Notice issued 8th Jany 1862
Janakyammal Fasli 1210

In the triennial jamabandy accounts of Fuslies 1210 to 1212, the Inam is entered as follows:- "Brammadayam Inam in the name of Ramaiyan Panchangee".

But in the register of Fasli 1223, it appears in the name of Appannachary as the son of Teertachary the original grantee and the extent is given at one Collam of seed land which denomination of the capacity of lands never was nor is now in use in the part of the country where the Inam is situated.

There are now two claimants, one is Janaky ammal who is in actual possession of the Inam and said to be the widow of the grandson of the fysal Inamdar and the other is Coppannachary son of Appannachary mentioned in the Register of Fasli 1223. The latter claimant could not satisfactorily account for his not being in possession of the Inam and moreover the villagers would not vouch to his belonging to the line of the Original grantee. It is also a known fact that the Madhwa Class of Brahmins have not entered the profession of "Punchangee" in this part of the country, and I therefore come to the conclusion that the Second claimant is not a lineal descendant of the Original grantee and that Janaky ammal is such; but how his fathers name came to be introduced into the Register of Fasli 1223, with reference to which he holds a ticket in his hands signed by a late Sherestadar of the Collectors office, is a mystery.

Under the above circumstances, I consider the Inam a personal grant & to have been in the family of the Original grantee all along, and recommend that as such it may be enfranchised at half tax of the land.
