The Inamdar has no Parwana tho' the Inam appears evidently to have been granted under the present administration. From a copy of a Tahkid with the Inamdar purporting to have been issued by the Collr in F1239 the Inam wd. seem to have been granted without sanction for the support of the Uttarádi choultry. As however neither the Tahkid nor the date of Govt sanction [illegible] I asked the Collr [illegible] whether any [illegible] could be ascertained from his records but I have had no answer either [illegible]. Though the date of Govt sanction cannot now be ascertained, yet it cannot be affirmed that the Inam was granted without the authority of Govt at such an advanced stage of British administration, the district being one that has remained, from the beginning of British rule under the direct management of Govt. When the Collr or even the Bd. could not grant an Inam without authority under such circumstances, we cannot for a moment imagine that any subordinate officer granted it. I think the Inam may therefore be presumed to be valid & recognized as such & continued as long as the choultry is efficiently maintained.
