PREFACE

VILLAGE statistics in a Census are usually presented police stationwise in the serial order of the jurisdiction list numbers. To facilitate reference an alphabetical index of the names of villages included in a police station is often added to a Jurisdiction List or a Village Directory. The present index, first of its kind prepared for this State, arranges the names of West Bengal villages, fortytwo thousand six hundred fifteen in number, in one running alphabetical series, giving simultaneously the location particulars of the villages, their population figures and certain other data such as postal, health and educational facilities available, industries practised, etc.

The usefulness of a handbook of this kind for reference purpose is obvious. Apart from providing a ready means of locating any village in any part of the State, it contains ground material for a wide yet largely unexplored field of study—the amazing variety of village names. The name a village bears to day, not unusually as old as the village itself, was acquired in some cases evidently by mere chance and perpetuated by common acceptance and use. But in a vast majority of cases the name is not nearly that casual, for it has a definite connotation which is seemingly derived from a distinctive feature of the habitation, the tradition, custom, function or caste of its people or a myth or anecdote associated with them.

That names of gods, goddesses and deities constitute the single largest source of village names is indicative of the predominant role that religion played in the village life of Bengal. Durga, Govinda, Gopal, Hari, Jagannath, Kali, Krishna, Shyam and Sib are among the most freely used prefixes of village names. Of the mythological characters, Arjun, Bhima, Lakshman and Ram, after whom quite a large number of villages have been named in all parts of the State, seem to have commanded the largest measure of attention. But other characters have by no means been ignored. One would come across a Bibhishanpur in Midnapore, a Rabanpur in West Dinajpur and even a Kunti in Purulia,

Of the fauna-based names a good many are contributed by bagh i.e., the tiger or, more commonly, the leopard—the terror of the village folk and their livestock. Such names as Bagbari, Bagbandi, Bagdanga, Bagdiha, Bagdoba, Bagdogra, Baghmari, etc., are reminiscent of the depredations this animal caused in the countryside when forests coexisted with habitations. The jackal still abounds in most villages and has lent its name to quite a few of them, among which are Siala, Sialdanga, Sialdah, Sialtor, Sialpahari, etc. Then there are such bovine appellations as Garubhasa, Garupota, Bachur Khoyar, Baladmara and Gaighata. Included in other names with zoological overtones are Ghoramara, Ghoradaha, Hatidubi, Hatikheda, Bheramari, Bherapathar, Bhaluka, Bhalukbasa, Kukurbaghi, Biralgoria, etc. The Bengali predilection for fish is evident in names like Ruidanga, Ruipur, Ruipukur, Katlamari, Chithalia, Kaijuri, Kaikhali, Kaipukuria, Magurali, Magurpur, Singimari, Tapsia and Tengra. Several common types of birds, have featured in some names among which are Kakdihi, Kakdwip, Babuidanga, Babuijore, Paira-danga, Pairaura, Ghugudanga, Ghugumari, Mayna, Maynaguri, Hanskhali, Hansghara, Murgidihi, Murgapahari, Kukrakhupi, Chilakhali, Salika, Charaigola, Fingapara, Kokilpur and Muniadihi. Even lowly insects have not been lost sight of. There are names like Pipragachhi, Piprakhali, Makardaha, Masagram and Faringgachhi, to speak nothing of one Uipoka found in the Midnapore district.

After the fauna the next prolific source of village names seem to be the flora. A large number of names are redolent of fruits, flowers and trees. Ambari, Amdanga, Amjor, Jambad, Jambani, Kalabani, Kalagachhi, Belgharia, Belpahari, Kathalia, Kanthalpara, Narikela, Narikeldaha, Taldanga, Talgram, Champahati, Golapganj, Gendagachhi, Padmapukur, Jaba, Ghetugachhi, Salukdanga, Sapla, Tentulia, Tentulbaria, Salbani, Saldanga, Pipulbaria, Pipuldaha, Nimdangi, Nimdiha, Simulia, Simultala, Babla, Babladihi, Kultali, Jhowkuthi, Amrulbani, Kadamtala, Palasdanga and Dalimgaon are only a few of the examples. Among names associated with vegetables and spices are Alubari, Adabari, Begunia, Jhingapuni, Mulajor, Patalpur, Peazgaon, Lankabari, Laudaha, Kumrakhali, Labanga, Dhanikakhali and Mauri. Common agricultural crops have lent their names to some villages of which mention may be made of Dhanghara, Dhanberia, Dhansol, Dhanyakuria, Amanpur Ausgram, Patghara, Patpur, Kalaidanga, Mugberia, Musuria, Tilgaon, Sarisha and Chholakhali.

The physical features of some villages seem to have crept into their names. It is apparently their sandy soil that is attributed to the names of the six villages which are called Bali and the fourteen which are called Balia. Such terms as Jal, Kada, Pathar, Pahar, Bil and Char are used as prefixes to many other names: Jalapara, Kadabani, Patharghatta, Paharpur, Bildaha and Char Mathurapur are only to name a few.

Some place names are merely indicative of a direction. Representative of them are Bahati in West Dinajpur and Dankuni in Hooghly. There are two villages called Bahira, one of them is in Howrah and another in 24-Parganas. The village called Pichari in Purulia can be added to the list.

Next, there is that curious assortment of villages which are known by geometric measures. Among them are Pachishigha in West Dinajpur, Trisigha in Hooghly and Satbigha in Midnapore. No less remarkable are the villages which bear only numerical names. Examples are Egara in Burdwan, Satara in Purulia, Satasi in 24-Parganas, Satais in West Dinajpur and Atattar in Midnapore.

Names indicating functional and caste groups are quite common. There are eightyfive village names derived from Kumar, eightyone from Kamar, fortyeight from Dhoba or Dhobi, seventeen from Sonar, sixteen from Tanti, twelve from Muchi, twelve from Goala, five from Jele or Jalia, two from Chutar and two from Napit. Twentytwo names are derived from Baidya and one hundred sixty-five from Baman, Bamun or Brahman. Unknown individuals have been immortalized in some names. A village in the Darjeeling district is called simply Shibnath Das and another in Midnapore is known as Buraburi Jadav Chandra Misra Chak.

An interesting feature is the recurrence of some village names. There are, for example, at least one hundred and fourteen villages called Govindapur, seventyfive villages called Srirampur and seventytwo villages called Jagannathpur. Villages with a common name can be found in widely separated districts.

It is, incidentally, worth noticing that some of the names which are generally believed to be unique are in fact quite common. The name Digba by which the renowned sea resort in Midnapore is known is shared by sixteen other villages of which four are in the same district; two each in Burdwan, Nadia, 24-Parganas, Purulia and Murshidbad; and one each in Hooghly and Birbhum. Before the new township in Nadia was formally christened as Kalyani there were already two obscure villages, one in Bankura and another in West Dinajpur, bearing that name. That there is one Kalikata in the Howrah district dispels the widely held notion that the name is associated with the place known as Kalighat in a part of the city which grew out of a village bearing the same name. Contrary to popular belief, Chanak in Barrackpur was not obviously named after Job Charnock who is known to have camped there, for there are at least two more villages, one in Burdwan and another in Murshidabad, which happen to have the same name.

Scanning the list of names one would occasionally run into some quaint entries. It is difficult for instance to imagine how a village in Nadia came to be known as Alfa or one in Howrah was named Alpin. A village in Birbhum bears the mystery name Bidesiui and one in Midnapore is called Bahulya. It is fascinating that while some names are as sophisticated as Kunjaban or Abantika or Sephalika-chandan, some others are as sinister as Jamduar or Mundakati or Bhasurkata. One would wonder why a village near Diamond Harbour was called Bangla, or why a village in Murshidabad was known as Bharata or what gave the village Bilat in Midnapore its name. It is worth investigating under what pretension a village in Malda inhabited by sixtyseven persons only calls itself Basudha. Who, incidentally, was the lady pining for her lover after whom a village in West Dinajpur came to be known as Birahini? Was her yearning by any chance for the man whose pangs gave the other village Birahi in Nadia its name?

Some of the names have elements of geographical surprises too. To many it would be a revelation that there could be found in West Bengal ten Patnas, eight Ajodhyas, five Agras, two Elahabads and even one Chandigar. Such names as Dhaka, Pabna, Khulna and Rangpur would doubtless make many of the immigrants from East Pakistan feel nostalgic.

And finally a word on suffixes. Although no clear pattern of suffixes to village names can emerge from an alphabetical listing, it is nevertheless obvious that among the most popular suffixes are pur, nagar, ganja, hat and gram. These are found all over the State. But there appear to be a few suffixes with pronounced regional bias in their distribution. For example bari, guri and kata are more common in the districts of Darjeeling, Jalpaiguri and Cooch Behar than elsewhere in the State. Kharibari, Naxalbari, Haldibari, Ambari, Siliguri, Maynaguri, Kamakhyaguri, Falakata, Nagrakata and Gairkata: all belong to this region. In the West Dinajpur district, particularly in the Islampur area, the common suffixes are gachh, chhat and milik. Pota is common in Nadia while bandh, chak, dihi, gar, garia, jhor, khola and sol seem to favour the districts of Midnapore, Bankura and Purulia.

The huge labour involved in compiling this volume was cheerfully shared by my colleagues in the Census Office. My grateful thanks are due to all of them.

NOTE

COLUMN 1. A village is generally conterminous with a revenue survey mauza. The village names have been spelt according to the last published Jurisdiction List. The following symbols have been used.

P	Primary School
H	High School
D	Dispensary
Rhc	Rural Health Centre
Hos	Hospital
Mcw	Maternity and Child Welfare Centre
Po	Post Office
E	Electricity
L	Library

Symbols like 3P, 2H, etc., denote that in the village there are three Primary Schools, two High Schools, etc.

COLUMN 3. The figure zero indicates that the village is uninhabited. Where part of a village is included in a town, the population figure given relates to that part of the village which is rural.

COLUMN 4. Data on village industries have been tabulated from the houselists prepared in October 1960. These relate to household industries carried on in census houses. Industries are denoted by three digit codes of the Indian Standard Industrial Classification reproduced in the Appendix. Figures within brackets denote the number of establishments.
