NEW MEMBER.

The Honourable Mr. JAMES HERBERT THONGER took the prescribed oath of allegiance to the Crown and then took his seat.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Order made by His Excellency the President under rule 11 of the statutory rules for the asking of questions in the Council—

(1) Printed copies of all the questions and answers to be put and given at the meeting shall be placed on the Council table half an hour before the President takes his seat. The questions shall be numbered consecutively as printed.

(2) The questions shall be put and answered in the following manner :—

The Secretary shall call the name of each interpellator in turn, specify the serial numbers of his questions and make a sufficient pause to allow the Honourable Member a reasonable opportunity of rising in his place, if he is desirous of asking any supplementary questions. Supplementary questions must be put immediately after the principal questions to which they relate.]

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.

1 Q.—(a) In view of the fact that registering officers should attend at private residences out of office hours, will the Government be pleased to state whether the registering officers are eligible for compensation leave for the period they spend at private residences?

(b) If not, will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of granting leave to them with a view to compensate for the overtime work which they are required to perform?

1 A.—(a) Registering officers are not granted compensation leave for the period they spend at private residences.

(b) The proposal does not commend itself to the Government.

2 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a brief account of the death of lightkeeper C. Francis that happened at the Manapad lighthouse, Tinnevely district, on 26th February 1918?

(b) Is it a fact that the lightkeeper when he fell ill requested to be relieved at once with a view to his seeking admission in the General Hospital at Madras for treatment; that it took more than a fortnight for a relief to be ordered; that before the reliever came, Francis expired; that the deceased wished a tombstone to be erected out of his security money which the Presidency Port Officer is not pleased to sanction?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to inquire into the above?

(d) Will the Government be further pleased to issue orders for avoiding delays in such matters?

2 A.—(a) & (b) Lightkeeper Francis was apparently in good health in November 1917 when the Inspector of Lighthouses visited Manapad. On the 5th of February 1918 he wrote to the Presidency Port Officer stating that he was ill and asking to be transferred to Madras where he could get better medical aid. He did Compensation leave to registering officers attending at private residences.

Death of a lightkeeper, Tinnevely district.

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.)

not ask to be relieved of work, but merely for a change of appointment and there was nothing in his application to suggest that immediate relief was necessary on medical grounds. In accordance with his request a transfer was arranged and an order to that effect was issued on the 21st February. Meanwhile, however, Francis sent another application, which reached the Presidency Port Officer on the 21st February in which he stated that his illness was increasing and he asked for relief so as to enable him to proceed to Madras and be admitted into the General Hospital as an in-patient. Orders were issued by telegram on the following day directing his relief, but in the meanwhile the head lightkeeper had himself relieved Francis on the 19th of February on the report of the local medical officer.

As regards the erection of a tombstone, the property of the late lighthouse keeper, including his security money, is at the disposal of his heirs. It is in no way under the control of the Presidency Port Officer and that officer's sanction to the erection of a tombstone is unnecessary.

(c) & (d) The Government having examined all the facts do not find that there was any undue delay in dealing with the lighthouse keeper's application.

3 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article in the Justice of the 18th June 1918 regarding the sale of sovereigns at increased prices? Issue of sovereigns

(b) Are the Government aware that sovereigns are sold by sowcars at Rs. 19 each and even more sometimes?

(c) Are the Government also aware that the Currency office issued a large number of sovereigns to sowcars at Rs. 15 each in exchange for silver, sometime in April?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to take necessary steps to put a stop to sovereigns being sold at more than Rs. 15?

(e) Will the Government also be pleased to arrange to issue necessary instructions not to issue sovereigns to sowcars who are doing regular business on sovereigns, but to issue sovereigns to banks who can issue them to their customers at not more than 20 sovereigns at a time for bona-fide purposes at Rs. 15?

3 A.—(a) The Government have perused the article in question.

(b) The Government are aware that sovereigns are being sold at a premium.

(c) Sovereigns were issued from the Currency office in exchange for notes in April 1918, but no discrimination was made as to the identity or occupation of the persons presenting notes for encashment.

(d) & (e) These are not matters which are within the province of the local Government.

4 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article headed "Education in Trichinopoly" in the Hindu, dated 26th June 1918, publishing the resolution passed by the Moslem Literary Society of Trichinopoly? A high school for Muhammadans at Trichinopoly

(b) Will the Government be pleased to make necessary arrangements to open a high school for Muhammadans at Trichinopoly out of the eighteen high schools recently sanctioned for the Presidency?

4 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The new schools to which the Honourable Member refers are intended to provide instruction for all classes. At Trichinopoly there is already an incomplete secondary school for Muhammadans under private management and the Government have approved a proposal to take over the institution under departmental control and develop it suitably. Arrangements for its transfer to Government are in progress.

5 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article in the Hindu, dated 26th June 1918, headed "Karaikal Land Customs"? Land customs on the Karaikal frontier.

(b) For reasons explained in the article, will the Government be pleased to arrange to abolish the land customs and bring sea customs into force in the interests of all concerned?

5 A.—(a) The Government have perused the article.

(b) The question of improving the Customs arrangements on the frontiers of the French Settlements in the Madras Presidency is engaging the attention of Government.

6 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether the experiment of water-works for Tuticorin at Morappanad is successful;

(b) if so, whether protected water-supply can be given under present conditions within a reasonable period of, say, five years;

(c) if not, will it not be feasible to give Tuticorin a supply similar to the one that is now under execution for Ramésavaram as such supply should be possible to get from the fresh water area near Alangarathattu?

6 A.—The tests conducted show that an adequate supply will be available at Morappanad: but it is not possible to say when the works will be completed. According to expert opinion the scheme of supply from wells sunk in the sandy area near Tuticorin is not practicable.

Tuticorin water-supply scheme.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.)

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

Closure of a public pathway in Trichinopoly.

7 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that Mr. T. C. Thangavelu Pillai, B.A., Bar-at-Law, has submitted to Government a copy of the resolution passed by the citizens of Trichinopoly in a public meeting held on the 16th June 1918 protesting against the action of the headmaster, Aryan secondary school, in closing the public pathway leading to the western side of the Bathway Godown lane, Trichinopoly?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to inquire into the matter and take the necessary action?

7 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) A report has been called for.

The Vellore Taluk Board and Muhammadan elementary schools.

8 Q.—(a) With reference to a resolution passed at the North Arcot Moslem Educational Conference held at Vellore in February last, are the Government aware that the taluk board of Vellore amalgamated some of the Moslem elementary schools under the control of the board with those of the Hindus against the wishes of the Moslems of the locality?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to order the said taluk board not to do so in future?

8 A.—(a) The Government understand that the Muhammadan school at Pallikonda has been combined with the Hindu school there, a special Muhammadan teacher being provided to teach Urdu as second language to Muhammadan children. The Government have no further information.

(b) The Government do not propose to interfere with the discretion of the local body.

Board Sessional school, North Arcot.

9 Q.—In view of the limited number of qualified elementary school teachers in the North Arcot district, will the Government be pleased to retain the Board Sessional school, started as a temporary measure, as a permanent institution?

9 A.—The matter is for the consideration and decision of the Vellore taluk board. The Government do not propose to interfere.

A Muhammadan officer as Personal Assistant to the Director of Public Instruction.

10 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to appoint a Muhammadan as a Personal Assistant to the Director of Public Instruction to help and advise the Director on all matters affecting Moslem education?

10 A.—The Government are not, as at present advised, prepared to accept the Honourable Member's suggestion.

Encouragement of Muhammadan education.

11 Q.—With reference to the recommendations made to the Government by the Muhammadan Educational Conference held at Vellore, will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of

(a) reserving a certain number of seats in Government and other aided colleges for Moslem students specially as is done in Bengal;

(b) increasing the number and scale of Government scholarships awarded to Moslem students in colleges;

(c) affording special facilities to Moslem students studying in law, medical, engineering and agricultural colleges by instituting scholarships on a liberal scale; and

(d) establishing hostels in schools and colleges where a sufficient number of Moslem students attend?

11 A.—(a) The question of reserving seats has already been considered and the Government are of opinion that it is unnecessary, particularly in view of the recent establishment of a Muhammadan College.

(b) & (c) The Government consider that the provision of scholarships for Muhammadans in Arts Colleges and in the Law, Medical and Engineering Colleges is sufficient. They will, however, watch the development of the Muhammadan College and take such action in regard to scholarships as may prove necessary.

No scholarships are at present awarded at the Agricultural College and the Government do not consider that any need be created specially for Muhammadans.

(d) The Government are prepared to consider any specific proposals for the establishment of hostels whether for Muhammadans or others.

Water-tax in the Chingleput municipality.

12 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the Government have consented to postpone the collection of water-tax in the Chingleput municipality until supply of water is commenced?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to approve the proposal made by the Municipal Council, Tuticorin, some time last year to suspend collection of water-tax until the supply of water is actually made?

12 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The Government are unable to approve the suggestion. There is no similarity between the conditions existing at Tuticorin and those of Chingleput. The scheme for the supply of water to Tuticorin is very much larger and more costly than that for Chingleput, and, unless the Council builds up a reserve fund towards the capital cost, it will be unable to carry the project through.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.)

13 Q.—(a) Are the Government aware

(i) that the Municipal hospital of Tuticorin is situated in the most congested part of the town and in the busiest thoroughfare called Great Cotton Road;

(ii) that the hospital building is in a dilapidated condition and old-fashioned; and

(iii) that the whole ground of the hospital is damp and water-logged?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to make immediate arrangements to acquire land in the Victoria Extension road for the construction of a new hospital?

(c) If the Government find it difficult to provide funds for the construction of a hospital at present, will the Government be pleased to provide a sufficient sum to acquire the site?

13 A.—(a) The Government understand the facts to be approximately as alleged.

(b) & (c) The Government have received no proposals from the municipal council with regard to the construction of a new hospital near the Victoria Extension road and are unable to consider the question of financial assistance in the absence of a definite scheme.

14 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the report of the committee for the inspection of Indian refreshments at the railway platforms has been received? If so, will the Government be pleased to place it on the table?

(b) If not, will the Government be pleased to state when they are likely to receive the same?

14 A.—(a) The report by the Senior Government Inspector of Railways and M.R.Ry. Rao Bahadur K. S. Venkatarama Ayyar of Negapatam on the subject has not yet been received.

(b) The Government understand that the inspection is almost completed and that the report may be expected shortly.

15 Q.—Is it a fact that a large number of Sub-Judges and District Munsifs sent a memorial to the Government regarding the reorganization of the Judicial Department, and, if so, how many Sub-Judges and Munsifs, and will the Government be pleased to state what action they have taken in the matter?

15 A.—Memorials from 21 Sub-Judges and 72 District Munsifs regarding the recommendations of the Public Services Commission for the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service have been received by Government and will be considered in connexion with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission.

16 Q.—In view of the fact that the Government has increased the pay of the process-service establishment, will the Government be pleased also to increase the pay of the court peons and court keepers attached to the munsif and sub-courts?

16 A.—The matter is engaging the attention of Government.

17 Q.—With reference to the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman's speech at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on 6th April 1918 saying that the proposals in regard to the reorganization of the Judicial Department were complete and would be sent to the Government of India and the Secretary of State in the next month, will the Government be pleased to state whether the proposals have since been sent up and, if so, when?

17 A.—The Government of India were addressed on the subject on the 5th August 1918.

18 Q.—(a) Is there a proposal now before Government for revising the scale of pay of Port officers in this Presidency?

(b) In refixing the scale, will the Government be pleased to take into consideration the scale recently sanctioned for the Madras Pilot Service, who also draw an overtime allowance?

(c) In view of the exceptional local circumstances prevailing in some of the ports such as Tuticorin, Cochin, Calicut and Negapatam, will the Government be pleased to attach a local allowance payable to the Port officers serving at these ports?

18 A.—(a) & (b) Yes.

(c) The Government do not consider it necessary to make such a distinction as is suggested by the Honourable Member.

19 Q.—In view of G.O. No. 200, Public (Marine), dated 12th June 1918, will the Government be pleased to authorize the Port officers in this Presidency to survey sea-damaged cargo also and grant certificates, cancelling paragraph 28 of the Madras Port Manual?

19 A.—The Government will consider the suggestion.

20 Q.—With reference to my question at the meeting of the Council held on 12th February 1918 regarding "Insult to a Moslem Leader" and the Government's reply thereto that the matter had been referred to the High Court, will the Government be pleased to state how the matter has been disposed of?

20 A.—The High Court after due inquiry saw no need to take any action.

Tuticorin Municipal hospital.

Report of committee for inspection of food arrangements at railway stations.

Reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service.

Pay of peons in District Munsifs' and Sub-Judges' offices.

Reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service.

Revision of pay of Port officers.

Authorizing Port officers to survey sea-damaged cargo, etc.

A Moslem leader and the Tirupattur Munsif.

(Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar ; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; [13TH AUGUST 1918 Sir Alexander Cardew.)

Inspection of
stations by Port officers.

21 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to say if paragraph 12 of G.O. No. 245, Marine, dated 8th April 1896, holding Port officers responsible for inspecting coast light stations is still in force?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Presidency Port Officer by a departmental order has prohibited such inspection by Port officers?

(c) Is it within the power of the Presidency Port Officer to pass such an order?

21 A.—(a) The orders in question are in force.

(b) & (c) The Government will inquire.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao.

Splitting up of taluk boards,
Godavari and Kistna districts.

22 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether a request has been made by the Taluk Board of Cocanada for the separate constitution of a taluk board for the Cocanada taluk, Godavari district, and whether a similar request has been made for the separate constitution of a taluk board for the Ramachandrapuram taluk, Godavari district?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to consider the questions favourably?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state when the taluk board for the Bhimavaram division, Kistna district, is likely to be constituted?

22 A.—(a) No such request has been received from the Cocanada taluk board.

(b) The President of the Godavari district board has been asked, along with other presidents, whether there are any taluk boards in his district which in his opinion are unwieldy and could with advantage be made into smaller units.

(c) The question of the bifurcation of the Kistna district and the formation of new revenue divisions and taluks therein is still under consideration. After this question is settled, the question of the reconstitution of all the taluk boards including Bhimavaram will be considered.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"With reference to the constitution of a separate taluk board for the Bhimavaram division, the Government say that it depends upon the question of the bifurcation of the Kistna district. May I know when this question is likely to be settled?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"The matter is under reference to the Board of Revenue and as soon as the Board make their report we are ready to carry it out, if funds permit. I cannot give a definite date, but I trust it will be before long."

Ele torate to
taluk boards.

23 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing the number of voters in each taluk board area in the Presidency on the 1st April 1917 and also on the 1st April 1918 and the voting qualifications for each area?

23 A.—The property qualification for voters prior to 1918 is shown in the schedule to G.O. No. 1668 L., dated 10th November 1915, which has been placed on the Editors' Table. The qualification was reduced to the possession of property of an annual rental value of Rs. 30 for all taluk board areas in notification No. 75 published at page 33 of Part I-A of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 2nd January 1918. Information in regard to the number of voters in each taluk board area on 1st April 1917 and on 1st April 1918 is not available. It has been called for and will be laid on the Editors' Table as soon as it is received.

Water applications in delta taluks of Godavari, Kistna and Guntur.

24 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the total extent of land in each of the delta taluks of the Public Works divisions in the Godavari, Kistna and Guntur districts and in regard to which applications for water for the first crop were rejected in the official years 1916-17, 1917-18 and in 1918-19?

24 A.—The information asked for has been called for from the local officers and will be furnished when received.

Prices of foodgrains.

25 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state in how many districts in this Presidency normal, warning and scarcity rates prevailed on the 1st August 1918 in regard to principal food-grains?

25 A.—The following statement will be laid on the table:—

Principal food-grains.	Number of districts in which normal rates prevailed on 27th July 1918.	Number of districts in which the rates ranged between normal and warning.	Number of districts in which warning rates prevailed on 27th July 1918.	Number of districts in which the rates ranged between warning and scarcity.	Number of districts in which scarcity rates prevailed on 27th July 1918.

Adequacy of stock of foodgrains and their export.

26 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the stocks available in each district on the 1st August 1918 of the principal food-grains, namely, rice, ragi, cholam and cumbu?

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how much of the stocks available are required for local consumption in each district till the next harvest or till December 1918 and how much may be made available for export outside the district?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the export of the food-grains from this Presidency to stations outside the Presidency has been prohibited? If so, when and of what articles?

26 A.—(a) & (b) The Government are not in possession of this information which could only be obtained by taking a grain census.

(c) The export of all food-grains from this Presidency to the Bombay Presidency, Hyderabad State and the north of India was prohibited on 27th May 1918 with the exception of rice from Cocanada to Bombay. The question how far this prohibition may be further relaxed is now under consideration.

27 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any request has been made by the Collectors of districts for controlling the prices of food-grains or acquiring the stocks? If so, in what districts such request been made? Control of prices of food-grain.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement on the situation that has arisen on account of high prices now prevailing in the Presidency and what action the Government propose taking in the matter besides what has been done already?

27 A.—(a) The Collector of South Kanara has asked that he should be vested with power to acquire stocks of food-grains and thereby control the local prices. No similar request has been received from any other Collector.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the press communiqué issued on the 27th July 1918 which furnishes the information required.

28 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any estimate of the stocks of yarn and articles of clothing available in this Presidency has been made? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of the available stocks on the 1st August 1918 and also to state how long they are likely to last? Stocks of articles of clothing and control of their prices.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether, in view of the great scarcity and of high prices of all articles of clothing, Government contemplate taking any action, and, if so, the steps proposed to be taken?

28 A.—(a) A rough estimate of the stocks of piece-goods was taken on 6th July 1918 and shows the following results:—

Grey, unbleached—20,834,000 yards.
White, bleached—16,497,000 yards.
Coloured, printed or dyed—22,951,000 yards.
Fents—421,000 yards.

The Government have not sufficient data on which to state how long these stocks will last. They have no information as to stocks of yarn.

(b) The question is under the consideration of the Government of India.

29 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of applications received in 1918 for admission and the number actually admitted into Admissions to the Medical and Engineering Colleges and Schools.

(1) the Medical College and the Medical schools in this Presidency;

(2) the Engineering College, Madras, and the Engineering Schools, Vizagapatam; and

(3) the Arts colleges in this Presidency?

(b) Has a Medical school in Bellary been started? If not, when is it likely to be started?

29 A.—(a) (1) & (2) The following statement gives the information desired:—

	Number of applications for admission.	Number admitted.
The Medical College and Medical Schools ..	2,090	375
The Engineering College and the Engineering School at Vizagapatam.	702	164

(3) The Government regret that they are not in a position to furnish reliable statistics.

(b) The Medical School at Bellary has not been started, as the Surgeon-General advised that until the hospital there is enlarged and improved there would not be sufficient clinical material for a medical school. It cannot at present be said when it will be started. In lieu of this medical school, classes for third and fourth-year students have been opened at Madura and special stipends tenable at Vizagapatam Medical School have been sanctioned for Telugu and Kanarese students belonging to the Ceded districts.

30 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether a decision has been come to in regard to the allotment of the Imperial grant of 5½ lakhs of rupees for elementary education? Allotment of the imperial grant for elementary education.

30 A.—The answer is in the negative.

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Sir Alexander Cardew ; [13TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. Ranga Achariyar.]

Formation of
regiment.

31 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to consider the advisability of the recruits from the Telugu districts being formed into a Telugu regiment or regiments? Are there any proposals now in the matter under consideration?

31 A.—The proposal to form a regiment from the Northern Circars is under discussion with the military authorities.

Proposed scale

32 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) how much of land in the Godavari, Kistna and Guntur districts coming under sections B, C and D of the Appendix I to the Board's Standing Order No. 4 falls under groups I, II and III as suggested in notification No. 345, dated 18th July 1918, published at page 757 of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 23rd July 1918;

(b) how much land coming under sections G and H of Appendix I to the Board's Standing Order No. 4 falls under groups I, II and III as suggested in notification No. 345, dated 18th July 1918, published at page 757 of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 23rd July 1918;

(c) what is the probable amount of revenue derived by the adoption of the new water-rates proposed in the above notification?

32 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Regarding the proposed scale of new water-rates, the answer of the Government is 'the Government are not in possession of the information asked for.' May I ask the Government whether they will call for this information?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"I am afraid that to obtain the information which the Honourable Member asks for will mean an elaborate inquiry and will take a very long time. It is only on that ground that it is not possible for us to call for that information. When the Honourable Member's resolution is debated we shall be able to give him further details why it is so."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar.

Development
oil industry.

33 Q.—With reference to the remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman on the budget for 1918-19, made at the meeting of the Council on the 6th April 1918 about sandalwood oil (published on page 701 of the Proceedings), will the Government be pleased to state the policy they intend to pursue towards developing that industry?

33 A.—A special officer has been deputed to collect information regarding the trade in sandalwood. The Government await his report before coming to a final decision.

Development of industries
education.

34 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what practical steps they have taken since the outbreak of the war to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by it

- (a) for starting new industries,
(b) for improving existing industries, and
(c) for imparting technical and industrial education?

34 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the annual reports of the Department of Industries published since 1914.

Reorganiza-
Provincial Judicial Service.

35 Q.—With reference to statement of the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman in the course of his reply to my resolution regarding reorganization of the Judicial Branch of the Provincial Service moved at the meeting of the Council on the 22nd November 1916 (published on pages 221 and 222 of the Proceedings) and with reference to my question No. 58 at the meeting of the 22nd May 1917 and question No. 8 of the Hon'ble Mr. V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar at the meeting of the 12th February 1918 and the answers thereto will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken in the matter of reorganization of the Provincial Service (Judicial Branch) the revision of salary of its members, and the making of temporary courts permanent?

35 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to question No. 17. As regards the revision of salary, the Government propose to consider the matter along with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission.

Sub-Judges and District Munsifs
establishments.

36 Q.—With reference to my resolution No. XIX moved at the meeting of the Council on the 14th February 1918, will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken in the matter of giving effect to that portion of the resolution accepted by Government for giving additional powers to Subordinate Judges and District Munsif over their establishments?

36 A.—The matter is still under the consideration of the Government.

Opening of a
in a school,
Tiruvallur.

37 Q.—With reference to the Proceedings of the Director of Public Instruction referred to in the correspondence published at page 7 of the Indian Patriot of the 5th July 1918, headed "The C.C.C.H. School, Tiruvallur", will the Government be pleased to state

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

(a) what were "the present circumstances which do not justify the opening in that school of forms higher than in the third" referred to in the said Proceedings of the Director,

(b) whether the circumstances included the probable withdrawal of students from the mission school in that place,

(c) whether, in view of the matters stated in the correspondence, the Government will be pleased to instruct the Director of Public Instruction to cancel his former order and sanction the opening of the fourth form in that school, and

(d) whether the Hindu and Muhammadan students in the Christian Mission High School will be given the option of not attending the classes for religious instruction?

37 A.—(a) The smallness of the town suggests that there is no need for two high schools in it. The higher classes of the mission high school are by no means full. Very few, if any, boys are going from Tiruvallur to Madras or elsewhere for high school education, while a considerable number are coming to Tiruvallur from the surrounding villages.

(b) Yes, it was anticipated that some pupils would be withdrawn from the mission school with the result that there would be two sets of small high school classes in the town involving ultimately an unnecessary additional charge on public funds and increased difficulty in staffing high school classes which, in view of the opening of the new board secondary schools, is at this time particularly to be avoided.

(c) The Government are not prepared to instruct the Director of Public Instruction as requested. No request for a reconsideration of the Director of Public Instruction's order has been received from the manager of the school.

(d) The policy of the mission is, it is understood, to accord sympathetic consideration to any application for exemption from religious instruction, based upon conscientious grounds: but as a matter of fact no parent or bona fide guardian of any boy in the school has applied for such exemption.

38 Q.—With reference to the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar at the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 22nd November 1916 and the promise of the Government thereat to make a further inquiry into the economic condition of the South Arcot district, with special reference to the indebtedness of the ryots, and with reference to G.O. No. 476, Revenue, dated the 4th February 1918, will the Government be pleased to lay the report of the further inquiry on the table?

economic condition of ryots in South
Arcot.

38 A.—The report is contained in G.O. No. 601, Revenue, dated 12th February 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

39 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

- (a) how many settlement parties are at present working in the Presidency;
(b) how they are distributed over the Presidency, giving the headquarter station of each settlement officer; and
(c) what their programme of work, if any, during the current year and the next five years is?

Settlement parties and their programme.

39 A.—(a) & (b)—

Number of party.	Districts in which the parties are working.	Headquarters of each party.
I	Tanjore.	Tanjore.
II	South Arcot and North Arcot.	Ouddalore.
III	Bellary	Bellary.
IV	Tinnevely, Ramnad and Madura.	Madura.
V	Ganjam and Vizagapatam.	Vizagapatam.

In addition a special settlement officer is making a preliminary investigation in the Nilgiri and Malabar-Wynads with headquarters at Ootacamund.

(c) A provisional programme of work is laid on the table.*

40 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

- (a) what the number of backyards exceeding 25 cents in the Tanjore district is;
(b) when the practice began of assessing backyards;
(c) for what crops the assessment is levied;
(d) what the total amount collected as assessment on backyards for fasli 1327 is;
(e) whether it was included in the budget items of the budget for 1917-18;
(f) whether it is included in the budget items of the budget for 1918-19 and, if so, under what head?

Assessment of

40 A.—The information is not available.

41 Q.—(a) With reference to G.O. No. 2466, Revenue, dated the 29th June 1918, will the Government be pleased to state

Secretariat.

(1) what is the total annual additional cost incurred by the Government on account of the new branch of the Secretariat constituted thereby;

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

- (2) whether it is intended to make it a permanent arrangement ;
 (3) from what items in the budget estimate the Government propose to meet the extra expenditure ;
 (4) when the proposal to constitute a new Secretariat was made ;
 (5) whether the sanction of the Secretary of State and the Government of India has been obtained for the same ; and
 (6) why the matter was not placed either before the Finance Committee or at the Budget meeting of the Legislative Council ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay the correspondence on the table ?

41 A.—As was stated in the press communiqué, dated the 29th June 1918, the new branch of the Secretariat has been created to deal with work connected with the War and is mainly a consequence of the resolutions of the Conference which was held at Delhi at the end of April last. The matter could not, therefore, be placed either before the Finance Committee or at the Budget meeting of the Legislative Council, as the proposal had not then arisen. The additional annual cost of the department, which is on a temporary basis, has not yet been fully ascertained, but it is estimated at about Rs. 60,000 a year, against which will be set the saving of part of the cost of the temporary Deputy Secretary, Revenue Department, for whom Rs. 31,600 was provided in the budget estimates for 1918-19. Any excess cost will be met by reappropriation. As the scheme was within the financial competence of this Government, the sanction of the Government of India or the Secretary of State was not necessary and consequently there is no correspondence to be laid on the table.

Cultivation of a variety of paddy in Tanjore.

42 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether they are aware that in the last harvest season in the Tanjore district the yield from lands cultivated with the newly imported variety of paddy known as "Kurangusemba" was very far below the average and quite contrary to all expectations based on (pulli) estimates formed with the crops standing on the land and much of the grain turned out to be chaff and in most of the cases the outturn falling much lower than 2 to 4 annas ; and

(b) whether they will be pleased to have the matter investigated by their experts in the Agricultural Department ?

42 A.—(a) The Government have no information.

(b) A report will be called for from the Director of Agriculture.

Appointment of instructors in physical training.

43 Q.—With reference to the discussion on my resolution regarding appointment of instructors in physical training moved at the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 13th March 1917, and the assurance given by His Excellency the Governor as published at page 555, will the Government be pleased to state whether any and what steps have been taken to secure the services of competent instructors in physical training in schools and colleges and generally to give effect to the policy of extending physical education ?

43 A.—A post of Assistant Physical Director has been created for a period of two years and arrangements have been made under which Mr. Noehren gives, instead of one-third, at least half his time to the service of Government.

Mr. Noehren has been actively engaged in giving lectures and demonstrations to teachers, in training gymnastic instructors and in touring, and proposals for further measures for the improvement of gymnastic instructors are now under consideration.

Exchange value of the rupee.

44 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to give the exchange value of the rupee as it prevailed in Madras during each quarter of the years 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and the first two quarters of 1918 ?

44 A.—The only information officially available relates to the rates at which Bills and Telegraphic transfers on Madras were drawn by the Secretary of State in London, and the statement placed on the table shows for each month from January 1914 to June 1918 the highest rate, the lowest rate, and the average of these two rates.

Exchange compensation allowances.

45 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state

(1) whether they have considered the question of the desirability and necessity of continuing the payment of exchange compensation allowance to the European and Anglo-Indian servants of the Government ;

(2) whether they have made any recommendations to the Government of India and the Secretary of State on the subject and, if so, whether they will be pleased to lay the papers on the table ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to consider and examine the question ?

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar.)

45 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is invited to rule VII in Government of India Resolution No. 2422-Ex., Finance and Commerce, dated 31st May 1897, and to Government of India Resolution, Finance Department, No. 1175-F.E., dated 30th October 1917. The compensation for exchange allowance depends on the amount by which the average demand rate of exchange for each quarter falls short of the privileged rate of exchange, viz., 1s. 6d. per rupee. Owing to the rise in the average demand rate of exchange, the rate of compensation for exchange allowance paid to Government servants has already much diminished, and if that average rate amounts to 1s. 6d. the rupee for the rest of the current quarter the compensation for exchange allowance will automatically cease. In these circumstances the Government see no reason to take the action suggested.

46 Q.—With reference to my questions No. 155 at the meeting of the Council on the 21st November 1916 and No. 162 at the meeting of the Council on the 20th November 1917 and the answers thereto, will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken in the matter of the amendment of rule 99 of the Madras Educational Rules on the recommendations of the Conference appointed by the Government to discuss educational questions, especially with regard to the imposition of penalty on primary school pupils seeking admission into secondary schools and the abolition thereof ?

Imposition of a penalty on primary school pupils seeking admission to secondary schools.

46 A.—The matter is still under the consideration of Government.

47 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to order the publication, in all the vernaculars of the Presidency, of the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms by the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy ?

Publication of Report on Indian Constitutional reforms in vernaculars.

47 A.—Vernacular translations of a summary of the report are under preparation. The Government do not at present propose to arrange for the publication of the report in extenso in the vernaculars.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar.

48 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether they have received a memorial from the landholders of the Tanjore district objecting to the acquisition of the house-sites now occupied by their Paraiya farm-servants ; and
 (ii) whether they have passed orders on the same ?

Provision of house-sites for Panchamaes in Tanjore.

48 A.—More than one memorial has been received. The Government have informed the memorialists that their representations will receive due consideration.

49 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state, with reference to the reply to question No. 14 put at the meeting of the Council on the 3rd April 1918, Licensing steamer companies to touch at Tirumullavasal.

(i) whether they are aware of the great difficulty in procuring railway wagons for the transport of rice from Shiyali to Colombo ; and
 (ii) whether they will therefore issue licences to steamer companies, other than the B.I.S.N. whose steamers touch at Negapatam, to enable them to call at Tirumullavasal ?

49 A.—(i) The Government are not aware that there is any special difficulty in procuring wagons at Shiyali. The Director of Civil Supplies has been invested with the power to grant priority certificates in order to give precedence to essential traffic and, in case of difficulty, application should be made to him.

(ii) No licence is necessary to enable the steamships of any company to call at the port of Thirumullavasal.

50 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the name, age and designation of the officers of the Judicial Department on Rs. 200 and above and of Deputy Collectors in the Land Revenue Department who were retired or were given extensions during the last three years ending 31st July ?

Extensions of service to officers on Rs. 200 and above.

50 A.—A statement of officers on Rs. 200 per mensem and above in the Judicial Department and of deputy collectors in the Land Revenue Department who were retired or were granted extensions of service during the three years ending 31st July 1918 is laid on the table.*

51 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the grounds on which they refused the usual Government teaching grant to the Saraswati Patasala Girls' School at Kumbakonam for the year ending 31st March 1918 ?

Refusal of grant to a girls' school, Kumbakonam.

51 A.—The Government saw no reason to treat the Sri Saraswati Patasala for girls at Kumbakonam differently from the other institutions under the management of the Theosophical Educational Trust.

(Mr. I amanuja Achariyar.)

13TH AUGUST 1918.

Reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service.

52 Q.—With reference to the answer to question No. 8 put at the meeting of the Council on the 12th February 1918, will the Government be pleased to state what further action has been taken in the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service?

52 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to question No. 17.

War allowances to clerks in Government service.

53 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether at present an extra allowance is given in any department either by the Local Government or the Government of India to the poorer clerks in Government service in consideration of high war prices; and

(ii) whether any such proposal is under consideration by this Government for any department?

53 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 535, Financial, dated the 26th June 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

The conduct of a police officer in Madras City.

54 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether their attention has been drawn to the correspondence published on page 6 of the Hindu newspaper of the 3rd May 1918 under the heading "The Police and Women";

(ii) whether there is any legislative provision authorizing police officers to compel the occupants of a carriage to come out and put them to inconvenience out of consideration for the animal drawing the carriage;

(iii) whether Government will take steps to prevent a recurrence of the complaint made?

54 A.—(i) The Government have seen the correspondence.

(ii) The Honourable Member is referred to sections 22 and 53 of the Madras City Police Act, 1888.

(iii) The Government consider that no action is required.

Introduction of the forest village system in certain areas, Coimbatore.

55 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether they have received a memorial from the villagers of Sinnathadagam, Nanjundapuram, Virapandi and Anaikatti, Coimbatore taluk, objecting to the introduction of the forest village system into their village forests;

(ii) whether orders have been passed thereon; and

(iii) whether pending the passing of orders the introduction of the forest village system will be held in abeyance?

55 A.—(i) Yes.

(ii) & (iii) Orders were passed on the memorial on 25th June 1918.

Terms of working of the Tanjore District Board Railway line.

56 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether the District Board of Tanjore has made a representation on the subject of the proportion of the gross receipts claimed by the South Indian Railway Company for working the railway line of the board;

(ii) what is the proportion fixed by the model agreement;

(iii) whether orders have been passed on the representation; and

(iv) whether the Nidamangalam-Mannargudi line is worked on the same system as the Mayavaram-Arantangi line or in accordance with the model agreement?

56 A.—(i) Yes.

(ii) The model agreement is still under consideration and final orders have not yet been passed thereon.

(iii) Not yet. The matter is under the consideration of the Railway Board.

(iv) The Nidamangalam-Mannargudi line is being worked on the same terms as the Mayavaram-Mutupet section.

Persons convicted of offences and enlistment.

57 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether any orders have been issued directing magistrates to offer pardon to persons convicted of offences on condition of their enlisting themselves as soldiers; and

(ii) whether the orders will be laid on the table?

57 A.—No such orders have been issued.

Government grant to the Nilgiri Library, Ootacamund.

58 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether the Committee of the Nilgiri Library at Ootacamund receive an annual grant of Rs. 600 from Government;

(b) whether the Government are aware that the committee refuse to permit Indians to become subscribing members so long as they wear the dhoti, and that they insist on their wearing trousers and European dress to be eligible for membership; and

(c) whether they will consider the advisability of withdrawing the grant?

58 A.—(a) The Nilgiri Library is in receipt of a temporary annual grant of Rs. 600.

(b) & (c) The answer is in the negative.

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(The Raja of Ramnad.)

The Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad.

59 Q.—Will the Government kindly state

(a) why a retired Indian Medical Service officer is appointed as Inspector-General of Prisons;

(b) whether an Indian Medical Service officer in regular service cannot be appointed for the office, his place being given to one in Provincial Service; and

(c) whether the retired officer is now permitted to draw the full pay of the office in addition to the pension he draws?

59 A.—(a) & (b) No Indian Medical Service officer suitable for the post of Inspector-General of Prisons could be spared without detriment to the public service. The officer who has been appointed was selected as the most suitable officer available. Although he is on the retired list, he volunteered to return to active duty at the commencement of the war and has been in service ever since.

(c) Yes.

60 Q.—(a) Have the Government received instructions either from the Secretary of State for India or from the Governor-General in Council that extensions of service should not be granted to officers when they are about to retire except on indisputable public grounds?

(b) Will the Government kindly give the names of persons to whom they have given extensions since the receipt of the order, with such public grounds in the case of each?

60 A.—(a) The Honourable Member will be furnished with a copy * of the latest instructions on the subject which are embodied in article 459 of the Civil Service Regulations.

(b) The Government are not prepared to give the information desired.

61 Q.—Will the Government kindly consider the desirability of the restoration of the Coroner's appointment for the City of Madras?

61 A.—The Government do not consider the restoration of the Coroner's office to be necessary.

62 Q.—(a) Did the Government peruse the article headed "Policeman stabs himself (suicide case)" appearing in page 5 of the Madras Mail, dated 10th June 1918?

(b) Are the statements given there, regarding recognition of his good services, correct?

(c) Was his promotion ever overlooked?

(d) If the answer to clause (c) is in the affirmative, will the Government kindly state the cause for overlooking his claims for promotion?

62 A.—(a) Yes.

(b), (c) & (d) The Government have no information.

63 Q.—With reference to the list containing the names of persons who have done valuable service in connexion with the war till August 1917, appearing in page 5 of the Madras Mail, dated 8th June 1918, will the Government kindly state whether it contains all the names brought to the notice of the Government of India by the Madras Government, or only a few names?

63 A.—As correspondence on the subject of such recommendations is confidential, the information sought cannot be supplied.

64 Q.—Will the Government kindly lay on the table a proposition statement giving a list of persons to be employed for the management of the Sivaganga zamindari with their pay, which to my question No. 3, dated 3rd April 1918, they answered was not then complete?

64 A.—A statement of the establishment which the Court of Wards propose to employ in the Sivaganga estate is laid on the table.†

65 Q.—(a) Will the Government kindly publish the medical certificate produced by Doctor Nayar for getting passport to go to England for treatment?

(b) Will the Government kindly state which medical officer gave the certificate?

65 A.—The Government are in possession of a certificate signed by an Indian Medical Service officer as to the condition of Doctor Nayar's health, but must decline to publish it as it is a confidential document.

66 Q.—(a) Have the Government perused the notifications inviting applicants for appointments, made by the Registrar of Madura and the Revenue Divisional Officer of Peddapur in pages 1040 and 1041, respectively, of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 2nd July 1918, and by the Collector of Anantapur in the Madras Mail, dated 5th July 1918?

(b) Will the Government kindly state whether such notifications, inviting candidates only from particular castes, are authorized by the Government?

(The Raja of Ramnad; Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar; Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(c) Will the Government kindly issue orders that officers inviting applicants for appointments, should not state in future that any one particular community alone should respond to the notification?

66 A.—(a) The Government have now perused the notifications in question.
(b) & (c) The Honourable Member's attention is drawn to Board's Standing Order No. 12* (2) under which it is a standing instruction of the Government that the appointments in any district should be distributed among the several castes. The Government presume that the object of the officers who issued these advertisements was to enable them to comply with this direction and they see no reason to take the action which is suggested.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar.

67 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the student T. D. Krishnaswami Mudali, L. 346, 1917, of the Lower Subordinate class of the College of Engineering, Madras, was, after he has duly completed his three years' course, struck off the list in his class?

(b) Were charges duly framed against him and was opportunity given as required to explain why his name should not be struck off the list before his name was so struck off?

(c) Is it true that the student applied more than once to be given such an opportunity?

67 A.—(a) The student in question was struck off the list in his class for malpractices in a college examination.

(b) The Government are not aware of any rule governing inquiry into cases of this kind. They are, however, satisfied that sufficient and impartial inquiry was made and that the student was given every opportunity of proving his innocence.

(c) Yes: his petitions were disposed of by the Director of Public Instruction.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao.

68 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table copy of G.O. No. 541 I., dated 11th September 1918, which is quoted by the Public Works Department officers in the Godavari delta as authority for refusing water for lands classified as irrigable dry in the last resettlement as it does not appear to have been published in the Fort St. George or the district gazettes or issued as a press communiqué?

68 A.—The Government are not prepared to place on the table the Government Order because it is largely out of date. The localization of the irrigable ayacut of the Godavari Western Delta is at present under inquiry by a special staff.

69 Q.—With reference to Government answer to question No. 28 asked by me at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 3rd April 1918, has the attention of the Government been drawn to resolution No. 16-A passed at the Twelfth Godavari District Conference held at Razole from which it would appear that a relaxation of the rule was made in the Godavari district in favour of a certain lanka lease-holder and, if so, the circumstances under which that relaxation has been permitted may be stated?

69 A.—The Government have received a copy of the resolution. They have no information as to the alleged relaxation of the rule referred to, but will call for a report.

70 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state why the publication of the statement of water-readings in the several channels of the Godavari delta published in June 1916 has not been continued thereafter and whether they will be pleased to order its regular publication at least during first crop cultivation season hereafter on account of its usefulness as a permanent record for reference?

70 A.—Considerable expenditure and increase in press staffs would be necessary to permit of the statements referred to being published regularly. The Government do not consider that the advantages obtainable from the publication of these statistics would be commensurate with the cost.

71 Q.—Is it a fact that the Tahsildars are not now empowered to directly dispose of applications for water for the first crop when a wet crop is raised in a field classified at the last joint inspection as irrigable dry and shown as commandable by a certain pipe of certain channel in the Godavari delta and whether it has been brought to the notice of the Government that this restriction is felt as a hardship both by the taluk officers and the agriculturists alike and whether Government will be pleased to empower Tahsildars to deal with such applications hereafter without the intervention of the Public Works Department as prayed for in the last Godavari District Conference?

71 A.—The Government have no information that the transfer of the disposal of water applications from Tahsildars to Executive Engineers has caused any hardship. The subject will, however, be further considered when the permanent localization of the irrigable area in the Godavari Western and Kistna Eastern deltas, now in progress, has been completed.

Removal of a student from the Engineering College.

Lands classified as irrigable dry in the Godavari delta.

Place at which kist should be paid.

Water-readings in the channels of Godavari delta.

Tahsildar's powers to dispose of water applications in certain cases.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao; Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar.)

72 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the estimates for the extension of irrigation to Coringa and Polavaram islands of the Godavari which would appear to have been submitted to the Chief Engineer for Irrigation towards the end of 1915-16 were sanctioned and, if so, when the works may be expected to be undertaken?

Extension of irrigation to Coringa and Polavaram islands.

72 A.—The estimates for the Polavaram island project have been returned to the Superintending Engineer for revision. Those for the Coringa island project will be taken up after the Polavaram island project is disposed of.

73 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the names of the channels which have been remodelled in the three deltas of the Godavari district in 1916-17 and 1917-18 and the approximate outlay incurred during the said period?

Remodelling of channels in Godavari deltas.

73 A.—The Government have not got the information asked for, but will call for it.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. Annamalai Chettiyar.

74 Q.—(a) Has the Government perused a letter published in the correspondence columns of the Hindu, dated 24th June 1918, under the headline "A Suggestion" and signed by Mr. Sundara Rao, pensioner, bringing to the notice of the authorities and of the public that, while pensioners in Presidency towns are not assessed to profession-tax on their pensions, pensioners in the mufassal are assessed to profession-tax on their pensions, and giving his reasons for amending the law in such a manner as to place the pensioners in the mufassal on a footing of equality with the pensioners in the Presidency towns?

Levy of profession-tax on pensions.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to so amend the District Municipalities Act as to relieve the pensioners in the mufassal of the burden of such municipal taxation on their pensions unless it is found that the pensioners actually pursue some trade or calling in their places of residence?

74 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The suggestion will be examined.

75 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an "editorial note" appearing in the Hindu of the 28th June 1918, in which the fact of the Government accepting the programme of arrangements submitted by the Salem Municipal Council for the control of the sale of arrack and toddy in that town has been announced and urging on the other municipalities the importance of submitting similar programmes to Government and achieving similar results in this important direction?

Control of sale of arrack and toddy in municipal areas.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many other municipalities have submitted so far to Government programmes for controlling sale of arrack and toddy to the public in their respective municipal limits and how many of them have been approved by Government?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to call for such proposals from municipalities which have not submitted them till now and accept them in the same manner in which they have dealt with the programme of the Salem Municipal Council?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to issue a general circular to all executive officers of the Abkari Department to co-operate with municipal councils and other local bodies for achieving substantial results in effecting this reform?

75 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) No other municipal council has submitted similar proposals.

(c) The Government are not prepared to make any suggestions to municipal councils in the matter.

(d) No such general circular is called for.

76 Q.—(a) Has the Government perused a summary of the memorial submitted by the South Indian tanners to His Excellency the Viceroy, communicated to and published in the Hindu of the 28th June 1918, submitting their grievances and praying for permission being granted to them for exporting their present stocks of tanned skins on private account, placing their prayer on the ground that such a step will not in any way affect the output of tanned hides?

Grievances of tanners in South India.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to make such recommendations as lie in their power to the Government of India for redressing the grievances of South Indian tanners in this direction?

76 A.—(a) The Government have perused the communication referred to.

(b) The Government of India are in possession of full information on the subject and the Government do not consider it necessary to move in the matter.

77 Q.—Considering the difficulty that is being experienced by the public for some time in the past in obtaining, either in the treasuries or banks or post offices or the bazaar, rupees, smaller silver and other coins in exchange for currency notes, will the Government be pleased to issue the necessary instructions to the departments concerned to take the necessary steps in the matter at an early date?

Difficulty in obtaining coins.

(Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar; Sir Alexander Cardew.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

77 A.—The regulation of currency is vested in the Controller of Currency who is an officer of the Government of India and the Local Government are therefore not able to issue the instructions desired. The Honourable Member's attention is drawn however to the press communiqué, dated 14th June 1918, issued by the Government of India which shows that large consignments of silver have been received from America and that the mints are turning out rupees and other coins as far as possible. These supplies will gradually relieve the existing stringency. The Honourable Member's attention is also drawn to the leaflet, dated the 15th June 1918, issued by the Central Publicity Board and entitled "How hoarding rupees helps the Germans." This shows that the scarcity of metallic currency referred to in the question has occurred in spite of the issue by the Government of India of immense quantities of metallic coinage and is largely due to rupees and other coins being hoarded by people in India.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"Will the Government be pleased to state whether they will at least order the issue of small coins, 4 annas, 2 annas and 1 anna?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"So far as the coins are available they will be issued. The mints are turning them out fast. Until the mints are able to overtake the demand it is impossible for the Government to ask the Collectors to issue the coins."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"Will the Government ask the Collectors?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"It is not proposed to make a reference to the Collectors; each Collector will have a discretion to come up if necessary."

Control of prices.

78 Q.—(a) Referring to G.O. No. 2078 of 29th May 1918 (Revenue Department), will the Government be pleased to give a list of articles with reference to the high prices of which the Government have decided so far to exercise control?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the results obtained so far by the Director of Civil Supplies and his Advisory Committee in controlling the high prices of commodities of general use in this Presidency?

(c) Referring to a paragraph under "News in Brief" column of the Hindu of the 29th June 1918, stating that the Government of Bombay are collecting information regarding some lines of cotton piece-goods with a view to consider the desirability of controlling the prices of such goods under War Emergency Acts, will the Government be pleased to state whether they have already taken similar steps for controlling the prices of similar goods in this Presidency and with what result?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to order such steps be taken without further delay for controlling the high prices of piece-goods for popular consumption in this Presidency?

78 A.—(a) & (b) The Honourable Member is referred to a press communiqué issued on the 27th July 1918, which furnishes the information he desires.

(c) & (d) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 28.

Converting the elementary school, Devakottai, into a middle school.

79 Q.—(a) Referring to G.O. No. 757, dated 11th June 1918, Home (Education) Department, sanctioning the proposals of the Director of Public Instruction for the opening of new high and middle schools under the management of the local bodies, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for omitting the Ramnad district from the list of schools brought under such management?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to arrange for raising to the status of a middle school the elementary school in Devakottai in view of the population and youth of school-going age resident in that Nattukottai Chetti centre?

79 A.—The absence of any substantial demand for increased facilities for secondary education in Ramnad is indicated by the facts that it already has twelve secondary schools and that no elementary school under board management was found to be in such a stage of development as would justify its being raised in grade. The elementary school at Devakottai is one of the schools that has not yet sufficiently developed to be raised in grade.

Handing over the Government Soap Works Calicut, to private enterprise.

80 Q.—(a) Referring to paragraph 30 appearing on page 10 of the annual report for 1916-17, submitted to Government by the Honorary Director of Fisheries, embodied in G.O. No. 285, dated 21st January 1918, will the Government be pleased to state whether arrangements have since been made for admitting students for training to the Government Soap Works Calicut?

(b) If no arrangements have been made till now to admit students to the Soap Works, will the Government be pleased to issue the necessary instructions to the Honorary Director of Fisheries to admit students for training in the said industry for the purpose of aiding and encouraging private Indian capitalists to invest largely in this line of enterprise and develop it for the benefit of the country?

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar; Sir Alexander Cardew; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether, with a view to encourage the flow of the indigenous capital in this very desirable direction, they will hand over the industry to any respectable Indian capitalist for working the factory and developing it on a commercial scale?

80 A.—(a) & (b) Arrangements for admissions will be made as soon as practicable.
(c) Not at present.

81 Q.—Referring to G.O. No. 2258, dated 13th June 1918, regarding the constitution of emergency committees, will the Government be pleased to take steps to organize taluk committees also for co-operating with the district committees for attaining the object desired? Taluk committees to assist in controlling prices.

81 A.—The Government consider it desirable to leave to Collectors and their emergency committees a free hand to introduce any organization that may be most suitable to the conditions of the district. While having no objection to the formation of taluk or local committees where that step seems desirable, the Government do not consider it necessary to issue any precise instructions in the matter.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"With reference to question No. 81, I should like to know if the Government would consult Collectors on the subject."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"It is not proposed to make a reference to Collectors. Each Collector will have discretion in the matter, and will appoint committees, if necessary."

82 Q.—(a) Referring to G.O. No. 1535, dated 6th July 1916, referred to in the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao at the meeting of this Council held on the 21st November 1916 (vide page 168 of the report of proceedings) and the observations of the Hon'ble Mr. R. B. Clegg and the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew during the debate on this resolution appearing on page 183 of the same report, and also of the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar as finally accepted by the Government (vide page 184) on the above subject, will the Government be pleased to state whether they have received from the Board of Revenue the lists of charities and charitable endowments and other particulars concerning them for all the districts of this Presidency? Lists of charitable endowments.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to place those lists on the table of this House?

82 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is invited to paragraph 2 of the Board's Reference printed in G.O. No. 2505, dated 2nd July 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

83 Q.—Referring to paragraphs 2 and 3 of G.O. No. 723, dated 6th June 1918, Home (Education) Department, will the Government be pleased to make a complete statement of the proposals approved by Government for the reorganization of the Madura Technical Institute? Reorganization of the Madura Technical Institute.

83 A.—The proposals on the subject are under consideration.

84 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it has received from the non-official members of the Devakottai Taluk Board, Ramnad district, a memorial objecting to the appointment as president of M.R.Ry. Rao Bahadur M. R. Govinda Rao Avargal, a retired Deputy Collector, now holding the office of Receiver of Kunnakudi Devasthanam under the Ramnad Temporary Sub-Court at Madura, who has been recommended for the office of president of the said taluk board by the Revenue Divisional Officer of Devakottai? Non-official president for Devakottai Taluk Board.

(b) Is it a fact that, before making the recommendation, the Divisional Officer did not consult the wishes of the non-official members of the said taluk board but brought this question to their notice, when the Divisional Officer's proposal for the removal of the headquarters of the taluk board from Devakottai to Kunnakudi, which is Mr. Govinda Rao's present official residence, came for consideration before the board at their meeting of the 6th July 1918?

(c) Was this proposal of the Revenue Divisional Officer for the change of headquarters of the taluk board from Devakottai to Kunnakudi referred to the taluk board by Government and was it vetoed by a resolution of the taluk board?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to grant the Devakottai Taluk Board the privilege of electing its president from among the non-official members of that board?

84 A.—(a) Four non-official members of the Devakottai Taluk Board have submitted a memorial objecting to the appointment of M.R.Ry. Rao Bahadur M. R. Govinda Rao Avargal as president of the board.

(b) The Government have no information.

(c) Yes.

(d) The Government do not propose to make any change just now in regard to the office of president of the Devakottai Taluk Board.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"Will the Government be pleased to state whether they will consult the wishes of the non-official members of the board when they propose to make a change in the office of president?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I cannot commit the Government now to any promise in the matter."

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju.Agricultural farm for Ganjam.

85 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when they propose to establish an agricultural farm in the Ganjam district in view of the statement of the Government in 1916 that one would be opened as the requisite funds and staff became available?

85 A.—It is not possible at present to specify a date.

Condition of Kuntikutta
channel,
Ganjam.

86 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government received a report on the condition of Kuntikutta channel, Ganjam district, and what measures, if any, have been taken by the Government to remedy the defects complained of?

86 A.—Yes. The supply to the Kuntikutta inalla has been improved by means of a diversion channel and an estimate for further improving the supply is under consideration by the local officers.

Results of the
examination.

87 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Government propose to take any and, if so, what action regarding the low percentage of successes in the Intermediate examination in recent years?

87 A.—The Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

Appointment of lady Fellows.

88 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the appointment of ladies of educational distinction as Fellows of the Bombay University? Will the Government be pleased to state whether they would adopt it in this Presidency?

88 A.—Yes. Nominations are made by the Chancellor of the University and not by the Government.

Compulsory
education.

89 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state, with regard to the observation of His Excellency the President in the matter of withdrawing the resolution regarding a Bill for compulsory elementary education on the 4th April 1918 that the Government are engaged in framing a scheme for the reorganization of elementary education which will include a provision for compulsion, whether compulsion refers to the compulsion of parents for sending their boys where schools are available or whether it merely refers to the compulsion of boards and municipalities to provide schools to accommodate the boys that are willing to study?

89 A.—The former was intended.

Muhammadans
in Provincial Educational Service.

90 Q.—(1) Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether any Muhammadan is serving in the Provincial Educational Service; and
(b) whether Mr. Abdur Rahim, Sub-Assistant, Madras Muhammadan Range, lent to His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Government, has rejoined the appointment in the Provincial Educational Service?

(2) If he has not joined, will the Government be pleased to appoint a Muhammadan in his stead temporarily or permanently?

90 A.—(1) (a) The only Muhammadan member of the Provincial Educational Service is Mr. Abdur Rahim.

(b) He has not yet rejoined his appointment in the Provincial Service.

(2) The matter will be considered.

Lecturers, etc., in Government colleges in
districts.

91 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether it is not possible to secure qualified Andhras to be lecturers and assistant lecturers in Government colleges in Telugu districts by preference; and
(b) whether there have been sufficient applications from qualified Andhras?

91 A.—Other things being equal, Telugu men are appointed by preference to Telugu districts.

The Gosha Hospital,
Vizagapatam.

92 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the communication, dated 17th June 1918, of the central committee of the Countess of Dufferin's Fund to the President of the Thirteenth Vizagapatam District Conference about the necessity of having a well-equipped women's hospital under a competent lady doctor of the Women's Medical Service at Vizagapatam and stating

(1) that the present Victoria Gosha Hospital in Vizagapatam is deficient in suitable staff and equipment;

(2) that a nurse-matron should be appointed in the hospital for having nurses and midwives trained; and

(3) that there is need for an operation room?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take any and, if so, what action in the matter?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to direct the endowment of Rs. 20,000 of the late Maharaja of Vizianagram given to the local civil hospital, which is now vested in the Government, to the Gosha Hospital for working the same efficiently?

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Venkatapati Raju; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar;
the President.)

92 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The letter has been transferred for disposal to the district board to whom the institution belongs.

(c) The answer is in the negative.

93 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to issue instructions to their subordinates not to levy and credit to Government penalty from tappers for over-tapping and killing palmyra trees of private owners or in the alternative direct the payment of the penalty to the owners either in whole or in part?

93 A.—No penalty is levied from tappers for over-tapping and killing palmyra trees of private owners.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Am I to understand that no amount is levied?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"The answer is there is no penalty."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"I want to know whether in any shape any amount has been levied from palmyra trees."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Honourable Member wants to know whether there is any penalty in any shape."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I regret I am not able to amplify the answer. The Honourable Member must give notice if he wants further information."

94 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the resolution XVII, Land and Land Registers, and XIX and XX, Irrigation, passed by the Twelfth Godavari District Conference in May 1918 and will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take any action in the matter?

94 A.—A copy of the resolutions has been received; but in the absence of any statement of the reasons for the numerous proposals brought forward, the Government are not in a position to take any action in the matter.

95 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to consider the advisability of adopting "trial borings" at Government expense in places where there is water scarcity so that their success might induce the people to have borings in their own fields at their own expense?

95 A.—The rules allow for the remission of the fees when the resources of applicants are slender. It does not seem to be necessary to make any further concession. The Honourable Member's suggestion does not commend itself to the Government.

96 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the "water-finder" is used at all by the Agricultural Engineering Department and, if so, at what places and with what results?

96 A.—The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the concluding portion of paragraph 58 of the report on the administration of the Agricultural Department for 1916-17, which has been placed on the Editors' Table. No further information is available at present.

97 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they made any arrangements for having necessary supply of pipes to the Boring Department as they are priced high and moreover scarce in the market owing to war?

97 A.—The pipes required are either obtained on indent from the Director-General of Stores or are purchased locally if available.

98 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the abnormal prices fixed by the firms and scarcity in some instances of text-books prescribed by the Educational authorities in schools and colleges? Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take any action in the matter?

98 A.—Yes. The matter has been examined by the Director of Public Instruction and it does not appear that any action is called for. The rise of prices of books seems inevitable under existing conditions.

99 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they would consider the desirability of paying the full salary of the appointment of persons appointed as acting District Munsifs without a substantive appointment?

99 A.—Orders have already issued fixing Rs. 200 as the minimum salary of District Munsifs in this Presidency whether holding a substantive appointment under Government or only temporarily employed as such.

Monthly grants to aided

100 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they would consider the advisability of extending the system of paying grants by monthly instalments to aided elementary schools instead of by annual grants to all districts in the Presidency?

100 A.—The method adopted in four selected districts for paying elementary school grants monthly having been found unsatisfactory, such payment has, pending the consideration of alternative methods of payment, been discontinued.

Raising of second-grade colleges to the first-grade.

101 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they would encourage the raising of second-grade colleges to first-grade colleges in places where there are no first-grade colleges at present, by offering such terms as are contemplated for the Kollikōta College, Berhampur?

101 A.—The Government are not prepared to make any such general statement as that asked for by the Honourable Member.

The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser, Kt.

Changes in the personnel
of Madras.

102 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a detailed statement showing the names, in chronological order, of officers who have acted as Collectors of Madras during the five years ending 30th June 1918 with the period of each appointment?

102 A.—The statement asked for is laid on the table.*

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"In view of the numerous changes shown in this statement, fifteen officers in a short period of five years, and the inconvenience caused thereby to the public, will your Excellency's Government endeavour to make the appointments more permanent?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"The Government will certainly endeavour to carry out the suggestion of the Honourable Member."

The Hon'ble Sri Sobha Chandra Singh Deo.

Parlakimedi.

103 Q.—Regarding the Government Memorandum No. 145-1 L., dated 1st June 1918, requesting the district boards to report on the advisability of dividing unwieldy taluk boards into smaller ones, will the Government be pleased to give a separate taluk board for Parlakimedi by splitting up the jurisdiction of the present Chicacole Taluk Board?

103 A.—The matter will be considered after the reply of the Ganjam District Board to the Government memorandum referred to is received.

Uriya as the court language
division.

104 Q.—(i) Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether the Collector of Ganjam has reported on the advisability of adopting Uriya as the sole court language of the Chatrapur division of Ganjam; and
(b) whether the Government has passed orders declining to accept the proposal?
(ii) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the Collector's report and a statement of the reasons for the orders passed?

104 A.—(i) (a) & (b) Yes.

(ii) The Government did not approve of the proposal, as a strong body of public opinion was against the change and as there was an appreciable Telugu element in the Chatrapur division. The Government do not consider it desirable to publish the Collector's report.

local bodies.

105 Q.—(a) Considering the population and the importance of the Uriya community, are the Government aware that the representation of the community in the various local bodies is extremely inadequate?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to grant special electorates to the community, especially in the Berhampur municipality, with reference to my question No. 85 in the last meeting of this Council?

105 A.—(a) The Government have no information on the point.

(b) The Government do not propose to take action in the manner suggested.

Constitution of the Jeypore Agency into a
district.

106 Q.—With regard to my question No. 77 put at the last meeting of this Council, regarding the grant of an independent status of a district to the Jeypore Agency in Vizagapatam, will the Government be pleased to state whether they have arrived at any definite conclusion on the subject?

106 A.—The question is still under consideration.

Scholarships for Uriyas in the engineering
Vizagapatam.

107 Q.—Considering the answer to my question No. 79 in the last meeting of the Council, regarding the Engineering school at Vizagapatam, will the Government be pleased to lighten the disadvantages of the Uriyas joining the school away from their homes, as compared with the Telugus, by the creation of a few special scholarships?

107 A.—The matter will receive the consideration of Government.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Sri Sobha Chandra Singh Deo ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

108 Q.—In view of the inadequacy of the provision for the medical education of the Uriyas and the paucity of Uriya medical men, will the Government be pleased to make increased provision to meet the wants of the community?

Provision for medical
of Uriyas.

108 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is drawn to G.O. No. 81, Medical, dated the 28th September 1916, a copy of which is placed on the table.* The rate of the stipends has since been increased to Rs. 15 a month.

109 Q.—(i) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Forest officers require the ryots along reserved forests to pay grazing fees for the whole year though, in extraordinary cases, the ryots utilize the privileges, if at all, only in paddy season, i.e., from September to January?

System of levy of grazing fee.

(ii) Will the Government be pleased to remedy this state of things

(a) by limiting the levy of fees to the number of months during which grazing is resorted to; and

(b) by requiring that applications for pasture rights should be made as a condition precedent for the grant of permits, such applications specifying the months for which grazing is required?

(iii) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the panchayat system regarding the Ballipodro forest was unacceptable, because the terms offered by the Forest Department were not considered favourable enough?

(iv) Will the Government be pleased to show some concession regarding the collection of fees, so as to facilitate the working of the panchayat system in these backward areas?

109 A.—(i) & (ii) Grazing fees are usually levied for the year as a whole and the Government see no reason to modify these rates.

(iii) & (iv) The Government have no information, but the Honourable Member's suggestion will be remitted to the Forest Commissioner for consideration.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar.

110 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether a number of respectable gentlemen of Namakkal apprehending internal disorder joined together as one body and applied to the Collector of Salem for assistance in the shape of officers and arms to drill, train and equip that body;

Training and supply of arms to certain
in Namakkal.

(b) what action, if any, was taken on that by the said Collector; and
(c) whether the Government would be pleased to issue directions to the said Collector and others to render such assistance whenever the same is practicable?

110 A.—(a) & (b) The Government have no information regarding any such joint representation to the Collector of Salem. They have received through the Collector a scheme devised by an Indian resident of the district for the periodical training of the Salem members of the Indian Defence Force.

(c) The Government are not in a position to issue any instructions to the Collector. A scheme for the periodical training of the 1st Madras Infantry, Indian Defence Force, will be prescribed by the Government of India in due course.

111 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have received a proposal from the Erode Municipal Council to increase its elective proportion, and whether they will increase it to the maximum permitted by the law or at least the proportion asked for by the council?

Increase of
strength of the Erode Municipal Council.

111 A.—A proposal on the subject was received from the Erode Municipal Council on the 9th instant. The question will be considered.

112 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when their Elementary Education Bill will be placed before the Legislative Council?

The Elementary Education
Bill.

112 A.—The Bill is under preparation and will be placed before the Legislative Council as soon as possible.

113 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether any cases have occurred in which the Government exercised their power under section 93 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1915, or the previously existing provision corresponding thereto;

Exercise of the power conferred
93 (2) of the
of India Act.

(b) whether during the last ten years any nominated or elected members of this Council were "for a period of two consecutive months" "absent from India" or "unable to attend to the duties of his office" during the last ten years;

(c) whether any of these applied for permission to be absent or intimated such absence or inability, and what proceedings were taken by His Excellency in each of these cases; and

* Vide Appendix VII on page 41 infra.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; the President ;
Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; Mr. Gillman.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.

(d) whether the Government will place on the table all such intimations, or applications and proceedings including the application by the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar and the reply thereto?

- 113 A.—(a) One, which was in the case of an official member. The powers referred to are vested not in the Government but in His Excellency the Governor.
(b) Yes ; so far as the records in the Government office show, seven nominated and six elected non-official additional members were absent from India for a period of two consecutive months, during the last ten years.
(c) No permission to be absent from the meetings of Legislative Council is required by the Act. Nine of the non-official members referred to above tendered resignation of their seats ; and in eight instances the resignation was accepted : while in the remaining instance and also in the four additional cases which make up the total of thirteen, that is to say in five cases, no action was taken under section 93 (2) of the Act.
(d) The answer is in the negative.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—“ The answer to clause (c) is ‘ nine of the non-official members referred to above tendered resignation of their seats ’. May I know how many of them were elected non-official members and for what period they were absent ? ”

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—“ Will the honourable gentleman put a fresh question ? ”

Opening of Government
High schools.

114 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if, in pursuance of their recent decision to open more high schools, such institutions have been started in any place in which a high school run by private agency was already in existence ; and, if so, in what places ?

114 A.—No such school has been started in a place where a recognized school of the same grade is already working.

Exodus to the Hills.

115 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) if they received the proceedings of a public meeting held at Madras protesting against the Government's summer exodus to Ootacamund even during the present war conditions and if they will place the same on the table ;

(b) what action they have taken thereon ; and

(c) what extra expenditure has already been incurred by reason of the exodus ?

115 A.—(a) Yes. As the proceedings have been already published in the newspapers, the Government see no object in placing them on the table.

(b) No action was considered necessary.

(c) The extra expenditure incurred from 1st April to the 30th June 1918, the period for which alone accounts are now complete, is Rs. 28,320.

Opening of fourth form in a school,
Tiruvallur.

116 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if their attention has been drawn to an article in Hindu of 6th July 1918 at page 6 headed “ The C.C.C.H. School, Tiruvallur ”, and to the reasons given by Diwan Bahadur T. T. Ranga Achariyar for a reconsideration of the Director's refusal to recognize Rao Bahadur Cunnah Chettiyar's school and will the Government be pleased to order the matter to be reconsidered for the above reasons ?

116 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer to question No. 37.

List of persons
England.

117 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a list of the persons who have been given passports for a voyage to England since 1st March 1918, mentioning their names, addresses, and purpose of their voyage ?

117 A.—The Government see no reason to publish this information.

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur.

List of Kazis, etc.

118 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of (1) Kazis appointed by the Government in accordance with the Government of India Act XII of 1880, (2) of other Kazis whose appointment is reported to the Government and also of the (3) Naibkazis appointed by the Kazis as their assistants ?

118 A.—(1) A list of Kazis appointed under Act XII of 1880 in each district is under compilation and will, when ready, be furnished to the Honourable Member if he will repeat his question.

(2) & (3) The Government have no information as no reports are made to Government of such appointments.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—“ As regards clause (3), will the Government be pleased to get information from parties concerned ? ”

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—“ I do not think it is necessary for the Government to interfere in a matter like this, because the appointment of Kazis is a matter with which they have nothing to do.”

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; Sir Alexander Cardew ; Mr. Stone ;
the President.)

119 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the number, nature, origin and description of the jaghirs and other endowments for the maintenance of Kazis in this Presidency ?

Endowments
for maintenance

119 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—“ Will the Government be pleased to get that information for me ? They are in a better position to get the information than I am.”

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—“ I am not quite sure that any useful purpose will be served by getting the information. What does the Honourable Member want the information for ? If he will communicate with me as to what he wants it for, I will consider whether it is possible or whether it is worth while to call for it.”

120 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a descriptive list of Muhammadan charitable endowments under the management and control of the Government, local boards and municipalities ?

endowments.

120 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is drawn to G.O. No. 2505, Revenue, dated 2nd July 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' table.
No further information is at present available.

121 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if they have recently received a memorial from the Muhammadans of Nellore praying for the conversion of the first-grade municipal elementary school for Muhammadans into an incomplete secondary school ? Will the Government be pleased to direct the Municipality of Nellore to accede to this request and, if necessary, to subsidize the said municipality for this purpose as a part of the scheme lately inaugurated for raising some of the municipal and local board elementary schools to the status of secondary schools ?

Municipal Elementary School, Nellore, into a

121 A.—The memorial has been received and is under reference to the Director of Public Instruction.

122 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Muslim and non-Muslim students who were declared “ eligible ” as the result of the last S.S.L.C. examination and the number of Muslim and non-Muslim students admitted this year in the Junior Intermediate class of each of the Arts colleges in Madras Presidency including the Madrasa-i-Azam ?

Muhammadan
candidates
colleges.

122 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for. A list of Muslim and non-Muslim students who are declared eligible will duly appear in the Fort St. George Gazette.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—“ Will the Government be pleased to get the information applied for in question No. 122 from the various colleges ? ”

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE :—“ I would suggest that the Honourable Member should ask the University for the information. The University has a machinery for replying to questions on University matters. It is not a matter with which I am particularly concerned. The information can be got from the University.”

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—“ It refers to the number of students admitted into the various colleges.”

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE :—“ The colleges are under the University. The University assumes responsibility over the colleges. The University will have in its office a record of the admissions into the colleges. I have not got any such record.”

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—“ Will the Government be pleased to call for the information from the University ? I am not a member of the Senate and cannot therefore negotiate with the University direct.”

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—“ If the Honourable Member wishes to have any further information, he may put a further question later on.”

123 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Mussalmans in the Judicial service holding (1) the acting and (2) permanent appointments of District Munsifs, (3) the acting and (4) permanent appointments of Sub-Judges, the total number of each of these appointments and the proportion the number of Mussalman incumbents bears to the total number in each ?

Muhammadans in the
service.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to draw the attention of the High Court to the necessity of increasing the number of Mussalman Munsifs ?

123 A.—(a)

	Number of Muhammadans.		Total number of appointments.	Proportion.
	Acting.	Permanent.
District Munsifs	3	1	158	4 : 158 or 2.5 per cent.
Sub-Judges	1	Nil.	39	1 : 39 or 2.5 per cent.

(b) The matter is already before the High Court.

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Malabar Soap Factory.

- 124 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(1) the amount of money put into the Soap Factory attached to the Department of Fisheries in Malabar;
(2) value of the turnover every year since it was started;
(3) cost of establishment and working expenditure (exclusive of the cost of raw materials) each year;
(4) number of persons trained up to date in the factory in the art of soap-making; and
(5) the number of the trained persons that have gone out of the factory and the number of those employed in the factory?

- 124 A.—(1), (2) & (3) The particulars required are not available.
(4) & (5) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to clauses (a) and (b) of question No. 80.

Grievances of tanners in the Presidency.

- 125 Q.—Have the Government perused the communication in the Hindu, New India, Indian Patriot and Swadesha Mitran of the 28th June 1918 headed "Tanners' Memorial"? Will the Government be pleased to recommend to the Government of India the favourable consideration of the memorial in view of the importance of the industry to this Presidency and to allow the export of the present stock of tanned skins?

- 125 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer to question No. 76.

The New Beach station and its location, etc.

- 126 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the piece of land lying between Springhaven Road and North Beach Road to the east of the High Court as well as the land to its north with buildings, etc., thereon formerly belonging to the General Post office and the Harbour Trust have been sold to the South Indian Railway Company for constructing large station premises thereon?

- (b) Will the Government be pleased to state if the station will be a joint property of the South Indian Railway and Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Companies?

- (c) Will the station be only a sub-station for local train service or the principal station of both the lines for the town?

- (d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a map showing the location and dimensions of the station premises, goods shed and other buildings that are proposed to be constructed on the above land?

- (e) Will the Government be pleased to direct that the lines are so laid out and building and platforms so located as to facilitate double tracks of both the companies being laid in future for local train service?

- (f) Will the Government be pleased to direct that the Beach Railway Station buildings and other connected buildings are put up as near the present station building as possible in any case to the north of the point at which there was formerly a crossing road from the Harbour to the China Bazaar Road, so that the land to the south of this point may remain an open maidan with nothing on it but the railway, and telegraph lines and fencing?

- 126 A.—(a) Yes.

- (b) Yes.

- (c) The station will not be the principal station for the town. It will serve
(1) existing metre gauge local traffic, South Indian Railway,
(2) existing broad gauge traffic, Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway,
(3) the harbour traffic from the existing metre gauge, South Indian Railway, and the proposed Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway metre gauge line from Renigunta when constructed.

- (d) No such map is available. The proposals are at present being framed by the South Indian Railway.

- (e) The suggestion will be remitted to the Railway Companies for consideration.

- (f) As the Government are not aware of the details of the scheme, they are not prepared to make any recommendations at present.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.

Opening of a high school at Manjeri,
Malabar.

- 127 Q.—(a) With reference to the recent Government Order sanctioning 18 new high schools for the Presidency, will the Government be pleased to state whether the allocation of the schools has been settled and whether any new high schools have been allowed for Malabar and South Kanara, and in what places in these districts?

- (b) Will the Government be pleased to order one of these high schools to be located at Manjeri, the headquarter of the Ernad taluk?

- 127 A.—(a) The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 757, Home (Education), dated the 11th June 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

- (b) As the location of the new high schools already sanctioned has been settled, it is not possible to adopt the suggestion of the Honourable Member. The Board school at Angadipuram was recently made a high school with a special view to the development of Mappilla education.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.)

- 128 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that under the present rules persons aspiring only to posts of ministerial officers of civil courts, such as sarishtadars, head clerks, central nazars, etc., have to pass the Civil Judicial test for which the Indian Evidence Act, Contract Act, Negotiable Instruments Act, Transfer of Property Act and Provincial Insolvency Act are among other subjects for examination?

- (b) In view of the practical inutility of these subjects for persons holding low ministerial offices, will Government be pleased to consider the feasibility of eliminating these subjects from the curriculum and retaining only the rest?

- 128 A.—The question of simplifying the Civil Judicial test is under consideration.

- 129 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the preliminary survey of the railway line from Shoranur to Manantoddy has been completed?

- (b) Will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of the proposed line passing through the headquarters of Ernad and Walluvanad taluks and the Mappilla outbreak zone of Pandikad and Melattur and also touching the important markets and trading centres in those taluks, which lie more or less on the way?

- 129 A.—(a) A reconnaissance survey of the line is being made by the South Indian Railway Company and has not yet been completed.

- (b) The suggestions will be considered.

- 130 Q.—(a) With reference to G.O. No. 1870, Revenue, dated 13th May 1918, regarding the resettlement of the Wynad, will the Government be pleased to state whether any inquiry was made by the Special Settlement Officer regarding the economic condition of the people and the effects of the last settlement?

- (b) Have the Government been pleased to consider the representations of the janmis of the Nilgiri and Malabar Wynads in their petition of 28th January 1918 in passing orders regarding the resettlement?

- (c) Have the janmis submitted their observations in reply to Government reference? Will the Government be pleased to consider the matter sympathetically?

- 130 A.—(a) The report of the Special Settlement Officer, Nilgiri and Malabar Wynads, which is recorded in G.O. No. 1870, Revenue, dated 13th May 1918, is, as the Government Order shows, merely a preliminary one and is directed mainly to the question of the staff required for the work. The Government cannot say to what extent the Special Settlement Officer has yet inquired into the economic condition of the tract. That subject will be dealt with in the scheme report which has not yet been received.

- (b) Yes.

- (c) The observations have not yet been received.

- 131 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to inquire if all the Malayalis who have enlisted from Malabar during the last three or more years are given the option of joining the new West Coast Regiment?

- (b) Will the Government, in view of the essential principle which led to the formation of the fresh regiment and in justice to the early recruits, be placed to recommend to the Army authorities the desirability of adopting the course?

- 131 A.—The constitution of the new regiment referred to by the Honourable Member is under discussion with the military authorities and the Government are unable to make any statement on the subject. The suggestion contained in the Honourable Member's question will, however, be borne in mind.

- 132 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that, in view to encourage recruitment for the Indian Army, the Bombay Government have ordered exemption from payment of fees in primary schools to children of those enlisted in the combatant branches of the Army?

- (b) Has any similar concession been allowed in this Presidency to children of those serving in combatant forces? If so, have arrangements been made with managers of private schools for exemption of such children from fees in their schools also?

- (c) In view of the Marumakkattayam system in Malabar and South Kanara, will the Government be pleased to recommend that, so far as those districts are concerned, the recruit may be given the choice of those to be benefited by the above concession limiting the number for each recruit?

- 132 A.—(a) The Government have seen a report to this effect in the newspapers.

- (b) Yes. G.Os. No. 402, Home (Education), dated 23rd March 1918, and No. 973, Home (Education), dated 24th July 1918, will be placed on the Editors' Table.

- (c) The matter is under consideration.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Gillman.)

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar.Government Technical Institute,
Madura.

133 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the Government Technical Institute at Madura was proposed to be extended by putting up a series of buildings for use to educate boys in various technical subjects such as carpentry, weaving and smithy, etc.?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the various estimates for buildings, the dates on which they were prepared and the progress that has been made year after year in the construction of these buildings?

(c) Is it a fact that there has been delay in the construction of the several portions of these buildings and their delivery for commencing the various branches of works proposed to be started? Will the Government be pleased to issue orders to see that the buildings are completed at once and delivered?

133 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member will be furnished with copies of G.Os. No. 1519 W., dated 30th July 1913, No. 2380 W., dated 7th December 1914, and No. 957 W., dated 26th June 1916, sanctioning the estimates (original and revised) for the buildings in connexion with the Technical Institute. During 1916-17 and 1917-18 an expenditure of Rs. 1.41 and '63 lakhs respectively was incurred on the work, and there is a provision of 5 lakh in the current year's budget.

(c) The Government are not aware of any avoidable delay in the execution of this work which is expected to be completed by the end of the current official year.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"As regards clause (c), will the Government be pleased to call for a report as to the delay that occurred?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"We have already inquired into the matter, and, as stated in the answer, there was no avoidable delay in the execution of the work."

Improvement of an irrigation source in
district.

134 Q.—With respect to question No. 31 put by me in the meeting of the Legislative Council, dated 3rd April 1918, regarding the Eluntharaikondan tank, will the Government be pleased to state whether any decision has been come to and whether the Government will take up the improvement of the tank on hand immediately?

134 A.—The question is still under consideration by the local officers. The Collector reported in June last that the Revenue Divisional Officer who had been asked to examine the proposals for improving the supply to the tank could not do so as the supply was very scanty last year and that the matter would be examined in the current year.

Reservation of Arugupulli tope, Ramnad, for grazing
purposes.

135 Q.—With respect to question No. 33 in the same meeting regarding the Arugupulli tope, will the Government be pleased to state whether the same has been set apart for grazing purposes or if any other orders have been passed?

135 A.—Proposals for the disafforestation of the Arugupulli tope are under the consideration of the local officers and the Board of Revenue. No orders have yet been passed on the subject.

Publication of certain statements in Local Fund administration
reports.

136 Q.—With respect to question No. 35 in the said meeting regarding the publication of certain statements in Local Fund administration reports, will the Government be pleased to state what inquiry has been made and what orders passed?

136 A.—All the statements which are compiled and furnished to district boards will be made available to Honourable Members.

Water-supply to the
tank.

137 Q.—With respect to question No. 38 in the said meeting regarding the water-supply to the Palayakayal tank, will the Government be pleased to state whether the investigation has been completed and if any final scheme has been adopted?

137 A.—The investigation has not yet been completed.

Central nazarat

138 Q.—(a) With respect to the discussions in the meeting of the Legislative Council at its meeting, dated 21st November 1917, regarding the splitting up, wherever possible, of the central nazarat and the central copyist establishments, will the Government be pleased to state what action has been taken since then?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence on the subject and the final decision, if any, arrived at?

138 A.—The High Court has been addressed on the subject.

The Police and the District Conference at Thottiyam.

139 Q.—Is it a fact that, during the sittings of the District Conference held recently at Thottiyam in the Trichinopoly district, armed reserved police was taken to that place? Will the Government be pleased to explain the circumstances under which this action was taken?

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Suryanarayanamurti Nayudu;
Mr. Siva Rao.)

139 A.—A detachment of reserve police was sent for because the proceedings on the second day of the conference indicated the possibility of a disturbance with which the local police might not have been competent to deal.

140 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the Government are selling salt of the Ennore licensees at Madras depot by a system of auction sales from 18th July 1917 to date? Sale of salt at Madras depot.

(b) Is it a fact that the average price of these sales work out to Re. 1 per maund ex duty as contrasted with 3 annas during pre-war years?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to quote the prices at these various sales per maund ex duty from the said 17th July 1917 to date?

140 A.—(a) Ennore being a monopoly factory, the licensees manufacture salt for sale to Government. The salt is the property of the Government, not of the licensees. The Ennore salt has been sold at the Madras depot by auction from the 24th July 1917.

(b) & (c) The Government have no accurate information but will call for the same.

141 Q.—Are the Government aware that the licensees of salt under excise system have been selling their salt for the last two years and more at nearly the rate fetched at the abovesaid auction sales? Sale of salt by licensees.

141 A.—The Government have no accurate information but will call for the same.

142 Q.—(a) Are the Government aware that unseasonable rains in the best part of the season having been proving disastrous to salt manufacture in this year also in the said circle and the said licensees are very badly hit? Fall in quantity of salt manufactured.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to quote the estimated quantity of salt scraped up to the present time in the current season in the said circle and also the average for the preceding five years?

142 A.—(a) It is true that the weather has been unfavourable for the manufacture of salt in the Ennore Circle in the current year.

(b) The Government have no accurate information but will call for the same.

143 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that Ennore licensees petitioned to the Board for an increase of kudivaram and that only a very slight excess of about 10 pies per maund has been promised to them for salt scraped after July 1918 only? Application by Ennore salt licensees for increase in kudivaram.

(b) Will the Government be pleased in view of two adverse seasons to order a higher rate of kudivaram for all salt of season 1918, securing to the said licensees at least 25 per cent of the profits made by the salt in their auction sales as a temporary measure for the current year?

143 A.—(a) The Government have no accurate information but will call for the same.

(b) The Government will inquire if any relief is necessary to the licensees.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur K. R. Suryanarayanamurti Nayudu.

144 Q.—With reference to G.O. No. 326 W., dated 6th March 1918, regarding the construction of a new general hospital at Cocanada, will the Government be pleased to state when the construction is likely to be started? Construction of a new hospital at Cocanada.

144 A.—Detailed plans and estimates for the new hospital buildings are not yet ready and it is not possible to say now when construction is likely to be started.

145 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state as to how the proposal to construct a bridge between Neelapally and Yanam, a French town in Gōdāvari district, was decided upon? Construction of a bridge between Neelapally and Yanam.

145 A.—The district board has been advised to postpone consideration of the construction of the bridge near Yanam till conditions become normal, as the prices of steel work and cement are prohibitive just now.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao.

146 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the question of the restoration of the "Kinni Vattan" channel in Kaliyampundi and other villages in the Uttiramerur division, Chingleput district, has been investigated; if so, with what result? Restoration of a channel, Chingleput.

146 A.—The investigation has not yet been completed.

147 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the Government recently sanctioned a war allowance for one year from the 1st of March last to all Government servants drawing a pay up to Rs. 50? War allowance to employees of local bodies.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to sanction it in the case of employees of the local bodies also?

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

- 147 A.—(a) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer to question No. 53.
 (b) The Government have authorized local bodies to sanction similar allowances where necessary and where they can afford the additional expenditure.

Grain compensation and house-rent allowances to compounders.

148 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the grain compensation allowance is denied to the class of compounders though their maximum salary falls below Rs. 30? If so, will the Government be pleased to extend it to them?

(b) Is it a fact that there is no provision for payment of "house-rent allowance" to the compounders? Will the Government be pleased to sanction it in their case?

148 A.—(a) An improved scale of salary having been sanctioned for compounders with effect from 1st March 1918, compensation for dearness of grain ceased to be payable from the same date, the higher rates of pay having been fixed with reference to the fact that upon their introduction the special allowance would cease.

(b) Compounders may be provided with free quarters where available, but no house-rent allowance is payable where free quarters cannot be provided. The Government are not prepared to revise the existing rules.

Permission to retired officials to practise as vakils.

149 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the articles in the New India under date 21st February 1918 and in the Hindu under dates 4th March 1918 and 10th April 1918 regarding "Retired Government officials"? If so, will the Government be pleased to grant to those retired officials, who have passed the criminal judicial test, general permission to practise before magistrates?

149 A.—The Government have perused the articles. The Code of Criminal Procedure gives every magistrate a discretion qualified by certain rules to permit persons other than qualified legal practitioners to act in criminal proceedings before him. The Government are not prepared to interfere.

Typists in Revenue Divisional offices.

150 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the scale of pay sanctioned in the case of typists employed in the Revenue Divisional offices and the scale allowed in the other Government offices in the districts?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to equalize the scale in the offices of the same grade?

150 A.—No typists have been sanctioned for Revenue Divisional offices. The scale of pay in other Government offices is—

	RS.
(1) For clerks who have passed elementary test in type-writing.	20—1—25
(2) Do. intermediate test in type-writing.	25—1—30
(3) Do. advanced test in type-writing.	30—1—50

Building for Municipal High School, Bellary.

151 Q.—Is it a fact that the Government sanctioned a sum of Rs. 50,000 in the current year's budget for the construction of a building for the Municipal High School at Bellary? Will the Government be pleased to issue instructions forthwith to the Public Works Department to start the work?

151 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 206, Financial, dated the 19th March 1918, in which a subsidy of Rs. 50,000 was sanctioned for the purpose. Plans and estimates for the work are under preparation.

Reorganization of the Registration department.

152 Q.—Have the Government received a memorial from the district and the sub-registrars regarding the reorganization of their salary, emoluments and prospects? Will the Government be pleased to pass favourable orders thereon?

152 A.—Memorials have been received from both district and sub-registrars and they are under consideration.

Abolition of the plague notification system.

153 Q.—Is it a fact that the recent "Plague Committee" concluded, among other matters that the notification system and the inspection at the frontier stations might be dispensed with? Will the Government be pleased to discontinue the inspection and the issue of notifications at Hindupur in the Anantapur district?

153 A.—Yes. Orders have been issued directing the closure of the notification station at Hindupur.

Revision of the Plague Regulations.

154 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the "Plague Regulations" have been recast in the light of the recommendations of the said committee? Will the Government be pleased to place them on the table?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the apportionment of "plague charges" between the Government and the "local bodies" has been settled, and in what manner?

154 A.—(a) Yes; the Honourable Member is referred to the revised Regulations published in notification No. 125 on pages 430-32 of Part I-A of the Fort St. George Gazette, dated the 16th July 1918.

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Siva Rao; Mr. Gillman.)

(b) Yes. So far as can be foreseen expenditure will only be needed for the following purposes:—

- (1) observation, including the pay of plague inspectors;
- (2) inoculation;
- (3) the provision of shelter for persons leaving their houses;
- (4) police to guard evacuated houses and approved camps;
- (5) rat destruction, including the cost of traps and poison and the pay of any staff employed;
- (6) hospitals, appliances and staff for the care of patients; and
- (7) measures taken to ensure the breaking of bulk of consignments of grain.

Expenditure on the first four items will be borne from Provincial funds. The cost of the fifth and sixth will be borne by municipal funds in municipal areas and by local funds in rural areas. That of the seventh will fall on Provincial funds if the measures are undertaken by the Collector under Plague Regulation 8 and on the municipal or local authority concerned if they are carried out under Regulation 10.

155 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the grant of the free studentships up to 10 per cent on the rolls in all the secondary schools has been sanctioned by the Government as recommended by the Educational Conference of 1916 and in the resolutions moved by me in May 1917 and in March 1918? If not, will the Government be pleased to sanction them forthwith?

Free studentships in secondary schools.

155 A.—The matter is still under consideration.

156 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the question of the opening of agricultural schools has been decided; if so, in what manner?

Agricultural schools.

156 A.—The Government have decided to open two agricultural middle schools in the Presidency, one near the Central Farm at Coimbatore and the second near the Anakapalle Farm in the Vizagapatam district.

157 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to start any agricultural farms of veterinary institutions during the current year; if so, in which localities? Will the Government be pleased to sanction an agricultural farm and a veterinary hospital at Anantapur?

Agricultural farms and veterinary institutions to be opened in current year.

157 A.—It is expected that the following farms will be started during the current year:—

- (1) a demonstration farm near Gudiyattam in the North Arcot district,
- (2) a cattle-breeding farm in the Kavali taluk of the Nellore district, and
- (3) a Cambodia cotton farm in the Pollachi taluk of the Coimbatore district.

A veterinary institution has already been opened at Devakottai in the Ramnad district in the current year. Sanction has been accorded to the opening of veterinary institutions at (1) Ootacamund, (2) Pollachi, (3) Cuddapah and (4) Bezvada, but the Government have no information when they will start work.

It is hoped that an agricultural farm will eventually be established in the Anantapur district. There is no prospect at present of a veterinary hospital being sanctioned for Anantapur.

158 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the scheme to open a separate District and Sessions Court at Anantapur has been sent up to the Government of India for sanction? If so, whether the sanction has been received?

A separate District and Sessions Court for Anantapur.

158 A.—The subject is still under consideration.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Will the Government be pleased to state whether the scheme to open a separate District and Sessions Court at Anantapur has been sent up to the Government of India for sanction?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—"It has not yet been sent up."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Which is under consideration? Is it the scheme itself? Is it with the Local Government or the Government of India?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—"The scheme for opening a District and Sessions Court in Anantapur has not yet assumed a final shape."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Has it been sanctioned by the Local Government?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—"It has to be sanctioned not by the Local Government but by the Secretary of State. The proposal of the Local Government has not yet been sent up."

159 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the location of the four high schools for girls and of the six manual training centres sanctioned in the current year's budget has been decided? If so, at which places?

Girls' high schools and manual training centres.

(Mr. Siva Rao; the President.)

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(b) Will the Government be pleased to open a high school for girls and a manual training centre in the Ceded districts?

159 A.—The consideration of these matters has not been completed.

Mortality in jails.

160 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the increasing mortality in the jails? Will the Government be pleased to state what steps it proposes to take in the matter?

160 A.—Yes. The Inspector-General of Prisons has been requested to give this matter his special attention while inspecting such jails as have shown unsatisfactory statistics.

Investigation of indigenous systems of medicine.

161 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what progress has been made in the investigation undertaken by them of the "indigenous systems" of medicine?

161 A.—M.R.Ry. Rao Sahib M. C. Koman has recently been pleased on special duty to obtain information with regard to the drugs used by Ayurvedic practitioners.

Condition of Indian refreshment rooms on railways.

162 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the result of the inquiry recently undertaken by them as to the sufficiency of accommodation of the Indian refreshment rooms on the railways and the quality of food supplied therein: and to place the report, if any, on the table?

162 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 14.

Recommendations of the Pilgrims Committee.

163 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, has been taken on the recommendations of the Pilgrims Committee?

163 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.Os. No. 1658 M., dated 21st September 1916 and No. 955 L., dated 2nd July 1917, which have been placed on the Editors' Table.

The suggestions made in regard to individual places have been examined or are under examination by the local bodies concerned. The Government of India have recently given a grant of rupees one lakh for improving the sanitation of pilgrim centres and it is proposed to distribute this amount to local bodies for urgent sanitary works in important pilgrim centres.

Control of prices.

164 Q.—Will the Government be pleased

(a) to make full statement as to the steps taken in regard to the abnormal rise of prices of foodstuffs and the other necessities of life on account of the war and the result arrived at with a comparative table of the prices prevailing before and after their action;

(b) to lay on the table the reports, if any, received by the Collectors of the districts in the same connexion; and

(c) to consider the desirability of appointing a Controller as in Bombay, with the necessary powers for fixing prices and with the requisite staff working under him and also the desirability of organizing local committees to help him?

164 A.—(a) The Honourable Member is referred to the press communiqué issued on the 27th July 1918 and to the table of prices of the staple food-grains published every week in the Port St. George Gazette.

(b) The reports received by the Collectors are not before the Government.

(c) So far as the Government are aware there is no Controller of Prices in Bombay. The officer who at one time was so designated has now become the Director of Civil Supplies. A Director of Civil Supplies has similarly been appointed for this Presidency and has been given the necessary staff. The Directors have no power to fix prices, but exercise their control chiefly through the regulation of railway traffic. Mr. Wood, the Director of Civil Supplies for Madras, is assisted by a Traffic and Priority Committee. In addition Emergency Committees have been constituted in the districts among whose duties is to advise Mr. Wood as to the state of supplies in the various parts of each district and the need for priority over the railways for the replenishment of depleted stocks.

Special Legislative Council meeting for considering Report on Constitutional Reforms.

165 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to convene a special meeting of the Legislative Council to enable the non-official members to express their views on the Report on the Indian Constitutional Reforms?

165 A.—There is no such intention at present.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Will the Government be pleased to call a meeting of the Council to discuss the report on the Indian Constitutional Reforms?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The answer is on the paper."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"The answer is that there is no such intention. Is the matter under consideration?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I cannot say; consideration is not barred."

[13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Siva Rao; the President.)

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Will the Government be pleased to consider it?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I cannot answer it."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Are the Government aware that the report does contemplate the discussion of these matters in the Imperial and Provincial Legislative Councils?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I am not prepared to argue with the Honourable Gentleman. The Honourable Gentleman has put a question on paper, and the answer on behalf of the Government is perfectly plain, there is no such intention at present."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"I wish to ask a supplemental question whether the Government will consider it hereafter."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"If the honourable gentleman will put this question at the next meeting, an answer will be given."

166 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the policy laid down in the Report on the Indian Constitutional Reforms and in the recent resolution of the Government of India "that the reformed and representative district boards of the future could and should be utilized by the district officer for purposes of advice and consultation"?

District boards to be utilized by Collectors for advice and consultation.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to give immediate effect to it?

166 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The Government do not propose to take any immediate action in the matter.

167 Q.—(a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the abnormal rate of mortality now prevailing in the City of Madras?

Mortality in Madras City.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to depute a special officer to investigate into the causes and to propose the requisite preventive and remedial measures?

167 A.—(a) The Honourable Member presumably refers to the high death-rate which has prevailed since the outbreak of an epidemic resembling influenza.

(b) The Surgeon-General has been asked to report on this epidemic and an officer was recently deputed to Bombay to ascertain the results of investigations carried out there.

168 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and if so what steps are taken or proposed to be taken to improve the staff, the equipment, the accommodation and the general condition of the district headquarter hospitals recently taken over by the Government?

Improvements to headquarter hospitals.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to appoint hospital committees and non-official visitors in respect of all of them?

168 A.—Steps will be taken to improve the staff and other conditions of the hospitals in question when that course seems to be necessary and so far as funds allow. Each case will be considered on its merits and the Government are unable to make any general statement that would be applicable to all cases. The question of appointing committees or otherwise will likewise be decided in accordance with the circumstances of individual hospitals.

169 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of appointing non-official visitors to all the war recruiting offices?

Non-official visitors for recruiting offices.

169 A.—The Government do not consider that the appointment of non-official visitors to recruiting offices would serve any useful purpose.

170 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the following Bills are ready and have received the sanction of the Government of India and when they are likely to be introduced in the Legislative Council:—

Bills relating to local self-government.

- (i) The Madras City Municipality Bill;
- (ii) The Madras District Municipalities Bill;
- (iii) The Madras Local Boards Bill?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of recasting them in the light of the policy announced in the recent resolution of the Government of India on local self-government?

170 A.—(a) (i) The Madras City Municipal Bill has been approved by the Government of India and is being introduced at this meeting.

(ii) & (iii) The Madras District Municipalities Bill and the Madras Local Boards Bill will be submitted to the Government of India shortly. It cannot be definitely stated when these Bills will be introduced in the Legislative Council.

(b) The two last-named Bills are being re-examined in the light of the recent resolution of the Government of India.

(Mr. Siva Rao ; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

Informal panchayats and their working.

- 171 Q.—Will the Government be pleased
(a) to furnish a list of all the “informal panchayats” organized in the Province;
(b) to state whether any reports have been received as to their working; if so, to place them on the table; if not, to call for the reports; and also
(c) to state whether any money has been hitherto sanctioned to “finance” them; if so how the money has been distributed?

- 171 A.—(a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statements laid on the table in reply to questions Nos. 12 and 74 asked at the meetings held on the 2nd April 1917 and on the 3rd April 1918, respectively.
(b) The Government have not yet received any report and do not propose to call for reports before December 1918.
(c) G.O. No. 178, Financial, dated the 13th March 1918, sanctioning a grant of 1.25 lakhs to district boards in 1917-18 for aid to informal panchayats will be placed on the Editors' Table.

Recurring grant for improving pay of teachers.

- 172 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the Government of India made a “recurring” grant of four lakhs for improving the salary and the emoluments of the teachers?
(b) Will the Government be pleased to state fully as to how the grant has been or is proposed to be utilized with the past and the present scale of pay of the teachers of various grades in the several schools?

- 172 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to paragraph 60 of the Revised Financial Statement for the current year and to G.O. No. 361, Home (Education), dated the 18th March 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

Additional Secretary to Government.

- 173 Q.—Is it a fact that the Government propose to appoint an Additional Secretary in the Government office; if so, will the Government be pleased to bestow it on an Indian?

- 173 A.—The Government do not propose to create any additional post of Secretary beyond that referred to in their press communiqué of the 29th June. As therein stated, the Hon'ble Mr. A. R. Knapp was appointed Secretary in the new branch styled the Revenue (Special) Department with effect from the 1st July and his place in the Revenue Department proper was on the following day taken by Mr. M. Young.

Changes proposed in the Board of Revenue.

- 174 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the changes, if any, they propose in the constitution of the Board of Revenue?

- 174 A.—The subject is under consideration.

Mr. Phillips's report on civil courts and Provincial Judicial Service.

- 175 Q.—Will the Government be pleased
(a) to publish the report of Mr. Justice Phillips regarding the distribution of the civil courts in the mufassal and the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service and the ministerial services;
(b) to state whether any action has so far been taken upon the recommendations contained in it; and also
(c) to state whether his report is under correspondence with the Government of India; if so, in what connexion?

- 175 A.—(a) The papers cannot yet be published.
(b) & (c) The Government of India have been addressed.

Reorganization of Provincial Judicial
Service.

- 176 Q.—Will the Government be pleased
(a) to state whether the High Court have sent up recommendations for the recruitment and the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service;
(b) if so whether any action has been taken upon it;
(c) to publish the report of the High Court in the same matter; and also
(d) to state what steps, if any, they propose to take for the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service?

- 176 A.—Certain recommendations on the subject were received from the High Court in 1912 and 1916 and will be considered along with those made by the Public Services Commission. The Government are not prepared to publish the reports.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.

Control of prices.

- 177 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to control the rise of prices of foodstuffs in the Presidency?

- 177 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the press communiqué issued on the 27th July 1918.

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

- 178 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and, if so, what further restrictions on railway traffic are contemplated in the immediate future?

Restrictions on railway traffic.

- 178 A.—The possibility that more stringent control may be found necessary has been under consideration, but no such measure has at present been decided upon.

- 179 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and, if so, what steps have been taken to improve canal traffic?

Improvement
of canal traffic.

- 179 A.—The only canal for which any improvements were considered necessary was the Buckingham canal; this canal has been put in thorough working order and a suction dredger is under construction to deal with any silting at river crossings that may be caused by floods.

- 180 Q.—(i) Will the Government be pleased to state for how many students of the secondary grade is accommodation provided in the Government Training School, Nellore?

Accommodation in Government
Training School,
Nellore.

- (ii) Will the Government be pleased to state (a) how many applications were received for admission into the Government Training School, Nellore, from persons in the Nellore district, (b) how many of them were allowed and (c) how many of them were rejected?

- (iii) Will the Government be pleased to state how many applications were received for admission into that school from (a) Guntur district, (b) Kistna district of (c) other districts, how many of them were allowed and how many of them were rejected?

- (iv) Is it a fact that some applicants who were previously working as teachers were refused admission into the training school and, if so, how many?

- (v) Is it a fact that some applicants who were not teachers but were clerks in other departments were granted admission and, if so, how many?

- 180 A.—The information is not available.

- 181 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that there has been no revision of pay of clerks of Inspectors of Schools for several years, except in the case of clerks of the lowest grade?

Pay of clerks of Inspectors of Schools.

- (b) Have any proposals been made to the Government for raising the pay of those clerks, in view of the present conditions?

- (c) Will the Government be pleased to consider the desirability of revising their scale at an early date?

- 181 A.—(a) No general revision has been made. The pay of the clerks in the office of the Inspector of European and Training Schools was raised in 1914.

- (b) No.

- (c) The Government will give due consideration to any representations that may be made.

- 182 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the karnams of Madanapalle and Vayalpad taluks in the Chittoor district presented memorials to the Government praying that they might be relieved of land records work?

Memorials from certain karnams in regard to land records work.

- (b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and, if so, what orders have been passed in the matter?

- 182 A.—No such memorial has been received by the Government.

- 183 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any steps have been taken to bring into operation the scheme for the reorganization of the male and female inspecting agencies, Education Department?

Reorganisation of inspecting staff.

- (b) Will the Government be pleased to publish all the papers relating to those schemes before further action is taken?

- 183 A.—(a) No action has been taken recently in regard to the reorganization of the male inspecting agency. The strengthening of the female inspecting agency is under consideration.

- (b) The Government are unable to entertain the suggestion.

- 184 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many Assistant Inspectors of Schools in the Presidency are in the Provincial Educational Service and how many of them are in the cadre of Sub-Assistant Inspectors?

The Hon'ble Mr. K. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar.

Assessment of backyard cultivation.

185 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if reply has been received to the reference regarding the assessment of backyard cultivation from the Board of Revenue and, if so, lay the papers on the table?

185 A.—The Board's report, dated 31st July 1918, has just been received and the Government have not yet been able to consider it. Moreover the returns from the districts are not yet complete. The papers will be laid on the table or published in due course.

Floods in the Cauvery.

186 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to ascertain whether there are any special causes either avoidable or unavoidable which have led to this abnormal and almost total failure of floods in the Cauvery till now?

186 A.—The low supply in the Cauvery has been due to the rainfall in its catchment being much below the average.

Rainfall in
of the Cauvery.

187 Q.—In view of the hardship and loss landholders are put to for want of timely and reliable intimation regarding rainfall in the catchment areas of the Cauvery and its feeders in this year, will the Government be pleased to see that henceforth such information is published every week at every Tahsildar's and Deputy Tahsildar's office in the areas fed by every river which commands an appreciable extent of irrigation in this Presidency?

187 A.—The Government do not consider that the publication of the weekly statistics of rainfall asked for would serve any useful purpose.

APPENDIX IV.

[Vide answer to question No. 60 asked by the Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 13th August 1918, page 13 supra.]

G.O. No. 798, Financial, dated 10th December 1917.

The Secretary of State has sanctioned the following amendment to article 459, Civil Service Regulations :—

Substitute the following for this article :—

459. (a) Ministerial officers who have attained the age of 55 may be required to retire but should ordinarily be retained in service so long as they remain efficient until they come under the provisions of clause (e).

(b) Officers, other than ministerial, who have attained the age of 55 should ordinarily be required to retire, and should not be retained in service except where unquestionable public grounds for retention exist, and there is no doubt as to the physical fitness of the officer.

(c) Each officer's case should be taken up when he is approaching the age of 55 and before the expiry of each extension of service. Extensions may not be granted for any period exceeding one year at one time.

(d) The powers given by the preceding clauses may be exercised by the authority competent to fill the appointment (if vacant) of the officer who is required to retire or retained in service.

(e) An officer who has attained the age of 60 cannot be retained in the service of Government save in very exceptional circumstances, and with the sanction of the Local Government.

(f) No claim to compensation, from an officer who is required to retire under the provisions of this article, will be entertained.

2. In consequence of the above amendment, article 912, Civil Service Regulations, is cancelled.

(True extract)

L. DAVIDSON,
Acting Chief Secretary.

APPENDIX VII.

[Vide answer to question No. 108 asked by the Hon'ble Sri Sobha Chandra Singh Deo at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 13th August 1918, page 21 supra.]

G.O. No. 81, Medical, dated 28th September 1916.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 5th April 1916, in answer to an interpellation by the Hon'ble Raja Sri Madan Mohan Singh Deo, the Government undertook to consider the question of instituting special scholarships for the encouragement of Uriyas in technical branches of education, such as engineering and medicine. The Surgeon-General, who was consulted as regards the increased facilities that could be given for the education of Uriyas in medicine, has now submitted his recommendations on the subject.

2. He points out in the first place that, as the Uriya community is backward in general education, it is desirable to give special facilities for the general education of Uriyas and he recommends the creation of scholarships in secondary schools for this purpose. The Government observe, however, that there is already a number of Government scholarships for boys in secondary schools and that the number allotted for the First Circle has been lately raised and is now 27. In the award of these scholarships special consideration is invariably shown to the claims of Uriya candidates, who also enjoy the privilege of paying school-fees at half-rates. Moreover two schools, one at Russellkonda and the other at Purushottapur, are specially maintained at the cost of Provincial funds for the benefit of Uriyas. These measures will no doubt gradually increase the number of Uriya boys qualified to enter for the medical profession and the Government do not consider that there is any need for providing further special facilities for the secondary education of Uriya boys.

3. As regards the provision of special facilities for their medical education, the Government agree with the Surgeon-General that Uriya students who have obtained good marks in the School Final examination may be admitted into the medical schools without undergoing a competitive examination and may be given a special stipend of Rs. 12 per mensem each. They are accordingly pleased to sanction the grant of two such stipends every year commencing from the 1st July 1917 to qualified Uriya students entering the Medical School, Vizagapatam. These stipends will count against the total number allotted to the Telugu districts.

4. The Government also sanction the award annually by the Surgeon-General of a special scholarship of Rs. 20 per mensem to the best of the qualified Uriya candidates who may offer themselves for admission into the Medical College, Madras.

42 ACTS ASSENTED TO; COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COUNCIL AND A MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT OF THE COUNCIL.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; the President.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

ACT ASSENTED TO BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The Secretary announced on behalf of His Excellency the President that the Mappilla Succession Act, 1918, had received the assent of His Excellency the Governor-General on the 25th May 1918.

ACT ASSENTED TO BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR.

The Secretary reported that the Mappilla Succession Act, 1918, which had been passed at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd April 1918, received the assent of His Excellency the Governor on the 3rd May 1918.

COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COUNCIL.

(i) The Secretary reported the receipt of a communication, dated the 6th May 1918, from the Joint Secretary to the Gōdāvari District Association, Cocanada, regarding the Bill to amend the Madras Village Courts Act, 1888.

(ii) With reference to the answer given to question No. 55 asked at the meeting of the Council held on the 12th February 1918, regarding improvements effected to the water-supply in grazing grounds, the Secretary laid on the table copy of G.O. No. 1848, Revenue, dated the 13th May 1918, recording papers on the subject.

(iii) With reference to the answer given to question No. 8 asked at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd April 1918, the Secretary laid on the table copy of a list of towns in the Presidency notified under Board's Standing Order No. 21 (9) during 1917-18.

A MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT OF THE COUNCIL.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Before the next business is taken up, I wish to move an adjournment of the house. I will state why."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Why now?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Under rule 4."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What page?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Page 87 of the Council Rules: 'A motion that any meeting or business be adjourned or postponed or that the Council pass to the business next in order in the statement of business may be moved at any time without previous notice as a distinct question, but not so as to interrupt a speech. If the motion is carried, the meeting or business shall be adjourned or postponed accordingly'."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What does the honourable gentleman propose to move?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I propose to move an adjournment of the house this day six months."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Will the honourable gentleman sit down? I do not wish to stand between the Honourable Members and the rules. What is the motion?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"This meeting of the Council do stand adjourned this day six months."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I hope the honourable gentleman has weighed his word. Will the honourable gentleman sit down while I consider the rule? (After consulting the rules) will the honourable gentleman proceed?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Your Excellency, it is hardly proper that business should get on here when important duties remain neglected. I wish to call attention to facts that any one who has a close contact with the people must be aware of; I have toured recently through ten Tamil districts and moved closely with the various classes of people, and I find a widespread feeling that there is not a sufficient recognition by the authorities concerned that internal order, peace and good Government of this Province is in peril either at a near or more distant date. The conditions making for unsettlement arise out of the War. High prices of necessities have led to looting in some places. No doubt the looting has as yet been confined to a very few places. But in times like the present, when men's minds are rather unsettled and when the masses are more responsive to stimuli of various sorts, looting or other disorder in one place will be copied by places even at a considerable distance. There is also another cause. We have had the Premier's message and the Viceroy's pronouncement thereon that India's north-western door is open, that some of 'the credulous and fanatical people of Afganistan' at a time of world excitement may be 'carried away by any wind of vain doctrine' that 'we must take no risks,' and 'whenever the call may come and whatever it may be we must be ready to meet it.' Local authorities in this Province have also referred to those possibilities as a reason for redoubling our War efforts. These statements required to be made and are fully justifiable. But they have revived apprehensions that had been dissipated after the destruction of "Emden." People realize no doubt that we in the south are very far indeed from the north-western door; yet there are those who fear that, consequent on any rumoured attack, the thieving and criminal classes will combine and expose the lives, honour and property of the people in towns and villages to great danger and that the handful of police now in the country will not be able to put down any large epidemic of disorder. Special constables, being untrained, will be equally useless and there is no other assistance that the people can rely upon. Many men think that each adult will have to keep himself in readiness to defend his women, children and property and feel their utter helplessness in the matter at present. Even the cultured, educated and well-to-do classes feel their present condition to be miserable and contrast it with the condition of similar classes in the civilised countries. Several of them, as at Namakkal and Tuticorin have come forward to drill and train themselves and be ready for self defence. They are asking the authorities for necessary help. Several gentlemen at Namakkal in Salem district asked their Sub-Magistrate to request the Collector to give them the necessary facilities for the purpose. However, no such thing has been done. Neither the Collector nor the Government have, so far as I know, moved even a little finger in this matter. I know people in other places, hopeless of getting authorities moving in this matter, have begun with imperfect assistance to drill themselves. This is hardly satisfactory state of affairs. The first duty of Government is to secure protection of subjects against all disorder from within or without. This duty is recognised to be the duty of this Legislative Council also, in section 79 of Government of India Act, 1915. People feel that this most important of all duties remains unperformed. Authorities concerned appear to ignore the above facts. Their action has been merely to ask people to lessen apprehension. They cannot remove circumstances which must continue to raise apprehension. They have certainly failed to help the thoughtful householders who, without seriously giving up their homes and avocations, yet wish to be drilled and equipped to meet sudden outbursts of disorder in their neighbourhood and there is no use in pointing out the Indian Defence Force to such people. Indian Defence Force is only for the few that will leave their homes and avocations for long periods and place themselves under military control and the Army Act, and Indian Defence Force is of no use for ordinary householder who likes to be in his own neighbourhood and form a sort of drilling or Rifle Club for home defence. To help these a more liberal issue of licences for arms and the loan of arms and drilling officers is felt to be necessary and I have therefore to move an adjournment of the house until such time as authorities have attended to this important duty."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju seconded the motion.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I will just explain the situation. The honourable gentleman has taken advantage of this rule 4 in order to place before this Council the substance of a resolution which he submitted for the agenda paper on this occasion and which I disallowed as President on the ground that it was a matter for the Government of India. The training of troops for the army and the drilling of troops is not a matter that lies within the province of the Provincial Government, and therefore I was obliged by the rules which committed such subjects to the charge of the Government of India to disallow the honourable gentleman's resolution. In order to give publicity to this resolution he has now taken this means which, as he probably will admit, is a straining at any rate of the purpose for which this rule 4 is included in our rules. I cannot therefore allow a discussion on this resolution. I must rule the honourable gentleman out of order."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Is not the question of employing our own officers to drill and help a group of gentlemen within the province of the Local Government?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The honourable gentlemen will agree that this is a simple point. I hope they will really believe I am having regard to promoting the usefulness of the Legislative Council and the desirability of Presidents and of Members of the Council having some respect, in fact scrupulous regard and respect to the rules of the Council. The Council is after all a greater thing than the individual members. Therefore, it behoves us all to carry out literally the rules of the Council in the interests of the Council as a public institution. I do not think therefore that the minor point that he mentioned really weakens the ground upon which I have disallowed his resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I want to make it quite clear that it is not with a view to giving publicity to the fact of my having proposed a resolution that I made this motion. I could have published my resolution in the papers. I have moved because I thought there was some neglect in the matter. If Your Excellency's Government think there is none, that is a matter for the public to judge. I must protest against Your Excellency's ruling which is not warranted by the rules and the assumption that I consciously violated the rules. Violation of rules is not by me. I hope Your Excellency will not continue that impression but will correct it."

A BILL TO PROVIDE FOR THE VOLUNTARY REGISTRATION OF MUSSALMAN MARRIAGES AND DIVORCES.

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur then moved for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the voluntary registration of Mussalman marriages and divorces. In doing so he said:—"I beg to move, under rule 31 of the rules for the conduct of business, for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the Voluntary Registration of Mussalman Marriages and

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

Divorces'. I have circulated to the members of the Council copies of the draft Bill and a full Statement of Objects and Reasons. It will be seen that Muslim marriage is a very simple affair. Marriage, according to Muslim law is simply a civil contract, its validity does not depend upon any religious ceremony. The consent of the contracting parties, which is called ijab—'declaration'—and qubul—'acceptance'—expressed in the presence of two male witnesses (or one male and two female witnesses) is all that is needed to make the marriage perfectly valid. The offer of a mahr or marriage consideration by the bridegroom and its acceptance by the bride is also considered essential in order to constitute a valid marriage. If a contracting party is a minor, consent to the marriage can be given by her or his wali or guardian. A purdanishen woman (and in this country almost all Mussalman women are purdanishen) gives her consent to the marriage through her attorney called vakil duly authorized by her in the presence of two witnesses. One of the Mussalmans present on the occasion officiates as Kazi and puts the necessary questions in the presence of the two witnesses to the bridegroom (or to his wali in the case of a minor) and to the bride (or to her wali in the case of a minor or to her vakil in the case of a purdanishen) and elicits their consent to the marriage and their agreement as to the value or form of mahr and then offers prayers, in which the audience join, for the happiness of the married couple. This simple ceremony is called Nikah Khani or the solemnization (literally 'the reading') of marriage. The Nikah Khan or 'Reader of the marriage ritual' is either a Kazi or his assistant called Naib Kazi or the Peshimam of the mosque of the Mohalla or locality where the party or parties reside.

The Kazis, Naib Kazis and the Peshimams who act as Kazis maintain marriage registers in which entries are made of marriages solemnized by them. In some places each entry is signed by the bridegroom, the vakil of the bride, the two witnesses and the officiating Kazi, but in other places signatures are dispensed with.

Dissolution of marriage is effected among Mussalmans in one of the following ways: (1) the husband tells the wife three times (with certain specified intervals) that he has divorced her and abstains from intercourse with her during each of the intervals (tahrs) and pays her the dower he had agreed to pay at the time of marriage. This form of divorce is called talak. Talak is also effected by the deliberate pronouncement of words which signify repudiation of the wife by her husband, for example his comparing his wife to his mother or sister or any other female relation within the prohibited degrees. (2) The wife obtains separation from her husband by giving him a consideration for example by foregoing her mahr and separation is also effected by mutual discharge from marriage tie. The former is called Khula and the latter Mubarat. (3) The divorce effected and enforced by a decree of the judge.

The talak is reported to the Kazi by the husband and the khula or mubarat by both parties jointly and he makes an entry of it in his register.

It is stated in the preamble to the Kazis Act of 1880 (enacted by the way at the instance of the late Sir Syed Ahmad Khan) that 'whereas by the usage of the Mussalman community in some parts of British India the presence of Kazis appointed by the Government is required at the celebration of marriage and the performance of certain other rites and ceremonies' it was expedient that the Government should be empowered to appoint persons to the office of Kazi. It was therefore enacted that 'whenever it appears to the local Government that any considerable number of Muhammadan residents in any local area desire that one or more Kazis should be appointed for such local area, the local Government may, if it thinks fit, after consulting the principal Muhammadan residents of such local area, select one or more fit persons and appoint him or them to be Kazis for such local area.

The Act further provides that 'the local Government may, if it thinks fit, suspend or remove any Kazi appointed under this section who is guilty of any misconduct in the execution of his office or who is for a continuous period of six months absent from the local area for which he is appointed or leaves such local area for the purpose of residing elsewhere, or is declared an insolvent, or desires to be discharged from the office, or who refuses or becomes in the opinion of the local Government unfit, or personally incapable, to discharge the duties of the office'.

Section 3 of the said Act empowers a Kazi appointed under this Act to appoint one or more persons as his Naibs to act in his place in all or any of the matters appertaining to his office throughout the whole or in any portion of the local areas for which he is appointed, and may suspend or remove any Naib so appointed.

In pursuance of this Act Government of Madras have appointed Kazis for certain places and at other places Kazis are self-appointed or hereditary and the latter not being appointed by Government cannot be removed from their office by Government. The object of one of my questions put at this meeting was to elicit information as to how many Kazis are appointed by Government and the list of Naib Kazis appointed by the Government Kazis. Government say that the list of Kazis is under compilation and will be furnished to me later on. Some of the Government and private Kazis have appointed their assistants called Naib Kazis. There are several localities where there are no Government or private Kazis. Here the Peshimam of a mosque officiates as Kazi for the locality in which the mosque is situated and he is appointed by the Muthawalli or trustee of the mosque. Even in places where there is a Kazi, a section of the community that does not belong to the sect of the local Kazi has an officiating Kazi of its own. Wherever Shia Mussalmans are in a number too small to have a mosque and a Kazi of their own they get a Shia Kazi from other locality to perform a marriage or some one of the local men officiates as such and makes a report of the marriage to the Shia Kazi of a neighbouring town. It is not laid down in Act XII of 1880 that there shall be a Kazi for each 'local area'. Mussalmans of some place may not desire to have a Kazi and a Peshimam of a

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

Mohalla may not care to be a Naib to the local Kazi. Section 4 of the Kazis Act does not prevent any person discharging any of the functions of a Kazi, and as a matter of fact the duties of a Kazi are being performed by several persons who are neither Kazis nor Naib Kazis. My Bill does not interfere with the Kazis Act but provides that it shall be lawful for the Governor in Council to grant a license to any person, being a Mussalman, authorizing him to register Mussalman marriages and divorces which have been affected within certain specified limits, provided that a license shall be granted as a matter of course to every Kazi appointed by Government in pursuance of section 2 of the Government of India Act XII of 1880 and to every Naib Kazi appointed by a Kazi in accordance with section 3 of the said Act. Thus the Peshimam and other persons who are now performing the duties of a kazi in respect of marriages and divorces as well as the ordinary Kazis and Naib Kazis will receive licenses from the Government and will henceforth be known as Muslim Registrars in addition to their own designation of Kazi, or Naib Kazi.

The present system of record of marriages by Kazis, Naib Kazis and officiating Kazis is loose and unsatisfactory. All sorts of books from a strong bound book with printed pages and ruled columns with printed headings to a cheap flimsy school exercise book, are used for the purpose of recording marriages and divorces. Entries are sometimes made at the time of the ceremony and sometimes long afterwards. Signatures of parties are sometimes taken in the book and sometimes they are dispensed with. The books remain in the possession of the Kazi of which no particular care is taken and they are easily lost or destroyed and not seldom done away with. It is obvious that this loose system of keeping records can give room to abuses of gravest nature. There have been many law suits in which the marriage of a party was questioned and the evidence produced to prove or disprove it was found to be unworthy of acceptance. I shall quote only one instance. In civil suit No. 269 of 1916 before the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri, the fourth defendant claimed to be the widow of the deceased and as such entitled to one-eighth share in the estate and also a mahr of 39 tolas of gold and Rs. 5,000. This claim was contested. One witness, the Naib of a private Kazi, who was said to have officiated at the marriage was produced to prove the marriage and he produced a book alleged to be a marriage register kept by him. Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri in his judgment remarks that 'according to exhibits 7 and 8, the marriage certificate, the marriage took place on the 27th November 1912. The Deputy Kazi admits that he did not make the entries in exhibit 7 as soon as the marriages are performed. He states that at the time of the marriage he used to make entries in slips of papers, that he then collected them together and copied them in the book once in five, six or seven months and that after he made the entries the slips were destroyed. He admits that the book was taken away by the Police in April 1913 and was returned to him sometime in January 1915 and that he made the 7th entry only in 1915. An entry of 5th May 1913 is written before 27th November 1912 the date of the alleged marriage. At page 10 of the book Exhibit 7, a marriage is duly entered and then it is cancelled. Though the Deputy Kazi says that the book was taken away by the Police in April 1913 he did not enter the marriage in question which took place in 1912 till 1915. He says that at the time of the seizure of the book by the Police he was engaged in writing the entries up to November 1912 and that after he got the book in January 1915 he made the other entries. He states that all the previous books except Exhibit 7 were eaten up by white ants, a statement which I find it difficult to believe. The witness also admits that the book Exhibit 7 contains entries of marriages not performed by him and that he used to enter marriages if news was sent to him of marriages officiated over by private persons. It also appears that one of the pages of this book has been torn.'

Here is a remarkable case in which almost all the abuses which the present system or want of a system of recording marriages can give rise to are found together. Here is a Naib Kazi who has been appointed to his office not by a Government Kazi but by a private Kazi. He records in his book not only marriages performed by him but also marriages officiated by private persons of which news was communicated to him. He noted down in slips of papers marriages performed by him and copied the entries in his book once in five, six and seven months. He entered in his book in 1915 the marriage that took place in 1912. One entry of a marriage was cancelled. One of the leaves of the book was found to have been torn away and the Naib Kazi stated that all the previous books were eaten away by white ants. Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri says in his judgment that this witness 'admitted after a great deal of prevarication, that he was convicted by Mr. Jones, Presidency Magistrate, for false personation of a police constable and though he denies that the conviction resulted in his dismissal from Government service where he was a schoolmaster, I have little doubt that he was really dismissed.' If he had been a Kazi duly appointed by Government he would have been dismissed from that office by the Government. If he was a Naib of a Government Kazi or a Peshimam of a mosque the authorities that appointed him would have dispensed with his services under the above circumstances, but a self-styled Naib of a private Kazi is a free lance responsible to no one for his actions. When my Bill comes into force the number of such persons will be considerably reduced, if they do not altogether disappear, for no respectable family will take the risk involved in a marriage having been performed by a person other than a licensed Muslim Registrar.

The Muslim Registrar shall be bound to enter into the register supplied to him all the marriages and divorces effected by him or reported to him by responsible parties and each entry shall be signed by the parties concerned, by the witnesses and by the Muslim Registrar, and he shall grant a proper certificate to the party that applies for it. The Government shall supply to every Muslim Registrar the seal and the books necessary for the purposes of this Act. The pages of such books shall be consecutively numbered in print and the number of pages in each book shall be certified on the title page by the officer by whom such books are issued.

"Every Muslim Registrar shall perform the duties of his office under the superintendence and control of the (Government) Registrar in whose district the office of such Muslim Registrar is situate. The Inspector-General of Registration shall exercise a general superintendence over offices of all Muslim Registrars. Every Muslim Registrar shall at the expiration of every month, send certified copies of all entries made by him during the month in the registers kept by him, to the Registrar of the district who shall file such copies in his office. Every Muslim Registrar shall keep safely every register until the same shall be filled and shall then make over the same to the Registrar of the district for safe custody. Section 12 of my Bill corresponds to section 54 of the Indian Registration Act, 1908, and is as follows:—'In every office in which every register hereinbefore mentioned is kept, there shall be prepared a current index of the contents of such register and every entry in such index shall be made so far as practicable immediately after the Muslim Registrar has made an entry in such register.' The index, the registers and the file of the copies of entries in the registers shall be at all times open to inspection in the office of the District Registrar by any person applying to inspect the same and paying the prescribed fees, and certified copies shall be given to all persons applying for same.

"It will be noticed that there is nothing in my Bill to require compulsory registration of every Muslim marriage and divorce. The Right Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali, the late Judge of the Calcutta High Court and now a member of Privy Council, in his book on Muhammadan Law, Volume II, referring to the Bengal Act I of 1876 on which my Bill is based says 'at the time the Bill was about to be passed into law, the author (of the book) pressed on the authorities the advisability of making the registration compulsory, but other counsels prevailed. It has since been acknowledged that great difficulties arise in the administration of justice from the permissive character of the Act. In Algiers and in most Muhammadan countries registration is compulsory.' Sir Ronald Wilson in his book 'Anglo-Muhammadan Law' says 'Mr. Amir Ali is probably right in thinking that this provision ought to be made compulsory and general.' In spite of these two eminent authorities I have given the Bill a permissive character, for I think that in the present state of society it will be too much of a drastic reform if we jump from the present loose system of keeping records of marriages and divorces to a compulsory system of registration. Though according to my Bill it is optional with the parties to register the marriage, but as marriages in this Presidency are performed as a rule by certain functionaries and seldom by private persons and as all these functionaries will obtain licences and become Muslim Registrars under the proposed Act, and as Muslim Registrars will be bound to register in proper form all the marriages that they perform, and as no respectable family hereafter will care to take the risk involved in a marriage being performed by a person other than a Muslim Registrar, unless it is eventually registered with a Muslim Registrar, practically all marriages will come to be registered in the ordinary course. The difficulties in the administration of justice will therefore be considerably reduced, for Judges will eye with suspicion marriages that have not been performed in the usual course by persons duly authorized to act as Muslim Registrars and the burden of proof shall be heavier on the interested parties.

"I believe I have now convinced the Council that the present system of keeping records of Muslim marriages and divorces is faulty, and it is capable of giving rise to and has been found to have given occasion for abuses of gravest nature, and that there is an imperative necessity for substituting for it a better regulated system of registration and that my Bill provides a system calculated to attain that end. I am sure that when this Bill with translations in Hindustani and other vernaculars is published and opinions thereon are invited from leading Mussalmans and accredited Muslim Associations this measure will be welcomed by the Muslim community. I therefore move that permission may be granted to me to introduce the Bill.

"It may not, perhaps, be out of place, to mention here that my friend the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Ahmad Thambi Marakkayar had intended to bring forward a Bill for the compulsory registration of Mussalman marriages and divorces. He issued a printed letter inviting opinions of some Mussalmans about a Bill that he had drafted. This shows that he as keenly feels the necessity of legislation in this direction as I do. The only difference between him and me is that he wants a provision for compulsory registration and I only that of voluntary registration."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I have great pleasure in seconding the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan. As one having, during my several years of practice, had a good deal to do with Muhammadan cases, I feel the force of the observations made by my Honourable friend. According to Muhammadan Law marriage is a contract. No religious ceremony or writing is necessary. According to established practice marriage is celebrated in all respectable families in the presence of a kazi or a deputy kazi or by peshimans. That has been the recognized practice under all Governments. In regard to the presence of such kazis at these marriages, it will be within the recollection of Honourable Members that under the Regulation of 1808 kazis were given not only judicial and administrative powers but had also to be present at marriages and other ceremonies in Muhammadan families. By Act II of 1864 this Regulation was repealed, but very soon after that it was felt that it was necessary to appoint kazis and the Act of 1880 was passed for that purpose; for there was a great demand among the Muhammadan community that they should have the Act which was in force prior to Act XI of 1864 and the Government had to revert to the system of appointing kazis. This power of appointing kazis is a power inherited from the Muhammadan Sovereigns. Under the Muhammadan law they were appointed by the Sovereign. Therefore, it is only a continuation of the practice requiring that some recognized official should be present at these marriages which are civil contracts and according to the peculiar law of the Muhammadans can even be contracted by agents. As pointed out by Mr. Wilson, one man may be the agent of both the parties. Therefore, having regard to the peculiarity of the Muhammadan system of marriage and having regard to the wishes of the people expressed by their representatives, I think it is necessary that this permissive legislation should be introduced. It is not a new thing. Bengal has had it from 1876 onwards and this Bill is mainly on the lines of the Bengal Act. Bengal has found it to work satisfactorily; and great Muhammadan authorities such as Mr. Amir Ali have stated that it works well and think that it should be made compulsory. I for one would like to make it compulsory, but as my Honourable friend does not go so far, I do not insist upon it.

"The unsatisfactory condition of the evidence of Muhammadan marriages has often been pointed out by the judicial officers who have had to deal with such cases, and they have expressed the opinion that the system gives rise to false claims. These questions are very difficult questions affecting the status and legitimacy of children. The legislature ought to afford facilities to the various parties to get their marriages registered. There should be uniformity in registration. It may be that this Bill applies only to those who know how to read or to agents who know how to read. In other cases this Bill will not apply. I hope there will be a time when the community will ask for this being made compulsory. I support the introduction of this Bill firstly because it is a continuation of the existing practice and elsewhere in other provinces which have had similar Acts it works well; and it would obviate false evidence and false records and encourage uniformity of practice in the community and stimulate them to make the marriages regular. I do not say that people do not enter into regular marriages. All that I wish to say is that whenever the matter comes up before the Court they must be able to establish it. The question is whether the kazis should take out licences. We must see that their appointment under the Act of 1880 should be uniform or they should take out a licence."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBHI MARAKKAYAR:—"My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose the motion moved by my Honourable friend.

"That the Mussalman system of registration of marriages requires legislation cannot be denied. Even so early as in 1900 the Mussalman residents of Triplicane sent in a memorial to the Government of Madras to amend the Town Kazi Act XII of 1880 and to prevent malpractices arising from want of compulsory registration of Muhammadan marriages. The Government on that occasion after consulting the Muhammadan officials and the Collectors of the districts observed that the Government would not take the initiative in the matter of legislation unless the members of the community are agreed as to the direction in which the reform should take. The need for providing better registration of Muhammadan marriages is admitted on all hands and therefore the Bill to be introduced must be one capable of putting a stop to corrupt practices obtaining at present for want of necessity to register marriages. So unless registration of Muhammadan marriages is made compulsory, the desire for registration would not receive adequate response. Under the Bill which my Honourable friend proposes to introduce, registration of marriages would be voluntary as at present and no useful purpose could be served by the Bill as in section 25 of the Bill no marriage would be rendered invalid for want of registration. In the objects and statements of the Bill my Honourable friend states 'that the loose system of registering marriages and divorces is capable of giving room to abuses of gravest nature' and I am afraid that the Bill which he proposes to introduce will fail to bring about the desired effect as he himself admits 'that it will be open to the parties to get married in the simple Islamic manner.'

"To provide that all cases of Muhammadan marriages should be registered to make them valid would probably be opposed to the spirit of Muhammadan law and so in order to escape from the difficulty it is necessary to penalise the parties for neglect to register Muhammadan marriages without at the same time making such marriages invalid for want of registration. Fear of penalty would compel parties to register marriages though marriages without registration might be held to be valid according to Muhammadan law. A Bill on the above lines penalising parties for neglecting to register marriages without rendering the marriages void for want of registration is the only one that could remedy the defects. In order to introduce such a Bill I was getting Mussalman opinion and before my endeavours on that respect are completed, my Honourable friend has brought forward this motion for leave to introduce a Bill which in my opinion is insufficient to check the corrupt practices prevailing at present. I am daily receiving a number of letters from the leaders of the Mussalman community from different parts of the Presidency encouraging me to take action on the lines suggested by me. Under these circumstances I am afraid I have to oppose the motion for leave though I am in sympathy with the Hon'ble mover's desire to effect some sort of legislation to provide for better registration of Muhammadan marriages. In my opinion the desired end could be brought about only by amending with the consent of the Government of India, the Kazis Act XII of 1880 to bring it into harmony with the wishes of Mussalman public without introducing a new Act whose principles might conflict with the existing Act XII of 1880."

The Hon'ble MUHAMMAD AZIZ-UD-DIN HUSAIN SAHIB Bahadur:—"The Bill to introduce which leave is sought by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan can be divided into two parts, the first relating to the registration of marriages and the second relating to divorces."

(Mr. M. Ramchandra Rao; the President; [1TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. Aziz-ud-din; Mr. Gillman.]

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO (interrupting):—"I should like to rise to a point of order. I should like to know—whether it is open to any Honourable Member to criticise the provisions of a Bill which is not before the House. The motion before the House is a motion to introduce a Bill to provide for the voluntary registration of Mussalman marriages and divorces. I ask Your Excellency whether it is open to any Honourable Member to speak on the Bill which my Honourable friend has supplied to the Members and criticise each provision in it, when the motion before the House is to introduce a Bill, which when it is published will come up for discussion in the ordinary course."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It would not be easy to avoid a detailed discussion of the Bill on this occasion. But at the same time any speaker who follows the Honourable Member can criticise anything which he has said in explanation of or in support of the measure."

The Hon'ble MUHAMMAD AZIZ-UD-DIN HUSAIN SAHIB Bahadur:—"If the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao thought that I intended to discuss in detail or in the abstract the provisions of the Bill to introduce which permission is requested by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan, I may tell him that that is not my object. My object is simply to apprise this House as to how this Bill is viewed by the outside Mussalman public. The Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao need have no fear that I am going to deal with the provisions of the Bill."

"I have been myself interested in this subject for the past many years. When His Excellency Sir Arthur Havelock visited South Arcot many Mussalmans of the place requested that some legal provision should be made for an effective registration of Mussalman marriages. The Government of the day were pleased to hold an inquiry, but it was decided that the time had not arrived for making any such legislative enactment."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"Was it in 1902—the same thing as the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar referred to?"

The Hon'ble MUHAMMAD AZIZ-UD-DIN HUSAIN SAHIB Bahadur:—"It was even earlier than that. Then the Mussalmans of Triplicane of their own accord submitted a memorial to the Government and that was referred for remarks to me as well as to some others. On that occasion, I was very enthusiastic over this subject, and even submitted a draft Bill—which must be in the archives of the Government. A more elaborate inquiry was made and all the Collectors, as stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar, were consulted, but even then unanimous opinion in favour of legislation of this kind could not be got and the result was that the proposal again fell through. Later on, when I was Collector of South Kanara, I suggested to the Mappillas, and they were agreeable that some satisfactory provision for the registration of Mussalman marriages was necessary, and His Excellency Sir Arthur Lawley was approached. He was good enough to give due consideration and Mr. A. Y. G. Campbell wrote to me that His Excellency was in sympathy with my idea and he requested me to write to the various Anjumans in the Presidency and ask them to express their opinions on the subject. As a Government official I could not command the necessary time to undertake such an inquiry and the matter stopped there."

"So this House will see at once that there has throughout been no unanimous opinion that a Legislative enactment was necessary to safeguard Mussalman interests in connexion with the registration of marriages. My idea throughout has been that great many malpractices have been going on in connexion with these marriages. As it is, anybody and everybody can solemnise a marriage. It is not invariably recorded in any register."

"What happens is, when a husband dies, a dispute arises as to the Mahar. The persons interested in securing a larger share at times influence the Kazis and make them tamper with the register with the result that the Mahar is increased. For instance, if the Mahar is Rs. 1,000, another cypher is added and it is made Rs. 10,000. Sometimes it so happens that the more influential party bribes the Kazi and the Mahar is reduced. I am very strongly of opinion that some legislative measure is necessary to safeguard Mussalman interests in connexion with their marriages."

"It has been the practice of the parties in the matter of Mahar, although it is considered meritorious to fix the Mahar as low as possible, to fix it as a rule, at a very high figure. I think the Government will have in their records a reference made by the Government of India in connexion with a Mahar suit by a lady who had married a Nawab. He had settled a Mahar upon her of Rs. 75 lakhs. The result was that after his death, his whole property was taken away by the widow who happened to be an English woman, and there was not a single pie left for the deceased's son. Then the Government of India wanted to know whether it would not be lawful to curtail the Mahar. I was one of those who were consulted, and I had to write that it was not possible under the Muhammadan law to fix the Mahar. In India it is fixed at a high figure, because according to the tenets of Muhammadanism a husband is allowed to contract in for a plurality of wives. Under these circumstances it is very necessary that the record as to those marriages is made as perfect as possible. If I were to mention concrete cases where there has been miscarriage of justice or where there has been malpractice, I think, I would require much more time than is allowed. I may therefore say at once that some legislative enactment is needed to safeguard Mussalman interests."

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Aziz-ud-din; Mr. Gillman; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

"At the same time, I do not think the Bill proposed to be introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan is a sound one or one which will receive the assent of the Mussalman public at large. As soon as notice was given in the papers about the proposed introduction of this Bill, several Ulemas came to me and expressed their dissent from the Bill. Their idea has been or is that it would interfere with their religious liberties, and they do not like that the Government should interfere in matters connected with their religion. Although I am a great enthusiast myself about legislation in this matter, I may say at once I have my own misgivings as to the advisability of having any such enactment as the one proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan or an enactment of the kind which is proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar at the present juncture. My fear is the Ulemas whose opinions in religious matters carry great weight with the Mussalmans might go to the length of saying that India has become Darul Harab. In Hyderabad it may be that any interference like this by His Exalted Highness the Nizam may be taken in a different light. But any interference here with religious matters will be at once resented. The portion of the Bill relating to talak is also open to objection. According to the Muhammadan religion khula is not a thing which is favoured. People do not like publicity in regard to divorce."

"Divorce in Arabia is something like mother's milk and no dishonour is attached to it. But Mussalmans have lived so many years in India that they have begun to think like Hindus, and not only divorce but widow-marriage is considered almost a sin, although Ulemas have been urging that according to Mussalman religion widow-marriage is not prohibited. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan has come here from outside. Although he has been here a considerable time he does not know much about the Mussalmans of this Presidency. He will not be able to point out any respectable family in which there has been a divorce. It is resorted to only in extreme cases. Registration of divorce will give a publicity to the act which will at once be resented by the parties and the respectable section of the community in Madras."

"Again among the Mussalmans there are four schools of thought—the Hanafis, the Shafis, the Hanbalis and the Malikis. According to the Hanafis a woman on her initiative cannot obtain divorce. She cannot tell her husband "I divorce you," but the husband can pronounce divorce and that brings about the separation. In some cases a Hanafi woman in order to obtain divorce from the husband has recourse to the subterfuge of going to the Kazi of the Shafi sect on some pretext or other—such as the husband's neglect to maintain her for some months—and the Kazi at once divorces her from her husband. Very often the divorce takes place without the knowledge or consent of the husband."

"Several Mussalmans who came to me raised objections to this Bill on the ground that it will be a great calamity, if these Kazis who are responsible to no authority are given the power to separate husband and wife merely on the complaint of the wife. On the whole, I think that at this juncture it is undesirable that permission should be given for the introduction of this Bill. If such permission is given, I may predict safely that the opposition will be extremely strong."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"I have listened with very great interest to the speeches that have been made on this measure by the Muhammadan representatives on this Council. There appears to be considerable difference of opinion as to whether this Bill is appropriate to meet the present needs of the Muhammadan community in regard to the matter of marriages. I entirely agree with what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din that this is a question in which the Government should be very careful to abstain from offending any religious susceptibilities of the community and it is one in which they should make every endeavour to obtain the opinion of the community before they proceed to give their assent to any enactment. I would, however, remind the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din that this is not a motion to introduce the Bill, but for leave to introduce the Bill, and that until leave is given to introduce, it will not be possible for the public in general to know the provisions of the Bill and to be in a position to criticize them. This subject was taken up before by this Government in 1902, as stated by two of the previous speakers, and it was decided that the time was not opportune for pursuing it further. Now though we have opinions that the enactment is required and that there is a general desire by Muhammadans to improve the registration of marriages, still the provisions in this Bill about registration of divorces are likely to meet with considerable objection. I desire to say on behalf of the Government that in regard to this Bill they are entirely neutral at present. They do not propose to express any opinion. They do not intend to oppose the motion for the reason that they think that full opportunities should be given to the public to consider the provisions of the Bill and make representations on the subject which would be laid before this Council. It is for that reason and that reason alone that the Government do not wish to oppose this motion."

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"After the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman that the Government do not wish to oppose this motion, that is to say, that leave will be granted to me to introduce the Bill, the Government naturally maintaining as usual a position of neutrality for the present, I need not say much. The intention of the rules in regard to the procedure to be adopted for such a motion is to elicit the opinion of the people towards the measure. A year or two ago, before the Business rules were amended, it was open to any member to move for leave to introduce a Bill without submitting the draft Bill; but according to the new rules the Bill has to be submitted to the Government so that they may know on what lines the proposed Bill will come before the Council. Having submitted the draft Bill to the Government I thought it advisable that the Bill should be placed in the hands of Honourable Members also so that they may know on what lines I proposed to introduce the measure.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar said in the beginning that he was opposed to the leave being given to me for introducing the Bill, but the speech which he delivered was such that I can take it to be in support of my Bill. He has said that there is a necessity, he has felt the necessity of such a measure so much so that he went to the length of drafting a Bill of his own for the purpose of introducing it later on. The difference between his measure and mine is that he wants the registration to be made compulsory, but I have made it voluntary. If the opinion of the community is in favour of registration being compulsory and not optional, then my Bill may be revised in due course to suit the opinions that may be given. In the same way the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din has said that he has all along felt the necessity for legislation in this direction and so long ago as 1902 he took practical steps to see that a legislation of this nature was introduced. In 1902, as pointed out by him and the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar, a memorial was submitted to the Governor and on that memorial opinion was taken from the public. It did not occur to the then Muhammadan member of the Legislative Council to introduce a Bill. If a Bill was introduced, opinion would have been obtained from the Muhammadan community in a better manner than it could be obtained in any other way. The Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar has also tried to obtain opinions. I was also advised to hold public meetings to discuss this Bill, and I told my friends that that would not be the proper method. It is the business of the Government to consult associations and public bodies and elicit opinions about a proposed measure, and that will be more authoritative than if any body else did it on his own hook. If the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar, for example, comes here with certain opinions and says 'so many are in favour of this measure,' it may be said that he consulted only those who were in favour of the measure and omitted to consult others. When people are consulted about my Bill in the usual course, I am quite prepared to accept the verdict of the community, and till that verdict is obtained and unless it is against the necessity of such a measure as this, the Government will allow me to proceed with the Bill. But if it is in favour of the measure, and it is only in regard to the detail that there is a difference of opinion, it will be the business of the Select Committee to consider the opinions and to alter or revise the Bill according to the majority of opinions expressed.

"There is only one other point that I would like to refer to. The Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din said that several Ulemas and several Mussalmans went to him and objected to the nature of the Bill. I cannot understand when these people went and saw him. I posted a copy of my Bill to the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din only on Saturday last. There were only Sunday and Monday for him and the opportunity to consult others cannot be so great as represented by him. That speech was made not with a view to prevent the Government from permitting me to move the Bill, but it is a speech made to the outside public telling them not to support the Bill, because the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din is opposed to it. That is how he wants to influence outside opinion. I am sorry that justice was not done to me by the Government. Usually when a motion is proposed and seconded, a member of the Government comes forward with their opinion, but here two persons were allowed to have their say before the Government member gave his opinion about it and thereby the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din, who is a member of the Government and of this Legislative Council, who sits on the side of the Government and is not free to have any independent opinion to which the Government do not give their permission, was in this matter allowed to oppose a non-official motion before this Council before the Government expressed their opinion on it. I am afraid personal feelings have been allowed full play. I hope the Government will allow me to introduce this Bill, and I feel sure that this Bill will be discussed by the Mussalman public at large with a free mind and the opinions that will reach the Government will be such as to influence the decision of the Government and the Council one way or the other. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Aziz-ud-din Sahib was always inclined to say that I am a foreigner not belonging to this Presidency and therefore I do not know the feelings of the Muhammadans of this Presidency. Let me tell him that though I have come from outside I have lived here for a long time and I know Mussalman feelings much better than any one else. I am here as a representative of the Mussalmans of half the Presidency. Those who have supported me and sent me to this Council know that I represent their opinion better than any body else."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Before I put the motion to the Council, I must say that the honourable gentleman's feelings have led him astray. He attributes to the Government—"

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"That was not my intention."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Will the honourable gentleman kindly keep his seat and allow me to make one observation on his remark? He attributed to the Government the action of the President of this council in the chair in allowing the Muhammadan representatives to express their opinions freely on a matter peculiarly relating to their community before the representative of the Government expressed his view. I simply wish to tell him that that action was not the action of the Government, but it was the action of the President of this Council endeavouring to get the full expression of the opinions of this Council on a subject of this kind."

The motion was then put to the Council and agreed to.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Mr. Siva Rao; Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

THE MADRAS PREVENTION OF ADULTERATION BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar then presented the report of the Select Committee on the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Bill, 1918, and moved that the Bill and report be taken into consideration at once.

The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew seconded the motion.

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

It was agreed that the consideration of the preamble be postponed.

Clause 1.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I beg to move the amendment of which I have given notice. It is as follows:—

'For the proviso to sub-clause (2) substitute the following:

"Provided that such notification shall be made after obtaining the consent of the local authority or authorities concerned for such extension."

"I must admit in the first place that the proviso which was introduced in the Select Committee has afforded substantial facilities in the way of the local authorities concerned expressing their opinions before the extension of the remaining provisions of this Bill. I welcome the proviso so far as it has been introduced. If in the same liberal spirit the Government had taken the further step of giving a larger amount of discretion to the local bodies in giving effect to the provisions of the Bill, it would have been quite satisfactory. This Bill is intended to prevent the adulteration of food in the interests of public health which is one of the primary functions of the local authorities. It is proposed to extend this Bill not merely to urban areas like municipalities but to district and taluk boards also. The Bill contains provisions which require the local authorities to employ analysts. It also provides that in cases they do not discharge this function, the Government can step in and appoint these officers. Such being the general provisions of the Bill, I think there are several local areas where it will not be desirable to introduce the provisions of this Act without securing their consent. In the first place, I would suggest that in the light of the recent resolution of the Government of India on local self-government, local bodies should be given freedom to a much larger extent. Secondly, so long as it is incumbent upon them not only to employ a public analyst, and to bear the expenditure necessary for the purpose, they will be called upon to incur the expenditure even though they do not like it, it is necessary that their consent should be secured. Therefore I suggest that this proviso which gives them merely an opportunity of expressing their opinion should be so modified as to secure their consent before action is taken. It may be that the local bodies will realize their responsibility and the advantage of the prevention of adulteration and apply the provisions of the Act; but if they do not choose to do so, it will be open to the Government to remind them of their duty and secure their consent. I do not think it reasonable to anticipate that they will not discharge these functions and consequently to thrust these provisions upon them."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I second the amendment. In seconding it I will make only one observation. In the reform report issued by Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford, local bodies are to be given full responsibility. Here is a matter which pre-eminently comes within the control of local bodies. Whether a particular place would like its butter or ghee being mixed with an adulterated article or its milk to be mixed with chunam water or whether they would prevent adulteration at some expense and trouble is pre-eminently a subject to be decided by the local authority. We may leave a certain amount of discretion to the local bodies. If the clause is worded as suggested, it would not merely give them an opportunity to express their opinion, but it would give them responsibility to have the Act extended. We have passed the stage of administering good doses of advice and doing the thinking for local bodies. They are competent to take care of themselves. The Government must give up the idea that these bodies are children; they are fully developed and are well able to take care of themselves."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"The amendment rather goes to the root of the matter, as it involves a principle, namely, whether it should be open to the Government to impose the operation of this Bill on local bodies even though they express their unwillingness. The latest policy of the Government of India has been to give them every latitude and every freedom. When the air is full of such liberal policy, is it consonant with that to give power to the Government to force these measures on the local bodies whether they are willing or not? This is a matter which essentially relates to public health. Under the Local Boards Act and the District Municipalities Act, this is a matter which specially appertains to local bodies. The responsibility is theirs and it is for them to invoke the aid of this measure. They may be trusted to exercise this responsibility. Why should it be supposed that if they feel the real responsibility, they will keep quiet? Either the consent of the local body should be obtained prior to the extension of this Bill, or it should be made a condition precedent that it should be extended only on the application of a local body. In other words it should be permissive. It should enable the local bodies to ask for its extension. In any view the local bodies should be trusted up to a certain length. They ought not to be dictated to. If there is real necessity for this measure, they will ask for it."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"My Lord, as one in the Select Committee responsible for the introduction of this proviso I should like to say a word. I might explain the reason why we put it in. This is a question which affects not only the local bodies, but it has

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; [13TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao;
the President.)

extra-territorial operation. You have, for instance, the Periyapalaiyam festival where a large number of people gather. The City of Madras might require that this Act should be in operation in that area. Suppose the Taluk Board of Tiruvallūr did not consent, is the City of Madras to suffer and allow cholera to be brought into Madras? Not only that. My honourable friends will remember that many areas are supplied with food from a lot of surrounding villages. For example, Madurai and Trichinopoly get supplies of food from places fifty miles away. The municipality that is going to be affected complains that they supply very bad food and it must have power to ask for the application of this Act to those villages. We give the ultimate decision to the Local Government, but they will consult the local authority. I do appeal to my honourable friends that it is not a purely territorial matter; it is not a local matter. It is a matter which is likely to affect places outside—third parties. I think a central authority is necessary. This is the reason why we introduced this provision."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, may I supplement what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said? When we put in that proviso in the Select Committee, we knew that we would have to introduce this legislation in blocks of local areas. In a district there are several municipalities and taluk boards; it may happen that a large majority are for introducing this legislation. Is it to be open to one or two isolated boards or councils to block the introduction of the measure and evade their share of payment of the expenditure incidentally? Unless you introduce it in a whole area which is within the jurisdiction of several councils and boards, you will probably find that the law is ineffective. There is no use of making a rigorous law for the City of Madras, if you find a big festival, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, going on outside it, without our being able to enforce it there. It is not that we want to force this legislation down the throat of unwilling local bodies. If a majority of local bodies are against it, we will not force it on them. If a majority are for bringing this law into operation, it is but fair that there should be some power in a central authority like the Government to bring it into operation and it should not be left to one or two isolated bodies to stand in the way and prevent the application of this Act. I would not advise the Council to vote for the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I am not in favour of this amendment. I am satisfied that the provision is not an interference with the freedom or free action of the local bodies. The administration of the Act is left to local bodies, but the application of the Act to any particular area may be left to the Central Government. As Honourable Members are aware, there is a certain amount of control necessary in the administration of certain Acts. The control of the Local Government over local bodies in England may be referred to in this connexion. I feel that this proviso is perfectly consistent with the relation that should subsist between the Central Government and the local bodies. If the Ellore municipality is willing to have this measure extended to-day, but if the neighbouring taluk board is not willing, the result will be that adulteration will be going on within a mile of the municipal limits. Therefore, on this particular ground I would suggest that my honourable friend may see his way not to press this amendment. After all, I am certain that in applying Acts like this, the Infectious Diseases Act and the Adulteration of Foods Act, the Government will call upon the local bodies and take their opinions as regards the feasibility of extending them. It is the local bodies that will have to apply for these Acts being extended to their areas. For these reasons, I am not for this amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"My Lord, I have listened with very great interest to the speeches made by two non-official friends who were on the Select Committee, but I am not convinced by their arguments. The only argument suggested is that while there are several local areas to which this Act might have to be applied, if any municipality expresses its consent to have the Act extended to it, but the adjoining taluk board opposes it, complications would arise. According to the provisions of this Bill, every seller is made liable for punishment under clause 5. If the argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar is to be accepted, Madras which gets articles of food from various parts—it gets supplies from all parts of the Presidency—might get the Act applied all over the Presidency. These sellers may be prosecuted and punished; in accordance with the provisions of clause 6 the employer may be held liable; and there would not be any difficulty for local bodies in putting a stop to the adulteration of food. Once there is a provision to punish sellers as regards any particular urban area, the necessary steps can be taken. It will be necessary for them to disclose the persons from whom they obtain their food supply; and they can be punished."

The amendment was put to the Council and lost.

Clause 1 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 2.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I have to ask the attention of the Council to an amendment which the Hon'ble the Advocate-General is going to move. If the Council would please to look at line 49 on the first page of the Bill, they would find the definition of local executive officer. 'Local executive officer' means, in any municipality in which there is a commissioner, the commissioner; in other municipalities, the president or chairman of the council; and in or for other local areas, the president of the district or taluk board, or such public servant as may be designated by the Local Government for the exercise of the functions 13TH AUGUST 1918.] (The President; the Advocate-General;

of a local executive officer under this Act.' The amendment is, in substitution of the words, 'the president of the district or taluk board etc.' the following words be inserted: 'the president of the taluk board, or if there is no taluk board the president of the district board, or if there is no taluk or district board, such public servant, etc.'"

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"I beg to move that amendment. The last portion of the clause will then read as follows: 'The president of the taluk board, or if there is no taluk board the president of the district board, or if there is no taluk or district board, such public servant as may be designated by the Local Government for the exercise of the functions of a local executive officer under this Act.' The idea which underlies this definition is to make the commissioner the local executive officer, or if there is no commissioner the chairman of the Municipal Council. Similarly with regard to taluk boards and district boards. In the case of the Nilgiris where there is no taluk board, there will be the district board. In areas where there is no taluk or district board the Government will have power to designate somebody as the local executive officer to carry out the purposes of the Act."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao seconded the amendment.

The amendment was put to the Council and agreed to.

The only amendment to clause 2 of which notice had been given stood in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I do not know whether you wish to move your amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I find from the proceedings of the Select Committee that this was considered but was not accepted. I therefore move my amendment. It is as follows:—

'In the definition of "local executive officer" add the words "other than a police officer" after the words "public servant."'

"I need not take a long time to satisfy the Council that in working this Act you must exclude the police officer from the category of officers who are to discharge such functions. They have ordinary functions to discharge under the ordinary criminal law. Under section 6 the seller can be prosecuted. I only draw attention to the fact that there are several presumptions created in the matter of prosecutions under this Act."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The honourable gentleman will bear in mind that the amendment will apply only to the Agency tracts. I do not know whether it is worth while to move his amendment unless he can base his case on the circumstances of the Agency tracts."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"It may be open to the Government to appoint a local executive officer anywhere."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"It is only in such areas where there is no commissioner or president of a district or taluk board."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The point is this; the clause which the Honourable Mr. Krishna Rao wishes to amend runs thus: 'if there is no taluk board or district board, such public servant as may be designated by the Local Government'."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I did not catch it."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I do not press it."

The amendment was withdrawn.

Clause 2 as amended was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 3.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I propose that clause 3 be omitted. This is an important amendment. It will be found that in clause 22 of the Bill it is stated that 'the provisions of sections 2 to 21 shall be read as supplemental to the Act under which the local authority concerned is constituted.' So far as the Municipal and Local Boards Acts are taken into consideration, they contain provisions for chairmen delegating their powers to particular officers. If it is contemplated that they should have further power of delegation, the appropriate course to be adopted would be to give them the power in the various Municipal and Local Boards Acts. What this clause proposes to do is 'the local executive officer may delegate his powers and duties under this Act to such persons and in such manner as may be prescribed.' And we see that in clause 20 it is stated 'the Local Government may make rules prescribing the classes or qualifications of persons to whom and the conditions on which the local executive officers may under section 3 delegate his powers.' What I would submit is that so far at least as the local executive officers who are presidents of district or taluk boards or chairmen of municipal councils are concerned, there is absolutely no justification for taking away the powers of delegation vested in them by the laws which create them. What is the necessity for suggesting that even in their cases they should delegate their powers and duties to such persons as may be prescribed by the rules to be framed under section 20. I think it will lead to very anomalous consequences. If we had not in this Bill section 22, the argument might have been suggested that, so far as the provisions of this Bill are concerned, the District Municipalities Act and Local Boards Act will not apply; but when the provisions of this section are to be read as supplemental to the Acts under which the local authorities are constituted and when those Acts contain provisions for delegation of powers, there is no necessity for this provision for delegation. The Hon'ble the Advocate-General having moved the amendment which has been accepted, the Government should in conformity with that idea leave the question of delegating those powers to such officers. As it is, the Bill leaves the power of delegation to the Local Government and not the local executive officers."

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; [13TH AUGUST 1918.

Mr. Siva Rao ; the President.)

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—" Will you quote the section in the Municipalities Act or the Local Boards Act where powers of delegation are given ? "

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—" Under the Local Boards Act the president and under the Municipalities Act, the Chairman, have the powers of delegation. If this clause is passed into law the effect of it will be that instead of these presidents and chairmen delegating their powers to officers at their own discretion which is the policy of those Acts, they will have to delegate these powers only to such officers and in such manner as may be laid down under section 20. There is meaning in having such restrictions in regard to the officers appointed for Agency tracts, but in the case of other areas where there are local boards or municipalities, these restrictions are quite unnecessary and positively injurious."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" I formally second the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" There seems to be a little misapprehension as regards the scope of clause 3. Under the District Municipalities Act and the Local Boards Act the chairmen of the councils and the presidents of the boards are empowered to delegate their functions under those Acts to the vice-chairman or the chairman-delegate. That delegation is for the purposes of the District Municipalities Act or the Local Boards Act. Now this provision is intended for the purposes of enabling the local executive officer to delegate his functions to food inspectors or sanitary inspectors for the purpose of discharging their duties under this Bill. My Honourable friend has not probably seen the distinction between this and the delegation under those Acts which is the delegation of the powers entrusted to the chairman or the president under those Acts. This is a special Act which empowers the local executive officer to discharge certain definite functions under this Act; the functions of inspection, functions of occasionally purchasing samples and submitting them to the analyst have necessarily to be discharged by municipal subordinates, food inspectors and sanitary inspectors. Clause 3 says that the president or the chairman will have power to delegate his functions under this Act to municipal employee also. I am unable to see the difficulty which the Honourable Member has felt. I do not see any necessary inconsistency in the powers of delegation given by the Municipal Act to the municipal chairmen and the powers of delegation given under clause 3 of this Bill which must necessarily be limited to the powers given to local executive officers under this Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—" I cannot agree to this amendment. The Honourable mover evidently means that by clause 3 the powers of delegation which the local bodies now have are sought to be restricted. This is a misconception. It may be so on a superficial reading. If you go deeper into the Bill you will see that the powers of delegation are extended. These are to be read as supplemental to the Acts constituting the local bodies. There is no provision which seeks to take away the powers of delegation already enjoyed by the presidents of local boards or the chairmen of municipalities. That is recognized. The chairman of the municipality can delegate his powers to the vice-chairman under certain conditions. In the Local Boards Acts also delegation is allowed under certain circumstances. Suppose there is a health officer in a town and the chairman is busy, why should not the chairman delegate these functions to him? Why should he not entrust them to a sanitary inspector? This is a welcome extension of the powers given to local bodies; I sincerely approve of it."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—" I am afraid that the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao has not correctly understood me. I do not say that the powers of delegation should be taken away. All that I am suggesting is that you can make them more free in the matter of delegation. Why do you restrict their powers by these sections."

The amendment was put to the Council and lost.

Clause 3 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 4.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—" I do not want to move my amendment that sub-clauses (2) and (3) be omitted."

Clause 4 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 5.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" I will ask the attention of the Council to another amendment which the Hon'ble the Advocate-General wishes to move, but it will not prejudice the first amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" May I know what bearing the Hon'ble the Advocate-General's amendment has on this ? "

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" It has no bearing at present. Let the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar move his amendment."

13TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR then moved the following amendment :—

" In sub-clause (1) (a), before the word ' sells ' insert the words ' to the prejudice of the purchaser."

In doing so he said :—" As the clause stands, even if the man sells superior food he is liable to punishment, and even if the purchaser knows that he was purchasing a different article the seller is liable to punishment. These words are introduced in all the Acts for preventing miscarriage of justice. There is some misapprehension in the minds of some who had the idea of omitting it. They seem to have misread the cases which are quoted in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. It is pointed out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons : ' The second defect in section 6 (of the English Act of 1875) which had to be corrected in 1879 was that it was doubtful whether it provided against a defence that purchasers buying only for analysis were not prejudiced and had nothing to complain about.' They misread the case about an analyst purchasing. The Madras City Act also omits to provide against this defence. So far as that is concerned, I agree that that proviso to this section is necessary. ' The words " to the prejudice of the purchaser " at the beginning of section 6 of the English Act have been the subject of considerable judicial dubitation.' I do not know that at all.—and are now read in a very general sense and as merely embodying the principle which may be left unstated, that there is no offence where a quixotic vendor sells a better article than the one demanded (43 J.P. 431). That case Hoyle v. Hitchman 4 Q.B.D. 233, instead of saying that these words are far from unnecessary says this : ' If a purchaser, whoever he may be, and with whosoever money he may purchase, gets an article inferior to that which he demands and pays for, it seems to me that he is necessarily prejudiced within the meaning of the section.' The statute never intended the fact that a person purchases with another's money to be material. The real offence is the fraudulent sale of an article adulterated so as to be of an inferior nature, substance and quality to that which is demanded and paid for. The necessity for the words, ' to the prejudice of the purchaser ' is this. But for these words various absurdities might arise on the words of the section. The sale of an article of a superior nature or quality to that demanded would be an offence. Another learned Judge says in the same case : ' What is the meaning of " prejudice " here? It cannot be confined to pecuniary prejudice, or prejudice arising from the consumption of unwholesome food. The prejudice is that which the ordinary customer suffers, viz., that which is suffered by any one who pays for one thing and gets another of inferior quality. The official purchaser is to purchase by way of testing whether the prejudice is suffered by the ordinary customer, and he is prejudiced in the same manner. The words " to the prejudice of the purchaser " are necessary because if they had not been inserted, a person might have received a superior article to that which he demands and paid for, and yet an offence would have been committed. The words are intended to show that the offence is not simply giving a different but an inferior thing to that demanded and paid for. It appears to me that the prejudice the Act intends is the general prejudice done to customers." What was in question was, was there prejudice to the particular purchaser? Again in 1902, 2 K.B.D. Justice Darling says : ' I think the words " to the prejudice of the purchaser " are used in the sense that there is a sale to the prejudice of the purchaser, if a purchaser in the abstract would be prejudiced, although the actual purchaser may for some reason peculiar to himself not be prejudiced. Goods might be sold under a false description and might not inflict any actual injury, because they were in fact of a better quality than the goods demanded; but it was never intended that in such a case there should be a prosecution; and I think that is the reason why the words " to the prejudice of the purchaser " are inserted in the section.'

" All these three cases show that the words ' to the prejudice of the purchaser ' should be there; otherwise the man who sells a better article than that demanded is liable to conviction. That is one part of the argument.

" The other aspect of the case is brought out in 1912, 2 K.B.D. 471, where Lord Alverstone, C.J., says : ' It seems to me that the result of the authorities to which our attention has been called is that if the purchaser is informed at the time of purchase that the article he is buying is an article mixed with something else, he cannot say that he is prejudiced on the ground that he thought he was buying a pure article. The sale in such a case is not prima facie to the prejudice of the purchaser. That seems to me to be the effect of the case of Sandys v. Small and the other cases to which we have been referred. Sandys v. Small also shows that the knowledge may be brought to the mind of the purchaser not only by means of a label under section 8 but also by a notice such as was given in this case.'

" Let us take a case where a seller tells the purchaser, ' this is not the article you are demanding.' As the section stands, he will be liable to conviction. The only exception is in proviso 3 which refers to label ' where . . . the article of food sold is not up to the standard of purity prescribed by the Governor in Council, and before the sale the vendor has clearly brought the fact to the notice of the purchaser either by means of a label on or with the food or in such other manner, etc.' But even that notice has to be by a label or such other method. If he merely tells him by word of mouth that will not do. That is what happened in the 1912 K.B.D. Case. Even if the vendor says ' this is not the article you want ', and yet the man buys, according to this section he will be liable to conviction.

" These are the two reasons which induced the legislature to introduce the words ' to the prejudice of the purchaser.' What is stated here as the reason for omitting these words? The sale of a superior article is not an offence. Naturally the purchaser would not make it an offence. It is said that the words embody a principle which may be left unstated, and ' there is no offence where a quixotic vendor sells a better article than the one demanded.' There are quixotic vendors, quixotic magistrates and quixotic purchasers. Therefore we should be careful in the language we use. The only argument is, it is unnecessary. On the other hand it has been held to be necessary in several cases. The reason for the omission is that it is unnecessary, I have shown it is necessary to prevent quixotic decisions. They are not quixotic cases at all. We are providing for public health and where there is a knowledge in the mind of the purchaser as to what he is purchasing there is no offence. The real offence is that the article is of an inferior nature. Everything is gained by having these words and there is a great deal to be lost by omitting them. The purchaser who purchases merely for analysis has nothing to lose. We have safeguarded that in section 6 as it stands. 'In every prosecution for an offence against the last preceding section, it shall be no defence to allege merely . . . that the purchaser having bought only for analysis was not prejudiced by the sale'. That itself is an argument that we ourselves contemplate that prejudice to the purchaser is a necessary ingredient, and yet in the words defining the offence we omit these words. What you do not want to make an ingredient of the offence, you want to make an exception. That itself is self-contradictory. The suggestion to omit these words is based on a misconception. Nothing is lost by having those words. As we are creating an offence our language must be un-exceptionable. We ought not to leave to quixotic magistrates to decide the meaning of the section."

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; [13TH AUGUST 1918.

Sir Gordon Fraser.)

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar will bear me out when I say that this was one of the points considered in the Select Committee and the majority of us were apprehensive that, if we introduced the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser', there might be difficulties in the working of the Act. But I recognize there is considerable force in what he has said. I am hardly competent to deal with the decisions on the subject. The Hon'ble the Advocate-General will refer to these decisions later on. So far as a lay man could see from the very decisions quoted, it will appear inadvisable to put in these words. Every one does not know how these words will be interpreted. The strong point in favour of the amendment is that these words are in the English Law. We have made a departure from the English Law. It will be better perhaps if other members will express their opinions."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"My Lord, since the last meeting of the Select Committee I have referred to the two cases mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar and I think these words should be inserted in clause 5. Suppose some food inspector purchases samples for analysis. The contention put forward was that these samples having been purchased with public money for analysis and not with the food inspector's own money, whether the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' would really apply to the food inspector, in fact whether a sale to a food inspector came within the provision of the English Sale of Foods and Drugs Act. That is the reason why in clause 6 we have specifically provided that a purchase for analysis should not be a defence, a person may merely purchase the article with public money for the purpose of analysis and such a person may be competent to undertake a prosecution under the terms of the Act if the food was adulterated. That exception has been specially provided for in clause 6, viz., purchase for mere analysis. But it logically follows that these words should appear in clause 5. It may be that a person may get a better article than what he demanded. It is unnecessary to expose any person who knowingly or unknowingly gives a better article to prosecution. The facts of those cases clearly show that it is quite possible that many times it so happens that the article actually demanded is not there and a better article is given. The question is whether this act should be an offence under this Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"My Lord, I am distinctly of opinion that the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' should be inserted in this clause; otherwise it will be a real hardship. It is not for every discrepancy between the thing asked for and that supplied that a prosecution should be instituted. The gist of the offence as put by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar is that the purchaser must be injuriously affected. That is the test, you must make that a criminal offence. If a chemical analysis is made it may be that the article purchased may not be of the same composition as announced. Before the prosecution is launched some degree of safeguard should be vouchsafed that the purchaser should be affected injuriously."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RICHMOND :—"Your Excellency, I support the amendment. I entirely agree with the reasons given by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar. It is necessary that the wording of sections creating an offence should, as far as possible, be exact. It should not be left to the criminal courts to decide upon doubtful constructions if that could be avoided. I think the amendment would only bring about the result that we wish to achieve."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER :—"Your Excellency, as one of the members of the Select Committee that considered Bill, I think that there is a great deal in what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said in favour of the introduction of these words. The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar pointed out one difficulty, that it is extremely difficult to foresee what plausible arguments may be brought forward under cover of these three words to escape prosecution. But as the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar pointed out, clause 6 is a safeguard against this. It is always possible to buy articles for analysis and clinch the matter. I think on the whole the arguments are in favour of the inclusion of these words."

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar ;
the Advocate-General.)

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"My Lord, I feel some difficulty, on account of which I am inclined to oppose the insertion of these words. In clause 5 it is perhaps taken for granted that the buyer is the consumer himself. But there is another kind of buyer who is not the consumer of the article but who will be a seller later on, a retail seller buying from a wholesale seller. For example, if a retail seller buys adulterated ghee from a wholesale seller, it cannot be said that the wholesale seller has sold that ghee to the retail seller to the prejudice of the latter, because the retail seller may have purchased and intended to purchase the adulterated article only to make more profit. The sale is not to his prejudice, but it is to the prejudice of the ultimate consumer of the article. This intermediate buyer should be taken into account and I want the wholesale seller should be prevented from selling adulterated article to another merchant though he knows that by selling it to him he is not doing anything to the prejudice of the purchaser. It would be very difficult to prove that the wholesale seller has sold his article to the prejudice of his customer—the retail dealer."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"My Lord, the introduction of these words will not solve the question. If the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' were added, it would require proof that the purchaser was prejudiced; otherwise you will not be able to convict the seller. Therefore, the addition of the words suggested will not give the remedy. But certainly the decisions quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar are decisions whose spirit will show that the wording here is not quite correct. We may have 'whoever fraudulently sells food' or some such words. I do not know whether this word 'fraudulent' would imply loss or gain. The present wording would probably make it difficult for the courts to punish a man who sells an article which is adulterated."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—"The suggestion made by the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar that the word 'fraudulent' might be added would make the section futile. The section in the Penal Code would suffice. Mens rea is not necessary for prosecution in case of adulteration of foods and drugs. It is necessary for the customer to get the proper articles."

"The amendment moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar gives rise to considerable difficulty. It is easy enough to refer to English decisions, but as a matter of fact one does not know whether we will be right in accepting his amendment. If these words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' were to be inserted in clause 5 (a) those words would mean the immediate purchaser; not purchasers generally. What the decisions generally state is this: it should appear that prejudice is done to customers. But if the amendment is accepted, unless there is prejudice to the actual customer, there cannot be a prosecution."

"The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan mentioned one difficulty which is not an unlikely difficulty. If a wholesale dealer in certain kinds of food-stuffs sold an article to a retail dealer who knew perfectly its quality and knew that it was adulterated, seeing that this retail dealer does not consume the article but sells it, there would be no prejudice to the customer. That will be one way of evading the Act. Suppose a purchaser never uses the article or buys it and prejudice is suffered by somebody else. Therefore the learned Judges take care to say that it is not pecuniary prejudice but general prejudice. No absurdities are really pointed out except two. If you can find a vendor in this world quixotic enough to supply an article superior to the article demanded, the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar's amendment is required."

"There is another possible case where the article that is sold is not superior but altogether different, but not adulterated. That may require protection. The prejudice of the customer will cover cases far more numerous than those mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar as requiring protection, and it would open a wide door to all sorts of adulteration and defences which it will be impossible for the prosecution to overcome. In the case in 1912 K.B.D. mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, what happened was that the purchaser had notice that all cream had a certain amount of boron. That case illustrates the necessity for keeping the section as it is. An ingredient was mixed, which was injurious. He knew only it contained a particular percentage of boron. There could be no prejudice because he knew it contained it. If you look at the proviso to clause 5, five safeguards are provided. Are they not ample enough for all reasonable purposes? The first proviso says 'Where any innocuous material has been used or admixed in the composition or preparation of food to render the same fit for carriage or consumption and not fraudulently to increase the bulk, etc.', that does not constitute an offence. The second safeguard is 'where in the process of production, collection, preparation or conveyance of the food some extraneous material has unavoidably been admixed therewith.' The third is 'where any innocuous material has been added or admixed or the article of food sold is not up to the standard of purity prescribed by the Governor in Council, and before the sale the vendor has clearly brought the fact to the notice of the purchaser either by means of a label on or with the food or in such other manner as the Local Government may prescribe.' So also in the case 'where the food is the subject of a patent in force and is supplied in the state required by the specification thereof.' The proviso to clause 6 says: 'the vendor shall not be deemed to have committed an offence under section 5, if he proves that the food was purchased by him as the same in nature, substance, composition and quality as that demanded by the purchaser and with a written warranty to the effect that it was of such nature, substance, composition and quality, that he had no reason to believe at the time when he sold the same that the food was not of such nature, substance, composition or quality and that he sold it in the same state as that in which he purchased it.' Sub-section (2) protects employers. There are also two new clauses 18 and 19

(The Advocate-General; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Narasimha [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

which say that no prosecution shall be instituted except on the complaint of the purchaser or with the consent in writing of the local executive officer, and that no prosecution shall be commenced after the expiry of three months after the commission of the offence. Though the words appear to be somewhat wide, really there are ample safeguards provided. If the object of the Bill is firstly to protect customers generally and secondly to increase the reputation of the goods of this presidency in the markets of the world, which is equally an important object, it is very much better to have a slightly drastic Adulteration Bill with sufficient safeguards rather than to let in any number of defences the exact nature of which it is not possible to foresee. One can see that the three English decisions do not exhaust all possibilities of the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser'. Naturally the ingenuity of the counsel for the prisoner will cover a far wider ground than these three decisions. If the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' are to be limited to the purposes mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, viz., that the seller should not be prosecuted if he sells an article superior in quality or an altogether different article, that would be a different matter. Those are the only two cases which require protection. The section does not involve any hardship. If those two cases require protection we can put in an explanation to say that any person who sells an article of food superior in quality to the one demanded or an altogether different one cannot be prosecuted. This can be put in at the end of clause 5, but to use the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' would be embarking upon the unknown."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"My Lord, my amendment is taken from the English Act of 1875 and the Madras City Municipal Act and the Calcutta Act. These words will not cover very many cases, because, ingenious counsel as he is, even the ingenuity of the learned Advocate-General cannot instance any other cases than those mentioned in the English cases. From the year 1875 ingenious counsels have not been able to invent any other defences. They devised only two, superior article or different article. From 1875 ingenuity could not invent another. If the Hon'ble the Advocate-General cannot invent one — we might well say that ingenuity is exhausted. We are creating an offence. Here are two cases which we do not want to make an offence. The Hon'ble the Advocate General says safeguards have been provided. This safeguard has been provided in the analogous Acts; why not we have that. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan says there may be an intermediate customer. That is what the English Judges say. That is exactly what we mean by 'to the prejudice of the general customer.' We have that precedent. Therefore it is not the prejudice of the particular purchaser but the prejudice of the customer in the abstract. I do not see why those words would not do, words which have stood the test of forty-three years. Simply because legal ingenuity may devise defences, it is said we should omit those words. What will be the percentage of cases that will be protected by ingenious defences. When we create an offence we must make the language unambiguous. In the case of the retail purchaser mentioned by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan either he is a party to the fraud or he is not. If he is not a party to the fraud, he is prejudiced. If he is a party to the fraud directly he sells it he comes within the Act. Therefore the retail buyer who buys for selling the thing to others will be either an innocent purchaser or a fraudulent seller."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"Suppose we say 'ultimate customer' instead of 'purchaser'."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"As there seems to be some difference of opinion, let us adjourn now."

At this stage the Council adjourned for a short interval and re-assembled at 2-50 p.m.

Then the consideration of the Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar's amendment to clause 5, sub-clause (1) (a) to insert before the word "sells" the words "to the prejudice of the purchaser" was resumed.

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—"I wish to add one or two words more by way of reply to what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said. In the very case referred to the learned judge says :—"The language of the section has unfortunately given rise to diversity of opinion and crippled the operation of a very beneficial Act." Apart from the words being of any use, they have given rise to endless difficulties. Some cases have found their way in the Law Reports, some of them are unreported. We must not suppose that, there are not other cases in which difficulties were experienced. The learned judge says 'an impression has gone abroad whether the purchaser can be said to be prejudiced when he knows the adulteration.' The result of this would be to strike out all those provisos and safeguards. The result will be that in few cases only will the offence be committed. In most of the cases he must be deemed to have known that it contains some ingredients. The whole question therefore is whether it is possible for the Council to allow such an amendment as this which has been characterised in the very case as having unfortunately given rise to a great diversity of opinion and of having crippled to some extent the operation of this very beneficial Act.

"In the second place, I wish to mention to the Council that the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar is not correct in stating that it works very smoothly in England. This Act was introduced in England in 1875. In 1879 they had to bring in an amendment in connexion with the very words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser.' Again, a further amendment was made in 1899 which was also the result of this unfortunately worded section. This amendment 13TH AUGUST 1918.] (The Advocate-General; Mr. Ranga Achariyar;

Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; the President.)

which the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has proposed will bring in the complications of English law and the complications which may be discovered in India hereafter in the actual working of the Act. So much for the felicity of the expression sought to be introduced.

"As regards the question whether the English legislation was on the same lines throughout, in the later Act, the Margarine Act, the words 'to the prejudice of the purchaser' do not occur. This is with reference to a special kind of food-stuffs. I would submit that the proposed words would seriously deprive this measure of any benefit which it is likely to secure. The word 'purchaser' must necessarily mean the immediate purchaser."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"In that very case it has been held otherwise."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—"It has been held in England; we do not know how it will be held here. Judicial opinion is not always uniform. The purchaser means the person who demands the article, and not one who does not demand the article. Then it may also involve the further question, what is meant by 'prejudice.' It is a very difficult question. Is it to be defined as injury, as injury affecting body, mind, reputation or property or is it any other kind of prejudice? I think when the Council looks at all the safeguards and the very exceptional provisions which have now been put in by which prosecutions are to be instituted within three months and with the consent of the local executive officer, and also has regard to the fact that if one sells an article superior in quality it is hardly likely that the magistrate will convict him for that, it will come to the conclusion that the section may remain as it stands."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I have very little to say, but after hearing the debate which has taken place, I feel convinced that the balance of advantage is against the amendment. It is really a question on what side the balance of advantage will be. I do not deny that there is considerable force in what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said. His strongest point is that there is a similar provision in the English law which was enacted forty years ago. But, as pointed out by the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, the English law gave a great deal of difficulty in the actual working. There is no particular reason why we should not depart from the English law when we feel that the departure will be in the direction of facilitating the working of the measure. The apprehension—I think it is a well-grounded apprehension after the debate—is that if you put in these words, the chances are that you would greatly weaken the measure. I do not think there is any fear of this measure being worked oppressively. There are a number of safeguards, as pointed out by the Hon'ble the Advocate-General. I would earnestly appeal to the Council not to adopt the amendment which would cut at the root of the enactment."

The amendment was put to the Council and lost.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"If you look at clause 5 (1) (a) the language is 'or in the case of a compounded article of food is not composed of ingredients according with the demand of the purchaser' It is proposed that those words be omitted."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—"The reason for the amendment which I beg to move is that it was apprehended in the Select Committee that the word 'composition' might give rise to difficulty so that it was necessary to define what 'composition' means and what 'compounded article' means. What I propose is to omit all reference to composition in the section. 'Nature, substance and quality' are sufficient to cover every case. It is not necessary to have the word 'composition' especially when we have 'compounded article of food.' This was taken from the English Act which itself was defective—section 7 of Sale of Foods and Drugs Act."

"This section refers to a clause which was dropped out of the Bill. It was originally intended to define what is meant by a compounded article of food. But unfortunately the section remained in the Act which was finally passed. Then the question arose whether prosecution in the case of compounded articles of food is to be under section 7 or section 6. The English Courts have held that section 6 which corresponds to section 5 of our Bill would apply. We find there was a special section which defined composition. Food is defined in clause 2 of our Bill as 'every article (other than drugs or water) used by man for food or drink, and all material used or admixed in the composition or preparation of such article and shall also include flavouring matter and condiments.' It is wholly unnecessary to have any reference to compounded article of food, because a 'compounded article of food is food and any article of food will be subject to the provisions of the Bill. There is, therefore, no necessity to have this proviso unless there is a definition of compounded article. This is due to the mere accident of our following the provisions of the English Act. I propose that the words 'or in the case of a compounded article of food is not composed of ingredients according with the demand of the purchaser' in clause 5 (1) (a) be omitted."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar seconded the amendment.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"Does the Hon'ble the Advocate-General propose to omit the word 'composition' wherever it occurs?"

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—"Yes."

The amendment was put to the Council and agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The next amendment which is a consequential one is that the word 'composition' be omitted in clause 5 (1) (b) and 5 (1) (c)."

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Sir Fairless Barber; [13TH AUGUST 1918.
Lieut.-Col. Giffard; the Advocate-General; the President;
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Is it necessary to remove the word 'composition' in this sub-section?"

"I think the word 'composition' is as necessary as 'nature, quality or substance.' The consequential amendment does not require the deletion of this word 'composition' elsewhere."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"Does composition refer to the proportion of the articles?"

The Hon'ble Surgeon-General Lieut.-Col. GIFFARD:—"If by composition you mean chemical composition, you would never get out of the difficulty."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"It is very difficult to define what is meant by the word 'composition' which is not covered by the words, 'nature, substance or quality.' By putting in these unnecessary words you create a certain amount of confusion whether it is chemical composition or proportion. If the food is lacking in the proportions of the ingredients it should contain, it will not conform to the nature, substance or quality of the food. It is better to omit the word 'composition'."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"There is a great deal of difference between coffee and chicory in the composition."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"If a man asks for a pound of coffee and if he gets coffee and chicory it is not of the nature, substance or quality of the article that he asked for. But if it is brought to the notice of the purchaser either by a label or otherwise that it is so much coffee and chicory, it will be all right."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I do not think the word 'composition' matters one way or the other."

The motion to omit the word composition in clause 5 (1) (b) and (c) was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I find in line 14 on page 3 the word 'composition'."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"That is a quite different thing."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The next amendment is with regard to sub-clause (1) (d). Does the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao want to move it?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Yes, I want to move a slight amendment which affects the penalties provided in the Act. The amendment runs as follows:—

"In sub-clause (1) (d) for "one hundred" substitute "fifty" and for "five hundred" substitute "two hundred"."

"There are two reasons: firstly, it is a new Act which will be tried in rural areas as also in the Agency tracts; even third-class magistrates may try these offences. That is why the penalty should be lighter. I hope there will be no difficulty in accepting it."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar seconded the amendment.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I am against it. This is only the maximum penalty. I do not consider rupees hundred excessive for the first offence or rupees five hundred for the second offence."

The amendment was put to the Council and lost.

Clause 5 as amended was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 6.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The word 'composition' goes out in four places; it occurs four times."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao intimated that he did not move his amendment to omit sub-clause (2).

Clause 6 was allowed to stand part of the Bill, with the omission of the word "composition" in four places.

Clause 7.

Clause 7 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 8.

Clause 8 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Ranga Achariyar; the Advocate-General;
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

Clauses 9 to 18.

Clauses 9 to 18 were allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 19.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao intimated that he did not wish to move the amendment to this clause of which he had given notice, viz., for "three" substitute "two."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR then moved the following amendment of which he had given notice:—

"After clause 19 the following clause shall be inserted as clause 20:—

"Every fine imposed and recovered under this Act shall be paid to the credit of the local authority within whose jurisdiction the offence was committed, or by whom or under whose authority the offender was prosecuted."

In doing so, he said:—"My Lord, I have taken this from the English Act, section 26. There is a corresponding section in the Madras City Municipal Act. We are now throwing a financial responsibility on the local authority in connexion with the working of this Act. It is only right that the fines recovered under this Act should go to the fund from which the prosecution is launched. That principle is recognized in connexion with prosecutions which are purely municipal or local. These bodies have not got enough funds and we are throwing a new financial burden on them. It is necessary that these local authorities should be given an inducement by way of these fines. As the principle of it is accepted in other Acts I do trust that the Government will accept it."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao seconded the amendment.

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"Your Excellency, there is great difficulty in accepting this amendment. The Government can always allot funds and distribute funds. The question is whether the Council has the power to pass such a section. No doubt in certain other Acts there have been similar provisions. The Government of India Acts were scattered in several statutes and it was impossible to find those statutes and they were not considered in enacting those sections. The real reason why I object to this section is that section 21 of the Government of India Act, 1915, provides:—"The expenditure of the revenues of India, both in British India and elsewhere, shall be subject to the control of the Secretary of State in Council; and no grant or appropriation of any part of those revenues, or of any other property coming into the possession of the Secretary of State in Council by virtue of the Government of India Act, 1858, or this Act, shall be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council of India." Therefore, any grant or appropriation of revenues cannot be made except by a resolution of the Council of India or by the various Governments in accordance with the general provisions of the regulations and rules framed by the Secretary of State under section 21 or the corresponding provisions in the earlier statutes in this behalf. The revenues of India are expressly defined in section 20, which states: "The revenues of India shall include all fines and penalties incurred by the sentence or order of any court of justice in British India and all forfeitures for crimes of any movable or immovable property in British India." Therefore the fines which are recovered are part of the revenues of India, and if you make a direct or substantial grant of the fines, then it would be contrary to the express prohibition contained in section 21 of the Government of India Act. That is a section which cannot be affected by the local or the Indian legislature. Honourable Members will remember, with reference to this section 65, clause (2) (i), which says "Provided that the Governor-General in Legislative Council has not, unless expressly so authorized by Act of Parliament, power to make any law repealing or affecting any Act of Parliament passed after the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty." Section 79 (4) says: "The local legislature of any province has not power to make any law affecting any Act of Parliament." Therefore, the express prohibition in section 21 will be affected by a legislation that part of the revenues shall be transferred. The Legislative Council can pass an Act which makes a charge on the revenues of India but has not power to appropriate any part of the revenues to any particular purpose. That is the general nature of the various regulations made in accordance with section 21. Therefore, my objection is only on that ground, that such a provision is ultra vires. I know in several cases that this has been done, but the recent Consolidation Act has brought this matter prominently to notice. There is nothing to show that when the provision in the City Municipal Act was made, this was had in mind."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I regret that the Hon'ble the Advocate-General should have come to the conclusion that the Government of India Act stands in the way of this amendment and that he should have made the extraordinary statement that the previous enactments containing similar provisions were enacted without the knowledge of this provision on the part of the Provincial legislatures, the Indian legislature and the Secretary of State. Section 21 refers to the appropriation of the revenues or expenditure, but it has no bearing upon the powers of the Provincial legislatures which are referred to in section 79 of the Act which contains restrictions upon the power of the local Legislative Council. Section 79 does not contain any restriction of the nature now suggested ; it says on the other hand that a Bill may be introduced with the permission of the Governor, even though it may affect the revenues of the Government of India. The precedents to be found in various enactments are a safer guide in this matter than the present contention of the Advocate-General. There is a provision in the Criminal Procedure Code, section 545, which permits the money realized from the composition of offences being paid to complainants in cases where it may be adjudged by courts. There are provisions in the City Municipal Act which say that fines levied for municipal offences should be credited to the municipal funds. A most recent case was when a village fund was constituted in Assam under the Local Self-Government Act recently passed ; the penalties imposed were to be contributed to the village fund. As this contention is put forward and is likely to be put forward whenever such a proposal is made, it is one of those matters in which we must join issue with the Hon'ble the Advocate-General. The consideration of section 21 has no bearing on this matter. On the other hand I am convinced that the local legislature has ample power."

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Siva Rao ;
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.) [13TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—" My Lord, I was considerably surprised at the position taken up by the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, although he conceded that there was considerable justice in favour of this claim. A local body has to engage an analyst, whether it will or no, and when the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao moved an amendment that this Act should not be thrust upon the local body, that was vehemently opposed by the Government. The operation of the Bill is imposed upon the local body and with it some additional burden is also imposed. The local body has to engage a staff and to incur certain expenditure in working the provisions of the Act and it has to employ an analyst. After all this, we are told at the end under the cover of certain Government of India Acts that the local body cannot have recoupment of all these expenses. There have been a number of provisions in the Towns Nuisances Act and the District Municipalities Act that these fines may be credited to the municipal fund. We have here a declaration of opinion for the first time pronounced by the Hon'ble the Advocate-General that those provisions are ultra vires. I shall invite the attention of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General to this point. The Act raises a special fund for certain purposes, and therefore the Act can give power to appropriate the fund for any definite purposes. It is a special Act, the Adulteration Act. It raises a certain fund, and when it does that, it is ridiculous to suggest that the same Act which creates these revenues cannot give the power to dispose of them. This provision does not contravene the provision in the Government of India Act. But for this Act, we would have no funds."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" I am glad that the Hon'ble the Advocate-General did not object to the amendment on its merits. I wish to press one aspect of the matter. Are we here to join the Hon'ble the Advocate-General and say that a series of Acts have been passed by this Council which should be treated by ourselves as invalid, or are we rather to say they are valid ? We have proceeded on one interpretation as to the power of this Council, and that should continue until it becomes necessary to alter our views. Suppose we accept the Hon'ble the Advocate-General's contention ; the proceedings of this Council will be quoted and the courts may say all these Acts are illegal and we would be stultifying ourselves. Should this opinion which is now the opinion of only one member prove ultimately to be correct, we should require a validating Act, as regards this and numerous other Acts. In such a general Act, we can have one clause about this Act also. The Moment case decided that the local legislature has no power to legislate so as to take away a right to sue the Secretary of State in regard to land. We as a Council should not stultify ourselves by saying that all these Acts are invalid. With due respect to the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, very few Honourable Members are prepared to believe that all these enactments are invalid. If they are held invalid, we may have a validating Act ; otherwise we should ask for the Secretary of State's formal permission."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—" My Lord, I think in this connexion we have to read sections 21 and 79. All that section 21 says is : 'The expenditure of the revenues of India, both in British India and elsewhere, shall be subject to the control of the Secretary of State in Council ; and no grant or appropriation of any part of those revenues, or of any other property coming into the possession of the Secretary of State in Council by virtue of the Government of India Act, 1858, or this Act shall be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council of India, provided that a grant or appropriation made in accordance with provisions or restrictions prescribed by the Secretary of State in Council with the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council shall be deemed to be made with the concurrence of a majority of such votes.' The constitution and the powers of the local Legislative Council are referred to from section 72 to section 79. Clauses (4) and (5) of section 79 are important. Clause 4 says : 'The local legislature of any province has not power to make any law affecting any Act of Parliament.' Clause 5 says : 'Provided that an Act or a provision of an Act made by a local legislature, and subsequently assented to by the Governor-General in pursuance of this Act, shall not be deemed invalid by reason only of its requiring the previous sanction of the Governor-General under this Act.'

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; Mr. Ranga Achariyar ;
the Advocate-General.)

Even in cases when prior sanction is not taken by the local Legislative Council for the provision, the provision is not illegal. That is well understood if we take sections 81 and 82. Section 81 says (1) 'When an Act has been passed at a meeting of a local Legislative Council, the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Chief Commissioner, whether he was or was not present in Council at the passing of the Act, may declare that he assents to or withholds his assent from the Act. (2) If the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Chief Commissioner withholds his assent from any such Act, the Act has no effect.' Clause 4 says : 'Where the Governor-General withholds his assent from any such Act, he shall signify to the Governor, Lieutenant Governor or Chief Commissioner in writing, his reason for so withholding his assent.' That, therefore, gives an opportunity for the Governor-General, when such an Act is passed to withholding his assent. Section 82 says 'When any such Act has been assented to by the Governor-General, he shall send to the Secretary of State an authentic copy thereof, and it shall be lawful for His Majesty to signify, through the Secretary of State in Council, his disallowance of any such Act.' These provisions are made. I have already referred to clause 5 of section 79, and so far as section 21 is concerned, I have mentioned, Your Excellency, that no grant or appropriation of revenue shall be made without the concurrence of a majority of votes at a meeting of the Council of India. The definition was read out that the revenues of India 'shall include all fines and penalties incurred by the sentence or order of any court of justice in British India, and all forfeitures for crimes of any movable or immovable property in British India.' These are the three clauses. The question is where there is an Act passed to have certain revenues and to appropriate them to a particular purpose, whether they will be the revenues of India. Sub-clause 3 of section 20 will come in only when they become the revenues of India. Under these circumstances the language used in section 20 (3) and section 79 does not refer to the competency of this Council to pass a measure like this. I do not see where we are out of order. Even if we are out of order in doing this, we have precedents. There is no reason why there should be a departure made like this. This Council is of opinion that it should not be made a revenue of India but should be made a revenue of the local body. The amendment is quite in order."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—" I do not want to follow my Honourable friend in discussing questions of law. The Hon'ble the Advocate-General will admit that there is some doubt. We have precedents including legislations of the Government of India and local legislations and nobody has ever questioned them. The principle of it is admitted ; nobody has questioned our power. Are we to drop it, merely because our Advocate-General is down on us ? With due respect to the Hon'ble the Advocate-General it is a highly doubtful question, and it has not been decided. Possibly it is an arguable point as some of our Judges will say. I am sure that if the Hon'ble the Advocate-General were on the Bench, I would convince him in five minutes. When the principle and the policy of the suggested amendment is admitted in other Acts, are we sure that it is ultra vires ? Has anybody suggested that ? Are we to say merely, on account of doubt, that all our Acts are ultra vires ? I quite agree that it is a doubtful point. There is the Governor who is going to give his assent and there is also the Governor-General who has to give his assent. Look at the consequences of it. We are going to have the City Municipal Bill, repeating that provision which was put in in 1884 and 1902. Look at the Criminal Procedure Code. Every magistrate knows that if a man is assaulted or hurt, so much is paid to him as compensation. In the case of adultery, hurt, assault, it is a well known thing. When we have precedent and practice and principle in our favour, is this doubt to stand in our way ? I would appeal to the Hon'ble the Advocate-General not to give effect to a mere doubt."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL :—" As I expected, the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar did not discuss the merits of the question. He skilfully evaded it by saying that it is a matter of doubt. With a full sense of responsibility, without any desire to throw any doubt upon similar provisions, I must point out it is a fundamental principle of the Government of India Act that no appropriation or grant of the revenues of India can be made by the local legislature. The amendment that is sought to be made is that the fines should be credited to the local authority. The question is whether these fines are revenues of India. The only argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao and the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar is, when you create an offence you create a fund and you can dispose of it. It is hardly right to say that. When you create an offence, upon conviction certain results follow. Section 20 (3) (ii) applies to all penalties in all cases before the Act or after it. That argument will not do. I am sure that the Government can do it by executive order. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar wants the legislature to do it. That the Government can do it there is very little doubt, just as the local bodies get other grants and appropriations substantial or otherwise. As far as practice is concerned, practice does not make a statute valid. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar and others as lawyers may remember there are many decisions based on many points never raised or argued. In the other cases referred to there may be special instructions issued by the Government or they may be in accordance with special regulations. The Council must confine itself to the present proposal. If it is a matter of doubt, it is serious enough according to the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar to make the Council withhold its assent to the amendment proposed."

ESTATES BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW introduced a Bill to declare the Doddappanayakkanur and Vuyyuru estates to be impartible estates within the meaning of the Madras Impartible Estates Act, 1904, and moved that it be read in Council. In doing so, he said:—“Your Excellency, my duty is to move for the introduction of this Bill and to move that it be read in Council. This is only a small measure the object of which is to accord to these estates the same degree of protection which is possessed by other impartible estates which are scheduled in the Act of 1904. I may just briefly explain to the Council what was the raison d'être of that Act. For a very long time, for nearly a century, it had been regarded as the settled law of this Presidency that ancient zamindaris were impartible and that conclusion really followed from the well-known principle that under the native rule every zamindari was resumable at pleasure. The ruling power did not promise continuance, though hereditary succession was freely admitted. But as the estates were resumable, they could not be alienated. Alienation would be detrimental to the continuity of the estate. For this reason all the ancient estates were regarded as impartible. That was the understanding and the general law of the Presidency. In 1889 the Privy Council dealing with an estate in Northern India held the view that it did not follow that these estates were inalienable and impartible and that it had to be proved in every case whenever the question was raised. The High Court of Madras following the Privy Council decision upset the law as hitherto understood in this Presidency and then the Government after a long debate determined to restore the law to the position it was in before, and in doing so they limited this protection to ancient zamindaris. In the case of ancient zamindaris, they declared by the Act of 1904 that they should be inalienable except in accordance with the provisions of that Act. What it is proposed to do now is to provide that that amount of protection should be extended to these two estates.

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Sir Alexander Cardew; Mr. Venkatapati Raju.)

“One of these estates, the Doddappanayakkanur estate, is undoubtedly an ancient one, and was scheduled in 1904, but section 6 of the Act provides that when an estate changes hands it shall lose the protection under the Act. It is easy to understand that rule. A small portion might change hands and to continue the inalienable character to it would lead to public inconvenience. There is nothing in the section however to prevent us from restoring impartibility to the estate alienated. It would not be necessary to amend that section. As I have said, the Doddappanayakkanur estate is an ancient estate. It is a small one consisting of two villages. The Government would no doubt hesitate to restore this quality of impartibility which it possessed if the ancient zamindari were to fall into the hands of a modern zamindar. But this is not the case here. The estate has been purchased by one of the members of an ancient Madura family which traces its descent from the famous Tirumala Naick. Although it is not an actual zamindari family, it is one of the old families. In view therefore of the special circumstances, the Government have thought that as an old family has purchased an old zamindari they may legitimately restore to it the character of impartibility which it possessed.

“As regards the Vuyyuru zamindari, it is a subdivision of what is undoubtedly an ancient zamindari, the Nuzvid zamindari which goes back a long way into the 18th century. As regards that estate as to whether it was impartible or not, there was a conflict of decisions. The original decision was that it was impartible, but subsequent decisions have been otherwise. But that does not prevent the legislature from giving protection to it if it is necessary in the public interests to do so. The owner has applied to the Government to give him the protection of the Act. It is an ancient estate and it appeared to the Government that there is no substantial objection to the same protection being extended to it as other ancient estates possess. In analogous cases of the Kangundi and the Peddapur estates which had been declared by the Courts to be alienable the legislature stepped in and placed them under the Act of 1904. So we have precedents for this course. On that ground also it is proposed to give protection to this estate also. The Act itself besides restoring the ancient law as it stood before the decision in the 17 Allahabad case has the effect of preventing the disruption of these estates being wasted in needless litigation which was one of the causes for the Nuzvid zamindari being divided into 8 or 9 fragments. The object of this Bill is to protect this small estate from further disruption and further waste by litigation. These are the reasons which have led the Government to bring forward this Bill which we hope will receive the general support of the Council.”

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. Gillman seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—“My Lord, after hearing the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew I might say that the measure is not a controversial one, and on that account it is not unopposed. It is opposed because a good principle is not enunciated. The Bill merely aims at the perpetuation of ancient families. When you want the abrogation of a certain law already made there must have been a certain misunderstanding. In the Act of 1904 there are two provisions which say that it shall cease to apply to an estate which shall thereafter be alienated; the person who purchases the estate cannot have the protection of an impartible zamindari. We want to bring an estate so transferred under the protection? Are we to open this door wide to persons who purchase the properties. There are merchant princes who have purchased ancient zamindaris. Are we to include them in the Act, or are we to cry halt in regard to some? The reason now advanced is that the person who has purchased is a person belonging to an ancient zamindari. Are we to say that all those who are allowance-holders as has been the case with these will be brought in? If we have some such provision, there will be no difficulty in deciding which estate should be included. We must have a broad principle which is now wanting. Under the Impartible Estates Act there is a provision in section 8 (2) ‘If, in any suit, proceeding or appeal, permitted to proceed by the Madras Impartible Estates Continuance Act, 1903, it be finally decided that any estate named in the schedule attached to this Act is partible, such estate shall be deemed not to have been mentioned in the schedule.’

“Even with reference to the estates mentioned in the schedule appended to the Act, if the courts should pronounce that they are not impartible, you must deem it that they are excluded from the schedule. We have a decision that these estates are partible. On what principle can we make impartible estates? If we say that in spite of the Privy Council decision, it is

(Mr. Venkatapati Raju; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; [13TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.]

impartible because it is an ancient estate as understood by the Madras Government and the Madras High Court, you must include all those estates which were held to be ancient.

"There is another circumstance also which I wish to place before this Council. Very recently the Privy Council pronounced that junior members of the impartible estate-holders were not entitled to any maintenance, but they say as a matter of practice they will allow it for the sons. You only create safeguards against the zamindars from being ruined by litigation. Are the junior sons to be sent out? Is it not necessary for the legislature to provide for the junior members? It is not enough for one zamindar to say, 'I will make an allowance for the junior son', or for another to say 'I have no son now, but if I have any son I will provide for him.' There must be a certain principle enunciated as to what sort of zamindars will be included or excluded, and secondly provision should be made for junior members. If that is made, I have no objection. We know automatically this motion will be carried, but there will be a feeling left that things are done in a manner which is not fair."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"My Lord, I do not wish to give a silent vote. I propose to vote for the motion. It seems to me that there is justification in principle for the inclusion of these two estates and for Government to consider whether the time has not come to amend the Act so as to give effect to that principle. Section 7 applies to all estates alike. As the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has pointed out, there may be cases where we will have to make exceptions. Suppose in the case of an ancient zamindari like that of Doddappanayakanur, the zamindar loses the ancient estate which was impartible and buys another—in this case Doddappanayakanur—which was impartible under the Act, such an estate should not lose the character of impartibility. If such a man buys such an estate, he should not be considered an alienee within the meaning of section 7. After all the custom of impartibility is a family custom. There are not many estates which by the nature of their tenure are impartible; in other cases impartibility has to be proved by custom. Where in a family there has been a custom of impartibility and such a family buys an estate, it will be a very good reason to make the estate impartible. Let us have some such principle."

"There is one other matter which I desire to mention. The Zamindar of Doddappanayakanur has got two sons. As the law stands, the second son has an one-third share and by this legislation we confiscate that property. What is the compensation we are giving? He is an infant who is not able to take care of himself. In the case of adult people who can give their consent, it will be a very good case to make the estate impartible. But here is an infant and we are depriving him of his estate without making any compensation. In such a case the Government should insist on the proprietor who has more sons than one making a settlement beforehand not to prejudice the interests of the sons. It may be to the interest of himself and to the interest of the infant that the estate should be impartible. Although I understand he wrote to say that he is willing to do so, I should like the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew to assure me on that point, so that my conscience may be clear in giving my vote, that the proprietor has given such an assurance to the Government."

"Then as regards the other estate which has been declared by the High Court to be partible, by a stroke of the pen we are declaring it to be impartible. I give my vote with a clear conscience, because the zamindar has got an only son and because the person interested applies. If all the people interested should apply that will be a principle to go upon. There are estates and estates. The condition should be that it should be an ancient zamindari prior to the Regulation of 1802 and it should be held in a family where the custom is impartibility and all the adult members should apply for its inclusion. I do not see how the public can object to it. It is time for the Government to consider whether they should not lay down for their own guidance some principle. It ought not to depend upon personal whims and fancies. I dare say the Government are acting on a principle. But there must be legislative guidance instead of the sweet will and pleasure of the executive Government. I earnestly urge upon the Government whether they will not consider the desirability of amending the Act itself so to give them guidance in future. I am sure there will be applications from persons who have purchased ancient zamindaris. The Kalahasti zamindari has been parcelled out and the Karvetnagar estate has been parcelled out. I therefore ask that the matter may be taken serious notice of by the Government so that the Government may not be flooded with applications from persons and personal considerations may not come into play."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I should like to offer a few observations. In the first place I should join my Honourable friends who have spoken before me and say that this Bill meets with my general support. While I agree with my Honourable friends that ancient zamindaris should get protection, there are certain considerations which arise on this Bill in regard to which I should like to have a clear statement from the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew. One of these is in regard to the purchasers of ancient zamindaris. It has been explained by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew, that if the purchaser happens to have been the owner of an ancient zamindari at one time, i.e., although he is a malikana holder, if the alienation was made in favour of a gentleman who belongs to an ancient family which at one time owned an ancient zamindari and were in possession of those estates the estate may be made impartible. Many of these ancient zamindaris have been broken up; we have a large number of auction purchasers. Karvetnagar has been broken up and Kalahasti has been similarly dealt with. In the southern districts a number of zamindaris have passed into other hands. The question arises whether the Government should create an aristocracy of auction purchasers or whether the Government's intention is to preserve the dignity of persons belonging to ancient zamindaris. As I said, the gentlemen concerned in this Bill come under ancient zamindaris, and possibly there may be no insuperable objection in their case. But the question which arises is one of legislative policy which has been inadequately dealt with by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew. I would ask him to consider whether a landed aristocracy of auction purchasers should be created. If such an attempt were made, it would meet with the same ridicule, as the proposal to strengthen the House of Lords by the creation of 500 Lords. I should like to know what the policy of the Government is. Some estates are already on the anvil. As soon as this Bill is passed, your Excellency's Government will have many more applications from persons who may not belong to ancient families themselves but who wish to come into the category of impartible proprietors."

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.)

"The second point that I should like to mention is with regard to the rights of maintenance of junior members. There is no provision in the Bill that maintenance shall be granted to the junior members. I understand that in one of the two estates there is a second son whose interests will certainly be affected by the Bill. Since the recent decision of the Privy Council in the Pithapuram case the rights of the junior members of impartible estates for maintenance have been unsettled, and the time has come when your Excellency's Government should undertake an amendment of the Act of 1904 by specifically providing beyond all controversy that the holders of impartible zamindaris are bound to make suitable provision for the junior members. That is a difficulty in regard to the Bill and I should like to have a clear statement about it."

"Therefore, my Lord, while I am willing to vote for this measure, I should like to have a clear statement as to the legislative policy implied in this Bill. Sir Alexander Cardew said something about the matter which was of a non-committal character. I hope, therefore, he will make a statement as regards amending the legislation suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar,—whether, if it is intended to extend the principle of impartibility, it is necessary to amend the Act so as to confer this right to members of ancient zamindari families or to auction purchasers."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"It is with some hesitation that I have decided to support this motion. But listening to the speeches which have been made, I have some doubt whether the proposed course is the best one. I have no doubt that the Hon'ble the Advocate-General will give his reasons for deciding to afford such help to zamindaris. I am very glad indeed that the Government have thought fit to extend the provisions of the Impartible Estates Act to those cases which they considered as reasonable and proper. Under the Madras Act II of 1904 there were important provisions created in section 6 and in section 8. It has been also pointed out that the cases of the two estates come in conflict with the provisions, in one case of section 6 and, in the other, of section 8. Is it the proper course for this Council to adopt a Bill irrespective of the provisions of sections 6 and 8 to violate those provisions and make a declaratory law? I feel considerable doubt in the matter. I hope it will be cleared up when the Hon'ble the Advocate-General offers his remarks. If we feel that the provisions in sections 6 and 8 are unnecessarily drastic, we may consider whether they cannot be modified so as to give discretion to the local officers to include certain estates in appendices. Would it not be proper to modify them or would it not be wise to leave them intact and proceed with a different Bill declaring that certain estates are impartible? My own view is to modify these provisions and give power to the Government to have new estates included rather than to have a new Bill to deal with these two estates."

"Considering the interests of the junior members of the zamindar's family it should not be left to the sweet will and pleasure of the zamindar to provide for them; but provision should be made in the Bill itself to effect that object. There is nothing repugnant to such a condition in the Bill. It may be that a private assurance given to the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew is ample assurance to some Honourable Members. But it is better to incorporate the provision in the Bill itself."

"These are the two points to be considered before the Bill is rushed through. From the agenda I find that it is proposed to suspend rule 46 and have the Bill passed into law. The necessary inquiries have to be made before it is passed into law. It is not desirable to pass this Bill into law at once. I am for introducing the Bill, but before taking further steps we must make fuller inquiries."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. KAVALAPPARA MUPPIL NAYAR:—"Your Excellency, my sympathies are wholeheartedly with the mover of the Bill which is fully in accordance with the laudable object of the Madras Impartible Estates Act of 1904."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"My Lord, my position in this matter has been causing me considerable trouble of mind. I have been trying to satisfy myself that I should vote silently. But I found it impossible. I do not want to repeat the arguments placed before (Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; Mr. Siva Rao ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; [13TH AUGUST 1918.

Sir Alexander Cardew.)

the Council. But I do want to press several arguments. I understand that in each case a portion of the present zamindari is set apart and is not sought to be brought into the Bill. It may be said that it is to satisfy the claims of the junior members. In one case I am able to say that it is so, but in the other I do not know. In the first case the estate of Vadagarai forms part of the zamindari; the proprietor has not applied for its inclusion. It looks to me that all aspects considered, one impression will be left on the public. For the sake of friendship or pressure by members who have taken an interest in the matter we feel bound to vote in favour of the present Bill. My submission is that the proper course would be, if the Government think more people should be protected, to give opportunity to the various zamindars to come with proper cases before the Government to have particular portions or the whole of their estates included in this list. Just as I was starting for Madras, the zamindar of Sevelpatti sent a man to me to say that he had applied for the inclusion of his zamindari under the Impartible Estates Act. From 1904 the Government seemed to have replied to him that if his first estate was impartible the present Act would not interfere with its nature and therefore it was not necessary to include it. That was the endorsement of the Government which he sent to me. When we are taking steps to protect certain people who were specifically excluded from the prior Act, I suggest that the intention of the Government should be placed before the country, and all persons interested should be asked to apply so as to give such satisfaction as the Government may finally decide to worthy zamindars. All of them may be asked to apply and the Government might proceed then. As suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao we are repealing two sections in the old Act which vitally oppose these estates being included in the old Act, and we shall be passing an Act which is inconsistent with a previous enactment. That is the position we are taking up. By implication we are repealing those sections. Why should the legislature proceed on these lines? I am also giving my support to this motion; but everybody would oppose and would yet support the Bill. It is not satisfactory that it should be done in that way. Let the whole thing be considered fully and in an open manner and the matter brought up at the next meeting. Unless that is done my conscience will be acting against my heart."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"My Lord, one feels conscientious scruples in voting for a measure like this introduced not at the instance of any official department, but at the instance of individuals who are interested individuals. Both of these are ancient zamindaris and are held by ancient families, but one feels that a principle which ought to guide us in the matter should be enunciated and until we hear from all the interested people, no such drastic action should be taken in my humble view. What about the unfortunate son who if this Act were not passed would get half the estate? How are the Government to satisfy him? Are we not defeating the expectations of these persons by passing this measure, although the Privy Council has decided that the estate is partible? Unless there are strong reasons for this step we should not have this Bill. This Bill will have a two-fold effect. It prevents the landholder from improvident acts and ties up the estate; and it introduces the law of primogeniture and disturbs the course of succession in the family. Why should that be done unless there are strong reasons? Unless there is a condition in favour of other claimants, such as other sons, this ought not to be done. They must also be heard on the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"My Lord, I think that except the last speaker, all the rest were not logical. They said they were not going to oppose the motion, but they gave ample reasons why they should oppose it tooth and nail, when they said that the present Bill is a repeal of the previous Act. We are going right in the teeth of sections 7 and 8. Section 7 of that Act says that if there is an alienation, the alienee shall not have an impartible estate. Some of us who are going to vote for the Bill tried to discover the principle of it. But there is no principle except the favouring of individuals. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew said that they are of ancient families. I should like to know whether we have exhausted all ancient families and whether they have applied to be brought under the Act and whether they would be treated with equal favour if they apply. The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar mentioned one ancient estate."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW (interrupting):—"It dates from 1803"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR (continuing):—"It dates only from 1803 and therefore the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew may not think that protection is necessary. I am not going into the case of the Sevalpatti zamindari, as I have not studied its history. But in Salem district, there are zamindaris in my neighbourhood which are ancient and which have not been included in the schedule to the Act of 1904. The question arises whether we are going to invite all persons who have ancient estates to come under the Act. Otherwise, we shall be charged with partiality. We are not logical in what we are doing. It is very unfortunate that the Government have lent their name to the introduction of this Bill. It would have been more appropriate for the representatives of the zamindars to introduce it in this Council. We have had frequent assertions in the Press, that some persons in high official authority push the interests of certain classes and their object is the creation of a cleavage between classes. It is unfortunate that such an idea should spread."

13TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Mr. Richmond ; Sir Alexander Cardew.)

"I would proceed to other matters. Certain of my predecessors tried to find out a reason for supporting the Bill. Of the two applicants, one was an Honourable Member who sat with me in this Council from 1913. Most of us sat with him. When he appealed to me I was disposed to support him. He put forward an application, which, in the circumstances of our having known him, we accept. I also made him understand that there will be very little to stand in the way of his wish. Each of the previous speakers says that he is a willing support. Several of them are unable to find a reason for the support. It is really illogical. If we support this, it must be because the zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur is a friend of ours and for that reason I should like to support him. By this Act, we are doing nothing short of confiscation. Suppose we proceed to drive out the younger members, we shall be certainly guilty of a gross act of confiscation. That is what we are doing under the colour of this Act. If we were doing this by a private act, the courts would set it aside; but we are doing it in this legislation and we are doing it merely for the preservation of ancient names. Why should a person who has a vested interest in the property be deprived of it? One Honourable Member who says he is going to vote for it says that there is an assurance given in private in closet. There are solemn assurances given in the Legislative Council which are whittled away. Assurances were given in the case of the Press Act but were whittled away by the Government and were found to be useless when the Act was discussed in Court. So we must have an adequate guarantee that the persons whose properties are confiscated have been provided for. There is no reason why in an important business like this, we should proceed in a haphazard way. If we vote for this Bill without a legislative guarantee we are giving predominance to personal matters without taking care of the interests of all the parties concerned."

"The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar seems to have discovered a valuable principle which seems to have given him satisfaction. If property owned by a person is held to be impartible, any property that may be purchased by that owner may be tacked on to that impartible estate. A man may go on purchasing any number of estates, but all of them cannot be made impartible. If really we are going to create a series of exceptions, we might repeal section 7. I should like to ask a clear question of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew. Suppose tomorrow this estate is again alienated, is he again going to introduce a Bill in 1919 to declare it impartible? Logically, we have no basis to support this Bill. If a basis is found and some other Bill is introduced in future on that basis I shall be glad to support it; at present, I must oppose this Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RICHMOND:—"None of the speakers have given sufficient reasons showing the necessity for laying down broad principles. It is not competent for this Council to lay down broad principles or hard and fast rules to guide future legislative councils. That should be left to the future legislative councils to decide when such legislative business comes before them. It is open to the present Legislative Council to vote for or against the present legislation. We may have members hereafter of ancient families who purchase zamindaris but there may be other facts in connexion with them which may render it undesirable to make the estates impartible. Each case must be disposed of on its own merits. As almost all the speakers have agreed to vote for this Bill, it is idle to seek to lay down in addition a policy."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"Your Excellency, as the Hon'ble Mr. Richmond has said, almost all the other Honourable Members have approved of the actual measure but wanted further information to relieve their conscience except one or two of them. In the statement I made in introducing this motion, I gave all the information. Act II of 1904 is limited to ancient zamindaris. The Government have no intention of going behind that principle. I explained the principle to be that ancient zamindaris should be regarded according to the common law of the country to be impartible. We do not wish to depart in any way from the principle of the old Act, namely that it should be limited to ancient zamindaris. These are ancient zamindaris, but the only exception arises in the case of Doddappanayakkanur estate. The present holder of it, though an ancient holder, was not the original holder of it. But I told the Honourable Members it is a sound exception. Honourable Members will agree with me that it is a sound exception, because the estate is itself ancient and is bought by the ex-owner of another ancient zamindari. That is never likely to recur. I may assure the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao that we have no intention of creating an aristocracy of auction purchasers who will be protected by similar legislation. We have no desire to take out a long list of recent purchasers out of money made by them. In the present instance the estate as a whole was bought by the representative of an ancient zamindari. It is an exceptional one and I do not think such cases are likely to recur."

"Then, with regard to the maintenance of junior members of the family, there is a decision of the Privy Council thereon; I am quite prepared to take it from the Honourable Members. That question is in no way brought up by this Bill which relates only to two estates. The question of maintenance is a general one and would require an amendment of the original Act. It would require us to take away the whole effect of the decision of the Privy Council on the original Act. That is a very important matter. Government may find it necessary to amend that"

(*Sir Alexander Cardew ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; [13TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao ; the Advocate-General.]*)

Act. I have not myself perused the judgment. The Government may find it necessary in view of the judgment of the Privy Council to deal with the question of maintenance, but I submit to the Council that that question does not arise here and now.

"Then the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar asked me for some information as to the provision to be made by the zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur for his younger son. As regards that, I may say that the zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur is also the owner of the Vadagarai estate which is a partible and alienable estate and the younger son's one-third share is provided out of that estate."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"I do not know if that estate is in existence. I thought he was a malikhana holder."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"Unless the Act is passed the zamindari of Doddappanayakkanur will continue to be alienable and the son may be deprived of the estate if it is alienated. It is not therefore a case of confiscation. The zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur has not told me anything personally, but he wrote to the Secretary in the Revenue Department informing him that he also proposes to provide for an allowance of Rs. 1,000 annually payable from and out of the income of the Doddappanayakkanur estate in addition to the Vadagarai property in which the younger son has a share. I hope that will satisfy the Honourable Member. We have no desire to depart from the principle of the original Act. This Bill does little more than carry out the principle of that Act, by giving the benefit of it to these two ancient zamindaris."

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Secretary then read the title of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew then moved that the Bill be not referred to a Select Committee for report.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. Gillman seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"I suggest that we should proceed with some caution. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew pointed out that the question of the maintenance of junior members has to be considered. He has to consider the bearing of the Privy Council's decision on this question and he has also to consider that decision in connexion with the amendment of the Act of 1904. He says that it has no bearing on the present Bill. I join issue with him. There is no difficulty in considering that question while we are dealing with this Bill. There is a general complaint that some provision should be made for junior members of the family under the Act of 1904. We should see the bearing of this Bill on all the provisions of that Act. So far as these two estates to be included in the Bill are concerned, there is no difficulty in this Council considering that aspect of the question. Clause 2 states 'notwithstanding any decision of the courts, rule of law, or enactment to the contrary,' those two estates are declared to be impartible estates. While we are trying to legislate in a general manner and taking wide powers, is it not open to us to deal with that aspect at all? I urge that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew can examine the bearing of the decision of the Privy Council and incorporate the necessary provisions into this Bill. It has not been suggested that there is any hurry to pass these two Bills at this meeting. Let it receive further consideration at the hands of the members of the Council and of the Government, and the Advocate-General, and let it emerge in proper form. It is somewhat extraordinary to suspend the rules. No reason has been shown to pass this Bill at this stage. It is not suggested that anything will be lost by referring it to a Select Committee."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General :—"The policy of including certain estates in the Act is a matter for the Legislative Council. The other one is what title-deed a man will take. That does not very much concern the Council. The Legislative Council first of all agrees that these estates should be impartible. The exact form is a question of conveyance—the terms of the title-deeds. This is like the procedure adopted in the House of Commons. This is a purely personal and private legislation. I do not see why we should impose conditions upon proprietors which they do not want. One point has been mentioned to which I should like to refer. There is no difference between the first and the second son. The right to demand partition is equally destroyed by proclaiming the estates impartible. There is no merit about the case of the second son. The real advantage which the sons get is that the estate is made a life estate and therefore they get a very substantial benefit. The holder of a life estate is unable to alienate it except under stringent conditions. It ensures that his property shall go to the sons unencumbered. So far as maintenance is concerned there is no difficulty. Both the first and the second sons of the Zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur and the only son of the Zamindar of Vuyyuru will be equally entitled to maintenance. The Privy Council decision deals with remoter persons, persons beyond the first generation. The Legislative Council is not going to decide whether the first son's son or the second son's son should get maintenance. That depends upon the circumstances of the zamindaris. I really think there is no necessity for the Legislative Council to go into the question of the rights of these parties. It will be noticed 13TH AUGUST 1918.] (*The Advocate-General ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Sir Alexander Cardew ; Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; that in the case of one estate the proprietor has only one son and in the other the Zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur has two sons, but no uncle or anybody else who can claim maintenance. We may safely leave to the fathers the guardianship of the interests of their children. They have come forward for this legislation; they are giving up their absolute powers of alienation in favour of their sons. I do not suggest that the members of the Legislative Council have not got the power, but I ask is it necessary for us to constitute ourselves the guardians of the zamindars when these zamindars can protect their own interests? This Bill is for the protection not of the zamindars but of their sons."

Mr. Thonger.*)

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"Of the two sons?"

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General :—"Yes. It does not affect the maintenance of the two sons. There is no doubt about the two sons of the Zamindar of Doddappanayakkanur having a right of maintenance; the same is the case with Vuyyuru. It is ancestral estate, and whether it is impartible or otherwise they have a right to maintenance out of it. The very Privy Council decision confirms the rights of the sons. There is no provision in the original Act to confer rights of maintenance on the sons. Are we to lay down a table of all persons entitled to maintenance in connexion with the decision of the Privy Council and say how far the Hindu law should be modified? I would certainly suggest that it is unnecessary to go into Committee, as you have already approved of the Bill."

The motion that the Bill be not referred to a Select Committee was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"I move that the operation of Council rule 46 be suspended. If the Council is going to pass the Bill, it should not be kept in suspense or doubt for any length of time because claims may arise. The Council has accepted the position that the Bill should not be referred to a Select Committee and there is no reason why its consideration should be postponed. On that ground I move that the operation of Rule 46 be suspended, so that the Bill may be passed into law."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"I now move that the Bill be passed into law."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

A BILL TO AMEND THE MADRAS PORT TRUST ACT, 1905.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar then introduced a Bill to amend the Madras Port Trust Act, 1905, and moved that it be read in Council.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"There is another public meeting at 5 p.m."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"This is a Bill which makes a few changes in the Port Trust Act. The changes which are proposed to be made are set out in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. There is only one further change which has since been urged upon the Government, after the Bill and the Statement of Objects and Reasons were issued, namely, the proposal made by the Trades Associations to amend section 9 of the Act so as to provide for the election of two members by the Trades Association instead of one. I hope to bring this up before the Select Committee for consideration. But at the same time I feel that I should mention it in the Council. With these remarks I commend this motion to the Council."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion on the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"It is suggested that the translation of the by-laws should be omitted. Having regard to the importance of the by-laws the translations should not be omitted. Can we discuss it in Select Committee?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"We can discuss it."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER :—"It was my intention to draw the attention of this Council to the inadequate representation of the Trades Association on the Port Trust Board. The Honourable Member has promised to take up this matter in Select Committee. Therefore the remarks that I wished to make may be left over for some other occasion."

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Secretary read the title of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee for report.

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

[13TH AUGUST 1918.]

The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar then moved that the Select Committee be constituted of the following members:—

The Hon'ble Mr. A. R. Knapp.
 „ the Advocate-General.
 „ Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar.
 „ Sir Gordon Fraser.
 „ Mr. T. Richmond.
 „ Mr. J. H. Thonger.
 „ Sir Francis Spring.
 „ Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar.

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

(Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; the Raja of Ramnad.) [14TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Council re-assembled at 11 a.m. when the discussion on the following Bill was commenced.

THE MADRAS AGRICULTURAL PESTS AND DISEASES BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR introduced a Bill for the prevention of the spread of insect pests, plant diseases and noxious weeds, and moved that it be read in Council:—

In doing so, he said:—“Your Excellency, I beg to move that the Madras Agricultural Pests and Diseases Bill be read in Council. Honourable Members will see from the Statement of Objects and Reasons that, while India Act II of 1914 gives power to the Government to issue orders and frame rules with the object of preventing the introduction into British India of any insect, fungus or other pest which is or is believed to be harmful to crops, it gives no power to prevent or control the transport of insect-pests, plant-diseases or noxious weeds from one part of British India to another. The prevention of the spread of infection or of insect and vegetable pests within the country is quite as necessary as the prevention of the importation of such evils from outside, and it is to achieve this object that the present Bill is framed. It is not an imaginary or remote danger that is sought to be provided against. As an example of an insect which endangers a field crop, I would cite the case of the ‘Cotton Stem Weevil’ which is reported to be most destructive to Comodia cotton in Coimbatore: examples of insect pests against which united action is called for in the planting districts are the green bug on coffee, the coffee borer, the orange and coconut borers, the pepper vine disease (prevalent in the Wynad) and also the blister blight which attacks tea seed. The legislation now proposed is, in the opinion of the Government, urgently called for to deal with these and similar pests. I would also mention in this connexion that legislation has been felt to be necessary for the eradication of the bud rot disease in palmyras in the Gōdāvari and Kistna districts. Operations against this disease in the Gōdāvari district were started in November 1906 and in Kistna towards the end of 1909. The special staff sanctioned by the Government has so far relied mainly on persuasion to get anything done: the plan of operations consisted at first in the cutting of dead trees and the opposition of the ryots was always quoted as a reason for slow work. When it was found necessary to operate on infected living trees, the opposition became greater and legislation was suggested so early as 1911, but the Government were at first reluctant to undertake it. In his recent reports the Director of Agriculture has pointed to the urgent need of having some sort of legislative provisions at hand if success is to be ensured in the operations. I may mention here that the coconut palms in Malabar are also affected with the bud rot disease. Special operations were undertaken in August 1913, but abandoned about the middle of 1915. The chief point in favour of the proposed legislation is that it is not much use undertaking a campaign against insect pests or plant diseases unless the Government can enforce the carrying out of what is necessary. All the ryots in a village, except one or two, may be willing that remedial measures should be undertaken, but the opposition of quite a small minority will render the measures taken ineffective, because the process of infection remains untouched in the crops or fields of this small minority. It seems to me, Sir, that, unless some legislation, such as that in the Bill now before the Council, is passed, we shall never be in a position to take effective action against insect pests and plant diseases injurious to crops, plants or trees. For example, the Government have spent on the operations against palm disease in the Gōdāvari and Kistna districts about two and a quarter lakhs of rupees. We could have had a much better return for the expenditure if the operations of the Agricultural Department had the backing of some legislation. The Bill also provides for measures to prevent the spread of noxious weeds dangerous to health or injurious to crops, plants, trees or waterways. As an instance of the need for this provision I would mention the water hyacinth which has done so much damage in tropical America and Australia, which is now causing trouble in Burma, and which has appeared in parts of this Presidency and threatens to spread. Water hyacinth, in addition to other evil effects, provides a breeding place for mosquitoes and is thus injurious to public health and comfort. Power has been taken to bring this within the purview of the Bill under the term ‘noxious weeds.’ I do not propose to trouble the Council with an analysis of the provisions of the Bill which is quite a brief one and I trust that the Council would accept the principle of it. If it is found that any of the details require alteration or amendment, the proper place for doing so would be in Select Committee. At present, if the Council is satisfied that the Bill is necessary to meet an undoubted evil and that it is based on correct principles, I trust that it will be accepted and allowed to go to committee.”

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—“Your Excellency, I beg to accord my whole-hearted support to this motion. The Bill has not come a minute too soon. It would be a source of great help when the Bill is passed into law to the agricultural population. The zamindars, in particular, should feel grateful to the Government for bringing up this Bill. There are certain matters which I should like to mention for incorporation in the Bill, such as giving powers to the local boards, requiring villagers to help the proprietors as in the case of kudimaramat and so on. But I presume that these matters will be duly considered, as mentioned by the Honourable Member of the Government, in the Select Committee. The local boards have already some powers in this direction, but that is confined, I see, only to clearance of noxious weeds, etc., adjoining a public road or pathway. Therefore the Bill enunciates no new theory which is not already in existence. I therefore feel certain that there can possibly be no opposition in principle to this Bill. I support this motion.”

14TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar ; Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao ; Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar ; Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Sir Fairless Barber.)

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. B. KAVALAPPARA MUPPIL NAYAR:—“Your Excellency, I am generally for the Bill. I know of the trouble they have had in my part of the country especially with the disease of the palms. The fear of contagion is great and protection is badly needed.”

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO:—“My Lord, I give my whole-hearted support to this Bill which is a measure quite necessary to deal effectively with palm diseases so prevalent in Gōdāvari and other districts. The Government have done a great deal in eradicating and also to a great extent checking, the diseases of palmyra trees in Gōdāvari and Kistna districts. This measure, I hope, when it comes into operation will be more successful and better care will be taken.

“I beg to offer one or two suggestions that I should like to be incorporated in the Bill before it is finally passed. I think it is necessary that in the powers, which the Government may take they should have the co-operation of the people in preventing, eradicating and checking agricultural diseases. It is also better that some sort of educational value should be brought to bear on the cultivators so that their co-operation and friendly information with regard to the insect pests may be brought to the notice of the officers, from time to time, concerned with the execution of this work. My Lord, I beg to suggest in this connexion that a board may be constituted in every district as is done in Ceylon under the Ordinance of 1907 under which there is a board constituted in each district for giving information and also for taking such action as may be necessary. With such alterations and such powers as may be found necessary, a board of similar kind may also be constituted for each district in this Presidency. The power to constitute such a board may also be incorporated in the Bill. With these suggestions I give my whole-hearted support to the Bill which will be of very great help to the agricultural community.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TANBI MARAKKAYAR:—“Your Excellency, the want of such a Bill is keenly felt by the people of my district. I have had representations from various people, especially from the Muhammadan constituents in my district that coconut trees in Mutupet and Adirampatnam have been spoiled by insects. This is a Bill which will do much good to the people, and they ought to be thankful to the mover of the Bill. I have nothing more to say. I give my hearty co-operation and support to the Bill.”

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—“My Lord, I am sorry that I cannot give my whole-hearted support to this Bill which the Honourable Friends who have preceded me have given. I am rather chary, because I am afraid that a department which is now growing in popularity will become unpopular. The Agricultural Department is doing very useful work and in course of time it will become a very useful institution and the people would begin to like it. Now under this Bill there are provisions made—I would specially draw attention to sections 8 and 9 and various other sections—which throw the burden of removing or preventing diseases upon the occupier of the land. These diseases are just like plague or cholera, but they affect plants and trees. They come from we do not know where, and it is a difficult thing for the occupier to take measures to prevent them. In the first place, the science itself has not advanced very much, and the experts employed in the Agricultural Department find it very difficult to deal with them. I will mention one instance: In an interpellation of mine yesterday with reference to a disease which affected the paddy crop in some taluks in the Tanjore district I asked for information, and I was surprised to see that the Government had no information. Since sending the notice of the question, I find in the Madras Students Agricultural Magazine published in June 1918, Mr. MacRae dealt with this disease which he says has come from outside and is a serious disease and they are investigating it and it will be difficult for the department to deal with it. The occupier, it must be remembered, in ryotwari tracts is mostly a poor pattadar holding a few acres. Many people hold less than an acre. In Tanjore they, the insects, may squat upon land 10 cents in extent. To call upon the occupier of that 10-cent land to comply with the provisions of the Act is rather difficult.

“There are two other provisions which should be noticed. Notice is to be given to remove the cause of the disease. If the man does not do it, it becomes an offence. I rather object to making it an offence. I quite agree that the department must have power to enter upon the land and do the necessary thing either by way of prevention or cure. In the first place to call upon him to take measures will be a hardship. In remote parts it may be difficult to obtain a chemical substance or a spraying instrument which you may advise the man to get. He will have to get them and also to get certain instructions and advice as to their use. Suppose he could not get it. Then to throw such a burden upon the poor occupier is to make the department unpopular which I do not think is the object of the Government. In the second place why do you make it an offence? We know people dread going to Magistrate's courts. Do the work yourself and take the damages from him; why drag him before the magistrate and get him convicted? While I welcome the measure inasmuch as it authorizes the department to enter upon the land and take remedial measures and protect not only the man's property but also the neighbour's property, I object to making it obligatory on the man to prevent the disease and to making it an offence if he fails to do it.”

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—“Your Excellency, this is a businesslike measure which I heartily approve of. It is quite a necessary and useful piece of legislation and the planting community welcome this measure.”

(Mr. Siva Rao ; Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar ; [14TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.]

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"My Lord, I don't give this measure the same warm approval as some of my Honourable Colleagues have done. The object of the Bill seems to be to prevent the spread of these pests and diseases from one part of the country to another. The legislature and the Government regret that hitherto there has been no power vested in the Government to prevent such pests travelling from one part of the country to another, although they have got power to prevent the importation of disease from outside British India. The only point for consideration is whether this measure will satisfy the object in view. Before I proceed further, I should like to point out that there is no parallel legislation undertaken in any other province in India. I may also say that this Act gives very drastic powers. For instance, section 9 says: 'If in the view of the inspecting officers any tree is infected with insect pests or plant disease, he may destroy it. He may even destroy any plants including trees which though not infected have in his opinion become liable to such infection.' The Council will have to consider seriously whether these powers are not liable to be abused. I do not know who the inspecting officer will be. The village karnam or the headman will be made to write a report, and on such a report, action may be taken. In some cases compensation is provided for, but in others it is not provided. The Bill gives these drastic powers of the destruction of trees and plants if only the inspecting officer thinks it necessary. The Council will have to consider whether these drastic powers do not require safeguards.

"Again, there does not seem to be any request for this piece of legislation from the people for whose benefit it is intended. At present if there is any pest, it is open to any individual to seek the advice of the Government employees. The Government have some officers to advise individual landlords or ryotwari proprietors exactly as to how to cope with such pests. It is left to their interest and sweet will and pleasure whether to combat it or not. It may be said, this mischief is not local, but it will at once spread. Therefore, we must have power to deal with it. But why throw the whole expenditure upon the poor landowner? If it is a general evil to be combated, why throw all the expenditure of these costly measures upon the poor landowner?

"There are sections which say that on or after notification it is open to the authority to call upon the owner to take remedial and preventive measures. Irrespective of the fact whether he has got the means of adopting these measures or spending anything on these measures, he ought to do it. If he fails to do it the Act declares it an offence, and the maximum punishment is Rs 50. The humble villagers will see nothing to their benefit in this measure, but will see some new weapon of oppression and probably blackmailing placed in the hands of the village karnam or, in a municipality, in the inspecting officer. The officer will not be anything above the grade of revenue inspector. The ryot will only see in this measure, which is said to be for his benefit, some means of squeezing out money from him. The inspecting officer will have the right to certify whether a certain tree is infected or not. The tree may be valuable. I do not wish to take up a long time. I am very diffident about the successful carrying out of this measure. I have my own misgivings whether this will do any benefit to the poor people who will regard it more as an engine of oppression than anything else. In order to deal with such pests, to take such destructive powers is in advance of the times. All that is needed at present is to provide a staff of officers who know how to deal with such pests; on request being made by the owner they should be called upon to advise him. There we might stop. We should not attempt to enforce the measures by statutes."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur A. SUBBARAYALU REDDIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I do support this Bill on its main provisions except as regards the levy of the cost from the ryots. As regards the cost, I do agree with all that has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Rangachariyar. It will be a great hardship to levy that cost from the ryot. I hope that the Select Committee that will be appointed hereafter will bestow its best attention on this matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I welcome this measure. If my memory serves me right, two or three years back at the budget debate, I expressed the hope that the Government would come forward with such a measure for this purpose. I do recognize the possibility of the abuse of such a measure. The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao is however in error in supposing that any measure of this sort must work for mischief. There are two ways in which we can provide against such consequences. In the first place, we can put in the necessary safeguards in the Bill when it comes up before the Select Committee or later on move amendments when it again comes up here. In the next place, you must remember that you are dealing with an agricultural question. For long, agriculture will be a question in which the representatives of the general public will have a determining or controlling voice. I am sure that with the increasing assertion by the public of what they conceive to be their rights, the danger of oppression at the hands of revenue officers and the subordinate police will be diminished. There is no possible doubt that legislative action is called for to put down the spread of insect pests and plant diseases. For instance, with regard to the water hyacinth, we have to take extensive measures. We cannot attack it with the help merely of a few pamphlets.

"Yet, at the same time, I wish to point out the serious omission of one or two matters which call for remarks. In the first place, Honourable Members will notice that power is sought to be given to the Government to define the local areas and the period within which notification is to be given. We may remember that we had it in connexion with the Food

14TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

Ad alteration Bill. Before any local area is made subject to the application of this Act, it is but proper that the sense of the local area should be ascertained. The necessity for that will be patent to Honourable Members. In the ordinary course, the local area must be consulted as to whether this Act is to be applied or not.

"Coming to section 7, you find there are provisions inserted which may be dangerous. As the section stands, the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao is justified in thinking that it may prove to be a dangerous weapon. Some pattadar is served with a notice, and he does not attend to it. Then, something is done for which no compensation is payable. I hope the Legislative Council will be slow to increase the number of cases in which no compensation is to be paid when damage is caused. If somebody has done serious wrong, he does not deserve compensation. The reason which is given here is that he has failed to comply with the notice. We know how notices are taken to be served. Some revenue inspector or karnam says he has served it and then there is to be no compensation. Seeing the great evils which would arise from such a provision it is necessary that before the Bill comes up again before the Council, we should have this provision deleted or materially altered.

"Again, I may refer to the clause relating to appeals to the Collector against the charges levied. There again, the language seems to suggest that it is not open to a man to go to the Collector and say 'you unnecessarily charged me with the cost of labour or the cost of an instrument or the material; whoever is responsible for the employment is responsible for the payment.' Under the section, it seems to me, he can only say that the rate is too high. Why the appeal to the Collector should be final, I cannot understand. In some of these cases the cost may run into four figures. I do not want to give scope for litigation because the matter would be indefinitely prolonged. But we must at the same time safeguard the ryots because large sums may be involved.

"I think there are one or two other matters which require serious consideration. What is meant by the declaration that the village officer shall have the duty of reporting certain matters? In default, is a fine or penalty to be levied or is a suit for damages to be started? A few other changes are necessary which are of minor importance and are matters of detail. Subject to the corrections I have indicated I am rather optimistic as to the working of such an Act, and I therefore support this Bill."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I should like to offer a few observations on the Bill especially after hearing the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao. Unfortunately my friend comes from a district where the rainfall is very small and consequently no tree growth. I come from an irrigated district where paddy pests, sugarcane pests, palm diseases, coconut tree pests are all prevalent; and the fact that measures have had to be taken with reference to palm diseases for the last eight or nine years in the Gōdāvari and Kistna districts is proof positive that such a Bill is necessary. The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao has stated that there is no demand for the Bill from the ryots. I am perfectly certain that if the Government stop the palm disease operations, I shall have a mandate from my constituency that these operations should be taken up immediately. The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has referred to the fact that these operations were in force in my district. Perhaps I may give the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao a few figures of dead palm trees during the past few years which have been removed:—

"In 1911 the dead trees removed numbered	36,657.
1912	37,539.
December 1912	34,000.
June 1913	38,000.
December 1913	21,000.
June 1914	13,000.
December 1915	11,000.
June 1916	18,429.
December 1916	8,400.

"These officers had to examine as many as two lakhs of trees in the course of a single year and to remove the sources of infection. Therefore the fact that these operations were carried on on a voluntary basis is a sign that the ryot would welcome this Bill rather than otherwise. The good sense of the ryots in allowing the officers in carrying on the operations of the department to enter upon their land and cut down the trees is praiseworthy. I think the necessity for such a Bill to meet cases of obstruction is absolutely made out.

"I do not wish to trouble Honourable Members with regard to the facts and figures about the prevalence of these diseases in that part of the country. My Honourable Friend suggested that there is no parallel legislation in other provinces. In the British colonies even the smallest colony has a law dealing with the subject. In the United Kingdom there is considerable legislation to prevent the pests.

"A point was made by my Honourable Friend about the want of co-operation. The great defect of this Bill is that it does not purport to secure the co-operation of the local inhabitants. It proceeds purely on the assumption that an officer should be appointed by the Government

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar moved that the Select Committee be constituted of the following gentlemen:—

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Muhammad Aziz-ud-din Husain Sahib.

Mr. M. E. Couchman.
Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao Pantulu.
Mr. A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar.
Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.
Sir Fairless Barber.
the Advocate-General.
Mr. A. R. Knapp.
the Raja of Ramnad.
Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao.
Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar.

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.
The motion was put to the Council and agreed to.

THE MADRAS CITY MUNICIPAL BILL, 1918.

The next business on the agenda was the introduction of the Madras City Municipal Bill by the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar.

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"I should like to move an adjournment."

His Excellency the President:—"The Honourable Gentleman is not in order. The Honourable Gentleman must first make the motion."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar introduced the Madras City Municipal Bill, 1918, and moved that it be read in Council. In doing so he said:—"I beg to introduce the Madras City Municipal Bill, 1918. This Bill has been before the public for about two years. The original draft of it was referred by the Government for the remarks of the Madras Corporation and that body devoted a number of sittings to a detailed examination of its provisions. Honourable Members have been furnished with a copy of the official report of their proceedings, and I take this opportunity to thank the Corporation for their careful examination of the Bill and the suggestions made by them for improving it. The Government have considered the opinions expressed by the Corporation and have made important modifications in the draft of the Bill. The Statement of Objects and Reasons which accompanies the Bill gives a résumé of the main changes of policy and principle which it embodies and Honourable Members have also been supplied with the 'notes on clauses' which explain in detail every change of importance which it is proposed to make in the law. I shall not therefore take up the time of the Council by attempting a lengthy explanation of the provisions of the Bill. I shall content myself with inviting attention to its salient features.

"Honourable Members are aware that we owe the inception of this measure to the report of the Royal Commission on Decentralization. The Commission drew attention to the stringency of the control exercised by the Government over the administration of the city under the existing Act. They said 'the control of the Local Government over the Madras Municipality is far more stringent. Its budget and any deviation therefrom require Government sanction, as does also the levy of municipal taxes. Various sections of the Municipal Act give the Local Government control in regard to the exemption of areas from water, drainage or lighting rates, the construction of water-works, the acquisition of land for street improvements, etc. Complaint should have as full powers, as Bombay now possesses.'

"The Madras Government being in complete sympathy with this policy, the Bill has been drafted with a view to give effect to it. First, as regards taxation, the approval of the Government is required under the present Act to the levy of all taxes and to the rates at which they should be imposed. The Bill gives the Corporation full control over taxation. Honourable Members will notice that no statutory maximum is prescribed for the property tax. The Corporation will be allowed complete freedom to adjust the rates of this tax at their discretion. In regard to the profession tax, minimum and maximum scales are laid down and the Corporation can regulate the rates within these limits. Secondly, the budget of the Corporation has at present to be approved by the Government. The Bill dispenses with the need for this sanction and the Corporation can, under it, frame their budgets without outside interference, subject to the maintenance of a minimum balance prescribed by the law. Thirdly, the Bill gives the Corporation full powers in regard to their establishments, subject only to the right of the Local Government to exercise a veto in the case of a few high offices. Lastly, the Corporation have been made the final authority in regard to practically all matters connected with the administration of the city and are given large powers of subsidiary legislation. The control of the Government is restricted to the few matters of cardinal importance referred to in Chapter II of the Bill, viz., revising the boundaries of the city, intervening (should necessity unfortunately arise) in case of gross mismanagement, removing councillors, etc., when such removal is proposed by a special resolution of the Corporation, cancelling resolutions and repealing or modifying by-laws, and framing rules to regulate such important matters as elections and buildings. In these and other respects the Bill gives effect to the policy laid down in the recent resolution of the Government of India on Local Self-Government.

"I now proceed to refer to the important constitutional changes introduced in the Bill. It is proposed, following the Bombay system, to appoint a Commissioner to replace the President as chief executive authority. The Commissioner will have the right of attending all meetings of the Corporation but will not have the right to vote. This change, which was recommended by the Royal Commission on Decentralization, was unanimously approved by the Corporation in 1910, and also last year when they considered the draft Bill.

"It is proposed to increase the number of members of the Corporation from 37 to 43. At present 28 of the Commissioners are elected, 20 by the electors of the divisions or wards, and 8 by institutions—the Chamber of Commerce, the Madras Trades Association, etc. Under the Bill the number of elected members will be 34, of whom 24 will be elected by divisions, and two representatives are newly given to the South Indian Chamber of Commerce. The number of nominated members, to represent important interests and minorities which cannot secure representation by election, will, notwithstanding the increase in the total strength, remain the same as at present. The constitution of the standing committee has also been liberalised. It consists at present of nine members, of whom only four may be divisional commissioners and three must be nominated commissioners. Under the Bill this body will consist of 13 members, of whom the elected chairman would be ex officio member, six would be divisional commissioners, and three institutional commissioners. The nominated element of the standing committee will thus be three out of 13, instead of three out of nine as at present. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the enlargement of the standing committee will enable sub-committees to be formed for supervising particular departments.

"The provisions in the Act regarding elections have been amplified. Annual elections are provided for, one-third of the members going out by rotation every year. This is considered preferable to triennial general elections, as likely to secure greater continuity of policy. Election questions are under the Bill to be referred to the Small Cause Court instead of to a Presidency Magistrate as at present. Honourable Members will also notice that a separate set of clauses deals with election offences which are only briefly referred to in the present Act. These clauses are modelled on similar legislation in England and are considered necessary in view of the large extension of the franchise which will take place in the near future.

"One important departure from the Act in regard to this portion of the subject should be specially mentioned. Sections 32 and 33 of the present Act lay down in detail the pecuniary qualifications of voters and candidates. It has been recognized for some time that the present franchise is very much restricted and that every effort should be made to extend it so that there may be a more widespread interest aroused in local matters. The aim should be, as stated in the recent resolution of the Government of India, 'to obtain constituencies which will be really representative of the body of the rate-payers.' As the resolution goes on to say, 'an enlarged franchise is in any case an essential condition of an extension of the elected element on boards and it should be understood that the increase in the elective element of local bodies must, if it is to be of value, be accompanied sooner or later by a substantial extension of a franchise upon which that election is based.'

"Honourable Members are aware that the Government have recently extended the franchise for rural boards and have also published proposals for giving the vote in municipal areas to all tax-payers. This has been possible as, in regard to local boards and district municipalities, the qualifications for voters and candidates are not prescribed by statute but by rules framed under the law. In the city there are at present only 12,290 persons qualified to vote, i.e., less than a third of the body of rate-payers, and only 480 qualified to be elected as commissioners. The percentage of persons qualified to be elected as commissioners to the total adult male population, percentage of persons qualified to vote to the total adult male population, is 1.33, and that of persons qualified to vote to the total adult male population, literate and illiterate, is 7.72. The percentages to the total population in both cases are of course very much smaller. There can be no doubt that a progressive broadening of the franchise is essential, and if the qualifications are stereotyped in the Act, it would be necessary, every time a change is proposed, to have recourse to the elaborate procedure of introducing an amending Bill. Power is therefore taken in the Bill to prescribe qualifications for voters and candidates by rules to be framed by the Government and, before any change is made, the views of the Corporation will, of course, be invited and considered.

"I now proceed to deal with the taxation proposals. In this part of the Bill the Government have carried out substantial changes in deference to the wishes of the Corporation.

"The Corporation have objected to the surtax on income-tax which was provided for in the first draft. They have expressed a preference for 'the tax on professions or callings' on the grounds that the profession tax is an old tax to which the people have long been accustomed, that no objection has hitherto been raised to its continuance or to the mode in which it is assessed and collected, that the Corporation and its officials would have little voice in fixing the rate of the surtax to be imposed from time to time and none in the assessment of individuals or in dealing with appeals, and that fluctuations in the rate of income-tax might lead to friction. Another tax included in the first draft, viz., the increment duty, has also been objected to on the grounds that a complicated machinery would be required for working it, that it would be difficult to prevent evasions and that its incidence would be uncertain. The Government have withdrawn these taxes: they have restored the profession tax with a revised schedule based on the proposals made by the officers of the Corporation. So far as the increment duty is concerned, I must say that the Government are by no means convinced that such a duty will not be a feature of local taxation, not only in the City, but also in growing mufassal towns where the resources of local bodies are so inelastic relatively to the demands on them. As at present advised, however, the Government consider that the increment duty should form the subject of separate legislation, to be brought into force when necessary in specified areas on the application of the local bodies concerned. I mention this as I am anxious that the impression should not be created that the omission of the increment duty in the present Bill is due to any feeling on the part of the Government that it is per se unreasonable or unworkable.

(Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

Another important portion of the original taxation proposals to which the Corporation took exception was the proposal to increase the maximum rate of the property taxes to 25 per cent and the exemptions from those taxes proposed to be given to places set apart for 'public charitable purposes' and to educational institutions. The Government have decided not to lay down any statutory maximum for the property taxes and they have withdrawn the exemptions referred to. The exemption of the Port Trust properties is an old provision which it is proposed to retain.

Two new taxes proposed by the Corporation, viz., an occupiers' tax and a tax on tobacco imported into the City, have not been included in the Bill. The property tax falls ultimately on occupiers of houses and a separate tax on occupiers would only be an addition to the property taxes in another form. A tax on tobacco would be unproductive: there would have to be provision for refund on export: the tax would be difficult to collect, while evasion would be easy. It is proposed in the Bill to abolish the town duty on timber and firewood. The Corporation have not raised any objection to this tax, but in the opinion of the Government the duty is open to all the objections usually raised to an octroi and, in so far as it is levied on firewood, it falls on the poorer classes of the population.

The Corporation have suggested that one-fourth of the revenue derived from excise in the City might be handed over to them. The Government have every sympathy with the desire that the system of fluctuating provincial grants now in vogue should be replaced by fixed grants: but they cannot consider this suggestion at the present juncture when important and far-reaching changes are under contemplation in regard to the financial relations between the Imperial and Provincial Governments.

The Corporation will in the result levy the following taxes—the property tax, a profession and companies' tax on a revised scale, a tax on vehicles and animals, and tolls. They may also, with the sanction of the Governor in Council and Governor-General in Council, levy an additional stamp duty on instruments of transfer of immovable property situated within the limits of the City such as is provided for in the Calcutta Improvement Act. Greater power is also given to the Corporation to raise loans for works of public utility.

The other portions of the Bill—Parts IV to VI—embody improvements which are the result of the experience gained of the working of the present Act. Provisions have been inserted to enable the Corporation to deal adequately with overcrowding and insanitary houses, to enforce building and town-planning regulations strictly, to make the power of abating nuisances more effective, to give the Commissioner sufficient powers in regard to the sale of diseased food, etc., and in other ways to confer greater powers of regulation where this is called for in the interests of public health.

Honourable Members are aware of the general feeling that more facilities should be provided for what has been termed 'municipal trading' by the Corporation. This is provided for in the rules in Schedule V.

Only one other matter dealt with in the Bill needs mention and that is the system of surcharge by auditors which is introduced in rules 18 to 26 of Schedule V. Honourable Members are no doubt acquainted with the English system of surcharge by auditors and the summary recovery of amounts surcharged. The Committee on the District Municipalities Bill, which included several non-official gentlemen with experience of municipal administration, recommended that a similar system should be introduced in our legislation. This has been given effect to and the Government trust that these provisions will meet with approval.

I do not wish to detain the Council with any further remarks. The Bill has been before the Government in some form or other for nearly four years. It owes its main features to the labours of Sir Sivaswami Ayyar whose experience of the working of local self-government in the City and in the Presidency generally has been of great value in shaping the lines on which it has been framed. The Bill has subsequently been altered in the light of suggestions made by the Corporation and the Government of India. There is no reason why it should not be further altered if necessary in its passage through the Council. I am confident that, if passed, it would substantially improve the municipal administration of the City and I therefore commend it for acceptance."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Under rule 4 of the business rules I move that the consideration of this Bill be postponed. I move this for two reasons. Though this Bill is an improvement on the present constitution of the Madras Corporation, it has to be remembered that this Bill was framed on the lines of the Bombay Municipal Act. But the constitution of the Bombay Municipality was framed many years ago, when there was a want of complete confidence in the people to manage their own local affairs. The people's ideal of local self-government has undergone a considerable change in the last few years, so that the reforms that would have been enthusiastically welcomed some two years ago will not now satisfy the people. The outlook of the Government themselves has undergone considerable change. It has in fact broadened very much. It is laid down as the first formula in the report of Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford that 'there should be, as far as possible, complete popular control in local bodies and the largest possible independence for them of outside control.' It cannot be claimed, judged from the standard laid down in this formula, that the present Bill does provide for complete control or the largest possible independence of outside control. It has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar that this Bill was framed four years ago. Then the ideal of self-government was quite different from the ideal which the Government of India—"

[14TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR (interrupting):—"I did not say it was framed four years ago."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur (continuing):—"The Bill was before the Government for four years. Since then there has been the war which has made a change in the outlook of the people and of the Government. As the original framer of the Bill has taken much trouble and spent much labour in framing the Bill and the Government have also taken much trouble to get through it, there is naturally a desire on their part to get it passed as it stands rather than undergo further trouble, in redrafting it in the light of the reform proposals that are before us. The resolution of the Government of India recently issued about local self-government cannot be regarded as constituting complete local self-government; that is what Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford themselves say about it. I cannot therefore ask the Council to revise the Bill in the light of the resolution of Government of India because it is not a complete scheme of local self-government; and even if the Bill is to be revised as suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar and be altered and brought into line with the resolution, still it will be imperfect. This report says 'if we are sincere in our advocacy of a policy of provincial autonomy, we must leave the work mainly to local Governments.' According to the Reform proposals the question of local self-government will be treated as a transferred subject and it will be in the charge of ministers who will be under the complete control of the legislature. The Local Government themselves will be given a good deal of autonomy to manage their affairs anyway they like without being interfered with by the Central Government. As I have said, the Provincial Government will have attained sufficient autonomy, and would it not be fair as suggested in the report that the drafting of another Bill should be left to the new Government and to the new legislature that will be constituted after these reforms are introduced? I do not think we will lose anything by postponing the consideration of this Bill for, say, about a year. We are assured that the Reform Bill will be taken into consideration by the Parliament and passed into law in about a year and it is quite possible that about this time next year or at the most in the beginning of 1920 the reformed Council will be able to tackle this question. One year is not a long period to wait for. We have been waiting for this reform for several years, for nearly two decades, and it has taken the Government themselves four years to bring it in the present form. The delay of another year or two will not, I am sure, hinder the needful progress which this seeks to bring about. No doubt if this Bill is passed, the municipality will have more facilities to raise revenue and that is, no doubt, a great consideration. But even then the Bill can at best come into force in 1919 or 1920, and the people will find that many provisions for raising revenue could not be applied on account of the conditions produced by the war. Nothing will be lost by postponement. On the other hand, we are likely to gain much by postponing it. If the reformed Council is not able to produce any better Bill than the one before us, then the responsibility will lie on the reformed Council and not on the present Government. If it is passed now, it will appear as if the present Government wanted to force the Act on the people against their wishes as it were. Some people might say that it is not against their wish, the Bill has been discussed by the public and by the Corporation and they have given a sort of approval to it and have suggested alterations most of which have been embodied and when the people are generally in favour of it, it should be passed now and not postponed. That approval was given when we had no reform proposals before us and when the Government of India's resolution on local self government was not issued. The new angle of vision had not come into existence then. Approval given under those circumstances cannot be taken as the present opinion of the people or the Corporation. The Corporation is not the only body that has a voice in the matter. The Municipality of Madras is a premier local body and anything you do for that city and the constitution you give to that body is bound to become the ideal after which other local bodies will strive. When a constitution is admitted to be not liberal enough, it is not desirable to make it a model for other local bodies to copy."

"Some people may say, 'why not let this Bill be passed? Afterwards the reformed Council may change it as it suits it.' I say that is not likely to be done for a long time: once constitutions are made for certain bodies they cannot be changed within a year or two; the tendency will be to say, this is a new constitution, you must give it sufficient trial, unless it has been well tried and proved to be wanting it ought not to be changed. Another thing is the new reformed Council will have many other things to look after. It would not do for that Council to upset everything that has been done by the previous Council or the previous Government. It is not likely that it will take up this Bill as their first Act. It can only be after some time that the reformed Council can take up an amendment of this Act. By postponing it now nothing will be lost. On the other hand, if this Bill is not now pressed it will be the first thing to be taken up by the reformed Council and the constitution given by it will be much more liberal than it is now, and if it is not so the responsibility will lie with that Council."

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Sir Gordon Fraser; [14TH AUGUST 1918
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I made up my mind to second the motion since yesterday. If there is so great an urgency so far as the Corporation is concerned, it is financial stringency, and if we were convinced that we get financial facilities for the Corporation, I should have been glad to go on with the Bill. On the other hand, the proposed Bill instead of giving new sources of taxation takes away the existing resources. All that my Honourable Friend has claimed for this Bill is that the threatened imposition of certain taxes was abandoned. On the other hand, we have the old property tax which remains. We have a tax on carts and vehicles and animals. That remains and also the old professional tax with a slight modification which will not give us more than Rs. 10,000 or 20,000. We have been waiting for this Bill from 1908 till 1918. Is it going to do us any harm if we wait for another two years? Although it might be possible to amend the taxation chapter in the Select Committee by making suggestions, yet since the objection taken by the Hon'ble the Advocate-General yesterday and accepted by this Council I feel whether it is quite competent to amend these taxation proposals. Suppose I suggest a new tax, a town duty, it might be said, you cannot impose it without the sanction of the Government of India. If I suggest any other tax, I would be told we have no power. I was told in connexion with the Prevention of Adulteration of Drugs Bill that I had no power to amend a certain section, because it dealt with the revenues of British India. I feel despondent that we cannot do anything in regard to taxation in the Select Committee. The taxation chapter takes away the existing taxes. It takes away two lakhs of rupees. No doubt the Honourable Member is giving unlimited powers to the Corporation with regard to the property tax. He calls it a blessing; I call it a curse. We have to spend Rs. 35 lakhs every year. We are at our wits' end to make both ends meet. Without any additional sources of taxation and with the existing sources being taken away, we will be driven to enhance the property tax. I am loath to go before my electors with this proposal. There are very welcome features in the new Bill; and there is no danger of their disappearing. On the other hand, these welcome features will become more welcome afterwards. Therefore I feel convinced that with the Advocate-General raising ingenious objection to our dealing with the financial portions we will be in a hopeless position; instead of its being a blessing it will be a curse to the city. On the whole it is better to postpone the consideration of this Bill. Also the Corporation might have an opportunity of considering this Bill. I have no authority to speak for the Corporation, but several Commissioners whom I have consulted and who have gone to me have pressed upon me this aspect. Though individually having bestowed some attention on it for seven or eight years and having fought on the revision of the Bill, on the whole I thought it better to go on with it; but after hearing the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan to-day and after what happened yesterday, I feel convinced that it would not be proper on my part to say that this Bill should go on."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, it is with the greatest surprise that I have listened to the speeches just delivered by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan and the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar. I would like most emphatically to oppose the motion that has now been put before the Council for the postponement of a Bill which the Government and others have taken such pains to frame during the last four years. I must admit, I hope most of my Honourable colleagues admit, that it is impossible to follow the arguments just put before the Council. There is no doubt that the present Bill is a well thought out scheme. Possible improvements may be suggested and there may be many improvements that can be made. But these will come up for discussion when the Bill goes before the Select Committee. It cannot be denied that the proposed Bill is a vast improvement on the present Act. To turn it down would be a great mistake. I do not think this Council could do it in justice to the rate-payers and the people of the city of Madras. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan brought forward the point that it was useless at the present moment to bring in the new Bill as a new Council may be formed under the reforms scheme, and this legislation should be allowed to be run by them. That argument will not hold water; it is quite possible and up to the new Council if circumstances call for it to take up and amend the new Act by a new Bill. The new Bill is an improvement on the old Act and provides a better foundation for the new Council to go on than the old Act. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan pointed out that in passing this Bill, it might be looked upon by certain people that the Government were pressing on the people a Bill that they do not want and he would prefer to leave it to the new Council. To listen to this statement must leave one with the impression that the mover is anxious to shelve the Bill to the new Council which may be formed. It seems to be an attempt to take the credit from the present to the new Council for the enlightened legislation which we are now through the present Council trying to pass. I strongly oppose any attempt to postpone the present Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"My Lord, though I had considerable hesitation in the beginning, after hearing the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan and the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar I have no hesitation in giving my support to the motion before this Council. As has been pointed out already, very great constitutional changes are under contemplation, and there is absolutely no doubt that a substantial devolution of power will be given to the local Government. The remarks of the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar where he dealt with the question of excise revenue are by themselves sufficient to convince this Council of the desirability of postponing this legislation. He pointed out that the members of the Corporation suggested as one of the additional items of revenue to the Corporation that a portion of the excise revenue levied within the city should be made over to the Corporation, and his reply to it was that it 14TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. J. H. Thonger, the Rev. Pittendrigh; the President; the Advocate-General, was not possible to give effect to the suggestion, because very grave changes are to take place and that question has to be settled with a good many other questions. A Bill to improve the condition of local bodies will never be complete unless the financial provisions therein are carefully examined and sifted. With the increased powers and responsibilities which the Government are willing to grant to the local bodies, one ought to see whether they are placed in possession of adequate financial resources with which they can satisfactorily discharge their duties. That is the reason why the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar drew the attention of the Council to that aspect of the question. We find that the Bill was referred to the Corporation in 1916 and they went into the matter at considerable length and made several suggestions to improve the financial condition. What has been the result? So far as one can judge, it cannot be said that the resources of the Corporation have been increased or that there is scope for increase. The duty on tobacco which they suggested was not accepted. The duty on timber was removed. They suggested that the properties of the Port Trust ought to be taxed. The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar said that it was an old privilege and the properties of the Port Trust could not therefore be taxed. The original Bill said that 25 per cent property tax was to be levied; he now says we leave it to the Corporation to fix the limit. Can it be said that these have substantially improved the resources of the Corporation? The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has not indicated any provision in the present Bill and has not satisfied the Council with reference to the figures as regards the vast improvement in the resources of the Corporation. If he had done that, it would have been of considerable assistance. It is also put down here that there is another clause to which the members of the Corporation who have dealt with this question object; that is with reference to clause 47 of the present Bill. That says 'The Governor in Council may at any time by notification cancel any resolution in whole or in part on the ground that it is in excess of the powers conferred by this Act or by any rules made under this Act.' I find the members of the Corporation decided that the civil court must decide this question rather than the Governor in Council. I do not find any material change in regard to this; the view of the Corporation has not been accepted. There ought to be no difficulty in postponing the consideration of the Bill. The remarks offered in 1916 by the Corporation are rather out of date. I have no doubt whatever that with the new changes which have taken place in the country, and which changes have been accepted by the Government of India and referred to in their resolution on local self-Government, the members of council will view the Bill in a different light. As the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said the Corporation has not had an opportunity to view the Bill in that light."

Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER:—"I oppose the amendment most heartily. I think it is a great mistake to have brought it forward. The citizens of Madras who have been clamouring for a larger measure of self-Government have now an opportunity of showing whether they are worthy of it, and they ought to welcome this piece of legislation. We should then have an opportunity of seeing whether they are worthy of that which they are demanding. My candid opinion is that the Bill should go before Select Committee and be passed into the law with such modifications as may be agreed upon after a careful discussion."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"I had no intention of speaking on this amendment, nor would I have changed my mind but for what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has said, namely, that, according to the remarks of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General, it would not be possible to interfere with the taxation proposals. That ought to be made clear. I object to certain taxation proposals, and I should try to get them modified by the Select Committee. If I have no power to do so, I must vote for this amendment. In the original draft Bill educational buildings were exempted; but that is not so in the present Bill. The thing is done in every other municipality in the Presidency with the exception of the Madras Municipality. But owing to pressure from some source or other—"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I may remind the Honourable Gentleman that we are not discussing the merits of the Bill, but we are discussing this motion for adjournment."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"I am suggesting this in order to get an answer."

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"I am surprised that the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar should have led this Council into a misconception. It is perfectly clear that the point taken yesterday was quite different from that which the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar wishes to take to-day. The conclusion that the Council came to yesterday was that this legislature had no power under section 21 of the Government of India Act to assign or allot or appropriate any part of the revenues of India to any particular body. The issue which the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar now wishes to raise is whether the legislature can arm the Municipality of Madras with powers of taxation over the inhabitants of Madras, for example, tax on professions, tax on timber or tobacco brought into the City of Madras. That is a quite different thing. It has nothing to do with the revenues of India. What is asked is whether the municipality can be empowered to impose any taxes it pleases. Certainly the Madras legislature has the fullest power to levy any taxes it pleases. There is absolutely not the slightest objection to that."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Can we impose a town duty on goods coming into Madras by sea?"

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; the Advocate-General; [14TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar;
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.]

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"Certainly."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Can I introduce an amendment in the Select Committee that a town duty may be imposed?"

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"Yes, certainly. Whatever decision the Council may come to it should not be influenced by this point. Whatever merits there may be in other points to which the Honourable Member referred, and with which the Honourable Member in charge is more competent to deal than I am, as far as this is concerned, it is a misconception and I am perfectly certain that on further consideration the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar will think it is a misconception and that this does not stand in his way."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, it is with some amount of hesitation I rise to speak on this motion. We have here three members of the Corporation, two opposing the introduction of the Bill, and we have the third, the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser, who does not want it to be put off. I regard this Bill as a very great improvement over the existing state of things. The Corporation has asked that a definite portion of the excise revenue should be appropriated to the municipal revenues. I find from the papers furnished that a definite request has been made and that has been made not only by the Madras Corporation but by every local body which has been consulted during the last three years. Honourable Members are aware that it is a unanimous request made. Your Excellency's Government have a much freer hand under the proposals made by Mr. Montague and Lord Chelmsford. From paragraph 203 of their report Honourable Members will see that the excise revenue will be a wholly Provincial head. If this proposal is carried out as I hope it will be, it would be open to your Excellency's Government to consent to a definite portion of the Provincial revenue being made over to the municipality. I ask the Hon'ble the Advocate-General whether it will be open to me or to any Honourable Member to propose that a definite proportion, whether it is $\frac{1}{2}$ or $\frac{1}{3}$ of the excise revenue levied within the jurisdiction of the Madras Corporation, should be made over to that body. If the Hon'ble the Advocate-General says it is open to us to move such an amendment in the Select Committee I am prepared to vote for the rejection of this motion. There is another point. The whole scheme of taxation in the new proposals do not appear to improve the financial position of the municipality and if this one provision is introduced, I should be glad to see that this Bill gets through as immediately as possible. If your Excellency's Government or either through the Hon'ble the Advocate-General or the Member in charge will give us that assurance, my Honourable Friend may be willing to withdraw this motion. There is one other matter which I should like to mention—the question of the imposition of a terminal tax. That has been discussed very much here. Such a tax prevails in Calcutta and the representatives of the Corporation are willing to impose it."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"We proposed it."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Will the Hon'ble the Advocate-General say whether we will be right in proposing a terminal tax? It would not do for the Advocate-General to say that we must go to the Government of India. If the Hon'ble the Advocate-General can say that we can suggest a definite portion of the excise revenue being appropriated to the revenues of the Corporation and also the imposition of a terminal tax which will bring about two lakhs of revenue, it would be something and we can get the matter discussed in the Select Committee. Otherwise, we shall not be solving the question of the finances of the Madras Corporation. Any Bill which improves the machinery of the Corporation should also relieve it of the financial difficulties. I quite recognize that there are very many improvements. But the real point is in regard to the taxation proposals. I should like to have a categorical reply to my questions."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"I support the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan. I think the Bill should come before the reformed Council. It seems a liberal measure but it really takes away the power of appointing the Commissioner, who will be appointed by the Government and who will have the whole power. He will not be removable unless there is a very large majority of votes for his removal. We cannot make any large improvement in this Council. As this is one of the transferred subjects, we should get it considered by the new Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I should just like to say why I vote for the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan's motion. My first reason is that given by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao. That leads me to a larger proposition, that matters which are not urgent and which can possibly be postponed till after the new Council when we shall breathe a freer air, should be invariably postponed, because the voice of the people will then be heard. At present the voice of the people does not prove of much avail. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser has stated that the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan seemed to be anxious to give the credit of this measure to the next Council. Suppose it is discredited what will the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser think about it? There are certain matters in which this Bill is retrograde, in which our freedom is fettered and those features reflect such discredit that we can leave it to a body which will be really representative of the people."

14TH AUGUST 1918.] (The Raja of Ramnad; the Advocate-General; Sir Fairless Barber; Mr. Siva Rao; the President; Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Mr. Thonger; Sir Gordon Fraser.)

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I am entirely opposed to this motion for the many reasons given by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser. It is provided in clause 414 that 'any fine or costs imposed or assessed by a Magistrate by virtue of this Act shall on recovery be paid to the Corporation to be by them applied to the purposes of this Act.' Will the Hon'ble the Advocate-General explain how this appropriation can be made and how, in the light of his remarks made yesterday, he considers the same as not offending the provisions of the Government of India Act?"

The Hon'ble the ADVOCATE-GENERAL:—"That particular enactment will be ultra vires. But that does not affect the present question."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"I wish to protest against the reform proposals forming the basis of the discussion of this Bill. It is preposterous that the consideration of this Bill should be postponed simply because of the existence of the reform proposals. The proposals have not been actually translated into action. Why should they be dragged in when considering the City Municipal Bill? There is as much logic in this motion as there would be in a suggestion to drop the consideration of the Bill because of that other proposal—the German occupation of India."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan has given very cogent reasons in favour of his motion. I vote for the motion for two or three reasons. Liberal as the Bill is, it does not comply with the latest resolution of the Government of India and is not in conformity with the policy laid down by the illustrious authors of the reform scheme. The policy laid down there is that there should be as far as possible complete popular control and independence of outside control. This Bill looks a little bit antiquated and out of date. That is one of the reasons why I wish to support this motion."

"There is one other reason. The policy relating to local self-government is part of the proposal of the coming constitutional reform and that policy has to take final shape. It is not desirable that we should hurry this Bill through, while the whole thing is under consideration. We have yet to see what final policy is to be adopted in connexion with local self-government."

"The most cogent reason for the motion seems to be that the financial relations between the Corporation and the Government have to be settled. I remember that it was stated in the revised financial statement that these proposals formed part of the proposals in the reform scheme, and they were under discussion. There was a proposal under serious consideration to transfer a portion of the excise revenue to the City Municipality and other local bodies. I ask whether it is possible in this Bill to insert such a provision for the purpose of augmenting the resources of the City Municipality. We should await a settlement of the financial relationship. In fact when I sent up my interpellation, I intended that the Government would give up this Bill in light of the recommendations of the Government of India in their latest resolution. I asked about the three Bills, and the answer given was that the Madras District Municipalities Bill and the Local Boards Bill will be submitted to the Government of India and are being examined in the light of the resolution of the Government of India. In the case of the City Municipal Bill they said that it would be introduced at the present session. If there is a reason to recast the two other Bills in the light of the resolution of the Government of India, the same reason holds good with regard to the City Municipal Bill. Then, there is a final reason, that it is very desirable that the enactment of these Bills relating to local self-government should only be passed after the whole policy is settled and the reform question is settled and it is desirable to leave them to the future reformed Council."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I do not know whether the Council is prepared to take the vote now. The matter has been thoroughly discussed."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Four Honourable Members have opposed my motion but I do not find in their speeches, any good grounds for opposing the motion. One of them, namely the Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad wanted an assurance to be given to him whether a certain revenue could be allowed to the Corporation and that assurance has not been given."

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I said I opposed the motion for the very good reasons given by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"That doubt has not been explained to his satisfaction, and perhaps he may be prepared to change his attitude. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser in opposing this motion said, so also did the Hon'ble Mr. Thonger, that so much time and trouble has been spent on this matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER:—"I did not make that statement." His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Honourable Gentleman is rather unfortunate (laughter)."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"I thought I might put them together. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser said that so much time has been spent by the Government."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"I said by Government and by others outside the Government."

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

[14TH AUGUST 1918.]

"Again in the Standing Committee, in 1884 five out of eight members were elected. The President and the Vice-Presidents were the members of the Standing Committee and the other five were elected representatives. I will take it that the elected President is also an elected representative. Even then we have only 7 out of 13 members of the Standing Committee who are elected representatives. I do not think that is right. Therefore the Corporation suggested that the proportion of elected representative on the Standing Committee should be larger.

"Again take the Corporation itself. It is in a curious position under the new system. It is not the councillors who form the Corporation; the Corporation consists of the Commissioner, the Standing Committee and the Council. So it is the general body who form the Corporation. The Commissioner has no right of vote in the Corporation but is made part of the Corporation. As pointed out by somebody else, a man who has nothing to do with the ratepayers is part of the Corporation. It is a curious departure from the Bombay Act. As regards the position of the Commissioner again, it is pointed out in this report of the Committee of the Corporation that he must be merely a person to attend each meeting but may not vote and his administration must be subject to the control of the Standing Committee and the Commissioners. They have made a departure from the Bombay Act. He has got the power to sanction contracts and estimates up to Rs. 10,000 and the appointment of officers carrying a salary up to Rs. 500. Almost all the functions of the Corporation, nearly 80 per cent of the work consists in the sanctioning of estimates and contracts up to Rs. 10,000 and the appointment of officers up to Rs. 500. How many officers are there beyond Rs. 500? That is not so in the Bombay Corporation. What is now being done by the Standing Committee is transferred to the Commissioner. That is a matter of detail which may be amended in the final stage. The Commissioner is made part of the Corporation. He is an executive officer of the Corporation and should not be made part of the Corporation. This is a fundamental defect in the Bill which needs removal. There is not complete popular control which is contemplated in the recent Resolution of the Government of India, if that provision remains.

"Again there are two other matters of importance which are left to be guided by rules. It is left to the Governor to decide what the city limits should be by rules instead of by statute. There are very difficult questions as to whether a certain area should be included within the city. A proposal was sent up to Government that portions outside Perambur should be included within the Municipal limits. The Corporation resolved not to have it unless it was decided by statute. To-day we may include Perambur, to-morrow Sembium, and the day after Saidapet. Such a matter should be decided by the statute. It should not be left to a body quite outside the Corporation to decide what the municipal limits should be. This question affects the people a great deal. The original jurisdiction of the High Court will be affected by the orders of the Government. The legislature should take care to decide what the municipal limits should be. Another matter which ought to be left to Legislation and not to the Governor in Council is the qualification of the voters and the candidates. I have no doubt that the Honourable Member in charge is actuated by a desire to extend the franchise and he will do it. Such an important matter as defining the right to vote and the right to be elected should not be left merely to rules but should be defined by legislation. It has not been done hitherto in any other province in any other Municipal Act. Let us fix the franchise as low as possible, but why should not the Government bring up this matter before the Council whenever they wish to extend the franchise? These are two matters reserved to the Government to which I object.

"Now coming to the financial resources of the Corporation, the Bill is wholly disappointing. They have not dealt with the situation. On the other hand they want to throw the odium on the Corporation by making them unpopular with the people at large. As I have already stated, instead of giving us new resources this Bill proposes to take away the existing resources. We are now levying a duty on firewood and timber which brings us Rs. 1.90 lakhs and it is likely to be a growing income. When the Corporation proposes other small duties, the Government propose to take away the existing taxes. What are the resources left to the Corporation to develop the city with and to improve the city, a city with the Cooum and the Buckingham Canal which the Government have not taken care of and which we are to do for the city with our special works?

In 1907 our revenue was Rs. 20,99,808 and our expenditure Rs. 17,88,520
1909-10	22,89,038	23,16,572
1911-12	24,92,100	24,84,672
1912-13	26,10,360	30,43,370
1913-14	27,01,990	29,54,540
this year	31,45,650	35,74,580

"Within the eleven or twelve years our expenditure has doubled and we are trying to develop our existing resources. Is it enough to throw the burden on the land and houses? The people are not for throwing the burden on the owners of houses and land. Are not there other sources? Are not other people enjoying the benefits of the Corporation all over the Mount Road and other places? Who complain most that the Corporation does not maintain the roads? Is it the poor people who own the properties? Why should not these other people pay the taxes? You must throw it according to the benefit you confer and according to the capacity of the people to bear. The Corporation is taking a heavy tax from the houses; we have taxed the houses enormously. If we are to increase our recurring expenditure, the special works are being increased and recurring expenditure on pumping stations has to be incurred, which comes to 40 lakhs—where is that money to come from? Is it to come from the houses? With the prices going up and taking the condition of the people, is it right to expect the Corporation

14TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Thonger.)

to make themselves so unpopular as to be a burden on the poor house-owner? The Corporation will find it impossible to discharge its functions with the resources which exist at present. We should have more power to improve our resources. Why should we not be allowed to levy a small duty on goods arriving at Madras? It will be spread on the consumers, it will not be a burden felt by anybody. There are other ways. The port is in very good order, thanks to the ability of the Hon'ble Sir Francis Spring. Merchants find it easy to land their goods very easily, at quays, instead of in barges and boats. The terminal tax will be an easy burden. When there are obvious resources they are neglected and we are thrown back on our original resources. The third point is the large interference in the affairs of the Corporation. There should be less outside control. There are sections in the Bill which give powers to the Governor in Council which are no less than those in the old Act. Section after section gives power to the Governor in Council. That is also a matter to which I wish to draw the attention of the Council.

"Again the Government have taken power to define what is public land. We are getting revenue from lands; the Government will take away all the land as public land and we shall lose that revenue. Again there is one other obvious source to which we are entitled by right, namely, the excise revenue. By the old Act we had a tax on liquor shops; in the Act of 1884 we had it. When the revenue was small they gave us a compensation of about Rs. 13,000. That we had it. The excise revenue has quadrupled but they still give us left the Government Rs. 29 lakhs. The excise revenue suggested that a definite portion should be assigned. Rs. 13,000. That is why the Corporation suggested that a definite portion should be assigned. It is a well recognized rule that local bodies should be given the benefit of a portion of that revenue. As I have already taken up the time of the Council, I do not wish to trouble it any further. These are some of the principal matters to be remembered in connexion with the Bill."

At this stage the Council adjourned for a short interval and re-assembled at 3 p.m.

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER:—"Your Excellency, the Madras Trades Association and the Chamber of Commerce appointed a joint Sub-Committee to examine the provisions of this Bill, and I need hardly say have given the subject very careful consideration. They made notes of several points which in their opinion it was desirable to bring to the notice of Government, and possibly the principal of these points was that in their opinion the perpetuation of the Standing Committee in its present form, despite the fact that powers had been taken to enlarge it with a view to facilitating the formation of Sub-Committees at discretion, was one of the greatest weaknesses in the whole scheme. Naturally in examining a Bill of this description it was the business point of view which interested the associations most. The legal aspect they felt could be left to others more interested therein.

"In matters of business there are always fundamental principles to be observed, and three of such principles I might enumerate in connexion with the Standing Committee. In the first place the organization of a business must fit in with its requirements, secondly individual responsibility must be defined, and thirdly, individual responsibility must be confined within reasonable limits. In the opinion of my association the Standing Committee from a business point of view does not conform to any of these principles. So far as the first principle is concerned, the basis of an organization is undoubtedly there, but it has not been organized. In regard to the second and third points, it might not be possible in the matter of the Corporation to bring the control down to the basis of individual responsibility, but we can certainly bring it within narrower limits than at present. The present Council consists of 37 members, and from this number they elect eight to form a Standing Committee. Upon the shoulders of these eight men is thrown the whole responsibility for the working and control of the Corporation. This control may be mainly financial, but it is not solely so. Collective responsibility is no responsibility, for if anything goes wrong it is impossible to place responsibility on the right shoulders. Were the departments of the Corporation divided between these eight men and they were made individually responsible, each for, say, one department, then I should say that an organization was in existence, but this is not the case. The remaining 29 members of the Council have practically no responsibilities whatever, and their duties are extremely limited. In fact it appears to me that their principal and possibly only duty is to attend meetings join in discussions when they are inclined to do so, and vote, very often upon subjects with which they are only indifferently acquainted. The Standing Committee consisting of eight men are responsible for such varied matters as education and drainage, taxation and house lighting, town improvements, water and so forth.

"The proposal which the joint associations desire to bring before the notice of Government is that the Standing Committee in its present form should be scrapped, and a series of small Committees consisting of 4 or 5 members be created, who should have definite responsibilities in regard to definite departments in the Corporation, the result being that each of these Sub-Committees under its respective Chairman would be responsible for the control and working of a definite department. This is a suggestion which the joint associations brought to the notice of the Government in a memorandum, dated September 1917. It would be very easy to divide the work of the Corporation into departments. It is in fact already so divided up, and of these departments I would mention the most important as follows:—

- (1) Finance and Taxation.
- (2) Water, Lighting, Drainage and road.
- (3) Sanitation, Public Health and Nuisances.
- (4) Building and Housing, and Town Improvement.
- (5) Education as concerned with Municipal schools, etc.

(Mr. Thonger; the Rev. Pittendrigh.) [14TH AUGUST 1918.

These departments might be added to or taken from as occasion arises. The result would be that instead of having the benefit of the brains and intelligence of twelve men, which is the size of the new standing Committee, the City would have the benefit and abilities of the whole 43 councillors.

"Another suggestion which I should like to bring forward is that it is highly desirable in the interests of the City as a whole, that these various Sub-Committees should have powers to co-opt outside expert opinion, under definite conditions, to assist them in their deliberations. We must not forget that the members of the Council are elected for various reasons, some because they are leading citizens, others because of their business abilities, others because they have made their mark in law or journalism. In fact they have been elected as members of the Council for every conceivable reason except that they understand Corporation work. For expert knowledge and advice they are absolutely dependent upon the paid expert executive, and I do not think there is any one who will deny that it would be highly advantageous for the general working and efficiency of the Corporation if outside expert opinion could also on occasions be called in.

"The most important of these committees would of course be the Finance Committee, for the whole of the Corporation work is based upon finance and therefore at the head of that Committee should be a man of recognized sound financial ability. In fact whether the Government adopt these suggestions in connexion with the new Act, or whether they do not, I am of opinion that it is desirable in the interests of the City that a Special Finance Committee should be formed immediately even under the old Act, for there is a growing feeling of uneasiness that the Corporation have been committed to an expenditure beyond their means. In this connexion there is undoubtedly a nettle to be grasped, and the sooner we grasp it and the more tightly we hold it, the less likely are we to be stung.

"We are striving after increased efficiency, and I feel assured that if these suggestions are in the opinion of your Excellency's Government an advance in that direction, they will be given most serious consideration.

"There are several other points which the joint associations thought it desirable to bring to notice, but I must admit that in this matter I feel myself up against a difficulty, and that difficulty is that, probably owing to my inexperience, I find it very difficult to determine where 'principle' ends and 'detail' commences. Even matters of comparatively small detail at times seem to border upon principle. I have decided, however, to consider most of these subjects as matters of detail, but I would express the hope that when this Bill comes into Select Committee the Honourable Member in charge of it will give favourable consideration to my desire to make further representations on various matters (the Honourable Member nodded assent). That being the case there is only one other subject that I need mention at this meeting, and that is the principle involved in the property tax. This tax is a most elastic one, and has been made more elastic by the fact that no definite percentage of tax has been mentioned. I have not had very large experience in these matters, but I must admit that never previously in my experience have I ever come across either an Imperial or a Municipal tax the amount of which has not been stated, or if it was a variable tax where the maximum and the minimum were not stated, and I am inclined to challenge the correctness of a principle which allows the imposition of a tax the amount of which is not stated. The tax in its present form has already been the subject of fairly general condemnation, and is worthy of further consideration. I consider that property tax in its present form will be a disadvantage to business. It is the basis of a business transaction that the seller should know what he is selling and the buyer should know what he is buying. In this case the seller certainly knows what he is selling, and the buyer knows what he is buying at the moment of the transaction, but he has no guarantee that the property which he is buying and upon which the taxes may be at the time of purchase 2½ per cent may not be taxed almost immediately afterwards to the extent of 25 or 50 or even a higher percentage of taxation. In the case of very many small property owners who have bought property for their own personal occupation, it may mean a very great hardship, for whereas a man in the purchase of a property may have given very serious consideration to the question as to whether he can afford an 1½ per cent tax and may have decided in the affirmative, he may on the other hand be absolutely unable to keep up his house on a higher rate of taxation, and might have the further hardship of finding difficulty in selling the same. In the same way, badly as houses are required in Macras, builders will be chary of building with taxation liable to an increase at short notice and the probabilities of being able to sell correspondingly reduced.

"I would commend the property tax in its present form to the further consideration of the Government."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"Your Excellency, I may perhaps be permitted to touch upon a subject which I dealt with in another connexion. I wish to speak on the general principle of taxation. I fail to understand why for example in this Bill the buildings vested in the Port Trust should be exempted from taxation while educational buildings are not. Why again should hospitals be exempted, when educational buildings are not? Educational buildings do not bring profit to the owners. In the vast majority of cases the managers have to put very large sums of money into education for the support of it, and therefore I fail to see why in the Madras municipality a tax should be levied upon educational buildings. I am speaking under correction; but I believe the municipalities in the Presidency do not tax their educational buildings. I am not sure that Bombay impose such a tax, again I speak, under correction. It seems to me that the Madras municipality should recognize that 14TH AUGUST 1918.] (The Rev. Pittendrigh ; Mr. Venkatapati Raju ; the educational institutions are worthy of the greatest care of the Corporation. Even from the lowest point of view, viz., that of trade, of the increase in material resources, education does a great deal for the town. These educational institutions bring in large numbers of people to the city. But I am not arguing from that material standpoint. From the standpoint of moral gain, these educational institutions are a great asset to the Corporation. The fact is that managers in most cases have put money into these institutions for their support and in no cases are these money making institutions. I fail to see therefore why when they were exempted in the draft Bill, that exemption has been struck out. I wish to press upon the Select Committee to consider this matter carefully and endeavour to have exemption granted to all educational institutions."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—“ My Lord, the Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. Pittendrig's suggestion that educational buildings ought not to be taxed is a very reasonable request, which ought to be considered by the members who will be on the Select Committee. In the districts, educational institutions are specially exempt from taxation. I find under the District Municipalities Act Government buildings are taxed; but in the City Municipality they are not. That is an anomaly. Instead of taxing educational institutions they ought to have taxed all Government buildings. As it is pretty certain, that the whole Local self-Government would be popularly managed hereafter, in the appointment and in the arrangement of the Select Committee a large number of popular members ought to be allowed to sit in order to bring in their views so that the Bill that may finally emerge from the Select Committee may differ very much from the Bill now being referred to it.”

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur :—“ I have many observations to make on the various provisions in this Bill but I do not think I shall be able to go through them all, within the limit of time allowed for speeches. I will therefore confine myself to one or two observations which I think are very important from my point of view. Having failed to get the consideration of this Bill postponed, the next best thing that we can now do is to appeal to the Government to allow its revision in a way that may satisfy the new angle of vision from which we are looking at everything now. And that can only be possible when suggestions made by the non-officials are heeded to by the Government members and they try to help us as much as possible. The very first thing, viz., the constitution of the Corporation or the Council, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, is unsatisfactory, because the proportion of peoples representatives is not enough; it is not adequate. There should be more councillors elected directly by the people and less to be brought in or appointed through other means. I think that there are only two alternatives in the case of the representation of the people that can be adopted. Either you should lay down that the members elected by a majority in the various divisions shall represent all sections of the population and all communities, and that no nomination of councillors of any particular section or community will be made. Either that policy should be declared or the principle should be recognized that certain communities shall be represented on the Council and that the body will not be completely representative unless there are on it representatives of all those particular communities. So far it has been recognized in practice, if not in theory, that certain communities should be represented on the municipal mind nomination by Government is undesirable for sectarian representation either of communities or classes. Neither the Government nor the Indian nation at large can say that it is immaterial whether Mussalmans are adequately represented on municipal or local bodies. The representation of Mussalmans cannot be placed on a par with any other communal representation. Ideal democracy is no doubt the Government of the people by the people through the representatives of the people elected by the majority of the people. Where a nationhood consists mainly of one people, such minorities as have settled in the country for trading or other avocations, as many foreigners are settled in London for example, or minorities that have taken shelter in a country from oppression in their own land, for example, immigrants in England in olden days, the Jews, or the Parsees in India from Persia, such minorities of course cannot claim separate representation. The country belongs to the people at large; the affairs of the country are the affairs of the people at large and the people at large should be represented through the usual course and minorities have no business to claim any separate representation. But where a nation consists of more than one people, as for example, in Switzerland or in Austria-Hungary, no Government can be strictly popular, unless it is composed of all the peoples that form the nation. The Indian nation we are aware consists of two peoples, the Hindus and the Mussalmans. No body, no public body, can be truly Indian, unless these two peoples of the Indian nationhood are adequately represented on it. The representation of Mussalmans as a people is not on a par with the representation of any other minorities or any section of the Hindu people. Recently, there has been much talk of communal representation and people are in the habit of mixing up the question of representation of certain sections of the people with the representation of Mussalmans. That is a fallacy. Just because communal representation is not considered desirable, that the different sections of a people, for example, sections of the Hindu people, should not claim to be represented separately,—if there is any objection to that, that objection cannot apply to the representation of the Mussalmans. Government want, our Hindu brethren want and everybody wants that the Mussalmans should be represented on the municipal bodies. And yet there is nothing in this Bill to provide for our representation. How can we come into this municipal council? Here we have got 20 electoral divisions. All divisions will have non-Muslim majority and we cannot hope of succeeding in being returned by means of these divisional elections unless it were by sheer chance. And should our representation remain a matter of mere chance and not be specially provided for? You may say that if sufficient number of Muhammadans are not elected then the deficiency will be made up by nomination. I say that we do not want nomination. If we deserve any representation, our representation should be made through election and not through nomination. You may say that under clause (e) it is provided that representatives might be elected or appointed by such other association or bodies or class of persons as the Governor in Council may direct. Perhaps a Muhammadan association may be asked to appoint a Mussalman representative. I say that would also be a very faulty system. The ideal system should be that all councillors should be elected directly by the people. If you take hold of any association and give it the privilege of returning a person to the Council,—I am talking generally whether a Mussalman or a Native Christian, or any other association and ask the association to return a representative to the Council, you are doing a great injustice to the other electors to the Council. Generally a man has to pay a large sum of money by way of tax to the municipality to become an elector. If members of an association who may be paying a subscription of four annas for membership are allowed to elect a councillor, they are given the privilege denied to many other rate-payers of the city. Another thing is that when once you have provided for the representation of certain communities through certain associations then a member of that community cannot stand in the general electorate. His opponent may go round and say 'here this man belongs to that association. He can get elected through that association or get nominated by Government: why do you vote for him?'. On the other hand, he may not have any means of getting elected through that association. Another thing is that associations would exist either specially for the purpose of electing a councillor or for some other purpose. If it is for the purpose of electing, why should the members of that association be given the privilege which they cannot have through other means. If it is for any other purpose then it is not right and proper that an educational or a social institution or a religious association should be asked to return a member to the municipal council. You are giving a sort of encouragement to such associations which may not be desirable. You say that all those people who agree with the objects of the particular associations or who belong to the party dominating in them will have the privilege of electing councillors. In such associations only those people who follow the creed of the majority will be elected. I point out these things to show the difficulty of securing the representation of any large community through these associations. Classes or communities whose representation is considered necessary on the Council should have special provision made for their representation. I shall give notice of an amendment to what I think should have been incorporated in this part of the Bill.

"Another objection that I had was that the qualifications of the Commissioners are to be higher than the qualifications of the electors. That was the defect of the old Act; but I believe that in this Bill that has been done away with. Any person who is an elector can become a candidate for election. I should suggest that the qualifications should be lowered, so that franchise may be exercised by a larger number of people.

"The third thing that I should like to point out is this; that the sources of revenue that have been provided are not sufficient for the growing needs of the municipality with the result that on certain sources of revenue greater strain will be put, for example, the property tax. I am not in favour of any leniency being shown to the holders of property. I think that everybody who has property must pay for the management of the affairs of the town in which that property is situated. But at the same time we must recognize that if the tax becomes too heavy on property it is not the owners that pay it but it is the tenants. Already in Madras, rent has gone up fearfully high and on account of that many people cannot now remain in Madras—because they cannot afford to pay the enhanced rent. My own experience is that within recent years—within less than 12 years—rent has almost trebled and if property taxes are increased to the maximum provided for, the result will be that the rent will still go up and it will not be possible for people to live decently according to their position. So we must find out some other sources of income. Some sources were suggested by the Corporation, but they were all rejected by Government and are not included in this Bill. I hope that when the Select Committee sits on this Bill it will see its way to bring in more sources of income, for example the one suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Munga Achariyar that goods imported into Madras should be made to pay something to the municipality. Of course, that is custom duty on the principle of which some objection perhaps may be made, that it is the Government of India revenue with which the local Government or any municipal body cannot interfere. Of course, that would be a valid reason if we ask the Government of India to pay the Council some of the revenue that it gets through this source; but if additional amount is added to the tariff already existing and the same be also levied on goods on which there is no tariff at present, I do not think that it would be objected to, simply because it does not come within our province. So I hope that the Select Committee may be able to revise the Bill in the directions I have suggested. After all it depends upon the members of the Government to help our views being incorporated but I hope the Bill will be amended suitably."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"Your Excellency, I am not a representative of the Madras Muhammadans in this Council. Still I consider that when a question affecting the Muhammadans comes up, I think it my duty as I always do—often my Honourable Friend the Raja of Ramnad points out that I am a religious fighter—to say a few words on Muhammadan representation. On going through this Bill, in section 5 it is said that out of 43 councillors distributed, I see there is nothing given to the Muhammadans to elect separately. I therefore thought of saying a few words on this subject to see whether the Government would see its way to set apart some seats for Muhammadans, to be competed for by election. As your Excellency is aware the Muhammadans find it very difficult to succeed in elections while competing with the other sister communities. I see, of course, a certain number of seats have been reserved to be nominated for those failing in the general election. But from my own experience I can say that the Divisional Officers and the Collectors are not satisfactory in carrying out the wishes of the Government in this respect. No doubt the intentions of the Government are very good, but the officers in charge are not carrying them out. I can quote many instances in which great injustice was done in this respect by not nominating respectable and responsible representatives. And so it is only proper that as stated in the constitutional reforms published, that the question of Muhammadan separate electorates must be left undisturbed, as they are. In this respect the Minto-Morley reforms were quite reasonable and that circumstance is due greatly to the fact that Muhammadans continue to be as staunch and loyal as they are. When we have enjoyed such rights in the Legislative Council and in the Imperial Council, I do not see the reason why we should not have similar rights in the local bodies as well to which I have often referred in this Council. As the Madras City Municipality Act is now to be amended I strongly recommend that separate election for Muhammadans be set apart in clause 5."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I did not want to take part in the debate, but the remarks of the two Muhammadan representatives in the Council have made it necessary for me to make one or two observations. It is quite true and right that there should be a proper representation of all communities in the local bodies. They should be assured of proper representation. I do not think there is any reasonable objection so far as this position is concerned, but they have raised the other thorny problem as to whether the representation ought to be by separate electorates formed for that purpose. Reference has been made to the report on constitutional reforms presented by Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford. It may be remembered that they dealt with this question at considerable length and pointed out that that was not a correct principle. To quote their words, they regard communal representation as a serious hindrance to the development of self-governing bodies. They however admitted it that in the case of the Muhammadan community—and later on extended it to the Sikhs—they have been enjoying this privilege, and there has been almost unanimity of opinion in this country with regard to it and that position ought not to be disturbed. That position is practically accepted throughout the country. It was not suggested by them or by any others for the matter of that that the question of communal representation ought to be made applicable to local bodies. It will be found I think that in the latest resolution on Local Self-Government it is stated as follows: 'As regards the special representation of minorities where this is necessary the Government of India prefer that this should be effected by retaining the practice of nomination rather than by introducing some system of communal or proportional representation.' While we are all willing that Muhammadans or any other community should have fair and proper representation the question of separate electorates for that purpose ought not to be extended to the case of local bodies. The sphere of action of these bodies is essentially different. The field of the Legislative Council is wider. So far as local bodies are concerned there is no necessity or justification for extending it."

The Hon'ble the Most Rev. J. AELEN:—"Your Excellency, I wish to say a few words supporting the position taken up by the Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. Pittendrigh regarding the taxation of educational buildings. It is only fair that the private-managed institutions which are run at a loss for the purpose of imparting education should be exempted from taxation. I trust the Select Committee will take up this question for consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RICHMOND:—"Your Excellency, in the first place I desire to say that there is no provision made for the effective representation of the Anglo-Indian community in the constitution of the Council as set forth in the Bill. No doubt there is a provision for appointing representatives by such associations or bodies as the Governor in Council might direct. Perhaps it will be possible under this clause to give a representative to the Anglo-Indian Association, but it will give us greater satisfaction if provision is made for election or nomination by the Association as a matter of right. I also see that there is provision for nomination of members; but we should like to get into the Council by election rather than by nomination. Another point to which I want to draw attention is that the statutory maximum for property tax has been abolished. There is a belief, rightly or wrongly, that without a statutory limit to guide the expenditure of the Corporation, the Corporation might get extravagant and therefore there is no knowing to what extent they may raise the house-tax. I think it is a salutary principle to have a statutory maximum for property tax. As regards the settlement of election disputes I should have preferred the City Civil Court rather than the Small Cause Court for deciding such matters."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO:—"My Lord, seeing that the Muhammadans and the Anglo-Indian community and several others are desirous of having a separate representative on the Corporation I am tempted to stand on behalf of the zamindars of this Presidency and ask for a representative for them on the Corporation. Most of the zamindars of this Presidency own buildings in this city and I think it is but fair that they should claim to be represented on the municipal Corporation."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar :—"Your Excellency, I can understand the Hon'ble Mr. Yaquub Hasan asking for separate representation for Muhammadans, but I cannot understand why he should say that the other communities do not require representation."

The motion that the Bill be read in Council was then put to the Council and agreed to.

The Secretary then read the title of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“ I beg to move that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee for report.”

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“ I move that the Select Committee do consist of the following gentlemen :—

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Muhammad Aziz-ud-din Husain Sahib	The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. Thonger, Mr. T. Richmond, Diwan Bahadur A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar,
„ Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar, Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar,	„ the Advocate-General, „ Mr. R. A. Graham, and „ Yaqub Hasan Sahib, Sir Gordon Fraser,	„ Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—" I propose that the Hon'ble Mr. Venkatapati Raju be added to the committee."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I am against it ; it is not usual to make a suggestion like this."

His Excellency the President:—“We had much difficulty in constituting this committee. We have the advantage of the presence on this committee of two gentlemen with municipal experience outside the city of Madras. We have included the names of the Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar and the Hon'ble Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar, both gentlemen with vast municipal experience. It will call for some sacrifice of time and trouble on their part. That is how the committee is constituted. For the time being let it be as it is.”

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARYA:—"There is none to represent the Andhras on the committee and hence my suggestion."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—" It is a long way. You must see the practical difficulty. It may be next said that a West Coast man is needed to represent Malabar."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—" I do not want to divide the Council on this matter."

The original motion was then put and agreed to.

Resolutions on Matters of General Public Interest.

RESOLUTION RE A COMMITTEE TO ADVISE ON THE PROVISION OF HOUSE-SITES FOR PANCHAMAS IN TANJORE.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—“ I have the honour to move the following resolution, of which I have given notice :—

'I. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that, before taking any further steps and incurring any further expenditure in the matter of G.O. No. 3559, Revenue, dated the 10th November 1917, regarding the provision of house-sites for Panchamas in the Tanjore district, a committee of officials and non-officials be appointed to investigate the question and make suitable recommendations with detailed schemes and that all further action in pursuance thereof be suspended pending such report.'

“Your Excellency, my object in moving this resolution is not so much to divide the Council or to get a vote in favour of the resolution as to have an opportunity of placing before your Excellency's Government matters which seriously affect the welfare of the district of Tanjore, a matter which affects not only the department concerned, but I am afraid affects the whole Government of that district. I hoped that we would have had an opportunity to present the matter in deputation to your Excellency, but on account of the unfortunate circumstances prevailing in Tanjore—the Cauveri having failed, and there being anxiety about the state of the agricultural operations there—people were unable to leave their places. I speak with first-hand knowledge in this matter, and I hope the fact that I am a landlord in that district will not colour my views in this connexion so far as it is humanly possible. But at the same time I wish to assure your Excellency, in bringing this matter before your Excellency's Government I speak not only for myself but for the thousands of pattadars who are landlords in that important district.

"In May and June as chairman of the executive committee of the Madras Ryotwari Landholders' Association, it was my duty to go round the district and attend meetings of several mirasidars in various taluks in the district. It is their wish that I am now placing before your Excellency's Government. With regard to this Government Order I have to take some pains to explain to the Honourable Members both official and non-official, more probably to the non-official, than to the official members, the nature and the genesis of this matter contained therein. I will briefly trace the genesis of this Government Order. My non-official colleagues will notice that this order was issued in the Revenue Department. It is an order not of the Municipal department. It is important that I should draw the attention of this Council to this aspect of the question. For I know for the last two or three days the special Deputy Collector who is in charge of the duties under this order has been here, giving a colour to the working of this order and making it appear that it is a question of relieving congestion and improving the sanitary surroundings. If it is a question of relieving congestion or improving sanitary surroundings one would expect the order to emanate from the Local and Municipal Department; one would expect that the taluk boards and the District Board would have been consulted, one would expect a sanitary grant to be given for the purpose. But that is not the case. I must first of all point out what this question is not, before I say what it is. It is not a question of sanitary measures as I have already stated, it is not a question of housing the houseless. We know there are many hundreds of families who are living under trees and on channel banks and river banks and on road sides without even a shelter, excepting the heaven above. It is not such a case with which we are now dealing. This order deals with providing houses for those who are now living in houses. That is the object of this Government Order. The genesis must be traced. In the year 1913 when His Excellency the Viceroy visited Madras, a temperance deputation waited on him and made suggestions, four in number for curing the drink evil among the Panchama community. The four suggestions were that there should be open parks, and there should be hotels and two other suggestions which I need not trouble the Council with.

"His Excellency the Viceroy referred the matter to the Madras Government and the Madras Government to the Collectors for opinion. The Collector of Tanjore, then Mr. Wood, thought that he would go further and suggested a further remedy. The Government disapproved of three methods, but they approved of the opening of tea and coffee shops; and that was tried. The Collector of Tanjore said 'I have got an excellent idea in my head. The Panchamas in Tanjore are living in houses which do not belong to them. They do not own land. Now let us give them something to live for and therefore take the houses of the owners and make these Panchamas their owners and also let us give them some land.' He suggested that the Small Holdings Act, and rightly enough. In England, of course, the question of small holdings is very material. Here we are all small holders. Who are the big holders here, except the zamindars? The large number of ryotwari holders are small. Therefore without reading the Act, he suggested that and thought it would be a panacea for the drink evil. What about the other Panchamas in other districts? And the Board of Revenue in paragraph 8 of their order said: 'Well here is something suggested as a radical remedy worthy of consideration. The Madras Government deputed Mr. Srinivasa Achari who was then working in connexion with the extension of village sites in Guntur in December 1916, to go to these places in the Tanjore district and to investigate what the situation exactly is as briefly as possible. My Honourable Friend Sir Fairless Barber his report have read it. In Tanjore and in the neighbouring districts I wish now to explain what the situation exactly is as briefly as possible. We are all owners of agricultural land and we want labourers to do our agricultural business. One of the facilities which we afford to our labourers is houses and on our property which consists of three kinds—we are not now concerned in dealing with them—on property which is admittedly our property, and on our site, we permit our labourer to live; we give him the materials to build houses and the condition is that so long as he tills our fields he may remain there; if he does not we send him away or if he does not want to work he goes away.

Tanjore, South Arcot and Trichinopoly. This matter came up recently in the case of 27 Madras. They

“This is peculiar to Tanjore, South Arcot and Trichinopoly. This matter came up recently before the High Court—Benson and Subrahmanya Ayyar, JJ.—in the case of 27 Madras. They sent out an issue whether there is a custom like that in Tanjore with reference to agricultural lands and evidence was taken from all parts of the district. I will just trouble the Council with a few citations. In 27 Madras, page 516 this is what one of the witnesses said:—‘Mirasidars own lands and manaikats appertaining to them. On these manaikats dwell their kudiyanavan, i.e., such as cultivate their land. These cultivators have occupied them from generation to generation and cultivated the lands of their landlords. If the cultivators default to cultivate their lands, they used to be ejected at once and other cultivators introduced into the manais they occupied and moneys also recovered from them’. They go into various other matters. “They quote the authority of Dr. Burnell and Mr. Sewell who had to deal with this matter. They quote not only judicial officers but also Mr. Cotton and some other Collectors and also from their reports dealing with this matter. Now this is an ancient thing. We are only concerned with house-sites belonging to the mirasidars. Under this Government Order, under this panacea for the drink evil, they say that Panchamas must be made the owners of house-sites they live in.

"I will just briefly explain how the position will be. Labourers to whom we have given houses are to be made the owners of the houses whether they cultivate our land or not. They may even go to the neighbouring estate and work and yet my house in which he lives will be made over to him. That is the object of the Government Order. One planter puts his coolies there and because he has been kind enough to allow him for years to live there, this coolie may go and work on the neighbouring estate. The Government come and say that in order to prevent the drink evil, these coolies must be given help and therefore they must be made the owners of coolie huts although they may go to a neighbouring estate and work there. That is the problem with which we are concerned. I may assure the Council at once I am in full sympathy with any efforts that may be made by this Government to elevate the position of these Panchamas but don't rob Peter to pay Paul. The very first question is, is it our property or is it not our property? If it is our property your very acquisition is wrong. You want to apply the Land Acquisition Act, acquire the ownership and change it. That is the point with which we are relieving congestion. The problem of provision of house-sites for Panchamas in this district is different from that in other delta tracts in that (1) it is not one of relieving congestion in the already existing hamlets of the Panchamas and (2) it is closely intertwined with that of their economic conditions."

"In most delta districts the Panchamas live huddled together in small huts in a portion of the village-site surrounded by wet cultivation which often extends right up to their doors. The village-site is Government poramboke, land allotted to them under house-site rules and permitted to be held by them as private property so long as it is used for the purpose for which it was granted. As wet cultivation increased and as the Panchamas multiplied, the sites available were not enough for the influx of additional labourers and increase of population. The result was the occupation of all kinds of waste lands and porambokes and an increase of congestion."

"In Tanjore district the land-owning classes are not usually the cultivators of the soil. The former either lease their lands to tenants called purakkudis whether Sudras or Panchamas or cultivate them themselves with the help of their Panchama farm servants and they are thus indispensable to the land-owning classes who employ all the means in their power to keep them to the cultivation of the soil."

"The first noteworthy point in connexion with the housing of the Panchamas is that, in the great majority of cases, they live in sites which are the property of the landholders. He points out 'Often times, the Panchamas claim ownership of the sites on which they live. This is specially the case where the influence of Christian missionaries is a predominant factor in their lives. In a good many villages the Panchamas honestly believe that as they have had uninterrupted possession of the sites, this is tantamount to ownership. The general principle by which the Civil Courts seem to be guided in these manaiakat suits is that laid down by the Madras High Court in Indian Law Reports 27 Madras 517, that there is a judicially recognized custom in Tanjore district by which purakkudis or artisans are allowed to occupy manaiakats belonging to mirasidars free of rent, so long as they cultivate the land of the mirasidars or render them service in other ways.' Recourse to the Civil Courts is, however, the last weapon in the hands of the landholders. 'It is a recognized duty that he should provide dwelling accommodation for his Panchama labourers and, of late, the latter have had so many attractions drawing them away from the cultivation of the land that the former in sheer selfishness are learning to ameliorate the conditions of life of the Panchamas. They have shown a readiness to find living accommodation for the Panchamas by renting it for them from some neighbouring landholder with a spare site, by setting apart his dry land conveniently situated for the purpose, or by even raising the level of his wet land. Not only is the site provided, but also materials for the construction of the katcha hut, such as is usually put by the Panchama and also straw every year required for keeping the roof in repair. A certain amount of backyard is also usually attached to the hut, on which the Panchama raises the kitchen, garden (vegetable, chillies or plantain) or a crop of ragi or turmeric for which, if irrigated, the charges are borne by the landholders. 'Before proceeding further however, it has to be borne in mind, that the problem of providing house-sites is not one peculiar to the Panchamas. It may be stated that as a general rule all house-sites in a village wherever situated whether in the paracheri or in the Sudra quarters—are owned by the land-owning classes and that the landless labourers do not own any of the sites in which they live. The only difference is that the caste labourers, being more thrifty and less addicted to drink, have, in a large majority of cases, acquired sites of their own by purchase. The problem however is common to both the classes and any remedy that may be suggested for the case of the Panchama will apply to the caste labourer also.' 'The fact that the site does not belong to the labourer is a frequently articulated grievance on public platforms and in conferences of the depressed classes.' 'At the same time, we cannot ignore the fact that evictions from house-sites are very rare and that in most villages individual Panchama families have been living in their old house-sites from generation to generation. There is no doubt that generally very kindly feelings exist between the Panchama and his master who is quite aware that it is to his own interest to treat the former sympathetically. Except where his sensibilities have been roused by contact with Christian missionary influence or by emigration, the Panchama is usually content with his lot which, where he has an ordinarily kind master, is not a bad one after all.' He then points out the difference between this man and the casual labourer. He says he interviewed hundreds of Panchamas. As regards wages, Mr. Gray says that the wages given are much higher in Tanjore than in any of the neighbouring districts. He says 'in Tanjore district more especially in the deltaic taluks wages both of padiyals and of daily agricultural coolies are considerably higher than in Chingleput or South Arcot.' 'The cash-wage predominates in the case of daily coolies. The male adult labourer's daily wages ranges from As. 4 to As. 8 or from 2 to 5 Madras measures of paddy.' 'That is the nature of things. We are the owners of the houses in which the labourer is housed; and so long as he tills our lands he can live there. Of course if he wants to change, he goes to a neighbouring mirasidar. That seldom happens. Another thing is there is what is called the irrecoverable advance. It ranges from Rs. 20 to Rs. 150. All that is pointed out here, and I have not got the time to go into it at length. The report tells us that we give him varam and we give him round the manaikat land ranging from 4 to 10 cents which he cultivates freely very close to the house-site and he enjoys it. That is their condition. Now I ask, what is wrong with this system? Is it wrong for a planter to build houses for his labourer and insist that so long as he works for him he will live in that house and the moment he goes to a neighbouring estate, he must quit the house? In the case of planters, I am sure, the children and grand-children of coolies will be allowed to live in the houses of their fathers under the planters. Now may I ask what is wrong in that system, and what is unreasonable in that system? What is the reason, on what ground do the Government interfere with this relationship between the owner and the labourer. Has there been an intolerable burden felt by the people? Has there been any complaint from the people? No reference is made to this either in Mr. Gray's report or Mr. Srinivasa Achari's report. On page 83 of his report, Mr. Srinivasa Achari points out: 'Generally very kind feelings exist between the Panchama and his master.' Again he points out: 'Where the Panchamas are so largely content to let things alone it would be unstatesmanlike to interfere. It may no doubt be a moral duty on the part of social organizations to educate them and create in them the craving for owning their house-sites. But where such feeling does not exist, it would be mischievous to interfere and create a friction where none exists.'

"We thus arrive at the conclusion that, in the matter of provision of house-sites for the panchamas, no immediate action on a large scale is called for at present as no widespread discontent exists." That is paragraph 14 of his report.

"The order is, as I already stated, to provide house-sites for those who are now living in houses. But there are other matters also to be considered in this respect. I am objecting to the Government acquiring the only valuable properties belonging to the mirasidars. The only properties valuable to them are house-sites and seed-bed lands. It is not easy to create seed-bed lands. It is very difficult to substitute seed-bed lands. So long as the mirasidars' house-sites are not interfered with, so long as their seed-bed lands are not interfered with, the mirasidars are quite willing to co-operate with the Government to give Panchamas house-sites or anything else. What they do object to is to taking away the house-sites which belong to them and giving their ownership to others. That is how this business was started. That is the object of this Government order. And that is how they began with their notification of 30th April. Now the Land Acquisition act is relied upon to convert a paracheri into a paracheri. What is the object of converting a paracheri into a paracheri? By all means if there is congestion, if the taluk boards and the district board agree that there are insanitary surroundings and the Sanitary department requires it, by all means do the needful. We have not gone in that way. We have dealt with it only as a pure economic problem. If it had been the relief of congestion and the improvement of sanitary condition, we have no objection to any such thing. Only let it come through the proper course. The only thing is that they should not interfere with our house-sites, that is the only reservation. I ask your Excellency's Government to consider the seriousness of the situation. The Government are as much interested in the welfare of the mirasidars as in that of the Panchamas. How do you expect us to carry on our agricultural business? We cannot find substitutes. If we find a substitute, where are we to house him? Are we to go and buy house-sites if you take away our houses? Once it is granted him? Are we to go and buy house-sites if you take away our houses? It is only changing ownership. Is that it belongs to the owner, how can you go and take it? It is only changing ownership. Is that a fit purpose at all? People in the district were holding meetings in large numbers protesting against this order and I hold in my hands the proceedings of meetings held in nearly all the taluks of the district from March to August 1918. I hold in my hands copies of memorials and telegrams sent to the Government with reference to this matter. I say from personal knowledge that the landholders are disturbed, perturbed. I do not think that the matter has been considered in all its bearings. I have got a lot more to say, but I shall not say it considering the time I have taken up. It is an order which requires very careful consideration and I ask your Excellency's Government's earnest attention to this matter which is of vital importance to the people. People are much troubled over this and your Excellency's Government may well imagine what their trouble is. In Tanjore people are generally quiet; but they consider this such a vital matter, your Excellency, that already the complaints made by the Special Deputy Collector show that the people are in conflict. If there is a real demand for it, if it is not an artificial thing why begin only in the Christian villages? One would expect they are in better condition. Here we have got a special Indian Christian Deputy Collector with a Christian Tahsildar and Christian clerks and the operations begin in Christian villages. There the missionary influence comes in, there is the danger. Why should the operation begin only in Christian areas? If that is a real and genuine grievance, begin it in the proper places. Why in the Christian places only? I do not think it wise to go and disturb the existing arrangements. I ask your Excellency's Government to consider all these matters. It is likely to lead to trouble; it is likely to lead to a breach of the peace. At this time when we are all concerned about the important issues of the war, why should we rouse up one people against another. Are you going to create disorder? In these times, is it necessary to upset these arrangements and create discontent in one class for securing contentment in another? Have you consulted the district board or the taluk board in this matter, or have you consulted any committee of non-officials on the matter? You have acted on the report of your own special officer. Are you to go and disturb the existing relations on that report? I don't want to raise any trouble, but the matter is too important to raising a controversy or trouble. I do not want a vote. I ask your Excellency's Government to take this matter into your earnest consideration. We are quite willing to help Government for providing suitable house-sites, but by taking away our seed-beds you are taking away our eyes as it were. That is why I ask your Excellency's earnest attention to this matter."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to second this resolution. In doing so, I express my regret that the Hon'ble Mr. Chidambaramada Mudaliyar is not here. He is one of the largest landholders and he feels very strongly on this point. I may say this is not a question of Brahmana or non-Brahmana. In fact, Brahmans hold only a small extent of land. A larger portion belongs to the non-Brahman mirasidars. They are not unwilling to help Government to accommodate these Paraiyas. They have no objection to improving their condition. All they want is that their present house-sites should be left alone. They are ours. If these Pariahs do not work for us, we shall have to get outsiders and we shall have to house them. The Government have got the Land Acquisition Act and they can acquire other lands and give them to these people; but do not take away ours, because we have not got sufficient extent of land to give. I was present at a district conference at which a large number of landholders were present. They all have resolved to request the Government that sites other than those in which the Paraiyas now live should be acquired. To that the landholders have no objection. If the Government accept this reasonable proposal, they will have the landholders' co-operation. If the Government excite discontent in the district, I am quite sure the mirasidars will all join together and resort to passive resistance. They will have nothing to do with these Pariahs for whom these lands are acquired, and their condition will be worse than at present. I think under these circumstances, the Government should take the people into their confidence. They are not unwilling to help the Government in this matter. I know there is a large amount of feeling in this matter and it is my duty to apprise the Government of this feeling and see that it does not lead to serious consequences in the future."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"I share the regret with the Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar that the Hon'ble Mr. Chidambaramada Mudaliyar is not here in order that he might state his case. I know it is a fact that he is a large landholder and should be able to state the position of the landholders better than anybody else in this Council. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar commenced by drawing attention to what he thought was the genesis of the matter, and to some extent his account is correct; but doubtless he is not aware that before Mr. Wood made his suggestion, the Rev. Mr. Andrew, a well-known missionary in Chingleput, had submitted a long memorial to Government on the position of Pariahs, especially in the Chingleput district and one of the points he raised was the question of house-sites. He pointed out the tremendous hold which the landholders had over these Pariahs by the power they had of evicting them. This first led to the inquiry. In consequence of this representation of the Rev. Mr. Andrew, the Government appointed Mr. Gray to inquire into the condition of these labouring classes, not only in Tanjore and Chingleput but in several other districts also, such as South Arcot, etc. Mr. Gray in his report has the following passage on this point regarding Tanjore."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"What is the date of that report?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"22nd November."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"The Government Order was dated 10th November."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"Mr. Gray in his report deals with this point. He says, 'The padiyal although nominally free to change masters at the end of the year, is, in many villages practically, bound for life to his master. In the majority of the villages in the deltaic part of the district the house-site (and very often, also, the actual hut) of the padiyal belongs to his master whose right he acknowledges in the recital of his service agreement or in a separate kur-chit (rent-deed). It is true that rent is not often actually collected, but the threat of eviction is held out to prevent the padiyal from leaving his master in order to better his position. Although 'mirasi right' in Tanjore has not been recognized by Government in the sense in which it is recognized in Chingleput, the mirasi feeling is fairly strong everywhere except in the dry tracts and the mirasidars in most villages generally act together in all matters affecting their common interests, more especially in the relationship with their padiyals. The result is that the worst evils of the padiyal system as they prevail in Chingleput are found intensified in Tanjore.' That was what Mr. Gray thought. Mr. Srinivasa Achariyar was then appointed, in the circumstances already described to the Council by Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar, that is, Mr. Srinivasa Achariyar, a Deputy Collector, an Indian and a Brahman was appointed to inquire into the position. I may just say in passing, that he was selected for the work because he had been chosen to carry out the acquisition of house-sites in the Kistna and Guntur districts at the particular instance of my Honourable Friend Mr. Ramachandra Rao, who is not now here and because he had carried it out with success. It was in the course of that special duty that he was sent to Tanjore. One of the things he found there was this. He said 'The fact that the site does not belong to the labourer is a frequently articulated grievance on public platforms and in conferences of the depressed classes. There can be no doubt that it is a real grievance. The labourer who has no permanent stake in the village, who is liable to be turned out of the house he lives in and who has nothing to look forward to, has no inducement to save. He sinks into a helpless condition which reacts on his moral character. He becomes reckless of the future, thrifless and seeks his only consolation in the toddy shop where he drowns his miseries in deep potations.' Both those officers after inquiry pointed out the evils which result from this system under which the labourer is liable to be evicted at the whim of his landholder, his employer. I do not wish to go into the ancient history of Tanjore. It is easy, of course, to draw a picture which can be supported by abundant evidence to prove that until within recent times the labourer in Tanjore was a slave. That, of course, is a well-known fact and this is one of the survivals of that fact. The ownership of house-sites in conjunction with the system under which the landholder gives a permanent advance to the labourer, which is never meant to be repaid, which is handed on from father to son, is, Mr. Gray points out, one of the pernicious survivals of the old conditions and actually maintains the servile position of the labouring classes in Tanjore. Honourable Members are aware of this. I do not wish to lay any particular stress upon it, because the condition is so clear. If the labourers are liable to be turned out of their houses at any moment they cannot of course have any freedom of contract with their employers. That is the main point with which we started. Incidentally and as a consequence, many cases are coming to notice of congestion. For instance, in one of the cases which the Deputy Collector has already dealt with, it was found that there were 46 families with 163 people living in 17 houses. It is obvious that that is not decent lodging, and that the landholders of Tanjore have not performed properly their responsibilities in providing for their labourers. Again, these houses are not large and spacious buildings; they are mostly, almost invariably one-room huts; and here in these small miserable dwellings people are congregated in this way; and one of the steps which the Deputy Collector will take, I trust, will be to provide not only ownership but more extensive and adequate rooms for people to live in. At present there is no room to live at all. In many cases they have no room to live. In many cases cultivation comes up to the edges of the houses. I myself remember having seen wet cultivation coming up close to the walls of the houses, soaking into the walls. Surely this alone is an evil which the Government ought to remedy. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has taken exception to the order being issued by the Revenue Department. I will draw his attention to the Board's Standing Order on the subject. It says that in Tanjore district among others it is customary for the State to provide house-sites. That is Standing Order No. 90 (4). And it is the practice of the Revenue Department to deal with this question. Moreover I would point out to him that, when it was a question of Kistna and Guntur, the Revenue Department, without any objection, appointed Mr. Srinivasa Achariyar to hold an inquiry there and take up the lands and with the strong support of the non-official members of this Council. We appointed a Deputy Collector to do it; he did it and it met with general support. Therefore, I do not see why the Revenue Department should be now reproached, because in this instance they are trenching upon the feelings of Tanjore landholders. And I would put it to the Honourable Member whether he is not really exaggerating this matter. The Honourable Member admitted—it is a vital point—that in other districts and in many villages even in Tanjore house-sites already belong to the Paraiyas. Is it found in other districts necessary that you must have the fellow under your thumb? Is it necessary that you must have the servant in such servile position that you can kick him out when you are not satisfied with him? I really do not think that, if the field labourer is given a house-site, it will upset the whole social arrangement of Tanjore. I do not think experience of villages where they do own houses can be said to support that claim. Of course, a change of this sort at the moment produces some temporary disturbance. The Rev. Mr. Andrew in his memorandum said 'this may at first disturb the economic system of agriculture and raise prices somewhat. But surely this should not be opposed by reasonable men. The great body of landholders and ryots are responsible for the perpetuation of the labour injustice and depression from generation to generation to which the agricultural labouring classes have been subjected and should see to it that such injustice and depression is speedily removed and a better state of things inaugurated.' That is a remark of the Rev. Mr. Andrew and I have no doubt that it is quite true. Many landholders in Tanjore treat their coolies fairly enough. Many do, no doubt; I do not wish to draw a general indictment against the whole class of employers. But a certain class of employers do not treat them with fairness. The trouble is that with a certain number of employers, as Mr. Gray points out, when disputes arise, unfortunately fairness often gives way to oppression and injustice. I cannot help thinking that my Honourable Friend would have been wiser not to have adopted this attitude of opposition. I am quite prepared to discuss the question when the deputation from the landholders of the district comes up. I think intimation to that effect has already been communicated to the landholders of the district. We are quite prepared to consider all special representations of individual cases. But I am quite unable to accept the resolution or to stop the proceedings which have been started. As regards the question whether or not representations had been addressed to Government, there has been a representation made to the Government by a conference of depressed classes, and subsequent representations were made by the Depressed Classes Mission. The Government are only performing a duty in this respect which they ought to have performed long ago. I hope my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Ranga Achariyar will not adopt this irreconcilable attitude in regard to this small measure for improving the condition of the Paraiya or Panchama labourers. He criticized a Christian Deputy Collector having taken up work in Christian villages. He took up that first because he thought there would be less objection in that place. He is starting out in fresh villages. If Honourable Members object to this we should be willing to consider whether he shall be debarred from taking up any Christian village, though I cannot see myself any objection. I think it is a pity that this question has been imported into the matter. I do hope that the Honourable Member will consider what I have said and will see his way to address Government, and send representations on which they can take action. We can meet landholders and consider any particular case of hardship. I am not prepared to bind myself down not to take village-sites or to say we will take only village-sites. Each case must be dealt with on its own merits. We do not want to create ill-feeling between classes. I think that assurance will satisfy the Honourable Member."

RESOLUTION RE A COMMITTEE TO ADVISE ON THE PROVISION OF HOUSE-SITES FOR PANCHAMAS IN TANJORE. 103

(Sir Alexander Cardew.)

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"This question probably has application to parts of the Presidency, other than Tanjore; and I congratulate the Government on the attitude they have taken in the matter of the rights of the Panchamas, of the rights of the labourers. I am glad to see that they have adopted a more or less socialistic attitude in their relations with labour. I hope that they will recognize the claims of labour, when they themselves have to deal with labour as parties to a contract. I congratulate the Government on coming forward with material assistance to the Panchama classes to better their position. I hope that their sympathy will not be confined to the Tanjore district, but will be extended to other districts also."

"Therefore, from my observations your Excellency would be able to see that I am entirely in sympathy with the main object of the Government Order now under discussion. But at the same time I may be permitted to offer one or two observations as qualifying the action, which the Government may take in this matter. I wish to point out to Government that there are certain circumstances which might, from prudence, if not from justice affect their attitude. I think it is a pity that the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achari should have put forward a resolution which as he rightly expected, does not find support amongst non-officials. Our sympathies are first with the depressed classes, with the Panchamas and everything that the Government might do in order to provide house-sites for these men must find sympathy with the Honourable Members of this Council. I think that false issues have been raised. There is no use saying there is no demand for house-sites or that the Panchamas should not be enabled to hold their own in the economic conflict. But at the same time there are certain other considerations. I hope the Government would realize what they are doing in this matter. In the case of Tanjore the relation between the landholders and the tenants has been unsatisfactory. These Panchamas were originally serfs; still, there are certain customary incidents in the relationship between landholders and tenants. The Government are now interfering with these customs and this relation. I wish they realize what they are about. From socialistic grounds it is quite right that they should interfere. It is a very important principle. I wish the Government will commit themselves to the principle of helping the weaker party in a contract like this and I wish they would be logical on later occasions."

"What, however, are the limitations in point of practice? Two seem to arise for consideration: first, how far can you proceed in the direction in which you have started without doing unnecessary harm, secondly, taking the actual facts, and seeing the amount of irritation which these measures cause, is it wise or prudent to go so far as the G.O. No. 3559 goes. These are the two points. Let us take the first question, that is, is it necessary to cause the amount of injury which is caused? The point is this. The mirasidars met at a recent meeting and sent up a resolution. In that they say 'You had better acquire our land, please do not touch the house-sites.' Government must also notice that mirasidars want house-sites for Panchamas to be employed by them in accordance with the established custom of the landholder providing all his tenants with house-sites. If Panchamas refuse to work for their employers, should they have the latter's house-sites? That is an important consideration, and unless it is absolutely forced upon the Government that they should dispossess any particular owner, the Government ought not to do so. That is a rule of morality—that the Government should not dispossess people of their property without necessity, i.e., that under the plea of acquiring house-sites for the Panchamas they should not do unnecessary harm to the mirasidars. I have recently been in Tanjore studying the question and have suggested a solution. The Government have ample opportunities to find out how far the suggestion is workable. Now here is the suggestion. It is applicable to 95 per cent or 99 per cent of the cases under discussion. A buyer should be granted a loan by the Government through the District Board to help him to purchase the site; and if that is done all hardships cease. I understand that there are hardly any cases where the Panchama cannot be provided with house-sites without touching the house-sites now in the possession of mirasidars. The objection to the acquisition of cultivable land will be that it is more costly; but that is no reason to take away the house-site in the possession of the mirasidar which he wants. The buyer, the ordinary Panchama ryot is not able to pay Rs. 300 or Rs. 400 in a lump sum for a plot of nanja land. And in places where the land is very costly, he may have to pay Rs. 300 at least. The ryot can furnish something like Rs. 100. For the balance, the Government should grant a loan. In the Tanjore district it may be that you will be able to start co-operative panchayats and lend money through them to these applicants. So far as the work has gone, it has not been necessary to acquire lands at high prices. I think that a loan of Rs. 50,000 will be more than ample to meet the cost of acquisition. Therefore on the whole, if the Government make an effort to find out in what cases they could acquire land, and what grants will be necessary, the entire solution of the problem will be near at hand. I would suggest the application of the principle that unnecessary harm should not be done."

"And for the other question, that of congestion, I noted, even when Sir Alexander Cardew was stating it, his conscience was pricking him, as the objection is an after-thought. He cannot believe that really there was congestion at the time of G.O. No. 3559. On the other hand, Mr. Srinivasa Achariyar distinctly says that there was no question of congestion at all. That argument ought not therefore to be trotted out. Of course, if the medical or sanitary officers come and say that there is congestion in houses in which Panchamas live, and it should be relieved, we are bound to accept that statement. In point of fact, the case referred to by Sir Alexander is one instance and there may be two or three more. There is no use therefore of referring to congestion. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has quoted an instance where 160 members lived in 17 houses. Does that prove that the mirasidars' house-sites should be turned into Panchama huts. How does congestion improve by mere change of ownership? For congestion the best remedy is to acquire the neighbouring land, to dig up a well and throw up the earth on all sides and thus to extend the land for house-sites."

"I refer to one other consideration which ought to weigh with the Government. That is the question of expediency. Now the Government are living in glass houses, and they should not throw stones at others. The Government are large employers of labour. Supposing there are some persons busy creating trouble between them and their employees, what would be their feeling? Government have actually the very best reason for not interfering with the mirasidars who are supplying them with so much grain. Prices of grains are rising already and we should not interfere with the production of grain."

"Mirasidars form a large class and there is a lot of irritation in their mind, and this is hardly the time when we can look complacently at that irritation spreading. I think it is wise on the part of the Government that they do not set a bad example in the matter of relations between labour and capital. We must help labourers but must not stir up labour to mutiny against their employers. What else do you do in G.O. No. 3559? The order is absolutely wrong and should be cancelled at the earliest opportunity as it is against all principles of discipline. I hope that from these two standpoints the Government will change this Order and adopt the principle which I recommended, namely, that all unnecessary hardship should be avoided and loans should be granted to the district board."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I believe that the difference between the views put forward by the Honourable Mover of the resolution and the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew is one of details of procedure rather than of principle. I do not think that there is any one in this Council who would not co-operate with this Government in any measures taken to improve the condition of the labouring classes. I believe that the Honourable Mover has made it clear that it is far from his intention to suggest anything which might detract from that view. I for one would accept the principle underlying G.O. No. 3559, dated the 10th November 1917, in so far as it seeks to provide house-sites for Panchamas. I am even inclined to think that in one or two aspects, that Government Order is not as liberal as it should have been. Having said so much about the acceptance of the principle underlying the Government Order, it is a matter for consideration whether it could not be modified in some respects so as not to cause unnecessary hardships to the landholders. Government Order suggests that an 'endeavour should be made to secure to them (Panchamas), as well as to others the ownership of the sites of the houses in which they live.' It does not proceed to consider any other phases. It does not suggest the possibility of there being other places available for providing them with house-sites. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has stated to the Council that if only their seed-bed lands and house-sites were excluded, the mirasidars would be willing to co-operate with Government and help them in this direction. I would ask the Government to consider the possibility of directing a full inquiry into the matter of providing house-sites which may not reasonably be objected to by the landholders. If it is found impossible to procure lands in other places I would certainly say that the Government may go along this line, but if, on the other hand, it is possible to provide other places, so as not to cause inconvenience to the landholders, it is the duty of the Government to provide them. Under these circumstances, I think the Government Order should be modified."

106 RESOLUTION RE A COMMITTEE TO ADVISE ON THE PROVISION OF HOUSE-SITES FOR PANCHAMAS IN TANJORE.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar; [14th August 1918. Mr. Ranga Achariyar.]

But let the principal point be that, where a landholder who holds a certain amount of property with house-site, much more than what may be required for him to keep for the purpose of his labourers, let that portion which is extra be acquired. And even there if, without extra cost, it is possible to acquire sites just near which will relieve the congestion, the landholders' property ought not to be interfered with. And in all cases a fair margin for fair occupation by a number of tenants should be allowed. I think in the course of the reply given by Sir Alexander Cardew—I was not able to follow that—he was inclined to treat it as a question that will be considered in each case on its merits. Of course he said that he would hear representations; but I think that, so far as this point goes, the Government may make their position clear that they do not mean to deprive landholders of house-sites needed by them for housing their own labourers. Of course, if any particular landholder has got too much of house-sites, not necessary for him, then the question may be treated as one in which the Government ought to interfere. I think a clear position of that kind may be taken by the Government."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TANBI MARAKKAYAR:—"Your Excellency, as a man from Tanjore, though I am not representing here the agricultural classes of the people I should say from what I have heard, and from what the mirasidars of Tanjore, a large number of them have represented to me, that they have some grievances on this question. I also hear from the Deputy Collector who is in charge of the acquisition the real thing he has been doing. As a matter of fact, I had been to a place Rapencoil (?) where I inspected along with the Deputy Collector and he put to me his own case and also that of the labourers, the Pannials of that place. Whatever it may be, I am not here to object to the action that Government have taken. On the other hand, the Honourable Mover of this resolution is not also objecting to the principle of it. The only objection he makes is that the Government need not touch the seed-bed lands or the wet land that really belongs to the mirasidars and there will be no objection to Government acquiring lands other than those, to give the Pannials every comfort. Your Excellency will admit that it is the duty of every mirasidar to look after his servant, especially Pannials as far as possible in their own interests; and I do not see there is any reason that they will ill-treat. At the same time as the resolution now stands, it is not objecting to the whole procedure that the Government have taken in this respect. The only thing is that sufficient inquiries have not been made and therefore it is suggested that a committee of officials and non-officials should be appointed to go into the question carefully and get a suitable recommendation on which final orders may be passed. I do not see there is any objection in doing so, and, as a matter of fact, the present Deputy Collector who is already on the spot doing the work may also be appointed as one of the committee to go into the question thoroughly."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"My Lord, as I said already I am not going to divide the Council over this proposition. I am asking merely for the consideration of this question. I do not want to commit the Government to any particular view. I wanted to have an opportunity of saying what I had to say. I quite recognize the social difference of both of us, the Government and the people. I for one would assure every one in the Council my support to what is necessary to elevate the condition of these people. But that condition is not peculiar to Tanjore? Here in our midst how many people are living under trees? What about the various coolies and Panchamas without houses? In whose houses do they live? What you provided for them? It is a much larger question affecting the town, the depressed classes and other classes. But that is not the question with which we are concerned. As I have said already, the Government want to acquire lands for the purpose of making house-sites; we do not object to that; our only objection is that we do not want that our house-sites should be made over to them and our seed-bed lands should be given to them. Mr. Gray's report was later than the Government order. But after all what does he say? He says that on account of this system the employer makes his coolies work. Which employer does not make his coolie work? Is it a crime to insist on work? He is a free man to go away when he likes and wherever he likes. Regarding Mr. Srinivasa Achari's report I wish to know which of us do not wish to own other people's property if possible, if we can legally acquire it. The question is: is there any justification for interfering in this matter? That is the point of view from which I ask the Government to consider this question. Has a case been made out for their interference for the burden of proof rests with those who started this question? The matter requires very careful consideration and I dare say the Government will bestow that consideration, because they are as much interested in the welfare of the agricultural population, whether they be pattadars or labourers, because, after all, the Government of this country depends upon these people for their revenue and must be very careful in dealing with these people. All agricultural operations are carried on not only for the benefit of the landholders but for the Government also. Government are co-owners with the landholders with reference to the property. You are as much interested in it as the landholders are; and that being so, I ask that this existing mamul should not be disturbed, unless a strong case is made out. From the report of the Government no strong case has been made out except on sentimental grounds. They say 'we are anxious to provide them with property; of course we are not able to buy lands for them. Only we are able to take away another man's property and give him money compensation, which means nothing. Now there is another suggestion which I will make. If we take away house-sites from these people, give them lands where they can put up their coolies, land compensation will be the proper thing in such cases and no money compensation is proper. People are content to be under the old system and there is no serious discontent. When there is no serious discontent with the existing state of things, is it necessary to interfere? After all the question of congestion is an afterthought. Mr. Srinivasa Achari himself says 'it is not a question of congestion in this district.' The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has given us one instance of over-crowding. Out of how many villages was it? By all means relieve the congestion. Whoever stands against it? In such a case, the taluk board will come forward and there will be the question of acquiring other property. When such is the case, you should not interfere with the existing system. It is only when you interfere with the existing system you create trouble. We are not standing against the extension of house-sites, but we do stand against changing the ownership of house-sites, changing the ownership of seed-bed lands. Therefore the Government will see that our attitude is not unreasonable in this matter. The Rev. Mr. Andrews' report has also been referred to in this Council. He has no experience of Tanjore; he belongs entirely to Chingleput. Mr. Gray points that experience varies from district to district. It is said that in other districts where labourers themselves own houses they work properly. Probably they do; but here in Tanjore the present state of things has existed all along. That is the connexion between the owner and the employee; that is the state of things under which they have been working. In other places they have been working without that connexion. Now here you disturb that connexion. You disturb an existing state of things here, whereas in other districts it does not exist; there it has become a mamul, here you create a mamul. It is not an easy thing. I ask the Government to take that aspect of it into consideration; why change those conditions under which we now live unless imperatively called for. Then, again, it is admitted that there has been generally good treatment by the land-owning classes. In fact, it has been pointed out that wages are good; and in the Tanjore district it is well-known there is much emigration. Therefore, we are already labouring under that difficulty. That is a very serious question and that added to the disturbing of the existing state of things will be a very serious thing indeed. Therefore, after all these aspects of the case are dispassionately considered, I hope the Government will take the right course. When the condition of agriculture in the district is better, the people will form a deputation to wait on your Excellency and I do not want to press the Government now to any particular attitude. I do not want to press the resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

At this stage, the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao intimated to the Secretary to the Council that he wishes to move the following amendment to the resolution; and that the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar will second it:—

"For the words commencing from 'before taking' to 'such report' the following words shall be substituted, viz., 'that G.O. No. 3559, Revenue, dated the 10th November 1917, be so modified as not to unnecessarily interfere with the vested rights of landholders'."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I want to know why the amendment of the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao has been disallowed."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is too late."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Why?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I have called upon the Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar to reply and he has replied that he does not wish to press the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"It is only just now."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Yes, it is only just now."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"It is open to any member to press an amendment, if the original mover does not wish to press his resolution. I would like to know under what rule the amendment was disallowed."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I will find out the rules for the Honourable Gentleman. Page 102, rule 20, of the Council Rules says: 'When in the opinion of the President, a resolution and any amendment thereto have been sufficiently discussed he may close the discussion by calling upon the mover to reply and the member in charge to submit any final observations which he may wish to make.'

'Provided that the President may in all cases address the Council before putting the question to the vote'."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"But the amendment has not been discussed."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I must leave the Honourable Gentleman to consider the rule at his leisure."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I propose an adjournment. It is already 5 p.m."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The next resolution will not take much time."

108 RESOLUTIONS RE MODIFICATION OF THE ORDER REGARDING HOUSE-SITES FOR PANCHAMAS AND MADRAS CITY SPECIAL WORKS.

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Rajagopal Achariyar.) [14TH AUGUST 1918.

RESOLUTION RE MODIFICATION OF THE ORDER REGARDING HOUSE-SITES FOR PANCHAMAS.

The following resolution of which notice had been given by the Hon'ble Mr. K. Chidambaramudaliyar was not moved as he was absent:—

'II. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that G.O. No. 3559, Revenue, dated 10th November 1917, be so modified as not to allow of any interference with the existing Panchama and other similar house-sites or the rights and liberties of landholders in them as well as in the village common.'

RESOLUTION RE MADRAS CITY SPECIAL WORKS.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Before moving the next resolution against my name I understand that the Honourable Member in charge of the department has got some communication which he sent to the Corporation, to make. This communication may facilitate the discussion in the matter.

"The following was the resolution:—

'III. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that pending restoration of normal financial conditions both of the Corporation and of the Government, they may be pleased to order the closing down of the Special Works Department of the Corporation of Madras.'

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"The Honourable Member is aware that the Corporation sent us some time ago a letter with reference to the loan of Rs. 9 lakhs proposed to be given to them from Provincial funds. The Corporation then said that while accepting it they wished to make it clear that they would not be able to continue the financing of the drainage works and that the responsibility for this work should be taken up by the Government. With reference to that we have sent a reply to the Corporation. I do not want to trouble the Council with reading the whole of it, but I will read only the relevant portion of it.

'The general rule with regard to the financing of water-supply and drainage schemes is that not more than half the cost shall be contributed from Provincial funds. Out of a total of Rs. 124 lakhs which the works contemplated under the restricted programme are estimated to cost, Rs. 75 lakhs have already been granted by the Government. The standard contribution has thus been largely exceeded. In view, however, of the magnitude of the work necessitated by the special conditions of Madras, and of the argument that as a Presidency town it should obtain exceptional treatment, the Governor in Council is prepared, subject to the condition named below, to recommend to the Government of India and the Secretary of State that the Imperial contribution of Rs. 25 lakhs shall be excluded in calculating the half share of the total cost with which Provincial funds may legitimately be burdened and that the Government may be allowed to undertake liability for further grants aggregating Rs. 12 lakhs, so as to make the total contribution from Provincial funds up to Rs. 62 lakhs. The condition is that the Corporation undertakes liability for the remainder (about Rs. 7 lakhs) of the expenditure necessary to complete the programme. If, owing to an increase in the cost of labour or other unforeseen cause, the estimate is exceeded, the Governor in Council will be further prepared to consider the question of bearing half of such excess. The Corporation is requested to report at a very early date whether it agrees to the arrangement proposed above.'

"So this matter will come up before the Corporation and it seems desirable that the discussion of this resolution should not be taken up now. Let the proposal made by the Government be considered. I think the Honourable Member will not under the circumstances press this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Speaking for myself I thankfully accept the position and I dare say I will be able to induce the Corporation to accept it. And under the circumstances there is no necessity to press the resolution. I withdraw it."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

At this stage the Council rose for the day to re-assemble at 11 a.m. on Thursday the 15th August 1918.

110 RESOLUTION RE ENCOURAGEMENT OF AYURVEDIC AND UNANI SYSTEMS OF MEDICINE.

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar.) [15TH AUGUST 1918.

The Council re-assembled at 11 a.m. when the discussion of the resolutions on matters of general public interest was resumed.

RESOLUTION RE ENCOURAGEMENT OF AYURVEDIC AND UNANI SYSTEMS OF MEDICINE.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I have the honour to move—

IV. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government may be pleased to give substantial grants-in-aid annually to the Madras Ayurvedic College and other similar institutions for the encouragement of the study and practice of indigenous systems of medicine and also be pleased to take steps through that institution or otherwise

(a) for the encouragement of the translation or publication of Oriental medical texts;

(b) for instituting a research into the value of indigenous drugs and indigenous medical science;

(c) for starting schools for teaching Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine and affording facilities for the training of Ayurvedic and Unani students in anatomy and physiology in Government Medical schools and colleges.

"This resolution consists of four parts, and I am encouraged to bring up this resolution by a change in the angle of vision towards the study and practice of indigenous systems of medicine. I find that in the triennial reports of the civil hospitals and dispensaries in the Presidency for the year 1914, it is recognized that the great need of the hour is research—the present fashion is for research—and it is also stated, in this connexion, I am happy to report, that the Government are instituting a research into the value of indigenous drugs. The report says: 'We are sometimes told that the average western doctor is not in sympathy with indigenous medical science; nothing can be farther from the truth. The man of science knows no distinction between eastern and western science; but is willing to take advantage of whatever good he finds in either. What the western doctor insists upon—and rightly so—is, that all things should be proved before they are accepted, that nothing should be believed on mere authority and blatant quackery, which does so much mischief in India, should be exposed and replaced by that which is proved by experiment to be true and useful. The western doctor has already taken a number of the indigenous drugs of all countries into his pharmacopoeia and nobody will be more glad than he if the research contemplated bears fruit in this direction.' It is this encouragement that is given to the matter which has induced me to bring up this resolution, though this question has been before us for the last four or five years.

"As I stated, the resolution consists of four parts. In the first part, I ask that where there are institutions both for the study and the practice of indigenous systems of medicine such institutions may well be encouraged by substantial grants-in-aid. I know that there are such institutions in Madras—for instance the Madras Ayurvedic College and the Venkataramana Dispensary. Both these institutions are serving a real need; and recognizing the good work done by them the Corporation of Madras have been pleased to give them an annual grant from their funds. I may point out from the figures furnished to the Corporation that this Ayurvedic College treated 29,482 out-patients in the year 1917, 5,905 patients in January 1918 and 1,322 patients from the 1st to the 5th February 1918. I have not got the later figures, but I know that it is really serving a great need. As to the Venkataramana Dispensary the average number of patients treated is 26,350 and as regards the Sri Kaannika Parameswari Dispensary, the average number treated is 35,759. These results are due to private effort and private charity on the part of Indian citizens. Appeals have recently been issued for the upkeep of these institutions and the charitably disposed citizens are helping them. At the same time as they are serving a public need, and as the Government themselves are unable to keep up the requisite number of hospitals on western lines, it is but right that they should help such hospitals as these. In our budget we have a provision of Rs. 50,000 for helping hospitals; and as the institutions that I have mentioned are hospitals which give medical relief and also provide instruction, they may be rendered some substantial help. If we give grants-in-aid to these institutions that will be done under suitable conditions so that there may be inspections by our medical officers, who will thus be brought into contact with the practice of the indigenous systems of medicine. This Ayurvedic College turns out 20 students every year. They have to undergo a very long course of studies. I notice that in the year 1913, 14 students were turned out of the college; in 1914, 18 students; in 1915, 20; in 1916, 21; and in 1917, 21.

"That being the nature of the institution, I should think that it deserves Government help. But much money need not be spent upon it, and anything that the Government are pleased to give will be a welcome contribution. The management of the institution is in excellent hands; it is in the hands of a registered society, of which several of our leading citizens are members. The managing board consists of Diwan Bahadur Krishnaswami Rao, Diwan Bahadur Bajaratna Mudaliyar, Rao Bahadur P. Theagaraya Chetti, Mr. P. V. Krishnaswami Chetti and Rao Sahib C. Cunnau Chetti. This being a combined institution educational and medical, has every claim upon us for help. It is one of the prerogatives of Government to encourage such institutions. If we had an Indian Government this will be the first thing they will do; and as this department is in the transferred list, I dare say that the minister in charge will give effect to it at once when the change in the administration is brought about; but let it not be said that this Government have not done what they ought to do.

"The second part of the resolution is that the Government be pleased to take steps to encourage the translation or publication of oriental medical texts. I do not want to commit the Government to anything definite, because they may consider that private effort will achieve the object better in that direction as suggested by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew in this Council. I merely suggest that encouragement be given for the translation or publication of oriental medical texts. I do not think I need say much about the advisability, desirability and necessity of publishing and translating such medical texts. In fact, the Government have already appointed an officer to make an inquiry into the value of indigenous drugs and he will be helped to do it at once when the change in the administration is brought about; but let it not be said that this Government have not done what they ought to do.

"The third part of the resolution is that the Government be pleased to take steps to encourage the translation or publication of oriental medical texts. I do not want to commit the Government to anything definite, because they may consider that private effort will achieve the object better in that direction as suggested by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew in this Council. I merely suggest that encouragement be given for the translation or publication of oriental medical texts. I do not think I need say much about the advisability, desirability and necessity of publishing and translating such medical texts. In fact, the Government have already appointed an officer to make an inquiry into the value of indigenous drugs and he will be helped to do it at once when the change in the administration is brought about; but let it not be said that this Government have not done what they ought to do.

"Then as regards clause (b) 'for instituting a research into the value of indigenous drugs and indigenous medical science,' the main portion of it has been accepted. At the time when I gave notice of this resolution one officer was appointed for the purpose, but very soon after he was appointed, he was sent away to Bombay. I am glad that the Government have appointed a very eminent and popular doctor who will be able to properly conduct a research in this matter.

"In clause (c) of the resolution I propose that steps be taken for starting schools for teaching Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine and affording facilities for the training of Ayurvedic and Unani students in anatomy and physiology in Government Medical schools and dispensaries. One of the great complaints against our vaidyans and those who practise the indigenous systems of medicine is that they are ignorant of anatomy and physiology and therefore their treatment cannot be relied upon. I was encouraged to bring up this portion of the resolution, after seeing what had taken place in the Madura Municipality. I notice that under the advice of Major Ganpat Rai, the Madura Municipality has afforded facilities for Ayurvedic students to attend the medical school to learn physiology and anatomy. Other municipalities will follow suit, if the Government will be pleased to hold out the inducement of financial help. If the Government themselves are not prepared to start such schools, they might encourage local bodies to start some schools.

"It is recognized that the medical relief afforded to our people is wholly inadequate. The old system is dying out and we are not able to replace it by the new system. In remote villages and in corners of the Presidency people are unable to obtain medicine for the ordinary ailments and it cannot be said that the systems of medicine that prevail in the country are not useful. When we ourselves are unable to give scientific relief to the people and when there is a system availed of by people very largely—medical relief being a necessity to the human system—we cannot do something ourselves, let us see that something is done which is capable of being done by the old system. It may not be as good as the western system. I do not admit it myself and I am merely granting it for the sake of argument, because where the western system has failed, the eastern system has effected a complete cure. We cannot look upon the present addition of the people without concern. People cannot at present get the medical relief they require. With regard to the recent outbreak of Bombay fever which spread throughout the Presidency with such rapidity, people were unable to understand what it was; and it struck great terror into the minds of people as they could not get much relief. Therefore, when even the case of ordinary ailments our people are not able to obtain in remote parts relief from eastern science, it is our duty to help the old system which is practised all over the country. We must therefore take early measures and see that the indigenous systems are placed on a proper basis. I have refrained from making any express suggestion; I have made suggestions on a general as possible with the intention of giving a free scope to Government. The only thing that I point out is that action is needed and it is left to the Government to decide as to what they should do. I, therefore, hope that Your Excellency's Government will be pleased to accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Your Excellency, I have much pleasure in endorsing this resolution. I am sorry that there are no Unani Colleges in this Presidency which could be utilized for the purpose of encouragement and study of the Unani system of medicine, just as the Madras Ayurvedic College is recommended to be utilized for the encouragement of the Ayurvedic system of medicine. There are some Unani schools of medicine and the best amongst them is that maintained at Triplicane by Mr. Kaddas Badsha Sahib. That is a private school maintained by a private gentleman. The fact that four or five years ago the school was brought into existence shows that the need was felt for an institution of that kind; and an attempt was made by a private gentleman to meet that need. There is a great necessity for bringing aided schools into existence instead of leaving them entirely in private hands. There is a great future for aided schools. If the Government will take measures to carry out the purpose of this resolution, it will encourage Mussalmans to come forward and found a college for the study and practice of the Unani systems on lines similar to the Ayurvedic College. The Madras Ayurvedic College I have visited once. I know it is well equipped for the purpose of collegiate education; and if encouragement is given, as suggested in this resolution, a number of schools will come into existence and they will become affiliated to the college so that the whole system of education in the indigenous systems of medicine will be regularized throughout the Presidency. Resolutions for the encouragement of the indigenous systems of medicine have already been moved and discussed at great length in previous years and it is not necessary for me to go over the whole ground again to establish the necessity for taking measures like those suggested in the resolution. I can only appeal to the Government to do their best to encourage the systems. I know they have already done something. They have appointed an officer to conduct a research into the value of drugs, which forms a part of the resolution. But a good deal remains to be done. Though I would like that private agency should undertake all this work, yet it cannot attain much progress without encouragement from the Government. With these remarks I beg to second the resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"Your Excellency, I find I have been under a complete misapprehension regarding the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar. Judging from his attitude on various matters, I always regarded the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, the mover of this resolution, as a progressive of the progressives. I always thought that he was a red-hot reformer, belonging to the new school of progress in India. But we find him here yesterday adjuring all of us 'to maintain a namul'; and to-day he is urging us on similar lines to go back several thousands of years, to dig up this archaic institution, this survival from before the Christian era and asking us solemnly to patronize it.

"Your Excellency, I am glad in some ways that he has moved this resolution, because although I thought that I had made the attitude of the Government on this question fairly clear before, I understand that it has not been made sufficiently clear. For instance, the Madras Municipality to which the Honourable Member referred, has its venture in the system of Ayurvedic medicine. I am told that it was led to do so by the activities of a political body in this Presidency which addressed all local and municipal bodies and urged them to take up this pre-scientific system. It is rather an unfortunate subject for a political body to interfere with, but that is the genesis of the matter. Did they really understand that the Government would approve of their proposal? Did they really think that it was a thing in which the Government would themselves take a part? On a previous occasion, we defined the part which we are prepared to play in connexion with Ayurvedic medicine, that is to publish the medical lore as contained in ancient medical works, mostly Sanskrit. As the Government would encourage any other matter of antiquarian interest, so they were prepared to help in the publication of these texts on antiquarian grounds, just as the Government in a western country might help the Christ. The Government have also agreed, in order that there should be no charge of want of sympathy in the matter, to endeavour to ascertain what are the drugs which are valuable in the usage and practice of Ayurvedic doctors; and we have lately, at great inconvenience to the administration, taken away from the Medical College one of our trusted Indian Officers, Mr. Koman, and put him on special duty to carry out that undertaking. Those are the lines on which the Government have repeatedly stated that they would work but it must not be supposed from that, that the Government have in any way recognized it as a possible system of medical relief on which public money could be spent—I mean the practice of Ayurvedic medicines. That system, as the Council is no doubt aware, is an old survival. It is interesting as an old survival, just as the dodo was an interesting survival in the island of Mauritius when that bird was still alive. As an archaic system it is of interest. It treats of principles advocated in the early part of the Christian era when writers like Celsus and other classical doctors flourished. But unfortunately it has stopped still at that stage and the enormous progress which science has made in the last century has been a closed book to it, just as to Japan it was like working with the Ptolemaic system of Astronomy. I cannot understand why the Honourable Member should want to go back and make himself the laughing stock of the civilized world, not merely England, not merely Europe, but America, Japan and every other country which claims to be civilized. Is it to be supposed for a moment that these books which were written centuries ago—and which showed a wonderfully high standard of medical knowledge when they were written—can be considered now to be up to date with all the progress that we have made in that science? They were written long before our field of knowledge in medicine was widened. How is it possible to suppose that a system which dates from before the Christian era, from before the sixteenth century when the microscope was discovered, can hold the field as regards the causation and therefore the treatment of disease? It was only in the seventeenth century after the invention of the microscope that medical science began to make progress; and I do not understand how the ancients could have understood the elementary facts in biology without the aid of that instrument. Honourable Members may remember the passage in 'The Critic,' 'The Spanish fleet thou canst not see—because it is not yet in sight.' In the same way they could not see the microscope, because before the days of the microscope it was not in sight. How can you ask now it after the microscope has been invented, that the Government should go on spending public funds on promoting a system so totally out of date?

Your Excellency, the honourable mover is perhaps looking at it from a different point of view—from the point of view that it is an old Indian system; and because it is an old Indian system he would like to see it promoted. I do think it is the duty of the educated men in this country not merely to advance perpetually in one direction, namely, politically, but to advance all round. We are told that the first thing that the Indian Government would do would be to promote this system. I am very much afraid that it is true and it is heart-rending to think that the clock is going to be set back as soon as this becomes a transferred subject. As the Honourable Member yesterday himself said, let him wait till that day comes; because I will not be a party to such reactionary conduct.

"The view that I have put forward is not merely the view of Europeans. I should like the honourable mover to read the debate in the Bengal Legislative Council last March. First of all one honourable gentleman got up and said that he wanted a provision of one lakh of rupees for the development of the Unani system of medicine. The Hon'ble Moulvi Abdul Kassim knocked that on the head by saying 'if we have got money we have got many important matters for which funds are wanted and we could not take up this useless subject.' The Honourable Member replied that this was the unkindest cut of all. Then came another Honourable Member, a Hindu, who wanted Rs. 9,000 as a grant for an Ayurvedic College at Calcutta. He too got a knock out blow from Doctor Nilratan Sircar who made a very interesting speech and who referred to the great progress India has made in medical science. He spoke about the beginnings of eastern science and said:

"From the historical point of view, all the accumulated wisdom of the races which has culminated in different kinds of art has its roots in some instinct, and in the case of the healing art these instincts—hygienic, sanitary or medicinal—have their roots deep in the pre-historic times. This is common with many other biological and sociological instincts which have their roots in the instincts of the past. Our ancestors did not stop at these instincts; they advanced to empirical recipes based upon extensive observation and generalizations. These empiricisms are the empiricisms of a pre-scientific era. Then, they further proceeded by methodical observation to inductions and classifications mixed, of course with inevitable errors and superstitions; and next there came an era of hypothesis and speculation embodied in comprehensive sutras, that is enunciations, each of which covers with formal precision a vast assemblage of observed facts. Thus a stage of provisional science was reached. This is all that I can claim for the splendid system of therapeutics that was brought into existence by our ancestors, but no more. I dispute the claim of such a system to positive science, because it is wanting in that precision of a quantitative measurement and that experimental verification based upon quantitative measurement which is the essence of all positive science. This is the important element that is wanting in this system."

"I have to press these remarks on the attention of the honourable mover and the seconder of this resolution. Here is one of their countrymen, not wanting in pride for the performances of ancient India and not wishing to decry the cherished notions of his people, as a foreigner might, pointing out that this is not a scientific system and saying that to teach that system is really to put back the hands of the clock.

"Lastly, I do think that those gentlemen who have proposed and seconded this resolution have not the slightest intention of profiting by the provision that they propose to make. They think that the Ayurvedic system is good enough for common people. While they themselves go to the western practitioner, whether Indian or European, I really think they have no right to foist upon the illiterate masses an antiquated system when they are just as much entitled as the Honourable Members themselves to scientific medical relief. If the medical relief that we provide is not enough, let us by all means increase it. Let us increase our colleges and admit a larger number of students. I have tried to do a little in this direction during the past two or three years and let us go on with our efforts. But let us not waste any public money upon this old system, interesting no doubt though it is, but not up to date. I hope that my honourable friend Mr. Ranga Achariyar would like to be up to date all round in future."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"The speech of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has literally taken my breath away from the strong condemnation he has made of the Indian system of medicine. At the risk of being stigmatized by him as an unprogressive and as being out of date and as trying to go back to the old Christian era, I have no hesitation in supporting the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar. This question of affording encouragement to the indigenous system of medicine has been before this Council for the last five years, and I am glad that some steps have been taken in that direction. As has been pointed out, an assurance was given for helping towards the translation of oriental medical books and also an officer has been deputed for the purpose of investigating the indigenous drugs. All the attempts during the last five years have led to this conclusion, that it is only on account of some archaic interest that some attempts were made to investigate into the indigenous system.

114 RESOLUTION RE ENCOURAGEMENT OF AYURVEDIC AND UNANI SYSTEMS OF MEDICINE.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.) [15TH AUGUST 1918.]

of medicine, but that the system itself is not to be encouraged and that public funds ought not to be wasted on that system. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew treated us to some remarks made by some Honourable Members of the Bengal Legislative Council, and it would have been better if the attention of the Council had been drawn to the whole of the discussion. On a former occasion I drew the attention of the Council to the remarks of Sir Pardy Lukis who expressed his admiration of the Indian system of medicine in no unmistakable terms. Is it to be suggested for a moment that simply because in the case of some text-books they require, for their publication, to be unearthed from forgotten shelves, that the system does not deserve serious attention? The system has to be judged by the results it has achieved. Simply because no new discoveries have been made and no new publications have been made, the system ought not to be discouraged. Have the Government taken the trouble to ascertain from Indians whether there are not many among them who freely take medicine from Indian doctors who practise the Indian system? Has it ever struck the Government to take a census of the Indians who avoid western hospitals and dispensaries established at so much cost and who resort to Ayurvedic doctors for treatment? I do not think my honourable non-official friends will be ashamed to admit that we have recourse to this day to Ayurvedic doctors for treatment. Is it not a fact that we have recourse to them, because we are convinced of the success of the system and its practice? A more comprehensive inquiry should therefore be undertaken before such a strong condemnation is pronounced, such as the one to which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has given expression. I would state for the information of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew that the educated Indians would prefer to go back a century if only for the purpose of utilizing Ayurvedic doctors. Seeing for a moment that the Indian system requires further investigation, is it a task from which the Government should shrink? I am not suggesting that the system is incapable of improvement. It is not perfect; and it is not as perfect as it ought to be. When it is realized that a major portion of the people who resort to this system of medicine are being treated by those men whom you call quacks, is it not your duty to see that those men are improved and are placed on a better footing?

"When this resolution was moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar I was expecting opposition from the Government not on the ground of the want of advance by the system, but on the ground of financial limitations. I thought it would be urged by the Finance Member that, being careful about the finances and holding the purse-strings, he found much difficulty in giving grants to help the Ayurvedic college or to start schools for teaching Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine. I was thinking that the only difficulty could be the allotment of funds for the purpose. I remember that when a resolution, to a similar effect, was moved in this Council in the year 1913, it was pointed out by the then Member for Government that to support an Ayurvedic college or to start a really useful institution would cost as much as the Madras Medical College itself; and he asked whether the Government could be expected to embark upon such a costly institution. I am therefore surprised that the opposition to this resolution is not on financial grounds, but the opposition is raised because the Hon'ble the Finance Member discredits the whole of the Ayurvedic system. I would therefore ask your Excellency's Government to re-consider the whole situation and take the necessary steps to improve the existing indigenous system of medicines by giving facilities to those who are now practising it to enable them to practise it under better conditions."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I am perhaps in the opinion of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew a fossil. But before I have done with the speech that he has delivered, I would place some facts before Honourable Members to show whether the speech made by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew is not out of date and whether he is not the fossil. The point that he has made most of is that the Ayurvedic and Unani systems are ancient. To parody Kalidasa, ‘नवीनमित्येव न साधु सर्वम्

पुराणमित्येव न चाप्यवद्यम् ।

सन्तः परीक्षयन्त्यतरङ्गजन्ते

मूढः परप्रत्ययनेयबुद्धिः ॥’

‘A thing is not good merely because it is modern ;
Nor is it worthless merely because it is ancient.
The wise scrutinize the merits of both and prefer the better.
The fool is led away by the opinions of others.’

"I may say for the benefit of Sir Alexander Cardew what Professor Max Muller stated. Professor Max Muller started the study of the ancient system of religion and philosophy prevailing in India and his first impression was that it was the expression of an infant mind emerging from a savage condition; but he lived to learn that this philosophy contained a sublimity of thought and knowledge which was a solace in old age, especially to himself.

"So far as I know, the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has not had any opportunity of going deep into the subject. I must congratulate him on the fact that he has begun the study of the Ayurvedic and Unani system of medicine. He has just now begun with the study of Doctor Nilratan Sircar's speech. I do not think that he has had any opportunity of going to

Mysore and seeing there how these institutions are working and how the Ayurvedic institutions are being encouraged in Cochin and Northern India and what great good they are doing. If he sincerely studies our systems, I am sure that some day he would, like Professor Max Muller, live to learn that he was too rash in the utterances that he has given expression to to-day. He has proceeded, I am afraid, too far in his denunciation of everything connected with the Ayurvedic and Unani system of medicine. But if he will carefully examine clause (c) he will note that what is recommended is that those students who are studying the Ayurvedic and Unani system of medicine should be given facilities to learn physiology and anatomy. His horror of the Ayurvedic system cannot go much farther than when he says that he will not allow the Ayurvedic students even to study physiology. I am afraid he seems to think that to give grants to Ayurvedic institutions is like encouraging idolatry. I do not see why grants-in-aid to institutions in which Ayurvedic medicines are distributed should be condemned as an attempt to resuscitate a system as extinct as the Dodo. I am afraid that the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew is not conversant with the existing state of affairs among the masses. What does he mean when he refers to the system as extinct as the Dodo? Does he mean that the people have no belief in the Ayurvedic system and therefore do not take to that treatment? If he will only study the life outside his own residence, he will discover that practically the whole Indian population including persons of the highest education resort to these systems and these alone and have come to the conclusion that these indigenous systems are not the despicable systems that he makes them out to be; that the practitioners of these systems have knowledge which is worth being availed of. Knowledge is not the monopoly of any one nation or any one individual. As regards the western system of medicine which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew advocates, that system is in as pitiable a condition as any system can be. At one time, you come forward with one theory about fever and at another time with another kind of theory. Western practitioners who practised it 15 years ago had a notion different from that which the present-day practitioners have. I have no doubt that Ayurveda and Unani will live down the remarks of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew. Experience of ages cannot be condemned and the knowledge enshrined in our ancient books cannot be condemned and consigned to immediate oblivion at his behest. To look down with supreme contempt on these argues a narrowness of mind on his part. Instead of trying to quote Doctor Nilratan Sircar, who might have imbibed too much of the west and whose Indian birth has not stood him in good stead, the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew might try to tackle facts as they are. Doctor Nilratan Sircar was an Indian; but his opinion of things that are Indian is not worth accepting merely on that account. For what says the Tamil poet—

‘உடன் பிறந்தார் கற்றத்தார் என்றிருக்க வேண்டா
உடன் பிறந்தே கொல்லும் விபாதி.’

‘Fancy not that he is your kin who is born (of the same parents) with you.
Disease born with you kills you.’”

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"I am not surprised at the way in which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has dealt with this resolution. He knows only the western system and he does not want any other system. It is only human nature to think well of what one knows. But I may assure him that the Indian system is not a dead system, but a living system. It is not a system which is enshrined only in old text-books; there are numerous medical practitioners who practise the system and there are Indians, large numbers of educated men, who resort to this system. I am sure that the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar does resort to that system and recommends it to others. So far as I am concerned, I must say that I resort to the practitioners of the indigenous system and I also go to hospitals. I know for what cases I should go to hospitals and for what cases I should go to Indian practitioners. I know, for some cases, the western system can never replace the Indian system; but there are cases in which the Indian system must give way. We are therefore anxious that the Indian system should be improved. That is why I have risen to support this resolution. We are anxious that the Indian students who are studying the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine should be given instruction in anatomy and physiology, and I should have no objection if they are also taught the theory of germs. We want the Indian system to be retained and improved. I therefore beg to support this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"I wish to support this resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar, even at the risk of being told by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew that I am a reactionary, anti-diluvian, and antiquarian and antiquated. I do not know what impression I made upon him—whether I am a progressive or not. I do not mind if I am told I am a reactionary, but I heartily support this proposition. I wish that the Government should come forward to actively encourage the so-called system of Ayurvedic and Unani medicines—I call it so-called because it is not admitted by the western practitioners to be a system.

"I must say that it is a mistake to suppose that the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine are dead. I might remind the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew that they are living systems giving relief, I must say, to millions of people. It is a notorious fact that under the western system the medical relief that is now being given is totally inadequate. It is equally notorious that the system of medical relief on the western lines now administered is very

116 RESOLUTION RE ENCOURAGEMENT OF AYURVEDIC AND UNANI
SYSTEMS OF MEDICINE.

(Mr. Siva Rao ; Mr. Venkatapati Raju ; [15TH AUGUST 1918.
Lieut.-Col. Giffard.)

costly. In many cases, indigenous drugs may be allowed more freely than the foreign drugs in affording medical relief to the people. Foreign drugs are more costly and the western system of treatment is also very costly. That being so, it behoves us to consider whether we must not resort to a system which would be cheap, a cheap system of medical relief which can be extended to rural areas.

"Now the proposal of the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar comes to this: that the western system of medicine now practised should be supplemented by the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine. It may be that the system of Unani and Ayurvedic medicines cannot be quite scientific and up to date; but that is no reason for throwing away the experience of centuries and throwing away the opportunities for benefiting ourselves by the experience of old Indian sages and doctors. It may be that the English system of medicine may have nothing to learn from the indigenous system in regard to the antiseptic surgery or in regard to physiology or anatomy. In spite of it, I would respectfully ask whether the western system of medicine could not be usefully supplemented by the eastern system. All that I claim for the eastern system is that there are books which give a correct description of diseases and prescribe certain medicines and give certain recipes. Why not we look into these books and try to prepare these medicines as laid down in those books and experiment them on patients and try to see whether they are really efficacious? I know of personal instances wherein patients have been benefited by the Indian medicine when the western medicine failed to give relief. In that light, the whole subject has to be considered—not in the light of there being one system of anatomy for the western system and another system of anatomy for the eastern system. As far as the treatment of particular diseases is concerned, we have books which give details of treatment and recipes; and there is no reason why we should not imbibe what is stated in these books and try to profit ourselves. The suggestions contained in this resolution are threefold. The first suggestion is to start schools and if the Government are not willing to do so, let them aid the schools started with private enterprise and then in the case of dispensaries and hospitals, if the Government are willing to open them, well and good; if not, let them give grants to those already opened with private enterprise. Then, there are these ancient textbooks which have to be translated and carefully sifted and attempts should be made to find out whether there is anything useful in those books. Is it fair to condemn these works as being antiquated without any scrutiny whatever? Is it likely that people who have contributed the most sublime thoughts to the world have not got anything to teach in the matter of medicine? I, therefore, heartily support this resolution that the eastern medicine must be made to supplement the western medicine and people must be enabled to resort to whichever system they like,—the western or the eastern system. In regard to surgery, nobody would go to Ayurvedic practitioners to get his wounds incised; but in the matter of medicines I can personally testify to the fact that in the eastern system there are medicines which are far more efficacious than are known to exist in the western system."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"The attitude adopted by the Government is adding insult to injury. It is bad enough to refuse to give us any money, but to say that our system is bad, and to attack it is not right. There were last year nearly over 2,000 applicants for admission into medical schools established by the Government, but the Government were able to admit only 300 students and as many as 1,600 aspirants after medical knowledge were denied the opportunity of profiting by medical education. Again we find that as regards in-patients, only a fraction of the people were treated, while a large number could not gain admissions into hospitals on account of limited accommodation. Does it mean that the rest of the world does not want any treatment? When our medical schools and colleges are not enough in number to produce a sufficient number of doctors required for our hospitals and dispensaries and while the number of hospitals and dispensaries themselves is absolutely inadequate to provide relief to all the people who have to resort to them, are we not to find some means of providing medical relief to the people at large? There is one circumstance which I have to bring to the notice of the Member of Government in charge of the department and of which he may not be aware. If he will refer to Ayurvedic and Unani doctors and also educated Indians, he will find that several people are being benefited by Ayurvedic and Unani medicines and there are several who are giving up practically western practitioners. If a person has not got ready at hand medical relief, afforded by the western system, are we not to give him something else to alleviate his suffering? Again, there are certain diseases which are considered incurable under the western system but which are cured under the eastern systems. For instance, lunacy and leprosy have been given up by the western practitioners as beyond cure, whereas under the eastern system, these diseases are being cured. I know there are doctors who are trying to cure them. I know that there are western doctors who recommend their patients to go to the eastern doctors to get themselves cured. Are we therefore justified in saying that it is an archaic form of treatment and therefore should not be countenanced? If you are unable to find out the rationale of this treatment, it is due more to your ignorance than to the inherent defects of the system; it is due to our long neglect of the system that we are unable to understand its rationale."

The Hon'ble Lieut.-Col. G. G. GIFFARD:—"I hope it is not too late for an expert to enter into this debate. It is quite true that people are suspicious of experts. I find myself in a particularly unpleasant position as being the only medical man in this assembly. I am to a certain extent glad that this subject has come up again and hope that it has come up for the last time. I am also sorry that it has come up, because when I spoke in a similar debate at the beginning of this year, I said that I was afraid that debating this sort of question in this Council must lead to friction in the Profession which I hoped would disappear during my Surgeon-Generalship and would be allowed to die down.

"It is very difficult for me to stand here and explain the Profession's attitude towards the so-called systems of Indian medicine, because I am talking as a single professional man to men of other professions and it is only in the profession of medicine that such a thing could occur. I do not think that any reasonable lawyer would suggest that the complexities and difficulties of modern days could be satisfactorily dealt with by the chapters of the Magna Carta; nor do I think that any Engineer would be prepared to start with the formulæ used by Archimedes; nor would you consider that a navy would be fully equipped to go out to sea without a compass or even without an astrolabe on the ships. I doubt if a modern army would succeed with only bows and arrows and a battering ram. I want to try and explain to you the position of a doctor in this assembly. Your Excellency—the well-known lines of Sir Walter Scott are familiar to Honourable Members:—

'Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
That never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land.'

I think that there must be some such feeling in the Honourable Members—this is our 'native medicine.' I believe that there must be some such patriotic or pseudo-patriotic feeling which impels them to press the ayurvedic and unani medicines in the twentieth century.

"I do not yield to any man in this country in my desire to help the sick and the poor; but I do object to a large number of laymen trying to decide which is the best way to help the sick and the poor in the matter of medicine. There is a proverb that every man is, as regards his own body, a fool or a physician at forty. As regards other people's bodies everyone seems to feel capable of effecting cures before forty or indeed at any age. This feeling is a peculiarity of the profession of medicine. Whether the 'doctor' be a B.I. Captain or a missionary's wife, or a planter he can point to a large number of cures in his own practice. But I never heard them suggest that they had special systems of medicine. The point that I wish to make clear is this—there are not three or four systems of medicine. There is only one system of medicine; it is cosmopolitan and universal. You cannot expect me to believe that there are several systems of medicine any more than you expect me to believe that there are several systems of engineering or astronomy. It is not of the slightest use for me single-handed, starting to bandy words about the success or failure of medicines or of medical practitioners in this country. I do not propose such a thing for a moment. I only wish to correct one or two misstatements or wrong impressions which have got about as regards the attitude of the profession of medicine towards this question. I admit at once that the need for doctors in this country is very great. It is quite obvious that 1,200 practitioners cannot supply the need of 42 millions of people. I quite agree with that; but I do not consider that because of that incapacity or want of numbers of professional men to deal with the sick of whole Presidency, that therefore you should supplement them by the practitioners of the so-called native system of medicine—I call it so-called, because I do not admit that there is such a system of medicine. The practitioners of this country undoubtedly use many good drugs. Undoubtedly they know (many of them have had long experience with sick people), they know how to manage and how to give medicines, to sick people. But let me remind you, please, that all that they claim is a knowledge of medicines—drugs—medicine and not Medicine as a profession; medicine in the sense of giving medicaments. The most stalwart advocates of unani and ayurvedic systems admit that their standard works were written somewhere about the days of Pericles. Home added practically nothing to the works of those days. Those who know Hippocrates' books know that he was the first of the clinicians. He tried, even in those far off days to struggle away from the unintelligible mysticism and the cloud of words which was already beginning to interfere with the profession of medicine.

"Hippocrates did this by actually writing aphorisms as true to-day as then, of which I may give you an example. 'No injury to the head is sufficiently severe to be despaired of or sufficiently trivial to be neglected.' That is as true to-day as it was then. If ayurvedic writings had contained this sort of truth, as the result of clinical experience they would have gained far more fame and been accepted without any question nowadays. I need not give you a long history of Medicine in this country, but I may tell you that it became as time passed more formal, more false and more wrapped up in some form of priestly mysticism. The doctors who know what has been written in the Sanskrit text tell me that it is quite unintelligible. To go back to Vedas for professional teaching at the present moment is practically useless."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Did I hear the honourable gentleman say 'Veda'?"

The Hon'ble Lieut.-Col. G. G. GIFFARD:—"It may be Ayurveda. I do not pretend to pronounce it properly. This is the attitude of the Profession. The Profession is not antagonistic in the sense of its being jealous of the indigenous systems of medicine. People who practise these indigenous systems are rather to be pitied than anything else. When you present them with the results of modern science they deliberately shut their eyes. I am only now talking of what medical professional men think about it. Mr. Komau has been put under Government

Orders on an inquiry as to whether something could be got from the ayurvedic medicines. We have always accepted the fact that good medicines, as apart from any system of medicine, no doubt exist in India. This is no new inquiry. In 1860 Doctor Wise of the Bengal establishment made a thorough inquiry, examined all the books and then translated some of them. The results of his experience are to be found in his book on Hindu medicines and his commentary on Hindu medicine. I would advise anybody who is still hankering after the indigenous systems of medicine and who considers that there are two systems of medicine, to read his book. Then in Bombay the Government took up the question in 1890. They encouraged a chemical examiner who, in conjunction with an Indian gentleman, brought out a book in which every known plant of India was mentioned and all the knowledge that could be gathered about it; and it contains a great wealth of knowledge. There are very few really efficient drugs existing, which are not known; and thousands of drugs exist in India which are of the same natural order or class as the drugs which have come into our pharmacopœia. I mean the British pharmacopœia which we call the pharmacopœia. There is the French pharmacopœia and the American pharmacopœia which are exactly on the same footing. I doubt whether any great results will come from any further examination of the drugs. Anyway, Mr. Koman is making an inquiry and if he is able personally to induce Indian doctors to give him any assistance, we may find something useful. The great profession of Medicine never shuts its eyes to anything useful. Medicine has, within my memory, seized upon Crooke's discovery of electrical discharges in vacuo and also upon the discoveries of Pasteur who searching for the cause of diseases in mulberries and in sheep was able to start the wonderful science of bacteriology which is now so useful to us.

"It does seem to be extraordinary to me as a professional man, that I should be asked as Surgeon-General to advise the Government to spend public money upon a form of medicine which entails no knowledge of anatomy or of only a knowledge of anatomy which is obviously bad and which even Indians who read Sanskrit tell me it is impossible to follow, because the idea of these days was to let the whole body rot in water and see what it contains. They did not do what the anatomists of the Alexandrian school did, give living people to the doctor to see what there is to be seen, by dissecting the body of the criminal to see what is going on. There is no physiology among them. As regards midwifery, they had no knowledge. I would do anything to advocate its encouragement if there is anything about midwifery in that system. Why should you ask me as a professional man to advocate that public money should be spent upon this sort of thing? I regret that I cannot advise Government nor will I ever advise anybody to spend any money on it and anybody who advises the Government to do so does wrong."

"Talking to lay gentlemen who are not doctors, I would say: 'Why do you ask us to do in medicine what you will not do in regard to any other matter? Would you ask us to do the same thing in regard to engineering? You ask us to start an ayurvedic college and subsidize dispensaries. I am on perfectly good terms with those who now conduct the existing ayurvedic institutions. I have seen their schools and I have discussed the whole thing with them. They admit that they confine their teaching of medicine and the use of drugs which we consider to be a small part of the whole profession of Medicine. I appeal to you who are not medical men to say whether you would ask me to start an engineering school without tools, testing machines or laboratory. Would a trader be content to start his business on Baylonic lines, on the lines of the petty shopkeeper in Syria about two thousand years ago? That is why I have risen to make myself quite clear. Why should we throw away the advantages gained by several centuries of invention?'"

"Did Harvey whose discovery of the circulation of the blood revolutionized the profession of medicine and upon which discovery physiology is largely based, did Harvey, I ask you, live in vain? Did Virchow work and write in vain? Is Pasteur to be worried in the next world with the feeling or the knowledge that his wonderful discoveries and the whole of modern bacteriology which is based upon them is to be rejected in India in 1918 in favour of ayurvedic writings more than two thousand years old? Are we to take to the surgery of the days before Lister's glorious invention made it possible for aseptic surgery to be performed and made it possible for the surgeons in this great war to save the thousands if not hundreds of thousands of lives which they have saved? Do you expect us, medical men, to give up our life-long habit of examining carefully into the secrets of nature and to learn from the ayurvedic text rather than to follow the example of Troussaud and the other famous clinical observers who have taught us how to observe? Have all these men lived in vain? Are the stethoscope, the ophthalmoscope and the laryngoscope to go on to the scrap heap? I ask you as a professional man—'why do you ask me to spend money on a so-called system of medicine which has stood still while the centuries have passed and which has known none of the great names of history'? It is suggested by several members that it is best to pour the new wine of modern science into the dried up old leather bottles of ayurvedic medicine. I am certain that if you try that experiment, you will burst them. I must appeal to you, gentlemen—if I were addressing my brother members of the Royal College of Physicians, I would find it an easy task—I would appeal to you to consider what I have said, before you try to make a dreadnought by putting a petrol engine into a trireme. Can you light a city by electricity by merely putting coconut-butties on electric standards? Can you improve the practice of medicine in this country by the ways that you suggest? I say that after giving much thought to what this country has done and even though I have sympathy with the objects aimed at—I tell you with the long experience of thirty years that the thing cannot be done and therefore to attempt to do it would be to waste money. Let us look forward and admit that there are not enough doctors. My whole endeavour has been to make more. Since the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has been the minister for Medicine, we have made a great advance and I am sure that we will have still greater advance. Honest people do believe that there is something in the ayurvedic medicines but medicines by themselves are only a small part of the medical profession. Everybody has an aptitude for medicine. There is a Tamil proverb—excuse my Tamil—which says:—

‘ஆயிரம் பேரை கொல்லுகிறவன் ஒரு வைத்தியன்.’

'He who kills a thousand men becomes a good physician.' It is considered that that is the best way to learn medicine. I do not want to detain you in this hot atmosphere, but I hope that I have made it perfectly clear in my speech as to what opinion is held by the medical profession. I am perfectly willing to admit that being the officer to advise the Government, I cannot advise them to spend any money on it. Because spending any money on this matter would not help to improve the practice of medicine. Suppose you give money to the ayurvedic and unani professions; to whom would you give it? There is no such thing as an ayurvedic or unani profession; the people who practise this medicine, vary from the well-educated gentlemen of good Sanskrit learning down to anything at the bottom, in fact, it is said that the tail is so long that instead of the dog wagging the tail, it is the tail that wags the dog. If we give money to dispensaries, we must take care that this is well spent and for this purpose somebody must inspect them. There are very few people who are competent to inspect the work done by those people. There are a good many who claim to be ayurvedic doctors. I know there are many ayurvedic doctors; there are some who are the best and the most respectable. But the list goes down to the dismissed ward boy, the quack itinerant pill-monger, and a man marching down from Benares to Rameswaram with a potent nostrum in his pocket, the cataract coucher and the obvious charlatan: all come under the title of ayurvedic and unani practitioners. Please do not take me as unsympathetic. I will ask any one to show me if there is anything to inquire about. If those who advocate such an inquiry can show that it would be profitable, I will have the money spent on the inquiry; but I am not sanguine of the results of any inquiry that may be conducted, because the ground has been well-covered by much more competent persons than Mr. Koman. One individual man cannot conduct an inquiry into the utility of the practice of the indigenous systems, but if the inquiry is to be in the shape of what Americans call team work, a number of men will have to join together and divide themselves into little knots, each group inquiring into a particular thing thoroughly and the results collated. If you really think and I am sure you honestly believe that there are good medicines in the ayurvedic and unani systems, the proper thing to do is to press for a really comprehensive inquiry with the help of a professional toxicologist, a pharmacologist, a biologist and a number of ayurvedic physicians and others who will be prepared to carry on the team work. If that is done, something useful might be brought about; but to say that one or two individual men can do anything important is not correct. I wanted to make the position of the profession clear so that this sort of discussion, where there is only one side of the argument, should not recur again."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I am rather surprised at the remarks made on the subject. The subject has been discussed for the last five years and I think the attitude taken up by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew is much stronger than the attitude he had taken up on previous occasions when the subject was discussed. After hearing the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General, I come to know what strange notions are being entertained about the indigenous systems. No doubt, the Surgeon-General has in his usual straightforward way explained his position and the reasons which influenced him to take up that position, and he has placed before this Council his view of the matter. As an expert opinion, I do not think it possible for any one of us to challenge it. After all it may not be necessary to challenge it. But I do not know whether even he has not given away the case of the Government in the matter of this resolution. I think he said that he had only 1,200 doctors to look after the interests of forty or forty-one millions of people. This number is only enough for about one million people. What about the rest? We know that in the past one or two years the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has been doing his very best; and I know in what way the Government have been adding to medical relief on the lines they considered best; but as Government, it is their duty to see that the remaining forty millions of people are treated properly and the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General who keeps watch and ward over this population is bound to give advice to the Government to see how best to regulate the treatment given in hospitals and dispensaries so as to make it available to the remaining people also. He is bound to exercise the greatest care in seeing that what is administered to the people is administered in the best form and that as much care is taken by the Government as possible to protect the people committed to their charge. That is a portion of the Surgeon-General's duties and it cannot be said that simply because he feels strong that the Hindu system of medicine is not a system by itself, therefore forty millions of people need not get any treatment. It will not be impossible for me and I do not think it is necessary for me, to contest the position that he has taken up that it is not a system of medicine. If he tells us that the Western system is already perfect, I should respectfully dissent from him; but he does not. With regard to the unani and ayurvedic systems as they are practised—he need not call them systems if he does not like them—he will find that with the use of certain drugs by themselves or various drugs combined, there is a system which deals so far as the medical portion is concerned, with certain diseases better than the Western system. And that is especially so in the case of the diseases of infants and longstanding diseases. If he denies that position, I must respectfully submit that he should examine the whole question further, in which case he will find that the diseases of infants and chronic diseases are better brought under control by the use of ayurvedic and unani medicines than by the Western treatment. If on examining the question and by discussing it with the leading members of the educated community, (Mr. Rama Ayyangar; the Rev. G. Pittendrigh; [15TH AUGUST 1918.

people that have been respected by the Government and the public at large, he finds that satisfactory results could be obtained by practising the system in the way laid down by Dhanvantari and that medicines properly prepared under careful supervision in the shape of lehiyams and churnams are capable of effecting a cure in complicated cases—if such should be the result of the inquiry. I really do not see why Government help should not be given in the matter. I believe that has been the feeling at the back of the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar's mind and that is why he has referred to the Venkataramana dispensary. That is the object with which he mentioned the Venkataramana dispensary; what he has said is the collective opinion of people who have been thinking over the matter and have come to the conclusion that the Eastern system can effect cures and can be more successfully employed than the Western system in complicated cases. If that is so, there is no reason why it should not be helped. When a proposition like this is urged before Government, it is their duty to see what the existing state of things is and how the existing institutions should be controlled. Nobody says that the forty millions of people ought not to be treated according to the Eastern system; but it is not open to the Surgeon-General to say that he will sit quiet and do nothing until he is able to find more doctors to cope with the remaining people. While human life is in danger, is it not his duty to see that the people are helped? No doubt as he put it, there is a saying that he who kills one thousand people is half a vaidyan; but are we to allow people to kill one thousand persons before they become half vaidyans? Are we to see that forty millions of people die under our very nose for want of treatment? He is to advise the Government to see that a proper system is practised and the main portion of the expenditure is incurred on it; but at the same time, he should see that the medicine that is practised amongst the bulk of the people is not practised wrongly, and that the quacks practise the system in a manner so that life is not in danger. When we know that 99 per cent of the people of the Presidency have to be treated in this manner, we might take steps to see that people who practise the indigenous systems in rural areas are sufficiently educated and have some real knowledge, as may be evidenced by the possession of a diploma from a recognized institution. This is what the Government should do—to see that only those who have some kind of diplomas practise this medicine. If these people take a diploma at some of the institutions already established, then you will find that instead of each one of them being responsible for 1,000 deaths, they will all be responsible for 200 deaths. It is in that way the people will be greatly helped. It is that function of the Government that has to be tackled. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar does not say that the present system is one on which all expenditure should be stopped; but he has only asked for an infinitesimal portion of the expenditure now incurred on medicine and sanitation being set apart to be spent upon Eastern medicines that are being actually given to the people at large. The Government as Government cannot shut their eyes to what is going on around them. The Surgeon-General has said that he has talked to learned pandits and has been told what is written in our ancient books. But what should be done is to make a real effort at understanding the real meaning of our text-books. The Government are conferring titles such as Vaidyaratna and Mahamahopadhyaya. While that is so, it is their duty to encourage the indigenous systems of medicine by starting institutions like the one suggested in the resolution. I do not think that it can be said that the attitude taken up by this Government is in accordance with the attitude taken up by the Government of India. The attitude taken up by this Government for some time indicated that they were willing to do something in the matter of the encouragement of the ayurvedic and unani systems of medicine, but now they have come to the conclusion that they should drop all attempt to see that the ayurvedic and unani systems are put on a proper footing. I am sure that if the present Surgeon-General is asked to take up this question and see that something is made out of it, he will do it."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PRIENDRIGH :—“ I do not wish to say anything on the merits of this resolution, but I cannot help saying that the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General's speech is quite conclusive. Those who are more or less detached like myself have felt that this debate is singularly illogical. The Government have appointed Mr. Koman to inquire into the merits of the system and at the same time the Government are now being asked to subsidize these institutions. It seems to me that it would be wiser to withdraw this resolution and in the meantime leave the matter to future development, until we know clearly what Mr. Koman's conclusions are.”

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"My Lord, I least expected that a debate on this innocent resolution would take the turn it has taken. I may remind the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew, notwithstanding his idea that I am a progressive, that I am after all an Indian, and he is after all an Englishman. I had hoped by this resolution to combine the East and the West. I had hoped that I would give an opportunity to the Western scientist to investigate into the Eastern system before he condemned it; and I had hoped by this resolution to give the Eastern practitioner some knowledge of Western science. These are the two main objects I had in view in moving my resolution; but for some reason or other, both the Honourable Members who have spoken against this resolution have chosen to misapprehend the scope of this resolution and they seem to have thought that I have moved this resolution in this Council for the substitution of the Eastern system for the Western system. That, as Honourable Members know is far from my idea. My idea was that whereas you are spending lakhs and lakhs on the Western system, you might spend a few thousands on the Eastern system, specially considering that the Indians have not yet lost faith in the Eastern science. I would ask the Government not to prejudge or condemn the system without anything like an inquiry. The Hon'ble Colonel.

15TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

Giffard who has spoken in behalf of the profession has betrayed his ignorance. Even where he professed to find knowledge, he spoke of the Vedas, as if one goes there for any knowledge of medicine. I refuse to take such condemnation. I keep an open mind; I would ask you to keep an open mind also. I ask you, practical people who are charged with the health of the lives of 43 millions of people to take stock of the situation. What is the present situation as described in the official reports? We have 668 hospitals serving a population of 1½ millions of people out of 43 millions of people. There are also 25,000 people who do not belong to the western medical profession, but who practise the eastern science. I ask that they may be given an opportunity to acquaint themselves with modern knowledge. I am sorry that after the Government of India accepted the resolution on similar lines in the year 1916, this Government should in the year 1918 choose to say that they will have nothing to do with the Indian system. I know that the Surgeon-General has told us in the last portion of his speech that he is willing to be convinced. I know Surgeon-General Giffard very well; and I know that he is a great friend of Indians; and I know that he is not one of those prejudiced Anglo-Indians. But I am only sorry that his honest conviction should be what it is, sorry because truth is not going to be found out. If, after investigation, Surgeon-General Giffard should tell me that the system is unsound I would be the last man to come forward and say it is sound. I know his ignorance of our system and that is why I refuse to take his verdict. I rather take the view expressed by Sir Pardy Lukis in March 1916.

by Sir Fardy Lukis in March 1916.

“The motion now before us deals with a subject to which I have devoted considerable thought during the 36 years of my residence in the east, and as I said the other day at Indore, the longer I remain in India and the more I see of the country and its people, the more convinced I am that many of the empirical methods of treatment adopted by the *vaid*s and hakeems are of the greatest value.

I may say also that I do not recognize any fixed line of demarcation between the eastern and western systems of medicine. The main difference between the two is, that whereas one has advanced the other has remained stationary.”]

"I ask that the science may be made more progressive. I ask the Government to help in this matter. I ask that the Government may perform their function by making it progress—that which has remained stationary. Then he goes on to say: 'and that is why I am an advocate for thus increasing their usefulness.' The system is already useful and he wants you to increase its usefulness. Then he says—to increase its usefulness. Then he says—‘Why then should the Allopath, arrogate to himself the right to appropriate for his individual benefit all new discoveries, denying these privileges to the practitioners of other systems of medicine? This appears to be especially unfair when it is borne in mind that 90 per cent of the Indian population live in rural areas where the *vaid*s and hakeems are—and will be for many years to come—the chief attendants of those dumb millions alluded to in recent speeches in this Council. It was in view of this, and in the hope that something might be done to raise the status and improve the education of *vaid*s and hakeems that I insisted on a definite standard of education for the new type of vernacularly trained village practitioners which it is proposed to create, for I am strongly of opinion that, in the interests of the masses, the improvement of the education of those who profess the indigenous systems of medicine is quite as important as the invention of a lower grade of Allopathic practitioner. Personally if I were ill, I say frankly that I would prefer to be treated by a good vaid or hakeem rather than by a bad doctor. I resent strongly that spirit of medical trades-unionism which leads many modern doctors to stigmatise all *vaid*s and hakeems as quacks and charlatans. and I shall always be proud of the fact that I was privileged to have the friendship of two such learned men as the late Mr. Ferozabad and Kaviraj Bijay Ratan Sen of Calcutta.

"I will not take up your time by quoting more from his speech, as my time is short. Speaking as an Indian, I am not ashamed to go back. All that I say is : to bring out all that is best in the east and combine it with all that is best in the west. As a progressive Indian, I want the best of everything whether it be the best of the east or the best of the west or the best of anything wherever it may be found. What is it that I have asked ? I have asked that the Government may give a grant-in-aid of a few thousand rupees, in the place of several lakhs, to well-known institutions and not to anybody and everybody as the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General assumes. He asked "to whom are we to give it?" I carefully defined it. I said that grants-in-aid might be given to institutions for the encouragement of the study and practice of the indigenous systems. I did not ask that grants should be given to those who practise the system. That is the first portion of my resolution. Misapprehension of my resolution has led to a patriotic speech from the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General. Let me also be patriotic and I believe any of my countrymen will take the same attitude. I think that steps may be taken for the encouragement of the translaspeech from the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General. I am sorry that the countrymen will take the same attitude. "What did I ask? I asked that steps may be taken for the encouragement of the translation or publication of oriental medical texts. Is that a wrong thing in itself? Will you condemn it simply because the system is 2,000 years old? Won't you look at it and see if there is anything in it? I have asked that steps should be taken 'for instituting a research into the value of indigenous drugs and indigenous medical science.' I express my thanks to the Government for having appointed Mr. Koman, but I pity poor Mr. Koman. I doubt whether he will have the courage, after the Surgeon-General's speech and after the speech of the Honourable Member for Government to come forward with any view of his own if he really believes that the system requires encouragement. It will certainly require a great deal of courage, faith and hope to come forward with one's own view. I am sorry I brought forward this resolution but I am glad also that I have done it, because the Government have defined what the present angle of vision is. I do not know if it is possible to correct it; possibly it may

SYSTEMS OF MEDICINE.

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Sir Alexander Cardew.)

[15TH AUGUST 1918.]

be corrected from above, because the Government of India have faith in it, and they have asked the Local Governments to take steps to see and make it more useful. I should like to know whether, in obedience to that command, this Government will take any steps. What did I ask? I simply asked that the Government be pleased to take steps. One of the steps that has to be taken may be to appoint a committee to investigate the system—a committee consisting of people with whom the Hon'ble Surgeon-General is willing to associate himself, to see if it is practicable to do what I have asked for in the resolution. There is Major Ganpat Rai who has not lost faith in the indigenous system of medicine. Let us investigate the system of medicine. If it were possible, My Lord, by spending Rs. 20 lakhs, you can have 6,000 hospitals, instead of 600 hospitals, and I think I am not far wrong in this statement. But I do not want the Government to spend one pie less on any one of the western hospitals. Let the Government spend all the money they can spare on western hospitals scattered all over the country. But in doing so, let us not lose sight of the actual condition of things. There are millions of people who are admittedly in need of medical relief. There are some medical men serving them and we cannot prevent them from killing these people. If one person has to kill one thousand people before he could become a vaidyan, between the 25,000 vaidyans the multiplied: and the vaidyans practising in the country have not succeeded in killing the people. Let us not therefore be afraid of that bogey.

"I do not see how my resolution, humble as it is, has been understood as implying that I wanted to compare the eastern with the western systems, while I deliberately refrained from doing so. As a layman I also know what value to attach to the opinion of an expert. I do not want to be dragged into such controversy. I ask the aid of the Government and of the Surgeon-General in seeing that this small step which I advocate, be taken, which will not cost the Government more than Rs. 10,000 to encourage these institutions. With these words, I again appeal to the Government that they will not stick to the attitude which they have taken up."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"There is one remark to which I would like to invite the attention of the Council because it exemplifies the standpoint of Honourable Members. One Honourable Member said to the Council that he did not suppose that any one contended that the western system was perfect. That just shows the point of view which the Honourable Members are taking. How can any science in any direction be regarded as perfect? Where is perfection ever to be attained in a science which is necessarily growing and progressive? Of course, the western system is not perfect. It is a living organism which is perpetually advancing and progressing. The idea that it should be perfect, that it should cease to expand in its supply of knowledge shows what idea some people have of science. Then there is the point which the Honourable Mr. Narasimha Ayyar took. He told us that Professor Max Muller who began his study of eastern philosophy and religion by depreciating it, came to recognize its great worth and fundamental merits at the end. But I ask whether philosophy and religion stand on the same basis as a science which is advancing. What is there in philosophy and religion to advance? It was the great speculative minds of the Hindus, the Hebrews and the Greeks that developed philosophy and religion. Psychic speculation cannot be measured in the same way as an experimental science. That is why Indian philosophy demands the respectful study of every man, who professes to know something about philosophy. But can you say the same thing about engineering? Can you ask the Hon'ble Sir Francis Spring to derive his knowledge of engineering from the engineering precepts of a century ago? The Hon'ble Surgeon-General in his exhaustive speech has clearly put all these points before you. There is, however, one misapprehension expressed by the Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. Pittendrigh. That was that Dr. Koman has been appointed to examine the Ayurvedic system. That is not so, he has been appointed to see what drugs are in use in it, to see whether they could be of such value as to be included in the pharmacopoeia of the world. To inquire into the ayurvedic system would require a whole team of workers, as stated by the Hon'ble the Surgeon-General, who would have to take it up and divide it among themselves. But Mr. Koman will only examine the drugs. That is what I promised to the Council. He will not go into the whole system, as it would be a prodigious task, which would require an enormous amount of labour."

"I understand the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar's attitude in this matter. This is an Indian system; he is an Indian and therefore he is naturally interested in it. I can understand that. But in such a matter we cannot be guided by patriotism. This is a case of science. We cannot have an Indian mathematics, any more than you can have French or Japanese mathematics. In the same way, you cannot have an Indian system of medicine. On that point, I may quote what Surgeon-General Edwards said:—"There are really no separate systems of medicine. The art of medicine should know no boundaries. We do not want one medical system for India, another for China, a third for France and so on; what we want is one school teaching and assimilating the best from all over the world." When you go to Japan you do not find a separate system. There, they have made very remarkable discoveries in the last thirty years in the sphere of medical science. I think therefore that, with that example before you, the true line of advance must be that science must be cosmopolitan and all-embracing."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar has asked me in this resolution to give Rs. 20,000 or 30,000 to these schools. It is a small sum. What can it do? You say there are 40 millions of people who depend upon ayurvedic practitioners and there are 25,000 ayurvedic practitioners. What can a sum of Rs. 20,000 do? The idea of doing any good by setting apart a grant-in-aid of Rs. 20,000 is impracticable. If you are going to do anything useful for the 40 million people you will have to spend not Rs. 20,000 but Rs. 20 lakhs; but I submit that that sum would be better spent on the extension of medical instruction on scientific lines.

RESOLUTION RE ENCOURAGEMENT OF AYURVEDIC AND UNANI 123
SYSTEMS OF MEDICINES.

15TH AUGUST 1918.] (Sir Alexander Cardew; the President; Mr. Ranga Achariyar.)

Therefore, I would appeal to Honourable Members not to look upon this question as one of patriotism, but as a really scientific question in which we want to do our best for India by devoting all the money we can to a system in which the rest of the world would share. For these reasons, it seems impossible to depart from the attitude which the Government have all along taken up and therefore they must refuse to aid these particular schools of instruction."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If I may say so, it is a thousand pities that on a subject which is really not one in many ways appropriate for discussion in this Council, and on which we have had so many discussions during the last few years and towards which the Government have shown, as a matter of fact, a most considerate and sympathetic attitude—it seems to me a thousand pities that we should have to go to a division on this question for this practical reason. There is no good saying that we are not going to substitute, that we do not desire to substitute by this motion for the present Local Government medical institutions, medical institutions engaged in the practice of ayurvedic and unani medicines. What you spend on the one you must take away from the other, if you are to encourage institutions practising the ayurvedic or unani medicines. As a responsible institution, is this Council going by its vote to encourage every local body throughout the country to adopt this view, or are we going by such action really to alleviate the sufferings of humanity in this Presidency? Apart from any question whether we desire or do not desire to alleviate that suffering it is common ground that everybody is anxious to do his utmost for the sick and the suffering—the Government have shown their desire to extend medical relief during the last few years in the most significant manner. I have not got the file of figures with me, because I never intended to intervene in this debate. The estimate for medical relief in 1916-17 was Rs. 18 lakhs, but this year it is Rupees 26 lakhs. Is that not proof of the desire on the part of the Government to do their utmost to extend the provision for medical relief throughout the Presidency? You may say that it is insufficient. Are you therefore justified in taking away a portion of the money now spent on it and utilising it on some other purpose? There is no obstacle or objection whatever to private and philanthropy undertaking this work and private munificence being spent on any kind of medicine. But so far as the Government are concerned, it seems to me that we are all more or less responsible for the medical relief that we give. But if we divert our funds to some other purpose, then it may be that every local officer will have a certain kind of hesitancy about this matter. That is what it will be taken to be. I therefore venture to put that practical difficulty on the administrative side to the Council. Does the Honourable Gentleman wish to divide the Council?"

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar replied in the affirmative."

The resolution was put and lost.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar and the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar both claimed a division.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Who wants a division?"

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I ask for a division."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That is the general right of the mover."

The division was taken with the following result:—

124 RESOLUTIONS RE A SEPARATE SECRETARIAT EXCLUSIVELY FOR WORK CONNECTED WITH THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL AND AMENDMENT OF THE MADRAS CITY CIVIL COURT ACT, 1892.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; the President; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; [15th August 1918.
Mr. Gillman.]

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I beg to draw the attention of your Excellency to rule 24 (3) which says that any one can call for a division."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is the usual practice that some courtesy should be shown to the Honourable Mover of the motion. Therefore it was I wished to make it clear as to who asked for the division. It is the ordinary practice in all assemblies of this kind to show some courtesy to the mover of the motion and it is my duty to protect the rights of the Members. Therefore, I suggested that the mover might be consulted."

RESOLUTION RE A SEPARATE SECRETARIAT EXCLUSIVELY FOR WORK CONNECTED WITH THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The following resolution of which notice had been given by the Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar was not moved:—

"V. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government may be pleased to consider the desirability of having a separate Secretariat of the Government exclusively to deal with the work connected with the Madras Legislative Council, so as to afford greater facilities to promote legislative work and to non-official members of that Council in the discharge of their duties."

RESOLUTION RE AMENDMENT OF THE MADRAS CITY CIVIL COURT ACT, 1892.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to move—

"VI. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council

(a) that the Government may be pleased to take steps to obtain the necessary sanction under section 79 of the Government of India Act, 1915, to amend section 3 of the Madras City Civil Court Act of 1892 by substituting the words "five thousand" or at least "three thousand" for the words "two thousand and five hundred" occurring therein;

(b) that the Government may be pleased to exercise their power under section 4 of that Act by appointing one of the Puisne Judges of the Presidency Court of small Causes as an Additional Judge of the Madras City Civil Court; and

(c) that they may be pleased to recommend to the Government of India to take into consideration the desirability of their amending the Madras City Civil Court Act, 1892, by empowering the City Civil Court to try also any suit not exceeding Rs. 10,000 in value which may be transferred to it by the High Court."

"You will notice that clause (b) has become unnecessary in view of the notification already issued. But I wish to suggest that an additional Judge who has been appointed only for three months ought to have been appointed for a year at least, so as to give relief to the Judge in that Court."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"Do you mean to say that a second Judge should be appointed permanently?"

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"If my other proposals are accepted, it may be necessary to do so; but otherwise it may be for a year. As regards clauses (a) and (c) it may appear contradictory on the face of it; but I will explain why I have put it in that way. This Council, after the previous sanction of the Government of India, has power to amend the City Civil Courts Act, so as to increase its jurisdiction. That Act itself says that it does not affect the jurisdiction of the High Court on the original side, so that people who have suits to file may go either to the City Civil Court or to the High Court. All people can go to the High Court and in the case of those who go to the High Court, the punishment will be by way of costs. I say that the original jurisdiction of the City Civil Court may be raised by allowing suits not exceeding Rs. 5,000 in value to be filed in that Court. The present jurisdiction of the City Civil Court is Rs. 2,500 and this jurisdiction was fixed when the district munsif had jurisdiction up to Rs. 2,500. It will be within the recollection of the Council that in the year 1916 we raised the jurisdiction of the munsif to Rs. 3,000. The idea underlying the original limit, so far as the City Civil Court is concerned, was that it should be the same as the limit of the district munsif. I do not think I need trouble the Council with any elaborate remarks. There may be various difficulties that might arise if the original jurisdiction of the City Civil Court is not raised, so as to make it concurrent with that of the district munsif. For there might be questions as to which Court is the superior Court for the purpose of trial and whose decision will have a binding effect—whether that of the district munsif or that of the City Civil Court. Undoubtedly the City Civil Court presided over by a judge of a greater standing should not have forced upon it the res judicata with regards to decisions of district munsifs; whereas if the limit of the City Civil Court is not raised, the decision of the district munsif might have a binding effect.

RESOLUTION RE AMENDMENT OF THE MADRAS CITY CIVIL COURT ACT, 1892. 125

"The object of the City Civil Court Act was to take small cases away from the High Court so as to give relief to the High Court and also to the litigant public to whom litigation in the High Court is costly. The suits in the City Civil Court are suits mainly concerning houses. A house worth Rs. 2,500 in the year 1892 is now worth much more, as the value of property has risen. While the value of the rupee has gone down, the value of houses has gone up. What was worth Rs. 2,500 in 1892 is now worth Rs. 5,000. It is the market value of houses that is the basis for the valuation of suits in Courts, and therefore we are not doing anything wrong, if we give effect to the resolution that I have moved. We will be simply restoring the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court, by raising the value of suits to Rs. 5,000. That is really on account of rise in the value of house property which has been going on. Therefore, we are not doing any violence, if we raise the pecuniary limit of suits filed in the City Civil Court, because by so doing we will be simply restoring the limit which was fixed for the City Civil Court in 1892. I may at the same time say that it will give considerable relief to the High Court. Suits which would have been filed in the City Civil Court are now filed in the High Court. At I find that about 100 suits are filed in the High Court—suits of the value of Rs. 5,000. At least half of them would have been filed in the City Civil Court if the market value of houses had not risen. Therefore, by giving effect to the resolution that I have proposed, we will be giving relief to the High Court. Moreover, litigants cannot afford to have the costly machinery provided in the High Court; they have also to face the delay in the High Court, as the duration of contested cases in the High Court is nearly three or four times that of the City Civil Court, and they do not get that speedy justice which they should get. By taking away the small cases from the High Court, it will not be necessary to keep up the same number of costly judges. We will be giving relief to the poor litigants also; we will be restoring the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court and we will be reducing the expenditure of the High Court. It will be feasible for the Government not to continue the doubtful practice of appointing temporary judges. As regards clause (c) which relates to suits from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 10,000 in value, the High Court, as it is now constituted, has no power to transfer its suits on its own motion, except those cases which are brought up in the Court of Small Causes; it cannot transfer its own suits to other courts. Therefore, I say that the Government may be pleased to recommend to the Government of India to take into consideration the desirability of amending the Madras City Civil Court Act. It may not be possible for this legislature to amend the Act, to give that power to the High Court, because the High Court's power is derived from an Act of Parliament and it is only the Government of India who can do it. That is why I make the suggestion in clause (c). The High Court is not bound to transfer its suits; it is only a permissive provision that I suggest. If we have an enabling clause, enabling the High Court to transfer simple suits to the City Civil Court, it will relieve the High Court. It will save the unnecessary expenditure to the litigants and will enable them to get speedy justice, because the trial in the High Court is very prolonged for some reason or other, while the trial of suits in the City Civil Court is speedy. I suggest that both these amendments may be accepted. I only ask the Government to make a recommendation. I am not proposing any violent change; I am, on the other hand, asking, by the first clause, by clause (a) to restore the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court and by clause (c) to give relief to the High Court. As regards clause (b) the principle of it has been already accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapathi Raju seconded the resolution.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"Your Excellency, the resolution proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar covers a pretty wide field, and the questions raised by him are not of equal interest or importance. So in dealing with it, I propose to take up first the suggestions which seem to be of lesser import, and having disposed of them, I will deal with the issue raised in clause (a) which deserves greater attention."

"The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar apparently does not wish to press the question raised in clause (b) except to say that the recent appointment of a Judge of the Court of Small Causes to do work in the City Civil Court only for three months seems to be hardly an adequate relief. That point was carefully considered by the Judges of the High Court. It was on their recommendation that the appointment was made for three months, and judging from the state of arrears in the City Civil Court, the Government anticipate that the appointment of an additional judge for this period will probably restore the work of the City Civil Court to its normal condition; but if it does not, we will either continue the term of the appointment or later on make a similar appointment whenever it is necessary."

"The proposal made in clause (c) is to give power to the High Court to transfer to the City Civil Court any suit not exceeding Rs. 10,000 in value. I would first of all like to impress upon Honourable Members of this Council that the object with which the City Civil Court was originally established was 'to relieve Judges of the High Court of such petty cases as they do not think it desirable to call up for trial themselves.' These are the words used. I am not aware of the details of the original cases coming before the High Court. I should think that a great majority of them would be below Rs. 10,000 in value on the original side. Anyhow, it seems to me that we can hardly call cases between Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 in value petty cases. This suggestion made by the Honourable Member contravenes the original intention with which the Court was established. It seems also to be inconsistent with the ordinary principle that a higher Court may transfer suits to the lower Court which are within the pecuniary limit of the lower Court's jurisdiction. The High Court is given power under section 16 to transfer suits to the City Civil Court. But those suits must be within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the City Civil Court, which is Rs. 2,500. The proposal made in this clause seems to be rather inconsistent with that made in clause (a) because it really connotes that the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court would have to be raised according to the ordinary principle to Rs. 10,000. The proposal has never been suggested by the High Court with whom the Government have from time to time discussed various suggestions with regard to the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court. I do not think it is likely to commend itself to the High Court or to the public or possibly to the Bar as a whole. I am rather surprised to hear the argument of the Honourable Member advanced in favour of the suggestion that litigants do not get speedy justice in the High Court and would probably have their cases more promptly disposed of in the City Civil Court. That argument seems to be directly opposed to the argument put forward not only by him but by other non-official members in the debate on the resolution to reduce the number of Judges in the High Court when they complained that the Judges of the High Court were doing their work a great deal too quickly.

"Having disposed of clauses (b) and (c) I now come to clause (a), which suggests that the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court should be raised to Rs. 5,000 or at least to Rs. 3,000. I may say that both these suggestions have been seriously examined by this Government in consultation with the High Court, with the result that neither of them has been adopted. There are two main considerations which weighed with the Government in coming to this decision. In the first place, it seems to us that the public would not appreciate being driven to any inferior forum unless there was compensating advantage such as cheapness in litigation. We are advised that, on the average, having regard to institution fees in the City Civil Court, the cost of suits between Rs. 2,500 and Rs. 3,000 would be greater in the City Civil Court than in the High Court.

"The next point is that the file in the City Civil Court is as heavy as a single judge could manage. We have had, as I have already observed, to appoint an additional judge for a short term. It is pretty clear that if we are to add further to its file either by raising the jurisdiction to Rs. 3,000 which will involve about 70 extra suits, or to Rs. 5,000 which will mean 150 or file of the Court, which now stands between 500 and 600 suits a year, and involves a great deal of extra work in the way of execution petitions. The appointment of a second judge is not in our opinion likely to have any effect in appreciably reducing the work of the High Court on the original side and would not enable us to effect any reduction in the number of judges in the High Court on that account, so that that arrangement would not tend to any economy.

"It seems, therefore, that the proposal of the Honourable Member would neither be popular nor would it be in the interests of economy. I am perfectly well aware that the jurisdiction of Rs. 2,500. The Honourable Mover suggested that certain difficulties may arise, if the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court is not brought into harmony with that of the district munsif. He has raised the question of res judicata. I may tell him that we have already considered that matter. I do not pretend to be a lawyer—I have been advised by the Advocate-General that the rule of res judicata requires that the first Court, the trying Court, should be competent to try the second suit, in which the question in issue was raised; and he has also advised us in regard to this matter that the decision of the district munsif would be res judicata in the City Civil Court; and the decision of the City Civil Court in suits up to Rs. 2,500 and of the High Court in suits between Rs. 2,500 and Rs. 3,000, which the High Court alone are able to try, would be res judicata in the district munsif's court, so that there will be no difficulty as apprehended by the Honourable Mover. I may say in general that the question of the jurisdiction of the City Civil Court is one of which the High Court is thoroughly cognisant and the Government have discussed it with them on more than one occasion and gone over all the matters which have been raised by the Honourable Mover, except the last. So that we may leave it to the Honourable Judges to come forward with any proposals which they may consider necessary. In the circumstances I have stated I do not think it is advisable for us to press them to consider the proposals which have been suggested by the Honourable Mover."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I think that this is a resolution which will have a very far-reaching effect in connexion with the commercial community. I would certainly not appreciate suits up to Rs. 10,000 being referred to the City Civil Court for disposal. I would suggest that, before any step is taken in this direction, the proposal should be submitted to the Chamber of Commerce, the Southern India Chamber of Commerce and the Madras Trades Association for their views before this Council makes any attempt to legislate on this matter. I therefore suggest to the Honourable Mover to withdraw his motion for the present; it is only fair that he should allow such bodies to have their say."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I am quite willing to accede to the suggestion of the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser, especially in view of the fact that the Honourable Member in charge of the portfolio doubts whether the idea contained in the resolution would be popular. I am glad that he attaches great faith to the opinion of the High Court, and also he thinks that, if there is anything in it, the High Court will move in the matter. I dare say that all wisdom is not centered in the High Court; there may be some wisdom left elsewhere. I will certainly take an early opportunity of ascertaining the opinion of the bar on this matter. I am only asking in clause (a) for the restoration of the original jurisdiction of the City Civil Court. If the Government consider the matter from the standpoint I have put forward, they will see that, owing to the rise in the market value of houses, suits in regard to houses which would be ordinarily tried in the City Civil Court are now being tried in the High Court. A number of suits up to Rs. 5,000 filed in the High Court is about 250, and the number of suits between Rs. 5,000 and Rs. 10,000 is 115. As regards suits between Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 2,500, it will be less than 100. I think, therefore, we will be affording greater relief to the High Court. I am also sure that the people will welcome my proposal generally, though not unanimously. I am glad that I have had this opportunity of ventilating this matter. Out of deference to the suggestion of my Honourable Friend, I do not press this resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE STEPS TO PREVENT IMPORTATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES FROM CEYLON.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"Your Excellency, the resolution that stands in my name runs as follows:—

"VII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that necessary steps be taken to prevent the importation of plague, small-pox and other infectious diseases from Ceylon."

"In this connexion I beg to make a few observations.

"The Honourable Members of this Council will doubtless remember that the question of restrictions imposed on Indian passengers proceeding to Ceylon and the inconveniences and hardships they are put to at the Ceylon quarantine camp at Mantapam has been the subject of lengthy discussions in this Council on various occasions. In spite of the repeated representations made, the Ceylon Government have not been kind enough to withdraw or relax the restrictions imposed on our Indian passengers proceeding to Ceylon. The Honourable Members will also remember the remark made by the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman during the debate on my resolution brought in April last. 'I have not heard of any case of plague,' said the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman, 'brought from Ceylon at India and if the Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad has any precise information on the subject I shall be very glad to consider it.'

"At that time I brought to the notice of this Council instances of two imported cases of plague from Colombo, one at Tanjore and another at Dhanishkodi. Now my Lord, I have authoritative information from Ceylon that 22 cases of indigenous plague and 29 cases of smallpox were recorded in one particular place called Nawalapatiya. On the whole, 114 cases of plague were recorded in the last three months from April to June and in the island itself the number of plague and smallpox cases recorded during the said three months are 141 and 147 respectively. From this the Council will observe that Ceylon is not the paradise that it is so often represented to be and that unfortunately the place has become infected. At this stage I am sure the Council will agree with me that there is no necessity for the Government of Ceylon to make any fuss in keeping the Indian passengers under strict observation in Mantapam quarantine camp. It is all well and good to do so if their place were free from infection. When both the places are infected, where is the necessity for quarantining the Indian passengers going to Ceylon? If I am not out of the way, I should like to express my regret that, even though the Government promised to relax to a certain extent the restrictions imposed by permitting the Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars to grant certificates of identification for passengers proceeding to Ceylon, no advance has been made in that direction as yet.

"To return to the subject proper, I beg to suggest that necessary arrangements should be made with the Government of Ceylon to construct a quarantine camp at Talaimannar and get the intending passengers to India to undergo observation in the camp before they embark for India in the same way as the Ceylon Government do in the Mantapam quarantine camp, as it seems to me that while the Ceylon Government are so very anxious to prevent the importation of plague and other infectious diseases from India, it is but right and proper that our Government also should take such steps as may be necessary to prevent the importation of infectious diseases from Ceylon. With these few observations I commend my resolution with the full hope that the Government will give its best attention to protect its subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Your Excellency, I rise to second the motion; but before doing so, I wish to congratulate the Honourable Mover on the bold stand he has taken for his brethren and sufferers in the Madras Presidency. He was referred to yesterday as a religious fighter. I find that he is a fighter for the self-respect and the general rights of the people—a fighter for the relief of the people. He has put his claim for the relief mentioned in this proposition on two important grounds. The first is a sanitary one—that we must escape from plague and other diseases which may be imported from Ceylon and elsewhere. Incidentally, he has pointed out that, by enforcing quarantine measures, we give an opportunity to the Ceylon Government to get wiser. Indians have still some idea of self-respect left. If the Ceylon Government can put our passengers to indignity and trouble the Indian Government can retaliate. The Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar manfully advocates a process of retaliation and I congratulate him on his taking such a bold stand.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES FROM CEYLON.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“Your Excellency, the resolution on the paper says ‘that necessary steps be taken to prevent the importation of plague, smallpox and other infectious diseases from Ceylon.’ I expected the Honourable Mover and the Honourable seconder to give the Council some information about the volume of the importation of plague, smallpox and other infectious diseases from Ceylon into India and how they considered that the arrangements in force in this Presidency were not enough to prevent such importation and how these arrangements could be improved. The Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar has devoted the greater portion of his speech to the measures which the Ceylon Government are taking for preventing the importation of infectious diseases from this country. I am not here to defend that Government. Assuming that the Ceylon Government are putting vexatious restrictions on our people going into Ceylon, am I to understand that that is any justification for our imposing equally vexatious restrictions upon people coming from Ceylon.”

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—“Yes.”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“I knew you would say that. That would be all right, if it is the Ceylon people that come to India. Ninety per cent of the people who go to Ceylon or come from Ceylon are our own people. The real Ceylon people that come and go are very few. Most of the people who suffer and about whose suffering the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar is complaining are people from southern India who go to Ceylon. When they come back, they are all right. They come in easily; we do not impose restrictions when they come back. In order to ease the situation, the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar says: Let us increase the vexatious restrictions upon our people by putting on a second set of over to Ceylon for livelihood will have vexatious restrictions to undergo when he goes to Ceylon, and again, when he comes back. The Honourable Member suggests these restrictions not for the purpose of safeguarding the health of southern India, but as a sort of reprisal. This is very much like cutting off one's nose to spite one's face. I am, however, prepared, if it is very great, and the existing rules are not enough—I am prepared to make the rules as rigorous as may be necessary for the purpose. But no such information has been given. I find that people coming from Ceylon, come in two ways; they come in by the sea route to Tuticorin or by the Talaimannar route. Those who come by sea are governed by rules that apply to all ships. Those rules provide for the isolation of ships when there are infectious cases on board. In regard to those who come in by Talaimannar, not only do the Ceylon Government examine them at Talaimannar, but our medical officers examine them at Danushkodi, and anyone suffering from a contagious disease is detained. If it could be said that these rules of ours are insufficient and that diseases are imported into southern India, I will have the Surgeon-General inquire into the matter and make the rules more stringent. But I would not advocate the rules being made more stringent by way of reprisal because it will make the hardships of our people greater than they are. This point was brought to my notice at the Mandapam camp when I had a talk with a countryman of mine. There were several Muhammadans detained there; they admitted that they were treated kindly and that the Ceylon Government had to detain them for four days more. I asked them whether it would do if we imposed similar restrictions on our own side. But they said ‘no, we hope that you won't detain us one week both when we go and when we return.’ These are the people that go and return. I would not advise a policy of reprisals in this matter; not that I consider that per se a policy of reprisals is bad. I have no objection to see whether the rules in force at our end of the border to prevent infection are satisfactory or not. If they are not satisfactory let us, for the sake of public health in southern India, make them more satisfactory. I hope my Honourable Friend will agree to my point. I am prepared to do it in the interests of public health if he wants it.”

At this stage, the Council adjourned for a short interval and re-assembled after the interval at 3 p.m.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—“I want to say only one word in connexion with this resolution. Of course, the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar said why should we trouble our own men in this matter? But what I wanted to place before the Government was there was a statement made sometime back by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew that the system would be revised by the Ceylon Government after a certain time had elapsed for which they had bound themselves to abide by certain arrangements. This opportunity is taken to see that relief is given to the people that go from here. If as a retaliation it will be only additional trouble put upon our own men, it is time to see that the ordinary precautions that we take here are enough to prevent any importation of plague and other diseases, and to urge that the same measures ought to be enough for them.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBİ MARAKKAYAR :—“Your Excellency, I noted carefully the remark made by the Honourable Member in charge of the portfolio. I am not unmindful of the effect of this resolution. It will be a double penalty to the Indians only, if it is accepted by the Council. The Indians going from here are punished by the Ceylon Government and on coming back they will get another punishment. It is not my intention that I should get my own people double punishment. My object in bringing this resolution is due to a certain principle. It is a great sanitary principle. We will find after all very few people going from India to Ceylon as merchants and coming back. If a disease is imported from Ceylon, the Honourable Member in charge of the portfolio will agree with me that it will spread throughout the whole of India and it will be a serious loss to India if the disease spreads. Secondly I have my grievance, as the Honourable Members of this Council will feel, in regard to the injustice done by the Ceylon Government in insisting upon the Indian passengers proceeding to Ceylon being kept under quarantine and being put to all sorts of hardships at the Mandapam camp by the Ceylon authorities. We have been clamouring against these arrangements and asking this Government to get the hardships relaxed; but nothing is forthcoming. As I said in last April, there was some suggestion made by the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman. It is nearly four months now and no remedy yet. Another point is why not we take retaliatory measures in getting a camp constructed at Dhanushkodi and getting the people coming from Ceylon detained under quarantine whether Indians or Ceylonese. That was my intention in bringing this resolution. If I brought the same old resolution to relax the restrictions at Mandapam, perhaps I may be out of order, because I brought it up only in last April. As the Honourable Member in charge of the portfolio said that he would inquire carefully into the question and do what he could in the matter, I am sure that what he said will not be, as it is has hitherto been, overlooked, and I hope that by his inquiry he will also see that the restrictions the Ceylon Government imposes are unjust.”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“I beg the Honourable Member's pardon; I did not say anything about inquiry into the matter of people going to Ceylon, but I will certainly inquire into the rules we have in force to prevent diseases coming in, to see that they are adequate; if not we will strengthen them. I am sure the Honourable Member will excuse me for this correction.”

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBİ MARAKKAYAR :—“I do not press the resolution in view of the assurance given by the Honourable Member.”

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE OMISSION OF STANDING ORDER REGARDING REPRESENTATION OF DIFFERENT CLASSES IN THE SERVICE.

The following resolution of which notice had been given by the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramauja Achariyar was not moved :—

“VIII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that Standing Order No. 128, clause (2), is ultra vires and should be deleted from the published edition of the Board's Standing Orders.”

RESOLUTION RE ADMISSION OF STUDENTS INTO THE INTERMEDIATE COURSE.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—“May it please Your Excellency, the resolution which I have the honour to move runs as follows :—

‘IX. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the Syndicate of the Madras University be asked to consider that the deficiency in the School Final examination of one mark and less in English or any other subject be treated as not unfitting boys for the Intermediate course when they have taken more than the required marks in the other subjects and that this in any case be made the rule in the case of boys from recognized institutions which have been doing well in English during the last five years.’

“My Lord, I have to premise by saying that the resolution is intended to apply only to the Secondary School Leaving Certificate examination for 1918. I propose to confine the resolution to the results of 1918. That was what was intended by the resolution and the last portion of sub-inspectors are not posted to the districts in which they are born. They must have naturally relations and must be capable of being influenced and even though there are exceptional sub-inspectors who may stand against all influences and relationships, it is not proper that they should be tried in such places."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"What does the Honourable Gentleman mean by native district?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The district in which he is born. It may be very well argued that people should be tried in their own districts to see whether influence affects them, to know whether confidence can be reposed in them. Very well, it is not this kind of officers that should be put to these tests whatever may be the truth of the biblical allusion to Adam and Eve being put in the garden. Whatever it is, here it is a question of securing conviction and imprisonment, and influence may well be brought to bear upon them and it is only proper that these officers are not exposed to such influences. I understand that recently there has been a tendency to post sub-inspectors to the districts in which they are born and the objection raised is not treated as of any value. I only press that the Government may as a rule discourage this and avoid people being tried like that. I beg that the resolution may be accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"I second this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar has moved that the posting of sub-inspectors and higher officers of Police to their native districts should be thoroughly discouraged and he has defined the term native district as the district in which they were born. I think perhaps I had better take the case of the sub-inspectors first. The idea all along has been to group this section of the force by districts. And the Police Commission recommended in paragraph 60 of their report that sub-inspectors should be borne on the district list and promoted within their districts. The Government of Madras have developed this instruction, as it is proved by experience that sub-inspectors get contented when they are serving in their own district than elsewhere. The rules governing the appointment of sub-inspectors have been framed in accordance with these views and men are selected for these appointments by district committees with the help of non-official training to the districts from which they were raised. If the principle of this resolution is adopted, it will be impossible to post a Ganjam man to Ganjam, or a Malayalee to Malabar or a South Kanara man to South Kanara; and I would ask Honourable Gentleman to consider the great difficulty that will be experienced if only outsiders are posted to these districts. I remember the late Mr. Vengail Kunhi Raman Nayanar in this Council protesting against the importation of outsiders to South Kanara because he said they had no knowledge of the language and customs there. I remember a debate in this Council in 1915 which was led by the Honourable Mover himself in which the efficiency of sub-inspectors and the necessity of sympathy between them and the people was strongly impressed on Government by many speakers. After all, it is efficiency we are striving after and we believe that the best way of carrying out the object is the principle which we have adopted. No doubt it involves risks that certain men will abuse the confidence reposed in them on account of their influence in the district of their domicile. But we do not consider that the risk is great and that we need make any amendment in our rules in the manner suggested."

"The Honourable Member has not made much reference to the higher officers of Police, and I do not know whether he intended to press that part of his resolution. Now I will say there are two general points in this matter. One is that these Inspectors and Deputy Superintendents are posted by the Inspector-General and Government respectively and are liable to districts is not very great. Probably it may happen more frequently in the case of Inspectors, but in the case of Deputy Superintendents the number of such occasions is probably inappreciable. I want also to point out that the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar's definition of native district is not one that is contemplated by any rule in the Public Service Conduct rules. The fact that a man is born in a district is no criterion that he wields influence in it. We all know there are many cases where owing to family accidents a man is born in a district to which he does not belong and it very frequently happens that he has no relation in that district. The criterion in the rules is the holding of property. That is the only criterion the Government recognize. Now even in regard to officers of the Revenue Department who are on the same grade as Police Inspectors, that is the Tahsildar or Deputy Tahsildar, the only order is that they shall not serve in a taluk in which they own land. The Honourable Member would have it that the policeman should not serve in any district in which he is born. He would impose far more severe restrictions on the Police officers than on the Revenue officers. Besides, the holding of land in a district cannot be put forward as a restriction in the same way in the case of a Police officer as it can be put forward in the case of a Revenue officer because in their ordinary official capacity the Revenue officers have everything to do with the disposal of land. I do not think, Your Excellency, that this is a great evil that has to be remedied as suggested in this motion. It is a question of balance of advantage. There may be some cases in which the privilege is abused, but on the whole it seems to Government that the advantage of not placing any restrictions on policemen in this respect is considerably more than the disadvantages pointed out by the Honourable Member. In these circumstances and in view of what I have said I hope he will not press the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SADASIVA BHAT:—"Your Excellency, I wish to offer a few observations on this resolution. As the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman remarked, after the late Mr. Kunhiraman Nayanar, last year I also protested against the importation of men from other districts into Malabar and South Kanara. We in Malabar and South Kanara especially know the disadvantages that will result if this resolution were adopted. In the first place, the policemen should know the language of the district and Kanarese is spoken only in South Kanara and Malayalam only in Malabar. While Police officers in Malabar come from all other districts, they will not know the vernacular of our districts and necessarily this resolution will tend to lower the efficiency of police work in these districts. It is from that point of view I oppose this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Your Excellency, so far as the definition of the word 'native' is concerned, I said not only 'born' but also 'having relations in the district.' Of course I referred to cases not of officers circuiting who probably reside in one place and then change to another. I never meant to refer to such people. I meant to refer to people who had relations and close ties in the districts in which they were born. I included relations also in my definition. The observation I made therefore will apply. But I am not going to divide the Council on this matter. What I do say is that so far as the reference made to the Police Commission report is concerned, my humble submission is, and I dare say the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman will go into it, it applies only to the posting of people to districts which may be contiguous or to places where they know the customs and manners. I do not know whether they restrict it to districts where they have relations. That is a matter which deserves to be looked into. I am not myself prepared to make a definite statement on it, but I say it will be too much to expect officers of this class to be posted to districts where they were born. I do not think the observations made by the Hon'ble Mr. Bhat apply in this case. I do not see how a Malabar man cannot be posted to South Kanara, and how a South Kanara man cannot be posted to Malabar. I do not want to divide the Council. I say under the circumstances it will be only proper to consider my suggestion as regards the posting of sub-inspectors. As regards higher officers the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman has said that the Inspector-General is posting them only to places outside their districts. If the principle applies to them, it applies to the others. I do not press the resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE EXTENSION OF THE SYSTEM OF NON-OFFICIAL CHAIRMEN AND PRESIDENTS IN CERTAIN DISTRICTS.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The next resolution is as follows:—

'XI. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the chairmen of the municipal councils and the presidents of taluk and district boards of the districts of Madura, Ramnad and Tinnevely be all ordered to be non-officials, whether elected or nominated, as the Government may decide in each case.'

"This resolution also does not want much of argument from me for the Government to accept it. The wording is clear and the present circumstances are clear also. And if under the Reform scheme we are very soon to hand over the administration of local self-government to non-official hands, it is time that the matter is taken up immediately and I think this Government should work in this direction till another Government takes charge. Well, anyway, they should try to keep the people absolutely marched up properly to take charge of the Government when the opportunity comes. Of course this is not a question which has been before this Government only now. We have been urging it and though the Government were crying a halt, we have found they were prepared to take steps unexpectedly even to the surprise of this side of the Council, to see that non-official presidents were put in charge of district boards even. My complaint is not that, according to the previous views and opinions, the Government have not been trying to add to the non-official presidents, presidents of district boards and municipal councils. But my submission is this resolution comes at a time when almost the views of all are unanimous in the opinion that local self-government must be pushed as far as possible. Under the present circumstances what I ask them is only a very small portion of that, that in the case of the southern districts of the Presidency all the presidents of taluk boards and district boards and the chairmen of municipal councils may be non-officials. I do not want to fetter the Government's discretion in allowing elected presidents or chairmen or nominated presidents or chairmen."

"It will be too late in the day to place facts and figures before the Government to show that there are people who can take charge of these functions in the district and taluk boards and municipal councils say in districts like Ramnad and Madura. We have got a number of municipal

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar ; [15TH AUGUST 1918.
Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

councils in Madura and Tinnevely and only one municipal council in Ramnad, of course two now. In the Madura district already more than three municipal councils have the right to elect their chairmen. In the case of Madura municipality, the Government have been permitting official chairmen also to be elected. My request will therefore only be no more to allow officials to apply for these places, so that non-officials and retired officials may come in, may be allowed to be selected by the council. Of course, three more councils have got the right to elect chairmen, like Dindigul, Bodianayakanur and Kodaikanal, and they are constituted in places where there are people to fill the office. There are principal District Munsifs' courts, Divisional offices, etc.; and they will be able to have non-officials who are available to take charge of these offices as presidents. In fact I know the condition of each one of these districts and the areas where these taluk boards and district boards and municipal councils are. I can say with a certain amount of certainty that people will be available to fill the office of president. But I may not be able to assert that with certainty in the sense it would be recommended by the Collectors. People will be available if they are allowed to be elected. And therefore it is I have been very careful about the words, for it may be election or nomination that is allowed for these taluk boards and municipal councils. If the Collectors think that if election is given the proper sort of men may not be available, have recourse to nomination, I do not say that the views of the collector should be crossed or that nomination should not be allowed. Therefore it is that I have worded the resolution carefully. But if it is said that persons are not available I oppose that statement. I ought not to fail to notice that about three years back one taluk board president's place in Tinnevely and one taluk board president's place in Madura were thrown open to nominated presidents. And in these cases the administration reports of the two districts will prove that the people nominated have more than satisfied the Government in their expectations. It may be that not having been given the idea clearly, Collectors have not been finding out the proper persons. And that may be the reason that they did not voluntarily come forward to make a request or proposal to Government or it may be a question of their not moving about to know that there are persons willing or available or they might be indifferent. But I have no doubt that if specific request or order goes from the Government, it will be possible for officers there to find and for the Government also to satisfy themselves that men are available to take charge of these boards.

"What is now being done is: if there is an official president, the franchise that is conferred on the people for election ordinarily is not being exercised as enthusiastically as it ought to be. When non-official presidents or chairmen take charge of these boards, the franchise given to the various people for electing members to these boards and councils is seen to be exercised with greater enthusiasm and care and there is more competition than ordinarily. I know that since the taluk board president of Madura took charge there has been greater activity shown in the election. I, therefore, submit, My Lord, that the question of putting non-official presidents in charge of these bodies ought not to be thought as coming a bit too soon. In Tinnevely, Koilpatti is one of the centres where there is a taluk board and there is no doubt that the landholders, lawyers and others there will be able to take charge of the administration of this body. Similar circumstances prevail in other places also. Therefore, My Lord, I submit it is now time that this step is taken so that there may be a real activity commenced early enough in the matter of local self-government. It may be that this activity is further developed when franchise is extended or when other circumstances happen. But it is now time that people would begin to realize that they have functions to discharge; and to place the local bodies in charge of non-official presidents is absolutely essential to start this idea, to really give them an impetus. And wherever it has been done it is seen in practical working that it has added to the vivacity of the work of rural bodies and municipal councils. Therefore, My Lord, I submit that the Government will be pleased to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"I second this resolution."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I need hardly assure the Council that the Government are entirely at one with the Honourable Member in desiring the substitution of non-official for official agency in the headships of local bodies. But I may point out that this resolution is something more than a recommendation that that policy should be carried out in these two districts. The recommendation is definite, that the chairmen of municipal councils and the presidents of district boards and taluk boards of the districts of Madura, Ramnad and Tinnevely be all ordered to be non-officials, whether elected or nominated as the Government may decide in each case. In other words it is a definite recommendation that in every municipal council where we have no non-official head the council should commit itself to the statement, that a non-official head is available, capable and willing to serve as head, and that we should appoint him. Of course, we have no means just now of judging whether that statement is correct whether in every one of these places there is a non-official available for the purpose; and I am therefore at some disadvantage in dealing with this resolution. The Honourable Mover has closer acquaintance with these districts than I can claim to have. But I would hesitate greatly to commit myself to the view that in every one of these local bodies, in these three districts where there are officials just now, they should be replaced by non-officials. It is not a question of putting the men gradually, but immediately just now, men willing, capable of being put in the place of officials. I think it is a matter for the council to consider whether it should commit itself to that view, on practically no definite information except the assurance given by the Honourable

15TH AUGUST 1918.] (Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

Member for whom we all have respect. But after all this is only an assurance that there are such men. He says "Put them in." It is not a question of our inquiring and seeing whether there are.

"Well let us take first, the municipal councils in these three districts. Now I have got here a list of eleven municipal councils in the three districts referred to by the Honourable Member—Madura, Ramnad and Tinnevely. In Bodianayakanur we have got a non-official chairman. It is true he is paid, but still he is a non-official. The Honourable Mover wants only a non-official. Bodianayakanur therefore complies with the Honourable Member's proposition. Dindigul has an elected non-official, Madura a paid chairman, an official. But here I would point out that the official has been chosen by the Municipal Council, that is to say, it is not a matter of Government putting in an official against the wishes of the council. But the council which is a big municipality felt the necessity of choosing somebody with official experience who can run the municipality. Therefore they chose a deputy collector, who has been doing by no means badly in the place. Government approved of it. So in Madura if he is an official, he is a man of the council's choice. Palni has a nominated non-official; Periyakulam has a nominated non-official. In Ramnad district, Srivilliputtur and Viruduppatti are the only two municipalities where there are revenue divisional officers as chairmen. Palamcottah, Tinnevely, Tuticorin, have all of them elected non-officials as chairmen. So out of eleven heads of municipalities in these three districts we have now eight non-officials, we have got one official who has been chosen by the local body concerned. I presume that we all have sufficient deference to the wishes of local bodies. If they want an official, we do not want to deprive them of that choice in a place like Madura, which really wants an officer of large experience. We have only two municipalities left to which the resolution can apply, namely, Viruduppatti and Srivilliputtur. In regard to Viruduppatti I would point out that this municipality came into existence only in September 1915. It has generally been the practice when a municipality is started to have it run by the revenue divisional officer for two or three years to allow it to settle down and gain some experience, and then we transfer it to non-official agency. I have no objection to inquire into the case of these two municipalities and ask the councils concerned whether they would like to have non-official heads, to ask the local officer of the Government, the Collector, who after all is our chief adviser, and under any changes, he will continue so to work—whether he considers that these two municipalities are fit to be allowed to have non-official heads. So far as the municipal councils are concerned the Council will see that we are by no means chary of substituting non-official for official heads, and we are prepared even in regard to the two remaining, to ask them if they would have non-official chairmen. At the same time I may at once inform the Honourable Member that if the councils should say, as some of them said, that they would prefer for the time being to be run by Divisional officers, I think it will be the duty of the Government to defer to their wishes. After all in these matters local bodies should have the preponderating voice in their own affairs. By all means we can have a general policy and try to run it. But it will be our duty also to defer to the wishes of local bodies as far as possible.

"I now proceed to the case of the local boards, the district and taluk boards of these districts. In regard to these I at once admit that we have not proceeded as far in the direction of substituting non-official for official headships of these boards, as we have been able to do in other districts, for instance, the district from which the Hon'ble Mr. Sadasiva Bhat comes. There the district board is presided over by a non-official and all the taluk boards are presided over by non-officials, and only the other day we gave permission to elect the president when the next vacancy arises. Again in South Arcot we have recently appointed a non-official to preside over the district board and two of the taluk boards have non-official presidents. So also can I mention a number of other places like that. If, therefore, we have not been able to go as far as the Honourable Member wishes in his three districts, I submit it is due to the fact that we have not been able, quite successful, in finding suitable non-officials for the purpose as we would wish; but the moment we find them, nothing would give us more pleasure than to proceed to carry out the policy about which there is really no difference of opinion. The difficulty is in finding the men.

"On this subject I will simply mention, just to prove how the Government have been proceeding in that direction—I will give you some figures which will show how things are going on. In the current year out of 72 municipalities in the Presidency, so many as 60 have non-official heads and only 12 have official heads and in two cases the officials were elected by the local bodies themselves, and in two others there are paid chairmen, the choice of the local bodies. So that out of 72 only 8 councils have nominated officials, in which Government bodies. Then again in regard to local bodies have taken up the responsibility of the choice of the head. Then again in regard to local bodies we see in the current year we have got 96 taluk boards of which 48 taluk boards have non-official heads. That is half the number. We have succeeded in substituting non-officials for official heads. That is half the number. We have succeeded in substituting non-officials for official heads in half of the taluk boards, and in regard to district boards the Honourable Member himself said that it was an agreeable surprise to him that the Government all at once put in four non-officials as presidents. It is not a new and sudden thing at all. It was done after considerable deliberation; and we have now added a fifth.

"I am simply mentioning all this to show that there is no question of the general policy at all, and we are carrying it out as far as possible and nothing will give us greater pleasure than to carry it out. When it comes to making changes in particular places, we are bound to satisfy ourselves that non-officials are available who can be put in, first are fit to be put in and secondly are willing to be put in. These two things are not quite synonymous. I have had instances where non-officials about whose capacity there can be no doubt—have said they would prefer not to be troubled in this matter. Again I have had instances of non-officials willing to be put in, but I thought it would be better not to put them in, in the interests of good administration. In the substitution of non-official for official agency in the headships of local bodies, it is a matter for your consideration if the Government are not well advised in proceeding with some care. If the council were now by one stroke to say that in these three districts every local body which has no non-official head now, is, in its opinion, fit to have a non-official put over it, and that the Government should immediately do it, I think, with all deference to my Honourable Friend, that that is a recommendation which it will be unwise for the Council to make. I think it is a matter which has to be left to the Executive Government of the day. It is our duty to substitute non-officials for officials when opportunity arises. I can assure the Honourable Gentleman that this matter is having our continuous attention. One of the things which we continuously bear in mind is this. In several places we have done it already, and I am sure several Honourable Members must now be aware that we are pursuing a pretty rapid policy in this respect. I would say in the interests of the success of that policy 'do not force the pace.' I do not think it will be good. It is only a question of a few years longer. Do not commit the council to any generalisation that a particular tract of country is immediately fit for a complete substitution of non-official agency. Even the Government of India in their latest resolution say in regard to the district and taluk boards of this Presidency—I trust Honourable Members will permit me to read that portion—

(Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.) [15TH AUGUST 1918.]

"The circumstances of district boards and of large subdivisional boards, such as those in Madras, are materially different from those of municipalities, since they need much more time and widely extended travelling on the part of the head of the board if the work is to be satisfactorily carried out. The Government of India would urge provincial Governments to arrange for the election of chairmen, wherever this is possible, and where this is not possible to encourage the appointment of non-official chairmen. When the chairmen is a non-official, however, they think it essential in regard to district boards and to such sub-district boards as deal with large areas that, as in the case of large cities, the ordinary official work should be largely in the hands of a special executive officer, whose appointment should require the approval of the Government and who should not be removed in ordinary circumstances without Government sanction. If such a board, wishing to save the expense of a special officer, or desirous of remaining under the presidency of the Collector or of one of his assistants, should wish to elect such an official as chairman, the Government of India think that its wishes might be acceded to, subject to the condition that the election should be made by the non-official members of the board and that it should be a special matter requiring confirmation by the Commissioner or some higher authority."

"So Honourable Members will see that the Government of India themselves do contemplate that in the Madras Presidency in the large areas of the district and taluk boards, these local boards may themselves wish to remain under official headship for the sake of saving themselves the trouble and expenditure of having an executive officer."

"Now, what we have done in regard to this proposal of a special executive officer is to refer it to all local boards for their opinion. Those opinions have not yet come. I took occasion during my recent tour, as the Hon'ble Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar will bear me out, to discuss this question with several district and taluk boards, and I was surprised to see a very strong consensus of opinion against the putting in of an executive officer; they say 'let us have a non-official who is capable of running the board; if we cannot have it, we do not want a non-official as a figure head, while the whole machinery is being run by an executive officer appointed by the Government. Many of the boards seem to think that this is some curious device for our keeping the machinery of local administration in our hands, while ostensibly giving it up to them. I am simply mentioning all these circumstances to show that this is not quite so simple a matter as my Honourable Friend may think. And while deferring to his wide experience of the three districts and intimate knowledge of them, I would most respectfully urge the Council not to commit itself to a recommendation like this, commit itself to a number of details in regard to a number of places. I think it would be an unwise commitment, and I trust the Council will leave it to the Government to pursue the policy which they have adopted and which in several places is being carried out. And I dare say that the districts of Madura, Ramnad and Tinnevely will in due course be in the same position as South Kanara, South Arcot or Malabar. I trust that this explanation would be deemed satisfactory by the Honourable Member and that he would not press us for a definite verdict in this matter just now."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"Your Excellency, I have been very glad to hear from the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar such detailed statement, but I should very much like him to go through the taluk boards. He talked of municipal councils. I thought he would deal with the taluk boards also."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I have merely supplemented what the Honourable Gentleman said in regard to those bodies."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"We have got in Madura the Dindigul Taluk Board, Usalampatti Taluk Board besides the Madura and Melur Taluk Boards. We have no non-official presidents in any of the other three taluk boards. The Hon'ble Mr. P. Rajagopala Achariyar has been quite clever in his method of putting it. I ask the question whether any offer was made to anybody whether he would be prepared to run these taluk boards as president, whether an attempt was made to ascertain if any persons in these taluk board areas could take charge of these as presidents."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I do not want to interrupt the Honourable Member, but probably I omitted to mention that these attempts that we were making have been made as early as March 1918 and Collectors were informed that the Government were anxious to appoint non-official presidents to as many taluk boards as possible and in response to this some communications have been received, but we have not their recommendations in all cases. That is where the difficulty comes. If the Honourable Member says that this or that man is fit and if we consider him otherwise, it is fair to the man that we should discuss him?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"In the course of my opening address I referred to the fact that sufficient intimation had not been given to the Collectors to find out the proper persons and also ascertain if they would be willing to accept. I was therefore so very particular to know it. But I am told that steps are taken in that way."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I only beg to submit the task has not been carried out in the spirit in which the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has been discussing to-day."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I was in great doubt whether this resolution ought to be allowed are not, whether it is a matter of general public interest or not. The rule has partly for its intention to prevent our going into personalities. We argue more or less on general principles. I should deprecate Honourable Gentleman pressing whether official inquiries had or had not shown whether there is any individual or the absence of any individual in particular cases suitable or not suitable for employment in this office. These are all confidential matters which it is undesirable to press beyond a certain point in public debates in Council, and I should suggest he will keep to the general principles."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I did not at all want to know any reference about any individuals. I only wanted to know whether general steps were taken. In fact I was not for asking anything."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Honourable Gentleman has been assured that steps have been taken."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I only beg to submit, my Lord, that if detailed inquiries are made, there will be no difficulty in securing the necessary persons and in view of the observations made by the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar I do not propose to divide the Council over this resolution. I withdraw it for the present."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE PUBLICATION OF VERNACULAR SCIENTIFIC PRIMERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"Your Excellency, the resolution which I have the honour to move runs as follows :—

"XII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government may be pleased to take steps to publish scientific primers in the vernaculars and to encourage their publication by making substantial pecuniary grants to authors and publishers and by prescribing such vernacular scientific primers as text-books to be used in schools and in any other manner they may deem fit."

"It is a very short resolution and I am going to be very short over it. There is not much new matter in this and I do not think we are at issue on the point. The only question is with regard to ways and means. It has been suggested to me, Your Excellency, that I might substitute the word 'or' for the word 'and.' I accept the suggestion made by substituting the word 'or' for the word 'and' in the third line. I know the difficulty of the Government in directly publishing scientific primers in vernacular. I have seen it stated that it is a matter more for private effort than for the Government. I acknowledge the weight due to that argument, and that is why I substituted the word 'or' in the resolution and therefore I confine my attention to the latter portion of the resolution."

"Making the public acquainted with western science and spreading the knowledge of western sciences must be admitted by all to be a very desirable and necessary object which the Government should encourage. What I wish to point out to the Government is it is not an easy matter for private effort to step in in this behalf and undertake the expense needed for such publications. If there was a great demand in the country for such vernacular literature, there will be no need to approach any one for help. In these matters, it is no use saying that there should be a demand for such literature. I think it is the privilege, and I may be permitted to say the duty of Government to create the demand by making the supply, because

140 RESOLUTION RE PUBLICATION OF VERNACULAR SCIENTIFIC PRIMERS.

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar; [15TH AUGUST 1918.
the President; Mr. Stone.]

after all knowledge has to be given. The duty of the Government is to impart education. In this way I say it is the duty of Government to create the demand for it and if we are going to wait for that demand in order to create the supply that day may never come. I think it is not a proper attitude to be taken that the Government should say that there is no demand for it. You must create the demand by making the supply.

"The next question is, how are we to make the supply? As I already said private effort in this direction can only be taken by teachers or professors. And they are unfortunately in this country so very ill-remunerated. It is a matter for regret that they cannot afford to incur the expenditure and risk of embarking on such a venture. It is only persons who actually deal with such questions that will be able to write and get such books published. Without mentioning names I may mention there is one gentleman who has earned the gratitude of the public by undertaking the publication of such scientific literature in the vernacular, and he has burnt his fingers very badly in connexion with it. He has incurred an expenditure, a poor teacher in the Christian College, of nearly Rs. 25,000 and odd, and he has not yet been able to reimburse himself even to the extent of even two-thirds of that amount. And it is, as I stated already, in encourage such publications. The books have been accepted on all sides by eminent people, professors and laymen, including very many great people, including His Excellency the Governor. His noble and patriotic effort in that direction has been recognized, and many people have certified that they are very good publications indeed and the Educational Department has rendered some service by prescribing some of the books as suitable text-books. But that does not satisfy the question at all. A few hundred copies he has been able to supply—600 or 700—will hardly suffice to meet the cost. As I stated these poor people alone can undertake the task and it is the duty of Government to make substantial grants for that. And unless that is done it is not possible to expect this branch of the work to progress. I therefore earnestly appeal to Your Excellency's Government to make substantial pecuniary grants wherever Your Excellency's Government are satisfied that the work is deserving of support. It is not in every case that I want support to be given but only where Your Excellency's Government are satisfied that the work deserves encouragement. I appeal to Your Excellency's Government that unless some substantial grants are made in such cases it is not possible to undertake such work. It is very necessary that such work should be encouraged. And unless they are also simple in their language and well illustrated and put the subject properly so as to catch the ignorant people and enable them to make them understand, the publications will not be of much use. To make such publications is a very difficult thing—to translate English ideas even in ordinary matters into the vernaculars is very difficult and to translate scientific language in a vernacular which will be really useful to the public is really a very difficult task and it is not a task which each and every one can undertake. And therefore it requires exceptional ability, and we do not find such exceptionally able people very much in the country. Therefore such effort ought to be greatly encouraged. I, therefore, earnestly expect, Your Excellency, this being one of the privileges of the Crown to make grants in aid of knowledge, for the spread of knowledge and for encouraging others in such matters to do so, that this resolution will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar:—"Your Excellency, I second the resolution. I fully agree with the principle underlying it. Let me take one instance. In a largely agricultural district, like mine it is important to adopt a method of spreading more up to date agricultural scientific knowledge. There I know the thirst for some education is so great that I have no hesitation in saying that such text-books as proposed will lead to a commendable closer association of the people with the Central Institute at Coimbatore. I think there is nothing like creating an interest in these matters among the classes to be directly benefited even from their early boyhood. No amount of bulletins without the creation of that same early aptitude can be of any real use. I admit there will be considerable difficulty in pitching upon what subject to select and how exactly to deal with them because of the want of uniformity in opinions and results, because of the varying conditions in different districts and especially as new knowledge is constantly being brought out. But I believe we have enough to make beginning. If however Government thinks it cannot agree to the immediate acceptance of the resolution I request it may be borne in mind and given effect to at the earliest opportunity."

His Excellency the President:—"I do not quite understand the form in which the Honourable Member wishes to move the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar:—"I shall omit the first portion."

His Excellency the President:—"Then it will run thus: 'This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the Government may be pleased to encourage the publication of scientific primers in the vernaculars by making substantial pecuniary grants to authors and publishers and by prescribing such vernacular scientific primers as text books to be used in schools and in any other manner that may be deemed fit.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. Stone:—"Your Excellency, the principal part of the resolution is this that the Government should encourage the publication of scientific primers in vernaculars by making substantial pecuniary grants to authors and publishers and by prescribing such vernacular scientific primers as text-books in schools. I am to say that the Government are not prepared to accept this resolution as it stands, I mean as it now stands, because the Government are prepared to accept the idea that they should encourage publication of suitable vernacular books in science as in other subjects. I do not think it is possible to accept the expression 'making substantial pecuniary grants to authors and publishers.' Nor should I be inclined to accept even the words 'by prescribing such vernacular scientific primers as text-books to be used in schools.' As regards the making of substantial pecuniary grants, when the expression comes to be interpreted by the Honourable Member in this specific instance, I find he has not in mind the taking of Government into confidence by any gentleman who proposes to publish books of this kind. He has drawn a harrowing picture of a gentleman publishing books of this kind as a sort of adventure. If that gentleman had consulted the department before publishing the books and asked what encouragement the Government would give him in that venture, I may venture to say that he would not have incurred this pecuniary loss. I think he should not have gone in this fashion that he did. It is not philanthropy to publish books. It is simply a business. I pointed out to him how it is that he lost his money, but he would not be warned; he has now got another book in the press which will also be a loss to him and I do not know how many books he has published since he began to bombard the Government with requests for pecuniary grants. Well, I have got great respect for the gentleman in question and he has the best possible motive. But I want these things to be put on a proper footing. It would not do to dole out money. If money is given to this gentleman to indemnify him for the loss he has sustained, it will encourage everybody to follow a similar course and there will be no end of the matter. I am anxious that teachers should not take such risks; teachers should not take to this course of dashing off text-books and publishing them at their risk and thus suffering loss; I do not like that. I have great sympathy for those teachers who burn their fingers in that way and I shall do all I can to prevent that. Teachers very often come to me and send in manuscripts of their books and ask for an opinion of them. I give them my opinion. Several typewritten copies of books are sent to me and I give them my own opinion or get the opinion of competent men and give it to them. What I do ask is that if there is going to be a pecuniary relationship between a publisher or an author and the Government there must be previous consultation and he should let the Government know what he is about. I would myself just say one other thing. There is no use lamenting even an unfortunate loss. I asked this very gentleman 'why don't you go to a publisher and ask him to take it at his risk?' He said 'I did, but no publisher would take it.' After that unbusinesslike thing I do not think he can complain against the Government. If his work was philanthropic, he must pay for his philanthropy, but if he has transacted a business he has done it unfortunately.

I have got only one other thing to say. As to prescribing books, we do not prescribe books more than we can help. That is an established principle of education in this Presidency. We do not say 'use this book or that,' but we give them wide choice in the use of text-books. Some of the books published by this gentleman are likely to have some advance as we have the syllabus of the first three forms of secondary schools printed and they are being scrutinized by a number of schoolmasters. So that I hope we shall have better defined courses of studies for these first three forms in science. And of course according to our rules those studies will be in the vernacular, and therefore I hope there will be greater demand for the scientific text-books already produced in the vernaculars. One further remark, and that is in view of the existence already of a certain number of vernacular text-books, no Honourable Member would want us to flood the market by prescribing any further series of text-books."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao:—"I would wish that the Council would consider the terms of the resolution as amended and see if it is not desirable to give support to that resolution. It is not now necessary to determine whether the adventures of the publishers were wise or not, as to whether they should or should not have consulted the educational authorities."

"The resolution is simply this: 'That the Government should encourage the publication of scientific primers by making pecuniary grants to authors and publishers and by prescribing such vernacular scientific primers as text-books to be used in schools and in any other manner they may deem fit.' The principle underlying this resolution is this: whether the Government are willing to encourage the publication of scientific primers or not. That is the principle underlying this resolution. The other suggestions made are questions of detail, questions of giving pecuniary grants, and of prescribing text books or in such other manner. It will be remembered that this question of imparting scientific instruction in vernaculars in schools has been before the public and the Government for several years. It is a question which has been agitated for several years and there is a volume of literature surrounding the subject. There was an interesting debate in the Imperial Legislative Council where this question was discussed. The Viceroy expressed his strongest sympathy with this question and expressed some sort of surprise that in schools in this country education is not being imparted in the vernaculars so far as scientific subjects are concerned. I think so far as the principle underlying it is concerned, it is quite essential that attempts should be made to improve the instruction in scientific subjects by giving it in vernaculars wherever possible. When any one asked for the improvement of such education the Government have been replying there were no proper text-books. Nobody has suggested that instruction ought not to be given in the vernaculars, but they have suggested that it will take some years, probably some decades, twenty or twenty-five years before an attempt can be made in that direction. Where are the text-books which can be supplied for the purpose of imparting instruction? In the absence of text-books your suggestion that education should be given in vernaculars cannot be accepted. That was what Government were saying. How is this going to be solved if attempts are not to be made for producing scientific primers? It is true that the Government have some difficulties of their own in starting upon that enterprise, but it is also necessary that present circumstances should be taken into consideration and some encouragement should be given to persons who wish to have such books published. That is all what the resolution suggests. It suggests that the publication of scientific primers should be encouraged."

142 RESOLUTION RE PUBLICATION OF VERNACULAR SCIENTIFIC PRIMERS.

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"The Honourable Mover wanted an assurance. I should be very glad to have the thing properly defined."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Is it not the duty of Government to undertake this important task? That is what the resolution suggests. We need not therefore be deterred by the other suggestions made as to the ways and methods to be adopted. But if at least the principle is adopted, I think we will make some headway."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"I wish to emphasise the point of view of the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao, namely whether it is not a legitimate expenditure of money to encourage the publication of scientific primers in vernaculars for the spread of scientific knowledge. I have very great sympathy with that desire. It seems that it is a perfectly legitimate if not a laudable expenditure of money, just in the same way as we spend money for the production of a Tamil or Telugu dictionary. In the same way the Government may spend a very small sum, it may be, on the extension of scientific knowledge in the vernaculars. A great deal has been said about a particular instance. I know something about it. I have great sympathy with Mr. Sitaramayya who has added a series of such books to the existing literature. I should like to point out that it has not been altogether a foolish undertaking. I happen to have some of the figures here—Malayalam, physiology primer, 500 were printed and 100 were sold. In Telugu, civics primer 14,000 copies were printed and all were sold. Telugu arithmetic primer, 5,000 have just been printed and 3,000 have already been sold. If you go through the list, I am sure you will find that it has not been a foolish undertaking. He has really accomplished a great deal, only that he has gone too far for him. It seems to me that the spread of knowledge of science in the vernacular is a most desirable thing and if the Government could in any way encourage any proper effort, it would only be doing what is altogether desirable. I therefore commend this resolution. I hope it will not be a definite refusal altogether. I trust the Government will consider whether this cannot be assisted in some way. I am quite aware that the Director has done a great deal in the way of encouraging this. But Government should go a little further in this direction. It is not a foolish undertaking. That is what I want to say."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I wish to give my whole-hearted support to this resolution. I am afraid that the matter has not been dealt with in its proper light by the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction. He paid too much attention to one individual case and went on stating that he had not approached the Government in proper time before he started on this venture and therefore never deserved any support. The issue before the Council is whether the State would or would not do well to help the preparation of scientific primers in vernaculars. There are two aspects to be considered, Your Excellency. There is a considerable demand now for vernaculars being made the media of instruction in the schools, and as was pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao, the stumbling block that is pointed out by the official exponents of the other view is, where are the text-books? And now when we ask why don't you help the publication of text-books, then what is the difficulty of the State listening in response to the matter? There is the question of diffusion of scientific knowledge among the masses. There are many millions in the country not literate in English who cannot possibly get any knowledge of English, even a primary elementary knowledge in English. What about those people? They must be helped to acquire scientific knowledge and the State should take upon itself the duty of actively assisting the publication of these scientific primers which contain some elementary scientific rules which ought to be within the knowledge of everybody, so that he may adjust himself in his relation to life. That is what it means and that general principle had not been dealt with at all by the Director of Public Instruction—whether it is desirable for the State to help these enterprises. They have done so already in the case of the Tamil and Telugu lexicons in the case of vernacular literature; the question is whether they would not be well-advised to assume responsibility for the diffusion of this useful literature, the diffusion of scientific knowledge in the country. It is in that view that I expect the Government to deal with this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO:—"My Lord, this subject of asking for the encouragement of the publication of scientific primers in the vernaculars was brought before this Council some years back. It is a matter well-known that unless some sort of help is given to the publishers, it is not possible to have scientific literature produced in the vernaculars and the diffusion of scientific knowledge made possible among the masses. No doubt the publication of books is a business of the publishers. But in the matter of educating the masses in scientific knowledge and also in propagating scientific knowledge among the people the Government must help as far as possible and they must also help and encourage the publication of scientific books in the vernaculars. The only way in which a large volume of scientific literature can be brought into existence in the vernaculars under the present conditions is by Government undertaking either to subsidize or to purchase some copies of these books and supply them to various schools and other educational institutions. It is said that, unless there is a demand, the supply will not be forthcoming. Of course it may be true in several other respects, but in a matter like this, a matter in which knowledge has to be imparted to the masses, means will have to be found for imparting such knowledge. And one way of diffusing scientific knowledge among the people is by encouraging a large production of scientific primers on popular subjects in easy vernacular language and supplying these books to all the schools in the mufassal and also as far as possible by prescribing those books in the lower classes as text-books so that students may easily catch those ideas early and learn scientific subjects. I therefore think, my Lord, that it is a legitimate charge upon the Government and the Government should find some means of helping these publishers, only such deserving publishers as the Government might think deserving of help. With these words I give my hearty support to this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"My Lord, the instance I mentioned, I mentioned only by way of illustrating the difficulty that lies before us, before people undertaking such publication. But, however, the Director of Public Instruction with that bureaucratic mind which is often associated with officials in this country said that if he had approached him before he would not have burnt his fingers but he had not approached him beforehand. Suppose he had approached him beforehand, what would the Director have said? 'Well, I will examine the books. Are they suitable or not.' Then if he found them suitable, he would advise him to go on. That is what I expect to be done. The Director of Public Instruction subsequently might consider that these books are suitable for school reading. So that we have the position, that he would have given consideration before, had he been consulted; but since the publisher in question committed the blunder of not consulting the Director of Public Instruction beforehand, the consideration he would have given before would not be given. What is the folly committed in this case? It is not at all a folly. He has in Your Excellency's words performed a noble and patriotic task. In the Madras Mail regarding these publications it is said 'the author has done everything to make the exposition of the subject easy.'

"I therefore what is the folly that has been committed? Not approaching beforehand the Director of Public Instruction. Therefore he committed a great sin. I ask Your Excellency's Government not to approach that question from that point of view. He has done a laudable work and certainly the Government cannot better spend the money which is committed to their charge than in performing this duty of helping such publications. I do not want to lay stress upon the personal aspect. I only mentioned it; but the Director of Public Instruction made a point of it and therefore I am obliged to revert to it. My point is, however, that public money should be spent in making grants to such authors and publishers who undertake the publication of such scientific primers, and I do not see what legitimate objection can be taken to such a proposition. So long as there is no objection, I must press it on the Government for adoption."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"I do not want to say that this gentleman has done a foolish act. But if he had come to me, I should have told him to go to a publisher. He would probably say 'no,' and I might have considered whether it was necessary to ask the Government to take it up. Such sort of things might have happened if he had come to me. It would not be merely to say whether a book was good or not. I would have advised him to attempt the thing without burning his fingers on it. Publishers publish books, some succeed, some others fail. They must take the risks. It is not the business of the schoolmaster to take risks. The schoolmaster has a wife and family, and it is not his business to go into publishing business. He cannot command the means of advertisement which is an important thing. That is why I blame him, this gentleman, of being so unwise as to embark on a business in which he could not succeed. The Hon'ble the Rev. Pittendrigh gave a list of his publications that have been sold. The peculiar fact about that is that the books that were sold were not scientific books. The books that were sold are books on civics, arithmetic, etc. Only science books are not sold. Vernacular arithmetic books do sell, but not vernacular books in science—these do not sell much. If the Government had given him money, he would not have sold any more books and therefore you do nothing more for the diffusion of scientific knowledge. People go on burning their fingers and then come to Government for help. At any rate, I cannot ask the Government to give money to anybody who undertakes to publish vernacular books if they do not come to the department beforehand and tell me what encouragement they expect. Well then, I must say again what I have often said, that scientific knowledge is not diffused so much by means of text-books—text-books have only a subordinate place—laboratories and demonstrators are what are required. Therefore I take this opportunity of making this suggestion that if Honourable Gentlemen are really interested in furthering the diffusion of scientific knowledge, they should get up something in the nature of extension lectures. They may make use of the apparatus in schools all over the country for the diffusion of elementary science. I venture to say that money spent in that way will be money better spent than providing money for text-books. If I were asked for an opinion, I should have no hesitation at all to ask the Government to find money for such an institution as that. One other little remark I must make, although I have made it many times, and that is that we do teach science in the lower classes in the vernaculars. It is only in the three higher classes, fourth, fifth and sixth forms, that boys have to learn science, like everything else, through the medium of English. It is a great mistake to suppose that there are no scientific text-books in the vernaculars. There are. The difficulty of teaching science in the vernaculars is not so much the difficulty of text-books. Text-book difficulty is a small matter. If once we decide to teach science in the three higher forms in the vernaculars, we shall have all sorts of outlandish Sanskrit words in the lessons that we might have to give."

The resolution as amended was put and lost.

The Council re-assembled at 11 a.m.

RESOLUTION RE THE INDIAN CONSTITUTIONAL REFORMS.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Before we proceed with the business of the day, I should just like to make a short statement to the Council on a matter which is of interest to them as well as to the Government. The Council are, no doubt, aware that the Government of India have called for the opinion of the Local Government on the joint report of the Secretary of State and the Viceroy; and probably, as Honourable Members are aware, in forming their opinions, the Government are taking pains to consult various bodies and individuals in the Presidency. It was suggested in the beginning of this session that we should have a special meeting of the non-official members of the Council to consider the report. A question was put to that effect on the question paper, and the answer of the Government was that there was no such intention at present. That remains the attitude of Government towards any discussion of the general report—that is, on the whole of the recommendations. At the same time, if there is any feeling on the part of any individual members, that there may be advantage in having a general discussion of the report and if they will be good enough to communicate with me, I will be glad to discuss it with them. So much with regard to the general discussion of the report. I mention that in order to put it aside for a moment after giving you that assurance.

"If any gentleman has got the report with him he will find that there is a special reference to the consultation of non-official members in paragraph 238, towards the end of the paragraph—that is the last sentence on page 115 of the ordinary large copy; Honourable Gentlemen will see this sentence—'On the publication of this report, we should like to see the lists discussed in the Provincial Councils and considered by the Provincial Governments, so that the committee may have ready at hand, considered criticisms upon the applicability of our suggestions to the circumstances of each particular province.' That is the reference to the lists of transferred subjects, of which there are two alternative lists in the appendix. Now there is no overwhelming necessity to have a meeting of the non-official members for this purpose. It is possible that each non-official member could form his own opinion and communicate his own criticism of these lists; on the other hand, it may be of public advantage that we should have a meeting of the non-official members of this Council for the purpose and that we should have some opportunity of hearing their views upon the different details of these two lists in a manner which would not be quite so easy in written communications. The question is how to find such an opportunity. It would be merely a meeting for an expression of views; it is not a meeting for coming to a decision by a majority of votes; it is a meeting to ascertain the general tenor of the views of the different sections of the non-official members. Views may generally vary as to the selection of transferred subjects. A good deal could be said in favour of certain subjects and vice versa. The question is how to find a suitable opportunity for such a meeting about it. The views of the Government will have to be formed before December. I think they should meet to-morrow morning. I do not think we will finish our business before the afternoon. We might meet to-morrow morning. Perhaps this hall will be too large for the purpose. We might meet at Government House and we can have a discussion."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Discussion of what?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The discussion of the lists of transferred subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"It is too soon to have a meeting to-morrow. We have to consult our constituents and consult other members, and therefore to-morrow morning will be too soon. This is a long report; we will have to digest it and consider the several aspects of it. I would request your Excellency to grant a day in November."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"A separate meeting will be better if your Excellency can come down from the hills. This is a matter which may be discussed in one day. The question is whether a general debate could not possibly be arranged. One member may give out his views and another might offer some enlightenment on those views. It will be necessary to take a vote to know the views of non-official members. A debate is certainly desirable. It is certainly better to set apart a day for it—certainly not to-morrow."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I do not think I have made myself quite clear. The views of the Local Government have to be sent to the Government of India before the 1st of November. The Honourable Gentleman has travelled over a number of points. The first point is to settle the date of the meeting and if we can settle that we can settle the character of the meeting."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Some day in October."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"The Select Committee on the Madras City Municipal Bill is likely to meet about the 23rd September. It will last for four days."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"If the Honourable Members would finish the work in four days, we shall be very lucky indeed. We should be fortunate if we finish our work in a month."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Why not have this meeting in the third week in September?"

16TH AUGUST 1918.] (The President; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Thonger;
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar;
Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar;
Sir Gordon Fraser; Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is not so much to give the Honourable Members an opportunity to publish their views—that is not the purpose of the meeting. The purpose of the meeting is to enable the Government to profit by a communication of the views of Honourable Members on these subjects. I do not even propose that this should be a public meeting. I think it is quite an open question whether this should be a public session. It is a meeting of the non-official members only. You will understand therefore if Honourable Gentlemen wish to have this opportunity, we will endeavour to arrange it."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"May I continue? I quite realize the responsible position offered to us to take us into the confidence of Government on a matter of such vital importance, and therefore it is best that we are allowed to discuss the matter amongst ourselves and then come to a conclusion as to what is the best plan. As the advice to be given to the Government should go on the joint responsibility of the non-official members of the Council, we should have an opportunity of meeting and exchanging our views, so that we may consider what is the best advice to be given. That is one reason why some time should be allowed before we meet. The second reason for requiring some time is: I might have some view and when I meet my friends and discuss it with them, they may present other aspects which may incline me to change my view. That will be a matter of advantage. Instead of coming forward with individual views, it is better that we come out with our views with some responsibility. Therefore, I would ask the Government give us two or three weeks' time. I quite realize the urgency of the matter. But the time that is given is too short for us to meet and give our views on a matter of such very great importance."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER:—"I cannot say I have any very great confidence in the meeting that is proposed or the discussion that is suggested, because we may go from point to point and might have a discussion which may be very unprofitable. I would therefore suggest that the non-officials might formulate their views and submit them to the Government either individually or collectively."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I quite agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar that there should be a meeting at which we can have a free exchange of views. Your Excellency will have the advantage of a free discussion with the non-official members on the one side and the Members of the Government on the other. As has been suggested, the Select Committee on the City Municipal Bill is to meet on the 23rd September and we might meet some day before that. So far as non-official members are concerned, they might be asked to meet here a day in advance, and come to some understanding."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur A. SUBBARAYALU REDDIYAR:—"Is it necessary to have a meeting? Will it not be enough if Honourable Members submit their views to the Government? In the meantime members may require time to consult their own friends. Is it necessary to have a meeting of the non-official members either here or at Government House? It is enough if they are given time to consider their views, to consult their own friends and to submit their opinions."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The report itself says that you should have the opinion of the Legislative Council."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"No, no. Not necessarily; you can see the report."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"There are two paragraphs. One says 'discussed in the Provincial Councils and considered by the Provincial Governments'."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"It distinctly says 'discussed in the Provincial Councils'."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"May I make a suggestion? The non-official members should meet some time this day—they are all present here with the exception of one or two—and just discuss the matter amongst themselves. There are varying views evidently and we might settle the matter before we adjourn. Would that do?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"If your Excellency will give a quarter of an hour before the luncheon interval, we might see if we could arrive at a unanimous decision."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBİ MARAKKAYAR:—"As for myself, I have not studied the Reforms Report."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That is the Honourable Gentleman's fault."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"We have simply to decide when we are to meet."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is only to discuss the transferred lists. The Council will adjourn at a quarter to two to enable non-official members to confer together on what has been said just now."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"It is not to discuss the lists or anything else."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is not essential that any Members of Government should be present at this meeting. Non-official members can suit their own convenience. The Government do not wish to stand in the way of non-official members meeting together."

148 RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON PRINCIPLES CONTAINED
IN RECENT RESOLUTION ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; the President ;
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

[16TH AUGUST 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—“Is it to decide whether non-official members shall meet or not?”

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—“It has been decided that the Council shall adjourn at a quarter to two. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser suggested that they should meet together and consider what has been said.”

RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON PRINCIPLES CONTAINED
IN RECENT RESOLUTION ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—“I have the honour to move—

‘XIII. This Council recommends that His Excellency the Governor in Council be pleased to appoint a committee of officials and non-officials to examine and report upon the principles suggested in the latest resolution of the Government of India on local self-government.’

“It will be remembered that after the Decentralization Commission made an exhaustive inquiry into the subject and formulated their own recommendations they were, in due course, communicated to the local Governments for their opinions. After considering the opinions of the local Governments, the Government of India issued a resolution in 1915 suggesting some modifications in the existing system, laying down some lines of policy and leaving it to local Governments to develop local self-government in their own provinces as best as they could. After the publication of the resolution of 1915, it will be remembered that, on the 20th August 1917, it was announced in the House of Commons that the policy of His Majesty's Government would be the increasing association of Indians in every branch of administration and the gradual development of self-governing institutions with a view to the progressive realization of responsible Government in India as an integral part of the British Empire. The Viceroy, while referring to that declaration in the Imperial Council on the 15th September 1917, stated that there were three roads along which advance should be made, and that the first road to be taken was in the field of local self-government. The Government of India examined that question at considerable length and examined the resolution of 1915, and afterwards formulated a scheme on a liberal scale and that scheme was approved by the Secretary of State. Having made that proposal, this is how they referred the matter to the local Government:—

‘Having received his approval to their recommendations they now desire to intimate the lines upon which they would wish local Governments to move in the direction of more complete local self-government. The Government of India fully recognize that it will not be possible to make all the injunctions formulated below of absolutely uniform application and are, therefore, willing to reserve to the local Governments the power to modify their application in specific cases and for specific reasons, but they expect that in the absence of such specific occasions, a substantial advance should now be made on the lines laid down, and from indications received in the course of their recent communications with heads of local Governments, they believe that the local Governments, each in its own degree, are also anxious to adopt a forward policy in general conformity with the wishes of the Government of India.’

“This is the latter portion of paragraph 3 of the resolution. In the resolution of 1915, they gave a much larger discretion to the local Governments in the matter of the extension of local self-government; but in this resolution of the 16th February 1918, they made their position more definite and expressed their definite intention that it should be extended on the lines laid down, and if the local Government thought fit to vary them, they should do so for specific reasons and in specific cases. It is very clear that some discretion has been given to the local Government in this respect.

“It is now necessary for me to point out some of the recommendations and suggestions contained in the resolution of 1918, so far as this resolution of mine is concerned. Though it does not give complete and full local self-government, that resolution of the Government of India is conceived in a liberal spirit and marks a definite stage in various directions. Among the recommendations contained in this resolution it is definitely suggested that municipal and district boards should contain a substantial elective majority; it is suggested that the elective franchise should be broadened as widely as possible to make the institutions truly representative of all rate-payers; it is suggested that even if officials are nominated to any of the boards, they should be nominated for the purpose of discussion and advice without any right of voting. They suggest that the district officers might utilize the district boards for consultation and work. They state that the chairmen of municipal councils should be elected, though they would not deprive these councils of their power to elect officials as chairmen with the help of non-officials. It is also stated that they should arrange for the election of presidents of district and sub-district boards, it being at the same time pointed out that district boards and taluk boards should have an executive officer appointed by Government and removable with the sanction of Government. They further suggest that so far as municipal and rural boards are concerned, they are free from the various restrictions imposed upon them by the Government in regard to the exercise of their powers. It is suggested that these bodies should be at liberty to impose and vary taxation within the limits laid down in the various Acts constituting those bodies.

RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON PRINCIPLES CONTAINED 149
IN RECENT RESOLUTION ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

16TH AUGUST 1918.]

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

It is stated that they must have control over the services paid for by them. It is suggested that the restrictions that these bodies should obtain the sanction of Government for works carried out by them, should be removed, except where the works are carried out with the loan funds. It is also suggested that the outside control over establishment should be relaxed to a very large extent. They definitely suggest, for the purpose of guiding them in matters of local self-government, they should have the assistance of a central body and they made the specific suggestion that a central body should be constituted which co-ordinates the work of local bodies. This is what they say: ‘The Government of India recognize that the powers of Collectors and Commissioners should be maintained but they would suggest for the consideration of the provincial Governments the constitution of a central body which should co-ordinate the experiences of the local bodies and provide improved control and guidance by entertaining further expert inspecting establishments, if necessary. Such a central body should be in direct touch with the Government and might fitly be presided over by a member of the Executive Council where such exists. It should further be considered whether in place of a formal board, there might not be a Standing Committee for local and municipal affairs in direct contact with the Government, to be largely drawn from elected members of the Legislative Council.’ That is the specific suggestion made by them in this resolution. In the case of village panchayats, they enter into a detailed discussion of the circumstances now in force, especially after the issue of the Government order in 1915, and they modify some of the conclusions arrived at in their former order. They suggest that panchayats should be confined to a single village, unless it be that in special cases, two or three villages may be considered a single village; they suggest that these panchayats should receive a definite portion of the revenue and should be given voluntary powers of taxation and that the legislation in regard to them should be simple and elastic.

“I have placed before this Council most of the recommendations contained in the latest resolution of the Government of India issued in February 1918 so as to suggest the desirability of taking a definite action in giving effect to these recommendations. Having made these recommendations, as to the procedure to be adopted, this is what is laid down by the Government of India. ‘It will probably be found on examination that a large part of the suggestions put forward in this resolution can be brought into effect without any change in the existing legislation, and so far as this can be done, action should be taken without further delay. In some provinces, as in Madras, the amendment of the existing law is already in contemplation. In others, as in the United Provinces and Assam, there has been recent legislation which, to a large extent, meets the necessities of the present resolution and it will be for the local Governments in such provinces to determine whether fresh legislation will be necessary at the present time to meet the requirements now suggested. The development of a village panchayat system, where this is undertaken, should in any case be secured by separate legislation unconnected with the Acts relating to municipal and rural boards.’ It will be within the recollection of the Council that recently a committee was appointed by an order, dated the 24th June 1918, of the Council that recently a committee was appointed by an order, dated the 24th June 1918, to examine the Municipal Account Code and the Local Fund Account Code and to make specific recommendations to remove the restrictions on and to increase the powers of local bodies in that respect. Among the recommendations contained in the Government of India resolution of 1918, there are some which relate to the increased powers of these bodies in connexion with the restrictions contained in the Municipal Account Code and the Local Fund Account Code. And to that extent, it will come within the purview of the inquiry of that committee so far as such portions of the resolution are concerned, and it is not necessary to appoint another committee or to make a further reference to that committee. Even accepting this portion of the resolution which relates to the budget, there are matters in which the labours of a committee would be useful.

“The question for this Council to decide is whether a committee should be appointed. It will be found that most of the recommendations which will have to be considered are those relating to the constitution of these local bodies. First taking the question of the increase of elective strength—I am aware that Government have made a reference to various local bodies as to whether they desire an advance—the Government have called upon the local boards as to whether they would suggest the elective strength to be two-thirds of the total number and the replies to that reference must have been received. It must also be stated that the question of elective franchise is being inquired into. In connexion with the District Municipalities Bill and the Local Boards Bill, some committees were appointed and they were at work and considered certain suggestions and those suggestions are now under the consideration of the Government. Though in respect of some of these matters, these questions have been considered by the Government, in some cases with the help of the committees appointed, while the District Municipalities Bill and the Local Boards Bill were under consideration, it is not certainly clear that these recommendations must have been made before the recent resolution of the Government of India was published? There is a good deal of difference between the suggestions which must have been made after the recent resolution of the Government of India reviewing that of 1915 was published and those made before that date. I would therefore draw the attention of the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar to this circumstance, that the non-official members who sat in the committees to advise in the preparation of these Bills, made their suggestions regarding the strength of the local bodies, without having before them the specific suggestions made herein; and one of the particular suggestions made herein is that to secure the experience of persons who are officials, it is not necessary that they should be members with the right of voting, but they might be appointed for the purpose of consultation and advice without a vote. If this aspect of the problem had been before the Government or those who made the suggestion regarding the strength of these bodies, the recommendations they made must have been different. It may be found also that in reply to a question put by my Honourable Friend Mr. Siva Rao it was pointed out that so far as the Madras District Municipalities Bill and the Madras Local Boards Bill were concerned, they were being examined in the light of the recent resolution of the Government of India. It is observed in reply to question No. 170—'The Madras District Municipalities Bill and the Madras Local Boards Bill will be submitted to the Government of India shortly. It cannot be definitely stated when these Bills will be introduced in the Legislative Council. The two last-named Bills are being re-examined in the light of the recent resolution of the Government of India.' Therefore, it would not be an answer to my suggestions to say that while the Bills were under preparation on a former occasion there was the advice and assistance of committees, when the Government have themselves found it necessary to re-examine those Bills in the light of the recent resolution of the Government of India. I would follow the position taken up by the Government of India and say whether the re-examination of the matters dealt with in those Bills could not be better conducted with the aid of a committee specially appointed for the purpose.

IN RECENT RESOLUTION ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.) 16th August 1918.

"It may be suggested in reply that the suggestions made by the Government of India are directions and that the local Governments are expected to carry out their recommendations. And therefore why do you suggest the appointment of a committee? My Lord, I would remind the Council in this respect that some of the answers given to questions put at this meeting show that there is a necessity for a committee to advise them in connexion with that resolution. The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao put a question at this meeting asking the Government whether they would give effect to the recommendations contained in this resolution about district officers being put on district boards for the purpose of advice and consultation. The answer of the Government is that they did not propose to take any immediate action in the matter. I am aware that the word 'immediate' is the substantial idea and is so comprehensive as to bring in anything in its sphere. I am aware it may be suggested that it may take some time for district boards and local boards to be developed in the manner suggested in the resolution and then it would be time enough for the Government to take action. But is it not right to try and give effect immediately to the principles enunciated by the Government of India in regard to the constitution of local boards? Is it not a proper thing to appoint a committee and ascertain their views? That is so far as the questions which were before the former committees are concerned.

“There are really some questions which are of vital importance and which, I believe, will have to be considered by the committees formerly appointed in connexion with the District Municipalities Bill and the Local Boards Bill. I have suggested that even where committees were formerly appointed, it is a great advantage to have their views subjected to a re-examination. I propose that with regard to the proposals contained in the recent resolution in regard to other matters, we should have a separate committee altogether. A specific suggestion is made in the resolution as to the appointment of a central body which might correspond to the local Government Board or a Standing Committee largely drawn from the elected members of the Legislative Council.”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Which paragraph? I know it is in the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—" You will find it in paragraph 18. That is an important question which could not be considered with the help of the mixed committee appointed on a former occasion. That is a very important matter which can only be satisfactorily settled, not merely by correspondence through the official channels, but by active co-operation with the representatives of the people.

"Again, it will be remembered that in respect of the legislation with reference to village panchayats, the matter could not be considered by any of the committees appointed on a former occasion. So far as this is concerned, may I draw the attention of the Council to the debate that took place on the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar about the drawing up of a Bill for the constitution of the village panchayats. The question was discussed at considerable length and it was suggested by the Honourable Member for Government that they require some more experience; and it was pointed out that some attempts have been made in forming involuntary panchayats and we should wait for the result for a long time. So far as this portion of the resolution is concerned, the suggestion is definitely clear and there is no reason for delay whatever. In the case of informal panchayats, it will be curious to find that it is not proposed to take any immediate action in the matter; but that the Government are willing to allow the matters to lie over for a fairly long period.

"The Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao has asked the Government for some information with reference to these informal panchayats. In question No. 171, at this meeting he asked: 'Will the Government be pleased (a) to furnish a list of all the "informal panchayats" organized in the province; (b) to state whether any reports have been received as to their working; if so, to place them on the table; if not, to call for the reports and also (c) to state whether any money has been hitherto sanctioned to "finance" them; if so, how the money has been distributed?' In reply to that, the Government have stated:— "(a) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statements laid on the table in reply to questions Nos. 12 and 74 asked at the meetings held on the 2nd April 1917 and on the 3rd April 1918, respectively. (b) The Government have not yet received any report and do not propose to call for reports before December 1918. (c) G.O. No. 178, Financial, dated the 13th March 1918, sanctioning a grant of 1.25 lakhs to district boards in 1917-18 for aid to informal panchayats will be placed on the Editors' table." I would leave it to the Government to consider whether in respect of this resolution which definitely makes an alteration in the policy laid down in the resolution of 1915, as to the attitude of the Government of India, the statement that they would not even call for a report before December, is calculated to.—"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR (interrupting):—"We have already called for the reports. The reports are due in December. Probably the wording of the answer is not quite correct."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO (continuing):—"Probably the answer is not quite correct. The answer is "The Government do not propose to call for reports before December 1918," so that no report will be before the Government even in regard to informal panchayats; they might be received in the course of some time and it will be long before any definite steps can be taken. If the Government are prepared to take immediate steps for carrying out some of the recommendations contained in this resolution, the co-operation of non-officials must be secured in order to enable them to proceed without any further delay. I would, therefore, suggest that there should be no delay in the appointment of a committee. It is because of the answer given to the question that the Government are not likely to take immediate action, that it is necessary to press this aspect of the problem. I am quite sure that the Member for Government would agree with me that there are some questions such as the appointment of a central body, the desirability of appointing an executive officer corresponding to Commissioner not only in district boards but in taluk boards—these are important matters which require careful consideration. I know reference has been made to district boards—whether they would advocate the appointment of a commissioner—and also to local boards. I know for one thing that this reference must take some time, because district boards have to call for the opinions of taluk boards. Let us take it that their opinions will be before the Government at the earliest date. This is a matter of definite policy which will have to be considered in the light of all shades of opinions, with the co-operation not only of officials but also of non-officials. In the consideration of this question of policy, it is for the Member of the Government to consider whether they will adopt the usual official channels and decide the matter in the Secretariat without giving an opportunity to the people to consider how things are going to be settled. As it is a matter concerning the Local Self-Government, I submit that it is one which should be decided with the advice of non-official gentlemen. This resolution of the Government of India contains several questions which will have to be examined, while there are old questions which require re-examination, and undoubtedly the examination of the new points raised in the resolution requires the appointment of a committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—“ I rise to second the resolution. I myself sent up a resolution to the same effect—that immediate effect be given to the most recent resolution of the Government of India, but I was late by one day and I regret to say that my resolution was disallowed. However, it is some consolation to me that after all this subject has come up for discussion in this Council in some form or other. I must say that this is an urgent matter. I myself expected, when I read the recent resolution of the Government of India, that the first step the Government would take would be to appoint a committee and to refer to them various matters involving far-reaching changes raised in the resolution for the consideration of that committee. Your Excellency, if I were asked to quote a precedent in favour of the step which we are urging, we need not go far enough, because the Bombay Government has already done it, and the report of the committee has been sent up and is pending consideration at the hands of the Local Government. Other provinces have also, I believe, appointed mixed committees of officials and non-officials, and they are deliberating over the far-reaching changes that have been suggested ; but it is a regrettable thing that this Government have not moved in the matter. It may be that they made some references here and there, but as regards the general resolution itself they have not taken steps to consult the non-official opinion, in order to enable them to make up their own mind. I am sure that the Government will be glad to take up the changes, the details of which were given them to make up their own mind.

"Before proceeding further, I must sum up the changes, the details of which were given by the Honourable Mover—I must sum up the general effect of the changes in the words of the illustrious framers of the report on Indian Constitutional reforms. In paragraph 188 of the report, the first formulae they laid down is "There should be, as far as possible, complete popular control in local bodies and the largest possible independence for them of outside control." The same policy has been enunciated in detail in the recent resolution of the Government of India. The question we have to consider is how far that policy can be adopted in this province. The effect of these changes comes to this that the Government of India propose to confer almost complete autonomy on local bodies. This is the most important of the proposed changes. Can that be done without the consultation of non official opinion in the matter? I must say one important change that is proposed in the recent resolution of the Government of India is to make these councils contain a substantial elective majority. The maximum now provided in the District Municipalities Act is three-fourths, which has not been reached in most cases, and it is for the Government to consider what will be the elective substantial majority, in the case of municipalities and also in the case of district boards and taluk boards. Now the other change equally important is to broaden the elective franchise, to extend the present system of franchise. The Government have seriously to consider how they will extend the franchise and what should be the minimum qualifications of voters and what should be the minimum qualifications of candidates. These are two matters of importance regarding the constitution of these bodies which have to be considered. There is another important question—whether officials should or should not be allowed to stand for election and again whether they should be allowed to take an active part in the proceedings of these bodies by voting. The Government of India propose that in the case of municipalities or taluk boards, or district boards, there must be a substitution, not a gradual substitution; and the line laid down is the immediate adoption of the change, not a change to be brought about in the course of a century. They say that, in their view, the time is come for the carrying out of these changes and it is for the local Government to say 'yes.' to this proposition. The Government cannot possibly impose this policy on local bodies. When the Provincial Governments, especially the Provincial Councils are to be made more autonomous, the Government would not dictate to the Provincial Governments what they should do to further the development of local self-government; they will simply satisfy themselves with laying down the broad lines on which the progress should be made and it is for the local Government to make up their mind as to how far they would carry out the suggestions contained in the resolution.

(Mr. Siva Rao.)

"Going further, there is a most important subject, namely the budget, the power of the purse which municipalities and local boards should have, subject to the minimum balance being maintained. They are to have a free hand in framing the budget, subject to this condition; and this provision was also introduced in the Madras City Municipal Bill. The Government of India say that this principle should be applied to the mufassal municipalities also. Hereafter the Government will not have the power to interfere with the allotments made by local bodies so long as the minimum balance is maintained, and it shall not be open to Collectors and divisional officers to interfere with the various provisions of the budget nor will it be open to the Surgeon-General or Director of Public Instruction or any other officer such as the Sanitary Commissioner or the Sanitary Engineer to interfere with the discretion of local bodies in this matter. Lastly, the other important change that is recommended is as regards district boards. In the opinion of the Government of India, the time has come when district boards should be made more representative and must be utilized not merely for the purpose of advising the Collector in local matters, but also in general matters of administration. I got a very disappointing reply the other day from the Government. I asked whether the Government would be pleased to give immediate effect to this recommendation. They gave me a very laconic reply—a very literal reply no doubt it was and I am sorry for it—that they have no present intention of giving immediate effect to it. Beyond that, they do not throw any further light on the subject. Such answers as this, literal though they may be, will not satisfy anybody.

"Then there is the question of the local self-government board or the Standing Committee drawn from the Legislative Council. Lastly there is the most important reform with regard to village panchayats. They say that, so far as possible, they should be started at once and be given administrative powers. The whole question of village panchayats is a very complicated one. The question is what is to be their constitution, how to finance them and who is to control them? Would not the Government do well to have a committee and ask them to help in formulating their views.

"It may be said that we have been doing all these matters ourselves and we have always done what we can in the best interests of local self-government; we have raised the strength of the elective majority in so many municipalities." They may say "Here are the statistics showing that out of 72 municipalities, 64 enjoy the elective franchise and out of 96 taluk boards, 48 have the privilege of non-official presidents." Such assurances I do not think can hoodwink anybody who has had to deal with the history of local bodies. These reforms have been long overdue; the provision made in 1884 for having non-official presidents of taluk boards and district boards by election is carried out only in the year 1918 and credit is taken for it—that the Government are alive to the development of local self-government. I remember the discussion in 1917 when I struggled hard to have one non-official president for one single district board and that too as an experimental measure. I lost my resolution by one mark so to speak, or by one vote. I asked for a poll and I secured 19 votes, and I remember the memorable words uttered by the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur Rajagopala Achariyar, the oracular, "not yet." Within three months, there was a "metamorphosis" to use the word, which has been used in some other connexion on the first day and there was an announcement to have non-official presidents in four district boards. This is the halting and hesitating policy that has been pursued in the matter of local self-government. If that be so, are we not justified in asking the local Government, knowing that the circumstances have altered and that there has been a change in the angle of vision, to give immediate effect to the recommendations of the Government of India. Look at the disparity between the resolution of the Government of India issued in 1915 and the resolution issued in 1918. In the year 1915, the Government of India would not force their own ideas; it was said that it was all a matter for local administrations, and they did not want to fetter the discussion of local Governments and allowed them to carry out such improvements as they liked. But in the year 1918, as I said, there is a sudden reversal of that policy. They were now trying to force the hands of the local Government. They have made more specific recommendations and in some cases they have given directions also. What objection can there be to a committee of officials and non-officials being appointed, as soon as possible, to consider the matter and to submit a report? The local Government may then review that report and lay down their policy as early as possible or to issue instructions to carry out the directions of the Government of India as loyally as possible. I would ask the Government to carry out the resolution of the Government of India loyally and not to throw it into the back-ground for one reason or the other.

"I should like to refer to the attitude of the local Government with reference to village panchayats. In Bengal, the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha has introduced a Bill and they have done a similar thing in the Punjab. I have been asking for it at several meetings; to call for reports from Collectors and Divisional Officers regarding the working of informal panchayats; but the Government decline to do so; how can they get along without finance or without the power of taxation? Therefore, 99 out of 100 informal panchayats are not working; they are shams and unrealities. They cannot do anything without finance. The Government have said in reply to my question that they would get the reports by December 1918. Why do you give the month of December for reports? Why not call for the reports in September? I still remember the speech of Your Excellency delivered in May 1917. Your Excellency assured us that you had the best interests of local self-government at heart and that the local Government would do everything in their power to extend—never mind other questions of Home Rule and responsible Government—local self-Government and this is the foundation upon which the whole superstructure is to be built by the illustrious framers of the report on Indian constitutional reforms. This foundation must be raised. But the Government of India say that the progress has been slow; they say that there has been a lamentable lack of enthusiasm both among the non-officials and officials in the matter of local self-Government. Can there be a sadder commentary on the way in which we have been working? Let me not single out what has been done either by the people or the Government. These matters have to be liberally construed. What is it that my Honourable Friend has asked? Only the appointment of a committee; we, who have had some experience of local self-Government, say that we are prepared to assist the official Members of the Government, though we may have to come from Gōdāvari or Waltair, why do you refuse to take our help? I moved for the appointment of a committee in April this year. The Decentralization Commission which trotted up and down the country and spent a large portion of the tax-payers' money came to certain conclusions and they sent up their reports in the year 1910 and that report was considered in 1915. To this day it remains a dead letter. In April last, I read all their recommendations in respect of taxation and of services under the control of the local bodies and I ask the Government to give effect to them. They agreed to do so, but when I looked at the reference to the committee that was appointed, I find that they were asked to revise the Municipal Account Code and the Local Fund Account Code."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting):—"The Honourable Gentleman has considerably exceeded his time."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"The committee were asked to consider only the restrictions imposed by the Local Fund Account Code and the Municipal Account Code. It does not matter whether we get the power to appoint a man on Rs 25 or on Rs, 20. The committee is already there and there is nothing lost by utilizing that committee by widening its terms for purposes of the proposed committee reference. The committee is to meet on the 17th September."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, the resolution is for the appointment of a committee of officials and non-officials 'to examine and report upon the principles suggested in the latest resolution of the Government of India on local self-government.' In seconding the resolution the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao has devoted the greater portion of his speech to finding fault with us for the circumstance that though the Local Boards Act passed in 1884, provided for the appointment of non-official presidents of district boards and taluk boards, that provision was brought into operation only in recent years. I am not at present concerned with answering that indictment. If it were intended to bring a general indictment against Your Excellency's Government for slow progress in the past, I submit that the resolution should have been differently framed. But I am bound by the rules of the Council to deal with the resolution on the paper as it is and I shall not be led away because the Honourable Member has travelled outside his resolution—I shall not follow him in that direction even in the agreeable task of defending Your Excellency's Government against the unwarranted indictment.

"Taking up the resolution, the resolution recommends to Your Excellency's Government that we should appoint a committee of officials and non-officials to examine and report upon the principles suggested in the latest resolution of the Government of India on local self-Government. I would, first of all, point out that the Government of India is an authority over us, over Your Excellency's Government and also over this Council; and their resolution is for us to adopt. I quite recognize that there is a certain amount of elasticity in that resolution. Wherever there is a discretion in the resolution, by all means let us use that discretion. The resolution of the Government of India is a mandate from a higher authority, directing us to proceed in certain directions, in administering a department of Government. But the Hon'ble

(Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao says 'let us appoint a committee of officials and non-officials to examine this question.' I should like to know what the authority of the committee of officials and non-officials is to be. Can they examine the resolution coming from the supreme Government? Assuming that this committee told us not to act upon that resolution in certain directions, would it be open to us to act upon their recommendation? My first point is that it is a wholly erroneous move to suggest to this Council that they should make a recommendation to Your Excellency's Government to appoint a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to examine the resolution coming from the Government of India, to examine the principles it contains and to submit a report upon those principles. I would first of all point out that the principles laid down by the Government of India are the principles laid down by a higher authority. They are binding upon us. It is our function to carry them out. Therefore, ordinarily the Government must wholly demur to this proposition, that we should take it upon ourselves to subject their resolution to a very critical analysis and a careful examination at the hands of a mixed committee of local officials and non-officials, to see how far that resolution is right or how far it is wrong. If we appoint a committee to consider and report upon that resolution it is open to the committee to say that this principle is right and that principle is wrong. So far as Your Excellency's Government are concerned, they cannot be a party to any such thing. I recognise that probably, the Honourable Gentleman did not mean exactly that; and what he probably meant—I gather that from his speech—was that this committee would be in a position to communicate to the Government how they should carry out the resolution of the Government of India, in which case it would have been more convenient if the resolution had been worded more in accordance with such an intention. But here we have to deal with the resolution on the paper as it is. It is my duty to object to the resolution whatever may be the intention of the Honourable Mover.

"Though there are several points on which we have not yet come to a conclusion, the general conclusion that we have come to is that the resolution of the Government of India is unexceptionable and must be carried out. We find that we have been doing most of the things which the Government of India have asked us to do. We started doing them before the resolution of the Government of India came to us and it was a satisfaction to us that what we were doing were on the lines laid down for us subsequently. What we are now doing is to carry out the wishes of those in authority above us. If the Honourable Member could convince me that a mixed committee could really advance matters in this respect, I would most gladly agree to it. Honourable Members are aware that we have not been chary of appointing committees so far as the local self-government departments are concerned. When the District Municipalities Bill had to be considered, we had a committee on which there were several experienced chairmen, such as the Hon'ble Mr. A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar and the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao and several others and that committee gave us great help, and afterwards we had another committee to examine the Local Boards Bill. Now a third committee is examining the Local Fund and Municipal Account Codes. The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao has spoken disparagingly with reference to that committee by saying 'what does it matter whether a local body can appoint men up to Rs. 20 or Rs. 25?' With all deference to him, it does matter. He will find that 90 per cent of the restrictions against which local bodies are complaining are restrictions in matters of detail; they are restrictions imposed by the codes and not by the law; I am sure that the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar who moved a resolution on this very subject a year or two ago will bear me out that with local and municipal bodies, these things are not such small things as the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao is apparently inclined to imagine. Such things do matter to them. When we have had three committees, if we can only be convinced that a fourth committee would advance matters, nothing would give us greater pleasure than to consent to the appointment of such a committee. I have carefully followed the speech of the honourable mover which was carefully thought out and I am convinced that a committee can do no good.

"To show that, I would, if the Council would permit me, take up the resolution of the Government of India and indicate to you, as I go on, how these things are being done or have been done; and that in any case a committee could not advance matters. The Honourable Member has read some portions of the resolution. The first question taken up by the Government of India is that of an elective majority on boards. This is what the Government of India have said. I am only reading a portion of it: 'The Government of India are now of opinion that as a general principle the Commission's proposals in favour of a substantial elective majority, both as regards municipalities and as regards rural boards, should be accepted and carried out by the local Governments.' In regard to that, I would say we have not only accepted that principle, but we have been carrying it out for a considerable length of time, and I have got the figures showing what we have done. We took up the councils and boards one after another and a reference was made to them to state how they stood and what their wishes were in regard to their constitution. Honourable Members will agree with me that that is the correct course. With all deference to non-official members here, after all local boards and municipal councils have the first right to be heard as to how their constitution is to be altered; and there is no use our sitting here and saying we will decide whether the South Kanara District Board is to have a majority of two-thirds or three-fourths of elected members. It is for them to say how they will have their constitution altered. We hear often of what is called the principle of self-determination; I plead for the acceptance of that principle in regard to local bodies. I venture to ask Honourable Members to agree to the exercise of that principle by local bodies. Reference was sent out to district boards and municipalities—I am not giving you any old figures. It went on 2nd February. So many as thirty municipalities have given their replies. We had in the Bezvada Municipality twelve elected members and eight nominated members and we changed them to fifteen elected members and five nominated members. In the Cuddalore municipality there were twelve elected members and eight nominated members. We raised the strength of the Council and also gave them eighteen elected members. The strength of the Conjeevaram Municipality was raised from 20 to 24. They had ten elected members and ten nominated members, and when we raised the total strength to 24, the nominated element was reduced to eight and the number of elected members was fixed at 16 as against the original 10. As regards Kumbakonam—I am sorry that the Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar is not here as he will be glad to hear what I have to say—Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar is not here as he will be glad to hear what I have to say—Hon'ble Mr. A. Subbarayalu Reddiyar will bear me out when I say that when we made a reference to the district boards and taluk boards, we asked the district boards to ask the taluk boards the question as to what should be their strength and next what percentage should be elected and we also asked the district boards what should be the strength of district boards and how many members should be returned by the taluk boards. These are naturally local matters which have to be discussed with regard to the circumstances of each locality. We asked these boards for these particulars and replies have been received from as many as 16 boards. I am not one of those who believe that there is any particular virtue in a three-fourths or a two-thirds elected majority. What is aimed at is a substantial majority, and we have made no attempt to dispose of all the replies together. As each reply came up, we at once passed orders. We have received a reply from Anantapur which is a constituency of the Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao; the total strength was 32 and the elective strength was 16. We retained the total strength, but raised the elective strength to 24. In North Arcot the total strength was 36, and the elective element was 18, that is one half. We retained the total strength but raised the elective strength to 24. With regard to Bellary—another of the constituencies of the Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao—the total strength was 36 while the elective strength was 18. We retained the total strength but raised the elective strength to 24. In Tinnevely we had the elective strength at 18 out of 24; but we raised the total strength to 36 and the elective strength to 24. I quote these figures to show that we have been proceeding in the direction of raising the elective strength of local bodies. If Honourable Members would wait till the end of the year, they would find, taking the municipalities and local boards, that these have a substantial elected majority. The majority will vary from two-thirds to three-fourths. The most advanced will have a majority of three-fourths and the less advanced will have a majority of two-thirds; and where the councils are quite new, we put the elective strength at one-half. What could a mixed committee of officials and non-officials do in this matter? We are telling the local bodies proposals and issue notifications. This is not a matter to be dealt with by a mixed committee of officials and non-officials, passing vague and general resolutions. That will not do. We have to carry out the policy of ascertaining the views of local bodies and acting in accordance with them as far as possible.

"Then the Government of India say: 'As regards the special representation of minorities where this is necessary, the Government of India would prefer that this should be effected by retaining the practice of nomination rather than by introducing some system of communal or proportional representation.' That is how it now stands. We have not got communal elections; and I do not want to go into that thorny subject. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan Sahib has a different opinion. The state of affairs that we have is in accordance with the declared wishes of the Government of India; and it is our duty to abide by these wishes.

"Then the Government of India say: 'It has been suggested that apart from the officials who would count as supernumeraries under the above arrangement, the proportion of nominated members on a board should not ordinarily exceed one-fourth; and it will be open to local Governments to adopt a standard of this character, but the Government of India recognize that in the case of boards to which the elective system has not hitherto been applied there may be local opposition to the immediate introduction of election on so extensive a scale and the proportion of nominated members on boards must necessarily vary from place to place.' That is just what we are doing. I believe Honourable Members are aware that this is the general principle that has been adopted by us and communicated to all boards so early as February 1918. This resolution was issued in May 1918. I mention that fact to show that it is not a question of our hands being forced. It is an old policy of this Government to bring about the substitution of election for nomination and we are pushing that everywhere as much as possible. We have been making progress; sometimes the progress may appear to be slow due to local conditions. Honourable Members are aware that there have been set-backs and several municipalities which had a strong elective element had to be suspended. The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar knows that was the case with Kumbakonam. Where we have a large number of local bodies, we cannot make them march to the tune of a particular regulated strength. I would commend to the Council the wise words of the Government of India that they 'recognize that in the case of boards to which the elective system had not hitherto been applied, there may be local opposition to the immediate introduction of election' and so on.

“Then there is the question that a certain proportion of the members should be co-opted and hold office for a period longer than the ordinarily prescribed period. In the District Municipalities Bill over which a committee sat, a provision did exist for introducing a system of aldermen, whereby those who would not care to stand for election might be nominated; it was therein provided that the council itself, as a body, should be permitted to nominate certain members, as municipal councillors. This is really an old idea and not a new one. The Hon'ble Sir P. S. Sivaswami Ayyar put it in the Municipal Bill; but when the matter came up before a mixed committee of officials and non-officials—unfortunately the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao the Hon'ble Mr. Subbarayalu Reddiyar was himself a member and he knows it—there was strong opposition to it; they all said that this would enable the dominating party in a council to perpetuate themselves by appointing a number of their own friends. I see that the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar agrees with that view. That was a provision which the local Government put in, and that is the very thing now suggested by the Government of India; but until the test was applied, as to whether it would be agreeable to the members, that aspect of the matter which was placed before the Government by the committee, never struck me. Later on during the last month when I went round the districts of South Arcot and Trichinopoly I met several district boards and local boards; they did not know what opinion I held. I asked them what they thought of the system of aldermen; every one of them opposed it. I am merely mentioning this to show that it is not always safe to follow a general rule in regard to a matter like this. Here taking the co-opted members, what has a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to do? They will say 'let us have it or let us not have it.' Suppose they say 'let us have it,' we are met by the opinions of local bodies who would not have it. But if they say 'let us not have it' they will be saying merely what the local bodies are saying. I am going into this matter, somewhat minutely, and I hope I am not wearying you. It is not clear, therefore, what a mixed committee of officials and non-officials can do in connexion with this matter.

"We now come to the extension of the franchise. The Government of India say in paragraph 6 :—'In accepting the proposals of the Decentralization Commission with regard to the provision of a substantial elected majority on local bodies, the Government of India desire to add the important corollary that the franchise for such election should be sufficiently low to obtain constituencies which will be really representative of the body of the rate-payers.' That is a proposition which has my entire concurrence. What have we done in regard to that? This is what we have done. Taking the municipal areas, you will find that the rule now is :—no person should be qualified to vote unless he is of the male sex, has attained the age of 21, etc ; and in regard to property qualifications, he must have a monthly income of Rs. 50 or he must be the registered owner or occupier of a house, the rental value of which is Rs. 48, or he must be assessed to profession-tax, except in the last class, or he must be assessed to income-tax and so on. That is the existing rule. The Government have now notified that they propose to reduce the franchise ; what they are doing is so to reduce the franchise as to enable every person to be a registered voter or candidate who is assessed to the profession-tax, to the tax on buildings and lands and who is a registered holder of any building or land which is taxed or is the occupier of premises assessed to the building and land tax. That is, every person who pays profession-tax or house-tax becomes a voter and he could also stand as a candidate. Every man who pays a land tax or house-tax becomes a voter and he could also stand as a candidate. Every occupier, who need not even pay a tax, of a building or land which is paying tax, becomes a voter. How can you go any further? Every human being who contributes to the municipal revenue becomes a voter ; and even if he contributes half a rupee, he could be a voter and stand as a candidate. The result of that change will be to increase the number of voters very largely.

"What about local boards? So far as they are concerned, the district boards get their strength from the taluk boards. We have made a number of changes in regard to taluk boards and I will not trouble you with enumerating them. We have compiled approximate figures for this debate which will show you what sweeping changes we have made. I will take the Honourable Member's district—the Nellore district. The number of voters in the Nellore Taluk Board is 392, but under the changes we have made, it will be 2,447, that is, seven times the original number. As regards Kavali, the number has been raised from 593 to 2,543. With regard to Satur, the number has been raised from 586 to 5,772. The Hon'ble Mr. Graham tells me that these changes have already taken place. Considering the large lowering we have done —"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR (interrupting):—"Is it the lowering of qualifications from Rs 50 to Rs. 30?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“ Yes. I may tell you that with regard to the Sērmadēvi Taluk Board, we have raised the number of voters from 781 to 4,951 and as regards Vizagapatam, the number has been raised from 2,692 to 5,900. I mention these things to show you that we are going on in some respects, not slower than we should do, but probably faster than we should do. My point is: what is a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to do in this matter? I am sure that if the Hon'ble Mr Ramanuja Achariyar were on this mixed committee, he would object to this great lowering of this franchise. He will come into conflict with the decision of the Government of India which I am bound to support. I am sorry, your Excellency, that I have largely exceeded my time."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I am sure that the Council would like you to go on."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—" This is the only opportunity we have of stating what we have done."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—“ We should like to hear you.”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARYAR :—"I have told you what we have done in regard to the constitution of the councils and boards, and how we have gradually increased the elective element and how we have, to an almost revolutionary extent, lowered the franchise. As regards the elective headships of municipalities and district boards, this is what the Government of India say : ' In dealing with the appointment of chairmen in municipalities the Decentralization Commission desired that the municipal chairmen should ordinarily be elected non-officials, that Government officers should not be allowed to stand for election and that if a nominated chairman was required, an official should be selected. The Government of India in their Resolution of 1915 accepted this view, subject to the qualification that in special cases in which it was necessary to nominate the chairman (election being the ordinary method) discretion should be reserved to local Governments to nominate non-officials as well as officials, and subject also to the further condition that although boards should not be absolutely prohibited from electing officials, the election of an official should be a special matter requiring confirmation by the Commissioner or by some higher authority. It may be roughly laid down that at the present time one-third of the chairmen in municipalities in India are nominated officials, one-third are elected officials and one-third are elected non-officials, but certain local Governments have latterly evinced a desire to increase the proportion of elected non-official chairmen within their respective areas. The Government of India accept the proposals of the Decentralization Commission as qualified by the Resolution of 1915 on the understanding that when an official is elected to be a chairman the election should be by a majority of the non-official votes.' As I told the Council yesterday, out of 72 municipalities, 60 have non-official heads and only 12 have official heads. Out of these 60 municipalities, 39 have chairmen who are elected by the councils. In addition to that there are three councils with paid chairmen - also non-official elected chairmen; they are not technically elected, they are chosen by the council and formally approved by the Government. It is true that we have eight councils which have nominated official chairmen. Does that not show that we have been pursuing a policy of putting non-official heads in lieu of official heads? Does it not show that we are not particularly keen about allowing officials to stand for election? I remember only two chairmen who are elected officials, both of them being paid chairmen. It cannot be said that we are rushing officials in. That is not our policy. What we have done is what the Government of India have prescribed. This is what we were doing before the resolution of the Government of India came.

“The Government of India further say: ‘The Decentralization Commission, however, indicated that in the larger cities it would be desirable to adopt the practice which has been worked with success in the city of Bombay. In order that the large amount of every day administration necessary should be efficiently carried on, this administration is in Bombay placed under a special nominated Commissioner, who is, however, subject to the general control of the corporation and of its standing committee. This proposal was commended in the Resolution of 1915, and it appears to the Government of India to be worthy of consideration.’ That is what we have done in regard to the Madras Corporation. That was also proposed in the case of some of the larger municipalities in the mufassal; but, as the Hon’ble Mr. Subbarayulu Reddiyar would bear me out, the mixed committee which sat on the Municipal Bill took strong exception to it, and the result was that we had to give it up, not because it was not right, but out of deference to the wishes of the non-officials on the committee, who strongly objected to the change. Notwithstanding the preference of the Government of India for a Commissioner, if a large majority of non-official gentlemen do not want it, it will be our duty to defer to their wishes. We cannot force this change upon them.

“ Now coming to rural boards, as I said already, out of 96 taluk boards, 48 have non-official heads of whom 12 are elected, and there are five district boards with non-official presidents. The Hon'ble P. Siva Rao seemed to think that it was nothing ; he did not seem to attach much importance to it. That does not matter. It is true that we have not been able to make the same progress here as we have been able to do in regard to municipalities ; but the reason is not far to seek. This is what the Government of India say :—‘ The circumstances of district boards and of large subdivisional boards, such as those in Madras, are materially different from those of municipalities, since they need much more time and widely extended travelling on the part of the head of the board if the work is to be satisfactorily carried out. The Government of India would urge provincial Governments to arrange for the election of chairmen, wherever this is possible, and where this is not possible to encourage the appointment of non-official chairmen. When the chairman is a non-official, however, they think it essential in regard to district boards and to such subdistrict boards as deal with large areas that, as in the case of large cities, the ordinary official work should be largely in the hands of a special executive officer, whose appointment should require the approval of the Government and who should not be removed in ordinary circumstances without Government sanction. If such a board, wishing to save the expense of a special officer, or desirous of remaining under the presidency of the Collector or of one of his assistants, should wish to elect such an official as chairman, the Government of India think that its wishes might be acceded to, subject to the condition that the election should be made by the non-official members of the board and that it should be a special matter requiring confirmation by the Commissioner or some higher authority.' This is exactly what we are doing. The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar will bear me out when I say that we had correspondence with one of the boards in his district and we proposed to have a non-official chairman. I am not going to give the name of the board or the name of the non-official. There was a certain amount of agitation, and afterwards the Collector proposed a non-official which we had to veto because we felt that in the interests of the change which we were introducing, it was not desirable that the non-official should take the place of the official with a large number of people out of sympathy with him and hostile to him as it would jeopardize his administration. In the case of rural areas, the substitution of non-official agency for the official agency is a question of time. The Hon'ble Mr. Subbarayulu Reddiyar as the President of the South Arcot District Board, will be able to say what difficulty we have experienced in finding non-officials to be heads of rural boards. The man must not only be capable but be acceptable to the bulk of the people. Sometimes you have a thoroughly respectable man, but he cannot do the work. Again the large areas of several taluk boards seriously hamper the experiment. To obviate that difficulty, a reference has been made to taluk boards as to whether they would like to split up into smaller areas so as to substitute the non-official for the official agency. This is essentially a matter of detail which is to be settled after consultation with the local people. A mixed committee of officials and non-officials cannot help us much in this matter.

"It is true that we have not given complete powers of taxation to municipalities and rural boards and control over the budgets. But these are provided by law. The Local Boards Act will soon come up before the Council and the Council will have ample opportunity of satisfying themselves whether the proposals of the Government of India have been given effect to or not. There will be a Select Committee sitting not only on the Local Boards Bill, but also on the District Municipalities Bill. There are a number of restrictions imposed by the Local Fund Account Code and the Municipal Account Code, which derive their authority from the rules issued under the old Acts. We relaxed them last year as there was a general desire that they should be relaxed. We have since appointed a committee from which I hope good will come."

“I have only two things more to refer to. One of the things which the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao said should be usefully considered by a committee, is the question of a Central Government Board. That is a matter which came up by way of a resolution moved by the Honourable Member last year; but he will remember that several non-official members voted against him. The Government of India have made the same suggestion in this resolution. They say: 'It should further be considered whether in place of a formal board there might not be a standing committee for local and municipal affairs in direct contact with the Government, to be largely drawn from elected members of the Legislative Council.' In the report on Indian Constitutional reforms, it is stated: 'We propose that to each department or group of departments, whether it is placed under a Member of the Executive Council or under a Minister, there should be attached a standing committee elected by the Legislative Council from among their own members.' If these standing committees are to be appointed under the new scheme, it would not be necessary to appoint any committee to consider this question as to whether a Central Government Board should be constituted.

“ Lastly, I come to the vexed question of panchayats. The general impression seems to be that we are hostile to the development of panchayats. The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao said : You would not give money and you would not call for reports. We can only call for reports after some work has been done by these panchayats. These village panchayats must work at least for a year before we could call for reports. I do not think we should now bother ourselves with the question whether we were right or not in starting these informal panchayats. The experiment was made and it is open to Honourable Members to say whether it is working well or ill, when these reports come in. Suppose we appoint this committee, the very first question that they will be faced with is this : a number of panchayats have been started and the committee will have no idea as to how they have been working. Reports are due to us next December, by which time the panchayats will have done one year's work ; we have given them a substantial amount in the budget and when these reports come, it will be time enough to consider the question of the future development of panchayats. If we then find that the appointment of a mixed committee of officials and non-officials will do any good, we will ask our non-official friends to help us ; but there is no use in asking you to sit in judgment on this question at the present moment.

"Your Excellency, I have now done. So far as the resolution of the Government of India is concerned, in regard to the main question of the constitution of local bodies, it does not say anything more than what we have been doing. I have given the council ample proof by facts and figures that we have given as large powers as possible and we also intend giving much larger powers by legislation and the two Bills will shortly be before you. There will be select committees which will consider those Bills. As regards the restrictions imposed by the rules framed under the existing Acts by the Local Fund and Municipal Account Codes, a committee has already been appointed to consider how far these restrictions could be relaxed. If I could convince myself that a mixed committee of officials and non-officials could sit usefully on the Resolution of the Government of India and advance matters, I would gladly accede to the request, but as I am not convinced, I am unable to accept this resolution."

16TH AUGUST 1918.

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I wish to move a small amendment and I am encouraged to do so from the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar. I feel that the request made in the amendment would be more acceptable to the Government than the one raised in the resolution. I beg therefore to move that the words 'to examine and' be omitted and that the words 'what further action should be taken to give full effect to' be added after the words 'report upon'."

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar seconded the amendment.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I do not think that these words would really alter the discussion on the principles of the resolution and it would not alter the position of the Honourable Member who has spoken in behalf of the Government, because the amendment really comes to the same thing as the original proposition."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I have dealt not only with the wording of the resolution but also with the substance of it. Others will have to say what they wish to say and there the thing may end."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR :—" Having heard what the Honourable Member for Government had to say, we might leave the matter in the hands of the Government and I would advise the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao to withdraw the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"So far as the amendment is concerned, I am prepared to accept it."

HIS EXCELLENCY THE PRESIDENT:—"That would not make any difference."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I am also inclined to agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar. The statement made by the Honourable Member on behalf of Government is an exhaustive one, and he promises to satisfy us in course of time. I have to point out that the policy of this Government which has been kept in view from February last is the policy that is now being pursued; but that is not the policy enunciated by the Government of India. The present policy of the Government of India is to try to have non-officials as much as possible immediately. There must be reason given for not having non-official members at once. From the long statement made, it looked as if that was the step taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; but during February, when this matter was discussed, that was not the policy. They were trying to extend the non-official element wherever they thought fit. But it is another thing to give full extension to the principle and wherever it is to be departed from it should be an exception. That should be the view which the Government should adopt. As regards self-determination who are the persons to determine this question? Is it the present municipal councils as they are constituted? Are they to decide for themselves the whole question of franchise? Whether the elective element should be two-thirds or three-fourths, or is it the local area that has to decide the question? As regards outside local areas, representation on local bodies has not been sufficiently representative of the people at large and the persons who now go in for the membership of local bodies do so with the view of making themselves known to the authorities. Therefore, the principle of self-determination has not been properly utilized. I understand that, in the case of local bodies, if I remember aright, in the Government order issued in February, their opinions were invited whether they would be prepared to have two-thirds elected members—not that they were asked to say whether they would like to have the full extent of election. Under the previous order of the Government what they have been asked to state is whether the local boards would be willing to have two-thirds elective seats. I do not know if that is the principle of self-determination that was meant to be given effect to and if that is the principle that ought to be given effect to in carrying out the Resolution of the Government of India. I will only urge that these points should be considered and we have also to consider the question of carrying out the principles enunciated in the Resolution of the Government of India. Whatever might have been done before, everything has now to be done in the spirit of the recent Resolution of the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has failed to make any reply in regard to the suggestion in the Resolution that district officers should consult district boards."

160 RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO REPORT ON PRINCIPLES CONTAINED
IN RECENT RESOLUTION ON LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

(Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [16TH AUGUST 1918.]

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“What paragraph is it?”

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—“Paragraph 5.”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“This is what the Government of India say: ‘The Government of India desire that district officers should as recommended fully than at present for consultation and advice in matters of general concern which lie outside the sphere prescribed for the activities of these boards.’ There is nothing to prevent them from doing so now; the discretion is theirs. What is present in the Honourable Member's mind, if I may venture to say so, is the last discussion on the subject—a discussion which we are not likely to easily forget—where a proposal was made that by statute we should empower local bodies to express their opinions on matters of general concern; that would have given the right to any one of the members to move a resolution on any subject. What the Government of India are proposing is that the district officers should utilize the district boards for consultation and advice on matters of general concern. I know that several district officers do so at the end of the district board meeting. If I remember aright, the Hon'ble Mr. Aziz-ud-din told us that he did it. This is essentially a matter in which we cannot force them to take action. I do not see how a committee of non-officials and officials is to help in this matter.”

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—“Is there any objection to their being advised?”

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—“No objection. No order has been issued not to consult the district boards.”

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—“I am glad the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar with his zeal in furthering the cause of local self-government has placed before this Council several facts to show that the Government have been taking steps to improve the constitution of local bodies. I know that attempts have been made to improve local self-government, and I have also referred to what is being done in my opening remarks. There is absolutely no doubt that steps are being taken to increase the elective strength of local bodies. In the first reference sent out by the Government, district boards were asked to say whether they would like to increase the elective strength and two-thirds was definitely suggested. It was in pursuance of that suggestion that the district boards went on suggesting two-thirds elective majority in their replies. He has referred to certain orders which have been passed increasing the elective element to two-thirds. But can it not be that, if the recent resolution of the Government of India had been before them the suggestion that officials should be nominated only for the purpose of consultation and advice without their having the right to vote? Then it might probably have been likely that the Government would, without limiting the elective strength to two-thirds, have suggested either the full extent of election or three-fourths of the elective element as suggested in the resolution or would have left it to the local bodies themselves to suggest to what length they would be prepared to go in the matter of election. I am only pointing out this as an instance in which there is a further scope for improvement. I have no doubt that if this resolution of the Government of India had been before the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar, his outlook would have been broader and his reference to local bodies would have taken a different shape.”

“So far as the extension of franchise is concerned, we are told that definite steps are being taken. A difference has to be made between those matters which were already considered by the Government and regarding which the Government have come to a decision and the Government are taking definite steps and those matters regarding which the Government have not taken steps and which have still to be considered. I do not know if I correctly understood the Honourable Member when he referred to the Central Government Board. He referred us to the resolution moved about the local government board and also referred us to the Standing Committee to be drawn largely from the members of the Legislative Council. Am I to understand that, while they are unable to favour the idea of a Central Government Board they are willing to consider favourably the idea of a Standing Committee. It is not quite clear why the Honourable Member made reference to the resolution moved by me and also referred to the fact that the resolution was lost, some non-officials voting against it. He referred to this with some object. Does he mean that as between the two alternative suggestions of the Government of India, the local government are not prepared to accept one, but are prepared to accept the other—namely the suggestion of a Standing Committee drawn from the Legislative Council? While we have received the information about the elective strength and franchise, I do not think we have received any definite information from the Honourable Member on that point.”

“So far as the question of legislation about village panchayats is concerned, I submit that it is not too early to take up this question notwithstanding that the information that we have about informal panchayats is not quite sufficient. Nobody says that they should be uprooted. The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar drew an illustration of one who uprooted the plant recently planted, to see whether it took root. But that illustration has no application to the question at issue. We know the function and the constitution of informal panchayats. The question definitely suggested by the Government of India is that they must be placed in possession of funds and they must have legislative powers; they suggested that a portion of the revenue should be handed over to them and they should have voluntary powers of taxation. Some of these bodies which have been created need not be done away with, but the question is whether they cannot be improved and cannot be placed in a sound financial position. These are questions which may be taken up at once. We know the circumstances under which these voluntary panchayats were started and what their constitution is. Though in respect of matters in which the Government have been moving already, namely, the increase of elective strength, the extension of franchise and the appointment of non-official members to municipalities and rural boards, the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar may have difficulty in having a mixed committee, yet in the case of new problems which have not yet been decided by the Government, such as the advisability of having a Central Board which has been placed before the Government and also the question of village panchayats, there is so much assistance which can be derived by the appointment of a committee that I hope that the Honourable Member will see his way to give effect to it. The Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has told us that he is still open to conviction and if he is only convinced of the necessity for the appointment of a committee, he, having been responsible for three committees, he would not be chary in appointing another committee. I throw out this suggestion to him that when the Government have to come to a decision on those points, on which they have not yet come to a decision, I hope they will have the assistance of a committee. I will not, therefore, divide the Council in regard to this resolution; but I hope that an attempt will be made to have a committee. With these remarks I will not press the resolution.”

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE INQUIRY INTO THE SYSTEM OF MODERATION OF MARKS FOR THE SCHOOL FINAL CERTIFICATE SCHEME.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—“I beg to move—

‘XIV. This Council recommends that His Excellency the Governor in Council be pleased to inquire into the present system of moderation of marks for the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate scheme, with a view to abolish or modify that system.’

“I do not think that, while dealing with this resolution, I need enter into any elaborate discussion of the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate scheme, which was referred to in connection with another resolution yesterday. The main point underlying this resolution is the present system of the moderation of marks for the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate scheme, which has been adopted to help boys in getting admission into colleges. Amongst the regulations laid down by the Syndicate there is one regulation which says that the marks obtained at the public examination or the marks at the school might be moderated according to a certain method suggested in order to secure admission into the college. As to the method to be adopted they definitely laid down :—‘The individual mark gained by him for the last year at school in each subject will be multiplied by the average mark for the last year at school. The figure and the result divided by the average mark of his class for the last year at school. The figure thus obtained will be added to the individual mark gained by him at the public examination and the total will then be divided by two to obtain the final moderated mark.’ The chief difficulty which has arisen on account of the system of moderated marks is owing to the uncertainty, only which has arisen on account of the system of moderated marks for school work and it has not been indefinite and unsatisfactory method of awarding marks for the school work possible to adopt any definite standard for the purpose of awarding marks for the school work which is being done at the discretion of the headmaster and his assistants. There is no doubt the provision that the inspecting officer will have to check the manner in which the marks are being awarded; but it may be fairly admitted that with the limited time at his disposal, it has not been possible for the inspecting officer to exercise an effective check over marks given for the school work as leisurely and as satisfactorily as they should be checked. This question was considered by the various inspecting officers and some of the opinions received from them are embodied in the report of the Director of Public Instruction for 1916-17 which will bear out what I say. This is what is stated by the Director of Public Instruction : ‘The system under which marks are awarded has also evoked criticism. The nature of this criticism may be gauged by the following quotations :—

“Mr. Ranaford says: ‘Giving of marks is very uneven. It is exceedingly rare to find a teacher who can give marks at all sensibly for oral work, questions which might be suitable for compositions are given in oral work, and the result is an answer of tremendous length and generally abominably expressed.’

“Mr. Brierley says: ‘There are loud complaints, however, that the marks system has invested dishonest teachers with inordinate powers, but if the inspecting agency is vigilant it is possible to minimize the causes for such complaints.’

“M.R.By. A. Rama Rao says: ‘The school marking is often found to be liberal, but this is probably no more than what should be expected, seeing that the school marking is confined to the immediate lesson, which is probably fresh in the minds of the pupils.’

“Mr. Callaghan says: ‘The system of giving marks is still unsatisfactory. Marks are seldom given for oral answers in class.’

162 RESOLUTION RE INQUIRY INTO THE SYSTEM OF MODERATION OF MARKS FOR THE SCHOOL FINAL CERTIFICATE SCHEME.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao ; Mr. Venkatapati Raju ; the President ; Mr. Stone.) [16TH AUGUST 1918.

"Mr. Champiou says: 'The marks awarded at the public examination were and are more dependable than those assigned for daily work in school. It is not surprising that college Principals and prospective employers have confined their attention almost exclusively to the marks awarded at the public examination.'

"Mr. Green says: 'Methods of marking in school may have improved theoretically, for most schools can now present a fairly sound mark scheme, but the scheme is rarely carried out satisfactorily. Masters still lack the judgment or the courage to discriminate between the good and the bad. The marks in most schools disclose a dead level of mediocrity which by no means agrees with facts. In the less efficient schools, school marks diverge too favourably from marks obtained in the public examination.'

"Then it is stated: 'It may appear to some from the foregoing remarks and from the subsequent review of the methods of teaching that the picture is gloomy, that the schools are not flourishing and that the ceremonies of dead fashions still cling too closely to the teaching. Such a conclusion would be misleading; the picture has its bright as well as its dark side, there are many successful and efficient schools, and there is no lack of vitality in the teaching. My remarks on the Secondary School-leaving Certificate Scheme may fitly end with four further quotations.' So far as the scheme is concerned, it is a good one. It is clear from this report that so far as the giving of marks in the schools is concerned, it is a matter which calls for an inquiry. The rules for the moderation of marks suggest that apart from individual cases in which teachers did not give marks properly there is a tendency to show the results properly by adjusting the marks. They give very good marks to some to show the school average low. Apart from loud complaints, referred to by one of the Inspectors, there have been complaints which the headmasters or their assistants will openly acknowledge, as to the giving of marks arbitrarily which amounts almost to jobbery. There is a case for inquiry into the system of giving marks. I do not say that the system be done away with. After an inquiry is made, it will be time enough to consider whether the system should be altered."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"I have great pleasure in seconding this proposition. The moderation of marks is not a matter which will help the candidates to secure the necessary number of marks at a public examination by moderating the class marks by certain formulæ which human ingenuity can suggest. If the examination had been conducted in the same way as examinations are conducted in other countries, there would not have been any need for moderation. There is both trust and distrust in teachers. Without any system of marks, they can allow teachers to certify as to who can go to the higher class. But when you distrust, you allow teachers to give students marks. With this hard system of examination there is a temptation in the way of teachers to manipulate the marks. If we abolish this moderation system and go back to the old system of examination, where you make the papers more difficult it will be worse. Having in view, the desirability of seeing that a proper number of candidates pass an examination either under the one system or the other, you may devise any system you like which will suit the people at large."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I understand that there has been an adjustment between the Honourable the Director of Public Instruction and the Honourable Mover by which the Honourable Mover was agreeable to an amendment that has been suggested. Would it not be better to have the final form of the resolution?"

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"This is the amended resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Who is responsible for this amended resolution? We must know who is responsible for it, having regard to the business character of this meeting."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I have no objection to the amended resolution. I have asked for an inquiry and the Director of Public Instruction says that there is no objection to having an inquiry made if there is no reference to the moderation system in the resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The words of the resolution have not been submitted to me."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"The point is that I shall have to reply either to the one resolution or the other."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao then read the modified resolution which was as follows:—

"This Council recommends His Excellency the Governor in Council be pleased to cause an inquiry be made into the manner in which marks are awarded for school work under the scheme for the award of secondary school-leaving certificates."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"Before saying anything on this resolution, I might just point out to the Council the real object of this moderation. I do not want it to go out to the world that I am in sympathy with this resolution. The object of moderation is to admit of marks, given in the school, being taken into account in determining the eligibility of persons for admission to the University course, by eliminating so far as possible differences of standard as between school and school. This moderation does not do anything to secure fair treatment as between pupil and pupil in the same school. That was not the object, but the Honourable Members said and I have also seen it in the press that teachers in some schools are sacrificing the fair treatment of their pupils in order to get favourable school average. The lower the school average is, the more favourable the moderation operates to the pupils. But the higher marks actually given to pupils make the school average high. That is the danger for the teacher who gives high marks. The Headmaster gives higher marks to pupils who do well and give less to others than what they ought to have. The Honourable Member relies a good deal on what is said in the report on Public Instruction. No inspector loudly complains as stated by him. Mr. Brierley merely says that there are loud complaints, but he does not say what he himself thinks about them. He says that 'if the inspecting agency is vigilant it is possible to minimise the causes for such complaints.' I am quite willing to accept the resolution as it stands amended that Government should cause an inquiry to be made. I am willing to have the inquiry made. The Government are not asked to initiate the inquiry, but they will ask the Director of Public Instruction to make the inquiry which he will do through his inspectors.

"I do not myself believe that there is any reason or general cause for complaint in regard to the bona fides of the staff of any school. I do not believe that the staff of any school are trying to juggle with the marks and so treat their pupils unfairly. Although I am prepared to make an inquiry and see what justification there is for these complaints, and also inquire into the general subject of giving marks, I do not wish it to be understood that I am casting any aspersions on the great body of teachers or admitting that their bona fides can be properly called into question."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"In its amended shape the resolution is so watery that it is almost worthless, and I do not know what good is going to be done by this amendment. The Government are inquiring into matters of education from time to time and this is one of those inquiries—some inquiry is to be made into some matter. The main object of the mover as disclosed in his original resolution has not been furthered. The main object of our examiners in India seems to be to plough as many candidates as possible."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I cannot allow a general discussion on the system of examinations."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"What there was in the original motion is lost in the amendment. We do not know with what object this inquiry is to be made. We know that the income-tax resolution was moved with one object, but its acceptance and enforcement defeated that object. The same is the case with regard to this resolution. I would, therefore, heartily vote against this amendment, because there are greater chances of evil coming out of it than good."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I will only make one remark. We are going to have facts before us and we can form our own opinion on the facts collected. That is what the Director of Public Instruction has in view."

The amended resolution was put and agreed to.

At this stage His Excellency proposed to adjourn the meeting.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"The next resolution would not take a minute."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If the non-official members do not object, will the Honourable Mover of the next resolution move it?"

RESOLUTION RE EXTENSION OF TIME-LIMIT FOR SUBMISSION OF RETURN OF INCOME.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"I beg to move—

"XV. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that, under the powers vested in them under section 43 of Act VII of 1918 (the Indian Income-tax Act), instruction No. 1 to Form D among the rules already published by the Local Government under the said Act in Part I of "Fort St. George Gazette" of June 4, 1918, be so modified that when assesses apply, on reasonable grounds, for an extension of time for submitting their return of income, the Collector shall have power to extend the time-limit of thirty days to such further period as he may consider proper in each case."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar seconded the resolution.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I accept the resolution."

The resolution was put and agreed to.

At this stage, the Council adjourned for a short interval and re-assembled at 2-45 p.m.

164 RESOLUTION RE EXTENSION OF THE PERIOD FOR WHICH COMPOSITION OF INCOME-TAX MAY BE PERMITTED.

(Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar ; Sir. Gordon Fraser.) [16TH AUGUST 1918.]

RESOLUTION RE EXTENSION OF THE PERIOD FOR WHICH COMPOSITION OF INCOME-TAX MAY BE PERMITTED.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"Your Excellency, the resolution that I have the honour to move is as follows :—

'XVI. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that, under the powers vested in them under section 43 of Act VII of 1918 (the Indian Income-tax Act), the time-limit of three years, given in rule 34 (iii) of the rules published by the Local Government in Part I of Fort St. George Gazette of June 14, 1918, be increased to five years as in the old Act, in the case of assessee who apply for the composition of their tax.'

"This resolution does not seek a new concession. It only requests the restoration, in the rules under the new Income-tax Act, of an arrangement which was provided for in the rules under the old Act, for the composition of tax. In the rules under the old Act, the maximum period was five years, but in the rules recently framed by Your Excellency's Government under the new Act, it is laid down that the maximum period for the composition of tax will be only three years. The reason for this reduction is not known. But I am sure, the change will be a great disadvantage, as three years will be too short a period. The Board of Revenue in their Proceedings No. 530, dated 1st March 1886, observed that 'the principle of composition being evidently calculated to obviate friction and trouble in assessment, should be extensively adopted.' Again in their Proceedings No. 62, dated 1st February 1890, the Board observed that in order to secure this object 'assessing officers should make a point of drawing the attention of the assessee to the advantages of composition.' According to the present rules, the assessee year after year have to send for accounts and information from all their places of business, however distant they may be, for the preparation of returns of income and again they have to send for the assistants and sometimes the agents also to assist the assessee in preparing the return. The same process has to be repeated a second time when the Collector holds an inquiry for ascertaining the assessable income of the assessee. Even after the inquiry is finished, it takes a long time for the account books, filed in the Collector's office, to be returned to the parties. This means a general dislocation of business and enormous and unnecessary expenditure to the assessee. Only with a view to avoid all these troubles, the Board of Revenue observed that the principle of composition should be extensively adopted.

"My Lord, the object of composition cannot be gained by reducing the period from five years to three years. The assessee who compounds his tax for three years cannot enjoy the benefit of it for more than two years. Because in the first year, he has to file as usual, all the account books in the Collector's office and send for the agents and assistants to explain them to the Collector's establishment and thus saves no trouble. I request Your Excellency's Government to consider whether two years is not too short a period. I hope the resolution will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER :—"I have much pleasure in seconding the resolution proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar that the time-limit of three years for composition should be increased to five years. There is no doubt that the arguments brought forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar are quite sound in this respect. Three years is too short a period for composition. The argument brought forward in 1890 when the Board of Revenue observed that the principle of composition being calculated to avoid friction and trouble in assessment should extensively be adopted—that argument holds good just as much now as it did 18 years ago. One of the greatest advantages obtained by this composition is that of secrecy. We all know, it is well known, that the returns sent in duly go through the office of course as confidential, but still information leaks out. And it certainly obviates friction and annoyance when an assessee or an individual can go to an income-tax collector and come to terms on information put before him for a certain period of years. Three years is too short; five years would be a better period to take. I do not know whether the Honourable Members know a well-known story of a Solicitor in Madras. It is a story that is absolutely correct and holds good in these days. The Solicitor undertook to obtain within three days the exact figures submitted by one of the well-known firms in Madras to the Collector regarding income-tax. And in getting this return he had not to spend more than As. 8. Within three days he gave the information. We also had some years ago trouble in this respect and we received an intimation from the Collector that any information submitted by us would be treated as strictly confidential. That year it was confidential. The next year the letter from the Collector's office acknowledging our return was initialled by five different people and signed by somebody else for the Collector. It was I think, in 1914 the Collector for the time being published in his report, and it was republished in the Madras Press—that the reason for the increase of revenue under income-tax was due to the large profits made by Messrs. Best & Co., and one or two other concerns. This was published in the papers. I say these things ought not to happen. Due to the constant changes we have had in the Collectorate, fifteen in five years—an undertaking given by one Collector holds good for the time that he is in office, but when another comes that is all forgotten and hence we find a letter acknowledging receipt of a return signed by five men. I hope that your Excellency's Government will do all you can to increase the term. Also I think it has been a great mistake—I do not know whether I am going outside the power of the Council in dealing with the Income-tax Act, but if I am not, I should say it is a great mistake that the companies registered under the Indian Companies Act cannot compound for income-tax. I think it is a great pity, as we have many private companies nowadays, that these companies which are not bound to publish their returns and which to all intents and purposes are exactly on the same footing as private concerns should not be enabled to come to terms with the Government in this matter of composition of income-tax for a period of years.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I do not propose to go into the merits of this matter, but I would simply mention to the Council that these rules have been issued in accordance with the directions we have received from the Government of India. In one of these directions the maximum period allowable was to be three years. I do not therefore know whether we can discuss this in the local Council. It will be more appropriate if some Honourable Member in the Imperial Council brings it up there. It is an imperial matter. We cannot therefore take it upon ourselves. I would suggest that the Honourable Member, if so minded, might arrange to have this question brought up in the Imperial Council."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"I am sorry to hear that the Madras Government are unable to do anything in this matter. But I am glad that the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar sympathizes with us the assessee and that he will be able to move the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR (interrupting) :—"I did not say anything about my sympathy one way or the other nor do I propose to move the Government of India."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The proper course is to get the Madras representative in the Imperial Council to move in the matter."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"It will be much better if the Madras Government also move the Imperial Government to consider the importance of the matter. It concerns both European and Indian concerns. It is a matter in which the Madras Government should address the Government of India. I do not propose to press this resolution, but I hope the Government will be pleased to address the Government of India."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I see that we cannot even discuss this resolution, as we are acting on the strict instructions of the Government of India. I was under the impression that we were free to discuss the resolution; but my Honourable Friend seems to think that we cannot. The best course for the Honourable Gentleman is to endeavour to raise it in the Imperial Legislative Council. That is what our representatives are there for."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"I only want that the Government should communicate to the Government of India the strong desire of the people here for the proposed change."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I think the Honourable Member must accept my Honourable Friend's assurance that he cannot do anything in the matter."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER :—"Is it not possible to recommend the matter to the Government of India?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"We had already sent up our recommendations and then the Government of India sent us the rules. So at this moment it will not be of any service to address the Government."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"Am I to understand that the Madras Government already addressed the Government of India?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I am not at liberty to disclose the correspondence that has passed between this Government and the Government of India; but this order has come as a result of correspondence on income-tax matters and we cannot address the Government of India now. If, as His Excellency suggests, you can make a representation in the Imperial Council and they make a reference to us, it will be our duty to ascertain the wishes of non-officials in the matter. But we cannot intervene in the matter now."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—"I do not think it will be of any use to press my resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Honourable Member is taking the right course. His interest will not be prejudiced by the course he is taking."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

166 RESOLUTIONS RE TALUK COMMITTEES TO CO-OPERATE WITH DISTRICT COMMITTEES IN CONTROLLING PRICES AND CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF ADVISORY COMMITTEES FOR CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS.

(Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.) [10TH AUGUST 1918.]

RESOLUTION RE TALUK COMMITTEES TO CO-OPERATE WITH DISTRICT COMMITTEES IN CONTROLLING PRICES.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR :—" In view of the answer given by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew the other day, I propose to withdraw the next resolution. The resolution ran as follows :

"XVII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that referring to G Os. No. 2078, Revenue, dated 29th May 1918, and No. 2258, Revenue, dated 13th June 1918, regarding the control of high prices of commodities of general use and the constitution of emergency committees in each district for this purpose, taluk committees be also organized with representative non-officials for co-operating with the district committees for attaining the object desired."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE CONSTITUTION AND POWERS OF ADVISORY COMMITTEES FOR CHARITABLE ENDOWMENTS.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—" My Lord, I beg to move—

"XVIII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that G.O. No. 2505, Revenue, dated 2nd July 1918, be reconsidered and that powers be conferred on advisory committees to make recommendations to the Board of Revenue or the Government as the case may be and that the local agents referred to be also members of such advisory committees to report to them and take their decision before taking further action."

"It might be within the memory of this Council that two resolutions were moved for the purpose of making an inquiry into the conditions of charitable endowments and for collection of information regarding them and placing them on a basis that will be profitable both to the Province and to the charities concerned. The proposal was to request the Government to take steps to bring in a Bill which will properly see to the administration of these charitable endowments. The matter was in charge of a special officer, I suppose, and the latest order of the Government has been issued—G.O. No. 2505, dated 2nd July 1918 and that is the Government Order upon which the present resolution is moved. With regard to the advisory committee the Board recommends in paragraph 4 of that Government Order :—"The Board has considered the various suggestions made regarding the constitution of advisory committees. It doubts whether these committees would be of any real use but has no objection to their being tried. A committee may be formed for each taluk or independent Deputy Tahsildar's division and may consist of not less than three and not more than seven members appointed by the Divisional Officer, the members being selected from among the non-officials resident at the places in the area where charitable endowments are most numerous or where the most important institutions are to be found. No one however who is connected with an institution should be on the committee. To save the correspondence regarding their appointment the members may be allowed to hold office for life or until they resign. They may elect their own presidents. As the main function of the members of these committees will be to lay information before the local agents and to hold inquiries when they are asked and are willing to do so the Board considers that no rules for their guidance are necessary. My Lord, I read that full paragraph only with a view to make it clear that from the beginning to the end the advisory committees are to be treated almost as unnecessary and as could not work. The Government Order on it says 'The Government hereby appoint all Deputy Tahsildars to be local agents.' They say with regard to advisory committees that the 'Government are of opinion that the duties of advisory committees should be defined, that members should hold office for five years and that provision should be made for the removal of a member who does not attend to his duties. The Board is accordingly requested to frame rules for the guidance of advisory committees.' The Government do not apparently agree with the Board that these committees will be meaningless bodies, and they can be really of no use in the matter. They want to place them under some rules. The last sentence in the paragraph I quoted from the Board's recommendation says 'As the main function of the members of these committees will be to lay information before the local agents and to hold inquiries when they are asked and are willing to do the Board considers that no rules for their guidance are necessary. So far as the local agents and their powers are concerned, the Government approve of the suggestions made by the Board and also constitute the Deputy Tahsildars as local agents. And what these advisory committees are to do, of course they have asked for rules being framed. Apparently the Government also expect that the function of the members of these proposed committees will be to lay information when asked. They do not seem to disapprove of that. Therefore the advisory committees will be practically used or not used as the local agents, the Deputy Tahsildars, require them to do or not to do. And if they are willing they may act and only for such purposes. Therefore it will be practically constituting advisory committees for nothing and they won't be willing to act especially when the local agents are given absolute power to use or not to use them—deputy tahsildars who may be in sympathy with the persons in charge of the charities. An advisory committee which was sought to be constituted so may not be useful in collecting information as to the nature of these endowments, as to the way moneys have to be expended, as to the way actually the intentions of the founders are carried out by the people in charge. If the local agents want such advisory committees, all of them together should co-operate; and they will certainly work properly and get the necessary information and place it before the Government or the Board for such action as the local agents together with other members may decide upon. If, on the other hand the local agent who is a deputy tahsildar is to be the person to ask the advisory board to act or if the advisory board has to make a recommendation through him no member of the committee will be inclined to take such steps as to go against the wishes of the local agent. In fact, though we have had divisional officers as local agents till now, the deputy tahsildars and others under the divisional officers have all been working in this way in connexion with charitable endowments. Even under the regulations they are the persons that are expected to communicate with the officers and have the right to supervise and communicate to Board matters for orders. What has been felt is that that system has not been working properly and this has been recognized by the present Government Order and the report made by the Board on the Government Order. This has not been recognized by the previous G.O. No. 1535, Revenue, dated the 6th July 1916. Under these circumstances I submit it is not proper to have a deputy tahsildar as local agent, if he is to supervise these advisory committees which are not to act of their own motion but when he is willing to ask them; that is the local agent may choose to ask. What is the use of constituting three-fourths of it into an advisory committees to do business which the local agent may ask them to do? The whole complaint has been that the local agent has been doing nothing. I therefore want that these advisory bodies should be bodies in which the local agent should be one of the members and that body may collect information, when requested to prepare statistics or a list of endowments that may be necessary. It is only proper that in this connexion the recent press communiqué of the Government of India dated the 2nd August 1918 on a suggestion of His Excellency the Viceroy has decided to form a central "Charity Organisation Board." They are considering charities for war purposes but other charities are also asked to be examined and arrangements are to be made for preparing a list of charitable endowments. That Government Order also is in connexion with this. When these proposals are made, it is only proper that these local agents are not left alone to act, but advisory committees consisting of local people should be asked to collect information and prepare lists, and the local agent should be made to utilize the advisory committee whether he likes or no. The advisory board should be empowered to take such action as they are authorized to take. Without the constitution of an advisory committee of that sort the whole recommendation made may not work quite well and will only stand in the same state in which it stood before."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramannuja Achariyar seconded the resolution.

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—" Your Excellency, the care of these charitable endowments is vested in the Board of Revenue by Regulation VII of 1817. It lays down what the duties of the Board are, and then it goes on, in order to enable the Board to carry out its duties, to appoint local agents in each district. These local agents in 1817 were officials. Then the regulation goes on to say, that it will be the duty of the local agent to obtain information from the public records regarding endowments, report the names of trustees, report vacancies, trustee or manager and so on. The Regulation thus clearly lays certain duties on the local agents. This resolution on the other hand proposes that before the local agent takes action he shall consult the advisory committee. The advisory committee has no statutory position. It is a new creation; it has not been tried. It is an experiment. To tell the local agent not to take any action except through the advisory committee as this resolution proposes, is in fact in conflict with the provisions of the Regulation. Has the time arrived when we should alter the law? That time will be when these advisory committees have been tried and have proved their value and their usefulness. It may then be desirable to make over the charge of charitable endowments to them subject to the supervision of the Board of Revenue, and by amending this Regulation remove the legal difficulty which stands in the way of adopting the course suggested by this resolution. These advisory bodies have not been tried; they are in the experimental stage; they have been just constituted. It is obvious that it would be premature to do away with the system laid down in the regulation till we have given time for the experiment to work and until we see how these advisory committees work. The Honourable Member's proposal is thus premature. The first thing to do is to form these advisory committees and when we have got them we have to define their functions which we have not yet done. The rules for that purpose are being framed by the Board and will be shortly sent up to Government. When we have formed the committees and defined their functions and they carry on their work, if they prove successful we shall be prepared to remodel this part of the Regulation and give them power to a great extent to deal with these charitable endowments off their own bat. There is no fear that they will not be given a fair opportunity of proving their utility. The Honourable Member says that the local committees will be useful in collecting information as to how the endowments are spent. I think that they will be able to get very valuable information. I do not think he need be afraid that this method will not be given a fair trial. He should wait for a few years and see if the local committees are useful. If they are useful, I am sure that the Board of Revenue—they have expressly said so in the reference—will be glad to hand over the similar charitable endowments to these local committees. In the meantime I would suggest to the Honourable Member that no useful purpose will be served by pressing this resolution because the law makes it impossible to accept it and it is too soon to attempt to alter the law."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"If there was any other difficulty, I should not have thought of speaking further. But as the legal difficulty is suggested, I do not think there is any force in that portion of the argument. I do not want these committees to be local agents. I do not want statutory powers to be given to these committees. I only want that the advisory committees should be constituted with the local agents as members. It is not as if I go against the provisions of the Regulation. To amend the Act they want an experiment to be tried. If the experiment is to be a success, there must be some change in the present conditions of the body which is newly started. The local agents have been found not to work well till now. The work of the charitable endowments has not been carefully checked, the matter has not been sifted. Apparently the Board do not think the advisory committee useful because they have only to act when the local agents refer the matter to them. That is the understanding on which they proceed. I do not want these committees to be wholly constituted into local agents. Nor do I want recognition of them under the law. Now they cannot act independently. I say do not make the deputy tahsildars or other people act. He may be a member of the advisory committee. When they meet and express their views the deputy tahsildar may make a report. They will see that charitable endowments are brought under the list. I do not say at all that if the whole thing is done bona fide the officer in the department will not be able to find out the truth and put the whole thing in order; but for some reason or other the people in charge of the department of charitable endowments do not want to be disturbed. I suggest not that the law should be altered but there must be some arrangement which will give an impetus to the matter. The local agent will be one of the advisory committee. If they meet once a month or once a quarter or when there is a reminder from the Board, they will be able to sift the whole matter. If that is the only difficulty, I would request the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew to consider the matter."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Does the Honourable Gentleman wish the resolution to be put to the Council?"

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"I would just point out to the Council that the last line of the resolution says 'that the local agents referred to be also members of such advisory committees to report to them and take their decision before taking further action.' The local agents are not to act except with the permission of the advisory committee. But the Regulation says to the contrary. This resolution is therefore in conflict with the regulation and therefore I cannot accept it."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I do not propose to withdraw their discretion."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If the language of the resolution means that he is not to follow the decision of the committee, then it is not clear; it is ambiguous."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Before further action is taken, let him consult them."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"You had better withdraw the resolution, and then I will consider what duties should be laid on the advisory committees and what their position would be in regard to the local agent."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Am I to understand that the Government will consider whether the local agent will be one of the advisory committee?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The fact is the Honourable Gentleman's resolution is not in clear language; it is not plain; it is really impossible for the Council to commit itself to a resolution which is open to two meanings. The Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew offers to relieve the Honourable Member from the difficulty of having the resolution negatived, by saying that he will consider in the rules the duties of the committee. I advise the Honourable Gentleman to accept that."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I want to know whether an attempt will be made to include the local agent in the advisory committee."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"He has not said that."

The resolution was put to the Council and lost.

RESOLUTION RE INCREASED ACCOMMODATION IN INTERMEDIATE 169 CLASSES OF GOVERNMENT COLLEGES.

16TH AUGUST 1918] (Mr. Yaqub Hasan)

RESOLUTION RE INCREASED ACCOMMODATION IN INTERMEDIATE CLASSES OF GOVERNMENT COLLEGES.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur moved the following resolution of which he had given notice:—

"XIX. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that steps be taken to increase, next year, the accommodation in the Intermediate classes of the Presidency College and other Government colleges to twice their present strength."

In doing so he said:—"The number of students to whom certificates were granted on the results of the last Secondary School-Leaving Certificate examination was 2,411. I had put an interpolation to find out how many students out of this 2,411 have found admission in the various arts colleges; but that information was not furnished to me, and I am compelled to fall back upon the figures of last year to show the necessity for increased accommodation in the colleges especially in Government colleges. Last year the number of those declared as eligible for admission into colleges was 2,919. The strength in that year, in all the arts colleges in this Presidency, of the Junior Intermediate classes was 2,522. In this number of course is included the number of those who have not been promoted to the senior class and also the number of students from Native States. So all the remaining students who were not admitted must presumably have gone to other branches of study or voluntarily given up university education. The number of those who were denied collegiate education is sufficiently large to deserve our consideration."

"At present the system of admission into colleges is pernicious. All the students who have been declared eligible for admission into arts colleges are not admitted. The colleges exercise their discretion; they select the best students available out of the applicants and reject the others. The result is that the students go from college to college, and wherever they find admission they join. Some of them have to go long distances even though there is a college in their own town. The educational institutions by adopting this mode of selection reduce themselves to the level of an ordinary trade when they try to secure the best raw material in the shape of students in order to produce the best results that will bring credit to the institutions. It is not so much the spread of education, but the reputation of the college that is kept in view. It is this unhealthy competition which is bad. The colleges which are not so well situated and which have not a high reputation have to be content with the refuse of other colleges. That gives them a rather lower position, comparatively speaking."

"The Presidency College is the worst sinner in this respect. The standard of selection of students is very high. It is said it is a model college which should maintain a standard of perfection in every respect and therefore it should be open only to the best and most brilliant students. I do not think a model college ought to do that. A model college should take students who are not so brilliant and by stint of their attention make them really capable students. Then their credit will be greater than will be the case otherwise. Colleges which have schools attached to them probably first take boys of their own school, and if they do not take them I think they ought to be compelled to give preference to their own students; then they should show preference to the students of the town and then the students of the district and then students from the surrounding districts. But here in the Presidency College there are more students from the junior intermediate class from Tanjore than from Madras itself. There are 18 in the first year class. Out of the total strength of the college there are 106 students from Tanjore whereas the students from Madras in all the classes in the college number only 58. That I consider to be unfair competition with another Government college in the Tanjore district itself, namely the Kumbakonam College, because the Presidency College takes away the best Tanjore students. I can understand students coming to Madras from districts where there are no colleges, and students coming to the B.A. class from districts where there are no first grade colleges. But they are coming to Madras on account of the superior facilities that exist in Madras. A better arrangement would be that students who pass from colleges in Madras should study in Madras itself and other students should be encouraged to go to the colleges nearest to them. I find in the case of the Rajahmundry college the largest number of its students come from Godavari, next to that from Kistna; and the two districts serve the need of the Rajahmundry college. In the Kumbakonam college also the bulk of the students are from the Tanjore district. So my remarks which apply to the Presidency college do not apply to the Kumbakonam or the Rajahmundry college, as far as the districts from which the students are taken are concerned. To a student who goes a long distance from his own town for his education, it is immaterial whether he goes a long distance or a short distance. He would prefer to go to Madras, rather than elsewhere because it is the capital town and provides more facilities in the matter of accommodation, hostels, etc. So Madras has to provide not only for Madras town itself, but also for other districts."

"The accommodation in the Madras Colleges is not at all adequate or reasonable as compared with the accommodation that we find in the colleges in the mufassal. There are four colleges in Madras. In the Pachaiyappa's college there are 243 students in the first-year class, in the Christian College there are 161, in the Wesley College 108 and in the Presidency College only 96. There are two colleges in the Ganjam district with a strength of 17 and 29 respectively."

170 RESOLUTION RE INCREASED ACCOMMODATION IN INTERMEDIATE CLASSES OF GOVERNMENT COLLEGES.

[16TH AUGUST 1918.]

In Vizagapatam there are two colleges with 70 and 80 respectively. Godavari has two colleges with 85 and 80; Kistna one college with 51; Guntur one college with 38; in Kurnool there is no college; in Bellary there is no college. In Anantapur there is one college with 17 students in the first class; Cuddapah and Nellore have no colleges. So also Chingleput. North Arcot has one college with 48; Chittoor 24; Salem 33; Coimbatore 36. Nilgiris has no college; so also South Arcot. In Tanjore there are two colleges with 118 and 80. Trichinopoly has two colleges with 286 and 227; Madura two colleges with 101 and 73. Ramnad has no college. Tinnevely has two colleges with 15 and 97. Malabar has four colleges with 93, 17, 43 and 52; South Kanara has two colleges with 88 and 61. That is how the students are spread in the 22 districts. There are eight colleges in the five districts in the north, with about 400 students. There is no college in Cuddapah, Nellore, Chingleput, Nilgiris, South Arcot and Ramnad.

"Out of the 2,500 students last year there were 377 students in the five Government colleges; 400 in Municipal colleges; in the 12 Mission colleges there were about 1,000 students and there were 742 in private colleges. All this is of course in the first-year class. It is the Mission colleges that provide for the largest number of students in the Intermediate classes and our thanks are due to them for this provision. The Government provide for half of what the private agencies provide, one-fourth of what the missions provide and a little more than one-eighth of the total number. The Government's share in providing accommodation for Intermediate classes is not enough. My proposition, therefore, is that the accommodation should be increased to double its present strength, that is 750 instead of 377. That will not be considered a tall order.

"This provision can be made, I am sure, with very little extra initial cost to the State. There may be building accommodation in some of the colleges to have larger classes; in some, buildings may have to be extended and some more furniture put in, but the recurring annual expenditure will not be any perceptible increase, because there is no limit to the classes in colleges and a larger number of students can be taught by the same staff as at present. I do not ask for the opening of new colleges although there is a great demand for them in some districts. All that I say is that the existing accommodation should be increased. In the Presidency College there is greater need for increasing the accommodation, for it is practically the University College; the students prefer the Presidency College because they wish to complete their education in that College, because they expect there will be better facilities for them in the B.A. course after they pass the Intermediate course; besides the best and most up to date arrangements are made in that College in all the subjects especially scientific subjects. That is a further inducement for students to go there.

"As for the cost of maintaining these colleges—I think it is important—the total cost of all the colleges is Rs. 13,31,000 of which more than half, that is Rs. 7,11,000 was recovered in the shape of fees. So nearly Rs. 6,20,000 was provided by the managing authorities. Of this Rs. 6,20,000, the Government spent Rs. 71,000 on their own colleges, and they gave Rs. 1,21,000 in the shape of grants. The municipalities spent Rs. 1,16,000 on their own college; and the Mission colleges spent Rs. 1,21,000 and private agencies about Rs. 88,000 on eleven colleges. It has to be admitted that the people in general have not taken their legitimate share in providing for collegiate education. Out of thirty-one colleges there are eleven private colleges of which four are maintained by Zamindars, two by Rajas, that is, one by a Maharaja and one by a Zamindar. So that the private colleges are seven of which the Pachaiyappa's college is maintained from an endowment at a total annual cost of Rs. 91,000 of which Rs. 81,000 is recovered from fees. The Theosophical College spent Rs. 18,000 in the year besides the fees recovered—the largest expenditure by any private agency. Next to that comes the Madura College which spent Rs. 8,000. The Tinnevely and the Coimbatore Hindu Colleges spent only Rs. 2,800 and Rs. 3,900 respectively. Considering this, it was really surprising that the Mussalmans undertook to maintain the Mussalman College at an annual cost of Rs. 24,000. The Mussalmans will remember with gratitude the annual donation of Rs. 12,000 by his Exalted Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad. It is really a matter for regret that the interference of the local Government has frustrated that scheme at present. Assuming that the College was intended to be open to Hindus, Christians and Muhammadans, had it come into existence, the students for whom I am pleading would have found admission in that college. It would not have been a purely Mussalman College as the Madrasa-i-Azam or a purely Hindu College as the Pachaiyappa's. That is the reason why I am asking for increased accommodation in the Intermediate classes in Government colleges. I may take this opportunity to appeal to my fellow countrymen to start some more colleges. The initial cost alone is great and prohibitive, but their maintenance itself is not so very costly especially when students pay fees and are anxious to take advantage of the education.

"There is a fear that the University may raise difficulties as it has done on the ground of unfair competition or on the plea of education not being of high quality. These are things which we must take into account and must struggle against in providing more facilities for education. I hope that in dealing with this question the objection will not be brought forward that by increasing this accommodation the Government will make education cheap or will make the quality lower. I do not think I have that fear. The University may say that it is better to give the best education to a few than any education to a larger number. My principle is that a larger number should be given some education rather than a few should be given good education. As it is, only 2,500 students are considered fit to go to a college out of 9,000. A little more liberality shown will increase the number of students coming up, and there will be more accommodation necessary for them in the colleges. I have shown that the Government's share as it is, is not adequate and should be increased. Therefore I have brought this resolution which I trust will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I beg to second the resolution. The Government have recently taken a bold step forward in taking over a number of complete secondary schools and starting a number of incomplete secondary schools. It follows as a corollary that the accommodation in the Intermediate classes should be increased. This resolution suggests that accommodation in the Intermediate classes in the Presidency College and other Government colleges should be increased. Even if that is done, it would not meet the demand. The increase in the number of secondary schools must mean that a greater number of students will have to go to the colleges. I hope there will be no difficulty in accepting this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. STONE:—"Your Excellency, I am constantly being told that students cannot get admission into the colleges, because there is no room for them. I myself have received no complaints from students that because there is no accommodation they could not get admission into colleges. People complain to me about a large variety of things, and if there has been this difficulty I should have received such complaints. It is not as if students would get admission into the colleges where they want to go. It is not true that a large number of students cannot get admission because there is no accommodation. If you take the number of students in the colleges during the last two years in the Junior and the Senior Intermediate classes, you will find that in 1914-15	the total number was	5,394

1916-17	"	4,624, i.e., a diminution of 800

The reason for that decrease is in that year a restriction by the University upon the Principals admitting students into the Intermediate classes was introduced. That explains the sudden fall in the number. In 1915-16 the colleges had 5,546 students, in 1916-17 there were only 4,624. Therefore there was room for about 800 students more. The figures for 1917-18 are not yet published. Therefore, it seems to me clear that there is room enough for more students. I do not accept the fundamental hypothesis that there is no room for students in colleges. The University did not ask the colleges what accommodation they had, but they are going to ask, so that we might know what accommodation we have in our affiliated colleges. Until we know that, we cannot do anything more. So far as the actual seats in the colleges go, they are sufficient. The Honourable Member will probably say they are not sufficient because all students who wish to go to the Government colleges must be able to do so.

"If he will remember the policy of the Government in regard to the Government colleges, I think he will see the reason why the Government could not unhesitatingly accept his position. These Government colleges have been maintained to serve as models for the maintenance of a good collegiate standard and not for supplying all students with places therein. The Government have departed somewhat from the policy of model colleges, because they have lately opened one or two more colleges with a view to providing special classes for special reasons—the Queen Mary's College and the Ceded Districts College. The Queen Mary's College meets a special need and the Ceded Districts College was opened because those districts could not open one and they had to be helped. More recently we opened a college for Muhammadans. In these respects the Government have departed somewhat from the idea of model colleges; but the Government have not gone so far as to provide for as many seats as there are students who wish to go to Government colleges. The Honourable Member seems to think that all the students who wish to attend the Presidency College ought to be able to do so. The Presidency College is maintained as a standard. It is supposed to furnish the best collegiate education. That is the object of maintaining the Presidency College. In order that you may carry on education in the best sense you must be allowed to choose persons whom you will admit. If you will admit all and sundry because their parents live in Madras, you must depress the level of education carried on there. A college is judged not only by teachers but by students, and in order to have a college of the kind which we wish the Presidency College to be you must have a select class of students. Therefore the Presidency College applies a severer test for selection than other colleges. That is perfectly justifiable.

"Then the Honourable Member thinks that the people of the locality must be able to send their sons to the local college, just as there is a police station in a particular locality. I wonder how people would like it, if for instance people in Anantapur were told that they should not send their students except to the Anantapur College. People select a distant college because the education they get in the particular college is better than the education they get in their own locality. I may remark that it matters a great deal to a student whether he goes to a college 30 miles off or 300 miles off. The Honourable Member seems to think that the students do not care how far they go provided there was no college within the town. Then the territorial distribution of colleges or this limitation of attendance in colleges is an impossible thing.

"Then as to the specific proposal that the number of admissions into the Intermediate classes should be doubled, it is not such a perfectly simple thing as the Honourable Member thinks. It will be a difficult thing to find a place for building in the Presidency College; it will be easier with the Kumbakonam and Rajahmundry colleges, but there will be considerable difficulty with regard to the staff. If the Government thought that there should be accommodation for double the number, the Government would not mind the difficulty. I know the Government are not prepared to be tied down in this way to the special course of development. The Government have given every proof that they are willing to develop colleges; for instance they have started three colleges, and the staffs of other colleges have been decidedly increased a good deal with a view to the better teaching of the Intermediate classes. That shows, to my mind, that the Government are not less mindful of the needs of collegiate education. The Government will continue to pursue the development of the colleges in the ways suitable to them. In not accepting this resolution the meaning of the Government is that they are not prepared to tie themselves down to the development of collegiate education in the way the Honourable Member asks for."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"The Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction says that he has not received complaints about want of accommodation. There is a general complaint of want of accommodation. I would earnestly urge upon the attention of the Government to increase the accommodation in Government and other affiliated colleges."

The Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"Your Excellency, I have listened to the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan with something like amazement. The whole principle of education laid down by the Government of India is that Government colleges should be model colleges. He complains that the Government are not taking their proper share in the education of the country. But the Government's idea of education is that it should be on an aided basis, that the Government should support aided colleges and should carry on one or two Government colleges with a view to being model institutions."

"The other point that amazed me was that he would deprive the parents of their freedom, a most unusual procedure, and make them send their children to the colleges in their own towns. Suppose a parent were asked to send his children to Oxford or Cambridge, what consternation would it produce! Further Government education is very expensive; it costs the Government ten times what it costs them to aid institutions."

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"My Lord, when I proposed this resolution, I knew that the Government were prepared to develop collegiate education as much as possible and they were doing their best to provide for collegiate education. I only wanted them to do a little more. It is not that I complain that they are doing very little, but I want them to do more. If I omit the words "twice their present strength," even then it may not have been acceptable to the Hon'ble Mr. Stone, for he says he will not bind himself to develop the colleges on the lines laid down by me. The Government colleges being model colleges do not cease to be model ones by increasing the accommodation. They will continue to be model institutions."

"It has been said by the Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. Pittendrigh that Government education is expensive. That is also one reason why I suggest this. If accommodation is increased, the cost of education will be reduced to half the present amount. That will reduce the cost of educating a boy in a Government college. These Government colleges in the mufassal are not model colleges. They are provided only for the requirements of the district. Only the Presidency College can claim to be a model college. The Hon'ble Mr. Stone asked whether, if all them. I see no reason why accommodation should be provided for students in the Madras town or in the Presidency want to get into the best college you may at least make it possible for a large number to get into that College; you should not confine it to a very small number. Ninety-seven in the first Intermediate class is really too small, whereas in other colleges we have 250 students. Why not the Presidency College have 150?"

"It is said that accommodation in all colleges is enough for all those who go in for collegiate education, but my experience is not of this year. Last year there were many who could not get admission and they had to go without education. By the time they knew the result of their application the time of admission was over. Because no complaint was made to the Director of Public Instruction, he cannot conclude there is accommodation in the colleges."

"As regards my remark that students should be made to go to the nearest college, it has been taken in a different light from what I had in mind. At any rate the Hon'ble the Rev. Mr. Pittendrigh said it would take away the freedom of the parents to send their children to whatever colleges they liked. If it is the freedom of the parents, it will be a different matter. Students are now compelled to go long distances. If you get statistics from colleges, you will find students in Ganjam whose parents are in Madras. Who will dream of doing so except that he could not get accommodation into any of the colleges here simply because no Madras college would admit? Freedom is not given to parents to send their boys to the colleges they like. Circumstances compel them to send them away. At any rate I am very glad that the Government will try their best to provide more facilities. It is not the present number that has to be taken into consideration, but the number that may come hereafter. Limited accommodation in colleges has a serious effect on the results of the Secondary School Leaving Certificate examination. The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar pleaded for the students who failed for want of one mark. What is the use of giving that mark to them when there is no more accommodation in colleges and they cannot get admission into colleges? Limited accommodation in colleges has an injurious effect upon the number of passes, i.e., the number of boys declared eligible for admission which tends to be kept low. I do not say it is intentionally kept low, but with the importance that is attached to collegiate education and owing to the high standard of English with 40 per cent minimum, only 2,500 are considered fit for collegiate education. If you had a larger accommodation you will have a larger number passing the Secondary School Leaving Certificate examination and there will be more boys going to the colleges."

The resolution was put to the Council and lost.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We have to consider how we are to finish the agenda. Some gentlemen wish to leave Madras to-night. Does the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan move all his resolutions?"

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Yes."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO:—"I want to catch the train. If Your Excellency will give me ten minutes' time, I will move resolution No. XXVIII."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If the Council has no objection, we will take No. XXVIII."

Resolution No. XXVIII was then taken up.

RESOLUTION RE SCALE OF WATER-RATES.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao, the following resolution which stood against his name was moved by the Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao:—

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO:—"The resolution that has been entrusted to me by the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao runs as follows:—

'XXVIII. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the existing scale of water-rates should not be increased as suggested in notification No. 345, dated 18th July 1918.'

"My Lord, by a Government Order issued on the 18th July 1918, a notification published in the Fort St. George Gazette it was announced that the water-rates charged for irrigation in the tracts to which sections A, B, C, D, G and H of Appendix I to Board's Standing Order No. 4 apply will be hereafter Rs. 6-4-0 for group I, Rs. 4-3-0 for group II, and Rs. 3-2-0 for group III per acre for each wet crop and the scales for dry crop and dufassal crop are also given. My Lord, this differential system of the water-rates (of charging water-rates on a differential system and also making a difference with regard to dry lands that are occasionally irrigated) has come into vogue since the resettlement in 1899, and those that are regularly irrigated) has come into existence in both the Kistna and Godavari deltas, that is in the Western, Eastern and Central deltas of the Godavari district. My Lord, it has been before the Government and the Board of Revenue whether this system of charging water-rates on dry lands on a differential system and taking also into account the occasionally irrigated rates on dry lands on a differential system is complicated or simple. The Board has gone into this question and also the Collectors have given their opinion upon this matter. Now there are obvious advantages and disadvantages in this system of charging differential water-rates and arriving at a rate at which water-rates should be charged for dry lands. By deducting the dry rate from the wet rate it will be practically easy for the Revenue authorities to go on. In this system of charging there is no doubt an obvious advantage since it is theoretically a very reasonable and also a very perfect method of arriving at the exact rates of water-cess that should be charged per acre of dry land. It is a great disadvantage, inasmuch as the rates that have to be determined for the various classes of dry land would have to be determined chiefly by the karnams who naturally will have a great deal of influence in the matter. It is also to be said as an advantage in favour of this differential system of water-rate that the crop that is irrigated will be considered, whether the crop that is raised on the dry land is an occasionally irrigated crop or a regularly irrigated crop. Even the nature of the cultivation of the particular dry land is taken into consideration as also the source which commands that dry land. This differential water system is perfect if it can be carefully and justly worked. But sometimes it is a very difficult process and the Board of Revenue looking at the difficulty of arriving at the calculations appear to have been considering for sometime that it will be advantageous to have a fixed water-rate for all the dry lands and adopt the new system of charging for water on a fixed scale. The Collectors reporting on this as to how occasionally and regularly irrigated crops in connexion with this new system of calculating water-rates on dry land are likely to fare gave their opinions as follows. Mr. Elwin points out that 'whatever may be the financial effects of levelling down the distinction between these kinds of crops, the incidence itself seems inequitable, as for instance, a gingelly crop watered only twice or thrice and a chilly crop systematically irrigated will pay the same rate."

"Mr. Turing also says 'It is distinctly advantageous to abolish, if possible, the distinction, often rather a fine one, between "occasional" and "systematic" irrigation.' My Lord, while this differential water-rate system is in vogue in the deltaic tracts of Godavari and Kistna, a fixed water-rate is being charged in all zamindari areas and the whole inam villages and minor inams. A rate of Rs. 5 per acre is charged for supplying water for dry crop. But now under the notification published in the Fort St. George Gazette, dated the 18th July the rate is to be made Rs. 6-4-0 for wet crop per acre in group I and Rs. 4-3-0 per acre in group II, Rs. 3-2-0 for land under group III and for lands in the zamindari area also which are now being charged on a fixed water-rate system at the rate of Rs. 5, the charge will be the same; that is in the zamindari and the whole inam villages and private inams the charge for water for dry land will be Rs. 6-4-0 for group I, and so on instead of Rs. 5 as hitherto. My Lord, in answer to an interpellation which has been put by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao asking for information with regard to details of lands and areas, etc., that will be affected by this Government Order, the Government stated that they were not in a position to give full information. I am alive to the difficulties of the situation. It is not possible for the Government now to give any detailed figures or to have any clear idea about this matter. It is a very complicated and difficult matter to arrive at figures or to obtain definite information in regard to this matter.

"I may also bring to the notice of this Council that there are five classes which are recognized under the present system of differential water-rates which will hereafter be brought down to three classes. In the Government Order, it is stated that the first and second classes will be classed as first, the third as second, and the fourth and fifth will be hereafter in the third class. Most of the lands which are already in the first class and also such lands in Bhimavaram and other taluks which are at present under class II would hereafter be brought under class II. In these districts there are zamindari tracts some of which are at present in class II but they will hereafter be brought under class I and the charge upon these lands will now be Rs. 6-4-0 instead of Rs. 5. The one matter which I want to bring to the notice of this Council is by this Government Order not only some dry lands in the ryotwari tracts will be affected but a large number of lands in the zamindari areas will also be affected and the water-rate on these dry lands will become enhanced from Rs. 5 to Rs. 6-4-0. The Government Order was published on the 18th July and the public were asked to make representations before 20th September. It is a very short time. I do not say that this differential water-rate system with its complicated calculation must be continued and I am perfectly convinced of the soundness of charging a fixed water-rate provided that it does not unduly enhance the rates which are now being paid by the people affected by this Government Order. I request that this matter may be considered and in giving up this differential water-rate calculation and charging a fixed water-rate consideration may be paid to seeing that the persons who have now been paying a certain rate are not made to pay more than what they have been paying hitherto.

"My Lord, there is one other matter. There are about 1 lakh acres of bapat land. They will cease to be under dry portion. At present the localization of wet areas is being made in the Kistna district. In the Godavari district some experiments are being made with regard to the supply of water. The season is very unfavourable and the crops last year were not as good as was expected.

"Taking all these things into consideration I request that the Government will be pleased to see that the rate charged under this notification are not enforced and the water-rates that are being at present charged are not enhanced as suggested in the Government Order. At least I request Your Excellency's Government to give some time to enable people to make representation and also to enable Government to go into this matter very fully and see whether or not they cannot effect their purpose by not charging more than what they have been charging at present as water-rate on dry land. With these words I commend this resolution to the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"I beg to second this resolution. Any proposal made in this Council proposing a change of water-rate will meet with considerable opposition on behalf of the Government. But in this particular case when the effect of this notification is to increase the existing water-rates I wish to know whether sufficient notice has been given to the persons affected to make proper representation. I know that in several previous cases whenever resolutions were moved in this Council as to the difficulties of ryots, the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew would make the reply that the persons concerned have not made a representation as if probably it were a sort of estoppel against them. In this case in the Government Order, dated the 18th July the time given is the 20th September. That is not enough for the people to acquaint themselves with this Government Order, to understand it and to make representations to Government. I therefore think it is fair and proper that further time is given to enable all persons concerned to make direct representation to Government."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"Your Excellency, this question of water-rate has been under discussion between Collectors and the Government for a period of ten or twelve years or more. The matter is one of considerable complexity and various systems have been tried. One is the differential system which has been working in the Kistna district since the last settlement and which has been also introduced into Kurnool and certain other tracts. In that system the water-rate on wet crops is equal to the difference between the dry and wet assessment. We tried this assessment in various parts of the Presidency, and it has been persistently condemned by every one who has had anything to do with it. I would myself have liked to stick to it but I have been overborne by the weight of evidence against it. It has been said that it is beyond the understanding of the ryot, that he does not know why he is charged, that the system puts him entirely in the hands of the karnam and that it gives an enormous amount of trouble to the Collectors and village officers. At last, I have unwillingly given way, because though 16TH AUGUST 1918.] (Sir Alexander Cardew; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar;

Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao.)

I saw the theoretical advantage of making a graduated charge for water I recognize the necessity of substituting in its place a simple system which will make the charge for water depend entirely on the sources from which it is obtained. Land irrigated from a first-class source will then have to pay more than land irrigated from a second-class source and land irrigated from a second-class source more than land irrigated by a third-class source. All attempts to charge water according to the quality of the soil will be abandoned, because in practice it is impossible to carry it out with accuracy or intelligibly to the ryot or satisfactorily to anybody.

"In the Kistna district there are at least 24 rates for which it is proposed to substitute three rates. I take the Kistna district, because the Honourable Member belongs to it. In Kistna each taram has the wet and dry assessment, and the difference between the two forms a fresh rate. It is proposed to do away with all attempts to adjust the water-rate to the soil and to substitute the simple plan of charging for wet crops Rs. 6-4-0 for first-class sources, Rs. 4-2-0 for second-class and Rs. 3-2-0 for third-class sources. In some places it means a decrease in the charge. The highest water-rate in the Kistna district is Rs. 8 and there are rates of Rs. 7-8-0, Rs. 7 and so on. The highest rate under the revised scale will be Rs. 6-4-0. The lowest rate formerly was Rs. 5, Rs. 4-12-0 and Rs. 4-8-0. Now the lowest rate under group III is Rs. 3-2-0. What the financial effect will be it is impossible to tell. The substantial reason for the change is to simplify the water-rates and to enable the ryot to understand what he has to pay according as his land is in the first, second or in the third class.

"The other system of water-rate which has been tried is the system which is based on the crop. Some crops require more water than other crops and the rate is adjusted to the crop. That also involved complexity, as in different districts different cultivation customs prevail which necessitate a different charge in two different districts for the same crop. It has been thought better on the whole to substitute for that a quite simple plan. I do not know whether it will involve a loss of revenue. I believe that in some districts it will involve a reduction in revenue—in Kurnool and also in Ganjam. I do not think that in any case Rs. 6-4-0 an acre for a first-class source can be regarded as excessive, Rs. 4-3-0 on the second group is certainly moderate and Rs. 3-2-0 on the third group is actually a reduction. I hope it will be welcomed by the ryot when he comes to understand all the complexities that have been removed.

"It was rather difficult for me to follow the Honourable Member. He seems to advocate the differential system. It is so complicated that no one understands it and its retention cannot be accepted. Primarily the change is not a fiscal one but it is intended to simplify the system. The only area where I think there is any likelihood of hardship is in zamindari lands in Kistna and Godavari, where a fixed rate has been hitherto in force and not the differential rate. All the lands there pay Rs. 5—now, some of them will have to pay Rs. 6-4-0, ential rate. All the lands there pay Rs. 5—now, some of them will have to pay Rs. 6-4-0, while others on the other hand will have to pay Rs. 4-3-0 and Rs. 3-2-0. Without an elaborate calculation we can hardly tell whether this would mean an increase. I must admit that in zamindari tracts it may probably mean an increase. When representations come in that in zamindari tracts it may probably mean an increase. I am supported by every asking the Government to give more time, that will be considered. I am supported by every revenue officer that this change of system is going to prove a great relief to the ryot and village officer and the officers of the Government and I hope the Honourable Member will not press this resolution to a division."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR :—"I welcome the change back to the fixed system which was the system in force fifteen years ago. I know in Tanjore the differential rates have not been introduced. In my village I have been paying only Rs. 4 an acre. If you add Rs. 6 to the dry rate, which is Rs. 4 an acre, it becomes Rs. 10, whereas the wet assessment is Rs. 9. I want to know the principle upon which Rs. 6-4-0 has been fixed. Is it a rate fixed without inquiry? To raise the rate from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6-4-0 will be a very heavy charge. If the Government will give us time to understand it, we will make representations. Until I saw this resolution, I was not aware that the Government had issued this notification. If these lands have been paying more than Rs. 6 as water-rate we would not mind it. But we have been paying only Rs. 4. If we are given time, we would make representation either by memorials or deputations."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO :—"My Lord, all that I want the Government to do is to give the persons affected by this notification some time to see how far this would enhance the rate they have been paying, or whether they will have to pay the same amount hereafter or whether this would affect them in any way. It is said that it is only dry land in class I that will have to pay Rs. 6-4-0, and those under class II will have to pay Rs. 4-3-0. Almost all the lands in Godavari delta are classed under group I, but that is what the settlement report says. There are no doubt some lands under group II; but that is what the settlement report says. Under the new grouping system lands under groups I and II will come under group I, so that all these lands will have to pay Rs. 6-4-0 instead of Rs. 5. The Honourable Member has said that some lands in Kistna and Godavari districts pay very high rates, as much as Rs. 8 but I am more concerned with lands charged a fixed water-rate in zamindari and whole inam villages. What about those lands? They will now have to pay Rs. 6-4-0 instead of Rs. 5 as hitherto if they happen to be in group I. Most of these lands will be put under group I. Though people will not have to submit themselves to elaborate calculations of the differential water-rates, they must understand what their position is and they should be given some time for that. Twentieth September is fixed as the latest date. I shall be satisfied if six months' time is given; they will then understand the notification and the intention of the Government and make representations if they find it necessary to do so."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"Your Excellency, there is some reason in what the Honourable Member asks. Without undertaking anything further, I am prepared to give more time for the representation which he wishes to submit. We will give three more months, and I am prepared to extend the period by three months, i.e., up to the 20th December."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO :—"It would be more advantageous if six months were given. I request that six months' time be given."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW :—"The Honourable Member will try to send his representation before the 20th December."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO :—"I beg to withdraw the resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE TRANSFER OF THE MALABAR SOAP FACTORY TO A PRIVATE COMPANY.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"I do not wish to move resolution No. XX. I want some information and I will be in a better position to move it at the next meeting."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Honourable Gentleman will send in a notice."

Resolution No. XX which was not moved was as follows :—

"XX. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the business of the Soap Factory attached to the Department of Fisheries in Malabar be handed over to a limited liability company to be formed and registered under the Indian Companies Act, 1913, the share capital of which to be open to public subscription, the Government retaining a number of shares and a seat or two on the directorate of the company with a provision in the articles of association for affording facilities for the training of apprentices in the art of soap manufacture."

RESOLUTION RE DOUBLE TRACK BETWEEN THE BEACH AND PALLAVARAM STATIONS.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"I also wish to postpone No. XXII."

The resolution No. XXII ran as follows :—

"XXII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the South Indian Railway Company be asked to arrange for the laying of a double track between the Beach Station and Pallavaram as soon as the war comes to an end."

RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER MR. LANCHESTER'S REPORT ON THE MADRAS CITY.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur moved resolution No. XXI of which he had given notice and which was as follows :—

"XXI. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that a committee consisting of the President, the Engineer and Special Engineer of the Corporation of Madras, the President of the Harbour Trust Board, Sanitary Commissioner, Chief Engineer, Consulting Architect to the Government, Collector of Chingleput and six Commissioners of the Corporation of Madras elected by the Corporation, be formed to consider the suggestions made in the Report on Madras Town by Mr. H. V. Lanchester and to submit proposals, preliminary to the formation of a fuller scheme, for the improvement of the town of Madras, relief of congestion in it and creation of healthy suburbs in the neighbourhood of Madras."

In doing so he said :—"Your Excellency has taken personal interest in the matter of town-planning improvement. It was Your Excellency who arranged for the visit of Professor Geddes to this Presidency. He aroused interest of the people in the towns they live in and in their surroundings. He opened our eyes to the beauties of nature and art amidst which we lived and moved, but to which we had become insensible and oblivious. He showed us that our forefathers must have possessed æsthetic sense in a high degree to have designed beautiful buildings, constructed imposing temples and mosques, so set up towers and minarets, domes and cupolas as to have a pleasing undulated sky line, planned towns and gardens, planted avenues, built tanks, arranged squares and recreation grounds; in short, made a town not only a centre of trade, commerce, industry, education and administration, but also a place of abode where a community could live an enlightened and cultured life. We have however degenerated since those good old days. Our æsthetic sense has deteriorated: our arts have lost their vigour and originality; we have become so indifferent to the beauties of art that have been bequeathed to us from past generations that we cover finely chiselled carving with chunam plaster and hang tattered tattis over a highly ornamented facade. Professor Geddes has shaken the people out of their indifference to their surroundings. Efforts are being made here and there to improve towns and surroundings. In anticipation of demand for expert advice about town-planning and improvement, Mr. Lanchester was engaged by Your Excellency. Our grateful thanks are due to Your Excellency for timely action in this matter. Mr. Lanchester's report on Madras town is a valuable book. He has wisely abstained from giving us an elaborate scheme. He has made a survey, pointed out defects and shortcomings and suggested lines on which and directions in which improvement is desirable. Modern requirements of life, consideration of sanitation, hygiene and health, passion for artistic and pleasant surroundings, the keen sense of citizen-ship and pride in one's own native place—all demand the reconstruction and reformation of towns and villages. There is not a single important town in Europe that has not undergone transformation in the last half a century; and India in its onward march of civilization and progress cannot afford to lag behind. In point of population and importance, Madras is the third city in India. But in the matter of town improvements, other capitals of minor provinces are making more rapid progress, and if Madras does not look up, it will be as badly beaten in this respect as it is in the race for the Indian War Loan. The Englishmen, who first landed on these shores and asked the Nawab of Carnatic—so goes the story—to give them a piece of land as large as can be encompassed by a skin so that they may carry on their peaceful trade from that encampment were not quite wise in spreading their skin on the particular spot where we are now having our deliberations. Of course, they did not foresee that the small settlement was destined to become one day one of the principal seats of British Government in India. We have some serious natural drawbacks to contend with in this city. One of the formidable drawbacks was the unsuitability of this coast for a safe and useful harbour. The resourceful ingenuity of the Hon'ble Sir Francis Spring has overcome all the adverse elements and has given us a harbour of which any modern town will be proud. The success which has crowned Sir Francis Spring's efforts gives us a hope of equal success in the larger question of the improvement. The attention of the city fathers has so far been devoted to the provision of the most elementary needs of the town. Our water-works have been completed only recently. If this boon has not done any other good beyond driving away the uncomfortable disease of elephantiasis, we may thank our stars that we are going about our avocations so light-footedly. In my fancy free school days at Aligarh, I used to conjecture as to which place would be the best to settle in. I had a great dread of Madras, for I was told that a large number of people here dragged on their existence with misery, for nature was jealous of the nimbleness of the Madrasses and out of fairness to the less agile dwellers elsewhere, nature started the Madrasses in the race of life with heavy weights. Our Special Engineer Mr. Madeley is still struggling on manfully with the drainage. There was a prospect of Mr. Madeley's career through the gutters of Madras coming to an untimely end at this very sitting of the Council. But the Government, after tantalising the Corporation and leading it to the brink of despair, have sportingly come again to its rescue.

"The work of improvements in other directions has yet to be taken seriously in hand. The Corporation has done a few things here and there spasmodically and in a hap-hazard manner. Some streets have been broadened, some parts of the city opened out, some awkward corners rounded off, some model houses for the poor and model paracheris have been built, and some footpaths laid. But this has been done without any definite plan. It is high time we had a workable plan and a constructive scheme to regulate improvements and extensions in future. Relief of congestion is the principle thing to tackle. Trade and commerce have made long strides during the last two decades. Many a domestic house in Georgetown have been converted into godowns, shops and business premises. Many people who have their business or avocation in Georgetown have been crowded out of it. Expansion of business has naturally increased the number of persons employed therein who are desirous of either living near the businesses or in quarters from which there are convenient means of conveyance to the places of their employment. For want of convenient suburbs, these people are only adding congestion to the already congested parts of Madras. Creation of good healthy suburbs is therefore the second thing that has to be planned out. Madras has plenty of space in its neighbourhood for the development of ideal suburbs. The town itself can also be suitably extended. The Corporation fights shy of the question of extending the limits of the city. It has already maintain roads, the length of which is in proportion to the population, greater than that of any other town in India and further extension of the town will mean more area to be supplied with roads, light and water. This is the third point for the consideration and decision of the proposed committee. Extension of the town and creation of new suburbs will not be beneficial and successful unless means of conveyance are also extended and improved. Mr. Lanchester's report contains many useful suggestions for developing tramways and railways. It is already proposed to lay tramway on a part of the Mount Road. The proposed committee might suggest further extension of that line to the toll-gate, even to Saidapet. A new metre-gauge line will enter the town from the north-west from Renigunta and will join the South Indian Railway line at the harbour. This will provide through traffic without a break all round the outskirts of the town. The waterways present to us problems of their own. The savoury Cooum is a big problem by itself. Any other town having a river and a canal meandering through the town, in the way the Cooum and the Buckingham canal do, would have made better use of the waterways and turned them to be the most pleasing and original features of the town. But here these are allowed to be eyesore and sources of danger to the health of the city. A special feature of Madras is the existence of bungalows with large compounds. But the compounds are too big to be kept in good trim and tidy without much expenditure and compound walls are anything but picturesque. It was such a pleasure to see in Colombo, during my recent visit, small houses in the midst of small gardens with verandas, porticos and compound walls overhung with flowering creepers. Why should not each dreary plot of land with one dismal dwelling in its midst be divided into half a dozen plots, each having a snug little human nest in the midst of a garden of its own? New houses are now coming up in all sorts of places, large compounds are being split, vacant lands are being turned into dwelling places, rice fields are being converted into house-sites. In short, there is much building activity in Madras. But there is no town plan, no building rules, no expert guidance. The standing committee has reserved to itself the right of passing the designs of buildings for certain specified localities where it is considered necessary to have buildings possessing good architectural features. But Members of the Standing Committee are all laymen and they do not have the assistance of any architect. I hope I have made it clear how necessary it is that Madras should have a programme and a plan for the improvement of the town. Mr. Lanchester's report bristles with various suggestions that require careful examination by a committee consisting of persons capable of considering a multifaceted question from different aspects and capable of giving advice in the formulation of proposals for the improvement of the town. This committee should not be confined only to the Commissioners of the Corporation. Corporation is no doubt the principal body interested in this matter and it should be well represented on the proposed committee. But there are others outside the Corporation who can bring to bear on this question their knowledge and experience, such as the President of the Harbour Trust Board, Sanitary Commissioner, Chief Engineer, Consulting Architect to Government. Some of the executive officers of the Corporation should also be placed on the committee such as the Engineer, Special Engineer, and I would add the Health Officer. The Collector of Chingleput should also be on the committee for his advice and opinion and co-operation is necessary in the matter of suburbs, and I would add the representatives of the tramway and two railway companies. The Corporation has already elected the President and six Commissioners to form a committee. These six Commissioners are to be added to the committee I propose.

178 RESOLUTION RE COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER MR. LANCHESTER'S REPORT ON THE MADRAS CITY.

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; [16TH AUGUST 1918. Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.]

"After good deal of hesitation and after trotting out the bogey of war and want of funds, the Corporation has appointed a committee of the President and six Commissioners to consider the report. It is advisable that this committee should be strengthened with the addition of the persons named by me. The rules of the Corporation do not allow of persons other than the Commissioners being put on the committee; nor can the executive officers of the Corporation be placed on it as equal members. Hence I move that the Governor in Council be requested to appoint a committee of which the committee appointed by the Corporation should also form a part."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I second the resolution. It will turn out to be a costly scheme, but let us have a committee to consider the scheme and it will be time enough for the Madras Corporation and for the Government to consider how best it could be carried out. With the additions proposed I second the resolution."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I do not propose to follow the Honourable Mover in the very interesting remarks he has made about Mr. Lanchester's report on the city of Madras. I will confine myself to this one circumstance. As soon as Mr. Lanchester's report came into our hands, we communicated it to the Corporation in April 1918, and we advised the Corporation to appoint a committee to examine the suggestions made in the report and consider what definite action could be usefully taken on it and to frame a programme for a series of years so that such schemes as might be decided upon might be undertaken after normal conditions are restored and as funds became available. The President of the Corporation was also requested to work out in consultation with the President of the Chingleput District Board for the control over the areas adjoining the city. The President informed us in June last that the Corporation had appointed a committee consisting of himself, Mr. C. P. Rameswami Ayyar, Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar, Mr. Yaqub Hasan, Sir Gordon Fraser, Mr. A. J. Powell and Rao Bahadur Muparappa to consider the suggestions made in Mr. Lanchester's report and make a preliminary report to the Corporation as to how best the Corporation could deal with the several matters dealt with in this report. Matters now stand on that footing. I do not think the Government should do anything which would look as if we were taking the matter out of the hands of the Corporation or that we had any want of confidence in the Corporation. The very circumstance that this resolution is moved by a member of the Corporation and seconded by another member of the Corporation who represents that body in this Council shows apparently that there is a large volume of opinion in favour of a larger committee being appointed by the Government. I would not commit the Government to any supersession of the premier municipality. The Council would agree that the Corporation is the proper body to look after this matter. We have asked them to look into the matter and they have done so and we should not interfere at this stage. If the Corporation after getting this report ask us to appoint a more comprehensive committee, we can take such action as we may be advised, but at this stage I cannot do anything which will be regarded as a most uncalled for reflexion upon the Corporation in a matter in which it is primarily interested and which by a specific order of the Government has been entrusted to that body."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Why not the Government forward this debate to the Corporation for remarks?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I do not think we can send the debate to them for their remarks. They will see the debate. We will simply send them a copy of the debate."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I think we all fully sympathize with this resolution, but after the remarks of the Honourable Member for Government, who has put the question rightly to us, we cannot possibly interfere in this matter at this stage after the Corporation have been asked to appoint a committee and after they have actually appointed a committee. I think we must welcome a full report on this matter and bear in mind the possibility of instituting a special institution in this city similar to the City Improvement Trusts which they have in Bombay and Calcutta. I hope Your Excellency's Government will keep this in view. There are many sites for building in this city which it is impossible for a private purchaser to buy on account of the impossibility of getting anything like a good title. The acquisition of land can only be brought about by an Improvement Trust with full powers for the purpose.

"There are many ways in which the town may be improved, the short circuiting of the Cooum and the filling up of the Buckingham canal. Mr. Lanchester wants Rs. 15 lakhs for ten years. This is a very large sum of money. A very great advantage of having an Improvement Trust would be that we will be in a position to appreciate how money could be utilized to bring in a good return. As we stand at present, we must accept the remarks made by the Honourable Member for Government."

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Your Excellency, when the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar moved that proposition in the Corporation, it occurred to me to add some outside names; but I thought it would not be possible for the Corporation to do that. Therefore I thought that the best course would be to ask the Government to appoint a committee. This Council is for the whole Presidency and therefore it is interested in Madras town also just as much as the Corporation itself. It is also open to this Council to make a recommendation to the Governor in Council to appoint a committee. The Corporation might also ask for such a committee. As suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar, the corporation may ask the Government to appoint a larger committee and this Council may also ask for it. This resolution is a recommendation to this Government. It is suggested that that recommendation should come from the Corporation, that I or the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar may move in the Corporation a resolution that the Government be asked to appoint a committee. I do not think the Government may appoint committee even without a formal application coming from the Corporation. I do not think it would be a reflection upon the Corporation. Now that the Government have chosen to say that that would be the proper course, we will move it there. Then the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar said that he would forward the proceedings of this debate to the Corporation; that would also show the Corporation that it is desirable that a larger committee should sit on this subject. As for the suggestion of the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser that there should be an Improvement Trust, this committee will consider that as one of the proposals. It is for such a preliminary consideration that such a committee is proposed. I withdraw this resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE STOCK OF FOOD-GRAINS IN NORTHERN CIRCARS.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao, the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur K. R. SURYANARAYANAMURTI NAYUDU moved the following resolution:—

'XXIII. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council

(a) that an inquiry be immediately made as to the condition of stocks of food-grains in the districts of Ganjam, Vizagapatam, Godavari, Kistna and Guntur;

(b) that steps be taken to permit merchants in the Northern Circars to import food-grains from Orissa and Bengal and to afford the necessary railway transport facilities;

(Mr. Suryanarayanamurti Nayudu; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; [16TH AUGUST 1918.
Sir Alexander Cardew.]

(c) that exports of paddy from the above districts to stations outside the above districts be prohibited if imports of food-grains from Orissa and Bengal is not permitted.

In doing so he said:—"As regards clause (c) I do not propose to move that part of the resolution. With regard to clause (b) with Your Excellency's permission, I want to move it in an altered form, namely, 'that steps be taken to afford the necessary railway transport facilities to merchants in the Northern Circars to import food-grains from Orissa and Bengal.'

"As regards part (a) that an inquiry be immediately made as to the condition of stock of food-grains, I understand that the Director of Civil Supplies is gathering information regarding stocks of paddy and rice in these districts. But I do not know if the same thing is done with regard to other food-grains. It will be better if that is also done.

"As regards the importation of food-grains from Orissa and Ganjam, at present on account of the difficulty of getting railway wagons very little is coming from those places. Some time back a steamer load of rice and paddy was obtained from Akyab when the prices were going up, but soon after that importation the prices went down. Now to get steamers has become impossible. If we apply for wagons, they are not available and the stocks are small in these districts. So if facilities are given, it would be helpful to import rice from Orissa and from Ganjam where the crops of last year were good and there are large stocks. The stock of ragi in these districts is very small and some people were importing by carts from Vizagapatam and Ganjam to Cocanada and Rajahmundry, paying Re. 1 or 1-8-0 per bag and selling it at ten and ten and a half seers for a rupee. If we can bring that by rail, we can sell it at 14 seers for a rupee. The Relief Committee in Cocanada which was not an official body, will be able to bring ragi from Pervatipur and Bobbili if some facilities are given and that will be helpful to bring down the prices. I hope Your Excellency's Government will find their way to render all necessary help and give the facilities mentioned in the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to second the resolution, and in doing so I wish to lay emphasis on the urgency of making an inquiry into the stock of foodstuffs of each district. Having regard to the threatened scarcity in Tanjore and other districts, we should see that food stocks in each district are not sent out. Already a large stock of paddy has been sent out of the districts and I do not think that the stock remaining is sufficient. I think the circumstances will be worse if the Canvry continues to behave as it has been doing. We are threatened with scarcity in all the districts. It is a matter of very great importance and we must take steps to see that each district is self-contained especially as railway wagons are not available."

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"Your Excellency, the position as regards the stocks of food-grains not only in these districts but in other districts has been under the constant examination of the Government for sometime past and we have got several estimates of the probable supply as compared with the demand up to the next harvest, and we are advised that on the whole there is probably enough to carry us on till the next harvest. But there is certainly a much smaller surplus than usual, and I cannot avoid the admission that the position is by no means as satisfactory as we would like it to be. There is no restriction on the importation of food-grains from Orissa and Bengal where there are plenty of pulses too. The only difficulty is in getting the wagons. The lines are very much congested by coal traffic and by demands of all kinds. The Director of Civil Supplies issues certificates for grain consignments and they have to be countersigned by the Controller of Supplies in Calcutta. He cannot always do that. Mr. Wood has left Madras to attend a conference in Nagpur which is presided over by Sir Claude Hill, the Revenue Member of the Viceroy's Council. There the Controllers of Prices of all the provinces are to assemble, and the procedure is to be laid down to enable them to adjust the demands of the various provinces in the most economic and efficient way possible. It is also proposed that the Central Board in Simla will have some controlling power, so that it will be in a position to see that no province is unduly deprived of the supply or refuses to pass on its supplies. Until Mr. Wood returns and until we know the rules which the Government of India will impose to regulate these matters, it is impossible to come to any clear conclusions. About two months ago, Your Excellency's Government issued an order prohibiting the export of grain from this Presidency. It was necessary to do that on account of the disturbance that occurred in Kistna, Kurnool and in Nellore. The issue of that order had the effect of bringing down the price of cholam in Bellary; it arrested the rise in price. But it was keenly objected to by other provinces. The Bombay province strongly objected, and the Government of India also objected and they began to press us, soon after the order was issued, to withdraw it. Your Excellency's Government stood out against the withdrawal as far as we could, and we had a conference with the officer from the Government of India and after talking it over with him a modus vivendi was arrived at and we did withdraw the general prohibition as such. We are still uncertain what powers this conference will give us. The Honourable Member may rest assured that the Government are looking into this matter with the greatest possible attention and are most anxious not only to secure imports but protect any district from any undue denudation of food or other supplies, and we will certainly carry out the suggestion that facilities as far as possible for the importation of food-grains from Orissa and Ganjam will be provided—as far as possible to bring in a large quantity of rice and paddy."

WATER APPLICATIONS IN THE KISTNA AND GODAVARI DELTAS; IRRIGATION OF LANDS LIABLE TO SUBMERSION IN AND

the President.)

"As regards stocks we can only take them from time to time and watch the course of prices in the districts. I think that in that part of the country the monsoon is not so bad as it is elsewhere. I do not myself anticipate a serious deficiency in the Northern Circars. Elsewhere the season prospects, I am sorry to say, are not very good, though in the last few days the results have been better. The Honourable Member may rest assured that the terms of his resolution will be borne in mind and we will do our best to carry out the intentions behind it."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur K. R. SURYANARAYANAMURTI NAYUDU:—"On the assurance given by the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew, I do not press the resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was withdrawn.

The following resolutions which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao Pantulu were not moved:—

RESOLUTION RE WATER APPLICATIONS IN THE KISTNA AND GODAVARI DELTAS.

XXIV. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that water applications should be accepted in the Kistna and Godavari deltas in respect of lands which have been hitherto irrigated with permission either on yearly applications or otherwise and that land so irrigated should be taken into account in the localization of wet areas in the above deltas.

RESOLUTION RE IRRIGATION OF LANDS LIABLE TO SUBMERSION IN AND AROUND THE KOLAIR LAKE.

XXV. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that lands liable to submersion in and around the Kolair lake in the Godavari and Kistna deltas should invariably receive water for irrigation for the second crop.

The following resolutions fell through owing to the absence of the Honourable Members who had given notice of them:—

RESOLUTION RE IMPROVEMENTS TO A SECTION OF BUCKINGHAM CANAL.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—

XXVI. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council the immediate repair and bringing into working order of the portion of the Buckingham Canal between Porto Novo and Tranquebar.

RESOLUTION RE OPENING UP OF MINOR PORTS IN THE PRESIDENCY.

XXVII. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council the immediate opening up of as large a number of minor ports as possible in the Presidency.

RESOLUTION RE STOCK OF PIECE-GOODS AND YARN.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO PANTULU:—

XXIX. This Council recommends to His Excellency the Governor in Council that a census of the stock of piece-goods and yarn available in the Presidency be taken to regulate the prices of cloth.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That disposes of the motions on the paper. Honourable non-official members have been good enough to signify to me their wishes in regard to the suggestion I wished to lay before them at the beginning of the meeting. From the particulars that they have been good enough to lay before me, there is no substantial agreement as to whether at the present time such a meeting will serve any useful purpose. I think the matter may be allowed to be dropped. There only remains the last item in the agenda paper, namely, the election of non-official members of the Finance Committee. I propose that the Council shall now adjourn."

The Council was then adjourned sine die.

- (vi) From the Chairman of a Moslem Public meeting held at the Victoria Public Hall, Madras, on the 20th September 1918.

Regarding the Bill to amend the Madras Port Trust Act, 1905.

From the President of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce, Madras, dated the 15th October 1918.

THE PRESIDENT'S INTRODUCTORY SPEECH.

His Excellency the President:—"Before discussion begins, I should like to say a few words in regard to the agenda paper for this meeting which is now before you. If a strict interpretation is given to the rules under which meetings of this Council are summoned, some legislative business is required for each meeting, no matter how slight that legislative business may be. In that view you will observe that Orders of the Day Nos. 2, 3 and 4 may each and all be taken to relate to some legislative business; but they are not all necessary to make this meeting lawful and Order of the Day No. 4, though it was originally with this purpose in view included in the agenda, has been in error printed in the official form of agenda as issued to members of Council. It will not, however, be taken at this meeting and will be placed upon the paper for the next meeting in Council. This will bring our business more strictly in accordance with the public announcement regarding the business to be taken at this meeting which declared that the meeting would be confined to a specific purpose and that questions and resolutions on general business would not be included in the agenda.

"This brings me to the specific purpose of this meeting. Its origin and purpose will be found briefly stated in the last sentence of paragraph 238 of the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms. That paragraph explains the proposed division of the functions of Government into reserved and transferred subjects; and in the passage to which I have referred the authors of the Report, the Viceroy of India and the Secretary of State for India, used these words:

22ND OCTOBER 1918.]

(The President.)

"On the publication of this Report we should like to see the lists discussed in the Provincial Councils and considered by the Provincial Governments, so that the committee may have ready at hand considered criticisms upon the applicability of our suggestions to the circumstances of each particular province."

"The methods under which it is proposed that the various branches of administration, so divided into two parts, shall be controlled and the working of the executive Government shall be carried on are laid down in paragraphs 218, 219 and 221 of the Report. It is not necessary for me to quote them again here. The Honourable Members will recollect the suggestion upon this matter which they were invited by me to consider during the proceedings of the last meeting of this Council, when the non-official members found some difficulty in arriving at any definite conclusion as to the advantage of the discussion, such as that which is proposed in the Report. Since then, the approaching visit of the Reforms Committee which will receive and consider opinions upon this subject has been announced. The Legislative Councils of several other provinces have met together to consider this topic. In these circumstances the Madras Government have thought it well to propose to this Legislative Council this further opportunity of meeting the wishes of the authors of the Report and I hope that it may be possible for this Council to offer a useful contribution to the general consideration of this subject. Notice has been given as you will see of 40 resolutions on this subject; many of them however are duplicates.

"You will notice in the words which I have quoted from paragraph 238 that the authors of the Report desire to see two things and to have the results of two separate operations, namely, discussion in the Provincial Councils which comes first and then consideration by the Provincial Governments. Discussion in the Provincial Councils is desirable for the purpose of obtaining the collective opinion of the non-official members of these Councils. It is not possible at this stage—for all the materials are not before us—for the Provincial Governments to form their final opinion upon this subject. They have yet to confer with the Reforms Committee which is to tour through India this cold weather and in fact the collective opinion of the non-official members of this Council will actually form part of the material upon which the Government here will form its final judgment upon the subject. On this occasion, therefore, while official members will be present, they will not be called upon to vote on any of the resolutions now before the Council, nor will they be called upon to speak on any of these resolutions except in so far as they may be able, from their knowledge of the working of their departments, to offer information to non-official members of Council on any difficult points upon which that information is invited or will be useful.

"I make one more observation. It would not, I think, serve the purpose of this discussion if it were to begin by the discussion and decision of the non-official members of the Council on any omnibus resolution upon this subject, any resolution which purposes to make all or a large proportion of the business of Provincial Governments transferred, that is to say to transfer all the business, from the first, to Ministers. The essence of the proposals in the Report is that these changes shall be gradual. It would be contrary to the spirit and to the hypothesis of the authors of the Report, which is that the goal in view should be approached by gradual stages, to make all the departments either 'reserved' or 'transferred.' Turning to the agenda paper, I do not therefore propose to take early in this debate any resolutions of that character as by doing so discussion of each separate debatable subject will be closed and thus we shall not have the benefit of discussing fully the merits of the proposed changes in regard to subjects which may have features and characteristics peculiar to them.

"For this reason, I propose to take the resolutions in some such order as the following: 'For this reason, I propose to take the resolutions to pass over No. I* and to take first No. II* probably it will be to the convenience of the Council to pass over No. I* and to take first No. II* on the agenda paper; then I think we might pass to No. VIII* which raises a new subject, which is proposed by another member though it is covered in the proposals of several other members. We might then proceed to No. X* and then we might proceed to No. XV.† I am taking the numbers in order so as to avoid partiality or anything of that kind. These resolutions may be taken first, during our discussion, as they all raise different and separate issues, to which the several resolutions on the agenda paper refer.

"One more point I should like to make clear. We are all aware that the Report, part of which we have met to discuss, contains proposals of the highest importance, not only on account of the subject matter with which they deal but also because of the position and authority of those who are responsible for them. Non-official members of various shades of opinion some of whom are disposed to take opposite views of the Report which we have met to discuss, on this ground, take part in criticising the proposals of the Report which we have met to discuss, on this ground, namely, that they do not wish to commit themselves either to approval or to disapproval of the main proposals of the Report. To decline to discuss the Report on this ground, if I may venture to say so, may fairly I think be regarded as over-cautious and indefensible for this reason, namely, that the Report in spite of its high authority and the wide knowledge and experience and skill with which it has been drawn up is still after all a proposal which is intended to invite discussion and criticisms from all points of view in order that it and they together may form the basis of proposals which are ultimately to be submitted for the consideration of Parliament in some further form, which is for the present undetermined. From that standpoint therefore the scheme is provisional and hypothetical and our position to-day is that we are meeting here in accordance with the invitation of the authors of the scheme, still merely a scheme and hypothetical proposal, to discuss one part of it. The question which the authors of the Report ask us to consider is in fact this: supposing our plan of dividing the administration of departments into two parts is carried out by classing some of them as 'reserved' subjects and some of them as

(The President; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao;
Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

[22ND OCTOBER 1918.]

'transferred' subjects, which subjects in the opinion of the Madras Legislative Council non-official members should be 'reserved' subjects and which on the other hand should be 'transferred' subjects? The answer which we can give to-day to this question can only be a provisional answer. If the scheme is radically altered in any of its particulars so as to destroy the hypothesis upon which we are discussing it to-day, those who take part in the discussion will not remain finally and irrevocably committed to the opinions which they may express during this discussion.

"I have made these observations to the Council in the hope of defining our discussion and informing them of the lines on which I propose it should be conducted. I shall now call upon the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao to move the second resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Your Excellency, we are thankful for the general guidance which Your Excellency has given to our discussion and to the reservation of resolutions."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Would you allow the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao to move his resolution formally? We must have some business. I will call upon you afterwards."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I formally move resolution No. II*."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Your Excellency,—I believe Your Excellency's observations as regards the general trend of discussion in this Council will be shared by most of my non-official colleagues. My Lord, before we proceed with the discussion of the actual business of to-day, I have to move a resolution in the following terms and I shall briefly explain the reasons which have actuated me and those who are associated with me in moving this resolution as to why I have been obliged to move this resolution. The resolution is in these terms: 'That the business before the meeting be postponed till the agenda is issued in accordance with the regulations and till such time as the Government are in a position to afford facilities for the discussion of matters of public importance especially the following matters: the steps taken or to be taken by the Government for allaying the prevailing distress owing to shortage of food supplies and other necessities of life in all parts of the Presidency and the circumstances under which the police opened fire on the people assembled in the Collector's compound at Madura on the 27th September last.'

"My Lord, meetings of this Council are few and far between and we, non-official members of this Council, always desire to take advantage of the meetings to elicit information and bring matters to the notice of the Government with a view to afford redress and generally to press our views on all the important public questions of the day; and when I saw a notice of a meeting of this Council I was under the impression that we should have the usual opportunities by way of interpellation and resolution of bringing in other matters also before the Council. I am aware, my Lord, that this meeting has been summoned to discuss a special matter, the constitutional reforms, but there were two matters on which the public have been much excited and we were particularly anxious that in regard to those matters some information should be vouchsafed by the Government. But before I deal with these, I shall first deal with the first portion as regards the agenda. For this meeting some resolutions and questions were sent up, apart from those that were concerned with the question of constitutional reforms and it has been intimated to us that the resolutions and questions relating to other subjects will not be placed on the agenda. Apart from that injunction, which I submit is not in accordance with the rules,—for while I contend that it is not open to Your Excellency as President to confine the business in that way unless it be with the consent of the Council to any particular portion of the regulations, it is a question which I do not wish to discuss—there are two or three resolutions in regard to the discussion of transferred and reserved subjects which are not on the agenda and they are resolutions which relate to the control of railways in this Presidency. My Lord, I need hardly say that the powers of the Local Government in regard to railways have been such that Local Governments have found themselves absolutely helpless in the control of the passenger traffic and for the redress of other railway grievances. I moved a resolution two years ago that the powers of the Local Government should be enlarged and I respectfully submit that this question of enlarging the powers of the Local Government is within the purview of paragraph 238 of the Report on constitutional reforms. My Lord, this report contains two lists, one of reserved subjects for the Provincial Governments and the other of subjects which are proposed to be transferred to Ministers, and I believe, under the terms of paragraph 238, it is open to us to discuss both these lists, to enlarge the Provincial list, though a subject may not be transferred and ask the authors of this Report and the Imperial Government to enlarge the powers of Provincial Governments in regard to railways. I would read this particular paragraph—'As an illustration of the kind of matters which we think might be treated as provincial, and those which might be regarded as transferred, we have presented two specimen lists in an appendix to this Report.' On the terms of the language of this paragraph, it seems to me that it is open to this Council to suggest an alteration in either of these lists, to suggest the inclusion of subjects which are not in the provincial list, to suggest the exclusion of subjects which are in that list; and I submit very respectfully that this is one of those subjects in which public opinion in this Presidency has been very keen, namely, that the Provincial Government should have some kind of control over the railways, subject to such general control as may be exercised in the matter by the Government of India. It is with that intention and on the assumption that it is within the purview of paragraph 238 that myself and two or three other Honourable Members have sent in resolutions to include railways in the Provincial list, subject to such limitations and general control as may be exercised by the Government of India. I do not know why they have been disallowed and I have not received any communication. I suppose it has gone to my mufassal address; but I take it from what I heard from other members that it is considered not relevant to paragraph 238. I would urge very respectfully that, according to the language of paragraph 238, it is open to us to discuss both the lists—to include subjects which are not in either of the two lists or to exclude any subjects which are in either of the two lists. It is to raise this particular aspect of the question that I question the accuracy and the fullness of the agenda which has been issued for this meeting. Having said that, there is our general complaint that we should have an opportunity of discussing questions of general importance in order to further public interests. I merely mention those subjects of grave public importance which are now engaging public attention, as there has been considerable excitement over looting and disorders, in connexion with the economic situation that has arisen in this Presidency. I do not wish to have a general discussion on this question, but we desire to have as full information as possible on the subject. My Lord, a few days ago, I noticed that Sir Claude Hill assembled all the Provincial Directors of Civil Supplies at Simla and discussed the general situation with them."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Before the Honourable Gentleman proceeds to those other subjects, will he allow me just to say this? Notices have been issued convening this meeting, saying that the scope of the meeting will be confined to the business specifically mentioned for the meeting; and it would serve no useful purpose if I were to allow him to continue his speech and the remarks which he is now making on the other subjects which he has mentioned now, which are mentioned in his resolution. In the first place, we will be infringing the notice of the meeting to members who are not here and who might possibly have been here if they thought any other business would be taken. We must stick to the public notice summoning the meeting and the subjects mentioned in the agenda. Secondly, if I were to allow the Honourable Gentleman to speak at length on these subjects, the Government are not prepared to meet him; they did not expect a discussion of this subject, and we could give him no useful information. In fact, we are infringing the purpose of this meeting. Therefore, I do not propose to allow him to continue his observations on these subjects. I am anxious to treat every Member of this Council with the fullest consideration; but in no sense can these two matters which he has mentioned in his resolution be termed, with accuracy, definite matters of urgent public importance. On that point, I do not feel myself able to allow the Honourable Member's discussion. In regard to the point which he has brought up as to the resolutions dealing in fact with the other lists, the Imperial and Provincial lists, which have not hitherto been included in the agenda, I think a good deal may be said. The word 'lists' is used in the plural and I think it may be taken that such resolutions as have been ruled out of order hitherto, on that specific ground, may be taken as coming within our agenda. I have sent for these resolutions and if I find they come under the enlarged definition which the Honourable Member suggests, I will give intimation to the Council and we may take them in the agenda paper which is already printed. This is a special meeting in which we can relax our rules. I hope, with this explanation, he will see fit to withdraw his motion and proceed with the discussion of the resolutions on the paper."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I take it that Your Excellency would not allow me to proceed with my speech."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I think not; if the Honourable Gentleman will sit down, he will see he will have an opportunity of making remarks and offering criticisms and observations on our action or inaction, whatever it is, and the general situation. The Government are not prepared for a discussion on this matter and public notice has been given that no other business will be taken up. It is open to Honourable Members to address Government or address me on any subject of public importance, and the representation will at once receive the attention it deserves."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I intended to say at the end of my speech that if the Government intended to make a statement as regards the facts, I should be prepared to consent to an adjournment of this debate to the end of the meeting. I did not intend to take Government by surprise, but to elicit facts about what has taken place at Madura. We do not know the facts; we do not know whether any report has been received by the Government and what is the present situation as regards foodstuffs in Madras and in the mufassal, what action has been taken to import rice from other Provinces; I wait to have a statement from the Government, so that the Council and the public might be in a position—"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting):—"I quite understand the position. The Honourable Member need not elaborate. I see no reason to depart from the ruling which I have given."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Let it be seconded."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I hope the Honourable Member will withdraw the motion."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I shall withdraw it after it is seconded."

(The President; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.) [22ND OCTOBER 1918.]

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" I have already told him the extent to which I am able to meet him. There is no reason for moving the resolution or having any debate or anything of that kind. I have already given the Honourable Member that assurance that I shall intimate the resolutions to the Council. Other things are outside the business of this Council. I do not see that any further discussion will serve any useful purpose."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" I merely want the motion to be seconded and I shall withdraw."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR :—" Let me second the motion."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" If you please."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR :—" I beg to second this motion. In doing so, I wish to point out that Your Excellency has no right as President to limit discussion. Your Excellency should only fix the time and place of the meeting."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" Now the Honourable Gentleman wishes to question my ruling; if it is open to him under the rules to question my ruling on any subject, let him put down a resolution for the next meeting of the Council. At present, I think it will be better to devote ourselves to the business on hand, which we have met to do. I have suggested that to the Honourable Members' consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" May I know what is it that Your Excellency has said? Your Excellency has given a decision as to the validity of the meeting notice. Paragraph 3 of the meeting notice specifies the business. May I know if Your Excellency has given a ruling on the powers—"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting) :—" If the Honourable Gentleman wishes to discuss that question, if the rules permit him to do so, the proper course for him to adopt is to put down a resolution for the next meeting of the Council when general business will be taken up. That is what I have said to the Honourable Gentleman just now. That is what I say once again to the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" The rules do not permit a debate—"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting) :—" I cannot allow a general discussion at present. If the rules permit, there is no reason why it should not be discussed. If the rules permit it, let it be discussed."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" May I take it that Your Excellency has given a decision?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" The Honourable Gentleman has heard what I said and he must take what the words are intended to convey to him."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" My Lord, I share the feeling of my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar that there has been some informality and illegality as regards the rules. I do not wish to press this matter at this meeting. I withdraw my resolution under the circumstances."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" Your Excellency, I wish."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting) :—" Order, order. Let the Honourable Gentleman sit down. There is no motion now before the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" May I rise to a point of order?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" If you please."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" The proposition is proposed and seconded and it is proposed to be withdrawn. There are several members who are opposed to the withdrawal of this motion. I do not wish to discuss any matter, but I wish to make the situation clear. What the public want us, as their representatives, to do here, is to press our rights and one of our rights is to insist upon our right to have an adjournment motion placed before the Council. We do not want to discuss any matter on which Your Excellency has given a ruling or to question the correctness of your Excellency's decision. We do not now propose to discuss the validity of the meeting notice. But the adjournment resolution stands far apart. If one opens a discussion, it is open to the Council to vote on the question whether it is desirable to go on or to adjourn. It is the privilege of the house to vote upon the question whether it is going to adjourn or whether it is going to sit. I hope Your Excellency will not interfere with this right of the Council; the Council must itself decide and vote upon this question whether it is going to adjourn. Though they cannot dispute Your Excellency's decision as to a point of order, they may show their attitude even on that point by refusing to do further work. Your Excellency pointed out that the Government are not prepared to make a statement. My Honourable Friend wanted to elicit some information and somehow satisfied by the Government's answer is willing to withdraw; but it is open to the other Honourable Members to be dissatisfied with that position to show it and try to elicit that information by refusing to do any work till that information is forthcoming. I am not anxious to adjourn all business. Far from that, I do know that we are going to get on with the business. At the same time, we wish our rights to move for adjournment of the house under this rule to be given effect to. So I request Your Excellency to put to vote this resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao and take the sense of the house on it and if necessary, adjourn."

22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (The President; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" The Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao, seconded by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar has moved a motion. He has asked for leave of the Council to withdraw that motion. Does the Council allow him to withdraw that motion?"

The motion to withdraw was carried.

The motion was then withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE 'LAND REVENUE ADMINISTRATION' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—" Your Excellency, the motion now before the Council suggests that the subject of Land Revenue Administration should be a transferred subject. It runs :—

'II. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of "Land Revenue Administration" should be a transferred subject.'

"It will be remembered that the subject of Land Revenue Administration is one of the most important subjects which have been engaging the attention of the Government and of the public for several generations. It is the subject which affects the welfare and happiness of the bulk of the people in this Presidency and its scope, as stated in List No. I, is very wide and general. It will be remembered that this subject includes the following matters: 'Assessment and collection of land revenue, maintenance and procedure of revenue establishments, maintenance of land records, surveys for revenue purposes, records of rights, special laws regarding land tenures, relations of landholders and tenants, collection of rent, court of wards, encumbered and attached estates, famine, land improvement and agricultural loans, resumption of revenue, free grants, diluvion and alluvion, colonization and disposal of Crown lands.' Each item of the subject by itself will form matter for separate discourse, but I do not, on this occasion, propose to detain the Council long because there cannot be any difference of opinion as regards the importance of these various branches of land revenue administration as affecting the agriculturists and the ryots in this Presidency. It is better that I first draw the attention of the Council to the provisions contained in the report as to the appointment of Indian ministers and as to their powers and functions. It is necessary to consider the restrictions and limitations under which they are called upon to work and the precautions and the safeguards which are provided even in cases which are proposed to be transferred to Indian ministers. It will be found that, so far as the Indian minister is concerned, he is not the chosen representative of the elected members of the Council, but he is one chosen by the Governor out of the elected members of the Legislative Council. According to the scheme, which is now before the public, the Provincial Executive Government is to be divided into two parts, one consisting of the Governor and two members of the Executive Council, and the other consisting of the Governor and one or more Indian ministers, according to the number of transferred subjects; and in the appointment of the Indian minister or ministers, the Governor has a discretion to choose according to his discretion and pleasure, from among the elected members of the Council. That is so far as the appointment of the Indian minister is concerned. It is expressly laid down that he should be a member of the Executive Government, but not of the Executive Council. It is so far clear that his status is less than and different from that of a member of the Executive Council and that he is to be selected and nominated by the Governor. Now, as regards the relation between the Governor and the minister, this is what the report says in paragraph 219.—'The portfolios dealing with the transferred subjects would be committed to the ministers, and on these subjects, the ministers together with the Governor would form the administration. On such subjects their decisions would be final, subject only to the Governor's advice and control. We do not contemplate that from the outset the Governor should occupy the position of a purely constitutional Governor who is bound to accept the decisions of his ministers. Our hope and intention is that the ministers will gladly avail themselves of the Governor's trained advice upon administrative questions, while on his part he will be willing to meet their wishes to the furthest possible extent in cases where he realizes that they have the support of popular opinion. We reserve to him a power of control, because we regard him as generally responsible for his administration, but we should expect him to refuse assent to the proposals of his ministers only when the consequences of acquiescence would clearly be serious. Also we do not think that he should accept without hesitation and discussion proposals which are clearly seen to be the result of inexperience.' Later on, in paragraph 221, to which Your Excellency drew our attention, it is suggested that they should cultivate the habit of associating themselves and working in harmony with members of the Executive Council. It will therefore be seen by Honourable Members of this Council that the provisions made as to the functions and duties of these Indian ministers are such as not to jeopardise or endanger the interests of the Government. The Indian minister is called upon to act under the advice of the Governor; and the Governor has the discretion to control his acts and to refuse his assent wherever and whenever necessary. With these safeguards and with these limitations, both as to his appointment and as to his powers and duties, I would ask whether there is any reason for withholding any particular subjects from his control. I am not myself in a position to find satisfactory reasons for withholding any of these subjects from the control of the Indian ministers, especially with these limitations placed upon their powers. It is true that the provisions contained in the report as to the question of the appointment of Indian ministers, as to the method of selection and appointment and as to his powers are also subjects of criticism.

"But it is not within the purview of this Council at this special session to discuss that aspect of the question; and we have to consider these proposals in the light of the recommendations contained in the report. If I make a special request to this Council to pay special attention to this subject of Land Revenue Administration, it is not merely on account of the importance of the subject, but also in view of the prevailing state of things. I have before me several experienced district administrators of vast district experience and there are also several non-official colleagues of mine who have considerable experience of district administration; but no one would, I think, venture to suggest that district administration most of which depends upon the Land Revenue Administration in the district is as it ought to be, or is satisfactory. I would ask whether anyone would suggest that the system of district administration wherein all power is centralized in the district official who has to work only through official channels and who is not given the help of any popular machinery to guide or control his actions is a system which we can accept. Though in the Scheme of Reforms, some machinery has been suggested for controlling the actions of the Executive Government in large questions of policy, no machinery has been devised for making the actions of district officers responsible to popular opinion. It will be remembered that various proposals have been made from time to time with that object. The Decentralization Commission considered the advisability of providing machinery for that purpose; but we have not proceeded to any further extent in that respect. I am placing this further aspect before the Council to impress upon them the necessity of taking a new line altogether in matters affecting Land Revenue Administration. It is not now necessary to bring into existence any bodies for the purpose of mere consultation and advice when a scheme has been presented to us of transferring certain branches of administration to Indian ministers. It is not now necessary to ask that district officials should be instructed to seek the advice of their Indian non-officials when the proposal now before the public is that wherever possible and wherever conditions permit, certain definite branches may be made over to the Indian ministers. It is from that standpoint that I wish the Council to look at this question."

"Then what are the possible objections that can be urged against this proposal? Does this proposal not satisfy the test which is formulated by the authors of the report? In paragraph 238 of the report are stated some of the guiding principles to be taken into consideration. This is what is stated: they say that the list is not exhaustive, that the list would have to be varied according to the conditions of each province and that the list would have to be finally settled after the deliberations of the Committee which has been appointed. They say 'Their guiding principle should be to include in the transferred list those departments which afford most opportunity for local knowledge and social service, those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested, those in which mistakes, which may occur, though serious, would not be irremediable, and those which stand most in need of development.' This is the test laid down by the authors of the report as to the principles which should guide the Committee in transferring subjects to the Indian ministers. I would request the Council to pause for a while and see whether the subject of Land Revenue Administration would not come within the four corners of the principle which has been so clearly enunciated, or whether it can be taken to be an exception to these principles. Analysing this into all the four portions into which it can be analysed, it is as follows: 'Their guiding principle should be to include in the transferred list those departments which afford most opportunity of local knowledge and social service.' Can it be said that the subject of Land Revenue Administration with its multifarious branches which I have read out in the beginning is a subject upon which local knowledge cannot be brought to bear? Is there any other subject, I ask, wherein people would be in a position to bring home their own experience better than matters affecting either the interests of landlords or tenants or the assessment of revenue and other kindred subjects? This is I state, essentially a subject in which we have the opportunity of using local knowledge to a considerable extent. Then 'Those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested', is the next principle to guide transfer of subjects. I do not want any further testimony in support of my position except the debates in this Council during the last five or six years to convince the Government that the people have shown themselves keenly interested in matters affecting Land Revenue Administration. The volumes containing the proceedings of the various meetings will afford ample testimony to the position taken up by me. The third principle is that 'those in which mistakes which may occur, though serious, would not be irremediable' may be transferred. It is not like a case affecting the peace of the Empire or affecting the Army and the Navy or the defence of the country. It is not a case of that sort at all. The fourth point which is stated is 'Those that stand most in need of development.' Land Revenue Administration certainly stands in need of development. So far as I am able to see, these are the chief guiding principles that are stated by the authors of the report in paragraph 238; and if we apply those tests it is clear that the subject of Land Revenue Administration is a subject which should be included in the transferred list. There is no serious mistake likely to be committed; local knowledge would be brought to bear upon it; Indians have taken keen interest in it; and it stands most in need of development."

"Apart from these circumstances, I would like to consider what possible objections can be urged against it. I find that the authors of the report themselves suggest something in the same paragraph with regard to this—They state: 'In pursuance of this principle, we should not expect to find that departments primarily concerned with the maintenance of law and order were transferred. Nor should we expect the transfer of matters which vitally affect the well-being of the masses who may not be adequately represented in the new Councils, such for example as questions of land revenue or tenant rights.' I would venture to dissent from this view expressed by the authors of the report, with all due deference to their knowledge and experience of Indian conditions. I would suggest that it ought not to be accepted for a moment that educated persons are not in a position to judge as to what is required for the well-being of the ryots in this country. I find that such mistaken impressions have found place in various other portions of the report. I find that such misapprehensions have been largely responsible for the hesitation with which they have made some of their recommendations. They did not view the question from a liberal standpoint; but they were carried away by unnecessary and imaginary fears in the conditions of society here. I would request the attention of the Council to what is stated in paragraph 155 of the report. They state that the advance must be gradual and they point out some difficulties in the way. One of the difficulties pointed out by them is about the protection of the ryot and his interests. I would specially draw the attention of the Council to their remarks and ask them whether they would from their past experience subscribe to that doctrine. 'To the other difficulties which we have mentioned we propose to apply the same treatment, and while we do everything that we can to encourage Indians to settle their own problems for themselves we must retain power to restrain them from seeking to do so in a way that would threaten the stability of the country. We have shown that the political education of the ryot cannot be a very rapid, and may be a very difficult process. Till it is complete he must be exposed to the risk of oppression by people who are stronger and cleverer than he is; and until it is clear that his interests can safely be left in his own hands or that the Legislative Councils represent and consider his interests we must retain power to protect him. So with the depressed classes.' I would venture to submit, my Lord, that these assumptions are not based upon proper foundations and are not based upon proper materials. It may be that suggestions have been made, here and there which are not based upon proper information, or upon facts recorded in history, that the educated classes are not likely to protect the interests of the ryots. But I would, on this occasion, refer to some specific instances in the history of the administration of this country even in recent times to convince this Council that facts have been otherwise. Shall we go to the time when the Deccan Agriculturists' Relief Act was passed? Shall we recall to our mind the fact that Mr. Justice Ranade who was always known and admitted by all administrators as the friend of the poor ryot took a considerable part in getting that measure through? Need I remind the Council that when the Land Revenue Bill in the Bombay Presidency was under discussion and when measures were incorporated so as to affect the ryots and the agriculturists in a prejudicial manner, persons who represented the educated classes not only opposed the motion, but felt it their duty to leave the Council hall because they felt that they should not associate themselves with that measure? I find that on that occasion such distinguished persons as Mr. Mehta and Mr. Khare left the hall. Even the late Mr. Gokhale, though with very great reluctance and regret, followed the same procedure and stated his reasons pointing out that he had to leave because he did not want to associate himself with that measure."

"Apart from what took place, in other provinces, and in other Councils, let us recall to our mind the proceedings of this Council during the last five or six years and what do those proceedings show us? This Council has been seriously considering various questions affecting the welfare of the ryot population. There were Bills for which notice was given by representatives of the zamindars in this Council, to amend the Madras Estates Land Act. After the expiry of two years; those Bills were withdrawn but it is a fact that two or three Bills were at the same time introduced to safeguard the interests of the ryots in zamindari estates? All the draft Bills must be either in the Secretariat or the Board of Revenue. There were questions affecting Land Improvement Loans Act and the Agriculturists' Loans Act debated in this Council and brought up by representatives of educated classes. Is it for the benefit of the educated classes or for the benefit of the ryot classes, I would ask? There were questions of remission of land revenue, when the crop would be only one-third the normal crop, questions of remission of revenue when a portion of the land is left waste, though not demarcated by survey stones; questions relating to the simplification of the jamabandi; questions for reduction of the rigour of resettlement operations in the Chittoor district, North Arcot, South Arcot and Madura districts that have been brought up in this Council. Questions have been brought forward suggesting the modification of the resettlement rules so as to reduce the rigour of Land Revenue Settlement. Again there were questions for the grant of sites to the depressed classes and for the assignment of lands for the benefit of the depressed classes. I am mentioning these as examples to show that the assumption made in this report is a very unfortunate assumption not based upon solid facts. The experience of the working of these Legislative bodies must have convinced any waverer that the educated classes have not been neglecting their duty towards the less educated among their brethren and countrymen and that they have not neglected their duty towards the ignorant ryot or towards the depressed classes. That is the only objection referred to in this report so far as questions affecting Land Revenue administration are concerned. I would therefore ask that, whatever test may be adopted so far as this subject is concerned, there can be no justification for withholding it from the control of the Indian Minister. I therefore move this resolution."

(The President; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.]

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I hesitate very much before reminding the Honourable Member that he has been straying from the subject. Our discussion is a fairly limited discussion, whether or not these subjects should be in charge of the Councils or the Ministers. I dare say it is difficult to avoid wandering from the point; but I do suggest to Honourable Members that we should endeavour to concentrate our remarks and arguments to the point, that is to say, to considerations suggesting that they should either be a reserved or transferred subject. We are not so much concerned with the general observations on these topics. What we really want is arguments which are directed to the difference between the control by the Ministers and control by the Councils. I make that observation not with any special reference to the Honourable Gentleman's speech in particular, but I am sure that the proceedings of this Council would be facilitated if we can focus the debate on that particular point."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar:—"Your Excellency, —"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting):—"Does the Honourable Gentleman rise to second the motion?"

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar:—"No."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar:—"Your Excellency, I think the observation of Your Excellency is a very good observation and I hope we shall concentrate on the points for and against. But before I proceed to second this motion, I may point out that it might be advantageous for us to keep in view the fact that the list we are voting on is list No. II in the appendix. List No. II in the appendix is taken out of list No. I and these lists relate to all the provinces. We must bear in mind that we are now to frame lists which show what subjects future Provincial Government of Madras can discuss and deal with in the Executive Council or through the Ministers. In that view, I shall proceed to give what appears to me to be the main answer to the objections which were now mentioned against 'land revenue' and 'tenant rights' being in the transferred list. My Honourable Friend who spoke before me is slightly in error in thinking that the illustrious authors of the scheme were against the inclusion. No doubt they are excluded from list No. II, but they say that it is an illustrative list and not exhaustive. In paragraph 258 they say: 'Nor should we expect the transfer of matters which vitally affect the well-being of the masses who may not be adequately represented in the new councils, such for example, as questions of land revenue or tenant rights.' I presume they meant exactly what the words convey. That is, wherever in any particular province, it is found that the masses are not adequately represented, land revenue questions and tenant rights would not be desirable additions to the transferred lists. The authors of the scheme have not taken the position that the masses are not going to be adequately represented in the Madras Presidency. In connexion with that, we might notice the earlier sentences in the same paragraph. 'It should meet and confer with the other committee which is to deal with franchises, because the extent to which responsibility can be transferred is related to the nature and extent of the electorate which will be available in any particular province.' No doubt the Franchise Committee before whom our opinions will go, will have their own recommendations to make as to the nature and extent of the electorate. At present, we have to proceed upon the nature and extent of the electorate so far as it is known to us in this Presidency.' Therefore I sent up a question to your Excellency requesting information as to what is the nature and extent of electorates in the various matters."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I am reluctant to do it but I must draw the attention of the Honourable Member that he has not confined himself to the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar:—"I would like to —"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT (interrupting):—"The Honourable Gentleman's clear duty is to confine himself to the subject of the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar:—"Quite so, Your Excellency. I have no wish to disregard the order of the chair. I shall only mention that the only reason given for the non-inclusion of land revenue might be the inadequate extent of the electorate. That is the only point which I wish now to deal with. With reference to that, as Your Excellency did not admit my question to be placed before the Council, I may say we have got electorates for various bodies—municipalities, taluk boards, panchayats and we have various panchayats, co-operative, forest, caste, sanitary panchayats and others. If there is a very large electorate the authors presume that the masses know their rights. They will have representatives in this Council who will frame laws and influence the administration. As we all know, so far as this Presidency is concerned, we have a fairly large electorate even at present, a large body of people who are able to take care of their rights, so that this objection as to the nature and extent of the electorate may not warrant the non-inclusion of land revenue in the transferred subjects for this province. With reference to tenant rights, I have heard it said that tenant right contemplates two conflicting interests—the interests of the land-owners, of the estate owners, and tenants. It is said that the view of the estate holders is very important. I quite agree that we should consider the view of the landholders, but let us not forget what the framers of the scheme insist on. They say that the people are not represented, that the masses are not represented. I should like to hear any Honourable Member who wants to take up the position that tenant rights should not be included,—I would like to ask him to view the position from the standpoint of the authors and say if Madras agriculturists consider that matters of administration in regard to land revenue and the relation between landlords and tenants should not be in the transferred list. In regard to the landholders, I have been using my time during my recent tour to ascertain the views of some of them; they were quite in a dilemma. They seem to think that in some matters even with reference to landlord and tenant legislation, which has already been passed in Councils like this, they have suffered as their rights have been ignored and they do not know whether to choose the transferred or the reserved list. They do not know who will be the harder masters—the people or the officials. There is one very good reason why they should be in that position: because one undoubted basis on which we are going is that in the new administration there will be a very wide franchise and it will be a very large body of tenants that will have the preponderating influence in the future Councils. From that standpoint which is rightly taken up as the main point by the authors, it is the tenants' representatives that will control legislation. As for the landholders, if they have not quite made up their minds, the matter may be left to be decided by others. So far as tenants are concerned, their interests will clearly be improved and in no way suffer by the transfer of 'tenant rights' to the list of transferred subjects. For these reasons, I support the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao."

[22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar; Sir Gordon Fraser; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar:—"My Lord, I may at once explain my attitude towards this and similar resolutions. Until the Franchise Committee's conclusions have been considered, we have no means of judging what sort of a Council we will have in the future and whom it will represent. From paragraph 225 of the report, this is clear. Well, if I cannot know what sort of people will be in the coming Council, how can I say what subjects ought to be transferred to their control? Secondly, when there are some of the major findings in the report to which many including myself cannot agree, what useful purpose can be served by my discussing a detail like this? There is no use in assuming that the Government in England endorsed these findings. The fact remains they have not, and it is the business of some of us to see that they do not."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I am afraid that I share the feeling described by Your Excellency in Your Excellency's opening speech, the feeling described as over-cautiousness. I must take advantage of the first opportunity to make a personal explanation regarding the attitude which I adopt not only towards this resolution, but towards all the other resolutions on the agenda paper. I did think at first of moving a motion under rule 4 of the rules for the conduct of business proposing an adjournment of this meeting until after the reports have been received from the Subjects and Franchise Committees; I myself can see no useful purpose to be served by this meeting but I quite admit that my opinion may not be the only one held at this meeting and that other Honourable Members may wish to put forward their views. I would be the very last to suggest that such Honourable Members should not have ample opportunities for putting their views forward. Discussion on this resolution as also on the other resolutions on the agenda paper must necessarily start with the hypothesis that the principle of divided responsibility is an acceptable principle. In my opinion, it is a most dangerous attitude to adopt, it is an assumption with which I do not for one moment agree. We are asked here to discuss certain particular details of a problematical scheme and give our approval while at the same time, we disapprove of the scheme itself. To do so, I contend, would place one in an extremely ambiguous and invidious position and without a direct and positive statement to the contrary, the participation by myself and other Honourable Members in the debate might be read to imply the approval of the main principles of this problematical reform scheme and approval of the main principles of the report that we have before us, as those principles govern the particular matters which we now have before the meeting. I desire, therefore, to emphasise most clearly that any remarks of mine or any participation in the debate by me must not, in any way, be taken as implying an approval of the report and of the proposals contained in the report on constitutional reforms. My remarks on any of these resolutions must not be taken as implying in any way an approval of divided responsibility of Government. Whether the principles governing the scheme are accepted or not, I see no advantage to be gained by resolutions and recommendations at the present stage, as the division of the functions of Government into two categories, will be very materially affected by the reports that we shall receive later on from the two Committees, the Subjects Committee and the Franchise Committee. Until these are made public, I contend that any attempt on the part of this Council to frame recommendations regarding the division of functions of Government is entirely premature and I cannot see any useful purpose will be achieved or that any value can attach to these recommendations. I am well aware that in paragraph 238, the distinguished framers of the report write: 'On the publication of this report, we should like to see the lists discussed in the Provincial Councils and considered by the Provincial Governments, so that the Committee may have ready at hand considered criticisms upon the applicability of our suggestions to the circumstances of each particular province.' Nevertheless, I contend that any such discussion under the present circumstances must necessarily be futile and a mere waste of time and I cannot see that any satisfactory results can possibly be attained. In support of my argument, it is not really necessary for me to stray outside paragraph 238 as in this paragraph 238—"

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao (interrupting):—"My Lord, I should like to raise to a point of order. I have listened with very great interest to the remarks

194 RESOLUTION RE 'LAND REVENUE ADMINISTRATION' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; the President; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.-
Sir Gordon Fraser; Mr. Siva Rao.]

of the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser, but I am doubtful, my Lord, whether these are pertinent to the particular resolution which proposes one particular department to be transferred to the control of Ministers. I take it from the general trend of the remarks of my Honourable Friend that he is either against the system of diarchy or the transfer of any responsibility to any Indian Minister. I do not know to which of these two propositions he is pinning his faith. Apart from it, if he wishes to raise the question that no responsibility whatever should pass to Indian Ministers, he is perfectly entitled to do so in any manner which he may choose for the purpose; but on this particular resolution I submit for the consideration of Your Excellency that we are proceeding on the distinct assumption to which Your Excellency has already referred that, provided the total responsibility cannot be transferred wholesale at one stage, what subjects should be transferred. In view of this fundamental assumption, I should like to know whether my Honourable Friend is in order in saying that we should wait to express an opinion till the Franchise Committee and the Subjects Committee send in their report. I rather think that the committee for the settlement of subjects was intended to elicit opinion, and if my Honourable Friend withholds his opinion till they decide what subjects they propose to transfer, I should place before him for consideration that what was wanted is our opinion and not that we should be guided by the opinion of the Subjects Committee, and that Sir Gordon Fraser should then make up his mind whether such subjects should be transferred. In view of this fundamental position, I should like Your Excellency to give a ruling whether the observations of my Honourable Friend are in order. I do not object to any remarks of my Honourable Friend, because they will give me opportunity to meet him. While I should welcome all that he wishes to say against us or against any particular proposition—we should be delighted to hear him—it is not with any desire to curtail the expression of any shade of opinion different from us that I am making this observation."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"As far as I could understand the Honourable Gentleman asked for permission to make a personal explanation. That having been done, I assume he will confine himself to the subject of the resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I was saying when my Honourable Friend rose to a point of order, that any discussion of this or any other resolutions under the present conditions is a waste of time and would be futile, and as I was saying at the time in support of my argument it is not necessary for me to go outside the sentence in paragraph 238 as in this paragraph as in many others of the report, notably paragraph 198, the distinguished framers of the report have arrived at conclusions directly contrary to the general sense of their report. In paragraph 238, the report emphasises the necessity for careful investigation and for the determination of the lists for each province and this determination of the lists is not undertaken by the framers of the report as they expressly say that they could do so only after settling the general principles on which the lists should be framed. They add that this work should be entrusted to a special committee. I mention this to point out the contradictory nature of this paragraph. Then again, we find ourselves in the case of this and other resolutions on the paper invited to discuss certain particular details of the scheme, namely, the division of subjects, without an opportunity to criticise the general scheme itself. The division of subjects is entirely dependent upon the reform ultimately to be passed by the Houses of Parliament. That any Parliament will accept the scheme as it stands is unthinkable. In fact, no definite scheme exists—"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Now that my attention has been called to it, I must point out that the Honourable Member is travelling very wide on the whole subject, as to whether or no this meeting should have been called. He is quite at liberty to hold his own view on the subject, but I do not think it is very proper that such elaborate discussion on the point is proper to the motion such as that we are now discussing. We are now discussing whether on certain assumptions land revenue should or should not be a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I think Your Excellency will appreciate the great difficulty that a Member of this Council has in discussing this matter. Your Excellency, while disapproving as we do of the general scheme, it is really very difficult for us to discuss various lists, reserved and transferred. In Your Excellency's opening remarks, Your Excellency referred to the impossibility of the Provincial Governments arriving at a decision at this stage. I am afraid that the same handicap holds good in the case of our non-official members."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I rise to support the resolution that has been moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao. I have been carefully following what has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Muppi Nayar and also by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser. The one difficulty which the first member raised was that the electorates have not yet been formed and that it is useless and futile in his opinion to attempt any discussion of this subject. Your Excellency, I may say that the possibility of forming electorates in which all these varied interests can be represented may be taken into consideration now and I do not think for a moment that these discussions will be thoroughly useless. Then the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser stated that the scheme itself is under trial and the main principles of the scheme have not been considered. The principle of division and the diarchy advocated in the scheme has not been discussed and so, it is a sheer waste of time in his opinion to consider which shall be transferred and which shall be reserved. This aspect of the question has been considered by the illustrious authors of the report in paragraph 238 of their report and they say: 'This work should, we suggest, be entrusted to another special committee similar in composition to, but possibly smaller in size than, the one which we have already proposed to constitute for the purpose of dealing with franchises and constituencies. It may be said that such a task can be appropriately undertaken only when our main proposals are approved. We find it difficult, however, to believe that any transitional scheme can be devised which will dispense with the necessity for some such demarcation.' The illustrious authors anticipate such criticism there and they also meet it. As regards the resolution itself, I need not detain the Council very long. I may say in the words of the report itself this matter of land revenue administration is one which vitally affects the well-being of the masses and as such if there is any subject which should be transferred to popular control, I most unhesitatingly say that land revenue should form one of them. As regards the possible objection stated in the report itself that, for some time to come, the masses may not be adequately represented in the new Councils, that seems to be an unfounded fear. If the masses are not directly represented, there will be others who may be trusted to safeguard the masses and their interests. With these words I strongly support the resolution."

A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Siva Rao; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.)

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Your Excellency, I want before I proceed to discuss this matter to place before my Honourable Colleagues the position that Your Excellency has drawn our attention to. The non-official members in this Council have to vote upon this matter and therefore it will be only proper for us to discuss the pros and cons of every question. I invite the attention of Honourable Members to my resolution which will be disposed of by the discussion of this resolution. That is resolution No. XXVI.* I want Your Excellency to kindly note that this resolution should be put to vote in the form in which I have proposed it there."

"I want that land revenue administration as a whole should be transferred, or, in any event, the matters referred to therein should be transferred—'collection of land revenue, maintenance and procedure of revenue establishment, maintenance of land records, surveys, record of rights, special laws regarding land tenures, relations of landholders and tenants, and collection of rent'—I want this to be divided into two parts and I take the word 'assessment' from the illustrative list. I first say that the whole thing should be transferred and I subsequently say that, in any event, the words I have used in my resolution may be added to the land revenue administration and such portion may be transferred. I want the pros and cons of the whole question to be considered. I do not think there is any difficulty if one sits to work in considering what the franchise committee has to do. It would not be difficult to proceed on the assumption of the report and give opinion. In fact, except those that would not want to say anything, others must be able to find a method of expressing themselves on the assumptions in the report. Paragraph 238 says what the kind of franchise would be and the whole matter is discussed. Territorial franchise is the main basis which is recommended by the report and a close examination of the voters or the electorates that may be formed in all the various aspects will have to be made. Whatever may be the aspect that has to be considered, it is clear that payment of land revenue will determine the large class of voters that might form the future electorate. I find that a close examination of the tables attached to the Revenue administration report shows that if persons paying over Rs. 30 are to get the franchise, we will have about 350,000 electors; if those above Rs. 50 are taken, we will have about 150,000 electors of land revenue-paying people alone. Of income-tax payers in the whole of this province, we will get about 52,000 people. If similarly we go to municipal councils and taluk board and district board members who already hold a franchise, we may have about another 50,000 on the whole. Now if professional tax-payers and co-operative societies and similar institutions are taken to be given the franchise, all that will give another 30 or 40 thousand voters. Whatever may be the view we may take of this, there is not the least doubt that persons paying land revenue whether more than Rs. 30 or more than Rs. 50, inclusive of persons who pay rents of the same amount to landholders, there is not the least doubt that we will have a large class of persons in the electorates, much larger than all the kind of electorates put together. The natural question will arise, suppose a legislative assembly in which representatives of various territorial jurisdictions come in, in which electors are mainly persons who pay land revenue to Government—the question naturally arises whether in the transition period, when we are considering the reform schemes as put forward by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State, it is safe to hand over the assessment portion of the land revenue also to the transferred list. Therefore it is I say even in case assessment is reserved the rest of it may be transferred. My submission to my Honourable Colleagues is to first consider whether the right to assess should be transferred or not. There again I want to place some views before the Government and before my colleagues. I want first to know whether, as provided in paragraph 240, if power is reserved to Executive Government of the province or to the Government of India in the matter of the nature of the assessment, if power is reserved to them to sanction any alteration by the ministers in the Legislative Councils, if alteration for the worse in the collection of land revenue should be adopted, whether such a power left with the Executive Government of the province or with the Government of India will not be quite sufficient to keep the necessary check and have the whole question transferred to the ministers who, with the Legislative Councils and the representatives from the various parts, will be more intimate with all the details of the administration and will be able to place before the ministers all the knowledge needed to accurately work out in detail the nature of the assessment to be levied. Therefore, my submission is that the whole of the land revenue inclusive of assessment should be transferred with the reservation of the powers referred to in paragraph 240. I base my argument on the sentence in paragraph 238 which says : ' Their guiding principle should be to include in the transferred list those departments which afford most opportunity for local knowledge and social service.' I submit that, in a matter of this kind of assessment, they will have the best knowledge. The only difficulty will be the constitution of the electorate and the voters that might actually influence the administration ; it cannot but be in a country like India, or in this province especially, that we must have a large number of voters who pay land revenue or rent to landholders and they might pass a resolution which might affect the total revenue. If the power is reserved with the Executive Government or with the Government of India to control any reduction, it will be there and I think it might very well be transferred to a body which will have greater detailed knowledge. But as I said at the commencement, my Honourable Colleagues should also consider whether it is not proper under these circumstances not to interfere with the assessment at the present stage and leave it, till greater security is insured of their administering it properly, to be reserved in the hands of the Executive Government until they themselves are satisfied that they are not likely to make any violent changes. We know that revenue is needed for the administration of all departments. Therefore, the first question for us to consider is whether the assessment portion should be reserved. Any how, I beg to submit that the rest of it can never, if it is to be productive of much good be reserved ; but it must be in the transferred list—I mean the list relating to collection of land revenue, maintenance and procedure of revenue establishment, maintenance of land records, surveys, record of rights, special laws regarding land tenure, relations of landholders and tenants and collection of rent.' All this, my Lord, must be within the better knowledge of these representatives coming from the various parts of the province. They must be able to effect these things much cheaper and with much greater force than by an establishment which is highly centralised and which is being controlled by the executive head of the province. I have already laid before this Council one or two resolutions where I suggested that the collection of land revenue in the villages might be transferred to villagers who might be asked to collect the rent and pay it to the treasury, subject to the control or the supervision of the revenue inspectors. My suggestion in that case was that all the people of the subordinate establishment which is being entertained by each one of the departments like the police department, like land revenue department, like the department of public works, and the local fund establishment, all these lower establishments may be left to be looked after by the villagers and the collection business also may be given to them. I calculated that Rs. 200 lakhs was spent on these minor departments and all this money according to me will be money which would be much less spent if the matter is sufficiently decentralized with a superintending staff reserved to see that things are done as stated by me. My submission is that this business of collection of land revenue, maintenance of staff and other things can be attended to with much less establishment by the villagers. Similarly, the maintenance of land records for which we are now spending about Rs. 45 lakhs, that establishment with the village agency will be able to do much more useful work connected with all the departments in the village than what is being done. It is a matter that can well be considered when the subject is transferred ; but, in any event, I do not think there is any likelihood of anything wrong being done. And this sentence in paragraph 238 says : ' Those in which mistakes which may occur, though serious, would not be irremediable, and those which stand most in need of development.' These are the two other clauses which might be well used in this connexion. Therefore I say that in the assessment portion, if a few mistakes are committed, it will result in serious consequence ; but in the case of the collection of revenue such mistakes, if they happen, will not cause any serious loss. If responsible bodies be constituted as are proposed to be constituted and if they take up the question of the collection of revenue and the maintenance of land records and the settlement of disputes about land, all these will be better cared for and more easily disposed of by this smaller agency than by a highly centralized Executive Government. Therefore, the proposition has to be considered in two aspects, and in any event, so far as the portion relating to collection is concerned, my impression is it should be absolutely in charge of the ministers. I would only add a word about the Court of Wards. I myself think that a wholesale proposition of transfer to the ministers may not be quite conducive to the best interests of the persons connected with the Court of Wards. That is a matter which will be moved by my Honourable Friend separately. Therefore my submission is whatever may be said about it I would like to have the advice and experience of Honourable Members of Government to let us know if in the case of assessments and general control as to variations in assessment power may be preserved to the Executive Government and whether this will not effectively prevent the ministers from abusing any power that may be so transferred. If that is so, the question of assessment may also be considered. As regards the other things, I have placed my views already."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO :—" Your Excellency, I have given notice of a similar resolution No. XVIII* on the question of land revenue administration. In that resolution, I have omitted certain clauses of questions relating to (1) encumbered and attached estates, (2) famine, (3) resumption of revenue free grants, (4) alluvion and diluvion and (5) colonisation and disposal of Crown lands ; and I have asked that the rest may be transferred. My Lord, the question now before us is whether land revenue administration is to be transferred either wholly or in part. I fail to understand why even a portion cannot be transferred. Regarding education, we see that a portion has been allowed to be transferred and a portion is reserved ; and excise, a subject upon which we do not think we can say we know much, has been transferred and it is no more a reserved subject. Under these circumstances, I fail to understand why at least a portion of the land revenue administration cannot be transferred. On reading the report, paragraph 238, we see that the distinguished authors of the report do not state that there are any political reasons why land revenue administration should be a reserved subject. All that they say is that the reason why it should continue to be a reserved subject is that that subject vitally affects the well-being of the masses who may not be adequately represented in the new Councils. On the other hand, we now see that there is a broad franchise proposed to be constituted and I have no doubt that the members who are on the committee will see that the masses are brought in large numbers and therefore the masses will have a sufficient right of representation and I am sure they will return proper candidates who will represent their views in the Legislative Council. Under these circumstances, I do not see why a portion of the land revenue should not be a transferred subject. With regard to the several clauses which have to be eliminated or included that seems to be a debatable question. I thought the Court of Wards question and the encumbered estates question had some political significance and so probably they will have to be reserved for some time at least to come. But when I see in paragraph 238 that the framers do not put the reservation of land revenue on any of those grounds, I beg to urge that the whole department should be transferred or if it cannot be done I stick to my resolution No. XVIII* and submit that, excluding those subjects, land revenue should be transferred. It is a subject which, as the framers of the report say, affords most opportunity for local knowledge and social service, a subject in which Indians have shown themselves keenly interested in which mistakes which may occur, though serious, would not be irremediable and which stands most in need of development. If there is any subject in which Indians have trained themselves, or in which they have got any experience, it is land revenue. The aristocracy is represented in the Council and there are middle class landholders who have also got interests of their own and when local self-government is transferred to us completely and when we can collect the land-cess and manage district boards and local boards and municipalities, where the same or similar questions arise, I fail to understand why ministers would not be able to manage land revenue administration also. I therefore submit that the whole or a substantial portion of it may be added to the transferred subjects and Your Excellency's Government may be pleased to recommend to the franchise committee to include the same."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER :—" Your Excellency, I should also like to be allowed to make a personal explanation and to say that my approval or disapproval of any resolution that may be discussed does not mean my approval of the reform proposals on the broad basis. If this is conceded, I am quite willing to hear the debate proceeding on what the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao called fundamental assumption. As to the terms of this resolution, I oppose it because of the debates I have heard in this room on matters of revenue settlement. I should like to know the views of the officer now responsible for revenue settlement on the question."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARYAR :—" Your Excellency, the most important item under land revenue administration is resettlement and in the new administration local self-government will be transferred to the minister, who might probably require a large amount of revenue, and this might have to be obtained from land revenue. Therefore, resettlement must be under him and if resettlement is transferred, all the other subjects, which are of minor importance, may also be transferred."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" I should like to know whether the request of my Hon'ble Friend Sir Fairless Barber as to a statement of the case from the Land Revenue or Settlement Member is to be complied with, because I would like to wait to hear what he has to say. Otherwise, I will offer a few observations."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" I understand the Honourable Gentleman to invite the opinion of the Honourable Member on the resolution. As I have already pointed out, it is not possible for official members to comply. Let the Honourable Member go on."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—" My Lord, we are all under a certain amount of difficulty in dealing with a resolution of this kind. We have here land revenue experts who have spent 25 or 30 years of their life-time in conducting district administration, in forming the Board of Revenue and the Central Government of this Presidency. On the present occasion, in the discussion of this subject, Your Excellency will realize our difficulty in not knowing the case for the Government and therefore we have to imagine what is probably passing in the mind of the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew and the Members of the Board of Revenue sitting at my back as to the observations made on this question of the transfer of land revenue. If we know the difficulties which are likely to be suggested, it is quite possible for us to meet those difficulties. For the present, we must complain, not in a complaining spirit, that Your Excellency has laid an injunction that the official members should not speak or vote. Therefore, we have to meet the case on hypothetical assumptions as to what objections are likely to be raised against this transfer. I may at the outset point out that whatever may be the views that are likely to find acceptance on this matter in the collective Government of Madras, so far as the authors of the scheme are concerned, they have laid down certain definite principles which have been referred to again in the reference to the subjects committee and the franchise committee which was recently published in the newspapers. So that, my Lord, whatever practical objections might be urged—for I submit they may be urged not only for the transfer of this department, but to the transfer of any department under Government—those objections

* See page 267 infra.

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Sir Fairless Barber; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.
Sir Gordon Fraser; the President.]

still remain and I suppose those objections are objections which would anyhow be urged by at least some members of this Council though not here, but elsewhere. I am referring to the statement made by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser and the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber about the fundamental propositions. The fundamental proposition that has been raised by this report—

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER (interrupting):—"I did not say fundamental proposition. I used the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao's own words 'fundamental assumption.'"

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I am thankful to my Honourable Friend for the correction. The fundamental assumption of the report is the transfer of responsibility to Indian ministers; whether my Honourable Friends who represent trade and commerce and planting interests in this Council accept that fundamental assumption of transfer of responsibility to Indian ministers is a matter upon which they have carefully avoided expressing an opinion. They have not stated a single word about that matter. They have not expressed their disapproval. Therefore, I might perhaps bring to the notice of Honourable Members who may not agree with us in this matter the words of one of the authors of the report after the publication of this report and that is: 'Let us have it out once for all what was to be the principle of our Government in India. Was it to be domination or subordination to the iron hand? Were we to have one principle of Government for India and another principle for the rest of the empire?'"

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"I rise to a point of order. Are the remarks of the Honourable Gentleman relevant to the proposition?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"To be candid with the Council everybody who has spoken has been out of order with the exception of one or two gentlemen who have spoken to the resolution. I have endeavoured to do my best to keep the discussion within limits. I can only hope that the tendencies of straying out of order which are shared by so many gentlemen will soon become exhausted."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I do not wish to pursue the subject. But I may say that the tendencies are already exhausted, but they may be revived the moment something else is said. There is the danger. I trust my Honourable Friends will appreciate our position that we are doing our best to support the principle of responsible Government which is embodied in this report and it is on that fundamental assumption that we are proceeding to discuss this matter."

"Now coming to land revenue administration, I am afraid that the illustrative list, which is appended to this report, has not been compiled with strict conformity to administrative conditions in this Presidency. For example, alluvion and diluvion, so far as I know, are not dealt with in the department of Land Revenue. I rather think they pertain to the Public Works Department, river conservancy, and alluvion and diluvion pertain to the Public Works Department. It seems to me, my Lord, on reading the report that the gentleman who drafted it belongs to the United Provinces; I see his hand not only in the illustrative list, but throughout the report. It is based upon the conditions of the United Provinces and does not accord with the general administrative organization in this province. That is a remark which I deliberately make, because as I proceed under each resolution, I propose to show that tendency which is plain in this report. Leaving aside all these observations about alluvion and diluvion, my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Suryanarayana Rao referred to some political reasons for excluding this subject. So far as I can see, there can be no reason except that property has to be protected by the construction of embankments and I do not see any reason why that should not be transferred. My main contention, my Lord, is that this is one of those departments in which the people are very greatly interested and this is a department manned mostly by Indian agency. Most of the divisions are now in the hands of the Indian divisional officers, some Collectors are Indians and a great deal of the settlement work is done by Indian agency. I think, my Lord, that, looking at these circumstances, this is one of those departments which within the governing principle of this report, namely, that it is a department in which Indians have intimate knowledge of the subject."

"The second point is that the whole of the land revenue system is based upon administrative systems which prevailed before the advent of the British. In fact, the whole theory of settlement has been inherited from previous governments and I submit even before the advent of the British there was a government in this country, there was collection of land revenue. And what is the state of things in the Indian States now? Is it contended that in Mysore where there is an Indian minister in charge of the administration land revenue is not properly administered? Whether it is a popular minister or whether it is a Member of the Executive Council appointed by Your Excellency, whether the department is in the hands of Indians, it cannot be contended that there is any serious danger of disorganization which would endanger peace, order or good government. I submit that the day-to-day administration on which the welfare of the masses is dependent is the revenue administration, the disposal of lands, the economic condition of the people, the way in which remissions are granted, the way in which lands are disposed of, the way in which land revenue collections are made, the question of land improvement loans, penal assessments and agricultural loans—these are all subjects in which I submit for the last nine years the representatives of the people have done their level best to persuade the Government to pursue a different policy. Under these circumstances, it seems to me futile on the part of anybody to contend that an Indian minister would not be able to 22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; the Raja of Ramnad; manage this department. After all we have the Board of Revenue and other subsidiary organizations in direct charge of the administration. Under these circumstances, and with these safeguards, I submit that this is a case which comes within the governing clauses of this paragraph 238 of the Report.

"My Lord, there is one other observation which I would like to make. It is impossible to split up surveys and land revenue. They are so inter-related to each other, land revenue to survey, survey with land records and so on, that it is absolutely impossible that they can be partly transferred to the charge of Ministers."

"The only other observation I would like to make is as to whether there is any particular danger of non-collection of assessment. I have heard it said now and then, my Lord, that the moment this department is placed in charge of an Indian minister, the first act of that minister and of a popularly constituted assembly would be to reduce the assessments, probably to introduce a permanent settlement of land revenue holdings. That has been suggested, my Lord, now and then, but I think that a most ungrounded fear. There is absolutely no ground that any Government, be it Indian Ministers or be it under the Executive Council, would, under any circumstances, surrender revenue, because they are responsible for the day-to-day development of the country. So far as that fear is concerned, it does not seem to operate on the distinguished authors of the report. One of the departments which the authors of this report have placed on the transferred lists is excise. What is the growth of revenue in this Presidency—about 15 lakhs from excise and between 4 to 5 lakhs from land revenue. This being the case, when the authors of the report were perfectly willing to trust an Indian minister with the department of excise, in which he can throw away, if he is so minded, Rs. 15 lakhs at any moment, is it reasonable to suppose that in land revenue they are likely to give away Rs. 4 lakhs? The tendency is rather the other way, to take care of every pie and to bring to the hotch-pot every item of revenue. I may say I have a little experience of collection of revenue, not land revenue but municipal revenue. I am not aware of the tendency of any municipal council to forego revenue improperly. If there are any instances of that kind, the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar may hunt up references and tell us whether any municipality has been censured for surrendering any portion of the revenue unnecessarily. Speaking generally, I am not at all sure that this fear of land revenue being surrendered unnecessarily or on improper grounds is one that is justified. On the other hand, as I submitted, my Lord, it is quite likely that it may be the other way."

"These are the circumstances, the antecedent circumstances and the great success already achieved by Indians in the field of land revenue—I do not wish to quote Sir John Kees who referred to Raja Todar Mal in support of the argument—and there are many instances in the administration of Native States and also in British provinces, where the whole administration has been very ably conducted by Indian officers."

"These are my remarks, my Lord, on the question of land revenue administration. Two of my Honourable Friends have given notice of identical resolutions with certain reservations. I propose to move an amendment to the main proposition of my Honourable Friend Mr. Krishna Rao with a view to bring it in conformity with the general sense of all the resolutions on the subject. I do not know whether my Honourable Friend would like to exclude alluvion and diluvion. I should like that they should remain and go to the Public Works Department. I propose that the exception should be the Court of Wards. I propose that the following words should be added at the end of the resolution: 'With the exception of questions relating to the Court of Wards and encumbered and attached estates'—because it is to be found in the other resolutions—I formally move this: My reason for this exception is not that an Indian minister would not be able to look after the Court of Wards as well as other departments of Land Revenue; but my main reason is, my Lord, one purely of expediency on the present occasion. Honourable Members will remember that the zamindars presented an address to the Secretary of State and to Lord Chelmsford in which they asked—I am quoting from recollection—I am subject to correction—for some kind of responsible government in certain spheres of activity; but afterwards it was unfortunate that there was a split and that a section of the zamindars do not seem to be as enthusiastic about the reforms as the other section. I see a divergence of opinion as regards the reforms. I do not wish to complicate this question by bringing questions relating to the Court of Wards under an Indian Minister for the present. I do say it is not on the ground that an Indian Minister would be unable to exercise control, but if any zamindar has any desire that questions which are usually dealt with in the Court of Wards should continue to be dealt with by the Executive Council and Your Excellency, I would rather leave that for consideration for the present under the present administration. It is on that one single ground and with a view not to create any more hostility to the reforms than is necessary, that I propose this exclusion. I do not know the views of the zamindars. It is unfortunate that my Hon'ble Friend Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao who represents the northern zamindars is not able to be present here but my Honourable Friends, the Raja of Ramnad and the Raja of Bobbili, are here and subject, to their wishes, I propose this amendment to this resolution."

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I beg to support the amendment. That would indicate my wishes in the matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Your Excellency, I do not see why some of my Honourable Friends should adopt an apologetic tone as if we are going to surrender revenue."

200 RESOLUTION RE 'LAND REVENUE ADMINISTRATION' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. Venkatapati Raju; the President; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Surgn.-Genl. Giffard.)

What I respectfully urge is this: the proper attitude is that if it is necessary to reduce it, it would be reduced, and if it is necessary to increase it, we have to increase it. There is no doubt that so far as land revenue administration is concerned, it should be reduced for the simple reason that the whole administration was carried on during all these years under a misconception. That misconception was that they have to pay a larger proportion of taxation than the rest. The proper thing is that the revenue ought to be reduced. Even the Director-General of Statistics said long ago that a larger share of the produce should be left in the hands of the ryots so as to save them from the money-lenders and that 25 to 30 per cent would be necessary for this purpose. Under these circumstances, we should offer no apology to reduce the assessment. If necessary we have to reduce it. What I would suggest is that we should take more from the treasury and less from the general tax-payer. Though it is a paradox, it is absolutely necessary that we must economise our expenditure and utilize the revenue by efficient management. That is the way of tackling the problem. I support the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao without any amendments whatever."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I think we might take a division as there has been no opposition. We might take a division on this subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I would not detain the Council long. I wish to make a few observations on this particular resolution which is a very important one now before this Council. It will be clear that the province is almost entirely agricultural and almost the entire population depends upon land and as such any form of responsible government, if it means anything at all, must be responsible to them in some degree or other. And it cannot be responsible to them unless and until questions affecting land are entrusted to the ministers responsible to them. Under these circumstances, I believe that the proposition before the Council should be accepted by the Council as a whole. If, however, safeguards are necessary, I am willing to consent to the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao in the view that there should be the least division among the non-official members of this Council. With these remarks, I heartily support the proposition before the House."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I propose if the Council is agreeable to put this resolution in the form in which it has been proposed by the amendment. The resolution we are discussing is No. II. It has been moved and seconded that this amendment should be added namely that the words 'with the exception of the Court of Wards and encumbered and attached estates' should be added to resolution No. II."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"May I request Your Excellency to put the amendment separately to vote?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The first motion before the Council is whether or no this addition shall be made."

This was put and agreed to, seven voting for the addition and two against.

The resolution thus amended was put and agreed to, ten voting for and six against.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao demanded a poll which was taken with the following result:—

RESOLUTION RE 'INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

201

22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

RESOLUTION RE 'INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Your Excellency, the resolution of which I have given notice runs thus:—

'VIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms questions relating to industrial development (item 19 of List I of the same appendix) should be transferred to the control of Ministers.'

"It will be observed that two lists are given in the appendix. List I shows the subjects which are proposed to be declared as provincial subjects; that is, subjects in which the Government of India will not interfere; and out of these subjects, which are 29 in number, some fifteen subjects are shown as to be transferred to the control of the Ministers. Of course, these two lists are tentative and they are only given by way of illustration. The intention of the two authors of the report is to show what subjects it would be advisable to transfer to the popular control and what subjects should be retained under the Executive Council. My resolution is that all these subjects which are mentioned in List II should be transferred, that is to say, no subject from this list should be brought back to the category of reserved subjects. In addition to that, I want, in this resolution, one more subject to be completely transferred. Why I consider it advisable that all these subjects which are given by way of illustration in the second list should be transferred subjects is this: In my opinion the division of subjects into the two groups should be made as equal as possible. Power should be equally balanced between the Executive Council and the Ministers. I am not one of those who advocate that most of the subjects should be transferred to the Ministers and only a few subjects should be left to the Executive Council. At the same time, I am opposed to the party which says that only a few subjects should be transferred to the Ministers so that the Indians may be put on their trial and their capacity for administration may be tested and later on when they have proved that they are capable of managing some departments, some more departments may be given to them. That does not seem to be the intention of the authors of this report. It is taken for granted that we are quite fit for managing these affairs, but it is not considered advisable that the whole responsibility should be transferred at once, but it should be done gradually. Therefore, I think that the division should be so made at least in the advanced provinces—and I consider Madras to be one of the most advanced provinces—that it may be as equally balanced as possible. Of course this report deals with the whole of India and they had to take all provinces into account. There are provinces which are less advanced, there are provinces which are very much backward, and perhaps there it may not be advisable to transfer a very large number of subjects. But in the advanced provinces, a large number of subjects should be transferred and, as I said before, Madras is one of the advanced provinces. Education has spread here to a larger extent and the sense of citizenship has also developed here more than is the case in other provinces, and there would be no dislocation of the administration, by a transfer of a large number of departments to the popular control. It is only when the division is made equal that there will be perfect co-ordination between the Executive Council and the Ministers. If extra weight is placed on one side or the other I consider that will be unfair and it will not be conducive to the success of the scheme.

"Coming to the particular item which forms the subject-matter of my resolution, it will be noticed that there are some departments which are completely transferred, but there are other departments which are only partially transferred. For example, item 5 in the first list is maintenance of law and order, and out of the long list placed under this heading only the subject of prevention of gambling is transferred. In the same way, in item 8, forests and forest products, only a portion is transferred. Under education, primary, secondary and technical education is transferred while college and university education, reformatories and industrial schools are reserved. In the industrial department, only development of arts, crafts and local industries is transferred whereas other subjects which come under the same heading and which are very important are reserved; for example, 'factories, dangerous and offensive trades, inland steam vessels and steam-boilers, registration of labour, labour exchanges, provident funds, industrial health insurance, friendly societies, apprenticeships, accident insurance'. Some of these subjects do not exist now, but as they come into existence and as they get more developed, they will form important subjects. All these are kept as reserved subjects and only the development of arts, crafts and local industries which is comparatively less important is transferred to the control of the Ministers. Your Excellency is aware that industrial questions will assume still greater importance after the conclusion of the war. One war is going to give place only to another war, the industrial and economic war which will be more far-reaching in its effects than the war which we are now having. Every nation will try to better its economic position at the cost of other nations. Among the Allies themselves there will be competition though they may come to a certain understanding on the lines of least resistance, but under certain limitations, each will try to gain advantage over the others. Then, within the Empire itself, the different members composing it will contend with one another for supremacy and there will be rivalry in industrial matters and many a question, tariff, for example, will crop up in order to acquire that supremacy. Such being the case, I think it is but right and proper that Indians should demand that they should be allowed a free hand to develop their industries and to arrive at all decisions concerning industries with as little check and interference from outside as possible. Of course, I am now dealing with the industrial question as a provincial matter and not as an affair of the Government of India. Of course, the Government of India can alone deal with the Imperial questions, but even as a Provincial subject, there will be many questions which will require very careful handling. It is due to their local importance that the industrial matters are placed as Provincial subjects, that is, subjects in which the Government of India will not ordinarily interfere except having a general control and I propose that this subject should be under the control of Indians. I have not lost sight of the fact that, at present, with most of our important industries Europeans are most vitally concerned. But I may say that Europeans need not have any apprehensions on this subject. They will be adequately represented on the Legislative Council and in the transitory period when the scheme is in operation, they will have the moral and material support of the officials. If the reform proposals are finally adopted in the main, and we are proceeding with the discussion to-day on the assumption that it will be so, and if in due course complete responsibility is to be granted to the provinces as well as to the central government, it is high time that Europeans and Indians begin from the very beginning of the reforms to cultivate mutual trust and dependence so that in the transitory period we might have adjusted ourselves to the new conditions and prepare for the time when complete responsible government will be granted to India. India is quite sensible of the great benefits which she has derived from the Europeans, both merchants and industrialists, and we do want them to remain here and prosper, but only with this reservation that their good as individuals or as a class should come out of the good of the country itself and that we Indians should have equal opportunities with Europeans for industrial pursuits. It may be said why not leave this department with the Executive Council who may be trusted to look after Indian interests as well as European interests. But I contend that we should try and forget that there are European and Indian interests, as far as industries are concerned. At present, they do exist; these interests are separate interests but they should no longer continue to be so. That can only be brought about by placing this subject under the control of the Indian Ministers.

"I need not go very minutely into the question and show how if industrial matters are placed under popular control, we may bring about the industrial development of the country and raise India to the status of a manufacturing country. That is a very broad subject and this is not the time or occasion for going into it at length. One thing must, however, be admitted that unless our industries are developed and unless India makes progress in this direction, all the boons that we may receive in the political field will not be so very beneficial as they should be. In fact this is one of the reasons why India is very keenly demanding self-government. The idea was that if self-government is granted to us, we will be able to spread education and to develop industries and commerce in a manner that will raise India at no very distant date to a position of equality with European countries and with Japan. It is to their industries, no doubt, that these nations and Japan owe their greatness and India cannot be an exception to the general rule. So, when responsible government is to be granted to us by stages, let this Department of Industry be the first thing with which reforms and the transfer of responsibility should begin. I appeal to you all, Indians and Europeans, to accept this resolution in the spirit in which it is proposed."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I beg to second the resolution. The resolution is a very important one. India is largely dependent upon foreign countries for manufactured goods. If the resources of the country are to develop, Government must take action and indigenous enterprise should be encouraged. It is a recognized fact that in this country people are unable to carry out their programmes without the help and guidance of Government, and to secure this help and guidance from the Government the popular opinion in this country is that the Department of Industries should be entirely controlled by the Indian Ministers under the Reform scheme."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Shall we take a decision on this matter or shall we adjourn?"

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I should like to address the Council."

At this stage the Council adjourned for a short interval.

The Council re-assembled at 2.45 p.m. when the discussion on resolution VIII was resumed.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I wish to say a few words in support of this proposition. The illustrious authors of the report lay down in paragraph 238 of the report certain principles for the differentiation of these subjects. They say 'The guiding principle should be to include in the transferred list those departments which afford most opportunity for local knowledge and social service, those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested, those in which mistakes which may occur, though serious, would not be irremediable, and those which stand most in need of development.' I submit, my Lord, that this subject of Industries is a subject which requires most development. In paragraph 331 of the report, in dealing with the industries and tariff, the authors of the report quote a statement made by the late Mr. Ranade: 'the political domination of one country by another attracts far more attention than the more formidable though unfelt domination, which capital, enterprise and skill of one country exercises over the trade and manufactures of another. This latter domination has an insidious influence which paralyses the springs of all the various activities which together make up the life of a nation.' Now the question arises how to put an end to this sort of commercial domination and the question also arises which agency is more likely to effect this. I must, without any doubt, answer that the ministers of the popular assemblies are more likely to carry out this programme than anybody else. In the same connexion, they say that the Government ought to move in this matter. 'We believe that this is true in the case of industries; and that if the resources of the country are to be developed, the Government must take action.' They also say: 'We are agreed therefore that there must be a definite change of view; and that the Government must admit and shoulder its responsibility for furthering the industrial development of the country.' In another connexion they suggest 'conditions are ripe for the development of new and for the revival of old industries on European lines'; and they also say: 'We are advised, for instance, that tanning, glass-making, soap-making, sugar-refining, and the manufacture of a great variety of vegetable dyes, drugs and essential oils are instances of industries which are now pursued on primitive lines and which present obvious opportunities for the application of technical science.' The only reason that can be urged against the classification of these subjects under the head of transferred subjects is that technical knowledge will be necessary which will not be available in this country. As regards that, popular assemblies and popular ministers, if it should be handed to their control, will find it extremely easy to consult and have the service of experts. There would not be any difficulty in the matter. The other difficulty that will be raised is that the interests of the foreign trade, the interests of the foreign capitalists, will have to be protected. In a matter like this, I may say without trenching upon personal matters that when a conflict arises between indigenous enterprise and foreign enterprise, I have no hesitation in saying that the interests of indigenous enterprise should prevail and it is because there is this dual interest, that we feel strongly on this point that this department should be handed over to popular control."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I support this resolution. The previous management of this department by the Government for generations together bears ample and eloquent testimony to the urgent need for the transfer of this department to the hands of the ministers who will take an intelligent and enthusiastic interest in the subject. It has been a fatherless department and I may say, it has been almost under the guidance of a step-mother, as it were. Persons who have been in charge of this department, with all respect for their patriotism for their own country and for the welfare of their own country, we must say and pointedly say, that they have neglected the interests of this country in preference to the interests of the Home industries. The present sad state of affairs in this country, if I may say so, is entirely due to this lack of sympathetic regard for the interests of this country and it is unnecessary for me to quote chapter and verse in support of this position. It is acknowledged in this report itself. It is acknowledged from page 210 onwards in this book and I will give a reference to paragraph 331. They say 'In the course of our discussion, the conviction has been forced upon us that economic factors enter largely into the political situation in India; and we feel bound so far to exceed the limits of strictly constitutional discussions as to take note of these also. There is truth, we think in words of the late Mr. Ranade, spoken as long as 25 years ago'—my Honourable Friend Mr. Siva Rao just quoted that statement of Mr. Ranade. We may say that the present war has brought out the industrial weakness of India in its nakedness. We cannot sit with folded hands and see the raw materials of this country neglected, the resources neglected, and all because of the want of enthusiasm and interest in the persons who have been in charge of this department. The time has gone by when we can any longer safely leave the interest in the same hands and it is better in the interests of all concerned, both in the larger interests of the Empire to which we have the honour to belong and the vital interests of this country that this department is placed in the hands of people who will take an enthusiastic and patriotic interest in its development. That is, I submit, a very strong argument in favour of the transfer of this subject to the minister, who, of course, will be assisted by the other councillors and by first-class statesmen from Home who will preside over the destinies of this Province. I do not see any danger at all. On the other hand, any danger that there is will only tend to develop the resources of the country; really, it is no danger, but it is profitable to all who have to live in this country and earn their bread in this country. As I stated already, the past management of this department is sufficient proof that it should no longer remain there uncontrolled."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Your Excellency, having given notice of a resolution on this subject, I wish to say a few words to point out that even according to the views put forward by some of my European Colleagues here, this subject should be transferred to the Indian ministers. I am quite happy to find myself in agreement with my Honourable Friend Sir Gordon Fraser, who, I am sorry, is not in this hall at present, when he stated that dual responsibility is not after all a satisfactory thing. Let it not be supposed for a moment that we accept the principle of dual responsibility or divided responsibility as a satisfactory solution of the problems which have to be solved in evolving a scheme of self-government. Everyone is agreed that, if possible, and if feasible, there must be a system of full responsible government without any divided responsibility. The more correct solution would be to have the necessary safeguards and checks in the machinery of the Government of India and to allow complete provincial autonomy. But because the authors of this report have, for various reasons stated therein, considered it necessary to divide responsibility and because they have conceded the desirability of some devolution of responsibility to Indian ministers, we have thought it the wiser course to accept it so far as it goes, hoping that in course of time we will justify the demands for further reforms in that direction.

A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao ; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.

"So far as this subject is concerned, I would like to point out that it finds a place in list No. I as also in list No. II. So far as list No. I relating to the provincial subjects is taken into consideration, it provides for industrial matters under head 19 in these terms:—'Factories, dangerous and offensive trades, inland steam vessels and steam boilers, registration of labour, labour exchanges, provident funds, industrial health insurance, friendly societies, apprenticeships, accident insurance. Electricity, petroleum, explosives, mines, geological survey for minerals. Development of arts and crafts and local industries.' We find that, so far as this subject is concerned, some matters are proposed to be transferred to the Indian ministers. It is not proposed to reserve the whole of this subject to the Governor in Council: a portion of it dealing with crafts and local industries is proposed to be transferred to the Indian ministers. I would suggest that here, in the division of subjects, we must not carry the principle of divided responsibility further than necessary. It has been found feasible to transfer some portions to Indian ministers. If so, there ought to be no difficulty whatever, in transferring the whole to the Indian ministers. The only possible objection that may be put forward is whether Indians have the necessary expert knowledge or the expert training to deal with the subject in a satisfactory manner. May I ask whether it can be pretended that everyone who has been dealing with this subject, either as member of the Executive Council or as Secretary to the department, is himself an expert? They have been dealing by obtaining expert advice and expert information, by trying to understand these subjects and by bringing to bear on the questions arising therein all the information that they can get. Why not expect the Indian ministers also to follow the same course as the present members have done, though they themselves are not experts. There is no force at all in the contention which is likely to be brought forward that these Indian ministers may not have the necessary knowledge and technical skill required for the purpose. It is always open to them to appoint the necessary officers who will be in a position to supply the necessary information."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"Your Excellency, I wish to oppose this resolution. And in doing so I wish to point out a fallacy on the part of the Honourable Member. He stated in the course of his speech that European prosperity was due to commercial and industrial enterprise. I maintain, in the first instance, that European prosperity is due to a stable Government and as a result, commerce and industry were able to prosper. I would like to ask members of this Council if they have ever considered what the position of this country may be under the reform scheme with this transfer of subjects in industries. Would the credit of the country be anything like what it is at present? From my own knowledge of this country, the credit of the country has improved during the 25 or 26 years that I have been in this country and gradually money has grown cheaper. At present, I take it that the country is backward industrially because it is not yet fully developed agriculturally and the agriculturists will not be able to develop fully until plenty of money at a cheap rate is forthcoming. I do not think that the Government, as foreshadowed by the Honourable Member, is likely to find cheap money and private individuals would not be able to do so. I speak feelingly as an agriculturist. One of the drawbacks that we suffer from is the difficulty of getting money from the country. I do not think the fault lies with the Government. It is merely a matter of time and improvement on the present lines, before we get developed. Had it not been for the war, we would have had railways all over the land and that in turn would have brought more money and created more development in the country."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Your Excellency, to exactly understand the significance of this resolution, I would like to draw the attention of Honourable Members to the present condition of the present administration of the department relating to industries in this Province. We find here in item No. 19 of list No. I relating to industrial matters: factories, dangerous and offensive trades, inland steam vessels and steam boilers, registration of labour, labour exchanges, provident funds, industrial health insurance, friendly societies, apprenticeships, accident insurance. Electricity, petroleum, explosives, mines, geological survey for minerals.' The third class relating to 'development of arts, and crafts and local industries' has been transferred to the transferred list. The authors of the report clearly point out that they have not had time to discuss with respect to each province, the conditions of the province to say whether it should be in the reserved or in the transferred list. In fact, what I find is, it is only proper when we are considering this question to know where we stand in respect of the industrial progress in the province and whether the transfer to the ministry will, in any way, improve the position or make it worse. Of course, we have to take the scheme as it has been put forth. The Government will be a combined Government consisting of two parts, one the executive, the other the ministers. All expert advice will be available to the Government, His Excellency the Governor being enabled to appoint additional members if necessary who shall advise but shall not take part, so that it is that Government in which ministers will only take a secondary part, in which His Excellency the Governor will have the right to give the Council necessary help and even the right to control where it is apparently inexperienced and in all other cases, for practical purposes, the ministers will be allowed to have their way. It is that kind of ministry that is asked to control the present subject. The first item there is factories. This is not shown in the other illustrative lists. Whatever may be the conditions with respect to other provinces, so far as Madras is concerned, it is plainly seen that it affects mostly Indians in every part. I have got the administration report of the Department of Industries, G.O. No. 1051, dated 4th October 1916, Home Department (Education). Table 10 gives all the industries and the factories available. There we have in 'Agriculture and irrigation' 701 factories, mines and quarries about 21 factories, iron, steel and engineering trades 61 factories, metal trades other than iron and steel, 3 factories, textile trades about 248 factories, clothing trades one factory, food drink and tobacco trades 595 factories, chemical and allied trades 45 factories, paper printing and allied trades 35 factories, leather canvas and India rubber trades 5 factories, timber trades 22 factories, clay, stone, building and contracting trades 29 factories and public utility services, 31 factories, making in all about 1,792 factories. That is the list attached to the administration report.

A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

"The next point that I would draw the attention of the Council to, is G.O. No. 1209, dated 19th September 1917, Home Department (Education), containing the report of the administration of the Department of Industries, the report made by Mr. Innes, Special Officer in charge of the Department of Industries. A mere look at the head-notes of the various things which now affect the officer in charge will show that there is the question of the Imperial Silk specialist, the pumping and boring department, the mechanical engineering section, the proposed demonstration of a gas suction engine, the proposed survey of the rice mill industry, the survey of a possible cement industry at Bezvada, Anderson oil-exPELLERS, hydraulic oil mill, etc. Most of them are owned by Indians. Again there is a reference to the glass factory which was subsequently taken up by Government, there is the penoil factory; then we get again the dyeing section, the weaving section and the industrial bureau which will be most useful hereafter and then industrial education. These are the various points that are now engaging the attention of Government. The question is whether there is any one department, which could be left with any body other than a gentleman intimately connected with the people. Suppose the information bureau gets the information to the ministers that a particular mineral is available in a particular part of the province and that that mineral could be utilized to start a factory, and if really no useful purpose can be served, it is the ministry that will intimate it properly to the representatives of the people immediately wherever these facilities exist, and where it will be found to be a paying concern, it will be conducted. It is said that so much money in India is tied up either in jewels or is lying idle in iron safes. So much of that money it will be possible to utilize if it will produce such results as would add to the economic condition of the country. That can be utilized properly only by its being placed as a transferred subject. My Honourable Friend Mr. Ranga Achariyar has referred to the previous work that has been done in that direction. The Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber has raised a question whether Government should help at all, whether they should help private gentlemen who can maintain industries. That was the question raised and re-raised by the gentleman representing that view, but the Government have taken finally a definite stand on it and I do not think that question arises any more. Government have a duty to perform and unless the industrial condition of the country is sufficiently improved, there is no hope of improving its economic condition. That seems to be definitely put forth in the report itself. Under these circumstances, the question is which is the agency which will certainly improve the condition of the land, which will better utilize the opportunity and add to the prosperity and the economic condition of the people. There could be but only one answer that this department must be a transferred subject and there must be a representative of the people who can, immediately the information is got, be able to influence all sorts of people who could invest to start the industry, improve the condition of the country and add to its prosperity. Therefore, my Lord, one has really to see what the subjects are that are at present under the control of the department of industries and then to see whether the country will be better served by their being transferred. There is not a bit here which is not Indian and you have to develop the others only to see that money is invested properly in all these cases; it will be only proper to leave it as transferred subject in charge of the ministry. There is no danger of the thing being misused or misapplied. There is expert advice available. There is the mixed Government during the transitional period and the Government are sure to advise properly and take the responsibility as a whole, though for purposes of administration, it is divided. Under these circumstances, it is almost a clear case that it should be a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I have only a few words to add to all that has been submitted on the resolution. I entirely support this resolution. There is no question that the industries in this Presidency are in a very neglected condition and I think that this department as a whole should be transferred to the ministers. I fail to understand why there should be so much despondency that, if the department is transferred to the ministers, the department will not prosper. If we are only in the transition period, the matter will be tried for four or five years and then we will be able to see how the matter has improved and if we find that the ministers have not tackled with the problem properly, then there is time enough to put it in the list of reserved subjects. I cannot understand this division in item 19 of list No. I. It contemplates industrial matters, but in regard to factories and other things, it has been said that as these develop they will be probably transferred to the transferred subjects, but only one portion of that item 19—the development of arts and crafts and local industries would, for the present, be transferred to the transferred subjects. It reads very well on paper

A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. Suryanarayana Rao; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Venkatapati Raju; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.]

to make a division of this sort, but in practice I do not think the division is a very happy one. When the industries have to be developed, I think the minister should have complete power to see that they are developed and I think the whole department should be transferred to him and not a portion. I therefore submit that the whole department should be transferred and a chance given to the ministers to see how they will manage the department hereafter. There is His Excellency the Governor always to advise and there is the Executive Council also to advise. Therefore, I have every hope that matters will never go wrong and if they do they can be mended in no time. But that is no reason why the department should not be handed over to the ministers."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Your Excellency, I wish to say only one word in support of the resolution and that is by way of answer to the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber. In trying to meet the argument, advanced in favour of the proposition that this department needs much development, which is one of the criteria referred to in paragraph 38 of the report, he contended that development pre-supposed funds, and development till now proceeded on the basis of a stable Government. The implication in the mind of the Honourable Member seems to be that stability will decrease. If so, I wish to point out that that assumption is purely arbitrary and unsupported by facts. I can refer to solid facts. In point of fact, the proposals now before us tend to broaden the basis of Government, the foundations will be greatly strengthened and therefore stability will be greatly increased by the proposals. Let us consider the other question he raised, namely, would more funds be available in case industries be transferred? The implication once again in the mind of the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber would be that somehow foreign countries, when they behold industries in the list of transferred subjects, will cease to send money to India and India will not be able to develop her agricultural industry. This again is a groundless assumption. On the other hand, a large number of industries will be developed and there would be more occasion for foreign countries to send money and there will be a great deal more money in India itself which will be applied more courageously. Therefore, that assumption falls to the ground. Therefore he can vote with a safe conscience for the transfer of industries to the list of transferred subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Your Excellency, I have only one word to say. We have to consider who is responsible for the present backward condition. I can quote the authority of General Smuts who recently said that industry and commerce have never prospered in the past under bureaucratic rule and he said that they would never prosper in future. Therefore it must be the people's representatives that must be placed in charge of industries in order to improve industries."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I do not wish to repeat any portion of the arguments adduced already, but I wish to point out that there is one important circumstance, namely, that this subject is placed in the transferred list. My Lord, one of our complaints hitherto has been that the industrial policy of Provincial Governments has been unnecessarily interfered with up to now by the Secretary of State in regard to the development of industries. I may perhaps bring to the notice of Honourable Members that in 1908 the Government, my Honourable Friend Sir Alexander Cardew was the then Revenue Secretary—made a comprehensive programme of industrial development and framed a scheme and sent it to the Secretary of State for sanction. That, of course, was opposed at the time in the Council by the members who represented European trade and commerce and I am very sorry that, on the present occasion, my Honourable Friend Sir Fairless Barber has not seen his way to support our present contention for industrial development. However, there is this fact to be recognized and I am sincerely glad the subject of industrial development has been placed on the provincial list. I sincerely trust, as one of the members of the Committee which has to decide this matter is in the Council, that no further limitations will be placed in the way of the provincial development of industries and that the Secretary of State or any higher authority would not interfere with the industrial development either in the supposed interests of the agriculturists in this country or in the interests of some other persons elsewhere. I trust, my Lord, whether it is a transferred subject or a reserved subject, that the present limitations as regards expenditure on industrial developments would be removed and that the provincial Government would be set free to do what it likes in industrial matters and what they consider necessary for the industrial well-being of the Presidency. I do not see any limitations here, but it is quite likely that some may be introduced hereafter. I trust that this subject will be free from the restrictions imposed by the Government of India or the Secretary of State. That is the first of the observations which I would like to make."

"The second is this: so far as this Presidency is concerned, the Department of Industries is already in the hands of an Indian Member; both as Secretary and the Member in charge of this department—the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar—is already in charge of this portfolio. I trust that that fact will be recognized and that there will be no differentiation as regards Europeans and Indians so far as this particular subject is concerned; whether it is an Indian minister or a Member of the Executive Council, the fact that the Member is an Indian per se would not be taken as a disqualification to be put in charge of this department."

"Having said all this, I wish only to point out a few practical difficulties as regards the division of the subject. Honourable Members will notice that item No. 9 relating to 'fisheries and connected industries and river conservancy' is placed in the transferred list. Then,

RESOLUTION RE 'INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; Sir Fairless Barber; Sir Gordon Fraser.)

agriculture is a transferred subject and agricultural industries will naturally fall into the group of transferred subjects. Then it is also stated that the development of arts and crafts and local industries would be transferred. So, Honourable Members will see that even on the assumption that the list of transferred subjects is not added to, there are three departments of industrial activity relating to fisheries, agricultural industries, arts and local industries which are transferred. Having placed so much in the transferred list, it seems to me that the other two items here in the reserved list, namely, 'factories, dangerous and offensive trades, inland steam vessels and steam-boilers, registration of labour, labour exchanges, provident funds, industrial health insurance, friendly societies, apprenticeships, accident insurance,' etc., should not be reserved. Another reason why those should not be reserved is this: the subject of insurance and friendly societies—this group of subjects—is now being dealt with by the Inspector-General of Registration. That officer would, I take it, come under the control of the ministers, because registration of deeds and documents is placed in the transferred list. I am pointing out these difficulties to show that it should be either in the one or in the other. Three branches are in the transferred list, and the officer who deals with insurance and friendly societies is already in the transferred list. Therefore, I would point out that the whole group of subjects should come under one department; whether it is under the Indian minister or whether it should be reserved department is a matter to be considered. As regards the propriety of its being placed in the transferred list, I have already said that this is one of the departments which requires development and it is one of the cardinal principles of the report that a department which requires development should be under popular control. I am really unable to see the point of my Honourable Friend Sir Fairless Barber who makes some reference to cheap capital. On that matter, I am certain that an Indian minister would probably be better able to stimulate indigenous capital."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"Your Excellency, I said something about the credit of the country."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I am glad for the correction, my Lord. I do not think the credit of the country will suffer in the slightest degree if the Department of Industries is transferred to Indian ministers. On the other hand, I think the credit of the country would be enhanced. Perhaps the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber must have realized by this time that the present moment is the occasion in which the want of industrial development has been keenly felt in this country. Mr. Montagu stated in one of his addresses 'how much more could India do for us had her industries been developed.' May I ask whether this statement of Mr. Montagu is not right? Would the development of industries suffer in the slightest degree if an Indian minister who knows the people and who can induce the people to come forward to help them were placed in charge of this department? Would the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber say that the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar has not done a great deal for co-operative societies in establishing the central urban bank here. Does he know that fact and how much of its success the central urban bank owes to his initiative? My Lord, it seems to me that it is a strange proposition that, if an Indian minister is in charge, Indian capital would not be available. That is the assumption which underlies the statement of the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber that the credit of the country would suffer. I deny that statement."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER:—"Your Excellency, I had not intended to talk on this subject, but I must just mention that I oppose this resolution as I consider that the administration of industries should remain under present control and that the Government should be at liberty to appoint the best men available to be in control of the department, whether European or Indian. The Honourable Mover enunciated a very common fallacy when he claimed equal opportunities with Europeans to develop industries in India. I contend they have always had equal opportunities, but unfortunately they have not taken advantage of those opportunities. It is well known that Indians in Southern India—it is the only part of India with which I am acquainted—are very averse to take the risks which they must incur in investing their money in industrial ventures. They prefer to put their money in the sounder—to them safer—security of landed property. This has been shown during the last few years when a very large amount of money has been made in Madras and it has all gone into landed property with the consequent appreciation of landed property. I contend that if Indian capitalists would come forward with their money and take an interest in Indian industries, then the industrial development of this Presidency would follow. I have had twenty-three years' experience in Madras and I have always had an outlet for any capital that I could lay my hands on. The same position has existed with Indian capitalists; but unfortunately they have not taken advantage of these opportunities. They prefer to invest it in landed property."

"Another point—I understood the Honourable Mover correctly—he says that Indians do not want to drive away European merchants out of the country; he said: 'We do want them to remain here and prosper.' It is really very good of the Honourable Member to give us this assurance, but I think the very fact that he thinks it necessary to give us this assurance has rather an ominous aspect."

RESOLUTION RE 'INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Sir Gordon Fraser; Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar; [22ND OCTOBER 1918. the President; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

"The Honourable Mover also asked quite correctly for mutual trust and confidence between Europeans and Indians. I contend here also that mutual trust and confidence does exist. I have worked with Indian gentlemen myself in business for many years now and I can certainly say that a very large degree of confidence and trust does exist. Under these circumstances, Your Excellency, I oppose the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I wish just to say a word in reply to the observations which my Hon'ble Friend Sir Gordon Fraser made. He conceded that equal opportunities have been given to Europeans and Indians alike. I wish just to ask him a question, why equal success has not attended them. He has himself answered it in his own way and that by observing that capitalists are afraid of risks. I only wish to assure this Council that one, if not the chief, of those risks, consists in its being entirely in the hands of Government. If the popular ministers who, under the new scheme, would become responsible to the public, are entrusted with the management and development of industries, I can assure this Council that that would be the most potent way of removing this fear in the mind of the indigenous capitalists. More than all, this is a department in which I share the feeling of my Honourable Colleagues in this Council, that it has been, I must say, not as properly attended to as it should have been, considering the real interests of the country. The country is sadly neglected and this Province particularly is one of the worst of Indian provinces and as such, I do feel that this would be the most powerful way of removing this defect in the economic condition of this Presidency, that is, by way of co-ordinating and taking the people more into confidence and entrusting fuller powers to the hands of ministers chosen by them."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I propose to take division unless the Honourable Member wishes to speak again."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Only one word, Your Excellency. This question has been fully debated and I do not wish to take up Your Excellency's time and the time of the Council by making any more contribution to it. I only want to say this. Sir Gordon Fraser when he said that the very fact that I have given the assurance that we Indians want Europeans to remain in this country and prosper, shows the need for such assurance; I admit there is need for such assurance and the need has come in this way—that lately there has been a discussion by European associations and individuals and they have shown some apprehension, that if the responsibility is transferred to Indians, their interests will suffer and so, I thought it necessary to give this assurance. The need for it came from them and not from us. There is, I know, and I, as a merchant moving with Europeans for a long time, can bear testimony to the fact, that among Indian and European merchants, there has been mutual trust and mutual confidence and as I said in my speech, this mutual trust will be enhanced rather than decreased by the transfer of the subject to Indians. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser himself said that it should be left to the Government to appoint the best man who would deal with this question, whether it be Indian or European. That is exactly what we want. The Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao has pointed out that the Indian Member of the Executive Council is already under the present system in charge of this department and if, in the new system, it remains a reserved subject, it is possible the Indian Member of the Executive Council may be in charge of it. But I move this resolution in order to inspire more confidence in the Indians themselves, the Indians who are said by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser to prefer to put their capital in property and land rather than in business and industrial concerns. Why I ask? It is because they do not feel confident that there will be the same return for the employment of their money in industrial concerns as there will be in the others. They feel they are handicapped in this field of industries and they will continue to feel the same if this department is not transferred to the control of the purely popular element in the Government. It will be left even then to the Governor to appoint a person whom he considers best fitted to deal with this and other subjects because, according to the Report, the appointment of the ministers is in the hands of the Governor. I need not say much about the question of cheap capital and railways and other things. These are economic questions and there are different factors at work which act and counteract on these things and they are brought about by the usual economic laws, and the mere fact that the industry is in the hands of Europeans or that the Government is stable, that the present Government is more stable than the future Government is likely to be, will not be a governing factor. I am sure the future Government will have its credit as high as the present Government and I think that a mere dependency is never trusted to the same extent as an independent government of the country having a better station and position. The question of stable government does not enter into this small matter of the transfer of a subject from one section of the Government to the other but still, as it has been brought in, I have had to refer to it. I have nothing more to add."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I shall take division."

The resolution was then put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDERIGH:—"May I ask your Excellency, whether this will rule out of order such a resolution as No. XVII†?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Perhaps it is omnibus. Let the Honourable Gentleman confine his resolution to the question of borrowing."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Perhaps Your Excellency will permit me to move a resolution at the end that all the subjects mentioned in the transferred list should be in the transferred list."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We should not fetter the liberty of individual members to move resolutions about specific subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"May I know whether Resolution VIII* was voted? If so, there we have the words 'in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in Appendix II.'"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is purely a question of industrial development. The words 'in addition to the illustrative list of subjects mentioned in Appendix II' will be omitted."

"We will confine the question to borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues."

RESOLUTION RE BORROWING ON THE SOLE CREDIT OF PROVINCIAL REVENUES.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Your Excellency, the resolution which I wish to move runs as follows:—

X (latter part). 'The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of "borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues" should also be transferred to the control of ministers and should not be a reserved subject.'

"The resolution raises a single issue as to whether the power of borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues should be transferred to the control of ministers. My Lord, perhaps it is necessary for me to briefly refer to the scheme of Government which has been formulated in this report in order to see why this subject of borrowing should be a transferred subject. In paragraphs 216, 218, 219 and 221, the authors of the scheme set out their views about the dual government in the provinces, proposed to be set up, one part of it comprising the head of the province and the Executive Council and the other part consisting of the Governor and the ministers. Paragraph 218 fully explains the scheme so far as this division of government into two compartments is concerned. 'The other part' they proceed to state, 'of the government would consist of one member, or more than one member, according to the number and importance of the transferred subjects, chosen by the Governor from the elected members of the Legislative Council. They would be known as ministers.' Then paragraph 219 explains the relation of ministers to the Governor. It says: 'The portfolios dealing with the transferred subjects would be committed to the ministers, and on these subjects the ministers, together with the Governor would form the administration. On such subjects, their decisions would be final, subject only to the Governor's advice and control. We do not contemplate that from the onset, the Governor should occupy the position of a purely constitutional Governor, who is bound to accept the decisions of his ministers.' Then they proceed to set out the limitations under which ministers can work. Then proceeding further, in paragraph 221, the authors of the scheme state that 'it is highly desirable that the Executive should cultivate the habit of associated deliberation and it is essential that it should present a united front to the outside.' But they qualify this statement and state: that 'the actual decision on a transferred subject would be taken, after general discussion, by the Governor and his ministers; the action to be taken on a reserved subject would be taken, after similar discussion by the Governor and the other members of his Executive Council, who would arrive at their decision in the manner provided in the existing statute. The additional members, if present, would take their share in the discussion, but would in no case take a part in the decision.' So that Honourable Members will see that the decision with reference to a reserved subject lies solely with the Governor and the Executive Council and the decision relating to a transferred subject would lie essentially with the Governor and the ministers. Further, they state in paragraph 222 that 'by dividing the Government into what will in effect be two committees with different responsibilities, we have ensured that members of the Government accountable to different authorities do not exercise the same responsibility for all subjects.' I am not criticizing the scheme but I am pointing out the assumptions on which we have to consider this question of borrowing, the assumptions being that the responsibility for decision on a reserved subject would lie with the Governor and the Executive Council and the responsibility for decision on a transferred subject would lie with the ministers and the Governor. This is the general scheme of provincial administration as set out in these proposals.

(Mr. Ramachandra Rao.)

"My Lord, as regards the financial position, Honourable Members will find it discussed in paragraphs 255, 256 and 257 of the report. In these paragraphs, Honourable Members will see that it is the intention of the authors of the report that all proposals for taxation should be initiated only with the approval of the ministers. 'Such taxation proposals would be presented to the Legislative Council only with the approval of the ministers.' They also state as regards the scheme of financing this dual government: 'In these joint discussions, the provincial revenues will be estimated; the contribution to the Government of India will be set apart, the proposed allotments for the reserved subjects will then be carefully scrutinized and examined with a view to facing criticism in the Legislative Council, and remainder of the revenue will be at the disposal of the ministers. If such residue is not sufficient it is open to the ministers to suggest extra taxation either within the schedule of permissible provincial taxation, or by obtaining the sanction of the Government of India to some tax not included in the schedule. Such taxation proposals would be presented to the Legislative Council only with the approval of the ministers.' My Lord, I am at one with several of my Honourable Friends who have preceded me already in feeling grave doubts as to the system of diarchy such as that formulated in these proposals, a system under which two different principles of Government are combined, two different sets of authorities are created who look to different authorities for their responsibility—two different systems of finance which give preference to one set but first of all placing the revenues at the disposal of the Government of India leaving the ministers to get what they could after the reserved portion of the Government is satisfied. On this financial proposal for working this dual government, I have very grave doubts whether the scheme as it is, would be workable and whether it does not place the ministers at the mercy of the Governor in Council. I fully believe that this part of the scheme should be reconsidered if reforms are to be a success. The authors of the scheme state that the Government of India should have precedence in regard to their contribution. Then they say that the reserved portion should receive their supplies and there is no limit to that supply; the Governor in Council may ask for what they like and then the ministers are to develop those departments which require development and are supposed to get the balance of what is available after all the other needs are satisfied. If there is a deficit, the ministers will have to face it and ask for extra taxation. This scheme of running this dual government under this system of finance is, I submit, open to the gravest possible objection. I hope that Your Excellency in Council when these proposals come up for examination, will devise a scheme which will be equitable to both parts of the Government and which would not place the ministers at a disadvantage in undertaking a new experiment such as this.

"My Lord, therefore, first of all, before I deal with the question of borrowing, I wish to address Honourable Members about these financial proposals, not only non-official members but also the members of Your Excellency's Government both individually and collectively to improve this portion of the scheme and to devise a scheme which will not bring one portion of the Government into collision with the other and suggest modifications for removing administrative friction that must be caused if the scheme remains as it is. I must say that the collective wisdom of the Government of India and the Secretary of State's Government and the distinguished authors of this report has not enabled them to evolve a scheme which is not open to all these grave objections.

"Having said so much in criticism of the financial proposals I must make myself clear that if I give my adherence to this scheme, it is because we proceed on the principle that there must be for the present a division of the functions of Government and that assumption must be maintained, but the chances of friction and the chances of collision must be reduced.

RESOLUTION RE BORROWING ON THE SOLE CREDIT OF PROVINCIAL REVENUES.

22ND OCTOBER 1918.]

(Mr. Ramachandra Rao.)

The administrative experience of Your Excellency's Government will be fully useful in the direction of improving the scheme, and the success of the reforms greatly depends upon bringing your practical knowledge for devising financial proposals in such a manner as to make them equitable to both parts of the Government.

"Before I go to the actual subject of credit, Honourable Members will see that this is the first time, so far as the Government of India and the Secretary of State are concerned, that the power of taxation is proposed to be given to Provincial Governments. The matter came up before the Decentralization Commission, but the proposal was opposed. This is also the first time that it is proposed to place a minister in charge of particular departments. This is also the first time that it is proposed to permit Provincial Governments to resort to the open market. As regards the conditions under which they could borrow, it is also necessary that I should draw the attention of Honourable Members to paragraph 211: 'We come now to the question of the borrowing powers of Provincial Governments. In this respect, Provincial Governments are almost unanimous in desiring greater freedom. They recognize the difficulties which we have already discussed, and the impossibility of allowing them to compete with the Government of India in the open market. But they suggest that the Central Government should regard an application for a loan solely from the standpoint of finance and not from that of administration, and that, if it has the money and is satisfied with the arrangements for financing the loan, it should not withhold sanction. It has also been represented to us that there exist local sources which could be tapped by Provincial Governments but are not touched by Indian loans. A new argument for further liberty of action is afforded by our proposal to provincialize irrigation works on which a large capital expenditure is necessary. We think that in order to avoid harmful competition Provincial Governments must continue to do their borrowing through the Government of India. Also it may often happen that the Government of India will not be able to raise sufficient money to meet all provincial requirements. In that case, it may find it necessary to limit its total borrowing on behalf of Provincial Governments in particular years; and when that happens, it will be difficult for it entirely to avoid a reference to the relative merits of the schemes for which the loans are wanted. We think, however, in such cases there ought to be no insuperable difficulty in making a reasonably fair and equitable distribution between the Provinces.'

"Then they say, 'But we are prepared to go further. If the Government of India finds itself unable to raise the money in any one year which a province requires, or if there is good reason to believe that a provincial project may attract money which would not be elicited by a Government of India loan, we would allow the Provincial Government to have recourse to the Indian market. But in that case, we think that they should secure the approval of the Government of India to the method of borrowing, including the rate of interest, so as not to affect the investments in the Post office, and the time of borrowing, so as not to conflict with Indian loans.' I am in general agreement with all that is stated with reference to the conditions under which Provincial Governments ought to be permitted to borrow. But what I object to is to place this subject in the reserved list. As I already pointed out, the ministers have to give their approval for fresh taxation. They get a residue of revenue and that being so, assuming that a budget has to be made up first by the residue and then by the raising of fresh taxation and perhaps thirdly by resorting to loans both for productive and unproductive works, it must be left to the ministers who raise taxation also to deal with this question of borrowing. I may further illustrate this matter by a reference to the provincial loan account. Honourable Members will see that all questions relating to local self-government are on the transferred list. They will also notice that railways, light and feeder railways, district board railways, which are under the management of local bodies, will be in the transferred list. Co-operative credit societies are also on the transferred list, and if as proposed by my Hon'ble Friend Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao, major irrigation is placed in the transferred list, that will also be another department in which loans are required. I had better refer to the provincial loan account of this Government one of these years to see the departments, in which loans have now to be taken. The Provincial loan account is divided into five heads; loans to cultivators, loans to co-operative societies, loans to landholders and notabilities—fortunately we have none in this Presidency who have had to resort to Government for loans—loans to mufassal municipalities—they are the loans for water-supply, drainage and hospitals—loans to district boards,—they are for railways and miscellaneous loans and advances; so that Honourable Members will see that so far as loans are concerned, they are taken by local bodies mostly and also by cultivators, through the Revenue Department. But, my Lord, my present contention is that the departments in which most of the loans have to be taken are in the transferred list. Assuming that local self-government is transferred, a minister who wishes to give a loan to a municipality or who wishes to finance a district board railway or who wishes to help a co-operative credit society,—I believe it is also under contemplation to use co-operative societies for loans to agriculturists—the minister wants money, if borrowing is placed in the reserved department it will be within the competence of the Governor in Council to refuse him facilities to grant loans. Is that a state of things that can be contemplated? That is the essential point which I wish to raise by this resolution. Ministers are responsible for taxation and no taxation can be imposed without their approval. Ministers are responsible for the departments for which loans are required and yet, borrowing on the sole credit of the Government is placed in the reserved list. I think that the position will be intolerable, intolerable for a minister who wants money and who cannot get it. If he wants a loan he has to go to the other part of the Government and ask them to sanction the loan. I submit that the scheme as it is, is not a sound one. If you make the ministers responsible for taxation, I think the only thing that you can do is to make them the authorities for borrowing, and make them also responsible for it. I am sure that under this scheme, whenever there is a question of borrowing, it will be discussed in the collective Government, but the responsibility would lie with the ministers. That is a point on which I would lay much stress. My Lord, it has been one of our complaints for a long time that the progress of local bodies has been held up greatly for want of facilities for financing various schemes. Up to 1909 district board railways were placed on the provincial loan account and about that time, the Government of India ruled that the provincial loan account should not include any funds required for district board railways. What has been the consequence? For the last 9 or 10 years, several schemes have been matured and I believe the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman stated once in this Council that the total estimated value of the schemes which were ready for execution is about 340 lakhs. If the district board railways are on the transferred list, what is the position of a minister who wishes to see that these lines are constructed? It seems to me, therefore, considering the question from any aspect, this question of loans, and borrowing on the credit of Government should be placed on the transferred list.

212 RESOLUTION RE BORROWING ON THE SOLE CREDIT OF PROVINCIAL REVENUES.

"The second point I wish to mention about municipalities and local boards is that in western countries the development of these local bodies is greatly dependent not merely on their current revenues but upon large amounts always placed at their disposal in the shape of loans. I do not wish to weary the Council by quoting statistics as to what is raised in any average year in England by local bodies in the shape of loans. It is nothing less than 10 to 15 millions sterling. Here, there is no way of financing municipal schemes; while I welcome greatly this opportunity of the Provincial Government to resort to the open market though under the conditions mentioned by the authors of the scheme, I trust that nothing will be done to arrest development by making it impossible for ministers for securing that money which is so needed for the development of their work. I submit that the scheme as it is by placing it in the reserve department is unsound. The Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber stated sometime ago that the credit of the Government might suffer. My reply is the same as that already given. The credit of the Government will be enhanced. It is true that we want foreign capital, but we also want the capital of the country to be invested in the country and the success of the last two war loans is an indication that there is capital in the country which if properly tapped, would be available. Under these circumstances, I cannot see what harm would be done by placing this on the list of transferred subjects. I submit there is everything in its favour and nothing against it.

"Then there is the question of major irrigation which if transferred, would require a large outlay. Take a case like the Kistna reservoir project or the Cauvery project. The amount required would be several millions and that will have to be raised by loans with the permission of the Government of India, all over the country a portion in Calcutta, a portion in England, a portion in Bombay and I am sure there will be talent enough to float these loans and there is the collective Government at our back. Under these circumstances, I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I second this resolution. Your Excellency, so far as this question of borrowing is concerned, it is quite clear that it is one of the most essential problems which have to be solved in dealing with the future devolution of responsibility in the Provincial Government. The question relating to the allocation of subjects is of a different kind from the question which relates to the funds to be placed at the disposal of the Indian ministers for carrying on the work entrusted to their care. No doubt, we have not got the benefit of the views of the members of Your Excellency's Government regarding the various proposals made in this Council today. It is true that we are somewhat handicapped in that we are not in a position to meet any possible objections which might be urged by them. But I believe and trust that their attitude will be one of trying to understand the views of non-official Members of this Council on this occasion and then to formulate their own proposals to be submitted to the higher authorities in due course.

"The first problem for consideration will be whether it is a desirable step to invest Indian ministers with control in the matter of provincial taxation when it is not proposed to give them the power to borrow on the credit of provincial revenues. I only wish this Council to have a graphic picture of the position of the Indian minister when he is called upon to find funds for carrying out various improvements, when he is required by the statute to provide all the funds required for the transferred subjects by taxation. It will be found from the inquiries made, that there is not a large margin left for taxation. I need not go further than this report itself for that position. They themselves say in paragraph 332: "the economics of a country which depends to so great an extent as India on agriculture, must be unstable. Moreover, though as recent inquiries have shown, the standard of living among the peasant classes has improved perceptibly of late years, there is still no great margin of taxable capacity."

"Notwithstanding the limitations under which they made these inquiries, it has been admitted by all responsible ministers that there is no substantial margin left for additional taxation. Then the question naturally arises if, for carrying out improvements in the various directions, it is necessary to procure a large amount of capital, and if, as has been admitted by the best statesmen and administrators, there is very little margin left for extra taxation how are the ministers to get on with the work, if they are to carry on their work in a manner which will satisfy the people and the Government? It is therefore necessary that they must be given the power to borrow on the credit of Provincial revenues. Otherwise, I must pity the position of the ministers whoever they happen to be. When the Royal Commission goes round ten years hence, they will find that they are not in a position to carry on any large scheme of reform, to show any improvement either in industrial matters or in any other matter owing to want of funds, owing to their inability to borrow on the credit of Provincial revenues and owing to their inability to suggest any definite scheme of taxation in view of the poverty of the people. I would therefore request Your Excellency's Government to pay particular attention to this aspect and see whether it is reasonable, whether it is fair to give them the power to tax but not the power to borrow. I submit it is very unjust, unfair and inequitable. I hope the Council will support this resolution."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"Your Excellency, I wish to oppose this resolution. In Your Excellency's opening remarks, Your Excellency advised the Council to remain cautious and go slowly. It seems to me that, in this resolution, the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao would go fast. Here we are under the present regime where Local Governments are not empowered to borrow. Straightaway under this new Government, he wishes to see the borrowing power immediately transferred to the minister. I take it that the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao means that the minister of each head of the department should have the borrowing power."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"That is not my meaning."

The Hon'ble Sir FAIRLESS BARBER:—"That is what I understood. The Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao mentioned the matter of district board railways and I think he said that for the last nine or ten years they have been greatly handicapped by not being able to borrow money. To my own knowledge in the case of local boards, one railway has been sanctioned with borrowed money. It is very refreshing to find the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao has been able to find one of the evils in the divided responsibility between ministers and the Provincial Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"I shall add a word or two in support of this resolution. I believe that this power of borrowing is indispensable for the ministers for the reason that, under the proposed scheme of reforms, the revenues are charged in the first instance with contributions to the Government of India and secondly with the expenditure under the reserved heads and thirdly if any residue is left, it is to be devoted to these transferred subjects. So the transferred services, as I put it, in some other connexion, will have to be satisfied with the crumbs of the table; and they have to fall back upon their proposals for taxation. They have to face the country with proposals for taxation and they will have to incur that odium. I believe, under the proposed scheme, these so-called transferred services will be starved, unless this power is granted to the minister. When the minister faces the popular assembly with any proposals for fresh taxation, the popular assembly will say: there is absolutely no further margin for further taxation and then these transferred subjects are likely to be those which require the most development and development means more finances are requisite and more resources are necessary for fostering their growth. What is to become of the unfortunate minister who is likely to be refused support for his proposals for taxation, what is to become of him and what is to become of these services which require development if this power is not conceded to him? With these words, I support this proposition."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I have only to say a word. Paragraph 222 says: 'What we can do is to aim at minimizing causes of friction; and we have proposed arrangements that can be worked by mutual forbearance and a strong common purpose. It is our intention that the decisions of the Government should be loyally defended by the entire Government, but that the ministers should feel responsibility for conforming to the wishes of their constituents.' The reading of this passage will quite convince the necessity to leave this in the hands of the minister and treat it as a transferred subject. The whole Government have to work together in this matter, but the portion of the Government which is responsible for raising money and for spending it for departments for which no money is available will be the ministers. The ministers will be advised by the Governor and the matter will be discussed by the Provincial Governor and the ministers. There will be a common meeting in which all of them would agree to defend the acts of either side of the Government. If that is the common way in which this has to be carried on and if the ministers have actually to decide on the final borrowing, it is proper to leave it to them and for the other Government to advise them. It is borrowing on the credit of the total revenues and therefore this is unifying action of the Government and both sides of the Government will come in. The effect of it will be that it will ordinarily come to the ministers. It should be a transferred subject if the rest of the portions of the report which have been referred to by my Honourable Friend Mr. Ramachandra Rao should have their natural effect given to them. If the minister feels the necessity for the money and he is refused the right to borrow his position becomes dubious. It may be said that this unifying force will make him agree that borrowing is not needed. Then the question is ordinarily to be left to ministers. Therefore my Lord, in view of the statement contained in paragraph 222, and the other statements referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao it becomes necessary that it should be a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Your Excellency, with reference to this resolution, there has been much said about the question of divided responsibility. I find it rather difficult to understand what exactly my Honourable Colleagues mean by that expression. I am one of those who think that, whether it be administration by the ministers or it be administration by the Executive Council, it is only directed towards one purpose and only one purpose and that is the true and best interests of the province as a whole and as such I strongly support the motion before the house that when the whole revenues of the province have to be made credit, when borrowing is to be made on the whole revenues of the province, and when the Government as a whole have to be responsible for such borrowing, I think it should be under the control of the Government as a whole and not be a purely reserved subject."

The Hon'ble Sir GORDON FRASER :—"The Honourable Mover of the resolution has laid stress on the necessity for the powers to borrow for the transferred subjects which subjects he fears will suffer by the proposed dual control of the budgeting. The Honourable seconder of the resolution laid stress on the fact that there was no margin for further taxation. I would just like to remind the Council of the fact that powers to borrow mean further taxation, both to pay interest on the borrowed money and to repay the borrowed money itself."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"My Lord, there has been some amount of misunderstanding as regards my position with reference to this resolution and the next one. I might perhaps say that when I sent up this resolution, it was one resolution. Resolution No. X* was the first part of the resolution (a) and Resolution No. II was the second part. I received a communication splitting up this resolution into two. At the time I gave notice of this resolution, I felt some difficulty about one or two points which have been referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar and I believe also by the Hon'ble Sir Fairless Barber. I did not intend that the ministers, of their own responsibility and without any reference to the collective Government as a whole, should go direct to the market and raise a loan. What has been stated by me was that the power to allocate funds with reference to the transferred departments by way of loans should rest with the ministry. That is, assuming that in a department money is required, they should not be required to go to the other part of the Government for a decision as to whether that is required for the purpose of the transferred departments. I think, my Lord, as has been pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar it is not one portion of the Government that will be responsible in the open market for these loans, but it is the collective Government as a whole that will be responsible and therefore, when I say that borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues should not be a reserved subject, I mean that the collective Government is responsible but that the responsibility for the necessity of the loan and for allocating the funds to the departments under their control, should lie with the ministers. The credit that is placed for the loan should be and would be the credit of the whole collective Government of the province. I do not think there should be any misunderstanding on this matter, because I do not suggest ministers of their own responsibility without reference to the collective Government should go to the market and raise loans. It is the whole Government that would be responsible for these loans. I make this explanation because, standing by itself independently of the other portion, it would be open to the construction that the ministers can resort to the market without any reference to the collective Government. That is not my intention. In that sense, I tender this explanation. I request Your Excellency to put resolution No. X* to vote."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Resolution No. XI* seems to me to represent the views of the Honourable Member better than resolution No. X*." The Honourable Member has said that borrowing should take place on the credit of the whole Government. If the Council would permit me to do so, I should put No. XI* to the vote and not X*."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"They seem to be alternative."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"If you once put XI to the vote you cannot put X*."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"I suggest that X* may be X (a) and XI* may be X (b)."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"No matter what you call them they would not agree with one another. You cannot do both. You cannot make borrowing a wholly transferred subject and at the same time make it not a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"My point is this. No. X says 'if it is found inexpedient or impracticable.'"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"We shall have to leave that hypothesis; the motion was that this subject of borrowing as a whole should be transferred."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"I gave notice of a resolution in form No. VII.* There is some difficulty in No. XI* being adopted. It cannot be a reserved subject if the idea is that the Executive Government should deal with it. If the form originally suggested be adopted with a slight amendment at the end, it will be all right—that the subject should be a transferred subject and the responsibility for borrowing should be with the whole Government."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"That is a mere question of words. If the Council wishes to decide whether it is to be a transferred subject I shall put resolution No. X*. If it decides that it should be a transferred subject, it would be a transferred subject. If, on the other hand, it is the wish of the Honourable Member that the subject should be dealt with by the Government as a whole I will put No. XI,* but I do not think it is possible to combine the two."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Resolution No. X* is all right. If it becomes a transferred subject, it will be considered by the Executive Government as a whole but the final decision will be arrived at by the Governor and the ministers and that will be binding on the Government as a whole."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I am not concerned with all that. I am concerned with the point on which the Honourable Member wants a decision."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"I thought the discussion was on No. X*."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Discussion was on No. X.* but the Honourable Member may choose to take XI* in this case."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"My point is : whether this should be a reserved subject or a transferred subject. It is now in the reserved list. No. XI* does not mean that it should be a reserved subject. The proposal is that the whole collective Government should be responsible. We wish to negative the idea that it should be a reserved subject. Subject to that idea being carried out, I would add the words 'should not be a reserved subject, but should be committed to the Executive Government as a whole' at the end of No. X*. (After some consultation) My Lord, I would prefer to put No. X* as it is; for this reason that even if the proposal is not accepted, there is the idea that it should not be a reserved subject. I prefer to leave it as it is."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Very well."

The resolution was then put and agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I have been consulting the Secretary as to how to express accurately the character of these resolutions. I think, on the whole, it should be 'the non-official members of the Council recommend' as a matter of historical accuracy."

"We will take resolution No. XV which will raise the question of education."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju rose to address.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I am not sure whether it would not be better to take XVII. That would raise the issue more definitely. Honourable gentlemen can speak on XVII. I call upon the Rev. Mr. Pittendrigh to move No. XVII."

RESOLUTION RE UNIVERSITY AND SECONDARY EDUCATION.

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH :—"The resolution of which I have given notice reads as follows :—

'XVII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that elementary, industrial and technical education should be included among the transferred subjects, while university and secondary education should be retained among the reserved.'

"In support of this resolution, I wish to say that I have the utmost sympathy with the desire to promote in some measure the scheme that has been proposed, namely, this division of subjects. It seems to me, however, that it is undesirable that certain of these subjects should be placed under the control of the ministers. I argue for this division of education in the interests of elementary education itself. It may seem absurd to many people who are accustomed to give little thought to education, but I believe there is no subject within the sphere of Government which is more important for the well-being of the community than that of education. There is no field therefore in which it is more important to proceed cautiously. You may make mistakes about roads and bridges, and no irreparable permanent harm is done, but a false step in education may have profoundly serious consequences for the nation."

"Now there is no question that the task of introducing compulsory elementary education is one of tremendous magnitude—one that the present Government with all its desire to be progressive has shrunk from, because of the enormous cost and the almost impossible task of securing trained teachers. Yet we are all agreed that universal elementary education must be attempted. The problems involved must be faced and the education to be given must not only be universal but must be real, much more real and serious than we have yet attained in our primary schools, which on an average the pupils attend for about two years, and they forget in a very short time the little they have learned. The compulsory education that we look forward to must aim at least at four years' attendance at the start, rising in course of time to a considerably longer period. When it is remembered that this great net work of schools has to cover a population of 40 millions, it will perhaps be partially realized that the task we propose to place on the new controlling authority is much greater in extent than that which faced the British Government in introducing compulsory education in England. People talk lightly in an airy fashion of transferring this department and the next, as if it all could be accomplished by the stroke of a pen. This one department of elementary education alone is sufficient to give the thoughtful pause. My contention is that the new Government should not be saddled with the problems of University and secondary education, and my first argument is the greatness of the task before them in dealing with elementary education. My second argument is that secondary education will prove a constant drain on the finances that ought to go towards elementary education. Compulsory education is not really a popular thing, when we have to deal with an extended electorate. It is an excellent electioneering cry, but when we come down to hard facts, in the villages, and taxation must be imposed, for that is what it means, then hostility is awakened, and a dull solid opposition makes itself felt. On the other hand secondary education is always popular. It appeals to a more progressive class of the community, and to the more wealthy classes. It makes for show, it dignifies the village to have its high school. The consequence will be that in a popular assembly there will always be a temptation to favour secondary education at the expense of elementary. They will take the line of least resistance. I do not suggest at all that the members of our Legislative Council will have an exceptional dose of original sin. It is simply a tendency in human nature as manifested in a popularly elected assembly. I maintain, therefore, that until elementary education is well-established, it is desirable that secondary education should be retained among the reserved subjects.

(Rev. Pittendrigh; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; the President; [22ND OCTOBER 1918. Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Most Rev. Aelen; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.]

"With regard to industrial education, it is naturally connected with elementary education; all vocational training of an elementary grade must form part of it. On the other hand, secondary education finds its natural connexion with the university. That is especially true in India, where the great majority of pupils in the higher classes of our secondary schools look to the university as their natural goal. The curricula of the University and the high schools are inter-dependent. The two therefore should go together. It is difficult to separate secondary education and University education. When the matter was discussed at a preliminary meeting called for the purpose of considering the draft of a new Education Bill, it was suggested that secondary education might well be separated from elementary education. It simply means that the high schools should belong to the Executive Council as distinguished from the ministers. I think it is hardly necessary for me to add anything about the importance of retaining University as a reserved subject, because I imagine that very few really will urge that it should be a transferred subject. The Universities with which I am familiar in Britain have got practical independence from Government altogether. We have sometimes felt that, even under the present Government, the Universities are not quite as free as we would wish them to be."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I rise to a point of order. The question of University education may be raised under the Hon'ble Mr. Venkatapati Raju's resolution. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh may confine himself to the question of secondary education being excluded from the transferred list. Otherwise, Your Excellency may permit a debate on the whole subject of education under this resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I have no objection."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"This deals with secondary education."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"The word 'University' is there in the resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"If so, I have no objection."

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH:—"I simply wanted to say that it seemed to me that the placing of the Universities under the control of a popularly elected assembly might lead to very great difficulties. Even now, in the present Legislative Council, proposals are made to instruct the Syndicate to accept certain marks, etc., in laying down rules for entrance into the University. If that is done in the green tree, what will be done in the dry? If the University is placed at the will of a popular assembly, it will be extremely damaging to the interests of the University. My contention then is, that as it is proposed to retain University among the reserved subjects, secondary education ought naturally to follow it, whereas elementary education and all connected with it such as industrial education should be passed on as a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble the Most Rev. ALEN:—"I second the motion."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"I wish to move an amendment."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Does any gentleman wish to speak on this motion?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I wish to oppose it, but I shall be brief, considering the lateness of the hour."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"At the same time, my amendment may be taken. If my amendment is taken, members can address both on the amendment and on the original proposition."

22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (The President; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar will address and if the Honourable gentleman will hand the amendment to me, I shall be able to consider what effect it will have on the debate."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I shall be very brief. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh conceded a number of points which, I thought, were really points opposed to his resolution. He said that secondary education is just the thing which attracts popular fancy, that it is likely to be developed and he is afraid that in their anxiety to develop secondary education, they may forget the interests of elementary education. What are the tests laid down in paragraph 238? One of the important tests is the development that the subject needs. Here is an admission that secondary education will attract educated people and will find support at their hands. Therefore it is a very strong argument for making secondary education a transferred subject. I presume that the Council will consist of elderly people and not children who will spend the whole money on one subject. It is unnecessary for me to go into the matter. One thing that is needed for the development of secondary education I shall refer to. Looking at the past history of secondary education, many a man is disposed to shed tears as he sees how many secondary schools have been cut down one after another and even the authors of the scheme have felt the need for its development and therefore suggested that secondary education should come into the transferred list. As for the subject of University education, there is some point of difference. I notice that the authors of the report did not include it in the transferred list because they fancied that it might not stand so much in need of development and probably other considerations might have prevailed. But whatever it may be, I do not think that the argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh will stand. He says, seeing in this Council that there are some gentlemen willing to put forward a proposal about marks, the transfer is not desirable. But mistakes are committed everywhere. Public bodies are not the only sinners. In point of fact, taking the Department of Education, have we not had examples in this Council as to the turns about in educational policies, policies ushered in five years back are overturned and yet the educational world has not lost its balance, and India has not been ruined. Admittedly the mistakes have not proved irremediable. But the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh says that, whereas mistakes in local self-government and other departments are remediable, mistakes in this department will be serious and are not remediable. I think, I have given a sufficient answer to the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh and I submit that, so far as secondary education is concerned, it is absolutely clear that the illustrious authors of the report are right in including it in the transferred list."

"As for University education there is a certain amount of doubt. All things considered, I am rather inclined to think that it should go into the transferred list for the reason, as suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh that it is very difficult to separate University from secondary education. That is the reason for University education also being included in the transferred list."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"May I move the amendment?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I will put the resolution safeguarding what you wish. There is no necessity to move an amendment."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"The resolution as it stands even if rejected will not add University education to the transferred list."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I shall put it in two parts so that the Council can decide on both issues."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"If University education is to be added to the transferred list, another resolution will have to be added."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I will safeguard it in the way I put the resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I am surprised at the points which have been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh. So far as secondary education is concerned, Your Excellency has lately adopted a policy of development through local bodies for which we are all very thankful. It is only recently, I believe in the beginning of this year, that Your Excellency's Government sanctioned the establishment of 18 secondary schools, complete secondary schools and a large number of incomplete secondary schools, about 48 or 50. If the policy of Your Excellency's Government is to develop secondary education through the agency of local bodies, the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh wishes to take us now in the opposite direction. Local Government is a transferred subject and if secondary education is to be under the control of local bodies, I do not know whether he proposes that they should be deprived of their existing powers of expanding secondary education."

"My Lord, I consider that the organic connexion between one department of education and another must be borne in mind. Elementary education leads to secondary education and secondary education leads to University education and the courses are dovetailed with each other. The curricula and the courses are also connected and inter-related to each other; but I should think that this division of elementary education, industrial and technical education as suggested in this resolution would be disastrous to the cause of education. I feel very strongly that the whole subject of education should be committed to the ministers including University education, that the respective spheres of education, elementary, secondary and

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; the President.) [22ND OCTOBER 1918.]

University, have to be constantly correlated and adjusted and to put one branch of education, the lowest branches of education, elementary, industrial and technical under one authority, and to transfer University and secondary education to another would be fatal to a sound development of education.

"The second point that I should like to state is that, after all, the ministers, even if the whole field of education is placed under them, will have expert advice of educational officers. There seems to be an underlying assumption in the argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh that the ministers would act in educational matters without expert advice. I respectfully wish to point out that even if the whole subject of education is placed in the hands of a minister he would not deprive himself of expert educational advice in carrying out his duties as a member of the Government. My Lord, the Director of Public Instruction, who is the primary authority, who deals directly with the Government, with elementary and secondary education, according to the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh's proposal, will have to pass under two authorities. He is now in charge of elementary education, industrial and technical education, and also in charge of collegiate education and is perhaps the intermediary between the Government and the University in university matters. The proposal of the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh would amount to this: that he will have to work under two authorities, the ministers in regard to the elementary and technical and industrial education and with regard to University, secondary and collegiate education, he will have to be under the Governor in Council. It is bad enough to have two compartments in the Government itself, but it would be worse if the direct authority for education has to serve two masters. I think if there is one point with reference to the reforms and the way in which the new organization is to work, it is this: we do not want dual control over the departments and for that one strong reason, I would ask that the whole field of education should be placed under the ministers.

"As regards University education, I do not see what harm or what disaster would befall us if it is placed under a minister. Under the Universities Act, the direct administration of all University matters is confined to the University and the Government have a certain measure of control to initiate the policy and to nominate senators and generally to approve of their by-laws and a certain measure of interference with their resolutions. I should like to know why these functions should not be performed by a minister and what harm would come if they are placed under a minister.

"Then as regards collegiate and secondary education, nothing has been stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh as to why they should not be committed to a minister. He suggested that the subject of secondary education is more popular and the more progressive classes are after secondary education and if the underlying suggestion is that elementary education will be neglected to the detriment of secondary education, I submit that I do not share his views.

"On all these broad grounds, on the ground that the courses of study are inter-related to each other, that, as regards secondary education, the process of specialization has gone on in the secondary department so as to link them with the University courses, and on the general ground of the organic connexion between one branch of education and another, I believe that the whole field of education should be placed on the transferred list."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"I feel compelled to oppose this resolution as it stands. Elementary education and technical education are already on the transferred list. And as my resolution has been accepted, we have confirmed their being on the transferred list. My first resolution was that all the subjects that are in the second list should be considered transferred subjects. Therefore, elementary and technical education are, according to my resolution, already transferred subjects. Now the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh was kind enough to bring industrial education also to the list of transferred subjects and that is as it ought to be. I am not opposed to that. But still, I am opposed to the whole resolution as it stands, because if this is carried, we will not be able to take up either Resolution No. XV† or No. V* in which it is proposed that the whole subject of education should form one undivided department and should be under the control of the minister."

His Excellency the President:—"Will the Honourable gentleman allow me to explain to him that I propose to put the issues separately in regard to secondary education and then in regard to University education so that the Council shall have a full opportunity of expressing its opinion on these two points and also in regard to the point of industrial education. None of the resolutions permits these separate issues to be raised. If the Council wishes that they shall be raised, and wishes to express its opinion separately, there is no alternative but to adopt the course that I suggest."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"As it is agreed that these parts shall be put separately, I am in order in saying that University education should be a transferred department and there should be one undivided educational policy. It will not do for secondary education to be in charge of the ministers and university education to be in charge of the Executive Council, while elementary and technical education would be in the hands of the minister. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh said that elementary education is such a big question and that the Council and the department concerned will be so much engaged with that subject that it will be cruel to place any extra burden of university education on the same department and under the same officials. The result of his proposal will be this. If secondary and university education are in the hands of the Executive Council, they may spend more money on that education and therefore elementary education will be starved. So the reason why the Honourable Mover wants that university education should not be in the same hands as elementary education loses its force. Either the Council will devote more attention to university education and spend more money on it, in which case there will be a rivalry between the two departments, one department spending money lavishly at the cost of the other or the other alternative may be that the Council may neglect university education, so that according to the Honourable Mover, elementary education may prosper and may not be starved. In any case, there will be a disadvantage and not an advantage in this bifurcation of the department. If all the branches of education are under one control, there will be a consistent educational policy and there will be a proportionate expenditure of money on the different branches of education and also the department will be one and policy will be carried out by one department and not by two."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I wish to oppose this resolution, so far as it suggests that university education and secondary education should be reserved. The main argument of the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh for suggesting that these should be in the reserved subjects, proceeds upon a fallacy which deserves some examination. He stated that it was necessary to take special steps to improve elementary education, that it was even necessary to see that compulsory provisions were enforced for the expansion of elementary education, and that popular assemblies might neglect elementary education and prefer secondary education. I would have wished the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh to have placed before this Council, some information as to the materials on which that conclusion is based. If he furnished some evidence as to the way in which popular assemblies have generally neglected elementary education and spent large sums on secondary education, we could have examined that state of things. But I believe the Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar will bear me out when I say that, so far as expenditure by local bodies is concerned, they spend more on elementary education than on secondary education. It is only in the course of this year that owing to the grants made by Government, these local bodies have been used as the agency for the starting of secondary schools in various districts, a sum of Rs. 5 lakhs having been contributed by Government for the purpose; and several secondary schools have been started in various parts of the Presidency. I may bring to the notice of the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh that that expenditure was not an expenditure incurred by popular assemblies out of their own funds, to the detriment of elementary education. The charge has been always the other way. The charge might have been that they paid too much attention to elementary education. Owing to the state of their funds, they are justified in concentrating their attention on elementary education as it affects the masses. The Government quite properly realized that defect and wanted to rectify it and help them in the opening of secondary schools; and they consequently allotted funds. If the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh is in a position to furnish information to show that popular assemblies neglected elementary education when they had funds for supporting it, that would have been an argument in his favour. I am quite positive that things are the other way and that there is absolutely no ground for apprehension that they will neglect elementary education, which is dear to the hearts of the people. It is after all retrograde and undesirable to go back even from the recommendations made by the authors of the report and the suggestions made in the illustrative list. Secondary education has been shown in the list of transferred subjects.

"Coming to university education, I have not been able to find any specific reasons for retaining it in the reserved list except that it should go with secondary education. If the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh has not convinced this Council as to the retention of secondary education in the reserved list, he does not take university education any further. The complaint he made against university education is more a complaint against the university than against the Government. The powers of control are limited and they are exercised with great care and caution. There is absolutely no danger of anything serious taking place, if university education is entrusted to Government, whether it is to the Executive Council or to the minister. It makes no difference at all. After all, the minister is bound by certain limitations. He is bound to work under the advice and control of the Governor. He cannot go and work without the advice of expert officers. When we have all these safeguards why should we hesitate to recommend that university education should be placed in the transferred list? I therefore request the Council to vote for the inclusion of secondary and university education in the list of transferred subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, there is one aspect of the matter which I wish to emphasize in this connexion. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrigh is apparently anxious that elementary education should have a prior claim on the attention of the Government prior to university education and secondary education; by reserving those two subjects in the reserved branch, he places them in a more favoured position than elementary education in this way: because according to the arrangement in the report, reserved subjects have a prior claim upon the finances of the Province and it is only after meeting the expenditure on the reserved subjects that a minister can take money for the transferred subjects and the minister can only take the residue which is left after meeting the claim of the Government of India and of the reserved subjects. He comes last as the residuary legatee for whatever balance that there might be. On the other hand, the advantage of placing this department in charge of the minister would be that he would be able to take a comprehensive view of the needs of all the departments and he will be able to allocate the money accordingly. Already we are complaining that we are dividing the Government. That is the objection from the standpoint of some

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Rama Ayyangar.]

Honourable Members, that by this proposal, the Government are going to be divided into two sections. When that is so, if we are going to divide the department itself into sections, it will be adding to the intricacy of the problem. I do not think there is any real danger to the policy which will guide the department in University and secondary education by placing it in the hands of ministers. The minister will, after all, be guided by the experts who will be in charge of the department and I dare say there will be the Secretary to Government and the head of the department to guide him and as regards University affairs,—they will mostly be questions of policy which will be mostly in the hands of the University. It is only in the matter of secondary education that the Government will have more voice in controlling its direction. I do think, having regard to the inter-connexion between the various branches of education, the interests of the subject will be best served by placing it in the hands of one minister."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Your Excellency, if I rise to say a few words against this motion, it is on these grounds. I feel that education is one of those subjects which above all in this country deserves to be nationalised and I also feel that our attempt in that direction, so far as we can judge from the past has been certainly very far from what it should have been. If we really feel that, in the best and true interests of the country, education should be nationalised, I think it should be among the transferred subjects, education as a whole. As regards certain difficulties, which the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih placed in favour of the resolution that he has moved before this Council, I believe my Honourable Friends who have spoken previously have fairly answered the whole thing. His main objection is that elementary education may be starved in preference to the others, and he has stated other possible difficulties. As previous speakers have pointed out, I am one of those who think that on the whole the interests of education would be better and more adequately served by its being entrusted to the minister who would be chosen by the national assembly. The one and only effective way in which education can be nationalised would be to entrust it to these ministers."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Your Excellency, the proposition has been moved as though immediately the transfer of the subject is made, something very bad will happen to the whole subject itself. Paragraphs 238 to 240 together deal with this subject. In paragraph 238 it is said: 'In dealing with each subject the powers of the provincial legislatures to alter Government of India Acts on that subject will have to be carefully considered. We have indicated in paragraph 240 infra certain other reservations which seem to us necessary.' And in paragraph 240 it is said: 'We do not claim that this list of reservations is exhaustive or definitive; we look to the committee to assist in making it so. Our aim must be to secure to the Official Executive the power of protecting effectually whatever functions are still reserved to it and to the Government of India of intervening in all cases in which the action of the non-official Executive or Council affects them to their serious prejudice. For otherwise, the official Government which is still responsible to Parliament may be unable to discharge its responsibility properly.' The Universities Act—how far it will be controlled by the new body that will take charge of education is not a question that we now raise. That will be considered by the Committee—how far the constitution of the Universities should be altered; probably it will be said that it will have to be altered with the permission of the Government of India. The Universities Act will be preserved with all the expert opinion that India can command and probably Parliament can command. It will be sought to overrule the provisions of that Act. So that we may take that the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih used not at all be afraid that some wild change will be immediately adopted as soon as it becomes transferred. The next point that I wish to make is that the conditions of this province are opposed to those of the other provinces. We have got in 1916-17 according to the statistics on education, 31,276 institutions in all, of which we have colleges to the extent of 48, inclusive of oriental colleges and professional colleges, secondary schools going up to 460 and elementary schools about 28,867. We find here that of these, Government keep only a few colleges and a few secondary schools and a few elementary schools. The total number was only about 167 out of nearly 30,000 elementary schools. The rest is left to the local boards and municipalities or to private management. If you consider the whole position, it is in the hands of the people; it is looked after by the people; while the Bombay, Bengal and the United Provinces, they spend much more on Government public institutions, Madras spends least. In fact that is the point noted by the Education Commission as the peculiar position of this province. My submission is, knowing as we do, which colleges, which high schools and which primary schools exist in the Presidency, we have to find a machinery which will serve the interests of the public best. I can very well understand the authors of the scheme putting primary education as a reserved subject, because that will be a very proper thing to do. They should have asked the Executive Government to see to the education of the masses in every village and utilize local bodies. I can quite understand that. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih seems to take no objection to that. He seems to think that these people will rivet attention on secondary education, absolutely sacrificing elementary education. On the other hand, funds are not available and Government feel that they cannot give as much expansion to elementary education as possible. That subject is transferred and nobody objects to that. It is a scientific process that must be adopted to see that elementary education is spread throughout the length and breadth of the country so that the prosperity of the province may be quite well assured. If this is left out, what is the University? It is not a body that has institutions of its own to manage, but it is purely an examining body. It has 22ND OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; the President; Mr. Siva Rao.)

added on to its lists now certain professors who give lectures. But what is the harm which the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih expects if it is left in charge of the ministers. Does he mean that they will cancel the whole Universities Act? As I have referred to in paragraphs 238 and 240, it is not that we are now asking you to go into the whole question, though I sent up a resolution asking for a committee to go into the question of what rights might be reserved to alter the Government of India Acts. I thought it was a matter within our province. I did not know Your Excellency's announcement this morning, but whatever that may be, these are the safeguards and it is not that the Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih's advice will be thrown away in the University. In the Senate there are people enough to safeguard the interests of the University and, in fact, there is too much safeguarding. We say that education has not been appreciated as it should be. There will be a great contest, if it is sought to be interfered with. I do not think it is going to be so easily handed over to the people to have control over, especially collegiate and University education. That being so, I think the whole foundation of the fear expressed in this Council disappears. Then the question arises, is there any chance of money available for primary education being diverted to secondary education and is there any chance of primary education dying out in the land? I do not think it is the policy of Government to start model schools. It is only a question of encouraging certain institutions under the management of local boards. That being so, it is a clear position that we must see that the subject of education must be handed to the control of the ministers who will have a large body of elected members to see that education spreads as far and wide as possible without its being confined as often it was thought to primary education. It was once said by Government that secondary schools might all be closed unless they keep up to a certain level and that brought a retrenchment of 200 secondary schools, but recently the policy changed and we have added to the number of schools. In that state of affairs, I do not think there is any fear of the ministry any way changing the policy of the Government and starting schools at the expense of the public. On the other hand, they will be able to find out proper localities and, with probably much less assistance from Provincial Governments, will be able to maintain them as efficiently as possible. Of course, the budget is to be considered by the combined Government and the whole thing will be considered with the advice of the Governor who will advise both parties properly and there is no reason to fear that the minister will be able to carry out his wishes as he likes, and the assembly will let him do as he likes. He cannot be turned out by the vote of the Council, he will join with the other Members of the Government in seeing that education is not adversely affected. We have not forgotten that most municipalities were prepared to tax themselves extra if it is a question of having compulsory education. The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao has often fought in this Council to allow certain municipalities to tax themselves extra to have compulsory education. I do not think, so far as education is concerned, any zeal will be wanting on the part of the ministers or on the part of the Legislative assembly which will become so representative especially when we know that territorial and property qualifications will be the main ground for representation and when we know that these people will be anxious to see that mass education improves, as also secondary and collegiate education. Under these circumstances, it will be only very proper to allow the whole thing in the hands of the ministers and not unnecessarily allow it as a reserved subject for the Government to vex itself too much with expenditure on them. On the other hand, the people may be told: 'There is education with you, you may find out fresh money by fresh taxation'. Under these circumstances, it will be quite proper to leave it to them and see how far they progress. Of course, the science of education will not suffer."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I suggest an adjournment now."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I think it will be convenient for the mover and the seconder if the subject is finished now."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"It is an important subject and some of us wish to say something."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I suggest we may arrive at a decision now."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The report says that the views of non-official members will have to be collected, so that it is not merely a question of non-official members voting upon it. Their views should be put forward."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The reporter is taking down everything that is said."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Any new opinions that might be given will be useful for consideration. It is not a matter of closing discussion."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I wish to be very brief. The Hon'ble Mr. Pittendrih has failed to convince us why secondary education should be omitted from the list of transferred subjects. I have carefully listened to him. There was a sneering reference made by him about electioneering 'cry'. But I wish really to know what is the calamity that he apprehends if this subject of secondary education is transferred. My Lord, the defects in the present system of education are summed up in the report on reforms in paragraphs 121 to 187. We have observed already that one of the greatest obstacles to India's political development lies not only in the lack of education among its peoples taken as a whole, but also in the uneven distribution of educational advance. The educational policy of Government has incurred much criticism from different points of view. Government is charged with neglect, because after sixty years of educational effort only six per cent of the population is literate while under 4 per cent of the total population is undergoing instruction. It is charged, on the other hand, with having fostered education on wrong lines, and having given to those classes which welcomed instruction a system which is divorced from their need in being too purely literary, in admitting methods of unintelligent memorising and of cramming, and in producing far in excess of the actual demands of Indian conditions, a body of educated young men whose training has prepared them only for Government service or the practice of the Law. The system of University education on western lines is represented as cutting off the students from the normal life of the country, and the want of connexion between primary education in the vernaculars and higher education in English is regarded as another radical defect. They also say 'Attempts towards direct moral training were always impeded by the desirability of avoiding the difficult and delicate domain of religious beliefs.' Then there is also the question of female education, the progress of which has been very slow; and the authors of the report wind up by saying: 'It is part of the political advance that we contemplate that the direction of Indian education should be increasingly transferred to Indian hands. Only so, we believe can the stimulus be forthcoming which would enable the necessary money to be found. The weak points are recognized. A real desire for improvement exists. Educational extension and reform must inevitably play an important part in the political progress of the country.' I do not think there can be any better authority for the position that education should be handed over to popular control and it is impossible to divorce secondary from primary education. Secondary education should not merely be included in the transferred list, but higher and collegiate education also and University education also should be similarly handed over."

(Mr. Siva Rao; the President; Mr. Venkatapati Raju; [22ND OCTOBER 1918.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"In order that the Council may be quite free to express its decision on the two parts, I propose to put first Resolution No. XVII down to the word 'subjects' in the second line. Then I will take University education and secondary education separately."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Would it prevent me from moving my resolution separately which refers to colleges?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Yours is not quite a good resolution. It confuses the issues. We would have to alter your resolution if we took it."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"I shall move the motion as an amendment."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Your amendment will not be necessary. As I understand it, the object of all the resolutions is to give Honourable Members who are present here a full opportunity of expressing a clear and definite opinion on each part of education. That is the end which is sought by various resolutions and I think, if I put this resolution in three parts, that will enable the Council to give a clear decision on every part. If I take the other resolution, I shall have to cut that up in the same way. I hope the Honourable Gentleman follows me."

The Hon'ble Mr. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"The question of colleges is not discussed under this resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"College education is identical with University education. I do not think we need be under any difficulty on that score."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"The administration of colleges and the management of colleges is quite a different thing from University education."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Very well. We will take colleges separately and Universities separately."

"I propose, first of all, to put the first portion of Resolution No. XVII to the Council:—

'The non-official members of this Council recommend that elementary, industrial and technical education should be included among the transferred subjects.'

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur Mr. M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"May I say that they are already on the transferred list?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I am perfectly aware of it. I have read the report on the constitutional reform and I have referred to it on several occasions. Somebody has to guide the discussion and if you will allow me to do it, you will see that we will get through the thing all right."

The first portion of Resolution No. XVII was put to vote and agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It is unanimously agreed by those present that these branches should be transferred subjects."

Now I will put 'secondary education to be included in the transferred list.'

The motion was agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Now we take the question of collegiate education being included in the transferred list."

The motion was put and agreed to.

(The President; Mr. Suryanarayana Rao;
Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao;
Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Now we take University education."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Council has now agreed that elementary, industrial and technical education, secondary education, collegiate education and University education should all be transferred subjects."

"I want to try and arrange for the convenience of the Council the business for to-morrow. I have been looking through the agenda and it seems to me that the following are the principal individual subjects. Resolution No. XII* should be taken. There are several resolutions which raise the same issue. Then resolution No. XX† should be taken which raises another issue. Then No. XXII† should be taken which raises another issue. There is another question, namely, the question of law, justice and police. There are two or three resolutions dealing with law, justice and police. There is one resolution No. XIX† dealing with 'Civil justice' and I do not know whether it is necessary to take that separately or whether the Council would prefer to take the whole subject of law, justice and police."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO:—"Civil justice is separately dealt with as a reserved subject. I wish it to be separately discussed."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We will take it as No. 4. Then comes law, justice and police—No. 5. There is another matter, the question on which I undertook to make some examination. There is the question of some resolutions which were not placed on the agenda owing to the interpretation put upon the word 'lists.' There are three resolutions in regard to railways. I propose to issue this paper to-morrow which will contain these three resolutions and I think the best resolution to take is in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao. We shall see to-morrow about it."

"There is a resolution under the same category as regards income-tax in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar. I do not know if there is much use in taking it."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"I will consider the point."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"You will let us know to-morrow."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"There is another resolution with regard to light feeder railways."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We shall just see whether we cannot combine both these in one resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"There is the control of Imperial services in the provinces."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That is another subject and I do not think it comes within the category."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"It comes indirectly under resolution XII."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"If we discuss that resolution under resolution XII* that will be suitable. The Council will now adjourn."

The Council then rose for the day.

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL OF SERVICES OF TRANSFERRED DEPARTMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(The President; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

The Council re-assembled at 11 a.m.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"We now proceed to the business of the day. We take resolution No. XII."

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL OF SERVICES OF TRANSFERRED DEPARTMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"Your Excellency, I have the honour to move as follows" :—

"I believe that owing to some inadvertence or oversight the question of the conditions of service and the control of the services relating to transferred subjects has not been shown in Illustrative List No. II. We find in Illustrative List No. I, Provincial subjects, 'the appointments, conditions of service and control of all Provincial services,' with the remark 'subject to any existing privileges enjoyed by those now in service.' If once it is agreed as one of the principles of devolution of responsibility that certain departments should be transferred to Indian ministers, it certainly stands to reason that the conditions of service and the control of the services so far as those departments are concerned, should also be included in transferred subjects. Otherwise, we would get into a state of affairs which cannot be considered satisfactory. If the conditions of service and the control of the services regarding the departments under the management and control of Indian ministers should be in the Governor in Council and if they should be merely called upon to administer those branches it will lead to anomalous results. What, after all, are the difficulties that are likely to accrue by transferring that portion of the subjects to the Indian ministers? I have not been able to find in the report any cogent reasons adduced for keeping that subject under the control of the Governor in Council in regard to the departments transferred to the Indian ministers. That is why I suggested at the outset that it is possibly due to inadvertence or omission. I find that the authors of the report consider this question about the future conditions of the services and come to some conclusions. They consider the future position of the European services in the country and the work awaiting the English official and sum up the position as follows: 'It may conceivably be that the utilities of the European official in India will gradually undergo a change; that instead of continuing to the same degree as now as the executive agency of Government, he will stand aside more from the work of carrying out orders and assume the position of a skilled consultant, a technical adviser and an inspecting and reporting officer. To attempt to forecast the future organization and disposition of the services would be idle. These matters will settle themselves in the course of political evolution. But we can see no reason for alarm. Our policy is irrevocably declared and it ought to content all sober minds. We are no longer seeking to govern a subject race by means of the services; we are seeking to make the Indian people self-governing. To this end we believe that the continued presence of the English officer is vital, and we intend to act on that belief. So long as Indians are employed in increasing numbers wherever they are fit, there can be no just complaint of the retention of the Englishman; if that condition is not fulfilled, there is an appeal to the periodic commission.' Later on, they make some provision for the protection of the services: 'On more than one occasion, we have declared our intention to protect the interests of the services if necessary; and it may be well to make it clear what we mean by this phrase. The question of methods depends on a number of Acts and rules and regulations, for which reason we reserve it for detailed consideration hereafter in connexion with the question of demarcating functions and powers. But our purpose is that any public servant, whatever the Government under which he is employed, shall be properly supported and protected in the legitimate exercise of his functions; and that any rights and privileges guaranteed or implied in the conditions of his appointment shall be secured to him. No changes that will occur can be allowed to impair the power of the Government of India or of the Governor in Council to secure these essential requirements.' That is why we find in the first list showing Provincial subjects it is expressly stated 'subject to any existing privileges enjoyed by those now in service.' With these safeguards, can it be suggested for a moment that the conditions of service and the control of the services handed over to Indian ministers, should not vest in them?"

"It cannot be suggested that this is not an important question for consideration. One of the complaints made and one of the suggestions also put forward from time to time has been that the present system of administration is one of the most costly systems in the world. It has been suggested as one of the means of reducing the cost of the administration that there should be a larger employment of indigenous agency in the public services. If this principle is accepted, it will have to be considered whether Indian ministers would not be in a better position to regulate the conditions of service regarding the departments which are to be under their control and find out what are the terms under which they can secure duly qualified, efficient members for the various branches of work. They will be able to obtain the advice of the other members of the Executive Government and consult them in all important matters and consult them in regard to the privileges of the services. I cannot pass over this aspect without referring to the complaint which has been raised owing to the suggestion made in the report as to the increase of allowances to various departments of the public service. The authors go further than the members of the Public Services Commission. It is, therefore, necessary that so far at least as the departments transferred to the ministers are concerned, the question will have to be considered and kept within proper limits. Otherwise, I have no doubt that the administration which is already costly will become even costlier and will be a burden to the tax-payers."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"I should like to know whether there will be a separate discussion on resolutions XXX† and XXXI† of which I have given notice, which relate to the same subject, but with some variation."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Resolution XXXI† is really included in this motion which we are discussing. But resolution XXX† regarding maintenance of law and order need not be grouped with this."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"I made a mistake. I meant XXXI† and XXXII†."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I think they are included in No. XII*. Will the Honourable Gentleman point out in which particular they are not?"

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Resolution No. XII* says 'conditions of service and the control of services of the transferred departments shall be included in the list of transferred subjects,' but it does not include appointments. It refers to the conditions of service and control of the services. Only with regard to item 4, in Illustrative List I, I have asked that in the case of the Provincial services, the appointments, conditions of service and the control of the services shall be transferred subjects and even in the case of all other services, all-India services, the control of those services should be transferred subjects. That is why I have sent in a consolidated resolution."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I shall be very glad if the Honourable Member will come and speak to me. As far as I can make out, resolution XXXI† relates to all the Provincial services, relating to transferred subjects, including those of the future ministers."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Yes."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Would they not be transferred subjects?"

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Yes."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"It is not necessary to mention it separately. That disposes of XXXI†, which is within the motion we are discussing."

"Then as to XXXII†, we had better not take that, because it is an omnibus resolution. It is one of the same kind which we rejected yesterday. It rejects the whole of the subjects in List I, and adds it to List II."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"I shall omit XXXII†, but I wish to bring in an amendment to this resolution 'that this Council recommends that the appointment, the conditions of service and the control of all Provincial services connected with the transferred departments including those of the future ministers and the control of all services relating to the same departments shall be included in the transferred list.'"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"You do not add anything except that you have repeated it three times. The only thing is the question of appointment and matters affecting the conditions of service and the control of the services. Appointment may be taken to come under the conditions of service."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"It may be added formally."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"If I have to accept an appointment, I must consider conditions of appointment. Future ministers will have control of the transferred subjects. You say all transferred departments; it includes all departments."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"If that is so, it is all right."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Honourable Gentleman's fears are unfounded."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—"Then I beg to second this resolution. The resolution relates to three matters. I must say, first, with regard to the conditions of service and control of all the Provincial services; secondly it relates to ministers and thirdly to all services, whether Provincial or all-India services. It does not require any elaborate argument to convince any body that when the departments are themselves transferred, the accessories thereto, the staff that works these departments should be transferred along with them. It would be very anomalous that the framers of the report should have provided for the transfer of certain departments without providing for the transfer of control over the employees who are supposed to work these departments. It will be absolutely impossible for the ministers to work these departments without having control over the staff employed therein."

"I was just trying to find out the reasons why these services should have been placed in the reserved list. The only reason that can be urged is that certain services need protection that if the recruitment and the conditions of certain services are allowed to remain in the hands of ministers and popular assemblies they may so work them or so lay down or prescribe rules that the efficiency of the services may be impaired. There may also be one other reason in the minds of the illustrious authors of the report that if the services were handed over to popular assemblies and Indian ministers, they would not attract Europeans. All these fears seem to be unfounded. This resolution is very modest and does not seek to have the appointment and conditions of service of the Imperial services. It only asks for the control of these services. Under these circumstances, there cannot be any objection to passing this resolution."

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL OF SERVICES OF TRANSFERRED DEPARTMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—"Your Excellency, I have great pleasure in supporting the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao. I find the reason why they wanted to include this matter in reserved subjects in paragraph 259 with reference to the relation of the services to the Government. All that they say is that they will be under the control of the Executive Government including the ministers and therefore the orders will go out as those of the Executive Government instead of in the name of the Governor and the ministers. My objection to that explanation is that so far as the transferred subjects are concerned, they want to make the ministers responsible for those subjects and actually they say they are to be held responsible. In those circumstances, if they give the responsibility for these departments, it necessarily means that the control of the services also goes with them. Without control I have not heard of any responsible government anywhere. For instance, we passed yesterday a resolution that education should be a transferred subject. If the ministers have not got the power of appointment and control, what is the use of placing education under the ministers? We know that in 1886 the Education Commission made their report and they suggested unanimously that we ought not to introduce young men from England in the matter of education and what was the practice thereto should be modified or cancelled. Instead of following that course, they introduced additional men. If it were in the hands of people's representatives they would have followed the recommendation. There is one general reservation with reference to the already existing services. Whether it is Provincial Service or Imperial Service, the existing rights and contractual obligations entered into by the Government must be respected. They cannot reduce their pay. With reference to the future appointments and conditions of service, they must have control. Until they have control, it is a misnomer to say that they have control over the services. It simply amounts to saying that ministers are to have the responsibility without any power to enforce their opinion."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur :—"I fail to see the necessity of this resolution. Transfer of subjects means transfer of the relative services also. Although in the Report it is not laid down specifically, it is contemplated that it should be so. For example, in paragraph 128 it is stated: 'Further, as the principle of popular control is admitted into the Government through the medium of the legislative councils, some means must be devised of enabling the established services to fall in with the new order of things.' In paragraph 325 they say: 'On more than one occasion we have declared our intention to protect the interests of the services, if necessary'. They say that that question will be considered in detail in connexion with the question of demarcating functions and powers which will be investigated by the committee and they go on: 'But our purpose is that any public servant, whatever the government under which he is employed, shall be properly supported and protected in the legitimate exercise of his functions'. It is contemplated that they will be under the control of the council or the ministers, whichever departments they belong to. At the same time they will be protected. With the change of government in the transitory period as well as after the reforms are fully introduced, the interests of the services should not suffer and special measures are contemplated to see that they do not suffer. The control will be with the Minister or with the Council as the case may be. That being so, I do not see any necessity for bringing this resolution, unless the intention of the Honourable Mover is that there should be no ambiguity on this subject. If that is the object, I have no objection. My impression is that the control of the services goes with the departments."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"My Honourable Friend Mr. Yaqub Hasan must be under some mistake in thinking that the authors of the report contemplated the transfer of the services along with the subjects which are on the transferred lists as pointed out by him. It is true that some portions of the report are not quite clear. At one place it is conceded that the popular government should have full scope to proceed along the lines which are chalked out in this report, but as has been pointed out many times after the publication of this report, the one point which is clear is that the authors of the report are over-cautious with reference to the powers which they propose to confer on the ministers. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan will see paragraph 240; they have hedged these powers with regard to transferred subjects with so many limitations, both as regards powers of intervention of the Government and as regards the administrative control of the services. They have definitely stated that the appointments, conditions of service, and control of all Provincial services have been placed in List I. Therefore, it is clear that, so far as the authors of the report themselves go, they do not seem to contemplate that the ministers should make appointments to the services which are under their control. The conditions of service and the control of the public services do not seem to have been contemplated by the authors of the report. It is one of the most elementary propositions of administration that the ministers who are administering their departments should have full control over the staff appertaining to the departments. Unless that is conceded, the whole of this scheme would stand self-condemned. It has been more than once pointed out by the Decentralization Commission that the services should be controlled by those who are responsible for administering those departments. If ministers are to be held responsible for the departments to be ultimately placed in the transferred list, they must have a free hand with the services employed by them. As an illustration take the medical service. The Medical department is in the transferred list; the Medical department from the Surgeon-General downwards should be under the control of the ministers. If the department of education is a transferred subject, the appointment of the Inspectorate and the Director of Public Instruction and the departments which deal with collegiate education, female education, technical education, every department that you find in the Quarterly Civil List relating to education must automatically come under the control of the ministers. I do not understand what is meant by saying that the department of education is transferred to the control of ministers if the members of the department are not subject to the disciplinary control of the ministers. Then, as regards agriculture, the forest department, the departments relating to agricultural research and education—all these must pass automatically to the control and be amenable to the control of the ministers. Then again you have the civil veterinary department. Then you have the department of industries. Appointments such as those of the Director of Industries, the Leather Expert, the Dyeing Expert and the whole body of persons who are directly under the department of industries must be under the disciplinary control of the ministers. Therefore it seems to me, my Lord, that unless this fundamental proposition is conceded, there is no use of having any transferred list—I mean the principle that ministers should have control of the departments.

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL OF SERVICES OF TRANSFERRED DEPARTMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

23RD OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar ; Mr. Suryanarayana Rao.)

"There is one other important question, my Lord, with reference to the services in the departments transferred to the ministers. Taking agriculture as an illustration, there is an Imperial Agricultural Service. Then again there is an Imperial Service so far as the civil Imperial Agricultural Service. Then again there is an Imperial Educational Service. The authors of the scheme assume that these Imperial Services would be constituted on an all-India basis. I do not wish to attack the principles of the constitution of the Imperial Services. But what is asked for under this resolution is that even in the case of those Imperial Services whose appointments are not made by the Provincial Governments, but by the Government of India, they should be subject—even though they are not appointed by the Provincial Governments and though the conditions of service are not settled by the Provincial Governments, for these are settled by the Government of India and the Secretary of State and they are recruited elsewhere—so far as the control is concerned, the Imperial Services are now under the control of the Provincial Governments for disciplinary purpose—control should automatically pass to the extent to which the Imperial departments are employed under ministers to the ministers. As I have already said, the Imperial Agricultural Service must come under the control of the ministers and its officers must be under the control of the Provincial Government exactly in the same way. Whatever may be the departments transferred ultimately, even taking the departments in the Illustrative List, for example, the Departments of Agriculture or Industries or Education, I say that Imperial Officers as well as Provincial Officers will have to be appointed and the ministers should have such control as the Provincial Government now has with reference to the appointment, conditions of service and general control of the services. Otherwise, the position of the ministers will be quite anomalous. To compare small things with great, it will be like the office of the president of the district board who has to exercise control over the medical institutions, but has very little power over medical subordinates of the district board. Unless full powers of control, transfer and discipline over these departments are given, I do not know what the minister is going to do. Take the case of the Surgeon-General who is at the head of the Medical department. If the Medical department is placed under the control of the minister, the minister must have the choice of appointing the Surgeon-General and he must have the choice of appointing the members of the Provincial Medical Service; he must have the power to transfer medical subordinates from one station to another; he must be able to settle the conditions of service. All these are powers incidental to the due performance of their duties with reference to these departments. Otherwise, the position of the ministers will not be the same as that of the Provincial Executive Government."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I am not quite sure of that."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"Otherwise I think the position of a minister will be that of a subordinate. He will have to go to the Executive Government and say: 'Let this man go from Rajahmundry to Chicacole or from Ramnad to Madurai'. He would have no power to transfer a District Medical and Sanitary Officer. If this scheme is to succeed and the minister is to have any control over the departments which are to be allocated to ministers, he must have the full choice of every officer from the head of the department down to the lowest man over whom he can exercise control. Otherwise it is quite easy to disorganize a department under a minister if the Executive Government does not like a particular proposal made. It seems to me to be absolutely a corollary from the transfer of these departments to the control of the ministers alone, that the whole power and the responsibility of appointment, control and responsibility for the efficiency of these departments is implied. Unless these essential conditions are also carried out in the report and unless these too cautious proposals which are to be found in the report are modified, I am certain that there will be a deadlock between the two departments of the Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO :—"I have only one word to submit. In paragraph 195 it is stated: 'It is thought that wherever a board pays for a service, it should control such service.' I submit that the same analogy applies here. If ministers are to

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL OF SERVICES OF TRANSFERRED DEPARTMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. Suryanarayana Rao; Mr. Narsimha Ayyar; [23RD OCTOBER 1918.
the President; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.]

administer certain departments, they must have control of the services in those departments. I fail to understand why a distinction should be drawn with reference to transferred subjects. If the local boards should have full control over their services, the same analogy applies to the ministers, and they should have control over the services under them. I have therefore great pleasure in supporting the resolution proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Krishna Rao."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I beg formally to move that the word 'appointment' be inserted because later on it may give rise to misunderstanding."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We may insert this word."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I find it very difficult to follow this debate. A close reading of the lists makes it difficult to follow it. List I includes the appointments, conditions of service and control of all Provincial services. List II does not have this. It has therefore to be taken as a reserved subject from the lists alone. Going to paragraph 259 of the report, I find: 'That there are difficulties in either case we do not deny, but they would certainly be greater if one and the same officer received his orders from two governments instead of one. The objection may be taken that the same authority may not be felt to attach to orders coming from ministers as to orders coming from the Executive Council. We do not admit that they will come from either. All orders will come from the Government and they will all be Government orders. At the present time it is not the business of an executive officer to differentiate between an order conveyed to him by the Secretary to Government in one department and an order conveyed to him by the Secretary in another department, and the procedure will not differ in the future.' That is the wording of that paragraph. Then the Executive Government as per paragraph 222 and the previous paragraphs is to consist of two portions. One portion, the Executive Council, is to consist of one Indian and one European member and the other portion is to consist of the Governor and the minister. We have to take that, in relation to the appointment, conditions of service and the control of the Provincial services the orders in respect of the services in the Transferred List shall issue from the Government, but that Government will consist of the Governor and the ministers. In paragraph 259 they ask the officers concerned to treat the orders whether issued by one department of the Government or the other as Government orders. Therefore, the effect of this will be that in respect of the transferred departments, the orders will practically go from the Governor and from the ministers, because it is the ministers and the Governor that will constitute the portion relating to transferred departments. Taking paragraph 259 with this particular clause it becomes very difficult to understand whether the Government order referred to will be a Government order, an order of the Government inclusive of the ministers or of the Governor and the Executive Council, because they do not wish the officers to distinguish the orders. If really what is meant is that actually the Governor and the ministers shall not be the Government that issues the orders to the officers of the transferred subjects, but they shall be the orders of the Executive Government who have to issue such orders, the difficulty practically comes in. It is because of that difficulty that the proposition becomes quite relevant. The question is if it is meant to say that the Government orders in such cases must proceed only from the Executive Government because reserved subjects are under the control of the Executive Government and if actually the subject is to be considered by the Governor and the ministers, what it comes to is this. The Governor and the ministers shall decide that particular officers in the transferred departments shall have certain orders, but if these orders related to the conditions of service or the appointment or the control of the services they cannot issue the order immediately; must go to the Executive Government and ask the orders to be issued. I do not think the authors of the report after they have put in that language in paragraph 259 meant that the Governor and his ministers should in communicating the order to the officers in the transferred departments appeal to the Governor and the Executive Council to issue an order of that kind when it related to one of the three points, viz., appointments, conditions of service and the control of the services. If in regard to appointments the Governor and the ministers should say an appointment should be made but they cannot issue that order unless they consult the Executive Government, that will be an anomalous position. My position is that this must be cleared up as the report stands. If really it means that the joint government issue the order though the department which issues the orders on transferred subjects will be the Government consisting of the Ministry it is all right. If, on the other hand, it is meant to be treated as powers vested in the Executive Government, it deserves to be immediately altered."

"The only difficulty that might be pointed out is in the case of appointments and probably conditions of service. It may be stated that when people are enrolled in the service on certain conditions, the existing services must be protected and hereafter the Executive Government alone shall make the appointments. Once the appointment is given to them, the question of conditions of service will have to be settled by them. Suppose there is a difficulty in arriving at a conclusion. I shall take the third, the control of the services. How can it ever be left to the Executive Government if the department is to be administered by the ministers? If the control of the officers employed in connexion with these subjects is to be exercised not by the Governor and the ministers who are actually in charge of those subjects, the results will be disastrous. Then as regards the two other questions, appointments and conditions of service, it may be said that in the case of the Imperial services the whole appointment and conditions of service and control of the services are taken up by the Government of India. There is recruitment by the Government of India for those services and it is found practicable that the Provincial Government make reports and they have certain disciplinary jurisdiction over these officers and they have been able to get on till now. Why not the same thing be done hereafter with reference to the conditions of service, and appointments to the Provincial service? My submission again is that the Executive Council is part of the Government. The other part is the Governor and the Ministers and they are the heads with regard to transferred subjects. Where the subject is transferred, there is no meaning in the appointment and conditions of service being left to another portion of the Government which has nothing to do with the department which is being administered by the Ministers. The whole tendency of the report at present is that the executive head of the province shall have all the power to see that the Ministers are not allowed to go astray and they have the power to control the Ministers where through inexperience they miss the point. In those circumstances it is not only not necessary to have the executive arrange the appointment and conditions of service for the transferred subjects, but it is only proper that it should be left to the Governor and the Ministers and they together should have full control in order that the services may be efficient and there may not be unnecessary complications. I support the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I strongly support the motion before this Council. I have only one word to say. It is clear as the proverb goes that one should pay the piper and another call the tune would be a very anomalous thing. On that ground more than anything else, I most strongly support the resolution before the Council."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"As it seems to be the view of some Honourable Members, I propose to insert the word 'appointment' in the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Will your Excellency include the word 'Ministers' also?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That is not necessary. Ministers will be in charge of the transferred subjects and there cannot be any possible mistake in the wording as it stands. It is perfectly clear."

The resolution was put to the Council and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Is it unanimously carried?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I do not think so. I will take a poll if you want it."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Yes."

A poll was taken with the result that no one voted against the resolution and the following members voted for the resolution, viz:—

RESOLUTION RE 'PRISONS' AND ADMINISTRATION OF PRESS, ETC., ACTS TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECTS IN ADDITION TO THOSE IN LIST II.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"There is resolution No. XX* against the name of the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar. He is not here. I will take No. XXII*."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar told me that he would leave word with the Secretary that I might move it."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Honourable Gentleman may move it."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The resolution which I have the honour to move runs as follows:—

'XX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that, in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in Illustrative list II of Appendix II, prisons 5 (iii) and the administration of the Acts relating to incitements to crime, seditious meetings, press and arms [item No. 5 (v) of list I of Appendix II] should be placed in the list of subjects to be transferred to the control of Ministers.'

"My Lord, I would urge for the acceptance of this proposition first that this province has to be treated separately from other provinces in this matter. Madras has been peculiarly fortunate in that it has been ever known as one of the most peaceful provinces in all India. Up to date it may not be possible to say that Madras has given room for any real impression being created that it has been any to the least extent disloyal or wanting in loyalty. If there are any aberrations or unrest, a close analysis of the affairs of the province for a decade or two will clearly show that there has been no room for the impression that any subject of the province has been a party to organized crime or seditious meetings or offences against the State, or offences against the Press Act or the Arms Act. There might have been occasions when this view was questioned by the officers, but I think the Government have uniformly held that all such doubts thrown have not been based upon any real facts, for investigations have clearly established that there has been no reason for the apprehension that the province is in any way affected by any indication of crimes of the kind that I have already referred to. This being so, it becomes proper to consider how far the subjects regarding these matters should be placed in the reserved head. It would be seen from clause 5 of the Illustrative List I that (1) administration of criminal justice including village courts, (2) police including railway police, (3) prisons, (4) criminal tribes, (5) working of particular Acts, for example, incitement to crime, seditious meetings, infanticide, press, arms, European vagrancy, (6) poisons, (7) gambling, (8) dramatic performances and cinematographs are brought under 'maintenance of law and order'. Prisons, working of particular Acts, for example, incitements to crime, seditious meetings, infanticide, press, arms, European vagrancy, have been included there. This resolution only deals with two clauses, clauses 3 and 5 and in clause 5 only three portions.

* See page 267 infra.

"The next question that arises is the authors of the report say in paragraph 234: 'Their guiding principle should be to include in the transferred list those departments which afford most opportunities for local knowledge and social service, those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested, those in which mistakes which may occur though serious would not be irremediable and those which stand most in need of development. In pursuance of this principle we should not expect to find that departments primarily concerned with the maintenance of law and order were transferred'. That is the opinion that the authors of the scheme have expressed. As I have been placing my case before the Honourable Members, I do not want to go against the spirit of that observation. I merely base my argument on the fact that in the Madras Province matters are absolutely different from the other provinces. If owing to excitement or owing to various disturbing causes or owing to the fact of opinions that particular people might hold in particular districts, sudden ideas, offences against the Press Act or the Arms Act are becoming too many—if there are reports received we may ordinarily take it that these reports come from persons who have not correctly grasped the situation. In most cases we may take it there is something wrong on the part of the officers of the locality and there has been a misconception. That is the inference to be drawn. Exceptional circumstances may come in. But the ordinary circumstances that happen in this province never come under that category. Therefore, the main point that will have to be brought out or understood is to actually analyse the situation with a cool head probing the thing to see if the officers themselves have an aberration to say that the conditions of locality are bad. This will have to be gone into with perfect calmness. Even if there is a committee appointed to go into all cases of this kind for the last 25 years in this province and if they are asked to go into the details of each case I have not the least doubt that they will make a unanimous report that it is not possible to prove that in this province there existed at any time a state of affairs which called for a special establishment to go into the question of incitement to crime, seditious meetings and offences against the Press and Arms Acts. Of course, it may not be out of place for me to refer to what has been stated in the Sedition Committee's report. They have unanimously come to the conclusion that in Madras there have been no indications of any organized sedition or incitement to crime or anything of that sort. The Ashe murder case is referred to and the other occurrences in the province are referred to only for a unanimous conclusion to be arrived at that Madras has proved to be one of the most peaceful provinces. I only refer to that to show that questions of that kind crop up only to tend to confirm the belief of the authorities and the people that the people are good and quite loyal and order is soon restored. It is owing to some wrong administrations that difficulties crop up. This is not the time to go into the other details, because these things are not relevant to the present discussion. We will have to raise this question more clearly at another time. I am sure the Government will agree with me in thinking that the conditions of this province have always been very peaceful. Under these circumstances, it becomes very important that the subjects relating to incitements to crime and seditious meetings should be transferred to the ministry.

"In fact it might often happen if differences arise that the Ministers might catch hold of the representatives of the locality and see that the whole matter is investigated properly and actual peace restored much more easily than by a regular investigation, as I said yesterday, by a highly centralised authority which acts on private reports of one officer or another. Most of these disputes are better settled by mutual understanding. Of course, where there is organized conspiracy or armed preparation or bomb throwing or any conspiracy to join with enemies, we can well understand that precaution should be taken. But all these rights that exist in the executive Government are not taken away by what is asked for in this resolution. The so-called incitement to crime, seditious meetings, offences against the Press and the Arms Act should therefore be in this province in proper hands under Ministers, for the Governor and the Ministers will be able to deal with the situation, whatever it may be.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

“ Another portion that is added is the administration of prisons. The administration of prisons and matters connected with the inmates of the prisons is certainly a matter which an Indian will be quite competent to sympathetically attend to as to what is to be done to the population in the prison and so on. So far as diet and the work to be done by them are concerned and in every other way to see that the inmates of the prison are properly attended to and that the industrial articles they produce are of the best kind, it would be proper to place these matters in the hands of Ministers. Having passed a resolution that industrial matters should be in the hands of Ministers, I should urge that it will be proper when we know that the prisons have been producing various articles of late and have been used for industrial work that this department should be in the charge of Ministers. How well the inmates of the prison can be utilized should be decided by the Ministers. For all these reasons the proposition deserves acceptance and these subjects may be put in the transferred list.”

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—“ Since the majority of the non-official members are of opinion that the maintenance of law and order should be a reserved subject and that only prisons should be a transferred subject, I suggest that the words in the resolution after the words ‘prisons 5 (iii)’ and before the words ‘should be placed in the list of subjects’ to be transferred to the control of Ministers’ be deleted.”

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Prisons' may be removed."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Prisons" is the only thing that will remain. That will be in accordance with the view of the majority.

The motion fell through for want of a seconder."

RESOLUTION RE FORESTS AND 'FOREST PRODUCE' TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECTS WITHOUT LIMITATION.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—“ I beg to move.”

'XXII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the whole subjects of "Forests and Forest Products" be transferred to Illustrative List II and not only "unclassified and some protected."'

“To understand this resolution I have to refer to the report of the Forest Committee which was issued on the 15th January 1913 with the orders thereon. The Committee proposed to divide the forests into six classes. Class 6 is ‘those reserves which are so barren or so deteriorated that they are worthless for any purpose, even for grazing.’ Class 5 is ‘those reserves which are so much more useful for grazing than for any other object that for practical purposes grazing alone need be considered.’ These are forests which are asked by the report to be handed over to the village panchayats. Class 4 relates to ‘those reserves which adjoin villages and which, while useful for grazing, contain tree growth which it is necessary to preserve for working in the near future, or which are already worked to a small extent for rural supply’. The Committee recommend that on certain conditions they may be transferred to the village panchayats. Class 3 is ‘fuel plantations, especially the casuarina plantations on the coast, including lands taken up for that purpose and not yet planted.’ This class is recommended to be in the hands of the department because they will not be useful for grazing purposes as they are taken up for purposes of plantation, and they also recommend that such taking up of lands should be as restricted as possible. Classes 1 and 2 remain. The first class relates to ‘those reserves which must be preserved for climatic purposes and for the protection of water-sources as well as those reserves which are not in close contact with villages and cultivation’. The second class is ‘those reserves which, although not remote from villages and from cultivation, are valuable as producers of timber or fuel, and which are, or are capable of, being intensively worked for this purpose, and in which grazing is altogether a secondary product.’ These two classes of forests are recommended to be put absolutely in the hands of the forest department.

“ The next position that I want to place before the Honourable Members is that in dealing with each one of the classes of forests, with reference to the method of treatment of each class of forest, we find that in the case of classes 1 and 2 the Committee recommend that they may be used for grazing cattle ; a limited number of cattle which will be decided on or determined, may be permitted to graze in portions of the forests which are allowed by the department to be utilized for that purpose. Class 3 is not of much use, it is only casuarina plantation. The others are forests which are permitted to be handed over to the village panchayats. I shall draw the attention of the Council to is statement No. 73, and I shall leave it to the Council to decide whether it is necessary to take any further action in the matter.”

The others are forests which are permitted to be handed over to the village pahtunayats.
 "The next point I would draw the attention of the Council to is statement No. 73, annual form No. 73 in the administration report. I have got the report for 1916-17 and this statement appears on page xx of the appendix. We find from there that in classes 1 and 2 except in the northern circle in all other circles more than 80 per cent of classes 1 and 2 are allowed for grazing cattle. I find more than 60 per cent is thrown open for grazing in the northern circle even in reserved forests. Therefore, my submission is that in forest administration, while it has on the one hand to be carefully conducted with the help of expert officers trained for the purpose, the whole thing is meant for the use of the masses, and it is absolutely essential that the use of these forests should be carefully regulated and not treated as almost a close preserve for forest officers to allow them to be made use of by the people. Of course they should decide carefully that the real growth of the forest is not interfered with and the only proof that I could give of the certainty that the Ministers will be able to discharge their duty very properly will be the Forest Committee's report. Two of the members of the committee have been staunch advocates of the people's cause and two respected members of this Council, one of whom is the lion'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao and the other Mr. Kesava Pillai. On the point I have referred to, both of them have unanimously supported the recommendation of the Forest Committee. Mr. Kesava Pillai has written a minute of dissent, but that does not refer to the point I have mentioned. They are anxious to see that the forests are preserved for most useful purposes and this can be done if they are not interfered with by ignorant folk. When the department is placed under Ministers, they will be able to properly appreciate the object of the forest, and to see that the classes and the masses are benefited so long as it is not adverse to the department itself. This is only a negative certificate I give. We shall have also to see whether they will be positively useful. The Ministerial Government will properly manage this department, because there will not be unnecessary reasons for complaint when the grievances of the people are properly understood for which there is not so much chance in the case of the Executive Council as in the case of the Ministerial Government. The main part of the recommendation in the report deals with the fact that the people will take considerable interest and will be able to place the facts before the Government and such subjects therefore should be transferred. That is the scheme of the report of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State, and I submit that it is therefore proper that this should be placed in the hands of the Ministerial Government.

234 RESOLUTION RE FORESTS AND 'FOREST PRODUCE' TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECTS WITHOUT LIMITATION.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar ; Mr. Chidambaranatha Madaliyar.) [23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

"Going to the administration report for 1916-17 we can see that the question of protective staff is referred to in various pages, 50, 51 and 53. In each circle the protective staff is separately considered. We find that the protective staff is generally inefficient and unsatisfactory. I will read from the report: 'The conduct of this branch was unsatisfactory on the whole. One forester was convicted; six forest guards and two watchers were dismissed; two foresters, sixteen forest guards, forty-four watchers, eight tannadars and one plantation overseer were removed; nine foresters, seventeen forest guards, eleven watchers, six tannadars and one plantation overseer were suspended; two forest guards and one watcher were reduced. It is hoped that a modification of the "patrol system" as at present in force will have some effect in improving the conditions of service'. This is with regard to the northern circle. We find similar complaints with regard to the other circles also. This is the state of affairs that exists because sufficient care is not taken and sufficient industry is not exhibited to see that the subordinate staff are efficient to protect the forests. Even in that view I should think that the transfer to the Ministerial Government of these forests and forest produce will enable the people to take a real interest and afford the department such officers as will be able to work the department more efficiently.

"The next point that I wish to mention in connexion with this is the recent occasion given to the Forest Department to prove its utility to supply products which have been used during the war which have been exhibited in Madras. That clearly shows how far industrial forest products could be utilized for the benefit of the country and the public and it clearly shows that there is considerable scope for improvement in the utilization of forest products. That is again a point which must be placed in the hands of the Ministry so that the people at large may well know how they can utilize forest products and how they could industrially improve their position so as to improve the economic position of the country.

"There is only one other point which I wish to mention. The Industrial Department, as has been pointed out yesterday, is in charge of an Indian Member and everything is found to go on well. That is another reason why the whole of forests and forest produce should be transferred to the Ministerial Government. For all these reasons I submit that it is only proper that this should be transferred."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I second the motion. There are eighty thousand square miles of forests and they are very fairly distributed all over the province. I need hardly remind the Council that agriculture and forests are so closely related to each other that it is in the best interests of the people that they both should come under one system of supervision. As I am entirely in favour of land revenue being in charge of the Ministers, I strongly support forests being placed under the control and supervision of the Ministers. I have also to make another observation. I am one of those who think that forests have not been developed as they ought to be in a province like this where development is certainly possible and absolutely needed. There has been one consistent policy which has been adopted in the past with regard to these forests, and that I believe is more or less the policy of making the best possible revenue out of them, the highest possible income out of the forests. I feel that in the best interests of the province, particularly of the land-holding population, forests ought to be developed as much as possible even sometimes at the cost and sacrifice of revenue. As an instance I may mention that I am one of those who believe that any reckless destruction of forests for wider cultivation of tea, coffee or other industrial crops ought, in the true interests of the province, to be condemned. I believe that forests as such should be preserved to the utmost possible extent and also developed in all possible directions. For these reasons I strongly support the motion before the House."

RESOLUTION RE 'FORESTS' AND 'FOREST PRODUCE' TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECTS WITHOUT LIMITATION. 235

23RD OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Venkatapati Raju ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Your Excellency, in considering this resolution and also similar resolutions whether it is possible or not to transfer some department from the hands of the Council to the Ministers, the chief point to be considered is what is the advantage of having a transfer and what is the disadvantage in keeping it under the same system which has prevailed till now. The main difference is that just like the present Government the Executive Councils would attach more importance to the experts' advice than to public opinion. If the Ministers control this department, they will have better knowledge of the conditions of the people than the experts and they will be in touch with the people. They will have a true sense of proportion when they have to reserve a portion of the forest or to throw it open to the villagers. That will be an advantage to a greater extent than the corresponding disadvantage. It is the fault of the experts, whether in this country or elsewhere, that they have not a sense of proportion which is essential to understand the wants of the people. If this department is given to Ministers, they can understand what the experts say and they know what the people really think. With that object we request that this department or any other department should be transferred to the control of the Minister. Forests and forest produce should go along with the subject of the industries. Most of the forest produce would be serviceable for the development of indigenous industries. There may be certain considerations whether foreign exploitation and control should not be reduced and if forests are under the control of the Ministry they will safeguard Indian interests."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I wish to give two very brief reasons in support of this proposition. From list No. II which mentions that only unclassified and some protected forests should be considered as transferred subjects, one may surmise that the more important classes of forest may be thought to be endangered if forests as a whole become a transferred subject. It is commonly spoken of in the Forest Department that there has been to a large extent denudation of valuable forests and that the people of the villages in the neighbourhood or at some distance are responsible for such serious denudation. Perhaps there is an unconscious association of that fact when they say that the whole of the Forest Department should not be reserved. Possibly also of the four tests put forward in paragraph 238 it is the remediality or irremediability of mistakes that is the basis of the conclusion that we find in list No. II. It may be that it is considered that if once valuable forests are denuded it may take generations for the country to get good forests and therefore the harm caused by careless management is irremediable.

"I wish to answer the objections that I have raised. In the first place I must admit as a fact that valuable forests have been denuded and that by the grossly improper conduct of some villagers. Looking to the causes, what are they? Luckily in this matter we have the advantage of the Forest Committee's report. There they point out that the forest administration has not worked smoothly and the main difficulty is that that administration has proved a very bitter pill to the villagers and the villagers who had been accustomed to exercise certain privileges were deprived of those privileges. Facilities should be given to the people if you want to popularise the forest administration. It has been pointed out by some of the witnesses before the Committee that a lot of denudation that goes on is by way of revenge. If the Forest Department is severely worked so as to deprive the people of immemorial rights, the people get into the forests and cut down trees or set fire to them and otherwise cause damage. Therefore, in the interest of the real protection of the forests what is wanted is to make the administration popular. That is a very good reason for placing the entire Forest Department in the transferred list, because it will be more popularly administered.

"Then, as for the fear that the policy of the Ministers may be such as to encourage denudation and there may be too much pressure by the popular assembly, that is a cardinal mistake. We have no right to assume that the Ministers will yield to undue pressure and the argument based on that assumption should not find support.

"One further reason I will give and I will close. That is, as far as possible when we take a department it is rather undesirable to split the department into two parts, one reserved and one transferred. It is better to keep the department under one control. When a portion of the Forest Department is brought under list II, it is but reasonable to make the whole department a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"My attitude in this matter is the same as in that of education and industries. I do not want this department to be divided. Why I do not want it to be divided is just for the reasons I have mentioned in regard to the resolutions on education and industries. If this department was entirely a reserved subject, I would not have moved for the transfer of the control to Ministers. We are vitally concerned with all the twenty-nine subjects. If there should be a diarchy, some departments will have to be left in the reserved list and some will have to be transferred. As it is proposed in the list itself that the reserved list should be partially transferred to popular control, there seems to be very good reason why the whole should be transferred. Those reasons have been mentioned by the previous speakers. I only say instead of transferring it partially transfer it fully."

The resolution was put to the Council and agreed to.

236 RESOLUTION RE 'XIX. CIVIL JUSTICE' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. Suryanarayana Rao ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.) [23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

RESOLUTION RE 'XIX. CIVIL JUSTICE' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO:—"Your Excellency, the resolution that I have the honour to move is in these terms:—

'XIX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that No. 15. Civil Justice should be included in the list of transferred subjects.'

"As I understand from the report, paragraph 238, it is only those subjects that relate to the maintenance of law and order that are proposed to be completely reserved subjects. But with regard to the other subjects they are to be included in the transferred list. Those departments which afford most opportunity for local knowledge and social service, those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested, those in which mistakes which may occur, though serious would not be irremediable, and those which stand most in need of development are regarded as proper subjects to be transferred. With regard to civil justice, on reference to the Illustrative list II, it will be seen that it is a reserved subject. In list I you find under 5. 'Maintenance of law and order' that the administration of criminal justice including village courts should be a reserved subject but civil justice has been put down as a separate subject No. 15, and it includes "administration, including village courts, legal practitioners, law reports, local Acts and interpretation of local Acts." Civil justice has not been put down under No. 5. "Maintenance of law and order." The authors must have had very good reasons for drawing the line between civil and criminal justice. I think they were anxious that criminal justice should be exclusively a reserved subject. With regard to civil justice, they were not quite so sure, because in this very paragraph 238 they say 'nor should we expect the transfer of matters which vitally affect the well-being of the masses who may not be adequately represented in the new councils, such for example as questions of land revenue or tenant rights. As an illustration of the kind of matters which we think might be treated as provincial and those which might be regarded as transferred we have presented two specimen lists in an appendix to this report. We know that our lists cannot be exhaustive; they will not be suitable to all provinces; they may not be exactly suitable to any province—but they will serve at all events to illustrate our intentions if not also as a starting point for the deliberations of the committee. Our lists are in the main mere categories of subjects.' So I believe that the authors were not quite sure whether civil justice was to be excluded from reserved subjects or should be included, because they themselves observe that the list may not suit all provinces equally.

"Taking the history of our Presidency there is no doubt that if there is any subject in which the people take a keen interest and in which they have sufficient information, it is civil litigation. We are now considering the question of village courts, arbitration courts and panchayat courts. There is no doubt that it is the opinion of all that litigation should be minimised as far as possible and curtailed by private settlement of these matters by panchayats or arbitrators or by private individuals. It is also known that minor litigation should, as far as possible, go to village courts and that the district munsifs' courts should not have so much work with regard to petty suits.

"No doubt some difficulties would be suggested regarding the separation of functions, because for the present except munsifs' courts and the sub-courts the district courts are exercising functions both civil and criminal and the High Court has both civil and criminal jurisdiction, it might be suggested that there would be some difficulty in the separation of these functions. But even at present we are observing a distinction, because with regard to criminal cases it is the district magistrate and others that exercise jurisdiction, and with regard to civil cases it is the district court and the High Court that exercise jurisdiction. If this suggestion should lead to a separation of executive and judicial functions, civil or criminal, I think we would only welcome the change. Civil Justice is for the masses and the masses take a keen interest in the matter and the masses are anxious that litigation should be cheapened and should be made cheaper in the sense that the interference of the courts is minimised and that arbitration and other systems are encouraged. I think civil justice would fare better in the hands of Ministers than in the hands of Government proper. I, therefore, submit for the consideration of the Council that civil justice may be a transferred subject instead of being retained in the hands of the Government as per list I as a reserved subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"Your Excellency, I beg to second this resolution. Resolution No. 21 of which I have given notice is to the same effect. The whole administration report of civil justice when analysed will show that the main portion of the civil litigation of the province rests on the village courts and the small causes side of the munsifs' and subordinate judges' courts. Original suits are fairly large in number but nothing compared with the others. We have got the appellate jurisdiction of the sub-courts, district courts and the High Court which is the highest court. In this matter of civil justice even the present Government leave the whole thing practically in the hands of the High Court. In fact highest court in the land practically has charge of civil justice. Appointments and transfers of sub-judges upwards are kept with the Government, but even that is only exercised mostly in accordance with the recommendations of the High Court. The contention on this side has always been that as far as possible civil justice might be entirely left in the hands of the High Court. It is not necessary to refer to the recent Public Services Commission's report, because while distinguishing all other features and using considerable force in argument relating to peace, order and good government and also relating to the Police department, so far as civil judiciary is concerned, the Public Service Commission report makes it clear that considerable advance could be made and the charge of civil justice might be left in the hands of Indians, so much so that they would add so many Indian district and sessions judges.

RESOLUTION RE 'XIX. CIVIL JUSTICE' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT. 237

"That being so, this question of civil justice is considerably one in which keen interest is taken and the statistics for the whole of India clearly show that the Madras Province contributes largest number of suits in the whole of India. We have 39,442 cases; the total of all litigation in India is 427,302. The rent suits in Bengal added to other suits come up to that, otherwise Madras stands almost unique. The rent cases in Bengal amount a considerable number; there are a number of summary suits, about 229,000. If that is left out, it is found that Madras has practically the largest number of suits in civil courts. As I say, the small cause jurisdiction of the sub-courts and district munsifs' courts and the village courts and panchayat courts consume three-fourths of the litigation. The masses of the people are intimately connected with this litigation, and it is very proper to constitute courts which will be very near these people. Most of the suits of small cause nature must be disposed of by a Government intimately acquainted with the needs of the people. Recently village panchayat courts have been considerably added to, and Bench Courts Act has also been under consideration; and the practical effect of it will be that if original jurisdiction is exclusively given to these courts up to Rs. 50, considerable relief will be given to the other courts. As regards munsifs' courts, a close examination of the valuation of suits shows that below Rs. 100 and 200 more than 60 per cent of suits are disposed of; they are of that value.

"The more serious litigation is very much less. That portion of it also will very properly be controlled by a representative Government. Greater difficulty arises when we consider the higher courts, the sub-court, the district court and the High Court. It is there as I originally pointed out, my Lord, that Ministers will be quite willing—that has been the aim of this side of the Legislative Council—to be guided absolutely by the advice of the High Court which would be left untrammelled as much as possible. The constitution and composition of the High Court being on an Imperial basis and not affected by this Government, I submit that the proper portion of the Government which should be in charge of civil justice will be the ministerial Government. That Government will be really able to point out the sources of dissatisfaction in the administration of civil justice whether it be in the matter of execution of decrees or in the actual selection of people and other things. They would not interfere with the High Court. Just as the Government do, they will indicate the lines on which improvement might be made in the administration of civil justice and practically the hands of the High Court will be left free. It is very proper that the representative Government should be in charge of it."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO PANTULU:—"My Lord, this is one group of subjects which may come generally under the category of the departments or subjects relating to the maintenance of law and order. In this report the distinguished authors lay a great deal of stress on the fact that the transferred subjects should be such as require development and should be those in which Indians have shown special aptitude and have exhibited a great deal of interest. But they say also that the departments which deal with maintenance of law and order should be the last that should be entrusted to the popular representatives. My Lord, I do not want to challenge that position, not because it is absolutely sound but because we are anxious to see that these reforms are inaugurated on the assumptions of the authors of the report and we do not wish to do anything so far as it lies in our power or to state anything in this Council which will call into question the fundamental assumptions of the authors of that scheme. They assume that the departments which deal with the maintenance of law and order should not be transferred but only those departments that require development and those in which Indians have distinguished themselves. My Lord, perhaps most of the Honourable Members are aware that nearly one-third of India is under the administration of Native States, and that peace and order have been maintained by those in authority in the Native States and no serious harm or no harm at all has arisen. The Police department and criminal justice are administered by Indians in Native States. Therefore so far as the assumption itself goes, it seems to me that the whole group of departments which comes within this category is already administered for the whole group of departments which comes within this category is already administered elsewhere by Indians. Therefore so far as the assumption itself goes, it seems to me that the facts are against the authors of the report inasmuch as elsewhere these functions have been successfully discharged by Indians under the conditions which prevail in the Native States. Though these are facts myself and several of my Honourable Friends in this Council are perfectly willing to accept the position of the authors of the scheme and in guiding public opinion in a way which will be conducive to the success of reforms. It is for these reasons that the general trend of political opinion in this country has accepted that these departments of law, peace and good government should be excluded from the category of those which should be entrusted to the popular representatives. We do not challenge the fundamental basis of this report that the department of peace and order should be the last to be transferred. We give our adherence to that principle not because in the hands of Indians these departments will not be properly administered—perhaps they will be administered better or at least as efficiently—but merely because we do not want to raise a contention on such an essential matter. It is on that ground that my Honourable Friend's proposition with reference to the group of subjects relating to incitements to crime, seditious meetings and the Press and Arms Acts did not find support; it was not because we had any apprehension but because the authors' fundamental proposition was one which we were not willing to challenge.

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.) [23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

" Having said that, with your Excellency's permission I would say why civil justice should be excluded from this category. It will be within the recollection of most of the Honourable Members that in the evidence which was given before the Public Service Commission only five or six years ago all opinions were unanimous, almost unanimous in pronouncing that if there was one subject or department in which Indians had distinguished themselves to the satisfaction of very eminent authorities both in this country and in England it was in the department of Justice, civil justice especially. Sir Ralph Benson furnished two statements to the Royal Commission which showed that the whole bulk of litigation was disposed of by Indian judges, I mean the whole bulk of civil litigation. Then the Chief Justice also made a statement very complimentary to the Indian Judges. I submit therefore that this one department comes within the category of those departments in which Indians have specially distinguished themselves. We may look at the organization of the department. The High Court has several Indian judges. The sub-judges are Indians and the munsifs are all Indians and there are number of Indian district judges. The Judicial staff is wholly Indian. This is one of the reasons of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission for a wider employment of Indians in the field of civil justice.

" The second point is that the powers of the Local Government in regard to civil justice are very circumscribed. So far as the High Court is concerned, it makes the appointments of district munsifs. Subordinate judges are appointed, I take it on the recommendations of the High Court, by the Government, and the district judges are appointed by the Government. Therefore the powers of the Government in regard to matters relating to civil justice are comparatively very few. Partly it is a question of patronage with reference to appointments above that of district munsifs. Myself and most of the Honourable Members would like to see that these appointments are made by the High Court. Those who are in immediate touch with the administration of justice should select the judges. We would not be averse if this power is immediately transferred to the High Court. There seems to be no question as regards civil justice except that of making the appointments. I know the Local Government have some other powers, they have to approve of the rules made by the High Court, and they have powers under various enactments of issuing rules and generally reviewing the work of the judges and they have various residuary powers which are reserved to them under various enactments both local and imperial. If there is one department where Indians have distinguished themselves it has been admitted that they have done so in this. Where the department is already manned by them and where there is absolutely no doubt that the Government are assisted by the Judges of the High Court in making these appointments and the High Court is in direct charge of the administration of criminal and civil justice, it seems to me that there is no harm, no public injury if this department is placed on the transferred list.

" Therefore I wish to explain this position with reference to the group of departments relating to peace and order. We acquiesce in the fundamental assumption in the report that this should be last department to be transferred. We are quite willing to give our adherence to that principle, not because Indians will be incompetent to discharge these functions or there will be public danger, but because that is the assumption of the authors of the report, and we do not wish to go into the fundamentals now and to challenge the principles of this report in order that there may be no delay in giving effect to this report. This is the one department in which Indians have specially distinguished themselves and this comes within the principles which the authors of the report have laid down for the guidance of the committee. Therefore, I wholeheartedly support the resolution. I trust the Honourable Members also quite appreciate our readiness to fall in with the view of the authors of the report, while making recommendations such as this, contained in this resolution."

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" My Lord, I am opposed to this resolution. I would leave civil justice as a reserved subject, not because I have any misgivings about its proper administration by Indians, but I would leave it as a reserved department because some departments have to be left as reserved subjects. The National Congress in its special session resolved that only three departments should be reserved, Law, Police and Justice, and all the other departments should be transferred. Congressmen in loyalty to the Congress should be consistent. I was opposed to any of the three departments being reserved because it implied that there was something about these departments which necessitate their continuing to be administered by the Executive Council and there would be some danger if they were transferred. That inference must follow if you reserve one portion to the Council. That was not the idea of the framers of the resolution nor the idea of the members who supported it. I would have said: 'If you want to leave three departments as reserved departments, tell the Government here is the list, select any three departments; it is immaterial what departments you take as long as you confine yourself to three.' That would have been much better than leaving any specific departments as reserved and transferring the others to the transferred list. But in regard to any system of diarchy the question of division of subjects comes in. We do not care for diarchy, but that is the only solution that is found for the gradual transfer of responsibility to popular control. Therefore some departments have to be kept as reserved and some transferred to the Ministers. Amongst those that are to be reserved, according to the Congress resolution I would leave Law and Justice and Police during the transitory period. For that reason I would oppose this resolution and not for any other reason. The first resolution on the agenda of this Council was in fact the resolution of the Congress, but Your Excellency has not allowed that to be moved because it looked like an omnibus resolution. If you take one department after another and transfer it, the cumulative effect of that will be that almost all the departments will be transferred, because with regard to each subject you are quite ready to ask that it should be transferred and you can give very good reasons for doing so. I myself agree with all that has been said by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao in support of transferring civil justice, but at the same time some departments should be left as reserved; and what would you leave after your deliberations are over? If the result of your deliberations be that all the departments should be transferred, you are going against the spirit of their deliberations and discussions should be this, that we should leave a fair number of departments to the Executive Council and transfer a good number of departments to the control of the ministers. As I said in my very first speech, I would personally like these two Governments to have equal powers equally balanced between them and one should not be heavier than the other. On that principle alone I oppose this resolution."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO PANTULU :—" My Lord, I should like to make a personal explanation with reference to the observation of the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan. I should only point out we are not transferring the departments, we are making proposals and stating the case as to which particular departments might with advantage be transferred and why. It may be that after the reshuffling that has to be done by the committee some departments may be transferred and some may not. It has been suggested that a wrong set of departments has been proposed for transfer. I do not know what subjects would be eventually transferred. It may be that the committee may decide to transfer some that are on the list and also some which are not on the list. We simply state the case for the transfer of civil justice on the principles laid down in the report. I am as conscious as the Honourable Member himself as to what we have done elsewhere."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO PANTULU :—" I appreciate the attitude taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan. There is something to be said in favour of the position he has taken. He has stated clearly that there can be no objection to transferring the department of civil justice but his position is that in so far as we proceed upon the assumption of the devolution of responsibility only in respect of certain subjects and in so far as three departments Law, Justice and Police were agreed to be reserved even at the last session of the Congress, why not confine ourselves to that position? Why should we distinguish between criminal and civil justice? Why should there be an exception created in respect of civil justice? That is his position. In the first place, we are handicapped in not knowing what the attitude of the Government is likely to be or that of the members of the committee. If there is a fair indication of the support which they are likely to give regarding the transfer of various subjects which have been recommended by non-official members, it will no doubt be necessary for them to pause for a while and see whether they cannot stop with the list already transferred and to pause for a while and see whether they cannot stop with the list already transferred and to pause for a while and see whether they cannot stop with the list already transferred and to pause for a while and see whether they cannot stop with the list already transferred. Not whether they cannot desist from asking for the transfer of the department of civil justice. Not knowing exactly how the members of Your Excellency's Government would in the first instance deal with the various recommendations which have been made by the non-official members of the Council regarding the transfer of the various departments, it is necessary for us to consider each subject on its merits independently of other considerations. We all accept the principle that there should be some subjects reserved and some transferred. If we proceed without an adequate conception of the nature of the subjects, we will probably come to wrong conclusions."

" I am not able to follow the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao when he stated that civil justice is one of the subjects which has a bearing on the subject of maintenance of law and order, but which he would like to see excluded because Indians have distinguished themselves in the department of civil justice even according to the report of the Public Services Commission. The authors of the report have made it fairly clear in the illustrative list; we need not have any apprehension that the department of Civil Justice is likely to be brought in under the description 'maintenance of law and order.' It is better to have a clear conception with regard to that. As to maintenance of law and order there has been a fair consensus of opinion in this country that they may, for the time being, during the transitional period, be reserved. But Illustrative List No. I classifies those subjects: and we may take it that the authors of the report paid some consideration to it. Under the head 'maintenance of law and order,' you find the following subjects referred to: (i) administration of criminal justice including village courts, (ii) police, including railway police, (iii) prisons, (iv) criminal tribes, (v) working of particular Acts, e.g., incitements to crime, seditious meetings, infanticide, press, arms, European vagrancy, (vi) poisons, (vii) gambling, (viii) dramatic performances and cinematographs, (ix) coroners. These are the subjects dealt with under the head 'maintenance of law and order.' So far as civil justice is concerned, it is dealt with as a separate subject in clause (xv) and it includes 'administration, including village courts, legal practitioners, law reports, local Acts and interpretation of local Acts.' According to Illustrative List II, village courts—civil and criminal—are transferred subjects. Therefore, it is clear that we need not be under the impression that civil justice will be brought under the head 'maintenance of law and order.'

" That being so, is there any reason for excluding civil justice from the control of ministers? I do not think any argument can be advanced for the retention of it in the hands of the Executive Council. There may be only one argument. It may be stated that it is somewhat difficult to differentiate between civil justice and criminal justice, that the agency by which civil justice and criminal justice are being administered is one and the same, and that it would result in some complication. But it is only when we come to the District and Sessions Judges

240 RESOLUTION RE 'XIX. CIVIL JUSTICE' TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; Mr. Siva Rao; [23RD OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Venkatapati Raju.]

that is there a duplication of functions as regards civil justice and criminal justice? So far as Subordinate Judges are concerned as also the machinery below that, they deal only with civil justice. So far as the magistrates are concerned, they deal with criminal justice. It is only when we come to District Judges that we find a combination of functions. If we accept the principle that it is desirable to hand over this department to ministers, there is no difficulty in separating the two functions. Even independently of that, I am one of those who would suggest that this combination may be removed as early as possible. I think we are all agreed that the method by which civil courts exercise civil functions is satisfactory, and that it satisfies the litigants more than anything else. If it is possible to separate the functions—it would not be very costly to appoint separate officers to exercise criminal functions and separate officers to deal with civil justice, it would lead to a better state of things and improve the efficiency. In support of this position I would only recall the attention of Honourable Members who are well conversant with the administration of law to the fact that this combination of functions, namely, the trial of sessions cases and the trial and disposal of civil cases, leads to difficulties in the administration of justice. Therefore this objection is not an insuperable one in the way of accepting this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—" I wish to say a few words in support of this resolution. I have tried to follow the reasoning of the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan, but I have to say with regret that I cannot understand it nor can I appreciate the arguments advanced by him. He starts by saying that the basis of the proposed scheme of the illustrious authors is that there should be some differentiation, a diarchy, and some division of functions between the two heads reserved and transferred. He asks 'if we take away one by one all the departments from the reserved list, what will be left reserved in the hands of the Executive Government or Council? That is not the principle on which these matters should be decided. The right principles which ought to guide us in classifying the subjects will be those laid down by the illustrious framers in paragraph 238. Applying those principles to the resolution in question, civil justice should be classified as a transferred subject. One of the principles laid down here is 'those in which Indians have shown themselves to be keenly interested'; in other words, those in which Indians have distinguished themselves. This is one of those subjects in which Indians have not merely shown keen interest but have distinguished themselves. It is enough to quote in this connexion the unanimous testimony of the witnesses who were examined by the Public Service Commission which has been referred to by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao. There is also another test laid down, viz., 'those in which mistakes which may occur though serious would not be irremediable.' This is also a department in which mistakes even if they occur will not be irremediable. It fulfills all the tests for being classified as a transferred subject. The Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan asks what should be reserved subjects according to us. The framers of the report themselves throw some light. They say that law and order should not be transferred in the first instance. The illustrious authors have taken care to classify under law and order: criminal justice, police, and other connected subjects, and they have taken care to exclude civil justice. In another connexion they also say that the basic obligation of the Provincial Government is to secure law and order. In a matter like this we may agree that law and order should form the last subject that should be transferred to ministers."

"One other consideration which arises is, which is the agency which is at present administering civil justice. I can unhesitatingly say that civil justice is mostly in the hands of Indians, and absolutely no harm can be done by transferring it to popular control. I may say that it is a standing cry in this country that the court-fee charged on plaints and documents filed in court in the mufassal is prohibitive and the Judicial department is making too much profit out of this concern and it is a question whether these fees should not be reduced. Then as regards the provincial judicial departments, the question is whether their prospects should not be improved. Which is the agency which is most 'suitable' to deal with the administration of civil justice? I need only refer to the evidence which Sir Ralph Benson gave before the Public Services Commission. It is: 'to put the matter shortly, so far as the decision of civil cases, original or appellate, that is so far as purely judicial work is concerned, it could be done quite satisfactorily by 'Natives of India' of proved merit and capacity and character though not members of the Indian Civil Service."

"It should be clearly realized that by far the greater part of the work is in the hands of Indians, and the proportion in their hands is steadily and rapidly increasing under the existing system."

"There is again the question of village panchayats which is part of the administration of civil justice and which should be left in the hands of popular representatives. Village panchayats and arbitration courts ought to be at once placed in the hands of the popular representatives."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—" Your Excellency, I regret I have to rise to oppose this resolution moved by my honourable friend. The question is not whether we are capable of managing this department or that. So far as Indians are concerned, they are capable of administering every department not only provincial but imperial as well. The only question is whether we should accept the division suggested by the illustrious authors. They want some subjects to be reserved, whatever subjects we can possibly say that they can take up. We say law, justice and police can be taken, because the authors are anxious to have them. Therefore let us give law, justice and order. If you say there should be no division, I am in favour of it; but when we agree to division I do not agree with the position taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao, that we agree to their proposition but we want this amendment as regards civil justice. What is it that we can do in the matter of civil justice which we cannot do in the matter of criminal justice? Both departments are worked by Indians. What is the reason that prompted our friends not to rise to second the resolution under police? The only point here is the appointment of Sub-Judges. There is already a complaint that it is mostly manned by lawyers and lawyers are interested. We do not care for the patronage of appointments of District Munsifs and Sub-Judges. The Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao said not only the appointment of Magistrates but of Judges should be transferred to the High Court. When we want to give law, justice and order to Government, let us do it ungrudgingly."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" What seems to be the underlying idea of Honourable Members is this: I do not think there is any difference of opinion. All are agreed that the popular government can control and take over this subject and on that question there is no difference of opinion. The Congress resolution which was quoted by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan and to which he and others including myself have been parties distinctly stated that civil justice can be part of the work of ministers. Against my own name there is a resolution that law, justice and police should be transferred subjects. I say they are subjects which could possibly be transferred. We have the terms of reference to the Franchise Committee and the Subjects Committee. They are asked to consider what should be first transferred and what should be ultimately transferred. Ultimately all subjects should be transferred. As a first step we say civil justice should be transferred. On that there is a good deal of agreement. If we have some assurance, we may be able to tell the Committee that in our opinion if the subjects that we mention are going to be transferred we will be willing to leave the others as reserved subjects. But as stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao there is no such guarantee that all the subjects that we ask should be transferred will be given to us. Therefore this subject of civil justice should be a make-way. The question is how the opinion of the Council is to be taken. The question is whether as a first step this is to go in. We ought not to act on the supposition that the other subjects recommended for transfer are agreed to. Civil justice is a subject fit to be transferred much more fit than other subjects suggested by us for transfer."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" The Honourable gentleman offers an ingenious interpretation but I am obliged to stick to plain English in presiding over this meeting. I must put the resolution according to the wording."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Your Excellency I wish to explain my attitude towards this resolution before the Council vote on it. As a practical body of people I think the Council would be well advised in adopting the attitude suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. Yaqub Hasan. I will also add that there must be a complete separation of judicial and executive functions before the department of justice is placed entirely in charge of the Executive Council. With that restriction I support the attitude of opposition to the motion."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—" The resolution might be withdrawn."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO :—" As there is a difference of opinion the resolution may be put to the vote."

The resolution was put and lost.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar demanded a division which was taken with the result that seven voted for and ten against the resolution. The following was the division :—

RESOLUTION RE QUESTIONS RELATING TO BUSINESS CONCERNS TO BE 'TRANSFERRED.'

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur :—" Will your Excellency take up No. IX*?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—" If the Council will allow, I have no objection. (The members said that the resolution No. IX* might be taken up.) We will now take up resolution No. IX* and next to that we will take up the resolution in regard to railways."

242 RESOLUTION RE QUESTIONS RELATING TO BUSINESS CONCERNS TO BE 'TRANSFERRED.'

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Sir Gordon Fraser.) [23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"The resolution which I have to move is in these terms:—

'IX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms, questions relating to business concerns (item No. 21 of list No. I of the same appendix) should be transferred to the control of ministers.'

"This is subject No. 21 'business concerns, banks, insurance and other companies' in Illustrative List No. I; in the remarks column it is stated 'Power of legislation to remain with the Government of India. Provinces to have such administrative powers as Government of India may permit.' Even as a subject of provincial concern some restrictions have been laid down. My resolution, if it is carried, will be subject to these restrictions so far as the orders of the Government of India are concerned. In regard to the preceding subject No. 20, 'co-operative credit' which is on the transferred list, a similar remark has been made 'The power of legislation normally to remain with the Government of India, though amendments to the principal Acts might be permissible to the provinces. Administration to be provincial.' Even in business concerns the administration will be provincial. I can quite understand why this limitation has been put here. It is a broad question which affects the entire country at large just as the question of industrial matters affects the whole country. In my opinion, these matters, business concerns and banks and commerce are related so much with industrial matters that they cannot be separated but must go together. If there was no diarchy these two departments would have been in one hand, industries as well as banking and commercial matters. There are many port-folios and they are at present divided amongst four persons. Under the new system there will be two members of the Council and two ministers and all the port-folios will be divided amongst them in similar manner. These subjects should go into one hand as it would have been the case if there was no diarchy. If industrial matters are to be a transferred subject and if banking and commerce are reserved subjects, I anticipate great difficulty and so I move that this should be a transferred subject.

"My other reason for suggesting it is this. This is a great and vital matter. In support of my proposal I need only quote the Report itself. The authors of the Report have admitted that 'On all grounds a forward policy in industrial development is urgently called for, not merely to give India economic stability, but in order to satisfy the aspirations of her people who desire to see her stand before the world as a well-poised up-to-date country'."

The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser:—"May I know what paragraph you are quoting?"

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Paragraph 236. Later on they say that in order to attain this end more attention should be paid to industrial and fiscal questions than is possible under the present system of Government. It is therefore naturally desired that these subjects should be placed under the Indian element in the Executive Government and not under the Executive Council. The authors of the report have grasped the situation thoroughly and have perfectly well stated the feelings of the Indians in this matter, and I cannot better support my resolution than by quoting the authors themselves. The question of capital comes under this head, because no industries can get on without investment of capital. There can be no investments of capital unless the control of all the money matters and banks is placed in the same hands as that of industrial matters. Regarding capital the authors of the Report say: 'We have been assured that Indian capital will be forthcoming once it is realized that it can be invested with security and profit in India; a purpose that will be furthered by the provision of increased facilities for banking and credit.' They have thus treated industrial matters and banking and credit together. That is one reason why I want them to remain together. Again they say 'conditions are ripe for the development of new and for the revival of old industries on European lines; and the real enthusiasm for industries, which is not confined to the ambitions of a few individuals but rests on the general desire to see Indian capital and labour applied jointly to the good of the country, seems to us of the happiest augury.' Again, they say speaking of particular industries 'the old metallurgical and chemical industries of the country, which have fallen even more completely into decay through the importation of foreign articles, also offer opportunity for profitable investment on a large scale if conducted on modern lines.' So all along it will be noticed that there is a general desire on the part of Indians to take their proper share in the matter, both fiscal and industrial. There will be great disappointment if they are not given a free hand in this matter.

"Speaking of capital, of course, we have certain difficulties to get over in so far as Indian capital is not flowing into industries as much as we desire to have it. There are good reasons offered and those reasons have been taken note of by the authors of the report. One of these reasons is that there is no certainty of success owing to the indifference of Government towards it. The authors of the Report say: 'We do not know whether he—that is the Indian politician and industrialist—pauses to reflect that these industries will be largely financed by foreign capital attracted by the tariff, although we have evidence that he has not learnt to appreciate the advantages of foreign capital.' I do not agree that we have not learnt to appreciate the advantages of foreign capital. We do know that the industrial development of India is to a very large extent due to foreign capital invested here through the British merchants and industrialists. It is not true that we do not appreciate it. We do appreciate it. 'But whatever economic fallacy,' the authors say, 'underlies his reasoning, these are his firm beliefs; and though he may be willing to concede the possibility that he is wrong, he will not readily concede that it is our business to decide the matter for him.' That is to say, it is not the business of the present form of Government to decide the matter for him. They say: 'He believes that as long as we continue to decide for him, we shall decide in the interests of England and not according to his wishes; and he points to the debate in the House of Commons on the differentiation of the cotton excise in support of his contention.' There they give what exactly we feel in this matter. Whatever the Executive Government may decide, it would not carry the same conviction in the minds of Indians as it would do if the same thing came from the minister; because England itself is a large industrial country, it is the pioneer of industries, we look to England for guidance and for help in all these matters, but at the same time it will not be human if the people of England do not look to their interests first and then to our interests. That is only natural and when I ask for this department to be placed under Ministers, I am only echoing the feelings of a very large number of people in this country. They feel that this is just the time when there should be a revival of industry and commerce and Indians should take their part in it and they should receive all the encouragement that will be possible for the Government to give. This Report wants the Government to give that encouragement.

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao;

"The British people who have put in so much money in these industries and, as they say, have so much stake in the country need not be afraid that it will injure their interests in any way. I will only echo what the authors of the Report want us to see in practice. They say: 'No less is it the duty of Indian politicians to respect the expectations which have been implicitly held out; to remember how India has profited by commercial development which only British capital and enterprise achieved; to bethink themselves that though the capital invested in private enterprises was not borrowed under any assurance that the existing form of Government would endure, yet the favourable terms on which money was obtained for India's development were undoubtedly affected by the fact of British rule; and to abstain from advocating differential treatment aimed not so much at promoting Indian as at injuring British commerce.' What the authors of the Report advise us to do I can tell them we are prepared to do, whatever our attitude may be against the importation of foreign goods, and whatever obstacle we may put against the importation of those goods. For example what has Australia done in the matter of tanned skins and hides? A great prohibitive tariff has been imposed against tanned skins and hides. Our tanned skins go to Japan and America but they are prohibited in Australia. We might have a tariff against some Colonies in order to protect our own industries as Australia has done to protect its tanning industry. Whatever we may do to limit the importation of foreign goods and to protect our own industries there will not be any obstacle between race and race in India itself. English and Indians will compete amongst themselves on an equal basis. The disabilities which South Africa has placed against Indian merchants will not be introduced in India, at any rate they will not be introduced during the course of the transitory period. They will surely not be introduced after full responsible government is restored even though we will continue to be handicapped by the British people. There is no denying the fact that the English people have had training as merchants for a number of centuries, they have organizing power, they are very enterprising and they are bolder than ourselves. All these qualities which they possess will give them an advantage, but we will take our own chance and compete with them and we do not propose that any artificial restriction should be placed in India itself between race and race simply on racial grounds. That being the case, I do not see why foreign capital, British capital, should not continue to be attracted to India even after the subject is transferred to the control of the Indian element in the Government. The authors of the Report anticipate—they themselves say—that if Indians think foreign capital will not be attracted they are mistaken. The very tariffs that we may impose will attract foreign capital to the protected industries. Many foreigners will think of going to India and start manufactories here that would pay them. It will bring more capital and I am quite sure that Indian capital would be handicapped in that way. But that is not a matter to be discussed now. We Indians are quite alive to the fact that, unless we ourselves are enterprising enough and train ourselves for all the industrial development, we cannot depend upon any artificial props for giving us the prosperity, commercial and industrial prosperity, that we desire. I therefore propose that this department be transferred just as the industries department is proposed to be transferred."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO seconded the resolution.

At this stage the Council adjourned for a short interval.

The Council re-assembled at 3 p.m.

The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser:—"I wish to say a few words on the resolution before the Council. I warn the Council against supporting this resolution. I do not propose to discuss the relative merits of having the subjects of banking and insurance companies under the Ministers or the Governor in Council. But I warn the members that even at the present moment capital is getting shy in coming to India. There is a tendency more the other way."

RESOLUTION RE QUESTIONS RELATING TO BUSINESS CONCERNS TO BE 'TRANSFERRED'

(Sir Gordon Fraser; Mr. Ramachandra Rao;
the President; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.)

[23RD OCTOBER 1918.]

There is a tendency to realize and remit money to England for investment there and I would strongly advise the Honourable Members of this Council not to accept anything which would accentuate this feeling.

"I oppose the resolution also because I do not consider that past and present experience justifies the transfer of these subjects of banking and insurance companies to Ministers. The Honourable Mover of the resolution quoted in support of his contention from paragraph 336 and added that the authors of the report had so thoroughly grasped the situation that he could not do better than quote them in support of his arguments. I think that these were his words. I am also in the same position. I cannot do better than quote paragraph 336 in support of the arguments that I advance against the transfer. If you refer to paragraph 336 you will find that it opens by saying:—'The ineffective attempt to boycott British goods and the losses and disappointments occasioned by the failures of indigenous enterprises, started with high hopes and inspiring motives, were followed by the more serious failures of Indian banks in the Punjab and Bombay. Side by side with this went on the steady progress of enterprises under British control and a marked expansion of foreign trade. We feel no surprise that there remained a feeling of bitterness among the advanced party. But the moral of these disastrous adventures is one for all parties to read. The people have recognized their inability to carry out their own programme without the help and guidance of Government: and they confine themselves for the most part to pressing their claims for state assistance and for a policy of tariff discrimination against foreign imports.' Referring to the other paragraph quoted, namely 338, the distinguished writers of the report state in that paragraph that India's capital has not been generally available:—'In the past and partly as a result of recent Swadeshi experiences, India's capital has not generally been readily available; among some communities at least there is apparent distaste for practical training, and a comparative weakness of mutual trust.' I do not quote these passages from the report in any spirit of antagonism but only to put this point forward in the nature of a warning. We are entirely dependent upon foreign capital for almost all our enterprises. If I should start an enterprise I am entirely dependent on outside capital, not on Indian capital. I would therefore strongly advise the Indian members of the Council to accept this position and allow the question of business control to remain as a reserved subject. Later on conditions may change, but at first I should think that it would be a false move to accentuate the present feeling which some non-official members who are not businessmen do not realize the existence of. But this feeling does exist; and to accentuate it under the present conditions would, I think, be a very unsound policy."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—I have been in some difficult position to understand the attitude taken up by the Honourable Mover and the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser. As regards the particular subjects of insurance companies, banking concerns and other companies the remarks against that particular item show that the power of legislation would remain with the Government of India."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Honourable Mover has said that he does not propose to interfere with the power of legislation."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"That being eliminated what power do the Provincial Governments have? A further remark is made that the provinces ought to exercise such powers as the Government of India may permit. It seems to me, my Lord, that we are not in a position to appreciate what it is we are being asked to accept—whether it should be a provincial subject or a transferred subject. That is my difficulty. It seems to me that all these considerations of capital coming into this country or staying outside, according as it is a reserved subject or a transferred subject seem to me academic with great deference to my Honourable Colleagues who have spoken on the subject. That is my difficulty in recording my vote on this resolution."

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur:—"Your Excellency, as pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao there is very little in this line that is being transferred by the Government of India to the Provincial Government. It is mentioned in the remarks column that the power of legislation will remain with the Government of India and in the matter of administration the provinces will have as much administrative power as the Government of India may permit. So far as the particular subject such as banking, insurance companies and commercial matters are concerned we have very limited power. At first it occurred to me to move that this subject might be made entirely provincial. But I did not move a resolution to that effect. I want this subject to be transferred even with the limitations imposed."

"As to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser I, as a merchant, would be reluctant to suggest any steps that would constitute a false move and that would drive away capital from India. I do not want capital to be driven away. I do not see how by the mere fact that one little subject is to be placed in the hands of Ministers instead of in the hands of the Executive Council will create widespread feeling of insecurity that will prevent capital from going into India. I am not at all afraid of that. In fact, capital did come to India even when the British had nothing to do with the governance of this country. They came here as merchants in the days of the John Company. They established themselves as traders and through trade they occupied the country. When the British enterprise was so very great and so very strong that it overcame all difficulties then, will it now fight shy as regards capital coming into India, simply because a Minister, instead of the Executive Council, is to deal with this subject? If there is any tendency for the capital not to flow into this country there must be other reasons for it. If the remittances are being made Home instead of capital coming into this country, there must be other reasons and not because there is to be a transfer of this department."

"As regards the failure of certain banks some time ago there have been causes for it which I need not enter into here. The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser has quoted the Report against me. I may tell him that the very paragraph that he read says in the opening portion that the Indian capital feels shy and later on the authors of the report say that the Indian capital will come in if people feel confident about the matter. I do not think that the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser has made out his case any the stronger by quoting from the same report that I have quoted from. He has quoted the preliminary remarks which lead to the conclusions which I have quoted. I need not say much about this. As it is, very little is proposed to be given to the Provincial Governments as regards this department. But I want that that little should be in the same hands as the one which deal with industrial matters. I do not think that the departments should be with the Executive Council. With these words I commend the resolution."

The resolution was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser demanded a poll which was taken with the following result:—

For		Against
The Hon'ble	Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar.	The Hon'ble	Sir Gordon Fraser.
"	Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju.	"	the Most Rev. John Aelen.
"	Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur.	"	the Rev. G. Pittendrigh.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The resolution has been carried six voting for and five against. I should like to ascertain from the Council what resolutions remain to be moved, so that we may measure our business. I leave resolution No. I out of consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I propose to drop resolution No. XXVII† with one word of explanation."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"You must either move it or not."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I think a word of personal explanation may be allowed. We are entitled to ask for the whole, but we only put forward a small item."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What about resolution No. XXVIII‡?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"It may be dropped."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What about No. III*?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I propose to move it."

RESOLUTION RE LAND ACQUISITION TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What about resolution No. VI*?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I propose to move it."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Does not land acquisition come under land revenue?"

Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"It is dealt with in the Land Revenue Department."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We have already decided to transfer it, as we have decided the fate of the Land Revenue Department."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"That item may be put separately."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I have no objection. Will you move it?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"I formally move the following resolution:—

"VI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of 'Land acquisition' should be a transferred subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar seconded the resolution.

The resolution was put and agreed to by the non-official members present.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The whole thing was merely a technical point whether it was under land revenue or not. I now come to resolution No. XIII*. I do not think the Honourable Gentleman wished to move it."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"No."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"What about resolution No. XIV†?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"No."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We come to resolution No. XVI†. Does the Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad wish to move it?"

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Yes."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Then that remains to be taken up. We come to resolution No. XXX. I do not think the Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao wishes to move it."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"No."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Then there is resolution No. XXXIII‡. Do you wish to move it?"

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Yes."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Now we come to XXXVI‡, XXXVII‡ and XXXVIII‡. I have no instructions from the Hon'ble Mr. Sadasiva Bhat about these resolutions. I propose to let them drop."

RESOLUTION RE AGRICULTURE TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"What about resolution No. XXXIV?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It has been taken up."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"That refers to agriculture?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Does not that go with land revenue; if not will the Honourable Gentleman move it formally? We will take a vote."

The Hon'ble Mr. V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to move—"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju: seconded the resolution.

The resolution was put and agreed to by the non-official members present.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That takes us to resolutions XXXVI‡ and XXXVII‡. The Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar is not present here. But we shall ask him later on about it. I have seen him here to-day. That leaves us with resolutions Nos. III*, XVI† and XXXIII‡. This disposes of the printed agenda paper."

RESOLUTION RE SUBJECTS IN LIST II OF APPENDIX II TO BE TRANSFERRED.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"May I have a word on the first part of resolution No. X*."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"You would like to have a decision on the point."

The Hon'ble Mr. M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Yes. I beg to move the first part of resolution No. X*, which is as follows:—"

X (first part.) 'The non-official members of this Council recommend that in the opinion of this Council the portfolios relating to the subjects mentioned in illustrative list II of Appendix II (printed at page 177 of the Report on Constitutional Reforms) should be immediately committed to the control of ministers as suggested in paragraphs 218 and 219 of the report.'"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I beg to second the resolution."

The resolution was put and agreed to by the non-official members present.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"I should like to move the first portion of resolution No. XXIV† regarding the police employed in detective duties, i.e., the village police."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That resolution does not include the village police. We cannot put it now."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—"The reports of the village police are the basis of all police actions. If Your Excellency rules me out of order it is all right. But I want the point to be recorded."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"That leaves us with resolutions III*, XVI† and XXXIII‡. I want now to proceed to the supplementary agenda paper § before us. This includes all the resolutions which were not placed on the printed agenda paper on the special ground that they referred to matters relating to the subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List No. 1. the Provincial Governments should be given a free hand. But I do not think that this is a specific resolution. The resolution is not worded sufficiently definitely to claim a place on the order paper. Next comes the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar regarding the administration and control of railways, and also one in the name of the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao dealing with railways. I think that the better resolution is in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao. It is clearer and more definite. I therefore propose to take it up first, i.e., the resolution No. IV on the list*. Then there remains the question of Income-tax. I would suggest that it is not worth while to discuss the resolution on Income-tax. That is an Imperial subject and I would suggest that it should be left alone. The only resolution therefore that I wish to take up in the supplemental list is the resolution in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao. That leaves us with one resolution in the supplemental list and three on the printed agenda paper."

RESOLUTION RE CONTROL AND ADMINISTRATION OF RAILWAYS.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I beg to move

'IV (supplemental). The non-official members of this Council recommend that the control and administration of railways in a province should, subject to such general control of Governor-General in Council as may be decided upon, be a Provincial subject and should be included in Illustrative List No. I of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms.'

"Honourable Members would have noticed that according to the scheme of this report there are two lists which have been appended to the report illustrative of the subjects proposed to be transferred, one to the Provincial Governments, the second list suggesting the departments which in the opinion of the distinguished authors of the report may be immediately transferred to the control of the Ministers. They proceed to state in paragraph 238 of the report that these lists are provisional and should be discussed in the Legislative Council. So, my Lord, it is open to us to suggest both inclusions and exclusions in regard to either list. I propose to suggest that, subject to the control of the Imperial Government, the railways should be placed in the list of provincial subjects.

"The whole subject of railway administration has exercised the public mind for a good length of time; but what I propose to say is not to assert any right on behalf of the Provincial Government, independently of the general control over railway administration by the Government of India. It has been stated more than once in this Council that, owing to want of powers on the part of Provincial Governments, the railway administrations are not amenable to Provincial Governments in any matter affecting the convenience of the travelling public and in the rectification of the numerous complaints in regard to passenger traffic and goods traffic and generally in regard to matters which promote public convenience and safety. The whole subject of control over railway administrations has been discussed in this Council more than once. In April 1916 I gave notice of a resolution in these terms:—

"XIII. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a representation should be made to the Government of India that the powers of the Local Government should be enlarged in regard to the control, the administration and construction of railways in this Presidency, more especially

(a) by the reconstitution of the Railway Secretariat of the Government or by providing the Government in some other manner with an expert adviser in railway matters;

(b) by empowering the Local Government to deal with all complaints from the travelling public against the railway administrations in this province and to issue such instructions to them as the Government may think it necessary to remove such complaints, and generally to exercise the same control in railway matters as before the abolition of the Railway Secretariat; and

(c) by giving a free hand to the Local Government in the development and construction of district board railways."

"The last point really covers the two resolutions of which notice has been given by my two Honourable friends Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao and Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar. Now, my Lord, the whole question is whether the administration of railways should be centred in the Government of India and in the Railway Board. There is a volume of literature on the subject such as that which appeared in the press from time to time—that this centralization of control has been detrimental to public interests and people have been complaining that the Local Government have been absolutely powerless as against the railway administrations and their boards either here or at Home to compel them to do their duty by the travelling public. At the time I moved this resolution I brought to the notice of the Honourable Members that the present powers of the Local Government were very little—the present powers of delegation under the Indian Railway Act. I went into the question of the unsympathetic attitude sometimes assumed by the railway administrations in regard to the construction of district board railways in which not only your Excellency's Government but every district board is interested. I also brought to the notice of this Council various matters connected with railway travelling during the last several years by means of interpellation and resolutions—matters connected with overcrowding of trains, the situation of platforms and waiting rooms, the question of level-crossings and various other questions in which the Local Government with their local knowledge and influence should be in a position to exercise a healthy control over the Railway Board and the Railway administrations. Facilities for making the local knowledge useful are not afforded under the existing scheme. I pointed out that the position of the Local Government ought to be improved and that they should have certain administrative powers. If the Local Government had powers, they could bring pressure to bear upon local railway administrations to serve the public much better than they are doing. I also brought to the notice of your Excellency's Government that in the construction of district board railways the Local Government were handicapped in pressing schemes of certain district board railways, because matters have practically to be settled by the Railway Boards and not by the Local Government. I need not repeat the arguments urged by me on that occasion. The Honourable Members can look into that debate on the 6th April 1916 and see the arguments used on that occasion. I adopt every word of what I then said in support of my present contention that the provincial administrations should have a legitimate share of control and influence in railway matters so that this centralization in railway matters might be reduced to that extent. Your Excellency's Government accepted that resolution and the fact that you accepted it is a fair indication that all I have stated on that occasion was one that was sympathetically considered by your Excellency's Government. In moving on the present occasion the same subject I take it that, so far as your Excellency's Government are concerned, you are at one with the non-official members in desiring to see that your powers are enlarged. I do not think that I am justified in taking up any more time of the Council on this subject. I only wish to state that I have not suggested that this should be a transferred subject. At present, we should be satisfied if the powers of your Excellency's Government are improved and if your Government get your legitimate position as a Local Government and that the power of control over railway matters in this Presidency is conceded to your Government on this occasion. It is an important occasion in which the reorganization of the Local Government is under consideration and I think that unless we urge this particular question at present and see that this is included in the provincial list we shall be missing a very good opportunity to enlarge the powers of the Local Government in railway matters. On these grounds I move this resolution and I trust that it will be unanimously approved and carried."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—"I beg to second the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I beg to move that the words 'subject to the general control of the Governor-General in Council as may be decided upon' be dropped."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Honourable Gentleman will see that, if he moves this amendment, he will have to confine himself to that point only and will be limiting the discussion of the resolution. The better plan would be to have a general discussion before limiting it to one particular point."

The Hon'ble Sir FRANCIS SPRING :—"I did not come prepared to say anything on this subject as I was not aware that it was going to be put forward."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Will the Honourable Gentleman let the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman say a sentence or two which will bear on the debate?"

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—"Your Excellency, with regard to the Hon'ble Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao's remarks on the subject I should like to say that the Government of Madras, as he knows, agreed with the non-official members in this respect and wrote at the time and have repeatedly written since to the Government of India recommending the course that he proposes. I am in a position to inform the Honourable Member that we have received intimation from the Government of India approving of our proposals to have a separate Consulting Engineer for Railways with the Government of Madras and that they have applied to the Secretary of State for creating the appointment. That will restore us to the old position, when we had a man to deal with railways before the department was transferred to the Railway Board."

The Hon'ble Sir FRANCIS SPRING :—"Since the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman has given us that information, I have not very much left to say. I was going to express the strong hope that the Government of India would consent to revert to the state of things that was in force 15 or 20 years ago when I was here as Secretary and the Local Government exercised control over railways in all essential matters. Since those days, the Railway Board has come on the scene and has, like an octopus, seized the whole of the railways in India under its control, leaving only Inspectors in five or six centres—I do not know how many there are—to look after the safety and convenience of passengers. It is a great anomaly that these Inspectors should not be personally in touch in any way, officially at least, with the Members of the Government. I understand that for several years although an Inspector of the Railway Board has been here, he has not been in connexion officially, or indeed much in personal touch, with the Government. Many questions have arisen in this Council about the convenience and comfort of the travelling public, in relation to refreshment rooms, overcrowding of railway carriages, and so on, but the Government have not been able to tackle such problems without going to the Government of India, which was like cracking a nut with a sledge hammer. Of course, there are great difficulties, one of which is that it is very likely that while one system, like the South Indian Railway, may be confined to our own boundaries, another, like the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway, may extend to two provinces, the metre gauge of that company being outside this province, while

Mr. Gillman; Mr. Rama Ayyangar;
the President; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

a portion of the broad gauge is within the Nizam's territory, which is within the control or the purview of the Bombay Government. It is very difficult to see how far this Government can exercise control in regard to lines outside this Presidency. But such details as these may be left to be discussed and settled later on. I do not think it will be found difficult to give the Provincial Governments power to settle those matters in which they would naturally desire to exercise control, i.e., matters relating to the comfort and convenience of the travelling public."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"In supporting this resolution, I should like to make a remark about tramways and feeder railways about which I gave notice and which are found in the Illustrative List No. I. Tramways and feeder railways have been included in List I subject to the remark: 'So far as powers may be given by the Government of India.' That is the note under No. 10 which relates to public works. As it has been included as a provincial subject, with certain restrictions placed upon the Provincial Government, I thought it my duty to point out that in the matter of railways, tramways and light feeder railways, the Government might have a free hand without any restrictions. That is the object of the resolution of which I gave notice. So far as tramways and light feeder railways are concerned, the only means by which some progress might be affected is through the agency of the district boards in various parts of the Presidency. It has been admitted."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN :—"May I just interrupt the Honourable Member and say that the restriction mentioned by the Government of India will be only in the matter of finance?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"I am glad to learn that the restriction will be only in the matter of finance; if that is the understanding it takes away much of the opposition to this restriction. So far as tramways and light feeder railways are concerned, if the Government have a free hand in the development of these railways and in the matter of their control, I have no doubt that much improvement can be effected in this Presidency. This Presidency has taken a lead in the matter of the development of district board railways and other provinces are only trying to follow the example that has been set. In various districts, the railway cess has been collected and accumulated and it has not been possible to make any further advance owing to various causes, one of which is the present war. If the Government are given better control, we shall be able to show better progress."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"In the light of the information given by the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman, it becomes unnecessary for me to move the amendment of which I have given notice, because my difficulty as regards the control over the administration of railways even when they were being constructed by the Provincial Government, when they had expert advisers, they were subjected to the control of the Governor-General in Council. I thought that that was the essence of the position for which this Government was fighting from the commencement in the case of the construction of district board railways. In regard to control and administration of such railways, I think the Provincial Government ought not to be subject to the control of the Government of India or the Railway Board. If the restriction that is imposed is intended only as regards finance—that is common to the whole country—there is no reason to oppose it and there is no objection to their saying that they should have the general control over finance. The words 'as may be decided upon' leaves the question fairly open. I take it that the control of the administration of the railways in the province will not include undertakings of this Council in respect of district board railways under the Railways. In that sense, I do not move the amendment now."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"May I ask that the word 'tramways' be added?"

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"We will put it in afterwards."

The resolution was put and agreed to unanimously by the non-official members present.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Now we come to the resolution in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao. It does not come under the transferred subjects."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"It is included in the list of transferred subjects."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"Then, is it necessary to have this resolution?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"It is only about the removal of the restrictions that I intend the resolution to apply."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The position is that the tramways and light feeder railways are provincial subjects. But they are also transferred subjects. I do not think the Honourable Gentleman wants the resolution at all."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"But there are the restrictions."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The printed words remain. The assumption is that a note is in the record that district board railways, tramways and light feeder railways are transferred subjects. I think the Honourable Gentleman might remain content with that."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"I wish to point out that in the remarks column, against the subject of light feeder railways, appearing in List I and List II, it is stated: 'So far as powers may be given by the Government of India.'"

250 RESOLUTIONS RE CONTROL AND ADMINISTRATION OF RAILWAYS AND MAJOR IRRIGATION TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(The President; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao; [23RD OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.]

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"That governs everything. I suggest to the Honourable Member that he may be satisfied with the wording of the lists, as it is. He will not therefore put the resolution."

"We now go back to the printed agenda paper and take up the question of major irrigation."

RESOLUTION RE MAJOR IRRIGATION TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO :—"Your Excellency, I have the honour to move the following resolution :—

'III. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of "Major Irrigation" should be a transferred subject.'

"It will be found that in the List I relating to provincial subjects item 10 relates to public works. There the details are given, namely: 'Roads and buildings and major and minor irrigation; tramways, light and feeder railways.' So far as List II relating to transferred subjects is concerned, you will find under item 12 minor irrigation is included, but major irrigation is excluded. I therefore move that major irrigation should be included in the list of transferred subjects. The reasons why I urge for the inclusion of this subject among the transferred subjects are those already referred to, when I discussed the question of Land Revenue administration. It will be found that, so far as the Department of Public Works is concerned, several attempts have been made from time to time for giving further opportunities to improve indigenous agency in respect of that department. In regard to the subject of major irrigation there are two views put forward. I would refer to the Report of the Public Works Reorganization Committee which, after mature consideration, decided that a portion of the Department of Public Works might be handed over to district boards which are sought to be made popular bodies. No doubt they suggest that the Irrigation branch may be separated but the proposal, so far as the province of Madras is concerned, deserves some consideration. They recommend in definite terms that certain subjects might be transferred to district boards after suggesting some financial arrangements to help these boards. They also lay down as a guiding principle that the engineering staff employed in the various provinces is a circumstance to be taken into consideration in the delegation of these powers. They state specifically that, so far as Madras is concerned, roads and buildings should be made over to this agency instead of to a separate Public Works branch. They state later on that the petty irrigation works in charge of Collectors may be made over to district boards in addition to some sundry irrigation tanks, managed by the Irrigation branch. It is therefore clear that in the case of popular bodies in the Presidency, proposals have been made by this committee for the transfer not only of minor irrigation, but of some tanks now under the control of the Public Works Department. I would suggest that while almost all works of the Public Works Department are proposed to be included under transferred subjects, such as roads and buildings, there are no special reasons for withholding the subject of major irrigation from the control of Indian ministers. I would suggest that, if major irrigation is not transferred, it will lead to a duplication of functions; but if it is transferred, the control that is exercised by the Indian ministers in connexion with other works might be exercised in the case of major irrigation works also."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. CHIDAMBARANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Your Excellency, I beg to second the motion, and in doing so I will say that the subject of irrigation is so directly and intimately connected with land revenue that the one cannot possibly be separated from the other without serious inconvenience resulting to the administration. I cannot believe that any possible danger can come to the administration as a whole if it is entrusted to the control of the Indian ministers. On the other hand, I believe that inasmuch as minor works and minor irrigation have been entrusted by the Public Works Committee to the charge of Indian ministers, the major irrigation, if entrusted to the control of the popular element, will induce indigenous capital to come in and thus develop works of irrigation which are particularly large works now being financed by foreign capital. I would strongly support on both these grounds that major irrigation works should be transferred to the control of the ministerial Government in the truest interests of the province."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"I only wish to point out that this subject only illustrates the difficulty of making a suitable division into transferred and reserved subjects. So far as this province is concerned, the superior Public Works staff, so far as I know, is a combined staff which looks after irrigation and buildings and a portion of the same staff is also in charge of minor irrigation. Under the head of Public Works we will have the old question of river conservancy which is included in the words 'drainage and embankments.' That, as you will see, is under the same Public Works staff, so that Honourable Members will see that, so far as public works are concerned, we have buildings under the Public Works Department, minor irrigation, drainage and embankments—that is, a portion of it is placed on the transferred list—while the subject of major irrigation is placed on the provincial list. Unless the staff is separated, it seems to me this combined staff will have to go under two different departments of Government, so that there will be considerable difficulty and friction in adjusting the work of the staff between these two departments of Government. I am merely pointing out that these lists are based upon the administrative organization prevailing in the United Provinces or elsewhere where probably buildings form a separate branch. In this Presidency, roads are not at all under the charge of Government; most of the roads in this province are placed under district boards. There are very few provincial roads in this province. Under these circumstances, I am really unable to see how roads and buildings, minor works, drainage and embankments could be a transferred subject while major irrigation is to be a reserved subject. There must be difficulty to allocate the work of the Public Works Department under two authorities. Therefore the only conclusion that we can come to, is that it should be under one controlling head, unless Your Excellency would go to the length of duplicating the staff for performing the functions mentioned in these two lists. A further complication is to be found in the Report of the Public Works Committee where it is stated that that portion of the work done by the Public Works Department, relating to buildings and roads, should be transferred to district boards. If that is so, the transfer of the major works to the transferred list becomes all the more strong. If buildings and roads are transferred and minor irrigation works are also transferred and if river conservancy is transferred as suggested, I should think in the interests of economy, major irrigation should also be a transferred subject. That is all I wish to say on this subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—"I would only add one more word. In our province, major irrigation are in charge of the Public Works Department. There are many tanks included under major irrigation. In fact, the repairs to these tanks are under the minor irrigation staff. It has been often reported upon that between the two departments, it has been found difficult to get workmen during certain months in which the work has to be slowly done. For that reason in a province like Madras, where there are 40,000 tanks, some of which are under the Public Works Department, it is necessary to transfer the whole thing so that even if works under major irrigation should be newly started, they will be attended to by the new staff. Then there is a tank restoration party. That is a peculiar circumstance of this province. We had a conference about tanks and subsequently also the proceedings of the conference were issued. Our present expenditure on tanks comes to Rs. 33 lakhs a year. That is work which ought to be within the cognizance of the representatives of the people. One of the questions that was placed before the conference at Ootacamund was how to improve the rate of repairs of these various tanks. Various questions were discussed and the whole of that matter will have to be placed before the Government, which will have to consult the grievances from the various parts of the Presidency. They will, therefore, be much better attended to and with much less competition than otherwise, if major irrigation is included in the transferred list. That is the reason why major irrigation in this province should be a transferred subject."

The resolution was put and agreed to by the non-official members present.

RESOLUTION RE INTER-PROVINCIAL IMMIGRATION AND EMIGRATION TO BE TRANSFERRED SUBJECTS.

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD :—"My Lord, the resolution which I have the honour to move, runs as follows :—

'XVI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that, in addition to the subjects mentioned in Illustrative list II of Appendix II, the subjects relating to inter-provincial immigration and emigration should be transferred subjects.'

"In placing this resolution before this Council, I feel that I need lay no special stress on the importance of the matter with which it deals. In the matter of emigration generally, there is a strong feeling in this country that the interest of the emigrants is invariably, and in every manner possible, subordinated to that of their employers in various places to which they go. I feel it unnecessary to give elaborate reasons condemning the existing state of things, and one has simply to turn to the pages of the masterly and interesting speech delivered on 'Indentured Labour' by the late Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 4th March 1912 to see how the system deserves a wholesale condemnation. That the emigrants are taken to several places by the kanganis, or professional recruiters, in absolute ignorance of the conditions under which they should live and work, has been proved by Mr. Gokhale and other eminent Indians on occasions too numerous to mention. It is true that a Provincial Government cannot reasonably be expected to effectively control inter-emigration which affects more than one Presidency. But the illustrious authors of the reform report have deliberately given the Government of India a control over the inter-provincial emigration and immigration, and therefore there can reasonably be no apprehension that this matter, if left in the hands of a minister as a transferred subject, will not receive a proper treatment in his hands, due regard being given to the requirements of the sister presidencies. In the matter of labour for Assam, we have heard several complaints in the actual administration of the Act, and therefore though the power of legislating for emigration can, and should remain only with the Government of India, the administration of the Act must necessarily remain with the Provincial Government; and a minister, to whom will be entrusted the management of Agricultural and Industrial departments, should necessarily have a voice in the matter of labour and emigration. A minister who will be a representative of the people and an Indian, in all probability, is likely to handle the subject with every concern for the well-being of the emigrant and with a more definite knowledge of the agricultural and economic condition of the people in this Presidency. So, with a knowledge of the needs and requirements of the Presidency, he will certainly be more fitted to be in charge of this subject, and the sister presidencies will certainly in no way suffer, with the safeguards now provided by giving a control to the Government of India in the matter. Therefore, I submit that this subject should be in the transferred list and under the control of a minister. For these reasons, I beg to place this resolution before this Council for acceptance."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO seconded the resolution.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"May I ask for information from the Government Member as to what is meant in the remarks column against item 24 to which this resolution relates: 'subject to the control of the Government of India'? On a previous occasion, the Government Member said that it referred to the financial control. That is as regards railways. I should like to know with reference to immigration and emigration what sort of control is exercised by the Government of India."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"The Provincial Government cannot deal with the Colonial office and it is only the Government of India that can deal with it."

The resolution was put and agreed to unanimously by the non-official members present.

RESOLUTION RE POWER OF SUSPENDING LOCAL BODIES TO BE TRANSFERRED.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"I beg to move the following resolution:—

'XXXIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the power of suspending defaulting local bodies should not be vested in the Executive Council as suggested in the Illustrative list II of Appendix II of the Joint Report, but that this power should also be transferred to the Ministers.'

"This resolution relates to item 2 in List II. As against this item, it is stated, 'The question of reserving to the Executive Council the power of suspending defaulting local bodies be considered'. I need not say many words to this Council to commend this resolution. The report proposes to confer the largest powers to local bodies in regard to local self-government. The report also proposes to transfer the subject of local self-government to the control of the representatives of the public, whereas the power to suspend defaulting local bodies for misconduct or misfeasance is reserved to the Executive Council. As I am unhesitatingly of opinion that this power can be safely entrusted to popular ministers, I beg to move this resolution. The power that is proposed to be exercised is a very drastic one and it would be very satisfactory if this power is entrusted to the Ministers who will act under the instructions of this Legislative assembly. With these words, I beg to commend this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I beg to second this proposition with only one word. I think that in times to come there will not be much default on the part of the local bodies and there will be a great deal of interest taken in matters of local bodies. The question of suspending local bodies will be a very rare thing and even on those rare occasions the best guarantee that the power will be exercised properly is that it should be entrusted to that portion of the Government which reflects public opinion and which has control over local bodies."

The resolution was put and agreed to by the non-official members present.

RESOLUTION RE DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE AND CINEMATOGRAPHS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Does the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar wish to move resolution XXXVI?"

The Hon'ble Mr. A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"Yes."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I now call upon him to move the resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"My Lord, I wish to move the next resolution that stands in my name which runs as follows:—

'XXXVI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the management of "dramatic performance and cinematographs" now under Illustrative list I showing Provincial subjects be transferred to Illustrative list II showing transferred subjects.'

RESOLUTIONS RE DRAMATIC PERFORMANCE AND CINEMATOGRAPHS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT AND RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT. 253

23RD OCTOBER 1918.] (Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Mr. Gillman; the President.)

"For some time past I have been feeling that local bodies should have power to control public performances given in places licensed under the provisions of the Places of Public Resort Act (Madras Act II of 1888). It is always unsafe to the general health of the people of a town to allow dramatic and other public entertainments in places which are infected with epidemic diseases such as cholera, smallpox, plague and influenza. I believe there is no provision in the Madras District Municipalities Act IV of 1884 empowering municipal councils and their executives to close such performances when the authorities consider that they are a danger to public health. The disease which goes by the name of influenza has of late been prevailing throughout India not to speak of its presence in other countries. In some places the mortality has been very great and eminent medical men were advised that crowded meetings should be avoided and theatres closed as they contribute largely to the spread of this disease."

"Under section 5 of the Places of Public Resort Act it is the municipal chairman that must be approached for a licence to make use of a place for public resort or entertainment, if that place is within a municipal limit. This provision is made evidently with a view to give municipal councils control over places of public resort in municipal towns. Such control will not be effective unless they are given statutory power to close such places when such a closure is essential in the interests of the health of the town. Similarly such powers will have to be vested in local bodies as there are several union areas which in course of time are likely to expand into municipal towns and in such areas which are generally congested and wide all sanitary measures have to be taken as if they were municipal towns. These matters are more for local boards and municipalities. Even taking into consideration the fact that only popular kinds of shows can be allowed (as there be others which are either obscene or calculated to engender racial feeling), the control can properly be exercised by the local bodies as they are equally interested in the preservation of security among all classes and creeds. I consider, therefore, that this power should be given to municipal councils in the Madras District Municipalities Act and Local Boards Act which are now under revision. Naturally then the subject of public entertainments come under the head 'Local Self-Government' which deals with the provisions of public health, safety and convenience in the Illustrative List II showing transferred subjects."

"With these words, I beg to commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Before the resolution is seconded, I wish to point out that the Honourable Member seems to think that this is a part which comes under local self-government. It does not at all apply to the state of affairs in Madras. It is something which refers to the United Provinces. It does not come here under local self-government."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"It is a question which comes under law and order."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Then it is a matter connected with the Police."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. F. W. GILLMAN:—"You will see that under List I it is referred to in item 5 (viii)."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"We have already voted on it—that it should be a reserved subject."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I quite agree with you. At present, this subject is dealt with by the Judicial Department and the Council, in the absence of the Honourable Gentleman, decided that the majority of the subjects dealt with in the Judicial Department—all relating to law, justice and order should remain a reserved subject. Therefore, the best course for the Honourable Gentleman to follow is to withdraw his motion, having read his speech."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"I beg to withdraw the resolution."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the resolution was then withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The next subject which the Honourable Gentleman proposes to deal with is the subject of religious endowments. It is not a subject to be found in either List I or List II."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"It is in List I. It probably comes under the management of charitable endowments."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The Honourable Gentleman will find that that is not correct. As you know, the attitude of the Government of India in regard to religious institutions is one of neutrality. I would, therefore, suggest that we had better not discuss this resolution. As there is no purpose in discussing this motion, I would rather suggest to the Honourable Member that he should not move it."

The Hon'ble Mr. A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR:—"I observe that it is not in either list. My object was to add it to the transferred subjects. If your Excellency finds it impossible to do so, I have no objection to withdraw it."

254 RESOLUTIONS RE RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT AND STATIONERY AND PRINTING STORES AND SUPPLIES TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

(The President; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao; [23RD OCTOBER 1918.
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.]

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"There is no purpose in discussing it at this meeting."

With the permission of His Excellency the President, the Hon'ble Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar withdrew the following resolution :—

'XXXVII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of "Religious endowments" be also included with "the Charitable endowments"—vide clause 12 of Illustrative list II showing transferred subjects.'

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"The Hon'ble Mr. Sadasiva Bhat is not here and therefore it is no use taking up the resolutions of which he gave notice, unless any other Honourable Member wishes to move them."

RESOLUTION RE STATIONERY AND PRINTING STORES AND SUPPLIES TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"I beg to propose, in the absence of the Hon'ble Mr. Sadasiva Bhat, the following resolution :—

'XXXVIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the questions relating to stationery and printing stores and supplies—item No. 22 of Illustrative list I of Appendix II—should be placed on the transferred list and under the control of Ministers.'

"The note against item 22, which is in list I, is 'the control of the Government of India over stationery raises the general question of the purchase of supplies.' There was a debate in the Imperial Legislative Council on the question of the organization of the Stores department. I see observations made by the Honourable Member in charge of the resolution that the whole question was being considered. Now, what is asked for is liberty for the Provincial Government as well as ministers to get their supplies not necessarily through the India Office, but in any manner which may be conducive to public interests. I may state that the question of stores has been a matter of legitimate complaint and I take it in behalf of the Provincial Government and local bodies that, so far as I am aware, official opinion in this Council will not be adverse to the liberty of action on the part of the Provincial Governments in arranging for their stores."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao seconded the resolution.

The resolution was put and agreed to unanimously by the non-official members present.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"That exhausts the list of resolutions. Honourable gentlemen will note that this meeting of the Council has been held to give them full opportunity to express their views on the subject of these lists. I have endeavoured to make the proceedings somewhat elastic in our debate. As it is a special meeting of this Council, I have relaxed our rules in various ways—rules of procedure—in order to give a full opportunity to non-official members to express their views. If there is any other resolution which we have not discussed, but which they wish to put forward, will they please mention it to me?"

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"There is one subject of great importance having a bearing on the whole question of constitutional reforms, namely, the question of the financial contribution from this province to the Government of India."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I do not think we will go beyond transferred subjects."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"The whole question of the success of reforms depends upon finance."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"It is quite true. I do not contest the merits of the question raised. I do not think we need travel beyond the limits of the subjects which I have laid before the Council. I am not therefore for going into other questions, namely, general questions, great and important though they may be; but if there are any subjects in the agenda which have been omitted, I should like to hear about them."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"I should only mention that this question has been dealt with in the report at some length and it has a bearing on the organization of several departments."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I do not contest that for a moment. But I must adhere to what I said in my opening remarks that we gave notice that this meeting would be confined to these two lists. There would be a full opportunity in the future for the Honourable Member to express his views on the question he has raised."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"If I give notice of my intention to move at the next meeting a resolution on the lines mentioned by my Honourable Friend, so that under the scheme matters may be so adjusted as to equalise the burden placed upon the various provinces, will there be an opportunity for me to discuss this question?"

RESOLUTION RE STATIONERY AND PRINTING STORES AND SUPPLIES 255 TO BE A TRANSFERRED SUBJECT.

23RD OCTOBER 1918.] (The President; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar;
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I will consider whether such a subject will be a legitimate one for discussion. Non-official members have always the power to meet together and come to some conclusion on such a subject as the one mentioned. They are at perfect liberty to record their views and there is no difficulty about forwarding their views to the Subjects Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—"I now give formal notice that I intend moving a resolution to that effect at the next meeting."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I cannot give any undertaking in regard to the proposed resolution. The Honourable Member must recognize the limitations under which we work. Official members were present here throughout the whole meeting; and we have rendered our best to make the resolutions passed as the authoritative expression of the views of the non-official members. The report is a far-reaching and comprehensive document and we could easily spend a week or more in considering it. But I do not think that the interests of public business demand it in view of the fact that it is quite possible for non-official members to record their views on any subject they wish to deal with. I do not wish to shut out or deprive any Honourable Gentleman of any opportunity that he may wish to have to express his views. But we must consider the general interests in matters of this kind and look at it from the standpoint of commonsense. After all, it is quite possible for Honourable Gentlemen to meet together to consider the aspect of the question raised by him."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"We are thankful for the statement by Your Excellency on the subject. I may say that some time ago, I gave notice of a resolution bringing this matter under consideration, but it was disallowed on the ground that the matter was under correspondence between this Council and the Government of India. That was at the last meeting. The Hon'ble Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar also gave notice of the same resolution. We considered this matter to be one vitally important and we gave notice of the resolutions. Since the report was published, we felt very much that the financial contribution demanded from this province is out of all proportion to the legitimate demands that might be made for it. We feel very keenly on the subject and we hope that Your Excellency will see your way to permit us to give expression to our opinion, and to support what Your Excellency's government are probably already doing in this matter. We are anxious, and we know that Your Excellency is as anxious as any of us, to better the finances of this province and we shall be indebted to Your Excellency just at this moment if you will allow us to raise this question. If the rules can be relaxed so as to allow a resolution to be sent up at the next meeting, we shall be thankful. The success of the reforms, the cardinal point of which is to divide the subjects into reserved and transferred, depends very largely upon the finance which this Government are able to command and the reasonable contribution which they should be asked to make to the Government of India. This Council fully recognizes that view and we feel that, if the scheme that has been formulated is to be a success, the contribution from this province should be revised. A resolution to that effect was forwarded by one of the members, so as to give expression to our views. It seems to be quite clear that, unless we have a better share of the revenues of this province at our disposal, it will be impossible to ensure the success of the reforms."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I quite understand it. Any resolution that may be sent up to me for admission into the agenda paper will be carefully considered. I may say that it is a question which admits of being considered independently of any reform scheme and it is almost a separate question by itself."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO :—"If the present proposals are finally accepted, the question of the development of several departments has now been thrown on the ministers; and it is therefore necessary to emphasize this fact."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"If there are any other opinions which Honourable Gentlemen wish to place on record with regard to the transferred subjects, I should be glad to hear. I think we have thoroughly exhausted the field so far as I am aware, and, if so, the Council may now adjourn."

The Council was then dissolved.

'Education' to be a transferred subject without limitations.

VI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of 'Land acquisition' should be a transferred subject.

'Land acquisition' to be a transferred subject.

VII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of 'Borrowing on sole credit of provincial revenues' should be a transferred subject.

Borrowing on the sole credit of provincial revenues to be a transferred subject.

The Hon'ble YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur :—

VIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms, questions relating to industrial development (item No. 19 of list No. 1 of the same appendix) should be transferred to the control of ministers.

'Industrial development' to be a transferred subject.

IX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms, questions relating to business concerns (item No. 21 of list No. 1 of the same appendix) should be transferred to the control of ministers.

Questions relating to business concerns to be transferred.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO PANTULU :—

X. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in the opinion of this Council the portfolios relating to the subjects mentioned in illustrative list II of Appendix II (printed at page 177 of the report on constitutional reforms) should be immediately committed to the control of ministers as suggested in paragraphs 218 and 219 of the report and that, in addition, the subject of 'Borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues' (item No. 2 of list I of Appendix II) should also be transferred to the control of ministers and should not be a reserved subject.

Subjects in list II of Appendix II and borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues to be transferred.

XI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that, if it is found inexpedient or impracticable to place the subject of 'Borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues' immediately on the transferred list, the Executive Government as a whole should deal with all questions relating to borrowing.

Borrowing on the sole credit of Provincial revenues to be dealt with by full Government.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO PANTULU :—

XII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that matters affecting the conditions of service and the control of services of the transferred departments shall be included in the list of transferred subjects.

Control of services of transferred departments to be a transferred subject.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—

XIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that all the subjects falling within the jurisdiction of Provincial Government should be transferred subjects within the Province of the Presidency of Madras, subject to such limitations imposed to safeguard the interests of the Government of India when they are essentially affected or the peace and order when seriously threatened.

All Provincial subjects to be transferred subject to reservation.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU :—

XIV. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the departments of Law, Police and Justice (Prisons excepted) only be left in the hands of the Executive Government as reserved subjects during the transition period.

Only Law, Justice and Police to be reserved subjects.

XV. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject 11. Education, mentioned in illustrative list I of Appendix II, relating to colleges, universities, etc., should be placed in the transferred list without merely confining to primary and secondary technical schools in this Presidency.

Education including collegiate and university education to be a transferred subject.

The Hon'ble the RAJA OF RAMNAD :—

XVI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the subjects mentioned in illustrative list II of Appendix II, the subjects relating to Inter-Provincial immigration and emigration should be transferred subjects.

Inter-Provincial immigration and emigration to be transferred subjects.

The Hon'ble the Rev. G. PITTENDRIGH :—

XVII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that elementary industrial and technical education should be included among the transferred subjects, while university and secondary education should be retained among the reserved.

University and secondary education to be 'reserved'.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SUBYANARAYANA RAO PANTULU :—

XVIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that, in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in illustrative list II, Land Revenue Administration (item No. 6 of list I, Appendix II) with the exception of questions relating to (1) encumbered and attached estates, (2) famine, (3) resumption of revenue free grants, (4) alluvion and diluvion and (5) colonisation and disposal of crown lands should be added to the list of transferred subjects.

Land revenue administration to be a transferred subject with certain limitations, in addition to subjects in list II.

XIX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that No. 15 Civil Justice should be included in the list of transferred subjects.

Civil Justice to be a transferred subject.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—

XX. The non-official members of this Council recommends that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in Illustrative list II of Appendix II, prisons 5 (iii) and the administration of the Acts relating to incitements to crime, seditious meetings, press and arms [item No. 5 (v) of list I of Appendix II] should be placed in the list of subjects to be transferred to the control of ministers.

Prisons and administration of Press, etc., Acts to be transferred subject in addition to those in list II.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—

XXI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the administration of civil justice be included amongst the transferred subjects under Illustrative List II to be in charge of ministers.

Civil justice to be a transferred subject.

XXII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the whole subjects of 'Forests and Forest Products' be transferred to Illustrative List II and not only 'unclassified and some protected.'

'Forests' and 'forest produce' to be transferred subjects without limitation.

XXIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the appointments, conditions of service and control of all provincial services relating to subjects transferred to the ministers should be a transferred subject and placed under Illustrative List II.

Land Revenue administration to be a transferred subject.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—

XXVII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that all subjects now under the control of local Government should be included in the list of transferred subjects under the Reform Scheme.

All Provincial subjects to be transferred.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR :—

XXVIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that Law, Justice and Police should be transferred subjects.

XXIX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that Land Revenue and Tenant Rights be transferred subjects.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—

XXX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that all the subjects of Provincial concern, shall be classed under the head of 'transferred subjects' save and except those relating to the maintenance of 'law and order' as defined in Appendix II of the Joint Report on Constitutional Reforms.

XXXI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that all the 'Provincial services' relating to the 'Transferred subjects' including those of the future ministers shall themselves be classed under the head of the 'transferred subjects.'

XXXII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that, in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Joint Report, all questions relating to the condition of services and control of all Provincial services employed in the departments transferred to the control of ministers, should be placed in the transferred lists and that these questions should not be reserved to the Governor and the Executive Council.

XXXIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the power of suspending defaulting local bodies should not be vested in the Executive Council as suggested in the Illustrative List II of Appendix II of the Joint Report, but that this power should also be transferred to the ministers.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. RAMANUJA ACHARIYAR AVARGAL :—

XXXIV. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the subjects enumerated in illustrative list II (page 177 of the Report on Indian Constitutional Reforms), the following subjects be taken from Illustrative List I and be included in the transferred subjects:—

- (i) 6. Land Revenue administration—
Resettlement, Court of Wards, encumbered and attached estates, land improvement and agricultural loans.
- (ii) 7. Agriculture—the whole.
- (iii) 18. Land Acquisition.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. AHMAD TAMBI MARAKKAYAR SAHIB Bahadur :—

XXXV. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the management of Industrial schools under Illustrative List I showing Provincial subjects, Clause 11—Education, be transferred to Illustrative list II of transferred subjects.

XXXVI. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the management of 'dramatic performance and cinematographs' now under Illustrative List I showing Provincial subjects be transferred to Illustrative List II showing transferred subjects.

XXXVII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the subject of 'Religious Endowments' be also included with 'the Charitable Endowments'—vide clause 12 of Illustrative list II showing transferred subjects.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. SADASIVA BHAT :—

XXXVIII. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the questions relating to stationery and printing, stores and supplies—Item No. 22 of Illustrative List I of Appendix II—should be placed on the transferred list and under the control of ministers.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO PANTULU :—

XXXIX. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in Illustrative List II, Land Revenue Administration (item No. 6 of Appendix II), with the exception of questions relating to (1) the Court of Wards, encumbered and attached estates, (2) relations of landholders and tenants, should be added to the list of transferred subjects.

XL. The non-official members of this Council recommend that in addition to the list of subjects mentioned in Illustrative List II of Appendix II, the administration of forests and forest products (not merely unclassified and some protected forests) should be a transferred subject.

SUPPLEMENTAL NOTICE FOR THE MEETING OF THE COUNCIL ON THE 22ND OCTOBER 1918.

Resolutions.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO PANTULU :—

I. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the Provincial Government should be given a free hand in the development of tramways, light and feeder railways.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR :—

II. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the administrative control of the railways solely lying within this province should be left to the Provincial Government and the same ought not to be left to be given by the Government of India and should be added to the Illustrative List No. 2, Transferred subjects.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—

III. The non-official members of this Council recommend that income-tax should be scheduled in Illustrative List No. I, Appendix II, as a Provincial subject so far as the Province of Madras is concerned.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO PANTULU :—

IV. The non-official members of this Council recommend that the control and administration of railways in a province should, subject to such general control of Governor-General in Council as may be decided upon, be a Provincial subject and should be included in Illustrative List No. I of Appendix II of the Report on Constitutional Reforms.

NEW MEMBER.

His Excellency the President:—"Mr. Marjoribanks is not well and therefore he is not present to take the prescribed oath or affirmation of allegiance to the Crown.

"I call upon the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew to make a motion which he wishes to move."

THE LATE MR. K. R. V. KRISHNA RAO.

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—"Your Excellency, with Your Excellency's permission, and before the Council proceeds to ordinary business, I beg to be allowed to draw the attention of the Council to the loss which we have sustained since our last meeting by the death of the late Mr. K. R. V. Krishna Rao, who represented the zamindars of the northern districts. The late Mr. Krishna Rao was for five years a member of this Council and during that period, I believe I may say, he endeared himself to all the members of this Council by his genial disposition, his simplicity of character and his transparent desire to do all that he could for his constituents. Possessing as he did, a life-long acquaintance with the agricultural and revenue conditions of the Northern Circars, he was always desirous of laying before this House, the wishes and the needs of the districts which he represented and his contributions to our debates on those subjects were always worthy of careful attention. I believe he was also a considerable Telugu scholar, but in all the speeches which he made before this Council, his most distinguishing characteristic appeared to me to be his unfailing good temper and his good nature. Looking back on the debates which took place, I cannot recall a single instance in which a trace of bitterness of personal feeling was ever exhibited by him and I feel that the impression that he made was that of a man of a very attractive and likeable disposition. We feel that in him we lost a friend and it makes it the more easy for us to realize how great a loss it must be to his family. I beg therefore, Your Excellency, to move the resolution expressing our sincere regret at his death and our deep sympathy with his family, wishing that it may be communicated to the relatives of our late colleague."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I beg to second this motion. In doing so, I may say that the late Mr. Krishna Rao discharged his duties in this Council to his constituents with conspicuous ability. Not only that, but he took great interest in questions relating to agricultural population, irrigation questions, matters relating to land revenue to which he showed considerable aptitude and his general acquaintance with the progressive conditions of this Presidency was quite above the average. We regret he is no more with us and we fully share the sense of loss to which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has given expression. The late Mr. Krishna Rao was particularly a genial friend, and the handsome terms in which the Hon'ble Sir Alexander Cardew has spoken of his temper and general bonhomie are perfectly true. Knowing him as I do, as a friend for 15 or 16 years, our sense of loss is great and the Circars have lost a good and ripe Telugu scholar. I heartily support the resolution."

His Excellency the President:—"I am sure it would be the unanimous wish of the Council that our sense of loss and our sympathy be communicated to the relatives of the late Mr. Krishna Rao."

The resolution was agreed to unanimously.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Order made by His Excellency the President under rule 11 of the statutory rules for the asking of questions in the Council—

(1) Printed copies of all the questions and answers to be put and given at the meeting shall be placed on the Council table half an hour before the President takes his seat. The questions shall be numbered consecutively as printed.

(2) The questions shall be put and answered in the following manner:—

The Secretary shall call the name of each interpellator in turn, specify the serial numbers of his questions and make a sufficient pause to allow the Honourable Member a reasonable opportunity of rising in his place, if he is desirous of asking any supplementary questions. Supplementary questions must be put immediately after the principal questions to which they relate.]

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar.

- 1 Q.—(i) Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) what report Mr. Paddison has made as to the responsibility of (1) the District Superintendent of Police, (2) the Inspectors, (3) Sergeants, (4) and other officers and (5) the Reserve Police in regard to the incidents in Madura on the 27th of September 1918; Inquiry into the recent incidents in Madura.
(b) whether all or any of the Inspectors, Sergeants and other officers present on the occasion and of the policemen then present were examined by Mr. Paddison, and, if so, which of them;
(c) whether these persons have been examined by Mr. Pelly or by any other officer on the above matter, and, if so, who; and by whom; and when; and
(d) what representations have been received by the Government in the matter of the Madura incident, from whom and to what effect?
(ii) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the reports made by Mr. Paddison and Mr. C. B. Pelly, and the representations received from the public?

1 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918, which has been laid on the Editors' Table, from which he will see that Mr. Paddison personally took statements from the Reserve Inspector and two sergeants as well as the District Superintendent of Police himself. Mr. Paddison, when writing his report, had also before him 32 statements taken by Mr. Pelly from the same officers and from 28 members of the reserve police. Mr. Pelly's inquiry began on the 29th September and copies of the statements were sent to the District Magistrate on the 8th October. The Government do not propose to hold any further inquiry or to publish Mr. Pelly's departmental report. The representations received from the public are laid on the table together with the orders passed thereon by Government.

2 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to make a statement, preferably in a tabular form, showing in what places in the mufassal in this Presidency looting took place and the prices of food-grains prevailing at the time in each place, since the meeting of this Council in August last? Places where looting took place.

2 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 37 in regard to the places where cases of looting have occurred. Exact information as to the prices of foodstuffs prevailing at the time of the disturbances is not available.

3 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether, in the matter of the police firing on the Madura crowd on 27th September 1918, the complaint filed against the police has since been disposed of by the District Magistrate and how;
(b) whether after such disposal there is any objection to the examination of the policemen and police officers present at the firing; and
(c) whether the Government would be pleased to direct Mr. Paddison to resume his inquiry to examine the above witnesses and submit a further report in the matter?

Inquiry into the recent incidents in Madura.

3 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918, which has been laid on the Editors' Table.

4 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether, in view of the opinions of the local bodies consulted by Government on the question whether supplemental questions may be permitted by rules, the rules relating to interpellations in local bodies will be amended by the addition of a rule providing for such supplementary questions? Supplementary questions at meetings of municipal councils and local boards.

4 A.—In pursuance of the undertaking given at the meeting of this Council in November last, the resolution on this subject moved by the Honourable Member, with the report of the discussion thereon, was communicated to all local bodies. Only 21 out of 72 municipal councils and 10 out of 15 district boards expressed any opinion on the subject. Having regard to the general lack of interest shown in the matter, the Government have decided that no further action is necessary.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar ; Mr. Richmond.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

Statistics of influenza and other epidemics to be furnished by local bodies.

- 5 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether in the weekly returns of deaths from local boards and municipalities now published in the Fort St. George Gazette it is not possible or desirable to include one or more columns headed 'Influenza' and 'Other prevailing epidemics if any'; and
(b) whether steps will be taken for an early modification of the returns to make them up to date and useful in respect of 'Influenza' and 'Other epidemics' not mentioned in the usual return?

5 A.—The weekly return referred to relates only to municipalities containing 25,000 inhabitants and over and also to the Ootacamund municipality. In this return statistics are not given for other municipalities or for local boards. Having regard to the qualifications of the staff available for registration of vital statistics, the Government do not consider it practicable to adopt the Honourable Member's suggestion.

Employment of Indians and Eurasians as port and coast light-keepers.

- 6 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state in tabular form, in each of the departments of Port lights and Coast lights,
(a) how many Indians,
(b) how many Eurasians are employed, and
(c) how many transfers were made among coast light-keepers and how many among port light-keepers during the last twelve months?

6 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information.

Water difficulties and the raising of grazing fees in reserved forests.

- 7 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(i) how many representations they have received and from whom regarding (a) the absence of grazing facilities and water in the same reserve block and (b) the hardship caused to ryots by raising grazing fees recently from annas three or four per head of cattle to annas eight or nine or one rupee; and
(ii) what orders have been passed thereon?

7 A.—In the course of the past twelve months one representation in regard to the absence of grazing facilities and five in respect of the raising of grazing fees have been received by the Government. In two of the latter the Government declined to interfere. The remaining petitions were either transferred to the Board of Revenue for disposal or returned to the writers with the intimation that they should move the local officers in the first instance.

Abolition of grazing fees and relaxation of the rules in regard to permits for grazing of cattle.

- 8 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether, in view of the failure of rains, they would consider the feasibility of (1) abolishing grazing fees and (2) permitting the grazing in any block in the district of cattle that may have permits for any other block in which facilities for watering and grazing cattle are not found?

8 A.—Under the general rules printed on page 383 of the Forest Manual which regulate the grazing of cattle in Government forests in times of drought, the local officers have been empowered to grant such grazing concessions as may be suited to the circumstances of each locality. The Government do not consider any further action on their part necessary.

Suspension of kist collection.

- 9 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(1) what representations they have received regarding the grant of suspension of kist collection and of ultimate remission (a) for wet and (b) for dry lands; and
(2) what steps they have taken or propose to take in the matter?

9 A.—(1) A representation on the subject in question has been received from the Tanjore Landholders, Industrialists, etc., Association.
(2) That representation is under consideration.

Mahazar from the ryots of Sinnathadagam, etc., villages in Coimbatore district.

- 10 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if they have received a mahazar from the ryots of Sinnathadagam, Nanjundapuram, etc., of Coimbatore taluk, dated 6th June 1918, and what orders, if any, have been passed thereon?

10 A.—The mahazar referred to was received and the Government passed orders declining to interfere.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Richmond.

European High School Examination.

- 11 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have examined the question of changing the date of the European High School Examination from December to April as promised in reply to question No. 382, dated 2nd April 1914, and question No. 15, dated 2nd April 1917, and if so with what result?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the papers connected with the subject?

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Richmond; Mr. Ramachandra Rao; Mr. Duncan; the President.)

- (c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have perused the articles and correspondence that have appeared on this subject in the Madras Times since September?

11 A.—(a) & (b) As stated in the answer to question No. 45 asked by the Honourable Member at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd April 1918, the orders of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Simla Conference are awaited.

(c) The Government have perused some of the articles and correspondence.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. Ramachandra Rao.

- 12 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) the number of special police officers enlisted under section 16 of Madras Police Act XXIV of 1859 in each revenue division of this Presidency excluding municipalities and the number so enlisted in the area included in each municipality since April last up to date; and
(b) the duties generally assigned to the special officers?

Special police officers enlisted under the Madras Police Act, 1859.

12 A.—Under section 17 of the Madras District Police Act, 1859, the powers and duties of special police officers are identical with those of ordinary officers of police, and as provided by section 16 they are employed temporarily on occasions of special emergency for the preservation of the peace, the protection of the public and the security of property. The exact duties entrusted to them necessarily vary with the circumstances of particular cases and the number appointed since last April could not be ascertained without calling for details from every district in the Presidency.

- 13 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any report has been received from the District Magistrate of Madura in regard to the incidents that took place in Madura on the 27th September last? Will the Government be pleased to publish the report?

Inquiry into the recent incidents in Madura.

13 A.—A report has been received and published with G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918.

- 14 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what measures of legislation are likely to be introduced in 1918-19?

Statement of legislation for 1918-19.

14 A.—(i) The Koodalmanickam Devaswom Bill.
(ii) A Bill to amend the Madras Outports Landing and Shipping Fees Act, 1885.
(iii) A Bill to amend the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1884.

- 15 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when the Bill for the expansion of elementary education is likely to be introduced in the Council?

Introduction of the Elementary Education Bill.

15 A.—The Bill will shortly be submitted to the Government of India and will, it is hoped, be introduced in this Council during this cold weather.

- 16 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any final decision has been come to in regard to the recommendations of the Educational Conference held in March 1916? Will the Government be pleased to place the orders of the Government, if any, on the table? If no orders have been passed, will the Government be pleased to pass early orders on the subject of the recommendations of the Conference?

Giving effect to the recommendations of the Educational Conference.

16 A.—The matter is still under consideration.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"With reference to my question No. 16 about the recommendations of the Educational Conference, may I know when the orders of the Government are likely to be issued? It is now two and a half years since the Conference sent its report to Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. H. S. DUNCAN:—"These matters are under consideration of Government. I cannot give a definite answer."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"We will do our best to expedite the matter."

- 17 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the extent of land which has not been cultivated for the paddy first crop in each district in the current fasli?

Extent of land uncultivated for the paddy first crop.

17 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

- 18 Q.—Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the proceedings of a public meeting held on 21st October last at Madras under the presidency of Diwan Bahadur Govindas Chaturbujadas and will the Government be pleased to state what action has been taken with reference to the resolutions passed at that meeting,
(1) regarding the reduction of steamer freight charges from Rangoon to Madras;
(2) regarding the measures to be taken to co-ordinate the powers of the Directors of Civil Supplies in all the provinces with a view to regulate the supplies of wagons; and
(3) regarding the reduction of the penal storage charges by the Port Trust?

Reduction of steamer freight charges and certain other matters dealt with at a public meeting in Madras.

(Mr. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Yaqub Hasan.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

- 18 A.—1) The Government have seen the proceedings of the meeting. As regards the reduction of freights the matter is under correspondence, but the local freights depend ultimately on the rates in force in other parts of the world and it does not therefore seem likely that any substantial reduction in the freight from Burma can be effected at present.
 (2) The work of the Directors of Civil Supplies will in future be co-ordinated by the Foodstuff Commissioner appointed by the Government of India.
 (3) The rule of the Port Trust regarding penal storage charges has since been modified.

Statistics of import of paddy and rice into the Presidency. 19 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the quantity of paddy and rice imported into this Presidency in each of the months from August to November both inclusive from (1) Burma, (2) Orissa and (3) Pongal?

- 19 A.—Twenty-two thousand and sixteen tons and 8,691 tons of rice were imported from Burma by sea in August and September respectively. Two thousand five hundred and seventy-three tons and 20,599 tons of rice were imported by rail from Bengal and Orissa respectively in August and September together. These figures do not include imports by Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway in the month of September figures for which are not yet available. Figures of imports for October and November have not yet been received.

The Hon'ble Yaqub Hasan Sahib Bahadur.

Proportion of Muhammadan students admitted into colleges.

20 Q.—With reference to the answer to my supplementary question No. 122 put at the meeting of the Council held on the 13th August 1918, will the Government be pleased to state the number of Muslim and non-Muslim students admitted this year in the Junior Intermediate class in each of the Arts colleges in this Presidency?

- 20 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for. They would suggest that the Honourable Member address the University authorities.

Lists of kazis, etc.

21 Q.—With reference to the answer to my question No. 118 at the meeting of the Council held on the 13th August 1918, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of (1) kazis appointed by the Government in accordance with the Government of India Act XII of 1880 and 2) naib kazis appointed by the Government Kazis according to the said Kazis' Act?

- 21 A.—The compilation of the list of kazis appointed by Government is approaching completion, the only report still outstanding being a supplemental statement promised by the District Magistrate of Chingleput. As soon as this is received, the list will be completed and a copy furnished to the Honourable Member in accordance with the undertaking given in the answer to his previous question on this subject. No particulars have been collected regarding the appointments of naib kazis for the reason given by the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman when replying to the supplementary question then put, viz., that Government have no concern with these appointments, which are made by kazis.

Endowments for maintenance of kazis.

22 Q.—With reference to the answer to my supplementary question No. 119 at the meeting of the Council held on the 13th August 1918, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the number, nature, origin and description of the jagirs and other endowments that exist in this Presidency for the maintenance of kazis?

- 22 A.—The Government will endeavour to procure the information asked for and will lay it on the table, so far as it can be obtained.

Affiliation of the Presidency College in Arabic language and literature under Branch IX of the B.A. (Honours) course.

23 Q.—Is it a fact that the Director of Public Instruction applied in 1916 to the University of Madras for the further affiliation of the Presidency College in Branch IX—Arabic language and literature of the B.A. (Honours) course, but subsequently withdrew the application chiefly owing to the non-provision of sufficient staff?

- 23 A.—The lack of candidates and of justification for incurring a considerable increase of expenditure on the staff during a period of financial stringency were the main reasons for the withdrawal of the original application.

Affiliation of the Presidency College in Persian and Arabic under Group VI of the B.A. course.

24 Q.—Is it a fact that the Presidency College was affiliated in March 1917 in Persian and Arabic under group VI of the B.A. Degree course on the Director of Public Instruction giving assurance "that the present staff would be strengthened next year by the appointment of an additional lecturer who will be a native of Persia"?

- 24 A.—Yes; but such undertaking was subject to the conditions that the strength of the Persian and Arabic classes warranted the appointment of an additional lecturer and that the services of a native of Persia were available.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Yaqub Hasan ; Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar)

25 Q.—Is it a fact that Mr. Naimur Rahman's services have been transferred to the second-grade college recently opened by Government in connexion with the Madrasa-i-Azam?

- 25 A.—Yes.

26 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to appoint Professors of Arabic and Persian in the Presidency College in place of Mr. Naimur Rahman?

- 26 A.—The Government will be prepared to consider the question, provided there is sufficient demand for the study of Persian and Arabic.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar.

27 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of work up to 1st November 1918 in regard to the High Court of Madras similar to that appended to G.O. No. 2809, Judicial, dated 15th November 1915, and to the answer given to a similar question on 6th February 1917?

- 27 A.—A statement * is laid on the table.

28 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the number of cases actually ready and awaiting disposal for want of a Judge to hear them, on the 1st November 1918, under Appeals, Second Appeals, Letters Patent Appeals, Civil Revision Petitions, Civil Miscellaneous Appeals, Civil Miscellaneous Second Appeals, Referred trials, Criminal Appeals and Criminal Revision Petitions?

- 28 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information called for.

29 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state (i) what they propose to do in regard to the temporary Judges of the Madras High Court at the end of their present temporary period; (ii) whether they have sent up any proposal regarding the same to the Government of India and when; and (iii) whether they will make a statement to this Council on the subject?

- 29 A.—The matter is under correspondence with the Government of India and this Government regret that they are not in a position at present to furnish additional information.

30 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the reorganization of the nazarat establishments in the Presidency has been sanctioned and whether effect has been given to such reorganization?

- 30 A.—The reorganization has been sanctioned and the revised scale of pay took effect from April last.

31 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to inform this Council what steps have been taken by Government to provide separate nazarat and copyist establishments for each individual court?

- 31 A.—The matter is still under the consideration of the Government.

32 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the reply of the High Court on (i) the amendment of the Civil Courts Act to give power to the subordinate judicial officers to appoint their clerks, and (ii) on the general advisability of transferring District Court Sarishtadars once in three years as in the case of certain other judicial officers?

- 32 A.—The Government are not prepared to lay any papers on the table.

33 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of the amount collected in the various districts of the Presidency, especially in Coimbatore and North Arcot, on account of the removal of prickly-pear on the bunds of channels and irrigation tanks?

- 33 A.—The Government are not in possession of separate figures showing the recoveries made from ryots on account of the removal of prickly-pear from the bunds of channels and irrigation tanks.

34 Q.—With reference to the reply to question No. 58 put at the meeting of the Council held on 13th August 1918, regarding a Government grant to the Nilgiri Library at Ootacamund will the Government be pleased to state

- (i) whether any grant was given ten years ago to the library attached to the Students' Literary Association, Coimbatore; (ii) what are the reasons for the discontinuance of the grant; and (iii) whether the circumstances of this library differ from those of the Nilgiri Library at Ootacamund, which receives a grant?

(Mr. Ramanuja Achariyar; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

34 A.—(i) Yes.

(ii) The grant was one given under the Grant-in-Aid Code and it was decided that grants under that Code should not be given for assistance to associations or libraries not attached to educational institutions.

(iii) Yes.

Prohibition of export of rice from Muttupet to Colombo.

35 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have received a memorial from the merchants of Muttupet, Tanjore district, in regard to the prohibition of the export of rice from Muttupet to Colombo, and whether orders have been passed thereon?

35 A.—Yes. The memorialists were informed that their request could not be granted.

Defective irrigation in certain villages in Tiruturai-pundi taluk, Tanjore district.

36 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) whether they are aware of the defective irrigation of the villages of Pangal, Panangudi, Aiyur, Kothangudi, Sokkanathan Koil, Kachanam, Koodakuli, Panchaganthanallur and Alathamudi from the Pallavanar river in the Tiruturai-pundi taluk, Tanjore district;

(ii) whether the Revenue Settlement Officer remarked in 1893 in the Sanjaish accounts of the said villages that the Pallavanar irrigation was defective and that it should be improved;

(iii) whether the landholders concerned have been complaining to the Revenue and Public Works authorities of the district on the subject from 1877;

(iv) what steps the Government have taken till now to remedy the defect;

(v) why the improvements sanctioned by the Government in 1906 have not been carried out; and

(vi) what steps the Government propose to take in the matter?

36 A.—No information is available on the subject, but a report will be called for.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.

Places where looting took place.

37 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing (a) the places where looting took place in the Presidency within the last six months, (b) the amount of loss or damage which was caused by those looters, and (c) the steps taken by the authorities to prevent looting in those places?

37 A.—A statement* is laid on the table showing the places where looting is known to have occurred and the extent of the damage so far as information is available. All possible steps were taken by the authorities to prevent the spread of disorder.

Inquiry into deaths caused by the police firing on looters.

38 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state (1) whether any persons were killed owing to the action of the Magistrates or police officers in ordering fire to prevent such looting, and if so (2) how many and (3) in what places?

(b) If the answer to the above question is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether any inquiries were held as to the circumstances under which those persons were killed?

(c) If such inquiries were held, will the Government be pleased to state (1) who held inquiries in each of those cases, (2) how many persons were examined as witnesses, (3) how many of the persons examined are officials and how many of them are non-officials, (4) whether members of the public were given any opportunity to give evidence and (5) the result of those inquiries?

38 A.—The only such case reported relates to a riot at Chagalmari in the Kurnool district on the 8th June where one person was killed owing to the action of police engaged in quelling an outbreak of looting. The District Magistrate considered that the police were fully justified in firing but erred in failing to ensure that their fire in the first instance was effective. In this respect the conduct of the head constable in charge of the party has formed the subject of a departmental inquiry, but the Government have no particulars of the investigation held.

Control of prices of food-stuffs.

39 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they called for and obtained reports from the Collectors of districts before issuing the press communiqué, dated 28th September 1918, as to the control of prices of foodstuffs?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay those reports on the table?

39 A.—The collection of information regarding the stocks of food-grains in the districts, the prices of food-grains and the control of transport of food-grains has been entrusted to the Director of Civil Supplies, who is in constant communication with Collectors and it was therefore unnecessary to call for direct reports from Collectors before the issue of the communiqué in question.

* Printed as Appendix III on pages 291-292 infra.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.)

40 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state in what districts emergency committees of officials and non-officials were constituted to advise Collectors in matters affecting prices of foodstuffs?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether, before issuing the press communiqué referred to in the preceding question, they (1) called for or (2) obtained the opinions of such emergency committees regarding the necessity to control the prices of foodstuffs?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay those opinions on the table?

40 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is drawn to G.O. No. 2258, Revenue, dated the 13th June 1918, in which the formation of emergency committees was decided upon. It was there stated that the principal duty of these committees would be to bring home to the people of the district the need for economy, for avoidance of unnecessary demands on the railways, and for use of home products instead of imported supplies. It was added that the local experience of the members would enable them to advise the Collector and through him the Director of Civil Supplies as to the state of supplies and the need for priority certificates, but it was no part of the duties of the committees to advise regarding the necessity to control the prices of foodstuffs, and no reference was made to them on that question.

41 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of criminals in each of the criminal settlements in the Presidency?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state on what basis a recurring monthly grant of Rs. 3,250 to the American Baptist Mission was provided in the budget for 1918-19 for the management of the criminal settlement at Kavali, Nellore district?

(c) Is it a fact that the above criminal settlement is more expensive to the Government than the criminal settlements under the Salvation Army?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state reasons for the same?

41 A.—(a) A statement* compiled from the latest administration reports is laid on the table. The figures entered in column (2) represent the state of affairs at the end of 1917.

(b) The combined strength of the Kavali, Allur and Bitragunta settlements was expected to be about 1,300 and a recurring monthly grant of Rs. 3,250 was provided in the budget for 1918-19 towards the maintenance of the settlers at Rs. 2-8-0 per head.

(c) The answer is in the affirmative.

(d) The greater expense is due chiefly to the fact that at Kavali there is neither a plentiful or regular demand for unskilled labour nor enough cultivable land to form a genuine agricultural settlement as in the case of settlements managed by the Salvation Army.

42 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether effect has been given to the resolution for the appointment of non-official visitors for the criminal settlements, moved by me and accepted by the Council at the meeting held on 4th April 1918?

42 A.—The selection of non-official visitors has formed the subject of correspondence with the local officers which is now nearly complete and the Government hope shortly to make appointments.

43 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is proposed to increase the strength of the regular police to effect better surveillance over bad characters, and, if so, to what extent?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is proposed to increase the number of outposts in the Presidency, and, if so, to what extent and in what districts?

43 A.—The Government have no such proposals at present under consideration.

44 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that there has recently been a general revision of the house and land tax assessment books in the Tirupati Municipality?

(b) Is it a fact that the water and drainage tax has been recently raised from 4 to 6 per cent?

(c) Is it a fact that there has been no corresponding increase in the annual values of buildings and lands there?

(d) Is it a fact that the Pilgrims Committee and the Tirupati Municipal Council have recommended the imposition of a pilgrim tax?

(e) Has any inquiry been held as to the capacity of the rate-payers of Tirupati to bear additional municipal taxation after or before the receipt of the report of the Collector of Chittoor recommending the increase of the house-tax and the water and drainage tax?

* Printed as Appendix IV on page 293 infra.

Emergency committees to advise Collectors on prices of foodstuffs.

Grant to the American Baptist Mission for the management of criminal settlements.

Non-official visitors to criminal settlements.

Increase of strength of regular police.

Revision of taxes in the Tirupati Municipality.

(Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

(f) Have representations been received from the Municipal Council and the rate-payers of Tirupati objecting to the increase of tax on buildings and lands to 8½ per cent and of the water and drainage tax to 7 per cent after the issue of a notice by the Government under section 49 of the District Municipalities Act?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to suspend further action under section 49 of the District Municipalities Act pending further inquiry into the matter and the contemplated revision of the District Municipalities Act?

44 A.—(a) The house and land tax assessment books are reported to have been revised in 1917-18.

(b) The rate of the water and drainage tax was raised from 4 to 6 per cent on the annual value of buildings and lands with effect from the 1st April 1914. There has been no increase subsequent to that date.

(c) The Government have no information on the subject.

(d) Yes.

(e) No special inquiry has been made on the subject.

(f) No representation has been received from the Municipal Council; but one has been received from certain rate-payers.

(g) The Government are unable to accept the suggestion.

Statement of training schools.

45 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing

(a) the training schools for masters and mistresses in the Presidency;

(b) the number of applications received for admission into each of these schools; and

(c) the number of students admitted into each of these schools for training?

45 A.—(a) The Honourable Member is referred to the supplemental statistics published with the Reports on Public Instruction in the Madras Presidency.

(b) & (c) The Government are not in possession of the information.

Opening of additional training schools.

46 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether there are any proposals to open additional training schools for masters and mistresses during the next year, and, if so, in what places?

46 A.—Proposals are under formulation.

Elementary schools for the children of depressed classes.

47 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state
(i) the number of elementary schools for the children of depressed classes in the various districts of the Presidency during years 1916-17, 1917-18 and 1918-19, and
(ii) the number of pupils therein during these years?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, they wish to take to increase the number of such schools and of the pupils therein?

47 A.—(a) In 1916-17 there were 5,454 elementary schools for the children of Panchamas with a strength of 152,998 pupils; for 1917-18 the figures were 5,618 and 160,972 respectively. These figures do not take account of Panchama children who attend general elementary schools. Similar figures for 1918-19 are not available. The figures for 1917-18 for the several districts are shown in the annexed statement.* District figures for the other years are not available.

(b) The Government propose to continue the policy which has in the past led to a progressive increase in the number of schools specially provided for Panchama children.

Statement of irrigation projects under investigation.

48 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) what irrigation projects in the various districts of the Presidency are still under investigation,

(b) what progress has been achieved in their investigation,

(c) why there has been any delay in their investigation, and

(d) when their investigation is likely to be completed?

48 A.—A statement† giving the information asked for so far as it is available is laid on the table.

Statement of irrigation projects abandoned or postponed.

49 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) what irrigation projects have been considered by the Government during the last ten years but have been abandoned or indefinitely postponed; and
(b) why those projects were so abandoned or postponed?

49 A.—A statement‡ giving the information asked for is laid on the table.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

(Mr. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar; the Raja of Ramnad.)

The Hon'ble Mr. K. Chidambaranatha Mudaliyar.

50 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to ascertain and state the extent under wet cultivation in each revenue firka, and under dry cultivation in each taluk, under the chief crops, of this Presidency in each district on the 31st of October 1918, or other latest date possible, as also the extent harvested, if any, under each?

Area under wet and dry cultivation in this Presidency.

50 A.—The Government do not consider it necessary to call for the information asked for.

51 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the progress that has been made since 1st January 1918, up till now in the matter of securing to the Panchamas of the Tanjore district, as well as to other labourers, the ownership of the sites of the houses in which they live?

House-sites for Panchamas, Tanjore district.

51 A.—The appended statement* shows the progress made since 4th March 1918—the date on which the special deputy collector joined duty.

52 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the chief points considered by the Director of Civil Supplies, in his issue of certificates, allowing export of articles to prohibited areas?

Issue of certificates by the Director of Civil Supplies.

52 A.—The issue of certificates for food grains in the case referred to is regulated by the consideration of (1) the surplus available for export from the locality of export, (2) the necessity for the import of such grain into the locality of import, and (3) the maximum economy in the use of the railway.

53 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have taken or are prepared to take any steps to check the general rise in prices now prevailing?

Rise in prices of foodstuffs.

53 A.—The subject is under close consideration.

54 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the extent under wet cultivation in each revenue firka and under dry cultivation in each taluk under the chief crops of this Presidency on the 31st of October in the years 1916 and 1917 together with the extents harvested under each on that date?

Details of wet and dry cultivation in the Presidency.

54 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

55 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the average water-readings in the Cauvery at Kannambadi and at the Upper, Grand and Lower anicuts during each week in the months of June, July, August, September and October during this year with the average water-readings of the corresponding weeks during 1916 and 1917?

Average water-readings in the Cauvery at Kannambadi, etc.

55 A.—Statements† giving the information asked for are laid on the table.

56 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state fully

(a) the progress that has been made till now in the compilation of the Tamil Lexicon entrusted to the Syndicate of the University of Madras as per G.O. No. 991, Educational, dated 11th November 1912;

Progress in the compilation of the Tamil Lexicon.

(b) the date by which it may be expected to be published; and

(c) the expenditure till now incurred with the probable expenditure that may be incurred till its publication?

56 A.—(a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the periodical reports of the Tamil Lexicon Committee, printed in G.Os. No. 1368, Educational, dated the 31st October 1917, No. 1186, Educational, dated the 14th November 1916, No. 535, Educational, dated the 18th May 1915, and No. 532, Educational, dated the 9th May 1914, which have all been placed on the Editors' Table. Later reports have not yet been received. Some revised arrangements for the future conduct and management of the work have recently been sanctioned.

(b) According to present calculations, the Lexicon will not be ready for the press before January 1921.

(c) A sum of Rs. 53,500 has, till 1st April 1918, been placed at the disposal of the University for expenditure on the Lexicon. It is not possible to forecast with accuracy the further expenditure that may have to be incurred.

The Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad.

57 Q.—(a) Have the Government perused the leaderette in the Madras Mail, dated 6th August 1918, regarding the proposal for conserving power in the Periyar project for electric lighting and industrial purposes, made by Major Joly de Lotbinière?

Utilization of water power available at Periyar.

(b) Will the Government kindly make a statement upon the subject?

* Printed as Appendix VIII on page 300 infra.

† Printed as Appendix IX on pages 301-302 infra.

(The Raja of Ramnad ; Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

57 A.—At the request of the Madras Government, Major Joly de Lotbinière submitted, in the year 1904, a report on the utilization of water power at the Periyar Lake. Proposals in conformity with his recommendations were submitted to the Government of India in the year 1905, but they were disallowed on the ground that they involved a diminution in the supply of water available for irrigational purposes in years of short rainfall.

Lecturer in Gothic and Anglo-Saxon at the Presidency College.

58 Q.—(a) Are the Government aware that students of the Presidency College, Madras, go to the Madras Christian College to attend lectures on Gothic and Anglo-Saxon languages, ever since the departure of Professor Mark Hunter to Burma?

(b) Will the Government kindly appoint a suitable person in the Presidency College?

(c) If one should not be available from the Indian Educational Service for the purpose, will they kindly consider the desirability of appointing one from the Provincial Service?

58 A.—(a) Yes. The arrangement is only temporary.

(b) & (c) Action has been taken to obtain a suitable successor.

Circular of the District Magistrate, Ramnad, regarding copies of criminal complaints and first information reports.

59 Q.—Will the Government kindly call for the Ramnad District Magistrate's circular asking magistrates not to give copies of complaints or first information reports to accused before trial?

59 A.—The Government understand that no such circular was issued by the District Magistrate, Ramnad.

Public criticism on the Reforms Report.

60 Q.—Will the Government kindly give a list of persons and public bodies who are invited by them to offer remarks on the Reforms Report of His Excellency Lord Chelmsford and the Right Hon'ble E. S. Montagu?

60 A.—A list is laid on the table.*

Correspondence with the Madras Zamindars and Landholders' Association on reforms.

61 Q.—Will the Government kindly lay on the table a copy of their communication to the Madras Zamindars and Landholders' Association, No. 647, dated 25th July 1918, and of the reply memorandum, particulars of which appeared in Justice of the 10th September 1918?

61 A.—A copy† of the communication referred to, which was in terms similar to that addressed to other associations and individuals consulted regarding the report on Indian constitutional reforms is laid on the table. The replies cannot at present be published.

Listing of posts from the Provincial Service.

62 Q.—(a) Will the Government kindly state whether the appointment of three Collectors from the Provincial Service includes, or not, the present Secretary to Government in the Home Department?

(b) Will the Government kindly state why a third Collector has not been appointed from the Provincial Service?

62 A.—The subject is under correspondence with the Government of India.

Information regarding District Superintendents of Police recruited from Provincial Service.

63 Q.—(a) Will the Government kindly state

(1) the number of District Superintendents of Police recruited from the Provincial Service; and

(2) the names of persons who are holding the appointment permanently during the last ten years, excluding Mr. A. Subba Rao of the Imperial Service?

(b) If no one held the appointment permanently, will the Government kindly give the reasons?

(c) Will the Government kindly lay on the table the rules relating to these appointments?

63 A.—(a) (1) One.

(2) M.R.Ry. Diwan Bahadur P. Parankusam Nayudu Garu.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to order No. 43 of the Orders of the Madras Police, Volume I.

Payment by Government to religious institutions in respect of villages administered by Government on their behalf.

64 Q.—Will the Government kindly furnish the following:—

(1) a list of villages which are at present under the administration of Government, and which belong to religious institutions;

(2) the amount paid by Government as consolidated sum to each of these institutions every year; and

(3) copies of the agreements, if any, between the trustees of the several institutions and the Government regarding such arrangement?

64 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur A. T. G. M. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar.

Irrigation under the Vettar and Odambogiyar.

65 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that at the Engan regulator in the Vettar river where Odambogiyar takes off, morai is observed between Vettar and Odambogiyar?

(b) Is it a fact that the head of the Odambogiyar being an open head (without any regulator), the bed of the Odambogiyar has (since the construction of the regulator) been gradually becoming lower than the sill of the regulator at the Vettar (which is a fixed level)?

* Printed as Appendix X on pages 302-303 infra.

† Printed as Appendix XI on page 303 infra.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Ahmad Tambi Marakkayar ; Mr. Siva Rao.)

(c) Is it a fact that even on Vettar morai days, no water can go in Vettar unless the water in the river above the regulator is higher than two feet and that if the water is less all the water goes only in Odambogiyar?

(d) Is it a fact that the Public Works Department has already proposed to construct a regulator across the Odambogiyar at its head to regulate the morai proportionately to the irrigated area?

(e) If an estimate is ready, will Government direct the execution of the work at the next working season (February to May 1919)?

65 A.—(a) Yes.

(b), (c), (d) & (e) The information asked for is not available, but a report has been called for.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao.

66 Q.—(i) With reference to the question No. 150 put by me at the meeting of 13th August 1918 regarding typists in revenue divisional offices, will the Government be pleased to state whether there are clerks who are now doing 'typist's' work in the revenue divisional offices?

Clerks working as typists in revenue divisional offices.

(ii) Will the Government be pleased to sanction 'typists' formally in the revenue divisional offices and allow them same scale of pay as in other offices?

66 A.—(i) Yes.

(ii) The Government will consider the suggestion.

67 Q.—(i) Will the Government be pleased to state whether permit-fee for grazing a cow in the Yerramalai hills in the Kurnool range has been raised in the current year from 3 annas to one rupee in the case of 'Sugalis,' while it is only 3 annas in the case of others?

Increase of grazing fees as against 'Sugalis.'

(ii) If so, will the Government be pleased to state why the increase was made in the case of 'Sugalis' alone and lay on the table all the papers relating to it?

(iii) Are the Government aware that these 'Sugalis' live chiefly by cowherding and supply bulls and manure to agriculturists?

(iv) Will the Government be pleased to reduce the permit-fee to 3 annas in the case of the 'Sugalis' as before?

67 A.—(i) & (ii) The Government have recently given their sanction to the levy of a special grazing rate of Re. 1 per cow unit in the case of all Lambady (Sugali) cattle excepting those required for bona fide cultivation. The object of this special rate which is reported to have been substantially in force since 1912 under orders issued by the Collector, was to induce the Lambadies to resort to the pentas in the reserved forests rather than continue the practice which has recently grown up of penning their cattle in the neighbourhood of the already overcrowded village grazing grounds, and so depriving the village cattle of their pasture.

The rate for ordinary cattle has now been raised to 8 annas.

The Government do not consider it necessary to publish the papers.

(iii) The Government are aware that the Lambadies are professional graziers.

(iv) They are not prepared to take the action suggested.

68 Q.—(i) Is it a fact that in the Kurnool range the permit-fee for one cartload of 'green-manure' has been recently raised from Re. 1 to Rs. 2? If so, will the Government be pleased to state what led to this increase and to lay on the table all the papers relating to this matter?

Increase of permit-fee for green manure in the Kurnool range.

(ii) Will the Government be pleased to reduce the permit-fee to the former rate of Re. 1?

68 A.—The removal of green manure leaves from reserved forests is incompatible with the real protection of forest growth. The policy of Government supported by the opinion of the Forest Committee has therefore been to restrict the removal as much as possible by gradually raising the seigniorage. Indirectly this should induce the ryots to grow their own green manure. In accordance with this policy, the Board of Revenue issued orders on 9th April 1918 raising the seigniorage rate in the Kurnool district from Re. 1 to Rs. 2 per cartload. The Government do not consider it necessary to publish the papers or to examine the question of reducing the rate.

69 Q.—With reference to the question No. 152 put by me at the last meeting of the Legislative Council held on 13th August 1918, will the Government be pleased to state whether they have since considered the memorial submitted by the district registrars and sub-registrars? If so, what orders have been passed thereon?

Reorganization of the Registration Department.

69 A.—The memorials of the district registrars have been considered and the Government of India are being addressed on the subject. The memorials of the sub-registrars will be dealt with after the memorials of the district registrars are disposed of.

(Mr. Siva Rao ; Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

Investigation of the Kinnu Vattam
channel,
Chingleput.

70 Q.—With reference to the question No. 146 put by me at the last meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 13th of August 1918, will the Government be pleased to state whether the investigation of the Kinnu Vattam channel in Kaliaupundi and other villages has been completed? If so, with what result?

70 A.—Plans and estimates are under preparation by the Executive Engineer, Chingleput division.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO :—“ With reference to question No. 70 may I know whether the scheme has been sanctioned? The answer to my question is ‘plans and estimates are under preparation by the Executive Engineer, Chingleput division’. I wish to know whether any scheme has been sanctioned by the Government and whether the repair will be taken up.”

The Hon'ble Mr. W. J. J. HOWLEY :—“ The scheme has not yet been sanctioned. The report has not yet come in from the Executive Engineer.”

Free-student-ships in
schools.

71 Q.—With reference to my question No. 155 put at the last meeting held on August 1918, will the Government be pleased to state whether the free-studentships up to 10 per cent on the rolls in secondary schools have been sanctioned by the Government? If not, will the Government be pleased to give their early and favourable consideration to the matter?

71 A.—The matter is still under consideration.

Girls' high schools and manual
centres.

72 Q.—With reference to the question No. 159 put by me at the last meeting held in August 1918, will the Government be pleased to state whether the location of the four high schools for girls and of the six manual training centres has now been settled? Will the Government be pleased to locate a girls' school and a manual training centre in the Ceded Districts?

72 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 1276, Home (Education), dated the 25th September 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table, as regards the new secondary schools for girls. The consideration of the questions connected with the opening of manual training centres has not yet been completed. The claims of the Ceded districts will receive due consideration.

Report on the condition of Indian refreshment rooms on railways.

73 Q.—In relation to questions Nos. 162 and 14 put at the last meeting held in August, will the Government be pleased to state whether the report on the question of the Indian refreshment rooms has been received? If so, will the Government be pleased to place it on the table and to state what action has been taken thereon?

73 A.—The Government have just received a copy of the Senior Government Inspector's report to the Railway Board. The Railway Board's intentions as to publication are not yet known.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. K. R. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar.

Construction of the Palamanthol bridge in Malabar
district.

74 Q.—In view of the remarks of the President, District Board, Malabar, in his last administration report, and in view of the great difficulty experienced by the public, will Government be pleased to recommend the starting of the construction of the Palamanthol bridge, as soon as the plans and estimates are ready, in the hope that iron materials may be procured by the time they become necessary?

74 A.—The suggestion made by the Honourable Member at the budget meeting last April that an arched masonry bridge should be constructed over the Palamanthol river has been referred to the Malabar District Board for consideration together with the plans and estimates for a girder bridge received from the Superintending Engineer. The further action to be taken now rests with the district board.

Disposal of
owned by the Basel Mission.

75 Q.—With reference to Government's answer to my question No. 87 at the Council meeting on 12th February 1918, will the Government be pleased to state what decision, if any, has been arrived at in the matter of the disposal of more of the industries owned or controlled by the Basel German Mission in Malabar?

75 A.—The matter is still under the consideration of higher authorities.

Private programme in Malabar

Government for public purpose.

76 Q.—With reference to Government's answer to my question No. 49 at the Council meeting on 6th February 1917, will the Government be pleased to state whether the inquiry referred to has been completed and whether Government is now in a position to furnish the information?

76 A.—The reply to clauses (a) to (d) of the Honourable Member's question No. 49 at the Council meeting of 6th February 1917 is as follows :—

- (a) Such cases may have occurred but are not on record.
(b), (c) & (d) The answer is in the negative.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Kavalappara Muppil Nayar ; Mr. Rama Ayyangar.)

77 Q.—(a) With reference to the recent Government Order regarding minute subdivision of agricultural holdings, will the Government be pleased to state the nature of Mr. Paddison's proposals and the rearrangement referred to in paragraph 4 of the Government Order? Minute sub-division of agricultural holdings.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to order the papers on the subject to be placed on the table?

77 A.—The reports * of the officers consulted including that of Mr. Paddison are laid on the table.

78 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that the pay of sanitary inspectors in this Presidency is nearly a half of what their brethren are paid in other Presidencies? Pay of sanitary inspectors.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to consider an improvement in their case as soon as financial conditions permit?

78 A.—(a) The Government have no information.

(b) The pay of sanitary inspectors in municipalities was fixed on a time scale in February 1917. The minimum pay of sanitary inspectors employed under local boards has been fixed and it is open to a local board, for sufficient reasons, to give higher pay in individual cases. The Government are not aware of any reason why the matter should now be further considered.

79 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that Local Governments were empowered by the Government of India in 1914 to promote sub-assistant surgeons to the rank of civil assistant surgeons under certain conditions? Promotion of sub-assistant surgeons to the rank of civil assistant surgeons.

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether the benefit of this concession has been allowed in any; if so, in how many cases in this Presidency?

79 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer to question No. 138 put by him at the meeting of this Council on the 21st November 1916. There has been no promotion of this kind since that date.

The Hon'ble Mr. K. Rama Ayyangar.

80 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the several reports of the District Magistrate, the District Superintendent of Police and the Deputy Inspector-General of Police on the incident of shooting in the Madura Collector's office compound on the 27th of September last? Reports on the recent incidents in Madura.

80 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

81 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state On the recent incidents in Madura.

(a) At what hour and how many of the reserve constables were taken to the Collector's office compound on the 27th September—the day of the incident referred to in the preceding question?

(b) What equipment did each of the officers and the reserve police men take with him when proceeding to the Collector's office compound?

(c) When and by whom was it decided that fire-arms would have to be loaded and used that day? Where were the carbines that were used that day kept before they were taken to the Collector's office compound?

(d) Who gave the orders to get those carbines to the Collector's office compound and who actually brought them there and when?

(e) When (at what hour to the minute) were the cartridges distributed to the policemen? How many were so distributed and how many rifles were in the compound that day and with whom?

(f) Were all the rifles examined before and after the incident and by whom, and were any bullets discharged from the rifles?

(g) Were all the muskets examined before and after the incident and by whom? Who were the constables whose muskets had been emptied by firing?

(h) How many muskets remained unloaded? Who gave the order to fire?

(i) Was any precautionary action taken to see that only a few cartridges were used at first or that notice of firing was given beforehand? Did any of the police constables come with loaded muskets in the compound? Was there an order to load? Did all persons load only after the order to load was given?

(j) Is it a fact that the shots were all sent in the direction in which Dr. P. Varadarajulu's carriage went out? If so, is there any reason ascertained for that direction being aimed at?

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar.)

[19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

81 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table. The Government have received from the Inspector-General of Police Mr. Pelly's report of the results of the departmental inquiry held with regard to the conduct of the police. This confirms the District Magistrate's view and the Government accept the joint conclusions arrived at by Mr. Pelly and the Inspector-General that no order to load or to fire was given, that in the excitement of the moment certain constables loaded their carbines without orders and that the first shot was accidental, being followed by other shots fired under the mistaken impression that a proper order to fire had been given.

Service of the District Superintendent of Police at Madura.

82 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) What is the total service of the District Superintendent of Police at Madura?
(b) How long had he acted as Superintendent of Police, in what places, and during what periods before he was posted to Madura?

82 A.—(a) Nearly eight years.

(b) He had not acted as Superintendent of Police in any other district before he was posted to Madura.

Particulars regarding the sending of military troops to Madura.

83 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the report by which the military troops were asked to be sent to Madura and the date on which they reached Madura? What were all the subsequent communications which desired further despatch of military troops to Madura?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number and equipments and the dates of the despatch of the various troops that were sent?
(c) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the troops have been since withdrawn?

83 A.—The District Magistrate telegraphed on the 26th September to the Officer Commanding, Trichinopoly, in the following terms:—
"Please send immediately Madura 200 troops for ten days."
The troops asked for arrived on the following day. The Government have no details as to their equipment. It has been ascertained that the only troops now remaining in Madura are three officers and 103 men.

Reports on the recent incidents in Madura.

84 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that about the time of the firing the European residents of the town came dressed in military uniform towards the Thamukkam?
(b) If so, has there been an inquiry made to ascertain the reason for such action?

84 A.—The presence of some troopers of the Southern Provinces Mounted Rifles was due to the orders of the District Magistrate.

Inquiry into the state of unrest in Madura.

85 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to order a thorough inquiry into the condition of the state of unrest in Madura from the time of the mill strike to the date of the shooting incident?

85 A.—The Government do not consider it necessary to adopt the suggestion of the Honourable Member.

Failure of the Barur tank project.

86 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state:
(a) whether it is a fact that the present irrigable area and the revenue derived from the Barur tank project has considerably fallen short of the original expectations;
(b) if the answer is in the affirmative, whether any investigation has been made in the past to ascertain the cause of the failure of the scheme;
(c) whether any representation has been received in the matter from persons interested in the project complaining of irregular distribution of water and defects in the system; and
(d) what action the Government have taken or propose to take in the matter to make the project financially successful?

86 A.—(a) to (c) Yes.

(d) The question of the reduction of the ayacut of the tank to the limit up to which irrigation can ordinarily be guaranteed is now under correspondence. There seems no prospect of the system ever becoming a financial success.

Failure of the Barur tank project.

87 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the original G.O. No. 124 I., Public Works, dated 11th February 1881, sanctioning the Barur tank project and all subsequent correspondence which might have led to the project being condemned as a failure?

87 A.—The Government do not think that any useful purpose would be served by printing the Government Order referred to and the voluminous subsequent correspondence; but they will endeavour to arrange for the issue of a press communiqué giving a history of the project and its working up to date.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar.)

88 Q.—Whether the Government would be pleased to depute a special officer not below the rank of an Executive Engineer to investigate the possibilities of extension of irrigation under the Barur tank project in association with the Revenue Divisional Officer and other non-official gentlemen who might be selected?

Proposal to extend irrigation under the Barur tank project.

88 A.—The Government are not prepared to adopt the suggestion.

89 Q.—Whether the Government would independently of the investigation referred to in the preceding question order the establishment of water meters to determine the supply of water available both from the Ponnai river under the Barur tank system, and from the drainage of the catchment area of the tank; and whether they will order the readings to be taken by the Public Works Department Subdivisional office once in a fortnight for three or four years in the event of the Government deciding not to undertake any scheme of importance for increasing the supply for the successful irrigation of the entire area commanded by the project?

Establishment of water meters to determine the supply from the Ponnai river and the catchment area of the Barur tank.

89 A.—No object would be gained by installing water meters and taking fortnightly readings, as gauges in the supply channel and tank are now read daily.

90 Q.—Whether the Government would consider the advisability of transferring the duty of distributing water to the Revenue Department under the Barur tank system in view of possible abuse of authority on the part of lascars and sub-overseers in regulating water?

Transfer to the Revenue Department of the duty of distributing water under the Barur tank.

90 A.—The advisability of transferring to the Revenue Department the duty of distributing water will be considered.

91 Q.—Was there a strike among the labourers in the Madura Mills in August last? How many labourers were affected? When did the Government first have information about the strike?

Labour strike in the Madura Mills.

91 A.—A strike which ultimately involved 5,000 hands occurred in August and was reported to the Government at the time.

92 Q.—(a) Did the mill owners inform the Government that the mill hands had no grievances? Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the correspondence (telegrams and letters) from the mill authorities to all the officers of Government?
(b) Did the Government ascertain whether the mill hands had grievances and what action did they take?

Labour strike in the Madura Mills.

92 A.—(a) The answer to both portions is in the negative.
(b) The endeavours of the Government have been limited to the promotion, through the agency of the District Magistrate, of an amicable settlement in the interests of public order.

93 Q.—(a) How many hours do the labourers work in the Madura Mills? from what hour to what hour? What is the condition of the health of the labourers?
(b) Will the Government be pleased to inquire into the physical condition of the labourers and children in the Madura Mills and take steps to assure themselves of the safety and health of the labourers and proper education of the children employed? How many of the children go to school?

Labour conditions in the Madura Mills.

93 A.—The Government are not in full possession of the information requested but will consult the District Magistrate.

94 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a full report of the causes that led to the recent disturbances at Kamuthi and the steps that have been taken to ensure peace in Kamuthi and the surrounding parts?

Disturbances at Kamuthi, Ramanad district.

94 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2550, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

95 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) if any decision has been arrived at about the reorganization of the Police department by dividing districts into subdivisional charges under Assistant or Deputy Superintendents of Police;

Reorganization of the Police department.

(b) if, in such reorganization, the District Superintendents of Police will be in charge of any subdivision with power to take charge of any of the other subdivisions, that he might like, exchanging his charge with that of an Assistant or Deputy Superintendent of Police;

(c) if the system of inspectors being placed in charge of circles over a number of Station-house officers is proposed to be continued, and, if so, to what extent?

95 A.—The matter is still under the consideration of Government.

(Mr. Rama Ayyangar; Mr. Venkatapati Raju.)

[19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

Drainage under Perunkulam, Marudur ancient system.

96 Q.—With reference to the answers to questions Nos. 78 and 146 at the meeting of the Legislative Council dated 25th May 1915 and 23rd November 1915, respectively, regarding a scheme of drainage to wet lands under Perunkulam tank Marudur ancient system, will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether the detailed plans and estimates called for have been prepared and approved;

(b) when the Government expects the scheme to be taken on hand and finished; and

(c) in view of the delay in taking up the matter, will the Government be pleased to issue strict orders that the work must be carried out within a time to be prescribed by the Government?

96 A.—An estimate amounting to Rs. 46,570 for improving the drainage of wet land under the Perunkulam tank has been sanctioned for execution as a part-contribution work. The ryots' share is Rs. 23,435 and the Superintending Engineer has been instructed to put the work in hand as soon as their contribution has been collected. The work will be carried out as expeditiously as possible.

Particulars regarding port and coast
lights-keepers.

97 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table statements showing (1) particulars of men employed in various lighthouses in the Presidency, with their service, pay and educational qualifications, giving reasons, where necessary, for promotions withheld, if any; (2) the number of Europeans and Indians employed severally in the port and coast lights; and (3) the maximum pay provided for and actually given to Indians and Eurasians, respectively?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to issue orders that Indians and Eurasians in the lighthouse service be given the same footing with regard to pay and prospects and in reference to transfers from one group to the other?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to issue orders that transfers of light-keepers in future be restricted as far as possible to their own neighbourhood or at least to the same language area?

97 A.—(a) The Government have no information on the subject, as the appointment, promotion and transfer of light-keepers are in the hands of the Presidency Port Officer.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to his question No. 41 put at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 3rd April 1918. So far as the Government are aware, these appointments, promotions and transfers are governed by considerations of fitness.

(c) As stated in answer to clause (a), the transfer of light-keepers is in the hands of the Presidency Port Officer and the Government are not prepared to restrict the discretion of that officer by executive instructions of the kind suggested by the Honourable Member.

Transfers of light-housekeepers.

98 Q.—(a) Are the Government aware of the fact that several transfers of light-keepers were lately ordered from one end of the Presidency to the other not apparently in view of economical working of the department and that reasonable applications for re-transfers have been left unnoticed?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing the number of senior light-keepers who lost their promotions and were passed over by juniors, for having pleaded their inability to accept transfers to distant places?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state on what grounds such wholesale transfers were made?

98 A.—(a) The Government have no information on the subject.

(b) & (c) No.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju.

Estimated revenue from the proposed water-rates.

99 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the amount of revenue that is estimated to be realized by the water-rates recently proposed to be levied?

99 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answers given to question No. 32 asked at the meeting of the Council held in August 1918.

Water-rates levied under first-class irrigation sources.

100 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to publish a comparative table of water-rates levied in several provinces under first-class irrigation sources?

100 A.—The Government are not in possession of any such comparative table of water-rates.

Average net returns on productive irrigation works.

101 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to publish the average net returns of last year in several provinces on productive irrigation works?

101 A.—The average net return of last year 1917-18 in the Madras Presidency on productive irrigation works is 9.95 per cent. The figures for other provinces are not available.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

(Mr. Venkatapati Raju.)

102 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any arrangements are made to facilitate the maintenance and rearing of goats as they are absolutely prohibited from entering the reserved forests?

Facilities for goat rearing.

102 A.—No special arrangements have been made, but large areas of reserved forests have been disafforested during the last three years and are now open to goat browsing.

103 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any Uriya pandit is engaged to look after Uriya works in the Oriental Manuscripts Library?

Uriya pandit for the Oriental Manuscripts
Library.

103 A.—The answer is in the negative.

104 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to publish the market prices prevalent in Madras and other municipal towns during the months of July, August, September and October 1918 of the foodstuffs, cloths and other necessities of life so far as they are available?

Publication of the market prices of foodstuffs, etc., in the Presidency.

104 A.—The market prices of the chief food-grains and salt have been published each month in the Fort St. George Gazette. The Government do not receive regular returns of the price of cloths and other necessities of life.

105 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the localities where scarcity rates of foodstuffs are prevalent?

Localities where scarcity rates of foodstuffs prevail.

105 A.—The following statement is laid on the table:—

Foodstuffs.	Districts in which scarcity rate prevailed on 2nd November 1918.
Rice	Kurnool, Madura and Tinnevely.
Ragi	Anantapur.
Cholam	Godavari, Guntur, Kurnool, Bellary, Anantapur, Cuddapah, Salem, Coimbatore and Tinnevely.
Cumbu	Guntur, Kurnool, Anantapur and Salem.

106 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the taluks where paddy cultivation suffered for want of timely rains?

Taluks where paddy cultivation suffered for want of rains.

106 A.—The information, so far as it is yet available, will be found in the weekly season reports published in each issue of the Fort St. George Gazette, but as the agricultural season is not yet over, information cannot at present be complete.

107 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to start a coconut agricultural station either in Amalapur or Razole taluk where coconut plantation is extensive?

A coconut agricultural station in the Amalapur or Razole taluk.

107 A.—The Government do not propose to open coconut stations at Amalapur or Razole just now.

108 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any veterinary hospital or dispensary in the Agency tracts and whether it is proposed to open one at an early date?

Opening of a veterinary hospital or dispensary in the Agency tracts.

108 A.—There is a veterinary dispensary at Bhadrachalam and one will be opened at Polavaram during 1919.

109 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Boggeru project and Vengalapuram project of Nellore district are given up or will be pushed through?

State of the Boggeru and Vengalapuram projects in Nellore district.

109 A.—It was decided in November 1915 to abandon the Boggeru project as it did not fulfil the conditions of a productive, protective, or even a famine-relief work. As regards the Vengalapuram project, final orders on the plans and estimates are held over pending the result of an inquiry whether the ryots concerned are willing to pay the rates necessary to make the scheme productive.

110 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any public accounts are available to find out the existing number of agricultural live-stock and available pasturage for the same, by villages, and whether the figures are arrived at by actual census and survey or by guess work of kurnam?

Information on agricultural live-stock and pasturage.

110 A.—A census of the agricultural live-stock in every village is taken once in every five years and the figures for districts are published in Appendix G to the Season and Crop report. The extent of land reserved as common grazing ground in each village is given in Village Account No. 2. The census figures are obtained by the usual census methods.

111 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to make arrangements for maintaining stud-bulls either by the Government or local bodies at every veterinary hospital or dispensary instead of abolishing breeding operations altogether by selling the existing seven stud-bulls?

Maintenance of stud-bulls.

(Mr. Venkatapati Raju.)

[19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

111 A.—The seven stud-bulls referred to have already been disposed of as they were found unserviceable by the Agricultural department which has assumed control of stock-breeding operations in the Presidency. Stud-bulls are maintained at the Coimbatore, Anakapalle, Hagari, Nandyal, Mangalore and Kovilpatti agricultural stations.

A scheme for encouraging the better maintenance of stud-bulls by agricultural and co-operative societies and by private individuals has been sanctioned in G.O. No. 2477, dated 4th November 1916, placed on the Editors' Table. The Government do not consider it necessary to maintain stud-bulls at veterinary institutions.

Expenditure under breeding operations.

112 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the nature of expenditure of Rupees 1,291-11-0 under the Head of Breeding operation simultaneously with its obituary notice in the administration report of the Civil Veterinary department for 1917-18?

112 A.—The amount represents the charges incurred in the maintenance of breeding bulls till they were disposed of during the latter part of the year.

Reorganization of the inspectorate of schools.

113 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any proposal for a reorganization of the inspectorate of schools and whether it will be published for public criticism before final acceptance?

113 A.—The question of the general reorganization of the inspecting agency is being held in abeyance pending receipt of the orders of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission in regard to educational services. The Government are unable to entertain the suggestion contained in the latter part of the question.

Preservation of pasturage in villages.

114 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any order of Government that a definite area shall be kept as pasture land in every village, and, if so, whether any steps are taken to preserve the pasturage thereon?

114 A.—There is no rule requiring a definite area to be kept as pasture land in every village. The Honourable Member will find the rules regarding repression of encroachment on porambokes in Board's Standing Order No. 26.

Lease of Government channel bunds in the Godavari and Kistna deltas for planting coconut trees.

115 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether the available Government channel bunds in the Godavari and Kistna deltas are utilized by planting coconut trees; and
(b) whether the Government is prepared to lease out the same for private parties for planting coconuts on such terms approved by the Government as to avoid obstructions to traffic and repairs and on payment of revenue on graduated scale?

115 A.—(a) Material is not available to answer so general a question.
(b) Each case will be considered on its merits as it arises.

Plantation of road avenues.

116 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether local boards will be instructed to employ private agency for the planting of road avenues in the localities where shade avenue growing is neither profitable nor self-supporting?

116 A.—G.O. No. 107 L., dated 24th January 1918, is laid on the table.

Silk industry in the Presidency.

117 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state
(a) whether a Sericultural Superintendent has been appointed in our Presidency to look after silk industries;
(b) whether steps will be taken to establish nurseries to supply the seeds required by the rearers;
(c) whether loans will be granted under the Land Improvement Loans Act for building silk-rearing houses; and
(d) whether district overseers will be appointed to educate the rearers in the improved method of reeling process and to look after the growth of silk industry in various directions?

117 A.—(a) The Government have decided to appoint a Sericultural Expert for the Presidency.
(b), (c) & (d) The preparation of a detailed scheme of work can be considered only after the expert has reported.

Establishment of co-operative educational committees.

118 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether co-operative educational committees will be started in localities where co-operative banks are established for the purpose of organizing free night schools and technical classes and reading rooms or libraries where works on co-operation are made available in vernaculars and whether the Government will contribute a moiety of the expenditure for the aforesaid purpose?

118 A.—No such proposals as are referred to in the question seem to have reached the Government at present and therefore the question of a Government contribution for such purposes has not been considered.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

(Mr. Sadasiva Bhat.)

The Hon'ble Mr. K. Sadasiva Bhat.

119 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to make a statement with reference to Malabar and South Kanara as to

(a) the approximate outturn of the last crop as compared with the outturn in ordinary years;

(b) the condition of the standing crops; and

(c) the stocks of food-grains available in the two districts and their sufficiency till the next harvest?

119 A.—(a) & (b) The information, so far as it is yet available, will be found in the weekly season reports which are published in each issue of the Fort St. George Gazette.

(c) A revised estimate of the stock of foodstuffs has been called for from all districts. Pending its receipt the Government are unable to furnish the information asked for.

120 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to ascertain and state the approximate extent of the area in the districts of Malabar and South Kanara of land cultivated in normal years but left uncultivated or which yielded no crop owing to unseasonal or deficient rainfall?

120 A.—The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the monthly cultivation statement which is published in the Fort St. George Gazette. The statement for September shows the following results:—

	South Kanara.	Malabar.
	ACS.	ACS.
Cultivation up to the month	497,509	1,344,985
Average of previous five years	522,988	1,357,433
Reduction in 1918	4.8 per cent.	0.9 per cent.

No other information is available or can be obtained until the next monthly statement is published.

121 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state if final orders have been passed in the matter of revising the sandalwood transport rules in South Kanara? If any orders have been passed, will the Government be pleased to place them on the table?

121 A.—Final orders have not yet been passed.

122 Q.—(a) Is it a fact that it has been proposed to depute about 25 deputy collectors for training in survey and settlement work in a special survey school?
(b) What is the estimated expenditure of the scheme including the travelling allowances and the higher salaries to be paid to the relieving officers?
(c) Will the Government be pleased to restrict the training to such officers only as are likely to be actually employed on special settlement duty?

122 A.—(a) No.
(b) & (c) The Government decided in August last that the training in survey and settlement, which, under orders hitherto in force, had been compulsory on all deputy collectors, shall in future be obligatory only in the case of deputy collectors who are appointed direct and who therefore have not served in the grade of revenue inspector. Only one deputy collector is accordingly being trained this year.

123 Q.—(a) Has the Kerala Janmi Sabha submitted a memorial to Government dated 9th September 1918 regarding the grant of quit-rent pattas in respect of certain sites and other grievances of the janmis of Malabar?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state if it has held any inquiry into these grievances and if so with what result?

(c) If not, will the Government be pleased to direct an inquiry into the grievances referred to?

123 A.—The memorial referred to in the question has not been received.

124 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state (i) what steps are proposed to be taken or whether they have framed any programme in the light of the Government of India resolution for the extension of elementary education and (ii) for the utilization of the Imperial grant of Rs. 5½ lakhs for elementary education?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to ascertain the number of villages with a population of over 1,000 in Malabar and South Kanara which have no public elementary schools and call for proposals or suggestions from the local and other public bodies in the districts regarding their needs in that direction?

Outturn of crops in Malabar and South Kanara.

Decrease of cultivated area in Malabar and South Kanara owing to unfavourable season.

Revision of sandalwood transport rules in South Kanara.

Training of deputy collectors in survey and settlement work.

Grievances of janmis of Malabar.

Extension of elementary education.

(Mr. Sadasiva Bhat; Mr. Ranga Achariyar;
the President.)

[19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

- 124 A.—(a) (i) No separate action has been taken on the resolution in question. The Bill to provide for the expansion and development of elementary education in the Presidency which is now under the consideration of Government will indicate the necessary action in this respect. (ii) The Director of Public Instruction has been asked to submit proposals for the distribution of the grant. These have not been received in full.
- (b) The Honourable Member is referred to the supplemental statistics issued with the annual report on Public Instruction. The Government do not consider it necessary to take any special action as suggested by the Honourable Member.

Stipend for Malabar and South Kanara students in the Coimbatore Medical school. 125 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to offer special stipends for Malabar and South Kanara students at the Coimbatore Medical school as is done in the case of Telugu and Kanarese students from the Ceded districts at the Vizagapatam school?

125 A.—The supply of west coast students being sufficient, the Government do not consider that the course suggested is necessary.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. Ranga Achariyar.

Development of sandalwood oil industry. 126 Q.—With reference to my question No. 33 put at the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 13th August 1918 and the answer thereto, regarding the development of the sandalwood oil industry will the Government be pleased to state whether any report has been received from the Special officer deputed to collect information regarding the trade in sandalwood oil, and if so, whether they will lay the same on the table; and also state what action they propose to take in order to develop that industry?

126 A.—The report has been received and is under the consideration of Government.

Cultivation of a variety of paddy in Tanjore. 127 Q.—With reference to my question No. 42 put at the meeting of the Council on the 13th August 1918, and the answer thereto, regarding the cultivation of a certain variety of paddy in the Tanjore district will the Government be pleased to state whether they have received any report from the Director of Agriculture, and if so, whether they will lay the same on the table?

127 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to paragraph 34 on page 17, paragraph 9 on page 61, and paragraph 9 on page 79 of the report on the operations of the Agricultural Department for 1917-18 which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

Penalty on primary school pupils seeking admission into secondary schools. 128 Q.—With reference to my question No. 43 put at the meeting of the Council on the 13th August 1918, and the answer thereto, will the Government be pleased to state whether any and what orders they have passed on the recommendations of the conference appointed by Government to discuss educational matters especially with regard to the imposition of penalty on primary school pupils seeking admission into secondary schools and the abolition thereof?

128 A.—The matter is still under consideration.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"With reference to question No. 128, may I know when the orders of the Government may be expected? The matter has been long under consideration."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"The same question has been put by the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao. The matter will be expedited as far as possible."

Elementary Education Bill.

129 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state

(a) whether the committee appointed by the Government to consider the proposed Elementary Education Bill have made any report, and, if so, what action has been taken in the matter; and

(b) what were the recommendations of the conference on the subject assembled by the Government in May last and what action has been taken in the matter?

129 A.—There have been two conferences of officials and non-officials on the subject of the proposed Elementary Education Bill, the first was held at Madras in November 1917, and the second in May 1918 at Ootacamund; these conferences were informal, and they did not draw up any reports. It is not intended to publish their proceedings which will be treated as confidential; but they have been fully and carefully considered in the drafting of the Bill.

Statistics of voters and electors in taluk boards and municipalities.

130 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing (a) the number of voters for the election of members to each of the taluk boards in the Presidency; (b) the number of electors for the election of members of municipalities in each of the district municipalities in the Presidency; and

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; Mr. Annamalai Chettiyar.)

(c) the number of income-tax assesses within the limits of each taluk board or municipality in the Presidency, giving details of the member paying (i) over Rs. 30 and under Rs. 50, and (ii) over Rs. 50?

130 A.—(a) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 23 asked at the meeting held on the 13th August 1918. The information required has not yet been received from all districts.

(b) A statement* showing the number of electors in district municipalities in 1917-18, as compiled from the administration report statements, is placed on the table.

(c) The Government are not in possession of the information.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"With reference to question No. 130, clause (c), will the Government be pleased to call for information?"

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"If the Honourable Member will write and say why he wants the information, the Government will consider whether it is worth while to call for the information. He will kindly write and tell me."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur S. R. M. Annamalai Chettiyar.

131 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to make a full statement of the methods they have adopted or intend to adopt for the alleviation of the suffering of the people caused by the high price of food-grains and the total failure of the monsoon?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to direct Collectors to collect statistics of the approximate consumption of food-grains and garden crops during the past year, and of the actual stocks held thereof at present and of the quantities likely to be harvested in each district, and if the supply would not meet the immediate and the future demand in the various districts of this Presidency on the basis of the above statistics, will the Government be pleased to arrange for the importation from all available sources both from within and outside this province the quantities required?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to issue immediately an order absolutely prohibiting the exportation of the commodities referred to above except in cases where there are surpluses to places outside this province, either by land or by sea?

(d) Will Government be pleased to take power if necessary to compel producers to sell all their surplus stock both present and incoming and to fix their sale prices on an average rate of prices based upon those that prevailed in the districts during the five years of 1911 to 1915?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to take power if necessary to fix the quantities to be sold at a time and the percentage of profits at which traders in these commodities should sell them to the public in the several districts, and to permit such sale to be carried on only by traders licensed by the Collectors, the licence to contain the necessary penal clauses if the restrictions suggested above are infringed by them?

131 A.—(a) to (c) A statement on these points will be made in connexion with the resolutions on the subject which appear on the agenda paper.

132 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to make a full statement of all the powers exercised at present by the Director of Civil Supplies and the advisory and the publicity boards with reference to the supply and transport of commodities within and to places outside the province?

132 A.—The duties of Directors of Civil Supplies are to consider stocks of foodstuffs and other necessities, to receive and examine applications from merchants and others for the movement of traffic, to scrutinize demands and reports sent by district officers, to consult with the Railway authorities as to the movement of traffic and to issue certificates for traffic. The Directors of Civil Supplies are empowered to prohibit or restrict the movement of such commodities as are non-essential in order to facilitate the movement of commodities which are essential.

133 Q.—(1) Will the Government be pleased to name the districts in which emergency committees have been already formed to co-operate with the Collectors and the results achieved by them so far?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to direct the immediate formation of the emergency committees in the districts in which they have not been formed till now?

133 A.—So far as the Government are aware, emergency committees have been formed in all districts.

134 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to increase the railway and canal facilities for the transport of food-grains and other articles to places that require them?

134 A.—Yes, so far as the supply of rolling stock and existence and capacity of canals permit.

(Mr. Annamalai Chethiyar.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

Facilities for transport of Madras piece-goods.

135 Q.—With a view to relieve the tension caused in the Madras piece-goods market by a glut of these goods held up by speculative and other purchasers and to replenish the stocks in the mufassal consuming centres, will the Government be pleased to direct the Director of Civil Supplies to afford merchants promptly the necessary transport facilities?

135 A.—No such instructions are necessary as the Director of Civil Supplies is already issuing certificates freely for the purpose indicated.

Restrictions on the export of piece-goods from Madras.

136 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether any and what kind of restrictions are placed on the export of piece-goods from the City of Madras (1) to places outside Madras and (2) to places outside this Presidency?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they intend to exercise any and what kind of control over the prices of cotton-cloth stocks in Madras?

136 A.—(a) The Government are not aware of any restrictions on the movement of piece-goods.

(b) The control of the prices of piece-goods, if any, will be exercised by the Controller of Cotton Cloth with the Government of India.

Names and addresses of accountants approved by Government for income-tax purposes.

137 Q.—(a) For the benefit of the assesses to income-tax who desire to get their accounts properly audited and certified, will the Government be pleased to give the names of the accountants with their addresses as approved by them under rules 14 and 15 published by them on page 57 of the new Income-tax Manual?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of applications received from accountants and the number of them approved by the committee appointed under rule 15 referred to above for income-tax purposes?

137 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information, but will call for it.

Issue of passports to persons engaged in overseas trade.

138 Q.—(a) Will the Government be pleased to make a statement regarding their object in introducing the passport system and the policy pursued by them in the matter of issuing passports to enable persons engaged in overseas trade to go over themselves or send their agents and clerks engaged in this Province for carrying on their trade in Penang, Singapore and other places in the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States and in French Coochin China?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have issued any definite instructions to Collectors and District Magistrates to be carried out by them in disposing of the applications made to them for passports for voyaging to the above places for trade purposes?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of such instructions on the table of this House?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to issue the necessary instructions to the District Magistrates to grant freely all bona fide applications for such passports except in the cases of persons who are certified by the District Medical and Sanitary Officers to be unfit for undertaking the voyage on account of ill-health or disease?

138 A.—The passport system, which is based on the orders of the Government of India and the expressed wishes of the Home Government, has for its main purpose the 'restriction of journeyings, both for unnecessary and undesirable objects.' Instructions have from time to time been issued to Collectors in accordance with the rules originally laid down by the Government of India in this matter and modifications therein subsequently directed. According to the latest orders, which have been duly communicated to Collectors, the principle governing the issue of passports to persons engaged in overseas trade is to avoid unnecessary interference with legitimate livelihood. Passports are now freely issued to all persons who have bona fide reasons of business for journeys to the countries mentioned in the question and the Government believe there is no longer any legitimate ground for grievance.

Railway restrictions on the despatch of parcels of Indian hand-made cloths.

139 Q.—(a) Has Government perused the report of the proceedings of a meeting of cloth merchants of the Sowrashtia community held on the 4th October 1918 at Madura, published on page 7 of the Hindu of the 9th October 1918?

(b) Has Government received the resolutions passed at that meeting requesting Government to take the necessary steps for the transmission by railway parcel, Indian hand-made cloths from Madura to other consuming centres?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken for remedying the grievances embodied in the resolutions referred to above and also the grievances in other places in the Province where merchants dealing in similar goods are labouring under the same difficulties of transport of their goods by railway to other places within this Province?

139 A.—(a) Yes.

(b) No; but the Government received through the Collector of Madura a copy of a memorial addressed by the weavers of Madura to the General Traffic Manager, Trichinopoly, on the subject.

(c) The Government addressed the Agent, South Indian Railway, and he relaxed the rule prohibiting the booking of cloth by passenger trains temporarily until the Dipavali season was over. Further inquiries are being made.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Suryanarayana Rao.)

The Hon'ble Mr. A. Suryanarayana Rao.

140 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when the Government would arrange for the election or nomination of presidents of district boards as recommended by the Government of India in their resolution dated 16th May 1918?

Election or nomination of presidents of district boards.

140 A.—Non-official gentlemen are now presidents of the district boards of North Arcot, South Arcot, Godavari, South Kanara and Trichinopoly. The policy is being continuously kept in view and acted on whenever a suitable opportunity occurs.

141 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to publish the opinions of the presidents of district boards and non-official presidents of taluk boards recently called for by the Government regarding the appointment of special executive officers to the district boards and big taluk boards when they have got non-official presidents?

Appointment of special executive officers to local boards which have non-official presidents.

141 A.—Government Order No. 1510 L, dated 8th November 1918, containing these opinions will be placed on the Editors' Table.

142 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when amending Bills to give effect to the suggestion in the Government of India Resolution, dated 16th May 1918, regarding local self-government will be introduced?

Bills to amend the Madras District Boards and Municipalities Acts.

142 A.—The Bill to amend the Madras District Municipalities Act, 1884, has been forwarded to the Government of India, and the Bill to amend the Madras Local Boards Act, 1884, will, it is hoped, be soon forwarded to that Government. The two Bills contain, along with other matters, such changes in the working of district municipalities and rural boards as the Government consider it necessary to make in pursuance of the resolution of the Government of India.

143 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether they permit informal panchayats to raise money for their purposes?

Permitting informal panchayats to raise money for their purposes.

143 A.—Such panchayats are free to raise money by voluntary means for their own purposes.

144 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to take the opinion of the local boards regarding the contribution of a portion of land-cess raised within the limits of union panchayats to the union funds?

Contribution of a portion of land-cess to union funds.

144 A.—The Government do not consider it necessary to do so, as each taluk board is competent to give such subventions as it deems necessary to a union under it.

145 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons why a kistbandi is allowed only in the case of the Sarvasiddhi taluk of the Vizagapatam district and not with respect to the whole district and more especially with regard to Narasapatnam which is contiguous with the Sarvasiddhi taluk and also why three instalments were fixed in the case of Sarvasiddhi instead of four as was done in some other districts recently?

Kistbandi in the Vizagapatam district.

145 A.—In the case of the Sarvasiddhi taluk the December kist was abolished because it was reported that paddy which is the principal kist-paying crop of that taluk is not generally brought to market before January. On the other hand the principal kist-paying crops of the Golconda (Narasapatnam) taluk especially gingelly and green-gram are said to be usually brought to market in or before December and there was therefore no need to abolish the December kist in this case. The decision to levy the assessment in Sarvasiddhi taluk in three instalments instead of four was based on the fact that, if the December kist was abolished, a fourth kist must be postponed to April, an arrangement which was not considered advisable.

146 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state whether any Bill with provisions for compulsory elementary education, as the outcome of the educational conference held at Ootacamund in May last, is under preparation, and if so, when it will be published and introduced into the Legislative Council?

Bill for compulsory elementary education.

146 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer to question No. 15.

147 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to call for a report and place it on the table, for what periods the Tahsildars of Sarvasiddhi and Golconda taluks in the Vizagapatam district have exercised second-class magisterial powers within the last two years, and also whether the tahsildars of the said stations exercised such powers previously since the appointment of stationary sub-magistrates to those two taluks?

Magisterial powers exercised by the Tahsildars of Sarvasiddhi and Golconda taluks, Vizagapatam district.

(Mr. Suryanarayana Rao ; Sir Alexander Cardew.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

147 A.—The Tahsildars of Sarvasiddhi and Golconda, like other tahsildars, are ex-officio second-class magistrates, but the Government have no information as to the extent to which they have actually exercised their magisterial powers and in the absence of special reasons for inquiry, do not think it necessary to call for a report on the point.

Vacancies among Deputy Tahsildars in the Vizagapatam district.

148 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state how many posts of Deputy Tahsildars in the Vizagapatam district have not yet been filled up and for what period and the reasons for not filling up the same?

148 A.—The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO:—“With reference to question No. 148, which is ‘will the Government be pleased to state how many posts of Deputy Tahsildars in the Vizagapatam district have not yet been filled up and for what period and the reasons for not filling up the same?’ It is said ‘The Government are not in possession of the information asked for.’ Will the Government be pleased to call for the information?”

The Hon'ble Sir ALEXANDER CARDEW:—“Yes, I have no objection to call for the information.”

Prohibition of export of grain from the Godavari to the Vizagapatam district.

149 Q.—Is the Government aware that the Collector of the Godavari district has prohibited the export of grain to the Vizagapatam district even by carts, and the people of the Vizagapatam district, especially in the immediate neighbourhood of the Godavari district, are suffering on account of failure of the paddy crop in the Sarvasiddhi and Golconda taluks this year?

Will the Government be pleased to call for a report from the Collectors of Vizagapatam and Godavari districts on the subject and pass such orders as it deems fit?

149 A.—The Government will make inquiries.

Scheme report regarding the settlement of Vizagapatam district.

150 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state when the scheme report regarding the settlement of the Vizagapatam district will be published?

150 A.—It is not possible now to say when the scheme report will be published.

Appointment of special executive officers to local boards which have non-official presidents.

151 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the opinions submitted by the presidents of district boards and the non-official presidents of taluk boards regarding the appointment of an executive officer for district boards and large taluk boards as suggested by the Government of India in their recent resolution on local self-government?

151 A.—The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 141.

Reports regarding Thandava and other irrigation projects in the Vizagapatam district.

152 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the preliminary report regarding Thandava project in Vizagapatam district, and also reports giving information as far as it is available, in regard to irrigation projects in the Vizagapatam district at the time of the Irrigation Commission and subsequently?

152 A.—No orders have yet been passed on the preliminary report on the Thandava project pending receipt of forecast statements of revenue, which are awaited. The report cannot be published at this stage.

The Nagavalli project has been sanctioned and carried out, and further inquiries are being made in connexion with the Kondakarla Ava, but no useful purpose would be served by publishing the correspondence.

Arms Act licence forms.

153 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for a reduction in the number of the principal forms of licences in force under the Indian Arms Act in the Vizagapatam district as per statement II attached to G.O. No. 1888, dated 20th August 1918?

153 A.—In his annual report the District Magistrate noted that the reduction was due to the expiry of old licences which there were no sufficient grounds to renew and the exercise of care in granting new ones.

Activities of the Fisheries Department in the Northern Circars.

154 Q.—Will the Government be pleased to state what the activities of the Fisheries Department have been in the Northern Circars in general and the Vizagapatam and Ganjam districts in particular, since the opening of the department?

154 A.—The only scheme taken up by the Fisheries Department in the Northern Circars up till now is the Collair scheme mentioned at page 12 of G.O. No. 3161, Revenue, dated 17th October 1918, which has been placed on the Editors' Table.

Letter—from the Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR, B.A., B.L., Additional Member of the Madras Legislative Council, Madura.

To—the Chief Secretary to Government.

Dated—the 28th September 1918.

No.—R.O. 264.

I have wired to-day to the Government as follows:—“Madras Government, Ootacamund. At close yesterday trial Varadarajulu's case Reserve Police in immediate presence Superintendent charged with bayonet and fired killing reserve constable, mortally wounding another since dead, others wounded. Police action unwarranted. Immediate independent inquiry essential.”

An independent inquiry, I think, will allay public apprehensions. The crowd which had gone to witness the inquiry, I understand, has been there for some time and when Dr. P. Varadarajulu Nayudu after the close of the trial got down and went to his carriage which was standing east of the portico, the crowd gathered round him and were dispersed by a bayonet charge and after that stones had been pelted and a firing has taken place. The District Superintendent of Police told me that he had not given the order to load or fire. However, there was firing and two persons have died up till now. Hence my wire for an inquiry.

Letter—from M.R.Ry. V. RAMACHANDRA AYYAR, B.A., B.L., President, public meeting of the citizens of Madura.

To—the Chief Secretary to Government.

Dated—the 2nd October 1918.

In confirming my telegram to you of to-day in connexion with the resolutions unanimously passed at a public meeting of the citizens of this town at which I presided regarding the conduct of the police on Friday last, I have the honour to forward herewith a copy of the resolutions.

I may state that there is very great public feeling in regard to the matter and a very speedy and thoroughly independent and full inquiry would be extremely desirable.

I have the honour to request you to place before Government this letter and the resolutions.

ENCLOSURE

Resolutions unanimously passed at a public meeting of the citizens of Madura held on 29th September 1918.

That this meeting of the citizens of Madura is of opinion that the conduct of the police on the 27th September 1918 in charging with bayonets the crowd that gathered in the Collector's office compound to see Doctor Varadarajulu Nayudu returning home after the close of the hearing of the case against him for that day and after the cruel and unnecessary provocation and on the trifling pretext of a few stones being thrown in consequence, their conduct in opening fire on the crowd fully knowing that death would result, which conduct did result in the death of two persons and injury to others, was criminal and calls for an early and independent inquiry by the Government.

2. That this meeting is of opinion that the administration of the police of the district must be placed in the hands of a new and impartial District Superintendent and that the competency of the present District Superintendent of Police who was close by the firing line and hurried upstairs as soon as the volley was fired to hold his office any longer must be seriously considered by the Government.

3. That this meeting demands that an immediate, full and independent inquiry into the conduct of all concerned be held.

4. This meeting expresses its sympathy with the relatives and friends of the victims of the high-handed and insensate act of outrage.

5. That these resolutions be communicated to the Government and the press.

To—the Secretaries, Madras Congress Committee.
Dated—the 8th October 1918.
No.—2457 A-6.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram, dated 3rd October 1918, to the address of the Chief Secretary to Government and to state that the conduct of the inquiry into the unfortunate disturbance which occurred at Madura on the 27th September last is in the hands of Mr. Paddison, the District Magistrate, in whose judgment and impartiality the Government repose the greatest confidence. The Government have received a report from the District Magistrate, Chingleput, and do not consider any additional inquiry necessary. The Government are not prepared to consider the request preferred in your telegram for a public inquiry.

VI

Letter—from the Honorary Secretary, Madura-Ramnad District People's Association.
To—the Secretary to Government, Home (Judicial) Department.
Dated—Madurai, the 2nd October 1918.
No.—47.

I beg to communicate for necessary action the following resolutions passed by the Madura-Ramnad District People's Association in its general body meeting held on 29th September 1918:—

Resolution I.—"That this meeting of the District People's Association, Madura, is of opinion that the conduct of the police on the 27th September 1918, in charging with bayonets the crowd that gathered in the Collector's office compound, to see Doctor Varadarajulu Nayudu returning home after the close of the hearing of the case against him for that day, and after this cruel and unnecessary provocation their conduct in opening fire on the crowd on the trifling pretext of a few stones being thrown in consequence, fully knowing that death would result, which conduct resulted in the death of two persons and injury to others, was criminal and calls for an early and independent inquiry by the Government."

Resolution II.—"That this meeting is of opinion that the administration of the police of the district must be placed in the hands of a new and impartial District Superintendent and that the competency of the present District Superintendent of Police who was close by the firing line and hurried upstairs as soon as the volley was fired, to hold the office any longer, must be seriously considered by Government. That this meeting demands that an immediate, full and independent inquiry into the conduct of all concerned be held."

Resolution III.—"The Secretary of the District People's Association be authorized to communicate the resolutions to Government and to press."

To—the Honorary Secretary, Madura-Ramnad District People's Association, Madura.
Dated—the 8th October 1918.
No.—2487/A-4.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 47, dated 2nd October 1918, and to state that the conduct of the inquiry into the unfortunate disturbance which occurred at Madura on the 27th September last is in the hands of Mr. Paddison, the District Magistrate, in whose judgment and impartiality the Government repose the greatest confidence. The Government are not prepared to consider the requests preferred in your letter for an independent inquiry and the removal of the District Superintendent of Police.

VIII

Letter—from the Honorary Secretary, Madura-Ramnad District People's Association, Madura.
To—the Chief Secretary to Government.
Dated—the 9th October 1918.

I beg to communicate, for necessary action, the following resolution passed by the Madura-Ramnad District People's Association at its general body meeting held on 4th October 1918:—

Resolution.—"This meeting of the Madura-Ramnad District People's Association is of opinion that the condition of Madura city is peaceful and quiet and that the isolated instances of disquiet which took place more than a month ago and have since ceased to exist, i.e., the scare of looting in the bazaars of the city and insignificant overt acts accompanying the scare, were due to economic causes applicable to the whole country, namely, the high prices of foodstuffs and other necessities of life and that unwarranted bayonetting and shooting by Police on the 27th September 1918 and the consequent deaths and injuries do not show any disposition on the part of any portion of the public to commit disturbance and that under such circumstances the location of a contingent of soldiers and sepoys is due to panic on the part of the authorities and is a matter fraught with serious consequences to the peace of the city and is likely to bring about the very results intended to be averted and therefore the association prays that the Government may be pleased to withdraw the military forces from this city."

[Receipt acknowledged in Letter No. 2623-A-1, Home (Judicial), dated 23rd October 1918.]

IX

Letter—from the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR, President, public meeting, Salem.
To—the Secretary to Government, Home (Judicial) Department.
Dated—the 17th October 1918.

I have the honour to submit the following resolutions of a public meeting held at Salem on 12th instant.

ENCLOSURE

Proceedings of a public meeting held at the Salem Town Hall on the 12th October 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR—Chairman.

The citizens of Salem in public meeting assembled resolve—

1) That they strongly protest against the order of the Government rejecting the most reasonable and earnest prayer of the citizens of Madura for an independent inquiry into the conduct of the police on 27th September 1918 in bayonetting and firing on the crowd without cause.

2) That the public cannot have any confidence in the impartiality of the inquiry at present held by the District Magistrate of Madura.

3) That unless the Reserve Police constables who were on duty that day are examined in public before an independent committee, the inquiry will be absolutely worthless and the order of the Deputy Inspector-General to his force not to make statement at the inquiry is most unjustifiable and is calculated to prevent the eliciting of truth and should be immediately cancelled.

4) That the inquiry being really into the conduct of the officers in charge of the Reserve Police who were present on the spot, viz., the District Superintendent of Police, the Reserve Inspector and the Sergeant, it is impossible that the truth can be elicited at the inquiry, if the said officers are allowed to continue in charge of the police in that district.

The above 4) were proposed by Mr. S. E. Venkatappa Chettiyar, seconded by Mr. D. P. Chennakrishna Chettiyar and carried unanimously.

5) That in view of the strong public feeling in this matter an early reconsideration by the Government of Madras of their latest order in the press communiqué recently published is urgently called for, not merely in the interests of justice but also as a matter of expediency and wise statesmanship.

6) That the above resolutions should be communicated to the press, to the Government of Madras and the Government of India.

The above (5) and (6) were proposed by Mr. Kandaswami Pillai, seconded by Mr. Krishna-swami Nayakar and carried unanimously.

7) This meeting requests the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar to take such steps in the matter as will insure a speedy, proper and independent inquiry being held in the matter.

Proposed by Mr. C. Rajagopala Acharya, seconded by Mr. S. V. Subrahmanya Ayyar and carried unanimously.

[Receipt acknowledged in Letter No. 2638-A-1, Home Judicial), dated 23rd October 1918.]

APPENDIX VI.

[Vide answer to question No. 48 asked by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 19th November 1918, page 270 supra.]

Statement showing the irrigation projects under investigation.

Item No.	District.	Name of project.	Approximate cost (if known) in lakhs.	Brief description.	Progress made in investigation.	Probable year in which investigation will be completed.	Remarks.
1	Godavari	Coringa and Polavaram island projects.	14.00	The proposal is to extend the Godavari delta irrigation to Coringa and Polavaram islands.	The field work has been completed. Plans and estimates for the Polavaram island project which were received from the Superintending Engineer were returned to him for revision. The Superintending Engineer hopes to submit them daily revised before the end of this year.	1919
2	Melore	Aluru project.	5.62	The project consists in constructing a tank across a stream in the Kandukur taluk to command 3,700 acres.	The project is awaiting the result of further gaugings of the river.	1920
3	Guntur	Pubbonda reservoir project.	19.06	This is a proposal to form a reservoir across the Muni river at Pubbonda, a village about eighteen miles west of Ongole. The avacut will consist of 10,310 acres of wet cultivation.	The estimate for the work is held in abeyance pending the settlement of the question of supply available, to ascertain which, gaugings are being made.	1922	As stated in the annexure to G.O. No. 69 I., dated 14th February 1917, this project would prove productive only if an average water-rate of Rs. 15 per acre could be guaranteed.
4	Nellore	Pyderu scheme.	19.00	The proposal is to excavate a silted channel from the Kanigiri reservoir and to improve the Pyderu so as to make it capable of carrying its own discharge and that of the Kanigiri reservoir.	Plans and estimates are under the consideration of the Chief Engineer for Irrigation.	1919
5	Do.	Vengalapuram.	40.54	This project which provides for the construction of two reservoirs across the Pyderu was first prepared for the irrigation of 60,000 acres of dry crops. It has now been re-investigated on a wet crop basis.	The plans and estimates are lying over pending the result of the negotiations which the Director of Agriculture is understood to be carrying on with the ryots as to whether the latter will or will not pay the rate necessary to make the scheme productive. It will be seen from the annexure to G.O. No. 69 I., dated 14th February 1917, that an average water-rate of Rs. 12-5-0 per acre should be realised to admit of the project being sanctioned as a productive public work.	1919

Item No.	District.	Name of project.	Approximate cost (if known) in lakhs.	Brief description.	Progress made in investigation.	Probable year in which investigation will be completed.	Remarks.
6	Kurnool	Improvements to the Kurnool-Cuddapah canal.	100.00	The proposal is to widen the Kurnool-Cuddapah canal and to excavate a channel 56 miles long from near the Mittakondala cutting and to form a reservoir for the irrigation of 45,100 acres of first crop and 15,000 acres of second crop.	The plans and estimates are under the consideration of the Chief Engineer for Irrigation. Gaugings of the Kurnool-Cuddapah canal in connection with these projects are being made this year. The Velcode project would prove productive only if a water-rate of Rs. 11 per acre on the wet avacut and of Rs. 5-8-0 on the dry avacut were levied—vide annexure to G.O. No. 69 I., dated 14th February 1917.	1919
7	Do.	Velcode project.	..	This is a proposal to form a reservoir across the Kollavagu for the irrigation of 2,654 acres.	Further investigation regarding the water tightness of the bed of the proposed reservoir is being made.	1920
8	Do.	Thippayapalem project.	1.00	This project consists in the formation of a reservoir on the Papagani river by constructing a masonry dam across it near the village of Velgalla for the irrigation of 10,000 acres of wet crop and 17,300 acres of dry crop.	A preliminary report on the scheme was submitted, but it did not justify the complete investigation of the project. Gauging observations are, however, being made to ascertain whether the scheme is worth further investigation.	1923
9	Cuddapah	Papagani reservoir project.	42.00	The proposal is for improving the irrigation under the tanks connected with the Madurantakam system. The proposal is mainly intended to provide work for famine relief.	This scheme was ordered to lie over till orders were passed on the Uttaramerur project. As the latter project has been abandoned, this project is now being examined by the Chief Engineer for Irrigation.	1920
10	Chingleput	Madurantakam project.	4.80	The scheme consists in improving the headworks of the Marandahalli ancient and increasing the capacity of the tanks supplied by it to command 1,800 acres of first crop and 900 acres of second crop.	It has been decided by the Government that this project cannot be undertaken either as a productive or protective work. The estimate is being revised by the Chief Engineer for Irrigation for sanction under "33. Famine Relief."	1919
11	Salem	Marandahalli project.	1.43	This project consists in forming a reservoir across the Ponnar river near Krishnagiri about ten miles above Neelugai amount to acres of dry crop cultivation.	The plans and estimates were held over pending the results of the observations undertaken to ascertain as accurately as possible the surplus discharge of the river. The project is now being examined by the Superintending Engineer submitted a preliminary report in 1915 on the possibilities of constructing two alternative projects and recommended the detailed investigation of the financial aspect of the scheme.	1919
12	Do.	Krishnagiri project.	52.22	This is for the irrigation of lands in Kollong estate to the extent of about 10,000 acres.
13	Malabar	hold 6,000 mills. c. ft. of water to command 20,000 acres of wet and 38,000 acres of dry crop cultivation. Meengara reservoir project.	18.00				The question of supply available has been settled and the project is now being examined by the Chief Engineer for Irrigation. The Superintending Engineer submitted a preliminary report in 1915 on the possibilities of constructing two alternative projects and recommended the detailed investigation of the financial aspect of the scheme.

Item No.	District.	Name of project.	Approximate cost (if known) in lakhs.	Brief description.	Progress made in investigation.	Probable year in which investigation will be completed.	Remarks.
14	Malabar	Malapuzha reservoir project	19.00	The Malapuzha project is expected to irrigate 10,000 to 20,000 acres, while the other two are estimated to supply 1,000 to 2,000 acres each.	Gaugings are being made in connexion with this project.	1921	The detailed investigation of this project has been recently sanctioned.
15	Do.	Vanditode project	19.00	The proposal is to construct a small reservoir on the Anaravati for the irrigation of 7,000 acres.			The preparation of detailed plans and estimates for this project has been recently ordered.
16	Do.	Kilakancheri project	19.00	The proposal is to form a storage reservoir between 13.2 and 16.6 of the Ichchapur channel by improving the existing Hetta tank of Kunarapuram for the supply of an ayacut of 6,000 acres.	Field work is in progress	1920
17	Coimbatore	Anaravati reservoir project	11.33	The proposal is to improve the irrigation under the Garubale-gedda and to irrigate the newly-disforested block of Runku Hastamantilapur, measuring 1,270 acres.		1921
18	Ganjam	Constructing a reservoir on or close to the Ichchapur channel. Rushikulya system.	1.31	The proposal is to construct a reservoir across the Tuni river for the irrigation of about 40,000 acres.			The Superintending Engineer has been called upon to submit a preliminary report on the scheme for which special establishment was sanctioned in July last.
19	Do.	Construction of two reservoirs to improve the irrigation under the Garubalegedda.	..			Cannot be stated at present.	The forecast of revenue anticipated from the project is awaited from the Collector, and on its receipt the question whether the project should be investigated in detail will be considered.
20	Vizagapatnam	Tuni reservoir project	50.60			Do.

APPENDIX VII.

[Vide answer to question No. 49 asked by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 19th November 1918, page 270 supra.]

Statement showing irrigation projects that have been considered by the Government during the last ten years (1908—1918) but have been abandoned or indefinitely postponed.

District and name of project. Amount of estimate. Reasons for postponing the project.

RS. IN LAKHS.

I.—Projects abandoned.

Ganjam—
1. Padmanabasagaram project.	1.95	The scheme was to improve the irrigation of 4,000 acres in the estates of Tekkali and Nandigam. Owing to constant friction between these estates it was reported that the owners of the lands to be benefited were unwilling to undertake the work themselves, or to pay a water-rate of Rs. 4 an acre if the Government should undertake to execute the scheme.
Gōdāvari—
2. Anumunilanka project.	9.00	Observations of the discharges of the Yerrakalva on which river the reservoir was proposed to be constructed showed that the project was not feasible.
Guntūr—
3. Gundlakamma project.	54.82	The project yields a very poor return and is not financially feasible as a productive or protective work.
4. Mellavagu project	4.00	The anticipated return is only 1.6 per cent. In the locality in which the project is situated, good dry crops are grown and the ryots show no readiness to take water. The project is also quite unsuitable for purposes of famine relief.
5. Manchikallu tank scheme.	1.30 for 'works' only.	The return anticipated is very poor and the project is also unsuitable for purposes of famine relief.
Kurnool—
6. Sangameswaram project.	890.00	This project which was intended as a second impounding reservoir to supplement the supply from the proposed Tungabhadra reservoir was abandoned, as the latter scheme was ordered to be indefinitely postponed.
Cuddapah—
7. Chennayyagaripalli reservoir.	4.30	The supply available is precarious and the scheme does not fulfil the conditions of a productive or protective work.
8. Dorigallu project	18.65	Does not satisfy the conditions of a productive or protective work.
Bellary—
9. Nellikudiri project	20.96	The investigation of the project was stopped as the reservoir, if formed, would submerge six villages containing 1,130 houses, 100 wells and rich cultivated lands to the extent of 5,000 acres.
10. Supply channel to Kottur tank.	0.87	The project is not sufficiently remunerative. It is also unsuitable for execution as a famine-relief work.
Anantapur—
11. Upper Penner project.	23.84	The anticipated water-supply was found to be very precarious. It was shown that in a bad year the project would not protect a fair portion of the ayacut and that in a very bad year it would be a complete failure.
12. Ithodu project	3.60 for 'works' only.	The scheme fails to be productive, the return being only 0.64 per cent, nor does it satisfy the Indian Irrigation Commission's formula for the protective value of an irrigated acre. The project is unsuitable for famine-relief purposes and is not on a secure basis as regards water-supply.

District and name of project.	Amount of estimate.	Reasons for abandoning the project.
RS. IN LAKHS.
Nellore—
13. Sarvapalli project ...	6.89	The project was condemned as it was found that in years of short supply little or no water would reach the extension of the ayacut proposed and that the project would fail in seven years out of twenty.
14. Boggeru project ...	9.48	The project does not satisfy the conditions of a productive or protective work. In indifferent years the old ayacut alone would benefit by the increased supply.
Chingleput—
15. Varadappalaiyam project.	2.50	The scheme, which is expected to yield a return of a little over one per cent, fails to be productive and does not satisfy the conditions required of a protective work. In a bad year the existing irrigation would be entitled to preference and the new area to be benefited would suffer. There is the further objection that its effect on the irrigation lower down cannot be precisely estimated. The project is also unsuitable for famine-relief purposes.
16. Uttiramerur project.	12.82	The project was abandoned as most of the ryots concerned were not prepared to pay the water-rate necessary to make the project productive.
Trichinopoly—
17. Pimbalur reservoir project.	0.96	To make the project productive, a water-rate of Rs. 11-8-0 per acre would have to be levied. As it was reported that the ryots could not be induced to pay this rate, the project was abandoned.
Madura—
18. Perandalur project ...	33.90	The return anticipated from the project was very poor, viz., 1.5 per cent on the capital outlay.
Salem—
19. Gudumalai project ...	27.09	The project was abandoned as it was conclusively shown that there was not enough water for this project in addition to the Toludur project. The latter project which proved 'productive' was chosen for execution.
Coimbatore—
20. Amaravati reservoir project (bigger scheme).	25.00	The surplus available in the Amaravati was found to be insufficient, but a smaller project is being investigated.

II.—Projects indefinitely postponed.

A

Ganjām—
1. Paguva reservoir project.	8.45	These projects have been sanctioned for execution as famine-relief works when the necessity for famine relief arises.
Kurnool—
2. Chinna Tekur project.	1.25
Bellary—
3. Constructing a new tank at Kolur.	0.94
Chingleput—
4. Upper Arni river project.	2.04

B

Guntūr—
5. Pulikonda reservoir project.	19.03	These projects are in abeyance pending verification of water-supplies available.
6. Atteru project alternative schemes.	(a) 5.5 (b) 8.4
Cuddapah—
7. Papaghni reservoir project.	42.08
8. Pullampet project ...	66.80
Salem—
9. Krishnagiri project.	52.22
10. Vanisar project ...	5.14

Ganjām—
11. Bahuda reservoir project.	24.03	These three schemes are intended to supplement the supply to the Rushikulya system. Their consideration has been deferred until the proposed improvements to the existing Rushikulya system are completed.
12. Boradapalli reservoir project.	23.90
13. Godchollo project ...	15.17
Bellary, Anantapur, Kurnool, Cuddapah and Nellore—
14. Tungabhadra project.	1,300.00	As a return of only 2.59 per cent was anticipated from the project and as it was considered that the Cauvery and Kistna reservoir projects, which were likely to prove more productive, should be given precedence, it was decided that this project must be indefinitely postponed.
Kistna and Guntūr—
15. Kistna reservoir project.	834.00	The plans and estimates which were submitted to the Government of India in 1912 for sanction as a productive work were returned for revision. It is proposed to keep this project in abeyance until a decision is come to in respect of the Cauvery project as both projects cannot be carried out simultaneously.
Kurnool—
16. Owk project ...	40.30	The plans and estimates were kept back pending the result of the investigation of the Tungabhadra project which has since been indefinitely postponed. The project will be considered on its merits after the requirements of the Velgode and Kurnool-Cuddapah canal extensions, which appear to be more promising, are settled.
17. Gazuladinne project.	13.33	This project was ordered to lie over pending observation of the results of the Venkatapuram project which has been practically completed.
18. Krishnapuram tank project.	2.13	Do. do.
19. Gudempad project ...	0.56	Ordered to lie over pending the completion of the Venkatapuram and Koohervu tank projects. These latter projects have now practically been completed.
Chingleput—
20. Madurantakam tank project.	4.80	This project was ordered to lie over pending orders to be passed on the Uttiramerur project. The latter project having since been abandoned, this project will shortly be examined.
Coimbatore—
21. Bhavāni project—
(a) Upper scheme.	265.00	The project was ordered to lie over until the result of the Cauvery project was known as it was doubtful if a reservoir on the Bhavāni could be constructed without prejudice to the Cauvery project.
(b) Lower "	109.00
Trichinopoly—
22. Ladapuram project.	1.11	The prospect of the project materialising is remote. The anticipated return is very poor and a scheme giving such a small return could not be taken up for some years. Further investigation has therefore been dropped for the present.

APPENDIX XI.

[Vide answer to question No. 61 asked by the Hon'ble the Raja of Ramnad at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 19th November 1918, page 272 supra.]

Letter—from the Hon'ble Mr. L. Davidson, C.S.I., I.O.S., Acting Chief Secretary to Government.

To—the several addressees.

Dated—Ootacamund, the 25th July 1918.

No.—647, Public.

In connexion with a circular reference recently received from the Government of India on the subject of the proposals contained in the report by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State on Indian Constitutional Reforms, I am directed by His Excellency the Governor in Council to invite an expression of the opinion of your Association with regard to the recommendations formulated in paragraphs 212 to 235 of the published report. It would greatly facilitate the examination and consideration of your views if they could be arranged so far as possible in the order in which the subjects are dealt with in the report and I am specially to request that any statement of opinion which you may desire to offer should be transmitted so as to reach me not later than the 1st of September.

Proceedings of the Board of Revenue (Land Revenue), Mis. No. 649, dated 11th May 1918.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. BUTTERWORTH, C.S.I., I.C.S., Commissioner of Land Revenue.

The Hon'ble Mr. L. E. BUCKLEY, I.C.S., Commissioner of Revenue Settlement, Survey, Land Records and Agriculture.

The Hon'ble Mr. C. G. TODHUNTKE, I.C.S.,
Commissioner of Salt, Abkari and Separate Revenue.

The Hon'ble Mr. M. E. COUGHMAN, I.C.S., Commissioner of Land Revenue and Forests.

The Board begs to submit its reply to Government Memorandum No. 923-B/17-4, dated 3rd October 1917.

2. The Government desire, first, the Board's remarks on certain suggestions put forward by Doctor Gilbert Slater and the Director of Agriculture, Bombay, the object of which is to check the minute subdivision of agricultural lands. The Board is next asked to consider the advisability of certain proposals made by Government themselves with a similar object in view.

3. The memorandum and the papers received with it were referred to certain Collectors, the Director of Agriculture and the Director of Land Records and the replies of all these officers (with the exception of the Director of Agriculture whose reply was received after the Board had dealt with all the other reports) have been considered by the Board.

4. The Hon'ble Mr. Keatinge points out that by reason of subdivision and fragmentation—processes which he is careful to distinguish—the agricultural holdings of the Bombay Presidency have to a large extent been reduced to a condition in which their effective cultivation is impossible; land in fact is distributed amongst the agricultural population in such a way that a large and increasing proportion of the holdings are 'uneconomic.' Doctor Slater finds that similar conditions prevail in Madras. "The available statistics", he says, "appear to indicate (1) that in those parts of the Presidency under ryotwari tenure where the pattadars are the actual cultivators and not middlemen such uneconomic holdings are extremely numerous and (2) that with the excess of births over deaths that has prevailed over some decades they are getting more numerous and (3) the success of the efforts of Government in combating various physical evils tends to make them still more numerous."

The Board has examined such of the statistics at its disposal as are likely to throw light on the question whether agricultural holdings in this Presidency show a tendency to grow more and more minute. The figures relating to holdings in faslis 1310 and 1325, which are contained in the annexure to this proceedings, indicate, it is true, a tendency on the part of the smaller holdings to become even smaller. But before inferring from the figures either that subdivision is on the increase or that a large proportion of agricultural holdings have become so small as to be 'uneconomic' there are a number of factors which have to be taken into account. It is often the case, for instance, that a man holds more than one patta and that a joint pattadar has also a patta of which he is the sole owner; it is impossible to know how many persons the average patta holding is intended to support; the figures take no account of under-tenure holdings; and it is well known that most of the smaller ryots have subsidiary occupations unconnected, or only remotely connected, with agriculture. Whether the tendency to subdivide is on the increase or not, it seems unnecessary—as indeed without a very elaborate and settled inquiry it is impossible—to contest the general proposition that of the agricultural holdings in this Presidency a great proportion are uneconomic holdings from a purely agricultural point of view; in fact, the figures referred to lend a good deal of support to this view. Assuming then the existence of this state of affairs, what is the remedy? Mr. Keatinge suggests a scheme of permissive legislation which will give the ryots an opportunity of reforming their holdings in such a way that they will cease to be uneconomic. Doctor Slater suggests that the desired change must come as the result of education and industrial developments, but suggests that meanwhile Government might help the ryots by prohibiting the indefinite subdivision of holdings.

5. Though Mr. Keatinge's proposed law is only permissive and though there is every reason to suppose that it would be a dead letter, it is necessary to criticize it on the presumption that it will be operative. Judged in this light, the Board considers that the Bill is open to the strongest objections, the more obvious of which may be briefly stated as follows:—

(1) There would be the utmost difficulty in determining for the purpose of the Bill what constitutes an economic holding, the value of land varying, as it does, according to the nature of the crops it can produce, the method of its cultivation, climate, the standard of comfort of the owner, and so forth.

(2) The Bill aims at creating a vast mass of petty impartible holdings all over the country, in defiance of the whole social system of Hindus and Muhammadans alike.

(3) Its operation would, as a rule, be confined to those families which are rich enough to compensate such members as are excluded from the economic holding, that is to say, to the very cases in which there is the least need for any special arrangements. In so far as the Bill could be applied to poor families, it must tend to create a landless proletariat which is always a danger and doubly so in a country where industries are so little developed that they cannot absorb the surplus agricultural population.

(4) It would afford an opportunity to co-sharers to effect collusive registration thereunder for the purpose of defrauding creditors.

(5) Its general effect, it may be surmised, would be to impair the credit of the agricultural classes.

(6) All transactions relating to land would be complicated by the question whether the condition of impartibility existed.

(7) It would involve the revenue establishment in troublesome and often infructuous inquiries on applications for creating economic holdings and on complaints that the rule of impartibility had been breached.

(8) It would undoubtedly prove a fertile source of strife in families.

After considering the objections mentioned above the Board unhesitatingly condemns legislation on the lines proposed even in a permissive form.

6. Turning to paragraph 3 of the memorandum, the Board feels constrained to oppose the suggestion that the darkhast rules should be so amended as to impose on lands hereafter assigned a condition of impartibility below a certain limit. To the lands hereafter assigned a condition of impartibility below a certain limit. To the principle involved in the proposal most of the objections urged against Mr. Keatinge's Bill apply. The limit of impartibility would naturally be that vague something termed the 'economic' limit and, as it is impossible to fix for this purpose any standard of size equally applicable to all holdings, the appropriate course to take for the purpose of determining the limit would be to examine the circumstances of each case separately. It would, however, be impossible with the existing revenue staff to conduct such inquiries.

Apart from this initial difficulty the rule would be a futile one and could never be used effectively to prevent partition. Evasion would be easy and as Messrs. Stokes, Henderson and others have pointed out, it is entirely wrong to assume that the revenue registration has necessarily any connexion with the separate enjoyment of land in actual fact. Moreover the proposal has an obvious weakness, which it shares with Mr. Keatinge's Bill, that it provides only for the registered holder and takes no account of the large class of tenants who are left entirely outside this scheme of 'economic holdings'. The Board regards the proposal, in short, as quite impracticable and fears that the only result of trying to introduce it would be to breed strife and complaints and inquisitorial inquiries to the detriment of more important business while at the best it could only have the effect of creating here and there amidst thousands of others, a field to which a condition of impartibility attaches. It is too late in the day, the Board considers, to think of imposing so novel a condition upon the assignment of land in pursuit of an idea the soundness of which is quite open to argument.

7. As to the very minor proposal regarding stamp duty, the Board considers that the petty benefit resulting from reduction of stamp duty would have no effect whatever towards inducing ryots to consolidate their holdings in opposition to their present practices.

Letter—from C. A. HENDERSON, Esq., I.C.S., Director of Land Records.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Dated—Madras, the 19th November 1917.
No.—D. 715.

I have the honour to reply to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917.

2. It does not seem possible to contest the proposition that a large number of ryotwari pattadars subsist after a fashion on 'uneconomic holdings.' But the suggestion that any remedy for this state of things is to be found in direct action by Government, in the way of limiting subdivisions, is based on the implicit fallacy that the conditions of landholding are in any way determined in this Presidency by the record of them which the Revenue Department purports to maintain. As matters stand, it is a never-ending source of difficulty to bring concealed enjoyment subdivisions to light and to get the record corrected to accord with the facts. It is notorious that the greater part of the work of a special staff consists of detecting and recording hitherto unrecorded enjoyment subdivisions; and this though prima facie the correct record of a subdivision is to the advantage of the owner, who has at present no incentive to avoid correct registration, other than the unauthorized fees which are usually demanded for effecting the change. It requires no great foresight to anticipate what the result would be, if subdivisions within limits were prohibited and the owner of a subdivision had in consequence a very definite motive to conceal the fact. This is the obvious practical objection to the introduction of any such provisions of law; they will in practice be evaded whenever the desire to evade them is sufficiently effective, and the necessity for evasion and concealment will furnish the karnam with another source of illegitimate income. The alternative is a large and incorruptible detective staff.

3. The proposed legislation in the Bombay Presidency is interesting, but remains purely permissive; that is, it assumes that 'economic progress' and 'the production of increased wealth,' as stated in the objects and reasons, are so obviously desirable that the permission to adopt this new law of real estate will not be a dead letter. The history of similar permissive legislation is not encouraging, and I question strongly whether 'economic progress' or 'the production of increased wealth' are motives which affect any but the smallest possible minority of landholders in this Presidency. It is not sufficient to quote the success of similar legislation in European countries or even in Japan. If such permissive legislation, with the whole body of Hindu law, custom and sentiment in such matters opposed to it, has any serious effect on the size of holdings, it will, I think, be time to consider the application of similar measures to this Presidency. For I am unable to believe in the terms of the Hon'ble Mr. Keatinge's letter (paragraph 13) that if the Act is eventually found, by lack of compulsion, to be inoperative, no harm would have been done by its enactment. Perhaps conditions are more favourable in Bombay. In many cases in this Presidency there can be no reasonable doubt that the provision that the consent of all interested parties must be secured before an economic holding can be registered as such would render the proposed legislation inoperative. And if general consent were obtained it is not difficult to imagine the subsequent litigation on the point.

4. In this matter I am entirely in agreement with the Hon'ble Rao Bahadur V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar. It must be left to the sense of the people. Artificial restriction will lead simply to the multiplication of joint pattas, an obvious impediment to administration and distasteful to sensible landholders; or to evasion of the restriction.

5. I am not certain that I understand what concession in the matter of stamp duty is meant in paragraph 3 (ii) of the Government memorandum under reference. It is not a matter on which I feel competent to express an opinion, but I do not think that remission of stamp duty in respect of the deeds by which consolidation of holdings might be effected would of itself prove much of an incentive to consolidation.

Letter—from E. W. LEGH, Esq., I.C.S., Collector of Salem.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Dated—the 13th December 1917.
No.—Dis. 4171-D.

With reference to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917, I have the honour to report as follows.

2. I took the opportunity of going into this personally at Tiruchengodu. I went to three villages. In all villages the evil is admitted; the shares held are often too small to admit of their supporting a family. The holding of one man is moreover being often split up into several separated portions.

On the other hand, the ryots declared that the modification of the law of partition was unthinkable. One man said that if he suggested to his brother that he should relinquish his share he would 'cut his throat.' Jealousy between members of the family is so serious a thing that the idea of benefiting 'the family' (or the still vaguer thing 'the community') found in other countries appears to be not existent. Under these circumstances legislation is out of the question. The work must begin with the people themselves. I append a list of questions which I put in this connexion.

List of questions.

1. Are there many cases in your village where the area held by anyone cultivator is too small for him and his family to live on?
2. Do you think the number of such cases is increasing?
3. Is it due to the Hindu law of partition?
4. Would you welcome the opportunity (if given) to register any fixed portion of your lands an impartible property, i.e., not to be subdivided further by inheritance, sale, etc., but to be held by one heir in perpetuity?
5. Would it be useful if lands given on darkhast were assigned subject to condition that they should not be partible by inheritance or otherwise below a fixed limit?
6. Are there many cases in your village where one man holds small pieces of ground in several places?
7. Would the owners of such separate pieces welcome the opportunity to consolidate their holdings by exchange with others (if that could be done free of duty for stamps or registration) so as to get one single plot for each holder?

Letter— from F. B. EVANS, Esq., I.C.S., Collector of Malabar.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Date— Calicut, the 13th December 1917.
No.—D. 72-Confid.

I have the honour to reply to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917, about the subdivision of agricultural holdings.

2. The subject is very intricate and I do not see how it can really be discussed satisfactorily without the preliminary of a detailed inquiry into the economic history of several typical tracts. Anything of that nature was impossible in the limited time at my disposal (the enclosure to the Board's Proceedings reached me on 3rd November). The problem as a whole is also one that cannot easily be comprehended by the average 'ryot.' I have discussed various aspects of it with various persons during a recent tour and have obtained some useful information and opinions from Divisional officers and from the Zamorin's Estate Collector and Raja Vasudeva Raja of Kollengode. I have also had to make somewhat analogous inquiries in the course of the last two years in connexion with tenancy question. But I still find it impossible to say with any confidence even approximately either what should be taken as the minimum size of an 'economic holding' or whether holdings smaller than any postulated minimum are numerous or are on the increase or not. I have less hesitation in asserting that if the alleged evils exist the suggested remedies would be useless in a district like Malabar.

3. First as to the size of an economic holding. Both Mr. Keatinge and Doctor Slater seem to postulate a country of proprietors cultivating directly under the Government. In Malabar conditions are very different; the proprietor is usually not the cultivator, and the produce of most wet fields is divided between three or more families—proprietors, tenants and occupants. It follows that the area of the cultivator's holding is only one and not necessarily the most important factor in determining whether it is economic or not. A cultivating 5 acres on a wet rent may be worse off than B cultivating $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres on favourable terms. This fact in itself is probably sufficient to condemn any attempt to secure 'economy' by merely regulating subdivision. It at least makes it hopeless to attempt to fix any area as the minimum economic area. Local estimates of the minimum required for an average family of six or seven vary from 6 acres to 2 and from 200 paras of paddy to 400; while the estimate of the amount per acre that the cultivator may be assumed to get vary from 20 paras to 60. A statistician might deduce an average from such estimates corrected by experiments, but it would in my opinion be so abstract and divorced from reality as to be useless for any practical purpose. (I am throughout considering only wet land; since dry crops are unimportant in Malabar and garden crops are more industrial than agricultural.)

4. Next there is the difficulty of discovering with any approach to accuracy what proportion of cultivators' holdings falls below a postulated minimum area. The survey records are useless for this purpose in Malabar as the cultivating tenant's holding was not except by accident the unit of subdivision. In the Kollengode estate cultivators' holdings are said to be 'generally fairly large' (6 acres or more); 2 to 3 acre holdings are comparatively few; in parts of Walluvanad I was told that about 4 acres might be taken as an average; detailed inquiries in half a dozen paddy flats in Ernad and Walluvanad gave the average single holdings as between 1 and 2 acres in four cases and between 2 and 3 in two cases; but it is not certain that in these cases individual cultivators did not also cultivate land in other paddy flats.

5. There are similar difficulties in determining whether subdivision is on the increase—comparatively few new survey subdivisions are made on account of distribution amongst cultivators. Sub-registrar's registers show a good deal of splitting up of various interests; but it is difficult to judge from the mere document whether a cultivator's holding is affected; if a kanom holding is split up into half a dozen it does not necessarily, or even in most cases, mean that any actual cultivator's holding is affected. The laws of inheritance in Malabar only encourage partition amongst the Makkattayam Mappillas and the Pattars. The Marumakkattayam tarwad system encourages the reverse. Amongst the South Malabar Mappillas excessive partition has frequently been alleged for the last thirty years as a cause of their poverty. It may be so, that it is probably also a cause of their industry. And so far as can be seen there is no general progressive increase in subdivision amongst them as a whole: land changes hands amongst Mappillas far more readily than amongst Hindus. A's land on his death may be split up between his widow and half a dozen children, but if the subdivisions are small they are probably soon sold to some man who has ready money in hand and wants to acquire a decent estate. Consolidation seems more or less to keep pace with fissure.

6. The general impression seems to be that though subdivision is not increasing to any great extent there is a large number of holdings that are 'too small'; and this is no doubt true if the standard is to be based on what I may call abstract agricultural economics. But such theoretical considerations would justify compulsory restripment into far larger holdings than either Mr. Keatinge or Doctor Slater seems to contemplate. If you could ignore population and take your area of cultivable land and distribute it in the most economical way amongst as many as it would feed and give employment to, it would probably be best to create large farms worked by agricultural labour; but it is doubtful whether this would conduce to the real happiness of the agricultural classes; and it postulates a practically infinite field of industrial development for the large numbers that must be told to earn their living otherwise than by agriculture. Such sweeping measures are of course out of the question: and Doctor Slater presumably would be content to aim at fields of about six acres. But in a country like Malabar it is doubtful whether a field of six acres of wet land can be cultivated in any sense more economically by one family than by two. In practice a purely agricultural class can hardly be said to exist in Malabar; and the class of cultivators amongst whom subdivision is most common is precisely that in which agriculture is not the sole or even their occupation. A very large number of petty cultivators supplement their earnings by coolie work of various sorts, and the income of a large number of petty shop-keepers, clerks, peons, etc., is supplemented by a small bit of cultivation held by a member of the family. The Kollengode Raja writes: "The ordinary holders of land do not depend solely on the produce of their fields. They supplement it by other sources of income, for example, tapping, minor industrial and general labour. Again in some cases all the adult male members of the family do not engage themselves in cultivation: one becomes a shop-keeper or assistant, another becomes a road maistri or coolie, the third, a bandyman, the fourth, a fuel-cutter and so on, leaving the cultivation of the land, the grazing of cattle and the like to be conducted by one or two adult males assisted by the boys and the females of the family. The cultivating members too engage themselves in minor occupations when the actual season of cultivation is over." It is doubtful whether true economy would be served by any interference with this state of things, even if it were practicable. The question is largely one of the pressure of the population on the soil but it obviously also involves a careful consideration of the economic condition of a district in all its aspects, as indeed Doctor Slater indicates. So far as Malabar is concerned it may be stated roughly that of Doctor Slater's alternative remedies for "friend A B", the first and second are generally availed of; and there is little sign of the descent of the district as a whole into the fifth condition of extreme poverty.

7. As to permissive legislation on the lines suggested by Mr. Keatinge, it may be doubtful whether it is necessary or desirable, but there seems no doubt that it would be a dead-letter in Malabar. Every one consulted agrees that it would be unpopular and impracticable. The Kollengode Raja writes: "Here there seems to be no point in constituting a holding as a registered economic holding. Generally, the holdings are fairly large. There are also small or petty holdings. It does not however seem worth while to register them as economic holdings, as it appears opposed to sentiment, as there are different interests in the land, as the holders have other income also, and as there is no particular advantage to be derived in the circumstances. As a matter of fact, in some cases, the people themselves do not subdivide the land when it is far too small and inconvenient for such division, and they make other arrangements to adjust the matter among themselves at the partition or other settlement by paying proportionate amount of money to the parties concerned leaving the land in the hands of one or two persons for the sake of convenience. The legislation suggested will meet with opposition from the public, as it is against their feelings, besides being unworkable owing to diverse interests in the same land. There will be no general consent to give up partition either. There seems to be a hallowed feeling or idea with certain people to have a bit of the ancestral family property." The Calicut Divisional Officer Khan Sahib Ammon

Sahib writes : " The Muhammadan Law of Inheritance which the Mappillas of South Malabar follow and for which the Marumakkattayam Mappillas of other parts are also striving hard and earnestly, does not leave any option in the matter of partition. The experience of Makkattayam families which have essayed to live joint family life has been without any exception most discouraging. It has led to endless litigation and ruin even during the lifetime of the first generation. A landowner, however small his holding may be, still considers himself and is considered by his neighbours as a somebody in his village much more important than one who makes even a more decent living by other occupations which are all looked upon as precarious when compared to income from land. Hence it is the general ambition to possess land, be it half an acre or even less, so that when an opportunity presents itself, it is hardly probable that anyone would be willing to forego the pride of position within his reach for a money compensation." The Tellicherry Divisional Officer Mr. Hill says : " The number of small holdings are increasing but most of the people to whom I have spoken are very doubtful whether the type of legislation described in the end of paragraph 2 of your letter would effect any improvement. Registration of a plot as impartible would, I presume, require the consent of every male member of the undivided family at the time of registration. If it did not do so the legislation would be most unpopular and if it did do so I think it would be very little availed of owing to the difficulty of getting the consent of all the members. Every one I have consulted has pointed out that such registration would make it impossible for them to borrow money on a small portion of the registered plot, or to sell such a small portion to clear off a debt on the remainder. This consideration would make the janmi less likely to wish to register any of his holdings as impartible and would not be counteracted by the consideration that such registration would secure a holding which was more economical to cultivate because it is most unlikely that he would cultivate it himself."

8. The kind of typical case in Malabar is as follows : A janmi A owns 50 acres of land ; under him konam tenants B and C hold 20 and 30 acres each : under B there may be four cultivating tenants P Q R S cultivating what may be presumed to be economic holdings, and under C a dozen tenants cultivating uneconomic holdings. There is no reason why A, B or C should resort to the Act, and if P Q R or S made an application A and B would probably object and the Collector would presumably in any case have to refuse registration. In fact I do not see how the Act as drafted could be applied to such a state of things.

9. The two minor palliatives suggested in paragraph 3 of the Government reference are quite unimportant from the economic point of view. As to the first there are practically no lands available for darkhast in Malabar, but if any conditions are to be imposed they should presumably include prohibitions regarding letting, as in section 17 of Mr. Keatinge's Bill.

10. As to the second a man who will trouble about consolidation is not likely to be deterred by the small stamp duties now involved, and I think that such trifling 'concessions' are objectionable in principle.

Letter—from A. Y. G. CAMPBELL, Esq., C.I.E., I.C.S., Collector of Kistna.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.

Dated—Masulipatam, the 16th December 1917.

No.—R.O.C. 1751 B. & G.

I have the honour to reply to your Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917, regarding the minute subdivision of agricultural lands.

2. I enclose some statistics which I have collected showing the extent to which small subdivisions exist at the present time in certain selected typical villages. It will be observed from these statistics that generally the percentage of the area of dry lands subdivided into plots of less than two acres to the total dry ayacut of the village is greater than the percentage of wet land subdivided into plots of less than one acre to the wet ayacut of the village. This is explained as due to the fact that the intensive cultivation of dry land, however small it may be, pays the cultivator. Such small areas can be turned to good account by raising chillies, brinjals, plantains, etc. More labour and more capital are required for raising produce on similar subdivisions of wet land.

3. In considering the statistics appended to this letter, it has to be borne in mind that in some cases subdivisions may be consolidated for purposes of cultivation with neighbouring plots of land, but on the other hand there are survey fields which have not been subdivided in the revenue accounts although they are divided into plots cultivated by different cultivators.

4. It is clear from Mr. Slater's letter, dated 17th June 1917, that there are cases in which it may not be desirable to interfere with a holding smaller in area than that generally regarded as an economical holding. In some cases the plot of land may correspond to an allotment holding in England and may enable a man to raise garden or other crops though they may not be his sole source of livelihood.

5. The cultivators themselves adopt certain measures now to render the cultivation of small plots as economical as possible, for instance, they may borrow ploughs or bullocks from each other in exchange for labour.

6. One important factor in the fragmentation of holdings is the Hindu Law and the manner in which it is carried out, but it is clear from the reports which I have received that any direct interference with the Hindu or Muhammadan Law in this connexion will be very much resented and will no doubt be evaded. It seems to me that it will be of very little use to attempt to enforce any serious alteration of Hindu or Muhammadan Law, unless it is supported by the mass of the people who will be affected by it.

7. If a law is passed that if a holding less than a certain area is to be divided amongst the members of a Hindu family or if the division will render the various holdings less than the area of economical holding, in that case the holding should be retained by the senior member of the family who should compensate the other members by the payment of money, the result will generally be that the whole of the land will have to be sold or at least heavily mortgaged in order that the senior member of the family may obtain the required money. The final result will be that the land will pass out of the family into the hands of the money-lender.

8. Legislation on these lines will, therefore, adversely affect the interests of the poorer ryots and will benefit the wealthier classes.

9. Any artificial limitation of the extent to which subdivision should be carried appears to me of little use as the intention of any orders to that effect can be easily defeated.

10. In the same way the intention of an order that a holding included in one patta shall be entered in the name of a single pattadar if below a certain size can be readily defeated. The several joint-holders will put forward one man as the nominal pattadar and the only result of such an order will be that Government will have less security for its revenue, the security would be the property of the nominal pattadar only instead of the property of all the joint owners as at present.

11. In any legislation which is undertaken, it will be necessary to see that the holding of small areas similar to allotment holdings or gardens by persons having other avocations is not affected.

12. It will, further, be necessary to consider the case of subdivisions necessitated by the acquisition of land for such public purposes as railways and roads. In many cases the balance of the field not required for the public purpose may be less than the area of an economical holding. Will it be necessary for the Government or local authority concerned to acquire in such cases the whole field and hand over the land not required free of charge to the owner of an adjoining field? Obviously it cannot be handed over to any other person and as there will be little or no competition for the land the adjoining owner cannot be compelled to pay for the land and if it is not assigned to him it will go out of cultivation.

13. Apart from such lands as allotment holdings, etc., we are mainly concerned with seeing that the land in a single farm, i.e., managed for purposes of cultivation by one man or one corporate body either as owner or tenant or partly as owner and partly as tenant, should be an economical holding. I would suggest, therefore, for consideration that a farmer of land adjoining an uneconomical holding should be allowed to sue before the Divisional Officer for the tenancy of such adjoining uneconomical holding ; the conditions of the tenancy, the length of the lease and the rates of rent should be determined by the Divisional Officer, subject to such rules and orders as may be issued by the Government or the Board of Revenue.

14. Such a provision of law will not deprive a small owner of his ownership of the land, but it may deprive him of the cultivation of the land and compel him to lease it, unless it is of the nature of an allotment holding or garden. It is possible that parties may not generally take advantage of such a provision of law except on account of the ill-feeling, but the fear of the possibility of such action may lead petty owners and tenants to combine uneconomical holdings and will provide an inducement to families to divide land amongst the various members so as to avoid as far as possible the fragmentation of fields.

15. A condition of the lease given by the Divisional Officer should be that the farm of which the land leased is to form part shall continue under the management of one person or corporate body.

16. Facilities may also be provided for the formation of farming associations (e.g., co-operative societies) for the purpose of dealing with uneconomical holdings.

17. As regards the two points referred to in paragraph 3 of the Government Memorandum No. 923-B/17-4, dated 3rd October 1917, I do not think that it is desirable to revise the darkhast rules so that land assigned on darkhast in future should be subject to a condition of impartibility beyond a certain limit. As I have already suggested the intention of such rules can be easily defeated. Moreover, it appears to me undesirable that there should be plots of land side by side in the same village subject to various conditions of tenure. In order to enforce such a rule, it will be necessary for civil courts and registration officers, in every case affecting a portion of a field or holding, to make inquiries whether the land is impartible or not.

18. Concessions in the matter of stamp duty to encourage the consolidation of small uneconomical holdings may be granted.

19. I have made the above suggestions with considerable diffidence. I am inclined to think that it may be desirable to make further inquiry regarding (a) the existence and nature of evils resulting from the subdivision and fragmentation of holdings and (b) the agricultural practices adopted by small ryots at the present time to mitigate those evils.

Letter—from Khan Bahadur S. M. V. OOSMAN SAHIB Bahadur, B.A., B.L., M.R.S.A., Acting Collector of Anantapur.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.

Dated—the 17th December 1917.

No.—D. Dis. 3727.

I have the honour to submit the report called for in Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917, regarding the desirability of checking minute subdivisions of agricultural lands in this Presidency and also on the further questions raised in paragraph 3 of Government Memorandum No. 923 B/17-5, dated 3rd October 1917, communicated with the Board's Reference.

2. I have consulted some of my Divisional Officers and a few ryots who could be expected to make an intelligent expression of their views. The Sub-Collector remarks that some of the ryots whom he met did not quite understand the points for discussion. On the question as to how far the evil of carrying on subdivisions even to a ridiculously low limit exists in this district, there is some divergence of opinion among those consulted. The Divisional Officer, Gooty, reports that the tendency is common on the part of co-sharers in a holding to have their shares separately subdivided in order to avoid the risk of their property being sold for default of payment of revenue by the other co-sharers, and that this tendency has become aggravated by the laws of inheritance in vogue among the Hindus and Mussalmans. It is said to have become further accentuated by the steady and continuous increase in population and by the growing feeling in favour of a direct interest in, and attachment to, land. The cumulative effect of all these is the creation of too small and petty holdings wholly insufficient to maintain a family and quite uneconomical. This view has already been advanced by one of the opposers to the motion in the Legislative Council in the discussion held in May last. The Sub-Collector mentions an instance of a joint patta of 40 cents of land in which one of the owners could not sell his share except to the other owner who was his own brother and who would not offer him one-third of what an outsider was willing to give for his share. He says that it was asserted to him that his division (Penukonda) did not suffer much from this 'minute subdivision disease' and that commonsense generally acts as a deterrent. The Divisional Officer, Anantapur, on the other hand, avers that in the districts he has served so far, he has not come across villages in which many of the inhabitants have been suffering from 'chronic under-employment.' He does not see how the checking of minute subdivisions will remedy matters where such under-employment is the prevalent complaint in a congested district. I am inclined to the opinion that so far as Anantapur district is concerned, there is no reason to treat it as a congested district (from the point of availability and dearthness of labour), though there is no denying the fact that its poor soils on the whole and the steady increase in population have rendered the struggle for existence rather keen for the agricultural population. Even so far back as 1837, Sir Frederick Nicholson (then Collector of the district) made out clearly that this district is one of the poorest in the Presidency, that the bulk of the soil was very inferior and that the rainfall deficient and frequently unseasonable (vide his report on the economic condition of this district printed in Board's Proceedings No. 172, Revenue Settlement, Survey, Land Records and Agriculture, dated 27th June 1887). Since then, some industries in the district have been revived and have flourished, and fresh ones started. The introduction of oil engines, machines for extracting cane juice and husking paddy, groundnut shelling machines, the starting of cotton presses and cotton ginning factories, the working of the Goldmines at Ramagiri and the completion of two Railway lines (Guntakal-Bangalore section and Dharmavaram-Pakala line) have thrown open fresh fields for employment for the labouring classes, so much so that labour has become much dearer now than 30 years ago. It would not therefore be correct to say that in this district there are many villages whose inhabitants are unable to get full employment and maintenance on their own holdings and at the same time have no other sufficient means of subsidiary employment for earning a living wage. Much emphasis cannot therefore be laid on the score of 'under employment' leading to starvation and distress, in taking exception to the evil of minute subdivisions as far as it exists in this district, though the other objections urged from the economic point of view, such as those summarized in paragraph 8 of the Hon'ble Mr. Keatinge's report hold good generally even in non-congested areas. The following figures taken from the district rent rolls will show how the number of small pattas of one rupee and less has nearly doubled itself during a period of five years:—

	Faali 1321. No.	Faali 1325. No.
Pattas of the value of Re. 1 and less	13,999	26,937
Pattas above Re. 1 and up to and including Rs. 10.	64,643	70,199
Pattas above Rs. 10 and up to Rs. 100	39,156	32,106
Pattas above Rs. 100	1,057	786

Allowing margin for cases of small assignments on darkhast, there is no doubt that the bulk of the increase under small pattas is accounted for by excessive subdivision and fragmentation of holdings. It is therefore an unmistakable symptom of the existence of the 'disease' complained of, and the time, I think, has come for sounding a note of alarm to forewarn the public and the Government towards the adoption of remedial measures to arrest its growth, so that the further and further splitting up of fields may not go on unchecked and eventually lead to absurdity.

3. If then the existence of the evil is sufficiently manifest, the further question arises how far it is advisable for the Government to step in and legislate on the lines laid down in the draft Bill appended as an enclosure. It is needless to add that there will be some opposition to state interference in such matters on the ground that such a course is contrary to established custom and opposed to sanctioned usage and the Hindu and the Muhammadan law of partition and inheritance. These objections have already been put forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achari in the Legislative Council. Whether such interference by the State is politically sound is therefore a moot-point. The Divisional Officer, Gooty, remarks that the introduction of a law declaring the holdings indivisible is opposed to the ryotwari system and to the laws of partition, that in the case of holdings of small size, the son inheriting the property will not be in a position to find the money required for payment of compensation to his brother or other co-heirs and that the 'absence of equal treatment of the several sons of a pattadar would be opposed to the feelings, sentiments, customs and traditions of the people.' He thinks it is likely to lead to disruption of families and that the best thing therefore to do is to leave it to the good sense of the people whose customs and feelings must necessarily change with the spread of education. The Divisional Officer of Anantapur also has similar objections against the suggested remedy and doubts whether Indian opinion will support the proposed legislation. In short, this is tantamount to saying, 'what can't be cured must be endured.' But the question may well be asked whether the position is really irremediable? My Sub-Collector is in favour of Government assuming the responsibility of intervention whether the idea is viewed with favour by the public or not. I am inclined to agree with him. As he says, 'it is simply a case of saving the people from themselves.' If it has been found legally possible for a court of law to refrain from cutting up house-sites in partition cases and to order the site to be sold and the proceeds to be divided, there is no reason why the power of the law should not be extended to prevent agricultural holdings being similarly cut up and subdivided. After all, I presume the proposed legislation will only be aimed at and directed towards putting a stop to carrying subdivisions too far and to the ridiculous point, and both educated Indian opinion and village commonsense may be expected to see the necessity for State interference in a matter of such economic importance. It would be ineffective to wait for the poorer ryots to remedy matters by adjustment of holdings and mutual exchange of plots. The incentive even to such spontaneous action must come from Government, and it is by legislative enactment alone that it can be made effective.

4. As to the question whether it is advisable to fix a minimum limit to subdivision, I may add that, as already indicated in the Council debate, such a limit was actually in force some time ago and was abandoned for various administrative reasons. The old Board's Standing Order No. 3 was deleted I believe in the process of consolidation, and there cannot be much harm in reviving the limit so as to suit modern requirements. Of my Divisional Officers consulted, the Deputy Collector, Gooty, is in favour of making it one acre in the case of wet land and two acres for dry. The Divisional Officer of Anantapur proposes two acres for the wet and five for dry, except in special cases such as small unobjectionable encroachments on assessed wastes and porambokes adjoining a pattadar's holding or the like which can be incorporated into the holding. The Sub-Collector on the other hand would put it as 50 cents and two acres for wet and dry, respectively. I am not in favour of prescribing one limit for all kinds of soils—at least in a district like this where more than 77 per cent of the assessed dry area is of the inferior red sort. The value of lands which has of late risen considerably owing to high prices of food-grains and stuffs and the dearness of other agricultural produce varies of course with the different soils. An acre of black cotton land may be priced at Rs. 50 to 150 and that of the red loam from 5 or 10 rupees to 40 or 50 rupees. Further, the inferior red soils of this district cannot bear the strain of annual crops and require periodical rest. In such cases, the laying of a uniform subdivision limit will work hardship. The subdivision limit should necessarily be larger in the case of poorer soils than in the case of fertile and rich lands, as the former are left fallow once in two or three years. I would, therefore, lay down that so far as wet land is concerned (which is generally valuable even in red soil tracts), a minimum limit of 50 cents may be proposed, except in the case of unobjectionable encroachments such as those referred to above. As for dry lands, a limit of one acre in black cotton soil and two acres in others will suit and may not cause dissatisfaction. The same minima may be extended to lands assigned under the darkhast rules, as it is but fair that the condition applicable to existing holdings should be extended to future assignments. Such a limit is desirable from the point of (1) encouragement of intensive cultivation and (2) the necessity of preventing the growth and multiplication of small indigent farmers. The latter, if they spring up in unusually large numbers, will prove a menace to the agricultural prosperity of any locality.

5. Lastly, I am in favour of extending the concession now in force regarding exemption of stamp duty in the case of Government lands to inam holdings also, when parties voluntarily consolidate their holdings.

Letter—from E. S. LLOYD, Esq., I.C.S., Collector of Trichinopoly.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Dated—the 17th December 1917.
No.—D. Dis. 3744/R.

I have the honour to reply to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt. 17-1, dated 20th October 1917.

2. The evils of excessive subdivision and 'fragmentation' of holdings are undoubtedly real and are much in evidence in this district and I believe elsewhere in the Presidency. As examples of the former I append a statement showing typical instances in the ryotwari villages of Kukur and L. Abishekapuram in the Trichinopoly taluk where wet fields of two to three acres have been split up into numerous minute subdivisions of a few cents each. The Divisional Officer, Namakkal, further gives illustrative details showing the number of subdivisions in certain villages according to the old survey of the Namakkal taluk and in the resurvey recently completed. The number has considerably more than doubled in all the villages mentioned while in one case—the wet village of Kumarapalaiyam—the number in the old survey was only 161 while the resurvey shows 1,720. The acceleration of the process is generally ascribed to the growth of population and the gradual break-up of the joint family system and it is greatly encouraged by the present rule governing the transfer of registry of holdings. That it is economically unsound is very generally admitted but some of the Divisional Officers point out that it has one advantage in enabling the poorer classes to get hold of small bits of land which they would not be able to do if the state of the law favoured the formation of large estates.

3. As an instance of the evils of fragmentation I may mention the case of M.R.Ry. Seturatnam Ayyar Avargal, a leading Mirasdar of Kulittalai. He has been kind enough to give me a rough sketch (which I enclose for the Board's perusal) showing how a property of 190 acres was divided between his father and aunts. He has personally informed me that the disadvantages of such a disposal of the property are great and that it sometimes happens for instance that while he wants to harvest a crop of a particular kind of paddy his relations will be wanting water for Lettier—from A. GALLETTI, Esq., I.C.S., Acting Collector of Chittoor.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioner of Land Revenue.

Dated—the 22nd December 1917.

No.—4304.

I have the honour to reply to Board's Ref. No. 2093/Gt. 17-1, dated the 20th October 1917, on the subject of the desirability of checking minute subdivisions of agricultural lands in this Presidency.

2. Instead of referring the matter to Divisional Officers and Tahsildars, I referred it to the leading ryots of the district and then had a conference with a few of them at my office on the 20th instant. I enclose a copy of the proceedings of the conference.

3. There is no doubt that in parts of this district the subdivision and fragmentation of holdings has gone very far. We have instances of holdings of 1 cent and holdings of 2 cents enjoyed by nine persons. The ryots all agreed that the situation required a remedy so far as the minute subdivision as a result of partition and succession is concerned. They did not seem to be much troubled about the case of a man whose holding is scattered in different parts of a village. They seemed to think that it might even be advisable to have a piece here and a piece there so as to enjoy different varieties of soil and be able to grow different crops.

4. There was a good deal of difference of opinion regarding the extent of land required for the support of a family and the proper size of a holding in order that it may be an economic holding. I should imagine that if any legislation is undertaken authorizing the voluntary constitution of impartible holdings, and if the darkhast rules are altered to permit of the grant of impartible holdings, fairly wide limits should be laid down, say anything between 1 acre and 10 acres wet and anything between 5 acres and 25 acres dry.

5. None of the ryots present at the conference saw any objection to Government assigning land on darkhast on condition of impartibility. The Government Pleader who was present and who had also studied the papers previously and given his opinion in writing was positive that such darkhast grants would not be valid and would not be recognized by the courts unless special legislation is undertaken. In view, however, of the Crown Grants Act, 1895, I do not see what is to prevent Government making new grants on impartible inam or jaghir tenure, such grants being described as inams or jaghirs for the improvement of agriculture.

6. The conference was in favour of a suggestion that I made that the darkhast rules should be altered so that, of the two adjacent holders, the man with a smaller holding, being less than a certain maximum, should have a preference. A suggestion was also made by a ryot that an adjacent holder should be given a right of pre-emption by law in the case of holdings below a certain maximum placed on the market but most of the persons present thought this would lead to difficulties about the settling of the price and would decrease the value of the property.

7. Another suggestion was that some alteration of the remission rules was necessary to make it easier to consolidate the subdivisions within a survey number. When all the subdivisions become the property of one man, the Land Records department would consolidate them with the result that the owner would lose the chance of getting remission on a portion of his land. The suggestion was that the remission rules should be modified so as to provide for remission for parts of fields which have been consolidated.

8. No one appeared to be much attracted by the suggestion that a concession should be made in the matter of stamp duty when parties voluntarily consolidate their holdings. The sense of the meeting seemed to be that it would be an inducement insufficient to make any real difference but that it might be tried, the Registration Department being required to remit the stamp duty on the certificate of a subordinate revenue officer that the case was a genuine one of consolidation of a holding. It was thought that the proposal would be quite useless if a man had to pay the stamp duty in the first instance and to obtain a refund on application.

9. I see no objection to the enactment of a law on the lines suggested in Bombay to provide for the voluntary constitution of economic holdings, but the principle runs so counter to the habits and traditions of the people that I should think it would have no more practical results than the Malabar Marriage Act. Among the tens of thousands of laws on the Statute book of the Kingdom of Italy there is a permissive law of this kind; but I have never heard of a case in which advantage was taken of it. My conference also was much more impressed with the injustice that the constitution of holdings descending by primogeniture would inflict in their view on the younger brothers than the advantages of keeping the holding intact. The creation of darkhast inams in the form of impartible economic holdings for the improvement of agriculture would appear to me to be a more hopeful departure. Such inams would serve a purpose by way of example and admonition, even though very few of them would be created as Government have very little land of any value left to give away. It may also be considered whether preference should not be granted as between two darkhastdars to the one whose holding will be made into or will approach the size of an economic holding by the addition of the land applied for. It may also be considered whether Board's Standing Order No. 13, paragraph 4 (remission), should not be amended in the sense suggested by my conference.

ENCLOSURE

Proceedings of the Chittoor Ryots' Conference to consider methods for preventing subdivision and fragmentation of holdings (20th December 1917).

The Treasury Deputy Collector pointed out that the wakf system in the Muhammadan law provided a means of keeping property intact but only for religious and charitable purposes, not for mere economic purposes. However, as it is a family settlement it helps the family to keep the land intact for generations in the same family.

Facts regarding minute subdivision in this district.—Mr. Konda Reddi said that in Regallu the subdivision of holdings has gone down to 2 and 4 cents; Mr. Viraraghava Reddi of Kattamanchi that subdivision has gone down 7½ and 12½ cents in his village; Mr. Nanjundappa Reddi of Kalakattur that 26 cents is the minimum extent of a subdivision in his village; Mr. Obul Reddi of Chintamakulapalle that subdivision has not gone so far in his village; Mr. Chinna Chenga Reddi observed that in his village (Kolamasanapalle) subdivision has gone down to 5 cents. The Land Records Tahsildar produced accounts of Angallu village. In survey No. 507 of that village measuring 19 acres 29 cents there are 245 subdivisions ranging from 1 cent, 2 and 3 cents upwards. Some of these are held by joint pattadars, e.g., subdivision No. 138-4 is held by Mekala Chinnayya and Sitaramayya. In Vayalpad village there is survey No. 805 measuring acres 11-11 containing 126 subdivisions from 1 cent upwards, and survey No. 817 (acres 7-52) containing 108 subdivisions going down to 1 cent which is enjoyed by four persons. Other instances are: 3 cents are enjoyed by three persons, 7 cents enjoyed by 11 persons and 2 cents by nine persons. It is however pointed out that some of these small subdivisions might be wells or tree-sites and not arable land. Other instances were given from Doddipalle and Gundlur villages.

The extent of land required for the support of a family and the proper size of holding.—Mr. Nanjundappa Reddi observed that 80 cents will be required for the sustenance of a family but it might be more convenient to have the 80 cents in four different places with different kinds of soils for growing different crops. At the same time 80 cents of good soil is better than four plots of bad soil. Mr. Muddappa Chetti suggested that holdings should consist of not less than one acre wet. For the convenient support of a family, there should be not less than 4 acres wet or 10 acres dry land. Mr. Konda Reddi observed that in the case of wet lands under river-fed sources, 2 acres will be good enough for a family and elsewhere 4 to 6 acres—besides dry land to the extent of at least 5 to 10 acres in addition to the wet land. Mr. Chinna Chenga Reddi agreed with Mr. Muthappa Chetti. Mr. Viraraghava Reddi suggested 2½ acres of wet land and 5 to 6 acres of dry as the minimum extent sufficient for a family. Mr. Narayanaswami Reddi suggested 2 acres of wet under spring channels and in other places 4 to 5 acres and dry land of at least 10 acres. An economic holding should not be less than these figures. In the case of dry land with no well in it, 25 acres would be an economic holding. Mr. Konda Reddi's opinion is that 10 acres would be a better figure for an economic holding in dry land than 25 acres because it has all to be ploughed in one season and 25 acres is too much for one family to plough.

Discussion of remedies.—The meeting having come to the conclusion that the situation requires a remedy, the ryots present were asked what remedy they would propose. As regards the consolidation of subdivisions in one survey number, Mr. Obul Reddi said that there are great difficulties in consolidation as people of different castes own land in the same survey number. The general opinion of the meeting was that there would be no willing exchange of land because a man would be particularly attached to a particular piece of land and so on.

Right of pre-emption of adjacent holder.—Mr. Konda Reddi suggested that an adjacent holder should have a right of pre-emption in the case of small plots placed on the market. He added that the price would have to be referred to arbitration in this case. Mr. Obul Reddi objected saying that this right of pre-emption would decrease the value of the property to be sold.

Voluntary constitution of impartible holdings.—Mr. Narayanaswami Reddi was in favour of a law for the voluntary constitution of every economic holding subject to a right of primogeniture but he considered that the exact extent of such holdings would have to be left for determination in each locality. Mr. Konda Reddi was not in favour of any system which would deprive the younger brothers of their share in the property. He suggested that the younger brother would have to be paid off in cash by instalments if the elder brother were given the holding. He was not in favour of any other system which would leave the younger brothers of the family to starve. Mr. Viraraghava Reddi was not in favour of the proposed law. Mr. Muddapa Chetti suggested that the economic holding system should not come into force until the second generation after that of the person voluntarily constituting an economic holding, that is to say, the holding would go to the eldest son, compensation being given to the other brothers but after them the holding would go by primogeniture. Many attempts were made to get an opinion from Mr. Obul Reddi. He seemed to be in favour of Government doing something to stop partition suits in civil courts but he had no scheme for legislation. Mr. Chinna Chenga Reddi was not in favour of any change.

Alteration of darkhast rules.—The meeting saw no objection to the land being given on darkhast in conveniently large plots on condition that it should not be alienable except as a whole and it should descend on the principle of primogeniture. The meeting was in favour of the proposal that the darkhast rule should be altered so that of two adjacent holders the man with the smallest holding should have preference.

Exemption from Stamp Duty.—Mr. Obul Reddi said that exemption of documents from stamp duty would not be sufficient inducement and would make no difference. The meeting seemed to agree with him. Mr. Konda Reddi's opinion is that it might be useful to some extent and that it should be remitted by the Sub-Registrar on a certificate from the karnam and the village munsif or the Firka Revenue Inspector that it is a real case of consolidation of holdings and it would then not be necessary to make the party use a stamp and then claim a refund from the Collector.

Alteration of remission rules.—It was suggested by Mr. Konda Reddi that the remission rules and the clubbing of subdivisions under the rules would result in a man losing by the consolidation of a holding, as the subdivisions of a division held by one man would disappear and he would no longer get remission on a particular subdivision. He suggested that the remission rules should be modified so as to provide for remission on parts of fields which had been consolidated.

The Government Pleader's opinion was that the darkhast rules could not be altered so as to attach conditions overriding the Hindu law of Succession without legislation.

Letter—from H. G. STOKES, Esq., C.I.E., I.C.S., Collector of Kurnool.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Dated—the 31st December 1917.
No.—D. Dis. 4581-Genl.

Adverting to Board's Reference No. 2093/Genl. 17-1, dated 20th October 1917, on Government memorandum regarding the desirability of checking minute subdivisions of agricultural lands in this Presidency, I have the honour to report as follows.

2. The subject is of great importance and is novel to the people concerned, and it has not been possible in the period allowed for reply to go adequately into it. Some of my Divisional Officers have been consulted and a number of the leading ryots, and as might be expected, the general opinion is strongly against any legislative measure which would run counter to the principle of the Hindu and Muhammadan law of inheritance while no objection is taken to a purely permissive measure of the kind advocated by Mr. Keatinge in Bombay. As matters stand, a Hindu can dispose of his self-acquired property as he pleases and the proposed measure giving him in such case power to declare a self-acquired estate impartible would not seem to be unduly revolutionary, though like Mr. Keatinge, I question whether such a measure will be largely resorted to. How far it would be compatible with the principles of Muhammadan law is a different question; and I am inclined to think that in this connexion the measure would be a real innovation in the existing law which might not improbably be regarded with distrust by the members of that very conservative community.

3. That the undue subdivision and "fragmentation" of holdings is an evil from the economic standpoint may, broadly speaking, be conceded, though in a district like this where the ryots are mostly themselves the cultivators, it may be doubted whether the results are so serious as they appear. Although "fragmentation" no doubt exists, I do not think it has been resulted in "putting the bulk of the land" outside the possibility of effective cultivation or economical organization. The main cause, as is recognized in the papers circulated, is to be found in the provisions of the Hindu and Muhammadan law of inheritance and it is precisely by reason of this fact that I should be opposed to any attempt to impose from without a theoretically better system. Appendix II to Mr. Keatinge's report illustrates already the difficulty of inducing acceptance of such a measure by the peasantry even in advanced communities of Europe, and, a fortiori, it would be unwise to make such an attempt in this country under present conditions, when the bulk of the peasantry are unfamiliar with economic theory, are wedded to the accepted "Mamul" and are totally incapable of comprehending the reasons for the contemplated change. The remedy for the evil I think is mainly to be found in the gradual enlightenment of the agricultural population by education, and in widening his views and knowledge of agricultural economics.

4. I do not think that anything would be achieved to secure the object aimed at by an executive order prohibiting subdivisions in revenue accounts below a certain minimum, because the revenue registry has no connexion of cause and effect with the separate enjoyment of land in actual fact, and were Government to refuse to register separately any holding below (say) three acres, there would still be no guarantee whatever that the three acres were being worked as an "economic" holding, and was not in fact enjoyed by half a dozen persons each in possession of a distressingly "uneconomic" holding. We have of recent years, with the aid of the Registration Department, attempted to bring our revenue registry into closer correspondence with the facts of enjoyment; to refuse separate registry below the theoretically "economic" minimum will merely divorce the revenue registry from the facts; it will moreover tend to multiply joint pattas, which are a nuisance both to Government and the ryot. For one thing the collection of revenue from the joint pattadars is a matter of considerable difficulty and if as often happens there is disagreement between the shareholders as to the extent of land owned by each, we have to depend on the statement of the karnam who is by no means very scrupulous. Joint holdings leave the door open to the village officers for fraud. From the point of view of the ryot there is a still greater danger, for when one of the shareholders makes default in the payment of revenue the entire holding is brought to sale and even those who have duly paid their share of the kist suffer with the defaulter.

5. As regards paragraph 3 of the Government memorandum it would no doubt be possible so to revise the darkhast rules, in respect of future grants, as to reserve the power of resumption to Government in case the land were subdivided below a certain minimum. I do not consider that this would be a very practicable remedy, or effective; and it would be, I think, open to serious objection. In the first place, revenue registry being no guarantee on evidence of the facts of enjoyment, we should have either to allow the order to remain a dead letter, or to undertake constant inquisitorial proceedings to discover the facts of enjoyment, which would be a constant source of irritation to all concerned, and would give village officers and mischief-makers a standing opportunity of causing trouble. For example suppose ten acres to be granted now to a 'A' in preference to 'B' on an "impartible" tenure: and suppose that the unsuccessful 'B', after waiting for a suitable interval, accuses 'A' of having in fact divided it up, thereby rendering the land liable to resumption, and incidentally available for re-grant to 'B'; follows an inquiry with witnesses, vakils, expenses, and much hard swearing, and, even if the allegation of 'B' is false, there is a good chance of his getting his witnesses believed. Or again, suppose after 30 years it is discovered that a family has in fact divided its "impartible" holding and has been for many years enjoying it in separate plots—theoretically I presume, Government might resume; practically it would not be possible to do so without depriving the family of its livelihood and causing a real and natural sense of injustice. I do not think the irritation and insecurity which would result from such a condition would be at all balanced by the theoretical economic benefit resulting.

6. I see no objection to granting concessions in the matter of stamp duty when parties voluntarily consolidate their holdings. By "consolidation" I presume some adjustment of the nature of "restripment" is meant, which would be done by exchange of land or by conveyance involving material stamp fees. Consolidation by transfer of revenue registry would mean nothing necessarily and the fee for it is nominal. But I doubt whether the concessions will have much effect.

Letter—from J. M. Turing, Esq., I.C.S., Collector of Bellary.
To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.
Dated—the 5th January 1918.
No.—D. Dis. 26.

I have the honour to submit the following reply to the Board's Reference No. 2093 Gt./17-1, dated the 20th October 1917.

2. As desired by the Board, reference has been made to all Divisional Officers, and conferences with ryots have been held by the Divisional officers and by certain selected Tahsildars. The officers concerned were asked to discuss the matter with a few educated and intelligent ryots, not so much as regards their own holdings, which would naturally be of larger size, but as regards the smaller holdings principally concerned, and also with ryots of the class most likely to be affected, i.e., ryots possessing holdings which they cultivate exclusively by the labour of themselves and their families, and whose holdings are barely sufficient for their support. The replies are interesting, and indicate that, framed in a much simplified form, the economic question under discussion, and the proposed method of dealing with it has been rendered intelligible to the ryots.

The general results may be summarised as follows:—

(a) The ryots consulted are of opinion that holdings which are not "economic" in the sense in which that term is used by Mr. Keatinge and Doctor Gilbert Slater are quite common.

(b) As regards the existence of 'fragmentation', to a serious degree, opinion is somewhat divided. I do not myself think that 'fragmentation' is as yet a very serious difficulty in this particular district.

(c) As regards a minimum limit to subdivision, the ryots' opinion were much divided, the majority being apparently against such restriction.

(d) The ryots consulted were almost universally opposed to any legal restrictions on inheritance and were of opinion that, although the permissive creation of such holdings as Mr. Keatinge's Bill contemplates was not of itself objectionable, it was unlikely that any large number of people would create such holdings.

The general view is summarised in the following phrase in the report of one of the Tahsildars, "In the end the ryots came to the conclusion that the proposal of creating economic holdings was quite sound" (sound in theory I presume), "but not at all practicable."

I could not choose any phrase which more accurately sums up my own view of the proposal.

3. As regards Doctor Gilbert Slater's letter, I would add the following remarks:—

No one is likely to question the existence all over the Presidency of 'uneconomic' holdings, and in a less serious degree of 'fragmentation' carried to absurd extremes. No one is likely to question the fact that numerous holdings can barely support the families who live on them, or that the increase of population is likely to accentuate these conditions, unless other avenues of employment can be found. This fact has, I believe, been recognized for the last 50 years at least, but I doubt very much whether any of the solutions suggested are both practicable and also likely to be effective.

4. The various proposals touched on in the Board's reference and its enclosures seem to me to fall into at least four divisions—

(a) compulsory restriping or other measures for enforcing the creation of 'economic' holdings,

(b) the permissive creation of such holdings,

(c) the mere restriction of subdivision to a certain minimum extent, and
(d) such minor proposals as the Board's suggestion to make lands granted on darkhast impartible below a certain minimum.

5. Item (a), paragraph 4.—I have perused with great interest Mr. Keatinge's Bill, his explanation of its objects and his description of the legislation undertaken in various European countries and in Japan on the same lines.

I submit, however, that success in European countries in the 're-stripping' of land is no indication of what is possible in oriental countries. Whatever may be said to the contrary, India has never been subjected to the process which some one has called "bludgeoning at the hands of the law", through which most European countries have passed. Nor have its inhabitants till within the last hundred years had much reason to believe that the measures of their rulers unintelligible to themselves were being carried out in their best interests. It would be absurd to expect in India either the intelligent co-operation or (in matters of land tenure any way) the submission with which the large body of agriculturists in a European country would meet their rulers in such a matter. A European Government can and does approach such a subject without more concern than, shall I say, the alteration of the country's policy from one of Free trade to Protection or vice versa. In India it would be impossible to treat the two matters as being on an equal footing. The desire to deal with his land as he likes, subject to reasonable taxation is I believe in the very fibres of the Indian ryot, and I do not believe that any Indian administration could thwart this instinct with safety.

This would be my criticism on any attempt at compulsion in the matter of economic holdings.

6. As regards purely voluntary efforts in the same direction, I consider that Mr. Keatinge has supplied the answer to his own Bill, in paragraph 13 of his letter to the Chief Secretary of the Bombay Government. He says "it may be argued that the Bill is so weak that it would be inoperative; in that case at least no harm that the Bill is so weak that it would be inoperative, but do not think that would have been done." I agree that it would be inoperative, but do not think that any advantage is gained by ornamenting the Statute Book with enactments which amount to no more than pious wishes. They are apt to produce the impression that a solution has been found, where there has really been no solution at all.

7. As regards the limitation of subdivisions my belief is it would do no more than touch the fringe of the economic difficulty under discussion. Even granted that joint holdings will support a larger number of people than smaller individual holdings of the same aggregate size, the restrictions imposed could scarcely achieve a greater success than to postpone the full pressure of population on the land in a certain number of instances for a very limited period, probably not more than one generation. It is no use complicating our system of land tenure for such a small result. Such restriction is also of course quite contrary to our present Land Records policy which is trying hard to break up joint holdings in order to secure accurate registration.

8. I submit that the eternal problem of the pressure of the agricultural population on the soil is not capable of solution by any such means. The most hopeful measure has always seemed to me to be extended emigration to lands where labour is still required. That this is now being opposed on grounds of sexual morality among others is a curious commentary on this hope.

9. As regards the Government's suggestions in paragraph 3 of its memorandum regarding the revision of the darkhast rules so as to assign lands subject to a condition of impartibility, and granting exemptions in the matter of stamp duty, the second of these suggestions would, I think, have no effect at all. The former of them would perhaps be the natural outcome of the limitation of subdivision and is subject to the objections advanced against that portion of the scheme. It is also subject to the following further disadvantage that the majority of successful darkhasts are for an extent so small that by itself it could not be regarded as an economic holding. For example, in the case of a man who owns two acres of dry land and obtains one more on darkhast, it would be quite useless to prescribe that the one acre he obtained should be incapable of subdivision. If his holding plus the extent he obtained on darkhast was jointly less than an 'economic' holding all his lands would no doubt be incapable of subdivision. The provision about darkhasts is in that case unnecessary, while without restriction on subdivision of existing holdings it would be useless, and impossibly inconvenient, implying as it does that of two adjoining ryotwari acres belonging to the same owner one might be 'impartible' while the other was not.

Letter—from Diwan Bahadur L. D. SWAMIKANNU PILLAI, Esq., M.A., B.L., LL.B., I.S.O., Collector of Nellore.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.

Dated—the 12th January 1918.

No.—1024 G.B.

I have the honour to submit the following report with reference to Board's Ref. No. 2093/17-1, dated 20th October 1917, regarding the desirability of checking the minute subdivision of agricultural lands in this Presidency. The copy of the report on the subject from the Director of Agriculture, Bombay, to the Government of that province as well as the letter from Doctor Gilbert Slater was circulated to all my Divisional officers and I also took the opportunity as desired by the Board of consulting the views of ryots as well as of interested non-officials in the district.

2. The Bombay proposals aim at declaring by law the indivisibility and by consequence the impartibility of agricultural land below a certain limit. The subject is undoubtedly of great economic importance, but as matters now stand, any promulgation of a legislative measure on the subject would have to be preceded by very wide publication of the intentions of Government and the concurrence of the non-official members of the Legislative Council and their constituents would have to be secured as far as possible. I see, however, that the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao at the Council meeting, dated 22nd May 1917, was opposed on the spot by two important non-official members, the Hon'ble Messrs. T. Ranga Achariyar and V. K. Ramanuja Achariyar. It is of course possible that non-official opposition to any contemplated measure on the subject may undergo change, but it seems to me that before any such measure can be proposed, the main issues would have to be placed before the public, or at least before leading non-officials in some direct or indirect manner, so that the views of those concerned might be most readily ascertained. The paper drawn up by the Hon'ble Mr. Keatinge is a most valuable one, but evidently there are not enough copies of it to go round even among Divisional officers; whereas it would be necessary that the substance of the paper, including the account of what has been done in other countries, in order to combat the economic evils of excessive subdivision and excessive fragmentation, should be made known through Vernacular pamphlets or through articles in the public journals to the ryots of the Presidency.

3. All my Divisional officers except one are opposed to the measures suggested by Mr. Keatinge's paper and draft Bill; one Divisional officer alone proposes that land may be declared indivisible and impartible below a limit of one acre for dry and half an acre for wet; the few ryots whom I consulted seemed to welcome the arrangement. The officers who are opposed to reform have based their objections first on the repugnance of impartibility to Hindu ideas of inheritance; secondly, on the fact that the evils complained of do not exist to such an extent as to outweigh the objection to the novelty of the idea, and thirdly, on the vague and indefinite nature of the scientific objections to numerous subdivided holdings. They seem to argue that for the ordinary wet cultivation as pursued in this Presidency small holdings are not only useful but essential in order to keep the crop under water for the desired length of time and that this fact must be a permanent objection to laying out agricultural fields on a large scale so as to fit them for operation by steam and motor appliances.

4. It seems to me that on a priori grounds there could be no objection to Government declaring that for administrative reasons the division of land and the separate demarcation of subdivisions shall not proceed beyond a certain inferior limit. Such a declaration would be analogous to other restrictions upon individual rights which have been rendered necessary by administrative convenience. If indivisibility is declared the rule in regard to a certain class of lands, impartibility must follow as another administrative necessity. There would be in the alternative the possibility that minute subdivisions of land might be held jointly although for administrative reasons the subdivisions might be reckoned as one. Mr. Keatinge has provided an elaborate set of rules of succession based upon the English system of land inheritance. This of course would offer an easy target for legal criticism, but as admitted by Mr. Keatinge himself, the method of succession adopted is immaterial for economic purposes. I would recommend a system of nomination by each holder of impartible land as to who his successor should be, and in the event of no nomination being made by a person during his lifetime, I would propose that, in order to obviate the evils of litigation which would weigh most heavily upon such small proprietors as are now under consideration, the selection of a successor to the vacant piece of land might be left to some local tribunal, preferably, to the village panchayat.

5. It is a moot question whether the adjustment of the values of shares in land which has been declared indivisible should be effected in accordance with strict rules of equity. In the familiar example of a house which descends to many persons in common and which they find it inconvenient to occupy in common, the rule is for one shareholder to take the house and for the others to be paid the value of their shares by him in money. In this country and under present conditions, it is not always possible for a person to obtain money on satisfactory terms even on the mortgage of immovable property in order to enable him to adjust such values but the organisation of credit is being carried on in this country through co-operative societies pari passu with other economic improvements, and it may be expected that in places where there are co-operative societies such adjustment can be effected on terms satisfactory to all parties. But the difficulty is that authorities like Dr. Gilbert Slater hold that land such as that now in question is economically indivisible, that is to say, that it will not pay any person to admit shareholders thereto. If this view is correct, it follows that in regard to these small parcels of land even the adjustment of shares in money should not be allowed. This would be a further instalment of reform than mere indivisibility or even impartibility. It is hardly necessary to do more at the present stage than to point out the practical features of the contemplated measure. It is inevitable that a great deal of criticism, most of it adverse, will have to be faced and overcome before the measure can become law.

6. All my divisional officers are of opinion that the remission of stamp duty proposed by Government on applications to consolidate holdings may have some encouraging effect. But they also point out that the individual saving which would accrue from such remission would not be so considerable as to make this alone an incentive to consolidation. I am afraid I must agree with those who think that a measure modelled on the lines proposed by Mr. Keatinge should be left merely permissive, instead of being rendered compulsory; it would add one more to the number of persuasive measures of advice tendered to the people at large, which are only regarded as the pious wishes of Government. If the measure is at all necessary, it would have to be made compulsory after obtaining the concurrence of a sufficient number of persons among those concerned.

Letter—from G. F. PADDISON, Esq., M.A., I.C.S., Collector of Madura.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.

Dated—the 1st February 1918.

No.—D. Dis. 409-Rev.

With reference to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated the 20th October 1917, calling for report on the subject of the desirability of checking minute subdivisions of agricultural lands, I have the honour to state that I referred the subject to Mr. Reilly, the Divisional Officer, Dindigul, and Mr. C. S. Anantarama Ayyar, the Divisional Officer, Usilampatti.

2. Mr. Reilly states that a meeting of the ryots in his division and officers was held on 2nd December 1917, he found that the people were of opinion that the evils pointed out exist and that three-fifths of the people who attended were in favour of the introduction of the Bill proposed for the Bombay Presidency. The officers whom he consulted, i.e., the Tahsildars of Dindigul, Nilakottai and the Special Deputy Tahsildar, Palni, welcome the proposal to form economic holdings. The Tahsildar of Dindigul suggests certain modifications in the darkhast rules so as to encourage the formation of economic holdings and says that in the matter of granting permission to irrigate dry lands preference may be given to economic holdings. The Tahsildar of Nilakottai and the Special Deputy Tahsildar, Palni, are in favour of the formation of economic holdings as it will make the other members of a joint family more self-reliant and turn them to other means of livelihood. The economic holdings will on the one hand tend to improve the agricultural wealth of the country and on the other serve as a means of starting industrial enterprises. These two officers suggest that the grant of waste lands at the disposal of Government may be restricted to people who will maintain economic holdings or that preference may be given to holders of economic holdings.

M.R.Ry. S. V. Ramaswami Chettiyar, a non-official member, Taluk Board, Dindigul, is opposed to the idea of a formation of economic holdings as it is opposed to the Hindu Law of Inheritance and to their religious principles (a copy of his letter is enclosed).

3. Mr. Reilly (the Sub-Collector) himself is of opinion that in the Hindu community some permissive measure of this sort is highly desirable and that unless there is some active propaganda, official or non-official, any Bill passed would become a dead letter. He also points out that unless such a measure goes hand-in-hand with greater opportunities for industrial and commercial education and employment for the other members of the agricultural families such members will not be inclined to give up their hereditary rights. Mr. Reilly points out that the Bill does not provide for cases where the interests of minors are involved, e.g., whether a father who has three or four minor sons can apply to have his property registered as one or more economic holdings without the consent of his sons.

Again in view to further the object, namely, to create more economic holdings he suggests the following modifications to the existing darkhast rules:—

(a) The general rule that the adjacent landholder should have preference must be abrogated.

(b) In the case of extents insufficient to form a separate economic holding the man who has a small piece of land not sufficient for his living and who applies for the adjacent Government plot which together with his land would make up an economic holding should have the preferential claim if he agrees to have it registered as an 'economic holding.'

(c) If there is no such small holder the adjacent holder who agrees to create an economic holding of the land to be granted together with sufficient portion of his own land should come next in priority.

(d) Lands under the disposal of Government wherever of large extent should be split up into economic holding and then assigned.

4. The Divisional Officer, Usilampatti (Mr. C. S. Anantarama Ayyar), says that every Hindu whom he consulted is strongly opposed to the idea of interfering with the existing law of inheritance and custom of partition prevailing therein. He suggests that (1) in the case of joint pattas the owners should be required to nominate some one among them to be the proprietor for the purposes of revenue administration, (2) that Government may impose a condition that one acre for wet lands and two acres for dry lands should be the minimum limit below which subdivisions should not be allowed, (3) that Government may give a premium to any one who will buy petty fields and group them into one survey field and that Government may offer him a refund of half the stamp duty and registration fees incurred by him in buying the fields, (4) that Government may impose a condition in assigning new lands on darkhast that the lands shall not be subdivided below the proposed limit.

5. The officers consulted are in favour of granting the concessions in the matter of stamp duty when parties voluntarily consolidate their holdings, but the Sub-Collector thinks that the amount involved will not be in any case sufficiently appreciable to serve as an inducement.

6. The ryots of whom I have made personal inquiries are doubtful about the proposal; they recognize its economic value but fear that their religious feelings might be affected. My own opinion is that an attempt might be made in a district which is shortly to come under resettlement by the special staff in certain typical villages to see what can be done in the way of re-arrangement of holdings by consent. If the experiment is successful, it might be possible to extend it and even to make it eventually compulsory.

ENCLOSURE

Letter—from M.R.Ry. S. V. RAMASWAMI CHETTIYAR Avargal, Member, Taluk Board, Dindigul.

To—the Sub-Collector of Dindigul.

Dated—the 4th February 1918.

In accordance with your request to express my views separately on the subject of 'economic holdings' in connexion with a resolution brought in the Madras Provincial Legislative Council by the Hon'ble Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao, I have the honour to state my views as follows.

2. I explained the object of the 'economic holdings' to many ryots whom I came across during the last one week and most of them are opposed to the idea of setting apart a portion of their lands as an impartible 'economic holding.' The objections raised are—

(1) that eventually the 'economic holding' will be the sole property of a ryot who may have more than one son; in this case the other sons will have to enter upon the world with no capital for any livelihood;

(2) that he can raise no money on the holding for meeting even the bare expenses of cultivation, as such a contingency often arises with them;

(3) that a ryot ordinarily knows, or is experienced in, no other kind of labour or industry except cultivation;

(4) that Hindu law is opposed to the inheritance, by one member of a family, of the property which will naturally be partitioned by the several members of the family; and

(5) that Hindu law is based on some broad principles of religion and society, that the debt of a father will continue for two generations among all the male members of the family, which is contrary to the law of primogeniture.

3. Whatever may be the nature of objections raised, one point is clear that the Hindu nation as a whole have imbibed the partition system from religious principles, and they are averse to change their law of devolution of property. At the same time, it is a patent fact that India is growing poorer and poorer every day. Some months back there appeared, in the Madras Mail, a letter under the signatures of Dr. Gilbert Slater and the Rev. D. G. M. Leith, on 'primary poverty.' They calculated the cost of maintaining a family of four (husband, wife and two children) at Rs. 17 per mensem. How many of the agricultural poor approach it? Rupees 17 per mensem means Rs. 204 per year. Dividing among a family of four it gives Rs. 51 each per year. The average income per head in India has been estimated at Rs. 20. Where such a widespread misery exists, it is quite necessary that means should be devised for the improvement of the agricultural classes, India being mainly an agricultural country.

4. I would like to say a few words on the industrial aspect of the question. No country can be said to have advanced materially unless numerous industrial concerns are brought into existence with the aid of Government so that no raw product is allowed to pass outside the country of production except in the shape of manufactured articles. I say with the aid of Government purposely since no concern can thrive unless the Government itself helps it in the shape of money and protective tariff. India is a country rich in raw products and the help of the Government is much needed in both respects. Opening new industrial concerns inclusive of cottage industries means throwing open new avenues of life, and they would then serve as channels for drafting a portion of the agricultural classes to other kinds of labour. This will eventually act as a check upon the increase of agricultural classes in number, and will indirectly help the prevention of tiny subdivisions.

5. With the above prefatory remarks, I shall make my own suggestions on the question.

6. I would draw your kind attention to the provisional clause to sub-section (1) of section 145 of the Estates Land Act (Act I of 1908) which gives power to the landholders not to recognize subdivisions of a revenue field unless each subdivision is not less than 5 acres in extent if the field be classed as unirrigated and one acre in extent if the field be classed as irrigated or garden. In the case of ayan lands the Government stand in the place of landholders and a provision similar to the above may be advantageously inserted in the Revenue Recovery Act or any other Act. I however consider the above minimum to be more than necessary and I would like to reduce it by fixing the minimum at 2 acres in the case of dry and 50 cents in the case of wet.

7. I would also like to draw your kind attention to the provisional clauses (b) and (c) of sub-section (1) to section 60 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908). These are provisions favourable to the agriculturists and they give a list of movable and immovable properties which shall not be liable to attachment and sale in execution of a decree. As the opinion of a large number of pattadars is against the formation of "economic holdings," I cannot but think it our duty to find other means whereby advantages similar to those of registration of "economic holdings" could be secured. I have already suggested how a minimum could be fixed in the legislature. The next point is how to make it remain with the family so as not to fall into the hands of mortgagees and decree holders. For this purpose I would suggest that the words "cultivable lands to the extent of 2 acres in the case of dry and 50 cents in the case of wet" might be inserted in clause (c) between the words "Enjoyment" and "belonging."

8. As regards the revision of darkhast rules, I would like that when a piece of land is assigned on darkhast, a condition be imposed that no subdivision be made from it when the subdivided extent is less than the minimum proposed above. As my suggestion in paragraph 6 does not recognize subdivisions of less than the minimum extent referred to therein, I consider that the condition also would become unnecessary when my suggestion is approved.

9. Lastly as I am not in favour of "economic holdings" I think I need not dwell on the question of concessions in the matter of stamp duty when holdings are consolidated.

Letter—from N. MACMICHAEL, Esq., M.A., I.C.S., Collector of Coimbatore.

To—the Secretary to the Commissioners of Land Revenue.

Dated—the 7th February 1918.

No.—B. Dis. 27-Rev.

I have the honour to reply to the Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917.

2. The time allowed has been insufficient to permit of anything like a thorough discussion with the ryots. The question is intricate, and the proposals are almost of a revolutionary character; and it would take months to get the ordinary ryot to understand them. However, from the inquiries that I have had time to make, I gather that the evils of excessive subdivision and fragmentation are generally admitted; but general opinion is somewhat sceptical as to the efficacy of the remedy proposed in Mr. Keatinge's Bill. As the Bill is of a permissive character and as the consent of every one interested in the holding is required, it is thought that the provisions are likely to be inoperative. It may, of course, be said that it will do no harm to pass a Bill of this sort; but I think it is a great waste of time and effort to push through a Bill for which there is no demand and which, if it becomes law, is likely to share the fate of the Malabar Marriage Act.

3. Some of the practical difficulties in the way of this legislation are obvious. How is an economic holding to be defined? Besides variations in the size according to the fertility of the land and similar considerations, there will be variations according to the tenure on which the land is held. What may be an economic holding for a ryot whose land is unencumbered and cultivated by himself and his family may not be so for a cultivator paying a high rent.

4. There are also many difficulties in connexion with the proposed artificial restriction of subdivisions. For several years, great stress has been laid on the necessity of making revenue registration correspond with actual enjoyment. It is very doubtful whether the limitation of subdivisions in the revenue accounts will have any effect on the actual size of holdings; it is much more likely simply to lead to an increase of joint pattas which are admittedly a nuisance.

5. I do not think the proposal to revise the darkhast rules so as to make future assignments impartible will effect its object. A condition prohibiting sub-letting would be required to make the proposal effective. But, how is such a condition to be enforced? Certainly not with our present revenue staff!

6. I doubt if concessions in the matter of stamp duty would have any effect in encouraging the consolidation of holdings.

With reference to your Ref. No. 1295-B. & G., dated 13th November 1917, I beg to submit the replies of ryots as I understood them to be as no answers were recorded from individual ryots. The ryots of Tiruchengodu, Omalur and Edappadi were consulted by convening meeting for the purpose—

- (1) Yes.
- (2) Yes, increasing.
- (3) Yes, it is due to partition.
- (4) Yes, it would be welcome, if the minimum is to be fixed by the party himself. Second part mostly yes.
- (5) No.

Letter—from M.R.Ry. A. RAMACHA NEDUNGADI AVARGAL, B.A., B.L., Revenue Divisional Officer, Salem.
To—the Collector of Salem.
Dated—the 27th January 1918.
No.—97-D.

With reference to your Memorandum Ref. No. 1295-B. & G., dated 13th November 1917, calling for certain information regarding small holdings, I have the honour to report as follows.

2. I held conferences of ryots at Attur, Gangavalli, Isvaramurtipalaiyam, Tammampatti, Mallur, Rasipuram and Namagiripettai and discussed the subject with them, and their opinion is embodied in the replies given to each question. As the result of the inquiry was almost the same in all places there is no necessity to answer your questions separately for each village and so I have not done it.

(1) Are there any cases in your village where the area held by any one cultivator is too small for him and his family to live on?—In this question a cultivator is taken to mean a ryot owning patta land and not a lessee or a varam tenant, or a sivayi-jama cultivator, and it is presumed that he has to maintain a wife and two children, and that he has to depend solely on his land for the maintenance of himself and his family. What minimum extent of land he should have to maintain himself and his family was discussed at Attur where inquiry was first started, and though there was some difference of opinion it was finally decided by a large majority that it should be 1 acre of wet and 2 acres of dry or roughly lands having an assessment of Rs. 10, and the inquiry throughout was held on this basis, and it has been found that a large proportion of the ryots is of this class. This question has therefore to be answered in the affirmative.

(2) Do you think the number of such cases is increasing?—There is a consensus of opinion that the holdings are becoming less and less in extent, but the ryots cannot prove it by figures and the revenue statistics do not give accurate information on the point as though the holdings are divided pattas very often continue to be held jointly and in some cases joint pattas are divided and made several single pattas. For instance in Mangalapuram village, Attur taluk, there were 326 single pattas and 53 joint pattas or 379 on the whole with assessment of Rs. 10 and under in fasli 1315, the year of re-settlement, and now there are 360 single pattas and 20 joint pattas or 380 on the whole of that character. There is thus an increase of 34 single pattas and a decrease of 33 joint pattas and a net increase of one single patta. In Isvaramurti-palaiyam there were 218 single pattas and 75 joint pattas or on the whole 293 pattas with assessment of Rs. 10 and under in fasli 1315, but now there are 203 single pattas and 91 joint pattas or on the whole 294. In this case too there is only one excess patta, but here there is a decrease of 15 single pattas and increase of 16 joint pattas, probably because single pattas have become joint pattas now. In Peddunayakkampalaiyam village there were 165 single pattas and 238 joint pattas or 403 on the whole in fasli 1315, but now there are 174 single pattas and 238 joint pattas or on the whole 412 pattas. In this case there is increase in both kinds of pattas. These are typical villages, as there was no fresh assignment of lands in these villages after re-settlement. The above figures do not show that the evil of subdivision has assumed alarming proportions, though it may be said from practical experience that there is a tendency for people to subdivide their holdings.

(3) Is it due to the Hindu law of partition?—Though the Hindu law helps division of holdings to great extent, that is not the sole cause. People sell their lands to discharge debts incurred by their own impudence or for family purposes or to get money for carrying on trade and other business, or being absentee owners they cannot manage them properly or for such other causes. It is therefore not correct to throw the whole blame on the Hindu law.

(4) Would you welcome the opportunity (if given) to register any fixed portion of your land as an impartible property, i.e., not to be subdivided further by inheritance, sale, etc., but to be held by one heir in perpetuity?—The ryots condemn this proposal. They say that this system may work well in large estates where there will be much surplus to satisfy the demands of all the co-parceners, but it is quite unsuitable to the conditions of small holdings where every one of co-parceners has to co-operate with others to make their holdings profitable to them. The idea of impartibility is alien to the ordinary Hindu mind in this Presidency except in the West Coast and it is very difficult to convince the ryots that there are some good features in it. I think on the whole they are right, for impartibility does not appear an unmixed good. In the West Coast people have begun to feel the difficulties and disadvantages of the rigid system of impartibility and attempts were made more than once in the Madras Legislative Council to get a Partition Bill passed for British Malabar. They were not, however, successful owing to differences of opinion among the community. Now I have received a requisition from the Secretary of the Cochin Nayar Regulation Committee to give my opinion on a series of questions which the committee has raised regarding marriage maintenance, partition, inheritance, etc., with a view to legislate on these matters in the Cochin State. There is a volume of influential public opinion in Malabar now in favour of partition. Thus the West Coast clamour for partition and the East Coast for impartibility—and the inference is that there are advantages in both systems only to a limited extent, but beyond that both become inconvenient.

(5) Would it be useful if lands given on darkhast were assigned subject to condition that they should not be partible by inheritance or otherwise below a fixed limit?—The ryots are not in favour of this proposal either and for the reasons given above this proposal also does not commend itself to me.

(6) Are there many cases in your village where one man holds some pieces of ground in several places?—There are not several such cases in all villages but only few cases here and there.

(7) Would the owners of such separate pieces welcome the opportunity to consolidate their holdings by exchange with others (if this could be done free of duty for stamps or registration) so as to get one single plot for each holder?—The ryots say that this is not generally possible as lands in different portions of the same village will be of different quality with varying degrees of irrigation facilities and there is sentiment also to take into account. One would not part with his ancestral land however poor it may be on which his ancestors and himself have bestowed their utmost care and to which they have several associations attached in exchange for another plot simply for the purpose of making his holding a compact block, and at present co-parceners often demand portion of each plot of their ancestral property and are not satisfied with a total division, i.e., if there are four brothers and four plots to be divided, then each of the four plots has to be divided into four pieces making in all sixteen pieces and each co-parcener should be given a share in each plot and he is not satisfied with getting one plot. They add that wherever such exchange is possible it is being done even now without any interference from outside.

3. I do not think that any interference by Government in this matter is necessary, but that the ryots may be allowed free discretion to tackle with the difficulties if any which they may meet with in the best way they think proper.

Report—from G. A. D. STUART, Esq., I.C.S., Director of Agriculture.

To—the Secretary to Government, Revenue Department.

Dated—the 27th April 1918.

No.—R.O.C. 1108-1247-Genl.

I have the honour to reply to Board's Reference No. 2093-Gt./17-1, dated 20th October 1917. I apologize for the delay. The subject was discussed at the meeting of the Board of Agriculture at Poona in December last and I have been waiting for the receipt of a copy of the proceedings.

2. A reference is solicited to the report of the discussion on pages 26 to 39 of the printed proceedings. The final result was a somewhat general and non-committal resolution recommending further investigation and experiments.

3. There can be no doubt that the fragmentation of holdings, i.e., the fact that a 'holding' usually consists of a number of plots scattered all over a village, is an economic evil and a great obstacle to agricultural improvements. We have no reliable statistics on the subject, but my impression is that this evil varies inversely with the general level of education of a district. The existing state of fragmentation of holdings, which is most marked in the case of irrigated lands, undoubtedly had its origin in the system of periodical re-allotment of holdings, and has been accentuated by the indigenous laws of inheritance, enjoining equipartition among all the heirs. There are clear traces in the existing system of land-holding of the former widespread prevalence of the system of communal ownership, under which each member of the community did not own land as such, but merely a right to a definite share in the village lands. These lands were periodically re-allocated among the several shareholders, and the obvious way to do this with fairness was to give each shareholder a proportionate share of each different class of land that was available for division. The same system being adopted for partitioning among heirs it followed that each holding came to consist of a large number of small plots. Nowadays the shares are definitely fixed on the ground, except in a few villages, and there is a strong tendency among enlightened ryots to consolidate their holdings by buying or exchanging plots. But the continued fissiparous tendency of the laws of inheritance perpetually counteracts any attempt at consolidation.

4. It therefore follows that the first requisite for any considerable improvement is a change in the system of inheritance, and I do not see how this can be brought about without a change in the ideas of the people on this subject. I see no harm in permissive legislation of the kind proposed by Mr. Keatinge, but I do not think that anything can come of it until more enlightened ideas become widely prevalent.

5. At the same time it might be possible to do something to prevent the further dividing up of plots on partitions by amending the records and procedure of our land records system. At present we do not show the shares of joint pattadars in the revenue accounts, and we have no such machinery for carrying out partitions on the ground as is in existence in the Punjab. Take, for instance, the case of a patta covering the holding of a joint Hindu family consisting of, say ten plots, the lands being cultivated by tenants and the family sharing the rent. If the four members of the family wish to divide their holdings, it usually means at first that they wish to divide the patta so that each may be responsible for his share of the assessment only.

Our rules, however, do not admit of a division of the patta without definite allocation of the plots to each share. The parties therefore allocate one-fourth of each plot to each member as being the easiest and fairest way of dividing. They are told that the fields cannot be subdivided unless boundaries are first put up. They therefore proceed to throw bunds across plots which are already too small, as being the only way in which they can obtain partition on the ground. In the Punjab, I understand, the parties would ask for the partition to be effected by the revenue officers and there is a regular machinery by which the holding would be divided into reasonable shares, re-surveyed where necessary, and transferred on payment of fees. The same machinery is, I believe, made use of by the civil courts when partitions are decreed by them.

6. With regard to the general question of the absolute size of holdings I am of opinion that this must be left to settle itself by the operation of economic causes. As pointed out by Professor Stanley Jevons, a rise in the general standard of living naturally tends to ensure larger holdings by the elimination of the smaller holdings which fall below the limit at which any man will be content to try and live on them. But any sudden increase in the general size of holdings would mean the creation of a large landless class which would be a considerable evil. We must look to the gradual increase of industries to absorb the people thrown out of landholding by the increase of size of holdings. It has yet to be shown that in Madras the average holding is below the economic limit. It is a difficult matter to investigate, and requires careful research. Allowance must always be made for the large number of petty holdings which are held by agricultural labourers to supplement their income. There are also the petty shares of the rental of ancestral lands held by many absentee landlords belonging to the professional classes which under our system of land records figure in our accounts as 'holdings.' The fact that a clerk in Madras receiving rent from one acre of land in Tanjore has no bearing on the question as to whether the tenant who is cultivating that acre (and other lands in addition) possesses an economic holding. Yet the clerk's 'holding' of one acre figures in our statistics, while the tenant's holding is altogether omitted from consideration. It is the holdings of actual cultivators that should alone be considered, and even if it were shown that, in any particular locality, these were at or below the economic limit, there would yet remain the question whether the remedy was not more intensive and improved cultivation rather than any attempt at consolidation, which would inevitably drive some ryots off the land, and which might encourage slipshod farming by making conditions easier for the remainder.

APPENDIX XIII.

[Vide answer to question No. 116 asked by the Hon'ble Mr. B. Venkatapati Raju at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 19th November 1918, page 280 supra.]

G.O. No. 107 L., dated 24th January 1918.

The importance of planting trees by the side of roads where there are now none and of improving existing avenues has on several occasions in recent years been impressed on presidents of district boards but though considerable attention is paid to the matter in some districts, the information contained in the various administration reports indicates that less interest is taken in tree planting in others, and that the best results are not always obtained for the money spent. The planting and maintenance of avenues are generally entrusted to the Local Fund Engineering establishment; and where the Engineer or members of the superior staff study the requirements of the roads and take trouble to ascertain the most suitable kinds of trees the arrangement no doubt works well. It is feared however that overseers often find it difficult to pay much real attention to avenues or have insufficient knowledge of the subject; that money is wasted through an undue dissipation of effort or through want of continuity of policy; and that trees of no permanent value are often planted for the sake of immediate effect. On the other hand credit is taken in some places for the planting of trees likely to bring in revenue without regard to their value for purposes of shade which is of course the most important function of an avenue tree.

2. It is understood that programmes of tree planting extending over a period of years have been drawn up in most districts. The period covered, however, is generally comparatively short and the operations are scattered all over the districts; and it has been suggested to Government that better results might be obtained, in some districts at all events, on a system adopted recently in North Aroor. It was there resolved to make out a programme covering a period of 50 years and to concentrate operations in a small area at one time so that a small but full-time staff might be employed to attend solely to the planting and tending of trees until a sufficient number in that area were of a size to need no further attention. The suggestion is commended to the presidents of district boards for consideration. If it is adopted it would be desirable to place in charge of the operations a man with some practical knowledge of tree planting rather than one trained to clerical duties, and it would be worth while to offer adequate pay to a man with the requisite knowledge, though without general educational qualifications. It is possible that such a man might receive practical instruction from the district forest officials; as an alternative it is understood that if a few district boards are prepared to contribute the cost, arrangements might perhaps be made for a course of training at the agri-horticultural society's gardens at Madras.

5. More use might perhaps be made of village agency in planting trees in the immediate neighbourhood of villages outside the circle of the intensive operations suggested in the preceding paragraph. Though the villagers or village heads may shrink from undertaking the maintenance of any great lengths of avenues it should be possible to arrange with them in some cases for the planting and care of trees in the immediate neighbourhood of their villages and some of the money now spent on coolies over whom there is little supervision might profitably be diverted to subsidies to village agencies, payment being made to some extent on results.

4. A pamphlet prepared by M.R.Ry. Rai Bahadur K. Krishnan Nayar, District Board Engineer, Malabar, which contains useful hints on details is printed as an appendix to this order.

APPENDIX.

Avenue Planting.

The accompanying summary of instructions issued on avenue planting in the South Kanara district is circulated to all subdivisional and section officers in this district for information and guidance.

2. All expenditure on avenue planting or maintenance should, from this year, be incurred only in such a manner as to be chargeable either to a nursery or to a specified batch of plants. Registers should be maintained in the section office, subdivision office and the head office showing the charges incurred for each from year to year. When plants are ready to be removed from the nursery, their cost should be calculated and credited to the nursery and charged to the batch. Each batch should be not less than 50 plants nor further apart than one mile and should be consecutively marked A, B, C, etc., for each section. All the banyan and portia planting on one road may however receive one distinguishing letter provided such planting has been done on an extensive scale. At any stage, it should be possible at a glance to see what each batch has cost up to date. A description of the plants and their condition should be noted at the end of each year against the batch and it should be quite easy on the ground to see the result and judge it in view of the cost incurred.

3. Any expenditure incurred on account of old trees either for digging around them removing parasites or other purposes may be shown as miscellaneous expenditure on maintenance provided it is incurred in accordance with details furnished in the sanctioned estimates.

4. For planting in distant gaps, no avenue coolie can be sanctioned and whatever is possible must be got done by the road coolies.

5. The rain tree grows so fast that, properly looked after, it gets out of danger in two to three months. Here two to three years appear to be taken. It has been seen to grow 1' 1½" in a week. It requires substantial props properly strutted up. When it has grown 12 to 14 feet high, it should be cut off at 10 feet height. Till it grows to this height, no branches should be allowed. The branches also require similar pruning to be able to bear the weight of the luxurious growth.

6. Cuttings for banyan and portia should be 4 to 6 inches in girth. Pits should be dug and filled for these cuttings. The filling should be sufficiently higher than the ground to allow for settling.

7. Jack, mango, tamarind, margosa, Punna and Ganuga are among the fruit trees that may be largely planted.

COCANADA,
2nd January 1917.

District Board Engineer.

ENCLOSURE

The instructions issued by the District Board President and the District Board Engineer on the subject of avenue planting now cover nearly 64 foolscap pages of typed or printed matter and a summary of them has become necessary. Where these instructions have been fully carried out, very encouraging results have been obtained, results sufficient to show that the slow growth generally attributed to some plants is mainly due to want of proper attention and the ignoring of some of the elementary principles governing plant life.

2. One distinguishing feature of avenue planting is its great length without breadth. This adds considerably to the cost of rearing the plants and no effort should be spared to hasten their growth after planting and no expenditure grudged which, by advancing the time when they are out of danger, tends to economy in the long run. Besides, a fast growth necessarily requires a uniformly healthy condition and trees so grown will always continue to have a pleasing shape and appearance. A slow or stunted growth at the beginning accounts for the shapeless forms of trees so frequently seen and every lover of trees can recall to his mind the frequent temptations he had to destroy such trees.

3. The chief points requiring attention to secure a fast and healthy growth will be briefly referred to as far as possible in the order of time. At the very outset, it may be stated that too much importance cannot be attached to (1) the necessity of rearing seedlings in pots in a well managed nursery till they have a well established root system, (2) the proper preparation of pits dug in advance, allowed to weather and then filled in with good soil (as distinguished from sub-soil) and manure wherever necessary, (3) the securing of fences absolutely proof even against that "arch-enemy of all arboriculture, the ubiquitous goat," (4) the soil round all plant about 2 feet wider than the shadow at noon being kept always free from vegetation of any kind and raked from time to time so as to be always light and loose and (5) mulching that soil during the dry months of the year.

4. As soon as any planting is decided upon, a complete programme should be prepared showing the nature and cost of work to be done each year till the trees are out of danger as well as a calendar of all duties connected with it to ensure their being attended to in time. Samples of both are given in the printed memorandum of 13th May 1909.

Two years before the planting can be commenced in any place, a nursery should be started in the nearest possible place, where facilities for watering and supervision can be best secured. The seeds secured should be from well-seasoned fruits and all seeds defective in any way should be thrown away. The beds should be thoroughly well drained and may be in rows raised 6 to 9 inches higher than the paths or drains separating them. The soil should be light and does not require any manure and the covering layer should be generally as thick as the seed and themselves. After the seedlings have sprouted and grown sufficiently, they should be transplanted into small pots in time to allow this being done without in any way injuring the tap root. The plants may have to remain quite two years in the nursery to secure a well-established root system. Plants removed after a year from the nursery and put into the ground will no doubt for a time grow much larger than those remaining in the nursery but these latter when planted a year later are soon found to overtake the former. During the two years the plants remain in the nursery, they will have to be transferred periodically to larger pots probably about four times. Light rich soil is required for the pots and should be kept well drained. The pots should be full of soil almost up to the brim. Potted plants require watering every day, in the rainy season too when there has been no rain. But the watering should never be profuse. If this is regularly and judiciously done, there will be no water collecting at the surface when any watering is done. As, at every stage, unhealthy plants will have to be rejected, a larger number of seedlings should be raised than will be actually required. How much more depends entirely on the care with which the nursery is managed. With the proper attention, about 20 per cent more should suffice.

5. Almost simultaneously with the starting of the nursery, should pits be dug, in the vicinity of the planting proposed, to prepare leaf mould required for the mulching of the soil round the plants in the dry season. These pits should be filled with dry leaves well pressed and trampled down and finally covered with a thin coat of soil. If this is not properly supervised, there is the danger of the pit being filled with more of soil than leaves. If any drain is required to intercept drainage, narrow deep trenches may be dug instead of pits. This will have the additional advantage of allowing the dry leaves to be filled in again as the leaf mould is removed. Any touch-me-not cleared on the road side may well be used for this purpose.

If manure is required, it is best to secure it at this stage and store it in pits so that it may get thoroughly rotten by the time it is used.

6. The pits to be prepared for planting may also now be dug so that they may get sufficiently weathered. The dimensions of the pits depend entirely on the soil. In hard soil they may be 5 to 6 feet in diameter. The first three feet of depth should be cylindrical; for the remaining two or three feet of depth, the hole may taper towards the centre. The soil about a foot or a foot and a half in depth and generally distinguishable from the sub-soil by its colour should be stored on one side and the sub-soil kept separately to replace the soil round the pits that will be removed for filling them.

When earth is excavated for road repairs, the top soil which is not good for this purpose may be reserved for filling in avenue pits. Silt cleared from the side drain may also be used. Any filling done long before planting should be dug up. Here a warning is necessary against the practice of depositing side drain earth round trees and plants or adding manure so as to form a basement round them. Such heaps induce the trees to form surface roots above the natural ground level, which must necessarily suffer during the dry weather.

It may be quite possible to make the pits from which materials are removed for road repairs serve the purpose of planting also. Where earth has been already removed to some depth along the line of planting and where such removal is likely to continue, it is better to do the planting at the lower level.

7. Materials for fencing should now be thought of and where these are costly and can be made use of again but are too heavy to be conveyed to a different place except at great cost it is desirable to plant only one-half or one-third of the number of plants finally required. The morning sun being more injurious to men and animals, the eastern side of a road should first be given preference over the western. The sun being nine months in the year in the south the southern side should have a similar preference.

A dry thorn fence if it can be maintained in good condition without the materials being stolen appears to be the best. One chief objection to it is the renewal it requires under ordinary conditions but if planting is done according to these instructions, it is found that the trees get out of danger before the fencing requires renewal. Open work of laterite is often too costly. When used they should be at least five feet high and where goats have to be feared, the gaps should not be more than three or four inches at the narrowest end. A table is appended showing how these cages are best constructed. Barbed wire fence has been tried and found to be a failure first against goats and then against other cattle. Mud walls shut out air and light from the plants, are a kind of furnace in the hot weather and foster all kinds of noxious weeds and should be avoided if possible. When used, it is not difficult to provide a large number of holes.

8. No hard and fast rules can be laid down for espacement. Where space permits it, the distance from tree to tree should be equal to the diameter of the crown of a fully developed tree and the distance from the margin of the used road should be half that diameter. For ordinary trees this diameter may be taken as 30 feet and so the trees should be planted 30 feet apart and 15 feet away from the margin of the used road.

9. The best time for planting appears to be when some light showers have heralded the approaching monsoon so that, when a month or more later the monsoon actually breaks, the plants will have sent their roots into the new ground and established themselves there. Some time in advance, all the pits should be filled sufficiently higher than the adjacent ground to allow for the unavoidable settlement. This filling in should never be of wet soil and should be of top soil and manure only, the soil previously kept apart and the soil about a foot away from the edge of the pit being used for the purpose. The filling in should overlap this foot of undug ground and the overlapping portion where the fence would naturally be constructed should be trodden down firmly so as to prevent any drainage water percolating through it into the loose soil in the pit. In sloping ground, a drain may have to be cut on the upper side of the pit to prevent drainage into the pit. The filling in should further slope upwards six to nine inches towards the centre. If the fencing takes some time to construct, this is the time to complete it. If the filling is done some little time before the planting, it will settle sufficiently and the surface has to be restored by a little more filling. If done just before planting, it is necessary to press down the filling a little so as to prevent an excessive settlement.

10. The planting is itself a simple process. Nevertheless some of the most fatal mistakes are made then. Quite a common mistake is to plant them too deep from a fancied analogy with the foundation of a building which of course cannot or should not grow downward. Trees like the coconut or the plantain may stand some such partial burial but generally there is no need to place the plants deeper than they were in the nursery and to ensure this, the nursery mark on the plant should be left visible. Another practice common throughout this country and unfortunately sanctioned in some of the standard works on road making is to put a number of seedlings, often of different varieties into the same pit, presumably under the impression that one or the other may survive. This practice cannot be too strongly condemned. If so planted, the young trees will compete for nourishment, moisture and light and will often all die in the struggle or survive as stunted and useless shrubs. In the few cases in which more than one tree survives in healthy condition, it is found hopeless in after years to remove one of them without destroying the balance and shape of the other. If plants are well looked after, there is no need to take any chances and the very few that may die or prove unhealthy can be replaced.

11. Props will be found necessary for almost all plants, particularly as these are not intended to be half buried. Besides they enable the trees to have a clean straight vertical stem. The props should be quite rigid themselves and for this purpose, they require struts fixing them at a height of four to five feet above the ground. Great care is required in tying the plants to the prop. Flat dry plantain fibre can best be used for the purpose and a thick piece of the same can be placed round the plant as a sort of packing. The tying should be periodically released. No mark of the tying should on any account be allowed to appear on the bark of the tree.

12. Many of the officers having charge of avenue planting are possessed by the one idea that ordering and paying for watering on a large scale will cover a multitude of sins. They do not even see that the watering paid for is done and the men employed are so doubtful about getting payment for all the watering ordered, on account of the inadequate results which they themselves fear, that they always take care to be on the safe side. The result is that some watering is done at inspection time which makes the surface cake and harden induces the roots to come to the surface to be parched up afterwards and does on the whole more harm than good.

During the period lapsing between planting and the breaking of the monsoon, regular watering will be required. In the next season, a little watering, certainly not on the same scale every month, may be required, say about once in three days in April, May and June, once in five days in January, February and March and once a week in previous months if there has been no rain at all. Even this is capable of being further reduced. It is best to arrange for this under proper supervision. When watering is done, the ground should be periodically raked to prevent its hardening. If the plants grow properly, no watering should be necessary.

in subsequent seasons. Nevertheless if the plants are found to suffer from the draught, an occasional profuse watering may be specially arranged for under proper supervision. The mere fact of a plant not growing should not be taken as due to any draught. Plants also require and take rest.

Water is really required a little below the surface. On the surface itself, it is merely wasted and does more harm than good and it is well worth trying to secure moisture below, without wetting the surface. If the soil is loose, water poured into broken necks of pots placed round the tree will secure this object.

All the water poured should collect uniformly round the tree but not near the stem and no portion should flow away nor should the watering form any pit. No watering should be permitted between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

13. Far more important than watering is the prevention of the soil around the plant from hardening. It should be kept raked from time to time and should be loose and light. No grass, weed or any kind of vegetation should be allowed. These rob the plants of moisture not only for themselves but also form a medium for passing the moisture in the soil into the atmosphere. Even after the plants have developed into young trees and are out of danger, a digging should be given round them both at the beginning and the end of the monsoon. In the first digging it may be sufficient if the clod is broken and overturned; in the second, it should be pulverised. With the first digging any manure thought necessary should be added. As manure will hasten the growth of the plants, it is worth while to incur expenditure on this account. It may be added in varying proportions to different plants to see how far this expenditure is justified. Tank silt and other such rich deposits charred (not burnt) with alternate layers of a litter of dry leaves and twigs and covered with the same soil in such a manner as not to allow the smoke to escape have almost a startling effect on plants.

14. As soon as the dry season commences, the soil round the stem 2 feet wider than the shadow at noon should be covered to a depth of 2 inches with leaf mould or decayed vegetable matter already referred to in paragraph 5. Any watering done should be over this mulched soil. The moisture is then retained much longer and the soil will then neither cake nor crack and the tender roots will not be injured.

15. If the instructions in paragraphs 12 and 13 are fully carried out, there will be no necessity for fire-tracing to protect the plants or trees from being injured by the dry grass in the vicinity taking fire. It will really pay to employ a person who takes interest in the planting to watch their growth from time to time, remove the caterpillars or other insects that injure them and generally to see that all causes that hinder the growth in any way are promptly removed. A system of rewards depending on the healthy growth of plants will have a salutary effect and such discrimination between good and bad work will prove a powerful incentive for good work.

16. The places where rearing of avenue plants is easiest will doubtless receive the first attention. It should, however, not be forgotten that places where they are difficult to rear are often where avenue trees are most required. In a rock plateau devoid of all vegetation, sufficiently large pits may be dug and filled with good soil. This may give a sufficient start to the plants and if a proper selection of some hardy variety be made, the tree may be able to send their roots into the rock. Where the rock gets hardened, by weathering, the filling in should be done as soon as the pits are opened. At least, a little in this direction should be done every year and the road specification may provide for this being done at least in one place in every such furlong. In some cases, the excavated soil may be useful for road repairs. Where loose soil is difficult to obtain, all the side drain silt should be stored till it is sufficient to fill in one pit.

desirable to plant only one-half or one-third of the number of plants finally required. The morning sun being more injurious to men and animals, the eastern side of a road should first be given preference over the western. The sun being nine months in the year in the south the southern side should have a similar preference.

A dry thorn fence if it can be maintained in good condition without the materials being stolen appears to be the best. If done just before planting, it is necessary to press down the filling a little so as to prevent an excessive settlement.

10. The planting is itself a simple process. Nevertheless some of the most fatal mistakes are made then. Quite a common mistake is to plant them too deep from a fancied analogy with the foundation of a building which of course cannot or should not grow downward. Trees like the coconut or the plantain may stand some such partial burial but generally there is no need to place the plants deeper than they were in the nursery and to ensure this, the nursery mark on the plant should be left visible. Another practice common throughout this country and unfortunately sanctioned in some of the standard works on road making is to put a number of seedlings, often of different varieties into the same pit, presumably under the impression that one or the other may survive. This practice cannot be too strongly condemned. If so planted, the young trees will compete for nourishment, moisture and light and will often all die in the struggle or survive as stunted and useless shrubs. In the few cases in which more than one tree survives in healthy condition, it is found hopeless in after years to remove one of them without destroying the balance and shape of the other. If plants are well looked after, there is no need to take any chances and the very few that may die or prove unhealthy can be replaced.

11. Props will be found necessary for almost all plants, particularly as these are not intended to be half buried. Besides they enable the trees to have a clean straight vertical stem. The props should be quite rigid themselves and for this purpose, they require struts fixing them at a height of four to five feet above the ground. Great care is required in tying the plants to the prop. Flat dry plantain fibre can best be used for the purpose and a thick piece of the same can be placed round the plant as a sort of packing. The tying should be periodically redone. No mark of the tying should on any account be allowed to appear on the bark of the tree.

12. Many of the officers having charge of avenue planting are possessed by the one idea that ordering and paying for watering on a large scale will cover a multitude of sins. They do not even see that the watering paid for is done and the men employed are so doubtful about getting payment for all the watering ordered, on account of the inadequate results which they themselves fear, that they always take care to be on the safe side. The result is that some watering is done at inspection time which makes the surface cake and harden induces the roots to come to the surface to be parched up afterwards and does on the whole more harm than good.

During the period elapsing between planting and the breaking of the monsoon, regular watering will be required. In the next season, a little watering, certainly not on the same scale every month, may be required, say about once in three days in April, May and June, once in five days in January, February and March and once a week in previous months if there has been no rain at all. Even this is capable of being further reduced. It is best to arrange for this under proper supervision. When watering is done, the ground should be periodically raked to prevent its hardening. If the plants grow properly, no watering should be necessary.

COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COUNCIL; ACTS ASSENTED TO BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND THE KODALMANICKAM DEVASWOM BILL, 1918. 389

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; Mr. Ranga Achariyar; Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar; the President.)

COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COUNCIL.

The SECRETARY reported to the Council the receipt of two communications, dated the 6th November 1918, from the Honorary Secretary to the Moslem League, Begampur, Dindigul, one regarding the Madras City Municipal Bill, 1918, and the other regarding the Bill to provide for the voluntary registration of Mussalman marriages and divorces.

ACTS ASSENTED TO BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT announced that the Doddappanayakanur and Vuyyuru Impartible Estates Act, 1918, and the Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act, 1918, had received the assent of His Excellency the Governor-General on the 8th and 10th October 1918 respectively.

THE KODALMANICKAM DEVASWOM BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I beg to move that the Koodalmanickam Devaswom Bill be read in Council: The reasons for the Bill are given in the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the draft. As stated there, the Koodalmanickam temple is situated in the Cochin State and holds large endowments in British Malabar, Travancore and Cochin. The properties in British Malabar are quite small in proportion to the endowments of the temple. The scheme for the management of the temple has been accepted both by the Travancore and the Cochin Darbar and has now been sanctioned. The object of the Bill is to make that scheme applicable to properties in British territories. The object of the scheme is to provide for the efficient and honest management of the temple. I would therefore commend the Bill to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I beg to move that the Bill be not referred to a Select Committee for report."

The Hon'ble the Advocate-General seconded the motion.

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR :—"Your Excellency, I wish to oppose this motion and suggest that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee in view of the amendments proposed by the Advocate-General. It is a very important Bill and it is a matter which deals with the relations of this Government with reference to two foreign Princes, and the matters dealt with relate to matters of a religious nature in that the position of the head of a religious institution is to be considered and there is also a reference to a proposed measure in the Travancore Legislative Assembly. I have not seen that measure yet, nor do I find any reference to such a measure in the Administration Report of the Travancore Darbar. While I support the principle of the Bill cordially, I think it is a matter which requires to be carefully considered in the Select Committee especially whether this Legislature should pass an Act to extend the provisions of this Bill not only in British India, but also outside, if the suggested amendments of the Hon'ble the Advocate-General are to be considered. I do think, your Excellency, that this is a matter that might well be considered in the Select Committee. There is no urgency about it and I think the matter should be carefully considered in the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR :—"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar is under a misapprehension as to the reasons why the amendments standing in my name are sought to be introduced. They are for the purpose of making it clear that this Legislative Council does not wish to go beyond the territorial limits of its jurisdiction. The properties that the Bill deals with are all in the Madras Presidency and there are no properties in other presidencies. The object of my amendments is to affect the properties belonging to the Devaswom and within the Presidency. The object of my amendments is not to make this Bill apply either to Travancore or Cochin as such. The Bill cannot affect the Travancore and Cochin properties. The Travancore and Cochin legislation will affect such properties. Even if this Legislative Council purported to travel outside and affect properties outside the Madras Presidency, they would not be affected. There are no words in the Bill which will give extra territorial jurisdiction. The object of the amendment is just the reverse of what the Hon'ble Mr. Ranga Achariyar thinks. It is to make it still more correct if it is possible to do so."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT :—"I do not know if there is anything which may be said on the point. As stated by the Honourable Member, we have no desire to force our views on the Council. The view of the Government is that it will not serve any useful purpose if it is referred to a Select Committee. We will take the sense of the Council and let them decide it."

The motion not to refer it to a Select Committee was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR :—"I beg to move that the operation of Council Rule 46 be suspended and the Bill be taken into consideration."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar seconded the motion.

The motion was then agreed to.

The Secretary then read the title of the Bill.

340 THE KOODALMANICKAM DEVASWOM BILL, 1918, AND THE BILL TO AMEND THE MADRAS PORT TRUST ACT, 1905.

(Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar; the President; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; Mr. A. S. Krishna Rao.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

The Hon'ble Mr. S. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"I beg to move that the words 'In British India' in the title be omitted. It is to make it clear that the Bill affects only properties which this Legislature can affect, that is, properties of the Devaswom in the Madras Presidency. It is not necessary to say expressly 'properties of the Devaswom in the Madras Presidency.' I therefore propose to omit the words 'in British India' so as to make the point perfectly clear."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The consideration of the preamble was postponed.

Clause (1) was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause (2) was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 3.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"I beg to move that the words 'situated in British India' in clause 3 be omitted and the reasons are the same as those I mentioned in connexion with the amendment to the title of the Bill."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar seconded the amendment. The amendment was put and agreed to. Clause (3) as amended was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 4.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"I beg to move that the words 'in British India' in clause 4 be omitted for the same reasons."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar seconded the amendment.

The amendment was put and agreed to. Clause (4) as amended was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

The preamble.

The Hon'ble Mr. S. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"I beg to move that after the words 'and a manager appointed' the following words be inserted: 'and whereas the previous sanction of the Governor-General required by section 79, sub-sections (2) and (3) of the Government of India Act, 1915, has been obtained to the passing of this Act.'

"Under section 79, if local legislation affects in any way religious usages of any class, the previous sanction of the Governor-General is required. That previous sanction has been obtained but it is considered more desirable that the previous sanction so obtained should be expressly stated in the preamble to the Bill so that there may be no trouble afterwards.

"Then the reference to clause (2) of section 79 is also for a similar purpose, that is for the purpose of affecting section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code. Under that section 92, the Court will have power in a suit instituted by two persons with the sanction of the Advocate-General or with the sanction of the Collector, to settle a scheme. The object of this legislation is to have a statutory scheme which shall not be affected by Courts. The result, therefore, is that that portion of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code will not be operative and for that purpose the sanction of the Government of India has to be obtained under section 79 of the Government of India Act. That is the reason why there is a reference to sub-sections (2) and (3)."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. Rajagopala Achariyar seconded the amendment.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"It has been moved that in the preamble after the words 'and a manager appointed' in line 13, the following words shall be inserted: 'and whereas the previous sanction of the Governor-General required by section 79, sub-sections (2) and (3) of the Government of India Act, 1915, has been obtained to the passing of this Act.'"

The amendment was put and agreed to.

The preamble as amended was put and agreed to.

The motion that the title of the Bill be added was then put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to move that the Bill be passed into law."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE BILL TO AMEND THE MADRAS PORT TRUST ACT, 1905.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Madras Port Trust Act, 1905, and move that the Bill and report be taken into consideration at once."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar seconded the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The consideration of the preamble was postponed.

Clause (1) was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause (2) was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause (3) was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 4.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I have the honour to move the amendment to clause 4 standing against my name. It is to the effect that in section 9, the word 'three' shall be substituted for the word 'two', which in other words means that in the place of the two members to be elected by the Southern India Chamber of Commerce, three should be elected by the members for the time being of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce. In section 8, Act II of 1905, the Port Trust Act, it was stated that the Board should consist of a chairman and not less than eight nor more than twelve other members, of whom not less than three shall be natives of India residing in the City of Madras. Under section 9 of the original Act, it was stated: 'Four of the Trustees shall be elected by the members for the time being of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, and one by the members for the time being of the Madras Trades Association, in such manner as shall from time to time be determined at a meeting of the members of the said Chamber or Trades Association convened in accordance with the rules of such Chamber or Association.' When this Act was amended in 1915, it was thought desirable to insert provisions in this Act so as to give representation to the Southern India Chamber of Commerce which came into existence in 1909. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons for the amendment of the Bill in 1915, it was expressly stated that the Government considered that the position attained by the Southern India Chamber of Commerce which came into existence after the then Act became law entitled it to have two members on the Board. I am reading it to show that though it did not find a place in the Act of 1905, when the Bill was amended, Your Excellency's Government recognized the position occupied by the Southern India Chamber of Commerce and thought it fit and necessary to give it adequate representation on the Port Trust. After the Bill of 1918 was introduced in this Council and while it was under the consideration of the Select Committee, it will be found that the Southern India Chamber of Commerce sent up a representation to the Government urging that the representatives of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce should be increased from two to three. This is what is stated in the letter: 'I am to ask you to be good enough to place before the Select Committee to consider the Madras Port Trust Act Amendment Bill, for its consideration, the request of my Chamber to have the privilege of electing three representatives to the Madras Port Trust Board instead of electing two as at present.' In section 9 of the Act, my Committee request that the word 'two' in line 2 may be altered to 'three.'

"The importance of the interests represented by this Chamber justifies the request, especially in view of the increasingly large share Indian merchants have in the seaborne trade of Madras and in the operations of the Madras Port Trust in relation thereto.

"In these terms the Southern India Chamber approached the Government with a request that the number of representatives of that body should be increased to three. We find that the Select Committee considered this aspect of it, but owing to reasons which I am not in a position to know, they did not see fit to increase the number. This is what is stated by the Select Committee in paragraph 3: 'The Madras Trades Association in the letters referred to us have asked that the number of their elected representatives under section 9 of the Act should be raised from one to two. The Southern India Chamber of Commerce have similarly asked that the number of their elected representatives should be raised from two to three. We have decided after discussion to recommend to the Council the former but not the latter proposal and have accordingly inserted a new clause.' The amendment which I suggest is that in view of the importance of that body and the interest which they are taking in the affairs of the Port Trust, their request may be complied with and the number of members representing the Southern India Chamber of Commerce may be raised to three. I have not been able to see any reason for not complying with that request when it was possible to comply with the request of the Madras Trades Association to raise their number from one to two."

The Hon'ble Mr. YAQUB HASAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Your Excellency, I beg to second the proposition. The Southern India Chamber of Commerce is a very important body. It does not represent only the merchants of Madras, but its membership extends to the whole of South India as the name of the Chamber itself shows. In that body, not only commercial interests of Indians are represented, but it is also a Trades Association. Its members are not only importing and exporting firms, but also those who are engaged in carrying on a large trade in Madras, not only wholesale but also retail trade. So, when four members are given to the Madras Chamber of Commerce, which is only a small European body with a limited number of members, and when two members are given to the Trades Association which only represents the retail shop business of Madras, mostly European, it is only fair that a Chamber which represents the entire commerce of South India and the entire trades of South India, both wholesale and the entire commerce of South India should be adequately represented on the Madras Port Trust Board. So the request of that Chamber that the number of its representatives be raised from two to three was indeed a very modest one. They could have asked for at least as many as the Madras Chamber of Commerce has. They would have been even justified in asking for as many as the Madras Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association put together. They were however very modest in their request and I cannot understand why the Select Committee was not prepared to accede even to that moderate request. I am aware that Your Excellency usually asked the Southern India Chamber to submit some names besides electing two representatives for consideration for selection of more Indians to the Harbour Trust Board; and now and then some representatives are selected by Your Excellency. In that way their number is raised somewhat, but we do not like that system. Whatever representation the Indian merchants deserve, let them have it through their body, through their representative chamber, and let none of them be nominated. We are going ahead in the matter of representation; many a body which had to depend upon nomination has become an elective body. I cannot see why Indians should be represented on this body partly through election and partly through nomination. One or two seats that Your Excellency has reserved for nomination, may be given to the Southern India Chamber of Commerce. I therefore strongly second this proposition."

(Mr. Yaqub Hasan Sahib; Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.
Sir Francis Spring; Mr. Thonger.)

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I regret that I am not in a position to accept the motion made to increase the representation of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce. I would first draw the attention of the Council to section 8 of the present Act which says that not less than 9 and not more than 14 members other than the Chairman shall be on the Board. As a matter of fact, the Board is now working at its full maximum strength and there is no room for more. It is a matter for consideration whether, considering the work which the Board has to do, 14 is not quite as large a number as would serve any useful purpose. I do not think it would be wise to raise the number. I mention that first. Secondly, the elected members are four on behalf of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, two on behalf of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce and two on behalf of the Madras Trades Association—one has now been raised to two. So there will be only six seats left to Government for nomination. It is a mistake to think that there is much discretion in regard to these six. The Collector of Sea Customs has to be on the Board, the Presidency Port Officer has to be on the Board, the Agents of the South Indian Railway and the Madras Railway both of whom are intimately connected with the working of the Board take two seats, and the Superintending Engineer, who is our chief expert officer of the Department of Public Works, takes one seat. So there is really only one seat which is available and that one seat has till now been filled up by allowing the Southern India Chamber to nominate a man whom we appoint. So, as a matter of fact, the Southern India Chamber has three representatives, one nominated and two elected. The proposal now is to take away that one seat and give it to the Southern India Chamber permanently. This question was considered by us in the Select Committee and I looked into it with some care. It is not a question of Indian versus European, but it is a question of the volume of interests that are concerned. Taking all things into consideration, the volume of interests concerned and represented by the Madras Chamber of Commerce, the Southern India Chamber of Commerce and the Madras Trades Association would be fairly covered by this distribution of four and two and two and there is no justification for increasing the representation, the statutory representation of the Southern India Chamber of Commerce from two to three as proposed by the Honourable Member. I feel bound, therefore, to oppose this amendment."

The Hon'ble Sir FRANCIS SPRING:—"Your Excellency, I do not wish it to be thought that in opposing this amendment, I am ungrateful to the Indian Members of my Board who have assisted me so very effectively in all these years. It was I who first suggested that the Southern India Chamber should elect two members, instead of the two being nominated as previously. It is a fact also, as the Hon'ble Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar has said, that we have at present on the Board three members of the Chamber, one nominated and two elected, and one other Indian gentleman nominated by the Trades Association, and I can say, sincerely, that I highly value the advice they give and that everything they say is taken into serious consideration by the remaining members of the Board, as I feel sure the Hon'ble Sir Gordon Fraser will be ready to testify. If I oppose the amendment, it is only for this reason: that we now have a good, workable and useful committee and I feel it right to oppose any tendency to spread it out and enlarge it. We are getting on very well, we are working steadily, usually we have few controversies, and I greatly value the advice and assistance that I get from the existing members of the Southern India Chamber who are on the Port Trust Board."

The Hon'ble Mr. J. H. THONGER:—"Your Excellency, I feel I must also oppose this amendment not that I have any personal objection to the Southern India Chamber of Commerce having as many members as this Government is prepared to give them, but because I feel that any association which has two members on the Board may consider itself to be well represented. The Chamber of Commerce has four, but that is more by accident than by design. I think I am indirectly responsible for this amendment though representing a sister association. I might refer to the fact that the suggestion that the Southern India Chamber of Commerce's representation should be increased from two to three was not made until after the Trades Association made its suggestion to increase their number from one to two."

"As the senior association and also in regard to the volume of interests that we represent, we are certainly entitled to equal representation with the Southern India Chamber of Commerce. But the Trades Association did not bring forward this amendment with a view to coming into equality with the Chamber, but more with idea, if I may so put it, of righting a wrong. When this Bill was before this Council in 1884, after going through the Select Committee, it definitely provided for two members for the Trades Association and three for the Chamber of Commerce. Apparently the Chamber in those days were not animated with the same friendly feelings that obtain at the present, otherwise they would not have induced the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie to propose that our representation should be decreased to one elected putting it to the vote, it was negatived. As the Bill was passed by this Council, the Trades Association enjoyed two seats and the Chamber of Commerce enjoyed three. The Bill was sent to the Government of India but was referred back in connexion with certain financial clauses, and was again referred to a Select Committee. Whether this Select Committee was in order in inserting a clause in connexion with representation which had been the subject of a majority vote in the Council, I do not know, but the fact remains that when the Bill again appeared 19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Thonger; Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao;

Mr. Rajagopala Achariyar; the President;
Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

in the Council the representation of the Trades Association had been reduced to one and that the Chamber of Commerce increased to four. At any rate I feel sure that this Council will agree that if, in 1884, the Trades Association could by virtue of their importance in the Presidency, their standing and their business relations, be considered entitled to two seats, they are entitled to two now. That is however by the way. My reason for opposing this amendment is not that the Southern India Chamber of Commerce may not have three against our two but because from practical experience, I feel that any Association with two representatives on the Port Trust is well represented."

The amendment was then put and lost.

Clause 4 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clauses 5, 6, 7 and 8 were then agreed to—to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 9.

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, I propose that the words 'and unless the sum claimed is one rupee or more' should be omitted from clause 9. I do not think it desirable to have these words in this clause. It is not right that the Port Trust should thus appropriate any sum however small it may be. I therefore propose this amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. Siva Rao seconded the amendment.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"I accept it."

The amendment was put and agreed to. Clause 9 as amended was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

Clause 10 was allowed to stand part of the Bill.

The preamble was then put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur P. RAJAGOPALA ACHARIYAR:—"Under rule 51, I beg to move that the Bill be passed into law."

The Hon'ble Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar seconded the motion.

The motion was then put and agreed to.

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"Before I call upon the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar to move resolution No. 1, it has been suggested to me that this Council would desire to put on record its satisfaction at the recent happy news regarding the war. It is extremely fitting that any motion of that kind should come in the first place from non-official members. I understand to-morrow will be more convenient than to-day for this. The following words have been suggested as giving Honourable Members an idea of the terms which are, I think, suitable and which can be amended in any manner if desired, but I think the Council will find that these words comprehend all the feelings, so far as our words could go:—

"This Council desires to place on record the deep satisfaction with which it has received the news of the Armistice between the Allied forces and Germany and its grateful admiration of the courage and endurance of His Imperial Majesty's forces whose magnificent achievements have so powerfully contributed to the triumph of the Allied cause. This Council would respectfully offer to His Imperial Majesty its loyal and heartfelt congratulations on this victorious issue of this great struggle throughout which His Majesty's personal example and devotion to duty have been an inspiration to the subjects of the United Empire. These are the words."

"I call upon the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar to move his resolution."

Resolutions on matters of general public interest.

INQUIRY INTO RECENT INCIDENTS IN MADURA.

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Your Excellency, the resolution I have the honour to move runs in these terms:—

"I. This Council recommends to His Excellency in Council that a public inquiry should be held in the matter of the death of a police constable and a Sowrashtia in Madura on the 27th September 1918 and of the police firing on a crowd."

"Honourable Members are now aware that a recent Government Order dated 15th November has been issued with enclosures dealing with this question. Besides, the facts referred to in this resolution are very well known. Every reader of a newspaper would have fairly mastered the facts as far as they could be gleaned from newspaper accounts and therefore I may proceed to meet first what may be considered a preliminary objection to the discussion on this resolution. It might be stated that, now that Mr. Paddison's report is before this Council with the Government Order thereon, a public inquiry would be considered needless. I must admit in the first place that Mr. Paddison's inquiry partook very largely of the nature of a public inquiry, but it was not fully a public inquiry because the right of cross-examination was not conceded to all persons who claimed it and Mr. Paddison himself says that he allowed some persons to suggest questions to him. In the next place, a public inquiry is one in which the public have a right to get witnesses examined as they desire. Those who have carefully gone through this report will notice that Mr. Paddison has excluded at his will and pleasure a certain set of persons from the witness-box, if I can use that term witness-box, in connexion with his inquiry. He has not taken evidence from police constables present on the occasion. These are the reasons why I have stated that the inquiry by Mr. Paddison though to a certain extent a public inquiry, was not fully a public inquiry and as I have already pointed out, the numerous defects in connexion with the conduct of the inquiry mar the utility of that inquiry and the report based thereon. It may also be stated that there is an order passed upon the report of the inquiry made by Mr. Paddison and also in part upon certain departmental reports by Mr. Pelly. It might be, therefore, just as well for me to meet these two preliminary contentions. I wish to point out that the defects which prevent Mr. Paddison's inquiry being called a public inquiry are not trivial defects. They are not defects which you may ignore and say, 'you have a substantial inquiry, you ought to be satisfied with it and any order passed thereon must be accepted, because these are trivial matters which ought not to oblige us to go through the same form through the same process again.' I may liken Mr. Paddison's inquiry which omitted to examine the constables to an inquiry by a magistrate into a case of murder in which he would not examine eye witnesses, but would content himself with circumstantial evidence. This analogy would point out the serious harm to the inquiry and the absence of any utility in getting a report of such an inquiry and orders passed thereon. In this case, there was a big crowd and there would be a lot of difficulty in finding out who were the persons near enough the scene of occurrence to be able to give accurate information. Of all the persons that could be mentioned, the constables are the persons who are most directly concerned. They may no doubt have a certain bias, and that bias may have to be considered in weighing their evidence, but they may be able to give very valuable evidence in this connexion indeed. It may be said that their statements have been taken departmentally and they were sent to Mr. Paddison. This I would point out is no satisfactory answer at all. We have heard in law of a fraud on powers and we can easily conceive of a fraud on the policy of a public inquiry. The object of a public inquiry is not somehow to get statements in, but a public inquiry places the deponent in circumstances which would give special value to his statement. Here a departmental inquiry was conducted in practical secrecy, and I notice that Mr. Paddison says that a few members of the public were admitted. I am sorry that the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar is prevented by illness from attending to-day, but he was informed that some public men would be allowed to be present and he wanted to know further whether he would be at liberty to put questions. He wrote to the authorities concerned and the answer was that it was not their suggestion that he should be present. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Pelly or Mr. Paddison wrote to him that there was no particular purpose in his being present; and naturally a gentleman of the position of the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar does not wish to attend such an inquiry. Therefore, the inquiry of Mr. Paddison being practically a departmental inquiry is shorn of much of its value and the statements taken by Mr. Pelly behind the back of the public cannot be considered satisfactory. The most important portion of the evidence being the evidence which the constables could give, it is fairly clear that Mr. Paddison's inquiry was incomplete. Therefore, we have this defect in the report of Mr. Paddison that it is based upon statements of various persons and upon the second-hand statements of police constables taken under circumstances which do not entitle them to any weight. There is another circumstance which detracts from the value of Mr. Paddison's report. Here again, I am sorry that the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar is absent because it is he who told me: representations were sent from Madura to the Government, pointing out Mr. Paddison's connexion with the Madura district and saying that the Superintendent of Police continued there and that these would prevent many gentlemen from going before Mr. Pelly or Mr. Paddison to give evidence; and my Honourable Friend informed me that these facts did influence many gentlemen worthy of credit not to go before Mr. Pelly or Mr. Paddison. No doubt on the 5th or the 6th of October, the Madras Government passed orders on the representations of the Madras Mahajana Sabha, and the Madura Association and they stated that they did not see any sufficient reasons for interference and that Mr. Paddison had their fullest confidence. I wish in this place to point out that there is absolutely nothing said against Mr. Paddison personally. The Government Order seems to suggest that somebody was attacking Mr. Paddison's credit or his deserving the confidence of the Government. Neither myself nor any persons here who took the opportunity to send up resolutions to Government had any idea that Mr. Paddison had a personal bias or that he was personally unfit to conduct the investigation. We had the pleasure of attending with him this Council last year and we have all a fairly good opinion of Mr. Paddison as an officer and I take it that no portion of my speech will be understood as any reflection upon Mr. Paddison himself. The point urged by the various memorialists is that Mr. Paddison was the district officer and in that capacity the head of the police, and therefore any reflection on the administration of the Police in Madura must naturally affect Mr. Paddison not individually, but as the head of the district, human nature being what it is. At any rate, the people who are asked to come up and give evidence must be perfectly free from any idea that the officer conducting the inquiry is in any way likely to consider any statement made by them to be reflections upon himself. It is in this view also that they suggested that the District Superintendent of Police who was in a greater degree responsible for any mistakes committed by the Police department or for any negligence attributed to the Police should not be on the scene of the inquiry lest he should influence it. I do not mean that he would influence the people not to give evidence; I wish to guard against my statement being understood that way, but the memorialists thought that the very presence of the District Superintendent concerned in the matter would be a circumstance against the inquiry being fruitful. We know how the spirit of the people is too weak to come forward and bear testimony against the lower subordinate officials of the department which might bring them into unpleasant relations with them. These memorialists asked that some other person should conduct the inquiry: but Government were not pleased to grant this prayer.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.]

"I think in this story of the Madura incident, we have a series of unfortunate blunders. The first blunder was committed at the time when the order was given by Mr. Elliot asking the police to keep the crowd from approaching the carriage of Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu. The second blunder was made at the time the shooting took place. The third blunder was committed at the time the order was passed, so that as the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar told me, the impression on the mind of the public gained strength that the inquiry conducted by Mr. Paddison was to be a sort of inquiry to which we are accustomed in connexion with departmental inquiries, not a thing in which any person who has any self-respect would care to put himself forward or on the conclusions of which they would place much reliance. That is the conclusion which a large section of the public seem to have come to and that impression has gained strength by the order of the 5th or the 6th October and that of the 15th November.

"Then followed the other circumstance which impaired the value of Mr. Paddison's report. I have pointed out that the existence of Mr. Paddison's report and an order thereon need not debar us from pointing out various unsatisfactory features in the proceedings. In point of fact I wish to take Your Excellency through some of those unsatisfactory features, to show that there should be a further inquiry. In the first place, I may deal with the order of the Government, dated 15th November. The date of that order shows Honourable Members that the Government must have received notice of resolutions dealing with that subject and the Government must be fully aware that the representatives of the public in this assembly—I understand that not less than three members sent notice of resolutions—were anxious to place the views of the public on this very important matter, a matter which had caused a great deal of alarm, and we find the Government after receiving such notice and before the meeting came on, were anxious to close the whole subject with an order. That is a very unsatisfactory feature. It may be perhaps that the poor non-official representatives here have not got light enough to shed on the inner councils of Government, have not ability enough to offer suggestions, worthy of attention by Government. If that is so, we are an unfortunate lot and the public in having such helpless representatives are still more unfortunate. I do not know if the anxiety of the Government to pass orders even before the debate must be attributed to their supposition that the representatives of the public were incapable of giving suggestions or throwing any light on this matter. But I think to a certain extent, the public would take it that an order passed within these few days and without hearing the discussion would have to be discounted on that very ground. It seems to be too hurried an order and I shall presently proceed to show how the public has not been able to see eye to eye with the Government, and that there is still a lot of difference of opinion. I therefore think that the fact that there is an order, far from being a ground for refusing discussion on the matter furnishes an extra ground for discussion and a ground for the demand that there should be a public inquiry. In the first place Government in their order accept Mr. Paddison's inquiry and report in their entirety and then express the view that the criminal proceedings are undesirable and that departmental action is sufficient. Finally the order ends with encomium on the police and with the remark that 'up to the moment of firing, the measures taken by the Police were necessary and correct and further that, in discharging a dangerous and unpleasant duty, they showed all possible consideration to the crowd with which they had to deal.' These conclusions I may mention, surprised the public just as much as the shooting itself did. I shall proceed to state what exactly the public think with the information available to the public, namely the report of the evidence and the statements of gentlemen like the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar, and what views they hold and I shall show how in the light of those views, there should be an inquiry. As soon as the papers announced that a crowd of 7,000 had gone to the Collector's office to witness Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu's trial and that at the close of the trial on the 27th, they gathered round the carriage of Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu and his legal advisers, that the police drove them back using some violence, that the mob got excited and that there was a firing on the crowd, the impression produced on the minds of the public was, I must say, indescribable. I found that persons in districts far away from Madura were greatly shaken in their faith in the normal continuance of peace and order and thought, as the Tamil saying expressively put it, that the fence was eating the paddy crop, and that the police instead of being the preservers of order, became the destroyers thereof. They were astonished that such a state of things should exist, but they still cling to the hope that there would be an inquiry on the part of the higher officials and that justice would be done."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"Higher officials?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Yes, higher than those who shot. It appears that a very large portion of the public thought that very little relief can be obtained until a public inquiry is held and some attempt is made to render justice. I shall refer to the incidents that took place. Mr. Paddison in referring to the crowd on the 27th says that they became unruly at 2 p.m. and they had to be pushed back because they created noise and that the Police formed a cordon. I can understand so far. When the Court had done its work for the day, when Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu was going away, and when the public thought that there was something to be gained by looking at their demigod and his legal advisers, what was the object of keeping the crowd away from Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu? If the crowd wanted to make an idol of him and offer incense it is none of our business to interfere with that incense burning. In the very first enclosure to the order Mr. Paddison says that the Superintendent ordered the Police to push back the crowd? Why? What was the necessity? Was the Superintendent afraid that Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu was going to be attacked and crushed and huddled into a jelly? or was he afraid that his legal advisers were in danger? If people gathered round his carriage, the carriage had to proceed slowly, but who on earth was going to suffer? and why should the whole file of Police be asked to push back the crowd? Then comes the tragedy of errors. Mr. Paddison was of opinion that there was no bayonet charge. There are certain statements which go to show that there was no regular bayonet charge on a large scale. There were, a large number, however, of witnesses including the public prosecutor Mr. Krishnan Nayar whose evidence showed that bayonets were used. As the Government are not going to place the records at our disposal I have to quote newspaper reports. It may be as the Government said that consideration was shown and that bayonet charge did not take place till after a long time. Some men had an injury in the leg. Suppose the bayonets were presented. Is that not in itself sufficient to cause the excitement of the crowd which Mr. Paddison refers to? The reason of the bayonets being present and some people being injured—that is the reason the crowd got excited. Mr. Paddison does not give the reasons. He merely says: 'The Superintendent ordered them to fall in again'. Why on earth is this anxiety of the Superintendent to drive the crowd from the carriage? Was he afraid that the public were going to loot the Collector's bungalow or the treasury. If any such thing was apprehended I can understand. This order is a brutal order."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"Do you refer to the order to 'fall in'?"

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"To 'push back again' was the order. The order 'fall in again' comes next. It is by way of a slip that I mentioned it. The order to push back the crowd was a brutal order. Then follows the mystery. There is a difference of versions here. According to the Superintendent's version, he did not ask any one to fire. The Inspector issued orders for 'mob fire and close'. But he did not issue any order to fire or to load. The Government in answer to the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar's question state that no orders were given for loading; but somehow loading goes on and the result is that one loaded carbine is discharged. That is the result of the inquiry. Other persons thought that there was an order for firing, and curiously enough a large number of shots were fired on the crowd admittedly under circumstances which would not warrant firing. There is nothing in Mr. Paddison's report that circumstances had come about which would justify firing. Therefore I take it that the firing was improper, not merely unauthorized. The firing was very improper, because there was a Magistrate within a few yards, there was the District Superintendent of Police present. Who is to give the order? Is the subordinate to give the order and say 'fire' on the mob, when there is the Superintendent of Police and a first-class Magistrate? It is quite obvious therefore that firing under the circumstances was very highly improper. And with reference to this very highly improper act, let us see what has been done. Various versions and statements are taken and the net result is that firing has been found to be a totally unauthorized act. Somebody seems to have fancied that there was an order to 'fire'. There was no order for loading and yet there was loading unchecked by the superior officers present who must have seen the loading. There were lots of persons injured. These are vagaries and if these vagaries resulting in serious consequences are to be tolerated, human life is in danger. The one boast of the British administration is that there is personal security but if incidents like this are to be witnessed, such boasts will be impossible. It is of the utmost importance, therefore, that we should do our level best to increase personal security. We should carefully go into all these cases of firing and see if there is any justification. In this case, what was the justification? Various persons gave various versions and Mr. Paddison discovered a theory of his own. The Inspector and the higher officers say that there was no order of firing. The constables say they were ordered to fire. Each tries to shift the responsibility on the other; but in the result Mr. Paddison has acquitted both."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"No."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Yes, he acquits them on these two versions, though still there is a departmental inquiry. He discovered the theory of accident and that is a third version. There is no witness to prove this accident, and from the materials before him I am not able to see anything to justify his theory of accident. In spite of the remark of the Government in their Order about the voluminous record of Mr. Paddison's inquiry, there is this disadvantage that it is an one-sided inquiry; the inquiry of the police is not before the public and this inquiry we are told was very thorough. In this state of circumstances, the public cannot be content with the apology of an inquiry. The public are entitled to demand that there should be a public inquiry, if not a judicial inquiry. With reference to that, however, the Government in the first portion of their Order say that criminal proceedings are undesirable and will serve no useful purpose and as the Governor-General in Council would invariably act upon the ideas of this Government, there will be no chance of sanction being accorded and so there is no hope of a judicial proceeding to clear this matter. Therefore, it is that this Council should recommend a public inquiry and that is why it is being still pressed for. There is an answer that departmental action is going to be taken and nobody will be whitewashed. With reference to that, I should give a brief answer. I have got only five minutes more. With reference to the departmental action, what is stated is that there is going to be a departmental action in respect of those who have fired without orders, i.e., the constables. The finding is that the constables had no order to load or fire, and presumably it is the responsibility of the police constables. A departmental order may also deal with the superior officers who are responsible for keeping the police constables in that ill-disciplined condition, but the public cannot be satisfied with such a departmental proceeding. Departmental punishments sometimes very strongly resemble promotions. Some men are punished for the moment and two or three years hence, are promoted very much more rapidly than otherwise. So in spite of the Government's recommendation in favour of departmental action, this Council may proceed to consider the necessity for a public inquiry. Then comes the most important reason. The Government Order offers encomiums to the police. It says: 'The Government wish to place on record their opinion that up to the moment of firing, the measures taken by the police were necessary and correct.' Police means every one in the department including constables. There is an answer given to the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar's statement that there was loading without any orders. Loading is preliminary to firing. The Government in this order not only seem to approve the action of those who loaded without any orders preliminary to firing but they also offer praise. Then they say that they showed consideration to the crowd, but I fail to see how the consideration to the crowd can be consistent with an order to push back the crowd when they were going to the carriage of Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu. There are also several other reasons for pressing for a public inquiry. The foremost is the absence of examination of the constables. About that, Mr. Paddison himself says: "I did not, I regret to say, record statements from the constables who fired." In the sentence there is the next statement about the inquest. At the inquest one would expect that these constables would have been examined. But they were not examined. To rectify the omission, only one course is possible for this Council and that is to come to the conclusion that a public inquiry should now be recommended so that the Government might have a chance of rehabilitating the faith of the people, in peace and order under the aegis of the British Government. I may therefore point out that though circumstances have to a certain extent changed since the 27th of September, I hope the Government will not put forward the plea that orders have been passed and that a departmental inquiry has been held and departmental action will be taken; and I would entreat the Government to accept this resolution and defer departmental action in the light of a public inquiry and reconsider their view that they would not sanction criminal proceedings against police officers or men. At present, the impression is gaining ground that there is an attempt to whitewash and that there is something held back. I have always noticed that any refusal to allow evidence to be produced, has produced all sorts of impression on the persons who are not allowed to adduce evidence. People fancy that there is an attempt to screen the real offenders and to whitewash them. It is in the interests of the higher officers, in the interests of the Government themselves to impress the public that they will not tolerate any idea of screening anybody but that they are always for a public inquiry. Without meaning any slur upon Mr. Paddison or any other public officer, I would suggest to the Government that they may accept this resolution and defer action proposed to be taken in pursuance of this Government Order."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. SIVA RAO:—"Your Excellency, I beg to second this resolution. I believe the Honourable Mover has made out a very strong case for a public inquiry on the lines suggested by him. Your Excellency, in this case there has been undoubtedly firing as Mr. Paddison noted in his report: 'some of the reserve began to fire in all 26 rounds of fire'. Two lives have been lost, some have been injured and the lives of so many have been in danger by what we rather think the reckless firing that took place. It is very important and imperative to know how this firing took place, under whose orders and under what circumstances. My Lord, there have been very serious allegations on the conduct of the Police on that day and when such serious allegations have been made, it is not proper for the Government to refuse a public inquiry and I must say that public opinion is very strong in the matter; public opinion throughout the country has expressed itself in the most clear and unequivocal terms that there should be some sort of independent and impartial inquiry, which should be held above board. No doubt we have had a departmental inquiry. But it is very desirable and most expedient to allay public opinion in matters like this; when serious charges are brought against the servants of the Government, it is proper that there should be an inquiry. Without entering into the merits of the question—I have not formed any opinion as regards the merits of the case—it is high time and it is very expedient that the Government should place the matter in the hands of a tribunal which would command the confidence of all people. It is true that Mr. Paddison is an officer in whose integrity and judgment, Government have the utmost confidence and he has held an inquiry. But there is one serious drawback, as the Honourable Mover pointed out, in an inquiry like this. The officer who conducted it is virtually responsible for the peace in the district and he is also responsible for the police administration and it was this officer who made all arrangements for the maintenance of order on that day. It does not need any elaborate argument to convince anybody that the officer who is responsible for these arrangements would not be a proper person to conduct this inquiry. As regards a judicial inquiry it was unfortunate that the case, started about the alleged murder of the young unfortunate Sowrashttra boy, was burked for want of technical sanction at the hands of the Government of India. If there had been a judicial inquiry, there would have been a thorough sifting of facts and we would have been able to draw right conclusions and form right opinions. I do not think I have gone through the findings arrived at by the officer who conducted the inquiry, but I hope the provisional conclusions of the Government are given in answer to question No. 81 on (Mr. Siva Rao; the President; [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.

Mr. Narasimha Ayyar; Mr. Davidson.]

the agenda to-day and they accept the theory of accident. Mr. Paddison has not come to any conclusions as to whether any orders of firing were given. There was some evidence that an order for firing was given. The only view that has found favour with him was that an order 'mob-firing close in' was given. That the reserve inspector should have taken the responsibility upon himself of saying 'mob-firing close in' especially under the circumstance when the Magistrate was a few yards away, in the upstairs of that building is what we cannot comprehend. That was taken as a sign on the part of the constables to fire and some of them prepared themselves for firing and some of the constables were preparing for loading and by accident the firing went off. This is the theory which has found acceptance at the hands of the District Magistrate who conducted the inquiry. I may say before I proceed further that we feel considerable hesitation in accepting the theory of accident. It is a very serious case, and once again I say that the lives of ever so many were seriously endangered on that particular occasion. Nothing is lost by an inquiry. Ultimately the police may come off with credit and they may vindicate themselves in the eyes of the public and in the eyes of the Government; but at all events we shall have an independent and a totally disinterested inquiry. I may point out in this connexion that the police were not, under the orders of the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, allowed to give evidence before the District Magistrate on the ground that there was the murder case pending against them at the time. So far as the examination of the police constables is concerned, it was a departmental inquiry to which the public had no access. For these reasons, I beg to support that there should be a public inquiry at Madura into this question."

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"This resolution covers Resolution No. XIII* also."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar is not come, so it would not be moved."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar has taken the Government to task for passing the order and laying it on the Editors' table in anticipation of the debate in this Council with the object, so to speak, of forestalling criticism. In the first place, the Honourable Member should remember that we had nine questions on this subject, as well as notice of resolutions and we had therefore to consider exactly how to answer those questions. In a matter of this description, in the case of questions ranging over a wide field, and much detail, obviously the most convenient arrangement was to publish the reports which we had received. If we had delayed doing so unduly, I have no doubt that we should have been taken to task for concealment and unnecessary postponement; indeed, I believe criticisms of that sort have been suggested by a gentleman who is sitting at the present moment in this chamber. Secondly, we could not very well publish without comment the reports of Mr. Paddison in this matter, concluding as they did with a specific request for orders on the question whether any further complaint in the matter of the alleged murder of the Sowrashtia boy should be sanctioned or whether it would suffice merely to take departmental action against the delinquent police constables. Some order was, I venture to say, necessary."

"On the point of delay, I may say that Mr. Paddison's final report, though dated 20th October was received only on the 23rd October. It was seen by the Hon'ble Mr. Gillman and I had the great advantage of discussing with him the course which, in the circumstances, it seemed most desirable to adopt. He was emphatically of opinion, as I myself was, that much the best plan—I do not know if he made the initial suggestion or not—would be to place before the public as many papers as we possibly could. The papers were of very considerable volume. There were the statements taken by the District Magistrate, I think, 34 in number, and the record of the Deputy Inspector-General's inquiry covered another 32 statements though there was a certain amount of overlapping because the senior police officers, four in number, were jointly examined by Mr. Paddison and Mr. Pelly sitting together. It may be asked why these statements or at least those recorded by the District Magistrate were not published together with his report. The answer to that is that there must be some reasonable limit to the publication of details in regard to a matter of public interest and I may add that having myself perused and scrutinized all the statements made before Mr. Paddison, not once but twice, I am satisfied that no useful purpose would be served by laying them before the public or the press. It is not that there is anything to conceal. There is nothing to conceal, but the evidence is of the nature with which any one who has had experience as a first-class magistrate and in that capacity has had to deal with riot cases is familiar. There are discrepancies on one point and discrepancies on another when the incidents are enwrapped in noise and confusion and no one present at the time has a precise recollection of what had taken place. But still, on a scrutiny of the statements as a whole, it is not as a rule very difficult to arrive at a very accurate idea of the main facts and I at least have no doubt whatsoever that Mr. Paddison's conclusions are substantially borne out by the record of his inquiry. That is the reason why we did not publish the details of Mr. Paddison's record of evidence. He had before him, as the Government Order states, a record of the statements taken from the police by Mr. Pelly and he no doubt took these statements into consideration when he was preparing his report to Government."

* The Hon'ble Mr. K. RAMA AYYANGAR:—

XIII. This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee consisting preferably of officials and non-officials be appointed to inquire into and report upon the steps to be taken in connexion with the recent incident in Madura in which the Reserve Police fired on the 27th ultimo on people in the Collector's office compound.

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. Davidson.)

"I suppose the next question to answer is why the statements which Mr. Pelly took are not published. In the first place, it is not usual, and I do not think it is desirable, that a departmental inquiry like this, which would ordinarily lead to disciplinary action, should be published. That is in general consonance with the policy which the Government have rightly followed in these matters; but there is another particular objection in this case which I am surprised that a lawyer like my Honourable Friend should have so completely overlooked. It is this that the police constables to whom he refers as witnesses whose statements are essential for a proper solution of the problem in issue are really in the position of accused. Mr. Pelly's inquiry, I may say, consisted in examining every constable who fired except three and the reason why those three were not examined was no desire to burk the inquiry, but because one of them was the man who is dead, another was a constable who took leave on very urgent and private affairs,—what the private affairs are is not stated,—and the third was, I believe, the only constable who fired two shots and was therefore prima facie more to blame than any other, and this man absented himself without leave."

"I have read all the statements before Mr. Pelly as well as those taken by Mr. Paddison twice over very carefully and I cannot say that the perusal has advanced me one stage beyond Mr. Paddison's conclusions and those of Mr. Pelly. It is quite plain that a number of the men concerned concerted what their reply should be on the salient points of the order issued. Mr. Pelly refers in particular to the glib manner in which each man of the reserve police, when examined, gave out the orders 'mob-firing,' 'load,' 'commence' in quick succession; this led him to the undoubted conclusion that they had been tutored to say so or that the constables who knew they were going to be found fault with for firing without orders by superior officers should meet together informally and settle what story they should tell. But their story is not uniform and there is plenty of discrepancy even on the point whether they received the order 'mob-fire' followed by 'load' and 'commence.' I may with advantage refer to a brief passage from Mr. Pelly's report bearing upon this point:

"The order 'mob-firing' is a perfectly correct order. It is an order for the men to fix bayonets (which in this case were already fixed) and close up. The next order will be for the officer in charge to order so many files to load with buckshot and so many with ball. The next will be a warning to the crowd; and then firing will be ordered by files or sections, etc."

"It must be remembered that these men had halters round their necks; if they admitted that they had fired without orders on the crowd, they would be liable to severe departmental punishment and there was the further possibility that they might later on have to stand a criminal charge of murder or of causing death by a rash and negligent act, which, I may say in passing, is the reason why Mr. Pelly informed his men that their own conduct being in question, there was no obligation to answer incriminating questions. To continue my extract from Mr. Pelly's report:

"But in this case, if the statements of the men who fired are to be believed, the Reserve Inspector gave orders quite contrary to rules of practice, and they began to fire without any definite word of command as laid down for firing on mobs. I cannot for a moment think that the Reserve Inspector, who is an officer of experience, ever gave such orders. In the first place, he was aware that his Superintendent was not far off and that he could not order firing under the circumstances without his Superintendent's order; and then again, although the crowd was threatening and was throwing stones in great numbers, yet the situation was not so very serious at the moment, although the Superintendent says matters did look bad and that was why he had sent word for the Deputy Magistrate to come; and last of all, the orders which the Reserve Inspector is said to have given are really no orders at all in the strict sense as being applicable to 'mob-firing'."

"I have heard criticisms directed to the question who actually fired the shots which resulted in the regrettable death of the Sowrashtia boy and of the constable in the front rank. I notice now for the first time that Mr. Paddison's report, though implying an answer to this question, does not explicitly state it. I will myself say at once that every endeavour was made to ascertain who fired the shots which actually caused the damage. Naturally it was not possible to ascertain this. All those who were in the immediate vicinity were themselves implicated in the liability to blame; and who could possibly say precisely where the shot from a particular rifle went? We cannot find out who fired the fatal shots and that is one reason why criminal proceedings are quite out of the question. Criminal proceedings must be against some particular person. But we do not know whom to place in the dock."

"The Hon'ble Mr. Siva Rao, I think, referred to the complaint of the Sowrashtia as having been burked on a technical point and surmised that, but for this action, the public would have been in a position to take part in a full judicial inquiry. I think he will admit that he is mistaken. If there is no person to be put in the dock, there is no possibility of a preliminary inquiry before a magistrate on a charge of murder, and Mr. Paddison's action in dismissing that complaint was, I have no doubt, correct; but in any case the legality of his action has not been called in question anywhere and the proper tribunal to examine that issue would be a Court of Justice and not the Legislative Council."

"It has been said that Mr. Paddison's report was deficient because he failed to examine the police witnesses. I have dealt with this and as I said the witnesses who were not examined were persons who were really in the position of accused. Mr. Paddison did examine certain superior officers and he took statements, so far as I recollect in public, from the District Superintendent, the Reserve Inspector, two European sergeants and possibly also one or two constables before Mr. Pelly raised objection. I am glad that the mover of this resolution has been careful to dissociate himself from any reflections on the bona fides of the District Magistrate, Mr. Paddison. I should have thought, knowing the respect in which Mr. Paddison is held in Madura, that an inquiry conducted as he conducted it, after inviting any persons who might be in possession of facts to come forward to substantiate statements made in regard to the conduct of the police, after taking pains to find out other persons who might throw light on the matter, after examining all those whom he could discern to have been hurt, and after permitting those present, notably vakils of Madura, to suggest questions—I must say I should have thought that this inquiry would have satisfied the general public. It has been said that there was no cross-examination. Perhaps not; but I imagine that cross-examination was virtually possible through the medium of Mr. Paddison himself, for he notes in paragraph 2 of his report that there was practically no cross-examination of any witness but that he permitted those who wished to do so to suggest questions to him. I have said that I should have thought his inquiry would have generally commanded confidence and I may add that an inquiry conducted thus immediately is probably almost the only way, and certainly by far the most satisfactory way, of ascertaining the real facts of an occurrence of this nature.

“If I may refer again to my own experience, as a magistrate, of riot cases, it must be a fact well within the knowledge of all those present in this room who are accustomed to practise in the courts that discrepancies are inevitable in riot cases and those discrepancies are accentuated in a marked degree if the inquiries are protracted or undertaken long after the date of occurrence. If we had a public inquiry to-day, I venture to say that a number of witnesses who gave statements before Mr. Paddison and Mr. Pelly would undoubtedly contradict themselves on a variety of points if questioned as to the details of what took place at the end of September. I do not believe, therefore, that any further inquiry now would get the Government or the public one atom nearer the genuine facts of the case. That there should be discrepancies apart from mere failure of memory or inaccuracy is perhaps particularly likely in this case; so far as the police witnesses are concerned, there was the patent reason of self-protection, and so far as others were concerned, local feeling was running high and I should think that there was some tendency to exaggerate the case against the police. There were thus special reasons for discrepancy.

“Are there now any particular points in the speeches of the Honourable Mover and the Hon’ble Mr. Siva Rao which require a specific reply? I have covered the ground generally and anything I say must be taken as supplemental to the Government Order and the reports placed on the Editors’ table, which I must confess I thought would have been sufficient to eliminate many of the points raised and materially to curtail the debate. The Honourable Mover refers to the District Magistrate, Mr. Paddison, as naturally having a bias in this matter, and I think the same criticism has been made by the Hon’ble Mr. Siva Rao. It is perfectly true that the District Magistrate is responsible for the peace of his district and has general supervisory powers over police administration, but in this particular case the issue was in regard to a fatality which occurred when the District Magistrate himself was far away in connexion with arrangements made by the police officers on the spot and in consequence of the behaviour of the crowd with whom those police officers had to deal. It is obvious therefore that Mr. Paddison was not responsible for the fatality and had no personal responsibility for the firing of the police on the crowd, whether this was with or without orders. Many gentlemen here know Mr. Paddison personally and know how judicial his frame of mind is. I do not think there can be the least doubt that his inquiry into this case was eminently fair and judicial and that no other officer could have approached the facts with a more open mind. I may refer further to the other officer primarily concerned, Mr. Pelly, whose departmental report will doubtless lead to disciplinary action against some of those concerned and for obvious reasons cannot be published. I should like to say that I have been particularly struck on perusal of his report by the fair-minded and judicial spirit which characterizes it.

“The Hon’ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar referred to the suggestion that Mr. Elliot ought to have been removed from the district while the inquiry was in progress and he suggested that in the public opinion both Mr. Elliot and Mr. Holland are really to be blamed and are being screened by Government. I should like to say, as emphatically and as publicly as I can, that I repudiate any such suggestion. I do not attribute it to the Hon’ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar, who was merely repeating what he said was the popular impression. If that is the popular impression, it is entirely mistaken. Looking at the conduct of these two officers from the standpoint of departmental discipline, it is clear that they are both entitled to the fullest exoneration from any responsibility for this unfortunate fatality. That is the joint opinion of the District Magistrate and the Deputy Inspector-General; it is agreed in by the Inspector-General of Police and it is certainly my own view after a very careful scrutiny of all the records available; and I do not wish it to be thought that the Government in any way regard either Mr. Elliot or the Reserve Inspector as at fault in the matter.

“Some criticism has been devoted to the actual wording of the Government Order. The Hon’ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar took exception to the phrase: ‘Up to the moment of firing.’ The Government Order says ‘The Government wish to place on record their opinion that up to the moment of firing the measures taken by the police were necessary and correct, and further that, in discharging a dangerous and unpleasant duty, they showed all possible consideration to the crowd with which they had to deal.’ I must plead guilty and admit that the criticism is just. I should have said ‘up to the moment of loading and firing.’ But we are told by the witnesses that the loading and firing must have been practically simultaneous and there is no evidence to suggest that any rifles were loaded before the stage of the preliminary order ‘mob-firing.’ The Hon’ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar has asked why it was necessary to interfere with the crowd when they broke through the police cordon and surrounded Dr. Varadarajulu Nayudu’s carriage.”

The Hon’ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—“He is only Mr. not Dr.”

The Hon’ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—“I am sorry to have given him a title to which he has no claim. The answer to that question is given in paragraph 3 of Mr. Paddison’s report. It was necessary to let the carriage through; and I think I am right in saying that the necessity for getting the carriage through was realized by the occupants of the carriage themselves. They could not be got through unless the police helped them.”

The Hon’ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—“Which occupants? Surely the occupants of the carriages behind Mr. Varadarajulu, i.e., his vakils, did not complain of obstruction.

The Hon’ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—“Those of the carriage which was taking Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu and according to the report of Mr. Paddison also the occupants of another carriage which followed. There is, I think, only one other point which I need mention and that is with regard to the Hon’ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar’s comment that there are no witnesses to prove the theory of accident. It is rather difficult to find witnesses to prove accident in circumstances such as those that obtained on that day, but I should think that there was considerable support to be found in the fact that one of the front rank men had his head blown away. That must have been due to accident; I do not think it can be suggested that the rear rank men really intended to kill him. Again it was found that the Sowrashtta boy was not in the midst of the crowd but more or less alone between the crowd to the east and the crowd to the west. Surely it must have been by accident that the shot got at him.

“I think, sir, I have now practically covered the field of this resolution, but I should like once more to say that anything that I have said to-day must be taken as supplemental to the papers which are laid on the editors’ table on this matter.”

The Hon’ble Mr. A. S. KRISHNA RAO:—“Your Excellency, the resolution now before this Council suggests that a public inquiry should be held in the matter of the death of a police constable and Sowrashtta boy on the 27th of September 1918. Your Excellency remarked in the beginning that Resolution No. XIII of the Hon’ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar may also be taken into consideration along with this, which suggests that a committee consisting preferably of officials and non-officials be appointed to inquire into and report upon those circumstances. We have heard with very great interest the speech of the Hon’ble Mr. Davidson in defence of the action taken by the District Magistrate and the Police officer. He also drew the attention of some of the members of this Council to their personal knowledge of Mr. Paddison and suggested that he is one with a peculiarly judicial frame of mind and that no objection can be taken to his report. After all, I am not satisfied that there are any serious objections to a proper inquiry being held into the unfortunate circumstances which led to the death of those two individuals. It is unnecessary for this Council to come to a deliberate conclusion as to whether Mr. Paddison is or is not justified in his conclusions to enable it to recommend an inquiry of the sort suggested in this resolution. It is one thing to say that the action of an officer is proper, is justified and is to be supported; but it is another thing to say that it is such as can satisfy the public. It is not enough that the Government, as the Hon’ble Mr. Davidson has told us, should be satisfied about the bona fide nature of the inquiry, about the correctness of the conclusions and about the evidence being such as to justify the conclusions. It is even more necessary that the public should have confidence in the correctness of the conclusions arrived at in a matter of this description; and it is that aspect of the question which I wish to place before this Council. The final authority to take action in respect of the conduct of officers is the Executive Government itself. So long as that function remains in the hands of the Executive Government, why should there be any objection to have an independent inquiry as to the circumstances which led to these unfortunate incidents. All the remarks made by the Honourable Mover of this resolution in support of this motion and all that appeared in the Press regarding the various incidents which took place in connexion with it must satisfy Your Excellency’s Government that the matters which led to these unfortunate incidents are such as to deserve a public and open inquiry. It is true that two or three vakils were allowed to be present and were allowed to suggest questions; it is true that Mr. Paddison gave opportunity to some to make a statement; but can it be stated that that would satisfy all the necessary requirements in a case in which innocent men were killed like the one now under consideration. Another point which deserves to be considered is this: if the statements taken by Mr. Paddison were published, it would have been more satisfactory than it is at present. We were told that the Hon’ble Mr. Davidson went through those statements, not once but twice, that he found some of those natural discrepancies which first-class magistrates trying such cases and lawyers are acquainted with and that he was satisfied that the conclusions are right or wrong; but it must be admitted by not in a position to say whether the conclusion is right or wrong; but it must be admitted by the Hon’ble Mr. Davidson that on such materials it is quite reasonable to infer that two men could take two different opinions. The Hon’ble Mr. Davidson may take one view, but another man may take another view. I am again placing this aspect before the Council. If these statements are published, and if it is pointed out that the matter deserves more careful consideration, the Government should have no hesitation in taking up such an inquiry. I am inclined to lay some stress upon this aspect of the question, because the conclusions and observations made by Mr. Paddison in his report of the 20th, in paragraph 5, require more careful investigation. He says: 'There is a considerable body of evidence that before the firing commenced, some order was issued.' This is also admitted by Mr. Holland, the Reserve Inspector of Police. He says that he gave the order 'mob-firing' thinking the situation was becoming serious. The District Superintendent of Police also states that he was actually sending a message asking the magistrate to come down when the firing occurred. The question is what was the order given. Certain persons say definitely that they knew the Reserve Inspector gave the order 'fire'. It is of course possible that they have mistaken the command 'fire' and 'mob-firing' which is merely a caution. On the other hand all the men examined by the Deputy Inspector-General of Police who actually fired say the word of command was 'mob firing, load, commence'. This is not a regular order I understand from the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, and is not supported by a single witness. I am therefore, after mature consideration, convinced that no order to fire was given. This is one of the points which forms the material issue for consideration in this case. It is a matter for consideration as to whether Police officers against whom it is proposed to take departmental action acted without orders, or whether any orders like the one attributed were issued by the Reserve Inspector. Will any serious harm ensue if a public inquiry were undertaken?

"While referring to the remarks of the Honourable Mover, the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson justified the action of the Government in publishing G.O. No. 2549, Home (Judicial), dated 15th November 1918. He said that if these papers were not published, the Government would have been taken to task on account of their concealing some papers or on account of some inexplicable delay or inordinate delay. If I understand the Honourable Mover rightly, it is not to the publication of the papers that he objects—I think he must thank the Government for giving an opportunity of knowing what is contained in the documents—but it is to the passing of the order on the 15th of November just a few days before the discussion in this Council that he complains. We are now placed in an awkward predicament in so far as the Government were not in a position to wait even for these four or five days, pending the discussion in this Council, but have committed themselves to a definite policy and stated their conclusions in explicit terms. The position now is this: that the Government in their order have exonerated all the Police officers and the magistrate and stated that their action was justified. Will it be possible for this Council constituted as it is to induce the Government to change their conclusion on the 19th, four days after? The suggestion made by the Honourable Mover is that it would have been far better if the Government had waited for four or five days without passing an order and had heard all the discussion in this Council, examined the matter further and then arrived at a conclusion regarding the questions involved. It is true that Mr. Paddison's report was dated 20th and was received on the 23rd October but could not the Government have waited for four days to hear the discussion in this Council before coming to a conclusion? That is the matter which the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar wished to place before the Council in that the Government forestalled this Council by passing the order on the 15th of November. If it is only possible for this Council to satisfy Your Excellency's Government that so as to inspire the confidence of the public in the strict and impartial administration of affairs, a public inquiry should be undertaken, I think some useful purpose will be served by this discussion. The final action to be taken will depend upon the result of the inquiry and the materials placed after such inquiry; but, so far, nothing has been suggested or indicated as to why such inquiry should not be undertaken."

The Hon'ble Mr. T. RANGA ACHARIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I am glad that the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson has assured the public in his speech that Government have no desire to screen any offenders, be they officers or men in connexion with the discharge of the duties that they have been entrusted with. It appears to me on a careful reading of this Government Order and the enclosures thereto that there are very many matters which require further investigation. I do not think the conclusions which the Government have accepted, can be considered satisfactory even on the materials placed by Mr. Paddison in his report."

"There are three people concerned whose conduct is in question here; first of all, the men who actually fired, secondly the Reserve Inspector who gave the order 'mob fire' and thirdly the Superintendent of Police who gave the order 'fall in and close'. As regards the men, no one has sought to justify their act under the provisions of the law. It is admitted that they acted beyond the bounds of law. They had no order from any superior officer and the situation was not such that they should act on their own initiative. The provisions contained in the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code, so far as Civil Government is concerned, are wide enough and liberal enough to give protection to the public against the excesses of the public and at the same time the provisions are careful in that they do not afford any unlimited power to the officers who have to discharge these unpleasant duties. My Lord, excesses in the name of law and order are as much to be deprecated as excesses on the part of the public against law and order and therefore a Government entrusted with the responsible task of maintaining law and order are as much bound to punish people who commit excesses in the name of law and order as those who break law and order. Therefore it is that in the rules made by Your Excellency's Government the Government lay down strict injunctions as to how policemen are to behave in such circumstances. In this case, admittedly the situation did not arise for the exercise of those powers which the law has rightly placed in the hands of the police, the magistracy. That being so, we have to see whether really these people who were responsible for the loss of these two innocent lives and for grievous injury to other persons deserve any consideration at all at the hands of Government and whether the law should not take its course in getting these men booked. Let us take the case of the men. It is admitted that they had no orders at all and in fact in the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson to-day, he absolutely absolves the officers from any responsibility, both the Superintendent of Police and the Reserve Inspector, because they did not give any order at all which would lend any colour to their believing that any order was given. What is the conclusion of Mr. Paddison with reference to these men? His theory is—I do not think I can call it by the dignified name of a conclusion—it is a mistake; it is a pure guess on his part, unsupported by the statements made by the men themselves, the men themselves do not say that they were in a tight corner with a hail of stones round about them and that therefore they thought the situation was serious and therefore they fired on the mob, that is not their plea. Under section 76 and section 79 of the Indian Penal Code, a man may honestly believe by mistake of fact, that he is bound by law to do or justified by law to do a certain act; and if by honest mistake of fact, in good faith, he makes a mistake as to a question of fact and believes that he is bound or justified by law to do that act, then the law protects him. When the men say that they heard the order to fire, how can they be labouring under an honest mistake as to anything else? Their very statement puts them out of court; their plea is definite and distinct that they heard a definite order. I can understand a person who is at a distance making that mistake in a large crowd. But here the men are close to the man who is said to have given the order and they actually say that they heard the order and that they were within hearing distance of the order which is a falsehood, which the Government believe is a falsehood. Mr. Paddison also says it is a falsehood and therefore here are men who actually come forward with a falsehood to protect themselves against a crime which they have committed and how can they be heard to say in the same breath that they honestly believed that on account of the shot which accidentally went off that order was given? That is the unsatisfactory feature of the conclusion. I cannot understand why Mr. Paddison or the Government should treat that guess as a serious matter to be considered at all in dealing with the men. There is another circumstance which militates against that theory. We always attach importance to early statements and what is the early statement contained in Mr. Paddison's statement of the 28th of September 1918. This is what he says: 'About 2 in the afternoon the crowd outside the court became unruly making shouts and interrupted the court. So the Reserve Inspector pushed them back and formed a cordon 40 or 50 yards from court. Nothing serious happened till the court rose for the day, I ask the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson to note that very carefully, with reference to the latter version that after 2 p.m. the crowd was unruly and threw stones, which was not in the first report.' On the other hand, it is said 'nothing serious happened till the court rose for the day' and 'when the accused appeared, the crowd outside the court rushed the police cordon. The reserve fell in under the orders of the Superintendent who ordered them to push back the crowd'—I add 'with pointed bayonets.' The crowd became excited to a certain extent and the reserve a little dispersed; so come down at once. While his back was turned the inspector gave an order 'mob-firing close' upon these orders being given—mark the words—'some of the reserve began to fire, in all 26 rounds of fire, ball and buckshot. One constable was killed and one of the crowd wounded.' The theory of accident which was an after-thought is not here. Here it is stated 'upon the orders being given, the police began to fire and then it was that the policeman was killed and the other man was wounded and died subsequently in the hospital. Therefore the earliest statement is quite inconsistent with the suggestion or the guess made by Mr. Paddison, because it is unsupported by any statement and it is a pure guess and I submit such a guess ought not to stand in the way of the law taking its course especially in a case like this where the men had committed a crime; and if they are to come under an exception, they must prove facts which bring them within the exception; they must prove good faith and mistake of facts. I submit it is a case really where a man should not stand excused on a mere guess like this. I do not think this opinion in the order is correct: 'criminal proceedings against individual police officers or men would serve no useful purpose.' I rather think that is a matter which requires further investigation before this certificate is given to these people who have broken the law and who acted in defiance of law. As I said these demonstrations in honour of people are becoming more and more common nowadays. We can certainly put shackles in the way of policemen behaving in this way and we ought not to think that the Government would wink on the action of policemen wrongly firing shots. On the other hand, Government should put down such lawless men and not allow these men to be guilty of rash and negligent act resulting in death. Let them consult their law officers before they give their verdict that criminal prosecution would not serve any useful purpose. This is a matter which requires to be investigated on Mr. Paddison's own showing and on the conclusion arrived at by the Government themselves.

"Let us go to the Reserve Inspector. He was in the immediate presence of the Superintendent of Police who was quite close. Now what happened was, the Reserve Inspector takes it upon himself to give the order 'mob-fire' and to give order 'close' although in the later version, the word 'close' is not there. In the first report there is the word. The later version is 'mob-fire.' Whatever it is, why should he take it upon himself to give this order when the Superintendent of Police was there? What did he do when he did not give this order for firing and when he saw the men loading? Did he shut his eyes? I am not familiar with handling fire-arms, but I think loading will take some time. He might have noticed them loading, but why did he see them load and why did he not say 'stop loading'? Was any such order made? What did the Superintendent of Police do? No doubt his back was turned, but he must have heard the order. There are certain questions which the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar has suggested in his interpellation No. 81 and if you look at page 14 of the agenda

(Mr. Ranga Achariyar ; Mr. Subbarayulu Reddiyar ; [19TH NOVEMBER 1918.
Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao.)

to-day you will find that there are a number of close and searching questions which the Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar placed for the consideration of Government, and the only answer is 'the Honourable Member is referred to G.O. No. 2549.' If the Honourable Member will turn to the Government Order, he will find no answer to any of his questions. His question No. 81 is:—

(c) When and by whom was it decided that fire-arms would have to be loaded and used that day? Where were the carbines that were used that day kept before they were taken to the Collector's office compound?

(d) Who gave the orders to get these carbines to the Collector's office compound and who actually brought them there and when?

(e) When (at what hour to the minute) were the cartridges distributed to the policemen? How many were so distributed and how many rifles were in the compound that day and with whom?

(f) Were all the rifles examined before and after the incident and by whom, and were any bullets discharged from the rifles?

(g) Were all the muskets examined before and after the incident and by whom? Who were the constables whose muskets had been emptied by firing?

(h) How many muskets remained unloaded? Who gave the order to fire?

(i) Was any precautionary action taken to see that only a few cartridges were used at first or that notice of firing was given beforehand? Did any of the police constables come with loaded muskets in the compound? Was there an order to load? Did all persons load only after the order to load was given?

(j) Is it a fact that the shots were all sent in the direction in which Dr. P. Varadarajulu's carriage went out? If so, is there any reason ascertained for that direction being aimed at?

"That is a matter which requires some inquiry. Mr. Paddison also refers to it in paragraph 8 of his report. He says: 'A jutka travelling behind the accused's carriage received a charge of buckshot, the driver being slightly hurt and one or two other persons received very slight wounds.' And again if you return to page 2 of the Government Order, it says: 'since writing the above, a vakil whose bandyman was hurt came and gave me an account. He was in a jutka just behind Varadarajulu's carriage. His jutka was hit four or five times and his driver was hit in the shoulder.' That is rather suggestive. Is it not necessary to inquire into it? How came it that behind the accused's carriage where there was a jutka also going, the police happened to fire. What was the aim? Was it accident? These are matters which require to be carefully investigated and I do really think that in the interests of that respect for law and order which we all have, I ask that there should be a public inquiry at which these matters should be investigated. My view on the point is that it is necessary to prevent a repetition of such conduct on the part of the police, because these demonstrations are likely to become more and more numerous."

The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur A. SUBBARAYULU REDDIYAR:—"Your Excellency, I have read the papers laid on the table in connexion with this matter and I have also heard the speeches very carefully. I am inclined to think on the whole that in the interests of the public and in the interests of the magistracy and the police and their reputation, it is much better that the recommendation to Your Excellency's Government that a public inquiry should be held should be accepted and a further public inquiry held."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Your Excellency, the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson began by referring to my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Narasimha Ayyar's statement about the publication of these papers just before the meeting and said that the complaint of the Honourable Member was that this publication was with a view to forestall criticism in this Council or some such thing. If the Hon'ble Mr. Narasimha Ayyar complained that the papers were published three days before the meeting, I at least would not complain of such a procedure. My complaint in this Council has been that if there are facts which must be placed before the public, the Government should take the earliest possible opportunity of doing so. I have said so, a number of times and I shall contend and continue to contend that it will serve the objects of peace, order and good government, that if there are any papers which should be placed before the public, they should be so placed at the earliest possible opportunity. It was with that view that when we met last time for discussing the proposals for constitutional reforms, I wanted to give the Government an opportunity or rather to suggest to them by way of a motion for adjournment that they should take the opportunity of that meeting for letting the public know the facts concerning the Madura incident. By that time, accounts of what had happened at Madura had already appeared and there were very broad suggestions that the police had exceeded their rights in opening fire without any justification whatsoever on those that were assembled on the 27th September last in the Collector's compound. It has taken nearly two months before we can get official, authorized version of the facts. The event took place on the 27th of September and Mr. Paddison sent a demi-official report the next day and he followed it up by another letter and formally sent his own report on the 20th of October and the report is published on the 15th of November. By that time, public opinion has settled itself as regards the facts and a great deal of suspicion has been roused as regards the bona fides of the police—whether rightly or wrongly I do not wish to say—and also in regard to what has really happened at the time. There were suggestions that the officers gave orders to fire, there are suggestions that the policemen went on firing without any orders. My Lord, if I value one thing, it is the continuance of the implicit faith of the people of this

19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Davidson.)

Presidency in the officers of Government. It is with that view that I would suggest that there should be an open and public inquiry in regard to the facts of this incident; and this and the shooting incident at Conjeevaram have brought into prominence the necessity of some form of inquiry into matters of this kind. Without any reference to the Madura incident, I sent in a resolution to be moved at this meeting that, whenever there was occasion for the police to open fire on a mob for the dispersal of rioters, there should be an inquiry by the District Magistrate with whom two assessors should be associated. That was the mode of inquiry I suggested, not necessarily with a view to detract from the authority of the District Magistrate, but to show to the public that the Government were anxious to ascertain the true facts of the case and place beyond cavil and criticism the conduct of public officers. In doing so, I had in view various independent inquiries conducted in this way in England into the action of the police. This is not a new thing; Your Lordship might remember the Bristol riots, the Colliery riots, whenever there is a conflict between the executive and the public, there is always a howl and there is a suggestion that the police exceeded their rights and these matters have been settled by Royal Commissions who ascertained what really are the facts and who also suggested remedies. Perhaps the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson is also aware that in 1909 there was another Royal Commission to settle the duties of the police in regard to their right of entry into public meetings and what they should do on those occasions. I merely mention all this to show that the anxiety of the public is that the executive police should not exceed their rights. On the other hand, I also admit that the police have a difficult duty to perform. But I believe the only way in which public confidence can be maintained is by some form of inquiry in which the public will have some right of representation as regards the sifting of facts and it was with that intention that I suggested that in cases of shooting of this kind, two assessors should be associated with the District Magistrate for the purpose of sifting facts. As I began, it took nearly seven weeks before we could have an authorized version of events that took place in Madura.

"My Lord, going to the facts, I may mention that there is no suggestion of any kind that Mr. Paddison was biased in this matter. I know Mr. Paddison and have a high regard for his general fairness and intention to do the right thing to all parties; but the point to be remembered is public confidence. It may be that persons who know Mr. Paddison are perfectly aware of his qualities, but we have to deal with a public who form their own conclusions and it is necessary to unsettle some of those conclusions when they are wrongly formed. As regards the facts, I think a great deal has already been stated on the main facts of the case and it would be unnecessary to discuss every incident connected with what has happened at Madura. Mr. Paddison, as has been pointed out by my Hon'ble Friend Mr. Ranga Achariyar, proceeds on the assumption—it is clear from his report—that at any rate the first shot was an accident; on the assumption—their conduct that they had orders the policemen set up the defence or rather in justification of their conduct that they had orders to fire. I might perhaps read that portion of Mr. Paddison's report in which he says: 'There is ample evidence to show that at the time of firing a large number of stones were being pelted at the police. It is also sufficient to justify the use of force under this chapter if the crowd conducts itself in such a manner as to show a determination not to disperse. Whether excessive force was used is not for decision at this stage.' That is exactly the point that has to be decided and that has not been decided. He says: 'From my inquiry it appears also that the order "mob-firing" was given and though this is merely a caution, the constables who fired will see that the version of the police constables is that they had the order "load and commence" and the version of the officers responsible for the orders is that their order was "mob fire" and that the words "load and commence" were not uttered by them. Mr. Paddison discards both these versions and comes to the conclusion that the words . . ."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON (interrupting):—"He does not discard that version. He is convinced that no order to fire was given. The order 'mob-firing' is not an order to fire. It is a preliminary caution, merely an order to assume certain positions."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"He discards the version of the police constables that the words 'load and commence' were uttered. That is the only aspect which we are considering now, and he comes to a deliberate conclusion that it was an accident, a version which was not stated either by the police officers or by the police constables. Neither party has set up that it is an accident and I believe my Lord, that under these circumstances to clear the facts, to restore public confidence, the only way is by a judicial inquiry where the policemen may be placed on their trial. It does not matter whether they are convicted or acquitted; but we must know by a proper judicial inquiry what the real facts of the case are, especially when it is suggested that the shots were directed in the direction of the carriage of the accused. I do not know what is intended by the suggestion, but I trust that there is no suggestion of any kind that the shots were intentional."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"The carriage was going due south and the policemen were facing south."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"As I have already stated, we do not know the facts. The facts are in the recorded evidence and the evidence has not been published. If I state things hypothetically, it is because I am not acquainted with the facts except those mentioned in the Government Order. There is one other point which I would like to note. Under Police Orders, section 394, I find it is stated that in every case in which the police use fire-arms in suppressing a riot, a report shall be sent to the Divisional officer. I know the

(Mr. M. Ramachandra Rao ; Mr. Davidson.) [19TH NOVEMBER 1918]

Divisional Magistrate was on the premises, but I am merely asking for information whether, as a matter of fact, there is this report on record. Police Order No. 394 states: 'In every case in which the police use fire-arms in suppressing a riot or in self-defence, an express report or telegram—whichever is quicker—shall be sent to the Divisional Magistrate. In this report, the number of persons killed or injured, if any, shall be stated.' If this is available, probably we shall be in a position to know what the real facts are as stated in the earliest possible report, when it was as early as possible to do so. Perhaps it is quite likely that because the Divisional Magistrate was in the premises no such report was sent. But I want to know the facts and I merely ask for information."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"A telegraphic report was received from the District Magistrate on the 27th regarding the riot and the circumstances which led to the opening of fire, and it said one constable was killed by accident and one man was wounded."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"I should like to know whether the police sent in a report."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"The District Magistrate was there and I do not know whether they sent him a report."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"Did the police send in a report as is required in this order?"

The Hon'ble Mr. L. DAVIDSON:—"I cannot say. Statements were taken from police officers that very evening."

The Hon'ble Rao Bahadur M. RAMACHANDRA RAO:—"My Lord, in regard to the rules regulating the circumstances and the manner in which the police may fire on crowds during riots and other disturbances of the peace, I made inquiries as to whether there are statutory rules. I received a reply to the effect that the existing rules are statutory rules, though they do not appear to have been passed under the Act of 1859. I would suggest for the consideration of Government whether they should not draw any distinction between police who are called in for the purpose of maintaining peace and order at public meetings—for, I can only compare the assembly of persons in the District Magistrate's office to a public meeting or something of that kind—and between the police who are called in for the purpose of suppressing riots. In the present case, I am led to make this remark for the reason that it appears to me that there was absolutely no necessity for the police who are asked to keep order and peace in the compound carrying to the place fire-arms and also buckshot and ball cartridges. There may be circumstances probably, but I do not see anywhere in the record anything which gave any apprehension to the police of some big disorder in the compound. So far as I can judge of the facts, it seems to me that where the police are asked to look after large crowds assembled as in the Collector's compound, there seems to be absolutely no necessity to take fire-arms, much less to use them, to the place even assuming that there was pelting of stones. I am quite prepared to admit that the crowd might get unruly and that those who are entrusted with the duty of keeping peace must do their level best to discharge their duty without as far as possible resorting to fire-arms. As regards good faith, perhaps the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson who was a District Magistrate is already aware of the rulings of the High Court with regard to firing on mobs. The case in the Indian Law Reports, XXI Madras, page 249, is in point. It says: 'A caused crops to be sown on land, as to the enjoyment of which there was a dispute between her and B. Persons having proceeded to reap the crops on behalf of B. the servants of A went to the place with the station-house officer and some constables who were armed. The station-house officer ordered the reapers to leave off reaping and to disperse, but they did not do so; he then told one of the constables to fire, and he fired into the air. Some of the reapers remained and assumed a defiant attitude. The station-house officer, without attempting to make any arrests and without warning the reaper that, if they did not desist from reaping, they would be fired at, gave orders to shoot, and one of the constables fired and mortally wounded one of the reapers. It was found that neither the station-house officer nor the last-mentioned constable believed that it was necessary for the public security to disperse the reapers by firing on them."

"Held that the station-house officer and the constable were not acting in good faith and that the order to shoot was illegal and did not justify the constable and that both he and the station-house officer were guilty of murder.' I am merely pointing out that there is some necessity to differentiate cases where police are called in to disperse riots and cases where, as in Madura, people are assembled peaceably to witness judicial proceedings or to attend public meetings and the police have merely to maintain order. One is distinct from the other. Some distinction of this kind seems to have been drawn in England with reference to public meetings. Therefore I trust that whatever may be the result of this motion, the Government would endeavour to make some distinction of this kind and try so to modify the rules as to avoid unjustifiable conflicts between the police and an excited crowd. In this case, the crowd seem to have behaved in a very cool manner notwithstanding the death of two of those who were assembled there, because there was absolutely no kind of demonstration afterwards. They all went home without the slightest difficulty and according to Mr. Paddison—he was there—everybody listened to him. Was any warning given to any of these persons to disperse? I do not see any reference to it in the records that any such warning was given and that they refused to obey the warning. Even if there was pelting of stones, that does not justify firing. This is merely a matter in which we are trying to see what the facts are and how public confidence can be restored in the action of the executive in regard to this matter."

[19TH NOVEMBER 1918.] (The President ; Mr. Suryanarayana Rao ; Venkatapati Raju ; Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:—"I propose we might adjourn for luncheon. I shall call on the Hon'ble Mr. A. Suryanarayana Rao immediately after lunch."

The Council then adjourned for a short interval and re-assembled at 3 p.m. when the discussion on resolutions was continued.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. SURYANARAYANA RAO:—"Your Excellency, we are very glad for the assurance that has been given on behalf of Government that the Government have no intention of screening the Reserve Inspector or the Police constables, if they are really guilty. One would infer from the order that the Government are anxious or that some one is anxious to see that they are not at all brought to book. The Government Order shows that there is a conflict of evidence offered on the point before Mr. Paddison, and Mr. Paddison himself is only drawing his own conclusions with regard to the evidence placed before him. Would it not be more satisfactory if this evidence is placed before a judicial tribunal and proper conclusions are drawn upon that evidence? With regard to the order that has been actually issued to the Reserve constables there is a conflict of evidence, the constables saying that there was an order to fire by the Reserve Inspector who says however that he gave an order only 'mob firing close in' while some people who were present at the time apparently suggested to Mr. Paddison as we see in paragraph 4 that the Police officers ordered the men to fire. He says: 'The next suggestion and the most serious one of all is that the Police officers ordered the men to fire'; it may be true or it may not be true, but however there may be some independent persons at the time and those persons would be in a position to give evidence on the point, and they would be subjected to cross-examination and if their statements are untrue, the evidence might be rejected if necessary. But I certainly think that all the evidence that is available should be subjected to judicial scrutiny and the officer who tries the case should have an opportunity of seeing whether the evidence is trustworthy or not and the public should have a right to go before the highest tribunal, the High Court in revision, if there should be any discharge or acquittal in the case. I come from one of the remotest districts of the Presidency, but I may say that when we read the incidents in the papers—I must confess the impression that was formed in the minds of us, Vizageer, was that the Police exceeded their powers. Whether that is correct or not can only be seen by the judgment of a proper court and with all respect due to the opinions of Mr. Paddison, it was after all the opinion of Mr. Paddison who does not himself say that he is personally aware of all these circumstances but he is only drawing his own conclusion. I think it will be more satisfactory if the very same conclusion is arrived at by a judge after trying the case. The order of the Government says that criminal proceedings against individual police officers or men would serve no useful purpose. I respectfully venture to submit that it would serve useful purpose, because it would clear their character once for all and finally and the Government will have the satisfaction that their conduct has been cleared up in an open trial and the public will also have the satisfaction that the Government have not allowed the matter to be screened for any ulterior purpose but the officers have been tried and acquitted in a proper trial. I therefore strongly support the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. B. V. Narasimha Ayyar."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. VENKATAPATI RAJU:—"Your Excellency, it is practically conceded on our side that Mr. Paddison is a most sympathetic officer and a broad-minded gentleman and therefore there is no question about the capacity of that gentleman to conduct the inquiry. But it is not a subject that ought to be entrusted to a departmental officer with reference to an inquiry as regards persons in the department. Why we are more anxious with reference to a public inquiry is that such precedents, if allowed, would be quoted hereafter and would lead to the adoption of dangerous measures whenever the officer concerned thinks it necessary to use unnecessarily harsh measures against persons who congregate in public assembly to congratulate any particular person who is not in good terms with the Government. In this connexion, I can very well quote what the Hon'ble Mr. Couchman has well said at Coimbatore at the Prize Distribution of the Forest College. He then said that esprit de corps in the department is good enough but it ought not to be made the occasion to gloss over the fault and to say that whatever they do is right. Such a procedure would ruin the department and would bring them into friction with the public and especially on such occasions like this, the department should have nothing to do with the inquiry. It should be a judicial inquiry in the sense that a judicial officer may be appointed to inquire into it as is done in England on similar occasions. By adopting such a course alone, the people will have confidence in the conclusions arrived at. Till then, the people will be of opinion that the truth was not out in spite of the reports published by various officers. Therefore, I join with others in appealing to the Government that this is a public occasion when the Government should agree with the people that there should be a public inquiry in the matter where two innocent people had been killed and there is not a word of regret throughout the report why these people suffered and not a word that their families should be provided for. Though there is praise of officers, and criticism of others, there is not a word of regret and nobody thinks about the poor people who have died."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"I propose to make a very brief reply. The Hon'ble Mr. Davidson and the Hon'ble Mr. Ramachandra Rao seem to have mistaken what I said about the publication of the papers. I never complained about the publication of the papers. What I meant to say and what I did say was that orders need not be passed in such a hurry before hearing us. If Hon'ble Mr. Davidson should say: 'We cannot publish papers without any orders being passed I object to that assumption for which I do not see any reason. What I wanted is that the papers may be placed before us, that our suggestions may be taken and that ultimately the Government may pass any orders. Till now, having carefully listened to all that the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson has said I am unable to see any defence put up for the position that Honourable Members should not be consulted or that there was any urgency that existed on the 15th instant for the immediate pronouncement of orders and that their judgment should not have been delayed for four or five days.

(Mr. Narasimha Ayyar.)

"The second matter which the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson touched upon was the publication of the other papers, the record and all that. From the Government Order, using the word 'voluminous', I fancied that there was a huge bundle. As a lawyer, I am accustomed to see heavy bundles sometimes several feet in height. But when he presented the papers, covering 24 pages and 36 pages, I was much amused. We lawyers are accustomed to treat this as a trifling thing which may ordinarily be handed over to juniors who have just entered the profession. The whole printing might have been undertaken at a very cheap cost and I do not think it is a voluminous record.

"As to the other question, the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson is right in saying that there are limits to the publication of papers. In a matter which has agitated the public mind so greatly is it not worth while to try and allay the alarm that has been caused in the public mind? So I do not think after the bulk of the record has been placed before us that Honourable Members would be all of them quite convinced that it is too large to be printed. I shall accordingly mention one or two matters to show that Honourable Members even now would like to have these papers.

"The Hon'ble Mr. Davidson said that as a lawyer, I ought to see the difference between an accused and a witness. From my question No. 3, he might have noticed that I knew the difference and I did point out to Government that the stage of the accused had passed. Mr. Paddison struck off the proceedings against the constables on the ground that sanction was a necessary preliminary to a case against them. If they are considered to be accused, there must be at least a revision petition before the High Court; but there is no such petition nor application before that body or the Governor-General; so that, there is absolutely no accused now; and certainly on the date on which the occurrence took place Mr. Paddison was not prevented by any impression that any constables were 'accused.' In his order he says that he regrets not having examined them; as they are not accused, there is no difficulty now in examining them. Mr. Pelly warned them that they are not bound to answer incriminating questions. Far from being incriminating questions, they would have questions enabling them to set out defences. There was no question of protection of these constables; they could have been very well examined and they would have taken very good care of their own interests and in point of fact, there are men who say that the orders issued by Mr. Pelly were not orders to protect constables, but to protect somebody else. Their suggestions may be uncharitable. A public inquiry alone can decide if they are.

"Then the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson said that criminal proceedings were now impossible, because Mr. Paddison asked the whole lot of constables who was the very man whose shot went and killed the constable and the Sowrashtia and that it was to their interest to refuse to answer the question or to say 'we do not know.' The Hon'ble Mr. Davidson seems to think that it is a sufficient answer. I say, no. There were two others not examined among the constables who shot and I did not see any valid reason why those two should not have been examined. Again with reference to statements to be made by constables, the constables may be able to cite others. If they are examined, they might say whether they had orders or not and they might point out and cite other people who may know what the actual facts were and these may be examined after the examination of the constables. Therefore, the inquiry by Mr. Paddison was necessarily incomplete. There is no use of the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson saying that at present we are not able to say who fired the first shot. A public inquiry may throw light on that identical matter and may show who did it. There is no use quoting the results of an inquiry which is far short of a public inquiry. Therefore the assumption that criminal proceedings are impossible because it is not possible for us to say now who was the particular offender—that position cannot stand. The Hon'ble Mr. Davidson said that Mr. Paddison permitted questions and that that was equivalent to cross-examination. I do not think any self-respecting vakil would agree to attend a place where he could only suggest questions which are or may be treated with contempt or ignored. The Hon'ble Mr. Rama Ayyangar definitely told me that he was given a chance of making suggestions but then he thought it inconsistent with his position and dignity to attend and merely to offer suggestions which might be rejected. This is far short of what the public have a right to expect. The Hon'ble Mr. Davidson told us that Mr. Paddison had no personal responsibility for the firing, but now even on the conclusions of the Government we see that there were a set of police people who were in a terrible funk, who were so badly disorganized that they went on firing shots, which shot even one of their own number, without specific orders and went on loading without orders and all this reflects considerable discredit on the police training there. If I were in Mr. Paddison's position—I know he is an excellent gentleman and I do not wish to say anything against him personally—I should feel considerably pained at this state of affairs revealed to the public and the Government. It is irritating to find that the police for whom he was in a general way responsible have committed an offence or have behaved in this shabby way. If the Court comes to the same finding as the Government have, the police who shot the people would certainly be convicted of culpable homicide or of causing a rash and negligent act. There is a certain amount of discredit reflected on the police officers. There is either general negligence or a terrible funk on their part. The police there have not been trained properly. Therefore the argument advanced, namely, that there was no personal responsibility on the part of Mr. Paddison is not satisfactory. He was to a certain extent in touch with the administration which made it desirable that he should be avoided.

"The other position which the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson took up was that even the Inspector was not at fault. This is a matter which is much harder for me to understand. I tried my best to follow the Hon'ble Mr. Davidson but I found it difficult to follow him. Because it is stated that the Inspector gave the order 'mob firing close.' I think that was the finding of Mr. Paddison. If he did give the order without consulting the District Superintendent of Police, who says that he is not responsible for any order, the Inspector was wrong in acting without consultation with the District Superintendent of Police and without consultation with the Magistrate."

The Hon'ble Mr. L. Davidson:—"It was only a preliminary caution."

The Hon'ble Mr. B. V. NARASIMHA AYYAR:—"Preliminary caution implies that the next thing may be to open fire. How is it possible for us to permit the Inspector to take upon himself the responsibility of saying that the stage had arrived for firing without consulting the District Superintendent of Police when he was there? A certain degree of moral blame attaches to the Inspector. I have not understood in what way he has explained his conduct in issuing that order and in allowing loading without orders to go on under his very nose, if there is an explanation of Mr. Holland, the Inspector.

"As for the most important point, it seems to me there was no necessity at all for pushing the crowd with bayonets. The answer was that there were occupants of some carriages who wanted to get out. I saw accounts in the papers, but I did not think that any people in carriages wished the crowd to be thrust out with bayonets. I have seen statements of persons concerned in the papers to the effect that the Police should have left things alone. Mr. Paddison says that there was one vakil who at a later stage offered to lead the crowd away. Mr. Paddison refers to a vakil and says 'A Home Rule Vakil'—I do not know what he means by that—said he would speak to them and lead them away. Probably he was so confident of his popularity that he thought that he could lead them. So many things might have been tried. But without meaning any disparagement of Mr. Elliot's capacity to manage a crowd, I think he might have asked Mr. Varadarajulu Nayudu to lead the procession out. That is the way in which any man of common sense would have acted. I cannot understand the order of the District Superintendent of Police. He seems to have been upset by what took place early in the day. It is said that there were some stones pelted. That is no justification for any such order. The argument which Mr. Paddison employs against the bayonet charge could be equally employed against stone-throwing. How many were the constables that were hit by stone-throwing? How many were there with torn skins and torn coats? The number of such people is remarkably small and therefore it is clear that the necessity had not arisen for the police to push the crowd away in a body and irritate them. That is a matter for further examination by a public inquiry.
