* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—"To-day, he has brought forward this proposal which can only be considered by those who know anything about the affairs of local bodies as a most reactionary proposal. Unfortunately, my hon. Friend is not a member of any local board till to-day. Therefore, I shall not go into his remarks. But my other Friend from Chingleput, whom I congratulate on his election to the Corporation by the Senate, because he will have some intimate knowledge of the working of local bodies at least hereafter, conveyed a wrong impression about local bodies, and their medical officers. What he said was entirely wrong. I may be pardoned for having to make a somewhat lengthy statement. What happened was this; originally the local bodies were recruiting their own men. This went on for some time. Afterwards the Surgeon-General was asked to recruit men for the local bodies, and these men were sent to the local boards; they were on a provincial cadre, and they had to be employed side by side as vacancies arose among men recruited by the local bodies. So, the local boards men were gradually disappearing and the men recruited by the Surgeon-General filled their places. The Local Boards Act, it was thought, gave power to local bodies to recruit their own men. The local boards thought that the contribution they had to pay on behalf of men recruited by the Surgeon-General was very costly. So the local bodies who had power given to them under the Local Boards Act, some of them, perhaps three or four of them, moved the Government to permit them to appoint their own men on a pay of Rs. 60 or 70 for a sub-assistant surgeon, while they had to pay something like Rs. 130 or so as contribution for the men sent by the Surgeon-General. I know a case where there was an appointment of a sub-assistant surgeon by a taluk board and there was trouble going on for some months between the taluk board and the Government. The taluk board would not yield and the Government would not give in. The District Board being midway between them had a lot of trouble in bringing about a reconciliation in the matter."

"Then there is the question of the Surgeon-General sending away men in service in large numbers. The Surgeon-General has been asked not to recruit in large numbers hereafter, seeing that some of the taluk boards working under deficit may go in for cheaply paid men. It was in that connexion, as the hon. the Chief Minister referred to, a meeting of the Public Health Committee was called and the Surgeon-General asked to limit recruitment. He suggested that the headquarter dispensaries might be made into hospitals and some of his men might be absorbed there. The whole thing is in a melting pot. I do not think it is right to say that men had to be sent away because the local bodies will not take them. In the Ramnad district out of 32 men only 3 or 4 are local board men. When a particular man is very popular in a particular place and the Surgeon-General transfers him to some other place, saying he must undergo Agency training and all that, the whole town people agitate to retain him saying that the man is very popular. The Surgeon-General is unable to comply with the request. This brings in a conflict between the Surgeon-General and the local body concerned. We are not suggesting to throw anybody out of employment; only the Surgeon-General is being asked not to make recruitments in larger numbers. In spite of the knowledge of my Friend from Chingleput in other matters, I am afraid that in the present case his knowledge is not correct. Though my hon. Friend never comes without preparation before making his remarks, yet in this case he has failed in that respect. He ought not to have made those remarks particularly when there are so many district board presidents who could tell him with one voice that his views are neither correct nor sound."

[The Raja of Ramnad]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Sir, the medical officers lent to the local bodies can under the Act 1 of 1920 be punished and removed by local bodies. The right to punish and remove these officers is a statutory right conferred on them. No doubt the suggestion made by the hon. Members for Chingleput and Madura would tend to greater efficiency, but I am afraid its adoption would not be received without a demur from local bodies. The services of medical officers serving in the headquarter hospitals cannot be dispensed with by local boards, but in the case of officers employed in other medical institutions under the management of local boards they can be. Recently this question was discussed at a meeting of the Public Health Advisory Committee and the Surgeon-General proposed that these powers of local bodies to remove medical men lent to them might be limited to 25 per cent. of the total number. The proposal is still under consideration. We must educate the local boards not to be arbitrary. We can only advise them. The discretion is with them; they have to see whether their financial condition would permit of their employing more costly officers. It would not be fair on the part of the Government to compel them to retain these officers. The general policy is under consideration. It is proposed to have two cadres, one cadre to officer the taluk headquarter hospitals and other institutions to supply officers to institutions managed by local bodies, the latter appointments to be made by the authorities concerned in consultation with the Surgeon-General. In these circumstances I have only to say that it will not be advisable to interfere with the discretion of the local bodies."

Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"I withdraw the motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR with the permission of the House moved the following resolution standing in the name of the Zamindar of Kallikota:—

'that the allotment of Rs. 3,34,800 for maintenance be reduced by Rs. 100.'

(To discuss about the inadequate provision of Rs. 34,000 made in the Budget for extension of medical relief in rural areas.)

He said:—"Sir, in places like the Ganjam district, it is very difficult to recruit these medical officers under the rural dispensary scheme, on the salaries that are now sanctioned by G.O. No. 1522, P.H., dated 22nd October 1924. The medical officers are paid a salary of Rs. 33½ a month with a free supply of medicines to the value of Rs. 250, if they appoint sub-assistant surgeons, and Rs. 50 a month if they appoint assistant surgeons.

[Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar]

Many presidents of district boards are at a loss to get medical practitioners of any standing, even ordinary beginners, to accept this salary and stay in those rural parts where the rural dispensaries are constituted. The difficulty is twofold, generally in places of any slight importance there is already a local fund dispensary run by the taluk board with a regular body of sub-assistant surgeons or assistant surgeons. The scheme of rural medical relief, as I understand it, is to take medical relief out into the remote parts of the district to those rural areas which have no regular institutions. I consider the present scheme as a very well thought-out scheme. It has to get the medical men to go there with medical outfit for which a small grant is given by the Government and to run institutions practically as private medical practitioners. There is only one difficulty in that scheme, and that is, there is absolutely no scope for private practice in places far remote, places to which medical relief is for the first time taken and where people have yet to appreciate the benefits of the western system of medicine. There being practically very little scope for private practice it comes to this, the medical practitioner if he is a sub-assistant surgeon has to be content with the salary of Rs. 33½ that he gets. It is merely an honorarium. An assistant surgeon gets only Rs. 50. I do not by any means suggest that they should be paid anything like the regularly constituted servants of the taluk board. But I plead that in areas where it is difficult to open rural dispensaries, some increase may be made in this amount. I know that some of the local boards have resorted to a sort of circumvention; and I have myself discouraged it. The circumvention is this; they shift the location of the dispensaries. If a dispensary is in a fairly popular place, popular from the medical point of view, and has been established for a number of years and is being run as a dispensary and has a permanently paid subordinate attached to it, the difficulties of getting men attaching themselves as honorary officers in a remote part being very great, the local body just transfers the regular dispensary to a remote part and places a regular officer in that latter place, though this is done on very rare occasions, I admit, and by very few local bodies. But this sort of circumvention is neither contemplated by Government nor desirable in the interests of the public. There must be a certain amount of permanency attached to these dispensaries. The men must know before they are going out as another type of officers at remote places, they are officers with a certain amount of efficiency. I therefore plead that the original idea of the Government should be directly carried out by the local bodies and the medical relief should be carried into the interior by means of these honorary officers. I therefore plead that the Government may be pleased to consider whether it is not possible to slightly increase the amount that they are now giving for these rural medical institutions."

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI:—"I also move

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 4,16,500 for grants to local bodies by Rs. 1.'

"Sir, I associate myself entirely with the observations made by my hon. Friend from Chingleput. It is true that the Government have formulated this scheme with a view to increase medical relief in out-of-the-way places. But the difficulty arises in getting young men with high prospects before them to settle in out-of-the-way places for which these institutions are intended. As president of a district board I know some details of this system. In the South Arcot District Board, it was proposed to open ten dispensaries, two for each taluk board, and the taluk boards sent up recommendations fixing the places, etc., to the district board and they were duly forwarded to the Government. The Government have approved these proposals. I believe, out of ten such institutions, three or four have not yet been opened and of the remaining six or seven, some have already died out, because these medical practitioners, with no prospects of getting any high income, do not agree to permanently stick themselves to those places. There are one or two points more that have to be considered by the Government and the local bodies in this matter. It is true the Government have promised about Rs. 400 to the sub-assistant surgeons and about Rs. 600 to the assistant surgeons. Who would like to settle in those out-of-the-way places? In a regular dispensary, the sub-assistant surgeon or assistant surgeon commands other conveniences; for instance, he commands the services of a compounder, he commands the services of a midwife, of an attender, and of a gardener. It must be said that the Government have promised, I believe, a sum of Rs. 100 to these sub-assistant or assistant surgeons who engage midwives. But this Rs. 100 is a small sum for any midwife of respectable position to be tempted to go to out-of-the-way places. In these circumstances, it is highly necessary that the Government should make it a point of raising the subsidy which they have promised, and the taluk boards may also be instructed to give these assistant or sub-assistant surgeons other conveniences in the shape of a compounder, and in the shape of other services.

"There is again this question of housing the institution. It has been found very difficult to find buildings for these institutions. The Government must adopt the policy of promising 75 per cent, or if that is not possible, at least 50 per cent of the capital expenditure that the taluk boards incur on buildings for housing these institutions."

p.m.

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"The object of introducing rural medical relief scheme is to extend medical relief to the interior of the Presidency. According to this scheme medical officers are not expected to be servants either of the Government or local bodies. They are private practitioners settled in particular places to practise as all private medical practitioners do. We are aware that it would be difficult for medical practitioners to get on with this small subsidy. The honorarium or subsidy is intended only as an inducement to them to go and settle in particular areas. It is not intended as the pay of the officers. These officers are expected to be useful to the public just as any other private practitioners are. Generally speaking, medical practitioners do not have compounders or separate buildings for their dispensaries."

"Government were anxious to introduce as many as 300 dispensaries in the very first year. Unfortunately, owing to want of applicants, the local bodies were able to introduce only 229 such dispensaries. This year it is proposed to add some 155 dispensaries more, but this addition would depend upon the availability of men. I should very much like to have more dispensaries brought into existence. Owing to limitations, limitations due to want of qualified medical men, although the Government were willing to open as many as 300 dispensaries in the very first year, local bodies were able to open only 229 dispensaries. There is therefore no use in providing funds for a very large number of dispensaries. It is for these reasons that the Government made provision only for 155 hospitals."

[The Raja of Panagal]

The motions were by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 4,16,500 for grants to local bodies be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I know for certain that there are several dispensaries run by local bodies, some of them having their own buildings and some rented buildings. In my experience I have found that the members of the depressed classes have no free access to these dispensaries. They are feeling the same difficulties as in the case of schools. It is a fact that they are made to stand in the anra street. They are not asked to get even on the pials. I think this is due to lack of human feelings and sympathy. I am sure the hon. the Raja of Panagal will never tolerate this kind of ill-treatment meted out to the depressed classes. I hope that at least hereafter the hon. the Minister in charge will kindly see that such a distinction is not made between man and man especially in medical dispensaries. It is true that these dispensaries are purely under the control of the local bodies and that Government cannot interfere in their affairs. But the District Medical Officer generally makes his inspection and I do not know what kind of inspection is generally being made by him in each of these dispensaries. It would be advisable if the district Medical Officer takes this matter very seriously into his head and makes some enquiries into the matter. I am sure that such an enquiry will set matters right."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"The hon. Member for the depressed classes has tried to make out a case that the medical treatment given to the depressed classes is not the same as the treatment given to others. So far as I know, there is absolutely no difference in the matter of treatment between patients of one community and those of another. The members of depressed classes are treated in the same manner as the members of any other community. They are given the same treatment, the same medicine and the same diet. If it is contended that the patients from the depressed classes are not shown better consideration and that they are asked to pay for treatment, the contention I must say is not well founded. Patients of depressed classes are treated gratis. For generally their income is less than Rs. 50 per mensem and persons whose income is less than Rs. 50 are treated gratis."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"I think the hon. Member was referring to the treatment given in rural dispensaries."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"My motion refers to the partial treatment given in dispensaries and hospitals maintained by local bodies, that is to say, municipalities and taluk boards. I have not mentioned anything about demanding payment."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"So far as the dispensaries and hospitals run by local bodies are concerned, they are being inspected by the Surgeon-General and also by the District Medical officers. If there were any cases of the kind referred to by my hon. Friend, Mr. Veerian, certainly they should have been brought to the notice of the Government. If, however, the hon. Member places before the Government any case where such a distinction was made, they will certainly take action and see that no such distinction is made."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. K. PRABHAKARAN TAMPAN:—"I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 4,16,500 for grants to local bodies be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"Sir, the object of my token motion is to suggest to the hon. Minister the desirability of opening Ayurvedic dispensaries in the local board areas.

"At the outset I must say that great credit is due to the hon. the Chief Minister for the vast strides he has made in affording medical relief in this Presidency after he has assumed charge of the department. He has also recently introduced the system of giving subvention to medical practitioners who have settled down in the rural areas. I am one of those who believe that the problem of medical relief can never be adequately and satisfactorily solved unless and until we encourage indigenous systems of medicine and the agency of the Ayurvedic system is resorted to. In the first place, allopathic system is neither cheap, nor is it so congenial to the health of the people as the indigenous systems are. In the second place, considering the cost of allopathic medicines, we shall require large sum of money which for a long time to come we may not be able to provide for to meet the requirements of the large number of dispensaries and hospitals throughout the Province.

"Sir, we in Malabar are reputed to have an efficient system of Ayurvedic medicines. There are doctors who can cure the most complicated diseases which would baffle eminent English doctors. There are very many physicians in my district who have the reputation of being efficient men. If these people are helped with some kind of subsidy and they are asked to practise in particular areas, the problem of medical relief in Malabar will be easily solved. I am aware that the conditions in other parts of the Presidency are not so favourable as in Malabar. It will be enough if you maintain a headquarter hospital in all taluks. It will then be very easy and quite possible to have two or three Ayurvedic dispensaries in every firka throughout the district. If my suggestion seems to be acceptable to the Government, I would recommend that some of the Ayurvedic physicians may be got together and a few lectures on hygiene, treatment of cholera and other diseases and first-in-aid may be given to them by the District Medical and Sanitary Officer so that these people may become up to date in the treatment of such diseases; for I believe that English treatment is more efficient in such respects than the indigenous system. I am anxious that our Ayurvedic systems of medicine should be given sufficient encouragement and made use of for the welfare and prosperity of the people of this Presidency."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Mr. Ramachandra Reddi has given notice of a motion on a similar subject. I think he may speak upon that motion now."

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI:—"That motion refers to the opening of Indian schools of medicine."

24th March 1926]

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"I have given notice of a similar motion (motion No. 666). It runs thus:

'666. To reduce the allotment of Rs. 48,700 for the school of Indian Medicine by Rs. 100.'

"I want to raise the question of opening more Indian schools of medicine, and of issuing Government certificates to students completing their course in private colleges.

"Sir, while feeling grateful to the hon. the Raja of Panagal for having given impetus to the improvement of Ayurvedic system of medicine in this Presidency, I should say . . ."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Will it not be more convenient to deal with Mr. Ramachandra Reddiyar's motion separately because it deals with Indian schools of medicine, whereas the motion moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Prabhakaran Tampam, refers to dispensaries."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"They are allied subjects in regard to the encouragement of Indian medicine."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"It is a long jump to go to motion No. 666 from motion No. 655."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"I should like to say, Sir, that he is moving a little bit slowly."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar or the hon. the Raja of Panagal?"

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"I am afraid both of them. (Laughter.)

"Sir, experience has taught us that the Ayurvedic dispensaries are much less expensive and more attractive than allopathic ones. In many places, especially in my own district, many such dispensaries have been started and they are working satisfactorily. But Government is not gracious enough to give grants towards the maintenance of these institutions. On the other hand, every facility is given by the Government to open allopathic dispensaries and maintain them. This goes a great way to discourage the attempt of many taluk boards to open many dispensaries. When a question was put in this House whether the Government would not recruit Ayurvedic practitioners under the scheme of Rural Medical Relief, the hon. Minister replied that there were not enough number of trained men to be appointed for the various dispensaries. I should like to suggest a way out of the difficulty. I am afraid it will take a number of years for the School of Indian Medicine at Madras to train a number of people from that institution to be appointed in the various dispensaries. I should like to suggest that some more schools of Indian Medicine should be opened in the Presidency. To begin with, there may be one in the northern districts, one in the Coed districts, one for the southern districts, and one in Malabar for the West Coast. These institutions will be able to train a good number of practitioners in a short time and they will be able to run dispensaries on indigenous lines. If the Government are really anxious to improve the condition of the rural areas which are in need of indigenous medicine they should open more schools on these lines. Pending the decision of the Government to open more institutions of this kind, I would suggest to the Government another easy and convenient system. In every town in the Presidency there are schools run by several Ayurvedic medical practitioners.

p.m.

[Mr. B. Ramachandra Reddi] [24th March 1926]

They are not at all encouraged by the Government. Even the practitioners trained by these institutions are not encouraged by the Government. Government may issue certificates to these practitioners that come out of these schools by holding an examination and testing their efficiency. If this is done, a good number of practitioners who have been certified by the Government will be available for appointment under the local bodies or in the rural dispensaries. These private schools must be subsidized by the Government to train more practitioners under the indigenous system. I urge upon the hon. Minister the necessity of opening more schools of Indian Medicine and more dispensaries of an indigenous nature and contribute to the improvement of the Ayurvedic system and the relief of the rural population."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, I have great pleasure in supporting the motion of my hon. Friend. The allopathic system of medicine is doing considerable good to the people of this country. I venture to think that whatever may be the number of dispensaries or hospitals that are opened on western lines, they would not be able to serve the needs of the whole population. They will only touch the fringe of the whole mass; because the money that will be available to the Government at any time for this purpose will be limited. It is therefore only with the aid of the indigenous system of medicine, with the help of the Unani and the Ayurvedic physicians that the Government will be able to render medical aid to the people at large. Again, Sir, the fees demanded by the practitioners of the allopathic system are comparatively higher than the fees charged by the Ayurvedic physicians. It is therefore necessary that dispensaries of the indigenous system should be opened not merely in every firka as the mover of the resolution suggested but also in every village if possible. In an advanced Indian State the system has been introduced and found to work satisfactorily. There is a superior officer, the Director of Ayurveda, who is a man of learning and well versed in both the systems, western and indigenous. Under him there is a net work of dispensaries on the indigenous system established in almost every village in the country. A similar system may be introduced here also with much advantage and without much cost. Small sums of Rs. 15 to Rs. 30 according to the qualifications of the practitioners may be paid to them monthly and they of course may be allowed the privilege of private practice. One officer may be appointed under the control of the local body at the head of the Ayurvedic department. They should be asked to maintain a register of patients and medicines dispensed to the patients. A stock of medicines also will have to be kept. It will be profitable to the practitioners when they receive grants and it will also be beneficial to the people. There is no fear that these practitioners will demand large fees when they are allowed private practice, because they know the limits within which their demands can be enhanced. If necessary, an examination may be instituted and it may be laid down that it is only those who have passed the examination that will receive grants and will be allowed to have private practice. The hon. the Minister has laid the people of the Presidency under a great obligation to him by establishing the School of Indian Medicine. An examination may be instituted by the authorities of the School of Medicine and thus the whole system will be found to work very smoothly and without much cost to the Government."

Mr. Chavadi K. SUBRAHMANYA PILLAI :—" Sir, I beg to support the motion. Ayurvedic dispensaries are less costly and more popular. It is a demand on which all the parties are united. The promotion of indigenous system of medicine is under contemplation for many years. It seems that some five years ago the question of Ayurvedic, Unani and Siddha systems was started in this House and a committee appointed and took evidence about these systems. That committee appears to have resolved that an Ayurvedic institution, with a hospital attached to it, should be started as an experimental measure in the Madras City. That proposal appears to have been sent nearly three years ago. An Advisory Board also seems to have been appointed by Government and a scheme appears to have been framed by it and submitted to the Government. Except the opening of an Indian School of Medicine nothing appears to have been done till now. Many medical schools should be opened and the people should train and qualify themselves and they should also work as teachers in various schools. It is only then there will be system and we will be giving a systematic basis to the Ayurvedic, Unani and Siddha varieties. The Government should encourage the indigenous systems of medicine. It appears that the hon. Minister for Local Self-Government has sympathy for the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine. The hon. Minister is kindly requested to make necessary arrangements immediately for the opening of more schools of Indian medicine, if he is sincere, which, I am sure, he is, and if he wants to improve the condition of Ayurvedic and other systems. I would also request the hon. Minister to give liberal grants to local bodies in order to encourage the opening of Ayurvedic dispensaries in many localities in rural areas."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I am sorry I am obliged to strike a discordant note in the debate on this question. We are all familiar with the arguments that are usually advanced in favour of the establishment of indigenous dispensaries on the Ayurvedic or the Unani lines. We may also say that we have got a fair amount of unanimity of opinion in the matter. It was with a view to encourage the establishment of Ayurvedic dispensaries that we pressed upon the Government to open an Indian School of Medicine, so that practitioners of the indigenous system might be trained to serve in the dispensaries. Such a school has been opened and has been working for some time past. Time has not yet come when we have got a sufficient number of trained practitioners to be sent out to the various indigenous dispensaries. When we have not got enough number of trained and well qualified men for running even the existing dispensaries, I am rather surprised at the attitude of some of my hon. Friends in urging that more such dispensaries should be opened."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" As a matter of personal explanation, may I say that I did not suggest that unqualified practitioners should be taken in? It is only with a view that only trained people and people whose efficiency has been tested, should be appointed that I asked for the establishment of more schools for training more practitioners."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Trained by whom, and tested by whom, Sir, I should like to know?"

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" By the Government, Sir."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Again by the Government, Sir? Here is the Government engaged in this task. Their school is not yet complete; their men are not yet ready to go out and practise. I know of districts which in their enthusiasm for these dispensaries have closed the allopathic dispensaries and started Ayurvedic dispensaries in their place. The people of these districts are sorry for the step that they have taken. Even for little wounds and things like that they can get no relief in the Ayurvedic dispensaries.

1 p.m. "On the other hand, in the Indian School of Medicine people will have efficient training in these matters; they will have training not only on the surgical side but also on the side of medicine. Until such time as qualified people come out of this school I am rather reluctant that we should embark too rapidly on the extension of these dispensaries. The moment you want to open a dispensary there is no end of applications from people for the posts but I may assure the House that most of them are people who are not able to make both ends meet and who want to get anything they can from local bodies and municipalities to drag on their existence. I think the Government and the local bodies would be failing in their duty to the people if they make these institutions unpopular by keeping them in charge of unqualified people."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Mr. President, Sir, the object of the motion is to suggest to the Government that a large number of Ayurvedic and Unani dispensaries should be forthwith opened in the province. This question of opening a large number of indigenous dispensaries was considered in connexion with the introduction of the rural medical relief scheme. It was then considered that it was impracticable to open these institutions for want of properly qualified and accredited medical practitioners. The hon. Member from Bellary has touched the right cord when he said that it is difficult to find out whether an Ayurvedic or Unani medical practitioner is qualified or not. It is for this reason that the Government do not sanction any grants from provincial funds to these institutions opened by local bodies. They do not, however, object to local bodies giving contributions to the dispensaries. The hon. Member from Nellore took the Government to task for being slow in this matter. May I not tell him that in matters like this it is only when we are slow that our progress will be sure? The same hon. Member proposed that there ought to be more Ayurvedic and Unani schools of Medicine. He suggested that the students who pass from private institutions should be given certificates by the Government. He also suggested that the private schools should be affiliated to the Government School of Indian Medicine. These questions were considered by the Government. So far as the question of giving certificates is concerned the Principal of the Indian School of Medicine was of opinion that since the alumne of private schools have no knowledge of anatomy, physiology and surgery, it would not be proper to give them certificates. He further pointed out that as there is no provision for teaching anatomy, physiology and surgery in private medical schools they cannot be affiliated to the Government school. These proposals were therefore dropped. I may assure the hon. Member that as soon as the Government school turns out medical practitioners it will be possible for local bodies to absorb them into their service. The day will not be long before the first batch will be available for local bodies for working indigenous dispensaries. We shall see how far these medical practitioners will be serviceable in giving medical relief to the people of this province. When it is found that these medical practitioners will do as well as allopathic doctors we can establish more schools. The present School of Indian Medicine is indeed conducted as an experimental measure. The future policy of the Government will depend upon the results of the working of this school. I oppose the motion."

* Mr. K. PRABHAKARAN TAMPAN :—"Sir, the hon. the Minister says that for want of competent medical men, my proposal cannot be accepted. I do not know anything about the conditions existing in other parts of the Presidency. But in Malabar there is no lack of such competent men. In the first place, there is a kind of Government examination conducted by the Travancore Government. Many men from Malabar pass that examination and set up private practice in their own places. There is also a non-official body in that district which holds examinations and awards certificates. I cannot understand why the Government should refuse to recognize the diplomas given by these bodies. If the principle of the proposal is accepted by the Government, the local bodies concerned may be trusted to find competent doctors for themselves. There will be no difficulty about that question. There are any number of men in the district who have a reputation of their own. As I said, it is quite sufficient if hospitals and dispensaries of the western kind are maintained in the headquarters of the taluks. There is no need to give subventions to private practitioners in a firka or a small village. The indigenous system, being cheaper and easily available, ought to be preferred. The difficulty of obtaining properly qualified men in other parts of the Presidency ought not to stand in the way so far as Malabar is concerned. I would be very thankful if the hon. Member in charge of the subject will consult the district board and other bodies in Malabar and give a fair trial to the scheme."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Mr. President, Sir, there is no doubt that there may be medical practitioners practising in the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine in Malabar. There may also be students who have come out successful in the Travancore examinations. But so far as this Government are concerned, they have no inspecting agency to find out whether a particular institution started by a medical practitioner is doing its work properly or not. Without an inspecting agency it will be too much for the Government to pay for such institutions . . ."

* Mr. K. PRABHAKARAN TAMPAN :—"There is a dispensary, Sir, in Kottakkal where medicines worth Rs. 13,000 are sold every month. The popularity of such institutions can never be questioned."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I do not deny the fact that there are such medical institutions here and there. But it will be difficult to ascertain whether all the institutions are working properly or not. We have no inspecting agency to inspect the institutions and report to the Government that they are functioning properly. Without such an agency it is impossible for the Government to take the responsibility of recognizing the institutions and provide grants for them from provincial funds. The hon. Member has requested the Government to consult the presidents of the local boards in this connexion. There is no necessity for consulting them. If the presidents are satisfied that a particular dispensary is doing good work it is open to them to help them financially and the Government do not object to their doing so. In fact, such help is given in several cases."

The two motions were, by leave, withdrawn.

[24th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“ I move

‘ that the allotment of Rs. 1,71,900 for Grants-in-aid—General—Non-recurring be reduced by Rs. 100.’

“ My object, Sir, is to draw attention to the smallness of the grants given to private leper asylums, notably that of Mangalore. The Mangalore Leper Asylum has been seen by the hon. the Raja of Panagal during his visit to the place. Since then, the authorities have extended the accommodation; but it is quite insufficient for the purpose of meeting the requirements of the large number of lepers in the district. Many seek admission but they do not get it. While the Government is lavishing something like one lakh of rupees for about 300 lepers here, I think that they should be more liberal to a district asylum maintained by Missionary bodies at much self-sacrifice. A sum of Rs. 4-8-0 can hardly cover even one-third or half the expenditure that is incurred for maintaining one single leper. I do not know how the calculation is made. But if you bear in mind the voluntary labour of the Sisters of Charity employed to look after the lepers, I think that more amount should be paid to that asylum. The Government should undertake at least to bear the cost of the building. The great difficulty is to provide the building. With regard to service, the Sisters of Charity and others are willing to aid the institution with their charitable contribution. But the difficulty is to maintain the buildings, to get the necessary land, construct the required building and provide the necessary accommodation. I confine myself to the Mangalore asylum. That is not the only asylum. There are many asylums of this character. I appeal to the Government to follow a more generous policy. I think the Act can very well be extended without much expenditure on the part of the Government. More than half the cost of the asylums will be met by local agencies like these charitable institutions. The amount which the Government will have to pay to the institutions will proportionately be very much less than that they spend at Tirumani. I may also mention that the authorities have recently taken care to send a doctor for getting special training for looking after the lepers. They have expert Nuns and Sisters of Charity to look after the lepers. These charitable institutions are working at much self-sacrifice for the benefit of the lepers. I think the Government should embark upon a more generous policy to aid the institution.”

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Mr. President, Sir, I thought my friend from South Kanara had exhausted what he had to say on the leper question. I am however glad that he has given an excellent certificate to the work done at the Mangalore Leper Asylum. I was at Mangalore, and I was glad to see splendid work done in the institution, but what I cannot understand is the jealousy which my hon. Friend feels towards Tirumani. I have already told this Honourable House that the case of Tirumani is different from that of any other asylum. Tirumani is practically a Government asylum. The Rayapuram Asylum has been transferred to Tirumani and the responsibility of maintaining it rests with the Government. I cannot understand why he should expect that the treatment given to the Tirumani settlement should be given to other settlements.”

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“ I think, Sir, he has misunderstood me on this point. What I said was that while Government lavish such large amounts of money on their institution so liberally, they should go half-way at least and be more generous towards helping these institutions, especially for providing building accommodation which is necessary for extending the operations of the settlements.”

24th March 1926]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Sir, so far as I can remember, there has been no application for any special grant from the Mangalore Leper Asylum authorities. That however is a different matter. The hon. Member has also referred to the question of raising the rate of grant for these asylums. That question, as I have already told the Council, is under consideration. I trust my hon. Friend will withdraw his motion.”

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

Mr. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE :—“ Sir, I beg to move

‘ that the allotment of Rs. 38,62,600 for hospitals and dispensaries be reduced by Rs. 100.’

“ I raise this token motion to direct the attention of the Government to the needs of the rural areas and especially of malaria-ridden places and to bring to the notice of the Government the necessity of maintaining qualified midwives also in the rural aided dispensaries. The people of rural parts feel at times the want of midwives, and many deaths occur due to the absence of timely help. Considering the fact that the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government has earned the lasting gratitude of the people by his scheme for aided rural dispensaries, I hope he will seriously consider the question of increasing the aid at present granted to them with a view to their maintaining qualified midwives also. The attention of Government is to be drawn to the pitiable plight of the people of the malaria ridden places. It is not necessary for me to describe here the fatal consequences of malaria and how it slowly but surely renders the patient too weak and unfit for any hard labour. Not only dispensaries should be established in all such places but ample provision should be given to them to combat this deadly disease. Where hospitals cannot be opened, at least touring medical men may be appointed who will go round the villages within their jurisdiction at least once a fortnight. I hope the Honourable House will sympathise with my motion.”

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Mr. President, Sir, the hon. Member from South Kanara has pressed his plea for the extension of rural medical relief and also for anti-malarial campaign. The hon. Member wanted to have more dispensaries. If only he knew that under the new scheme there are already 229 dispensaries brought into existence and 155 are to be brought into existence during the coming year, I do not think he would have complained of any lack of interest on the part of the Government in the matter of extension of medical relief to rural areas. They are trying their best; but in all these cases the rate of progress depends upon the availability of funds. So far as the complaint regarding anti-malarial enterprise is concerned, I can only say that the Government are taking steps in that direction. They have deputed some medical men to be trained in the Calcutta School of Tropical Medicine to have a special course of training there so that when they come back they can take up the anti-malarial work in the Presidency. The scheme however is still under consideration, and as soon as these trained men come back they will be in a position to carry out the scheme of anti-malarial work.

[The Raja of Panagal] [24th March 1926]

"Another point referred to is the maternity work. Already the Government have offered to give Rs. 100 more to any medical practitioner in charge of a rural dispensary in case he employs the services of a midwife. Perhaps, under the existing circumstances it may not be possible to have midwives all over the Presidency on account of the scarcity of trained midwives; but when my hon. Friend's Bill becomes an Act, it will be possible to have some of the Dhais who have had shorter courses recognized as midwives. When they are available local bodies can employ them. I hope and trust that local bodies will get these Dhais to undergo the course of training."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I am afraid Mr. Srinivasan cannot move his motion because it relates to a Central subject."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN:—"My motion is to elicit information as to the necessity for establishing hospitals to be maintained by Railway Companies for their employees in the city and districts."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"That makes the meaning clear, and it also makes it possible for me to rule this motion out of order, because it relates to a Central subject. The Local Government have nothing to do with the maintenance of hospitals by Railway Companies."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"On a point of order, Sir. May I know whether these things are not verified in the office before they are put on paper?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Order, order. The placing of these motions on paper does not at all mean that they are in order."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 3,47,700 for medical schools be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"If I remember aright, Sir, some candidates who have not completed the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate nor passed any of the examinations recognized by the Government as equivalent to it in Article I of the Public Service Notification are not admitted in the medical schools to undergo training in the L.M.P. course. This is a disqualification, and I am going to point out the reasons for that. If candidates have not obtained a sufficient number of marks in particular subjects or in some subjects, they may be given a test and admitted in the schools for the preliminary examinations they hold every year. I think, Sir, they hold preliminary examinations for three or four years. These candidates may be given a test to see whether such students who have not obtained a sufficient number of marks are capable of ever getting the capacity to continue in the medical line. By chance, I know that some students get better marks or a good deal of marks according to the pleasure of the examiner. Therefore, I should like to know, Sir, whether any exemption cannot be made, or whether there is any feasibility in making an exemption in the case of lady students or at least in the case of the male students belonging to the depressed classes to undergo training in these medical schools. Then, Sir, I wish to know about the examinations equivalent to the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate. I wrote to the Surgeon-General as well as to the Secretary of the Local Self-Government Department requesting them to furnish me with the required information. I do not know whether the reply is on its way to me or not. I want to know, Sir, whether the Senior or the Junior Cambridge examination or the Middle School examination is equivalent to the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate examination. I should like to know from the hon. the Minister in charge whether exemption cannot be made in the case of those depressed class students who have not obtained completed Secondary School-Leaving Certificates."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Mr. President, Sir, possession of Secondary School-Leaving Certificate is prescribed as a qualification for admission for the mere reason that unless the students have a certain amount of general knowledge and are in a position to understand the lectures given in the medical schools, there would be no use in admitting them to medical schools. My hon. Friend thinks that an exception should be made in the case of girl pupils and boy pupils belonging to the depressed classes. I do not think the Government will be well advised to make any exception of the kind. The hon. Member asks whether students who have passed examinations equivalent to the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate examination could be admitted. The object in prescribing the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate, particularly with Science as optional subject, is to see that the student who seeks admission to the school has a fair knowledge of Physics and Chemistry. If the Cambridge Senior examination has in its curriculum the Science course equivalent to the course prescribed for the Secondary School-Leaving Certificate or higher, there can be no difficulty in getting those who have passed that examination admitted."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 8,09,600 for Medical Colleges and Schools be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"Sir, there is some difficulty in giving this concession of school fees for the students who are undergoing training in the medical colleges and schools. I think, Sir, that stipendiary students are exempted from school fees; but in the case of other students, they are asked to pay the school fees. In the case of backward or depressed classes as specified by the Government in their notification, they are eligible to get half the standard fees; but the difficulty arises in this way. If they are Ezhuvas and if they spell their names in the recognized manner, namely, Ezhuvas, there is no difficulty. But if they spell their names in the common way, viz., Eluvas, they are not eligible for the exemption. (Laughter.) I made a reference about it to the Surgeon-General and he has written to the Government. All the same, Sir, they are Ezhuvas. There is no difference between that word and this word, but the community is the same though there is difference in the spelling. I do not know if the same difficulty arises even in the case of other communities; I only request the hon. the Minister to kindly look into it and see that such difficulties are not felt. Candidates are not supplied with any Government notification containing such names spelt in the recognised manner."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Sir, the Government have no objection to look into the matter; but I believe the mistake must have been made because there is a list of the communities given. If the particular applicant did not give the name of the community as mentioned in the list, the authorities responsible might find some difficulty in identifying the community. In such cases, it is open to the members concerned to satisfy the authorities that they belong to the particular community in the list."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, in moving for the reduction of the allotment of Rs. 2,98,300 for Mental Hospitals by Rs. 101, I beg to suggest that separate accommodation be provided for patients according to the maladies they are suffering from. It may be a matter, Sir, which perhaps is already engaging the consideration of the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government.

p.m.

"When I had been to the mental hospital to see the patients there I was struck with the absence of arrangements for segregation of the patients according to the maladies they are suffering from. Now I am reliably informed that there are some diseases which the patients may be suffering from and which spread to others who come in contact with them like hysteria for instance. I should therefore suggest that some arrangement should be made for providing separate accommodation to patients according to modern requirements."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"The question is already engaging the attention of the Government. The Surgeon-General has reported that a classification is being attempted and in virulent cases, the patients are segregated."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I move

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 21,100 for Medical—Works by Rs. 100.'

"My object in bringing this motion is to draw attention to the neglect of the Women's Hospital at Mangalore. I am sorry that the Government are so hard-hearted and obstinate, where they should be sympathetically inclined. We have raised contributions to the extent of Rs. 28,000 for a Women's Hospital which is sorely needed there. The hon. the Minister has indeed admitted more than once and even gave a solemn assurance in this House that if people in South Kanara raised a contribution for building a hospital, he would provide an equal amount for the purpose. Depending upon that, we have collected Rs. 28,000 and I think we can even collect more. But to our surprise there is no provision made in the budget for the purpose. From the proceedings of the Finance Committee supplied to us I find that the Government have gone on very strange calculations. At first perhaps they thought the people of Mangalore would not be so generous and calculated that the building would cost Rs. 41,000. Now they have found that a sum of Rs. 75,000 would be necessary and they offer to pay the difference between the original estimate and the actual amount collected, that is, 41,000 minus 28,000, or 13,000. They now say that the rest of the money should be found by the people. This is an unfair way of dealing with the public. The Government have broken faith with the people who have been generous. If only the Government had encouraged us, we should have expected more generous response from the public. I say so, Sir, because we have been maintaining many public institutions by public contributions. There is hardly an educational institution in Mangalore that is not run with charitable aids and even the Government College there is endowed by the public, in several ways. Instead of encouraging us and enabling us to set an example to the other parts of the Presidency, instead of giving us as much as they can, they have made no provision. And I now call upon the hon. the Minister and the hon. the Finance Member—I do not find him here—to explain this state of affairs."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Sir, we have one more motion about the Medical Institutions of Mangalore. It is true that the hospital referred to by my hon. Friend is far from being satisfactory. The Government realised this and wanted to improve the building accommodation. But unfortunately for want of funds, they could not go ahead with the work. Later on however they added a block of buildings (the police hospital) and the position of accommodation was thus improved. It is true, Sir, that the generous people of Mangalore were pleased to subscribe Rs. 28,000 and odd. But the revised estimate has risen to a much larger amount. At one time it was considered that Rs. 44,000 and odd will do for the entire scheme. But according to the revised estimate the cost of the work will be much more. And the question is one of ways and means. I hope and trust that an early opportunity will be taken to provide funds for this scheme. In fact, we have arrived at a decision to allow the work to go on."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"That is poor consolation, Sir."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Meantime, they can go on with the funds at their disposal."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. A. V. BHANOJI RAO:—"Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 58.47 lakhs for Medical be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"The object with which I tabled this motion is about the opening of a new dispensary at Vizagapatam. I have made repeated requests to the hon. Minister for Local Self-Government to open a small dispensary without any expenditure. There used to be a dispensary-endowed by a certain gentleman and that was taken away by the Medical College. Now people in one portion of the town feel it very difficult for want of medical help. They have to go a distance of about two and a half miles to the new hospital at Maharanipectta. When the site was selected for the present hospital there was a deputation to the hon. Member for Government who came there to choose the site and the difficulty was pointed out on the part of the people who live in the southern portion of the town and who will have to go all the way to the hospital. I believe the hon. Member for Government then gave us an assurance that a small dispensary would be opened in the locality. Since the Government have taken away the dispensary presented to the public in that part of the town, it is but right that a small dispensary is now opened in that locality. It will not entail any expenditure and I will show how. There are already a number of doctors and also those working in the medical college may be utilized while the medicines could be supplied from the hospital. The doctors who have no other work practically except teaching work in the college are always available, and they can be put in charge of the dispensaries by turns. At present it works very hard on the poor people to go all the way to the hospital for simple maladies like slight fever or headache. I would request the hon. Minister that he may take all these into consideration and open a small dispensary which will involve no extra expenditure.

"I would then suggest that as the medical college just opened at Vizagapatam on the lines of the medical college at Madras needs a provision for a hostel being attached to it for the benefit of students who find it very difficult to accommodate themselves, some provision may be made for a hostel. Moreover, from the educational point of view, it would also be better if all the students are placed together under a common supervision. These are the two points that I wanted to raise on this motion and I hope the hon. the Minister will give a sympathetic reply."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Mr. President, Sir, the two points raised by the hon. the Member for Vizagapatam are: first, the opening of an allopathic dispensary at Vizagapatam and secondly, the construction of a hostel for the students of the Medical College. So far as the first of these points is concerned, the hon. Member rested his case upon an assurance given by the hon. Sir Alexander Cardew, a former Member in charge of the Medical portfolio. Since there was no reference in the office traceable, the hon. Member was asked to give us the reference and his reply is yet to come."

Mr. A. V. BHANOJI RAO:—"On a point of personal explanation, Sir. It is very difficult to find an assurance of the kind given by an hon. Member of Government. At the time he came a deputation waited on him and he gave an oral assurance. Of course that hon. Member is not present here and I have written to the hon. the Minister that it is not possible to find any written record on the matter."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"At all events, the foundation for that assurance is not as sure as it was represented to be. On the merits of the case, I must say that both the District Medical Officer and the Surgeon-General considered it not necessary. Their contention is that the headquarters hospital (the King George's Hospital) is almost in the centre of the town. No portion of the town is more than two miles away from this hospital. Moreover, Sir, the outpatients department of the Women and Children's hospital is near the place where my friend would have the proposed hospital opened. There is also an Ayurvedic dispensary maintained by the municipality near the place. For these reasons I must say there is no case made out for the institution of the dispensary. If the municipality likes it could convert one of the Ayurvedic dispensaries into allopathic."

"So far as the second point is concerned, I am glad I can give him a more favourable reply. The work that he has proposed has been sanctioned."

Mr. A. V. BHANOJI RAO:—"Just a few words, Sir, regarding the opinion given by the Surgeon-General and the District Medical Officer. The present hospital is not really in the centre of the town. If it were so, nobody would suggest the opening of another dispensary. It is in one corner, nearer to Waltair than to Vizagapatam. People really find it very difficult to go there. About the Ayurvedic dispensary which is now maintained by the municipality, I should say that the general tendency for some to prefer the allopathic to the Ayurvedic system must be taken into account. People should not be forced to the Ayurvedic dispensary when they have got faith in allopathic cure. Moreover, the Government have taken away a dispensary which was presented for the benefit of the public, and it is but right that they must open one in its place. That is my contention, and I hope that the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government will be pleased to comply with my request."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The demand under the head "Medical" was then put and carried and the grant made.

The House then adjourned for lunch.

After Lunch (2-45 p.m.).

(The hon. the Deputy President in the Chair.)

DEMAND XXI—PUBLIC HEALTH AND VITAL STATISTICS.

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I beg to move on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor

'that the Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 33.28 lakhs for Public Health and Vital Statistics.'"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 3,25,900 for pay of establishments be reduced by Rs. 100.'"

"My object is to urge the desirability of having vaccinators paid by Government and local bodies charged for the payment. Sir, the present system of vaccination, as I have more than once pointed out on the floor of this House, requires a good deal of improvement. The Government when charged with carelessness with regard to the vaccination system blames municipalities and local boards because the appointments are in the hands of those local bodies, and the salaries are paid actually by the local bodies. In reply to a question, Government recently explained that the standard rates of pay were fixed for the different classes of vaccinators which were reasonably high, but if the local bodies cannot pay that salary they appoint men who are not fully qualified though the qualifications are fixed by the Government as well as the salaries. Between this Government fixing an ideal and the local bodies carrying it out into practice far below that ideal, the people must suffer. There are many cases I think wherein vaccination is done in a very careless manner. Government formerly were preparing vaccine which could not be preserved for a long time. Now, they have got vaccine which can be preserved long. I think that experience has shown that vaccine that is imported now will maintain its purity for a very long time, under the system in which it is preserved now, and is not liable to quick decay. It will not lose its good properties, and sceptic poison will not get into it as it happened to be the case formerly sometimes. Last year on the floor of this House I said that the results of some cases of vaccination were disastrous, and I was charged with exaggerated language. But in view of the cases which occurred in the past the language was not exaggerated. But as things have improved in that direction, there is not much to blame in regard to vaccine. The fault lies, not in the vaccine, but in some of the vaccinators, on whom we cannot place much reliance. Therefore what should be done is this, as in the case of the health officers whose standard of qualification and salaries are fixed and paid by Government, and as in the case of the municipalities the salaries are charged to the account of the municipalities in certain proportion to be exacted from them, Government should place these vaccinators entirely under the district health officers and under their control, the vaccinators being appointed by Government or the Director of Public Health or by the district health officers according to the high qualifications required of the vaccinators. They should be paid by the Government and a certain proportion of the full amount should be exacted from the municipalities and local boards. I know of course it will be pointed out to me that this is against the principle of Local Self-Government and that we should have confidence in the municipalities and local boards. That there are certain local boards which do not realise the importance of careful vaccination and also sanitation in general, of course, is not very much to the credit of the local boards who do not pay according to the standard fixed by Government or do not appoint men according to the standards required. But there are certain local bodies that think that they do not get sufficient income and that they cannot pay according to the higher standard laid down by Government. In a matter like this in which the health and the life of the people are concerned, the Government should undertake the whole responsibility of the appointment and payment of vaccinators, taking a reasonable contribution from the municipalities."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" In this connexion, I wish to draw the attention of my hon. Friend, the Chief Minister to one fact, Sir. I do not know whether it is due to want of skill on the part of the vaccinators or the bad quality of the lymph that is employed, but I know of two cases in which two children who were vaccinated fared very badly after the vaccination. One of these two children suffered in consequence of this vaccination from a kind of disease which lasted for one full year, and the other child had smallpox. Fortunately the two children did not die. I do not know whether it is due, as I said, to the incapacity of the vaccinator or the bad quality of the lymph that is given. Such cases do occur, and I know these two cases personally, and I hope my hon. Friend, the Chief Minister, will insist upon the department being more careful both in the quality of the lymph and also in the qualifications of the vaccinators."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I very much regret the incidents which my hon. Friend the Member for Malabar has referred to. As he himself pointed out, the two cases might have been the results of a mere accident, and hon. Members are aware that such accidents are inevitable in any treatment. I do not mean to say that we are not going to take steps to prevent such accidents."

" Sir, this time the hon. Mover has allowed his irresistible eloquence to attack the system of vaccination. He has tried his best to make out a case for what I do not know. I have listened carefully to his lengthy speech and yet I am sorry I am not in a position to know definitely what really he is aiming at. There was a vague suggestion to the effect that the Government are taking shelter under the plea that because this work is done under the supervision of the local bodies, they cannot be held responsible."

24th March 1926]

[The Raja of Panagal]

I do not for a moment wish to plead any excuse in the matter, if really there is any defect in the system. I do wish to improve the system if indeed I can do so."

" Sir, so far as the question of provincialising the service is concerned, it is not so easy as my hon. Friend seems to think. He urges on the Government to pay the vaccinators' salary bills and recover the same by way of contributions from the local bodies. Even if we do this the vaccinators will still be the servants of local bodies. On the other hand if the Government pay their salaries from Provincial funds they would incur heavy expenditure. Moreover, vaccinators are under the Acts of 1920 appointed by the local boards and municipalities. Any attempt on the part of the Government to go back upon this would be seriously resented. These appointments however can be made only in consultation with the District Medical Officers. That really means that the Department of Public Health will have its voice in the matter of these appointments."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—" Probably the hon. Minister means the District Health Officer, not the District Medical Officer."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Yes, Sir, in consultation with the D.H.O.'s, that is, the District Health Officers. That is a guarantee for qualified men being appointed; more than that I think it will not be possible. Recently this question of transferring the service from the control of the taluk boards to that of the district boards was being discussed in the Public Health Advisory Committee, and for obvious reasons the Committee could not agree to the transfer. The proposal had therefore to be dropped. The system of provincialization was introduced in the case of the municipalities, and the municipalities have been complaining against the system. Similarly if the service of vaccinators is provincialized in the case of local boards, the local boards will raise a hue and cry. For these reasons, I have to oppose the motion."

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI :—" Sir, I also rise to oppose this motion of my hon. Friend, Mr. Saldanha. It is true that vaccinators in some of the districts are not paid adequately, but that does not mean that the power now vested in the local boards should be taken away from those boards. There may be cases in which here and there people are not paid properly. But what is the remedy? Is the Government going to pay them more if the cadre is provided for by them? Certainly if they want to mend matters in that direction, it is open to the Government to grant subsidies. I do not propose to ask for subsidies as president of a district board. Recently this question was mooted in various boards and most of the boards have considered the proposal of the Director of Public Health to improve the scale of pay of these vaccinators, and my friend, Mr. Saldanha, may be glad to learn that most of the boards have recently revised the scale of pay as suggested by the Director of Public Health. I know some of the boards have not reached the standard fixed by the Director of Public Health, but the scale has been revised fairly liberally. I do not know how my friend, Mr. Saldanha thinks that if the Government take up the establishment under their own hands the system would improve. When local bodies with their local knowledge and with the constant supervision over these people are not able to manage these vaccinators, how does he expect the Government to exercise better control over these people? There is a Director of Public Health with his staff, and then there has recently been installed, the district health staff with a District Health Officer who looks into these things very minutely. They have got to submit returns fortnightly and these will have to be scrutinised by the district boards also in some cases. When a system of local scrutiny is supposed to be working all right I do not know why centralisation is deemed necessary by my hon. Friend.

3 p.m. "This is the first time this question is mooted in the House. Unless the Government is going to increase its expenditure, Sir, heavily under this item, I do not think matters would improve. I do not think Government should take this item under their charge."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I think taluk boards are responsible for these appointments. They must have a direct sense of responsibility to discharge their obligations towards the people. What happens is this. There is a strong prejudice against vaccination in the villages generally. There is a considerable body of people who are against vivisection and such other matters. They consider it almost a sin and there is a good deal of a kind of propaganda against vivisection. So many people do not willingly resort to vaccination. When they really see serious cases of illness after vaccination they do not want to be vaccinated. So it is the duty of the local bodies to respond to the claims by the Government for the appointment of men with proper qualifications and also pay the vaccinators according to the standard fixed by Government. When they do not do so and when it is due to their neglect I think Government should take the responsibility and make the local bodies pay the amount expended, as it is done in the case of the municipal health officers. They are paid by Government and a certain amount of contribution is exacted from the municipalities. The same principle may be carried out in the case of the district boards. I am very proud to see that the taluk boards are generally alive to their responsibilities. But in this matter, I think, there is neglect on the part of some boards. I am therefore right in asking the gentlemen here who are connected with local bodies—and most of them are connected with local bodies—to see that the local bodies discharge their duties properly. With the assurance given by my hon. Friend that the local bodies are willing to do their duty properly I have no objection to withdraw the motion."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Sir, I must join issue with my hon. Friend when he says that the local bodies show a want of sense of responsibility in their administration. They have their sense of responsibility and they know their duty. Sir, coming back to the question I must say that the suggestion made by the hon. Mover would, if adopted, result in unnecessary correspondence. He wants the Government to pay the salaries of vaccinators from the provincial funds and recover the amount from local boards. Local boards would naturally delay payment and protracted correspondence will be the result. This will not in any way improve the service. So far as the question of the increased scale of the pay is concerned Government addressed local boards that they should increase the pay and as has been pointed out by the President of the South Arcot District Board some of the presidents have already agreed to improve the prospects of these vaccinators. As regards the efficiency of vaccination the Director of Public Health has recently issued instructions in the matter of vaccination. It is expected as the result of following these instructions there will be improvement in the work of vaccination."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[24th March 1926]

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I beg to move

"I want to point out, Sir, that in many places members who are not willing to enter into the cheris are appointed as inspectors. In a place near Vaniyambadi there was a cholera case. Cholera was raging in that village and when the health inspector went there he did not enter into the cheri but he stood upon the pial of a church and taught the people how to avoid the epidemic. He did not come the next day but simply told them how they should behave. So what I wanted to suggest is that non-orthodox people should be appointed as far as possible so that this kind of distinction may not be made by them. This department is such a department, Sir, and therefore I ask that only such kind of people who would serve the department well with a view to bring good reputation to the department should be appointed. The second thing that I wanted to point out is that whenever these health inspectors go the people say, 'Look here, we have no water to drink. Our cheri is not in a sanitary condition and is overgrown with prickly-pear bushes also.' What could these health inspectors do? They have no money with them. For each and everything they will have to write to the presidents of the taluk boards and the other authorities concerned. What I would suggest is that a certain amount be left in the hands of the health officers so that they may utilize the amount in consultation with the president of the taluk board for providing water-supply in rural parts and removing prickly-pear growths, etc., etc."

Mr. T. MALLESAPPA :—"Many villages are without public wells. Some contain one or two unprotected private wells, which, however, provide neither sufficient quantity nor good quality of water to the villages. By using the water of such wells the villages become subject to all sorts of epidemics. A few of the villages have not got even a single well. The villagers here depend upon rain water which is collected in some pond or other. Whenever the local boards are approached to provide wells, they plead they have no funds. In order to see that the local bodies do not put forward such pleas, it is the duty of the Government to place sufficient funds at the disposal of the local bodies to carry out the work essential to the welfare of the people. Owing to the scarcity of rains for the last three or four years especially in the district of Bellary, the ryots of almost all the villages are in need of sufficient supply of water both for men and cattle. Tanks and Vakkaraïs are to be constructed in various places to store up the rain water in the rainy season so that it may be used during the remaining portion of the year. The inhabitants of certain villages are forced to vacate their villages and settle in some other villages for a portion of the year for want of water. So I request the hon. Member in charge of the Local Self-Government Department to see that sufficient funds are given to get the villages sufficient supply of water."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Mr. Deputy President, the orthodoxy referred to in the motion at one time puzzled me. But the hon. Mover has made it clear that it is not the orthodoxy in regard to the profession but in regard to the views about caste. The hon. Member contends that when orthodox men, men who have strict ideas about caste, are appointed they will not care to visit the cheris. He has referred to dereliction of duties on the part of health inspectors. It has not come to the notice of the Government that there has been any dereliction of duty in the direction in which the hon. Mover accuses the health staff. In any case, Sir, the health staff is working under the direction of District Health Officers and the Director of Public Health. These officers are expected to exercise sufficient control and supervision over the health staff and to see that the staff visits these places and does its work properly. So long as the staff does its work, it does not matter to the Government whether the staff is orthodox or heterodox. Sir, regarding the second point raised in the debate, namely, allotting funds to be placed at the disposal of the department, I must say that that department is not a department to execute works. There is the Public Works Department. There is the Engineering staff under the local bodies and there is the Labour department. It is indeed the duty of these departments to carry out the execution of water-supply schemes such as well-sinking, etc. I do not think, Sir, that the Health department can take up the work of executing these works. I oppose the motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"I beg to move.

'that the allotment of Rs. 5,87,700 for Establishment—Mufassal, be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I want to say only a few words. These health officers do not visit the cheris at all. They simply come, make enquiries, ask the talaiyaris and go. The system should be so modified as to insist on these people visiting the cheris. Therein lies the whole thing. Many of these people do not go to see personally what is going on there. It is with that object I have brought in this motion. I hope the Government will see that those who are interested in the work are made to do this work and will also insist upon their visiting these cheris."

3-16 p.m. * The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I have only to reply to the statement made by my hon. Friend representing the depressed classes that the health staff has been discharging their duties satisfactorily towards the health of the cheris and the people living there. As a matter of fact, in the report submitted by the Director of Public Health, it was stated that the health staff has been discharging its duty well. It is true that the condition of some cheris is not satisfactory. But improvement in this direction can only be a matter of time. Progress can but be slow. If in case the Government are in a position to finance all schemes of improvement at once, progress can be more marked. But there are limitations to their financial capacity. I trust my hon. Friend will not press his motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I move.

'that the allotment of Rs. 4,300 for Town-Planning—Pay of establishments, be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object is to draw attention to the superficial manner in which town-planning schemes are prepared. In South Kanara, we have got the town of Mangalore and a number of other smaller towns which are not municipal towns, and in none of these towns is there any idea of developing schemes of town-planning, though the population is increasing very rapidly and houses are springing up like mushrooms everywhere without any provision for properly laid roads, without elbow room to move about and without any building regulations. So far as the building regulations are concerned, I was told they were being considered and they were being issued, and it is three years since, and nothing has come out. I have been myself personally carrying on some agitation in this direction of town-planning. Most of the members of the municipality who are elected members are afraid of moving this subject, because in a town-planning scheme, on account of exactions and recoveries of incremental values from owners of lands, it is feared that the burden will fall ultimately on the rate-payers and no municipal councillor would dare to join with me to carry on the campaign of town-planning. I am myself making an earnest attempt at town-planning, but most of my friends are afraid to join the campaign. What they would like to do is to make a road here and there, and leave everything to the municipality. But it is only touching the fringe of the problem of town-planning and improvement of the whole town. Because, by making small improvements here and there with a little money, instead of acquiring lands and making proper roads, there will be no real improvement, and it will take years to do anything or it will never be done. Government should, I think, amend the Act to see that town-planning is carried out much more earnestly by municipalities and by local boards in rising towns. Unless this is done, our towns will spring up in a very haphazard manner, and it will be too late to make improvements, because what is called improvement of a town means a very expensive affair. If town-planning is adopted and towns are built on those lines, such a large expenditure on improvements will not be necessary and later improvements will be easy and less costly. We have got the lesson of Bombay in the matter of improvement schemes. Instead of spending a few thousands in town-planning in olden days, they are now spending lakhs and crores of rupees without success.

"Now, one of the difficulties found in the Town Planning Act is that it does not apply to undeveloped places. The Town Planning Act says that it would apply to an undeveloped area if it can be connected with developed areas. If there are outlying places in the City of Madras which are undeveloped, like those portions adjoining Mylapore and Adyar, the Act could apply. In other places, only improvements can be introduced just like those under the Bombay Improvement Act, to which the Town Planning Act would not apply. If the municipalities do not look ahead and take time by the forelock, and if they now neglect town-planning when the towns are rising, I think it will cost them crores of rupees later on to make improvements and to set matters right when it is too late. These improvements become necessary only when we have not paid sufficient attention to town-planning in due time. Now, we have got a scheme of extending or widening the Broadway. It is a narrow way and it deserves to be called a narrow way, and if you want to broaden it, fancy what it will cost, perhaps a crore of rupees. If the Madras Municipality had been careful about a hundred years ago and adopted town-planning, as they have done in Pondicherry, they would have saved several crores of rupees. Bombay is an example where crores have been spent and where extraordinary taxes are levied on the people to meet the cost of improvements. Instead of acquiring lands in olden days at perhaps Rs. 10 per square yard, they have now to pay Rs. 1,000 or even Rs. 2,000 for a square yard. This is all owing to the careless way of developing a town. Now, they want to extend the land by reclamation from the sea and they said it would cost Rs. 7 crores. An eminent officer of this Government to whom I boasted of our Bombay town-planning scheme, and who is not here now, told me that the Bombay scheme would run up to Rs. 14 crores, and his prediction is fulfilled. So if you do not take time by the forelock and prepare schemes on wise town-planning models and do things carefully now, it will cost our municipalities, including the Madras Municipality, many crores of rupees to mend matters by improvement schemes. I therefore appeal to the hon. the Minister to devote much more careful attention than is done now to this point, and insist on the municipalities and unions which are rising into towns to adopt well-considered town-planning methods. The municipalities should take a lesson from what happened in Bombay. I therefore hope that an earnest attempt will be made to adopt town-planning in rising towns and in making improvements to old towns."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, the narrow lanes without elbow room referred to by the hon. Member from South Kanara happen to be the lanes of the old town. The present Municipal Council or the Government cannot be held responsible for those places. I do not think that the hon. the Mover seriously means that the schemes prepared under the direction of the Director of Town Planning have been planned without any consideration for the future. For most of the schemes have been prepared after due consideration, after personal inspection of the places and after careful examination of the views recorded by previous town-planning experts. There has been no complaint from any quarter as to the objectionable nature of the schemes prepared under the direction of the Director of Town Planning. He takes care to see that the plans prepared admit of future development, and he is insisting on municipalities paying attention to the future improvement of the town. I confess I do not follow what really the hon. the Mover's attack is. As I said, if the attack is against the lanes, which happened to exist for centuries, if a Broadway happens to be a narrow way, the present Town Planning department cannot be taken to task."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I regret my point was not understood. I think I made myself not clear though in a short speech. I did not blame the Town-Planning Department for any schemes prepared. I admit they are all right but they do not go far. My attack was against the narrow ways of the old people. What I wish to impress is that we should not allow things now to drift, so that difficulty will be felt in the future. I therefore warn Government, municipalities and townspeople against this policy of drift and neglect of making proper schemes at this stage. When I told my friends, municipal councillors, they hint like this:—'it will go against my grain to touch town-planning. Because you are not a municipal councillor you can be doing it. If I preach it, it will cost my seat.' If they want town-planning they will point to that part of the town lying outside the municipal limits or an altogether open maidan. Therefore, though I am not going to attack anybody, I say that such a policy will mean that the whole town-planning will be useless and worse than useless. The Act will be one without anything being done under it. Therefore what I say is this: that as this Council and the Government would not be afraid of anything to carry out such schemes, they should take matters well in hand, and insist upon municipalities to submit proper town-planning schemes for their approval and to carry them out.

"At present there is no provision in the Act to make it obligatory on the part of a municipality to carry out such objects. If Government insist that they must submit the scheme and bring pressure to bear on them, then they will do it. There is no pressure now, and though the Ministers go round and make tours, they do not tell them to attend to these things. I attach very much importance to this. It is not a party affair, it is not a question of neglect on the part of the Ministry; it is a matter for future action. So I press my motion, and it should not be considered as a reflection on anybody."

p.m.

The motion was put and lost.

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 21,28,900 for water-supply and drainage be reduced by Rs. 1,00,000.'

"Sir, at the outset, I would say that I do not intend to cut one lakh of rupees from this allotment, but I wanted it only to be a token motion for two reasons. Firstly because I do not like to stand in the way of other schemes being supplied with sufficient funds, and secondly because I believe in the maxim that discretion is the better part of valour. Even if I am to press it now, I am not going to succeed. (Voices: 'Why?') Therefore, I appeal to the hon. the Minister with regard to the necessity of considering this Gudur water-supply scheme. This scheme has been pending for a very long time. As I have already stated in this House, this place is at the junction of two railways. It is a very important centre, and further the headquarters of the Sub-Collector's division. Also there is a flourishing high school there. It has a population of more than 9,000 and it has got ample facilities for development. But for this scarcity of water-supply for drinking purposes, the town would have been in a flourishing condition by this time. I want to urge on the Government the necessity of considering this question with greater sympathy, providing for this, if not during the current year, at least during the year after the next. At the same time, I will also remind the Government that this is not a new scheme to be thought of. It has been under consideration for a very long time past. A sum of Rs. 30,000 has already been spent on it for constructing wells, and the work has been abandoned then and there. The reason for abandoning it is not explained, and the question of water-supply has not been solved at all. In the present year's budget, as many as eleven schemes have been provided for, but Gudur does not find a place at all. I am sure the hon. the Chief Minister has personal knowledge of this town, and I appeal to him to take some personal interest in the matter and relieve the residents of the town from this great calamity."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Mr. Deputy President, the cost of the work is estimated at Rs. 1,40,000, and works valued at Rs. 23,000 have already been executed. The portion of the work already executed consists of sinking of suction wells which forms part of the scheme. There yet remains work estimated at Rs. 1,17,000 to be executed. The financial position of the Gudur Union does not seem to be favourable for financing the entire scheme. Recently, the President of the District Board addressed the Government that in the matter of this water-supply scheme the Government should depart from the usual practice of giving 50 per cent by way of grant and 50 per cent by way of loan and give two-thirds grant. He requested that the District Board Engineer should be allowed to execute the work, and that the repayment of the loan should be extended over a period of thirty years instead of twenty years. So far as the second of these requests is concerned, namely, that the District Board Engineer should be allowed to carry out the work, there can be no objection as the Public Works Department has agreed to allow him to carry out the work, and it is proposed to inform the President of the District Board to this effect. As regards the request for giving two-thirds grant and for the extension of time for the repayment of the loan to thirty years, there seems to be no reason why the usual practice should be departed from. It is said that Gudur is a junction station for Tirupati. There are other junction stations too, such as Pakala, Renigunta and Katpadi. If by being a junction station Gudur can claim two-thirds of the cost of the scheme by way of grant, any other junction station can also claim the concession."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" On a point of personal explanation, Sir. It is not a question of junction alone that is most important; that is cited only by the way; but the difficulties that are being experienced by the Gudur public are the most important matter to be considered."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" So do the people of many other stations suffer for want of water. I do not see why any departure should be made in the case of Gudur."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" I withdraw my motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI :—" I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 21,74,500 for grants for public health purposes be reduced by Rs. 1.'

" Sir, I do not think any lengthy speechifying is necessary to impress on the hon. the Minister about the importance and the necessity of improvement in respect of rural water-supply. In tabling this motion I wanted to know two points: firstly, whether there is any likelihood of the time fixed for the current year's grants being extended, and, secondly, why in the budget of next year no provision is made for such an important scheme as the improvement of rural water-supply. With regard to the first point, as most of the Members of the House are aware, the grant was made very late in the year, and there was also a condition laid by Government that the taluk board or any other local body should contribute more or less an amount equal to the grant by the Government; and before the local boards could retrench other items of expenditure and provide for this item which was considered by them to be very necessary, the wet season commenced, and no body would think of sinking wells between October and February. If my memory serves me right, this grant was made only in the month of September or so; and for the local boards to be told that these grants would lapse if these works are not finished before March is more or less tantamount to saying 'we do not make any grants for this year'. I would therefore request that the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government will see his way to extend the time for the current year's grant being spent fully.

" The second point is why there has been no provision made in the next year's budget for this important scheme. I do not think, as I have already stated in my speech during the general discussion of the budget, I can congratulate the Finance Member or the Members of the Finance Committee on the schemes approved of by them for expenditure from Provincial funds. They have provided for items which can well afford to wait. They have provided for court-houses in some places, Judges' residences in some places, quarters for the establishment of a district munsif's court and so on. I suppose these can take their own time, and even if they are considered necessary they can certainly wait, and preference should have been given to this scheme of improvement of rural water-supply. I am glad my hon. Friend from Chingleput, Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar, realized the importance of this scheme and waited on His Excellency with a large number of Members, but I do not know what has become of the deputation. I am yet to hear from him or any other Member of the deputation."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" I am afraid, Sir, my hon. Friend from South Arcot is under a misapprehension. I have already stated during the general discussion on the budget that after the ordinary demands are voted, I would move a further demand for grant for the schemes of village communications and village water-supply. During the current year the grant was made, rather late in the year, but the anxiety shown by those who are interested in Local Self-Government was so great that I thought that the whole amount would be spent during the rest of the year. But what is the result? Till now it does not appear that local boards have spent more than Rs. 30,000 or Rs. 40,000. That speaks volumes. The hon. Member has taken my hon. Colleague the Finance Member to task for not providing funds for these schemes. I cannot understand why he should do so."

p.m.

(Voices :—" He did not give any assurance.")

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" I did give the assurance at the time of the general debate. We do propose to move for supplementary grants for water-supply schemes and for making village roads."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 24,100 for compilation of vital statistics—clerical establishments be reduced by Rs. 100.'

" It is only for the purpose of drawing my hon. Friend's attention to the perfunctory, unsatisfactory, and, if I may be permitted to use a very strong word, the scandalously unsatisfactory way (laughter) in which these vital statistics are collected and recorded. After all, the collection of these vital statistics is a very important matter. On the percentage of the births and deaths that are recorded in it are based some important conclusions and upon these conclusions are built some important schemes. So if the foundation on which these conclusions are arrived at is very unsound and if we build our schemes on these conclusions, practically nothing will come out of these schemes. Not only this: it will lead to very dangerous results. After all the money that is spent is spent for the improvement of the health and the sanitary condition of the people. Now let us see the nature of the vital statistics that are collected.

"Sir, I am basing my arguments and statements on the report of the Retrenchment Committee. They state that in very many cases 32 to 93 per cent of these births are not recorded. Not 1, 2, 3 but from 32 to 93 per cent of these births are not recorded and very often more than 50 per cent are omitted. These statements are startling. I wish to read from page 151 of volume I of the Retrenchment Committee's Report. They state:

'From the report of the Director and the figures furnished by him it is clear that not only is the registration of births and deaths perfunctory, misleading and inaccurate but that it is not possible to draw reliable and accurate conclusions from figures which have but a small relation to the facts. In a memorandum on vital statistics prepared by the Director in October 1922, the result of the investigation of vital statistics is set forth. The investigation showed that the omission or the failure to register births varied from 30 to 93 per cent and that in the majority of cases it exceeded 50 per cent. A perusal of these indicates the inaccuracy and unreliability of the figures on which the deductions of the Public Health Department depend.'

"I wish to draw the attention of the hon. the Chief Minister to these remarks so that he may sit upon this department (laughter) and make it do its work. I am sure if he does it everything will be set right in the course of six months, in any case before the budget is presented for the next financial year. I felt that I had only to draw his attention to this and then he would immediately apply his mind to this."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I do not contend that the vital statistics which are prepared at present are accurate. In a country like India, it is difficult to prepare accurate statistics. Government have been trying their best and taking steps to improve the mode of recording vital statistics. Recently they have arranged with the Revenue Department to allow the Public Health officers to peruse the records prepared by the village officers so that the former may make their suggestions to the District Collectors. The Government have introduced the system of compulsory registration. They have also effected improvement in the subordinate agency of registration. We have to wait and see whether these new rules will not give better results."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I wish to bring to the notice of the hon. the Chief Minister one particular circumstance which seriously affects the health of the people in towns on the West Coast. The hon. Minister is aware of the complicated land problem in Malabar. The Adi-Dravida people unfortunately do not hold any lands there. What happens is this: soon after a death takes place in an Adi-Dravida household he stealthily takes away the corpse without giving any information to the local board or the municipality concerned, and buries the dead body near the sea-shore with the result that in the early morning if you walk along the sea-shore you can see the jackals and dogs eating the legs and hands of the dead body. This is what is actually happening on the West Coast, and if we cannot make proper arrangements in municipalities like Calicut, Cannanore and Tellicherry for the burial of the dead bodies of the depressed classes, the health of the city will be dangerously affected."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I cannot understand the relevancy of this question to the collection of vital statistics."

24th March 1926]

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—"I suppose the hon. Member did not hear the remark."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I am speaking of what is actually happening. As soon as a man dies the next step is to bury him."

"Sir, I think we must have proper arrangements made to find out how many are the persons whose dead bodies have been removed stealthily and buried on the seashore by the Adi-Dravidas. I think that the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government will take some interest in the health of those people who live in municipal towns or at least in municipal areas and will provide a more liberal grant for finding a burial-ground for the Adi-Dravidas."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"May I say a few words?"

* The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—"No."

Then Demand XXI—that Government be granted a sum of 33.28 lakhs for Public Health and Vital Statistics—was put and carried and the grant was made.

DEMAND XXII—AGRICULTURE.

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move
'for a grant not exceeding 15.66 lakhs under Agriculture.'"

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I beg to move
'that the allotment of Rs. 49,100 for Direction be reduced by Rs. 101.'"

"I move this motion with a view to request the Government to investigate into the causes of reduction in the number of cultivating landowners and increase in the number of non-cultivating landowners and cultivating tenants and suggest measures for improving the economic conditions of agriculturists in the Ceded districts."

"Sir, I wish first of all to point out to the House that the number of people who are depending on agriculture has increased considerably during the last thirty years. According to the Census Report prepared in 1921, those who were supported by land including workers and dependants were 300 lakhs of people out of a population of 428 lakhs in the Presidency. In other words out of every 10,000 people of the province as many as 7,025 were supported by agriculture. Let us compare this number with the corresponding figures of the previous two decades. In 1901 it was 6,831 for every 10,000, while in 1911 the number increased to 6,818 and the present figure, as I have said, is 7,025. If you take the whole agricultural population, that is, the actual workers as well as dependants you will find that out of every 1,000 persons supported by agriculture there were in 1901, 30 people who were non-cultivating landowners. That number rose to 34 in 1911 and to 56 in 1921. Similarly the number of non-cultivating tenants who were only 2 for every 1,000 in 1901 rose to 6 in 1911 and to 32 in 1921. On the other hand the number of cultivating landowners has showed a steady decline. It was 512 in 1901, and then it fell down to 461 in 1911 and 398 in 1921."

[Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar] [24th March 1926]

"Let us take again the number of people who were actual workers connected with agriculture. Out of every 1,000 such people, the number of noncultivating land-owners was 19 in 1901. That number rose up to 23 in 1911 and to 49 in 1921. As regards non-cultivating tenants there was one for every 1,000 in 1,901 which rose to 4 in 1911 and to 28 in 1921. The cultivating land-owners again, as I have already remarked, have shown a consistent decline. It was 484 in 1901, 426 in 1911 and 381 in 1921.

"Now it behoves the Government to pause and consider why it is that the number of people dependent on agriculture has increased considerably during the last thirty years and at the same time the number of people who actually own land has shown a steady decline while those who have parted with their lands and undertaken to remain as tenants has shown an increase.

p.m. "In other words the Government should have put to themselves the question which the Superintendent of Census Operations for 1921 has done and asked themselves, 'Does this mean that land-owning farmers are forced to relinquish their lands to the non-cultivating money-lenders under whom they are content to remain as tenants as is indicated by the figures?' But alas, the Government seem to have taken no notice of this matter. While this is so for the whole province the matter is still worse so far as the Ceded Districts are concerned. The proportion of population depending on agriculture there, is much larger than that which obtains for the whole Presidency. It was 719 per thousand in 1911 and rose to 746 per thousand in 1921. Similarly the number of people that have parted with their lands has shown an increase. I ask the Government to find out why this unfortunate condition prevails in these districts. Again, Sir, I would refer to the records of the Government to show the miserable condition of these districts economically. Speaking about the distribution and movement of the population the Superintendent of Census, 1921, says with reference to the Ceded districts:—

'Situating in the middle of the peninsula where it gets the full benefit of neither monsoon, this division must always have a struggle to maintain its population. The prosperity of all these districts is immediately affected by even a comparatively small shortage of rainfall, while Bellary and Anantapur especially are seldom free, if not from the reality at least from the haunting apprehension of famine, and from the epidemics which come in famine's train. During the past decade these districts have all lost in population and Bellary especially has been very badly hit. The epidemic of influenza took great toll in these districts than in other parts of the Presidency, and in addition to the abnormal mortality from this cause Bellary and Anantapur were at the end of the decade visited by famine.' (P. 7).

"In another place the same report says that six taluks of Bellary are conspicuous for a great fall in population ranging from 10.2 per cent in Alur to 17.3 per cent in Siruguppa. It is true, Sir, that deficiency of rainfall and lack of irrigation facilities account to a certain extent for the sad plight of these people. But are Government free from responsibility in this matter? I urged upon the hon. Member for Irrigation to provide better facilities for irrigation. Surely the hon. the Minister for Development cannot absolve himself altogether from the responsibility for this state of affairs. I should like to know from him what he has done to tackle this question of constant deterioration of land. As remarked by Sir James Caird, in India 'crop follows crop without intermission so that Indian agriculture becomes a process of exhaustion.' Land certainly does not yield that amount of outturn which the Government have assumed to be the case for the purpose of their assessment. I shall come to that in a minute. According to the old settlement reports—if the Government have taken the trouble to inform themselves of these matters —land bearing an assessment of Rs. 2-8-0 per acre is expected to yield 340 Madras measures or 510 local measures of cholam. Lands bearing an assessment of Rs. 2, 1-8-0 and Re. 1, respectively, are expected to yield 420, 360 and 300 local measures of cholam, respectively. But if you ask practical cultivators you will be struck by the unanimity of opinion of these people that these estimates are an exaggeration. Of course when people say so, it is natural for the Government to turn round and say that they are interested people and that they could not be relied upon. I do not want to base my statement merely on the practical experience of the cultivators, but I would like to ask the Government to turn their attention to their reports from which it will be conclusively seen that the actual outturn of these fields is certainly 33 per cent less than that estimated to be the case in their settlement reports. There is no denying the fact that land is giving less than it did before. What has the Agricultural department done all these years to arrest this continual decrease in outturn? If it is due to deficiency of manure what steps have the Government taken to provide manure on easy terms to the ryots? Is it on account of some defect in the methods of cultivation? If so, what have the Government done to see that there is a proper rotation of crops and that the seeds are of high quality? If the remedies have been found, what have the Government done to bring the knowledge of them to the people by increasing the number of demonstrators for teaching the people from taluk to taluk and firka to firka? If an economic investigation is carried on, it will be found how people really stand, what their indebtedness was thirty years ago, what their property was thirty years ago, how many acres they own now, why they borrowed money and whether they were put to a great disadvantage by borrowing. They should consider how far borrowing was avoidable and how far not. If they go into the question thoroughly they will be struck by the gravity of the situation and compelled to find out a remedy. The hon. Ministers have had six precious years to tackle this problem and I should like to know how they have utilized their opportunity to examine the question that I have presented to the House."

*The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, my hon. Friend and myself come from a department where we have always been accustomed to swear by statistics. I am glad that this subject has come just after our discussion on Vital statistics; for we are full with the idea that there is something wrong with statistics and the sooner it is rectified the better. Since hearing this and even before hearing this, I have been looking into the question of statistics. In addition to all the arguments put forward by my hon. Friend I may bring to your notice and the notice of the House certain figures which will go to show how far the reliance that we place upon the statistics is bound to receive a severe shock. As it has been said by my hon. Friend Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar that Agriculture has suffered I looked into the statistics for 1911 and compared them with the statistics for 1921. It is seen that the percentage employed on Industries has gone down from 15 to 11 whereas Agriculture has gone up by one per cent. If we descend into minor particulars such as the classification of people according to castes we will find this. During the period 1911 to 1921 it is shown that the Devangas decreased from 736 to 540, the Kaikolas decreased from 538 to 480 and the Saliyas decreased from 636 to 471. I wondered what became of the difference in all these castes. When I examined further I found that in 1921 the Scurashtras account for 700 people. This community was not classified as a separate community in the preceding years and they have been separately classified in 1921. If you add the Devangas, the Kaikolas, the Saliyas and the Sourashtras for 1921 you will find that their number is a little more or less than the corresponding number for 1911. Coming to another point, you will see that our rural population is thoroughly unlettered. If a person goes to a village with a census schedule and asks a villager, 'In what class shall I put you in?' and the man happens to be an agriculturist owning a small plot of land or cultivating it for another, and at the same time he happens to be driving the motor-car for his master or doing some other work besides, it puzzles him in what class he should classify himself."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Under motor drivers obviously. "

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" In the census of 1911 he might have classified himself as an agriculturist; in the census of 1921 he might have classified himself as a motor driver, seeing, as our hon. Friend puts it, that the motor-cars have come into prominence. Going deeply into the figures you will find all sorts of complications. Under the circumstances, it is not for a lay department like that of Agriculture to go into the question. We must have an economic enquiry conducted into the matter so that we may have all the statistics that are available and draw correct conclusions. Really what my hon. Friend calls an agricultural question is an economical question. Another question which the hon. Member asked was, what I have done or what the Ministry has done during the last six years for the improvement of agriculture. If the hon. Member only takes the trouble to see the several administration reports that are issued by the department from time to time various items of information will be found which will demonstrate conclusively the importance of the improvements effected by the Development Department. For instance, take the case of paddy. It has been demonstrated at the Aduthurai farm that by sowing a new strain of paddy the production will be increased by about 16 per cent. On a rough calculation this will be adding an extra quantity of food worth Rs. 2 crores. If the population is stationary or if it only keeps pace with the increase of food there would be no difficulty at all. On the other hand, as we all know, the population increases in geometric progression whereas the quantity of food increases only in arithmetical progression."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Not in Ceded districts. There the population is going down."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" I take the Presidency as a whole. Therefore what I say now is that we cannot place such implicit reliance upon the figures. If you wish to go into the question deeply what we ought to do will be to take statistics if they are easily reconcilable, and if they are not reconcilable to go into the question and find out the real cause. Incidentally he said that the land was deteriorating and he asked me to say what I had done to improve the fertility of the soil. We have been suggesting to the ryots the use of green manure, the use of oil cake. Now we have found out that there are in three or four villages in the Trichinopoly district phosphatic nodules which will suffice for fertilising the whole of the Madras Presidency for years together."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Are they available in other districts? "

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" The survey of the whole Presidency goes to show that there are phosphatic nodules in three or four villages on the road from Lalgudi to Ootatur. There are besides gypsum deposits which will be useful for other purposes."

" As regards the demonstrators, we have, within the limited funds placed at our disposal, been able to supply as many demonstrators as possible. Fortunately, with reference to a question put by my hon. Friend I had to say that Bellary had been more favourably treated than any other district; there are three demonstrators and two assistant demonstrators in Bellary though there are other districts which want more badly the services of these people. But as our friend has been insisting upon it from time to time, we have been obliged to show some partiality to the Bellary district."

" He wished also to know why people had gone down in the matter of affluence. One of the causes is that they go on incessantly subdividing holdings. If a father had two acres of land in one generation, in the third generation it dwindles down to 20 or 30 cents. What can a ryot do with such a small holding of a few cents? He cannot apply improved methods of cultivation. He has to stick to the old method of cultivation by country ploughs, which will only scratch the soil but will not go deep into it. Another reason—if there is a decrease at all in the number of agriculturists—is, because many earning classes such as lawyers, doctors and retired public servants have superfluous wealth and they go in for lands whatever the price may be. I may bring to the notice of the House that the people of Melapalsiyam of the Tinnevely district which is inhabited by the Lubbai class go to Penang, Singapore and such other places and come back with huge sums of money. They do not know what they can do with the money. They go in for land whatever the price may be. Of course, I take it that all the remarks made by my hon. Friend Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar are more or less suggestions for future improvement and I take them in that light and shall try what is possible in those circumstances."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I thank the hon. the Minister for Development for the tone he has adopted in reply to my motion. He referred to the fact that he and I once upon a time belonged to a particular department and came from that department and that I should know what value I should attach to the statistics of the Government. I shall assure him at once that I agree with him. But the statistics are more on the side of the Government than on the side of the ryot. When that is so, I fail to see how he can adduce that argument to controvert my proposition."

" I shall now refer to the question of profits. It is not very long ago that he retired from service. We know who selects the field for experiment. It is the revenue inspector. He has to take into account the convenience of the Divisional Officer who will not be inclined to move much. The land must be very near the village. It must be a fertile land with good yield. Otherwise, the revenue inspector will be hauled up for selecting a land which was not typical. You may take it from me that the lands are selected with a view to show rather an excessive outturn than a deficient outturn. When such selections are made, the results would naturally be good. It is not correct to base any argument on that fact. I hope the hon. the Minister would not advance that argument again.

"Sir, it is true that we are suffering from lack of rainfall. But are there not countries in the world where rainfall is as low as it is in our districts? In those countries do the Government do nothing at all to raise crops suited to the soil and to the rains obtainable there? If my information is correct, there are countries where rainfall is deficient as it is in my district; but the Government there manage to have recourse to improved methods of cultivation adopted to the soil. I am not very much conversant with them. They take measures to combat the climatic conditions and to see that the ryots do not suffer more than they need. What measures have the Government here taken? My point is this. I do not want the hon. the Minister or anybody else to go through books and quote statistics and figures. Let them appoint a few peoplet—their own departmental heads. Let them go into the question. Let them be asked to examine one taluk or one district and see whether people are going down in prosperity. The hon. the Minister referred to very good yields. It is all very well to talk here without putting our opinions to the test. What is it that I have been asking? The hon. the Minister mentioned that a committee might be very well appointed to go into this question. I shall be content if he appoints two or three people. I do not want a big committee which will simply go round and do nothing. Let them be his own departmental heads who will go into the question and come to a deliberate and dispassionate judgment of the whole question.

"I have already referred to the question of funds. When speaking on the budget I said that the hon. the Minister had allowed lakhs and lakhs of rupees to lapse every year. I do not know what amount is going to lapse this year. You do not give relief to the people from whom you collect money. What is the good? I will give one simple instance how money is not spent properly. The Government imported a Millet Expert to develop millet-growing in districts like ours. They must have employed him in the tracts where millet had to be improved and where millet was growing on a large scale. They put him in Coimbatore and wanted him to grow our millet there. What is the result? It seems millet grows but there is no ear of corn. This has been going on for the last three years. The Government are spending money in that way. I requested the hon. the Minister to send that gentleman who was intended to develop the millet of our districts to make experiments on our soil. The Government still persist in keeping him in Coimbatore. Perhaps he may not have so many conveniences elsewhere and he has good society in Coimbatore. I have no doubt that from the point of view of the ryot you are wasting money on experiments like that in places where they need not be continued.

"As regards other things I do not want to anticipate what the hon. the Minister has to say. If he would be so good as to really carry on some investigation in this matter and do whatever is then found possible I shall be more than satisfied."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"Mr. Deputy President, in the matter of selecting fields for conducting experiments and finding out the outturn of crops it is now the Agricultural Department that does it. Formerly, the same work was done by the Revenue Department. I should say in fairness to myself that the selection was not made by the revenue inspector for me. I selected the field and had the experiment carried on. It may be that the hon. Member's experience might be different. But so far as I am concerned I can say with a feeling of certainty and with a feeling of pride in this Council that it was I that selected the field and carried on the experiment."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I was not referring to any one person. I was referring to the practice which is generally followed and I, as a Divisional Officer, had no need to select the fields. Some time earlier, the Government had done away with that system. Therefore, the hon. the Minister need not contrast his work with mine."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"It was only the other day that my hon. Friend asked me to visit the Bellary district and I went with him and his own knowledge of what took place there would point out to him what extreme care I was taking in getting at the facts so far as the sugarcane and other crops were concerned. We went over to fields at long distances in order to find out for ourselves why a particular field put on a green appearance and another field, a pale appearance, and it must be within his memory that these facts were elicited in order that some improvement might be effected. As regards demonstrators, what he suggests is what we are now following and it must be within his experience."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"May I know what is the reason for allowing the Millet Expert to remain at Coimbatore?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"Coimbatore and Salem form an important millet tract and he is stationed at Coimbatore so that he may start the work on the crops in the lands near the Coimbatore Farm. Millets grown in the Ceded districts are also studied. Work in the Ceded districts will be undertaken next year if possible."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"The hon. Member from Bellary stated that the Millet Expert was not doing anything useful at Coimbatore and the experiment conducted by him was not so successful as it was expected. It would be better to transfer him to a place where millet is being grown such as Ceded districts. I should like that some light should be thrown on that matter."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR. :—"Sir, it seems to me from what has been stated by my hon. Friend, Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar, that the department is not doing justice to itself and to the people in keeping the Millet Expert in Coimbatore particularly at a time when his services can be usefully employed elsewhere. The hon. the Development Minister will see the desirability of transferring him to a place, say, in the Ceded districts where he can render really useful service to himself, to the department and to the ryots instead of keeping him for scientific experiments at a place where he cannot do very much for the people at large."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"It is as a result of the scientific experiments that we have been enabled to march so long and so well; and those scientific researches are carried on at Coimbatore though it is not now possible to say whether the millets of Ceded

p.m.

[Sir. T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai] [24th March 1926]

districts could be studied completely in Coimbatore. As a result of a discussion with the hon. Member from Bellary the Government have decided to open a station in the Ceded districts in 1927-28. The expert is doing good work at Coimbatore at present."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I merely wish to add, Sir, that there is a proposal to post an assistant to the Bellary district by July 1926. He will prepare the ground for the station to be opened in 1927-28."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"I should like to know, Sir, whether he has done anything at Coimbatore, or in other words whether he has succeeded in doing anything."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Experiments have been carried on, Sir; but though we cannot say that they have been a success, I do not think it is yet time to say that they have not been successful."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"Then, what is the use of posting him to Bellary or anywhere?"

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I think, Sir, that the further information furnished by the Secretary for the Development Department makes the position easier. Of course the expert is meant for improving the millet of my districts. (At this stage Khan Bahadur Haji Abdulla Haji Qasim Sahib Bahadur took the chair.) I think experiments conducted there might easily be applied to areas in other districts, where conditions are more or less similar. As regards the complaint of the hon. the Minister for Development, that I have ignored his visit to my district he has only anticipated me; because when I came to those resolutions, I should have said what my hon. Friend has already said."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Sir, I formally move
'for the reduction of the allotment of Rs 6,500 for Pay of establishments by Rs. 101.'

"Sir, we have got some agricultural stations, but they are all located in black cotton soil. A good portion of the land in some districts consists of red soil and I think those soils have till now not received the attention they are entitled to. I do not know if the information furnished by the hon. the Secretary for the Development Department is meant to convey the idea that an agricultural station in the red soil tract is going to be opened. I am not sure if he meant to convey that opinion."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"A millet station."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I request the hon. the Minister to consider the possibility of opening an agricultural station for red soil, for there is at present none of that sort, Sir. A good portion of the districts consists of that soil and that also needs to be improved."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"I am at one with the Mover in considering the necessity for locating a farm there for the red soil in the Bellary district. But the principal difficulty has always been want of funds and greater need in other districts. For the present, we have got under one paddy farm in the Tanjore district, one in the Coimbatore district, and under cotton, we have got some other places, and there is already one farm at Hagari. (A voice: 'Black cotton.') So, I am sorry that considering the needs of other districts, if I give preferential treatment to Bellary, I would be accused of being partial to one of the districts at the expense of some others."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I am the last person, Sir, to claim any partial treatment. I only wish to say that help must be rendered as there is need for it. Here is a district which, as I have shown, has been suffering acutely for several years past. Unlike other districts in the Presidency, the population of this district has been going down. What is it due to? The hon. the Development Minister admits it is due to economic causes like the failure of seasons, diminished outturn and so on. It is but part of his duty therefore, Sir, to come to the help of a district like that. Where does the preferential treatment come in, especially when he does this for one who is standing opposite to him? Really, Sir, he is using an argument something which, with all due respect for him, I should say he should not have advanced. There is no question of partiality in this matter. The district is suffering and there is acute need for help; and after all, Government must help a district which is really in need of it."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"I am sorry, Sir, that the word has been misunderstood, or rather I did not use a better word. I must tell him that this answer has been given to me by so many other Members of the Legislative Council, and they always tackle me with the question 'How is it you seem to be a little prone to carry out improvements to the Bellary district? If they ask for sugarcane, you go and see them; if they ask for millet you go and see them. It appears you are not able to see any other plot, because it would interfere with your work in that district and so on.' It was that idea running in my mind at the time which prompted me to use that language, which perhaps I should not have used."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Now, Sir, whatever my view may be of the arguments the hon. the Minister has advanced, I do not press my motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Sir, may I, with your permission, move

'for the reduction of the allotment of Rs. 3,45,000 for Demonstration by Rs. 101' with a view to have more demonstrators appointed for the Bellary district.

"Now, Sir, I should like first of all to tell the House whether or not the people of my district try to profit themselves by the advice given to them by these demonstrators. In this motion, I have not asked the Government to establish farms or laboratories or any such thing. I want only more demonstrators, and my reasons for that request are these: the people of my district are anxious to be guided by the advice of the agricultural demonstrators and to carry on agricultural operations under the guidance and in accordance with the directions of the demonstrators. What more do the Government expect of these people, Sir? The Government are willing to spend lakhs and lakhs of money in putting up huge buildings appointing costly Deputy Directors and farm managers, and what not, and carrying on experiments which end in nothing after years of labour; but they are not prepared to appoint more demonstrators when people are willing to place their lands practically free at the disposal of the Government and are willing to undertake all the labour necessary to carry on these experiments in accordance with the directions of the officers of the department. In such cases, if you are not prepared to come to the help of the people, I do not know what else a department is for. If I had the time, I think I can prepare a table of the demonstrators for each district and show what place my district occupies in it; but that is not my point. Here are people who are willing to take advantage of any advice that may be tendered to them by the Government. The Government must welcome such an offer and take advantage of it. It is in that view, Sir, that I have ventured to press this on the attention of the hon. the Minister for Development. I am sure, Sir, that he will not let himself be scared away by what others might have said to him half in joke and half in seriousness, and there is nothing behind what they have told him, I am sure."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"My Friend, Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar, is placing his district, Sir, in a way which will command the sympathy of the officers. Analysing the list of demonstrators that have been distributed to the several districts, I find that as I have already stated before Bellary has got three demonstrators and two assistant demonstrators. If we compare the figures of the other districts, I should say that Bellary has been very generously treated. No doubt, the existing number seems quite inadequate; but everywhere the people apply for demonstrators and the sort of help which my friend volunteers for the Bellary district is also volunteered by several other districts. For instance, it was only the other day that the people of Lalgudi in the Trichinopoly district were found to be very anxious to have a demonstrator or two and I gave them those two demonstrators. The chief difficulty has been both want of funds and want of trained men. As soon as they become available, we will be able to give more demonstrators to Bellary."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, I should like to know, since he has compared my district with others, another district which has suffered as my district and which is so bad as my district. Lalgudi that he speaks of, Tanjore, Madura, Coimbatore, all these districts need only be mentioned, Sir, to convince the House that there is no common point between these districts which are favourably situated and mine in the famine zone. The hon. the Minister is himself convinced of the difference to the people due to better methods of cultivation. When people take to single plant cultivation, for example, it gives a better outturn than when they persist in the old method. The hon. the Minister witnessed it with his own eyes and he was struck by the difference between a particular plot where there had been single transplantation of paddy and the other tracts where the old methods had been followed. He was convinced also that the demonstrators there were doing some useful work and that their work resulted in very great profit to the people. He would no doubt rejoice to see that these lessons are copied by all of them; but who is to go and give the lessons to those people? That is the point. If you would only give us a few more demonstrators, one for each taluk, it would be possible to go round and get hold of people who would lend their lands for these experimental purposes and thereby, Sir, the lessons which he is so anxious should be spread among the people would be spread. But I take it, Sir . . ."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"If funds and men are available, we will do it."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"You want men or only funds? If you want men, there are a number of people who are unemployed. I have got a list of them in my hands. I shall find the men, I shall myself advertise for them at my own cost and send the applications to the Government. What is the use of saying that there are no men when really there are many unemployed? I have got a list in my hands, of men who are in need of employment. So, the only argument is lack of funds. If men are not forthcoming . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"Are they trained men?"

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I think so; I think they are trained persons."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"We shall be glad to consider the question."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN:—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 500 for Public Exhibition and Fairs be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"It is my impression, Sir, that this sum was not spent as usefully as it ought to be. I think the Government have at present proposed to spend Rs. 500; and I may say that if only the purpose of such shows is served, the people will be ready for a provision of even Rs. 5,000, nay Rs. 50,000. The shows are intended to have an educative value. I think this year or year before last I saw a show in Madras and it was a disgraceful show. Here a dog, a fowl there, a sheep in another place, all were mixed up in a row. A game cock was put here, a dog was there, all badly arranged. The whole thing was so badly arranged as to have the least educative value. In other countries where people take great interest in shows, they really serve an educative purpose. There, various things are exhibited in an attractive manner. If our shows are to be conducted in the manner they used to be, I would rather suggest that we need not waste any more money on them. I should like to know from the hon. the Minister how this amount is proposed to be spent."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, out of this provision of Rs. 500, Government award medals costing about Rs. 60 for the best bull and the best cow at the Tiruppur cattle show. Rupees 200 was set apart for the poultry show at Ootacamund. It is for these two purposes that this amount is intended. The remainder is proposed to be utilized for unforeseen demands. As regards the suggestion that better shows and more shows must be held, I should like to draw the hon. Member's attention to this fact, that Government used to make a grant to the Ongole cattle show, but that the show ceased to be held since 1918. When the question of revival of the show came up for consideration in 1923, it was the opinion of the Advisory Committee that it was preferable not to hold the show and that at any rate it was not necessary that the Government should move in the matter, the predominant opinion being that there was more danger to the country than good, the danger being the apprehension of depletion of the best stock in the Ongole area. When the shows were regularly held they served to advertise the excellence of the breed and invited foreign customers from distant lands who took away the best animals. People therefore apprehended that this depleted the stock; and it was feared also that the Ongole breed would become extinct in a short while. Therefore this Government persuaded the Government of India to prohibit the export of cattle from this Presidency. That is the reason why more shows are not held."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—" Sir, I am sure that it would be of immense benefit to the country if more shows are held. But the way in which they are held is not satisfactory. I may just take the instance of the cattle farm at Hosur. We have in that case a very insufficient area for the purpose. I should think that an extent of 10,000 acres would be required to prove the useful working of the farm. Of course if we go on at the present rate the apprehension of drain of our stock is well-grounded. But my point is that we should produce as much as possible, and increase our stock not only of cattle but also of sheep. If we are not able to reproduce, the little that we have will surely be drained. If that is the excuse of the Government for not holding more shows than at present, I am afraid, Sir, I cannot appreciate it."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" I shall inform my hon. Friend that the Hosur farm contains 1,600 acres and we are rearing 1,000 head of cattle there and also some sheep in fairly large numbers."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—" May I know whether the sheep are for slaughter or for production of wool? Are they cross-bred?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Work is done with the object of trying to raise a pure bred flock and to improve the quality and quantity of wool."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

(At this stage, the hon. the Deputy President took the chair.)

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI :—" I move

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 1,40,500 for live-stock by Rs. 1.'

" Mr. Deputy President, in tabling this motion, I wanted to suggest that more breeding stations should be opened and that the standard of our live-stock should be maintained properly. The condition of the cattle of the mufassal parts is really pitiable and it is high time that the Government think of improving their condition and thereby help agriculture in a sure and positive way. It is the cattle and their manure that are very necessary for the improvement of agriculture. In this connexion, I want to know why this is treated as an agricultural subject; properly it should come under Veterinary. It is a pity that even in such headquarter institutions as the Veterinary Hospital at Cuddalore and in some of the other taluk stations there are no breeding bulls maintained by the Agricultural Department. I wish that they take up the matter earnestly and see that a sufficient number of breeding bulls are maintained."

[24th March 1926]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" The suggestion will be borne in mind. I must say that I fully sympathise with the hon. Member's object; but as usual the complaint is want of funds. At present we have got breeding stations at Chintaladevi, Guntur and Hosur. Chintaladevi was opened seven years ago exclusively for the Ongole breed, Guntur three years ago for the buffalo breed and Hosur for the Kangayam breed. There is also a lot of cross-breeding going on and this scheme will be the nucleus of future schemes for cattle breeding. As regards the suggestion that particular bulls may be stationed in veterinary institutions, I shall have the matter looked into."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—" Sir, I move

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 52,300 for Central Farm and College Estate by Rs. 100.'

" Sir, my object is to elicit information as to the work done in this farm and instruction given to the students in it. I understand, Sir, that the students who come to the institution are generally highly educated. This debars the class of population who are generally agriculturists. Such a high standard of education is not really necessary, for a mere capacity to understand even in vernacular, I should say, the instruction given in the farm on agricultural matters will be quite sufficient. I should therefore like to know from the hon. the Minister as to the sort of instruction that is given there and the work done in the farm."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" As for the fact that instruction is not given to less educated men, I should say at once that there are two other schools maintained for that purpose. This Central Farm is maintained for the instruction of people who have got the wish to rise higher in the scale, for agricultural graduates. As to what work is done in that farm, I will refer the hon. Member to the annual reports that are being published. If the hon. Member wants a copy, I shall lend him one. There is also a system of having monthly digests showing the monthly work issued by the Director of Agriculture which give all information as to the improvements made from time to time, especially during the month for which they are issued. The students of the college are taught how to cultivate all kinds of crops, dry crops, garden crops and wet crops. They are also taught how to manure fields, the principles of rotation, the implements that are to be used, how the ploughing is to be done, if satisfactory results are to be obtained, how sowing and weeding have to be attended to. Each student is made responsible for a particular plot. He is given a cultivation sheet, in which his observations are recorded from time to time and also the several improvements made. In fact the training given is a practical one to meet all kinds of difficulties later on in life when he goes out either as a servant of Government or to cultivate his own lands."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—" May I know whether any attempt has been made to introduce a poultry farm and a honey bee farm in this country?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" This question will come up before the Council with my answer to it, I hope, shortly."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[24th March 1926]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, I move to reduce the allotment of Rs. 25,500 for Agricultural Schools by Rs. 100."

" Sir, my only object in moving this motion is this, namely, to plead for the establishment of more agricultural schools. I believe there are only two agricultural schools in the Presidency, one at Taliparamba in Malabar and the other at Anakapalle. I have seen the work of one of these schools, the one in my district, and I am sure that it is doing very good work and I infer with regard to the other school also that the work turned out must be good. As these schools are doing very good work, I should ask my hon. Friend to open more schools of the kind; for two schools for the whole Presidency would practically be of little use."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, in supporting the request made by my hon. Friend from Malabar, I should like to draw attention to the necessity of including agriculture within the curriculum of studies for middle schools, especially in the villages. I may draw the attention of the House to the following sentences in the Madras Administration Report for 1924-25. They occur at page 102 :

" There are two agricultural middle schools, one at Taliparamba and one at Anakapalle. The primary object of these schools is to provide, for the sons of cultivators, a course of instruction in the principles of agriculture. The intention is that the persons trained shall return to cultivate the land, so that, eventually, methods of cultivation will improve. But, of the 38 persons who have passed out of these schools from the year 1922-23 onwards, only 10 are known to have returned to the land and 21 are known to be idle of whom 13 definitely hope to get employment under Government. The value of a practical training in improved methods of agriculture does not yet appear to be appreciated. But the Government have not considered that the comparative failure of these schools over the short period for which they have been working is a sufficient reason to discontinue the experiment. Unless facilities for this type of education are provided the public cannot be trained to take an interest in improved methods."

" I beg to point out that the experiments should not be discontinued. We must however find out what the defects in these schools are. I should also like to point out the necessity for the opening of one elementary school for each village. The children of the ryots who go to the schools at present get their head filled with new ideas which are not of much practical use and consequently they emigrate to towns like Bombay and other places. Their mind becomes filled with ideas alien to agriculture under the present conditions. As a result the parents are very much afraid of sending their children to these schools lest they should give up the agricultural profession. For these reasons, the boy should be given such education, as should make him to love the agricultural profession, to take an interest in it so that he may not leave his ancestral pursuits."

" In fact, the whole system of education in our rural schools deserves to be overhauled, and suited to the ancestral pursuits and traditional ideals of the people. But, a question may be asked, where are the teachers who are trained? Where are the men who can make demonstrations? Where are these men? Well, I may draw attention to the fact that Government have given up what is called the certificate classes in the Agricultural College. Now, these certificate classes were useful to such classes of people who need education in agriculture. These people who are trained in the certificate classes receive sufficient education for demonstration purposes and they can also be employed as teachers in the purely agricultural schools or in elementary schools. I see, Sir, that some eight persons are reported to have passed the last examination held in regard to this certificate class. Out of them only one or two seem to have found employment. When they entered they were given some hope of obtaining employment under the Government, but most of these passed men of the certificate class have been given no employment. And yet the Government say that they have not got men for demonstrators' posts. Eight men have been stated to have passed, and are therefore certificated men, and they can work as demonstrators. I have much to say, Sir, but I would suggest that the debate may be adjourned now and taken up to-morrow."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—" You have already taken five minutes, and another five minutes you have got a right to take. So, the House may sit for some time and finish the subject."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" The subject cannot be finished so soon, Sir, but I can finish my speech. The subject requires a very careful discussion and detailed attention, because we have not come here to offer destructive criticism in regard to a matter which is still in its infancy . . ."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—" Will the hon. Member kindly finish his speech?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" You, Sir, said that the subject might be finished, and I only take exception to that remark. I can and I will finish my speech. I am not an expert in this matter, and I can only give expression to public feeling and public opinion on this point, namely, that things are not going on in the right direction in the matter of agricultural education of the ryots. In this connexion, I may be allowed to refer to a report of an interview with Lord Sinha on this subject, and in the interview he touched this point. He said, 'the present system of education does not run according to the traditional ideals or traditional customs of the people.' The education that is given throws things out of gear and into confusion."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—" Do you think that the quotation has relevancy to the subject under discussion now?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" He spoke about what is called village reconstruction. That is a subject of the highest importance and is connected with agricultural education. Now that the Royal Commission on Agriculture is coming, we must, I think, put our heads together and place our views before the Royal Commission. I think all those Members here who come from the villages are interested in agriculture. And how to improve agriculture is a problem to which we must devote our first-hand attention, and we must bestow on it all the care which it deserves. On agriculture 70 per cent of our people depend, and it is a matter to which very little attention is paid, and we, including myself, are guilty of much neglect on that point. I hope that this matter of agricultural education of our village people on proper lines with a view to make them adopt improved methods will be taken in hand very early and thoroughly by the hon. Minister. As for the Advisory Committees, I do not know what these Advisory Committees are doing. I am not on any Committee. But we have to discuss this question of agricultural education and training of our people more in detail and devote to it much greater attention. Judging from the results of the education imparted in the past, I am afraid that the majority of the pupils who are trained in the agricultural schools have not returned to the fields—this is shown from the report I referred to, published by the Government itself. What is the reason, Sir? (At this stage the gong was sounded.) I have placed this motion before the House and I should like to know the views of the hon. the Minister on the points raised."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There are two other motions which go with this, and they are Nos. 712 and 713. They may all be taken up together and discussed to-morrow."

The House then adjourned to meet again at 11 a.m. the next day.

B. V. KRISHNA AYYAR,

I

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

[Order made by the President of the Madras Legislative Council under Standing Order No. 15 on the 4th December 1924.]

1. Starred questions to be put at a meeting of the Council with their answers shall be printed and placed on the Council table an hour before the President takes his seat.

The Secretary shall call out the name of each interpellator in the order in which the names are printed, specify the serial number of his question and make a sufficient pause to give him or any other member a reasonable opportunity of rising in his place and putting a supplementary question. Supplementary questions must be put immediately after the principal questions to which they relate.

2. If a member responsible for a starred question happens to be absent when it is called, it will be open either to him or to any other member to put supplemental questions thereon after the other starred questions for the day have been answered, provided question-time is not thereby exceeded.

3. Questions, not starred, will not be called in Council, but they will be printed with their answers and placed on the table of the House along with the list of starred questions. Oral supplementary questions will not be allowed in regard to unstarred questions.]

STARRED QUESTIONS.

Agriculture.

Recommendations of the Director of Agriculture.

* 1798 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state the proposals made by the Director of Agriculture for 'the organization of agriculture for profit instead of for subsistence' and further whether he recommended an import duty on manure and even prohibition of export of manure to foreign countries and the orders of the Government, if any, thereon?

A.—No such proposals have been made by the Director of Agriculture nor has he ever recommended an import duty on manure. The question of prohibiting export of certain manures from the country was considered by the Director of Agriculture as well as by the Board of Agriculture and the latter recommended to the Government of India an examination of this question by a committee.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, has the attention of the Government been drawn to the speech of the Director of Agriculture wherein this duty was recommended?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I do not remember having read it."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Has the committee recommended by the Board of Agriculture been appointed?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There is already a committee of the Board of Agriculture."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"It is said in the answer that the latter recommended to the Government of India an examination of this question by a committee. I am asking whether that committee has been appointed?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"No."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Besides making that recommendation, has the Local Government done any thing at all?"

[25th March 1926]

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"We are awaiting the orders of the Government of India."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"How long is it since the reference to the Government of India was made?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I want notice."

Agricultural staff in Bellary district.

* 1799 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state whether it is a fact that, for lack of agricultural demonstrators, the ryots of Bellary district are unable to adopt in sufficiently large numbers, improved methods of cultivation, etc., and whether the agricultural staff in the district is proposed to be strengthened soon and, if so, in what way and to what extent?

A.—There are at present five demonstrators working in Bellary district. The Department cannot spare any more at present for work in this district. The need for more demonstrators is felt all over the Presidency and will be satisfied as more men and money become available.

Co-operative Societies.

Number of co-operative societies inspected by Assistant Registrars.

(b) the number of societies inspected during the year 1924-25 by each Assistant Registrar for conducting inquiries under section 35 of the Co-operative Societies Act;

(c) the total number of co-operative societies inspected during the year 1924-25 by each Assistant Registrar;

(d) the number of co-operative unions inspected during the year 1924-25 by each Assistant Registrar;

(e) the total number of visits made by each Assistant Registrar for the inspection of co-operative societies other than those at headquarters; and

(e) According to the information available with the Inspectress no fines were imposed on any of the students either in 1924-25 or in 1925-26 nor were stipends withheld.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"With reference to clauses (a) to (d), may I know whether they fix the number of stipends in each training school?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"The amount is fixed and therefore the number of scholarships available will be limited."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"May I know whether the stipends go to particular communities as Muhammadans, Christians, etc.?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"They go to those students who come under the rules."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"My own information is that in the Coimbatore Training school these stipends go to Indian Christians though there are other women coming forward. May I know whether they fix some such rule so that there may not be any difference in giving these stipends to particular communities?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"I think there is nothing done with reference to any particular community. If there is anything and if the attention of the Government is drawn to it, Government will direct their attention to it."

Registration.

Representation of Indian Christians in the Registration department.

* 1802 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA : With reference to the return of officers in the services in the Registration department who held permanent appointments on 1st April 1922 and 1st April 1925, will the hon. the Minister for Education and the hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) what explanation there is for the increase of Indian Christians by only 1, of Non-Brahmans by only 7, and decrease of Muhammadans by 6 in appointments on Rs. 100 and over, as compared with the increase of Brahman by 52 in the Registration department under the Inspector-General of Registration;

(b) what justification there is for the assertion made in the Council by the hon. Minister that the Indian Christians are over-represented in the Registration department;

(c) whether the calculation of the percentage for adequate communal representation in Government services is based merely on the numerical strength or on the literacy of Indian Christians as compared with that of the total population in the Presidency; and

(d) what steps are being taken to establish in the Registration department the equilibrium sought by Government orders in the interests of the under-represented communities, who have at least advanced in education like the Indian Christians?

A.—(a) The correct figures of officers who held permanent appointments in the Registration department on 1st April 1922 and 1st April 1925 were as follows:—

	On 1st April 1922.	On 1st April 1925.
(i) Brahman	187	229
(ii) Non-Brahman	87	94
(iii) Indian Christians	18	19
(iv) Muhammadan	13	17

The increase under Brahman which is 42 is due to the accrual of increments to officers who were drawing less than Rs. 100 on 31st March 1922. Under Muhammadans there was an increase of four.

(b) The hon. Member is referred to the answer to question No. 431 given at the meeting of 22nd August 1924.

(c) The question is not understood.

(d) The hon. Member is referred to G.O. No. 658, Public, dated the 15th August 1922, and to the answer to question No. 569 given at the meeting of 28th October 1925. The question will be considered by the Committee appointed in G.O. No. 733, Public, dated the 3rd August 1925.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"As regards (a), the correct figures of officers who held permanent appointments in the Registration department, I do not find any from the depressed classes. Therefore I wanted to know whether there are anybody holding such permanent appointments in the Registration department or not."

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"Notice, Sir."

Local Boards and Municipal Councils.Government Order No. 4738, L. & M., dated 23rd December 1925.

* 1803 Q.—Mr. S. SATYAMURTI: Will the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the order of the Government No. 4738, L. & M., dated 23rd December 1925, was issued on a reference by the Chairman of the Municipal Council, Periyakulam;

(b) what the need for that reference was; and

(c) whether the order was issued in connexion with the election of the Chairman of the Municipal Council, Madura?

A.—(a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) As the question in issue related to the interpretation of rules having the force of law and might arise in any municipality at any time, the Chairman, Municipal Council, Periyakulam, considered it necessary to bring the matter to the notice of the Government.

(c) The answer is in the negative.

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"May I know, Sir, whether the opinion of the Law officers of the Crown was taken in the matter before Government issued this Government Order?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I think the Drafting department was consulted."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I have not heard of that expression 'Drafting department'. Probably it is the Law department."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Drafting section of the Law department."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I know whether the election of the chairman of the council was pending at the time?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I do not think there was any such question."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"May I know how this question from the Municipal Council of Periyakulam emanated?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"A reference was made from the Municipal Council."

Velayutham, son of Chennayan, Kottur Malayandipatnam, Pollachi taluk, on 29th March 1925, has been received by the hon. the Chief Minister in his official capacity praying that the claims for Adi-Dravida representation in the Pollachi Taluk Board, Coimbatore district, may not be ignored;

25th March 1926]

(b) the names of the nominated members to the Pollachi Taluk Board together with the names of the communities to which they belong and the dates on which they were appointed by the President, Coimbatore District Board;

(c) whether Adi-Dravidas were nominated already to Erode, Palladam, Gobichettipalayam, Dharapuram and Tiruppur Taluk Boards by the President of the Coimbatore District Board; and

(d) if so, the names of the candidates together with the names of the sub-sets of the depressed classes to which such candidates belong and the dates of their appointment?

A.—(a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) to (d) The information has been called for.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether Government cannot do anything until the period of nominations expires with reference to considering the claims of the depressed classes?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"When once a member is nominated, he should continue for the whole period of three years."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"My information is that in some cases Government have cancelled the nominations."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Government interfered in one or two cases and objection was taken to it, thereupon the Law officers were consulted."

"They were of opinion that the question was not free from doubt."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Here also, Sir, in the case of Erode and Gobichettipalayam the claims of the depressed classes were not considered. It was brought to the notice of the hon. Minister that there are 18 Goundars and again 4 Goundars are nominated ignoring the claims of the depressed classes. Still if the nomination was made, may I know if it was made contrary to the spirit of the law?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"If the facts are as stated by the hon. Member I must say that the conduct of the President is not in accordance with the spirit of the law. But the question is whether Government could interfere. That is doubtful."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I point out that the spirit of the law is that due regard ought to be given while making nominations to the unrepresented minority communities. When there were already too many members of a particular community nominations were again made from that community ignoring the claims of the depressed classes. May I know, Sir, whether the Minister thinks that the action of taluk board is right?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I do not think the hon. Member is right in his question. I already stated that if the facts are as stated, the conduct of the President is not in accordance with the spirit of the law. But the difficulty is whether the Government can interfere with the discretion of the President. According to the advice Government had it is doubtful whether they can interfere."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"It may not be directly; but could it not be done indirectly?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Circulars have been issued asking them to pay attention to the rules prescribed by law."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"May I know whether presidents of district boards abide by that rule contained in the Local Boards Act?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"That depends upon the circumstances."

Water-supply in rural parts.

* 1806 Q.—Mr. R. VEERIAN: With reference to question No. 1121 answered at the meeting dated 16th December 1925, will the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) why a sum of Rs. 6.25 lakhs as grant was granted to local bodies to improve the water-supply in rural areas since the sum is applicable for general water-supply;

(b) whether the Government are aware that the water scarcity is being felt only among the depressed classes mostly owing to insufficient number of wells or no wells at all in several places;

(c) if so, what they have done in the matter of providing water-supply in rural parts;

(d) whether the Government are aware that there are no depressed classes representatives in several of the local boards; and

(e) how the Government expect that the water scarcity among the depressed classes will be improved since there are no representatives of the depressed classes?

A.—(a) As the Government considered that the improvement of the water-supply in rural areas was an urgent necessity, a supplementary demand for Rs. 6,25,000 was moved in the Legislative Council in August 1925 to enable the Government to make grants for the purpose to local boards.

(b) & (c) In order that the depressed classes may be provided with a better water-supply, the Government have issued instructions that in utilizing the grants referred to local boards should keep in view the needs of the depressed classes and meet them as far as possible.

(d) The Government have no exact information but it is probable that it is so.

(e) The Government do not consider that the improvement of water-supply among the depressed classes depends solely on the presence of representatives of those classes on local boards.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Sir, with reference to clause (e), there are several wells intended solely for the use of the non-depressed classes in rural parts provided out of public funds. May I know, Sir, whether Government do not think it advisable that local bodies give up one of these wells for the use of the depressed classes so that the local bodies may not say for want of funds that they are not capable of providing wells?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"They have been given funds to take up schemes."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I do not get the direct answer to my question. I only wanted to know whether the Government do not think it advisable to ask the local bodies to give up one of the wells now set apart for the use of the non-depressed classes for the sole use of the depressed classes."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Government will be very glad to give one or more wells for the use of the depressed classes."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"After the information is received."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I only want to say that the information called for is very urgent. Owing to the unsatisfactory administration of the plague regulations, hundreds of people are dying daily. Will the hon. Minister kindly expedite getting the information?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"We will try to get it as early as possible."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Will it be before the Council adjourns?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"It is a difficult question to answer. We will try to get information as early as possible."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"It is quite clear that the hon. Member does not hope to get the information before the Council sitting is over. So, probably he will not be in a position to answer the question till June or August next. So, may I request him to take prompt action on the information that he may be getting with regard to the very unsatisfactory way in which the plague regulations are being carried out?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"It is not quite clear to me at all events that the information will not be received before the meeting is over. But Government have already taken steps to get the information as early as possible. They will remind the authorities from whom the information is expected to expedite sending up the information."

Mr. F. NOYCE:—"I shall have a telegraphic communication sent shortly."

The question of drawing up a general programme of bridges required on trunk roads in the Presidency is engaging the attention of the Government.

- (c) & (d) The Government have no information.

Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"With reference to the answer to 11-11 clauses (a) and (b), viz. 'The question of drawing up a general programme of bridges required on trunk roads in the Presidency is engaging the attention of the Government', may I know whether any report has been called for?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I should like to have notice."

Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR:—"With reference to the answer to clause (d), may I know how many Nadars have been appointed as honorary organizers?"

[25th March 1926]

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I cannot say that. If the hon. Member gives notice, I can get the information."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Is not an allowance given to them for out-of-pocket expenses?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I do not think they are given any sort of allowance."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"These are said to be organizers of panchayats. May I know under what circumstances they can organize panchayats? I ask this because I am told that unless a mahazar is sent up, they cannot organize panchayats."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Yes. When the residents of a village send up a mahazar, then the Registrar-General will issue instructions to the honorary organizer and also to the taluk board president to take steps."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"In the case of honorary organizers of co-operative credit societies they do."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Order, order. We are not on co-operative credit societies."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"I only wanted to know whether Government will extend the same kind of allowance to these organizers of village panchayats as in the case of organizers of co-operative credit societies. I put the question Sir, in that way, in order to find out from the hon. the Minister in charge whether the same travelling allowance or daily batta will be given to these honorary organizers of village panchayats also."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I said they are not getting any allowance."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"My point is that in the case of honorary organizers of co-operative credit societies, the Government give certain amount of travelling allowance and daily batta. Only I want to know whether the same facilities will be awarded in the case of honorary organizers of village panchayats, because these people also do the same kind of work."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Evidently, the Government think it is not necessary."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I am not quite clear as to what was meant by the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government. Is it that the honorary organizer makes a recommendation on the request of the village people, or that he should not go to the village and organize a panchayat unless a mahazar is received in advance from the people?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"No, he may go to the village at any time. There is nothing against his going to the village with a view even to advise the residents of the village to submit a mahazar."

(c) No.

(d) Yes; Saptur station which is five miles from the village.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"With reference to answer to clauses (a) and (b), may I know whether it is for want of evidence on the part of the depressed classes that no case has been made out against the community mentioned here?"

The Government have no information on the points raised in the question, but have called for a report.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"May I know, Sir, why the Government have not found out before this that only one scholarship was given in the Bellary district, two in North Arcot, two in Chittoor, two in the Nilgiris and ten in Cuddapah, out of the enormous number of school-going population in those districts?"

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"I do not understand the question, Sir."

[25th March 1926]

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I only wanted to know why the Government have not found out before the fact that only one scholarship has been given in the Bellary district when there is a large school-going population. The Government say they have called for a report. When there are ..."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Order, order. The hon. Member is going to enter into an argument."

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"The reason is that no hon. Member of the Legislative Council has called the attention of Government to it before!"

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Is it because that there are no more applications that only one scholarship was given in Bellary?"

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Perhaps it is so."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"On the other hand, I am told that in this district more applications were sent in."

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"It is a matter for the head of the department, Sir. I do not think Government deal with these applications."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I myself saw to it that many applications were sent in. May I know therefore why the Commissioner of Labour has awarded only one scholarship for the whole district?"

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"He must have his own reasons as to why he awarded only one scholarship."

A.—(a) In 1922-23, three panchayats under the Forest Village System were formed for certain reserves in the Baindur division and the ryots were permitted the use of manure leaves, dead fuel and thorns free of payment on condition that the forests should be protected from fire and other damage.

(c) In the Tanjore district, the operations of the department are carried on throughout the district while in the other districts the special staff is working in selected taluks.

(f) Since the year 1920; the Government have no information as to how long it will take to complete the work in the taluk.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"With reference to clause (f) in the answer, I find that the Labour department has started working in Saidapet taluk 'since the year 1920.' That means to say nearly six years. Therefore, Sir, may I know whether it will take approximately six years for the Labour department to finish up their activities in one taluk, and whether the depressed classes have to wait for sixty years for the Labour department to conclude their work in the ten other taluks of that district?"

The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"I am not aware of the facts."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"If that is the reason why their activities are not extended to other places, may I ask whether it is impossible for them to do so all at once?"

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Is the hon. Member aware that in other districts the department does not take many months to finish its work in a taluk?"

A.—It is not the policy of the Labour Department to convert aided schools into Government schools by taking them over nor does the Labour Department open or take over schools in cheris in which the school-going population numbers less than 100 and the number of pupils on the rolls is not expected to be above 45. As a general rule, no schools are opened or taken over in taluks in which the operations of the department are not carried on.

(e) whether it is a fact that on some of these lands the Government hold mortgages for loans granted to make improvements in these lands and, if so, what the Government propose to do in such cases?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) In some cases.

(d) The Government do not propose to give compensation.

(e) Possibly in some cases. The question will be considered when it arises.

(a) whether the Gundal river supplies water to some channels and a large number of tanks in Kollegal taluk of the Coimbatore district and, if so, what is the total ayacut under all the schemes connected with this river;

(b) The supply is sometimes deficient.

(c) The proposals for a new channel from the Gundal river will be taken up for consideration after orders have been passed on the Habbehalla scheme.

(d) Yes. The matter is under the consideration of the Government.

(a) whether it is a fact that the yield of wet lands in the North Arcot district has been very much reduced recently and what remissions of kist, if any, have been granted in each taluk for every year from 1920 to 1925, both inclusive;

[25th March 1926]

(b) whether it is a fact that several tanks have been either newly built or repaired in the Mysore State and whether that has reduced and in some parts of the year removed the possibility of any water flowing in the Palar, which is the chief source of water for irrigation purposes in that district; and

(c) whether any scheme has been decided upon or is in contemplation to improve the irrigation facilities in North Arcot district?

A.—(a) The Government are not aware that the yield of wet lands in North Arcot district has been very much reduced recently. They have no figures for the remissions granted in each taluk. Figures for the district are given in the annual jamabandi reports which are placed on the Editors' Table.

(b) The Government are not aware that the supply in the Palar has been materially affected by recent works in Mysore.

(b) if the answer to question (a) is in the affirmative, why this difference was made and is continued; and

(c) whether the Government will sanction a uniform rate of allowance to all shorthand writers of all District and Sessions Courts?

A.—(a), (b) & (c) Under the latest orders there are only two rates of shorthand allowances admissible, one on Rs. 25 given to those who pass the higher grade examination and the other on Rs. 15 allowed to those who pass the lower grade examination. But prior to the introduction of the above rates, three rates were prevailing in district courts, namely, Rs. 15, Rs. 30 and Rs. 40 for Elementary, Intermediate and Advanced grades, respectively. The incumbents who were drawing these rates prior to their revision have been permitted to continue to draw them.

MOTIONS ON THE BUDGET FOR 1926-27.

*The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—“Sir, yesterday, after Mr. Krishnan Nayar had moved his motion and Mr. Saldanha had spoken on it, the House adjourned. The other two motions, viz., Nos. 712 and 713 on the paper, also refer to agricultural schools, and although these motions are not moved, I may say that the whole subject connected with these three proposed cuts is intended to be an exhortation to the Government to open more agricultural schools and to include certain subjects as sericulture, especially in the curricula of lower, middle, high schools and secondary schools. From the hon. Member, Mr. Krishnan Nayar, we heard yesterday that he inspected the Taliparamba Agricultural School himself, and that he was satisfied with the way in which the institution was being conducted, and he also hoped that the other school that was established at Anakapalle was following a similar course. I am glad that the hon. Member bore testimony to the good work done by the department. With the finances that we have at present, we have been able to establish two schools, one at Taliparamba and the other at Anakapalle. I must also bring to the notice of the Council that I am grateful to my hon. Colleague M-1."

* Printed separately.

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"What does M-1 mean?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"It is an official jargon."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I mean my hon. Colleague, the Raja of Panagal. He has kindly come forward to establish an agricultural school at Kalahasti. It is a very costly business, and with his usual generosity he has given the entire extent of land required for the school and farm to be attached and also agreed to bear the cost of some of the buildings required for the establishment of that school. (Cheers.) And it is the intention of Government to open more schools in the several linguistic areas as soon as we are in position to find funds."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"When does the hon. Minister expect to find funds?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There is a question involved in these three outs, which is how far the nature of instruction imparted in these schools meets the real needs of the country. There is a report by the acting Director of Agriculture that his inspection showed that the two existing schools do not meet a real want. Here, as against the acting Director's report, we have the personal observation of my hon. Friend, Mr. Krishnan Nayar, and I may also add my personal testimony to it, because when I visited these two schools I found there was nothing wrong with them and that they deserve to be continued. However, in deference to the wishes of the acting Director, the matter was placed before the Advisory Committee, and they have decided that the present two schools must be continued, only that buildings and land may not be further acquired for that purpose. The whole thing would arise upon the decision which the Royal Commission on Agriculture might take on this subject. So for the present, without taking further steps we propose to continue what we have been doing in the past and await the decision of the Royal Commission on Agriculture."

a.m.

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"I am very glad that the recommendation of the acting Director of Agriculture for closing these two agricultural schools has been turned down by the Advisory Committee. I am rather surprised that the acting Director should have thought fit to make this recommendation. I thought that a person who is only in temporary charge of a department should reserve such important questions for decision for the return of the permanent incumbent. I know the views of the permanent Director, Mr. Anstead, and I should be surprised if he agrees with the views of the acting Director. (The hon. Sir T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai: 'He does not.') I am very glad he does not. From my inspection of the Taliparamba school, I was very much pleased with the way in which it is conducted. I am also glad to learn that the Minister has formed a very favourable impression of the working of the Taliparamba school. I have not seen the Anakapalle school. But as the hon. the Minister said, the

[Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar]

Royal Commission on Agriculture will be in the country very soon, and we know also that the Viceroy who will take charge of his exalted office in the ensuing week is a person who has a great deal of interest in agriculture. So I hope as a result of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture and also when more funds are available, more schools will be started.

"I withdraw the motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 14,98,800 for Agriculture be reduced by 100' in order to urge on the Government to abolish the appointment of Directors of Industries and Agriculture, to have one appointment of Director of Development for Agriculture and Industrial development, and to appoint experts in engineering, textile and other lines. Before dwelling upon this recommendation of mine, I must bring to the notice of this House the difficulty of providing myself with materials for argument. That difficulty arises mainly from the neglect of Government to place before us their reports of different departments. For instance, take the report of the department of Industries in Madras. I received this copy which I have in my hand only yesterday and that too after sending an urgent message to send me a copy. This shows the indifference of Government for publicity in these matters. I may bring to the notice of this House that this report is dated 24th August 1925. It was sent by Mr. Thomas, the Director of Industries. Then the Government reviewed it—it must have been printed soon after and before the Government reviewed it—it was reviewed by Government on 19th October 1925, i.e., more than five months ago. The review of Government consists of three or four pages only. It was placed on the Editors' Table about 15 days ago. I wrote to the Press for a copy only about 12 days ago, and yet the Superintendent, Government Press, writes to me in his letter of yesterday that he sends a copy as a special case because I asked for it urgently; otherwise he says it would take time to collect all the requisitions from the different Members of the Legislative Council and then distribute copies in the ordinary course. I should have got it ten days or so ago; otherwise it will be quite useless. What I want to urge is that before this Budget we should at least have the reports of the previous year, not of this year, but of the year ending March 1925. Is it creditable to this Government and is it worthy of this House that we cannot get the reports for the year ending March 1925 of the departments of Government before the budget discussion? On what basis can you discuss or criticise the budget? If we cannot get these reports in time, it shows that the Government is probably not at all anxious that we should base our criticism on some proper material. Without such material, when we attack the Government, they attribute it to malice prepense. This results in a severe censure of the Government, their not supplying material for proper discussion. Now, this is a report of agricultural operations carried on some time ago, and it contains very meagre material. And I make this suggestion. This suggestion is made after my study of the activities of the Agricultural, Co-operative, and other departments. My firm conviction is that what you want is more of expert advice and more of earnestness than more of Directors. There is a surfeit of Directors, Director of Agriculture, Director of Industries, Director of Fisheries, and then Deputy Directors and so on. What they do in the way of direction I am at a loss to understand. The hon. the Minister has succumbed to the very charming manner of Mr. Wood who has been urging upon him an anti-national policy. Government have succumbed to the policy which has been dictated to them by certain Members of this House and especially by Mr. Wood the other day. Are you going to support foreign manufactures to the neglect and prejudice of indigenous industries? That is just what the King-Emperor asked at the Industries Fair held in Birmingham. Are you going to purchase American typewriters to the prejudice of the home industry? Are you not discouraging home industries by getting machinery from outside? I ask: are you not going to encourage indigenous industries because they may not be of the best kind, and you can get from foreigners' products and manufactures of a superior kind? So I urge the necessity for improving the indigenous industries."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"But how will the appointment of combined Director of Industries and Agriculture promote this policy of the hon. Member?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"We want a Director to serve as an administrative officer, to co-ordinate the activities of the different departments, to pass the travelling allowance bills, etc., to act as a sort of post office for submitting reports of the experts to the Government."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Why not have a post office straight away?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I would rather have it. (Laughter.) I would have the reports of the experts direct. The Director is simply for co-ordinating the activities, passing travelling allowance bills and so on. I am sure that the new policy is declared with some ulterior object in view. The jam factory at Coonoor is to be closed because it cannot compete with the Australian preserved fruits. The result is our indigenous industries cannot prosper. Surely our Minister could urge that a bounty be granted or that a tariff duty be imposed in order to encourage our indigenous industries."

"I shall urge another point. What is the use of this industrial concern to us from an educative point of view? I suggested several times in this House—never mind what I have been urging privately—that these industrial concerns of Government should be of an educative value. In the factories at Coonoor and other places—never mind their working at a loss—a large number of apprentices could be trained to learn the art of preserving fruits and other things."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Is the Leader of the Opposition in order in raising this question on his motion?" (Cries of 'Order, order'.)

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"The Raja of Ramnad was fortunately chatting when I was serious."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is it 'fortunately' that the hon. Member said?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Fortunately for him and unfortunately for myself. My point is this. These Directors have very little to do; they are not experts. The Agricultural Director could attend to all the work, and we can very well do away with the other Directors. The Bombay Government has done away with the Director of Industries. In Bombay for a long time they had a Director of Agriculture, a very capable Director, an Indian Civil Service officer. I do not object to have one Director if we want one at all. He will have much less to do according to the policy enunciated in the report. I cannot, I must say, understand the purport of the report very clearly. My suspicion is that Government having closed the jam factory, will next close the soap factory and so on. In reply to a letter I wrote to the Government I got this letter: 'In reply to your letter, etc., I am directed to inform you that it is uncertain how long Government is to continue the Chaliyam factory. The question whether this should not be closed has been engaging the attention of the Government,' and so on. Chaliyam is mentioned because of the canning industry carried on there. A large number of people in India do not know how to preserve fish by canning which is a cheap method. Preserving in glass bottles is a very expensive process."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

"Therefore the preservation of fruit or the canning of fish is a very important art for us to learn. But it is a very difficult matter I admit. I would suggest that as large a number of apprentices as possible should be trained by the Government in various factories which are existing at present for the promotion of these industries." 11-45 a.m.

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member talking about the combined appointment of Director of Agriculture and Industries or is he talking about the development of industries in this Province. Which is he talking about?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"After all, Sir, what we require is expert advice for the starting of industrial concerns and for the promotion of industrial education. In order to achieve these objects we do not require a lot of Directors, such as the Director of Industries, Director of Agriculture and Director of Fisheries and so on, especially when we are closing all the factories. What we want is that industrial education should be more widely spread among the masses. For this purpose we do not require so many Directors. I suppose we can very well get rid of even the hon. the Minister for Development. What I am suggesting is only a thin end of the wedge."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Order, order. The hon. Member must confine himself to the combined appointment of Director of Agriculture and Industries."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"What I submit is that in the Public Works Department there is the Secretary who deals with the reports of experts without an intermediary officer called the Director and that the same may be followed by the Development Secretary. Hence it is, I say, that we do not want so many Directors but only one Director purely as an administrative officer in charge of these departments. On the other hand, what we require is a larger number of teachers, more demonstrators, more schools and more farms. The abolition of the posts of so many directors will effect a large saving in our expenditure which can very well be utilized for purposes mentioned above. If this department should usefully function, it should be more in the way of giving expert advice and of diffusing education among the people. Now we have to go all the way to Bangalore for getting expert advice. At present the Madras Government are paying something like Rs. 10,000 to the Indian Institute of Science at Bangalore. The minimum that we have to pay for getting expert advice is Rs. 40."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha] [25th March 1926]

"Now, I ask what is the profit to the nation at large by the existence of these appointments of Directors? It is true that my hon. Friend the Minister for Education was very much pleased with the education given in one of the existing industrial schools. But from the report I learn that more than half the number of boys are idling away their time."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member going into the Education Department?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Industrial education which is under the Director of Industries. In conclusion, I submit, Sir, that we should have more experimental stations, more expert advice and more schools rather than a large number of Directors."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR:—"I have given notice of a similar motion."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member can speak upon it now."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR:—"May I move that motion now?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Yes, yes."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR:—"I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 15.66 lakhs for Agriculture be reduced by Rs. 1,000.'

"Sir, the hon. Member from South Kanara wanted to have the posts of Directors of Agriculture and Industries combined. I go a step further. I want to have the three departments of Agriculture, Co-operation and Industries combined into one. This question was raised last year at the time of the budget debate but it was not pressed. I think the necessity for combining these three departments into one was not felt so much then as it is now. It is becoming clear day by day that these three departments should be combined into one in order to improve the condition of the ryots economically, agriculturally and industrially, because men who had been in the department and who are likely to know something of these departments come forward and say that these departments should be combined into one. So, Sir, the necessity for combining these departments into one is becoming more and more essential. It must be accepted at the same time that the Co-operative department has done some appreciable work, for we find that the number of co-operative societies has increased day by day and the activities of the department are becoming varied. And on account of the increase in number and the varied activities of the department we are going to have a Joint Registrar. Yet, I want to know whether there is any improvement in the condition of the ryots? I must say, Sir, there is no improvement not only among the ryots but also in the working of the co-operative societies, for if we consider the income of these societies it comes to nothing. As a matter of fact, most of the societies are not working in proper order. What is this due to? I must say that it is due to the economically poor condition of the ryots. Most of the ryots in this Presidency are small landholders and they depend for their maintenance on the income from lands. In spite of so many farms established in different places and the phosphatic nodules which are going to be introduced, we find there has been no improvement in the produce of the land. With regard to the income from the land it is in the same level as it was some years before. The present condition of the society is such that people are put to a lot of expenditure in their mode of living, so much so they have been unable to maintain themselves from the income of the land alone, on which they solely depend. In these circumstances the ryots are forced to borrow money wherever and whenever they could, and when they find that there is an avenue, namely, the Co-operative society, open to them, they rush to it and borrow as much money as they can. The result is not so favourable as might be expected.

"With regard to the Agricultural Department, as I said before, in spite of so many improvements alleged to have taken place in it, we do not find that it has been able to impress upon the minds of the people the use of the department. So I submit that the condition of the people has not in any way been improved.

"With regard to the Industries department, I may say that it is practically unknown to the people that there is such a thing as the Industries Department. The result is that these departments, working separately, have not been able to achieve very good results, for it is rather difficult to impress upon the minds of the people what each department is doing. I believe officers of each department are visiting villages at different times and are suggesting their own method of improvement. So, Sir, it would be better if the activities of these departments were combined so that only one set of officers might be able to visit the villages, enter into the feelings of the people there and suggest means of improving their condition economically, agriculturally and industrially. Suppose a ryot has run badly into debt, if there is a single departmental officer to go to him, he will be able to suggest all the possible means of improving his income. He may ask him to go to a co-operative society and take a loan and at the same time suggest him the means of meeting his loan and also perhaps teach him something with regard to industries so that he may utilise the spare hours left to him in that direction. In these circumstances I move that these departments may be combined into one. Perhaps it may not be possible to achieve the desired results immediately or within the next few years. It must be done slowly and the best method of doing it will be to introduce such subjects as co-operation, book-keeping, banking and small industries in the Agricultural College. I hope the hon. the Minister for Development will take those suggestions into consideration and give us a sympathetic answer."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGANANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, I shall begin my observations first on the speech of my hon. Friend Mr. Saldanha. The first charge that he made against the Government in general, and this department in particular was that there had been a lot of delay in publishing the annual reports. That is a matter on which I am asking the Development Secretary to reply, because it is more a matter of office routine than one of policy. But I must observe that the hon. Member had the advantage of the administration reports issued by the Departments of Industries, Agriculture and Co-operation. For the last two years these reports were published and were with him at the time when he had the budget of this year for criticism. It might be that there might have been good reasons for delaying the publication of the report of the Department of Industries for this year; but I should like to know of what benefit the other published reports had been to the hon. Member. For if he had read them carefully, many of the points on which he dwelt here would have been answered already. It would not have been necessary to go into such elementary questions as to what these three departments had been doing in the past. The object of the departments as explained in the several published reports will be to convince the general public for what purpose they were created, and how far they have satisfied the aspirations which they had and the expectations which the general public had. I find that not only he, but also the other hon. Member Mr. Chidambara Nadar has, I am sorry to say, not studied the several published reports to any advantage. If they had done so, they would have seen the obvious advantages of the carrying on of these three departments. Take the Agricultural Department, for example."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"As a matter of personal explanation, Sir. I did not say that I was against the departments. I only said that I did not want these Directors."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Where is the personal explanation of the hon. Member? I think the hon. Minister is referring to Mr. Chidambara Nadar's motion. Is the hon. Member, Mr. Saldanha, making a personal explanation on behalf of the hon. Member Mr. Chidambara Nadar?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I thought he was referring to me as not having read the reports. I know that the departments are doing good work. I only questioned the necessity of so many directors and a registrar to boot."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Take the case of the Agricultural department. In the first instance the Director of Agriculture has been crying hoarse over the several improvements that have been made from time to time. Besides, he is publishing monthly digests which give information on the various improvements that have been made. The problem has been engaging the attention of the deputy directors and the other officers of the department. For example, the researches carried on in the Aduthurai and Coimbatore farms have resulted in the discovery of a new strain of paddy which will yield about 16 per cent more than the old strain. I have already given this information in reply to another speech made yesterday. If the hon. Members realize that the result of the discovery would be a production of 116 kalams of paddy where only 100 kalams were produced before, and that if the process is adopted by the whole country it would mean a valuable addition of food worth about two crores of rupees, the great value of the department would not be questioned. Is this not proof that the Agricultural department has been doing its level best to make its existence beneficial to the people? Coming to the co-operative societies, there also the hon. Member dealt lightly with the question of co-operative societies. The Registrar of Co-operative Societies has been taking great pains to enlighten the general public as to what improvements he has made and how far they are for the benefit of the people. If only the last annual report had been read it would show that about four crores of rupees—I am sorry I have not got the exact figures—have been given as loans. The number of societies has vastly increased. In the matter of land mortgage banks four new institutions have been started with a view to reclaim the persons hopelessly in debt. As regards Industries we have done a good deal to find out the course of the sub-soil water and make arrangements to pump it out for irrigating the fields. Moreover, we have brought into operation certain new and improved machinery for pumping well water for irrigating the dry fields. If you take all these together it will be easily seen what an amount of advantage is given by these improvements caused by the three departments.

"My hon. Friend Mr. Saldanha wanted that the two departments might be amalgamated, and the hon. Member Mr. Chidambara Nadar said that all the three departments might be amalgamated together under one Director only. Here also, I am put to the painful necessity of remarking that if these hon. Members had had even a cursory glance through the administration reports of these departments they would have seen the amount of beneficial work that the directors have been carrying on and how if they were taken away they would be leaving a gap which cannot be filled at all. All these three officers are experts in their own way. In the Department of Agriculture what is the meaning of having a department without a director? That will be having a body without the head. As regards the Departments of Industries and Co-operation, have these two hon. Members the slightest conception—I am sorry I have to use harsh language because the circumstances of the case require it. I hope I am using parliamentary language. Have these hon. gentlemen an elementary and rudimentary idea of what is being done in the co-operative field? If I take up that subject, I am afraid I shall have to take up much of the time of the House. These three directors really serve a useful purpose and they cannot be replaced.

"As regards the suggestion that these departments might be combined together under one director I may say that each is a separate department by itself requiring technical knowledge of a high order in the head of the department. It will be absolutely impossible for the Director of Agriculture to carry on the work of the Director of Industries, nor will it be possible, for example, for the Director of Industries to carry on the work of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies. Some of the hon. Members may be ignorant as to whether the three officers have got full work now. Anybody may step into their offices any day and verify it for themselves. Or they can judge for themselves from the various reports that have been submitted how hard-worked these officers are. Every one of them has been complaining to me that the work is pressing very hard and asking for extra assistance. Otherwise they have been saying that they would not be able to discharge their responsibilities. They would break down as some of their predecessors did. Even, if by some fortunate circumstance we are able to find an officer who can run all the three departments together—I say it is not possible—but even if it were possible to do so, naturally he can do the work for himself and we may not be quite sure of finding a suitable successor to take up that appointment. I may also add for the information of the hon. Members that the question was once considered and given up as impracticable. The really co-ordinating head is the Minister and he helps to co-ordinate the working of the three departments together. Even the heads of the departments meet together on occasions such as the festivals and fairs and discuss the ways and means of co-ordinating their work. Also the deputy directors of agriculture, the deputy registrars of co-operative societies, and the corresponding officers of the Industries department meet together and discuss their programme. They do not allow the things to stagnate. Taking all these matters into consideration, I do not think that ~~any~~ on made out for the abolition of the posts of the directors or the post of the registrar of co-operative societies. No case has been made out either for amalgamating their duties. As regards the delay in the publication of the reports, my hon. Friend will speak."

p.m. * Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I do not know if you felt, as I did, that much of what fell from the hon. Minister was beside the issues raised by the two hon. Members. The question now before the House is whether or not it is advantageous to the people that these three departments, which for all practical purposes are run separately, should not be co-ordinated if not at least amalgamated with one another. That is, I think, the real point at issue. I am not here with any readymade scheme to be presented to the hon. Minister for Development. I shall place before him the various difficulties in regard to the existing state of things. When I want to start a seed union on a co-operative basis in any place, I find that I cannot effectively start the society without a considerable amount of help from the Agricultural department. As a matter of fact, the Agricultural department is doing that work on its own account. As soon as a society is started it has to get the seed from one or other of the various agricultural farms of the Agricultural department. If the Agricultural department does this work of its own accord, then the farm does not ask for ready money and waits for some time to realize the amount. On the other hand, if the co-operative societies purchase the seed, the Agricultural department does not part with the seeds except for ready money. This is, for instance, one of the difficulties due to the two departments working more or less independently of each other. Take again the case of the weaving society in Bellary which is run on co-operative lines for the purpose of weaving cumblis. It is on the decline because the weavers there have not enough wool. They cannot provide wool from their own resources because of the various restrictions on grazing facilities, etc. The Industries department can do something to improve the wool industry. They can find out the place where wool can be obtained and wool of good quality. They can import wool for the benefit of the people; they can find a market for the finished goods. The co-operative society at Kuditini is languishing for lack of support from the Industries department. This is the difficulty we are labouring under. What are the Government doing to co-ordinate the work of all these departments? The departments should not work in an isolated fashion; they can work well only if all their activities are co-ordinated with one another. We are asking to know how far you have proceeded in that direction."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" Sir, my business will be not to deal with the main question raised by these motions, viz., the advisability of amalgamating the posts of the three directors into one, but with the delay in the publication of the Government review of the administration report of the Industries department and with a few other amusing irrelevancies which need not have been raised at all during the course of the debate. The delay in reviewing the administration report which the hon. Member, Mr. Saldanha complained of, is not one of the Development department because I find the report is dated 24th August and the review of the Government is dated 19th October. That is less than two months. If the review and the report had been published and distributed in good time after the 19th October I dare say the hon. Member would have had sufficient time to prepare himself for the budget discussion. I am unable to say now why there was delay in issuing the review of the Government. The delay might be in the Press. I do not know where the delay occurred. All I can say is that I shall inquire into the cause of the delay. I do not think the hon. Member, Mr. Saldanha, has suffered very much by the delay. His complaint of lack of material is hardly justified by the nature of the speech he delivered; he has ranged from China to Peru and referred to the tariff duty, the Jam factory and the policy followed by the Industries department though the motion itself is to discuss a specific point, viz., the abolition of the post of one director or two. The hon. Member from South Kanara has charged the hon. Minister with having succumbed to the voice of the charmer, the charmer in this case being the hon. Member Mr. Wood, and that the policy which was announced at the end of the general discussion of the budget was dictated more or less by the demands made by the hon. Member. There is evidently a misapprehension here, because the policy that was announced at the end of the general discussion on the budget was only a reiteration of the policy announced before Mr. Wood came to this House and before the hon. Minister had any chance of being beguiled by his charming words. It was a policy which the Government declared in their review of the administration report of the previous year, i.e., 1923-24. When the facts are known, the hon. Member from South Kanara will be the first to admit this. Whether the Government are right or wrong in coming to that decision, Mr. Wood had nothing to do with the enunciation of the policy.

"The hon. Member from South Kanara also referred to the analogy of the Public Works Secretariat and he wanted that the Secretary of the Development department should follow the example of the Public Works Secretariat, viz., that the experts' report must be considered in the Secretariat without the intermediation of any Director. I believe I am correctly stating his position. But as I understood the position in the Public Works Secretariat as was explained the other day in this House, there is to be a Chief Engineer and he is to continue; he is to be the head of the department and to deal with the technical aspects of subjects which come up before the Government. It is not proposed to abolish his post. On the other hand, the Public Works Secretariat is prohibited from criticizing the technical aspects of matters which come up before the Government. In other words, the practice followed in the Public Works Secretariat is exactly the opposite of what the hon. Member wants."

* The RAJA of RAMNAD :—" May I ask whether the Director of Industries is an expert ? "

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" He is not one in the particular sense that he is able to carry on and manage an industry himself. He is an expert in the sense that he knows business methods and the organization of industries. I think what the hon. Member Mr. Saldanha quoted is not in point and it cannot be relied upon as an argument for abolishing either of the directors' posts. We have the need of an expert in each of the departments of Agriculture and Industries. The analogy quoted being the only strong argument brought forward by the hon. Member, I need not perhaps dilate further on that point."

"The hon. Member from Bellary pointed out certain practical difficulties which have been experienced. He confined himself to his own part of the country but I dare say that he does not wish it to be understood that such difficulties are not experienced elsewhere. He mentioned certain practical difficulties which, according to him, can be traced to the want of co-ordination between the Co-operative, the Industries and the Agricultural departments. He instanced the case of a co-operative society for seed distribution and the complaint seems to be that the Agricultural department which has to supply seed to private persons did not supply seed to the co-operative society on credit. I think I am correctly stating his complaint"

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"What I said was that the co-operative society could not get seed from the Agricultural department on credit."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I am not interested in what may be. If the hon. Member would say what actually happens I shall be very glad and willing to have it inquired into. I cannot possibly deal with what may be. The hon. Member assumed that the co-operative societies for seed distribution will not get credit. I think the hon. Member will give the Department of Agriculture some credit for common sense."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I shall bring the question again."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"He brought forward another instance, the rather bad condition and somewhat poor state of the cumbli industry. This matter has been inquired into by the Government very carefully and for the present what has been decided is that the Government should start a mill in the Bellary jail and after the result of the experiment is known the Government should take up the question of improving the condition of the workers in the cumbli industry either by constituting a co-operative society or by some other means. All I need say is that the question has not been lost sight of. Even if the complaints had been well founded, I do not think that they would constitute a sufficient reason for the motion, viz., to abolish the post of the Director of Agriculture, or the Registrar of Co-operative Societies or the Director of Industries, because these complaints of an individual nature are inseparable from any kind of administration which is human. There may be here and there some reason for complaint, but that, I believe, is not a sufficient argument to change the whole system of administration and to throw an impossible burden on the shoulders of one man which three men are now finding it difficult to bear."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I do not wish to withdraw the motion, as I am keenly interested in the matter. I was charged with ignorance of the working of the departments. I have been reading the older reports of these departments. I have a large number of these reports and I go through them in my leisure moments. I take very keen interest in agricultural and co-operative matters; so much so I was once invited by the Bombay Government to be present at a conference held at a long distance in connexion with agriculture and co-operative societies. When the Government asked the permission of the High Court to send me to that conference, the High Court expressed the surprise that a Judicial Officer took so much interest in the matter. However, they are matters on which I am keenly interested as they are most important for relieving the distress in our country and for improving the economic condition of the people. Then as to the reports themselves, it is not only the reports of the Industries department but also those of the Excise department which has not been made available"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member will confine himself to the reports of the Department of Industries."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I think that the Superintendent of the Government Press is responsible for the delay in sending not only this report but other reports also. The fact that the report which was reviewed in October last should not be available to the Members of the Legislative Council till the end of the Budget debate requires an explanation. I think it is a great discredit that we should not have materials for criticising the Government until after the whole show is over. I am not going to discuss the policy of the Department of Industries. The Government are gradually retiring from their activities and a number of duties are being got rid of."

"The Director of Industries will have little work to do. What I want to drive home is this, that we want more experts and one director for all these departments. I do not want the abolition of all these departments; they should all exist there but they should be administered by one officer. For such a purpose, it is not necessary to have an expert at all. I do not know whether Mr. Thomas, a man of great ability, is an expert in industries or in any industry for the matter of that. I think he must be gradually gaining experience for becoming an expert. That is not what we want. We want an officer like him to combine in his functions the administration of all the departments and place the views of the different experts before the Government. I do not say that the Secretary of the Development Department should deal with them directly. He can have the advice of the various departmental experts placed before him by one officer. The Bombay Government have abolished the post of Director of Industries, though perhaps they needed him there more than we want him here if one were wanted at all. We want a common officer for all these departments with expert officers under him, more teachers, more farm managers, more demonstrators, more schools and more men to attend to the industrial concerns that we have got for the use of the people and for training apprentices. As this is a subject of the greatest importance to the public, I want to press this motion."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Is Mr. Chidambara Nadar withdrawing his motion?"

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"But I want to say a few words, Sir."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"I will first get Mr. Saldanha's motion out of the way."

The motion was put and the House divided thus :

Neutral.

The Raja of Ramnad.

The motion was lost. Ayes 4. Noes 48. Neutral 1.

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—“ Sir, I have been told that I do not know the rudimentary principles of co-operation, agriculture, industries and so on.”

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—“ I thought the hon. Member has already spoken.”

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—“ The hon. Member is replying.”

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—“ Sir, whether the words used by the hon. the Minister for Development are parliamentary or not, what do they amount to? They amount to this, that Honourable Members come here without knowing and without understanding subjects and make speeches in an irresponsible manner. I must assure the hon. the Minister that I know too much of these departments. I am a landowner in my own way. I am interested in agriculture, and I have come across officers of the department from the hon. the Minister downwards to the agricultural demonstrator.”

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—“ I thought that it was parliamentary language that I used.”

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—“ He does not object to the language. He objects to the argument.”

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—“ I have come across many of the officers of the department, Sir; but I must say that I have not derived much benefit from them. Once I was told to purchase a plough for Rs 75. Now it is lying idle. Sometimes the suggestions given by these departmental officers are useless.”

“ Then Sir, with regard to co-operation, I know something of the working of this department in my district. So far as the work among Kallars is concerned, it is in a very pitiable state. Many societies have become bankrupt. It is high time to devote some time to these societies in the Madura district.”

“ With regard to the department of Industries, Sir, it is also in a pitiable condition. The hon. Minister said something of the pumping and boring instruments. There are boring instruments and pumping machines, but the difficulty is in introducing these things. For boring instruments you will have to pay a deposit of Rs. 150. How can the poor ryots afford to pay Rs. 150 for bringing the boring instruments? So also with regard to pumping machines. To go in for these machines is very difficult. Small landholders cannot afford to go in for such costly things. So, Sir, if at all the Agricultural Department could do anything for the ryots, it must be in the reformation of the methods now used by the ryots.

“ Again, Sir, the hon. the Minister stated that the Director of Agriculture is crying hoarse and everything is published in his report. I do not know whether his work stops there. It is not enough to cry hoarse and publish everything in reports. Perhaps the Aduturai farm gives a yield of 16 per cent more than the old strain but I do not know how far such farms are going to be introduced elsewhere. We do not know the manure or the cost incurred in taking to such cultivation. We do not know how far it is going to prove a practical thing.

“ With regard to Co-operative department, Sir, I should like to add a few more words. The hon. the Minister stated that the number of societies has been doubled and land mortgage banks have been established to redeem people who have run into irredeemable debts. As I said before, most of the societies may in course of time become bankrupt and the people perhaps may run into such irredeemable debts which the land mortgage banks will take over; and perhaps these things will continue for ever and the people will be growing poorer and poorer day by day. With these words, Sir, I do not want to press my motion.”

The motion was by leave withdrawn

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—“ Sir, I move my motion, viz—
‘ that the allotment of Rs. 15.66 lakhs for Agriculture be reduced by Rs. 100.’

“ Sir, I shall be very brief

(At this stage, Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar took the chair.)

“ The object of my motion is, Sir, to plead for a larger allotment of money for the Agricultural department, Agriculture, Sir, is a growing department and it requires larger and larger amounts year after year. To allot a small sum to the department year after year is not only making it practically stationary but, having regard to the nature of the department, making it retrograde also. In order that this department may not be a stationary one, in order that this department may not be a retrograde one, it is highly essential that larger and larger amounts should be allotted for expenditure in this department. After all that is said and done and that may be said and done hereafter, agriculture must continue to be the staple and the most important industry in this country. I believe about 68 per cent of the population in this country depend for their livelihood upon agriculture and work in agriculture. So, having regard to the large percentage of population that depends for their livelihood upon agriculture, it is very necessary that this most important industry of the country should be developed. I do not blame either the department or the hon. Minister in charge of Agriculture. I know they are doing their very best to develop it. But have they been able to produce any impression in the country as a whole? I do not deny that the department could have impressed some particular localities with their experiments. The question however is, has the hon.

[Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar] [25th March 1926]

Minister been able to produce any impression on the country taken as a whole? If only hon. Members here would appeal to their personal experience, they will have only one answer to the question and that is in the negative. Just to illustrate my remark. My hon. Friend stated yesterday that in the case of the Aduturai farm it has been realized that the yield has increased by 16 per cent. I would ask him whether the agricultural population as a whole of the Presidency, or even the ryots of the whole of the district of Tanjore have been able to realize this fact. My complaint is that it is not possible for the department for want of funds to carry this knowledge to the agricultural population of the whole Presidency. In order that this may be done, it is necessary to have a large number of Agricultural Inspectors and others acquainted with the details of agriculture who can go into the interior direct to the agricultural population, speak to them in their own language, take them into their confidence, infuse confidence into them. Our ryots, I should say, Sir, are keen businessmen as a rule, and, if they are once convinced that the experiments are beneficial to them, they will not be slow to adopt them. How can the experiments that are now carried on by the department be brought to the notice of the people if the department is not supplied with the necessary funds? Again the hon. Minister said yesterday that phosphatic nodules have been found to exist in some portions of the Trichinopoly district. We know that green manure is fast disappearing in the country and that it becomes necessary day after day, more and more to use artificial manure. Do the population of districts like Ganjam, Malabar or South Kanara know of the existence of these nodules in the Trichinopoly district; even if they know, can they make use of them? It is essential that the department should dig up the nodules, transport them to the remotest corners of the presidency and sell them to the people. Of course, the cost of digging and of transport can be realized by the sale proceeds. How can the department do this unless it is supplied with the necessary funds.

"Sir, the subject is so wide and of so great importance that it is not possible to resist the temptation to speak at length. But, for want of time, I would stop here with the earnest request that the Government, particularly the Finance Member—I am sorry that I do not see him here nor the Finance Secretary—should devote a large portion of the remission granted by the Central Government for the needs of this department rather than merge it in the general fund and devote it for payment of the debts."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, I am entirely at one with the hon. Member in this respect and feel with him that the task is great but the resources small. I expect—it is my own personal opinion—that as a result of the deliberation which would be bestowed on the subject of agriculture when the Royal Commission on Agriculture comes here, arrangements will be made for the expenditure of more money on this important subject which furnishes the means of living for almost the whole population. At present it is the want of money that stands in the way and we have only to cut our coats according to our cloth. I may say that in 1924-25 we had spent Rs. 14 lakhs and for the next year, 1926-27, we expect to spend Rs. 16 lakhs."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Practically the same amount as in the current year."

25th March 1926]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"On the main point, I am at one with the hon. Member; but as regards certain observations made by him, I should like to offer some explanation. The country is no doubt very large and the department is doing, with the limited finances at its disposal its best to propagate the knowledge that it gains by means of its experiments. So far as the Aduturai farm is concerned, the question of its yield of 16 per cent over and above the normal is a thing which has been brought prominently to the notice of the public in the monthly digest which is being circulated all over the Presidency."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"In English?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Yes, in English. If any Member wishes to have a copy of it, it will be specially sent to him. As regards phosphatic nodules, I have taken the trouble to bring and stock them in my own room and I would invite hon. Members like Mr. Krishnan Nayar who are interested in the subject to see what is meant by phosphatic nodules and how they are applied for the fertilization of the soil. All that could be done by means of publication is being done; as for instance in the case of the Aduturai G. B. 24 paddy seeds, much of the quantity that has been harvested have been sold to several people both in the district and outside who wanted to take it for experimental purposes. We of course reserved only as much as was needed for cultivation in the subsequent year and sold the remainder."

"I think after these observations, my hon. Friend will not press the motion."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Sir, I wish that the hon. Minister had taken my remarks a little more seriously than he has done. Instead of light-heartedly saying that his room is full of these nodules, pamphlets and monthlies and asking those who are interested in the subject like myself to go to his room to have a look at them, I wish he had entered into the spirit of my observations. I could have criticised the department if I wanted it; but I did not and I purposely refrained from doing so. I could have effectively exposed the administration of my hon. Friend, the Minister, but I refrained from doing so deliberately. My complaint was that this knowledge with reference to the nodules and with reference to the increased yield at the Aduturai farm has not reached the people. My hon. Friend replied that this knowledge is published in the pamphlets which could be had in his room. He is not able to make this knowledge accessible to the population. I wish that it should be spread in districts like South Kanara in Kanarese, in Malabar in Malayalam, in the Telugu districts and in the Tamil districts similarly in their vernaculars. The ryots in these parts are absolutely ignorant of what these nodules are and as to the experiments carried on in the Aduturai farm. It is not enough if Mr. Krishnan Nayar and other Members of this Council could go to the hon. the Minister's room and satisfy themselves with the contents of the pamphlets stored up in it. It is necessary that the cultivating ryots who are ignorant of the English language should know of them. What, Sir, is the use of publishing them in magazines and pamphlets in English? It is necessary that they should be in the vernaculars and not only that but, as I said, the Inspectors ought to go to the people, instil into them the results of the experiments and so popularize the results."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I never meant to be offensive, Sir. I think I have toned down my speech considerably merely to carry information and nothing else."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"I should then remark, Sir, as to the inappropriateness of his invitation to me and others to go to his room for information. I do not wish, however, to press the motion. I should like to withdraw."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR (Chairman):—"The time allotted for the demand having expired, I shall put the demand to the House."

The demand was put and carried and the grant made.

DEMAND XXIII—CIVIL VETERINARY SERVICES.

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, I move

'that the Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 6 51 lakhs under Civil Veterinary Services.'

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI:—"Sir, I move

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 2,65,100 for touring establishments by Re. 1.'

"Sir, it will be noticed that there is a similar motion tabled by me numbered 727 in the notice paper which is intended to raise the same question, namely, the necessity of opening more hospitals and dispensaries. With your permission, Sir, I should like to speak a few words on the subject. The question about the touring establishments suggested itself to me on account of an incident which took place during my tour in the district. On one occasion, a veterinary touring officer was staying with me in my camp. His programme, he told me, had been arranged about two months previous to his date of arrival at a certain village and in spite of the fact that he was camping for two days in that village, and the fact that his services would be available to the villagers was tom-tommed by the toti in the village, no one brought any cattle for treatment by him. I knew then that there was in that particular village rinderpest raging. I refer to this only to show that in the case of touring establishments, the villager does not appreciate the value of their work and it does not appeal to anybody. The reason is that diseases pertaining to cattle as is the case with human diseases have each its own freaks and they do not wait till the arrival of the veterinary officer. My suggestion therefore is that instead of keeping the touring establishment it would be better to have regular hospitals and dispensaries wherever possible. I am not able now to say anything as to touring work done by these touring establishments. But I take it that taking into account the arduous nature of the tours, their work must naturally be smaller than the work done by the regular establishments. Moreover, the necessity for veterinary aid permanently stationed in fixed places is being keenly felt in the rural parts of the district; and may I suggest in this connexion that if the finances necessary are not forthcoming, the hon. the Minister may as well help the local boards that are willing to start such dispensaries. Under the present Act, an expenditure by the local boards on this account is not legitimate, but I know that there is a feeling in the country that if the Agricultural or Veterinary department is not able to extend its help, the local bodies that realize the need may as well be allowed to provide such institutions, of course with the help of the Government. For instance, at Cuddalore I know there was a regular hospital which was managed by the district board till some two or three years ago. It has now been taken by the Government, and I do not think that it is any the more flourishing for the change. I do not mean to criticize, but I only mean to suggest that the institution has not fared much better at the hands of the Government. I may also say that it may be a financial relief if at any rate these local boards which are willing to start the institutions are given liberal help by the Government."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"Mr. Chairman, I have given notice of a motion which is identical with the one that has just now been moved by the hon. Member, Mr. Sitarama Reddi, and I take this opportunity of making some more observations on points that have not been touched upon by the hon. Member who has preceded me. In this Presidency the number of touring establishments and dispensaries are very few, and this is a fact known to everybody. I will only exemplify that fact by saying that there is one veterinary assistant for every 700 square miles, and to treat 1½ lakhs of cattle. Year after year it has been agitated on the floor of this House that a greater number of dispensaries are needed and that a greater number of touring assistants should be appointed. But year after year we are confronted with this woeful tale 'No money and no further increment in the number of these establishments.' In the present year's budget we have seen that an increase of only six touring establishments has been made, and only nine dispensaries have been provided for, more than what used to be the case hitherto. And in the estimates that have been put forward at page 319 of the Civil Budget Estimate, for hospitals and dispensaries a sum of Rs. 2,16,900 has been provided in the budget under discussion, whereas the revised estimate was for Rs. 1,92,000. And for touring establishments, the revised estimate is Rs. 2,74,500 and the budget estimate is Rs. 2,65,100. Now in the former case there is an addition of Rs. 24,900 whereas in the latter case there is a reduction of Rs. 9,400. Taking the two together it means, Sir, that only Rs. 15,500 have been provided for in this year's budget for the increase of these touring establishments and dispensaries. And now, during the budget discussion last year I pointed out to this House that the touring establishments were not doing as much work as the regular dispensaries are doing. I have given figures to show that the touring establishments are doing only half as much work as the dispensaries are doing. It is time that the touring establishments are slowly reduced giving place to regular dispensaries run with proper equipment provided for them. During this year, as we see, only 15 posts have been provided for, whether it is in the touring establishment cadre or whether it is in the regular dispensaries. These 15 posts will not, after all, go to any extent to relieve the suffering that is now in existence all over the Presidency, to relieve the poor cattle that are dying without any proper treatment at all. This is a department that is included under the Development Department. But no real development is to be seen in the working of this branch. It is regrettable that this sort of lack of sympathy towards this department is an unhappy thing. And, in addition to this, Sir, the equipment that is now available in the regular line dispensaries is inadequate. I may point out that the up-to-date surgical apparatus is not provided at all in the dispensaries, at least in the headquarters dispensaries. I am informed, and I say that subject to correction, that even in the headquarters hospital at Madras itself there is not even an operation table. I do not know whether I can call it a shameful matter and whether it is one to be brought before this House at all. A couple of years back, Sir, to come to more tangible instances I was assured in this House that a dispensary would be opened in Kavali in the Nellore district. All these two years I have been waiting with the greatest patience at my command and after all nothing tangible seems to have come out at all till now. There is a great need for the establishment of dispensaries and appointment of more touring billets in my district which is known to be a cattle centre. I hope that the hon. the Minister will kindly bestow more consideration on this matter and try to get more and more funds for the purpose of developing this department, and I am sure if it does not develop at all, whether it be in its resources or in its activities, it is a misnomer to call it a subject under the Development Department. It is no more useful to take shelter under the hackneyed argument that the hon. the Finance Member does not give room. Of course that is an argument which has come to be advanced often in this House and it is really an unhappy thing that this House is bored from time to time with that argument. I hope the hon. Minister will not forget the observations that have been just now made by my humble self and look to the establishment of more dispensaries and provide more money at least in the revised estimate for the coming year."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Mr. Chairman, Sir, I beg to make the motion standing in my name, and that is No. 725." Sir, two of the speakers who have preceded me have referred to the unsatisfactory nature of the work—that is inevitable I may say to some extent—that is at present done by the touring veterinary officers. I shall crave the permission of the House just to explain how this system is working at present. There are officers at the rate of one touring assistant for two or more taluks. This touring assistant, I do not know if he is given a permanent peon now, but at any rate, until recently had no permanent peon of his own. The idea was that as soon as he went to a village he should meet the village reddy of the place, get himself acquainted with him, and through his good offices secure a peon at so many annas per day. With the help of that peon and of the village officer, he was expected to advertise his arrival and presence in the village not only to people of that village but to people of the adjoining villages as well. Now, Sir, all this is bound to take time. You may take it that to reach the villages close by, within a distance of 3, 4 or 5 miles, it may take two or three days. And people living in more distant villages may not know of his arrival even after a week or more. Now, Sir, assuming that immediately after the arrival of this assistant in a particular place, people do come with their diseased animals for treatment, I say it is not possible for him to treat the animals in any satisfactory way, and the reason is this. He cannot stay at anyone place for more than ten days. If he prolongs his stay for more than ten days, the Government will not allow him travelling allowance for the excess number of days. And so, p or

^a To reduce the allotment of Rs. 2,16,900 for hospitals and dispensaries by Rs. 100. (To open two more dispensaries in the Bellary district by utilizing the services of some of the touring assistants in the district.)

as he is, he cannot possibly stay in a place for more than ten days. And even if the people of the village he is camping in come for treatment, they cannot hope to have treatment for more than ten days. But if we turn to the registers of the several dispensaries, we will find, I think, that the average period necessary for the successful treatment of an animal is a fortnight. So that the present period of stay of the touring officer falls short of that average by four days. And in the case of the villages further off from the place he is staying in, they may not have even five days for the treatment. And it may be that people who come to know of his arrival late may come to his camp only to know that he has left that place for some other place. They cannot be expected to go after him from place to place and get treatment for the animals suffering from one disease or another. If, on the other hand, this officer is made to stay at a particular place, and if they have got animals which are really in need of treatment, they will take the trouble of bringing these animals to the headquarters with the certainty of the animals being attended to by him. So, I think, Sir, by having dispensaries established at particular places, a larger number of animals will be attended to than can be or is being done at present. There may be the question of cost. Under the scheme I have suggested, Sir, I do not think the Government will be put to any extra cost. By having a dispensary in a particular place, you may have to pay rent, and for the service of a compounder. But as against that, you have the savings due to the elimination of the travelling allowance which these touring officers are now drawing, and if they have a permanent peon there will be the saving of the travelling allowance to the peon also. It will be seen on a comparison that the savings in the one case will be more or less equal to the extra expenditure necessary in the other arrangement. So, I think, Sir, that the Government need not have more than one or two officers as touring assistants for each district. I suggest they may be kept in reserve—one or two officers—because they may be required to meet any emergency. Suppose there is an outbreak of some epidemic or other, then you can indent upon these reserve officers to go and attend to a disease in a particular place. Otherwise, the number in excess of this his reserve force may well be utilized, I think, in the opening of dispensaries. So far as my district is concerned, for which I have given the motion, I think places without rent may also be found for the location of these dispensaries."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGANANAM PILLAI :—" Sir, till recently the policy was one of appointing a number of touring veterinary assistants and establishing certain veterinary institutions and appointing certain people there. The subject of touring veterinary assistants had elicited the observations of Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar and Mr. Ramachandra Reddi and in deference to their wishes the question was placed before the advisory committee and they came to the conclusion that as a sort of experiment the system of permanent veterinary assistants at important places might be tried. That will be tried in the Kistna district next year (1927-28) and I dare say it will be found successful because subsequent to the passing of the advisory committee's resolution I have come across any number of people who had all one word to say that it was more in the interests of the people that veterinary institutions should be established rather than touring inspectors appointed. For all the arguments of Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar I think it would be better to wait till next year. My ambition

p.m.

[Sir T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai] [25th March 1926]

is to have one veterinary institution for each taluk of the district and if we have funds there will be no difficulty at all. My friend, Mr. Ramachandra Reddi, vaxed eloquent on that matter and wanted to brush aside the question of finance. Being without money I do not know how it will be possible for me or to anybody else to undertake a task of that magnitude."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" I will be the last man to think that the Minister is committed to the Finance Department."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" In the absence of funds it will be absolutely impossible to establish more institutions than what I have done in the past. One important suggestion was made by my hon. Friend Mr. Sitarama Reddiyar, i.e., if the local boards would kindly come to the help of the Veterinary Department many more institutions could be established. I welcome the suggestion and I dare say that my hon. Colleague, the Chief Minister, will also note that suggestion and help me with funds for the opening of more institutions at other places with the help of local bodies. After these observations I hope my hon. Friend would find that it is not want of sympathy about which he regrets very much but it is want of money that is very substantial. He also said that one operation table was missing or was not in existence. I do not know whether this information was obtained by him very recently or long ago. If it had been a long time past I would have welcomed information of that kind being communicated to me so that I could have taken the necessary action. Now, that it has been brought to my notice I will see that there is no defect at all in the headquarter institution of the Presidency. As regards Kavali I must say that a veterinary institution has been opened there. About the argument of touring veterinary assistants I need not say anything as the posts will gradually be abolished. In this connexion, if I may venture to throw out a suggestion to the Members of the Legislative Council, it is this: that during the year when non-official work is being done, when resolutions are being discussed, if these also form subjects of discussions and certain definite resolutions are framed it would strengthen our hands at the time of the framing of the budget. I think that is a matter well known to them and I think they will carry them out."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I do not understand what the hon. Minister is driving at."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" My point is that if resolutions are passed in the Legislative Council it would be found more useful to me and I will find myself in a better position to include all these subjects in the budget."

Mr. Sitarama Reddiyar's motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, those who have been watching the debate on subjects connected with the Development Department would have been struck by the number of times the Minister has said that he could not promote one thing or the other for want of money. Sir, his speeches conclusively show that he is quite satisfied with the necessity for the development of his department in more than one direction. He knows that the people are vitally concerned in regard to these matters and that they are in need of relief which should not be and ought not to be delayed more than can be helped. It behoves us, therefore, Sir, to request the hon. Minister to take us into his confidence and tell us what attempts he has made to secure the money which he is the first to acknowledge he needs most urgently. What attempts did he make and what response did he receive? Was he satisfied with the explanations that may have been offered him for more money not being found? I think he was not satisfied. If he were, I do not think, Sir, he would have appealed to this House that they should have supported him by passing resolutions and that they should have strengthened his hands so that he might have put up a better fight and got more money. I do not want to enter further in this as these are constitutional matters about which I was warned not to go into too much details. I would leave it to the Minister to tell us all about it. If he does not tell us any of these things, I think he has no reason to complain and say that he could not do more because he failed to secure more funds. I think the Act unsatisfactory as it might be, does not leave the Minister quite helpless. I think he has got remedies under the Act and under the rules framed under it by which he could have achieved what he wanted."

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar) :—" Does the hon. Member wish to withdraw his motion?"

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" If the hon. Minister has anything to say, I would like to hear."

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar) :—" The hon. Minister has nothing to add."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Let it be voted upon, Sir."

When the Chairman was putting the motion to the House Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar asked permission to withdraw. It was allowed and the motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,20,800 for pay of establishments be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object is to urge that the pay of the assistants is too low and higher appointments are too few. If there is one thing needed, Sir, to show with what neglect this assistant, Veterinary Department, is treated by Government, it is this, viz., the fixing of the pay of the veterinary surgeons. With regard to the staff of the touring inspectors previous speakers have dwelt upon it and I do not propose to take the time of the Council again. At present I will invite the attention of the House to the very low pay that is given to these officers. To realize that hon. Members should make a comparison of their pay with the pay of the officers of similar rank in other departments. The veterinary assistants are paid Rs. 60—4—120 and in the higher grade Rs. 125—5—175. The number of veterinary assistants is about 16 and the number of Inspectors is 10. Now, let us see the pay of the corresponding officials. The grade of the sub-assistant surgeons is well known to all of us. Sub-assistant surgeons generally do serve in hospitals as assistants to the surgeon or the assistant surgeon and their pay is Rs. 75—175 with a maximum pay of Rs. 200 whereas the minimum pay of the veterinary assistants is Rs. 60 and the maximum is only Rs. 175. Compare this to this class of officers. The veterinary assistant is a sort of officer who stands by himself. He is not an assistant to anybody. He is in charge of an office and of a department in a taluk. He is a sort of an independent officer standing alone by himself. Whereas the sub-assistant surgeon is working under the direction of some other official, and his pay starts at Rs. 75 and reaches the maximum of Rs. 200 and the veterinary assistant starts much lower and the maximum also is lower. Then, under Agriculture in page 472 you see the agricultural demonstrators start at Rs. 85 with a maximum of Rs. 250. Then take the sub-inspectors of police, they start with Rs. 65 and very large number of them rise as inspectors and the field of promotion is wider. Then take the health officers. They start on Rs. 200 and have a maximum of Rs. 600. When you compare the health officers to the veterinary assistant surgeons, you will see the veterinary assistants receive longer training than the District Health officer. In the Forest department, Assistant Conservators start on Rs. 250. We are all conversant with the work of these worthy officers, the veterinary assistants. They are in sole charge of an office; they deal with a wide area, a whole taluk; they have to go at any moment's notice from their headquarters to the different places where epidemics like rinderpest are reported to have broken out and render necessary relief, so that they have to be touring officers; they have therefore multifarious duties. The veterinary assistant is also called upon by people to attend cases in their houses. It is not always easy to take sickly cattle, etc., to the hospital, and in such cases the officers have to go to the stables or cowsheds to attend cases. These officers have submitted memorials to Government and recorded resolutions at their conferences for increase of pay. I think they have made out a good case for increase of pay, as proposed in their several memorials.

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

"Besides, there is one other point. The hon. Minister had already pleaded at great length want of money for every proposal brought forward, and all the Ministers say the same thing, want of money. Money must be found for these nation building departments somehow or other, and I am sure money for these officers can be found by curtailing the number of appointments at the top who are of little use to the people. Money could surely be found from within the present allotment for the whole Department of Agriculture. These are the officers who are needed more by the people than the higher officers, who are more or less useless from the point of view of the people. I am glad that the hon. the Minister did not tell us in this instance that he is going to wait for the Royal Commission on Agriculture. Whatever it may do, the Royal Commission is not however going to bring additional money to the hon. Minister. The Royal Commission has been urged as the ground for waiting on many other cases. Those high officers, Directors and Deputy Directors, tour round and get their allowances, and give little benefit to the people. I am sure the hon. Minister if he makes an earnest attempt, will be able to find the money for these veterinary assistants out of the total allotment for the department. I hope that this appeal of mine will find an echo from all parts of this House."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The present pay of veterinary assistants, viz., Rs. 60-4-120; 125-5-175, is considered to be too low. That was a scale which after mature consideration was sanctioned only in the year 1921, and subsequent to that nothing has transpired which would urge upon the Government the necessity of making any change. The hon. Member compared the veterinary assistants to the holders of similar offices in the Medical, Public Health, Agriculture, Fisheries, and other departments. So far as I could see, there is not much in the comparison that has been made. I wish to bring to the hon. Member's notice what they are paying in other Presidencies to similar officers. I find that in Bengal they start at Rs. 50 and stop with Rs. 100; in the United Provinces the pay is from Rs. 45 to Rs. 90."

[Sir T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Their grade may be different, and there may be scope for higher appointments."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"In Bombay the pay is from Rs. 60 to Rs. 140. So, compared with their brethren in other parts of India, I should say that they are not paid anything lower than what ought to be paid to them. As regards the higher appointments, we have got six persons on Rs. 250 and above. These may be considered small, but in course of time with the usual increase in other sections, these also would increase, and I do not think there is anything further upon which I have to speak."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"Before this is put to the vote, I want some information, about the figures in the budget which are puzzling me. On pages 321 and 322 we find the pay of veterinary assistants given as Rs. 60-120 and Rs. 150-200; on page 472 their scale is put as Rs. 60-4-120 and Rs. 125-5-175. I want to know how these figures are to be reconciled."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Rupees 175 is the correct figure. Their present scale is Rs. 60-4-120 and 125-5-175."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"Am I to take it that the figures on pages 321 and 322 are incorrect?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The figures given in the budget for the department represent the pay of some men on the old scale, called veterinary inspectors. But that class is practically going to be obsolete. In future the selection grade will consist of men on the scale of Rs. 125-5-175. Now, 15 men are getting Rs. 150-200, because they were employed at the time of the revision of pay on the old scale of veterinary inspectors."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I have to make one or two observations on this point. Because the scale was fixed in 1921, it is said there is no ground for increasing the pay. 'Nothing has transpired,' is what the hon. the Minister said. Much has transpired since 1921, and I believe it is a long period since the scale was fixed, and since then this department has come prominently to the notice of this House and of the public. The speeches of several hon. Members have shown the amount of good work they do, and how much need is felt by the people for the services of these veterinary officers. Therefore, it seems to me that there are sufficient grounds for giving them higher salaries. Comparing these appointments with what is going on in other Presidencies is somewhat misleading. It is necessary to take the whole cadre for purposes of comparison. The ground of complaint is not only that the pay is low, but the scope for promotion is very limited in this Presidency. They are, I think, only ten appointments at the top from Rs. 125 to Rs. 175, as against 160 appointments in the lower grade, and you can fancy, Sir, the difficulties which these people have for getting into the higher grade. Therefore, I have urged that there should be a large number of appointments in the higher grade. Now, practically the majority of the people have no chance of rising at all to the higher grade in the present state of things. We have not been told what is the number of higher appointments and what is the maximum pay there, and what scope there is for promotion to what are called superior appointments. These superior appointments are practically denied to them. I do not think there is any chance for them in the Provincial Service."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The number of appointments on the selection grade is 15 for a cadre of about Rs. 200."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Is that sufficient? Only 15 appointments for about 200 people, even if they are appointments to which they can rise. This compares very badly with what is obtaining in other departments where there is more scope for promotion to Provincial Service appointments. For instance, take the number of deputy collectors in the Revenue Department which are open to tahsildars, and the number of assistant surgeons in the Medical Department and of health inspectors in the Public Health Department, which give scope for promotion. I am not of course very much for increasing the cost of establishment at all. But I think that the treatment given to these veterinary assistants is bad, and I have urged this matter so that hereafter their cause may be taken into proper consideration. That is the appeal I make to the hon. the Minister in withdrawing my motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Demand XXIII—Civil Veterinary Services—was then put and passed, and the grant was made.

The House adjourned for lunch at 1-4 p.m.

After Lunch (2-45 p.m.).

DEMAND XXIV—CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES

(The hon. the Deputy President took the Chair.)

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Mr. Deputy President, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move
'for a grant not exceeding Rs. 7-36 lakhs for expenditure under "Co-operative Societies".'"

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR:—"I beg to move that 'the allotment of Rs. 18,000 for pay of officers be reduced by Rs. 100.'"

"Sir, with regard to the co-operative department, I have stated in my previous motion how this department is working and it is not in any way improving the condition of the ryots in the villages. When such is the case, a joint registrar's post is being created with a monthly salary of Rs. 1,000. I understand that the Registrar has already a personal assistant who is in the cadre of Deputy Registrar, and also a manager who is in the cadre of assistant registrar. When there are already two officers in the cadre of deputy and assistant registrars, to assist the Registrar I find no necessity for a Joint Registrar. So, I move the motion."

* The hon. Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, the hon. the Mover has said that there is no improvement in the conditions so far as the ryot population is concerned by the work turned out by the co-operative section and also that while there is a personal assistant, a deputy registrar and a manager who is an assistant registrar, it is not necessary to have the services of a joint registrar. In reply I have only to say that the work of the Registrar has become very very heavy and that unless substantial relief is given to him he will be unable to carry on the duties of his office with credit to himself or even satisfactorily discharge his liabilities. He tells me, and I believe him, that if the help that he needs is not given to him, there would be a complete breakdown so far as his health is concerned and also so far as the other works are concerned. He tells me also that he finds it difficult even to carry on his routine work of the office. Now that deputy registrars have been appointed, he has to supervise the work of the districts, and therefore the proposal to create a new post appears very essential. And as regards the allocation of duties between the Joint Registrar and himself, he says that the new Joint Registrar will take a definite part of his duties, of course subject to his general control and he will also relieve the Registrar of important duties connected with the financing of the movement, and inspection of the work of the deputy and assistant registrars. Till now, we have been confining our attention to co-operative credit societies. Of late we have taken up the work also of non-credit section. That means an enormous amount of work, and it is highly necessary that if the Registrar is not to be mulcted in financial loss as the Act lays the whole responsibility on himself, it is necessary that we should grant him this help."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Of what cadre the new officer will be? Is he beyond the financial control of this House?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The appointment is open to either a Provincial Service officer or a junior officer of the Indian Civil Service, the pay to be Rs. 1,000 to 1,200. If a junior member of the Indian Civil Service is appointed, he will get his grade pay plus Presidency allowance. The post is provided in the budget estimate of this year, and it has to be voted upon. At present the post is proposed to be temporarily sanctioned for a period of one year, and after experience is gained, the question of continuing it will be considered."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Who will be appointed, a Provincial Service officer or an I.C.S. officer?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"It is open to the Government to appoint a member of either Service, but it does not arise for consideration till the Council passes the budget."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I for one will completely bear out the statement that the Registrar is really over-worked, because personally I had to see him on many points in connexion with, not credit societies but co-operative, agricultural and industrial societies. It is one of the objects to which I have been devoting my attention for a long time and hope to devote the same attention hereafter too. Though my hon. Friend the Minister attacks me and many others here with ignorance of the subject, I think I can at least assure him that I have been taking some sort of interest in these matters, though not of practical value, in starting co-operative credit societies. But my present object is to devote as much time as possible to starting co-operative, agricultural and other societies. One defect in the constitution of the Registrars in India and especially in this Presidency is that the Registrar is overburdened with an amount of detail which should be left to the people themselves. He should give only the necessary assistance, leaving the societies to start in their own way, provided they do not undertake financial risks of a fraudulent character or of a character which will ruin the society in the future. That is the only one important matter on which the officer on the spot may refer to the Registrar. But as to the organization itself, I think leaders of society or community are sufficiently advanced to look after themselves and to see what sort of help is needed and how a society is to be started. There is an amount of literature which is available not only in connexion with the societies in England or in India but also in the Continent of Europe where the societies have developed to a very great extent on the initiative of the people themselves and with very little interference from the authorities. I think that now the deputy registrars have been assisting the Registrar and there are also a number of assistant registrars; the advisory portion of the work should be left entirely to them and the Registrar should not call for papers or reports or deal with this work. What happens now is this. When deputy registrars and assistant registrars in the case of co-operative societies submit their proposals with all the details to the Registrar, all sorts of questions are raised which interfere with the initiative. Personally, I think this initiative as to organization and as to development should be left to the organizers themselves. I think, if the Registrar is overburdened, it is not his own fault. The Act places such duties upon him, and I think it is necessary that the Act should be amended on the lines suggested. So, I do not see any reason for the appointment of a Joint Registrar."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" It is an All-India Act."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" This Government is quite authorized to amend the Act when it wants with the previous sanction of the Governor-General. So, what is needed is more of autonomy, more of encouragement and more of self-reliance on the part of the people; only the local official, Assistant Registrar or Deputy Registrar, should be allowed to interfere when there is a risk of cheating people or of other malpractices on the part of the directors or secretary. These are matters which the local official can deal with. I do not see why everything should be submitted by the deputy registrars and assistant registrars to the Registrar? There is a feeling and, properly too, that there is too much of interference of the Registrar and of the officials with the starting of these societies. Let us take an instance—I shall not refer to a particular society—there are a number of people, leaders of communities who want to organize parish societies, agricultural societies. They meet together and then call upon the Assistant Registrar. The rules have to be framed, and the matter is kept pending with the Deputy Registrar and the Assistant Registrar for several months. It must be borne in mind that the leaders of the community are themselves quite capable of drawing up these rules.

"In this way a lot of time is wasted and very often several months pass before a society is started. Meantime people lose heart and the whole thing ends in a fiasco. So, what I would urge is that assistant registrars and deputy registrars should relieve themselves of very many interferences with the people. There are certain matters in which time should not at all be lost. I think people have a sufficient knowledge of the working of these co-operative societies and therefore they may be allowed to shift for themselves and start societies without any paternal or maternal interference. (Laughter). A large number of my friends who have a good deal to do with the starting of co-operative societies will bear me out in this matter. Very often these officers say that if a particular society is started it will interfere with the working of another society. There are people who want to start societies in different places and I ask why should they be prevented from doing so?"

25th March 1926] [Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

Mr. A. RAVASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" On a point of order, Sir. How is this relevant to the appointment of a Joint Registrar?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" It is in this way relevant because these Deputy Registrars and Assistant Registrars come and interfere very often with the people. I have worked for the starting of co-operative societies not only in this Presidency but also in Bombay. Whenever I came during vacation to my native place I used to advise my friends to start co-operative societies and had also given them advice as to how they should work those societies. I have got a good deal of experience in this matter, and I have found that there has been too much interference on the part of officials. I think the Assistant Registrar and Deputy Registrar can be very well relieved of this work and people left well alone for themselves. The creation of this appointment will only add to the number of heads of departments to which I called attention this morning, namely, Director, Deputy Director, Registrars and so on, who will poke their nose unnecessarily in matters concerning the starting of co-operative societies. So, Sir, I think that people may be allowed to shift for themselves, and if that is done it will give very good results. The only thing that is needed is that there should be provision for the control of these societies by a proper auditor. If this is done it will prevent many irregularities which may arise in the working of these societies."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" I am entirely at one with my hon. Friend Mr. Saldanha in the matter of starting co-operative societies. If there has been any serious interference, and if my hon. Friend is able to bring instances where the Assistant Registrar has unnecessarily interfered to my notice, then the matter will be enquired into."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—" Sir, there is some force in the argument put forward by my hon. Friend from South Kanara. There is too much of interference in the department by the higher officials. The hon. the Minister instead of meeting that argument says that instances should be brought to his notice. I hope he will bestow some consideration over the matter and see that such interferences do not take place in future. However I shall be glad to withdraw my motion if the hon. the Minister for Development gives me an undertaking that an Indian will be appointed for the post under discussion."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT :—" Is the hon. Minister prepared to give that assurance?"

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" May I point out, Sir, that the discretion to appoint a particular man is vested in His Excellency the Governor? Therefore it is not possible for any Member of this Government to give any assurance about such appointments."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—" The hon. the Minister may recommend an Indian?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" The observations will be noted."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[25th March 1926]

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" Sir, I beg to move
'that the allotment of Rs. 7.36 lakhs for co-operative societies be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I should like to point out to the hon. the Minister in charge of Development that there are only ten Honorary Assistant Registrars in the whole Presidency and it was only after I made representations to him he appointed a few more candidates and that only lasted for a year, and not more than that, as any other appointment. I think they make the appointments in the month of June or July."

(A voice :—" May '.)

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" I am glad for the correction. They make the appointments in May. The Assistant Registrar takes the initiative and recommends persons to the Registrar and the latter approves of them, and afterwards forwards their names to the Development Minister who finally appoints them as Honorary Assistant Registrars.

"From the statistics that I have before me I find that we have got some 174 co-operative credit societies run by the department and 1,024 societies run by the Labour department. In South Arcot there are no societies at all run by the department. Let me mention the number of societies run by the Co-operative department in the various districts—

Anantapur ... 20	Gōdāvari, East. ... 9	Malabar ... 9
North Arcot ... 25	Gōdāvari, West. ... 7	Nellore ... 80
South Arcot ... 19	Guntur ... 38	Ramnad ... 28
Bellary ... 6	South Kanara ... 3	Salem ... 16
Chingleput ... 84	Kistna ... 23	Tanjore ... 2
Chittoor ... 17	Kurnool ... 82	Tinnevely ... 42
Coimbatore ... 44	Madras ... 47	Trichinopoly ... 16
Cuddapah ... 81	Madura ... 10	Vizagapatam ... 1
Ganjām ... 5

"Sir, the societies run or started by the Labour department or under their supervision are nil in Anantapur, so also in North Arcot and various other places."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" The societies started by the Labour department do not come under this motion. So I want to know how they are relevant to our present motion."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" I have very constantly pointed out the absence of Honorary Assistant Registrars belonging to the depressed classes. It is only to bring that fact into prominence that I am raising this question in connexion with this motion. If my hon. Friend had waited for a little while he would have understood the reason why I raised that question here."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" It is not a question of understanding my hon. Friend. I know it is a very difficult matter. I merely pointed out that that question should not be brought under this motion as the Labour department is in charge of the hon. the Home Member."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" Well, I already pointed out there are several societies run by the Labour department, and I am not going to deal with them now."

25th March 1926]

[Mr. R. Veerian]

"What I want to point out is the qualification that these Honorary Assistant Registrars should possess. They must have some previous connexion with the co-operative movements or societies, and they must also be capable of starting societies. They must also be able to utilize their time in touring throughout the districts in order to teach to the people the advantages of co-operative societies. What do I find here? In some districts there are no co-operative credit societies at all. If Honorary Assistant Registrars were to be appointed from among the depressed classes, I am sure they will mix freely with the depressed classes and teach them all the advantages of co-operative societies. There is no use of appointing people who already hold lot of honorary appointments, namely, the membership of a union board, or the membership of a taluk board or municipal council and so on, or who have got lot of private engagements. They must be people who can afford to spare their time out of sympathy and interest and for the sake of humanity. There is no use of appointing persons who hold lot of honorary appointments. It will be just like the Tamil proverb அறுக்கமாட்டாதவன் கையில ஐம்பத்தெட்டு அறுவாராம் which means—what is the use of giving 58 sickles to a man who is unable to use even one? When Government appoint persons as members of district board or taluk board or municipal council they give one and the same man membership in each board. I do not object to Government giving a man any number of appointments. But in this case the appointments are all honorary, and persons who are already holding various positions will not be useful inasmuch as they will not be able to devote their time to this work."

"Sir, I only wanted to say that the hon. Minister would try his best to see that as many candidates as possible from the depressed classes were appointed as Honorary Assistant Registrars. He cannot say that there are no suitable candidates among the depressed classes because all these societies should be run either by the president or the secretary among themselves and I have given a list of names of members belonging to the depressed classes who will be able to discharge their duties as Honorary Assistant Registrars satisfactorily if they are appointed as such. If these appointments were given to the members of the depressed classes they will be able to teach their fellowmen the advantages of co-operative societies, so that there may be many societies for them."

"I hope, Sir, that the hon. Minister will not hereafter find any difficulty in appointing suitable candidates. I have already given a list of names but only very few of them are selected. I hope that at least this year many of them will be appointed. It is not a question of appointing those persons whose names I have given; I shall be content if members of the depressed classes are appointed."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Sir, I am very sorry that the hon. Member, Mr. Veerian, has missed the whole point in the appointment of Honorary Assistant Registrars. The principle that we follow is that the gentleman should be recommended by the union in which he is a member of the governing body and he should have certain other qualifications besides. I have appointed all the members of the depressed classes who have been recommended by the unions of which they are members of the governing bodies. If any gentleman in the list given by my hon. Friend succeed in getting into the governing body of a union and if the union recommends him I shall have the greatest pleasure in appointing him. Without the consent of the governing body it will be absolutely impossible for me to make any appointments. But in a few instances, out of regard to the hon. Member, Mr. Veerian, I have been obliged to go a little out of the way."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I wish only to mention, Sir, that the provision for co-operative inspectors employed in the Labour department is included here, and if the hon. Member, Mr. Veerian, wants to mention anything regarding them, this is the time for him to do so."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"The hon. Minister said that the candidate must have some connexion with the governing body of a union, but I have come across instances where the members appointed from other communities have no connexion with the governing body."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The demand was put to the House and carried and the grant was made.

DEMAND XXV—CINCHONA.

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'that Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 1.36 lakhs for Cinchona.'"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 900 for pay of establishments be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I want to urge on the Government the necessity of distributing quinine free or at the old cheap rates. It is one of the departments that is now earning a profit. Last year the profit was Rs. 3,28,115. Next financial year it is expected to yield a profit of about two lakhs. I am not entering into the question whether the estimate of the profits is correct or not. I only want to mention that the Government while making such huge profits from this department are callous to the needs of the poor people, especially in the malarial tracts. Formerly quinine used to be sold in 'pice packets'. Though now also they are called 'pice packets' their real cost is nine pies. This increase in cost hits hard on the poor man. In going through the jungles of South Kanara, in the remote corners of this world which are malaria-ridden, much difficulty is experienced in getting quinine. For example, I met a man who was shivering with fever and when I asked him why he should not go to the post office and take quinine, he laughed at my question and said that the post office was six or seven miles off and that it was very difficult to walk through the jungles. Several such cases have come to my notice. Fancy the difficulty of walking six or seven miles through a jungle for the sake of getting quinine! Besides the post office some more agencies should be formed for the sale of quinine. The village panchayats the village munsifs, the other revenue officials such as the tahsildar and the deputy collector who tour round the districts and the missionaries can be made to serve as agencies. They might have quinine with them to distribute freely or at cheap rates. (Mr. K. Prabhakaran Tampan : 'Members of Legislative Council also). Of course my friend suggests that Members of Legislative Council also might be made to serve as such agencies. They are expected to tour round the constituency; I do not know whether all of them travel; but I do a great deal of travel to study the condition of the people. It is a very good suggestion that came from the hon. Member for Malabar. He has also got large jungles (laughter). It will be very useful if he goes round the estates with some quinine for free distribution. I have urged this point off and on by putting questions and the reply that I have received is that the matter is under the consideration of Government. I wonder why such a simple matter as that should be under the consideration of the Government for months and months and years and years. On these matters, Government should decide quickly and in a generous manner also."

25th March 1926]

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, I should like to say that the Cinchona department has been commercialized and we are running it on business principles. A business concern cannot consistently be run on charitable lines. Under the circumstances, giving quinine free to anybody and everybody is impossible. On the other hand, we might certainly see that quinine is given to all those who are in real need of it. I understand that Government have under consideration the free distribution of quinine in malarial areas. The Director of Public Health has been asked to specify the malarial tracts where quinine could be distributed free. When they receive the report from the Director, Government will consider the question of distributing quinine free in malarial areas. Besides this quinine is also distributed free in dispensaries which are now-a-days opened in large numbers. Under these circumstances, I hope the hon. Member will not press his motion."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Sir, I am glad to hear from the hon. Member that Government have adopted or are going to adopt the method of free distribution of quinine in malarial areas. The proposals of my hon. Friend, Mr. Saldanha, are worthy of serious consideration by the hon. the Home Member. He stated that the department has been commercialized, and at the end also stated that the free distribution of quinine in malarial areas was under consideration by the Government. There is nothing inconsistent with business principles in having commercialized this department and adopting the suggestions of my hon. Friend if Government do not want to gain large profits or if they do not want any profits at all. Three suggestions were made by my hon. Friend. One was that quinine should be distributed free in malarial areas, the second was that the price of quinine should be reduced, and the third was that the agencies for the distribution of quinine should be increased. For the latter two suggestions, the hon. the Home Member has not replied. There must be other agencies which are easily accessible to the people besides the post offices to sell or give free quinine. With regard to the other suggestion that quinine should be reduced in price, I do not suggest that the Government should lose by the free distribution of quinine. But the profit may be minimised. I hope my hon. Friend will bear these suggestions in mind and give effect to them."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"As I have said already, Government are waiting for the report of the Director of Public Health. When the report is received Government will consider very carefully the question of the distribution of quinine free in malarial areas. At that time the question of the agency through which it is distributed will also be considered. But the lowering of the price of quinine will not be quite consistent with the policy of Government in distributing quinine free in malarial areas. At present I am unable to give any undertaking until the Director of Public Health submits his report. But I am prepared to consider sympathetically the hon. Member's suggestion with regard to the free distribution of quinine in malarial areas."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, on behalf of the people of the malarial areas I wish to express my hearty thanks for the assurance of the hon. the Home Member. As to the rural dispensaries about which so much is made I am afraid they are only increasing very, very slowly. They are situated at long distances and it is unlikely that many doctors will come forward to establish dispensaries in those jungle tracts for obvious reasons. In South Kanara and Malabar as in many other places what are called villages are not collections of houses in particular places; but each village is composed of various houses at long distances from one another. The houses do not aggregate in one particular area, as it is the case in the delta villages. The area covered by the village will be five or six miles round. The difficulty is whether doctors establishing dispensaries in those places can make it accessible to all the people distributed over a great area."

p.m.

"What I suggest, and I am sure that hon. Members on that side will agree with me, is that agencies other than rural dispensaries and post offices, should be found. The village officers are easily accessible to the people. They know the people and they must be given freedom to sell quinine cheaply and distribute it freely. There is danger—the Government is aware—of profiteering on the part of shopkeepers. They purchase large quantities of quinine. The village officers may be allowed to sell quinine in large quantities. People who own dispensaries and shops make a large profit by selling quinine. Not more than a certain quantity should be given to each individual. I think that such control should be exercised. Large firms appreciate and carry out the policy of combining charity with business. A lot of charity is done by large firms to their labourers."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The demand was put to the House and carried and the grant made.

DEMAND XXVI—INDUSTRIES.

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'for a grant not exceeding Rs. 11.26 lakhs for expenditure under Industries.'

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 54,300 for other establishments be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object is to raise the question of the unsatisfactory way in which the defective measures, weights and scales are used in dealing with the public by the vendors without any check whatever. This matter of having defective measures affects not only the poor classes of people but also the rich classes. I have travelled to several places but I am not going to say what I found in those places. I wish to confine myself for the present to two districts—Salem and Coimbatore. In Erode there is a shandi. There I found especially women—they are very clever—having defective measures concealed between their thighs. The vendors sit near the rice basket with defective measures concealed between their thighs. I asked one vendor to sit in another place and I was able to find it out then. I am not vested with police powers. There were no police there. The vendor said that he would go from that place. I found out afterwards that he did not do so. I thought there ought to be some understanding between the police and the vendors. I know for certain that the local bodies can frame rules and appoint a person to supervise these things. They can get a standard measure from the office of the Tahsildar, entrust it to the Supervisor, and ask him to check the measures. In other local areas the matter is much worse. The Tahsildar is not able to cope with this work and these things are allowed to continue on shandi days without being rectified. It seriously affects as I said not only the poor classes of people but also the rich classes. The Coimbatore municipality passed a resolution to appoint a person to check the measures. We got standard measures and weights and entrusted them to the officer in charge to check the measures. In the matter of weights also the vendors do the same thing. Even in the shops where they sell cloth they do not use proper yard scales. I hope the hon. the Minister will do something to rectify the serious defect and see that the vendors do possess always standard measures and weights on any account."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" The hon. Member referred to Salem and Erode. He said that in one place the police did not do their duty, and in another place the local bodies did not do their duty. I am sorry I have no jurisdiction either over the police or the municipality."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,04,800 for Direction be reduced by Rs. 101.'

"I move it with a view to request the hon. the Minister for Development to appoint a committee or other agency to enquire into the causes of decline in the number of those dependent on weaving and other industries in the Ceded districts and to suggest measures for improving their economic condition. If the hon. the Minister will be so good as to refer to the Census Report for which he does not seem to have much of admiration, he will find that the percentage of population living by industries is gradually on the decline. It has fallen down. I asked a question regarding this matter and as a matter of supplementary information on the subject I informed the hon. the Minister for Development that the number of weavers was 166,000 in 1901, and the number was 120,000 in 1911. In 1921 it was much less. You will see that within the course of 30 years according to the Census Report, the number has come down by more than half. The hon. Minister was so good as to say that he would go into the matter. I suppose he referred the matter to the Director of Industries. The Director was so good as to ask me to let him know wherefrom I got the information. I furnished him the source from which I got the information which I had placed before the House. That was in January 1925. I do not know what subsequently transpired, whether any enquiry was made in the matter and if so, what results were arrived at."

[25th March 1926]

Mr. R. MADANAGOPAL NAYUDU :—"Mr. President, Sir, I wish to draw the attention of the hon. Minister to something which took place in Mopada. Two people wanted help to start cottage industries and they applied for a loan. Provision is made in section 5 (1) of the State Aid to Industries Act for giving loans to cottage industries. The words 'cottage industries' do not seem to find a place in the Act and the Government, after application had been put in, passed an order on the 3rd February that 'cottage industries' would refer to industries in which people do work at home and in which middlemen are not profited to the least extent. The interests of many persons who can really do some work are affected by this definition of 'cottage industries'. I may tell you that there is a street in Madras where khaddar is being sold. We wanted to see that number of persons who earned a living by weaving cloths in their own houses, are helped. Though the Act is quite clear on the matter and though I understand the loan can be granted, the Government have ordered on the 3rd February refusing aid to these people. I request the hon. the Minister to reconsider the Government Order and see that help is rendered to these people. A number of people are maintaining themselves by this industry. It may be that cloth woven may go directly to the buyers in Madras or in some other place. No middlemen are profited by this industry. Therefore I would urge upon the hon. Minister to see that the help is given under the Act to persons living by these industries."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, the hon. Member from Bellary wanted to know what had happened to the question raised by him regarding the decline of the weaver class in Bellary. As he is aware, the Director of Industries held an enquiry in that matter. The hon. Member evidently does not know the result of the enquiry. I shall be very glad to give him a copy of the report of the Director of Industries. I do not want to read the report here. Unless I read the whole of it, it might leave misleading impressions on the House."

"With regard to the question raised by the hon. Member, Mr. Madanagopal Nayudu, the Government are of opinion that cottage industries, as defined in the Act, cannot be taken to include industries which are run in the fashion referred to by the hon. Member, where money-lenders or merchants act as capitalists and employ labourers who work in their own homes while the whole profit goes to the capitalists. The term 'cottage industries' must be taken to be limited to industries where only the workman is benefited and nobody else such as capitalists, etc."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Sir, I am not surprised at the summary way in which this question has been treated. Here is a very serious matter brought to the notice of the Government. I say that a large section of the population dependent on home industries has gone down to less than half and that even those who are left are not at all in a thriving state. The Government say they have conducted an enquiry but that no conclusions were arrived at. I am glad that they are willing to give me a copy of that report. I shall take it and go through it. Meanwhile, may I ask the Government what they propose to do now on the report?"

Mr. R. MADANAGOPAL NAYUDU :—"Sir, so far as my information goes, no money-lenders are profited. Money is got on behalf of the people

[25th March 1926] [Mr. R. Madanagopal Nayudu]

I referred to and it is distributed to them. The profits go to the persons who ask for these loans and not to any other capitalist."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Sir, the Government did not take any action on that report except simply to peruse it. As regards the question raised by Mr. Madanagopal Nayudu, I do not think these two gentlemen from Mopada were money-lenders at all. I was only dealing with it as a general question. I did not say anything relating to those particular gentlemen. I said 'money-lenders or merchants'. I have not said that any application was received from either."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, the other day during the general discussion of the budget estimates, I raised the question of aiding industries, and the reply was given to me that the State Aid to Industries Act applied to cottage or nascent industries. If it is not so effective as to enable Government to come at this critical stage to the help of a large number of weaving and other industries, that Act ought to be amended. Surely there can be nothing in an Act that cannot be changed at all. On a broader question of policy, in the present condition of things brought about by the exchange and currency questions that tell against us, by the stringency of the money market which Government have referred to in their report more than once and by other difficulties that work against our interests, I think Government ought to devise a measure for the relief of these industries. There is no doubt that what takes place in Bellary, to the same extent or more or less to some extent, takes place elsewhere too. I have already brought to the notice of this Council the distressful condition of our industries in South Kanara. They are not nascent industries; but they are in a distressful condition. Cannot Government devise some measure, whether it be this Government or the Government of India on the recommendation of this Government? Surely, this question must be tackled. Our industries cannot be allowed to go to ruin. If the sufferings of the people increase, unemployment also increases. Already there are many people out of employ on account of retrenchment in the different departments. This by itself has raised a very serious question. Every one of us know what unemployment means in the districts as well as in the city. In this city itself, there have been many firms which have become bankrupt, and the insolvency Court of Madras is full of applications of this sort and the receivers make a very good profit in the districts on account of these Insolvency proceedings against a large number of persons (Laughter). I have been told that at the end of the financial year or before June many more firms will go into liquidation all over the Presidency and I have also been told that this state of things applies to the rest of India. I am sure that the hon. the Finance Member, who has great sympathy for our people, with the noble heart that he has, will appreciate our difficulties and will join the hon. the Minister for Development in devising some measure to relieve the distress prevailing throughout the Presidency. Bellary cries and the people of Bellary have a very good advocate in my friend Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar; but the cries come from other places also and I will echo the distressful cry of the South Kanara district. In Malabar also the same thing happens. I went to Cannanore the other day and I heard about the same distress there about the weaving industry, and it has been accentuated on account of the tax levied by the municipality. This matter, I think, is already before the Courts. The municipality having no other resources to come to its rescue, resorts to taxation on the ground that hand looms are dangerous and can be taxed. What sympathy can we expect from the municipal chairman, born and bred up in service who has little sympathy for the poor people or from the revenue servants. There is want of sympathy on the part of the authorities combined with indifference. Here is a cry raised—and my friend from Bellary never raises a cry without sufficient grounds for it—and I am raising a cry, and the Development Secretary and Minister treat them with indifference. I earnestly hope that this question will be taken up very earnestly and not treated in an offhand manner as it has always been treated."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"On a point of personal explanation, Sir. I wish to assure the Member from South Kanara that I never treated them with indifference and that any suggestion that emanates from them will receive our immediate attention."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"But, Sir, his words do not bear him out. We judge the hon. the Minister by the sort of sympathy he expresses, and by his readiness to do something. I am sure the hon. Members will join together to help the Government—and I shall be glad to collect some volunteers in my district—if only the Government care to enquire into the matter. I am sure the hon. Member from Malabar will also join me in this move. Only Government should show some readiness to help. The way in which they treat us is not only indifferent but it almost amounts to cruelty. I do not know the reason for their treating us in this manner. It is really very galling to us. As the hon. the Leader of the House showed the other day, the House has recognized the fact that Government have treated us so far with a good amount of care and it has been a matter of gratification to us—I acknowledge this along with others—and the hon. the Finance Member has been very careful in this matter and giving a patient hearing to our complaints. But when it comes to our own Minister, after I appealed to him and to the Secretary who is also joining him in everything that he says, and shown how they have been treating these matters, where is the exposition of the policy of the Government? I want some more light to be thrown on the policy of the Government."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"I am sorry, Sir, I cannot see my way to withdraw the resolution. Any Government, Sir, which has the welfare of its subjects at heart would surely have taken some action in this matter and tried to find out what the causes for this decline are and see what they could do to remedy such of them as were capable of being remedied. Taking the textile industry, Sir, which includes weaving and spinning, the number of weavers and spinners in 1901 were 65,000; now they number only 19,000. Can the Government sit quiet and look with complacency on such a decline from 65,000 to 19,000 in these twenty years? The number dependent on all industries was then 167,000 and it has now come down to 77,000. There must be something wrong. Is it that the figures are not correct, or is it that the people have migrated to foreign parts? Where did they go to and why? Is it not a matter for explanation? I am very sorry, Sir, that the Government have not given any encouragement in this matter and I leave the question to be voted upon and let the Government have the joy of deciding the question any way they like."

The motion was put to the House and lost.

[25th March 1926]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Sir, I move the motion that stands in my name, namely,

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,04,800 for Direction be reduced by Rs. 100'

"The object of my motion, Sir, is to draw the attention of the Government and also of this House to the policy underlying the appointment of Director of Industries and the desirability of changing that policy. At present those who are appointed as Director of Industries are members of the Indian Civil Service. Probably it is superfluous for me to say that I have nothing to say against the estimable gentlemen who have occupied this responsible position during the last few years. On the other hand, some of them are my personal friends and all of them are men of capacity, character and integrity and have bestowed considerable attention upon the department as the head of which they were appointed. My point is this, namely, that the present system leads to no continuity of policy leads to lack of efficiency and also to want of economy. Just to take one or two instances. Within the last few years, there have been, to my knowledge—if my memory does not fail me—about four or five officers of the Indian Civil Service who have been at the head of this department. Some time ago Mr. Innes, now Sir Charles Innes, was the head of that department. He was bestowing considerable attention upon the work of this department and by the time he studied its needs and was in a position to handle the department more or less efficiently, he was transferred from the sphere of his work and was called away to Calcutta and Delhi where he adorns a high and responsible position now. He was succeeded—I am not referring to these officers in the order of dates—immediately or some time after by my friend Mr. Campbell who is now the Chief Secretary. He was at the head of the department for some time and again by the time he studied the work of the department and picked up the threads of the work, he was transferred to the Board of Revenue and subsequently to the Secretariat as Chief Secretary; so that all his experience and study were lost to the Government and to the people. Subsequently, my friend Mr. Cotton was appointed as Director of Industries. He too bestowed considerable attention, and I personally know more of his work than of his predecessor. By the time he became efficient, he was sent away as the Resident in Travancore and Cochin and subsequently as Agent to the Governor-General for the South Indian States. That is the position. Subsequent to that, Sir, Mr. Thomas was appointed as the Director of Industries and he has been presiding over the destinies of this department for the last two or three years.

"I dare say that by this time he must have learnt everything connected with this department, at any rate, such things as would enable him to administer the department with efficiency. I learn from the newspapers now, that he is going on leave and he is to be succeeded by Sir T. Vijayaraghava Achariyar. I do not know how long he will be permitted to be in the department. If this policy goes on, practically the department, the Government, and the country will not be benefited. It leads as I said to lack of efficiency, high expenditure and other similar defects. My suggestion is therefore to appoint a professional man, an expert as the Director of Industries. Of course, his pay will not necessarily be so high as the pay of the senior members of the Civil Service. There will also be a continuity of policy. As matters stand, the continuity of policy in the case of this department depends more or less on the Deputy Director. It is not desirable that a subordinate officer as he happens to be should be left in charge of the policy of the department. If an expert is appointed, he will be holding the place till his retirement. In point of efficiency, in point of economy and in fact in many other ways it will be advisable. In support of my suggestion, I have the high authority of the Retrenchment Committee, presided over by Sir Charles Todhunter. My hon. Friend, Mr. Usman, was also a member of that committee. In fact the suggestion that I have made and the grounds that I have urged in its support are exactly those made in that report. The Committee have devoted considerable attention to the subject and I may read a few sentences from and not the whole of paragraph 230 at page 100 of their report:

4 p.m.

[Mr. M. Krishna Nayar]

"These requirements can, in the opinion of the Committee, appropriately be applied to the post of the Director also as it seems to them undesirable that continuity of the work and policy should depend on the Deputy Director and not on the head of the department. An example of the lack of continuity has been supplied to them in the case of the district organisation which had twice been radically altered in the space of two years. Other instances of a similar nature has come to the notice of the Committee none of which has tended to secure continuity or even as a rule economy. The difficulty that has been experienced and the results that have ensued from the frequent changes in the personnel of the department seem to necessitate a change in the policy in regard to this office. The Committee therefore recommend that the post of Director should be held by an officer of the department and not by a member of the Indian Civil Service. Such an officer would require a personal assistant capable of dealing with statistics, staff and accounts and intelligence. The substitution of an officer of the department on a salary in the neighbourhood of Rs. 1,500 would not only tend to efficiency and continuity but would result in a saving of practically Rs. 25,000 per annum."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR:—"I think there must be something wrong, Sir, as obviously Rs. 25,000 works out to more than Rs. 2,000 a month."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Probably, my hon. Friend does not know of the circumstances which induced the committee to come to this conclusion. It is not likely that they mentioned this as a haphazard figure."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR:—"It cannot possibly be on the pay of the individual officer."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Certainly I can understand that, Sir. The pay of the individual officer I believe changes from time to time. I do not know whether the pay that was paid to Mr. Innes, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Cotton and Mr. Thomas were all the same. They have a scale of pay and probably some allowances also. I am perfectly at one with the hon. Member in saying that the entire amount of Rs. 25,000 cannot be on the pay alone of the officer."

"As I understand that Sir Vijayaraghava Achariyar has already been appointed, all my observations will apply to him also. He is not a professional man, he is not a permanent man of the department. He will be here only as a stop gap and when he grows sufficiently high in the service, he will be sent up. Now that the appointment has been made, I hope that the observations which I have now made will be borne in mind and the suggestion of the Retrenchment Committee will be considered and adopted."

* Mr. C. E. WOOD:—"Sir, I would like to endorse some of the views of my hon. Friend Mr. Krishnan Nayar, in this matter and I think I must do so as having been a member of the Retrenchment Committee to which he referred. I think the point which the Retrenchment Committee wished to make was that there must be continuity in this office. I do not think there was any feeling that the Indian Civil Service was not fit to hold the appointment because after all, it is an appointment for a good administrator rather than for a specialist. And I think the feeling was that there could not be continuity if appointments were made from the Indian Civil Service because as the holder of the appointment becomes more senior in the service, his pay gets to be more than the post warrants and that therefore it is necessary to look outside the Indian Civil Service if there is to be continuity. There is however one thing which I do not agree with. My hon. Friend has just said—I might have misunderstood him—that the post should be held by a professional man and an expert. It is quite impossible to have an expert who is an expert in all the matters that come before the Industries department. Therefore I think that provided we have a good administrator, we should leave the expert part of the business to the expert staff. My authority for that is the Report of the Indian Industrial Commission which made a great point of that. In paragraph 311, the Commission refers to the appointment of the Director of Industries and said that he must be a man of special qualifications, which include in the first place 'business sense, the capacity of appreciating the technical features of industry and their bearing on commercial possibilities and the ability to form conclusions as to the commercial soundness of a scheme worked out by the technical expert.' The Commission then went on to say that these qualifications were found in the Indian Civil Service frequently and finished that paragraph by saying that if a properly qualified industrialist was not forthcoming the balance of advantages in these cases was in favour of the selection of a Director from one or other of the existing services. But in paragraph 213, the Commission points out that the department would require in most of the provinces a large staff of officers with special qualifications, experts. It is the staff, in my opinion, that should consist of experts and not the Director."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"In making the present appointment of Sir T. Vijayaraghava Achariyar as the Director of Industries, attention was paid to the report of the Retrenchment Committee as well as to the Report of the Industrial Commission, and it is after taking stock of all the circumstances of the case that we found it necessary to appoint Sir T. Vijayaraghava Achariyar. Although technically it may be said that he is not a professional expert for the reasons given in the Industrial Commission's report, I think he comes up to that standard, and there are other reasons also which led to the appointment. It is not necessary for me to go into them. However, the observation of my hon. Friend Mr. Krishnan Nayar, will appear in the proceedings of the Council and they will have their due weight."

* Mr. K. Chavadi SUBRAHMANYA PILLAI:—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I am very glad to associate myself with all that has been said by my hon. Friend, Mr. Krishnan Nayar. My idea in supporting a Motion of this sort is not to reduce a pie out of the allotment, but simply to know whether the amount that is spent is usefully spent in making this department a channel for developing industries and for maintaining in a state of efficiency such industries as show signs of decline. I should like to state that industry is one of the indispensable items which require special attention of the Government. For the development of industries I would suggest that it is preferable to appoint professional experts rather than Indian Civil Service officers. It is only these experts who are expected to know what concern is profitable and useful to the general public and to know the way to manufacture things so as to be able to make the Indian product compete in the market. It is industry which has brought many nations to a flourishing condition. I therefore request the hon. Minister for Development to devote his special attention to industry and develop it and to do this by placing a real expert at the head."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. Moir :—" Sir, on this much disputed and recurring question of how the selection of the head of departments such as our Industries department should be made, I have really very little to add to what has fallen from the lips of the hon. Member behind me, Mr. Wood. I think there is a tendency, as he pointed out, to confuse sometimes the two issues of the expert or specialist, and the question of continuity. They are entirely different aspects of the case. And Mr. Wood has pointed out so far as the value of an expert goes, it must necessarily be somewhat limited. For example, the advice of a textile expert might be of little value in some question on practical engineering and in the same way the advice of an engineer might be of very little value on a question of weaving practice. But I quite admit that it is assistance to any one who is the head of a department such as the department of Industries, if he does combine with the other essential qualities a certain experience of an industry of some kind or other. But even assuming that you would be more likely to secure continuity by the appointment of an expert simply on the ground that he is permanently attached to the particular department and that it is most unlikely that his services will be transferred from that department to another, that does not really cover the whole ground at issue. Now, there are services in this country which do confer on those serving in them much larger administrative experience and outlook than a mere functioning in a special appointment. Although I quite agree that it is desirable that an officer who is appointed to such a post merely on the ground that he has administrative capacity should serve as long as possible or at any rate for a considerable period, I think that that argument itself can be over-stressed. It is true, as was pointed out by the hon. Member from Malabar, that we have had a succession of four or five distinguished officers holding this post during the last few years. But after all, there is this aspect of the matter to be considered. Each of these officers did bring to this post a very considerable knowledge of the conditions of this country and of its people, and that experience is necessarily much wider I think than any of our specialists could profess to possess. But apart from that, I do think that if the records of the department were examined, it would be found that each of these officers in his turn had contributed something of value to the department, to its organisation or to its lines of enquiry and investigation; and that is something in a department of this kind which is continually having to meet changed conditions and changing demands. I do not think it is really disputed that the department has had at its disposal the services of a series of men who were in a position to render services of that kind and to bring varied and different knowledge to bear upon its problems. It is true, as Mr. Krishnan Nayar has pointed out, that the officers at the head of this department have recently been those belonging to the Indian Civil Service. But it is not always so. We have had other officers who are not members of the Civil Service, and we are now going to have as head of the department an Indian member of the Provincial Civil Service, and in his case too, I think we may reasonably hope that he in his turn will bring to the consideration of the problems of the department new experience and knowledge and that if and when the time comes when, as my hon. Friend suggests, he may move to another sphere, we shall equally find in his case that he has from his experience and knowledge been able to contribute something valuable and considerable to the needs of the department. We are, I think, specially justified in anticipating this, because, as all Members of this House know, Sir P. Vijayaraghava Acharya has in the last two years had opportunities of studying industrial questions and other matters bearing on this department which few men in the whole of India have enjoyed. And I think we may hope that from that experience the Department of Industries in Madras will derive great benefit."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, I wish to say one or two words by way of reply. My Friend, the hon. Mr. Moir, stated that each of these Civil Service officers who was the head of this department had contributed materially to the benefit of that department, by his knowledge, study and experience. I do not for a moment dispute that proposition. In fact I myself referred, I believe, at some length to the benefit which this department derived from their experience, their toil and their work. So that, that observation, namely that, the department had benefit from these officers, does not in any way disprove the truth of what I stated, or in any way minimise the force of what I said. Then, my Friend further stated that no doubt expert knowledge was necessary, but administrative experience, skill and efficiency were also necessary. There again, I do not differ from him. Certainly administrative experience and efficiency are necessary, but they are not at all inconsistent with professional skill. Of course I perfectly agree with what my hon. Friend Mr. Wood and my hon. Friend Mr. Moir stated, namely, that even if an expert is to be appointed in the matter, it is not possible to have an expert who has a knowledge of all branches in the department. Perfectly true. I agree that it is absolutely impossible to have such an officer. But a person who has a general knowledge of all industries and has special knowledge of any one particular industry, can be found. And generally I find that departments of Industries are manned in other places by engineers because engineering will be of great assistance to the head of this Industries' Department. So that what I would advocate is the appointment of an officer who has studied some special branch of industry with a general knowledge of industries. So that what my Friends have been stating is certainly not inconsistent with what I say. Then my hon. Friend Mr. Moir stated with reference to the appointment of Sir T. Vijayaraghava Acharya that he hopes that that gentleman's experience and work also will be of benefit to this department. I have not the slightest doubt that it will be. And he stated further that his recent experience will be of considerable value. He was not specific about it, but apparently he refers to the work done and experience gained at Wembley in London in connexion with the Empire Exhibition. Certainly this experience will be of considerable value. If my memory does not fail me, I believe he has some knowledge of this department because when Sir Charles Innes was Director Mr. Vijayaraghava Acharya was his deputy, I believe. So that he has had some special experience of the particular needs of the department over which he is now asked to preside. All these things do not disprove the truth or minimise the force of what I said. In this connexion I am sorry to observe, Sir, that this morning a report was placed in our hands showing to what extent the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee in the various departments have been carried out. So far as the Industries Department is concerned, I find no reference to this aspect at all. It refers to some minor matters which do not govern the policy I have stated."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" This is only a supplemental list."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" In this portion certainly there is no reference or connexion to what I said. And if in the complete list this policy has been adopted, this would not have been the reply. So that this is certainly not dealt with in that."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" This is the second instalment."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" So, in the first instalment this has not been referred to, nor is it referred to in the second. In the third instalment I hope this policy will be carried out. With these observations I wish to withdraw the motion."

* Mr. C. E. WOOD :—" On a point of personal explanation, Sir, may I rise to say a word? I would like to make it quite clear that I was not in any way attempting to suggest any interference with the present appointment, the appointment that has just been made, because I think everybody must realize that to secure a suitable man who will fill the place with the qualifications laid down in the report of the Indian Industrial Commission will take considerable time. All that I am trying to press is that Government should admit that the recommendations of the Indian Industrial Commission are what they accept as what must be the aim in the future."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, I beg to move

'the reduction of the allotment of Rs. 1,74,500 for Industrial schools—Grants-in-aid by Rs. 100.'

(To urge for more generous aid to industrial schools in every district and taluk centre.)

"I would draw the attention of hon. Members to the report of the Department of Industries, Madras, for 1925. I do not suppose anybody has got it because I received it as a special case. There are older reports which are more or less on the same lines. I may only mention to you, Sir, that the aid given by Government to industrial schools is not quite adequate and generous enough. I find figures given in this report which show that out of the total receipts of Rs. 4 lakhs and odd which these industrial schools working in some centres have, the amount of teaching and special grants—I think these grants are given by the Government—is only Rs. 68,000. It is not even one-sixth or one-seventh of the actual expenditure."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" It is 50 per cent."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Here according to the figures given, I find that the total receipts amount to Rs. 4,20,000 and teaching and special grants amount only to Rs. 68,000."

[25th March 1926]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" I can give the hon. Member the figures worked out."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Very well, Sir. Reference is also made here at page 63 to the difficulties of some of these institutions. The report says :

'Many of the schools suffered from scarcity of funds during the year and in particular the finances of such of the institutions . . . have been hard hit by the heavy depreciation on the continental exchanges which in a number of cases has resulted in the stoppage of contributions from abroad I regret that the amount at my disposal for distribution in the form of maintenance grants was so small as to preclude my coming to the rescue of the institutions in one or two very critical cases.'

"I would appeal that in regard to these institutions which we have and which after all are not too many for a Presidency like ours which is very backward in industries, Government should be more generous, and especially when there was distress in some of the institutions where the Director could not come to their rescue, I think Government ought to have helped him with some contribution. It might also be mentioned that in the case of missionary institutions the practice is not what my hon. Friends talked about in the matter of admission of non-Christians into those institutions. The idea appears to be generally current that, as most schools are maintained by missionary bodies all over the country, these schools are not open to non-Christian pupils. This is far from the truth. The missionaries are ready to admit not only Christians but persons of any persuasion—in fact Hindus of any caste, and Muhammadans are freely admitted. Having regard to the cosmopolitan character of the institutions—and there are institutions which are purely Hindu like the Women's Home of Service at Mylapore and a number of others—Government, I think, ought to be more generous in helping these institutions, because they save the Government an amount of expenditure which would otherwise be laid on the public exchequer. There is of course a good deal of what may be called a generous sentiment expressed as to the development of industries in this country, but practically the total amount spent for this purpose and especially in the case of aided schools does not at all come up to the expectations formed from the existence of this Department of Industries itself. As I have said, we have got a very costly department as such but the expenditure for the really nation-building purposes is very small, I mean the amount spent for nation-building and industrial purposes and for purposes of spreading education is not at all commensurate with the heavy expenditure over the staff and the establishment of the department as a whole."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" This question was gone into very fully by the Industrial and Technical Education Committee sometime back. They recommended that a greater measure of assistance to these industrial schools should be given and the recommendation was accepted. I will just quote a few figures to show how far we have carried out the recommendations. In 1923-24 it was Rs. 67,500; next year it was Rs. 1,05,400; the third year it was Rs. 1,58,000 and for the fourth year Rs. 1,74,000. These figures will clearly show that there is no delay. Incidentally I may also say that in connexion with the new industrial school that is to be opened at Bezvada we are giving maintenance grant and building grant. There are also proposals in consideration to open a new industrial school either in the West coast or in the Ceded districts."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[25th March 1926]

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—“ I beg to move

‘ that the allotment of Rs. 1,800 for Investments in Government commercial undertakings be reduced by Rs. 1,000. ’

“ Sir, these Government commercial undertakings have neither been useful to the people nor profitable to Government. The Kerala Soap Institute is working at a loss. The profit that is credited to the institute this year is one which ought to have been credited for the year 1923-24, I think. That is what is stated in the budget memorandum so far as I can see. Then, the Russellkonda Saw Mill is temporarily closed with a loss of twenty thousand rupees. I hope it will be permanently closed. The Fruit Preserving institute is also working at a loss and it is unable to compete with foreign goods. I think, Sir, it is high time that a committee consisting of a majority of non-officials be constituted to enquire into these questions and put these commercial undertakings on a sound basis.”

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—“ Sir, the question of commercial undertakings by Government is one which is surrounded with many difficulties because of the limitations by which we have circumscribed ourselves. The policy of the Government being that we should first of all demonstrate that an article not hitherto manufactured in the Presidency could be produced at a standard level so far as quality is concerned, once this is established it has to be decided whether Government should undertake the manufacture of that article on a commercial scale or leave it to private enterprise. When Government undertake the commercial manufacture of any particular article and prove that it is successful, Government must then abandon it by transferring it to any private firm or person who is prepared to take it up. This policy which has been followed clearly shows that the commercial undertakings of the department cannot generally be worked at a profit. It is obvious that you have to part with an undertaking when it is bringing money as was done in the case of the Pencil factory which was proving satisfactory and earning a profit or when it is felt that the undertaking is hopeless as in the case of the Glue factory and recently in the case of the Fruit Preserving Institute at Coonoor. It is obvious in these circumstances that the final result will more often be loss rather than profit. But if you look to this side of the question by itself and your despair leads you to abandon the whole business as hopeless, it will only lead to this, that the department can do nothing to promote the growth of new industries or the development of existing ones. In other words the task which Government have undertaken is purely an experimental one. It is obvious that when you take up experimental work there must occasionally be failure and loss. The task of pioneering the industries which the department has to do is certainly by no means a light one and unless this House is prepared to give the department a chance of doing its best undeterred by losses in this concern or that, it will be impossible for the department to fulfil one of its main objects, viz., the promotion of industrial development.”

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“ I would ask for some light being thrown on this aspect of the commercial undertakings. There are several industries like carpentry, smithy and iron work which are maintained firstly in order to find employment and secondly to train a number of people in those industries so that they might eke out their own livelihood after training by opening their own shops. Some of these industries might be worked at a loss. For instance there is the Fruit industry. It is not only the Fruit industry that is important but the canning of the preserves also is a very important one which our people must learn. Europe is doing this kind of business on an enormous scale. In India the Canning industry is hardly known. There are a number of preserved foods like ginger, etc., which we preserve in bottles. How to do things without the bottle and by means of cans is a thing which our people must learn. I do not think the department gave any encouragement to training people in this direction.”

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—“ As a matter of fact, in the Tanur factory we have trained till the beginning of 1925 sixteen men besides the students who undergo training, and in the Chaliyam cannery six or seven men.”

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“ I did not refer to Chaliyam because some of these students are sent by the Native States of Baroda, Travancore, etc. Sixteen, I think, is a very small number to be trained in canning after its existence for so many years. I know that industry is a great failure. If only 16 are trained it is a very poor consolation. If ten times that number had been trained that would have been something, not very discouraging. There is hardly any room for residence at Chaliyam. The few that are there are labouring under great difficulties in the matter of finding quarters. It is far away and you have to cross a river and nobody would like to stay there. So there are practical difficulties for getting apprentices trained at Chaliyam. So far as the Coonoor factory is concerned I do not think any provision is made for training apprentices. When I wrote about this I was told that there was a prospect of its being closed. If Government wanted that Indians should learn this business, they should have already trained men. If by this time 100 persons had been trained in the art of preserving fruit, not only preserving for a few days but preserving it for years by canning it would have been a great national asset. From the point of view of national importance the training of 16 men at Chaliyam is a very small number. I would ask the Secretary of the Development Department what has been the summum bonum of all this wastage of money. I say that money was thrown away into the sea and it was a sheer wastage. If 100 persons had been trained in each of these factories as apprentices that would have been a great national asset. We would not mind the loss of several lakhs. Because it is a great thing that we get so many of our men trained. What did Germany do? What did Japan do? They sent their men to other places and got them trained and they did it in various ways. This is the way in which Germany once a backward country has now outstripped England by training its own men. What has this Industries Department done in this way? Then as for the foreign competition why close the factory at Coonoor? Can you not devise means? Why not you hand it over to some other agency? Why not you try a measure as England has done by means of a simple Act? The Safeguarding of Industries Act was passed in 1921. It is being used for the same good purpose. Then here is an Act passed by the Government of India which is meant for fostering the Bamboo-Pulp Paper industry. If the Fruit industry is to be developed in a place like Southern India with its elevated places where fruits could be grown on an extensive scale, not only in Southern India but also in Northern India and Western India where there are large plateaus and where fruits could be grown in abundance, surely the Government of India should come forward and pass an Act on the same lines.”

[25th March 1926]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar):—"The hon. Member is referring to a subject outside the competence of this Government."

p.m.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"The Government started a Fruit Preserving industry, and after working it for sometime at a loss they want to close it now, or to sell it to somebody. What I ask is this: have they at least trained a few people in the industry having spent so much money on it, have they found out by this experiment how this industry has to be developed and whether it will face foreign competition which we have got from European countries and from Australia? I feel doubtful whether the Government are really anxious to foster our national industries. If so, they should devise measures to foster industries like fruit preservation which they have started, and they should train up apprentices. On the other hand, money has been simply thrown out without benefit to anybody."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"The hon. Member the Secretary for Development said that the task of the Government in these commercial undertakings was only purely of an experimental nature, and in such cases there might be occasional failures and occasional losses. If such be the case, I have nothing to quarrel. But on the other hand almost all the commercial undertakings have either ended in failures or in losses. That is what we find, and I think I am right in saying . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"The Pencil factory and the Soap factory have been quite successful."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"I find from the Budget Memorandum that the profit that has been attributed to this year is one that ought to have been credited for the previous year. I should like to know whether it is true."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I heard the hon. Member the Secretary for Development just say that in all 16 students have been trained at the Government Cannery at Chaliyam."

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar):—"The hon. Member cannot interrupt a speech on that point."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"Apart from that, my hon. Friend from South Kanara said that there has been no development of our national industries in proportion to the amount we have spent on these commercial undertakings. A large amount of money is being spent year after year without any proportionate improvement in our industrial conditions. When such is the case, there ought to be some real cause for such a state of things. What is the policy of the Government in regard to fostering these industries? So, Sir, if the hon. Minister is prepared to constitute a committee to enquire into this matter, I shall be glad to withdraw my motion."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"With reference to the question of Government cannery at Chaliyam, I would ask the hon. the Minister for Development to give me an assurance whether it is his object to continue the cannery for the purpose of its educative value and whether it was maintained for the last seven years only on account of that policy."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Where is the educative value?"

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"If it is purely for its educative value that the Government is going to continue it, I will gladly give my support to this grant. Apart from that question, I would request the Government to consider the question of selling away that factory or rather of leasing it to some private concerns, as practically there is no use of having such a factory on the west coast, and if what I heard from the hon. the Secretary for Development, that in all only 16 students had been trained in the Government cannery at Chaliyam till now, is the case, I should say . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I said Tanur."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I wish to know from the hon. the Minister for Development whether he hopes to retain the cannery for the purpose of education."

(At this stage, the hon. the Deputy President took the Chair.)

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—"On a point of order, Sir. Can a question of this canning factory be raised under the present Demand XXVI—Industries, when it is a factory run by the Fisheries Department which comes under Demand XXVII?"

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"The reason why I spoke on the subject is that I heard my hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Saldanha, (laughter) make mention of it in the course of his speech."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I am not the Leader of the Opposition."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I referred to him as the Leader of the Opposition because he was so called by several hon. Members this afternoon, and he never raised any objection to it."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—"I am merely asking for your ruling, Sir, on the point I raised."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I heard Mr. Saldanha making a reference to it. So, I thought it advisable also to get some information on the point from the hon. Minister. That is why I spoke on the subject."

* Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"I press my motion for the appointment of a committee."

The motion was put and lost.

Demand XXVI—Industries—for Rs. 11.26 lakhs was then put and passed, and the grant was made.

DEMAND XXVII—FISHERIES.

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'for a grant not exceeding Rs. 9 lakhs for expenditure under Fisheries.'

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"Mr. Deputy President, Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 9,400 for Assistant Director, Coast, be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object in moving this motion is only for requesting the hon. Minister in charge of Development to appoint an advisory committee on the West Coast so that the officials of the Fisheries department may closely and freely move with the leaders of the fisherman community and know what actually their needs and requirements are, and thereby promote their social, economic and industrial welfare. I urge this question for the reason that Sir Frederick Nicholson, the greatest pioneer of industries we have in South India. I should think so far as the fisherman community goes, when he organised the Department of Fisheries was often very closely and intimately moving with the fisherfolk finding out their requirements and wants and trying to meet them. After him we had Mr. James Hornell who used to come to the fishing villages and send for the leaders and consult them, and he was very anxious as to how he could be of service to the fishermen in order to uplift them. I say that the fisheries problem is a very complicated one and unless and until you have experts to promote the fishing industry on the West Coast, the Fisheries department would not be a success. The present officer who is known as the Assistant Director, Coast, is in charge of Fisheries in the West Coast. With all respect to him I have to submit before this House that he has not got any knowledge of fisheries so far as the fisheries in the West Coast is concerned; hence to advise him as to what should be done for the amelioration of the fisherfolk especially in the matter of temperance, social service, education, question of salt, management of fish-curing yards, etc., an advisory committee is necessary and essential. If he has a committee in the West Coast to advise him on the actual requirements of the fishermen he will be able to submit proposals either to the Director or to the hon. the Minister in charge for their approval. I think that is one of the very best ways by which he can promote the welfare of the so-called fisherfolk, on the West Coast. It is my wish that the hon. the Minister for Development will come to the rescue of the fishermen who are now very badly suffering in the matter of finance, as is pointed out by the Director in the administration report of the Fisheries department. With this object, I move this motion."

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

*The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The hon. Member Rao Sahib P. V. Gopalan is already on the Fisheries Advisory Committee attached to the department and is also put on the Committee for the selection of students for the Training Institute."

*Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"On a point of personal explanation. Rao Sahib P. V. Gopalan being a Member of the Advisory Committee and of the Selection Committee has practically nothing to do with the particular question, I have raised, viz., the appointment of an advisory committee on the West Coast to study the needs and requirements of the fishermen community and for offering opinions as to how to meet them. The Fisheries Department has to deal with a number of questions and as a Member of the Advisory Committee I have to deal only with questions like fish-curing, canning, chank and pearl fisheries, and such other things. What I am now speaking is with special reference to the uplift of the fisherfolk on the West Coast. Hence an advisory committee."

*The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The hon. Member wants a standing advisory committee tacked on to the local officer. It has been the general policy of Government not to attach advisory committees to executive officers for the very obvious reason that in working such advisory committees friction is likely to ensue. If the hon. Member has got any grievances or any points to be brought to the notice of the Government it is quite open to him either to write a letter to the Development Secretary urging his points or to bring it before the Fisheries Advisory Committee whenever it meets at Madras. That being so I do not think that any case has been made out by him for the appointment of a separate committee."

*Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"The fact that I belong to the Fisheries Advisory Committee at Madras and that I am a member of the Selection Committee for the selection of students to the Fisheries Training school will not help me to improve the condition of the fishermen because their requirements are so many. I am not speaking only with special reference to fisheries education. The fact of my being a member of the Advisory Committee at Madras will be of no use to them. In my three years' experience in the Legislative Council I do not think except on one or two occasions I had anything whatsoever to do with the Fisheries Advisory Committee. That is the reason why I want a committee to be appointed for the West Coast to promote the welfare of the fisherfolk. I have no objection for the appointment of the committee after consultation with the District Officers. There are ever so many things that they are in need of. If the hon. Minister thinks that I ought to have my own stationery to write to him about the grievances of the fisher folk, I will only say that the hon. Minister has not got real interest in the fisherman on the West Coast."

The hon. the DEPUTY PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member pressing his motion?"

*Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"I am not going to press it."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

*Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 118,500 for Tanur station be reduced by 6 p. p. Rs. 100.'

"Sir, my reason for this token motion is to show that the object for which the Tanur station was established in 1909 has already been achieved. The object of the Government in establishing the station was for introducing improved methods in curing of fish and manufacturing of guano. The curing of fish is now being done in about 60 yards on the West Coast and there are about 500 to 600 guano factories on the West Coast. Practically, there is no need for having any demonstrations there. I was told that this was only as an experimental station that it was started 16 years ago. So there is no use any longer for having this station there and wasting Government money over it.

"Another important point in connexion with the Tanur station is that Government have undertaken the supply of fish to very many jails in the Presidency, and the Director of Fisheries, I find, is rather very sorry that the Mappillas have been removed to the Andamans. Now the supply of fish to the jails does not become part and parcel of the business of the Government. In fact, the Government should never compete with private enterprise. We have got an assurance from the hon. Minister that there are ever so many fish curing yards there. When that is so, where is the necessity for the Government for curing fish in their own yards and competing with private enterprise? Tanur was meant merely for the experimental purpose of curing fish. We have a large number of fish curing yards on the West Coast. So where is the necessity for the Government to interfere with private manufacturers and merchants? It goes even against the Proclamation of Queen Victoria. (Laughter.) I urge that that should not be the purpose for which the Government should have a station on the West Coast, simply to ruin the prospects of the fisherfolk who are manufacturing and curing fish on a large scale. Hence I move that the Tanur fishery station should be abolished.

"Again, they have only manufactured 310 lb. of oil and 297 pounds of guano against 2,000 tons of oil and 4,000 tons of guano by private enterprise. You will please observe that the figures given by Government are in pounds. There are hundreds and thousands of tons of fish manufactured on the West Coast. Hence I say this station is not required for any practical purposes except for the income which the Government Fisheries Department derive from the sale of the coconut trees which grow on the station there; I do not think there is any other income. Year after year, the result is disastrous. They say they are experimenting to improve the condition of the fish oil and make it as a medicinal oil. As for that, the Industries Department have got a laboratory at the Kerala soapery at Calicut and the Fisheries Department have got a scientific station at Calicut. They have got two or three research assistants and a good laboratory too. If they want to make experiments in fish oil, it is there they must do it.

"They then say that on account of the monsoons they could not supply fish. As a matter of fact in Malabar we have the monsoon from the 15th May to the 15th August every year. Unfortunately even the fisherfolk there do not sell their fish during the monsoon. It cannot be helped. It is proverbial that Malabar has monsoon from 15th May to 15th August. The Director feels sorry for having not sold fish during the monsoon. I therefore strongly urge that the Tanur station ought to be abolished, as practically there is no need for such a station since the object with which it was started is served at present by private enterprise."

The House adjourned at 5-6 p.m. to meet again at 11 o'clock next day.

R. V. KRISHNA AYYAR,
Secretary to the Legislative Council.

The Secretary shall call out the name of each interpellator in the order in which the names are printed, specify the serial number of his question and make a sufficient pause to give him or any other member a reasonable opportunity of rising in his place and putting a supplementary question. Supplementary questions must be put immediately after the principal questions to which they relate.

[26th March 1926]

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" May I know, Sir, whether it is the Commissioner of Labour or District Educational Officer or some other officer ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" The educational authorities, Sir."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" Sir, it is found that there are several pupils who have completed their course in the higher elementary school and are seeking admission to a high school. There will be no accommodation in the existing high school and that is the reason why they ask for a separate school. Does the hon. Minister still think that there is no necessity for a separate school for Adi-Andhras ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" Yes, Sir. I still think that there is no need for a separate school and the request for it is not to my mind a necessary one."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" With reference to clause (b), will the Government be pleased to call for the information ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" It is not known what the constitution of the Sangam is and how far its recommendations deserve consideration."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" Anyhow, Sir, I make myself responsible for the information that 53 pupils applied for the scholarships. The Sangam is a well-organized one; otherwise it would not have been able to conduct an elementary school in such an efficient manner for the past so many years. I therefore want to know whether the hon. Minister will call for the information."

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" No."

Stipends for trained Indian Christian female candidates.

* 1850 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA: Will the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) why whereas the special rates of stipends for female candidates trained for teachership are fixed from Rs. 9-8-0 upwards for depressed classes, Hindus, Muhammadans, Europeans and Anglo-Indians, only the minimum of Rs. 8-8-0 is allowed to Indian Christians; and

4.—(a) Special rates of stipends are allowed with reference to the varying standards of living and expenses which are normal to particular communities and also with reference to the educational backwardness or otherwise of the communities concerned.

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I do not think it requires any explanation."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, the answer to clause (b) relates only to masters and not to mistresses. Does this apply to mistresses also ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" Not mistresses evidently."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Do the Hindu and Christian mistresses get anything higher ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" The answer refers to masters only; it therefore excludes mistresses."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I want to know for what reason the Indian Christian mistresses alone are allowed only the minimum rates while all the other communities are allowed higher rates. For what sin of this community are they penalised like this ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" There is no sin or penalty in this case. On the other hand, it is to their credit that they are recognized to be more forward in education than other communities."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I ask whether the hon. Minister is aware that though my community is forward educationally it is not well off economically and as such why it is not entitled to the concession shown to the other communities ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" We are concerned only with educational facilities and not with economic questions."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" May I know, Sir, whether it is the intention of the Government to give a larger stipends to members of communities which are educationally backward ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" The answer to clause (a) makes it clear."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" The answer to the question says that the varying standards of living and expenses which are normal to particular communities are taken into consideration also. Though the Indian Christian community is progressive educationally it is not economically forward and as such it is entitled to the concession that is shown to the other communities also. I want to know why such a concession is not shown here. (After a pause.) Am I to understand that the answer is in the affirmative or in the negative? Why is this injustice done to a particular community? Why should they be penalised by allowing them only the minimum rates when every other community gets the higher rates? What is the exact cause ?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" I have already answered that question, Sir."

[26th March 1926]

Will the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to kindly consider the desirability of instructing these Collectors not to interfere in election suits?"

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"I think that the services of a Government Pleader must have been utilized by the Taluk Board through the Collector, and the Collector has expressed his opinion."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"I ask, Sir, what right has the Collector to say anything in this matter? The taluk board has got the right of defending its election cases in its own way. What right has the Collector to give such a gratuitous advice in an election matter? Probably the Collector is interested in the election of someone and the taluk board is interested in the election of somebody else?"

11-15 a.m. The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS:—"I must protest against these allegations, Sir."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"How does this matter come within the cognizance of the Collector?"

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"That is what I am asking, Sir."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Some party must have taken it to the Collector."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Yes, Sir, the Collector can, under the Act, call for the papers and peruse them and offer some advice in any matter for the consideration of the taluk board. Unless he is interested one way or the other in the elections I fail to see why he took action. I do not know what actually happened, Sir. I want fuller information on the subject."

I think, Sir, it is the hon. the Law Member who has to answer this."

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"I want notice, Sir."

(b) if the Government have made no such rule, whether they have communicated the suggestion to the authorities concerned and, if so, when?

A.—(a) & (b) The Advocate-General who was consulted in the matter was of opinion that the provisions of section 9 (5) of the Madras Local Boards Act could not be enforced without an amendment of the Act. The Advisory Committee at a meeting held on 7th October 1925 agreed on reconsideration to an amendment of the Act to give effect to its views as recorded in its resolution of 18th May 1925.

As already stated in reply to question No. 1393, the Government have accordingly decided to amend the Act.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, there is no answer to clause (b) of my question."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"The presidents of taluk boards have been repeatedly reminded of their duty to pay due regard to the representation of unrepresented communities."

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"I want notice, Sir."

Communal representation in nominations to taluk boards.

* 1848 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government have made a rule as recommended by the Advisory Committee which met on 18th May 1925, that in the case of taluk boards, nominations should always provide for a Muhammadan, an Indian Christian and a member of the depressed classes when candidates from each class are available and, if so, when; and

(b) if the Government have made no such rule, whether they have communicated the suggestion to the authorities concerned and, if so, when?

A.—(a) & (b) The Advocate-General who was consulted in the matter was of opinion that the provisions of section 9 (5) of the Madras Local Boards Act could not be enforced without an amendment of the Act. The Advisory Committee at a meeting held on 7th October 1925 agreed on reconsideration to an amendment of the Act to give effect to its views as recorded in its resolution of 18th May 1925.

As already stated in reply to question No. 1393, the Government have accordingly decided to amend the Act.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, there is no answer to clause (b) of my question."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"Both of them are answered together."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I have asked whether the suggestion has been communicated to the authorities concerned."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL:—"The presidents of taluk boards have been repeatedly reminded of their duty to pay due regard to the representation of unrepresented communities."

Education.

High school for Adi-Andhras at Masulipatam.

* 1849 Q.—Mr. C. V. VENKATARAMANA AYYANGAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Education and the hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether an application was made by the Andhra Deena Sangam, Masulipatam, requesting the Government to open a high school for Adi-Andhras at Masulipatam and whether the Government have passed an order refusing to comply with the request and, if so, why; and

(b) whether it is a fact that the Sangam recommended scholarships for 53 pupils of depressed classes but the Labour Commissioner was not able to provide for more than 3 pupils?

[26th March 1926]

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" May I know whether the hon. Minister thinks that there is no partiality in giving one rate of stipends to one community and another rate to another community ? "

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" That is not a question for information. "

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I know, Sir, whether recently a Government Order was passed enabling the students of the depressed classes to get a higher rate of stipend, i.e., Rs. 10-8-0 and if it is the case, whether the hon. Minister is inclined to consider the case of those economically backward communities like the Indian Christian community for a similar concession ? "

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" The guardian allowance in the case of the depressed classes is allowed. "

The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" Arising out of the answer given by the hon. Minister that the students of the Indian Christian community are paid less because they are educationally forward, may I ask him whether the European and the Anglo-Indian communities are not forward ? "

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" May I know the amount of stipend that is paid to the Europeans and Anglo-Indian students ? "

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I think, Sir, the Europeans are paid about Rs. 15-8-0. But what is the ground on which they are paid a higher rate ? "

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" The grounds are given in the answer to clause (a). "

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I want to know the exact ground why the Indian Christian community is paid so low, while the other communities such as the European, the Anglo-Indian and Hindu communities including the Brahman community, get a higher rate of stipend ? There is no use of enunciating the general principle that is based on the standard of living, the educational backwardness, etc. I want to know the exact grounds for this particular discrimination. "

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" I have not yet got an answer to my question as to how much the Anglo-Indian and European communities are paid. "

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" The hon. Member Mr. Saldanha has given the information. "

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—" It may or may not be correct. I want the official information. "

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" It has not been contradicted by the hon. Minister. "

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Yes, Sir, it is something more or less than Rs. 15-8-0. I want to know the exact grounds of this distinction. For what sin is this penalty imposed on this community ? "

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Why should the hon. Member go so far as to use the word 'sin' ? "

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I have an answer to my specific question from the hon. Minister ? (After a pause.) Probably the answer will not be favourable, I think, to the hon. Minister. "

(a) whether it is a fact that an arrack shop is going to be newly opened at Surla (Ganjam district);

(b) whether the people of the locality protested against the opening of an arrack shop;

(c) whether it is a fact that the villagers of Surla and those of the surrounding villages held a conference in January last and protested against the proposal;

(d) whether it is a fact that the Kevutos (fishermen) of the village are a non-drinking people; and

(e) why Government has decided to open an arrack shop where there are no people to drink?

A.—The Government have no information.

Public Works.Opening of a new sub-gate on the Pollachi-Vannanthorai road.

* 1854 Q.—Mr. C. V. VENKATARAMANA AYYANGAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) whether a sub-gate has been newly opened on the Pollachi-Vannanthorai road at the place where the Anamalai-Pulankinar district board road crosses it;

(b) whether no reference was made to this sub-gate in the notification published for auctioning the toll-gate on this road;

(c) when the sub-gate was opened, why and under whose authority;

(d) whether no information was given about the opening of this sub-gate to the district board which is paying a contribution for maintaining the road;

(e) whether the Anamalai Planters' Association were consulted about opening this sub-gate and if so, what was its opinion;

(f) whether the Kottur Union Board and the public of adjacent villages have protested against this sub-gate;

(g) whether the District Board of Coimbatore has passed a resolution that this sub-gate should be removed at once and that the payment of its contribution for this road will be stopped till it is removed;

(h) whether the toll-gate contractor pays anything additional on account of the opening of the new sub-gate and if so, how much; and

(i) whether orders have been or will be passed for the removal of the sub-gate and if so, from what date?

[26th March 1926]

A.—(a) The Government approved of the shifting of the Public Works Department toll-gate intended to tap traffic proceeding along the Pollachi-Valparai road from mile 34/7 to a point at mile 32/7—the local officers have apparently put up four gates at the cross roads and tolls have been collected wrongly on traffic proceeding across the Pollachi-Valparai road and along the Pulankinar-Anamalai road.

(b) The Government do not know, but have called for the sale notice.

(c) Presumably in August 1925, when the Government sanctioned the shifting of the old gate; as explained, the Government did not intend to authorize any gates to catch cross traffic.

(d) No.

(e) No.

(f) Yes.

(g) Yes.

(h) The Government do not know.

(i) Orders have been issued to move the gate away from the cross roads at once.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, with reference to clause (i), may I know the authority under which the Government have directed the removal of the gate?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"Government set up the toll-gate and they can remove it."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Is it not the local body, Sir?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"No, Sir, it does not refer to the local bodies."

Agriculture.Experiments by the Agricultural Department in the famine areas.

* 1855 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state the experiments, if any, made by the Agricultural Department in the famine zone of the Presidency to make the agricultural population there less dependent than now on the vagaries of rainfall and the results so far obtained as the result of them?

A.—All work in raising the yields of dry grains, cotton, etc., at the agricultural experiment stations in the Deccan has been directed to 'making the agricultural population less dependent on the vagaries of rainfall.' Dry farming and cultivation with a view to the conservation of moisture have been systematically advocated with the same end in view, and all efforts to raise the duty of water and to prevent waste of water in paddy cultivation, etc., are with the same object. At the Sirvel station which has been closed the problem of converting dry land into wet with as little expense and in as short a time as possible was investigated. The results have been published in a leaflet issued by the Agricultural department. Details of experiments carried out on the Hagari Experimental station to ascertain the most economical method of utilizing the water in sandy beds of rivers, and to study the most profitable methods of applying canal water to black cotton soil are given in the reports of this station for 1907-1910. The results of experiments to investigate the possibility of feeding cattle with prickly-pear during times of famine at Bellary have also been published in a departmental leaflet.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I know, Sir, whether any experiment was conducted on the red soils?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I should like to have notice, Sir."

COMMUNICATION TO THE COUNCIL.

The Secretary laid on the table a copy of the Report^a of the Public Accounts Committee on the Audit and Appropriation Reports on the accounts of the Government of Madras for 1924-25.

MOTIONS ON THE BUDGET FOR 1926-27.

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"Sir, the hon. Member from the West Coast representing the Fishermen community desires to abolish the Tanur Experimental station. The gravamen of his indictment is that the station has served its purpose and can therefore be abolished. I am willing to confess that the hon. Member has a special knowledge of the Fishermen community on the West Coast and as such his views are entitled to serious consideration. But in this particular case I am afraid that his views are coloured by a misapprehension of fact, namely, that the work of the station has really been finished. He starts on the assumption that the work is finished and therefore he says that the station can be abolished. I am afraid I may have to weary the House with a somewhat detailed description of the work done at the station and what is more important, of the work that remains to be done. As a result of the work done in this station, a large number of guano oil factories have been thriving on the West Coast, several hundreds of them, and these factories have been bringing an annual income of over 30 lakhs of rupees to the fish-curing industry. But that is only the fringe of the problem. There is still very much greater scope for further development not only in the volume of the industry but also in the nature of the industry. The work that is now done at the factories is only the manufacture of fish oil. It costs Rs. 80 or 90 a ton. The real point however is that the manufacture of the crude oil does not bring in so much profit as the manufacture of refined oil. While a ton of crude oil costs only Rs. 80 or 90 a ton of refined oil will bring something like Rs. 650. Crude oil is now being sent to the Jute Mills of Bengal or to Germany where it is made into refined oil. As we are not manufacturing refined oil on the West Coast several hundreds of rupees per ton are lost. If we can refine the oil ourselves on the West Coast all the additional profit will be gained by the industry on the West Coast."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"I am very reluctant to interrupt the hon. Member. May I know how many tons of crude oil are necessary to make one ton of refined oil?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I have no definite information on the subject. But I daresay that a very large quantity of crude oil is not required to make one ton of refined oil. I am not quite sure on that point. But I shall go on to a more sure ground."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"May I know if there is no factory on the West Coast which produce refined oil?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"No, Sir, unless we can call the oil produced by a private firm at Mangalore as refined oil. The hon. Member from South Kanara is astonished at the ignorance of the department. I am not astonished at anything which Mr. Saldanha says. Of course, his knowledge is so vast and so varied that he cannot have anything but contempt for the knowledge of others."

"Though it is profitable to manufacture fish guano, we have yet to manufacture fish meal. The difference in price between fish guano and fish meal is very great. A ton of fish meal would cost Rs. 250. Fish guano costs Rs. 80 a ton. The extra cost of manufacturing fish meal is only Rs. 40 per ton. We must manufacture fish meal and refine crude oil work which has not been taken up on a large scale by private firms. It is in these directions that the experiments at the station are being made with actual success and with promise of greater success in the future. It would be a great pity if we were to abandon the experiments at the station because there is a large number of private firms manufacturing oil depending upon the continuance of the Tanur station. As a matter of fact, even the private companies would probably not thrive unless the station continues, because the buyers of the products insist upon some guarantee as to the standard of the products. This experimental station furnishes certificates of analysis of fish oil and guano. In the absence of such certificates it is very doubtful whether the firms on the West Coast would be able to find a market for their products. Sir, there is a certain amount of inconsistency in the argument of my hon. Friend Mr. Gopalan. He objected to the continuance of the station on the ground that it competes with private enterprise. He went on to say that the quantity of guano oil produced at the station was infinitesimal. If that is the case the competition would be negligible. The station has not only to manufacture oil but it has to conduct experiments. Even in the matter of selling the products, the station is necessary to create a market and in order to make the products familiar to people outside also."

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"From the commercial point of view what is the profit and loss account of this station?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I am coming to it presently. I do not know if my hon. Friend wants that I should give the figures for every year. I shall give the figures for the last five years."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I want figures for the last five years. The Retrenchment Committee has dealt with this matter."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"As the hon. Member has not spoken on the subject already, he may wait and speak afterwards."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I shall give the figures for the last five years. I hope he will be satisfied and would not ask us to go into ancient history. In 1920-21 there was a loss of Rs. 136; in 1921-22, a gain of Rs. 1,070; in 1922-23, a gain of Rs. 3,480; in 1923-24, a loss of Rs. 1,275; in 1924-25, a loss of Rs. 3,763."

"So, on the whole, the result is a loss of Rs. 624. I make bold to say that it is more or less negligible and that it need not be taken into consideration."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"May I know if the profit and loss account takes into consideration the amount derived from the sale of thousands of coconuts from the garden?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I am not sure if there are thousands of coconut trees, I know there are a certain number of coconut trees."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"It will be more than 500 trees."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"The information I have got for 1923-24 is that the sale proceeds amounted to Rs. 434 and that it costs Rs. 150 to maintain the plantations. The figures for the last five years were given by the chartered accountant. I may add that the policy cannot be justly criticised on the ground that there is some loss. Even if the loss is great I make bold to submit to the House that in view of the excellent work done at the station which will be seen from the Administration Report of the year 1923-24 which I do not wish to read lest I should take more time of the House than I desire, which gives in detail the several improvements effected in the process of preparing oil and various other by-products, such as, Turkey Red oil and so forth, the work done at in the station gives us every reason to believe that it is serving a useful function and that its continuance is necessary for the prosperity of the West Coast."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, I would draw the attention of the House to the conflicting policies followed by the Government with regard to (1) the Coonoor Jam Factory and (2) the Fish station at Tanur. Both these institutions have been working at a loss on the whole. Their value would have been very important from an educative point of view. They could train a number of apprentices who could have learnt the art of producing refined oil, canning and preserving. These apprentices could encourage the development of the industry all over the Presidency. I may also mention that from the point of view of education . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member is not on the subject on education."

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"What I said was that these institutions would have been important from an educative point of view. From a commercial point of view I find that the institutions have been working at a loss. I want to correct a mistake. Yesterday when we were dealing with the Fish Preserving Institution at Chaliyam, the hon. Member, the Development Secretary, told us that the number of people educated there, was 16. I understood afterwards that that was the number trained at Tanur station."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I explained at the time that I meant only the Tanur station and not the Chaliyam Institute."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Only 16 men have been trained as apprentices. From that point of view also, nothing has been done. The Jam Factory at Coonoor would compete, if properly helped by the Government, with the import of jam from Australia which is in the hands of European firms. I want to know why the Government should not close the factory at Tanur. I will draw attention, Sir, to the suggestion made by the Retrenchment Committee as to the main work of the station. This is what they say :

"The main work of this station has been in the direction of fish-curing and in the development of the fish-oil and guano industry. As a demonstrational centre the station has done good work and has introduced improved methods of curing in the public fish-curing yards. The fish oil and guano demonstrations have resulted in the opening of 647 factories on the West Coast. Tanur from a demonstrational station has developed into a "commercial concern" and is now classed in the administration report as a "factory" to which the Factories Act has been applied."

Here is, I believe, the proper answer. That is what the Retrenchment Committee which consisted of my friends Mr. MacDougall, Mr. Wood, my friend Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar on this side, Dr. Subbarayan

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member need not go into the personnel of the Committee."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Besides calling it a factory, they go on to say :

"The turnover of the factory may be estimated from the fact that in 1922-23, 2½ lakhs of pounds of fish were purchased for curing alone and that 4½ lakhs of pounds of fresh sardines and 69 thousand pounds of sardine offal were purchased for oil and guano. The profit for 1922-23 is said to have reached the figure of Rs. 5,782. In the opinion of the Committee, Tanur has served its purpose as a demonstration station and has now been developed into a commercial unit. It need no longer therefore be maintained as a Government institution but may be sold."

"But Government have decided to retain it and that for very unsatisfactory reasons. I am afraid, Sir, I will have to take some time to show how absurd these reasons are for Government to retain this institution any longer. This is the first time the hon. the Minister for Development has come in for a criticism as regards this department in the budget debates and we have so little time at the same time to devote more attention to the details. I will show that the remarks made by the Retrenchment Committee are quite correct. It has not only led to the opening of 647 factories in the West Coast, but it has also led to the greater production of crude oil and refined oil. If the hon. the Minister had made enquiries, he would have found that the retention of this institution was quite unnecessary. I hope the hon. the Minister will find time to go through the reports and bring himself more in touch with the reports of commercial undertakings in the Presidency, which so far he has done only to a very limited extent. If he had gone carefully into the economic and industrial aspects of this industry, he would have found that there is much to be done and that much has been left undone by the closing of some institutions on account of money stringency. The West Coast Fishing Company, Messrs. Jos Alwaris & Co., which produces sardine oil produces refined oil also. This company has engaged the services of a graduate, a gentleman who has received diploma in the Bangalore Science Institute, and very good refined oil is being produced by this company at Mangalore. There may be other companies like this, but I am sure of this one. The greatest difficulties, however, are the competition from Government institutions and want of encouragement from Government. What Government should do in the case of all these nascent industries is to stop all competition and aid them in various ways. Nothing in this respect is done. First of all, they do not know if there is such a factory."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"On a matter of personal explanation, Sir. I did mention this company and I said I was not aware of any other. The hon. Member himself has not been able to give the name of any other company."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, the Secretary of the Development Department told us that they produce only sardine oil and that for medicinal purposes; but they produce oil for commercial purposes also. Sardine oil can be produced without chemical process. The uppermost layer of the oil is always good for medicinal purposes. For the production of the refined oil from crude oil, however, a man who has passed applied chemistry in oils is quite necessary and such a man is employed in this factory. This is only a typical instance and there may be many more. Considering all this, Sir, I think the House will weigh the policy of the Development Department which is quite anti-national. The Development Department has done very little in the direction of developing national industries; at any rate, at present they are taking a course which must necessarily retard the development of national industries. They have already given up an industry without any consideration—I mean the jam factory. They can maintain it at least as an educative institution for training apprentices and teaching them how to prepare and preserve jams."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"I think the other day the hon. Member approved of the closing of the jam factory."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I shall not dwell on that, Sir, but I shall go to the next point. What I wanted to urge is this, that the Government should not undertake or carry on any of these industries as their own for commercial purposes, but such industries should be encouraged for the purpose of training apprentices. For instance, the Madura Institute is said to serve the purpose of training apprentices. We want this institution also to serve the purpose of training apprentices and producing skilled workmen who will spread their knowledge of this industry far and wide. I am not for maintaining these institutions commercially. I think this House would not grudge the expenditure of some lakhs if only by that means we can be sure of spreading our industries all over the Presidency."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"Mr. President, Sir, I really congratulate the hon. Mr. V. P. Row, Secretary to the Development Department, for the very businesslike way in which he has argued the case for the retention of the Tanur experimental station on behalf of the Development Department. But, Sir, I am sorry I have to disagree with him in some important points which he has placed before the House. First and foremost, Sir, he said that the Tanur experimental station has justified its existence and he has also got proposals for further developments. He did not however say what the developments are. Secondly, Sir, he gave the figure of Rs. 650 for a ton of refined oil manufactured in the Tanur station. It will be news to my hon. Friend, Sir, when I say that private manufacturers who manufacture medicinal oil in the West Coast realize a sum of Rs. 1,500 for a ton of refined oil."

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"For mere refined oil?"

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I mean medicinal oil. It is for that purpose the oil is practically used. I am told, Sir, that in Newfoundland . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Refined oil is used for supply to arsenals, tanneries and so forth. They are not medicinal. Medicinal oil is different from refined oil which fetches Rs. 650 per ton."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"Sir, if that is the way in which he is going to argue the case, I may be permitted to say that during the war when our Government wanted thousands and thousands of tons of the oil, the Government station at Tanur did not yield even 100 tons; but the quantity supplied by the Government of Madras to the Government of India were several hundreds of thousands of tons. They secured it from private manufacturers, and not from the Government institution at Tanur. Therefore, it is not reasonable to say that the Tanur experimental station is manufacturing refined oil and is supplying it at Rs. 650 a ton. Further, I should have been very glad if Mr. V. P. Row put forth a case to the effect that the Tanur experimental station is now devising methods for manufacturing medicinal oils, because, I am told by an eminent doctor, that more cod-liver oil is imported in this country than is actually manufactured in England. What does it mean? It only means that the so-called cod-liver oil is a mixture of several other oils and what we get is not genuine oil at all. Here we get crude oil for Rs. 0-8-0 to Rs. 1 per gallon. If the Government had only taken the trouble to refine the oil and place it on the market for medicinal purposes, the amount realized would be something like Rs. 7,500. Now we have to pay Rs. 3 to Rs. 5 for a bottle of DeJohn's cod-liver oil. If only these things had been done by the Ministry, I should have been glad to congratulate and support them."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"It is being taken up and that is why the Tanur station must continue."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"But, my dear Sir . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"If the hon. Member is addressing the Chair, he need not be so affectionate. If he is addressing Mr. V. P. Row, he is out of order."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"It is a slip of the tongue, Sir. So, I say that the argument put forward by the hon. the Secretary to the Development Department that the station is to be retained for the purpose of further developments are. I say that in the place of the Rs. 650 per ton of refined oil, we can get Rs. 7,500, provided the department enthusiastically undertake to produce refined oil and place it on the market as a medicinal oil."

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

There was a question by the hon. the Secretary for the Development Department and by the hon. Member from South Kanara as to how many tons of fish will be required for manufacturing one ton of oil. I may say that six tons of round fish are enough to produce one ton of crude oil and out of one ton of crude oil one-fifth is stearin. So, we require about $7\frac{1}{2}$ tons of round fish for manufacturing one ton of crude oil.

"The second argument put forward by the hon. the Secretary to the Development Department is that he gets Rs. 250 per ton of fish meal. Sir, it is no wonder that we in Malabar have to pay something like Rs. 165 to Rs. 175 and sometimes even Rs. 200 for a ton of fish-guano. The hon. the Secretary argued that the existence of the station at Tanur is absolutely necessary, that it stands as a guarantee between the buyer and the manufacturer. I should just say that the fact is quite contrary. For when we sell our guano we do it on the basis of analysis. We have got Dr. K. Bamber in Ceylon, Dr. Schoulson in Calcutta and we have Messrs. Parry & Co., Messrs. Peirce, Leslie & Co. in Malabar who with the aid of laboratory find out the analysis of fish guano. We sell it therefore not per bulk but on the basis of analysis so many rupees per unit percentage of nitrogen and so much per unit percentage of phosphoric acid. The Government Fishery Station in no way stands as a guarantee between the manufacturers and the several firms that control the supplies."

"Then, it has been said by the hon. the Development Secretary that the station has been styled as an experimental station. I ask whether we can still call it an experimental station. For it was opened in 1908 and are we to call it an experimental station even when it has been 18 years old. If it be so, am I to presume that the station has not achieved its purpose in anything even after this fairly long period?"

"The next argument of the hon. Secretary is in regard to my observation made yesterday as to Government competing with private manufacture. He said that there was no sufficient reason because the quantity manufactured there was small. In his administration report, the Director of Fisheries regrets the fact and goes on to say that there has been for three consecutive years a successive failure at the fishing season. What does that prove? This proves that in ordinary circumstances the station should have made a larger quantity, should have been in a position to sell their produce to ever so many firms and thereby realise a big amount which the Director would have put forward in his profit account. Simply because of the failure of fish, the station has been found to be working at a loss. If the station had large quantities of fish, what would have been the result? The result would have been that they will have to compete with ever so many private manufacturers who earn their livelihood by this profession. I ask whether the Government would not be competing with the private manufacturer if they would be supplying fish to ever so many jails in the Presidency, oil to the Government Military Department. This is not really the function of the Government but of the private manufacturer. We have ever so many European firms, firms like Messrs. Parry & Co., Peirce, Leslie & Co., who give advances and it becomes our duty to manufacture and supply their needs. And when we see that an institution is patronized by the Government which is going to compete with us in the line, are we not right in assuming that they are competing with private enterprise?"

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

"Sir, the next argument advanced by the hon. the Secretary was, that in the Tanur station an improved method of curing is adopted. Sir, anybody can manufacture anything. That is not what we actually want. We have to find out a market before we take up the question of manufacturing. The question is whether the Government official has found out a market for consuming the so-called cured fish manufactured at the station. I should say 'No'. Because the fish manufactured at Tanur is not better than the fish ordinarily manufactured. We cannot dam these fish manufactured all these years, for our District Medical Officers have control over the manufacture and its sanitary conditions, and the fish is supplied after medical examination at such places as Ceylon, Singapore and the Straits Settlements. Simply on the ground that the Government station had manufactured 200 lb. of so-called cured fish and that they would like the private manufacturer to follow suit I don't think it can be reasonably argued that the station should be retained.

"Sir, I say that the Tanur station has not justified its existence. If it is to be retained, other developments, new activities for ameliorating the present economic condition of the fishermen, should be taken up; the fishermen should be taught the industries which could serve them as sources of income. If that purpose is not kept in view I do not think I have any reason to support the retention of the big establishment at Tanur. If the hon. the Development Secretary is anxious to carry on the experiments in manufacturing oil, we have got a station at Calicut. There is a special factory with a big laboratory, two scientists and a Government official over and above them. There is the research station with two or three scientists and a laboratory which can very well be utilised for the purpose, instead of having a special assistant who is an expert to run the station on business lines and an establishment. I should say, Sir, that for all these reasons the arguments advanced by the hon. the Development Secretary have not at all convinced me."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Sir, the hon. Member from Malabar says that he has not been convinced entirely by my arguments. I hope what I am going to say will further the process of carrying conviction. I am sorry I did not mention all these points even at the first instance when I addressed the House on the motion. I did not do so because I thought I would take up too much time. I should have laid more stress on the question of what remains to be done. I shall briefly mention the various kinds of experimental work which are now being done at the station. Apart from the question of improved methods of fish-curing and the refinement of the crude oil and the preparation of fish oil, one of the other lines of investigation now being pursued at the station is the production of turkey red oil from fish oil. That oil is usually produced out of castor oil but now it has been found possible to manufacture it from fish oil. And as the price of turkey red oil is Rs. 600 to 900 per ton and as it is being extensively used in dyeing textiles, I think there is sufficient scope for the manufacture of this product, especially as the process of manufacture appears to be not costly and within the reach of ordinary people."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"In fact the Calcutta market generally goes in for our crude oil and pay better price than for the oil referred to. For, for the purpose of manufacturing soaps and for gunny and jute factories they want crude oil because they will be in a position to get 20 per cent of stearin which they use for making candles and still they get a better value as they manufacture glycerine out of it."

26th March 1926]

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I mentioned that crude oil only costs about Rs. 80 or Rs. 90 per ton while turkey red oil fetches Rs. 600 to Rs. 900."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"Though I am a born fisherman and had something to do with many fishing factories and stations in all my life I have never been in a position to get crude oil for any thing less than Rs. 100 per ton. And it is news to me that the hon. the Secretary tells me that it can be got for Rs. 80. I hope I will be borne out by the hon. Member here who is the Sheriff of Madras, Mr. Wood, whose experience in crude oil is very large."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"I was referring to the price which was prevalent at the time when the Director of Fisheries submitted his report in October 1923. Now the prices have gone up perhaps comparatively high. But that may be equally true of the turkey red oil. In any case that does not affect my argument. Even assuming the price of crude oil is Rs. 150 and the price of turkey red oil is Rs. 600 to 900 and if the manufacture of the latter does not cost much, surely it is a hopeful field of development. Then, Sir, as to the process of manufacture of medicinal oil as a substitute for cod-liveroil, I should say that it is still in an experimental stage. Samples of oil were sent to the Government Ophthalmic Hospital in Madras for examination of the vitamine content. But as the facilities for analysis available at the Ophthalmic Hospital are not quite up to the mark, the samples are now being sent to the Imperial Institute in London for the same purpose and if we succeed in preparing a real substitute for cod-liver oil, that will lay the foundation of a most paying industry."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—"I just heard the hon. Secretary saying that the Ophthalmic Hospital did not give a good certificate."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"That was not what I said, Sir. I said that the facilities for making the analysis were not quite satisfactory and unless we know for certain what the vitamine content is, we cannot decide one way or the other. The most important thing to note is that it is not as a substitute for cod liver oil that the analysis is to be made but as to the vitamine content. That is the reason why, I may say incidentally, the sardinole which is backed up, influentially backed up, by my hon. Friend from South Kanara Mr. Saldanha."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"It was not influentially backed up by me. People like Mrs. Simmons, wife of the Surgeon-General, in connection with the Health Exhibition she controls, gets a large quantity of it and the Surgeon-General of Bombay have backed it."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Why should the hon. Member object to his support being called influential?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—"Sir, I may be permitted to have my own opinion of comparative influence. So far as my present purpose is concerned, the hon. Member from South Kanara is more influential than the other Members because I have got to convince him. Sir, the sardinole which was recommended by, among others, the hon. Member from South Kanara, was found to be not quite satisfactory and that is why the Government were not able to give facilities for pushing its sale."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" May I be permitted to say, Sir, that 'Lancet,' the greatest of medical journals, has said in its columns on the 11th July 1921 that sardine oil when compared with cod-liver oil is more easily digested and contains more of nitrogenous materials in it?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" Is it in comparison with the sardine oil produced at Tanur?"

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" They have said, Sir, the sardine oil manufactured in the West Coast of India compared with cod-liver oil is more easily digestible and contains more nitrogenous materials. And I ask, Sir, do we want further proof?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" I am sorry I have to go into this technical matter again. I have already said that the value of the oil does not depend on the nitrogenous contents but on the vitamine content. We were advised by two Surgeons-General with the Government of Madras that it is not an efficient substitute for cod-liveroil and that therefore they could not recommend it.

"Sir, I have been led away from the main point at issue by these numerous interruptions. Again I crave your indulgence for going on with the subject for some more time. I have mentioned the manufacture of turkey red oil, and the manufacture of medicinal oil as a substitute for cod liver oil. Another line of development is refrigeration, which means preservation from putrefaction by using cooling methods."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Sir, may I inform the hon. the Secretary that the refrigerating machine is not at Tanur but lying idle at Chaliyam?"

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" I do not say that these experiments are now being actually done. That is one of the lines in which experiments are to proceed in future."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" May I ask, Sir, what has been the experience of Sir Frederic Nicholson with regard to this refrigerating machine in 1913-14 and 1914-15?"

Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" My hon. Friend is really supporting my case. It is because the experiments already made were not successful that further experiments are necessary."

12-15 p.m. * Mr. C. E. WOOD :—" I have been referred to several times in the course of this debate, even once as Sheriff (presumably to arrest the fish which nowadays appear to be leaving the West Coast), and feel I ought to give some views.

"In my opinion, Sir, the hon. the Secretary for Development has made out some sort of case for retention of the Tanur station.

26th March 1926]

[Mr. C. E. Wood]

"It is quite true that some years ago, two or three I think, when the Retrenchment Committee sat, I was strongly in favour of the abolition of the Tanur station, and I am rather surprised to see that nothing was done. (Hear, hear.)

"But it was given a new lease of life and, as a consequence, promises to make important experiments in the matter of a substitute for codliveroil.

"If these experiments are really on the way and the department intends to pursue them and to give up dealing in fish products and fish oil in its crude state, I personally would see no objection to having the station retained for a short while.

"If those particular experiments do not succeed, however, I consider the station should be abolished."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Is Mr. Gopalan withdrawing the motion or pressing it?"

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Just one word, Sir."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" No speech, please. He must decide whether he would withdraw it or not. (After a pause) I have called upon Mr. Gopalan to say whether he presses his motion to a division or not."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Just one word."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Order, order. He must tell me whether he presses his motion to a division or is going to withdraw it."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" I withdraw it, Sir."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, I propose to reduce the allotment of Rs. 18,500 for Tanur station by Rs. 100 in order to advocate the training of apprentices. I have dwelt on this point repeatedly, but I think I may again make it quite clear . . ."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Yesterday, Sir, Mr. Saldanha waived the moving of all motions on this subject."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I will explain my position, Sir. At the request of an hon. Friend on the Ministerial side and as it was expected that the whole demand would be over by 5 o'clock . . ."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Is the hon. Member in order, Sir, in referring to conversations outside the House which are not within the cognizance of the House?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" It was not a conversation. I said that, as they were about to close the debate yesterday only, I said that I did not want to move my motions."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Very well, then, the hon. Member must abide by his promise."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Sir, I beg to move my motion
'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 16,500 for Training Institute, Calicut, by Rs. 100.'

"My reason for tabling this motion is not to press it, but only to place before the hon. the Minister certain facts and see that he would come to the rescue of the poor fisherfolk on the West Coast. The educational activities of the Fisheries department on the West Coast though contributory to the increase of literacy among the fisherfolk are certainly capable of improvement. More schools formed the greatest need, but before new schools are opened, the old ones should be made permanent not only as regards their habitation but also in strength and efficiency. These schools situated as they are in out of the way fishing villages should be under men who would not find it a hardship to live under such conditions. Higher castemen, unless abundantly endowed with high ideals of social service, can hardly be expected to do justice either to themselves or to their schools. This leads to the question of the selection of pupil teachers at the fisheries institute. The selection of non-fishermen, hundreds of whom are ready to accept jobs in the Fisheries department or elsewhere, is the chief cause of the unsatisfactory working of the fisheries schools. In this connexion the Director will be well advised to co-opt two or three leading members of the fishermen community in the present committee composed of the director, the assistant director and the headmaster.

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

"As regards the actual working of the training institute, there is ample scope for improvement. The three years course is necessary, but as there is already a Government training school at Calicut, there is no need for duplication as there is no difference in the teaching imparted during the first two years. The third-year course is the most important, being meant for special studies as socio-economics, fishery technique, zoology and botany with special reference to marine forms, fishing methods and navigation. For this the students completing the two years' course at the Government training school may come to the fisheries training institute. This will effect considerable economy. Efficiency in handling these special subjects should at all costs be secured. It is indeed a matter for regret, I speak subject to correction, that the students to be sent out this year have not yet been taught fishery techniques. The former assistant director was teaching this, but the present assistant director innocent of subjects like natural science and fishery techniques is the examiner and the recipient of the honorarium. The syllabus which is an ideal one ought to be followed and it is not impossible to find experts in the department, perhaps even at the headquarters of Calicut, capable of authoritatively handling those special subjects. The more the fishermen trained and sent out, the greater are the chances of success of fisheries schools. The training should be of the nature suited to the conditions of the fishing villages. It will not do to put one thing on paper and actually do another. I wish the hon. the Minister will also grant scholarships to a few fisher boys to pursue high school and collegiate education. With these words I beg to move the motion."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I would draw attention to the omission, rather the neglect, on the part of the Fisheries department so far as South Kanara fishermen are concerned. They are chips of the same block, the fishermen of South Kanara and those of Malabar (laughter), though they are speaking different languages. My hon. Friend from Malabar will bear me out when I say that on account of the difference in languages—Malayalam is so different from Kanarese or Tulu which the fishermen of South Kanara talk—it is very difficult for these fishermen of South Kanara to get training at Calicut. They have now got a school at Calicut, and I for one do not grudge the school to the fishermen of Malabar, not only fishermen but other people also who take to the cult of fishing because I find now that a number of people who do not exactly belong to the caste of fishermen are taking to fishing."

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Amateur fishermen?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Not amateur. They took to fishing as a sort of industry in addition to their caste profession or in lieu of it. For instance there are Christians who were hitherto boatmen, and naturally from boatmen they become fishermen, and this class of people also would require education in fishing. Such people are to be found not only among Christians but among Muhammadans and Mappillas. They are generally boatmen, but on account of the fact that the trade of boatmen is not very paying, they take to fishing and I think this class of people require educational institutions in Mangalore or somewhere in the north, say Udipi or Malpe, which are very important fishing centres. There are also on the other hand fishermen who have given up the vocation of fishermen and taken to education, teaching and other lines. In any case there are a large number of fishermen in South Kanara who are in need of education in their own language and line. There is no use of giving them mere literary education which only throws them out of their hereditary professions or professions for which they are fitted, and as we now see a great future for fishing and deep-sea fishing also, I hope more attention will be paid to the enterprising fishermen of South Kanara so far as their professional education is concerned. Another point which I wish to bring to the notice of the House is this. These fishermen of South Kanara, especially some of them Christians, took to the enterprise of fishing with nets which could not be found in any part of the Presidency. It is they that went northward and brought large fishing nets which are not to be found on this side at all. And it is these enterprising people . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"Did they get the nets from Ratnagiri?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"From Ratnagiri and Goa. They have taken to fishing on a large scale and also co-operative societies have been formed for the purpose. But it is the ignorance of the technique or the art of fishing on a large scale, as the Ratnagiri and Goa fishermen possess, that prevents our fishermen from being successful. In fact, a number of co-operative societies formed by these people proved a failure. I do not mean to say all failed; some of them have grown very rich on account of this extensive fishing. But with a study of the technique of fishing and especially of the manufacture and use of these nets, I am sure the art of fishing and the enterprise of fishing will develop extensively. I would therefore appeal to the hon. the Minister that he would take measures in the next budget for the institution of a school at Mangalore or somewhere at Malpe for the special training of fishermen and those who want to learn fishing."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Mr. President, looking at the statistics I find that during the last six years the number of students who were trained in this institute varied from 12 to 17. Of course, applications come in, but this institute is intended only for the training of teachers for elementary schools for fishermen, and so we have to see that the number we train is not far in excess of the number we need. Otherwise they would go to swell the ranks of the unemployed. It is with that object that a certain restriction has been placed upon the number of students to be trained. The other points mentioned by my hon. Friend Mr. Gopalan and also by my hon. Friend Mr. Saldanha are all new suggestions and they will receive my earnest consideration when the time comes for taking them up for consideration."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Sir, I beg to move my motion

'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 32,400 for schools for fishermen by Rs. 100' to discuss the question of the nature of buildings which are used for the schools for fishermen, etc. Sir, I find from the administration report for 1924-25 prepared by the Director of Government Fisheries that there are 32 schools for fishermen on the West Coast, and it was a surprise to me to see that there was not even a single institution which may be mentioned, built by the Government Fisheries Department for the purpose of housing these poor students of the fisherfolk. I have seen one school at Blangad which is a rented one, and no other buildings on the West Coast are there to admit pupils without fear or anxiety used as Fisheries schools. The Director of Fisheries in his report says that 11 on the East and 11 on the West Coast were blown away on account of the cyclone. Sir, it may be providential that in the so-called rickety buildings built with bamboo and cadjan, in which you find about 2,450 pupils sitting and studying the three Rs., their lives have been saved.

P.M.

"What would have been the condition, Sir, if one or two schools had been blown away by the late cyclone? The life of the children would have been put an end to. So, I would request the hon. Minister for Development to consider the question of providing at least half a dozen school buildings by the Department of Fisheries for the fishermen of the West Coast every year. I may say that the hon. Minister has not seen any one of these institutions. If he had seen any one of these schools, he would have taken up the schemes even in 1924 when he came to the West Coast. I therefore make this earnest appeal to the hon. Minister on behalf of the fishermen of Malabar, South Kanara and East Coast that instead of the so-called buildings or name sake ones real buildings may be put up."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" If you take the question as to whether for a school building we should have one made of cadjan leaves or coconut leaves or one of bamboos and tiles, I should say, following the latest theories on the subject, that the buildings should be on the first model, viz., coconut or cadjan leaves. Such a building could be changed from place to place, if necessary. In fact we have heard time after time the theory that in the case of the institutions like schools the more open air instruction is given the better. If we had built masonry buildings and if the storm that raged recently had blown over those buildings, the children would have come to the end of their existence. On that score I do not disapprove of the idea of masonry buildings, but the real reason for not having gone for masonry buildings is that funds could not be had. Yesterday some Member asked me what steps I had taken for getting the necessary funds. Here appears an instance in point where year after year we have been asking for funds; but the other question of cadjan buildings versus masonry buildings is always in the forefront and we have not been able to get any money. However, I shall still repeat the demand and as soon as funds come in we will be able to put up the necessary buildings that my hon. Friend suggests."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" The hon. Minister for Development said he was in favour of cadjan buildings for the purpose of admitting fresh air into the buildings. For that matter, I may assure the hon. Minister that we are living very near the sea and very few yards from the sea and all of us have got masonry buildings and some of us upstairs buildings. Even century old buildings are existing. I do not think that this plea should be put forth as a reason by the hon. Minister for Development. So far about the fear of storms. The second reason that he advanced was that he would have transferable buildings. (Laughter.) His point seems to be that as soon as the three R's. are taught in a certain place, the building could be shifted to another place. So probably the hon. Minister thinks that it will be rather good and reasonable for him to have transferable buildings for imparting education. (Laughter.) Above all, there is the assurance from the hon. the Minister that if funds permit he would sympathetically consider the views put forward by my humble self. I do not press my motion in the circumstances."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 2,96,200 for fish-curing yards be reduced by 1,00,000.'

"Mr. President, Sir, I am rather a bit stern in this amendment because this is a point which touches the vitality of the fisherfolk on the West Coast. The fishermen had been manufacturing cured fish from time immemorial with the salt earth which was procurable from the adjoining fields. The medical officers of the Health Department told them: 'It will not be becoming on your part to use salt earth. Use our duty-free salt from Tuticorin. The people said: 'Now, you will say that you will give no duty-free salt—and some time hence you will come and ask us for duty.' The officers told them 'We will see that this department is worked not to any profit but to look after the economic condition of the fisherfolk'. My elders believed this and were using salt for several years. Sir, what took place after 1st April 1924 is a very pitiable affair so far as we fishermen in the West Coast are concerned. Just at a time when the Government of India reduced the duty on edible salt from Rs. 2-8-0 to Rs. 1-4-0, we were asked to give an increased price. The reason adduced was that the Government of India told the Provincial Government, 'we cannot meet both the items—to give duty-free salt and meet the establishment of the fish-curing yards'."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" Is it not from Rs. 2-8-0 to Rs. 1-4-0 ? "

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—" Ten annas was the price per maund. I said one bag of two maunds from Rs. 1-4-0 to Rs. 2-8-0."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" Does it include Government of India duty also ? "

[26th March 1926]

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ I said that the Government of India in their letter No. 477, Finance (Separate Revenue), dated 16th November 1922, stated that they were prepared to issue duty-free salt for fish-curing yards but they were unable to incur any other expenditure. They said that they considered that the cost of all other expenditure should be found and borne only by the Madras Government. Sir, in answer to a question put by me on the floor of this hon. House on the 16th of this month, the reply I received was that the quantity of salt issued to fish-curing yards was 169,585 maunds. The actual cost to Government was Rs. 1,43,796. Before the 1st April 1924, the cost was only Rs. 1-4-0 per bag of two maunds. Now, I find a maund costs something like As. 14-6 and Rs. 62,791 have been debited towards the establishment charges, including pensionary charges. What I wish to submit before this House is this. • If it is for anything like the luxury for any class of people, I think Government is quite justified in having a profit out of certain transactions. That is not so here. Here are a certain set of people who happen to be classed as a backward community. They come to Government requesting them to elevate them. With this object Government originally supplied duty-free salt without any establishment charges for the fish-curing yards. Now, Sir, all on a sudden without telling a word of sympathy or a word of advice to the fisherfolk you have raised the price and debited the establishment charges on the fisherfolk. How are we to get on in our business unless and until the department sympathetically considers the question of the economic stress among the fisherfolk? For the same reason the cost of establishment was originally debited to salt revenue and they were not anxious to make any profit out of that. When the Government of India clearly said : ‘ We will give them duty-free salt and you had better pay the expenses incurred ’, we are made to pay the sub-inspectors’ salaries of Rs. 35, 40, 50 and sometimes Rs. 100 for the purpose of guarding 100 or 200 bags of salt. When members of our community men with efficiency and qualification seek appointments as sub-inspectors of the yards, they are refused admission. In the letter of the Director of Fisheries to the Government of Madras I find he says that it is necessary to have high salaried officers for the reason that there will always be corruption if they are paid low. While on this point of corruption I may be permitted to say that if there is a peon on Rs. 10 he will be contented with one anna per bag. If it is a sub-inspector he will not receive anything less than one rupee per bag of salt. I know it practically. (Laughter.) I have seen in South Malabar where fish-curing salt is brought and sold in ordinary shops mixed with charcoal and sold as bazaar salt. My friend the Secretary of the department says, ‘ How do you know ’. I know of two cases where two bags of salt disappeared. They were used for edible purposes. The fisheries staff could not do anything because the department of Salt had the control. The fishery officials had to report to the other department. Salt has got a tendency to dissolve and before action could be taken the salt disappeared. Another point which I have to submit before this House is this. Though there is a change in the cost of issue price there has not been any change in the management of the yards. They are rigidly working the Salt Manual Rules. The other day, on the 13th of this month, at Tellicherry there was a big fire. The yard is about 500 yards long and 50 yards broad. The fisherwomen come by one gate and after entering have to wait before salt is issued, then she has to take the fish to her yard to the other end to be subjected to the process of curing. In the big yard at Tellicherry there is but one gate in the west and one in the east. In the case of any emergency the poor women have to come from one end to the other running all the way to get out through one gate. We have been often requesting not to work the rules of the Salt department very rigidly. We have got now this instance of the Fisheries department working the rules very rigidly even now.

“ It is only fair that we should work for and with each other and thereby bring in some good for the fishermen. Sir, oftentimes fisherwomen will throw away small quantities of salt and when the fish is salted in tubs or in masonry pits. Thus it is sometimes found that the next morning, after salting large quantities of fish the previous day some amount of salt is lying in the brine undissolved. The rule is that nobody can leave either in the tubs or masonry pits any quantities of salt. If any such thing happens, the poor fisherman’s ticket is cancelled, and he is asked to clear out of the yard. After all the price of the salt has been paid by them, and yet the department of Fisheries is imposing on them terms and conditions over which the fisherfolk cannot have any control. I myself found some two pounds of salt in the pit undissolved. It is not their fault, it is only the fault of the science. (Laughter.) They try their best not to leave out any salt, but early morning the Fisheries department find one or two pounds left and they at once suspend the fishermen for one or two years or even cancel their tickets. The fishermen cannot be suspected of stealing the salt, for the reason the yard officer has got sometimes three or four peons to watch the curing operations with their eyes wide open whether anybody is taking away the salt. So, Sir, I make an appeal to the hon. the Minister for Development to sympathetically consider the question of somehow or other relaxing the intensity and rigour the rules in their application to the fisherfolk on the West Coast, and request of him to take such measures as will be conducive to the betterment of the fisherfolk. 12-45 p.m.

“ What I beg to say further is that the management of the fish-curing yards ever since they passed into the hands of the Fisheries has a sad tale to tell. The curers are now charged double the price of salt but this has not left them free of worries and troubles to which they were ordinarily heir to. Besides never in the annals of the yard was the transport of salt so much delayed and mismanaged. The fact that the year was a lean one saved the Fisheries department not a little. But that the department was not able to cope with the demand for salt during a year when fish supply was poor is proof positive of its inefficiency to control the yards. In many yards the operations ceased for periods ranging from 3 to 8 or even 11 weeks and during that period the unfortunate curers had to purchase bazaar salt. What with sleeping over the question of salt supply and the constant transfer of yard officers and peons, the curers had been put up to such difficulties and unnecessary hardships never before experienced. All this could have been prevented if they had had local honorary inspectors selected by Government from among the members of the community to advise and help the departmental officer. The curer’s interests would be safeguarded and at the same time unnecessary loss of revenue to the Government could be avoided.

“ The vexed question of the proper quantity of salt required for a given quantity of fish is still unsolved and troubles the curers and the officers. The entries so far as dryage, etc., are concerned may safely be said to be imaginary and this can be verified by the wide range prevalent all over the districts. Even here the co-operation of local men is sorely necessary for the department which stands aloof spurning their help.

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

"Sir, seeing that the Government fisheries department wants to make a profit out of this business of supplying salt for curing purpose and also get from it the establishment charges, pensionary contributions and other charges, I am at a loss to see why the hon. the Minister for Development should not come now to the rescue of the fisherfolk, especially as he knows that the past three or four years had been years of very great distress for them, coupled with the fact that we had a cyclone in the West Coast last year when so many lives, boats and fishing crafts were lost. I should like to know what he is going to do through this department for the amelioration of the conditions of the fisherfolk. With these words, I move the motion."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Prior to the 1st of April 1924, this business of the fish-curing yards was under the management of the Salt department. It was then a Reserved department, and it was only subsequent to that date, viz., 1st April 1924, that it came under the sway of the Transferred department. When the yards were under the Salt department the Government of India used to meet a proportion of the expenditure incurred on them, e.g., the contingencies of the yards were entirely met by that Government as also one-third of the cost of establishment and buildings. According to the figures of 1921-22 there was a net expenditure on these yards amounting to 1.37 lakhs, of which the Government of India paid Rs. .68 lakh. When the Salt and Excise departments were separated the yards were transferred to the Fisheries department. Before this was done the Government of India expressly said, that our 'obligations begin and end with supply of duty-free salt and any other expenses which we have been bearing hitherto you shall have to bear as the local Government.' So, when the yard came to us, we were not in a position to find ways and means for meeting the cost of the establishment which till then the Government of India had been bearing. Therefore, it is that after the transfer of the fish-curing yards to the Fisheries department we were obliged to raise the issue price of salt. It was formerly 10 annas per maund, and when we took up the yards and worked out the figures, we found that unless the price was raised from 10 annas to Rs. 1-4-0 per maund, that is double the price, we would not be able to supply the salt and maintain the necessary establishment without incurring any loss. As a result of our working we now found that in the year 1924-25 in spite of all precautions that had been taken, we got only, as the accounts show, a small profit of Rs. 394 for the whole year. That is only for the West Coast. I am not referring to the East Coast, where also a similar tale has to be told. Now, the whole argument of my hon. Friend, Mr. Gopalan, is to charge the consumers of salt in the fish-curing yards the actual cost. He says, 'do not put on them the charges of establishment.' If they are not charged the establishment charges the funds must come from the purse of the general taxpayer. It is for the Council to decide whether in order to benefit one single community, the fisher community on the West Coast, they will put themselves to the trouble and expense of bearing the whole cost of the establishment. It might be asked why so much establishment is needed. Though the duty on salt had been reduced, from Rs. 2-8-0 to Rs. 1-4-0 still it is a very valuable asset, and if there is not sufficient establishment especially to watch all those curing operations in order to prevent surreptitious theft, the result would be disastrous and the loss incurred would be even double or triple the amount that we now spend on the establishment. That will be clear from the very instance that has come to the notice of this Council; just at the time of the transfer of Fish-curing yards from the Salt department to the Fisheries department 404 maunds of Salt went astray. That is the incident to which Mr. Gopalan also referred. Somebody must have been profited by it. But in disposing of the matter, we did not allow the Government to suffer the loss by it, but we collected from the erring officers the cost price and the duty on the quantity of salt which they had to account for."

[Sir T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"May I ask the hon. the Minister what was the price charged for each maund of salt supplied to fishermen when the whole department was under the Government of India, and what is the price now charged by the Madras Government; if there is any difference in price, how does the difference arise? What is the charge that the fishermen have to pay now for the salt as compared with that when it was managed by the Government of India. It was said, now that the Fisheries department has been created they have to pay higher charges."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The fishermen have to pay some extra charge because the Government of Madras is not willing to bear the cost of the establishment. Now, besides the establishment, we incur charges in transferring a certain quantity of salt from the East Coast to the West Coast in dhonis and country craft, and we have to get these charges from the people who use the salt for fish-curing purposes. Thus they have to pay three or four annas, the actual price of salt on the East Coast, five or six annas for the cost of transport, and also the cost of establishment that has to be maintained in order to see that no person fraudulently takes away the salt without paying the duty."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Then, how did they charge only 10 annas, when it was under the Government of India? The complaint of Mr. Gopalan is that the fishermen have to pay more now than before."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Because the department maintained here by the Madras Government is larger than the department of the Government of India."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"No, Sir."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I am sorry if I have misinterpreted the hon. Member for Government."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Fish-curing salt was charged only 10 annas when it was under the Government of India. We have been obliged to raise it from 10 annas to Rs. 1-4-0 because our Government is not willing to bear from its own funds the cost of the establishment that is needed for putting down corruption."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Why not retransfer the Fisheries department to the Government of India?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"They are not willing to take it. In fact they would take away even the concession that is being given, viz., salt for fish-curing being duty free. Their concession now extends only to the remission of the duty on salt supplied. As regards the cost of establishment they were bearing before, they are not now willing to pay, and this Government also is not willing to meet it out of their revenue."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" May I know what the market price of salt per maund now is ? "

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" It differs in different places. The freight from Tuticorin to the West Coast is about Rs. 11 per ton."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" About Rs. 3-5-4 per maund."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" May I know whether anything was collected as duty from the fisherfolk then or is being collected now ? "

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—" Rupees 1-4-0 is now collected per maund ; no duty is charged on salt used for fish-curings."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" No ; from the people who are supplied with salt for fish-curing purposes, we are now collecting Rs. 1-4-0 per maund, and that includes the charge for maintaining the establishment for seeing that no salt taken out for fish-curing is passed on to the general public for consumption."

1 p.m.

" Various other matters, such as inspectors taking bribes and other things were brought to notice. But these are matters which if brought to notice in due course, just as in any other department will be put down by the superior officers. It was also stated that on occasions when there was fire there would be loss of life on account of the paucity of gates in Tanur yard. If more passages are provided in the yards, it would entail more establishment for guarding and increased expenditure on the preventive establishment. And as regards the delays, that is a matter which has been engaging the attention of the Government. In order to avoid such delays, we are getting a trawler. The trawler will be utilized for transporting salt from Tuticorin to the West Coast. With these observations I would request my hon. Friend to withdraw his motion."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, on behalf of the House I should like to be enlightened on this point. It comes to this, that because we have a Fisheries department therefore that the poor people on the West Coast have to suffer, have to pay an additional charge which they would not have to if there were no Fisheries department. (Rao Sahib P. V. Gopalan : 'Hear, hear.') That is what my Friend Mr. Gopalan drives at. This is a complicated subject. Complaints have been brought to me and I was asked to represent the matter in the House, but I have not got all the materials. In Bombay, I am told on good authority, the fishermen have not to pay all this extra charge. In North Kanara, they pay 14 annas a maund."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" Now or when the hon. Member was Additional Sessions Judge there ? " (Laughter.)

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I took no interest in the fishermen's troubles at that time. These were brought to my notice but a few months ago. I have had no time to devote to them. That was why I did not want to bring the matter before the Council myself. I think it is due to the House and to myself that we should have some light on the point. In North Kanara which is under the Bombay Government the fishermen there have not to pay so much, there being no Fisheries department, nor Development Department. Unluckily for us, we have the department and the result is that the fisherfolk in South Kanara have to pay much more. Apart from this, they are subject to a lot of worries and troubles."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" On a point of information. If the hon. Member would give us the figures for Bombay, I would be able to compare them with those of Madras."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I shall be glad to supply the figures, but not at this moment. (The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. Sivagnanam Pillai : 'When ?') The fishermen there pay much less for getting a maund of salt than those in South Kanara, the reason being that we have got the Fisheries department. There it is under the Government of India. Here the Fisheries department have to get the salt from private owners or Government salt pans, whereas the Government of India have their salt supplied at a certain rate. Mr. Gopalan's contention comes to this, that here in this Presidency on account of the Fisheries department, the fishermen are put to an amount of worry and trouble and an amount of additional charges, and the system leads to an amount of corruption. There is corruption all through ; so much amount has to be paid to the inspector so much to the sub-inspector, so much to the peon and so on ; there is a regular mamul. I have very authentic information that there is systematic corruption going on. The fishermen have to satisfy an army of officers from peon downwards to inspectors. The present system is one which leads to abuse. These fishermen who were wealthy and prosperous once are now impoverished, and the wealth of the fishermen is slipping away into the hands of the capitalists. In the place of the wealthy fishermen caste, another caste has sprung up, the capitalist caste, thriving at the expense of the poor fishermen. Is the Fisheries department existing for the benefit of the people or is it that the people are existing for the department ? It seems as if the people are existing for the department and not the department for the benefit of the people."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" I just want some information on this subject. I was very much confused when my hon. Friend, Mr. Gopalan, was speaking on that department, and I think that confusion has become complete after the comparison that my hon. Friend from South Kanara has drawn between what is being done in North Kanara and what is going on in South Kanara. I believe the Government of India's policy was itself entirely different from this Government's on the question of Salt administration. When the departments of Salt and Excise were bifurcated Salt had its own establishment managed by the Government of India and Excise was transferred completely to the control of this Government. I remember the time when the Government of India raised this question that they were not bound to supply duty free salt to the fish-curing yards in Malabar or East Coast. In this connexion I want to know a few facts. What is the cost which the Government of India was charging to these fishermen ? Was it merely the cost of production or was there anything over and above by way of cost of communication, cost of conveyance of the article to the fish-curing yards ? I want to know if it was only 10 annas and if as the hon. the Minister has stated the Government of India have since agreed not to charge duty for this salt and to continue the practice of delivering salt free of duty to these fishermen."

[26th March 1926]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Prior to the transfer of the fish-curing yards to this Government, the process had been somewhat like this. A person who wanted to get salt from the factory for the purpose of fish-curing yards had to buy the salt from the monopolists or the excise men who manufactured this salt. He made his own arrangements with them and got his salt at about 2½ annas, sometimes less, sometimes more. The profit went to the person who manufactured the salt. Having purchased that salt in the ordinary course he naturally had to pay duty to the Government officers; but if that was covered by a permit given by the salt officer that this salt was intended for fish-curing yards and not for human consumption, then it was passed on to the fish-curing yard without a duty being paid. Thereafter, that salt became the property of the buyer, and whatever cost was incurred in order to transport it from the factory to the consumer in another fish-curing yard, would have to be borne by the man who bought the salt. Under the old arrangement the man who purchased the salt for human consumption paid not only the cost of the manufacture but also the duty of Rs. 2-8-0 to Government; whereas if the salt was intended for use in a fish-curing yard he had to pay the cost of the manufacture and nothing to Government. By a calculation that we made, it came to about 10 annas if a maund of salt were to be purchased in the East Coast and transported to the West Coast and made available in the fish-curing yard for the purpose of consumption in the fish-curing yard itself. When we took up the management of fish-curing yards, we found that if we did not collect at the rate of Rs. 1-4-0 per maund we would be incurring losses to the extent of one lakh or so. That was what the Government of India were themselves losing in the years past, and when the department was transferred, they clearly told us that all the concession they could show was in giving us salt duty free."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"Where?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"At the place of manufacture."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"West Coast or East Coast?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"East Coast. Whatever place you find convenient. You know in the West Coast there is no manufacture of salt, because the country does not lend itself to it nor the climate. This money is paid there. I was asked whether the 10 annas was paid at the place of manufacture or at the place of consumption. The Government undertakes the duty of bringing the salt and making it available in the fish-curing yards in Malabar or some other place on the West Coast; and it is there that the person who wants it for fish-curing pays money and the salt is supplied to him for use within the factory premises, so that he may have no opportunity of taking it away to another place."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"Still I am not clear in my own mind, as to what this process is. Obviously there is salt sold in the West Coast, apart from fish-curing yards, there are markets where the salt is sold, and market salt is available to all. There must be a price fixed for the sale of that salt. Private merchants have only to go to the East Coast, and get it from the manufacturers paying a duty to Government. Now, the price of salt in the East Coast, after paying duty, is Rs. 1-4-0 a maund."

[26th March 1926]

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There are two kinds of salt in the West Coast; one kind is sold by the ordinary bazaar man who has paid duty at the salt manufacturing station on the East Coast; the other salt is also exposed for sale, but it is exposed for sale only in the fish-curing yards on the West Coast where it can be got at the rate of Rs. 1-4-0 per maund. But the bazaar man has to pay, if I remember right, Rs. 3-5-4 per maund. So, the difference in price in the salt that could be had under restriction and the salt that could be had freely is about Rs. 2 or so."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Has the hon. Member got any doubts?"

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"All of us have doubts; 1-15 curiously enough our doubts instead of being cleared become more and more P m. as the discussion proceeds. However, what I wanted to say was this. There is a large number of fisherfolk in the West Coast consisting of the original fishermen as well as the new converts to Muhammadanism who practise fishing as a profession. Practically all along the Coast, the fishermen consist mainly of these two classes of people."

"As I said, from the discussion that has proceeded so far, you will see that till 1st April 1924 the cost that was being collected from these fisherfolk for the purpose of fish-curing was only the cost of manufacture and the cost of transport from the place of manufacture to the place of consumption on the West Coast. It is in the Tinnevely district near Cape Comorin that salt is manufactured generally and it is from that part that salt is transported to the West Coast. Now the cost of production at the salt factory itself in Tinnevely, putting it at its highest level, will not exceed 2 annas or As. 2½ and the cost of transport from the place of manufacture to the West Coast may be about 5 annas or 6 annas. Both these put together . . ."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The cost price of salt in 1923-24, while it was manufactured in the salt factory, was As. 3-1 per maund. The cost of transport to the West Coast in 1923-24 by the Salt Department was As. 9-1½ per maund."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Roughly it comes to 12 annas I am thankful to the hon. the Secretary of the Development Department. Till the 1st of April 1924, the duty on salt was Rs. 2-8-0 per maund. Since 1st April the duty on salt has been reduced to Rs. 1-4-0. The fisherfolk instead of being benefited by this reduction are now asked to pay Rs. 1-4-0, whereas previously they were asked to pay only 10 annas or 12 annas, whatever may be the cost to the Madras Government . . ."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"So far as the fisherfolk are concerned, it matters very little to them whether the duty on salt is Rs. 2-8-0 or Rs. 2 or Rs. 1-4-0. All that is excused in their case. Therefore it is quite immaterial so far as they are concerned."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Not that I forget that point. When every man, woman and child is benefited by this reduction on salt duty, the one class of people, namely, fisherfolk alone do not get any benefit out of it. That is my point."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The fishermen will also get some relief. It is only fish-curiers that will not get any benefit."

[26th March 1926]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—“ I am speaking of them as fish-curers. So, what I submit is that these people alone in the whole of India are not in any way benefited owing to this reduction in duty. Of course, I quite follow the point referred to by my hon. Friend the Minister for Development and his Secretary. What I exactly want to point out is that although every man, woman and child in the country is benefited, these fish-curing people alone are not in any way benefited. The immediate result of this reduction so far as they are concerned is the increase in the amount from 10 annas to Rs. 1-4-0, whatever may be the cost to the Madras Government. They have to maintain an establishment and for the purpose of paying that establishment they have to collect the amount from out of the fish-curers. Apparently the Government of India was incurring that expenditure out of their own pockets. So, the immediate result is that the fish-curers have to pay Rs. 1-4-0 while they were paying previously 10 annas or 12 annas. It seems to me that this is a real hardship to them and I think that some method has to be devised for giving them relief.”

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—“ The whole question came for discussion in 1924. As I said just now, there are two classes of people who want salt. One is the general user and the other the fish-curing people. So far as the general people are concerned, the reduction of salt duty has affected them beneficially. So far as the fish-curing folk are concerned, it is quite immaterial to them whether the Government places Rs. 10 duty or Re. 1 duty, because they get their salt without having to pay any duty at all. The real difficulty which arises now is while the department was under the management of the Salt department they were content to get 10 annas per maund, while the Fisheries department want Rs. 1-4-0 for a maund. The reason for that I have explained, viz., that the Government of India themselves were bearing a loss. Now, on the eve of transfer they say ‘we shall have nothing to do with the department; if you are not going to undertake it, we shall cease to grant the concession’; if we had not given this concession, then too people will have to buy their salt duty paid and the cost paid. That is the real position.”

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ Mr. President, I just heard the hon. the Minister for Development saying that till recently the management of the Fisheries Department was under the Government of India and as a sort of concession these fish-curing folk were getting their salt at a low rate and if there are any grievances now, it is up to us to put a fight in the Legislative Assembly. In reply to that I beg to submit that this Government in their G.O. No. 219, dated 14th February 1924, have stated as follows :—“ The Government of India accept in principle the Local Government’s recommendation for the separation of Salt from Excise department in the Madras Presidency.” May I not presume that this step, viz., the transfer of the Fisheries Department, was taken by no less a person than the hon. the Minister for Development when he was suggesting to the Government the advisability of separating Salt from Excise? May I not appeal to him equally to see that the management of the Salt department is conducted in such a way as not to affect these poor fish-curers on the West Coast, and that if he views this question with sympathy he can easily solve the difficulties?”

26th March 1926]

[Mr. P. V. Gopalan]

“ The second point is that the Government of Madras have made a small profit of Rs. 300 out of the transaction of supply of salt. It is a known fact to the fisherfolk that the Director of Fisheries is not only in charge of the fish-curing yards, but he has also got so many other activities. If you will kindly turn to page 115 of the Report issued by the Fisheries department, you will find that he is in charge of many departments such as Oil and Guano Factories, Marine Fisheries, Pearl and Chank Fisheries, Beche-de-mer, Fish-Curing Yards, Marine Aquarium, Oyster supply, Research, Inland Pisciculture, Socio-Economic and other items of activities. Sir, is it expected that the profit which the Government make from these poor fish-curers would be set apart to pay this officer and his subordinates? I submit in all earnestness it is a hard fate that we fisherfolk on the West Coast are going to be levied for paying salaries of England-returned export and his subordinates.”

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW :—“ It is only the pay of the fish-curing establishment that is paid from out of this profit.”

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ May I ask the hon. Secretary for the Development Department whether the pay of the Assistant Director of Fisheries on the West Coast is not met out of the profit realized from fisheries? So, I submit that it is not a question of 300 and odd rupees alone. It is a question of nearly Rs. 62,921. This Rs. 300 and odd is after all a small amount. But the point is we have to pay pensionary contributions and salaries for so many officers. I submit that this is not the purpose for which the Fisheries Department should exist, namely, of making a huge profit from out of these poor folk and paying it to so many gazetted and ministerial officers.”

“ The second point is this : the hon. the Minister said that originally salt was selling at As. 10 per maund. Now the price has been increased to Rs. 1-4-0, because the salt has to come from a long distance. The Secretary of the Development Department said that the salt got from Tuticorin factory was selling at As. 3-1½ per maund. Before the year 1924 a maund of salt was obtainable for As. 10. Now we have got to pay Rs. 1-4-0. I have this authority and I shall just read it. This is what the Chief Commissioner of Salt says : ‘ The Deputy Commissioner who investigated the question of import of Bombay salt to Udipi recently reported that the cost per maund will be As. 11-6 to As. 12-2, while Tuticorin salt which we used for curing purposes works out at As. 9-8 per maund.’ So, I submit that while previously for a maund of salt we were paying As. 9-8 we have now to pay Rs. 1-4-0. I find from the speech of hon. Member the cost of transport of a maund of salt comes to As. 14-6, but they say that in the year 1924 they were selling salt at As. 10 per maund. I do not know how they were able to sell salt in 1924 at such a low rate, unless the hon. the Minister is able to explain it otherwise. Now they say that for the cost of transport alone they have to pay As. 14-6.”

“ Sir, I beg to submit to the hon. Minister that if the Government of India really wishes that the Madras Government should bear the cost of the establishment of the fish-curing yards on the West Coast, I shall have practically no objection to pay the extra cost of the salt to pay the cost of the salary alone of the establishment. But, certainly the fisherfolk on the West Coast do not want at all such a big establishment including the Director of Fisheries and his subordinates and meet their expenses out of the profits realized from the fish-curing yards."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"The pay of the Assistant Director of Fisheries is not met from the profits of the fish-curing yards."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"Then under what item does it come in? I am not speaking extempore, but I am basing my remarks on the answer given by the hon. Minister to question No. 1553 where it is said that the cost of the establishment is Rs. 1,48,791, including the pensionary contribution which comes to Rs. 62,791."

* Mr. V. PANDRANG ROW:—"It does not include the pay and pensionary contribution of the Assistant Director of Fisheries; it only refers to the pay and pensionary contribution of the establishment and also 25 per cent of the travelling and other expenses of the Superintendent of the Pearl and Chank Fisheries, Tuticorin."

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"Whether it is 25 per cent or 12 per cent or even one per cent, whether it is the whole salary or quarter of the salary, some portion of their cost is met out of the profits made from the fish-curing yards of the West Coast. If the Government of India have informed this Government that the cost of the establishment should be borne by the Madras Government, as a representative of the fisherman community, I have no objection if the cost is increased a little to meet the cost of the establishment. But we should not be charged cent per cent more to meet the cost of a big establishment. Take the question of transport. The transport charges from Tuticorin to Malabar has since 1924 doubled and trebled. While the salt was selling at 10 annas a maund before 1924, now the transport charges alone come to As. 14-6 per maund. I have placed before the hon. Minister for Development and the hon. House a statement of the grievances of the fishermen community. I request him to consider these questions sympathetically and lower the price of salt, so that the community may be able to thrive economically and the hon. Minister will always be remembered by the community and will say to themselves 'The hon. Minister has done justice to their cause and let us therefore be grateful to the Government.'"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Sir, in the same Government Order from which the hon. Member quoted you will find this pronouncement of the Government of India. They say that the Government of India would be prepared to remit the duty on salt issued for fish-curing purposes but would be unable to incur any further expenditure on this account. It is because that this expenditure was being borne from the general revenues that they satisfied themselves with a cost of 10 annas a maund for the salt issued to the fish-curers, while they themselves incurred an expenditure of about 9 annas per maund. When it came to our possession, we were obliged to pay the cost of the establishment maintained for the purposes of the fish-curing yards. It is on that account that we have to charge Rs. 1-4-0. The actual cost comes to annas 14 and a small excess is generally added on to the actual cost which brings it to Re. 1. We have put it at Rs. 1-4-0 in order that the cost would cover the transport charges and there will be a small portion left, so that the Government will not be losers thereby. The hon. Member seems to be under the impression that certain items of establishment charges which ought not to be included have been included. If he will only give a list of these items I shall have the matter looked into and if we are right, we shall explain the matter to him and if we are wrong, have the matter rectified."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN:—"Sir, I beg to move
'that the allotment of Rs. 8,900 for Nilgiri Fisheries be reduced by Rs. 10.'

"I have given notice of this motion simply to elicit information as to the lakes and streams in the Nilgiris where trouts will be available. The trout is a fish which is useful for sporting and useful also as an article of food. I should like to have information as to which are the streams and lakes where this kind of fish is available."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I was not prepared to answer this point, Sir, because it was not stated in the motion that it was the object of the Mover. I shall look into the matter and supply him the information."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN:—"May I know which are the streams in the Nilgiris where trout is available?"

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There is a list of them. Under rule 8 of the Fishing Rules published in the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 11th August 1925, the information will be found. The trout is also found in the streams specified in rules 6, 9 (i), (ii) and (v). Fishing with rod and line is freely permitted in the Ootacamund lake all round the year without licence."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The question that Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 7.49 lakhs for Fisheries was put to the House and carried. The grant was made.

The House adjourned for lunch at 1-40 p.m.

After Lunch (2-30 p.m.).

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move
'for a grant not exceeding Rs. 14.84 lakhs for Labour, including Factories'."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN:—"Sir, I beg to move
'that the allotment of Rs. 24,200 for Pay of establishments be reduced by Rs. 10.'

"My object is to suggest to make the appointments in the department permanent and to appoint an assistant commissioner to attend to works concerning depressed classes. The people in the department think that the department itself is not permanent, but only temporary. So, they do not attend to their work with heart and soul. Unless the department is made permanent, the work of the department would suffer.

[Mr. R. Srinivasan]

"The present Commissioner of Labour has so many branches of work to attend to, that he is not able to devote his whole time for the work of the depressed classes. The department requires an able officer with much experience like Mr. Paddison and other officers who have been there. As the work is extended now to 10 districts, an officer is wanted to attend particularly to this branch of work. At present there is no check over the District Officers' work. Once in a way the Commissioner goes to the districts to attend only to a particular business on which he was required there. The regular and routine work of the District Labour Officers is not checked at all. Papers are sent to them and are promptly replied. They think they have done their work if they keep up correspondence to the satisfaction of the head office. The executive work actually suffers. Their office work takes all their time and they cannot go out. I have visited certain places and I think that the work of the officers requires to be checked. Just at present there is a manager in the head office who attends to the correspondence and the routine work; he could not take so much interest in the depressed classes work which suffers a great deal as he has so many other works to attend. Therefore I suggest that an assistant commissioner or a deputy commissioner ought to be appointed."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, the question of making the Labour department permanent has been considered by the Government once or twice and they have not come to a definite conclusion. As a matter of fact, I do not think that any inconvenience is being felt because the department is temporary; and the usefulness of the department has not been lessened by that fact. The Labour department is working as an experimental measure, and if the Government think after some time that it has been doing useful work, it will then decide what staff is required for that department permanently. Therefore it is impossible for me now to give an undertaking that the department will be made permanent."

"As regards the other question, I can say that we had at first a deputy commissioner and afterwards an assistant commissioner and this post was abolished by the Legislative Council. I do not see how I can restore that appointment. If the Commissioner of Labour feels that he wants the help of an assistant or a deputy commissioner, the Government will no doubt consider his request when it comes from the Labour department. It is impossible for me to give an undertaking in this direction also."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,40,400 for Pay of establishments be reduced by Rs. 100'

"My object is to elicit information as to the chances of promotions which the District Labour Officers would have had had they been in the regular line and as to their travelling allowances. It appears that certain Collectors have expressed their opinion that the Tahsildars who have been transferred to the Labour Department do not stand any chance of promotion in the regular line. The District Labour Officers have to put up with indignity by castemen; they are not like the other Tahsildars. The Tahsildars in the regular line when they go to the villages are semi-gods. They are treated with much respect, and they command respect and enjoy all privileges. Immediately a Tahsildar is appointed as District Labour Officer, caste people and village officers take no notice of him. I know of an instance in which a District Labour Officer who was a Tahsildar in the same taluk wanted to have a drink of water—I was with him—the caste people turned their back and the village munsif refused to land a drinking vessel. The District Labour Officers suffer a lot.

"As regards the other question, all they get is an allowance of a few rupees more. I think it is not enough. Their position is in no way better. Of course, there are one or two exceptions. It appears that a Revenue Inspector gets 10 or 12 annas and these officers get lower than that amount. I wish to bring these facts to the notice of the Government."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, except in the City of Madras, District Labour Officers are generally appointed from the cadre of Deputy Tahsildars and Tahsildars in the Revenue Department. They are given a consolidated pay equal to their pay in the regular line plus an allowance of Rs. 50 up to a maximum of Rs. 250 a month. Their prospects do not suffer by their being in the Labour Department. Good work done by them in this department always betters their prospect. The District Labour Officers are not at any disadvantage on account of the fact that they are being employed in the Labour department."

"With regard to the question of their travelling allowance, I can say that the ordinary rules of travelling allowance apply to them. I do not know the reason why they should be treated specially."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. L. C. GURUSWAMI :—"Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,97,900 for Depressed classes—District staffs—be reduced by Rs. 100'

"Mr. President, Sir, my object in moving this is to raise the question of appointing more efficient staff. In doing so, I am obliged to remark that the proceedings of the department are slow, not to say that the responsible officers are slack in their duty. I am sorry to have to raise my voice against a department which has come to uplift the depressed classes. Certainly I would be the last person to be ungrateful to those who have sympathy to attend to the needs of the poor classes of people. But, when I find that some of the District Labour Officers find it even difficult to reply important questions, we have to view their snail-like movement to want of sympathy. Here I have an instance to quote. On 31st December 1924, some people of the Pundi village, in the Tiruvallur taluk of the Chingleput district, put in applications for assignments of some darkhast lands for a school and for a water-well. All these were intended for the use of the madigas of the village. I forwarded all these petitions and waited till 19th May 1925 for a reply, failing which I reminded the Commissioner of Labour of my letter and the petitions. I received a reply as to how these three matters were referred to the respective officers, viz., the Tahsildar of

[Mr. L. C. Guruswami] [26th March 1926]

2-45 p.m. Tiruvallur and the District Labour Officer of Saidapet. As I did not have any reply from these officers, I wrote to them on 11th June 1925. I received a reply from the District Labour Officer on the 14th June 1925, saying that the matter would be attended to shortly. The poor people of the village still could not have a well for taking water and it is an arid place where water is a scarcity. I have sent some reminders too and still no effect. Is this not lack of sympathy, Sir? The school and darkhast may wait; but water which is the first necessity of life should be promptly attended to. The delay in correspondence and the delay in attending to the needs of the poor people are things intolerable. I therefore beg to draw the attention of the Government to such many other irregularities. I have more than once pointed out that the Labour Department needs efficient men."

* The hon. Khan Bhadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Sir, my hon. Friend Mr. Guruswami has made out no case for the appointment of a more costly staff and he believes that we can get on better with a more costly staff than we can by employing a less costly staff. On the other hand, Sir, what we are now doing is in accordance with the wishes of the Legislative Council. Prior to 1922, Deputy Collectors were appointed as District Labour Officers; but in that year the Legislative Council by a clear vote said that we should not appoint Deputy Collectors as District Labour Officers. There was no other alternative to Government but to appoint District Labour Officers from the ranks of Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars. What we are at present doing is in accordance with the wishes of the Legislative Council and I do not see any reason why we should change the practice."

"As for the various grievances mentioned by the hon. Member, the same would have been the case if the District Labour Officers had been recruited from Deputy Collectors. I do not therefore think, Sir, that my hon. Friend has made out any case at all for the appointment of a more costly staff."

* Mr. L. C. GURUSWAMI:—"Mr. President, Sir, my only complaint is that the present staff does not attend to the needs of the depressed classes as much as it ought to."

The motion was, by leave of the House, withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Sir, I beg to move my motion, viz.—

'that the allotment of Rs. 1,97,000 for Depressed classes—District staffs—be reduced by Rs. 100'

"Sir, I wish to offer my remarks in a few temperate words and to say what I feel in connexion with this matter. Sir, experience has shown that the Revenue Department cannot possibly attend to the needs of the depressed classes in the various districts. Therefore, Sir, this department has been specially created for the amelioration of the depressed classes. They are doing a special work in connexion with the betterment of the so-called depressed classes. I am not a Member, Sir, who would unnecessarily criticize matters without having facts and figures before me. If at all I begin to say a few words, I will endeavour my best to see that I offer my remarks in such a way that they have a certain amount of sense in them. (Laughter.)

26th March 1926] [Mr. R. Veerian]

"In the first place, Sir, let me point out the nature of the work entrusted to the Commissioner of Labour. His work is very great. The following are the subjects with which he has to deal:—

Administration of the Factories Act.

Working of the Planters' Labour Act.

Working of the Workmens' Breach of Contract Act.

Emigration of Labour.

Labour Bureau and Employment Bureau.

Wages census.

Industrial disputes.

Control of settlements under the Criminal Tribes Act and investigation into the conditions of the depressed classes and also hill tribes outside the agency tracts and measures for their advancement.

"These are the various kinds of work that he has to do. Now, Sir, the Labour Department has been created in ten districts, namely, Chingleput, South Arcot, Godavari, Kistna, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Guntur, Bellary, South Kanara and Madras City. I believe that this department has been created on the strength of the population of untouchables in those districts. What I find from the statement I have in my hand is that there are a good number of untouchables in other districts also. Let me point out, Sir, that the number of untouchables in the various districts are—

Tinnevely	..	..	..	..	..	320,805
Chittoor	..	..	..	..	..	211,827
Madura	..	..	..	..	..	320,084
North Arcot	..	..	..	..	..	322,411
Coimbatore	..	..	..	..	..	320,572
Ramnad	..	..	..	..	..	238,946
Salem	..	..	..	..	..	252,784
Anantapur	..	..	..	..	..	128,153
Cuddapah	..	..	..	..	..	115,391
Kurnool	..	..	..	..	..	118,445
Ganjam	..	..	..	..	..	158,501

I do not know how we are to ameliorate the conditions of the depressed classes in those districts unless there is a special officer in each district. I know the difficulties of getting sufficient money. I think, Sir, that it will not be out of place for me to suggest that there should be a Deputy Commissioner of Labour for a group of districts appointed from among the members of the depressed classes as honorary workers, so that they may be able to assist the Commissioner of Labour in doing the needful for the depressed classes. I do not want to say anything more than this. I hope the hon. Member in charge will kindly see that Deputy Commissioners are appointed at least for a group of districts to look after the amelioration of the depressed classes in consultation with the Commissioner of Labour."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, my hon. Colleague Mr. Veerian has rightly pleaded for increased provision to expand the activities of the Labour Department. I should like to know, Sir, whether the hon. the Home Member is satisfied that the amount so far allotted for this purpose has been to the Christian faith. The parents feel their inability to send their children to schools conducted by Christian teachers. They want men belonging to the depressed classes embracing the Hindu faith. They want their children to continue in the Hindu faith. The Christian teachers, they complain, are generally averse to the Hindu mode of worship and offering prayers. In the interests of the community I think that—I know the task is not easy—teachers belonging to the Hindu religion should be got.

"If you will please allow me, Sir, as my hon. Friend, Mr. Premayya, has not moved his motion, to offer my few remarks on the object underlying his motion, namely, the increase of educational facilities for depressed class pupils. So far as I remember, Sir, in 1892 it was during the time of Dr. Duncan, as Director of Public Instruction, that the first Government Order came out affording certain facilities for the depressed classes in the matter of education. That Government Order was considered to be our Magna Charta."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member may speak on the subject when Mr. Veerian moves his motion which comes lower down."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, my hon. Friend has answered the question himself in a way when he said that it was not easy to get Hindu teachers for employment in the schools intended for the depressed classes. That is indeed the real difficulty. If more teachers can be found from the depressed classes, there will be no difficulty whatever in appointing them. The fact is we have not got sufficient number of men. I shall, however, draw the attention of the Commissioner of Labour to this aspect of the problem."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 38,200 for grants to private institutions, etc., be reduced by Rs. 10.'

"My object is to discuss the question of management of the hostel in Madras. My suggestion with regard to the hostel at Madras is that the warden or whoever is in charge of it should be an educationist. He must be a pensioned teacher, an Anglo-Indian or even a Brahman, but with knowledge as to how the institution can best be managed. If a clerk or a butler is put in charge, the boys do not at all pay any regard to him. And the most primary thing that he has to do is to manage them. Again, the premises—I once visited them—are filthy. The boys cannot be brought under discipline unless you have a person who can command their respect. As it is, the hostel cannot be a success."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—"Sir, as I was a Commissioner of Labour—I am sorry however that I held the place for such a short period—I should like to express my sympathy with the motion that has been just moved. The question of obtaining men of the class the hon. Mover describes to manage the hostel has engaged my attention during the brief period I was in charge of the department. And Mr. Macmichael, who is now holding the post, is considering it at present. I trust this will satisfy the hon. Member and that he will withdraw his motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 5,85,500 for depressed classes—Betterment, be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object is to ask for increased provision for the betterment of the depressed classes. Sir, for Kallars who are to be found only in three districts a provision of Rs. 3,11,000 is made in the budget. The population of the untouchables in the particular districts which amounts to 6,484,776 is certainly larger. Is it because, Sir, that the Kallars give too much trouble that they are being looked after properly? Sir, a running horse is not given the required quantity of grass and gram while the horse which never runs, which is not at all useful for any purpose is being looked after properly. That is the same position here, Sir. (Laughter). I am very serious about the matter and hon. Members should not laugh because the laughter emanates from me."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member is himself laughing."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Sir, I should say that even this provision will not be utilized for ameliorative purposes."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"On a point of order, Sir. We have disposed of this question on a prior motion, the need for an increased provision."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"But this is as against the provision made for Kallars."

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Let me proceed, Sir. This amount is not only intended for ameliorative purposes but for maintaining the establishment charges. One cannot say how much amount will be spent for ameliorative purposes. There are such items to be attended to as grants for wells, pathways, burial-grounds, sanitary improvements in cheris in the Madras City and the construction of houses at Pulianthope. I will not be surprised if the whole amount is utilized on the Madras cheris. There is no guarantee against it. I wish to know therefore whether it is not possible to utilize the provision according to the population of the untouchables and to increase the provision for betterment purposes. I do not want to make a lengthy speech, Sir."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"As I have answered on another motion, we have allotted this year a greater amount than in any of the previous years. In 1921-22 it was only Rs. 1,25,000; in 1925-26, Rs. 4,67,300 and for 1926-27 we have Rs. 1,18,000 more. We are thus going on increasing the allotment and I am sure there is no reason for discontent."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Sir, I move

'that the allotment of Rs. 3,11,000 for Kallars—Reclamation be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I wish to raise in this motion the question relating to the hill tribes in the Nilgiris. There are the Malasars, the Kotahs and the Todas, within the category of hill tribes. There are 740 Todas, 1,163 Kotahs and 4,199 Malasars. These people are left to take care of themselves. They are an spent properly and that the officers employed by him attend to their duties as they ought to. Confining myself, Sir, to the activities in the headquarters of the Presidency, I should like to know whether this department is sufficiently in touch with all that is taking place in connexion with the Buckingham and Carnatic Mills. Sir, here is a Labour Union formed by the people on their own initiative which has been working for some time past. But then the mills have taken into their heads to organize almost a counter-labour union, if I may so describe it, and are compelling their workmen to join this union. I should like to know, Sir, whether it is a justifiable step on their part and whether the labour officers have brought this matter to the notice of the Government and have taken instructions in regard to this matter. The Trade Union Act permits even outsiders to be office-bearers of the Union provided they are not in a majority. Is it justifiable, Sir, that employers should compel the working people in the way the Buckingham and Carnatic Mills are doing? It is to press this aspect, Sir, that I have spoken."

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"That labour union, Sir, to which the hon. Member who last spoke referred, is the union which had political agitation for its object till some time ago. I met the men who have now formed another union and they came and told me that more than Rs. 75,000 was collected and they do not know what has been done with it. They have not any confidence in such men, they do not want outsiders to come to the mill and speak to them. They wanted more men of their own and have formed another union for themselves. I think it is not justifiable to go and break it. They say that these men are political agitators. The newly formed union is the actual labour union. These political agitators simply collect men, have a meeting or a lecture, they carry out some resolution and say that it was the opinion of labourers. Actually it is not so and these people do not know what is happening among the labourers. Now they say 'we want to have a real union, we do not want outsiders'; and I do not think the Government will interfere in this matter."

Mr. N. DEVENDRUDU :—"Sir, I want to say a few words. There is no labour office in my district. Some time ago I sent a petition to the Labour Commissioner for opening a labour office in my district. I therefore request the hon. Member to kindly see that an office is opened in my district."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, I entirely agree with what my Friend, the hon. Member representing the depressed classes, has said, that Government have no business to interfere in these quarrels between the two labour unions referred to by the hon. Member from Bellary. As a matter of fact, Sir, I did not anticipate that my hon. Friend from Bellary was going to raise this question in connexion with this motion. I do not think it is necessary to say anything about these unions and it is not right for me to take up this question at all. The other side of the question should be looked into before I can say anything in regard to this matter. The House, I am sure, will excuse me if I do not say anything on this subject; and the best thing for the Government to do is not to interfere in this affair at all."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"Sir, on a point of personal explanation. My point was not that the liberty of the workmen should be interfered with if they want to do anything themselves, but I took exception to their employers compelling them to join this union or that union. That is all."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"The question has to be examined whether the employers are compelling their workmen or not. I do not think I will be justified in saying anything without considering the other side of the question."

"Coming now to the question of providing increased funds for the department and also for proposals to expand the activities of the Labour department, I should like to say that the provision made was for the last five or six years—

	RS.
1921-22	1,25,000
1922-23	2,25,000
1923-24	3,85,000
1924-25	3,84,000

and for the coming year, i.e., for 1926-27, we have provided in the budget a sum of Rs. 5,85,500, or about Rs. 1,18,000 more than what we provided for the current year. Therefore, hon. Members of this House will see that we are going on increasing the budget allotment for this department and that we are trying to carry out the policy enunciated by my hon. Friend Mr. R. Veerian.

"With regard to the question of extending the activities of the department, to other districts we cannot do it all of a sudden. The department must be able to cope with the work. We have already extended it to ten districts and in the coming year we are going to extend it to two more districts and perhaps then we will extend it to two, three or more districts if funds permit. Therefore, Sir, it will be seen that our policy is one by which we go on trying to increase the activities of the department, but it is not possible to extend such activities to more than two or three districts every year."

"As for the Deputy Commissioner, Sir, I have already said, that there was a Deputy Commissioner and the Legislative Council abolished the post, and thought it was unnecessary. There is no point in saying now, Sir, that a Deputy Commissioner should be appointed, especially when we are trying to act according to the wishes of the Legislative Council."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"With the permission of my hon. Friend Mr. Premayya, I should like to move the motion standing in his name, Sir."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Order, order. The hon. Member, Mr. Premayya, is not moving it and the hon. Member, Mr. Srinivasan, will move his motion, No. 795 in the notice paper." 3 p.m.

* Rao Sahib R. SRINIVASAN :—"Very well, Sir, I move

"that the allotment of Rs. 2,20,600 for education charges of depressed classes be reduced by Rs. 100."

"My object is to suggest to Government that depressed classes men of Hindu faith may be employed as teachers. There is a general complaint, Sir, from the depressed classes that the teachers engaged are men belonging innocent lot, simple minded and very useful persons. It is a great pity to see that they are left helpless. I appeal, Sir, that at least a small sum may be spent for ameliorating their condition and I hope that it will be considered favourably."

[Mr. R. Veerian]

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"I should like to point out, Sir, that the Government have not forgotten the claims of these communities. In 1924 the question of improving their condition was examined in detail at the instance of the Collector of the Nilgiris. One important remedy for their chronic indebtedness was considered to be the spread of the co-operative movement among them. A chief inspector of co-operative societies was appointed in 1922 and any further increase in the official staff was considered unnecessary. Then the Government issued orders in March 1924 that no liquor should be issued to any members of the hill tribes except on medical certificates. And the Government have already sanctioned a campaign against relapsing fever in their midst. Another very important question considered was the introduction of compulsory education. It is a matter for those who are to administer the Elementary Education Act. I do not think we can do anything further at present. All the same, the Government addressed the Commissioner of Labour on the subject raised by the hon. Mover and he has replied that he does not recommend the appointment of a labour officer as there is more need in other districts and that more money cannot be found."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"I move, Sir, that the allotment of Rs. 8,800 for Industrial School for Girls, Nellore, be reduced by Rs. 100.

"It is intended to elicit information on some points. I wanted to know, Sir, how many girls are reading, and what communities they belong to, whether there is any hostel accommodation for girls, whether they get any scholarship and what sort of instruction they receive. I should like to know these from the hon. the Law Member."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"With regard to the question for more schools for girls in other districts, I may say that the question of industrial schools must be addressed to my hon. Colleague in charge of the Industries department. The Labour Department does not deal with Industrial schools for girls. I should say that the girls' school in Nellore is solely for the criminal tribes and that is being run by the Salvation Army. I hope with this information, the hon. Member will withdraw his motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, I move that the allotment of Rs. 13,29,300 for Miscellaneous—Commissioner of Labour be reduced by Rs. 100.

"May I request your permission, Sir, to supplement the information supplied by the Government on the hostel?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"We have gone past that question"

[26th March 1926]

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"But, Sir, no particular object is specified against my motion and so, I hope, I can raise any question."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"May I raise a point of order, Sir? The hon. Member has written a letter that he is raising this motion in connexion with two points, the recognition of labour unions and those who are employed under the various firms under the Commissioner of Labour."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"I am only supplementing what the hon. Member said in regard to the Hostel Committee."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Even the Government Member does not seem to want that information."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Even if he does not want it, I may say, Sir, that the request of the hon. Member has been already met by the Hostel Committee. I only want to make some suggestions to the hon. the Home Member to see that the Government insist upon the employers of labour in large numbers to make arrangements for the education of the children of the labourers."

"At the same time they should house the labourers in healthy localities, and if possible form villages as is being done in large industrial centres in western countries. Another thing, Sir, I request the hon. the Home Member to see is that the various mills recognize the various labour unions attached to them, and if possible to see that there are labour boards appointed with representatives of both capital and labour on them with the Labour Commissioner in them, so that if any disputes arise they will be able to settle them. Another thing, Sir. The Government is taking care of Government servants. At least they are supposed to take care of Government servants and the hon. the Home Member is taking care of the labourers. But there are a certain class of employees who are not taken care of by anybody, and they are employees in the various firms in Madras and mufassal. I tabled some resolutions but the Government said that they are not able to do anything because they are powerless. Now, Sir, I request the hon. the Home Member to introduce a Bill by which they will come under his protection, and their hours of work, their salaries, provision for them in their old age and various other things can be attended to. So I request the hon. the Home Member to see that the employees under the various firms are brought under his protection."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur:—"Sir, I do not think there is any need for a special enactment for the purpose mentioned by my hon. Friend Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar. I find that the Trade Unions Bill has been passed by the Central Legislature according to which provision will have to be made for giving educational and other facilities for the members of the trade union. Further, trade unions have to be registered. When that Act comes into force, all that the hon. Member wants he will get. And further, it will be impossible for the Commissioner of Labour to take note of those who are employed in firms. I do not see any reason why they should come under the special jurisdiction of the Labour Commissioner. If there are labourers, no doubt, he has got a sort of general supervision over them. But beyond that, I am afraid the Labour Commissioner would not go."

p.m.

[26th March 1926]

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" I do not see why Government should take care of labourers alone but not these people who do another kind of labour. They are human beings. They are citizens. They work from 8 in the morning to 5 in the evening, and their salaries are not enough for their needs. And they are not well cared for. I know that very many firms are taking care of their employees. If others do not take care of them, it is the duty of the Government to take them under their protection."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Are they employees in factories ? "

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" They are not employees of factories, Sir. I am suggesting that the hon. the Home Member should take them under his protection. The Government servants are supposed to be taken care of by the Government, though they are not well taken care of, and the labourers are taken care of by the hon. the Home Member. So I request the hon. the Home Member to bring in an Act so that these unfortunate people will come under it and under his protection."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" May I know whether the hon. Member means labourers in the firms or clerks in the firms ? "

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" Even the clerks employed in the various firms should have the protection of the Government as the labourers have."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" I am sure the clerks will certainly protest if the Commissioner of Labour should interfere with their independence. And I do not see any reason why the Commissioner of Labour should take these clerks under his supervision. As for the labourers, I see the point of the hon. Member. Now that the Trade Union Bill is passed, the labourers can hope to get better facilities."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" I do not see why labourers alone should be taken care of and not other employees. We have got the Civil Service Regulations and other rules for protecting the Government servants. But why should not these people who are also our tax-payers and citizens have the protection of the Government ? "

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" Just as the Government take care of Government servants, the principals of the firms take care of their employees."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" If they do not take care of their employees ? "

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" No such case has arisen till now."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" If there are instances, may I take it that the hon. the Home Member will take care of them ? "

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" I am afraid, Sir, I have no power."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The Demand under Labour including Factories was then put to the House and carried and the Grant was made.

[26th March 1926]

DEMAND XXIX—CIVIL WORKS—GRANTS TO LOCAL BODIES.

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Mr. President, Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'that Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 40.59 lakhs for Civil Works—Grants to local bodies'.

Mr. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE :—" Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 6,75,000 for non recurring grants to local bodies for roads and bridges be reduced by Rs. 100'

(to discuss the condition of roads and bridges maintained by local bodies and to direct the attention of the Government to this fact).

"The condition of roads and bridges in general are far from being satisfactory in many districts. When questions are put on the floor of this House to draw the attention of the Government to this fact, the answer invariably has been that it is not the concern of the Local Government and that the local bodies should be moved in the matter. I therefore take this opportunity when we are to vote money for grants to the local bodies for the maintenance of roads and bridges to point out that the roads are not properly maintained. The local boards have started levying profession tax in addition to other taxes. In spite of that the local boards complain of want of funds when the question of opening new roads and bridges is raised. I believe that this is a common complaint. It is necessary therefore that the Government should issue special orders to the presidents of district and taluk boards to pay necessary attention to the maintenance of roads and bridges and particular stress should be laid on this point when grants are made to the local bodies. Now, Sir, turning to my district of South Kanara, I find that almost all the roads maintained by the local boards are in neglected conditions. Bridges destroyed by the floods are still not reconstructed with the exception of two or three bridges. Really it is hard that the local boards do not maintain roads properly in spite of heavy taxes of various kinds levied upon the people. Villages particularly in the interior are badly in need of roads. During the monsoons it is hardly possible to pass from one village to another although they are not very far away from each other. This is not merely for want of roads but also of bridges.

"It is well known, Sir, that the West Coast is interspersed here and there by a number of streams and rivers. Between Udipi and Mangalore—a distance of 36 miles—there are four considerably wide rivers not to mention the small streams. During the monsoons these swell up and crossing at times almost becomes impossible. It is urged therefore that the Government will be pleased to consider the question of providing more funds for new bridges to the local boards. I hope the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government will sympathize with the needs of the people."

Mr. T. MALIESAPPA :—" Sir, village communications are totally neglected by the authorities in charge of local boards. It is very difficult to travel from one village to another as all the roads have become quite damaged for want of repair. In the rainy season, especially in the black cotton soil taluks bandies cannot use these cart-tracks. The land cess collected from the villages is mostly spent on roads connected with towns. The villagers very rarely go to such places. On the other hand, they have to go from their village to neighbouring villages which are not connected by good and efficient communications. When the local fund revenue and other revenue comes mostly from the villages, it is just and reasonable that Government should not neglect the convenience of villagers any longer. I urge that early and necessary steps should be taken to give better help in this matter."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Mr. President, Sir, one of the conditions upon which the grants are given to local boards and district municipalities for the maintenance of trunk roads and second-class roads is that those roads should be maintained in good condition, and in fact these roads are reported to be generally well maintained. The Superintending Engineers and Collectors of the districts report to the Government the condition of the roads and whether proper attention is paid to them or not. Besides the grants given for trunk roads and for the second-class roads last year the Government have made provision for grants to village roads last year. Unfortunately as the grant was made rather late in the year, most of the local boards were not able to utilize the grants. I do not think, Sir, there is really any reason why there should be any complaint regarding the maintenance of roads. It is true that more roads have to be constructed and the Government are prepared to take a bold step in that direction. Regarding the policy underlying the distribution of grants, the Government generally consider that the responsibility of maintaining the trunk roads rests with them and they give grants subject to the condition of Rs. 500 a mile in the case of trunk roads in the district board areas and Rs. 1,000 in the case of trunk roads in the jurisdiction of district municipalities. This grant so far as trunk roads are concerned is supposed to meet the expenditure incurred upon the maintenance of trunk roads.

"In the case of the second-class roads, the Government give 50 per cent of the expenditure incurred upon these roads subject to a maximum for each district. These grants are being made on expenditure being incurred by the local bodies. In the case of the trunk roads the expenditure incurred during the first nine months in the financial year is being paid during the next month, the balance is paid early in the next year. In the case of the second-class roads throughout the year, they pay the expenditure incurred by the local boards next month but to the extent of 40 per cent, and the balance is paid only after the next financial year. I do not think, Sir, there is really any room for complaint which my hon. Friends from South Kanara or Bellary have made."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

3-30
p.m.

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" I beg to move that the allotment of Rs. 6,75,000 for non-recurring grants to local bodies for road and bridges be reduced by Rs. 100

" Mr. President, I believe I have some complaint in the matter of the motion which I am now moving. My complaint has the approval of my hon. Friend, Mr. Ranganatha Mudaliyar, not unnaturally perhaps. I am referring to the state of the river Palar on the 39th mile from Madras where the conditions are so bad that everybody who has travelled on that road must realize that it is high time that Government should come and build that bridge. It is only the other day that an enterprising journal—the Madras Mail—published an account and a photograph of the hardship which the pedestrians and cartsmen are put to in fording this river which is fairly long and which owing to floods has accumulated so much of sand on the existing causeway as to make it below the bed-level of the river and difficult to trace. It is so much below the bed-level of the river that after flood it is impossible for carriages and much less for motor-cars to ford the river. The district board from time to time employs a costly staff to clear the sand. It can be got cleared only during the dry months and for four or five months it is difficult to clear. The Local Self-Government Department announced the policy some time back that trunk roads within 100 miles of Madras will be their roads and bridges will be put up at the entire cost of Government. In 1920 the district board of Chingleput sent up an estimate for four lakhs of rupees for a bridge on the river Palar. I realized at the time—soon after the reformed Legislative Council began—that it might not be easy for my district to get such a large sum as 4½ lakhs and we were able to persuade the members of the district board to put forward a less ambitious scheme. The district board considered the matter and tried to be in financial sympathy with an embarrassed Government and gave up the idea of a bridge across the river which the Government are bound to do according to their own Government Order and according to the promise they have made. The board was then satisfied with a much less ambitious scheme, viz., the building of an elevated causeway across the river. We sent up the estimates through the Superintending Engineer after considerable time and trouble to the engineering staff and the district board staff for a modest sum of Rs. 28,000. That 28,000 has been there for the last four years and we have not been able to get it. We have approached the Local Self-Government Department. We have approached the Finance Department. I have made my own obeisance to both the departments, but it has had so far no effect. We have had a Government Order issued to the district board that the application may be renewed next year. The next year has been writ large on the wall. Several next years have passed and yet no funds have been provided. The difficulties people have been put to have been graphically described in a newspaper of this city. It seems to me that the Government have taken a particular step. When they have said that they will provide we cannot provide the necessary funds; because it is perfectly clear that this is not a case where we were asked for. As a matter of fact, it is a case where, entirely, wholly and unequivocally it is your own and yet you do not interfere with the matter. I went further—I went as much as possible to make a reasonable offer. Last year, I think a month ago, I brought the matter to the notice of the Government and seeing that there is no provision made in the budget for the particular causeway asked that any little saving for the current year might be given so that work might be started and materials collected expeditiously and then put forward the further condition that the district board itself would finance the work before the next rainy season and Government might pay the funds when it was available or when they were in a position to pay. Out came the cryptic reply that if we were going to do that it would be at our risk. That is most unfair to us."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" May I point out that the risk involved is that Government do not undertake to pay it in any particular year.

[The Raja of Panagal]

[26th March 1926]

That is they may have to wait any length until Government are in a position to pay the grant."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" I hope the position of Government is not so hopelessly bad as the hon. Minister suggests. If for a sum of Rs. 27,000 Government have to wait for any length of time then the hon. the Finance Member's future—well, I refrain from speculating on what its possibilities may be. I am perfectly certain that a modest sum of Rs. 28,000 could be easily found any year. All that is now required is—I shall take the chance of getting the 28,000 this year or in the coming year—all that is now required is let me be given this assurance that if funds are available in the course of the next financial year I shall be given those funds. But in the meanwhile at least give me the permission to begin work and carry on at my own cost—I mean the cost of the district board. (Laughter.) I have so much confidence in the finances of this province and so much more confidence in the administration of the finance of this province by the hon. the Finance Member . . . "

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" May I ask my hon. Friend why if he has that confidence he did not undertake the responsibility ? "

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" I could not because the Government won't even say that they are liable to pay and that they will pay when funds are available. The Local Self-Government Department wrote to the President that if he begins work it is at his own risk and Government won't be committed even to the liability."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" It was not so. They do at their own risk, that is to say, the actual payment would depend upon the availability of the funds and the Government could not undertake that the amount would be paid next year or the next year after that."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" Did Government give this assurance that we may go on with the work ? I am not afraid of the Greek calends. It was said that the Andhra University will have to wait till the Greek calends and it is now an accomplished fact. If I am also asked to wait till the Greek calends, I have no objection to wait for that day which I am certain will be within a few months."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I think I shall ask all the bridge people to speak."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I thought, Sir, there might be special considerations about this bridge. I myself have some knowledge of this. There may be special considerations about this bridge which may not exist in respect of others."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I will ask all those who are interested in bridges to speak now."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—" I wish to say, Sir, that the complaint does not begin with Chingleput and end with Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar. I wish to take the House to my district of Nellore and wish to point out that the roadway on the Pennar has been a long neglected one. The anicut on the Pennar has been constructed in the year 1854 and for these 72 years no proper roadway has been formed over it. During the whole course of 50 to 60 miles of the river Pennar in the district of Nellore there is no bridge and not even a properly laid roadway. About two decades ago Government have tried to move in this matter and estimates have been prepared to construct the roadway over this anicut. The anomalous position of this roadway is really a regrettable one; because a portion of it belongs to the Irrigation Department, another portion to the Department of Public Works and the responsibility of laying the road belongs to the Local Self-Government and added to the insults or injuries whatever that may be, the responsibility of laying the road actually belongs to the Public Works Department by taking the money from the local funds. These several years estimates after estimates have been prepared and not even one has been sanctioned. Recently, a couple of years back, I think, another estimate for Rs. 43,000 has been prepared and it has undergone all the necessary changes and all the necessary transformations from stage to stage and from office to office and after all when it came to the Local Self Government Department it has been unsympathetically turned down. I should like to point out the urgency and the necessity of laying roadway by mentioning a few facts about that road. That road is on the trunk road, the great northern trunk road that leads from Madras; that is the point from which the Doranal road begins and goes as far as Cuddapah district and that is the point from which the district board contemplates to lay a railway line as far as Atmakur which is about thirty miles from that place. I should also inform this House that nearly one lakh of carts (A voice : Cars') not so many cars so soon, and many lakhs of people pass over that anicut every year. The difficulty is that the road is laid in the month of February or January and is washed away in June and for another six months there is no road at all. Either side of the river is closed and even if it is not closed there is a rough uneven surface which makes the carts passing over that very difficult. After all it is a distance of 2,030 feet and it has been proposed to lay a double wheel track with cut stones and fill up the intervening spaces with concrete. This modest estimate of 43,000 has been turned down. I hope, Sir, that this case will be particularly taken care of and I hope also that no particular scheme will be marked special and this not so very special and abandoned. I only wish to say that this must be taken to be as equally important as any other thing."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" It may cause some surprise to the Mover of the resolution and probably to my other Friends in the House that I should rise to support this motion moved by my hon. Friend Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar. The reason is this. I recently had occasion to cross this river within the last one month or so and till my Friend Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar stated that there is a causeway there I did not know the existence of a causeway there at all. As a matter of fact when I went to the river in crossing it I was detained for about two hours. I have not been fortunate enough to see the photograph in the papers but I had personal experience of the trouble of bullock cart drivers and those who were travelling in cars and others generally. The river is a broad one, more than two furlongs and it is very sandy. In fact I never saw the causeway. That should be several feet deep I think. All along the river several bullock carts were detained in several places, the bulls being unable to drag the carts in that deep depth of sand."

[Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar] [26th March 1926]

3-45 P.M. "The bullocks were not drawing the carts. A number of men, drivers of bullock-carts, all joined in pushing the carts from behind. The car in which I was travelling also could not cross, and I had to engage the services of a number of coolies, who were ready there expecting passengers being put to difficulty and thus taking advantage of those difficulties of passengers, to push my car. I am therefore speaking from personal experience. I wondered at that time why this Government had not put a bridge—I did not think of a causeway at the time but I thought of a bridge—across the river which is on the main central road leading from Madras to the southern districts. The hon. the Mover of this resolution, as he claimed, makes a very modest request, and I think he might as well have asked for a substantial bridge across this river. I am surprised at the difficulty in getting this small sum of Rs. 28,000. I think it will benefit not only the people of the Chingleput district but also all those travellers who go to Trichinopoly and other parts in the south of the Presidency."

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI:—"My hon. Friend Mr. Krishnan Nayar finished his speech by saying that the construction of this bridge or causeway might benefit also the people going towards the south. I would at once say that the construction of this bridge or causeway alone would not mend matters. I have got also a sorry tale to tell just like my hon. Friend from Nellore, Mr. Ramachandra Reddi. Out of the hundred and odd miles of trunk road in my district, we have got many unbridged rivers to cross, and so the construction of this causeway over the Palar alone will not mend matters. But I do not want to stand in the way of my hon. Friend Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar getting the paltry sum of Rs. 30,000."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Rs. 28,000."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"From Rs. 27,000 it has come to Rs. 30,000." (Laughter)

* Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI:—"What I wanted to say was that it is high time for the Government to chalk out a policy on which they have to proceed. Some time back they issued a Government Order saying that they would undertake at once the construction of bridges within a hundred miles range from Madras, and the district boards were asked to prepare estimates and submit them to the Government. Some of the district boards appointed special staff and prepared estimates, and sent them to the Government, and the result is that all those estimates have perhaps been shelved. At the same time, I want to suggest one thing. Why should a hundred miles range alone should be thought of by the Government (Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar: 'Hear, hear')? In the South Arcot district the great south trunk road, at the 104th mile you have to cross the Pennar river, about 2,000 feet long, then at the 114th mile the Gadilam river, about 600 feet, then another river Gomukhi and yet another river Manimukthanathi, and all these rivers have no bridges. I do not know why Government thought of only a hundred miles range. By bridging those rivers, it would benefit three or four districts in the south. The Government must therefore give out their policy as to how they are going to bridge these crossings in the trunk road at least. I do not want to be understood that I stand in the way of my hon. Friend, Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar, getting the allotment he asks for. I spoke because I have felt the difficulty myself on so many occasions."

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I have said, Sir, I have also to refer to a bridge. In the course of my speech I shall refer to it in the proper place. Meanwhile, I want to find out, if it is possible to find out, what are the principles guiding the Government in the matter of giving these grants. I find, Sir, that difficulty is not peculiar to myself. I find many eminent people have tried to find out those principles, and evidently unsuccessfully. Because, I find the Financial Relations Committee appointed in 1920 refer to this very point. They say as follows in paragraph 31:

"We are unable to trace any uniform principles governing the distribution of these grants among the several services or among different local bodies. We have gathered the impression that State policy has not kept pace with the growth of surplus revenues and their adjustment to public needs. In some cases the terms on which the grants are made are in our opinion too stringent, in other cases too lax. Grants are given for parochial purposes, while matters of imperial importance are neglected. The demand for grants has 'degenerated into something like a scramble' and their distribution has been made with very little attention to reason."

"Then, Sir, in the same paragraph they say:

"Grants in aid of general resources are distributed without examining the financial position of each local body assisted, and richer bodies obtain more than poorer ones."

In paragraph 35, they say that an exception should be made in the case of 'specially poor bodies' and that the grants to them should be more liberal. These are the points which I want to press on the Government in connexion with districts like mine. If we turn to the Administration Report recently issued by the Government, I find, Sir, that the grants allowed for trunk roads vary considerably from district to district. In a district like Anantapur, 22 per cent of the total mileage of roads has been treated as trunk roads, and the Government are giving naturally liberal grants to keep those roads in good order. In Chittoor, Sir, while the total mileage is the same, only 14 per cent of the roads are treated as trunk roads and the grants are proportionate. In Kurnool again 14 per cent out of a total of 1,289 miles are treated as trunk roads and grants are made for them. In Bellary the percentage is 11½. Now, Sir, does not this make a difference on the burden of the local boards? If with reference to the total mileage of the district the Government give grants and help a larger percentage of those roads in the case of one district, naturally it has not got so much to pay for the balance left on its hands, while in the case of a poor board where the percentage of trunk roads is very small, a larger percentage is left on the board to be maintained, and naturally the burden will be more. The distribution of grants has not any reference whatsoever to the resources of the boards. For example, Kistna has got Rs. 8½ lakhs in the form of revenue from land cess; Chittoor has got a revenue of Rs. 2¼ lakhs; Anantapur has got Rs. 1¼ lakhs, and Bellary has got Rs. 1½ lakhs. So, if we take the resources of the boards, the income from land-cess, you will find, Sir, the poorer boards really are entitled to a far more relief than they are actually receiving at present.

"I told you, Sir, that I would refer to a bridge in my district. I know for example, many years ago after a good deal of application, the Government were good enough to grant Rs. 50,000 for the construction of a bridge on the Hagari river, for the want of which the western taluks felt serious difficulty in this respect. If there is a bridge across the river Hagari it would be possible for district officers and others to travel all over the western part of the district without difficulty. The Government of course sanctioned the grant. The president of the district board, or the Engineer—I am not concerned who it was—was not able to spend that amount within the year, and that amount lapsed. The Government may turn round and say well, we are not responsible for that; your board has not spent it; so we have nothing further to do. I do not know if they can take up that strict view of their responsibility. The president who was at default was their president, because he was appointed by them, and they have to be responsible for part of that default in this respect. So I think, Sir, Government also must take some slight responsibility in this matter. So I appeal to the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government to treat poorer boards like mine in a fairer way than he does at present. I hope that the hon. the Finance Member and the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government will put their heads together and find a formula which will take into account the resources of the districts and their needs and arrive at some arrangement by which assistance could be rendered to the boards in proportion to their resources and their needs. I ask, Sir, also for that long delayed bridge to be put on hand."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" I also support this complaint that in the matter of distribution of grants there has been no policy which can commend itself to the presidents of local bodies. As a matter of fact some get more while others get less. In the matter of distribution of grants for trunk roads, for instance, they simply take a certain amount and divide it by the mileage and give the grant accordingly irrespective of the fact whether that amount is wanted or not. Some boards get more than what they spent; others get very much less than even 50 per cent."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Is there any case where they have been paid more than what they actually spent ? "

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" Sometimes they get considerably above the actual expenditure. There are cases where only Rs. 200 or Rs. 300 are spent per mile and they get Rs. 500. I believe, Sir, in the Chittoor district they are spending very much less."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" They are expected to get only the actual expenditure."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" I do not know that, Sir. It has been my impression till this moment, that a uniform rate of Rs. 500 is allowed."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Does it mean that they spend much less than Rs. 500 and get Rs. 500 ? "

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" Whatever it is, it is really hard on boards who spend very much more. For instance, in Madura and Ramnad particularly in the black cotton tracts we spend Rs. 1,000 and even Rs. 1,200 per mile, and yet we get only Rs. 500. We have been spending like that for the past five years and it seems there is absolutely no hope of getting more from Government."

" Again, in the matter of grants for bridges and culverts, there is no well understood principle. I have said on more than one occasion that in all these cases they appoint some committee to go into this question of distribution of grants to various local bodies if they cannot utilize their various advisory committees for this purpose. From my own experience I have made that suggestion and that does not commend itself to the Minister. It is not only in the Local Self-Government Department, but I find the same difficulty also in the Education Department where grants are given on no well-known principles. Some colleges get very much more, while other colleges and schools get very much less."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" Grants are regulated by the Grant-in-Aid Code, and the rules are laid down there. It is not therefore correct to say that grants are made on no principle."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" On a point of order, Sir. Are we discussing educational grants now ? "

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I must ask the Raja of Ramnad to restrict himself to the grants for roads and bridges."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" I am merely showing an analogy. I say there ought to be a proper and well understood system. With your indulgence, I will tell the hon. the Minister for Education, who has already answered me, by pointing out to him how the Grant-in-Aid Code does not seem to be such a simple literature for every one to understand so easily."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" If the Members cannot understand it, it is not the fault of the department or of the Code."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" The Code is intended to be understood by the correspondents of schools and the various authorities. If they are not able to understand it, it is the Minister's duty to make it more explicit so as to be understood by them. That apart, coming to the bridges, this causeway is a great desideratum. Recently twice my car had to travel to Madras. You can imagine a person not known very much in Chingleput—I can understand my hon. Friend from Chingleput finding it very easy as he can command the necessary labour there for his car—like me coming all the way from the south, I do not think my driver can command the necessary help from the people. Therefore, it is a necessary item. I personally have a grievance about a very important bridge in my district. I have been asking Government to accommodate me with a grant which has been promised—promised in the sense that they have undertaken to give the local bodies 50 per cent of the cost of the capital works in second-class roads. It took three or four years before estimates and plans could be sanctioned. After they have been sanctioned, I was directed by a telegram to start the work. I started the work. I asked for the grant; the reply is that it will not be given in 1925-26 or 1926-27 but will be given in 1927-28. If this is the treatment accorded to the local authorities, I am afraid it will be putting the hands of the clock very considerably back and there will be no progress in the matter of providing better facilities of communications. Therefore I would strongly support the motion with a view to elicit a more sympathetic assurance from the hon. the Minister towards the southern districts. I do not know whether the other districts fare equally bad. After all, it is not an easy work to carry on the local self-government administration in a district. On very many occasions I have pointed out the difficulty. The only way to make it useful to the people is to undertake such works. Otherwise there is no reason for the existence of non-officials on local bodies and they can find better ways of spending their time than running these institutions."

[26th March 1926]

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Mr. President, Sir, my Friend, the hon. Member for Chingleput, began his eloquent speech with an assertion that even the hon. Members from Bellary and South Kanara had no room for complaint but he had room for complaint. (Mr. Saldanha ; I have room for complaints’.) (Laughter.) With all the emphasis of this assertion, I am afraid the room for complaint in the case of Chingleput is as little as in the case of Bellary or South Kanara. That it is so is more than evident from the complaints made by the Members for Nellore, South Arcot, Bellary and Ramnad. If there is a complaint that is common to most of the districts, it is no longer a complaint. (Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar : ‘ What is it then, a widespread calamity, or an epidemic ? ’) It is a complaint that the Government have not general funds provided for the construction of bridges all over the province. I wish we were much richer to afford to have all the rivers and streams bridged. But we cannot expect to do so in our present condition of our finance. While I say there is as little room for complaint, I do not deny the fact that the particular bridge is an important one. It is true there was a scheme prepared for the construction of the causeway across the Palar near Chingleput and the scheme was estimated at Rs. 24,000. The Government would have made provision if they had funds. In fact for want of funds they had to be content with provision in the coming year for the construction of such of the roads and bridges as are damaged by the floods. However, Sir, if the hon. Member from Chingleput, as he said would advise the president of the district board to take up the work, the Government will pay when funds are available and, as he himself is sure, the funds will be available sooner or later, sooner than later.

“ Now coming to the complaint of my hon. Friend from Nellore, I must say that his case is still weaker. He himself admitted that the construction of this particular road over the anicut at Nellore is a work to be done by the various departments.”

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—“ On a point of personal explanation, Sir. I said the control is vested in various departments but the construction is vested in only one department.”

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ The very fact that it is subject to the control of so many departments is in itself the reason for the delay. As I have already pointed out, in preparing the Budget for the coming year, owing to want of funds, the Government could only undertake to make provision for the repair of the damaged roads, and they could not allot funds for the construction of any new bridge works. I must say the same with regard to the Hagari bridge. Of course when funds are available, the Government will be glad to make provision.

“ Some Members remarked that there is no policy guiding the Government in the matter of distribution of grants for the construction of bridges. Hon. Members might remember that some time back there was a committee appointed to suggest methods of a fairer distribution of trunk road grants. There was also a committee appointed to consider the proposal that the Government should take up the construction of bridges within 100 miles from Madras. Those who lived beyond 100 miles objected to that course and so, that proposal was dropped. If the Government are not able to adopt a policy in this connexion, I believe the responsibility is not only with the Government but it is also with so many members of this House who were on the committee.”

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“ One word, Sir. I think the principle laid down by the hon. the Minister is that the roads and bridges damaged and washed away by floods should have preference. I have already brought it to the notice of the hon. the Minister by putting some question about a bridge which has been washed away on the road between Tellicherry and Mercara. That bridge has been washed away and there has been a conflict between the local board and other authorities as to who should repair it. There are bridges also in South Kanara which have been washed away. The bridges that have been washed away should have priority over other works. I hope the hon. the Minister will bear in mind this fact and sanction funds for construction of bridges as soon as practicable.”

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—“ Sir, the discussion over this question has at times taken us a considerable distance away from the Palar, and I think that my hon. Friend from Chingleput has shown some signs of anxiety at the number of claimants who have come forward for any further provision that may be made. But on that point I should just like to say (in this the hon. Minister has my concurrence) that whatever other claims have been pressed this afternoon, there seems to be a general agreement on the part of the members from all sides of the House that there is a very good case for taking special steps in connexion with the Palar. Personally I have some sympathy with that view, for I have crossed the Palar, and I did so with the help of two score coolies or so. And while it is possible that I may have been benefited by the exercise of various virtues such as patience and self-control I cannot state that the experience was equally good for my car. I trust, however, that the House will realise that in acceding to the request of my hon. Colleague, I am not enunciating any principle. I understand that in this case, the sum is comparatively small, 25 or 30 thousand rupees, the Chingleput District Board is prepared to find or advance that money and that provided the amount is repaid within a reasonable period they will be quite prepared to undertake the construction of this particular causeway and receive payment as soon as we can find money. It is possible that we may be able to make a little provision in the coming year, but it is not possible to adopt a principle of that kind on any large scale. A single isolated instance of this kind must not involve any new principle, for if it were a question of 20 to 30 lakhs a year for the construction of new bridges on the anticipation that Government would find the money, that would raise a very serious question of financial propriety. But I was rather disappointed to hear one or two members urge that there was no policy in these matters. The hon. Member from Bellary was perhaps the most ardent exponent of this theory. Although he had in his hand at that time a copy of the Financial Relations Committee’s Report, he was prepared to accept it only where it has benefited his own district and where the report has urged that special consideration should be shown to the financial condition of the poorer districts. That to his mind is a very sound policy indeed, but the report also laid down certain principles to be observed in respect of trunk roads. There he denied that there was any policy at all. On that point, I am afraid I must differ from him, because it is perfectly clear that you could never devise a policy which will satisfy all the conflicting claims of different localities. My hon. Colleague the Chief Minister quoted one or two instances in which an attempt to lay down such policies broke down owing to that very obstacle. It seems to me that we have a very definite policy. Perhaps, I have a greater reason to complain of that policy because the whole financial burden is thrown upon the Government in respect of trunk roads. The policy which was suggested and which is at present in operation is that Government assumes responsibility for the maintenance of trunk roads. The provision which it should make was determined on certain principles and no better principles have yet been devised. It is also in view of an agreement arrived at on the recommendations of the Financial Relations Committee that Government are responsible for the construction of all bridges on all trunk roads. Of course it is absolutely impossible that a policy of that kind can result in the Government granting to each district or to each local authority a percentage grant or a grant on the basis of population or a grant on the basis of total mileage under the area under their control. For after all a trunk road is a trunk road and it does not matter whether its extent is small in a certain district or great in another district, or whether it originates in a particular district and ends in another district. Of course the actual length of trunk roads in one district may vary very considerably from their length in another district. Take for example the district of Chingleput through which trunk roads to all parts of the Presidency radiate from Madras. It would naturally be assumed that that district would have a far greater length of trunk roads than another district through which only one of these diverging lines of traffic pass. And the reason for differentiating trunk roads is that they carry through traffic and thereby throw upon the district through which they pass expenditure which is much in excess of their own requirements. I share the regret of my hon. Colleague, the Chief Minister, that we have not been able to do more this year in the shape of grants to bridges for local bodies, but as he has explained, we are hampered by the bill for the restoration of bridges destroyed in the floods. We hope that we shall soon be released from these commitments and I trust that when this is done we shall be able to make larger grants next year, and in years to come and thus give greater satisfaction to members of this House irrespective of which area in this Presidency they represent."

[Mr. T. E. Moir]

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—"In view of the double assurances given by the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government and the hon. the Finance Member—I do not know which assurance I have to value more but in any case I believe these assurances will help the president of my district to go on with the work—I do not press my motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—"I will just make a few observations and then withdraw my motion. My case has after all been left in oblivion. I am sorry to say that you are partly responsible for this because you pooled all the complaints together and the first that ran the race got the prize."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"It is not merely a matter of time."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI :—"The hon. the Chief Minister said that the responsibility lies on the three hon. Members of the Treasury Bench and consequently shifts it a little bit. I should think that since the responsibility lies on three Members it is all the more easy for him to satisfy our claims. Now the question of constructing a causeway on the river Palar had the honour of being advocated by Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar and the river Palar had the honour of being crossed by many hon. Members of this House including the hon. the Finance Member. But, Sir, I should say the river Pennar had no such honour. I only ask the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government to reconsider the question and give a sort of concession to my district to relieve the difficulties under which the vast ryot population are suffering from."

[26th March 1926]

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 39,01,000 for grants-in-aid be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"Sir, during the visit of His Excellency the Governor to Tuticorin recently a deputation waited upon him to urge the necessity for constructing a road from Muthulapuram to Sivagiri and His Excellency promised to consider the matter sympathetically. Sir, the road from Muthulapuram to Sivagiri runs through two districts and cover about 45 miles. It will be a very important road for the agriculturists, for at Muthulapuram a cattle fair is held every year and ryots from all villages flock there for purchasing their cattle. Moreover the road will connect so many important agricultural villages and it will be a boon to the ryot population. Somehow it has been found impossible for the two districts, namely, Ramnad and Tinnevely, to take up this matter. Probably the matter concerns two districts and it is owing to this that the matter has been left in abeyance. So if the Government takes the initiative in the matter and constructs the road in question it will be a great boon to the ryot population."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Mr. President, Sir, the hon. Member for Madura in making his speech has raised the question of constructing a road from Muthulapuram to Sivagiri. There is no such question under the consideration of the Government. In fact grants are not given for the construction of roads other than trunk roads or second-class roads. The road in question does not come either under the trunk roads or second-class roads. The construction of the road in question is a matter purely for the consideration of the local bodies concerned and as hon. Members are aware Government have granted funds to the local bodies for the construction of village roads. If the hon. Member applies to the local boards concerned for the construction of the particular road I am sure the application will be considered by them. It is not a road for which any grant from provincial funds can be expected."

Mr. A. CHIDAMBARA NADAR :—"I may say for the information of the House that the road runs through two districts and it is rather impossible to move the two district boards. Nor is it possible to move the taluk boards concerned. So the matter was taken up by His Excellency and he promised to consider it sympathetically. I do not know whether the hon. the Minister has received any communication from the Government. If so, I shall be glad to know it."

The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I cannot say that off-hand. If the hon. Member wants any information, I shall furnish him."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

[26th March 1926]

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ I beg to move

‘that the allotment of Rs. 39,01,000 for grants-in-aid be reduced by Rs. 100.’

“ My object in moving this motion is to find out from the hon. the Chief Minister whether there is any proposal for the provincialisation of the assistant engineers. I am aware that the posts of the district board engineers are provincialised. The reason for my asking that assistant engineers should also be provincialised is this : they have got to serve two masters—one the district board president and the other the district board engineer. If the district board engineer is not in the good graces of the district board president, he tries to get transfer for himself from one district board to another. He can go on in this way from one district to another till he finishes off the 25 districts by which time he may retire from service with a pension. Whereas if the assistant engineer is not in the good graces of the president or the district board engineer his chances are not in any way encouraging. So, I wish to know from the hon. the Minister whether there is any proposal or means by which he can provincialise the posts of assistant engineers also. In this case we know that until and unless 75 per cent of the councillors or the district board members unanimously resolve that such and such an officer should be fined or transferred it is very seldom that he is very badly treated.

P.M.

“ I wish to know from the hon. Minister whether there is any possibility of provincializing the appointments of these assistant engineers working under taluk boards.”

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Mr. President, Sir, the question of provincializing the district board assistant engineers was considered along with the question of provincializing the district board engineers, but was dropped. It is true that the Local and Municipal Conference held in 1920 recommended the provincialization of the assistant engineers. It is also true that the Financial Relations Committee recommended it. But the question was discussed at more than one meeting of the Local and Municipal Advisory Committee and the members were strongly opposed to the idea of provincializing these officers. They said that under the Act their pay was paid by the boards and therefore their appointments must be made by the boards themselves. They resent the idea of provincialization. Later on, a suggestion was made to the Committee whether they would accept an amendment of the Act of 1920 so that in making the appointments of assistant engineers, Government should be consulted and the Committee strongly opposed the suggestion and therefore it had to be dropped. Under the circumstances, it appears to me that it is not feasible to provincialize the cadre of assistant engineers.”

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ Was it the Local Self-Government Department Advisory Committee that decided against this proposal ? ”

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ Yes.”

* Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN :—“ If so, I should like to know whether that Committee did not object to the disciplinary control of the Director of Public Health over the health inspectors and to the control of the sub-assistant surgeons by the Surgeon-General ? ”

[26th March 1926]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—“ If I remember aright I think there was a compromise in the matter.”

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—“ Sir, I beg to move

‘that the allotment of Rs. 39,01,000 for Grants-in-aid be reduced by Rs. 100.’

“ My object is to discuss that the grants to district boards for roads are not properly utilized and often mismanaged and to point out that the administration of local boards and municipalities is unsatisfactory. Sir, in this matter, other hon. Members have anticipated me and I have not got much to say. I expected that the hon. Minister would give an explanation as to why this present policy is being adopted. But the hon. the Finance Member gave an explanation of the present policy and it is a satisfactory one and therefore I do not press much further with regard to these grants.

“ Secondly, Sir, I wish to say that under the old Act there was an obligation on the boards to levy a cess like the railway cess and wherever the cess is accumulated, remunerative enterprises were undertaken. Under the new Act there is no provision for the collection of such a cess. In 1925 this Council introduced a legislation to amend section 236 of the Act by means of which the district boards were vested with the power of utilizing the accumulated railway cess for the construction of roads and bridges. In spite of such a legislation various boards are approaching the Government for grants and loans for the construction of bridges and roads and Government have been granting them on a large scale. I want to ask the hon. Minister why this policy is adopted.

“ Thirdly, Sir, with reference to the mismanagement of the grants by the local boards, I wish to state that some circular should be issued by the Government insisting upon the boards that tenders from the local board contracts should be called for not once in three years but every year. Again, Sir, contracts for the maintenance of roads—trunk roads, within the limits of a taluk board should be under the charge of the taluk board itself and not under the charge of the district board. Otherwise there is a chance of mismanagement of money; it would be giving an opportunity to these contractors to mismanage the money. I would request the Government to issue a circular to this effect to all the district boards.

* As regards the unsatisfactory nature of the administration of these bodies in general, I wish to confine myself to the nomination of Mussalman members.”

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—“ Order, order. That question has been dealt with on a previous occasion. The nominations to local bodies has nothing to do with Civil Works.”

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—“ In that case I do not discuss that question, Sir.”

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—“ Sir, from the wording of the motion of the hon. Member from Trichinopoly representing the Muhammadan constituency, I expected that he would bring specific instances of presidents of local boards embezzling or mismanaging the grants given to the boards. But from his speech . . . ”

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"I stated that the grants to the local boards are mismanaged; it might not be due to the presidents themselves but it may be due to several other reasons."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—"When the hon. Member referred to the mismanagement in giving these grants, I thought that he was levelling a charge against the Government. Then he said that the taluk boards should be allowed to select the contractors for works on the trunk roads passing through their respective areas. I am not able to see what exactly his grievance is. As regards the selection of contractors by the taluk boards, I think my hon. Friend is misinformed. The district board has no area of its own; all the area is either taluk board or union board. Therefore in the very nature of things the selection of contractors cannot be left with the taluk board. Even in the matter of the works undertaken by the taluk boards themselves and works costing over a certain amount, the selection of the contractors has to be approved by the president of the district board. Likewise for works of the union boards over a certain amount, the selection of the contractors has to be approved by the presidents of the taluk boards. There are various rules regarding the selection of the contractors for works according to their value. I do not think the hon. Member has made out a case. When I first saw the motion I was startled and thought that the hon. Member was going to bring home to the minds of the presidents of the local boards their grave irregularities and their mismanagement. I am greatly relieved after hearing him that he has brought no such charges. His grievance is imaginary and after all it reduces itself to this that the taluk board presidents should be given the patronage of selecting the contractors. I do not think, Sir, that the contractor for the maintenance of the trunk roads can be left to be selected by the taluk board president."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Mr. President, Sir, I must confess that I have not been able to follow the charges levelled by my hon. Friend. He began by saying that he wanted to know the policy underlying the distribution of these grants. He was however perfectly satisfied with the explanation of the hon. the Finance Member. Then he complained that the Government did not allow the application of some district boards to divert their accumulated railway cess towards the construction of roads and bridges. So far as I recollect, there has been no such application made by any president of the district board. Then he took the Government to task for the district boards not allowing the taluk boards to choose the contractors for the work of maintenance of the trunk roads within the area of the latter. That is indeed a matter between the district board and the taluk board and there are rules laid down which have to be followed in the matter of the distribution of the work between the taluk boards and the district boards. Government cannot be held responsible for any disputes between taluk and district boards in the matter of giving contracts. Sir, I have nothing more to add."

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"What I said was completely misunderstood. My chief complaint was that the same contractor is being given contracts by the district boards for a number of years and for that reason I stated that the Government should send a circular asking that the contractor for doing the work of maintenance of the trunk roads lying within the area of the taluk board should be chosen by the taluk board and not by the district board. Secondly, Sir, section 236 of the Local Boards Act was amended by this Council thereby giving power to the presidents of district boards to use the accumulated railway cess for the construction of roads and bridges. If the hon. Minister is not aware of it, I am not to blame."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I should like to know which of the local boards have applied for this permission to divert their funds."

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"Trichinopoly Board has applied for a loan for the construction of a bridge over the Marudiar."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Application for a loan is altogether different from an application for diversion of funds."

* Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"May I ask the hon. Minister whether he has not received any such application from any other board?"

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"I ask the hon. Member to bring to the notice of Government any such instances so that they might take action if they have not already taken action. But the hon. Member is not in a position to give any instance."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, I move

that the allotment of Rs. 39,01,000 for grants-in-aid be reduced by Rs. 100.

p.m.

"I wish to refer first to the second point, viz., the neglect of the Charmeda Ghat road in South Kanara district. I shall be very short. I may refer to the enunciation of the principle laid down by the hon. the Finance Member that trunk roads are to be repaired at the cost of the Government and that certain fixed sum is given for that purpose. But I am at a loss to see how certain roads are treated as trunk roads and others not. There is a road called the Charmeda Ghat road in South Kanara. That is a most important road that connects our district with the rest of the Presidency and Mysore. It is a road on which runs the heaviest of traffic. This road divides into two roads: one going to Mercara and Mysore and the other going to Charmeda and Bangalore. This latter more important road in the whole district is treated as second-class road whereas the other road which leads to Puttur and thence to Mercara is treated as a trunk road. One would find it very difficult to travel on this road in a car or cart during the monsoon from the month of June to November. The road is not repaired. It is practically impossible to travel on this road specially when there is heavy rains. Many persons and myself have had sad experience of this road. I bear marks of cuts by being thrown off the car. The ruts on the road after the heavy rains are so deep. There is continuous jolting that one is likely to be thrown off during unguarded moments. The distance of the road is long. There is no road which is so steep as this road. Even the Ootacamund road is not so steep. The road covers a distance of 10 miles. I want to know why this road is not included in the list of trunk roads. There was lot of correspondence between the hon. the Chief Minister and the president of the district board on this matter. The hon. the Raja of Ramnad is speaking. Our district deserves better attention at the hands of this Council. Our district is much neglected."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—"I did not hear some reference made to me."

[26th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" This matter is not of a local character. It is of an imperial character. I hope this Council, the hon. the Minister and the hon. the Finance Member will pay greater attention to our neglected district on a point of such importance as having a proper traffic road between South Kanara and the rest of the Presidency."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—" On a point of personal explanation, Sir. The hon. Member from South Kanara complains that I did not attend to his speech. Is there any rule or obligation that we should be all attentive to all his speech?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" When we talk of matters of South Kanara, the hon. Members of this Council are somewhat indifferent (Laughter). I am referring to an imperial matter. There is no obligation on his part to listen to speeches made in the Council. He can talk away all the time. But nobody is entitled to talk so loudly for an hon. Member of the Council not being heard. I have heard complaints from the official reporters that they are not able to take down speeches fully as hon. Members converse so loudly. (Laughter). The press reporters feel it difficult to report the speech of the hon. the Finance Member. They complain that while one hon. Member is speaking some hon. Members of the House are conversing very loudly. I have been particularly careful to see that our conversation is not heard by other hon. Members or by the reporters."

" I am sorry I have been led away from the subject. Another point is that where a town is growing in population and exceeds, say, 10,000 in number, it must be converted into a municipality or at least into a union. In Malabar and South Kanara I find there are a number of towns whose population exceeds 5,000, the minimum number for a union. It is a well-understood principle under the Municipalities Acts in all the presidencies if the population of a town exceeds 10,000 it ought to be converted into a municipality. Take the town of Udipi which has a population of 13,000. Most of the money is utilized for roads within the town. In the case of Udipi—I have visited the town—the complaint of the people is that the taluk board pays no attention to the construction or repair of roads in the villages. The matter is before the Government at this time. I do not want to raise a particular point. I would urge upon the Government to lay down some general principles with regard to town-planning, town development, health, sanitation, etc."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" May I know how this is relevant to the question of paying grants for the maintenance of roads?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I refer generally to the construction of roads. The taluk board spends most of the money for town roads. (Laughter.) The word is pronounced as 'taluka' in the Bombay Presidency. I am sorry I have accustomed myself to pronounce it as taluka. I have been corrected by many persons. The taluk board has been spending most of its income on the construction of roads within the town itself and neglecting the other roads. What I say is that the Government should urge upon the taluk boards the duty of constituting municipalities where there is a population of over 10,000. Where the population is more than 5,000, a union board should be established. I urge that the Government should ask the district board of South Kanara why villages with a population of over 5,000 each have not been converted into unions."

[26th March 1926]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Mr. President, I fully sympathize with my hon. Friend from South Kanara that the village roads and the road in South Kanara district referred to by him are in a bad condition. The hon. Member is aware that so far as village roads are concerned, they are the concern of the local boards. I am glad to tell him that last year a sum of Rs. 17,500 was granted to the South Kanara District Board for the improvement of rural communications. My hon. Friend would do very well to urge the claims of the particular road he has in view upon the attention of the taluk and district boards. So far as the Charneda road is concerned it is a second-class road and the Government give 50 per cent grants in the case of second class roads subject to a maximum for the district."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I ask why is that road classified as second-class road, and some other road as first-class road."

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" It has been classified as a second-class road by an expert committee. The Government give grants to the local bodies subject to a maximum of one lakh of rupees for the maintenance of roads. If, in spite of that, the second-class roads are not properly maintained, it will be open to the Government to reduce the amount of the grant. My hon. Friend ought to have moved the local boards to see that the roads are properly maintained. My hon. Friend has also raised the question as to why the road is not classed as trunk road. The question of the classification of trunk roads was considered by a committee and the committee did not come "

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I know what committee enquired into the matter and when?"

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" The Road Classification Committee was constituted for the purpose of considering whether any changes were necessary in the matter of the classification of roads into trunk roads and second-class roads. Unfortunately, that committee was not able to arrive at any definite decision. The matter was dropped; the Government propose to consider the question some time later. This time we hope that the committee to be appointed will come to a decision."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, I fear I have not made myself clear. I do not say that the grants given for the improvement of village roads were not utilized. The tendency of taluk boards—take the case of an important town like Udipi—is to spend most of the money on roads within the town. The inequality can be remedied by converting the towns into municipalities or unions. As regards the committee to be appointed I hope that we shall have an expert committee to decide the question. I think the hon. the Finance Member will agree with me that most important roads have been classed as second-class roads and less important roads have been classed as trunk roads."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

DEMAND XXX—CIVIL WORKS (TRANSFERRED)

p.m. * The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" Sir, I beg to move

'that the Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 105.89 lakhs for Civil Works—Transferred.'"

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" No, it is Rs. 106.89 lakhs."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" If the hon. Member will have the patience to hear me . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Mr. Krishnan Nayar does not want, I am sure, to give the Government more money than it wants."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I want corrections to be made and an accurate paper to be distributed to Members."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" I submit, Sir, that the demand is reduced by 1 lakh. If hon. Members will turn to the Civil Works Budget, on page 11 they will find under item 19 a sum of Rs. 2 lakhs provided under Medical—South Presidency—Purchase of permanent buildings for the School of Indian Medicine, Madras. Out of this Rs. 2 lakhs provided, the hon. the Minister was asked to transfer Rs. 1 lakh for rural water-supply and rural communications. So, Rs. 1 lakh having been deducted from the allotment of Rs. 2 lakhs that is provided in the Civil Works Budget for the purchase of new buildings for the school of Indian Medicine, the grant is reduced by Rs. 1 lakh here. Under supplementary grants, the hon. Member in charge will move for Rs. 12 lakhs as already notice has been given."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" As it is 5 o'clock, I shall have to put the other demands to the House without any discussion."

Demand XXX for Rs. 105.89 lakhs for Civil Works (Transferred) was put and carried and the grant was made.

The following demands were also put and carried and the grants were made:—

Demand XXXI for Rs. 53.05 lakhs for Pensions.

Demand XXXII for Rs. 19.53 lakhs for Stationery and Printing.

Demand XXXIII for Rs. 2.45 lakhs for Stationery (for Transferred departments):

Demand XXXIV for Rs. 15.19 lakhs for Agency.

Demand XXXV for Rs. 3.70 lakhs for expenditure in England other than on stores.

Demand XXXVI for Rs. 85.43 lakhs for Loans and Advances by Provincial Governments.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, may I enquire what the exact programme of work for the next week is? I have received notice of some private Bills, to be introduced, also that of Mr. Manjappa Heggade. Shall we have non-official work at all? If there is any non-official work, I would be glad myself to bring some non-official business."

[26th March 1926]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Mr. President, Sir, so far as the Bills relating to the District Municipalities Act are concerned, it is not proposed to move them on the 30th as originally proposed."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" You may remember, Mr. President, that on the last occasion about the 16th or 17th, I said if there was a general feeling that there ought to be one or two days for non-official business, they might be allotted. Sir, I find from such enquiries as I have made that there is no demand or inclination. The business of the Council will probably be over by lunch time on Monday."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" The House will now adjourn and meet again on Monday at 11 o'clock."

The House accordingly adjourned.

R. V. KRISHNA AYYAR,
Secretary to the Legislative Council.

The Secretary shall call out the name of each interpellator in the order in which the names are printed, specify the serial number of his question and make a sufficient pause to give him or any other member a reasonable opportunity of rising in his place and putting a supplementary question. Supplementary questions must be put immediately after the principal questions to which they relate.

2. If a member responsible for a starred question happens to be absent when it is called, it will be open either to him or to any other member to put supplemental questions thereon after the other starred questions for the day have been answered, provided question-time is not thereby exceeded.

3. Questions, not starred, will not be called in Council, but they will be printed with their answers and placed on the table of the House along with the list of starred questions. Oral supplementary questions will not be allowed in regard to unstarred questions.]

STARRED QUESTIONS.

Agriculture.

Royal Commission on Agriculture.

* 1859 Q.—Mr. S. SATYAMURTI: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state—

(a) whether he was consulted with reference to the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture and the terms of reference thereto;

(b) if so, what his opinion was; and

(c) the reasons why he agreed to the very narrow terms of reference to the Commission?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) & (c) The reply of the Madras Government to the communication from the Government of India on the subject is appended.*

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"With reference to the answer to clause (c), may I know what the terms of reference to the commission are?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The terms of reference will be published in the Fort St. George Gazette."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Do the Government of Madras propose to hold any enquiry of their own in case the Royal Commission does not materialize soon?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The answer, Sir, is in the negative."

* Printed as Appendix I on pages 903-904 infra.

[29th March 1926]

Establishment of an agricultural school in the Bellary district.

* 1860 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state with reference to the representations made to him when he last visited Bellary district and the replies he made to them when an agricultural middle school will be established in the district?

A.—The Government are unable to specify any date.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"If the Government are unable to specify the date, will they at least specify the conditions which will facilitate the opening of the school?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The conditions are only monetary."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I know what is the idea of the Government regarding the amount that would be necessary?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"That question, Sir, I remember, was answered once before, and if I remember right, I said that Rs. 36,000 would be required for initial expenditure and Rs. 10,000 for recurring."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"For one school?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"That is my memory, Sir. If notice is given, I shall verify."

Establishment of a sugarcane farm for the western taluks of Bellary.

* 1861 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state, with reference to the representations made to him when he last visited Bellary district and the replies he made to them, when a sugarcane farm will be established for the western taluks?

A.—The Government cannot say definitely when a sugarcane station will be established for the western taluks of Bellary.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, is it not a fact that the Sugar Committee which was last appointed recommended the appointment of a station in these taluks?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I have to inform the hon. Member that the answer that I gave for question No. 1860 ought to have been given for this question. As regards sugarcane, I believe they said that one farm should be opened in the Ceded districts."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I ask, Sir, where do we have such a large area of sugarcane other than in the Bellary district within our province?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The agricultural statistics will bring out the facts."

[29th March 1926]

Appointment of millet expert in the Bellary district.

* 1862 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state, with reference to the representations made to him when he last visited Bellary district and the replies he made to them, when the millet expert or his assistant will be employed in the district to conduct experiments there?

A.—It is likely that an Assistant will be sent to Nandyal in July 1926 so that he may study the millet problem in the Ceded districts, and keep in touch with the work at Hagari and Nandyal with a view to fit him for the work of the proposed sub-station in the Ceded districts.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—“May I ask, Sir, whether the expert at Coimbatore has anything to do with the operations at Hagari and at Nandyal?”

M. Chinnayya Pillai who is a member of the same Salem Urban Co-operative Society, Limited;

(b) whether the law and the rules prohibit a member of a society from ‘trying’ a case against another member of the same primary Co-operative Society; and

(c) why the cases were not referred to the local Assistant Registrar or to some person who was not a member of the society?

A.—(a) Nine cases were transferred to Mr. Chinnayya Pillai.

(b) if so, why this was discontinued;

(c) whether any remuneration, allowance or honorarium was paid to them; and

(d) if so, how much?

A.—(a) Yes, and the information was furnished to the hon. Member by the Registrar of Co-operative Societies in January 1926.

(b) Because their work is now entrusted to Honorary Assistant Registrars.

(c) & (d) The attention of the hon. Member is drawn to rule 102 (c) (1) of the Madras Travelling Allowance Rules.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—“Sir, may I know whether the activities of the Honorary Assistant Registrars are confined to a more extensive area than in the case of the honorary organizers?”

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—“It may or may not.”

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—“My own information is, Sir, . . .”

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—“The Council is not interested in it.”

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—“May I know whether the Government do not think it advisable to have the appointment of honorary organizers continued so as to ensure better work being done in the organization of societies?”

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—“The Government do not think so.”

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—“May I know whether the Government are satisfied with the activities of the Honorary Assistant Registrars?”

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—“The answer is in the affirmative.”

Fisheries.Grant of privileges to Mr. Anasthasius Motha in Tuticorin Pearl Fishery.

* 1866 Q.—Rao Bahadur CRUZ FERNANDEZ: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that one Mr. Anasthasius Motha of Tuticorin has applied to Government for grant of privileges in the Pearl Fishery;

(b) if so, what orders have been passed on his application;

(c) whether it is a fact that he claims the said privileges as the Jathithalaivan of the Bharatha community;

(d) the grounds on which Mr. Anasthasius Motha bases his claim to the privilege in the Pearl Fishery;

(e) whether he has done any service to Government and helped the Fishery Department in the inspection of Pearl Banks and other allied work at any time during the past eleven years, i.e., after the death of his father Mr. Lazer Motha in July 1924;

[29th March 1926]

(f) if not, what is the necessity for Government to recognize his claim and grant him any privilege in the Pearl Fishery;

(g) whether it is a fact that a mazahar has been received by Government from the Bharatha people of Tuticorin objecting to the grant of any privilege to Mr. Anasthasius Motha; and

(h) whether it is a fact that Mr. Anasthasius Motha has not claimed the fishery "take" as a birthright inherited from his forefathers?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The Government have directed that the concession which the Jathithalaivans enjoyed prior to 1891 should be continued during the fishery now being held off Tuticorin, namely, the take of two boats of ten divers each every day of the fishery.

(c) Yes.

(d) & (h) On the ground that he is the Jathithalaivan of his community.

(e) No.

(f) The Government have granted him the concession as a matter of grace.

(g) The Government received several mahazars some objecting to and others favouring the grant.

MR. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I know whether or not the question who should be called a Jathithalaivan is a matter for judicial adjudication?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The Government had been doing it before and they have done it now."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"What is the community referred to here for which this person is said to be the Jathithalaivan?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"The Bharatha community of Tuticorin."

Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"May I know, Sir, what is the difference between the answers given to clauses (e) and (f), and why the Government have granted him the concession as a matter of grace?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"We cannot get beyond the established custom and therefore we are obliged to grant it."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Arising from the answer, Sir, that there was some custom and the answer given in clause (f), may I know whether the concession was granted to him now or on previous occasions also?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"On occasions subsequent to the time when he rendered the actual service."

Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"May I ask whether this concession was granted to him after verification of the situation in Tuticorin by the hon. the Minister himself or whether it was on the recommendation of any officer subordinate to him?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"On the report of the Collector of Tinnevely."

[29th March 1926]

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Sir, with reference to the answer given by the hon. the Minister to the question I put last, it was said that the concession was granted subsequent to the services rendered by him. My question was whether it was granted only now or on earlier occasions also."

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"There were times when he rendered actual service and there had been also subsequent occasions when he did not do actual service. That is the point of difference between the two."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Sir, I was not asking whether he did or did not render any service. But my question is whether the concession was given to him in connexion with the present or with earlier fisheries."

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"In connexion with services rendered now and even sometimes before."

Rao Sahib P. V. GOPALAN:—"May I know whether he thinks that this concession is a hereditary right conceded to him?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"He claims it as a matter of hereditary right but we gave it on other grounds."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"What are the other grounds?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Custom."

Establishment, etc., of the Tuticorin Pearl Fishery.

* 1867 Q.—Rao Bahadur CRUZ FERNANDEZ: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state whether he will lay on the table—

(i) a schedule showing the scale of establishment maintained at the time of the Tuticorin Fishery held in 1889 and 1890 and that proposed for the ensuing fishery together with their pay and allowances and their qualifications;

(ii) a statement showing the expenditure incurred in the maintenance of the Pearl Fishery Department at Tuticorin from 1890 to 1925 inclusive and also the estimated net revenue to Government from the ensuing fishery; and

(iii) a comparative statement showing the anticipated net revenue to Government and the probable income to the Jathithalaivan in the ensuing fishery?

A.—(i) A statement* showing the cost of the establishment maintained in the fisheries held in 1889 and 1890 and the scale of establishment maintained in the fishery that is now being held is laid on the table. Details and qualifications wherever available are furnished in the footnote to the statement.

(ii) The information is not readily available. The figures will have to be worked out by the Superintendent, Pearl and Chank Fisheries, but he and his staff are so busy with the fishery that is now going on off Tuticorin that they would not be able to undertake the work now. The net revenue from the pearl fishery that is now being held is estimated at Rs. 2 lakhs.

(iii) It is not possible to say now what income the Jathithalaivan is likely to derive from the fishery.

[29th March 1926]

Industries.Concessions to depressed classes in Government Industrial Institute, Madura.

* 1868 Q.—Mr. R. VEERIAN: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state—

(a) who bears the cost of clothing, hostel charges and charges for books and necessary articles for apprentices' use in the school and in the workshop in the Government Industrial Institute, Madura, in the case of students belonging to each of the communities; and

(b) whether any concession is shown in the case of depressed classes in the matter of hostel charges, and charges for books and necessary articles for the apprentices' use in the school and in the workshop?

A.—(a) All apprentices irrespective of the community they come from must provide their own clothing, pay hostel charges and purchase their own books. Materials and tools for apprentices' use in the class room and workshop are supplied by the Institute.

(b) No.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"With reference to clause (a), may I know whether there is any separate hostel accommodation?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I do not know."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether there is any cosmopolitan section?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I want notice."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether the hon. the Minister in charge has suggested anything of the kind?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"It is only on the settlement of the prior question that this question will arise."

The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"From the answer given on the notice paper I find there is a hostel. Otherwise how can apprentices be required to pay hostel charges, as is represented in the answer?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I understood the hon. Member Mr. Veerian to refer to a separate hostel."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether any distinction is made in providing meals in the hostel?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I should like to have notice."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Are apprentices selected by the local bodies?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Notice."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"That seems to be a separate question."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether there are any members of the depressed classes undergoing training in the institution?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Notice."

[29th March 1926]

(a) whether scholarships are given to all the students in the Government Industrial Institute, Madura; and

(b) if so, what is the amount in each case?

A.—(a) & (b) No scholarships are given by Government, but apprentices who make satisfactory progress are paid wages for working days at the following rates:—

Probationary period	...	...	Re. 1 per mensem.
First year training period	...	...	As. 6 per diem.
Second	"	...	" 6 "
Third	"	...	" 8 "
Fourth	"	...	" 10 "
Fifth	"	...	" 12 "

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"With reference to clauses (a) and (b), may I know whether any deposit has been taken from the students either at the time of admission or during the course of their training?"

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The question is about scholarships. The hon. Member is asking about deposits. That is a separate question."

A.—(a) Only the Institute at Madura.

(b) No; the attention of the hon. Member is drawn to paragraph 5 of G.O. No. 2043, Development, dated the 28th November 1924, which was placed on Editors' Table.

* 1871 Q.—Mr. R. VEERIAN: Will the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to state what minimum educational qualifications are required for admission of students into the Industrial school at Madura?

A.—The candidate should have passed or have studied for one complete year in the old fourth standard or new fifth standard of an elementary school.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Sir, may I know what sort of industrial education they impart there?"

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"Instruction in machinery, in repairs to motor-cars and various other minor things."

[29th March 1926]

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"In that case, Sir, may I know whether tailoring does not come within that category?"

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Why does the hon. Member make special reference to tailoring of all industries in the world?"

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"Sir, because industrial education means metal work or wood work, etc. I wanted to know whether tailoring will not come within the several kinds of industrial education. Several people, Sir, may be interested in several branches. There should be variety in the course of instruction and I am only asking the hon. the Minister whether tailoring is also taught."

The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI:—"I have no information."

Education.

Stipends to Indian Christians for training as mistresses.

* 1872 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA: Will the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state on what grounds the stipends given to Indian Christians for training as mistresses are fixed at the minima while Hindus, Muhammadans, Europeans and Anglo-Indians are allowed special rates?

A.—The attention of the hon. Member is invited to the answer given to question No. 1850.

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, may I know what the rate would be of the stipends for Christians belonging to depressed classes?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"That is a theoretical question which I am not to solve at present."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I cannot understand, Sir, which is a practical and which a theoretical problem. I want to know whether the hon. Minister is aware that many of these women teachers belong to the depressed classes and are exceedingly poor?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"I quite sympathize with them, Sir."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"In that case, Sir, I feel thankful to the hon. the Minister; but will the hon. the Minister be pleased to give some rates higher than the minimum rates in the case of these mistresses?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"Each case will be judged on its merits while a general rule has to be followed."

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"The answer is puzzling, Sir. A general rule has to be followed and it should apply to each case. I wish to know whether in the case of depressed classes women teachers a rule is to be presumed that a minimum of Rs. 8-8-0 should be given or the rate of Rs. 10-8-0 or Rs. 9-8-0 now given to the Adi-Dravidas?"

"As there is no answer, Sir, may I take it that the answer is favourable?"

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member may put any interpretation he likes."

Pay of teachers transferred from Government elementary girls' schools to local bodies.

* 1873 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) the number of teachers who held permanent pensionable appointments in the Government elementary schools for girls and whose services were transferred along with their schools to the local bodies from 1921 and onwards;

(b) whether the teachers concerned were consulted and agreed to such transfer of their services;

(c) whether the time-scales of pay of Rs. 20—1—30 for lower elementary grade teachers, of Rs. 25—1—50 for higher elementary grade teachers, and of Rs. 30—2—50—1—60 for secondary grade teachers, which were introduced in the case of all teachers who continued to be in the schools under Government management, were not extended to their colleagues in the schools transferred to local bodies; and if not, why not;

(d) whether the latter teachers are still considered to hold pensionable appointments and their service after their transfer to local bodies counts for pension;

(e) whether a memorial has been received from the teachers under reference praying that the time-scales introduced in the Government schools should be extended to them and that, to enable the local bodies to do so, the Government should help them with reasonable grants; and

(f) if so, the orders of the Government thereon?

A.—(a) & (b) The Government have no information.

(c) No time-scale of pay was sanctioned by Government for teachers in elementary schools for girls transferred to the control of local bodies.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(f) The local bodies concerned were informed that it was open to them to raise the salaries of the teachers if the additional expenditure involved can be met from their own funds.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, when the teachers were transferred to the local bodies without their consent, did not the Government consider it necessary to see that their emoluments continued the same?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"It was open to the teachers to resign if they did not like to be transferred."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Were they given the option to retire immediately and draw any pension they were eligible for?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"When they did not like the conditions of service under the local bodies, it was open to them to exercise their discretion either way at the time of the transfer."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Of course they could have resigned, but were they given the right to a pension or would they have forfeited their right to it by their resignation?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"If they were qualified for the pension, they would be entitled to it."

[29th March 1926]

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"It is evident that they would not have put in 25 or 30 years' service; they might have put in 10 years. If their services ceased for reasons beyond their control ordinarily they would be entitled to proportionate pension. I wish to know whether these teachers were allowed the option to retire on the pensions that they could have got at that time."

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"Certainly, they have the option whether to continue to be teachers under the local boards or retire from service. If they retired and applied for a pension, the case would be one for consideration under the rules. But as it is, I cannot answer hypothetical cases."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—"It is the case of teachers whose pay was raised by the local bodies after their transfer and the question is will the Government give them pension on the new scale of pay or on the scale that they would be drawing on the date of their transfer?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"It is open to the local body to contribute pension charges but the liability of the Government is only to the extent that it was at the time when the transfer was made."

(c) why no scholarships are given to depressed class girls, whereas two scholarships are awarded to non-Brahman girls?

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Sir, may I know whether any attempt has been made or whether any information has since been received?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"No information has yet been received."

* 1875 Q.—Mr. R. VEERIAN : With reference to question No. 1382 answered at the meeting, dated 12th February 1926, will the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) whether the report said to have been called for from the Director of Public Instruction has already been received;

(b) if so, whether the Government will be pleased to place the same on the Council table;

[29th March 1926]

(c) whether the Adi-Dravida boy said to have been admitted into the Vellakinar Higher Elementary School, Coimbatore taluk, on 9th December 1925 is still reading or not;

(d) for how many days he was reading in the school after his admission; and

(e) whether it is a fact that owing to discouragement and maltreatment meted out by the headmaster and other assistants, the boy was obliged to stay away from the school?

A.—(a) & (b) The hon. Member is referred to the answer to question No. 1671 put at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 19th March 1926.

(c), (d) & (e) The Government have no information. A report will be called for.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Here also, Sir, the answer is that they have called for a report. May I know whether already attempts have been made or whether they are just going to make attempts at calling for the information?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"So many details of administration relating to a particular village out of many villages and to a particular school or school-boy, can only be had through the departmental head, the Director of Public Instruction. As we cannot get it in time, we say that a report has been called for."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"It may be a trivial matter to the hon. Minister. But so far as we are concerned, it is a very important matter."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"No one thinks that it is not important."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"It may be taken as a point of personal explanation, Sir."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"No personal explanation during question time is generally permitted."

(b) when this concession was allowed; and

(c) whether the rule 92 of the Madras Educational Rules is applied in granting half-fee concession for Brahmans and other forward classes also?

A.—(a), (b) & (c) Under rule 92 of the Madras Educational Rules, poor girls of all classes and communities are eligible for half-fee concessions.

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"Sir, the answer given is altogether puzzling. I find from the rules that this half-fee concession is allowed only to girls of Oriya, Muhammadan and the backward and depressed classes. I want to know why this is not extended to all girls."

[29th March 1926]

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO: "That rule is by no means exhaustive."

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether they have issued any such rule since the last publication of the Madras Educational Rules?"

The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"The list is not exhaustive and as such discretion is given to the heads of institutions."

(c) how many girl students belonging to the non-depressed classes are paying half fees and how many are paying no fees at all in each form in each college; and

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether the Government are not going to see that there is no employment of child labour in these factories in large numbers? A.—Bullock drivers of the Indian Army Service Corps are classed as non-combatants—vide Army Regulations, Volume II, Appendix XXXI, and those who served in this capacity in the great war are accordingly not now eligible for darkhast concessions, which after April 1924 have been restricted to combatants.

Mr. R. VEERIAN:—"These bullock drivers also served in the great recent war, Sir, in supplying meat to the sepoy in the firing line risking their lives. May I know whether the Government do not consider the advisability of extending to them the same concession as is granted to the ex-military men?"

(a) whether the Superintending Engineer, Madras Circle, has given any other reasons for the issue of this recent Government Order than the reason given by him stating that the Public Works Department officers were not receiving the notices of requisitions to examine cars in proper time;

(b) if he has given any other reasons, whether the Government will be pleased to state them; and

(c) if the Government were not furnished with any reasons by the Superintending Engineer, Madras Circle, other than the reasons mentioned in

(a) whether the Government will be pleased to inquire how many accidents had taken place during the past five years to persons on account of the cars not having been properly examined by the Public Works Department officers for want of sufficiently long period of notice?

[29th March 1926]

A.—(a) No.

(b) The question does not arise.

(c) The Government do not consider that such an inquiry is necessary.

Alleged accidents during car festivals.

* 1896 Q.—S. R. Y. ANKINEDU PRASAD Bahadur: Will the hon. the Law Member and the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state—

(a) whether the accidents, if any, taking place during our festivals were due to want of proper management of the crowd at the time of these car festivals or to the bad construction of these cars; and

(b) whether any representation has been made recently either by the public or by any responsible individuals as to the increase of accidents owing to bad construction of cars?

A.—(a) The Government cannot supply an answer unless specific cases of accidents are placed before them

(b) No.

Damages by collapse of temple cars.

* 1897 Q.—S. R. Y. ANKINEDU PRASAD Bahadur: Will the hon. the Law Member and the hon. the Minister for Education be pleased to state whether the Government will be pleased to publish a list of cases where serious damage was caused to persons by the collapsing of temporary temple cars built of light material like the palmyra posts?

A.—The Government have no information.

Civil Justice.

Seating arrangements for litigants in the Courts of South Kanara.

* 1898 Q.—MR. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE: Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state whether there are special seating arrangements for litigants and their party in District Munsifs' Courts and Criminal Courts of South Kanara?

A.—The Government have no information but have called for a report.

Disabilities of the depressed class in the Vadikapaliam village court.

* 1899 Q.—MR. R. VEERIAN: Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government are aware that while giving evidence in the Vadikapaliam village court, Pollachi taluk, the members of the depressed classes are made to stand during sun and rain outside the court premises; and

(b) whether the Government have received the representation sent to them by me requesting them to set right this defect; and if so, what steps they intend taking in the matter?

A.—(a) No.

(b) Yes. A report has been called for from the Collector.

MR. R. VEERIAN:—"May I know whether the Government have issued any circular not to have any rented building or own building in an inaccessible place, to the depressed classes especially?"

[29th March 1926]

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"I am afraid I do not follow the question, Sir. The point is that some persons while giving evidence in Vadikapalliam village court in the Pollachi taluk find it necessary or are compelled to stand outside the court premises during sun and rain. The present supplementary question is whether there is any circular issued by the Government asking or making it necessary that no rented building should be utilized."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Will the hon. Member put the question about this particular place?"

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"In this particular place they have rented a building which is inaccessible to the depressed classes."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Order, order. The Government have called for a report, and the hon. Member must wait for the report before he can put a question on the matter."

Mr. R. VEERIAN :—"I readily understand that. I only wanted to know whether they have infringed the rules, that is, the rule in the circular issued by the Government directing them not to have courts in rented buildings. They have now a rented building which is inaccessible."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member should not assume that the rules of the Government are infringed."

Number and disposal of suits in Coimbatore District Munsif's Court.

* 1900 Q.—Mr. C. V. VENKATARAMANA AYYANGAR : Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) how many suits were filed in the Principal District Munsif's Court of Coimbatore in each of the years 1921 to 1925, how many were transferred and how many were disposed of;

(b) & (c) The Government have called for the information.

Electricity.

Pykara Hydro-Electric project.

* 1901 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA : Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state with regard to the projected Pykara Hydro-Electric project—

(a) the name of the company to which the concession to develop the water resources of the Pykara and Avarai Halla rivers had been granted; when it was granted; within what area it was worked and with what success and profit it was worked by the company;

[29th March 1926]

(b) whether the Government project includes the Cholatipuzha scheme;

(c) what will be the extent of the operations of the Government project and what will be the total approximate cost;

(d) what probable return is expected, on what basis it is estimated and with what guarantee; and

(e) wherefrom the plant and machinery will be obtained and after what preliminaries?

A.—(a) To Messrs. Alfred Dickinson & B. D. Richards on behalf of a Syndicate to consist of Messrs. Dickinson and Richards, and Messrs. Balfour Beatty & Co., Limited, and the General Electric Company, Limited, London. The terms are set out in G.O. No. 257 I., dated 18th October 1922, and were published, as the House was informed in the reply given to question No. 796 of Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar in October. The concession was not worked.

(b) The Cholatipuzha scheme is a possible further development of the Pykara scheme, but it is not included in the project as at present contemplated. Details are given in Mr. Forbes' report which was placed on the table last year.

(c) The Pykara scheme, as has been stated many times already in this House, provides for the generation of about 37,000 kilowatts at a generating station at the foot of the Pykara falls through a pipe line fed from a reservoir just above the Pykara bridge. Power will be supplied to the Nilgiris and Coimbatore, in the first instance and then on to Dindigul, and to Villupuram and Madras. The total cost as at present estimated is about 238 lakhs.

(d) A return of 10 to 12 per cent is anticipated—but revised figures are still awaited. There is a safe load in the Nilgiris (including the Cordite Factory), in Coimbatore and Madras and from the South Indian Railway, if the scheme matures as now projected.

(e) Probably mostly from England—in consultation with the firm of Messrs. Merz and McLellan, Consulting Engineers to the Railway Board and the Government of India, who are examining the scheme.

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"With reference to clause (e), may I enquire whether the scheme was advertised in all papers in the United States and other countries so that tenders might be obtained from all firms all over the world in order that we might at the same time get the cheapest and the best plant available in all places?"

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"The remarks of the hon. Member will be borne in mind."

Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI :—"In the answer to clause (c), it is stated that power will be supplied in the first instance to the Nilgiris and Coimbatore, and then on to Dindigul, Villupuram and Madras. May I take it that all the intermediate places between Dindigul and Villupuram will be served and towns will be given power to have electric installations?"

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"That is the idea, Sir."

[29th March 1926]

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“The answer to clause (e) says ‘Probably mostly from England.’ So it seems to me that the Government have already made up their mind, and I do not understand whether the Government is really in earnest about getting the cheapest and best plant from wherever it can be got.”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“It is not a question of earnestness or no earnestness. The question of plant and machinery has not arisen in any live form yet and, as I said, the remarks of the hon. Member will be borne in mind.”

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“I may point out that this matter was raised in the form of a question by my hon. Friend Mr. Venkataramana Ayyangar in which it was then suggested that the scheme might be advertised far and wide. May I know whether steps were taken by the Government on this suggestion or whether the Government have already made-up their minds to get it from England or another place?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“I may at once say that if the cost is not very different, the Government would prefer to order material from England in consultation with the High Commissioner or the Indian Stores Department which exists there for the purpose of checking and scrutinizing these things. If there is great disparity of prices in these contracts, of course Government will try to secure the best and cheapest available in the market.”

The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—“Is it not the usual practice in such cases to ask the High Commissioner for India to make these purchases from the best and cheapest market possible?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“That I understand is the usual practice.”

Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—“In this case, which is a scheme costing, I believe, something like Rs. 238 lakhs, is it not advisable in the interests of economy, that there should be departure from the usual practice and that the materials be purchased from the best and cheapest market available?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“The usual practice is to get materials from the best and cheapest market possible, Sir.”

Tamparaparni-Papanasam Hydro-Electric Scheme Project.

* 1902 Q.—Mr. K. Chavadi SUBRAMANIA PILLAI : Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether “the Tamparaparni-Papanasam Hydro-Electric Scheme Project” has been engaging the attention of the Government from 1924;

(b) whether the scheme has been taken on hand and if so, to what extent;

(c) whether the scheme above referred to will be of any use for agricultural improvements;

(d) whether the scheme has been undertaken by Government or private agency;

[29th March 1926]

(e) whether any Government expert has inspected the place and made arrangements for construction of dams on the upper and lower portions of the Papanasam Hills and any expenditure was incurred thereon; and

(f) whether there is any other proposal to improve the irrigation sources of the Tamparaparni river by constructing reservoirs in Papanasam Hills?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) & (d) The scheme is under investigation.

(c) The Government hope that power may be used for well irrigation.

(e) Mr. Hawkins and his assistants have visited the place—estimates for the construction of a reservoir are in preparation. There has been no expenditure on works so far.

(f) No.

Mr. K. Chavadi SUBRAMANIA PILLAI :—“With reference to the answer to clause (e) of this question, may I know when the estimates will be ready for the Papanasam scheme?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“It is impossible to say, Sir. It depends really upon whether in view of the railway requirements it would be necessary to start work on the full Pykara scheme immediately. The Government have made up their minds to start Pykara, and the question of other schemes coming in, in addition to Pykara, will depend largely upon the question of the electrification programme of the South Indian Railway Company.”

Mr. P. N. MARTHANDAM PILLAI :—“Will the hon. Member be pleased to state even approximately the time when the scheme may be expected to commence?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“The whole question of the South Indian Railway electrification will probably be settled in the course of the next four or five months.”

A.—The information is not available.

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—“There is no prohibition, I think, of wet cultivation within 50 yards of municipal limits, but if there is such a limit as I am told, would not the Government be pleased to call for information on the point as possible wrong may be averted?”

The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—“I shall do so.”

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"I find, Sir, with reference to question No. 1859, that it was sent on 23rd January 1926. It appears to have been sent from your office on 12th March 1926. I do not know, Sir, what the reasons are. It may be that you made intermediate references and that it took some time for these things to be decided."

[29th March 1926]

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I know it was due to my absence from Madras for more than a month."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"It is more than that, Sir. It was sent on 23rd January 1926 to your office and despatched out of your office on 12th March 1926. And I may tell you that if these questions are not referred to immediately, sometimes wrong is done to the people. You may not be aware of that, but those acquainted with the ways of working of the administrative departments know that such things do happen."

The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"This delay is evidently one that took place in the Council office, and I may assure the hon. Member that the delay was unavoidable."

(d) Does not arise. Promotion of Inspectors and Sub-Inspectors are made by the Commissioner of Police.

Scale of pay of Sub-Inspectors of the City Police.

1920 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA: Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether, when the incremental scale of pay of the Sub-Inspectors of the City Police was started, some of the Sub-Inspectors were injuriously affected by the new scheme, and whether on the recommendation of the then Commissioner the case of an Anglo-Indian Sub-Inspector was favourably considered by the Government and he was given the maximum pay;

(b) whether it is a fact that three Indian Sub-Inspectors who were affected more injuriously than the Anglo-Indian Sub-Inspector appealed to the Government, and their cases were not considered;

(c) whether it is a fact that, subsequent to this, the case of two Anglo-Indian Inspectors who were also affected by the incremental scale of pay and who appealed to the Government were considered favourably by the Government; and

(d) whether it is a fact that the Indian Sub-Inspectors have again appealed to the Government; and if so what orders the Government have passed on them?

A.—(a) Some Sub-Inspectors of the City Police were adversely affected by the introduction of the time-scale of pay in 1922. The case of an Anglo-Indian Sub-Inspector was favourably considered by Government and he was given, not the maximum pay, but Rs. 126 per mensem in the scale of Rupees 90—3—135—140—5—150 with effect from 10th October 1922.

(b) Three Indian Sub-Inspectors considered themselves to have been adversely affected and represented their cases to Government. Government were unable to consider the cases favourably, as they had previously declared that no more applications would be considered.

(c) The cases of two Anglo-Indian Inspectors were favourably considered by Government but only one case was subsequent to the date of the orders passed on the memorials referred to in clause (b). Favourable consideration was given to the case subsequent to the date of the order, as it was then understood that there were no similar cases to be brought forward.

- (d) Two out of the three Sub-Inspectors have again appealed to Government. The matter is under consideration.

Retrenchment Committee.

Action taken on the Madras Retrenchment Committee's recommendations.

1921 Q.—Mr. P. C. VENKATAPATI RAZU: Will the hon. the Law Member, the hon. the Member for Revenue, the hon. the Home Member, the hon. the Member for Finance, the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government, the hon. the Minister for Education and the hon. the Minister for Development be pleased to place on the Council table a statement showing the action taken by the Government on the recommendations of the Madras Retrenchment Committee that were under consideration by the time of the issue of G.O. No. 666 of 11th September 1924?

A.—A statement showing the action taken on the recommendations of the Madras Retrenchment Committee that were reported to be under consideration at the time of issue of G.O. No. 666, Finance, dated 11th September 1924, has been separately placed on the Council Table.

State Prisoners.

Detention of deported Mappilla State prisoners.

1922 Q.—Mr. J. A. SALDANHA: Will the hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether there are in South Kanara any Mappilla State prisoners deported or exiled from Malabar in connexion with the Mappilla rebellion;

(b) if so, how many of them are detained in South Kanara, what their names are, on what allowances and subject to what conditions they are detained;

(c) whether the woman named Chettali Beyumma is one of such State prisoners detained at Mangalore and what her antecedents are;

(d) for what reasons she has been deported and subject to what conditions as to allowances, housing, etc.;

(e) what children or grandchildren or other relations she has got who can take care of her; and

(f) whether she applied to Government for being allowed to return to her home; what orders were passed and why she is still detained at Mangalore?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) One; her name is Chettali Beyumma; she is granted an allowance of Rs. 12 per mensem. She is not allowed to quit Mangalore.

(c) She is the one State prisoner detained at Mangalore.

(d) She was removed from Malabar for active participation in a particularly bad case of forcible conversion. In regard to her maintenance allowance attention is invited to the answer to clause (b).

[29th March 1926]

(e) The prisoner has a son who is a State prisoner detained in Madras, a widowed daughter and grandchildren. The Government are not prepared to allow the prisoner to return to Malabar, and her relatives are not in a position to make her any allowance.

(f) Yes. The Government have declined in the interests of the public peace of Malabar to permit her to return.

MOTION FOR THE ADJOURNMENT OF THE BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE RE THE PARALYSIS OF INDUSTRIES.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"Sir, I beg to ask for leave to make a motion for the adjournment of the business of this Council for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the critical situation created by the paralysis of several industries in the Presidency and the urgent necessity of Government taking immediate steps for the relief of the distress caused and devising measures for resuscitating the deserving industrial concerns that have closed or are closing."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"I rise to a point of order, Sir. As appears from the notice itself, it is not a matter of any urgent importance. The paralysis if it exists (laughter) has been, it seems to me, a chronic one."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"There are many industries in this country that suffer from this paralysis, and there is no doubt that this is a state of things which has come to a critical condition this year at this time."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is it a recent event?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"The critical situation is a recent one, Sir."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"In order that motions for adjournment may be in order, the hon. Members must show that the events have been recent, and that they refer to definite matters of public importance."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"May I be permitted to say also that the right is given in regard to a matter of urgent public importance? The concatenation of many matters giving rise to this situation is hardly within the scope of an adjournment motion, Sir."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I may draw attention to the administration report of 1924-25 in which it is stated that the financial stringency which prevailed during the greater part of the year was reflected not only in governmental activities but also in a number of firms which ceased to exist. I am not in possession of the report for 1925-26. But I have heard from enquiries that during this year the number of concerns that have closed on account of financial stringency is greater now than at the beginning of the war. The number of insolvencies owing to the closing of the concerns has also increased. This is so throughout the Presidency and especially in South Kanara the number of firms that have been closed now is more than what has happened during the last ten years."

a.m.

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Are they State undertakings ? "

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Not State undertakings. I mean private undertakings."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I think from what the hon. Member has stated so far there is not enough ground to proceed further."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I have not yet finished."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Order, order. The speech is not at all necessary at this stage. I am not at all convinced that it is a definite matter of urgent public importance and I think the hon. Member has other ways of bringing the matter before the House. I regret I cannot allow the motion to proceed."

IV

COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COUNCIL.

The Secretary then laid on the table a copy of

(i) G.O. No. 228^a, Development, dated 17th February 1926, passing orders on the report on the audit of the accounts of the British Empire Exhibition ;

(ii) G.O. No. 382^b, Revenue, dated 5th March 1926, publishing amendment to the rules under the Madras Survey and Boundaries Act, 1923.

V

DEMANDS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANTS FOR 1925-26.

Grant I—Land Revenue.

* The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS :—" Mr. President, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'that the Government be granted an additional appropriation of Rupees 1,16,792 under Land Revenue—5-b—Survey and Settlement.'

"This sum is made up of certain number of excesses against which certain number of savings are to be set off. The first main item of excess has reference to the Survey office and it is made of three lesser items one of which is an amount of Rs. 6,900 being an excess in the pay of the officers which was due partly to the absence of the Director of Survey on leave in India so that the leave pay had to be drawn in India and to the return to duty of the assistant photographic expert. The next item is Rs. 15,100 which is due to the provision made for draughtsmen for mapping the towns that have been surveyed and preparing an outline sheets for the Survey of India Party. The whole cost of the latter is recovered and also one-fourth of the former. That gives a set-off of Rs. 7,000. Lastly there is a small item of Rs. 1,000 for excess cost of electric current. The next main item is the principal one and it is made up of small items with which I do not think the House would be very much interested and one considerable item which is an excess of Rs. 1,55,000 on account of excess demarcation charges. These are due to the recent amendment of the Act by which a much larger proportion of these charges are debited to Government than used to be the case formerly. This excess could not have been foreseen as the programme of the department was to survey different areas than those that they did survey. The idea was that during the current year the staff would be employed in the resurvey of Ellore and Ernagudem taluks in the West Godavari district. But it was decided that the question of this resurvey required further examination and therefore they were employed on resurveying the irrigated areas in proprietary estates in the delta. All the charges of those surveys fell on the Government and this entailed an excess charge. Again, Sir, there is a set off of Rs 70,000 which we have saved in the Settlement Department by adopting a less elaborate and detailed procedure. The net amount is Rs. 1,16,792 for which I ask for an additional grant."

29th March 1926] [Mr. N. E. Marjoribanks]

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU :—" May I know, Sir, whether it is decided definitely to abandon the idea of surveying the Ellore and Ernagudem taluks ? "

* The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS :—" I am not certain, Sir, whether a definite order has been issued ; but the present intention of Government is not to resurvey those areas."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU :—" In view of the fact that the resettlement of the district is in sight and considering the numerous disputes and the subdivisions that have taken place and are still taking place, I must press upon the Government to reconsider the question of the desirability of resurveying those districts. They are upland taluks mostly inhabited by the backward classes—some of them Koyas—and there are zamindars. I am not speaking merely of the zamindars of the delta taluks but I am speaking of the zamindars of the non-deltaic tracts. They require resurvey for Government lands also. The quarrels between the ryotwari holders themselves and the quarrels between the ryotwari holders on the one hand and the inamdars on the other have found their place even in courts of law. Some of my people do really feel that there is some necessity in those taluks for a resurvey. I must expect that Government would not pass immediate orders but would consider the desirability of a resurvey in the light of the additional information that they might get from their officers."

* The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS :—" One of the main reasons that has influenced Government is the belief that the resurvey was strongly opposed by the House. I am very glad to find that the House is not unanimous and that the House is prepared to consider cases where there is a necessity for resurvey. However, I rather think that it is not so much a resurvey, i.e., the redoing of what has been done in these areas that is necessary as a supplemental survey. In any case when the registration comes to be corrected and what are called rough pattas are issued at resettlement all applications for further survey will then be attended to. If they come in such numbers as to make a complete resurvey necessary, that course will be taken. We hope when we actually apply the test we will be able to get the work done by a less elaborate process than an entire resurvey for the whole area. What the hon. Member has said however will be borne in mind when the final order is issued on the matter."

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

[23th March 1926]

Grant VII—Irrigation—Reserved—Public Works Officers.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that the Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 1,256 under Irrigation reserved 47-R (f)—Miscellaneous—Special Commissions of Enquiry' to meet the expenditure in connexion with the Ceded Districts Irrigation Committee. As will be evident from the note the Committee started work in July 1925 and submitted a preliminary report in the following month. Government thereupon asked the Committee to make its final recommendations and it is now submitted. This amount is for the labour in connexion with the final report which is a valuable document which the Government is now considering and with a large portion of which the Government are in agreement."

The motion was put and carried and the grant was made.

Grant IX—General Administration—Legislative Bodies.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that the Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 18,000 under 22 R. B. a. General Administration—Legislative Bodies—Provincial Legislative Councils' for meeting the travelling allowance of Members of the Legislative Council during the year. The position is this. A provision of one lakh was made in 1925-26. A supplementary grant was made by this House as that was not found to be sufficient. This is not expected to cover the expenditure and this grant is therefore necessitated."

Mr. P. T. RAJAN :—"I formally move

'that the allotment of Rs. 18,000 for travelling allowance be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"This is merely to raise the question of more accommodation to Members of the Council. I should say that there is no accommodation for Members whatsoever. The House Committee has pointed out . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The question of accommodation to Members is not relevant to this question which is one of travelling allowance."

Mr. P. T. RAJAN :—"When we get a daily allowance of Rs. 10 I thought this could also come in. I had given notice for the reduction of allotment in the budget motions, but unfortunately owing to illness I could not be present. I think I could take this opportunity to discuss the desirability of providing more accommodation and further giving quarters to M.L.C.'s from the mufassal as has been done in the other Councils and as you were good enough to point out in your circular."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"Though the discussion that has just been initiated is, strictly speaking, not relevant to the particular matter, you will observe, Sir, that a note has been circulated to hon. Members of this House embodying the results of the inquiry and the observations for which you have made yourself responsible, Sir. That matter will be borne in mind by the Government and it will be noticed also that Government have a building programme for which money has been voted and we shall see what could be done. Of course, the problem is not an easy one; but I assure hon. Members that Government are considering seriously the question of quarters and accommodation for Members of Council. The construction of living quarters is a much bigger question and I do not think I can deal adequately with it at this meeting."

[Sir C. P. Ramaswami Ayyar]

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, I rise to oppose this motion altogether. According to the circumstances, as I already said, under which this Council is working, this Council is not functioning as it was expected to function and the administration is not responsible to its dictates. Our solemn expression of views has been flouted on several matters . . ."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"On a point of order, Sir. It is probably not permissible for me to dogmatise on the rest of the undelivered speech. The first two sentences uttered by my hon. Friend raise very large questions which hardly arise from the subject of the extra ten rupees allotted to the hon. Members of this House."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Let me see what the hon. Member is driving at."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I am driving at the point that this amount should not be granted for the reasons I am going to give, if I am relevant. (Laughter.) This Council has failed to function for the purpose for which it was expected by the electorate. I am opposing this motion for the sake of expressing our resentment at things which are surely shared by our constituencies, and I am entitled to give expression to those feelings of keen disappointment of our electorate that this Council has not done anything and has been unable to do anything to further our national interests and development. Our Ministers . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"This question refers to travelling allowance of Members. Will the hon. Member confine himself to the ordinary Members of the Council?"

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"Any devastating criticism on Members of the House as a whole may possibly be in order but not that appertaining to any particular set of Members."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"This Council as it stands is not able to do anything and therefore I appeal to the House that we can refuse to sanction this grant. Of course, His Excellency the Governor may restore it. But we shall not be a party to sanctioning the travelling allowance to ourselves. (Laughter.) Our travelling ought to be in the interests of the electorate. The money is now simply wasted. So I say we should refuse the travelling allowance to ourselves."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member can easily do it by not sending in his travelling allowance bill." (Laughter.)

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I can do it myself if I wish. But I appeal to the Council to refuse this grant as a whole to express its dissatisfaction at the position in which it is placed. If His Excellency the Governor certifies it, let them have the grant, but not on our responsibility. I am sure the feeling is shared by all the Members that this Council does not serve the purpose for which it should function. (The hon. Sir C. P. Ramaswami Ayyar: "Question.") Even if the hon. the Leader of the House does not relish it, it is just our purpose to express our feelings, even if I should say things which might make him angry." (Laughter.)

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"If the only object of my hon. Friend is to make me angry, I am afraid that object will be frustrated."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"That shows how callous is the Leader of the House to the feelings of the electorate. (Laughter.) That is why we should express our resentment by not voting this grant. It is from the pockets of the electorate that we take our travelling allowance and they are paying their taxes out of which this also comes. It is but right that we should give expression to the feelings of their keen disappointment at the way in which this Council is functioning. Therefore, I object to this travelling allowance grant being passed. I hope the whole House will join with me in showing their resentment which has been expressed also by hon. Members on the Ministerialist side in various ways, in lectures, in papers and public prints. Now I want to know what we have done in this Council, and after all what is the sum total of good we have done to the country. As I fancy, this Council is only engendering a spirit of servileness on one side and eloquence on the other side. I recognize feelings are given expression to in most eloquent terms on the Ministerialist side, but all that eloquence is simply wasted. Therefore we should ask our Ministers also . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Will the hon. Member confine himself to the defects of the Members of the Council?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"One thing is certain that a good deal of our time is wasted. If we had proper Standing Orders regulating our eloquence, our speeches and other things, much time would be saved. As matters stand, we have not got . . ."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"This motion deals with the regulation of travelling allowance and not with the regulation of eloquence." (Laughter.)

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"What I ask is this: why such a large amount is asked from us? The question is whether we have been economical, and who is responsible for all those moneys wasted on select committees and a number of meetings."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD:—"Is it open to the hon. Member to cast a slur on the work of other Members of this Council? He is entitled to cast a slur on his own work."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"How am I to cast a slur on my own work? (Laughter.) I for one fancy I am as good as any other of us. (Laughter.) What I say is this: how is it that we have brought about such a state of things that we are not able to make both ends meet and have we tried our utmost by proper husbanding our resources in making . . ."

29th March 1926]

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Sir, I think I must point out at this stage that it is a recognized practice that

'debate on supplementary and excess grants is restricted to the particulars contained in the estimates on which those grants are sought, and to the application of the items which compose those grants; and the debate cannot touch the policy or the expenditure sanctioned, on other heads, by the estimate on which the original grant was obtained, except so far as such policy or expenditure is brought before the Committee by the items contained in the supplementary or excess estimates.'

"I would ask you, Sir, to enforce that rule and see that the debate is kept within the legitimate ambit of the discussion of travelling allowance to hon. Members of this House."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"Sir, I have absolutely no objection to that ruling being applied to the present case. But if it is intended to have it as a general rule as applicable in other cases, I must point out to you that the rule which is to be found in May's book is not to be applied to our Council but the regulations that we have got ourselves. When the proper case comes, it will be my duty to place before you the question whether such a rule could be applied here."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I have already ruled once or twice, apart from May's Parliamentary practice, that debate on supplementary grants should be restricted to items mentioned by Government. As regards the subject of the hon. Member Mr. Saldanha, I was just waiting to see him get into deeper waters (laughter), in order that I might get an opportunity of ruling him out on the point of relevancy. I was just waiting how he was going to develop his argument as to the way in which the Council has been conducting its proceedings."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I have not more to say Sir. (Laughter.) I think my time is limited. I have not prepared a long speech. My notes are only brief. (Laughter.) I think the drift of my speech is that we are not having our tours as they ought to be."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"That is too large a question to raise on this supplementary grant. I would like the hon. Member to confine himself to the question of travelling allowance for Members of the Council, as to why this should be increased."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"If they had functioned properly, this trouble of excess expenditure . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"That trouble has not arisen out of this supplementary grant, as the hon. Member will realise that if what he says is true the defective constitution of the Council is due to other causes than this question of excess expenditure."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"My reason may be right or wrong." (Laughter.)

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"It is not only that the hon. Member should be right, but it is also much more important for the conduct of business in this House that he should deal with relevant matters."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"But I submit it is relevant to say that I am opposed to this grant and that we should not pass this travelling allowance." The motion was put and passed, and the grant was made.

[29th March 1926]

Grant XII—Administration of Justice.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"I move, Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor,—

'that an additional sum of Rs. 32,000 for "Pay of officers—Voted" under "24 (e) Administration of Justice—Civil and Sessions Courts—ii. Mufassal Civil and Sessions Courts—Administration of Justice (Reserved)" be granted.'

"As has been pointed out in the explanatory note, this is really the result of a saving. The saving of rupees one lakh arises on account of various district and sessions judges belonging to the Indian Civil Service having taken leave. The Provincial Service officers who have been acting for them in those vacancies as district and sessions judges have to be paid and for that purpose a sum of Rs. 32,000 is required. The saving will be Rs. 1 lakh under "Pay of officers—Non-voted."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"I move
'to reduce the allotment of Rs. 32,000 by Rs. 100.'

"This is merely a token motion, Sir. Out of the 14 district and sessions judges that are appointed, I mean those recruited directly from the bar and those that were promoted from among the subordinate judges."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Before the hon. Member proceeds with the speech, may I ask Government whether this item includes provision for any additional officers in either of the services."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"No."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Then, I do not see how the question of representation of communities arises."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"If it does not involve the appointment of additional men, I cannot understand how this supplementary demand arises, and how a saving can come in by way of this demand."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"The saving arises in the non-voted portion of the budget."

12-15 P.M. "Certain civilian members of the service who were district judges took leave and the Provincial Service officers are appointed to act for them. The sum of Rs. 32,000 represents the salary payable to these Provincial Service officers who have acted for the district judges. By virtue of these district judges civilian officers not being available and drawing full pay, a saving is effected."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"Could not the Government appropriate under one of those Devolution rules, rule 39 or rule 38?"

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"They could not."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Regarding the relevancy of Mr. Natesa Madaliyar's motion, apart from the merits of the question, though no new appointments are made, the motion before the House is for a particular grant for appointment of certain district judges. Does not that give the right to any hon. Member of this House to raise the question as to the recruitment of these district judges? If that be the case, does not that give my friend the right to move this motion? It seems to me, subject to your ruling, that he has the right. And my friend, according to my view, is entitled to raise the question of appointment to that cadre."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"The answer to that is this. On the main motion when I asked under the voted grant for the salary of the Provincial Civil Service officers who have been functioning as district and sessions judges, the question would undoubtedly arise, as a matter of fact it was raised, and the matter was included in the 100 rupees reduction and the 32 lakhs reduction of which notice has been given by Mr. Natesa Mudaliyar. The point that I am now raising is that after having given notice of a motion to reduce the grant by 32 lakhs or in the alternative by Rs. 100 under the main head you cannot raise the same question under a supplemental demand which is only a matter of accountancy in the events that have happened."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"I take it that this grant is asked for under Rule 31. I am open to correction if I am wrong."

"When money has been spent on any service for which the vote of Council is necessary during any financial year in excess of the amount granted for that service and for that year, a demand for the excess shall be presented to the Council by the Finance Member and shall be dealt with in the same way by the Council as if it were a demand for a grant."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"This is not an excess grant; this is a supplementary grant."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"Under what rule does it come?"

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Under rule 32 (1)—

"An estimate shall be presented to the Council for a supplementary or additional grant when (i) the amount voted in the budget of a grant is found to be insufficient for the purposes of the current year, etc."

"What has happened is that the salary voted in regard to the Provincial Service officers is found insufficient for the purposes of the current year, because a larger number of Indian Civil Service officers have taken leave than was anticipated at the time. Therefore, in the place of the Indian Civil Service officers who have taken leave, Provincial Service officers have been put in."

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU:—"Does it say that the demand is subject to the same rules as any other demand under the budget? I am not able to put my finger on the rule."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"According to the grant, here, it is an additional sum of Rs. 32,000 for 'Pay of officers—voted' under Administration of Justice. I go upon this. It is an additional grant that is wanted. An additional grant should be treated as a budget grant. And the communal representation question on the Judicial services was not discussed at the budget time. What was discussed was only communal representation of the services in the High Court itself, the ministerial offices in the High Court. The appointments of district munsifs, sub-judges and district judges were not discussed at the time of the budget. So I am here to move that a 100 rupees should be reduced from 32,000 under Administration of Justice. I think I have every right to do that. Of course, Sir, I wait for your decision. I think I have every right to move it because this additional grant is to be treated as a budget grant. If you give me permission I will go on."

[29th March 1926]

Rai Bahadur Sir K. VENKATAREDDI NAYUDU :—" Referring to the same rule, I find in clause (iii) these words—

'Supplemental or additional estimates shall be dealt with in the same way by the Council as if they were demands for grants.'

"Therefore, there can be no difference between this demand and any other demand that we passed a few days ago."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Motions for reduction must be relevant to the items indicated by Government. With regard to the point raised by Mr. Natesa Mudaliyar, I think he is correct in stating that this particular question of representation in the Judicial services had not been reached during the general budget. It was only a discussion on the Ministerial offices. I think Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar may move his motion."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" Thank you very much, Sir. As I began, Sir, out of 14 appointments of district and sessions judges held by Indians either recruited directly or promoted from among the subordinate judges, only seven are held by members of the various communities in this land comprising 97 per cent of the population. Sir, the proportion is far below what it ought to be and what is desirable. The proportion is so low because in the initial recruitment of district munsifs, the desired proportion has not been observed. There are 201 district munsifs of which there are only 50 belonging to the 97 per cent communities. Secondly, there are 61 sub-judges of which only 16 belong to 97 per cent communities. Even in recruitment, among 49 acting district munsifs, there are only 19 belonging to the 97 per cent communities. Sir, these services are in the hands of two authorities, the High Court and the Government. We have our grievances against both of them. Sir, the High Court is beyond our jurisdiction. But the Government is responsible to us. We only request the Government to see whether they cannot come to a decision. According to the Letters Patent, the High Court is beyond our jurisdiction. Certainly, we have got very great respect for the High Court collectively and also to individual members that occupy the bench there. Section 8 of the Letters Patent authorizes the King-Emperor to appoint the Chief Justice and the High Court Judges and empowers these with the framing of rules as occasion may require, subject to any rules and restrictions which may be prescribed by the Governor in Council. This too is only for the ministerial appointments. I want to know from the hon. the Law Member whether any rule is there in the Letters Patent vesting the power of appointing district munsifs with the High Court. (An hon. Member: The Civil Courts Act.) The Civil Courts Act, I think, is within the bounds of this Council, if not the Assembly, to be amended. So, I request the hon. the Law Member to see that the Civil Courts Act is amended."

"Sir, in this connexion I request the hon. the Law Member, in replying to me, to reply calmly, and in keeping with the dignity and responsibility of his position, and the dignity of every Member of this House."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Is the hon. Member referring to any language used by the hon. the Law Member?"

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" I am requesting the hon. Member not to work himself up to an anger as he did on another occasion. It creates an impression that the Law Member rebukes the hon. Members of this House."

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Neither the hon. the Law Member nor any other member of the House is responsible for comments made outside the Council on the speeches of hon. Members. And with regard to the objection taken by Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar to the attitude of the hon. the Law Member, I would ask him to confine himself to the language used by the Law Member, and not to any kind of attitude and very indefinable things like attitude, because we cannot decide whether a particular attitude is parliamentary or not."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—" Language used in a certain way is quite different from language used in an ordinary way. I request the hon. the Law Member to reply to me calmly."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" Sir, I cordially accept the invitation that has been extended to me by the hon. Member from Madras, and I reply to him calmly. I do not propose to deal any further with the posthumous rehabilitation of old speeches which has been attempted. But let us analyse the contents of the speech made by the hon. Member for Madras. He first of all spoke of district munsifs. I think it has been stated more than once on the floor of this House that the appointment of district munsifs is vested in the High Court under section 7, I believe, of the Madras Civil Courts Act which was recently amended by this House. That appointment or right of appointment is vested in the High Court. But I do not wish to content myself with that answer. I wish to go further and say that the High Court has been apprised of the sentiments of this Honourable House with regard to paying due attention to the representation of various communities in the ranks of district munsifs; and it has to be remembered as I have no doubt that the hon. Member from Madras will remember, that there are members of various communities, Brahman, non-Brahman and Indian Christians, represented on the High Court. When it is remembered also that the appointment of district munsifs is not made by the Chief Justice or by any one or more judges, but is made at a meeting of the judges, he will see that the Government cannot well dictate to them, not only cannot dictate to them the policy, but cannot do more than point out what sentiments are entertained by this Honourable House."

"Now, Sir, my Friend is perfectly correct in asking that, so far as subordinate judges and district and sessions judges are concerned, it is quite open—subject of course to the relevancy of the debate on which you have ruled and to which ruling I bow—it is quite open to the Council to dissect the policy of the Government. Let me expound the policy. Now I have in my hand the latest list of district and sessions judges and subordinate judges. I find that Mr. K. S. Menon, Mr. Lobo, Mr. Narayanan Nayar and Mr. Zynuddin are among the permanent district judges. The other permanent district judges are Mr. Balasubramanya Ayyar, Mr. Viswanatha Sastri and Mr. Lakshmana Rao. So that among the permanent judges, speaking only of the Brahman and non-Brahman communities at the present moment, there are three permanent Brahman judges as against four non-Brahman or rather non-Brahman plus Muhammadan district judges. Let me also say this, that the Government definitely gave the permanent judgeship to Mr. T. V. Narayanan Nayar before Mr. R. Gopala Rao who had acted for a longer period than Narayanan Nayar. I do not want to discuss names any further. I only wish to point out that the Government and the High Court acting together are not swayed by communal feelings in this matter; and if, as is now and then sought to be said, the Government—meaning my three Colleagues and myself—are swayed by any particular communal or anti-communal feelings; they have not at least been translated into action.

12-30 P.m. "Let me go further and read the list of acting district and sessions judges at the present moment. There are (1) Mr. Fazuluddin Sahib, (2) Mr. Sundaram Chettiyar, (3) Mr. Venkatarama Ayya, (4) Mr. Anantha Narayana Ayyangar and (5) Mr. Govinda Menon. Can it be said that there is any bias towards one community or another? I submit that there is not. But it is undoubtedly a fact that there are amongst the subordinate judges a large proportion of them belonging to one community, and I for one cannot accept the doctrine that an efficient subordinate judge can be superseded for the purpose of satisfying a person who is not his superior or at least his equal. I shall not be a party to any system by which a person belonging to a particular community will be put above persons who are seniors and more efficient than himself simply because the former belongs to a particular community. I shall not subscribe and shall not be a party to any principle which it would be impossible for me to translate into action. Government will not, in the administration of justice or in conferring patronage relating to or pertaining to the administration of justice, be swayed by the feeling that a particular person belonging to a particular community should be put over his compeers who are far senior to him and not inefficient. I am afraid that neither the High Court nor the Government can accept such a proposition. I therefore oppose this motion."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—"I thank the hon. the Law Member for the conciliatory manner in which he started to reply me. I am sorry he said that he would not consider the cases of sub-judges."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"I did not say so. I said that the fact remained that there were many sub-judges a large proportion of whom belonged to the Brahman community and they were in turn promoted from sub-judgeships to district judgeships. There might be inequalities which might be considered wrong by hon. Members of this House. All that I was anxious to impress on the House was that promotion would normally be granted as in other services with strict advertence to merit plus seniority."

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR :—"I thank him for this conciliatory answer too, but the mistake lies in the initial recruitment of district munsifs. District munsifs are not recruited from various communities. We have got any number of sub-judges who want to go as district judges. I request the hon. the Law Member to see that district munsifs are recruited from various communities. Of the 49 district munsifs that were recruited recently there were only 19 belonging to the various communities such as Muhammadans, Indian Christians, non-Brahmans and Anglo-Indians and others. I only request the hon. the Law Member to interview the judges of the High Court and see that non-Brahmans are given adequate representation in the Judicial service. With these few words I withdraw my motion which is only a token motion."

The motion was by leave withdrawn.

Grant XII that Government be granted an additional sum of Rupees 32,000 for 'Pay of officers—Voted' under 24 (e)—Administration of Justice—Civil and Sessions Courts—ii. Mufassal Civil and Sessions Courts—Administration of Justice—Reserved was put and carried.

29th March 1926]

The amendment of Mr. Muhammad Ghouse Mian Sahib for a reduction of the above grant by Rs. 100 to request the Government to recommend to the High Court to frame rules for relieving the difficulties of official receivers under the Provincial Insolvency Act was ruled out of order by the hon. the President because it was not relevant to the item indicated in the demand.

Grant XXXI—Stationery and Printing—Transferred.

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"I beg to move—
'that Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 51,700 under Stationery and Printing—Transferred.'

"Sir, Stationery and Printing go together. At the end of the year the Superintendent of Stationery allocates to the Transferred and Reserved departments the necessary amount that should be brought under each head and owing to this adjustment it was found that there was a deficit of Rupees 51,700 on one side and it was proposed to be recouped from the other side. So it is only a matter of adjustment and the sum for which the sanction of the Council is sought for is proposed to be allocated under the Transferred head."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I beg to oppose this grant for this reason. I want to ask the hon. the Minister for Education to take into consideration the great delay in the publication of several administration reports of the Government, Civil Lists and other things."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Has the publication of the reports anything to do with this demand?"

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"This motion has nothing to do with the delay in publication of the Civil Lists. My hon. Friend for South Kanara must approach a different quarter for eliciting the explanation he desires to get."

The motion was put and carried and the grant was made.

Grant XXXII—Agency Tracts—Reserved.

* The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS :—"On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'that Government be granted an additional appropriation of Rs. 1,142 under Agency tracts—Reserved—41-R.g. Civil Works—Agency—Grants-in-aid—Recurring—Miscellaneous grants to local bodies'."

"Mr. President, this sum represents the remission of centage charges to the Polavaram District Board and is proposed in consideration of the backward nature of the tract and the inadequate funds of the board. The money was paid by the Board and the Government agreed to give back the money. A sum of Rs. 5,000 is being found by reappropriation and for the balance the Council is asked to give its sanction."

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. Mr. N. E. MARJORIBANKS :—" On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move

'that Government be granted an additional appropriation of Rs. 8,050 under Agency tracts—Reserved—32 R.b. Medical—Hospitals and dispensaries—iv—Grants to local bodies.'

"Sir, in February 1925 Government waived the contribution of Rupees 8,050 due to them by the Polavaram District Board on account of the pay of medical officers at the taluk headquarters for the years 1923-24 and 1924-25. As, however, the contribution had been already credited to Government it is proposed to refund this sum to the Polavaram District Board with the sanction of the Council."

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

Grant XII.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that the Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 5,600 under "Grant XII—Administration of Justice—Reserved" for the continuance of the warder guard system in the sub-jails in the Kurnool and Coimbatore districts during 1925-26.'

"Sir, I will explain the matter. The system of warder guards was tried as an experimental measure in place of police guards in order to protect sub-jail prisoners from police interference in the sub-jails of Coimbatore and Kurnool districts. After a few years' working, it was found that there were defects in the system and Mr. H. G. Stokes was requested to examine and report on the system. He recommended the abolition of the system and reversion to the old system of police guards on grounds of economy as well as efficiency.

"The warder guard system was not abolished from 1st March 1925 and orders were issued only in February 1926 directing its abolition and the reversion to the old system of police guards from 1st March 1926—vide G.O. No. 414, Law (General), dated 9th February 1926. Thus additional appropriation is necessary.

"I may say, Sir, that there will be a corresponding saving in the police grant as no specific provision was made for police guards in the current year's budget."

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

Grant XVII.

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" On the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 20,000 under 31-A. c. Education—University grants to non-Government Arts Colleges—Grant-in-aid—Educational—Voted—Teaching, for the payment of a teaching grant to the Madras Christian College in the year 1925-26.'

"Sir, the Director of Public Instruction forwarded to the Madras Government an application from the Madras Christian College authorities stating that their finances were in a very bad condition and unless a special grant was made it would not be possible for the college authorities to make both ends meet. The college authorities represented that there was a large deficit in their finances and all the possibilities of working on economic lines had been considered. Therefore it was found that there was an equitable case made out and that they deserved a special consideration from the Government considering their services in the cause of education. The institution deserves support. This grant is a special grant outside the Grant-in-Aid Code and it has to be made with the sanction of the Council."

[29th March 1926]

[Sir A. P. Patro]

The demand was put and carried and the grant was made.

VI

EXCESS GRANT FOR 1924-25.

Grant XXXIV—Stationery and Printing—Transferred.

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Sir, under rule 31 of the Madras Legislative Council Rules, I move that an excess grant of Rs. 27,695 be voted by the Council to regularize the expenditure incurred in the year 1924-25 in excess of the voted grant under Grant XXXIV—Stationery and Printing—Transferred. 12-45 P.M.

"Hon. Members will see that in paragraph 17 of the Report of the Public Accounts Committee very full explanation is given of the reasons which rendered it necessary to move this excess grant. In respect of the current year, hon. Members will observe, that many demands for additional grants are moved. If this procedure had been more fully understood, a similar motion would have been moved this time last year. But owing to the fact that under the procedure then in force in the office of the Superintendent of Stationery, the calculation of the actual value of the stores supplied on behalf of the Transferred departments were not made till the end of the year. The Superintendent of Stationery discovered on the 16th March last year that an additional grant was necessary. But the attention of the various departments had been drawn by the Finance Department to the necessity of sending in demands for supplemental grants to the Government before the 10th March. The Superintendent was under the impression that he was therefore too late to press the case. If he had informed us on the 16th March last year that he had discovered this defect, we could have rectified it by moving a demand for additional grant in the House at the end of March last year. A grant from the House is necessary now to regularize the expenditure and close the accounts for 1924-25. I therefore move this grant."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, I wish to make only one observation on this matter and that is this. Though the Superintendent of Stationery discovered this mistake on the 16th March just a week after the latest date for the proposals for additional allotment to reach the Government, one year has elapsed now before it has come before the House. I hope that the suggestion of the Public Accounts Committee of which my hon. Friend the Finance Member is the Chairman, to examine the accounts of the Stationery department and see whether a change in the system is necessary, will be acceded to."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Yes, Sir, I may say at once that the failure to notice the excess was due to the fact that the stores supplied to the Transferred departments were not valued as they were issued. The calculation was undertaken only at the end of year. The defect was discovered too late.

[Mr. T. E. Moir]

[29th March 1926]

In future, stores issued for the use of the Transferred departments are to be valued as they are issued, so that there will be no difficulty in checking month by month whether there is any prospect of the budget allotment being exceeded."

The hon. the President put the question to the House.

Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—"I have got an amendment* against my name."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"That is hardly relevant to the grant under discussion."

The demand was put to the House and carried; the grant was made.

VII

FURTHER DEMANDS FOR GRANTS FOR 1926-27.

Demand XXXVII—Administration of Justice.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that Government be granted an additional sum not exceeding Rs. 6,200 for the Administration of Justice.'

"This is to provide for the appointment of two Additional District Munsifs in the Ramnad district. One is at Paramakudi for eight months and another is at Devakotta for six months. From the point of litigation these are congested localities. The figures of arrears are 804 suits for Paramakudi and 487 suits for Devakotta."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Sir, I want to make a few remarks not by way of opposing this grant. My hon. Friend is aware that there is a large number of District Munsifs who have been acting for a number of years, say for four or five years and more and I hope my hon. Friend will see to it that they are confirmed very soon."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"That matter has been pointedly brought to the notice of the High Court and they are considering it."

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB:—"Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 6,200 for Administration of Justice be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"I wish to elicit information as to how many Muhammadans have been appointed as District Munsifs from 1916 and to suggest that Government should recommend to the High Court that more Muhammadans should be appointed as District Munsifs this year and the years to come."

* Mr. B. RAMACHANDRA REDDI:—

To reduce the allotment of Rs. 27,695 under "Stationery and Printing—Transferred" by Rs. 1.

(To ask for information as to what extent stationery of Indian manufacture is bought by the Government and especially from the Government factories; and to discuss the necessity of encouraging Indian industries by Government patronage.)

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"This particular motion is moved by the Government for the appointment of additional District Munsifs in the Ramnad district. Does the hon. Member suggest that Muhammadans should be appointed to these posts?"

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB:—"Yes, Sir."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"It is against policy for the Council to suggest the posting of officers to particular districts."

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB:—"If this motion of mine is carried, it will be possible for the Government to suggest to the High Court that more Muhammadans should be appointed as District Munsifs."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"This is a motion for the appointment of additional District Munsifs to a particular district. No hon. Member can suggest to Government to post particular District Munsifs to particular districts. I rule the motion out of order."

The motion of the hon. Member Mr. Manjappa Heggade* is also out of order because this motion of Government is in regard to the Ramnad District Court. Motions for reduction must be relevant to that motion. The hon. Member's motion is irrelevant to this particular motion of the Government. Does any other hon. Member wish to speak? (After a pause) I shall put the question to the House.

The demand was put to the House and carried; the grant was made.

Demand XXXVIII—Education—Transferred.

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that Government be granted an additional sum of Rs. 14,000 for Education—Transferred.'

"This amount is proposed to be granted to the University of Madras towards the establishment of a Research Institute for the advanced study of Vernaculars such as Tamil, Telugu, Kanarese and Urdu. On the recommendation of the Academic Council, the University found that such a scientific study of the Dravidian languages would be very useful to South India. A central institution is proposed to be established by the University and directed by persons well-qualified to conduct a scientific study of the vernaculars. It is known that the study of Sanskrit is concentrated in important colleges in the Presidency. Similarly Arabic also is concentrated in some of the most important Islamic Colleges. But in regard to the vernaculars there are well-versed pandits scattered all over the Presidency without any co-ordination of work amongst them. In order to bring them together and enable them to do research work the University proposes to establish a research institute for the scientific study of these vernaculars."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Sir, I wish to get information on two points from the hon. Minister. My hon. Friend said that

* Mr. D. MANJAPPA HEGGADE:—

To reduce the allotment of Rs. 27,695 under "Stationery and Printing—Transferred" by Rs. 1.

(To raise the question of the desirability of transferring District Munsifs of three years' standing in a place.)

[Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar]

well-qualified persons will be appointed for the scientific study of these languages. I should like to know what pay these officers who are to be appointed to these posts will get. If no definite information is available on that point, I should like to know at least approximately the pay that is proposed to be paid to them. I want also to know whether the pay that is to be paid to the teachers, readers, or the professors is the same for all the languages or is different for the different languages. The second point is this and it is a very important one from my point of view. My hon. Friend stated that the Dravidian languages that are to be developed are Tamil, Telugu, Kanarese and Urdu also. I was surprised that my hon. Friend did not refer to Malayalam at all. I do not know whether it is . . .

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"I do not know that such a mention is necessary at all. I need not have mentioned any language at all. When it is stated that all the Dravidian languages will be included it is patent that Malayalam also will be one of them."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"I would certainly have taken it in that light if the hon. Minister had stopped with saying, 'Dravidian languages' and did not go on to mention specifically Tamil, Telugu, Kanarese and Urdu. Urdu is not a Dravidian language, I understand. It is probably a slip."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"As regards the first point, Sir, I may say that there will be one Director of Dravidian vernaculars on Rs. 400, five readers one each for Tamil, Telugu, Kanarese and Malayalam and another for Urdu which is also taken up separately though it is not one of the Dravidian languages, and eight studentships, three for Tamil, three for Telugu, one for Malayalam and one for Kanarese. The University will also work out a scheme by which men well-versed in the different languages will be brought together in the Central Research Institute and asked to lecture on the Dravidian vernaculars."

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"Sir, I move

'the allotment of Rs. 14,000 be reduced . . .'"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"May I ask the hon. Minister whether the Dravidian languages include Urdu also?"

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"I used the word 'vernaculars' advisedly. It is one of the vernaculars of the province."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"I am afraid the hon. Member Mr. Ghouse Mian Sahib cannot move his motion.* This motion restricts itself to the provision for research in the Dravidian languages. As Government do not contemplate to include Urdu also in the Dravidian languages I do not think the hon. Member can move his motion. The hon. Member may oppose the motion if he likes."

* Mr. Muhammad Ghouse XXXVIII 14,000 100 (i) to emphasise on the Government Mian Sahib.

the desirability of providing and including Urdu, Persian and Arabic along with the study of Dravidian languages in the University Research Institute, and

(ii) to emphasise the abolition of the separation of the School Assistants from Deputy Inspector of schools and to equalise the ranks.

[29th March 1926]

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"The proposal originally submitted contained provision also for the study of Persian, Urdu and Arabic languages. But Government have not made provision now for these languages. I therefore want to move this motion."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"I am sorry the hon. Member cannot move his motion, but he can make a speech opposing the motion of the Government."

Mr. MUHAMMAD GHOUSE MIAN SAHIB :—"Inasmuch as the hon. Minister stated that the policy of the Government was to provide for the research study of Urdu also, I am not going to move this motion, Sir."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"I shall communicate the desire of the hon. Member to the authorities of the University. It is not a Government scheme; it is the scheme of the University which has to deal with it independently of the Government. I shall communicate the views of the hon. Member to the University."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Sir, may I enquire whether Kanarese includes also Tulu which is spoken by the majority of the Kanara people?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Is it a written language?"

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"It is written in Kanarese characters; it does not matter. For instance, English is not written in the English alphabet but it is written in the Roman alphabet. (Laughter.) It is not a defect. But while Kanarese itself is spoken only by a very small percentage of the people though it is the official language, a very large number of people speak the Tulu language in Kanara."

"As a matter of fact, Kanarese is spoken by only a very small percentage of people in South Kanara though it is the official vernacular. I would draw the attention of the House and of the hon. the Minister to the fact that Tulu plays an important part among the languages of South Kanara. I want to enquire whether Tulu will be included side by side with Kanarese . . ."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"The hon. Member from South Kanara, has just now informed the House that it is not a written language. Erukala is a dialect of the Telugu language. There are several dialects of the Telugu and Tamil languages. It is not possible to include all those dialects within the scope of the research."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Tulu also should be included . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"That is a matter for the University. The Government is only concerned with the provision of money for the University."

* The RAJA OF RAMNAD :—"May I know what the dialects are of the Tamil language? The hon. the Minister said the dialects of the Tamil language."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"Before we sanction the grant we want to know what the scope of the research work is. It may be for philological work, or for increase of literature or for cultivation of the language. The most backward languages play as much important part as the most advanced languages. I was told that Tulu was not a written language. In what sense? Tulu has got some literature at least, though not very large, and it is written in Kanarese or in some other characters. It is not a defect for a language to be written in another language. English language is not written in English alphabet. It is written in Roman alphabet. It might have been written with Greek characters also. We do not say that English is not a written language. Tulu has some literature and is spoken by the majority of the inhabitants in South Kanara"

[Mr. J. A. Saldanha]

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member would be more relevant on the floor of the Senate than on the floor of the Council. The Government are concerned with the grant of money for the advanced study of Dravidian languages."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"If the University does not place before the Council the scope of research, I oppose the grant. I have been taking an interest in the matter, attending the Oriental Congress and dealing with the philology of the languages, on which I have written certain articles. I would like to know what the University is going to do. The term 'advanced study of Dravidian languages' is indefinite. We have the linguistic survey of Dr. Grierson. It does not go into the literature of the languages. It goes into the philology of the languages. The Senate need not pursue"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"That is a question to be put to the University."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I will oppose the motion unless the Senate gives more information. Is the object of the University to teach the language or is it to teach the science, the history and origin of the languages and the relation of the languages? It has been said on the floor of this House that Telugu is an Aryan language. Every one knows that it is a Dravidian language. The University should employ professors who know something of the science of the languages. If that is the object of the University, we can grant the amount. If it is the cultivation of the languages it is done in the schools."

"One hon. Member said that Tulu was not a written language. If it is not a written language, it is not spoken by barbarians. I know that Dr. Caldwell has devoted much attention to Tulu, Kodugu and such other languages which have no written literature. In his survey, much attention is paid to the philology of the backward languages. We should pay as much attention to the backward languages as to the advanced languages. The cultivation and teaching of a language is different from a study of the science of a language. Let the University tell us what its object is. We should not be allowed to grope in the dark when we have to grant the money. We get it from the tax-payer and we are the custodians of that money. Are we to hand over the money because the University wants it? The hon. the Minister does not know the A, B, C of the science of languages. He said that Tulu was not a written language. Of course it is a very backward language. It is for that reason that I would include it among the languages in which research work should be undertaken. Tulu is a most interesting language. It is spoken by a very high class of people. I, for one, would object to this grant without the hon. the Minister enlightening us with something more reasonable and tangible rather than telling us that the money is wanted for research work and telling us anything about the nature of the research work."

* Mr. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE :—"I know more of the Tulu language than the hon. Member because it is my mother tongue. We speak Tulu in our homes. There is no literature in that language. It is not a written language."

29th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—"I wish to ask the hon. Member who has just spoken one or two questions"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The hon. Member cannot make two speeches. The hon. Member to whom the question will be put will have to make another speech."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—"Sir, after the most crushing reply given by the hon. Member Mr. Manjappa Heggade to Mr. Saldanha, there is very little for me to reply. We appreciate his enthusiasm for the Tulu language. But I must say that his acquaintance with the language is very poor indeed to enlighten this House. If he had known what was meant by the scientific study of the languages, he would not have been puzzled so much. When I used the words 'research institute' I expected the hon. Member to know that the objects he mentioned were included in the scope of the research. Otherwise, those words would have no meaning. The hon. Member might have taken some more trouble to understand the subject without attributing ignorance to others. We are accustomed to such display of ignorance whenever he speaks on any serious matter. I am sure that the House would not take his remarks seriously. Surely, the hon. Member's intentions are good. 'Scientific study' includes all the objects which the hon. Member referred to. The University has worked out the details of the scheme. It is quite unreasonable to say that the University has not worked out any details and that the Government have not considered them. The demand that is asked for is for the establishment of a research institute. Anybody with a little understanding can easily understand that the University, the Academic Council and the Syndicate have worked out the details of the scheme and that the Government have considered them. It should not be said that the scheme is unreasonable or not unworkable. I am sure that the hon. Member would now realize that the comparative study of philology was included within the scope of the scientific study of the languages. The hon. Member need not have confused himself over the subject."

(Mr. D. Manjappa Heggade rose to move his amendment.)

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The amendment of the hon. Member wants that a committee should be appointed by the Government. That is not relevant to the motion."

"The question is that the Government be granted a sum of Rs. 14,000 under Education (Transferred)."

The motion was put to the House and carried and the grant was made.

Demand XXXIX.

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—"Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move that the Government be granted a sum of Rs. 12,50,500 under Grants XXI and XXIX for Public Health and Vital Statistics and for Civil Works—Grants to local bodies.

"Sir, in the current year's budget a provision of 6½ lakhs has been made for the improvement of village roads and 6½ lakhs for rural water-supply schemes. As the grants were actually distributed to the local bodies late in the year, the amount that has been spent by them till now is only Rs. 18,299

[The Raja of Panagal]

for water-supply schemes and Rs. 33,872 for the improvement of roads. A further expenditure amounting to Rs. 50,000 may be incurred in the current year. It is proposed to give the unspent balance amounting to Rs. 11,48,000 plus an additional amount of Rs. 1,02,000 to the local bodies.

1-16 P.m. "It is proposed, Sir, that the local boards should get these grants, and if in case they show progress in the programme of works, I have the authority of my hon. Colleague, the Finance Member, to say that further grants will be given about June."

* Mr. K. Chavadi SUBRAMANIA PILLAI :—" Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move

'that the grant of Rs. 12,50,000 under Demand No. XXXIX provided for grants to local bodies for rural water-supply and village roads be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"My object in moving this motion is this: I wish to invite the attention of the Government to the undoubted fact that any responsible Government is expected to do as much good as possible to the majority of their subjects who are living in rural areas. It is therefore highly necessary that the needs of the village population should be attended to in very great earnest. The present condition of the villages in some rural areas is hopelessly bad. It is our duty to keep communications in good condition. The people in very many villages have no roads and communications to go to their adjacent villages. The sanitation is very bad in some villages owing to want of proper water-supply. On the whole, many villages suffer very much for want of public health and convenience though the masses in rural areas have been given political powers to vote and select representatives to all councils. Further, the lion's share of the Government revenue is from rural areas and it is therefore indispensably necessary that the condition of the village life should be improved as much as possible. The special attention of the Government is also drawn to the following facts. So far as Tinnevely district is concerned, in certain portions of the rural areas, there are no branch roads to some villages from the trunk roads or other main roads and consequently the communications are retarded. The manures and foodstuffs cannot easily be taken to their villages. In some villages, the people are not able to use manure at all to their fields for want of communications with the result that there will be no proper yield in their fields. The people suffer very much and depend solely on their adjacent villages for food-stuffs and the consequence is that the prices of food grains are increasing and famine will result from it. In some portions of the rural areas, there are no good roads to the villages either from the trunk roads or from other main roads. This causes much inconvenience to the people of those villages who have to go in a roundabout way to the main roads from their villages by cart-tracts. The funds of the district boards and taluk boards are not sufficient to meet the requirements of the people.

"During fasli 1333 (1st July 1923 to 30th June 1924) very heavy rains fell in Tinnevely district about December 1923, when the Tambaraparan river rose in heavy floods. There were breaches in several tanks and there were considerable damages to the fields and roads. During 1925 also there was heavy rain and some portions of the roads in the rural areas were affected very much. The chief portions of the main roads affected by the breaches are above and below Srivaikuntam and Marudur anicuts. Almost all the portions of the Tinnevely-Tiruchendur road were washed away. The road from Tinnevely to Sankaranayanarkoil was also very much damaged by the breaches in the Chittar river and many other roads had also the same fate. These damaged portions of the roads were temporarily repaired by the local boards. To bring all of them to their original condition means spending lot of money which the taluk boards or the district boards are not at present able to do for want of funds. These roads as well as the branch roads in rural areas should be repaired permanently. The road leading to Trivandrum high road from Palamcottah was alone repaired by the district board during His Excellency's visit. The other roads were not properly repaired by them for want of funds. There should be a grant of at least 3 lakhs of rupees to repair these roads. The hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government is kindly requested to devote his personal attention to this branch of work and place necessary funds at the disposal of the local boards and see that the existing trunk roads and other main roads and the roads in rural areas are completely repaired at Government cost, as the local boards are not now in a position to do the work themselves or at least to contribute anything for it.

"Now, coming to water-supply in rural areas, the people require wells in many villages. There are now drinking water wells in some villages which are not sufficient to meet the requirements of the people of those villages. In many villages, I have personally seen the people bathing and washing their clothes in dirty water stagnating in large pits by rains and they also sometimes use that useless water for drinking purposes. This water is full of germs and there is no wonder they are attacked by various epidemic diseases. Improvements on these lines are indispensable and the hon. Minister is required to allot liberal grants for sinking wells in all the villages which require them or for opening tube wells at least in their places with a view to facilitate the supply of good drinking water to the villages in the rural areas. The grant for rural water-supply and village sanitation should be recurring.

"As regards the distribution of grants to local bodies, I would request the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government to take into account the resources of the districts as well as their needs. All the district boards and taluk boards are not equally rich. There are some poor boards like the Tinnevely Board which should be treated in a fairer way. I am at a loss to know the principles adopted by Government in distributing grants to local bodies. What I would like to suggest is that an advisory committee consisting of some official and non-official members of the Council should be appointed for distribution of grants to the local bodies. They should deeply consider the financial status of all the local bodies in this Presidency, their resources and needs and distribute grants in proportion to the present condition of the local bodies. The hon. the Minister is kindly requested to do the needful."

Mr. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE :—" Sir, I beg to move

'that the allotment of Rs. 12,50,000 for additional grants to local bodies for rural water-supply and village roads be reduced by Rs. 100.'

"The scheme to grant aid to rural dispensaries has gone far, no doubt, to bring medical aid to the doors of the people in rural areas; but . . ."

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" May I point out, Sir, that this motion is out of order because the grants asked for are not connected with the establishment or the introduction of rural dispensaries, but relate to public health and vital statistics and to village communications."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" This grant is for public health and vital statistics. It does not include rural dispensaries."

Mr. D. MANJAYYA HEGGADE :—" It does include, Sir ?"

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" No. This is only about village water-supply schemes ; but the question is . . ."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I am afraid I must rule it out of order ; as also Mr. Raghuchandra Ballal's motion."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I request the hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government to give us some idea of the distribution of the grants among the different districts, to give us, if he has prepared, a statement of the grants for each district, showing how the total was come to ?"

Mr. T. M. NARAYANASWAMI PILLAI :—" May I know, Sir, the considerations or principles which have influenced the distribution of these grants ?"

* The hon. the RAJA OF PANAGAL :—" Sir, the Government quite realize the necessity for improving the village communications and village water-supply schemes. They also realize that it is high time that something should be done to give greater facilities for water-supply in the rural areas. It is with this object in view that the Government provided for these grants in the current year and it is also with the same object that they propose to have this grant repeated for the next year. Properly speaking, the improvement of village communications and village water-supply forms the concern of local boards. However, as the hon. Member from Tinnevely has pointed out, the financial position of most local boards is not as satisfactory as it should be, and the Government are of opinion that they should encourage them by giving these grants. Sir, the hon. Members from South Kanara and Trichinopoly have asked whether there are any principles in making these grants. I have only to tell them that, generally speaking, each taluk board is given Rs. 10,000—Rs. 5,000 for water-supply schemes and Rs. 5,000 for village communications. Normally local boards are expected to supplement an equivalent amount and have the schemes executed. As I have already stated, in case these local boards carry out pending schemes and are in need of more funds, the Government will consider such cases and give them further grants about June this year."

The demand was put to the House and carried and the grant was made.

Demand XL—Agriculture.

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I beg to move 'that Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 79,500 under Agriculture.'

"This amount was provided in the current year's budget for the acquisition of land required for a paddy-breeding station in Malabar. The acquisition proceedings were expected to be finished before the close of this year, but it is now found that they will not be closed until some time in the beginning of the next year. Hence, I propose to surrender this amount this year and bring in the further demand for the next year."

[29th March 1926]

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, before the question is voted upon, I should like to know from the hon. the Development Minister in what respects paddy cultivation in that particular area is suffering, and how the new station he proposes to establish there is calculated to improve the yield. My point is this, Sir. If the cultivation there is being carried on in the very best possible way and if there is not very much to teach the cultivators, then it may not be worth while to establish a station there and spend large amounts of money on that. I find, Sir, that Mr. Krishnan Nayar wants to reply to me ; but I would rather prefer the hon. the Development Minister, who presumably knows more about it than even my friend, to do it."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, of course the hon. the Development Minister will reply to my friend ; and as he quite rightly pointed out, the Development Minister knows and is expected to know very much more than a Member from Malabar ; but as a Member coming from Malabar, I may give some particulars for the information of my friend. In the first place, Sir, the origin of this farm arose from the frequent reports of the head of the Agricultural Department. The Director of Agriculture reported for many years, year after year, that the whole of the quantity of paddy produced in Malabar was not sufficient for the consumption of the people of Malabar for even six months. There is an idea abroad, Sir, that Malabar is a large rice producing country and that it is a fertile land. No doubt it has a fertile soil and it is a rice producing district in the Presidency ; but it has been shown by statistics that the whole quantity of paddy produced in one year in Malabar is not sufficient for the consumption of the people of the district even for six months. So, the Director was stating that it was possible with improved methods of paddy cultivation and adoption of improved seeds that the existing production could be increased considerably. Therefore he recommended, as I submitted already, in his reports year after year that a paddy farm should be established somewhere in South Malabar which has more paddy cultivation than North Malabar. Moreover, Lord Pentland while he was Governor of this Presidency visited Taliparamba and made an endorsement in the visitors' book supporting the recommendation of the department. Subsequently, a motion was moved in this Council recommending to the Government the establishment of a paddy farm in South Malabar and that motion, I believe, was carried without any opposition. I do not remember whether my friend the Member for Bellary took part in the debate.

"Knowing as I do the great interest that he takes in the welfare of the people, particularly of the agricultural population of the Presidency, it is very likely that he would have taken part in the discussion on this subject. And it was in accordance with a vote of this Council that it was resolved that a paddy farm should be opened in Malabar. It is in accordance with the resolution of this Council that the hon. the Minister for Development came forward with a demand last year for money. As the hon. Minister has stated, acquisition proceedings are not expected to be over during the current year, and therefore it is proposed to surrender this amount."

[Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar]

"In this connexion I have one word to say against the hon. the Development Minister. And that is this. The question came before the Agricultural Advisory Committee in August last and some members including myself, and my hon. Friend Mr. Tampan made certain suggestions with reference to the farm. The hon. Minister then said that if the suggestions were adopted, the money could not be spent in the current year and that he wanted to spend the money in August. He said that he could not agree to the suggestions on that ground. I am now surprised that though all the months from August to December have passed the hon. Minister was not able to spend the money. Now that the hon. Minister comes forward with a demand for the next year, I do not oppose it."

* The hon. Diwan Bahadur Sir T. N. SIVAGNANAM PILLAI :—" Sir, my hon. Friend, Mr. Krishnan Nayar, has already referred to the various points which I should myself have referred to. As he comes from the Malabar district, he knows all that could be said about it. I will only add that among the several districts in the Presidency, Tanjore comes first as a big paddy producing district, next comes Kistna and the third is Malabar. It is on that account that Malabar was chosen. I request that the grant may be passed."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" May I have some idea about the initial cost and the recurring expenditure? "

The demand was put and carried and the grant made.

Demand XLI.

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Sir, I move

'that the Government be granted a sum not exceeding Rs. 2,73,100 under Demand XLI.'

"This is purely a book transfer. The necessity for this demand arises from this fact, namely, that owing to a mistake in the construction of section 41 of the Indian Civil Service Act, various appointments including the 'listed' posts which were held by Provincial Civil Service officers were treated as non-voted. The departments failed to observe that such classifications depended on the framing of rules under that clause and section of the Civil Services Act and that those rules had not yet been framed. Accordingly such transfer of these posts from voted to non-voted cannot take place until the rules are promulgated and they come into force. In the meantime the provision in the budget for the coming year must be shown under the 'voted' and not under the 'non-voted' head. It will be necessary therefore in the final edition of the budget to transfer the amount shown under these different grants from the 'non-voted' to the 'voted' head. I move therefore that the demand be granted."

The demand was put and carried and the grant made.

Demand XLII.

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" Sir, on the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor, I move

'that the Government be granted a sum of Rs. 3,500 for additional staff in the Secretariat on account of the elections.'

The demand was put and carried and the grant made.

The House rose for lunch.

DISCUSSION ON THE REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE.

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Mr. President, Sir, I move

'that the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Audit and Appropriation Reports on the accounts of the Government of Madras for 1924-25 be taken into consideration.'"

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" I second it."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Sir, I wish to make some observations on this report, and firstly I shall deal with the financial state of the Presidency as disclosed in the report itself. It seems to me, Sir, that the financial outlook is not very bright. As has been shown in the report—figures are given in the report till last year—ever since the introduction of the Reforms the budgets in this Presidency have been deficit budgets, and we have seen also in the recent budget discussion that for the year which is now to close, namely, 1925-26, and for the year which is about to commence, namely, 1926-27, the prospects are also gloomy. They are also deficit budgets. For the next year, 1926-27, there is a deficit of about Rs. 76 lakhs and odd which has been reduced to about Rs. 26 lakhs by the remission of a portion of our contributions, to the central coffers, to the extent of about Rs. 57 lakhs. The deficits are not of very small figures. For instance, in 1921-22 it was about Rs. 108 lakhs; the next year, 1922-23, it was about Rs. 17 lakhs and odd; in the next year, 1923-24, it was Rs. 9 lakhs and odd; in 1924-25, that is, the year with which the report deals, the deficit was Rs. 29 lakhs and odd; and for the year that is about to commence, namely, 1926-27, the deficit is about Rs. 76 lakhs, or in one sense Rs. 26 lakhs and odd. Looking to our income, it does not seem to be very elastic. Practically it seems to me that we have reached more or less the maximum of the revenue that we may expect for the future. For, the most important of the items that yield revenue are these three items, Land Revenue, Excise and Stamps. The income under these three items together, under Land Revenue, Excise and Stamps, constitutes a very large portion, that is, about 88 per cent or 89 per cent of our total revenue of Rs. 16 crores. And the income under these three heads is, I submit, quite inelastic. For the land revenue has been steadily rising; from about Rs. 5 crores or so about 25 years ago, it has come to more or less the maximum figure that we can expect."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I am sorry to interrupt the hon. Member, but he seems to be making a speech on the budget."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" May I submit that these matters are contained and are dealt with in this report? "

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" That may be so. Those are only incidental to the report. The Committee on Public Accounts in coming to its decisions in regard to the Audit and Appropriation reports on the accounts of the Government for the year 1924-25 have necessarily to review the finances of the Presidency. I think any speech on the report of the Public Accounts Committee ought to confine itself to the remarks of the Committee in regard to the audit and appropriation in the finance of that year. Merely because the report mentions or gives a statement reviewing the finances of the Presidency, I do not think it is open to hon. Members to make another budget speech on the finances of the Presidency."

[The President]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" As a matter of fact, the report under consideration, if it is bereft of the remarks of the Accountant-General and also of the Committee dealing with these budget items, can be reduced to one page or two pages. Practically it is the Accountant-General that reviews. It is the Accountant-General that submits this appropriation report to the Committee. And it is the Committee that has considered it and passed it. So that practically the observations of the Accountant-General in this appropriation and audit report cover, may I say, more than three-fourths of the report, and it is upon this basis, upon the report of the Accountant-General that the Committee have come to their conclusions, and in the speeches on this report we naturally have to refer to the conclusions of the Committee, which themselves are based upon the Accountant-General's report; and it is not possible to refer to the conclusions of the Committee or agree with them or differ from them or in any way criticize them, adversely or favourably, without reference to the basis on which they themselves based their conclusions. And may I say that in the past year and in the year before last the discussion on the report of the Public Accounts Committee ranged over a very wide ground? If you rule that I should not make a speech, I shall sit down."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" My main object in calling the attention of the hon. Member to the point that I raised was to make the discussion on the report real, namely, to confine all remarks to the observations made by the Committee in regard to audit and appropriation. If speeches on the general financial position of the country were relevant, we should be once more inaugurating a general budget discussion, I may also point out that the Committee on Public Accounts has nothing to do with either the levying of taxation or with its expenditure. What the Committee is concerned with is to see that money is spent according to the decisions of the Council. If the hon. Member wants to use his statements in regard to the general financial position as just a preface or introduction to his remarks on the observations made by the Public Accounts Committee, I would certainly allow him to do so. But if he is taking this opportunity to review the general financial situation of the country, I must enter a caveat against that procedure."

p.m.

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Whether I agree with you or not, of course I am bound by your ruling. But before you finally give your ruling, may I submit this, Sir? The whole report of the Committee itself is based upon the observations of the Accountant-General and he himself deals with the finances of the Presidency. In fact, it is referred to in this report and the report contains very large extracts from his report on appropriation. He not only refers to the particular financial year but he refers to the finances of the previous years and makes observations on the finances of those years. My point is this. As I began, the financial outlook of the Presidency is not very good and it is necessary for us to take particular care as to how we handle this. That is the point on which I was about to speak. The Council discussed at length the whole question last year and the year before last. So that with your leave I shall proceed to develop the first point, viz., that land revenue, the most important item of revenue which we have, has come to the end of its resources and that practically we have reached the maximum. With reference to excise, as the hon. the Finance Member himself stated we have reached the maximum, and it seems to me that having regard to the various activities of the public outside the Council and of the Members within the Council and the movement and activities of the temperance reformers, it is not possible to have a higher figure than that which we have already had. As the figures show we have reached the maximum that we can have and the hon. the Finance Member has expressed the same view. Then with regard to stamps—which is one of the three items which go to make up 88 per cent of our revenues—as a matter of fact the rate was enhanced in 1922 and since then it has risen to an extent of 55 lakhs. A similar amount is also provided now and we cannot get more than that. On the other hand our expenditure seems to me to be increasing steadily. With reference to the General Administration, I shall not give the figures but shall go on making my observations as the figures are in the appropriation reports. With reference to General Administration, the Administration of Police and the Administration of Justice there is a steady increase and it is not likely to decrease."

29th March 1926]

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" On a point of order, Mr. President. The probable expenditures are not in this report. The hon. Member is comparing the expenditure in 1924-25 with the expenditure for the current year and the expenditure of future years. That is a matter which is entirely beyond the scope of the report which is now before the House. When the report of the coming year comes before the House it may be permissible to refer to the fact that such and such increase has been made in the current year compared with past years. But I would ask your ruling, Sir, as to whether it is permissible on this report to deal with figures with which this report has no concern whatsoever. Our appropriation and audit reports deal entirely with and are confined exclusively to the accounts of 1924-25. They have nothing to do with the accounts of the current year, still less with the accounts of the coming year."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" The observations that I have made stand good, thoroughly good, even if reference to the current year and the next year is made."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" On a point of order, Sir. I was not questioning the correctness or the accuracy. I was merely questioning the relevancy."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" Even so far as relevancy is concerned, even if I omit the reference to future years, all that I have submitted for the past years will go a great way in strengthening my case. I shall take the standard set up by my hon. Friend and quote the observations with regard to the years 1921-22, 1922-23 and 1923-24. With reference to all these three years the report deals exhaustively. Reference is made there to past years and I take it that my friend does not object to past years. If even these are omitted, there is nothing in the report. So that it seems to me that in 1924-25 we have reached the maximum of our revenues. On the other hand our expenditure is steadily increasing. That observation holds good for 1924-25 and past years."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" But my objection has not yet been met by the hon. Member. What has the Public Accounts Committee to do with the income and expenditure which has been sanctioned by the whole Council?"

[29th March 1926]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"The Accountant-General has dealt with the subject."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"The Accountant-General has still less jurisdiction over the finances of the Presidency. The sanctioning of the income and expenditure is a power which rests with the Council. What the Accountant-General and the Council has to see is that the expenditure authorized by the Council is properly spent by Government. The hon. Member should confine himself to the remarks of the Public Accounts Committee."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"With reference to my observations I submit this. The duty, the scope and the function of the Accountant-General is to deal with the appropriation. How can anybody deal with appropriation except by dealing with the figures, figures of income and expenditure? How can that be done?"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"If the hon. Member referred to income and expenditure, I will have no quarrel. He is raising the whole question of policy with which neither the Public Accounts Committee nor the Accountant-General has anything to do."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"The Accountant-General is an expert. He has dealt with the income and expenditure in detail."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"He can do it in so far as that has been sanctioned by the Legislative Council."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Yes, in dealing with the sanction he says this should be done. If it is done otherwise, these will be the dangers. That is the way in which the Accountant-General and the Public Accounts Committee have proceeded. It is with inconvenience to me that I am speaking. If discussion is not wanted, I will be too glad to resume my seat."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"My business is to see that the discussion is relevant. It is the report of the Public Accounts Committee that is before the House and not the general financial policy of the Presidency."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"At page 4 of this report the Committee begins a quotation from the Accountant-General's report. The report itself says: 'The Accountant-General reviews the finances of the Presidency in paragraphs 24 to 39 of his appropriation report which are reproduced below. Then the extracts are reproduced.'"

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Finances as settled by this Council."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Exactly, Sir, the appropriation report has to deal with the finances as settled by the Council. The Accountant-General deals with the appropriation report with reference to the finances as settled by the Council. So that if either in the report of the Accountant-General or in the report of the Accounts Committee of this Council no reference can be made to the appropriations and to the grants that have been sanctioned in the Council, discussion then becomes a nullity and an unreality. As I said Accountant-General's observations are quoted in pages 4 to 11 with reference to these points. If the Accountant-General cannot deal with these things how can he deal with the finances of the Presidency? In his appropriation report that is what he has done. If that is taken away there is nothing practically in the appropriation report. Practically the whole of the appropriation report is a review of the finances of the Presidency. That is what the Committee has discussed and recommended. That is what is reproduced from paragraphs 24 to 39. The Committee further says:

29th March 1926]

"The Committee endorses the opinions expressed by the Accountant-General at the end of paragraphs 35 and 38 of his report and trusts that the Government will see that the resources of the Presidency are not frittered away by the expenditure of capital upon unproductive purposes."

"What is this except commenting upon the appropriation of this Council? I have no desire even to seem to differ from your ruling. All that I would submit is this. If we are permitted neither in the Public Accounts Committee nor in the report of the Accountant-General, to refer to the question of general finances."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"My objection was only to raising the question of financial policy of Government and the Council. The hon. Member is certainly competent to review the remarks of the Accountant-General or of the Committee in reference to the appropriation of the expenditure. He is quite competent to do that. But he cannot raise general questions of financial policy."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"It is with reference to that that I wish to draw your attention. The Committee endorses the opinion of the Accountant-General at the end of paragraphs 35 and 38 of his report and trusts that the Government will see that the resources of the Presidency are not frittered away by the expenditure of capital upon unproductive purposes."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—"Remarks on the appropriation of expenditure are quite legitimate."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"No, it is not with the appropriation that the Accountant-General makes the remark. He says that the Government should see that the resources of the Presidency are not frittered away. It is not with reference to the resources of the Presidency alone. He trusts that the Government will insist upon all heads of offices exercising such control as to ensure that the spirit of financial rules is rigidly applied and to follow the principle that no financial rule should by being vaguely worded constitute a financial danger and invite laxity in interpretation. So that I was submitting that our expenditure on all these important subjects, General Administration, Administration of Police, Jails and other heads is rapidly increasing and in the words of the Accountant-General it is necessary that we should take very great care to see that the finances of the Presidency are not frittered away. The commitments that we have made are very large. With reference to the Andhra University Act we have committed ourselves to fifty lakhs."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—"What has the Andhra University which 3 p.m. is provided for in the budget of 1925-26 got to do with the accounts of the year 1924-25?"

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"I shall answer in the words of the Accountant-General. He refers to this identical aspect, and my hon. Friend, as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, did not say that the Accountant-General went out of his way and ought not to have made those remarks, because I do not see any remarks to that effect in this report of the Public Accounts Committee. In paragraph 39 of the Appropriation Report, the Accountant-General says: 'Government have roughly estimated the cost of the proposed Andhra University at Rs. 50 lakhs non-recurring and at about Rs. 1½ lakhs net recurring. The question of the contribution from public revenues to the cost is not yet ripe for decision, and so on; so that if my hon. Friend thought that the contribution to the Andhra University has no place in a discussion on appropriations relating to finance, he ought to have found fault with the Accountant-General."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR:—"I said in relation to the finances of the year 1924-25."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"It was with reference to the finances of the year 1924-25 that the Accountant-General made those remarks, and not with reference to any other year, and my hon. Friend, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, himself an expert on matters of finance."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR:—"May I explain that this report was not dealt with in the Finance Committee?"

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"My hon. Friend certainly should not take advantage of a slip. I did not mean the Finance Committee. Probably he regards it as an advantage gained against me. What I meant was the Public Accounts Committee. What I was saying was that he himself an expert in matters of finance, as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, did not find fault with the report of the Accountant-General in dealing with this matter in his appropriation report. But for these interruptions, I would have finished my speech by this time. What I was going to submit was that, with reference to various matters, not only regarding Andhra University—I referred only to this particular matter in the course of my observations—but also education and grants to local bodies the Accountant-General has made his remarks. He says in fact that a very large amount amounting to about 9 per cent of our total finances is given to local bodies to assist them in the matter of water-supply, sanitation, etc."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Were they not all made under the authority of the Council?"

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR:—"These come under the Local Self-Government Department and these accounts are audited by the Local Fund Audit."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"As a matter of fact, they are made under the authority of this Council. In fact, if they were not made by this Council, no observations could be made on them. Here again, I shall quote from the Accountant-General's report which deals with appropriations, and the Accountant-General has nothing to do except with appropriations. He says in paragraph 33 of his report: 'Nearly 9 per cent of the revenues are disposed of in this manner.' In fact, this is one among many items, so that what I wish to submit is that a large portion of our finance is spent on local bodies. Again elementary education, public buildings and communications and other things are also referred to in his report. They are no doubt necessary for the convenience of the people and progress of the country. But we must cut our coat according to the cloth. In addition to these, we have large commitments. There is reference also in the Accountant-General's report that we have committed ourselves very largely to heavy loan transactions with reference, for instance, to the Pykara Electric scheme, where the commitment amounts to nearly Rs. 200 lakhs—the exact figure is Rs. 193 lakhs. Again, with reference to the Cauvery-Mettur project we have committed ourselves to Rs. 6 crores, and it may come to very much more than Rs. 6 crores, and the Polavaram Island project of Rs. 18½ lakhs is also referred to by the Accountant-General. There are so many other schemes. All these things are rapidly increasing, and there is our loan fund also referred to in the Budget. I shall not refer to what took place about it at the budget discussion. I believe it comes to Rs. 1,200 lakhs. A portion of it, I know, is not repayable, and on another portion we shall be able to realize interest from those to whom we have ourselves lent. But we have to pay interest on the whole of this amount and then we have to pay back also a portion, Rs. 9 lakhs a year, so that with reference to the payment of interest on the total loan account and a part of the debt itself we have to spend a very large sum. I am not shutting my eyes to a possible answer to this question, namely, that the Pykara and the Mettur projects are expected to bring in large amounts as profits in future. They may be, but they are speculations. It may be that all our speculations, calculations and suppositions may not be realized. We do not know when they will be realized, so that it is only a matter for the future. So far as the present is concerned, what I submit is that the financial position of the Government—I do not say it must cause a feeling of despair because there are silver linings in the cloud—must make us anxious and careful in dealing with all these schemes, and it looks rather gloomy. I shall not dwell more upon this, though I wanted to say very much more, having regard though not actually to your ruling which I shall respect but to your idea on the matter.

"Another matter that I wish to refer to is this: as the Finance report shows, various departments, not only one department, seem to be remiss in the matter of spending all the amounts that are actually entrusted to them. For instance, I find in the year under review a large amount of Rs. 63 lakhs and odd out of the grants made by this Council was not actually spent by the departments concerned, and in this matter not only one department but many departments are at fault. The various departments which have not spent the whole of the amount that was allotted to them, and the amounts that were actually spent by them are all given at page 19 of this report of the Public Accounts Committee. The Revenue Department, the Excise Department and almost all other departments are guilty in this respect, and the total amount unspent in the year under report is Rs. 63 lakhs. I submit that my hon. Friend the Finance Member should pull up these departments and make them spend as much as possible, spend legitimately and satisfactorily, the whole amount that is allotted to them, the effect of which will be to increase the progress of the country.

"Then, with reference to departmental control itself over the expenditure what we find in this: we find that the heads of departments have some times no accurate knowledge of the actual amounts which are appropriated by the Council and other competent authorities. In most of these cases they are non-voted. Some heads of departments do not know the exact amounts. This may lead to serious consequences. It is not only one department that is guilty of this. They are referred to at some length in some portions of the report of the Accountant-General. For instance, the Chief Conservator and the Department of Education."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"What about the Education Department?"

[29th March 1926]

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" My hon. Friend cannot say he does not err. If he errs at all it is with many other departments."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" We do not want to err."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I am sure my hon. Friend does not want to err. As a matter of fact, none of us want to err. But in spite of that we very often do err, and when we do err, others have to point it out."

* The hon. Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO :—" With regard to the point about which the hon. Member was speaking, page 19 of the report says that under 'XVIII. Education' there has been saving of only Rs. 9,950 out of a Budget of Rs. 1½ crores."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I have finished that point already. What I am now at is this: that some of those departmental heads have no idea of the actual amounts allotted to them, and consequently they spend over their departments' amounts without any adequate idea of how much they are to spend."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" I may ask the hon. Member one question in connexion with his remark that the heads of departments do not know the amounts that have been placed at their disposal. I should like him to point out those departments."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" At page 24 of the Public Accounts Committee report we find: 'The Chief Conservator of Forests reported that the final appropriation under "Conservancy and Works" according to his figures was Rs. 16,86,579 while the correct figure was Rs. 16,96,860.' There is a difference of about Rs. 10,000. With reference to other matters, other departments are referred to in paragraph 76 of the Accountant-General's report, such as the Director of Public Instruction and the Commissioner for Government Examinations. My point is this: very often there is a difference between the figures both of expenditure and of appropriations as given by departmental heads, and the corresponding figures for those identical items as shown in the books of the Accountant-General. There will be no danger if the departmental head is under the impression that he has only one lakh whereas he really has more than one lakh; if he thus spends less, the balance will accrue to the finances. But if the impression happens to be otherwise, namely, that he has Rs. 1½ lakhs while he has only one lakh of rupees it may lead to serious consequences. I find that the Accountant-General has referred to these, and I find also that the Government has found out the importance of this, and they have directed that hereafter there should be monthly reconciliation both of expenditure and of appropriation of the amounts spent by the heads of departments and the amounts entered in the Accountant-General's books. I find also that the Government have passed an order by which what is called departmental control is introduced with effect from 1st April 1925 in reference to departments excepting Public Works and Forest departments. With reference to these departments a scheme of departmental supervision has been introduced with effect from 1st April 1926, and I echo the observations of the Public Accounts Committee that hereafter at least, with reference to future years at all events, by reason of the orders the Government have passed, there will be improvement."

29th March 1926] [Mr. M. Krishnan Nayar]

"Then I wish to make some observations regarding certain institutions with reference to which the system of commercial accounts has been introduced by the Government. For instance, with reference to the Russellkonda Mill and with reference to many other institutions, the Government have introduced a system of commercial accounts. The Accountant-General's observations commence from paragraph 56 of the report and here and there the Committee make their observations. Now the Russellkonda Saw Mill is a thing in which my hon. Friend, the Home Member, is particularly interested. What happened with reference to this saw mill was this. The Accountant-General deals with it in pages 65 and 66 and the Committee also have made certain observations. The scheme with reference to this saw mill was disallowed by this Council—I believe it was in 1921. It was restored by the certification of His Excellency Lord Willingdon, the then Governor. It was under such auspices that the scheme was inaugurated and this mill unfortunately has been working at a loss all along. There was not a single year in which the scheme brought in any profit. For instance, the loss incurred during the last three years, i.e., up to 1923-24 is Rs. 12,475 and in this amount is not included interest on capital amount. If we add the interest, it comes to Rs. 88,000 and odd. The result has been that the mill has not been working since April 1925. The matter came up before the Forest Advisory Committee. I understand that they have said that if Government will give the mill timber at a particular rate, for a period of six months, the mill may work, and at the end of six months the position will be examined again, and, if the Government think that it is undesirable and unnecessary to continue it further, the whole thing will be turned down. I shall leave the matter there."

"With reference to the Chaliyam cannery, we have heard a great deal about it. The Accountant-General refers to it, as also the Committee. We have heard a great deal at question time about the Chaliyam factory. It was stated that preserved mackerel and other kinds of fish were accumulating in tins and that fish preserved becomes better, the longer it is kept. On the other hand we see that the authorities have ordered the destruction of some of these and the value of these tins is lost. I hope my hon. Friend, the Development Minister, will look into the matter and close the whole establishment. As a matter of fact, this concern has always been ending in loss. For instance, during 1924-25, the year under report, 10,857 tins were ordered to be written off."

"Then the Mount Stuart Forest scheme. I have not much to say against it. I find it has been procuring profits, though in the particular year under report it has not been so satisfactory. The net result in 1924-25 was a loss of Rs. 1,800. The accounts are not ready for 1925-26. But the scheme has been on the whole procuring profit."

"With reference to the Nilambur Forest scheme, I am very glad to see that it has always brought profit; it has never ended in loss."

"With reference to Government Cinchona plantations, I find profit in the years before 1925-26 on an average of 3 lakhs. In one year, it was 4 lakhs; in 1921-22, it was nearly Rs. 3,97,000; in 1922-23, it was Rs. 3,83,000. In the next year 1923-24, it was very nearly three lakhs. For the year 1924-25 we have not got the figure. With reference to this we heard a great deal during the budget discussion. I hope my hon. Friend, the Home Member, will see the desirability of distributing quinine on a larger scale and at a much cheaper rate.

"Then, I shall refer to Chenai Nair forest exploitation. This has not been actually brought under commercial account. The department itself is dealing with it. This scheme was introduced in 1919 and it has always been working at a loss, and it never brought any profit at all. For instance, the accounts up to 31st March 1922 disclose a loss of more than 1 lakh. And then, next year 1922-23 shows a further loss of nearly Rs. 66,000. Then again in 1923-24, there is a further loss of more than 1 lakh. And last year, a costly mill has been installed, and a costly establishment of officers drawing large amounts of pay have been employed in the mill. Let us hope that it will not again end in failure. Speaking for myself I am not quite so hopeful. What is more, Mr. Martin had made a calculation of the probable output of timber for each acre of the Chenai Nair forest. His calculation was that 40 tons of timber could be extracted from 1 acre. But this has not been realized. So, I hope the hon. the Home Member who is in charge of the Forest department—I know he recently visited this mill and the Doni valley—will keep a particular eye upon this scheme. I shall not deal with the other schemes brought under report.

"With reference to the various financial irregularities referred to in the report, I shall not deal with them at length. The report shows that there have been misappropriations in two instances in the Agricultural department, in one instance by a magisterial clerk and in another instance by a treasury clerk. The last case related to the payment of a malikhana pension twice and the amount on one of the payments was misappropriated. However vigilant the Government may be, misappropriations will take place, so long as there is dishonesty in the world. But, as the Committee rightly points out if the departmental heads observed the rules properly, some of the irregularities would not have taken place. If the officers concerned exercise vigilance such things are not likely to take place.

"In the Jail department it has been observed that there was some unnecessary waste. I shall not refer to it now.

"My hon. Friend, the Finance Member, brought before the Council this morning one motion for the sanction of the Council with reference to an excess grant under 'Stationery and Printing—Transferred.' I thought my friend might reasonably have brought another item (at page 20 of the report) under 'Forests.' The excess amount spent under 'Forests' was Rupees 12,000 and odd. The Committee makes some observations. The Accountant-General considers that the vote of the Council is necessary to regularize the expenditure. The Committee think that no sanction of the Council is necessary. With very great respect to the Members of the Committee, I may say that I differ from them and agree with the Accountant-General. However it is merely a matter of opinion.

"I do not want to take up more of the time of the Council. May I say one word in conclusion. I have carefully gone through the report of the Committee, and if it will not be disrespectful on my part to say so, it is on the whole a very excellent report, and it bears ample testimony in its pages to the considerable attention paid to the details, and without any disparagement to the other Members of the Committee who of course are all Members of this Council and who I take it—I mean no disrespect to them—are not experts in financial matters, the only experts in the Committee being my hon. Friend the Finance Member and the Finance Secretary, Mr. Boag, may I say, as I stated before, the report is very carefully drawn up, and is the result of careful attention, on the part of the Finance Member and the Finance Secretary. I only hope that the several observations and conclusions made in the report to which I have referred now—I have referred only to a very small portion; there are some conclusions of the Committee with which I do agree and there are others with which I do not agree—will receive particular attention of Government and that they will draw the constant attention of the heads of departments to them.

"I omitted to touch on one other point, Sir. I find in one page the conduct of a particular Government official. The name of the official is not given there, and so I am free to criticise him. That is with reference to the travelling expenditure drawn by a particular head of the department who was acting only for one month. This is what we find at page 53. 'A certain Government officer while officiating as the head of his department for one month was continuously on tour throughout the officiating period.' And then the cost of his touring during that one month was one thousand and odd rupees, whereas the amount of monthly travelling allowance drawn by the permanent head of the department for whom he was officiating was only about Rs. 320. Practically he covered 584 miles by road, drawing more than Rs. 400 for that." (A voice: 'Which is that officer.')

* The hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Names are not at all necessary."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR:—"Even if I wanted it is not in my power. I hope the Government will consider whether he is fit to be appointed again as the head of the department."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA:—"I only want to draw the attention of this House and of the hon. Ministers concerned to a recommendation contained in the report which does not take into account certain principles that should guide the future policy of the Government in regard to certain industrial institutions. On page 67 of the report this is what they say regarding the Government Fisheries Cannery at Chaliyam—

"The Committee considers that the position of the cannery is unsatisfactory owing to the accumulation of large stocks of which the agents find difficulty in disposing and recommend that the question of selling or leasing the concern be examined."

"With reference to another industrial institution, viz., the Government Industrial Institute at Madura it is stated that the institution works out at a loss and Government did grant an annual subsidy for training apprentices.

"Then with regard to another institute, the Fruit Preserving Institute that also works out at a loss and Government have decided to close it. On this matter the Public Accounts Committee lays some stress on the profit and loss account and go so far as to recommend that it should be closed.

"In this connexion I might draw the attention of the Government to the policy recommended by the Retrenchment Committee. References were made by the Retrenchment Committee to the view of the Director of Industries who says: 'that these institutions should not be judged only from the commercial point of view, i.e., purely from a profit and loss point of view. Therefore what I wish to urge is that neither the Government nor this House should be alarmed by the losses which these institutes have sustained in their working, because the money that has been spent would be well spent' the Government were able to train a large number of apprentices in these institutes. For example, although Government have spent something like Rs. 15,000 in the case of the Industrial Institute at Madura, they have been able to train a large number of apprentices in that institute and it is a great asset to the nation, for these apprentices can go out into the world and help other industries or start their own. I would therefore strongly recommend that the Finance Department as well as the hon. Minister for Development should not be alarmed by this loss, but should see whether these institutions serve a very important purpose, namely, of training a large number of apprentices and thereby foster the industrial development of this province. If however the Government have decided to close all these institutions because they have been working at a loss, I think it is an ill-advised step for them to have done so. On the other hand I think Government would be well advised to continue the working of those institutes provided of course a large number of apprentices are trained there."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" Sir, in dealing with the report which is now under consideration of this House I am afraid I must regard myself as not possessing the latitude which the hon. Member from Malabar assumed to be open to him in dealing with it. As far as I am concerned I think it will be proper for me to confine myself entirely to matters dealing with audit and appropriation. They have nothing to do with the policy of the Government. It is not the function of the Public Accounts Committee to say to the Government that it should adopt a certain policy in the administration of one department or another policy in the administration of another department. These are matters which are entirely beyond the scope of the objects for which the Public Accounts Committee is constituted. The object of the Public Accounts Committee is to deal with these two items, namely, appropriation and audit and more especially with the reports for the last year for which accounts have been closed. An audit report is an examination of the accounts of the year to see that what I may call the treasury regulations have been observed by the different departments. It is on the observance of certain well defined regulations that financial control depends and the correct function of the Committee is to examine whether they have been observed as by that alone can irregularities caused by negligence or carelessness or other motives be avoided."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" May I ask why the Committee has taken for itself the responsibility of recommending the course of action regarding Chaliyam factory suggested on page 67 of the report, i.e., of closing the factory ?"

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" If I may say so, they did so with reference to those considerations which are under their observation throughout their examination of these reports, namely, financial considerations. They wished the department to examine the question whether further expenditure on this institution was financially justified. It is merely a recommendation to the department to do so. If the department could show on administrative grounds or on grounds of policy that the continuation of that expenditure was essential then the Public Accounts Committee would regard itself as having discharged its function in drawing the attention of the department to the question whether the expenditure was justified or not, or merely a waste of public money."

29th March 1926]

[Mr. T. E. Moir]

" In the second place the Committee deals with the appropriation report and its function is there to bring to the notice of the Council any cases in which it finds that money has been spent beyond the scope of the grants which have been given by the Council. There again it is not concerned with the question whether this Council might have made other appropriations of the resources at its disposal or whether the decision of the Council as to the manner in which grants should be spent was wise or not. That is entirely beyond the scope of the Committee and that is why I do not propose to follow the hon. Member from Malabar in considering whether particular items of expenditure were justified on administrative grounds; still less do I propose with reference to the accounts of the year 1924-25 to repeat the speeches which I made in the budget discussion for the year 1926-27 and raise again questions which have for the time being disposed of in the budget which has been passed by this House. One of these instances to which I may again refer is the Andhra University. The Public Accounts Committee in dealing with the accounts of 1924-25 had nothing to do with the Andhra University or any future expenditure which might be incurred upon it. They were dealing entirely with expenditure which has already been made. To one remark which the hon. Member from Malabar has made I think I must take exception. He pointed out the fact that in certain departments the expenditure had been less than it was estimated in the budget. He urged that the Finance Member should stir up all the departments of Government and see that the full grant made in a particular year for a particular department was spent in that year only."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I wanted that the whole Government should stir up their activities and if they had done so, possibly there would not have been as much of unspent money as there is now."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—" I am afraid if the Finance Member took upon himself the duty of urging the expenditure of a whole grant made to a particular department in a particular year, the finances of this Presidency would be in a worse predicament than that to which my hon. Friend referred. He also referred to the question of heads of departments not knowing the amount of expenditure or the amount of allotment. In this matter I think the hon. Member is under a slight misapprehension. As soon as the budget is passed the details of the appropriation for each department are communicated to the heads of the departments. There is never any doubt as to the amount of money which is placed at the disposal of each department when the budget has been passed by this House; and what the hon. Member referred to was not the question of heads of departments being unaware of how much they could spend in the year, but the fact that sometimes in the course of a year a particular head of the department lost sight of the amount which he still had at his disposal. The original or the initial amount will be perfectly well known and I think the hon. Member will recognize that the two things are quite distinct and it is the second point which we have attempted to provide for by these instructions regarding the watching of expenditure which are familiar to this House and in respect of which we have issued instructions to the different departments to see that their watch is more effectively exercised in future."

" Then the hon. Member turned to commercial accounts. Here again the Public Accounts Committee was concerned with the question whether expenditure under these commercial accounts had been properly provided for and watched. If in any case it has been found that the rules relating to commercial accounts have been disregarded, it will be found that references to the fact have been made in the report. At the present moment I do not recollect that we found any irregularities of that kind. The hon. Member also suggested that in one particular case of expenditure in his opinion the proper course should have been to bring in a supplemental or excess grant before this House. Well, Sir, in these matters we are guided by the advice of the audit authorities, that is to say, the Accountant-General, so far as we are concerned; and the intervention of a higher authority, viz., the Auditor-General or the Government of India is sought if there is any doubt as to the course to be adopted. It was with reference to their rulings on the subject that it was determined that it was not a case in which a demand for excess grant would have been appropriate. There was of course no question of concealing the facts of the case from the House because they have been fully stated in one of the paragraphs of the report which explains why we did not regard the appropriate procedure to be to move a supplementary grant.

[Mr. T. E. Moir]

3-45 P.M. "Sir, the only point to which the hon. Member from South Kanara drew the attention of the Government was the provision for certain commercial concerns. There too, he was dealing with matters which were entirely beyond the scope of the accounts for 1924-25. For instance, as regards the Jam factory the Public Accounts Committee was concerned only with the expenditure for the year 1924-25 and it was not concerned with what the future policy of Government regarding the factory was likely to be and whether it would be retained or closed down. Because that is a matter which would properly form and did, if I remember right, form the subject of discussion in connexion with the budget estimates for 1926-27. If I remember correctly, the hon. Member himself did take the opportunity to raise a debate on the Department of Industries for discussing that very question. I do not therefore go further and it seems to me beyond the scope of my function on this matter to raise that issue.

"But there is one point in which I should like to express my entire agreement with the hon. Member for Malabar. As hon. Members know, this flogging of the dead horse is one of the most onerous duties that Committee is called upon to discharge. I should like to join with him in paying a tribute to the manner in which the committee of the current year performed their wearisome task. The hon. Member is perfectly right in characterizing the report that is now placed before the House as bearing testimony to the efficiency and care with which they discharged their onerous duties. As regards the form of the report, I may say that we are entirely indebted to Mr. Boag, Finance Secretary, and I was very glad to hear the hon. Member for Malabar show appreciation of the care that has been bestowed upon it."

The motion was put to the House and carried.

IX

THE MADRAS NURSES AND MIDWIVES BILL.

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—"Sir, I present the Report^a of the Select Committee on the Bill for the Registration of Nurses and Midwives in the Presidency of Madras and move that the Bill, as amended by the committee, be taken into consideration.

^a Printed as Appendix VIII pages 920-932 infra.

29th March 1926]

[Mr. Muhammad Usman Sahib]

"In doing so I should like to say that the Surgeon-General at the last meeting had put forward certain ideas regarding dhais, which were really an improvement upon the Bill that was presented to this House then. These have been accepted by the Select Committee and incorporated in the Bill now presented to the House. For the first time, I think, we are giving a statutory recognition to indigenous midwives or dhais. My hon. Colleague the Chief Minister, I understand, is going to make some provision for their training. That will certainly improve the quality of the work they are going to do and reduce the death rate in labour cases. With these few remarks I move that the Bill be taken into consideration."

* The hon. Mr. T. E. MOIR :—"I second it."

The question was put to the House and carried. The Bill was taken into consideration.

Clause 1.

Clause 1 was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 2.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—"Sir, I move that item (c) be omitted and the remaining items (d), (e) and (f) be relettered as (c), (d) and (e) respectively. The object of this item is to have a definition of hospitals, etc., and it is found to be unnecessary."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—"I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—"Sir, I move that 'in item (f) in lines 3 and 4 for the words "that section" the words "either of those sections" be substituted.'

"This amendment has been made necessary on account of the amendment made by the Select Committee. Originally the register referred to was only under section 5. Now as section 6 also is included, this amendment has become necessary."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—"I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Clause 2 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 3.

Sub-clause (1).

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—"Sir, I move that 'in item (e) in line 3 for the word and figures "section 5 (1)" the words and figures "sub-section (1) of section 5" be substituted.'

Mr. F. NOYCE :—"I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

[29th March 1926]

- * Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that
' in item (g) in line 3 the words " by the Council " be omitted.'

" In clause 11 the rules in regard to election should be framed by the Government and not by the Council. It is for this reason that I propose to make this alteration."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Proviso to clause 3.

- * Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, I move that ' in lines 1 and 2, for the words " in the constitution of the first Council under this Act " the words " for a period of one year from the commencement of this Act " be substituted.'

" The appointments to be made under this proviso are to last for one year after which period election or nomination should be made in accordance with the rules prescribed in the preceding items (a) to (h)."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, in the same proviso the word ' registered ' occurs in two places before the words ' nurse ' and ' midwife '. In the appointment of these persons to the first Council they cannot be registered persons, because they are appointed before the register itself is formed. I move therefore that the words be omitted."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I think it will not be proper if we omit to mention here that the period of the first Council to which nominations have to be made is one year from the date the Act comes into force."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" We have passed the proviso."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Not the whole of it, Sir."

The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Yes, the whole of it."

Sub-clause (2).

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, with your permission and with the consent of the House, I wish to move the amendment in a slightly different form from that of which I have given notice. It is only a verbal alteration. I move that the following words be added at the end :—

' except members nominated under the proviso to sub-section (1) who shall hold office till the expiry of one year from the commencement of this Act.'

" After the expiry of one year, the persons appointed should possess the qualifications prescribed in the preceding items."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

[29th March 1926]

Sub-clause (3).

- * Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, I beg to move 4 p
' for the words " before the expiration of his term of office whether by death, resignation or otherwise " substitute the words " by the expiration of his term of office or by death or by resignation or otherwise."

" The object of the amendment is that even where the vacancy arises out of the expiration of the term of office, election or selection in accordance with the items under sub-clause (1) should prevail. The clause as amended will read thus :

' If the place of a Member of the Council becomes vacant by the expiration of his term of office or by death or by resignation or otherwise, the vacancy shall be filled in the manner provided for the filling of the vacancy by sub-section (1).'"

Mr. F. Noyce seconded the amendment.

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, I wish to know if I am right in presuming that these people will hold office for three years from the date of appointment and not only for the unexpired portion of the original term."

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I understand that they will hold office for a period of three years under sub-clause (2)."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" What about those members who will have to be nominated under the proviso to sub-clause (1)?"

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Those who are appointed under the proviso will hold office for one year."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Am I correct in thinking that the nominated members will hold office for the unexpired portion of the term, while other people will hold office for a period of three years?"

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Yes, Sir."

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Sub-clause (4).

- * Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, I move
' for the words " any member ceasing to be a member " substitute the words " an outgoing member " and for the word " re-appointment " substitute the words " re-election or re-nomination ".

" Sub-clause (1) refers to election and nomination. Therefore it should be provided that an outgoing member shall be eligible for re-election or re-nomination."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" If the amendment suggested would mean that a member could be re-nominated for an indefinite term of office, I would object to the amendment. I would like that it should be restricted to two terms. I therefore oppose the amendment."

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" My proposal is to make the meaning of this clause clear. My hon. Friend's proposal is that there should be some other substantive provision. Since no substantive provision could be made now, does the hon. Member desire that the clause should be left as it is? Is that his proposal, I leave it to him to consider?"

[29th March 1926]

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" May I move an amendment now ? "

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" It will be too substantial an amendment to be moved now. "

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Clause 3 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 4 was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 5.

Mr. K. SITARAMA REDDI :—" Sir, I beg to move that the following new sub-clause be added to the existing clause :—

' Nurses and midwives whose diplomas obtained outside India are accepted by the Surgeon-General as equivalent to the certificates issued under the examinations referred to in sub-clause (1). '

" I am referring to that body of nurses who are imported into this country from foreign countries like France by certain religious bodies. These nurses have had their special training and the excellent work which they have been doing has been referred to by my hon. Friends from Chingleput and Trichinopoly in their speeches at the first reading of the Bill. I do not propose to add to their speeches. I know the Sisters in Cuddalore have been doing excellent work for the last 22 years, and from the speech of the Surgeon-General, Symons, I see that other hospitals also are enjoying the benefits of their work, such as, the hospitals at Vizagapatam, Berhampur, Mangalore, Guntur, Bellary, etc. We thus see that the nurses are fairly large in number. They are brought into this country now and then and some of them are sent out on account of health or for various considerations. I see from clause 10 of the Bill that the Local Government is empowered to register the names of these nurses. They have to obtain the special permission of the Local Government in each individual case to have their names registered; the Local Government is a very big machinery to be approached and it will look very tedious to get permission in each individual case. I therefore propose that this sub-clause be added. The expert officer who knows something of the history of the Sisters and of their training they receive in foreign countries may be enabled to hold that the certificates which they hold are equivalent to those which may be got under the training mentioned in sub-clause (1). If the Surgeon-General is satisfied about their qualifications, he may recognize the nurses as entitled to registration. It is only to avoid the difficulty in approaching the Government in each individual case that I move the amendment. "

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" I second the amendment. In doing so I beg to express my heartfelt gratification and gratitude to my hon. Friend for having moved this amendment without any suggestion on our part. It only shows how rightly our hon. Friend from Cuddalore sympathizes with and appreciates the work of the Sisters of Charity. "

* The hon. Khan Rahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" Sir, the attention of the House has been drawn to this aspect of the case by the speech of my hon. Friend from Chingleput at the first reading of the Bill. The Select Committee also were for adopting the suggestion now made by the hon. Mover of the amendment. I think that special provision need not be made, for, there is already provision to that effect in sub-clause (1) of clause 5. It says that the Council shall maintain a register of the names of all nurses and midwives who have undergone the course of training and passed the examinations and fulfil the conditions prescribed. It does not say that the nurses should pass the examination in India. They might have passed the examination in France, England, etc. What is now wanted may be put down in the prescribed rules. We have further safeguarded the aspect of the case put forward by the hon. Mover of the amendment by clause 10 that the special sanction of the Government may be obtained. I do not think that the proposed amendment is necessary. I think my hon. Friend from Chingleput was thoroughly satisfied in the Select Committee when we have provided for the case referred to. "

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 5 was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 6 was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 7.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move, Sir, ' after the words " the Council may " insert the words " refuse to enter the name of any nurse, midwife or dhai in the register or " ' "

" The section as amended would read thus :—

' Subject to such conditions and in such manner as may be prescribed, the Council may refuse to enter the name of any nurse, midwife or dhai in the register or remove the name of any nurse, midwife or dhai from the register or restore thereto the name of any nurse, midwife or dhai so removed. '

" These words are added in order to give the nurses the right of appeal given in the next clause. If an order is issued refusing to enter the name of any person, that person is entitled to have a right of appeal under clause 8. It is for that purpose that the amendment is moved. "

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it. "

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Clause 7, as amended, was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 8.

Sub-clause (1).

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, I move that ' after the word " Council " in line 2 the words " under section 7 " be inserted. "

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it. "

The amendment was put to the House and carried.

Sub-clause (2).

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" In sub-clause (2), item (b), I move that ' for the word and figures " section 5 (1) " the words and figures " sub-section (1) of section 5 " be substituted. "

[29th March 1926]

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put and carried.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that sub-clause (2) item (c) may run thus :—

'One from a panel of not less than six registered nurses holding both general and maternity certificates and selected in the prescribed manner by the registered nurses and midwives.'

"It is simply a correction of the language."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The motion was put and carried.

Clause 8 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 9.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that

'for the word "by-laws" in line 2 of the clause, the word "rules" be substituted and for the words "as it thinks, proper" in lines 5 and 6 of the clause, the words "as they think proper" be substituted.'

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second the motion."

The amendment was put and carried.

Clause 9 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 10.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that

'in line 5 of sub-clause (1), the words "infirmary or lying-in hospital" be substituted by the words "or infirmary".'

"It is unnecessary to add the words 'lying-in hospital' because the word 'hospital' is already in that clause."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put and carried.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that the following be substituted for the present sub-clause (2) :—

'(2) After the expiry of one year from the commencement of this Act, no subsidy shall be paid by the Local Government or by a local authority to any medical practitioner who employs a dhai other than a registered dhai.'

"The clause as it stands says :

'No dhai other than a registered dhai shall be employed by a registered medical practitioner subsidised by the Government or by a local body.'

"The present amendment says that in such cases no subsidy shall be paid by the Local Government. If a medical practitioner employs such a person, we have no means of preventing it as we have no control over him. The clause as amended seeks to prescribe the penalty in case of failure to fulfil the conditions imposed on the medical practitioner by this measure."

[29th March 1926]

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second the motion."

The amendment was put and carried.

Clause 10 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 11.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" I move that

'for the words "fees levied under this Act and all other moneys received by the Council" in item (g) of sub-clause (2), the words "all fees levied under this Act and all moneys received by the Council" be substituted.'

"The amendment is purely a verbal one."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put and carried.

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" Sir, I beg to move that 'sub-clause (3) be omitted'.

"Hon. Members will see that this was inserted in the Select Committee, but I find now that the Government of India object to this rule-making power. Under these circumstances, I have to move for the omission of the sub-clause."

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second the motion."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" I should like to know, Sir, from the hon. the Home Member whether the particular object in view is going to be achieved; if not, in what other way he suggests he will give effect to the intentions of the Select Committee in this matter."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" All that I can say is that I do not think the rules we are making are not of very great importance, and that Government can be trusted to do the work. Government will frame rules and if hon. Members are dissatisfied with them, they have got various means by which they can make their wishes felt, viz., by means of interpellations, resolutions, etc."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" If he has an Advisory Committee, would he submit these rules for their consideration?"

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" I have no Advisory Committee which deals with the subject."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" Mr. President, while I do not oppose the amendment that has been moved by my hon. Friend the Home Member, I am bound to say that I take serious exception to the attitude the Government of India have taken in this matter, an attitude which is entirely unconstitutional and which is obviously opposed to the Government of India Act itself."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" Under what clause of the Government of India Act is the objection taken?"

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" After we passed this Bill in the Select Committee, we sent this to the Government of India. They have sent us this telegram which was received this morning."

[Mr. Muhammad Usman Sahib]

[29th March 1926]

I will read it. 'The Governor-General grants sanction to Madras Nurses and Midwives Bill as amended by Select Committee with the omission of sub-clause (3) of clause 11' and in the face of this, there is no other alternative."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Is there any authority under which the sanction is required of the Government of India?"

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—"The Government of India have passed orders directing that in legislation relating to Reserved subjects, after a Bill has passed through the Select Committee, the Bill as amended by the Select Committee should be sent up to the Government of India for scrutiny in regard to matters relating to sanction, and in pursuance of that power this has been done."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—"Mr. President, I am bound to say that, so far as I know the Devolution Rules and the division of subjects into Reserved and Transferred subjects, into Central and Provincial subjects, this is not a case in which there is any special power of sanction vested in His Excellency the Viceroy which is required as a preliminary before the amendment could be carried before the Council. I understand, Sir, that a general practice is likely to grow that as far as possible the Legislative Council should be precluded from exercising its powers of giving consent to rules or by-laws which are to be made under statutory powers by the Local Government. If that is the general line of policy which is going to be adopted by the Government of India and to be enforced on the Reserved side by this Government, I am bound to say that this House will take serious exception to such a policy. In the present instance, of course the matter is of such a trivial nature that it is not worth while raising a serious constitutional fight over it, but if by any chance such a thing is going to be repeated with reference to other Bills that may come up before this House, I want to enter a caveat at once as emphatically as I can against that, that we shall not be a party to accepting the Government of India's mandates so far as we are concerned. Their mandates may be of very great efficacy and power so far as the Local Government are concerned; but it is between them and their own superior authority. We, in this Council, are not going to accept the position of the Government of India saying that it does not contemplate with equanimity the idea of the Legislative Council requiring by-laws or rules statutorily framed by the Local Government to be placed for positive approval before this Council. Sir, that has been the policy which this Council has steadily adopted with reference to other Bills which have since become Acts and with reference to Bills which, we hope, will become Acts in the very near future. One of the earliest Bills, Sir, that came up before this Council with reference to which a provision was made by the Select Committee that rules made under the Act should have the approval, the positive approval, of this Council was passed without any objection either by the Local Government or by the then Government of India. It seems to me, Sir, that there is a reversal, and a dangerous reversal, of policy which has been well accepted by the Provincial Government and tacitly adopted by the Government of India; and against that reversal of policy we are bound to enter an emphatic protest. As I said, it is not my intention to oppose this particular amendment, because from the nature of the Bill and from the nature of the rules that are intended to be made, I was never very seriously in favour of having these rules placed before the Legislative Council for adoption or for confirmation; and I do not see any reason why this particular

[Mr. A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar]

Bill should be held up on that particular ground. It seems to me that if the Government of India could not give their sanction to a particular Bill being introduced in the Local Council with the amendment as carried by the Select Committee, the only course for the Government of Madras would be to merely take back the Bill from the Legislative Council and not to ask us to give our approval. I have only this desire to enter our protest against the attitude of the Government of India, because, as I said, I do not want to interfere in this matter at the present stage."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—"Sir, I entirely agree with all that was stated by my hon. Friend, and I even go further. I mean to oppose this motion and vote against it. This is a particularly important matter of policy with this Council. The rules framed under Acts generally—there may be exceptions of course—should come into force only after they receive the positive, affirmative sanction of this House, and such a doctrine as this has been adopted with the consent of the Government also, in many statutes recently passed by this House, as this seems to be a thoroughly innocuous matter, I see no reason why in this Act alone, the power granted in the other more important Acts should be taken away. My hon. Friend, the Home Member, has stated that the Government of India have declared that they will not sanction this provision. The declaration may be binding on the Government, I mean the Executive Government. But such an attitude of the Government of India is certainly not binding on this House unless of course it be that there is some provision in the Government of India Act or some other law that such a provision as was sought to be introduced by the Select Committee could be introduced only with the sanction of the Governor-General. As I read section 80-A of the Government of India Act, I do not find any such provision. If I am wrong, I am sure the Advocate-General will correct me. Unless I am convinced that there is such a law binding upon the Executive Government as well as this Council, I will vote against this motion."

Mr. T. M. NARAYANASWAMI PILLAI :—"I also beg to oppose the amendment which has been moved by the hon. the Home Member. My hon. Friend, Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar, has said that while he objected to the invasion upon the rights of this Council by the Government of India, he thought that in this Bill the rules which were likely to be framed were not so important as to make him oppose the motion. I believe inasmuch as it sets up a dangerous constitutional precedent, I feel bound to oppose the amendment, whether the rules to be made are important or not. It has already been pointed out that in the various enactments which have been passed in this House and which have obtained the assent of the Government of India this rule has been tacitly adopted. After all, what is a rule, a rule which has the force of law? A rule is made by the Executive authority under powers delegated by this Council which is the only competent authority to make laws. If the Executive passes any rule and if it becomes law, it is by virtue of the authority delegated by this Legislature. And what harm is there, I ask, what constitutional impropriety is there if this Legislature, vigilant and ever watchful, wants to supervise whether the delegated authority has exercised its functions properly? This is absolutely in consonance with the delegation under which the Local Government seek to exercise their rule-making power. And I daresay this Legislature will not be doing its duty if it is not vigilant, if it does not supervise the exercise of powers delegated.* In these circumstances, whether the rules are important or not, inasmuch as it is a direct reversal of the policy which has been tacitly adopted, inasmuch as it is a dangerous constitutional precedent and also for the reason that this Legislature is not a body subordinate to the Executive Government of the Viceroy, we feel bound to oppose this amendment proposed by the hon. the Home Member."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, as one who has been to some extent responsible for the insertion of a provision similar to the one which has been proposed to be deleted now, both in the Survey and Boundaries Act and in the State Aid to Industries Act, I should think that strong objection should be taken against the deletion of the provision. I may tell for the information of the House that in the case of the rules framed under the Madras Survey and Boundaries Act, there were many changes that were considered necessary and were actually affected because the House had reserved for itself certain powers of looking into them and suggest modifications. I think we should hesitate very much before we deprive ourselves of this power. And I, for one, shall vote against it."

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, the objection taken, I understand, is this. Under section 80-A (3), item (f) the Local Legislature of any province may not, without the previous sanction of the Governor-General make or take into consideration any law regulating any provincial subject which has been declared by rules under this Act to be, either in whole or in part subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature, in respect of any matter to which such declaration applies. Now, turning to the Devolution Rules, item 45 of the list of provincial subjects is 'Regulation of medical and other professional qualifications and standards; subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature.' It is under that provision that the Local Council has power to legislate but that being a subject of legislation in the Indian Legislature under section 80-A (3) (f) the previous sanction of the Governor-General will be necessary. When therefore in accordance with the rules under which the Government of India require that the report of the Select Committee should be forwarded to them, on matters which fall under some of these provisions in general, particularly in cases falling under these rules, they scrutinize the provisions of the Bill and wherever they think they could not give sanction, they take exception to the provision. I think that the objection of the Government of India is based on section 80-A (3) (f) and on the Devolution Rules, item 45 of the list of provincial subjects."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" I do not want to continue the debate on the competency or the powers of the Government of India, for that is an altogether separate question. The hon. Member in charge of the Bill has accepted the direction given to him by the Government of India and has moved for the omission of the clause. The House has to consider the question whether on the view arrived at by the hon. the Home Member it is going to accept the omission of the clause or not. The question of the powers of the Government of India does not arise at present."

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" Sir, I am very thankful to my hon. Friend, Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar, for giving me the assurance that he will not vote against the motion. I know that he has expressed himself very strongly on the question and all that I can say is that this is not a very important Bill and the rules to be framed under it are also not so important. Therefore hon. Members need not imperil the Bill by withholding their assent to this amendment. If occasion arises the feeling of the House on this question will be brought to the notice of the Government of India. I appeal to the House to pass the amendment."

The amendment was put and carried. A poll was demanded and the House divided thus:

Ayes 37: Noes 11.

The motion was carried.

Clause 11 as amended was then put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clause 12.

* Mr. T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRIYAR :—" Sir, I move that 'the words "with or without modification or amendment" be added at the end of sub-clause (2).'"

Mr. F. NOYCE :—" I second it."

The amendment was put and carried.

Clause 12 as amended was put, passed and added to the Bill.

Clauses 13, 14 and 15 were consecutively put, passed and added to the Bill.

The preamble was then put, passed and added to the Bill.

* The hon. Khan Bahadur MUHAMMAD USMAN SAHIB Bahadur :—" I beg to move that this Bill as amended be passed into law. In doing so I should like to point out one thing. It is a matter of real congratulation that we are going to have a Bill which for the first time gives legal status to dhais. It is now left to my hon. Colleague the Chief Minister to give them the necessary training to make them fit for the work."

[29th March 1926]

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, I beg to second this motion. (Cheers.) I congratulate the hon. the Home Member on his having this Bill passed with very few amendments. But I must express my deep regret that a very important clause, sub-clause (3) to clause 11, has been dropped. This relates to the rules being placed before the House for approval. In the Borstal Bill, a similar clause to the effect that the consent of the House should be taken to the rules framed under the rule-making regulations, was passed. And I very much regret that this clause, sub-clause (3) to clause 11, has been dropped in regard to this Bill.

"The other matter that I want to refer to in this connexion is that the status given to dhais and nurses very much depends upon the grants to be given by the Government. I for one think that our local boards and municipalities have got very little money and are reluctant to take up schemes involving extra cost, and I do not think they are very much enamoured of this Bill. So, this is a question in which the Government will have to help the municipalities and district and taluk boards with necessary funds to train the dhais and employ them. It is very good to pass an Act, but without the necessary funds forthcoming from the headquarters, the whole burden of the expenditure will fall on the local boards and the municipalities who will have otherwise to shoulder the whole burden in this direction. There are bodies like Health and Welfare Associations in the mufassal and at headquarters, and there are other bodies who can do something in that direction, that is, training, etc. But even then, we need funds. I myself wanted to move a cut in which I would have pressed that a Health and Welfare Association of which myself am the president should get some grant from the Government for helping them with necessary funds. With these words, I second the motion."

* Diwan Bahadur M. KRISHNAN NAYAR :—" I only wish to say this, that a Bill which is moved by a Member on the Government Bench and which is seconded by my hon. Friend, Mr. Saldanha on the other side must really be a very good measure, Sir. I congratulate my hon. Friend, the Home Member, on his getting this Bill passed."

The motion that the Bill as amended be passed into law was then put and carried.

NEXT MEETING.

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" Sir, I should like to know our programme when we next meet. I think we are to meet in connexion with the Malabar Tenancy Bill and the Irrigation Bill. I want to know whether we shall have any day or days for non-official business either at the commencement or at the end of the sitting. We are very anxious that some of our non-official Bills and also amendments to Standing Orders, for which I believe I once stood sponsor but which had been withdrawn at the instance of the hon. the Law Member, should also come up for discussion at that meeting. So I make a request that His Excellency might be moved to place at our disposal one or two days for non-official business."

Mr. P. N. MARTHANDAM PILLAI :—" In seconding the request made by Mr. Saldanha I wish to say, Sir, that I have given notice of a Bill to amend the Hindu Religious Endowments Act. It has been standing for three months and I have not had the opportunity of moving it in the Council, and I wish to move it at the next non-official day if allotted."

[29th March 1926]

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" I may say at once, Sir, that there would be no objection to request His Excellency to grant a day or two for non-official business, but I am afraid there is some misconception in the mind of the hon. Member from South Kanara, because I take it that his Bills are in a state of incubation, and are yet to be introduced; and, when they will be introduced, when the select committee is to meet, and when the next meeting is to come at which these Bills are to be pushed through and passed into law it is difficult to say. But that is a matter with which this House is not now concerned. I shall convey to His Excellency the desire of some hon. Members of this House to have a day or two for non-official business."

* Mr. J. A. SALDANHA :—" There are two Bills. First of all there is the Bill to amend the Local Boards Act, brought forward by my hon. Friend, Mr. Veerian. That is a very important Bill, and I hope that it will be passed. There is then my Bill, and I think both of these Bills were referred to a Select Committee, and I am sure that the Select Committee's report can be presented at the next meeting. So, these Bills may be taken up at the next meeting. As for other Bills, it is possible that there may be a session in August. Who knows the progress of events? So, we rely upon some good chance to push these Bills through."

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" If my hon. Friend knows so much, I have nothing to say."

Mr. A. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR :—" Sir, may we know when we are likely to meet next and where, if the matter has been finally decided?"

* The hon. Sir C. P. RAMASWAMI AYYAR :—" We shall meet at Ootacamund, probably on the 2nd of June."

* The hon. the PRESIDENT :—" The House will now adjourn to a date that will be notified later by His Excellency the Governor."

Secretary to the Legislative Council.

Letter from the Government of Madras, No. 1834, dated the 21st December 1925.

In reply to your letter No. 1637-Agri., dated 4th December 1925, I am directed to report that His Excellency the Governor acting with his Ministers welcomes with pleasure the proposal to appoint a Royal Commission at the earliest possible date to examine and report on the present conditions of agriculture and rural economy in British India. This Government has no doubt that the appointment of such a Commission would afford valuable assistance in solving the many problems now awaiting solution in connexion with the agriculture of the country and in focussing public attention on the subject of agricultural improvement and the part it plays in rural prosperity. The proposed terms of reference do not call for any special remarks except that His Excellency acting with his Ministers considers it desirable to include specifically in their scope the application of co-operative principles to agriculture in all its aspects, such as production, credit, marketing, etc. The importance of this subject has been recognized in several western countries and in Japan.

The panchayat will ensure that the grazing in the grazing block is used to the best advantage of the village community and to this end the panchayat shall:—

- (i) distribute equitably all the permits at the favourable rate which are entrusted to them for distribution,
- (ii) prevent wilful damage to the area,
- (iii) exclude goats and unlicensed cattle and sheep,
- (iv) prevent fires,
- (v) prevent quarrying and the removal of minor forest produce except by Government contractors or agents acting under the orders of the District Forest Officer,
- (vi) prevent the cutting of trees and lopping of green leaves for manure or for any other purpose (except when such cutting or lopping is carried out under the orders of the District Forest Officer),

- (viii) carry out all orders issued to them by the District Forest Officer or by the Range Officer, and
- (ix) keep a list of the names of co-opted panchayatdars.

- (ii) to exclude the cattle of any person who recklessly or mischievously sets fire to or otherwise causes damage in the area or who removes tree growth without permission or who disobeys the orders issued by the panchayat in exercise of the powers conferred upon it or who fails to assist the panchayat in carrying out any of the duties assigned to it,

Report on the working of Forest Village Panchayats in South Mangalore division.

The two panchayats under the Forest village system, viz., (1) for Bellary reserve of Puttur range and (2) for portion of Porkala reserve of Uppinangadi range, were continued during the year 1924-25 with Chief Conservator's sanction conveyed in his Proceedings No. 400, Routine, dated 9th August 1924. Accordingly fresh agreements were got executed for their continuance till the end of June 1925, on the same conditions and concessions reported in this office Dis. No. 80-D.F., dated 9th July 1923. The Bellary panchayat has continued to work satisfactorily during the year. There were no fires but there was one case of illicit grazing detected and which was compounded for Rs. 12. Assistant Conservator of Forests in charge of Puttur range reports 'throughout my inspections I found no fellings and I am satisfied that the panchayatdars took interest, particularly the President'. I agree with the Assistant Conservator's above remarks. The total grazing revenue collected during the year is Rs. 19-10-0 and I recommend the refund of half the grazing revenue. As the panchayat is willing to continue for the next year sanction may be accorded for its continuance for 1925-26 on the same conditions as at present.

2. As regards the second panchayat, it is unfortunate that the villagers have now decided not to renew their agreement after expiry of the present lease. The reasons are given in the following which is an exact translation of a resolution passed by existing panchayat:—

"With reference to the order of the District Forest Officer to the President of the Panchayat, for report on the willingness (or otherwise) to continue the panchayat, it is resolved that it is not necessary to have the panchayat for the forest, as ryots have been given the privilege of removing leaves and fuel from reserved forests to the whole district and to report accordingly."

3. The privileges referred to are the concessions given for the current year in Chief Conservator's Proceedings No. 2195/24-2, dated 23rd July 1924. I had a talk on this subject with the Panchayat President and explained to him that without a panchayat there can be no refund of portion of grazing revenue. But these people do not consider this refund to be a sufficient inducement to take up the additional direct responsibility of protection.

4. As regards the work of the panchayat for current year, it had been on the whole satisfactory. Three cases of illicit fellings were reported, of which two were compounded for Rs. 9-8-0 and the third one was withdrawn. One tiny fire also occurred in panchayat area but the accused was caught and the case was compounded for Rs. 10. Considering the area involved, I do not consider the offences to be many and would therefore request the Chief Conservator to kindly sanction refund of maximum amount of grazing fees, viz., half of the amount collected. The total collection from grazing permits was Rs. 120-6-0.

[29th March 1926]

Report on the working of Forest Village system in the North Mangalore division.

I am herewith submitting a report on the working of forest panchayats in the North Mangalore division for the year 1924-25.

2. There were seven panchayats under working against four in the previous year. During the year, two of the three panchayats in the Coondapoor range for the reserves noted on the margin which had failed to renew their agreements for 1923-24 came forward and executed the agreement. They were very much in need of manure leaf, both dry and green, and when they saw that their ends were not served by their keeping aloof and joining the non-co-operators of Khambadkone village, they wisely came forward and offered to manage the forests. As stated in the last report, a new panchayat was formed for the Durgamala reserve in Udipi range at the beginning of the year.

3. All the panchayats, except the one in Mangalore range, viz., for Todar and Hosabettu reserves, have worked satisfactorily. The Range Officer, Coondapoor, reports that there was no wilful damage to the standing growth in the forest of his range and that the panchayatdars rendered assistance willingly in detection and compounding of offences. In the Tenkahola reserve in Shankarnaraina Range, fire protection was attended to by the Panchayat Committee. The Range Officer, Udipi, reports that the relations between the panchayats and the department were cordial in his range and that in the case of two panchayats the members helped the forest subordinates in liberating the advance growth of Hopea, while all the three panchayats assisted in fire tracing work. It is reported that the Presidents of Mavinakodlu and Durgamale reserves are taking keen interest in the management of forest in their charge. All these reserves, except Mavinakodlu, were successfully protected from fire, while in the Mavinakodlu reserve there was a fire which burnt over 12 acres only. Three of the members of the panchayat were living close to the fire burnt area but did not take any steps to put out the fire. The President has recommended their removal from the Committee and this will be done and any grazing fees paid by them will not be refunded to them.

4. The Conservator in February last inspected the portion of the Matkal-gudde and Mavinakodlu reserves and from the fellings made therein observed that there was demand for firewood. He considered that the principle of located fellings should be applied to these reserves and proposed to the President that regular fellings in small areas should be carried out and the people asked to take their requirements from such felled areas. In return, the people are to sow broadcast an area equal in extent to that cut over. The panchayats were agreeable to this proposal. A simple scheme with two felling series for Mavinakodlu and one for Matkalgudde with 15 small coupes in each was submitted to the Conservator and has been approved. The first coupe of each of the three series have since been demarcated and fellings will be permitted therein. It remains to be seen how this scheme works.

In the Todar and Hosabettu reserves in Mangalore Range which were under one panchayat, several fellings of trees of all species, including some sandalwood trees, took place owing to the mismanagement of the Panchayat Committee. The explanation of the Committee seemed to show that they were not willing to take the responsibility of protecting the forests which they alleged rested with the Forest Guard in charge and also expressed a desire to have a separate panchayat for each reserve. The chief trouble in this panchayat is that some of the Christian ryots who cultivate betel leaf vine require standards as poles to the vines and though the Conservator proposed that an area of about 10 acres will be allowed to them annually for clear felling (coppice) provided they agreed to uproot the lantana in an equal area of other parts of the reserve, they refused to do so. On a further reference being made to the Conservator in March 1925 proposing in these circumstances to dissolve the panchayat he in his order D. Dis. No. 743/25, dated 8th June 1925, has requested the District Forest Officer to form separate panchayats for each of these reserves and watch their work during the current year. This will be attended to. As for the bad protection during the year, the panchayat will be penalised by refusing the refund of half the grazing fee.

5. All the panchayats are willing to renew their agreements and I recommend that this may be done. I consider it inadvisable to withdraw the subordinate staff from these areas and to empower the panchayat committees to compound forest offences arising in them. The following amounts were collected from the reserves as grazing fee and I recommend that half the sums be refunded except in the case of Todar and Hosabettu reserves :—

1. Sarpanamane	94	14	0

Rules regulating the duties of District Health Officers.

1. The District Health Officer is the executive head of the health staff employed in a district. He shall be on duty in places other than his headquarters not less than 60 days in each quarter; but consistently with the proper performance of his duties and public interests in reference to epidemic diseases, gazetted holidays may be accepted as part of the 60 days so spent.
2. By the 23rd of each month the District Health Officer shall submit to the President of the District Board programmes showing the localities which he intends to inspect during the following month.
3. The District Health Officer may depart from his programme if an outbreak of disease or other urgent cause necessitates his presence elsewhere. In such case he shall immediately report the fact, with reasons, to the President, District Board.
4. Programmes should be so arranged that all unions and other important villages may be inspected by the District Health Officer not less than once in each year.
5. The District Health Officer shall maintain a diary in which he should make brief daily entries as to the work done. This diary shall be submitted to the President, District Board, monthly and to the Director of Public Health and Assistant Directors of Public Health on their tours of inspection.
6. It is the duty of the District Health Officer
 - (1) to examine and verify village vital statistics not merely by examining the registers and initialling them but by intensive investigation and if necessary by house-to-house inquiry in the village and by checking the information thus collected with the events reported in the registers. He should give instructions as to the proper classification of causes of death and generally advise as to the correct maintenance of birth and death registers;
 - (2) to note important sanitary defects in villages inspected and to make recommendations for remedying them;

[29th March 1926]

- (3) to make proposals for improving the supply of drinking water in villages inspected;
- (4) to attend important fairs and festivals outside municipal towns, to advise beforehand as to the sanitary arrangements to be made thereat and to supervise the conduct of such arrangements in accordance with G.O. No. 1722, P.H., dated 13th December 1922;
- (5) to visit localities where epidemics occur, to supervise the arrangements made and, if necessary, to concentrate part or all of his district health staff in order to check them;
- (6) to verify the work of District Health Inspectors, to inspect the vaccination registers and test their accuracy and to call attention to any defects, false returns or excess in the number of unvaccinated children;
- (7) to perform such other duties as the Director of Public Health or the President of the District Board may call on him to perform.

Reports by the District Health Officers shall be submitted to the President of the District Board, who shall forward them with his remarks to the Director of Public Health.

7. A copy of the monthly vital statistical returns shall be communicated to the District Health Officer. He will forward them to the President of the District Board with such remarks as he may think advisable.

8. Copies of daily cholera, smallpox and plague reports should be sent by the authorities concerned direct to the District Health Officer as well as to the District Medical Officer and the Director of Public Health.

9. Whenever, by perusal of statistical returns or otherwise, the District Health Officer has reason to consider that the mortality in any local area is abnormal or that any local area is threatened with epidemic disease, he shall bring the fact to the notice of the President of the District Board or the Chairman of the Municipal Council as the case may be, with his recommendations on the subject. The defects noticed in vaccination work in municipalities which do not employ separate Health Officers shall be reported by the District Health Officer to the District Medical Officer who will instruct the local medical officer to carry out the improvements suggested.

10. Every Sanitary Inspector employed in local fund areas shall maintain a diary in a form prescribed by the Director of Public Health and approved by Government. This diary shall be open to inspection by the District Health Officer during his tours or at any time when he may think necessary to call for it.

11. It shall be the duty of the District Health Officer to assemble the health staff and to examine the conservancy plant in localities inspected by him, after giving due notice to the local authorities concerned, and he shall report in the manner stated in rule 5 as to the sufficiency, efficiency and economy of menial staffs and of plant employed.

12. In municipalities in the district which do not employ separate Health Officers all matters relating to public health which have hitherto been attended to by the District Medical Officer shall be dealt with by the District Health Officer. He shall also inspect all such municipalities at least once a year except those which have been inspected by the Director of Public Health or his assistants. He shall bring to the notice of Municipal Chairmen the proximity of any dangerous epidemic disease or conditions observed in rural areas surrounding the town that may endanger its water-supply or otherwise threaten the health of the inhabitants. He shall also visit the municipalities when any outbreak of epidemic disease occurs and recommend such action as he may consider necessary for the prevention of the spread of such epidemics to the adjoining rural areas.

13. The District Health Officer shall make recommendations to the President of the District Board as to the provision in any special locality of disinfectants and sanitary equipment, and during his inspection shall satisfy himself as to the efficiency and conditions of such equipment as may be ordered to be supplied.

14. The District Health Officer shall examine the village sanitary inspection book, make suitable entries therein and call attention to defects in their maintenance.

15. In his attitude towards the population, it is important that the District Health Officer should remember that changes in sanitary conditions should be effected by persuading people of their necessity. He should during inspection discuss matters with the people in a friendly manner and endeavour to show them that it is worth while to follow sanitary directions. In this respect the assembly of the people on the evening following an inspection of a village and talking over with them the conditions found may be of utility. Lantern lectures, cinema lectures and demonstrations may also be arranged. Health propaganda work should constitute one of the most important items of the District Health Officer's functions.

16. The District Health Officer should attend meetings of the district board, taluk boards and union boards at which any important sanitary matter is about to be discussed, and he may state his views, if the presiding officer requests him to do so.

17. In connexion with vaccination the District Health Officer shall make himself acquainted with all matters likely to prejudice its satisfactory conduct and shall endeavour to persuade all persons showing unwillingness to accept it. The importance of the revaccination of adults should be constantly brought to notice.

18. The District Health Officer shall not engage in private practice.

19. The District Medical Officer has no disciplinary control over the District Health Officer, but the two should co-operate with each other in public health work such as the management of epidemics, fairs and festivals, etc., the District Medical Officer arranging for the treatment of possible patients and the District Health Officer for the prevention of disease. In short, there should be a free exchange of views and mutual help between the two.

G.O. Mis. No. 2499, P.H., dated 7th December 1925.

Under section 8 of the Madras Town Planning Act, 1920, twenty-four municipalities including the Corporation of Madras have to prepare, print and submit to the Local Government for their sanction not later than 1st January 1927 a scheme or schemes in regard to all land within the municipality or in its vicinity in respect of which a town-planning scheme may be made under the Act. The Government regret to observe that till now only the Corporation of Madras and the municipalities of Madura, Trichinopoly, Salem, Guntur and Vizagapatam have submitted to Government for their sanction any town-planning schemes at all while the remaining 18 municipalities appear to have entirely overlooked the necessity for taking any action in the matter. Even in the case of the Madras Corporation and the five municipalities referred to above the schemes submitted cover only a very small portion of the areas under their jurisdiction.

2. The great need for town-planning and town improvement in all these towns cannot be too strongly emphasized and in some towns the need has become acute. The Director of Town Planning has visited all the towns and given advice in his inspection notes as to the lines on which action should be taken. In view of the fact that less than 18 months remain out of the five years period laid down in section 8 of the Act, the Government desire to impress upon the local bodies concerned the necessity for taking immediate action for the preparation of town-planning schemes. The local bodies concerned are therefore requested to draw up a list of schemes in respect of which action has to be taken under the Act and proceed to take action as laid down in sections 9 and 10 of the Act. In the case of urgent schemes they may apply to the Government for the issue of the necessary notification under section 12 of the Act.

3. A report showing the action taken with reference to paragraph 2 supra should be submitted to the Government through the Director of Town-Planning not later than 15th January 1926.

BILL No. 11 OF 1924.

*The Madras Nurses and Midwives Bill.Report of the Select Committee.

To

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.

We, the undersigned members of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Madras Nurses and Midwives Bill No. 11 of 1924, have the honour to submit the following report.

2. The Bill was published in the Fort St. George Gazette in English on the 15th July 1924, in Tamil, Telugu and Kanarese on the 12th August 1924, and in Malayalam and Hindustani on the 19th August 1924.

3. We considered the Bill at a meeting held on Tuesday the 16th February 1926. We have subjected the Bill to a detailed examination clause by clause, and have suggested changes, the more important of which are referred to below.

4. Clause 2.—We consider that 'dhais' should be brought within the scope of the Bill and have accordingly added a definition of the word 'dhai'. We have also added definitions of 'Hospitals', 'Infirmaries', 'Dispensaries', 'Lying-in hospitals' and 'Nurse'.

5. Clause 3.—We have slightly altered the constitution of the Council (a) by the substitution of the Superintendent of the Government Hospital for Women and Children for one of the members to be nominated by the Local Government, (b) by increasing the number of elected members by one (with a corresponding reduction in the number of nominated members), and (c) by providing that one of the two members nominated by the Madras Medical Council and one non-official member nominated by the Local Government shall be women.

6. Clause 4.—We have considered it preferable that membership of the Council should automatically cease on the failure of a member to attend three consecutive meetings, as removal by the vote of the Council is not a method generally provided in such cases.

29th March 1926]

7. Clause 5.—We have adopted the language of the Burma Act and have omitted the details relating to the training, examinations and other conditions of admission to the register which should, we consider, be regulated by rules.

We have further fixed three years as the period after which unqualified nurses and midwives practising at the commencement of the Act shall not be admitted to the register.

8. We have added a new clause providing for the maintenance of a register of 'dhais'.

9. Clause 7.—We have deleted the provision in sub-clause (1) (a) which makes it obligatory for the Local Government to consult the Chief Justice before nominating magistrates and civil judges to the panel, as we consider that such consultation is unnecessary.

10. Clause 9.—We have extended to three years the period after which unregistered nurses and midwives shall not be competent to hold appointments in public institutions and we have considered it necessary to give power to the Local Government to permit such employment in special cases. This is mainly intended to cover the case of any sisters of charity who may in future be recruited for employment in public institutions from France or from other countries where the system of training differs from that obtaining in this Presidency.

We have added a sub-clause to provide that only registered 'dhais' may be employed by the medical practitioners subsidised under the rural medical relief scheme.

11. Clause 10.—We have decided that the following important matters should be regulated by rules to be issued by the Local Government rather than by by-laws to be framed by the Council:—

- (a) elections of members of the Council,
- (b) conditions of admission to the register,
- (c) conduct of examinations and other connected matters,
- (d) conditions governing the removal of names from the register and their restoration thereto, and
- (e) selection of the panels under sub-clause (1) of clause 7 [sub-clause (2) of revised clause 8].

We have accordingly transferred these provisions from clause 11 to this clause and have further provided,

[29th March 1926]

(following the corresponding provision in the Madras Borstal Schools Act, 1925) that the rules made under (b), (c) and (d) above shall be subject to the previous approval of the Legislative Council.

12. Clause 11.—We have deleted the provisions relating to—

(a) the restriction of the practice of registered nurses and midwives within due limits, and

(b) the grant of leave to members of the Council.

13. Clause 12.—This has been incorporated in clause 10 (c) [new clause 11 (g)].

14. Clauses 13 and 14.—We have decided that, as in the Madras Medical Registration Act, 1914, it would be sufficient to provide for the punishment of offences under this Act by fine only.

We further considered that, to constitute an offence under clause 14, the mere use of any name, title, description, uniform, badge or signboard was not sufficient but that fraudulent intention must be proved. We have accordingly amplified the wording of this clause on the lines of section 171 of the Indian Penal Code.

15. As the alterations made do not involve any important changes of principle we consider it unnecessary that the Bill should be republished.

16. We append a copy of the Bill as amended by us.

MINUTES OF DISSENT.

(1)

I regret I was unable to attend the meeting of the Select Committee.

It has become necessary for me to send my dissenting note on the Madras Nurses and Midwives Bill.

The more I read of the Bill the more I feel unconvinced of the necessity of passing this measure.

The Select Committee have not apparently taken into consideration the several objections made in the Council when the Bill was introduced. They contented themselves with making a few alterations which are more verbal than material.

Section 2, clause (c).—The appellation 'Lying-in Hospitals' has become obsolete and they are now, I understand, called the Women and Children Hospitals. Therefore the latter appellation may be used.

Section 3, clause (f).—I consider the two matrons to be elected should belong to recognized hospitals. Since these two matrons are to be elected, I object to the provision that such matrons should be approved by the Surgeon-General. It seems to me to be a farce of an election if the elected should pass through the gauntlet of approval of the Surgeon-General. I, therefore, recommend the deletion of the clause "and approved by the Surgeon-General".

With regard to (g) and (h) I understand that a large percentage of nurses and midwives are employed under Government and consequently there is not the possibility of any nurse or midwife either employed in a private institution or privately practising being elected by this constituency. I strongly urge that provision should be made for election of a private nurse or midwife under clause (g) or they must be provided with seats to be filled by nomination by the Government.

With regard to proviso under section 3 wherein it is provided that, for the first council two matrons, a registered nurse and a registered midwife shall be nominated by the Surgeon-General and the Local Government respectively, I presume that this is so done to bring immediately into existence the council even before the constituencies are created. If this is so, I am of opinion that such nominees should hold office for not more than a year by which time arrangements must be made for holding elections as prescribed in the Act.

Section 5 (2).—The conditions and the restrictions under which the dhais shall be admitted should not be left to the Council on which there is absolutely no representative of the persons concerned and I contend that these should be laid in the Act itself. If the conditions and restrictions contemplated in section 5 (2) are such as to test the eligibility of the persons for either nursing or midwifery the maintenance of two separate divisions in a register is unnecessary if not invidious.

Section 6.—The objection advanced to section 5 (2) applies with greater force to this section inasmuch as there is ample scope for so framing the rules as to exclude a large number of dhais who are engaged in midwifery in this Presidency. Their interests are exposed to risks and it devolves upon the legislature to secure their interests properly by a just recognition of their claims.

Section 7 is very vague. We have no idea as to the offences for which a nurse or a midwife is liable to be removed from the register or restored to it.

The Local Government should place the rules before the Legislative Council for approval.

Section 10 (1) and (2).—This section prohibits the employment of unregistered persons under any institution not supported entirely by voluntary contributions. The local bodies, the poverty of which is proverbial, will find themselves unable to secure the services of registered persons both on account of the supply being inadequate and also on account of the high price that is artificially put upon the person by a "Trade Union" of the Council.

I am of opinion that it is utterly impracticable to prohibit the medical practitioners under the Rural Medical Relief Scheme from employing unregistered persons. The scheme operates in places too poor to have a dispensary of their own and if in such places no unregistered person could be employed, the people will have to go without the much-needed nursing and maternity aid. The whole idea of the framers of the Bill seems to me to set too high a value on registration.

It will be practically discouraging the local bodies to take up this part of the public health work.

29th March 1926]

Section 12 (b).—It is not clear what is meant by 'regulating' in this section. If it meant that a person is given a particular area within which alone that person is allowed to practise, it is highly objectionable and it only confirms my suspicion that the Bill seeks to enhance the cost of the services of the so-called registered nurses.

Section 13 of the original Bill should be retained.

In addition to the above modifications, I would suggest that no nurse or midwife should be allowed to practise who does not speak in at least one of the local vernaculars as the absence of any means of communication between the patient and the nurse or midwife is likely to result in disastrous consequences. To avert these, a proper understanding between the patient and the nurse or the midwife is necessary and this is not possible without the knowledge of any one local vernacular.

25th February 1926. S. VENCATACHELAM CHETTY.

I am of opinion that registered 'dhais' may be employed in hospitals and dispensaries maintained by taluk boards in places other than taluk headquarters and major unions. Clause 9 requires amendment on the above lines.

25th February 1926. C. V. S. NARASIMHA RAJU.

In the definition of 'Hospitals,' etc., I would include institutions recognized by Government or local bodies (e.g., the Leper Asylum or Father Mullers' Charitable Institutions at Mangalore) for grant-in-aid, although homoeopathic or indigenous system is mainly followed in the treatment of patients.

In some institutions there are trained 'sisters of charity' who do very useful work in a spirit of self-sacrifice. They belong to a religious body, whose certificates as to their qualifications deserve to be recognized. If such a body is duly recognized for the purpose of training nurses or midwives by the manager of institutions receiving grant-in-aid from Government or a local authority, the certificate of the head of such a body as to the qualifications of a nurse or midwife should, I submit, be accepted. Provision should, I think, be made for this purpose in the Bill.

26th February 1926.

J. A. SALDANHA.

[29th March 1926]

(4)

Clause 3.—The provision made in sub-clause (1) (g) of the Madras Nurses and Midwives Bill for the representation of registered nurses and midwives is not adequate. When provision has been made in (1) (e) for the nomination of two registered medical practitioners by the Medical Council, it does not appear to be necessary to provide for the nomination of one registered medical practitioner by the Local Government, as contemplated in (1) (d).

Clause 4.—There is no provision in the Bill prescribing the period within which meetings of the Council shall be held. The composition of the Medical Council is different from a composition of a local authority like a municipal council or a local board. It is not therefore desirable to provide that membership shall automatically cease owing to the absence of members from three consecutive meetings. I consider that the provision approved by the Select Committee is quite sufficient to meet the requirements of the case.

Clause 6.—I think that, in prescribing conditions and restrictions of dhais, due regard should be shown for local conditions and local circumstances.

Clause 10 (1).—Instead of extending the period for bringing this clause into force from one year to three years, I think it is desirable to provide that no appointment of an unregistered nurse or midwife shall be made after the expiry of one year from the commencement of this Act. The existing provision will compel local authorities to dispense with the services of nurses and midwives on the mere ground that they do not conform to the rules for the registration of nurses and midwives, though they have put in long service and though they have been doing their work fairly satisfactorily.

Clause 10 (2).—This is a new clause inserted at the instance of the Select Committee. It will take some time before dhais are duly trained so as to become eligible for registration. I think some reasonable period should be prescribed, say one year, for the bringing into operation of this sub-clause.

CANCELLATION OF CERTAIN GOVERNMENT ORDERS ON IRRIGATION 369
IN TRICHINOPOLY DISTRICT

23rd January 1935] [Mr. T. M. Narayanaswami Pillai]

Orders apply to vast number of people, we would realize the hardship. You will permit me, Sir, to explain in respect of G.O. No. 398 how it works with reference to five or six villages I have studied. I shall be able to satisfy the Hon. the Revenue Member and his Secretary that what I say is quite correct and founded on facts. I said that G.O. Nos. 40 and 398 go together; this is how it is. There are three kinds of rates for single crop for these lands; Rs. 10-10-0, Rs. 9-8-0, Rs. 8-4-0. It ranges from Rs. 10-10-0 to Rs. 8-4-0. The present rates work out to Rs. 11-14-0, Rs. 10-10-0 and Rs. 9-8-0. There is under this head alone an increase of Rs. 1-4-0; this is for single crop; for lands with double crops there are three rates again; rupees 14-3-0, Rs. 12-11-0 and Rs. 11. The present rates are Rs. 17-13-0, Rs. 15-15-0 and Rs. 14-2-0. There is increase per acre of Rs. 3-10-0, Rs. 3-4-0 and Rs. 3-4-0, respectively. From the mere statement of the rates you will find how any ryot owning an acre is affected. These are the Government Orders which affect the position of the ryot. As I said, there are two other Government Orders, namely, Nos. 736 and 521 which are similar in character and which can be taken up together. They aim at levying enhanced water-rates on irrigation upon wet lands. These apply to various portions of the district. G.O. No. 736 applies mainly to the Lalgudi, Musiri, Karur and Kulittalai taluks and G.O. No. 521 applies mainly to the Musiri taluk. The rate for irrigation on dry land for the first crop is higher."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member may continue his speech to-morrow."

The House then adjourned to meet again at 11 a.m. the next day.

R. V. KRISHNA AYYAR,
Secretary to the Legislative Council.

I.—QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

STARRED QUESTIONS

Education

Progress of the proposals for the conversion of a portion of the foreshore of the Madras beach as playgrounds for educational institutions.

*499 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) at what stage the proposals for converting a portion of the foreshore of the Madras beach as playgrounds for educational institutions are at present;

(b) what the estimates for such works are;

(c) whether any objections have been received for this proposal; and

(d) if so, from whom and how they have been disposed of?

A.—The question of laying out one or more playing-fields on the foreshore between Fort St. George and San Thome has been referred to a committee and its report is awaited. Objections, if any, to the proposals which may be made by the committee, will receive due consideration.

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—“Mr. President, are the Government aware that more than once the City Corporation has passed resolutions expressing its disapproval of the scheme of the Government?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“It expressed its disapproval with regard to a certain site being converted into a playground, but not of the general scheme.”

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—“May I know, Sir, whether this Committee was appointed after the disapproval expressed by the Corporation?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“The disapproval was, as I said, with regard to a particular site being converted into a playground. I think the Corporation has not committed itself against the conversion of any portion of the foreshore into playgrounds.”

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—“May I know if it is not a fact that the Committee has now decided that the foreshore should be converted into playgrounds and whether the Government, after receiving the communication from the Committee, will have nothing to do with this foreshore scheme?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“The answer here says that the report of the Committee has not yet been received. It is therefore impossible for me to say what their conclusions are. After the report is received, the Corporation will be consulted in the matter as required by the rules.”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“May I ask when and with whom this idea of the conversion of the foreshore into playgrounds originated?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“It originated before I became Minister.”

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—“May I know whether in view of the fact that the people of Madras are opposed to this scheme as represented by the City Corporation, the Government will consider the advisability of giving it up entirely?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“As I said, it all depends upon what takes place after the committee's report is received and after the Corporation has expressed its views on the report.”

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“Does the foreshore vest in the Corporation?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“It vests in the Government.”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“Arising out of the answer to my question, am I to understand that the Hon. the Minister is not able to find out from the records at his disposal how and when this scheme originated?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“I can certainly discover that, but I think it is not worth while doing that for the purposes of this question.”

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—“May I know whether the Government are going to expose the children to the vicissitudes of the weather, where they may be liable to attack by diseases such as pneumonia, etc., after their being exhausted in the games?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“My hon. Friend is more competent to express an opinion on that matter than myself. His opinion will certainly have weight in the decision of this question.”

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—“Will the Hon. Minister be pleased to state the names of the gentlemen who constitute this committee?”

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—“I can't say off-hand.”

[24th January 1935]

Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Will the Government consult their medical advisers on the astonishing statement made by Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar that the boys playing on the foreshore will be exposed to all sorts of diseases?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I may say that Mr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar is a member of that committee, and if in his minute he raises this point, we will certainly consult the medical advisers."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know whether, if the foreshore belongs to the Government or not, the health of the citizens is the primary concern of the Corporation, and if so, whether the opinion of the Corporation should not weigh with the Government?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"Yes. I wish the Corporation realized that it was their primary concern."

Inclusion of the Reddis of the Andhra districts in the list of backward communities for educational purposes.

* 500 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAIYA: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) why Reddis of the Andhra districts have not been included in the list of backward classes for educational purposes; and

(b) why fee concessions are not given to the students of that community?

A.—The list of backward classes eligible for fee concessions was drawn up some years ago and it is not possible to say now why any particular community was not included in the list. Government do not propose to make any additions to the existing list.

Mr. C. INDRAIYA:—"May I know why the Reddis of the Andhra districts are not included in the list of backward communities?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"As the answer says, it is not possible to find out the reasons for the inclusion of some communities and the exclusion of others. But as far as I can gather, that was because there was not sufficient illiteracy in that particular community to justify its being classified as a backward community."

Mr. M. A. MANIKKAVELU NAYAKAR:—"Do the Government propose to make any subtraction from the list?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"Neither additions nor subtractions."

Mr. M. A. MANIKKAVELU NAYAKAR:—"If the Government contemplate restricting the concession, will it not be safer to remove from the list such of the communities as are now advanced in education?"

[24th January 1935]

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"The question was examined, and it does not appear that any of the communities included in the list have advanced so far in education as to justify their names being removed."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Are the Reddis of non-Andhra districts included in the list?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"No; the Reddis of Ganjam district alone are included, not of any other district."

Mr. C. INDRAIYA:—"Is the Hon. the Minister aware of the fact that the Reddis of the Andhra districts are educationally most backward?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"May be; but only those who are called Reddis in Ganjam are considered backward for the purpose of these concessions."

Principles governing the personnel of the Committee for the selection of candidates for admission into the Presidency College, Madras.

* 501 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) who the persons now serving on the Selection Committee of the Madras Presidency College for selecting applicants for study in that college are;

(b) when each of them was appointed and what the duration of membership is;

(c) on what principles and on whose recommendations such appointments are made; and

(d) what the number of students (district-war) selected for admission in that college in each class in each year since 1930 is?

A.—(a) (1) The Principal of the College.
(2) M.R.Ry. R. Madanagopal Nayudu Garu, M.L.C.
(3) The Hon'ble Diwan Bahadur G. Narayanaswami Chetti Garu, C.I.E.
(4) The Reverend A. Arulanandam.
(5) Janab Jamal Muhammad Sahib Bahadur.
(6) Dr. B. B. Dey.
(7) M.R.Ry. Rao Bahadur Dr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar Avargal, M.L.C.

(b) All the members other than the Principal were appointed to hold office for three years from 20th May 1934.

(c) Persons who are considered suitable for assisting the Principal in the selection of candidates, are appointed in consultation with the Director of Public Instruction.

(d) The hon. Member is referred to Appendix B of the annual reports on the working of the college, which are placed at the disposal of the Press.

[24th January 1935]

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, what is the principle adopted in the selection of members? May I know what is known by 'assisting' the Principal? Is it the arranging of a table, papers or the handing over of a pen, and allowing him to give out his own opinion?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"That is the wording of the Government Order which constituted this committee, and that order was passed nearly ten years ago; and my hon. Friend is aware that it has been there from the time the committee was inaugurated. He has been on the committee from the beginning and knows best what assistance the members of the committee have been giving."

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"For the last so many years, I have been insisting that the language should be cut and dry, just as the Chief Minister did it in the case of the medical admissions. I have many a time requested the Education Minister to specify the assistance. May I know whether the Minister is going to change the language and see that things are made cut and dry, even as was done by the Chief Minister?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I do not exactly follow my friend when he says it should be made 'cut and dry.' I know however that some representations were made by my friend and they were considered. And as far as I could understand from my friend himself, he was quite satisfied with what took place at the last selection, and I hope there will be no room for complaint in the future."

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"May I say that last year it was all right because the acting principal was good but it was not so when there was another principal. In that year I protested and informed the Hon. the Minister that everything was not well."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is that a supplementary question?"

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"Will the Hon. the Minister be pleased to state whether the practice followed by the principal of publishing a list of candidates to be admitted into the Presidency College obtains without even consulting the members of the Committee?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I am not aware of it."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I ask the Hon. Minister to consider the question of revising the terms of reference to this Committee in view of the large number of protests received from members serving on the committee and co-ordinate the power of the principal and the committee members on the question of selection of candidates?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"If some definite lines on which improvement is required are suggested, I shall certainly be prepared to consider them."

24th January 1935]

Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know, Sir, why it is that none from the mufassal stations have been selected to serve on this committee especially in view of the large number of students coming from the northern districts, especially the Ceded districts?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"The members of the committee have always been drawn from the people in the city for one reason amongst others, that they need not be paid any travelling allowance; but at present some people from the mufassal also are being put in, though in this particular case, it is not so."

Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"May I know whether the Hon. Minister had considered the question of the representation of the backward Hindu communities in view of the fact that the Government have recognized those communities as backward in education?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"Yes; there is a Muslim gentleman and there is a Christian gentleman. There is also Mr. Madanagopala Nayudu who, I am sure, will look after the interests of these backward communities."

Principles governing the personnel of the Committee for the selection of candidates for admission into the Engineering College, Guindy.

* 502 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) who the persons now serving on the committee appointed for selection of applicants for study in the Engineering College at Guindy are;

(b) when each of them was appointed and what the duration of such appointments is;

(c) on what principles and on whose recommendations appointments to this committee are made; and

(d) what the number of admissions (district-war) made in each of the years since 1930 is?

A.—(a) (1) The Principal of the College.

(2) V. Hart, Esq., Chief Engineer, Public Works Department (General, Buildings and Roads).

(3) Khan Bahadur Abdul Razak Sahib Bahadur.

(4) M.R.Ry. Diwan Bahadur A. Appadurai Pillai Avargal, I.S.O., M.L.C.

(5) M.R.Ry. Diwan Bahadur M. Krishnaswami Reddiyar Avargal.

(6) M.R.Ry. Rao Bahadur R. Srinivasan Avargal, M.L.C.

(b) & (c) The attention of the hon. Member is invited to the answers to clauses (b) and (c) of question No. 501.

[24th January 1935]

- (d) The hon. Member is referred to the annual reports on the working of the College which have been placed at the disposal of the Press. The Government have no information beyond what is contained therein.

Industries

Scheme, if any, for the revival of rural industries.

* 503 Q.—Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state whether the Government have any schemes under consideration for the revival of village industries or the starting of any new cottage industries for rural uplift?

A.—The Government of India have agreed to make a grant to the various provinces for a period of five years to develop the handloom weaving industry through co-operative methods. The grant allotted to this Presidency for the current year and for 1935–36 is Rs. 26,500 and Rs. 59,500 respectively. The Government have formulated a scheme for the utilization of the grant and have forwarded it to the Government of India for approval.

The Government of India propose also to give a grant to be devoted to the increased production and supply of disease free 'cellular' seed to silk worm rearers in this Presidency and also for research on silkworm diseases. A scheme for this purpose also has been drawn up and sent to them for consideration.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"May I know whether the Government are prepared to place this scheme before the House?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"The scheme is still in the stage of certain proposals and they have been submitted to the Government of India. Till the Government of India have expressed an opinion on these proposals of this Government, I do not think any useful purpose will be served by placing this provisional scheme before the House."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"At least after approval by the Government of India, will the Government be prepared to place it before the House?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I shall consider."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know if the Government are aware of the latest communiqué by the Government of India with regard to the improvement of village industries in the country?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"That is not a matter which comes within my cognizance."

[24th January 1935]

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"Considering the importance of this question, will the Local Government be pleased to provide more liberal grants for the purpose?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"That question has never been considered, and I consider it very unlikely that this Government will be able to do so."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"As the current year will be over in about two months from now, will the Government be able to spend this sum of Rs. 26,500 allotted for this year?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"If the proposals are approved by the Government of India in time, I think it may be possible."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know whether the Provincial Government have taken any steps with regard to the scheme of rural industrial improvement that has been adumbrated by Mahatma Gandhi and whether they have taken any steps for counteracting those activities or bring in a measure for counteracting them?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"As I said, Sir, that is not a subject which comes within my portfolio at all."

II.—RESOLUTIONS ON MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST—cont.

* (1) CANCELLATION OF CERTAIN GOVERNMENT ORDERS ON IRRIGATION IN TRICHINOPOLY DISTRICT—cont.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The motion before the House is—
'This Council recommends to the Government that the following Government Orders be cancelled:—

(a) G.O. No. 398, Revenue, dated 26th February 1934.

(b) G.O. No. 521, Revenue, dated 13th March 1934.

(c) G.O. No. 736, Revenue, dated 12th April 1934.

(d) G.O. No. 40, Revenue, dated 5th January 1934.'

The resolution is now for the discussion of the House."

* Continued from the previous day.

[24th January 1935]

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"Mr. President, Sir, I seek the leave of the House to move the amendment standing in the name of Mr. K. S. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar. I move that—

'To resolution No. 1 in the agenda, now under discussion the following amendment be made:—

"Add after (d) the following:—

'(e) G.O. No. 1238, Revenue, dated 14th July 1933.'"

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Order, order. May I ask the hon. Member whether this Government Order relates to Trichinopoly or the Tanjore district? The main resolution speaks only about the Government Orders relating to Trichinopoly, but we cannot be going on adding these things district after district."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"The Government Orders referred to in the amendment relate to Tanjore but the problem is just the same in respect of both Tanjore and Trichinopoly, because the Government Orders pertaining to Trichinopoly district seek to reclassify irrigation sources and increase the revenue of the Government."

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Do they apply to Tanjore as well?"

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"The case of Trichinopoly."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"May I have some enlightenment from the Hon. the Revenue Member on this matter?"

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Sir, I observe the proposed amendment forms the subject of a resolution to be moved by Mr. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar on the 25th. That is one resolution and to-day we are discussing one of such Government Orders. Resolution No. 6 in the list of resolutions for the 25th cannot be taken up and debated on to-day and so it ought to be taken up in the proper order. Now, on the question of the point of order I consider these three Government Orders are not relevant in any way to Government Orders whose cancellation has been moved by Mr. Palat and this amendment is not therefore relevant to the present resolution."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"It is on the agenda."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"It may be on the agenda, but that resolution cannot be brought in as an amendment to this particular resolution and the hon. Member may wait until we reach the other resolution."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"Mr. President, I must on this occasion take the opportunity to offer on behalf of my hon. Friend, Mr. Narayanaswami Pillai, who was speaking on this resolution yesterday, his sincere regret that he has not been able to be present here to-day and complete his speech, as owing to an urgent call from Trichinopoly he had to leave Madras at 11 last night. Hence it is that he has not been able to be present here and finish his speech on the resolution. If he had been here I am sure he would have convinced this House about the unreasonableness on the part of the Government in passing these Government Orders and seeking to enhance the rate of taxation which is already very high in the Trichinopoly district. Sir, the Government Orders referred to in this resolution relate to certain irrigation sources in Trichinopoly district as also to double-crop cultivation in the same district. It has been admitted on all hands that even under the existing rate of taxation the ryots find it very difficult to meet the Government demand which is made annually.

"When that is the position, it is surprising that the Government should have come forward at this critical period and try to enhance the rate of taxation in an indirect manner by means of Government Orders to reclassify the irrigation sources and compel the ryots to pay higher rates of water-cess than they were paying hitherto. The increase amounts in certain cases to as much as 25 per cent. When it is the policy of Government, to give a reduction in the existing rate of taxation and as you know the Government have been pleased to give a remission of 12½ per cent, and when this is admitted, one fails to understand how the Government is justified in raising the existing rate in an indirect manner by placing these lands under different irrigation sources, i.e., by raising the lands from the third tarams to the second and the lands from the second to the first. I think it is not necessary to make any elaborate speech to commend this resolution for the acceptance of the House. I am sure that Government would realize that they are doing a great hardship to the agriculturists of this district by seeking to enforce the Government Order at a critical time. Even if Government should find it difficult to cancel it, I would request that it may be suspended until such time as our economies improve and the ryots are in a position to pay a higher rate of taxation."

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Mr. President, Sir, I am afraid that Government cannot possibly accept this resolution. I regret this because it has been moved by my friend, Mr. Narayanaswami Pillai, for whom I have great admiration and for whom I would like to do what I possibly can. It is my great regret as well as that of the House that he has received a sudden call and had to go back to Trichinopoly. For yesterday, he began to state his case in such a reasonable manner that I really felt that to oppose it would be somewhat against the grain not only on account of the way he presented his case, but because personally, I am very fond of him. (Laughter.) But, Sir, unfortunately, I think this resolution is ill-advised for this reason that in the case of those channels to which reference is made, Government have spent large sums of money to bring them to a state in which irrigation under them will be constant and secure. Some of them—I need not go into particulars—were already in the first class. It is only those that were in the lower classes that were raised one class higher for the purpose of water-rate. I think that was perfectly justified in consideration of the amount of money Government expended on them. In all these cases, the improvements to the channels were carried out at the specific request of the ryots under the channels and when they made those requests, they stated in terms to the Government that they would be prepared to pay any assessment under the channels to enable Government to reconstruct them so as to get a revenue return under the ordinary rules. Perhaps, I may be permitted to quote a statement which the President of the Kulittalai Landholders' Association made to Sir Archibald Campbell in connexion with the Sri Ramasamudram Canal on the north bank of the Cauvery. He said that he was very angry against the Government for having delayed carrying out the works on the south bank when the ryots had promised to pay Rs. 16 on dry land, and were prepared to pay Rs. 20 if necessary so as to give 6 per cent interest on the outlay. The repairs to all these channels were undertaken on the distinct promise from the ryots that they were going to pay a rate sufficient for the Government to realize its profit in accordance with the rules under the Public Works Code. I think to resile from that promise is hardly playing the game. I consider Government is in that way justified in consequence of the great improvement to these channels in raising the classification as they have done. I think the House should not support this resolution. I oppose it."

The resolution was put and lost.

(2) REMISSION IN LAND REVENUE FOR FASLI 1344.

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move—

'This Council recommends to the Government that a remission of not less than 25 per cent be granted in the land revenue kist in all the districts in respect of wet and dry lands and inclusive of water-rates for the current fasli, i.e., 1344.'

"Mr. President, Sir, when a motion of this character was moved even last year and passed, I dare say, almost unanimously by the non-official Members, I thought, that the Government had realized the gravity of the situation and were prepared to accept a resolution of this House. One charge that is always levelled against the non-official Members of this Council by the Members of Government is that we are an irresponsible set of people. Well, they can very well afford to say so in view of the constitution of the present Government. But yet, I must tell them that we are certainly not irresponsible to the needs of the country. There is no other class of people who realize the requirements of the people of this country and who are more responsible to the interests of the people than the non-official Members who are their representatives. Government is there because the Act has given them a place and they will continue to be there for some time longer in that entrenched situation. But I mention this, Sir, in order to lay stress on the fact that when we make a proposition of this character in this House, we do it after realizing the full responsibility of the situation. Sir, the situation has become so grave that however responsible you might be, you cannot help bringing forward a measure of this character for the acceptance of this House and the Government of this country. Sir, what exactly is the situation? The Government might come forward and say that things have improved since last year. The Government have suspended a certain percentage of the taxes and that was enough to relieve the landholder and he does not require any further suspension of the tax. Well, Sir, we did not have famines to the same extent as we have now. The whole of the Ceded districts is having acute famine and I understand that Tinnevely is in the same plight. The other districts are in no better condition. Only a few delta districts might not be in the same plight. That I can say. But they are not very much better off. Thanks to the indifference, I do not say of this Government, but of the Government of India with regard to the import of foreign rice. The Government of this province is not strong enough to make the Government of India realize the extent of harm that is being done to the agriculture of this province and to the paddy cultivation. The prices of paddy in this province have gone down by the import of rice from Siam and other foreign countries. Government, I suppose, might come forward and say that there has been a rise in the price of paddy in at least some of the districts. But, if you examine the facts, Sir, you will find that that is not the case. For the information of the House, I might refer to some of the figures with regard to some districts. For instance, in South Kanara on 3rd January 1933, the price per imperial maund was 3.59 rupees whereas on 3rd January 1934 it has fallen to 3.45, and then again on 3rd January 1935 it has fallen again to 3.33. So far as Tanjore is concerned, a district which is supposed to be generally very prosperous, I want to point out, Sir, that the rates have been falling even there. On 3rd January 1933 the rate was 3.60; on 3rd January 1934 the rate came down to 3.50 and again on 3rd January 1935 it has fallen to 3.49. Even with regard to the Madras district itself, the tale is not very different. From 4.59 it has gone down on 3rd January 1935 to 3.40. In Vizagapatam also, the prices have fallen from 3.64 to 3.01. These are some of the districts in which prices have by no means risen but on the other hand have been going down. Again, Sir, with regard to the central districts like Guntur, Nellore, Chingleput, Chittoor, North Arcot and Coimbatore districts, they have been affected by drought. Tanjore, Trichinopoly and Malabar have been suffering on account of the prevalence of insects and diseases. Again, Sir, the prices are falling by 17 per cent in Negapatam, 16 per cent in Rajahmundry and from 4 to 8 in other districts.

"These figures, I hope, will convince the Government that the prices instead of rising have fallen, and as such the Government's contention that there is no justification either for suspension or remission of kist falls to the ground."

"Well, Sir, this year I understand that the Government, instead of suspending a portion of the kist as they did in the previous year, i.e., by two annas in the rupee, like a Baniya have reduced the kist concession by a petty sum of one-quarter anna, thus giving only a reduction of 1½ annas in the rupee. If you take into account the exact situation in all the districts in the province, it will certainly be justifiable if a demand is made in this House for a reduction of 50 per cent or 33½ per cent of the kist. But, Sir, we as responsible people want to reduce that percentage to the lowest minimum of 25 per cent only. The mirasidars and the ryots are in a very hopeless position. Their indebtedness is increasing and there is nobody to buy their land. There is nobody even to lend them money. They are not in a position to pay even the reduced kist, whereas the assessment has also been increased on account of resettlement. The fact that the ryots are reduced to a hopeless position is shown from a perusal of what appears in the Government Gazette itself that the number of insolvents from every part of the Presidency is increasing very much. The list used to occupy not more than two pages of the whole Gazette. Now the number has increased to 9, or 11 or sometimes 16 pages during the recent weeks. That shows that the number of insolvency cases has increased on account of the fact that the landholders and mirasidars are reduced to the worst possible condition, and they have no other alternative but to file insolvency petitions. The landholder or the mirasidar in this country will be the last man to go to the court and file an insolvency petition unless he is driven to it. He is driven to it not merely by the economic depression but by the Government's attitude which does not recognize his position. I hope, Sir, that the Government will realize the situation in the country and accept this very modest demand for a reduction of 25 per cent of the kist. So, I move the resolution, Sir."

a.m.

[Mr. Abdul Hameed Khan] [24th January 1935]

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"In seconding this resolution, I want to bring to the notice of the Hon. the Revenue Member the difficulties of the agriculturists. The land revenue remission was given only for the last two years; in the first year it was 12½ per cent reduction, and in the second year even that remission has been reduced a little further. No doubt, this year, the Government has done something of their own accord before our asking for it, and we are glad for what little that has been given. But whether the reduction they have given is sufficient or not is the question for us to discuss. The Government thought that the price of paddy has improved considerably, and so they think they need not reduce the kist any further. But, I may assure the Hon. the Revenue Member that as a matter of fact the price has not at all improved on account of any marketing facilities or on account of any efforts taken by the Government. But it is due to some natural causes. Last year, the yield was so great that the prices fell, and this year the paddy yield has gone down roughly by one lakh of tons. That is one of the reasons, Sir, for the slight increase in price."

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Can the hon. Member tell me what percentage that one lakh of tons represents to the total amount of produce?"

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"The Hon. Member has got the Secretariat at his back and he can calculate the percentage for himself. I have not got any secretariat to prepare the figures for me."

"The second reason is this. On account of no seasonal rains, the dry crop also has failed in various places. Apparently on account of

that, the price has gone up a bit. Some people, as a matter of fact, expected a war and so they thought they should make some storage of paddy and this led to the withholding of paddy from the market, which also contributed to the rise in price. That is from Rs. 2 the price has gone up by a rupee. That is all due to speculation and not due to any steps taken by the Government. Another reason is that on account of some trouble in Siam, rice was not coming to Madras during that time which sent up the price of paddy. For these reasons, Sir, as far as I could gather, the slight increase in price has occurred. Even the little margin afforded by this slight increase of price was not shared by the ryot in any way, because it is only the middlemen who are dealing in paddy business that got the advantage. As a matter of fact, in the Kistna district one merchant who had a lakh and odd bags of paddy made a profit of about a lakh of rupees. On the other hand, the ryot has already sold his paddy even at the beginning to pay the land assessment. So the little benefit of that increased price has not gone to the ryot at all. The Government should not therefore take advantage of that situation and deprive the ryot of what they should do for him. It is not only in the Ceded districts but also in my district of Guntur, in certain taluks like Penukonda, for want of seasonable rains the dry crops have failed very badly. From the Fort St. George Gazette, you will see that there is not even sufficient fodder for the cattle in those taluks. I want to know from the Government what steps they have taken to improve the fodder situation and whether they are granting any free permits to the agriculturists to graze their cattle in the forests. If they grant these grazing permits freely especially at this time of want of fodder, the people will appreciate it to a very great extent.

"Again, I have been pointing out to the Madras Government for the last three years that the Nizam's Government is levying an unnecessary duty on Madras rice, and the Hon. Minister in charge of this portfolio has said with reference to my question on the subject that he has communicated with the Nizam's Government. As a matter of fact, the duty they are levying is against the agreement with the Madras Government. I just want to bring this also to the notice of the Hon. the Revenue Member, though it is not in his portfolio, as he is responsible for the prosperity of the agriculturists and ryots. He may also be helpful in a way to take necessary steps to see that some relief is given to them. Well, Sir, Siamese rice is still coming to Madras, about which my hon. Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan, dwelt. No doubt, it is an all-India question and the India Government has to take steps in the matter. But yet the Madras Government must press and worry them to see that some early disposal is made, expressing our local point of view to the Government of India."

"There is another thing. The railway concessions that are given for the carriage of internal paddy are also given to the Siamese rice. For example, if the railway concession for a bag from Tenali to Madras is 4 annas, the same facility is given to rice going up from Madras to Tenali, so that Siamese rice is finding its way to Tenali at the same rate of railway concession. The railway authorities should not give such facilities for foreign rice, just as we are not getting any concessions for our rice in other countries. That is one point which I want to bring to the notice of the Hon. the Revenue Member.

"It is a well-known thing that paddy crop is no more paying and so the Government must also find some new crops for the benefit of the ryot. I see that the Government is not taking any step in that direction. If the ryot himself changes for garden crops, unfortunately the Government is coming down on him with jaberdaast and zoolum in the matter of the irrigation of the crop. Considering that aspect of the matter, the ryots should be given a certain amount of privilege to use water for garden crops. But as a matter of fact, the privileges of the ryots which they have been enjoying from time immemorial are being cancelled during the last two or three years. There is a lot of trouble experienced by ryots for taking water especially for garden crops which have been grown during the last year or two. So the Government also must come forward with some sort of help to the ryot at this hour by giving proper water facilities.

12 noon. "Another thing, Sir. The irrigation authorities who are collecting a certain amount of irrigation tax from the ryot are expected to give water free of charge. If the ryot takes water from the main channel by subsidiary channels (lengthwise and breadthwise channels, as they are called), he is charged ground-rent and penalized again. So much so, every village has to pay about Rs. 200 roughly as penalty. For example, my own village pays Rs. 175 for taking such water. It is the duty of Government to supply us water free of charge. When we are ourselves repairing the channels, why should Government charge us for using this donka land which is used for purposes of irrigation? I want to impress on the Government that some sort of relief is necessary in this direction.

"A word about the inclusion fee. Now there are permanent wet lands and temporary wet lands. If the temporary is converted into wet they levy an inclusion fee of Rs. 25, otherwise called nazarana. This term takes us back to the good old days of Muhammadan rule. I do not see why the British Government should copy this system at this hour, particularly when the ryots are not in a position to pay the legitimate land revenue.

"Then as regards the resettlement, this business is worrying the people very much. When the Government itself has conceded that the ryot is not in a position to pay his legitimate land revenue, I cannot understand why the Government is proceeding with the settlement operations. Long ago, the Board of Revenue or the Board of Directors settled the land revenue policy. Mr. Dutt who was the champion of the ryots' cause has stated that the rents are fixed. The Board of Revenue then said that the rents were not fixed and they were not permanent. They said in criticizing the land revenue policy that fixed rents were very undesirable, because if the tax could be reduced at any time they would reduce it. Now we have had three settlements after that, but there has been no reduction of rent at all at any place; on the other hand there is excessive rent in various shapes. They say that 18½ per cent is the maximum for land taxation. But they are converting it in various shapes. They will say that the water-rate will not come under the 18½ per cent.

"There is another point. Government do not pay sufficient attention to repairs to irrigation channels. For example, in Tinnevely, from 1905 to 1935, they have not attended to the repairs of a particular channel. Thereby the ryots have to undergo a lot of difficulties for their cultivation. If Government repair any channel they demand Rs. 10 or Rs. 15 from the ryot. They hold out a threat to the ryot that if they are not prepared to pay, they won't repair the tank or channel. The poor ryot has no other go but to acquiesce. This is like saying 'Hands up and deliver or I will shoot you.' Have not the Government servants recently, when there was a cut of 10 per cent in their salary, kept quiet?

"Again, the Government of Madras has not taken up any crop-planning system. I say the crop-planning system must be brought into force and the ryots must be advised to change the paddy crop into various other crops for which bounties should be given or some other concession shown. There is no use Government granting the routine 21 pies remission or something like that. That does not mean that I am not in favour of this remission, but I want that the Government should come forward with more reasonable measures and grant more liberal remissions than they are giving at present."

* Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"I move, Sir, that at the end of the resolution the following words be inserted:—

'except in the case of famine-affected areas where full remission is absolutely necessary.'

"At present I do not propose to speak on the main resolution because I would rather like to wait for an opportunity to speak on it after the Hon. the Revenue Member has had his say. But what I am at present more interested in is what is considered necessary and what the decision of the Government is in the shape of land revenue remission in the famine-affected parts in this Presidency—most, if not all, of the portions, I believe, being in the Ceded districts. I know there are complaints, legitimate complaints I believe, from other parts of the Presidency also. The situation is such that unless full remission is granted the ryots living in those affected parts will be put to the greatest difficulty in paying the land revenue. I know Government has already taken some steps in this direction. In some areas they have remitted about 50 per cent—I am speaking subject to correction. At any rate, in some portions, they have remitted to the extent of 33½ per cent. It is absolutely inadequate. Even ordinarily, when there is a good crop, the ryots are not in a position to save anything, but now owing to general depression and the low price of agricultural produce the ryots are unable even to meet the necessities of life. Such being the case, is there any possibility of getting anything from the ryots

[Mr. K. Koti Reddi]

in a tract of country where the crops have almost if not completely failed? It is rather distressing that the Government should not have thought of remitting the full amount in such areas. Apart from the fact that fodder is very scarce in those parts, cattle are being sold away for a pittance for meeting the land revenue payments. It is often said that the ryot would have saved and ought to have saved something in good years for meeting the necessities of life and the revenue due to Government in bad years. As I have already said, on account of the very low prices prevailing, there will be nothing left for him for future years, even granting good crops; and after all, how many good years have we had? In my experience, in the Ceded districts, for the last 20 years I can honestly say there has not been one year in which we had good crops all-round. If cholam is a good crop; cotton fails, if cotton is a good crop, groundnut fails and so on. Not all the crops have been good in one year. No doubt, when prices were high, the ryot was able to save something. But unhappily there is now little left of that he had saved. He did buy some gold when the prices were high, but all that gold has been sold away now. It has been said that he sold away his gold because it fetched good prices. He began selling at Rs. 18 and the price has gradually risen and to-day it sells at Rs. 35 per tola. It is not a fact that the gold was sold because it fetched good prices. It is due to the fact that the ryot was compelled to sell his gold, first of all to meet the Government revenue and secondly to meet the necessities of life, let alone the sowcar who after all has not been able to collect much from the ryots. If the Government is prepared to call for statistics—let alone the private sowcars—from the branches of the Imperial Bank in Nandyal, Bellary and Cuddapah, they will certainly be convinced how the ryot in the beginning thought of not selling the gold but pledging it and getting money and subsequently how he was practically compelled to sell away all his gold because it was not possible for him to redeem the pledge and meet his needs. I believe the Government has enough material to be convinced of this. Such being the case, when even in the ordinary years the ryot is not able to put by anything against lean years, what is the good of expecting him to pay even half the tax when crops failed? So there is necessity for full remission.

12-15 P.M. "In cases where the outturn is more than 8 annas, it may not be as necessary as in cases where it is less than 8 annas. Let us classify the areas under two heads: (1) areas where the outturn is less than 4 annas, and (2) where it is more than 4 annas. If the former case, little is left for the ryot and he, besides being unable to pay any kist, has to go to the relief camp straightaway, whereas in the latter case, he will be just able to pay his kist but then if he does so, he too has to seek the help of Government for subsistence for the year as in the former case. The situation is such that in both these cases absolute remission should be granted, though it is necessary to do so only in cases where the outturn is less than 8 annas.

"Sir, I may take this opportunity to mention the fact that there is an impression in the Ceded districts, that the subordinates of the Revenue Department give, in their crop reports, exaggerated accounts of the outturn of the crop. These subordinates, except perhaps the karnams who are expected to over-estimate, know very little of how to correctly estimate the crop and yet these estimates are relied upon by the higher officers. This practice on the one hand misleads the officers above and on the other gives the impression to the ryots that these subordinates are expected to give such reports, though it is possible that these do so owing to the fear that they will be taken to task otherwise. The evil does not stop with the lower subordinates. It extends right up to the Revenue Divisional Officer and probably even to the Collector who, not being acquainted with the estimate of crops, usually confirm the subordinate officers' estimates as I have already said. The other day, when the Member of the Board of Revenue visited Pulivendla taluk, I expect, he got the impression that as the cholam crop was looking quite green, it would yield a good return. But, as one who is a bit cultivator himself, I may say that it is very difficult to estimate outturn on the field and generally the impression formed will be wrong when actually harvested."

[24th January 1935]

[Mr. K. Koti Reddi]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I may tell the hon. Member that he is exceeding his time-limit."

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"I am finishing, Sir. As I was saying, there is an impression that the subordinate revenue agency is expected to exaggerate the outturn in their reports. I request the Government not to simply rely on the returns sent up by these subordinates which are usually confirmed by the higher authorities but to leave enough margin for possible exaggerations. For instance, if the return says that the outturn is more than 8 annas, they may take it at about 8 annas, so on.

"Now, Sir, I expect the Government to move quickly in these matters. The first instalment of kist has to some extent been already collected. In these cases if it is not possible for them to refund the amount, I would request them at least to grant remission for the amount yet to be collected. The declaration has to be made immediately. If this is not done promptly, even people unwilling to go to the relief works after selling away what little they have for meeting the land revenue would be compelled to do so. I hope Government will take steps in time to see that not only 50 per cent but full remission is granted."

* Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, I beg to second the amendment. I do not think I need detain the House long. In view of the fact that the present Famine Commissioner is an officer who had been in Anantapur as Collector for nearly three years and as he knows the condition of the ryots in Anantapur and adjoining districts quite well, I expect that he will render every possible help. As a matter of fact he has recently visited these districts and has seen with his own eyes the test works that have been opened. I do not want to say much about it far from the few remarks that he made when visiting these test works—of course Government Members are very cautious and reticent about those remarks, etc.—I am confident that he sympathizes with the ryots of the Ceded districts and that he will do all he can to help them at this time of distress.

“I would like in this connexion to mention one thing. There is a mentality that the ryot is unwilling to pay the kist and that he wants to escape the assessment altogether even if he happens to have a good and plentiful yield. I would respectfully represent to some of the administrators who happen to have such a mentality to rid themselves of it. The other day when some of these distressed ryots approached the administrator on the spot they were told that they ought to be ashamed to go and ask for remission. What they had to pay was only the King's portion of the produce. The King's administration cannot go on if they did not pay it. They, therefore, ought to be ashamed for going and asking for remission of even a part of the kist. They must pay the dues to the Government in full. Sir, I certainly appreciate the fact that it is the bounden duty of the ryot to pay the King's share because it is impossible otherwise for the administration to go on. The ryot is certainly not unwilling to pay the King's share. He will be only too glad to pay his share. But unfortunately he is unable to do so. He is always willing to give but is now unable to give. He is always the giver and never the receiver. He is always there in order to help others. For example, in ordinary times who is the person who feeds your revenue peon when he goes to the village? May I know who it is that feeds the post peons who go to the villages? May I know who it is that feeds your salt peon when he goes to the villages? May I know who is the man who feeds your police peons when they go to the villages? Again, who is the man who feeds the revenue inspector when he goes to the village? May I know who feeds the tahsildar when he goes to the interior of the taluk? Who is it that goes and feeds the Revenue Divisional Officer when he visits the village? May I know who will feed the Hon. the Revenue Member if he decides to visit the villages to-morrow? It is the ryot that does so. The Hon. Member might take with him a few peons and butlers, but so far as the necessities of life such as salt, sugar, ghee, milk and so on, he must get them from the ryot and the ryot ungrudgingly offers these things. What about the others who visit the villages? May I know who gives succour to the poor people who go to the villages? It is the ryot. Who again is it that meets the vagrants that go to the villages? It is this same ryot. It is he again that feeds the travellers and the pilgrims that go to the villages. He, therefore, is always the giver. He is never the taker. It is, therefore, most humiliating to him to be told that he ought to be ashamed of himself for having gone and asked for relief in his most distressing hour. I believe that in such circumstances, if shame and humiliation lie anywhere, they lie only on the part of those who are in a position to grant the request and not on the part of those who make the request. The fault and the whole fault is that of the person who is in authority and is unwilling to move in the matter. That is the position which I want to lay emphasis upon. This is what I have been constantly saying.

[24th January 1935] [Mr. M. Gopalaswami Mudaliyar]

“So far as my district is concerned I would state one point and the Hon. the Revenue Member who visited the place in 1931–32 as Member of the Board of Revenue will bear out my statement. He had the privilege of coming to our district in 1931–32 and visited several famine-affected areas and, as a consequence we got timely help. He will bear me out when I say that this unfortunate district is being constantly visited by famine. We had famine in 1926, in 1929, in 1930. We have had a series of depressions in the last one decade as a result of which the ryot has been completely swept off his feet. He is, therefore, not in a position to pay the assessment. Because in some villages cholam crop is fairly good, it cannot be concluded that the ryots in the whole area are well off and could pay. It cannot be denied that the general situation is as I have described. I do not want to take up more time of this hon. House as there are several other Members desiring to speak on the subject. I sympathize with hon. Members in their desire, during this period of economic depression, to secure a remission of 25 per cent. But so far as the famine districts are concerned, I hope and trust that the Hon. the Revenue Member will come to our aid and immediately see that the kists are not collected.

“And as a matter of fact as my hon. Friend from Cuddapah has been saying they have already remitted one instalment there. So I request that Government will be pleased to take steps as early as possible and see that remission is granted to my district also.”

p.m.

* Mr. G. RAMESWARA RAO :—“Sir, in the previous speeches on this resolution all the general factors with regard to remission have been placed before this House both by the Mover as well as those who followed him. I want to specially emphasize the sad plight in which the district of Anantapur has been placed. It is a place where very few irrigation works have been constructed by this Government and the few irrigation works that were constructed by ancient Governments have been falling into decay because the present Government have not spent any money for putting those works in good repair, and have left the people of the district entirely in the lurch. I know of a taluk in my district, viz., the Madakasira taluk, which was supposed to be the garden of the district, where there used to be number of plantain, coconut and arecanut topes. They have here very little rainfall for the last 25 years, so much so, that if I go there now I cannot have a look at any one of them even for the sake of a specimen. Sir, to-day Madakasira taluk has been reduced to the position of a desert and Government have not spent anything for irrigation purposes. If God has not given to the people of my district the average rainfall and if added to that the Government also insist upon their pound of flesh and collect their revenue due to them, I say the Government will be the immediate cause in bringing ruin to the people. I would point out to the Hon. the Revenue Member that the average rainfall in my district was 11 inches in the current year as opposed to the usual normal of 22 to 23 inches. Even that little rain was undoubtedly availed of by the ryots and they invested the little they had by way of purchasing seeds

[Mr. G. Rameswara Rao]

and for the purpose of employing labour and thus completely rid themselves of their little money they had or they could raise on credit. Unfortunately for them there was no rainfall afterwards and consequently the seeds did not sprout well. Even the very few seeds that sprouted were not able to mature. I had the pleasure or displeasure of going in person to some of the taluks in my district and not even in one of these places was I able to see any crop, maturing well enough at least for the purpose of collecting seeds for the next year. When that is the position, I submit that it will be cruel on the part of Government if they did not come to the rescue of the ryot if not by restoring to the ryots what all they have lost, at least by remitting the circar kist without claiming it from them as a matter of course. This sort of concession is absolutely essential. I know the Famine Commissioner has been touring in the district with the Collector and I hope that they have been touched with the actual sufferings of the people. What I fear is that those who have not got previous experience of famine areas are likely to fall into error in exactly gauging the situation. The Board's Standing Orders provide for a sort of gradation in the yield and a sort of gradation in the remission or suspension. For instance, if the crop is between 0 to 4 annas remission will be probably from 25 to 50 per cent. The village karnam simply notes in his accounts that the estimated yield is 0 to 4 annas. It may be a zero or it may be 4 annas when recommendations are to be made by the local officers, they may have the maximum as the actual outturn and the minimum limit as the only scale that the ryot is entitled to. This would be an unfortunate way of dealing with the matter. The outturn accounts in the adangals are very misleading, because they are not actuals. There is what is called the karnam's note-book and the karnam is supposed to enter in that note-book the actual outturn after the harvest is over. During my tours I have always been asking the village karnams as to why the actuals were not entered in the note-books and they have invariably given the reply that it all depended upon the orders to be given by the Revenue Inspector or his superior and till they received his orders they would not fill up the register. No doubt the Government certainly do not expect their subordinates to do such things. As a matter of fact, these subordinate officials are so much over-powered by the officials above them that they do not fill up the columns in the register with regard to the outturn when they actually observe, but they do so only in the taluk office long afterwards when they go and sit there for Jamabandi for 20 days. Government know all this routine and hence, they ought not to attach very great importance to these accounts as if they were made in the usual course of business. Accounts are not very strict and they are only made to keep up to a form and not in the spirit in which they are required to be made. When that is so, I would press that the outturn reports should be looked into with some caution especially as the recommendations made by the local officials are likely to be lacking in sympathy as they may choose not the lowest scale for purposes of outturn but the highest and the lowest figure in the scale for purposes of percentage of remission. In view of the fact that the accounts themselves are misleading I would ask the Government to realize the situation and do the right thing to relieve the sufferings of the ryots.

24th January 1935] [Mr. G. Rameswara Rao]

“There is one other point which I wish to touch upon. Not only the prices of commercial crops have fallen, but also there has been a rise in the price of staple-food crops. If you will just refer to the Fort St. George Gazette, dated 8th January 1935, you will find that in Anantapur the price of one imperial maund of rice was 5.18, to the pre-War standard averages of 1913-14. The pre-War average was 5.18. Now this week it has fallen to 4.04. Now in the case of cholam the pre-War standard price per imperial maund was 2.91, 1.90 for the corresponding week of the previous year, and 3.02 this week. In the case of cumbu the price per maund according to pre-War standard was 2.95, for the corresponding week of the previous year it was 1.86 and it rose to 3.04 last week and it remains where it was this week. Similarly in the case of ragi. Taking the staple-food crops, their prices have risen as much as up to pre-War standard price or even higher in some cases. The prices of commercial crops have fallen. Therefore, I would ask the Government to take into consideration the very bad predicament in which the ryot has been placed. He has no foodstuffs. He has to buy it at a very heavy price. The prices of commercial crops have fallen and so he has less of money. If in addition to these, the Government also want the ryots to pay the entire kists due to them, I think it is impossible for them to get on. Therefore, I would ask the Government to take a sympathetic and a humane view of things and give the ryots full remission. Suspension may be thought of, but I fear that Damocles' sword will always be hanging on their head. I would, therefore, submit that full remission in all reasonable cases be given to the ryots. Except in cases where it is impossible to find that the ryot has made out a case for the concession. Wherever you are in doubt, I say, give the benefit of doubt to the ryot.

“With these few words I move my amendment, i.e., to add the following words at the end:—

‘and that Anantapur district deserves special consideration, apart from the other districts in the Presidency.’”

The amendment was duly seconded.

Mr. G. SIMHACHALAM PANTULU:—“Sir, I wish to make a few remarks on this motion. Though I cannot claim that Narasaraopet division should be included in the famine area, still I have got some justification. In three taluks, the crops are rain-fed crops. Time and again we approached the Government to take up some project in that portion of the district and we were often told that whatever project was investigated the result there was negative, and so no projects that we suggested were undertaken. The ryot has to depend upon his dry crops and these too have yielded very poorly owing to want of rains. God also has not been helping the people in their miserable plight. Whenever we bring forward this subject, the question of statistics come in our way. When we say there is no proper yield, the Hon. the Revenue Member will stand up and say that he has got information from the Collector to say that the yield was good. As rightly pointed out by my hon. Friend, Mr. Koti Reddi, we have to depend upon the estimate of the Revenue Inspector. After all, with no experience, he is not expected to give an accurate estimate of the crop. After all 25 per cent or full remission is certainly a modest request in a time like this especially in a place where the ryot has to depend upon the rain-fed crops. The reasons advanced by most of the Members of this House have now to be faced. It is no use saying that they are common-place arguments. It is also usual for the Government to say 'no.' Every time when this question was brought before the Council the reply from the Hon. Member was that the information given by the non-official Member was not correct, and therefore the Government could not act upon it. If the Government doubt the genuineness or the accuracy of the statement given by the representatives of the people here they can very well institute an enquiry by having a non-official committee and have a correct estimate of the crops. Instead of doing that if they simply say that the information given by us is not correct we cannot help it. May I submit that it all depends upon the view that the Government take in a matter like that? If the Government really and seriously intend to take a sympathetic view, certainly they will find ways and means. They can also find out arguments for the other aspect of the matter. Here, if Government admit that the economic depression is causing havoc in villages, certainly they can adopt measures to survey the actual state of things and grant remission to the ryots."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The resolution and the amendment read as follows:—

2. This Council recommends to the Government that a remission of not less than 25 per cent be granted in the land revenue kist in all the districts in respect of wet and dry lands and inclusive of water-rates for the current fasli, i.e., 1344, except in the case of famine-affected areas where full remission is absolutely necessary and that Anantapur district deserves special consideration, apart from the other districts in the Presidency."

* Rao Bahadur Dr. C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, I strongly support the motion moved by my Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan. He is a Madrasee and I am also a Madrasee. I believe we have got some lands in the Chingleput district.

"There should be some commission appointed. There is no use of hon. Members moving resolutions here every session and whether the Council passes them or not the Government not yielding to our wishes. There is something radically wrong with our land revenue system. My hon. Friend, Mr. Abdul Hameed Khan Sahib, explained the situation in many districts. Even the mirasidars of Tanjore, I learn who have first-rate fertile lands, get only a net income of Rs. 50 per acre. That income is not enough to maintain a single family. When such is the case with regard to Tanjore, I have a sorry tale to tell with regard to Chingleput. Those who can voice forth their grievances like the people of the Ceded districts are heard in this Council, but what about Chingleput district? First rate land in Chingleput district is assessed at Rs. 10 an acre. But look at the cost of cultivation. Seeds cost Rs. 3, ploughing Rs. 8, weeding for the first time Rs. 5, weeding for the second time Rs. 3, reaping, threshing, winnowing, etc., Rs. 5 and manure Rs. 3, making a total of Rs. 37. One acre of land produces 100 marakkals of paddy and at the rate of three marakkals a rupee, the landowner gets only Rs. 33-5-4. Therefore he will have to borrow about Rs. 3-10-8 even to pay the kist. Then where will he go for his maintenance? A family of five souls, two parents and three children, require at least Rs. 10 a month. I presided over a conference of mirasidars at Mamandur and I know the real state of things. Some of the landlords have lands in Chingleput and they know what little they get from the lands. The mirasidars who have relations in Madras go to them for help to pay the kist. The landlords who live in Madras think of their lands in Chingleput only when their relations go to them for help to pay the kist or to feed themselves. But there are many other people who have no relations to help them and what will be their fate? The difficulty is the lands are producing only half of what they were yielding when they were originally assessed. The rivers also have been silted up and even when only a normal quantity of water flows in them they are overflowed and the fields are inundated and the crops are submerged. The Revenue Department takes no care to make these lands yield more, but still they want the same rate of assessment as they got some years ago when the lands were very fertile. Let them increase the productivity of the lands by constructing dams across rivers and by other means. They constructed a dam across the Courtalliar river by means of which they have been enabled to supply the whole of Madras City with over six lakhs of people with water. If they do the same with other rivers the money will be properly utilized and the lands also will be made more fertile. Let there be a commission appointed and let them go into the question whether the Chingleput district can pay these assessments without suffering. I have tabled a resolution recommending a permanent remission of 33½ per cent but if the other districts can afford to take a lesser remission, I urge that the Chingleput district at least should be given that remission. I request the Hon. the Revenue Member to take into the consideration the cost of cultivation I have given and decide for himself how it is possible for the people in Chingleput to maintain themselves. They have already sold away their jewels and mortgaged their lands, perhaps never to recover them. Even the long-term loans advanced by the Government are not being repaid by the people because they cannot do so. Men who possessed extensive lands some 30 years ago do not possess them now. Those people who have been getting some help from people in Madras have been able to get on, but not others. I request the Hon. the Revenue Member and whole Cabinet to judge for themselves whether remission of 33½ per cent is not necessary for the Chingleput district. In fact it is necessary for the whole Presidency, but as my hon. Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan, has asked for 25 per cent only for the whole Presidency, I accept his percentage for the whole Presidency while pressing for a remission of $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent for the god-forsaken district of Chingleput."

* Mr. K. S. SIVASUBRAHMANYA AYYAR:—"Sir, I beg to move—

'that for the figures "25" the figures " $33\frac{1}{3}$ " be substituted.'

"In doing this, I am quite sure I am proceeding with a full sense of responsibility, due caution and moderation. Anyone who knows the condition of the agriculturists, and those who depend on them to-day will agree with me that this proposal for a remission of $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent on the current demand is not a wild one. As has been pointed out by my hon. Friend, Mr. Natesa Mudaliyar, it is the most modest one and not at all an extravagant one. Sir, in the communiqué issued by the Government wherein they propose to give a remission of As. 1-9 in the rupee for the wet lands, etc., they anticipated that the prices were likely to recover. I shall just show that the prices have not risen, but on the contrary they have fallen. The figures quoted from the Fort St. George Gazette by Mr. Hameed Khan in his speech on the resolution recommending a reduction of 25 per cent clearly show that the tendency of the prices has been to go down rather than to go up. With regard to my district the price of rice per imperial maund has been given as follows in the Fort St. George Gazette:—

On 12th January 1935 3-49

On 12th January 1933 3-60

"This clearly shows that the prices are on the decline. The rainfall statement published in the Gazette shows that while the average rainfall per year is 42.5 inches, we have had only a rainfall of 27.4 inches in the last year. The north-east monsoon has utterly failed. There are certain other relevant figures collected by the Secretary of the Tanjore Delta Mirasidars' Association which I wish to place before this House. The price of samba in the first week of January 1934 was Rs. 3-6-0; the price of big samba was Rs. 3. In the second week the prices were Rs. 3-12-0 and Rs. 3-4-0 respectively. In the third week the prices were Rs. 3-12-0 and Rs. 3-4-0 respectively. This year the prices have gone down. In the first week the price of samba was Rs. 3-4-0, of big samba Rs. 3 and of kuruvai Rs. 2-5-6. In the second week the prices were Rs. 3-4-0, Rs. 2-14-0 and Rs. 2-5-6 respectively. In the third week the prices were Rs. 3-4-0, Rs. 2-14-0 and Rs. 2-5-6 respectively. Prices quoted are mill delivery prices per one bag. Village prices are always 7 or 8 annas less than the mill delivery prices. These figures clearly show that the prices have not risen as anticipated. On the contrary they are falling. The failure of the north-east monsoon coupled with the fall in prices and the import of foreign rice has added to the difficulties of the ryots in all directions possible. The yield of paddy this year is not expected to be what it used to be owing to the failure of the monsoon and also owing to the prevalence of a crop disease called in Tamil (அலிவெட்டு) (destruction by rats). The difficulties of the ryots have been enhanced by the recent rains last week, because the little that the ryots were expecting has been submerged. Nearly 75 per cent of the population depend upon agriculture and the agriculturists and therefore is it too much to expect a reduction of $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent especially when the ryots are about to be ruined? I need not dilate on the condition of the ryot to-day as everyone knows what it is. He is very heavily indebted, cannot pay the interest and he cannot even pay his kist. The price of land has gone down. The price of the foodstuffs has gone down considerably and even for that low price, he cannot effect a sale of his produce. What little the ryot had saved and had by way of jewels, vessels, etc., he has sold and met the Government demand during the last two faslis. So much so, to-day he is a pauper indeed, pure and simple. If under these circumstances he is not able to meet the Government demand, it is likely to be misinterpreted or misconstrued as being an attempt on his part to resort to a campaign of no-tax. I should like to impress on the Government that if the ryot does not pay, as is likely to be, it is because he is not able to pay at all rather than because he is attempting to disobey the law. Sir, we are on the eve of new constitutional reform being introduced about whose success the Government are anxious. Therefore I would request the Government to think twice before following or sticking on to the present policy of niggardliness in the matter of granting remission to the ryots on the ground of prestige or other reasons as it is likely to drive them to despair but instead come to their rescue by granting this remission.

"Any further delay in the matter will not only be a danger but it will mean death to that class of population. I would also appeal to the Government to consider specially the case of the districts which were settled after 1918-19. I request the Government to give them at least $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent remission; so, I have come forward to move this amendment. I appeal to the Hon. the Raja of Bobbili, the Chief Minister who is not here, to lend his support and the support of his party to this amendment. Recently when he opened the Conference of Mirasidars at Shiyali, he was very sympathetic and made us understand that all efforts will be taken to see that the interests of the ryotwari population are safeguarded, that much more remission is given to them. We have understood from the papers that when the question of giving remission of land revenue was considered by the Cabinet, he was forced by circumstances or otherwise to absent himself from the Cabinet meeting. Perhaps that was the reason why we were not fortunate enough to get more liberal suspension or remission of land revenue. We were expecting much; as soon as he returned to Madras, we were under the impression that he would use his influence in the Cabinet and see that more liberal remission is granted to us. But we were sadly disappointed and nothing has been done till now. I would appeal to him to remember the promise, the undertaking he gave us at Shiyali and to put up a strong fight on behalf of the poor ryotwari population and to see that a more liberal remission is granted to us. . ."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member has exceeded his time-limit."

* Mr. K. S. SIVASUBRAHMANYA AYYAR:—"One minute, Sir. I would also appeal to the Justice Democratic party whose leader we miss to-day very sadly, to support this amendment, as it is an amendment in the cause of the poor ryotwari population for whose welfare he has always been working and putting up a very strong fight here. Lastly I would appeal to all the hon. Members of this House to support this amendment and carry it unanimously."

Mr. A. Pl. N. V. NADIMUTHU PILLAI:—"Sir, while seconding this amendment moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar, I wish to say a few words. Though several hon. Members of this House have been speaking on the floor of this House on this important question of land revenue remission the Government have been hard-hearted and have not taken into consideration the real plight of the ryots in this Presidency. During the last fasli even in spite of the inadequate recommendations of the Finance Committee for a remission of 18½ per cent and the verdict of this Council for a remission of 25 per cent the Government were pleased to grant only a temporary suspension of 12½ per cent in some districts and 9½ per cent in some other districts which they finally remitted. This small meagre concession did not at all help the ryots. The borrowing capacity of the agriculturists having reached the maximum, they are unable to command any credit and the banks do not pay even 15 per cent on the security of the lands since the price of the lands and their produce have reached a rock-bottom price. I am sure the Government would have received memorials and copies of resolutions passed at the various Taluks and District Conferences of Landholders from all parts of the Presidency. From the number of such memorials and the nature of resolutions the Government could easily imagine how the condition of the ryots has not improved. On the other hand their position is becoming very acute day by day. In fact the burning question of the hour is about the ryot and land revenue."

"The recommendations of the Government for a suspension of 10-15/16 per cent in the land revenue for the current fasli will not in any way mend matters and is not at all encouraging to the ryots who are hard pressed for money. Very recently in the small Indian State of Pudukottah, the Government having realized the acuteness of the untold sufferings of the agriculturists have granted a remission of 50 per cent. The other Local Governments also have come to the rescue of the mirasidars by liberal remissions. This Government alone is deaf to the cries of the ryots. To say that conditions have improved and the prices of paddy have risen is a mistaken calculation. Of course there were signs of increase in the prices of foodstuffs in some stray places. But this increase lasted only for about a week by which time the foreign rice was dumped into those markets. As long as the foreign rice is continued to be imported, there will be no market for our paddy being sold at a fair price. This Government and the Central Government should take immediate steps to stop dumping foreign rice or to impose a very heavy duty on the same. Then and only then the condition of the agriculturists can to a certain extent improve. In conclusion I would request the Hon. the Revenue Member and the Hon. the Finance Member to take a sympathetic attitude towards the ryots and recommend to the Government for a remission of at least 33½ per cent from this fasli in the land revenue both for wet and dry lands without any distinction. If the Hon. the Finance Member is not able to balance the budget if this remission is to be granted, I would once more urge the Government to revive the cut on salaries and reduce the strength of the staff in all departments."

Mr. A. RAMAKRISHNA REDDI:—"Sir, I rise to support the amendment. The Hon. Member for Revenue will remember that during the budget discussion last year, hon. Members of this House were describing the plight in which the ryots were then. The House almost unanimously declared that the Government should grant very liberal remissions. Probably the only hon. Member who was in favour of the policy of the Government was Sir Patro and the House might remember the encomiums the Hon. the Finance Member then showered upon him. Sir Patro while sympathizing with the plight of the ryot, pointed to the House that it was not possible for the Government to undertake to give wholesale remissions. He threw out an excellent suggestion that the Government may undertake to investigate into the actual localities where distress existed to a greater extent and that remission might be granted on that basis, rather than on the basis of the recently resettled districts. Of course that suggestion was a very good suggestion; when it was a question of giving relief to the poor, it must be done on the basis as to where relief is required. Unfortunately for Sir Patro, while the Government accepted his support, they gave him up by not paying the least attention to the excellent suggestion he then gave. If the Government had taken up that suggestion and had instituted an enquiry in the Presidency as to where actual relief was most needed, I am sure that the Ceded districts, which is very well known as the famine zone of the Presidency, will be the first to require the greatest relief. The fact that the Ceded districts is the worst districts in the Presidency is not a thing which is new; nor does it require many arguments in support of it. So far as these districts are concerned, it is well known that there are no irrigation projects at all; and the Government have been tantalizing us by the Tungabhadra Project which is supposed to be coming."

"The House knows that absolutely no progress has been made so far, as far as the starting of this project is concerned. The Government have been only giving this excuse for not spending more money on irrigation and for not repairing any of the existing irrigation works; we are asked to wait till the Tungabhadra Project comes. But unfortunately we see very little prospect of this project coming into existence."

[Mr. A. Ramakrishna Reddi] [24th January 1935]

So far as the Ceded districts are concerned, they practically depend upon precarious rainfall; it is also well known that nature also is not certainly bountiful to the extent to which it is in other districts of the Presidency. The actual crops that are raised, the House and the Government might know, are not crops which yield any amount of money. The only money-bringing crop so far as these districts are concerned, is groundnut. I am sure the Government, the Board of Revenue and everybody can know by this time that so far as the groundnut crop is concerned, it has been total failure in all the districts comprising the Ceded districts. The only other major crop is cholam; I think the Hon. the Revenue Member may know that cholam was selling at 16 measures per rupee two years back. On account of the famine conditions that are now prevailing, it is selling at 11 or 12 measures per rupee. One can imagine what is the amount of money that would come to the hands of the ryot in these districts which is not like other districts where money-crops can be raised in abundance. Here the crop upon which the ryot has to depend, namely, groundnut, has been a failure and so far as the other crops are concerned, they get very little money; that has been the chronic condition of the ryot for a long time. Added to the chronic condition of the Ceded districts, one can imagine by the very nature of the soil and the very nature of the rainfall, and by what one gets from the nature of crops than one can raise, that the effects of the economic depression are greater in these districts than in the rest of the Presidency. So far as the Ceded districts are concerned, the ryots have sold away every tola of gold. Everybody knows the condition of the ryots in the Ceded districts; how very conservative these people are; jewels are supposed to be stri-dhanam property and not a property belonging to the family. When these jewels have been sold to the last tola, one can imagine what is the nature of the plight the people are at present. In these districts, insolvency petitions are the order of the day. The only courts that are busy now are the insolvency courts. In the Ceded districts one can see now that there is a very large increase in crime, which is due to the fact that there is clash between the creditors and debtors. Unfortunately, creditors on account of the very nature of their business have to press for payment of the money lent by them, as the value of the properties are depreciating very rapidly and the debtors unable to give up their houses and probably small extents of land on which they are living, have to take up a desperate attitude. The result has been and I am sure the figures will show that there has been a very large number of murders on account of the clash between the creditor and the debtor; that is the present position of the Ceded districts. Added to this plight, this year there are special famine conditions throughout the Ceded districts. A large number of meetings have been held to impress upon the Government the serious situation which is now existing in the Ceded districts and so far as Kurnool is concerned—portions of Pattikonda and Dhone—very rigorous famine conditions are existing. The Government themselves have opened some kitchens in those places to afford some protection to the starving ryots; all reserve forests were thrown open for grazing. After that, probably on the 31st October 1-15 there was some small shower and later on again on the 3rd November p.m. in those parts.

“Taking advantage of this, the ryots were able to sow only cholam to a very large extent. After the 3rd of November till to-day there has not been a single drop of rain, and in spite of the repeated representations made by the ryots, by the representatives of ryots and by ryots' associations, the kist collection is unfortunately going on very vigorously, and absolutely no attempts have been made to stop such collections. I need hardly mention the other portions which are in similar plight, such as the Kurnool taluk, Dhone and Markapur. My submission is that taking into consideration the chronic state of famine generally existing in this province, and the facts that the Ceded Districts have to depend upon a precarious rainfall, that the economic depression is telling upon these districts to a much more extent than the rest of the province and that especially this year famine conditions in these districts are very acute, it is absolutely necessary that the Government should come to the rescue of these districts. It is no good for the Government to cling to their old formula of recently resettled districts or remotely resettled districts in order to find out where relief is acutely needed and then give such relief. There is no use acting upon such formula now when there is great distress among the people. I therefore make an appeal to the House that so far as the Ceded Districts are concerned, they should see that we are unanimous in voting for some special measure of relief to them. Probably every hon. Member would like to emphasize the conditions in his district, and think that any special relief to the Ceded Districts might affect the relief to his own district. But, Sir, this is not a case of speaking for constituencies; it is a case of having humanitarian considerations towards a people who are actually starving. I hope, Sir, the House will be unanimous in giving such a special measure of relief to the Ceded Districts.”

* Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, to my mind it looks as if a resolution of this nature, repeated as it has been this year, raises the fundamental question of not only temporarily solving the difficulties of the ryots and of the agriculturists, but also of giving them a permanent relief. Time and over, it has been stated in this House that the entire system of land revenue taxation in this province is based upon a fundamental error, viz., of taking 50 per cent of the net income of the agriculturist. Taking this admitted fact into consideration, the revenues we are deriving from the agriculturist is hopelessly high and large which is unparalleled in any other part of India. In fact, compared with the taxation in regard to other professions, the taxation levied on the agricultural classes, to which about 80 per cent of the population of this province belong, is unsupportable. As one who has kept himself abreast of the actual conditions of the agriculturists in the interior parts of the district it looks to me that the resolution moved by my Friend from the City is a very modest one. True, the argument would be adduced that if as much as Rs. 1½ crores is to be taken away from the revenues in the shape of remissions by a 25 per cent remission, the administration will be brought to a standstill. That argument has been trotted out on more than one occasion; and it has been equally emphatically replied to and in a convincing way by members of this honourable House who took part in a similar debate last year. Sir, we request Government to go back to the days of 1914 and 1920, so as to keep the cost of administration down to that level. From 1914 to 1934, within these twenty years, the cost of administration in this province has more than doubled, and the supreme question of the moment seems to be whether the bulk of the population employed in agriculture, from whom as much as 40 per cent of the entire revenues of the province is derived, can bear this topheavy administration. Relief in this direction, Sir, is an urgent necessity. Hon. Members who preceded me in this debate and hon. Members who participated in a similar discussion last year have brought to the notice of the Government the sad plight of the agriculturists of this province. I contend, Sir, that the condition of the agriculturists of this province was never prosperous, and least of all in years such as this. An unparalleled economic depression has overtaken them and broken their very backbone. I am sure the Government are well acquainted with the fall in prices of foodstuffs, the admission of which by the Government has taken the shape of a paltry concession of $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent remission last year— $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent remission in the case of districts which were resettled before or after a particular time and $9\frac{3}{4}$ per cent in the case of others. The price of agricultural products has fallen by 45 to 50 per cent; and although there has been a slight rise now and then in the price of such products, I think it will be generally admitted that there has not been a sufficient rise so as to warrant even the withdrawal of the small concession shown last year. Added to that, we have this fact, viz., that during the last two years, several hundreds of thousands of tons of foreign cereals, especially rice, have been imported into this country which has affected the price of foodstuffs adversely. The Madras Government have been sitting still without coming to the rescue of the agriculturists; and to this extent, I must say there has been a confession of failure to appreciate the exact position.

"I was saying, Sir, that the economic condition of the agriculturist was never too high, much more so these two or three years when he has been faced with a crisis. His reserve power has dwindled down within the last two years and the flight of gold from this country bears most eloquent testimony to the fact that whatever he had, he had to sell in order to meet the demands of the Government. Sir, the other day, in answer to an interpellation by me, the Hon. the Law Member on behalf of the Government admitted that the agricultural indebtedness of this country runs to the enormous amount of Rs. 150 crores. I say that most of this indebtedness is due to the fact that to-day we have to pay a land taxation which is unparalleled in any other province of this country. It may be said that a large part of this indebtedness is due to the fact that the agriculturists of the province waste money on ceremonial occasions; but those who know the agriculturists of this country will admit that you cannot find a race of more thrifty, hard-working and toiling people anywhere. To me at any rate it seems that money spent on certain ceremonial occasions is money rightly spent, which cannot be avoided in certain circumstances. That being the agriculturist's economic position, his reserve power being nil, the only question is whether he is in a position to pay the kist amount demanded of him.

"I have further to refer to one or two important suggestions. A suggestion has been made that the collection of kist may be made in six instalments by the Government instead of four, as at present. Another suggestion is that in view of a general failure of monsoon in most districts of the province, a larger measure of relief than 25 per cent should be afforded to the agriculturists. But I shall content myself for the present with supporting the resolution moved by my Friend Mr. Hameed Khan. He has referred to various districts such as Tanjore, Vizagapatam, Madras, South Kanara, etc., where prices have fallen. He has referred to other districts also where rains have disappointed this year. An unanswerable case on behalf of the agriculturists has been made out. I would therefore appeal to the Hon. the Revenue Member to give us an idea as to how he proposes to meet this economic situation of the agriculturists.

"One other point to which I would like to draw the attention of the House is that although in certain districts prices have improved to the extent of 1 or 2 per cent, still the outturn of produce has fallen considerably, and what he gained by the slight rise in prices, the agriculturist has lost by reason of the produce not being up to expectations. The result is that the economic condition is the same, the budget of the agriculturist is the same. The Government having admitted this acute situation, by giving a remission, cannot have any other answer to the resolution now, but to give a substantial remission of the kist. As I said, the reserve power of the agriculturist having fallen much lower than even last year, it behoves the Government to give a greater concession to him this year.

"I would like also to point out that on the question of marketing facilities, the reduction in transit charges has not benefited the agriculturist materially. This argument was advanced by the Hon. the Finance Member and also by the Hon. the Revenue Member last year on a similar motion before the House; but I make bold to say that during the last twelve months, adequate marketing facilities or transit facilities have not been given to the agriculturist. Such of the facilities as were given have not been of much help to him at all.

"With these words, Sir, I support the resolution moved by my Friend Mr. Abdul Hameed Khan."

Mr. MAHBOOB ALI BAIG:—“Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name, namely— 2-45 p.m.

‘Add at the end, “and that in the case of districts which are resettled, the increase in assessment due to resettlement shall also be suspended.”’

“Sir, it hardly requires any argument on my part to convince the House that this amendment is a necessary one and a just one. The position is this; speaking about my district, that is Kistna, the enhancement was about 18 per cent and the proposed suspension is about 12 per cent. The Council will therefore realize that the districts that have been resettled have not been given any relief at all. Thus, I request the House to support me in this amendment. Speaking generally about remissions, I wish to state that the subject has been dealt with so thoroughly both in the Press and on the platform and also in this Council that there is very little scope to contribute to the discussion as far as the merits of the case are concerned. The facts and figures have been canvassed on both sides by the Government as well as by the people. But the Government, however, admit that the monster of depression has not yet loosened its grip, that the purchasing power of the people continues still to be at its lowest ebb, and in consequence agricultural products have not been fetching at least that minimum of prices which are calculated to leave the agriculturists a surplus sufficient to keep his body and soul together. Again, by the appointment of a Special Officer to investigate into the rural indebtedness and also by allowing the non-official Bill of my Friend, Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar—the Debts Conciliation Bill—to go before the Select Committee, the Government have evidently shown their interest with regard to the grave situation that is growing in the rural areas of the Presidency. More than all the suspension of a percentage of revenue for this fasli, however meagre it may be, for which our thanks are due to the Government, clearly indicates that the Government is alive to the condition of the ryot and is alive to the fact that the ryot is not in his normal condition and is unable to pay his normal dues. But one is tempted to ask how is it then that in spite of the fact that Government is alive to all these factors and have got the knowledge of these facts, how is it then that the Government does not take any step and remit a sufficiently large percentage of the revenue which would go to give a proper and sufficient relief to the poor. To some extent, Sir, the land revenue policy is responsible for this. The poorest ryot is taxed and taxed at a similar rate as the richest ryot. More than this, Sir, the conception that finances must be ensured for running the Government at any cost, whatever conditions might prevail in the country and that stability should be secured only by pampering public servants and keeping them satisfied even in these days of depression, I dare say, Sir, that it is this conception on the part of the Government that is really responsible for not giving the relief that is required in the circumstances."

[Mr. Mahboob Ali Baig]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member has got only two minutes more."

Mr. MAHBOOB ALI BAIG:—"May I with your permission, Sir, state that the Government is short-sighted if it devoted its whole attention to the collection of revenues and felt anxious and certain at the prospect of decrease in the revenue. It is very unfortunate, Sir, that an impression is gaining ground in the country that the Government is a heartless machinery and that it does not heed the miseries of the people. When it wants, it collects money whether the ryot is able or is not able to pay. Sir, we, the representatives of the people, are anxious to dispel this impression from the minds of the people and want to tell them that their impression is really wrong and the Government still exist for the people and not the people for the Government. We, therefore, request the Government, Sir, to strengthen our hands by being responsive to our appeal so that we might go back to the country and tell the people that they were wrong in their impressions. Now, Sir, may I throw out a suggestion when the agitation in the country is more and if it is not an essentially political, it is more economic rather than political agitation. No wonder, therefore, that the party in the country which is opposed to Government finds it easy to disturb the minds of the people. The situation in the country is really fraught with dangerous implications. I, therefore, say with all the emphasis in my command for the stability of the country and for the peace therein and for all that goes to make for the better governments of the country, a substantial relief is necessary in the present circumstances."

[24th January 1935]

* Rai Sahib C. KOLANDA REDDI:—"Mr. President, Sir, in seconding this motion I wish to say a few words. This remission or suspension is a painful affair. I wonder, Sir, how the Government arrived at this petty figure of 12½ per cent and something less. It is a great pity that the Government do not realize the magnitude and the gravity of the situation. Of course, my friends who preceded me have furnished plenty of statistics and are imposing array of facts and figures, which I am afraid the Hon. the Revenue Member with all his intelligence and with all the files before him cannot rebut. (Laughter.) Now, Sir, as a Reddi, I am a ryot myself and you will pardon me if I present the ryot's case, the point of view of the man-in-the-street, of the under-dog who bears the whole burden of this administration. As I was leaving Bezwada, I found that the new paddy was selling at Rs. 20 to Rs. 25 per candy. Of course, it consists of 10 bags of 166 pounds each. Now, Sir, fortunately or unfortunately, two things have coincided. That is the harvest season and the kist season. I think it is needless for me to state that the revenue officials are ultra-busy now. They are busy now with one purpose, i.e., to squeeze, to squeeze and squeeze until the ryot is bled white as he is. Then you know the plight of the ryot. He will be thrown on the scrap heap. He will not be remembered until the next season comes round. Now, Sir, everybody knows that on account of this depression, the prices have fallen of not only paddy, but also other commodities and the fall has been so steep that whatever quantity is sold, the money that the ryot gets in return is precious little and the one thing that presses very heavily upon him is revenue assessment. After paying the assessment, the balance that he has is neither fish, nor flesh nor good red-herring. It serves no purpose at all, and he cannot make both the ends meet with what remains on hand so much so that the condition of the ryot is awfully deplorable, critical, nay, disastrous. I wonder, Sir, how you can expect the ryot under such conditions to beget children, to rear the children that he has, to educate them, to marry them and play the part of a human being. And he forms the very foundation, the backbone of this grand Government in this agricultural country."

"It is needless for me to say that 95 per cent of South Indians 3 p.m. are agriculturists. Kistna, Sir, from which I come, Kistna which was blessed by the presence of Mr. Souter more than once and that for long periods, I must say that when Mr. Souter was there, Kistna was a land flowing with milk and honey. In those halcyon days, there was prosperity all round and the ryot was rolling in wealth. (A voice: 'Who was responsible?') Of course, the Government is responsible. Now, Sir, at present, the ordinary average ryot's condition can be very well explained by quoting the case of the biggest ryot in the Kistna district. That man cultivates about one thousand acres of paddy, and before the depression spread its tentacles over the land, he was selling his paddy for Rs. 96,000. After paying the kist of Rs. 16,000, he had on hand Rs. 80,000, liquid cash, with which he could do anything. Now, what is his fate? Now, he realizes out of the sale of the same proceeds only Rs. 26,000, out of which he has to pay Rs. 16,000 in the shape of kist. With the balance of Rs. 10,000, it is for you to see what he can do with regard to cultivation expenses and other things. Sir, he has been reduced to such a plight that he was unable to meet a decretal demand of Rs. 4,000, so much so that he had to allow all his heads of cattle and other movables to be attached. Such is the condition of the ryot in Kistna. During the Christmas, I have travelled over some more districts and I find that the condition of the ryot is the same all over.

[Mr. C. Kolanda Reddi]

"Now, with regard to dry crops, they are no better than the paddy crop. The dry lands were leased out, I know as a matter of fact, at Rs. 12 per acre before the depression. Now men are not coming forward to take up the same land on even Rs. 4 per acre. That is the condition, and if we are ourselves to cultivate it, of course we may not be able to realize that amount. I say, Sir, in these circumstances, this remission or suspension of 12½ per cent is baniya's higgie or Komati beram. What I submit is these poor people have been bearing the burden with more than asinine patience. Even for that there is a limit, and it is for the Government to understand that limit and to act as it ought to save the situation.

"Now, Sir, I may submit that this is the time for the Ministers to show their sympathy for the ryot and tell the Reserved Half to be more human and humane, if they are not, warn them that there would be a parting of the ways. I am afraid, Sir, Sir Kurma is not here. He too is supposed to be a ryot, and I think ryot's interests must be nearest his heart. Of course, there is our Finance Member who is bidding us adieu shortly who is meeting other demands very liberally such as restoration of cuts and construction of houses for high officials as if they are now floating in the air for want of accommodation. But when it comes to the ryot, I am sorry to say he is rather close-fisted. I would earnestly request him to loosen the purse strings wide as more or less a parting gift and to remit at least 33½ per cent. We in Kistna, which is resettled just as West Godavari, are already paying an enhancement of 18¾ per cent and what is the good of remitting only 12½ per cent out of it? It is absolutely useless and as Mr. Krishnayya Choudari said this morning, the amount is so small that it slips away in the course of transit to the ryot. It is intangible and very inappreciable. So, make it at least 25 per cent, if you cannot 33½."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I think the hon. Member has exceeded his time by more than three minutes."

Rai Sahib C. KOLANDA REDDI:—"Only one word more, Sir, and that is this. We have been requesting the Government off and on to be humane and to treat the ryot as he ought to be in these hard days because as I submitted already he is responsible for the sustenance of the whole Government. We entreat you to pay heed to it; if you do not, I must say in Biblical terms, 'We have been baptizing you with water; others would come who would baptize you with fire.' Beware!"

[24th January 1935]

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—"Mr. President, Sir, on behalf of the group to which I have the honour to belong, namely, the group of the representatives of scheduled classes in this Council, I desire to make our position clear with reference to this question of land revenue remission. We feel, Sir, that whatever justification there might have been in the past for the land revenue remission that was granted, no such justification exists just at present. (Voice: 'Question.') In any case, the Mover of the motion himself admitted that there has been a general rise in prices at least in the districts of the Presidency, which are not famine-stricken. There is also the fact that there are districts which are undoubtedly in the grip of famine conditions. We on our part are prepared to sympathize with the case of those districts like the Ceded districts, and also agree to the principle that remission to a great extent ought to be granted to these districts. We are not convinced of the share that every district ought to get in the remission which they ask for now. Even the Government was alive to the fact that the conditions which existed last year did not wholly disappear but still persist to some extent, and having recognized that fact granted a general remission though not to the extent that they were prepared to grant last year. That being so, we feel that we cannot support the motion that was moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan, for the granting of 25 per cent remission of the land revenue assessment. We are, however, for supporting Mr. Ramakrishna Reddi's amendment for remission being granted to the Ceded districts. Our point of view is that hon. Members of this House ought also to realize that the Government is not merely concerned with land revenue administration and land revenue administration alone. They have got other activities which ought not to be seriously hampered by the grant of any large remission that some hon. Members of this Council may ask for. We particularly are interested in the matter of the ameliorative activities which the Government contemplate on behalf of our community, which are also in the interest of the nation-building departments. They ought not to be curtailed to such an extent as that our welfare will be seriously affected, and I do not see any proposal by which we can keep up and continue those activities at the same time as the Government grants the land revenue remission on the scale asked for by my hon. friend. That is the reason why we say we cannot agree to this motion, and we make it perfectly plain that we are supporting those famine-stricken districts and we are for giving them any relief that is possible for the Government to give."

Mr. DANIEL THOMAS:—"Mr. President, Sir, various amendments have been proposed. The main motion brought by my hon. Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan, as the hon. Members are aware, which is before the House is as regards the remission of 25 per cent of the Government kist for all the districts in the province. I may take it, Sir, as a result of all that has been said in the previous speeches of my hon. friends, that certain things may be taken for granted. In the first place, it may be taken for granted that there is a great deal of widespread agricultural distress not only in certain districts but all over the province. (Hear, hear.) It may also be next conceded that the extent of distress and the condition of the ryots vary in different districts. From these facts, it would appear that generally the province as a whole is in need of a certain amount of relief and also in the case of certain districts something over and above the general remission that may be given to the province as a whole. There are individual districts which require special consideration and special treatment at the hands of the Government. I may say at the outset that when the Government realize these conditions, when the Government took the action that they proposed in suspending one anna nine pies in the rupee of kist due, they realized and admitted that the ryot of this province stood to a great extent in need of relief. I would appeal to the Government that the extent of the remission ought to be such as to enable the ryots to feel that substantial relief has been afforded to them. I would say that even from the Government's point of view it is no use making so small a remission, such a trifling proportion of the tax that has to be paid by the ryot, that it is not felt that any relief has been afforded to him at all. I would submit that the relief proposed to be given, viz., 21 pies in certain districts, half of it in other districts, and as regards dry lands a still smaller percentage, is indeed too small to afford any relief to the ryot even with reference to most districts in the province. Hon. Members have referred to almost famine conditions in the Ceded districts.

[Mr. Daniel Thomas]

m. "I would mention here that my own district of Tinnevely is in no better state. The south-west monsoon has proved a complete failure, and the second crop has proved an almost entire failure throughout the district, and as regards the coming crop (pisanam) the failure of the north-east monsoon has made the prospects of harvest in the coming season extremely gloomy. If that is so as regards the river-fed and irrigated lands, the condition of lands under rain-fed irrigation and also the conditions of land under dry cultivation are appallingly bad. I may say that throughout the district there has practically been no dry cultivation, and with reference to all dry lands there has been a failure of crops.

"I would mention also in this connexion that with reference to double-crop lands the Government does not take note for the purpose of remission where there has been a failure of single crop; and most of the paddy lands in Tinnevely would come under this category. Therefore I submit that here again is a matter which requires urgent consideration by the Government.

"There is one other point. Tinnevely perhaps is the district in Madras where palmyra is most largely grown. With reference to a very large area in the district, most of the people live on the produce of the palmyra trees. But unlike in other cases a special tax is levied on it. I find that with reference to this question of remission it was contended by the Government last year that remissions given by the Government with reference to wet lands and dry lands should not be extended to the palmyra tree. The conditions of palmyra cultivation are growing harder and harder every year, and people are giving up palmyra cultivation. Palmyra climbers are imported from Travancore and these people are brought after making heavy payments in the way of wages for labour, etc. In those conditions it can be imagined what difficulties the palmyra-owners have to undergo. Of course palmyra trees are being tapped for toddy purposes, and the Hon. Minister for Excise may feel glad that so far as the excise revenue is concerned there would be no fall. But for sugar-manufacturing purposes, the conditions are getting harder and harder. I would appeal to the Hon. the Revenue Member to consider all these difficulties and extend the privilege of suspension of revenue with reference to the palmyra trees as well.

[24th January 1935]

"In this connexion I may refer, Sir, to the position taken up by Mr. Siva Raj on behalf of the depressed classes. I would submit, Sir, that the interests of the depressed classes in this matter are closely allied to those of the land-owning classes, so far as this matter is concerned. Unless the land-owner, the small land-owner, is in a position to realize some outturn from his land he would not be able to pay the labourers. Therefore I say their interests are bound up for good or ill with the interests of the land-owning classes in this matter. I would therefore appeal to my hon. Friend to reconsider his position. Whatever amenities or ameliorative efforts the Government intend for the benefit of the depressed classes will not be affected by the grant of remission to the land-owners."

* Mr. N. SIVA RAJ:—"I never said in my speech that the depressed classes are not connected with agriculture. What I really said was if there was to be a general remission to all districts, there might be a fall in revenue and Government may not be in a position to spend anything on behalf of the depressed classes. Then it will be a question of choosing between two evils."

Mr. DANIEL THOMAS:—"I do not think that the Government will be forced to the necessity of cutting down the ameliorative measures because of the remission of revenue. I believe that the Government will realize that ameliorative measures for the depressed classes is one of the foremost things they have to do, and I do hope and trust that whatever relief is afforded by Government in the matter of revenue remission will not react in any way against the depressed classes. Apart from that I hope and trust that in this matter the representatives of scheduled classes would co-operate with all sections of the House and support the demand for substantial reduction in the land revenue for this year."

* Mr. K. P. RAMAN MENON:—"Mr. President, Sir, this subject of land revenue has been cropping up every year and I hope this perhaps would be the last time when we have to handle this for I expect that the future Minister would be in a position to dictate terms to Government."

"The Government has also a duty to the cultivating ryot. The condition of the ryot has been going from bad to worse. I do not want to speak on all those facts referred to by previous speakers, but I want to lay emphasis on this fact; if it is granted that there has been a fall in the price of produce, where is the justification for Government to collect taxes on the same level as when the prices were high? I remember Sir Malcolm Hailey speaking in the United Provinces saying that the payment to Government of revenue must be graduated with reference to the prices that the ryots are able to raise on the produce that they raise on the land. If that is a correct statement that he has made, then certainly it ought to apply to the ryots here as well. Sir Thomas Munro and several authorities have stated that the assessment must stand for good or bad for thirty years, and it is stated that it became necessary to fix a period of thirty years on account of constant revisions that were made in 1854 and 1855 on applications from Collectors of various districts. Therefore it became the settled policy of the Government to have the tax fixed for a period of thirty years. This scheme no doubt worked very well when we see that the prices after the Mutiny year rose from a low level to a fairly high level for some time and then there came the booming prices during the War which upset all precedents. To frame the budget of the ryot with reference to the booming rises in the War period and tax the ryot on that basis is tantamount to wiping him out of existence. It will be seen that the ryots will not be able to make both ends meet if he is to pay the entire Government revenue demanded of him. As I said before, when the prices have fallen the demand must also fall. If you have Rs. 100 on hand you are able to pay Rs. 25 out of it. But if you have only Rs. 80 on hand you must have a reduction from Rs. 25 to Rs. 20 to keep the proportion of the demand to your income. It is a matter of arithmetic. I submit no elaborate argument is necessary to convince anybody that the ryot cannot afford to pay what he has been paying.

[Mr. K. P. Raman Menon]

"A word has to be said about the attitude taken by the hon. Mr. Siva Raj. He posed as the representative of the scheduled classes, at least as representative of the scheduled classes in the Presidency town. I have the authority of Mr. Premayya, another representative of the same class, who tells me that as a matter of fact he does not share the view that Mr. Siva Raj shares. Mr. Siva Raj, no doubt, with his snug salary as lecturer in the Law College is unaware of the conditions of the wage-earners in all parts of the Presidency. Their living is most miserable on the wages that they earn. I have more sympathy with them than he and his colleagues. We see them from morning to evening in the dirtiest surroundings. We want to ameliorate their condition; how can we do it unless we pay them more from the profits of the land. Only if we have profits from the land, if we have a margin left, we can pay; without that we cannot go on paying at the old old rates. As regards the ameliorative measures the Government are taking we shall be the first to oppose any movement on the part of the Government to interfere in any way with the amounts of money which are earmarked for the scheduled classes. He may depend upon it and he can rely upon me to come to the rescue of the scheduled classes if it comes to that. But why should he be so uncharitable to Government also; why should he think that Government will apply their shears to that item? Certainly, Sir, I was surprised to see that Mr. Siva Raj has taken up that attitude on the question before us.

[Mr. K. P. Raman Menon]

"Then again, Sir, speaking particularly with reference to the years we are concerned with, it is seen that the monsoons have failed in all the districts; and if the monsoons have failed, it is clear that no crop can be raised. With reference to the manavari lands the Revenue authorities know that most of the lands in Malabar so far as second crop is concerned is manavari and there is no justification for expecting any revenue from second-crop assessment. Turning to Anantapur, I have been reading in the Madras Mail contributions from a special correspondent pointing out that the conditions in Anantapur are horrible. It is a wonder to me how they are able to survive all these difficulties. I shall repeat what I read the other day, that a man was getting down into a well about 40 feet deep to take water in a coconut shell and fill the pitchers which others were carrying to the top of the well for drinking purposes. There was almost a rush for this water. Water is so scarce even for drinking purposes. I may say there is absolutely no water for other purposes. The average rainfall for the district is 25 inches and there is only 11 or 12 inches this year and the crop has failed. The ryots laid out their little money in cultivation of their land hoping to get rains in season and as there were no rains they lost all that money. The condition of the ryots must be deplorable. I have the greatest sympathy for the amendment which was moved by Mr. Koti Reddi. So far as Anantapur is concerned, the entire tax should be remitted for the current fasli.

"Then, Sir, that there is some flaw in the very theory of this basic foundation for revenue assessment is clear from the way this question has been cropping up every year. Have the Government noted, with reference to all other professions, the tax is not so high as in the profession of agriculture? The theory of the Government, with regard to agriculture, is that they are entitled to half the profits, that is, eight annas in the rupee. Now, what is the highest income-tax that they take from the persons who follow other professions? I believe the maximum is not more than four annas in the rupee. Now what is the difference between the other professions and this profession of agriculture? What is the position of the agriculturists? Why should they pay eight annas in the rupee whereas the others pay much less in proportion to the profit they get? That aspect of the question has to be considered and, I believe, the Government will find out some principle on which it would be possible for them to charge the profit made from land.

"Sir, it has been often stated—it was stated last year and it will be said this year also—that if you want the land-tax to be reduced, all the development departments will suffer. I say, let them not develop at all. I would prefer the ryot to have two meals a day to any other amenities which the Government may be pleased to confer upon us. These development departments, even the Pykara and other schemes may stop for the present until the ryot is put on a stable basis.

"With these words, I support the motion."

Khan Bahadur P. KHALIF-UL-LAH SAHIB Bahadur:—"Sir, my hon. Friend, Mr. Choudari, complimented the Government on the remission

3-30
p.m.

[P. Khalif-ul-lah Sahib Bahadur] [24th January 1935]

that they have been pleased to give for the mere fact that it is an out-and-out remission. It is mere suspension of revenue. (Mr. P. V. Krishnayya Choudari: I know that it is only suspension of revenue. I only complimented the Government for passing early orders.) So far as this question is concerned a mere remission of 25 per cent is not sufficient at all considering the condition of the ryots throughout the province. All accounts show that the condition of the ryots is most depressing and that every day it has been growing worse and worse. Their condition is not better to-day is seen from the very fact that the Government themselves have thought fit to grant this paltry suspension of 1 anna 9 pies in the rupee. That shows that it is a recognized fact that the condition of the ryots require help by way of remission of assessment. But what we beg to point out to the Government is that the remission of 1 anna 9 pies goes nowhere to help the ryot in his present circumstances. He has been suffering from this depression for the last four years and, as has been several times repeated here, he has sold away all his movable property to meet the demands of the Government for the payment of tax. To-day he does not even command sufficient credit to borrow any moneys. Such being the case it is most necessary that the Government should go to his rescue whole-heartedly and not certainly in the half-hearted manner in which they have come forward now.

"Sir, we heard piteous tales of the condition of the ryots in the Ceded districts, and Kistna. I may add my own tale about Trichinopoly which is supposed to be irrigated by the Goddess Cauvery. There, Sir, all that we know of the results of the Mettur Project is that our schedule of taxation has been raised. The first-class land has been converted to the second class and the second-class land has been raised to the first class and assessed accordingly. That is the net result to us of the Mettur Project. We do not know of anything else of that project. Our land is not producing one grain of paddy more than what it used to yield in the past. If at all, the production has gone down particularly this year on account of want of rains.

"Sir, so far as the dry lands are concerned, the position is worse. No crop has been raised this year for the reason that the rains came late. But, the poor farmer hoping to get something out of the land borrowed wherever he could and tried to cultivate his land taking advantage of the small showers that there was in the beginning of the season. The monsoon, however, stopped there and so, wherever one went into the villages, mere chavi, that is, grain with nothing inside it which is the result of lack of rains at the budding period, greeted his sight. So the poor farmer lost not only what he had, but also what he had borrowed.

"I shall now mention to the House how this question of remission affects the depressed classes. My hon. Friend, Rao Sahib N. Siva Raj, saying that he represented the depressed classes in this House, came forward with a bold statement to the effect that he is not for remission, simply because the depressed classes would suffer on account of the Government retrenching, consequent on remission, in the ameliorative measures for the depressed classes. So far as that subject is concerned,

24th January 1935] [P. Khalif-ul-lah Sahib Bahadur]

Sir, may I point out that the depressed classes would be nowhere if no remission is granted? There must be depressed classes to be ameliorated. They will die from day to day and there will be none left to be ameliorated if timely and adequate remission is not granted. They must be enabled to live first by granting this remission and till then this question of their betterment can wait. They are the parties seriously affected in the matter of kist collection. It is only if anything is left to the poor farmer that the depressed class labourer can hope to live. I am speaking from personal experience. I have known depressed classes in several villages in my district and I know them personally. All of them are living unable to get even a full meal a day. This is so because the poor farmers are hard hit. They have nothing left even to pay their labourers. That is the whole trouble. If the farmer is relieved by a proper remission, I feel sure that the depressed classes will be the first party to be relieved by him. With these words, Sir, I beg to support both the motion and the amendment."

* Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Mr. President, Sir, I rise with considerable hesitation to speak on a question of such popular interest as the present one on land revenue remission—popular in the sense that it involves profit to an influential section of the public whose voice invariably influences the public opinion of this Presidency. But, Sir, as one representing the workers of this Province, I feel it my duty to speak frankly on this question. The depression which is the basis of this demand for revenue remission has been continuous for the last few years and has not yet shown definite signs of lifting; neither its cause nor its duration has been correctly assessed and it is more than probable that this unfortunate state would continue for a few years more. This depression has lowered the price of agricultural produce, especially of paddy. No one has yet definitely stated that the supply of rice is more than the demand in this Province, even including the imported Siamese rice. The reported imports have certainly had a psychological effect in keeping down the price of local paddy. Though at the present moment and in this year the prices have risen appreciably, it has been contended by the advocates of remission that the cost of the produce leaves nothing above the cost of production. If this is a true statement, as I admit, it is very near the actual facts, surely remission of any portion of the revenue cannot help the ryot to live or persuade him to cultivate his land again and certainly remission is not the remedy for this continuing malady, though it may be the popular cry. One would expect an attempt to keep the prices above a certain economic level. I see no such attempt being made except the representation of the Government of Madras made to the Government of India for the imposition of adequate duty on imported rice. I would appeal to the Government to kindly focus their attention on the question of preventing prices from falling below an economic level. There must certainly be some other methods by which the level can be kept up. My hon. Friend from Guntur, Mr. Krishnayya Choudari, though he stood up to support the resolution for increased remission, his whole speech was not so much for asking for remission as for making valuable and constructive suggestions as how best the Government could help the ryot to tide over his difficulties and how to maintain a particular level of prices. Again on the question of remission itself, Mr. Krishnayya Choudari admitted that most of last year's remission did not reach most of the ryots and thanked the Government for announcing this year's remission in time, as he hoped this early announcement would enable the ryot to enjoy it by withholding it from his payments. After all to the poorer pattadar, this remission means nothing appreciable, though its total amount makes a big slice of the provincial revenue. As to the wage-earners and to the landless, remission of such a big amount is bound to retard the ameliorative measures which may otherwise be profitably undertaken. Village communications, rural water-supply are two different items of rural development which will be very badly affected by this remission.

[Mr. C. Basu Dev]

3-45
P.M.

"The hon. Member from North Arcot, Mr. V. M. Ramaswami Mudaliyar, had stated that the exorbitant taxation is responsible for the rural indebtedness which aggravates the present misery of the ryot. Sir, that is a statement with which I cannot agree. Just now, we heard Mr. C. K. Reddi, from Kistna telling this hon. House how Kistna was till recently flowing with milk and honey. The indebtedness is due largely to the improvidence of the ryot who invested large amounts of borrowed money on land which, in the present depression, proved to be absolutely unprofitable. Unless this indebtedness is tackled boldly by the Government, nothing can help the ryot. As in the State of Bhavanagar, the Government must take up the whole of the agricultural debt and treating its position as one of insolvency, declare a dividend for the creditors which would bring down the total amount of debt by 40 per cent at least. The amount should be collected in easy instalments along with the rent.

"Land mortgage banks are not going to solve the problem and recently Government allowed the bank to issue debentures offering up to 5 per cent interest. The problem of agricultural indebtedness, as I said above, requires a bold and courageous handling and I very much hope that the Government will not be deterred by any difficulties however serious but boldly adopt the example of the State of Bhavanagar. Again the middlemen who are to a great extent responsible for the depression and fluctuations in prices will have to be brought under control and their operations severely regulated. Over and above this the Government will have to chalk out a 20 years plan during which well-considered steps should be taken to revivify the fast dying ryot. Remission, Sir, I once more beg to submit, is not a remedy which a statesmen will apply, for it may be a palliative for an year or two, but no responsible person will think of it to meet a continuing difficulty.

"Mr. K. P. Raman Menon, the Leader of the Justice Democratic Party, has taken my hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Raj, to task for speaking on behalf of the scheduled communities. I do not know when the hon. Member from Malabar constituted himself as the representative of the scheduled castes. If this is the kind of representation which the scheduled castes in Malabar have, the word 'unapproachability' still darkens their lives!"

Mr. V. P. NARAYANAN NAMBIYAR:—"On a point of order, Sir. How is unapproachability in Malabar relevant to land revenue? (Laughter.)"

Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"I admit that it has no relevancy to revenue remission. But I referred to it because the hon. Member from Malabar got up and attacked the statement of my hon. Friend who represents the scheduled castes. Mr. Raman Menon represents the rate-payers of Malabar. They are not the scheduled castes of Malabar. I am a socialist and my main concern is about the workers. But I am prepared to support any constructive measure calculated to help the ryot, big or small, to realize a good return from his investment on land, but I cannot vote for a remedy of the nature of tinkering patch work. I once more beg to say that I am prepared to vote for any amount or measures necessary to permanently and substantially solve the question of agricultural depression."

Mr. AHMED MEERAN:—"Mr. President, Sir, I fully associate myself with the resolution moved by my Friend, Mr. Hameed Khan, and the amendment moved by Mr. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar. In doing so I should like to say a few words.

"It has been repeatedly brought to the notice of the Government that the economic position of the agriculturists who constitute the bulk of the population in this Presidency is a deplorable one and needs drastic measures for improvement. The repression which set in well nigh five years ago, has heavily told upon them and has reduced them to the position of undeclared insolvents. In the early stages of the economic depression they were not faced with such a situation as confronts them now. There was plenty of crops and successful harvests, their only difficulty then being the dearth of money which strained them considerably in the payment of kist. The difficulty was tided over by them by resort to borrowing, their income having considerably diminished while their expenditure remained stationary in some cases and grew in others. The result was that their indebtedness grew worse and their solvency sank to a depth.

[Mr. Ahmed Meeran]

"The depression entered a new phase. More than a year ago, successful harvests and abundant stock of agricultural produce which marked the early part of the depression, ceased to exist and failure of monsoons brought in its train a thorough failure of crops. Of the utter failure of 'kar' crops in several portions of the districts, Government are fully aware and the case of 'pishanam' is becoming worse. The Collector of Tinnevely, in his letter to the President, District Board, Tinnevely, says, 'As you know, there has been very little rain in the season and it is likely that many of the crops will fail and that there will be serious shortage of drinking water.' The ryots are actually faced with grim starvation now, and their cry for relief demands immediate response.

"In spite of the intense distress on the part of the ryots it is surprising that Government have not adequately responded to the real needs of the ryots. The Government Order granting meagre concessions to the ryots, discloses an utter lack of realization of the plight of the ryots. It is a matter of grave dissatisfaction that the resolution passed by so many district boards and peoples' conferences, in various districts on the necessity for substantial relief, have been cast to the winds by the Government with little or no reason.

"It is really strange that though the plight and misery of the ryots has enormously increased in recent times owing to the failure of monsoons, there is no corresponding generosity on the part of the Government in the matter of relief. Instead of liberalizing the grant of remission, the Government have sought to curtail even the 12 per cent granted last year. There is no case at all for Government for curtailing this meagre concession granted during the last fasli. The reason put forward by the Government for reducing the concession given last year seems to be that there has been an upward trend in the prices which, the Government presumes, must have improved the lot of the ryots. This is a wholly erroneous diagnosis of the situation. The Government have failed to realize that this alleged upward trend in prices is only temporary and that the unsteady tendency of upward rise in price has been brought about not by any improvement in world conditions, but stimulated only by local demands of a transitory nature. The price rose only because of the failure of kar crops and the local supply for a time. It is clear from the Government Order that these details of the case have not been taken into account by the Government in granting concessions. The case of my district (Tinnevely) is certainly more hard than that of any other part of the Presidency.

[24th January 1935]

[Mr. Ahmed Meeran]

Tinnevely pays the highest assessment for wet lands in the Presidency. I beg to draw, in this connexion, the attention of the Government to the proceedings of the ryots' conference held at Srivaikuntam last month in which the ryots' case is clearly set out. Is it not grossly unfair on the part of the Government to treat this district on the same footing as others which are not subject to so prohibitive an assessment? The distinction made between districts settled before and after 1918 for purposes of remission is most distressing when the actual situation in Tinnevely is considered. Such distinction ought not to apply to my district which, in fact, deserves most liberal and sympathetic treatment.

"It is surprising that, meagre as the concessions are, they are still more niggardly in that they are to be enforced from the kist of April instead of from February, the first kist itself. There seem to be no justification when once concessions are granted, to postpone them until the April kist, except that such an arrangement causes serious hardship to the ryots. I cannot but say, Sir, such half-hearted concessions cannot adequately meet the situation and that unless some greater and more effective measures for relief are taken by the Government, the ryot is sure to sink into irretrievable misery and disaster.

"Further the plea of the Government against an enhanced rate of remission has been want of money. The Government is aware that the All-India Services are still subject to a 5 per cent cut in salaries, and there is no justification whatever to restore the cut for the provincial services with that speed with which it was done. While the price of produce has been steadily depreciating and while the value of money in relation to its purchasing capacity has been steadily and surely appreciating there is no reason why the servants of the Government alone should continue to enjoy this advantage to the detriment of the tax-payer. I would, therefore, urge that the Government should take up once again the question of imposing a cut on the salaries of all provincial services and make that money available for purposes of relief to the suffering ryots. I refer here to one curious phenomenon which takes place in connexion with the resolution on remission. Every time the Ministerial party makes a show of being with the people by allowing certain of its party members to vote with the opposition, but when the actual question of grant of remission is taken up they seem to exert no influence whatever with the reserved half or on the Governor to ensure adequate relief to the ryot. They are only playing a double game little realizing that the ryot is only too clever as not to see through this big joke which is repeated as often as the question arises. I wish they realize that they cannot fool the ryots for all time. I, therefore, support the motion for at least 33½ per cent remission, which is a modest one and request the hon. Members of this House to unanimously accept this resolution."

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Mr. President, Sir, I fancy that hon. Members are rather weary of this debate. I must say that I am having listened to every word of it from this morning.

[Mr. C. A. Souter]

[24th January 1935]

The debate has ranged over a very wide field and has covered details which, I venture to think, the hon. the Mover of this resolution did not anticipate. I am afraid, Sir, that on behalf of the Government I must oppose the motion and the amendments to it. I shall give my reasons as briefly as I can and in doing so I should like to make a sharp distinction between the general question of remission of 25 or 33½ per cent and what appear to be the amendments proposed mainly on behalf of the Ceded districts that special concession should be shown to them. I think it was a mistake and a pity that the two things were mixed up. I think myself it would have been wiser and perhaps more convincing if those Members for the Ceded districts, Tinnevely and other districts which have this year suffered more than others on account of want of rain, had brought up separate motions for special consideration for those districts. Government would probably then have been able to assure them that special measures would be taken if the conditions in the district proved so serious as they were represented to be. I am perfectly prepared in the case of those districts which have been very heavily hit to see that their cases are considered sympathetically. I may say at once that, for instance, in Anantapur we have already granted remissions to the extent of 50 per cent in the Kadiri taluk and to the extent of 30 per cent in the rest of the district. We have already granted remissions to the extent of 30 per cent in the Vayalpad and the Madanapalle taluks of the Chittoor district. I can assure this House that if cases like these are put forward to Government, they will be considered quite as sympathetically. I am perfectly well aware that in certain dry parts or rain-fed parts of Madura, similar portions of Tinnevely and in Ramnad and in parts of Malabar, the reports show that conditions are not good. I shall consider these cases on their merits. I hope that these remarks will dispose of those particular cases which Members brought up with reference to their own districts.

"I now propose to proceed to the general question as to whether a remission of 25, 33½ or 50 per cent or whatever it is, should be granted all over the Presidency. Last year, as hon. Members are aware, the same subject was debated and Government, after the debate, gave a general remission of 12½ per cent. In considering the question this year, we studied the condition of the market as it prevailed at the time when the order was passed last year and its condition this year. Last year, remissions were granted mainly on account of the fall in prices. It is logical, therefore, to compare the prices this year with the prices of last year and see whether the same amount of remission that was given last year is advisable or permissible this year. I have here before me a statement—I have shown it to some hon. Members—in which the prices on 15th January this year are compared with the prices in January last year. I shall be glad to show this statement to any hon. Member who cares to see it. This shows that in every case except one the prices of January this year are higher than the prices of January last year, but that those prices are very considerably in excess of the commutation rates on which the present settlement in the various districts was made. (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: 'What is the source of your information?') The source of my information is the figures published in the Fort St. George Gazette, the figures reported to us by the Board of Revenue and the Director of Agriculture. Now, this statement shows that, as a general proposition, we will not be justified in giving the same amount of remission generally as we gave last year. But it has been urged from several quarters that our conclusion might possibly be vitiated by the alleged fact that the crops this year are very much less than they were last year. That, I think, was the second main argument advanced. As regards that, our reports—you may take them for what they are worth; they are reports on which Government have consistently proceeded for a number of years—our reports show that at any rate the wet crops from Nellore up to Ganjam are pretty normal and in some cases very good indeed. In Tanjore, the next big producing centre, the crops although not as good as they have been are still good and this was mainly due to the fact that Mettur existed this year. If it had not been for Mettur, Tanjore, even the old delta under the Cauvery, would have suffered very greatly. In Madura, the next biggest, under the Periyar project where recently they have had the turn system, I think, it is fair to say that the outturn though not so good as it has been for some years past, has been generally speaking good.

"But generally speaking, the outturn of wet crops this year is probably only about 1½ or 2 per cent less than last year. I am talking only about the wet crops under the big irrigation systems from which naturally the far greater proportion of our paddy is derived. As regards dry crops, the House is aware that we cannot grant remission for them unless there is widespread scarcity or practically until famine conditions exist. As I have mentioned, in those districts which have been depending upon dry crops, we have given large amounts of remission and we are prepared to consider other places in which recognized scarcity exists. Hon. Members must remember that these remissions which we have granted are in addition to seasonal remissions which, this year, are certainly very considerable, and if we in special cases decide to grant increased remissions in particular areas, it is in addition to seasonal remissions. I think hon. Members should take into account not only 10 per cent which we have granted this year but also the large quantity of seasonal remissions which have been granted and which may be granted hereafter.

"I would point out one other factor which is perhaps relevant. It is claimed that statistics for the last year show that there was a large amount of distress amongst the agricultural population. In spite of that, Sir, the Revenue Department, without very great difficulty collected 98 per cent of the revenue. I do not think myself that this collection of 98 per cent of revenue from the ryots is due to any unusual endeavour. In spite of the small decrease in the general remission which we propose to give this year, we hope again to collect 98 per cent of our revenue this year. That I think is certainly an index of the capacity of the ryot

p.m.

[Mr. C. A. Souter] [24th January 1935]

to pay, although hon. Members will not, I know, agree with me. But facts speak for themselves, and I prefer to go on facts rather than on theory.

"There are some matters of detail which various Members mentioned; for instance, Mr. Krishnayya Choudari referred to certain areas in Guntur for which a certain fee was collected. I must confess I never heard of it before but since he mentioned it, I shall have the matter enquired into; there are various other points of detail of the same sort which I think that in a general debate of this kind, it would have been better if they had not been brought forward; if those points had been made to the Government by different specific representations, I can assure hon. Members that they would have been very carefully considered. I do not propose to say much more on these cases.

"I am aware that there is a feeling of very great discontent (which I may admit I myself share), that imported rice from Siam and Indo-China has not been stopped. It is not the fault of this Government. This Government have urged the motion to the Government of India almost in season and out of season and they are still urging it; they have not given up hope yet. I now trust that our action will be strongly supported by this Presidency's representatives in the Assembly and the Council of State and that between us we may get some good result.

"Fodder, in the Ceded districts, was referred to. I may tell the House that a Special Officer has been appointed to see that supplies of fodder are sent to those areas which require them. He is a Forest Officer who has had to do with this item of work during the war and I am certain that so far as lies in his power, everything will be done.

"I may point out that if $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent were remitted, it would cost the Government something like Rs. 2 crores. Our total revenue is Rs. 16 crores; in other words it is proposed that one-eighth of our revenues should be remitted in a single year. I hope I shall not be thought hard if I tell hon. Members that such a thing is impossible in any Government run on well-considered budgets. If we did this, it would simply result in future Governments of this Presidency being left at a great handicap for want of funds and it would be putting the Ministers under the new Reforms in a very difficult position. (A voice: It is their concern.) It is said that it is their concern; it is not their concern; at least in my own opinion I consider it very much my concern and I know my hon. Colleagues think it is their concern too not to leave the future reformed Ministry in a state in which they cannot function satisfactorily.

"Another point which I think, was not brought out sufficiently strongly, although it was referred to, is this; to whom does this 10 per cent remission go? I find that all the representations or most of the representations that have been made to the Government on this subject, have come from large landholders, those who are specially benefited by large works of irrigation which the Government have carried out, at any rate those representations that have come to the Government. I should like hon. Members to remember also that some 70 per cent of the ryots of this Presidency who have got small holdings of land, pay Rs. 10 or less of land revenue. I would ask hon. Members to state what great difference it is going to make to a man who pays Rs. 10 or less—a great number of them, pay Rs. 5 or less—if you remit one anna or two annas in the rupee. Most of that money that we remit goes undoubtedly not to the small ryots on whose behalf hon. Members of this House have spoken to-day; but to those large mirasdars or landholders who are paying a large amount of revenue, a difference of one anna or two annas or three annas in a rupee may matter a great deal. The argument on behalf of the poor ryot who cultivates his own land is, to put it bluntly, eye-wash. I conclude my remarks and I sincerely trust this House will not carry this motion; the Government must oppose it."

MR. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"I move that the question be now put."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I will put Mr. Koti Reddi's amendment to vote first. The question is: 'Insert at the end—"except in the case of famine-affected areas where full remission is absolutely necessary".'"

The motion was put and carried.

The following amendment of Mr. G. Rameswara Rao was put and carried:—

"Add at the end the following:—

and that Anantapur district deserves special consideration, apart from the other districts in the Presidency."

Mr. K. S. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar's amendment, i.e., "for the figures '25', substitute the figures ' $33\frac{1}{3}$ '" was put and carried.

Then the following amendment of Mr. Mahboob Ali Baig was put and carried.

"Add at the end:—"and that in the case of districts which are re-settled, the increase in assessment due to re-settlement shall also be suspended."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The question is:

This Council recommends to the Government that a remission of not less than $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent be granted in the land revenue kist in all the districts in respect of wet and dry lands and inclusive of water-rates for the current fasli, i.e., 1344, except in the case of famine-affected areas where full remission is absolutely necessary and that Anantapur district deserves special consideration apart from the other districts in the Presidency, and that in the case of districts which are resettled, the increase in assessment due to resettlement shall also be suspended."

[24th January 1935]

The motion was declared carried. Mr. Abdul Hameed Khan demanded a poll. It was taken with the following result:—

(3) ALLOTMENT FOR THE RELIEF OF THE UNEMPLOYED.

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, I move the resolution standing in my name, viz:—

'This Council recommends to the Government that at least a lakh of rupees be set apart from the Provincial revenues to relieve the unemployed in the City and in the mufassal.'

"Sir, the unemployment problem has become a very serious question now. In Western countries there is almost only one kind of unemployment, i.e., mostly industrial. In our Presidency to-day there are four kinds of unemployment; intellectual unemployment, agricultural unemployment, industrial unemployment and unemployment among the poor.

"There are a large number of graduates and others who have taken degrees in various special subjects in India and on the continent of Europe and America and also a number of school finals who are without any employment in the City and in the mufassal. As I said the other day, there are 485 local graduates and those who have taken degrees in other universities in India and abroad, in the City itself to-day, and about 2,024 school finals. I have taken these figures from the census of 1930. Taking into consideration the number of candidates who graduate every year, I think the number of graduates to-day will be at least 500 more than in 1930; so that instead 485 in 1930 we will have to-day at least 985 graduates who are unemployed in the City. In the mufassal there are 479 graduates and others who have taken degrees on the European universities—this figure is taken from the 1930 census. There are also in the mufassal 1,955 school finals; and that number perhaps might have been doubled to-day. That is the present condition of intellectual unemployment to-day. In addition to all this, we are having retrenchment, and a number of people have been recently retrenched. People who have put in even ten years' service and fifteen years' service have been retrenched. I do not know why the Retrenchment Committee did not think for a moment if so many people were retrenched, where they could find food. What are they to do who have even small families consisting of two parents and two or three children? I want to know how the authorities concerned—our own Cabinet Members, Europeans who had put in 30 or 40 years' service in this country or Indians themselves—allowed so many families to go adrift and suffer from starvation. The middle classes especially are the worst sufferers in this respect. Yesterday a man came to me and said 'I have no food to eat to-day; I have got a number of children, five or six.' I say, Sir, the Government are responsible, the Cabinet Members are responsible for this state of affairs.

"There is the survey office and there are the survey parties. One fine day they simply say: this party is abolished or that party is abolished. Say each party consists of 300 or 400 people; and that means, if these people are sent out, 300 or 400 families are ruined. It is the Cabinet Members that have to see that such things do not occur.

[Dr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar]

[24th January 1935]

After all, we are having these Cabinet Ministers in the Government simply to safeguard the interests of our countrymen. Some two years ago there was a proposal to take away the Central Survey Office at Madras; but thanks to wiser counsels, thanks to the Governor and thanks to the then Revenue Member, everything was afterwards all right. It is now a self-supporting office, and I think it is necessary too. I hope the Government will not interfere with it hereafter.

"I now come, Sir, to agricultural unemployment. I have already pointed out in detail the condition of the people in the Chingleput district. They have nothing to eat; most of them have come to Madras in the hope of finding some appointment. They came here, they were disappointed and they have only served to swell the number of unemployed in the City.

"Then there is the industrial unemployment, e.g., in railway companies, factories, etc. The railway companies all of a sudden retrench 300 people one morning; where are these people to go to? I do not know if the situation has now improved. But some time ago there was a proposal to retrench some 800 people in the workshop at Arkonam. I ask: why should not Government step in and prevent such occurrences? They have some rules regarding short-time work, regarding holidays, etc. Why not apply all these rules in such cases? Government are the sole authority in these matters to interfere; we look upon the Government to take care of the unemployed, not the Railway companies. It is the Government, the Cabinet Members and the Governor that ought to take care of the unemployed. If an intelligent man is unemployed, he is more dangerous to the people than an unintelligent unemployed man. A man with brain and tongue who is discontented, will create discontent among thousands of people.

"Turning now to unemployment among the poor, everyday nearly 40 or 50 people come to me and request me to get some employment for them. One man says: 'I come from Tindivanam.' I told him 'our youths even in Madras are not able to get appointment; why should you come from such a distance? Yet I will try'.

"In addition to all this, we have repatriation. Our countrymen have been in Malaya, in South Africa, in Kenya and other places making the unproductive lands in those places productive. After their reclamation work is finished they are asked to go back to India. Here they find no employment. They want work or relief. In the Madras Corporation I gave notice of a resolution to give them relief; it was not moved because it was not reached. What can Madras do with so many unemployed men? Their number has reached a limit beyond which it cannot go. I request the Government to seriously think of the situation. We are loyalists; we want our Government, our British Government; and we want our British Government to make all the people contended in the land. What are they now doing? Except in India, in all countries of the world, the State is taking care of the unemployed. In England, in addition to their national insurance, unemployment insurance, grants to orphans, grants to destitute widows, old age pensions, etc., they have taken up the distressed areas scheme now. Mr. Lloyd George is coming in with new schemes; they are very careful in England. Those English people who are coming to India, let them see that we are also helped with these schemes here and we get as much relief as possible. In Germany, when Hitler became Chancellor in February 1933, 'the unemployed in Germany numbered 6,001,000; to-day they stand at 2,426,387.' 'The main plank in the Nazi policy for ensuring productive employment for all is the utilization of the German soil to the utmost of its capacity. They have, in addition, large schemes for new roads, for the building of houses, for the renewal of industrial plants, etc., but these are merely auxiliary to the great agricultural policy.' Not only that, Sir. In America, they are going to spend 105 billion dollars on a long range policy of schemes for housing and slum clearance, spread over a period of twenty or thirty years. I do not want the Hon. Member to give us all the money required—it may be some crores of rupees—but he may allot yearly some decent sum for some public work in order to relieve unemployment. It will indeed be a very great relief if he only does this. They are doing such things all over the world, except in India and most probably in our own Presidency. No doubt, the Hon. the Home Member started it by undertaking to examine the family budget of the workers and I hope he will extend it to the other classes of people also. I do not think a lakh of rupees will be enough, but I only want them to start. It is a token motion I am making. What I would request the Hon. Member to do is, if you really want to give relief to the large unemployed in our Presidency, large schemes should be taken up on hand, so that they may give employment to a large number of people for several years. The Tungabhadra Project, if taken up immediately, will go a long way to relieve unemployment among the people. Twenty-one lakhs has been voted the other day which the Hon. the Law Member wanted for hydro-electric schemes; it would relieve unemployment a little for a few years and if the Tungabhadra Project also is taken up, thousands of people will be employed. It should not be said, are we to spend so much money upon people who are unemployed although the schemes undertaken will be remunerative? Remuneration should not be taken into consideration. In Germany they spent to relieve 2,350 people about £29,900. This shows that they consider that the people of Germany belong to one joint family. That the world is one human family is the preaching of the Hindu religion, the Muhammadan religion and the Christian religion. This principle is acted upon in Germany and other European countries. As a matter of fact there are about one million acres of cultivable land remaining uncultivated in our Presidency. If projects like the Tungabhadra Project are taken up it will not only relieve unemployed, the land will become richer and more productive. The Hon. the Law Member came in the other day for a grant of 21 lakhs; it will relieve unemployment in a way. Let him tackle all resources of electricity in the whole Presidency, it will go a great deal. Through such means industry and agriculture will be developed, the country will become industrially and agriculturally better. Unless you do all these things, what is the use of the English people governing us and ourselves submitting to them? English people are sympathetic people. I do not want any other country to come into our country except England. Let them do all these things to make India as rich as possible and thus we will be for ever intimately connected with England.

24th January 1935]

"There is yet another thing which I want to mention and that is the question of the poor unemployed. They must be helped; every day they are starving. At least a thousand people are starving to-day in the city of Madras itself and I know this because I come in contact with such people. People come to me and say they have no food and that their children are actually starving in their houses. What they do in Germany for such people is this. There is the Labour Registry, people go there, register their names. The Labour Registry is trying its best to see that these people are employed somehow or other. 'Some registries endeavour to find employment for children leaving school, for domestic servants, for consumptives and other persons of limited physical capacity; or the registry keeps a list of foster-parents for use in the boarding out of orphans and other children maintained by the poor relief authority; and the municipal house registry, the legal advice agencies, and writing-rooms for unemployed clerks and others are sometimes worked along with the public labour registry.' That is the real relief given to the poor in Germany. Supposing they do not find any employment, they give boarding, lodging and clothing for the unemployed. In some places in Germany for the unemployed they give 15 to 37 shillings for a man or woman and for a family they are giving 45 to 55 shillings. There is no word like 'pauper' in Germany. There are other places where the poor are paid in kind. Food, articles of furniture, especially bedding, cooking utensils, fuel, clothing and food are supplied in suitable cases, and other common forms of relief in kind are tools and material for work. Medical attendance, medicine, help in confinement and burial belong everywhere to the usual range of poor relief and the Federal Settlement Board has decided that sanatorium treatment and salt-baths should also be given to these poor people.' That is the ideal state of affairs in Germany. There is also the system there of poor inspectorate. That inspector goes to every house and if he finds that a family bread-winner earns only 30 pounds and if he has to earn 50 pounds to keep his family, this extra 20 pounds is given by the local authority. They have also an arrangement by which they supply 'beds and bedding to families which are found by the visiting officers to lack sufficient provision of the kind. A nursing staff is also placed at the service of the poor in many towns.' There are medical men appointed to the poor. If a poor man is not sent to the hospital, if he does not like it, he is allowed to consult his own doctor. In this he is equal to the richest man in the land because the Government supplies the greatest physician in the land if he only wants him. Sir, many more things can be quoted as to what happens in Germany. (A voice: 'What is that book?') That is Government in Germany.

24th January 1935] [Dr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar]

(A voice: 'That is a pre-War book.') Yes, that is a pre-War book. These are pre-War things. In regard to the present state of affairs, I have already showed you how after Hitler came into power, he has reduced the number of unemployed by about 4 millions. Even now, German people are careful at least to take care of their community. I therefore request the Hon. Member to accept my resolution and start giving relief to the poor unemployed, as well as the educated unemployed. There are at present several B.As., B.A. B.Ls. and M.As., who are unemployed in the land. If he wants any statistics, he can go to the Museum or send for the statistics from there. He can consult the several census reports and thus get a list of such people. I request him also to see that not only the poor people in the city but also the several educated unemployed in the mufassal as well are relieved.

"As to agricultural unemployment, we were singing the song the whole of to-day to give relief to the agriculturist; Government should come to the relief of people in these matters. If only the Hon. the Home Member has a mind to do it, he will certainly pounce upon the various authorities or employers and take them to task if they begin to treat their employees badly or drive them away after a service of 10 or 15 years. Both the Home Member and the whole Cabinet which consists of Europeans also who have spent almost all their life here and have consequently become naturalized and have adopted India as their home, they will all join together and give us some relief in this matter of unemployment. I once again request the Hon. the Home Member to accept my resolution."

Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—"Mr. President, Sir, I beg to second the resolution which has just been moved by my hon. friend, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar. I do not propose to take up much of the time of the House. It is unfortunate that this very important question has been taken up immediately after the question of remission of land revenue assessment. Unfortunately, the question has not attracted the same attention and interest that it ought to have attracted. The question of unemployment is part of the programme of all democratic Governments now. It figures very largely in the programme of statesmen in Europe; and if up to this time this question has not been taken up in our country it is because democratic institutions were not functioning, but with the new constitution before us, our minds naturally go to all institutions which exist in democratic countries and we feel that the time has come when we should take up the question of unemployment. The figures which have been given by my hon. Friend, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar, ought to be sufficient to convince any one that the time is ripe for us to take action. The usual reply given to us is that no funds are available. But I am rather surprised how in certain matters that reply is not given. We have just now the case of the Pykara Project where no difficulty is raised and the money is made available. (The Hon. Sir K. V. Reddi: 'That is remunerative and it relieves unemployment.') I can understand that. My own opinion is that for such things money is readily voted. What I say is, why is it only in some cases such a reply is given? There is such a thing as invisible profit and visible profit. There are certain matters in regard to which you can at once see that they are remunerative, but in the case of certain other matters, though they are also remunerative, the profit on the transaction may not be visible. I think it is owing to lack of imagination on the part of the Government that in some cases which ought to receive the attention of Government, no attention is paid.

"Now, as regards unemployment, we know that is one of the concomitants of modern civilization. It is pitiable to see the amount of unemployment everywhere and Government is not going to take action in the matter. As a matter of fact, one lakh of rupees is a very small amount with which to tackle the question, but some step might be taken. At least we might be able to have a committee appointed to go into the whole question and investigate what things should be done. (The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. Pannirselvam: 'This will mean travelling allowance.') I am sorry the Hon. the Home Member takes a very sordid view of the matter. I do not think any of us want travelling allowance and that is not why we want the committee to be appointed. An official committee may be appointed to go into the question and I will be perfectly satisfied. In any case, I should like some initial step to be taken. We do not want that the whole lakh of rupees should be spent this year, but a part of it might be spent. My hon. Friend, the Mover, says he does not agree with me. I withdraw my remark. I think the whole lakh may be spent in the initial steps and I do not think that is much, seeing the amount of misery around us. I would point out that certain steps might be taken in hand immediately. For instance an information bureau or a labour bureau, can be established straightaway under the various departments. We have got this rural reconstruction . . ."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member may continue his speech to-morrow if he wants to speak for another five minutes or more."

III.—ANNOUNCEMENT RE CHAIRMEN OF SELECT COMMITTEES.

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Before we adjourn, I wish to announce the names of the following Chairmen for the several Select Committees on Bills which were referred to them:—

The Hindu Maths Bill—Diwan Bahadur T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar.

The House then adjourned to meet again the next day at 11 a.m.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL QUESTION No. 462.

Police—Constabulary—Recruitment in South Arcot district from 1st April to 30th November 1934.

With reference to the answer to Legislative Council Question No 462 given on 23rd January 1935, the following information since furnished by the Inspector-General of Police is placed on the table of the House.

Recruitment to the constabulary was made by the District Superintendent of Police, South Arcot, during the period 1st April to 30th November 1934. The total number of applicants was 548, of whom 47 belonged to the depressed classes. Seventeen men were actually appointed and of these 6 belonged to the depressed classes.

Depressed class applicants are generally given special consideration in the matter of recruitment to the constabulary. Though most of them know only the vernacular, preference is given to them wherever possible over better educated candidates belonging to other communities.

A.—No budget allotments are made until the Budget is voted. The Government will propose certain allotments for the year 1935–36 for the purpose referred to in the question.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ May I know whether we can expect elections in September of this year? ”

The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ I am unable to say. ”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I know whether the next election will be under the new reforms or under the present constitution? ”

The Hon. HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ I must ask for notice of this question. ”

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—“ May I know whether there is a proposal to extend the period of this Council? ”

The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ So far, I am not aware of this. ”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I know when the Government of India Bill will become an Act? ”

The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ The Government have no idea. ”

[25th January 1935]

Railways

Proposal for the discontinuance of the Salem-Mettur railway service.

* 523 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Member for Finance be pleased to state—

(a) whether there is any proposal to abolish the railway line between Salem junction and Mettur; and
 (b) if so, at what stage it is?

A.—(a) & (b) The Salem-Mettur Dam railway consists of two parts, viz., a permanent line from Salem to Mecheri and an assisted siding from Mecheri to Mettur Dam. The question whether the siding should be retained permanently has been deferred for consideration till the middle of this year to see whether there is any prospect of developing the Mettur township into an industrial centre on which the success of a permanent line from Mecheri to Mettur depends.

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I know the length of the siding and the cost of construction? ”

The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ I must ask for notice of this question. ”

Electricity

Places served with electricity from the Pykara Hydro-Electric Works.

* 524 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) what are the places that have been supplied with electricity so far from Pykara Hydro-Electric Works;

(b) what is the quantity of electric current consumed by each place in each month since January 1934; and

(c) what are the places which are yet to be served by the Pykara Hydro-Electric Scheme?

A.—(a) The hon. Member's attention is drawn to the answer given to question No. 367 at the meeting of the Legislative Council on 4th November 1933. Since then a number of other places in the Coimbatore and Nilgiri districts have been supplied with Pykara power, including a number of villages in which electric pumps to wells have been installed for purposes of irrigation.

(b) It will involve much labour and time to collect and collate the information wanted by the hon. Member. But if he wants information about any particular place, it will be called for.

(c) Karur, Trichinopoly, Srirangam, Negapatam, Tiruvarur, Tanjore and Kumbakonam for the present.

[25th January 1935]

* 525 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAYYA: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

- (b) when the book was first printed and published;

(b) In or before 1926.

(c) Three.

(d) No.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"May I know, Sir, whether the objectionable portions were intimated to the author?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"The author might cut out the objectionable portion and publish it again."

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"May I know why the Government allowed two or three editions to pass before they proscribed the book?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"Action was taken immediately the matter was brought to the notice of the Government."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Will not the Government enable the author to know exactly what the objectionable portion is in order that he might delete them?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"It is easy enough for an author to know it."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know why the Government itself cannot give this?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"There is no necessity for it."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know what the objectionable portions are?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"Notice."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"Is it not possible to assign reasons?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"The reason assigned is that they are objectionable."

[25th January 1935]

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"Will the Government be pleased to point out the objectionable portions so that the author may delete them?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"If an application is made, the matter will be considered."

* 526 Q.—Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

- (a) whether an Inspector of Police (Traffic Department) of Madras City was run over by a bus and killed; if so, what his name is; and
- (b) whether his portrait is hung in the office of the Commissioner of Police with the inscription thereon that he was murdered; if so, what the inscription thereon is?

A.—(a) The hon. Member apparently refers to the late Sergeant Major R. Williams of the Traffic Department in the Madras City Police who was run over by a bus and killed in June 1934.

(b) No.

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"May I know which part of the question (b) the answer refers to? I wish to know whether the Hon. Member means that no such portrait is hung or that no such inscription is there?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"The answer is to clause (b)."

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"Is it for both the parts?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"When it applies to the first portion, naturally the second portion does not arise."

* 527 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Director of Agriculture has recommended to the Government the sanction of a sluice for the irrigation of the lands of Konala and Arulla Agraharam of Tadepalligudem taluk in the district of West Godavari; and

(b) whether it is a fact that the above lands are reported to be fit for sugarcane cultivation?

A.—(a) The Director of Agriculture has forwarded a petition from the ryots of the villages asking for irrigation facilities to the lands to enable them to raise a sugarcane crop, and has recommended the grant of the request.

(b) The Director of Agriculture reports that the soil is suitable for growing sugarcane, but until it is ascertained whether sufficient water is available for that purpose, no definite conclusion can be reached on the question.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ May I know whether the Government are prepared to consult the Agricultural department whenever they remodel an existing irrigation system? ”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ No, Sir.”

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ Is it not advisable for the Government to consult the Agricultural department as to whether re-sludging is necessary or not in the interests of the ryots? ”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ No, Sir. The Agricultural department is consulted as to the nature of the soil.”

Alleged damage to crops by floods from Daravaram Madugu and Appa Rao Canal in West Godavari district.

* 529 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAIYA: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government are aware of the fact that the villagers of Daravaram in Kovvur taluk of West Godavari district have been sustaining serious loss of their crops every year by the floods from Daravaram Madugu and Appa Rao Canal;

(b) whether any petitions were sent up by the villagers to the Collector and Executive Engineer, West Godavari district, requesting them to make arrangements for putting up necessary bunds and for making other drainage arrangements; and

(c) whether any and, if so, what action was taken in the matter?

[25th January 1935]

A.—(a), (b) & (c) The Government have no information, but they have called for a report Repairs to the anicut under the Chinna Eri and Peria Eri in Kanavoi-Pudur, Omalur taluk.

* 530 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the anicut under Chinna Eri and Peria Eri in Kanavoi-Pudur village of Omalur taluk in the Salem district has breached last year;

(b) if so, whether the breaches have been repaired and when;

(c) whether it is a fact that the ayacut lands of the said anicut lie uncultivated on account of not doing what is necessary for the anicut;

(d) whether the ayacutdars of the said anicut have applied for remission and, if so, when and what has been done with their prayers; and

(e) when the anicut is likely to be repaired, if it has not been already attended to?

A.—(a) to (e) A petition on the subject was received by the Government in November last. The petition was transferred to the Board of Revenue. Another petition on the same subject, with a request for remission, was received at the beginning of this month. Confirmation of the temporary staff of the Central Survey office.

* 531 Q.—Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that the Central Survey office has been self-supporting by sale of maps to private parties, local bodies and to other departments and the work turned out is independent of the party offices;

(b) whether it is a fact that the Director of Survey has recommended to the Government for the confirmation of the entire temporary staff, and, if so, what action has been taken by the Government in this direction; and

(c) what steps the Government have taken to redress the grievances of temporary men in the Survey office as regards the grant of time-scale of pay and eligibility to old scale of pay when absorbed in permanent vacancies?

[25th January 1935]

A.—(a) The Central Survey office is not entirely self-supporting. Some of the items of work are dependent on the Survey parties.

(b) The Director of Survey recommended that the temporary staff should be made permanent. The Government were unable to accept the recommendation.

(c) The matter is under consideration.

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—" May I know whether the temporary staff referred to in clause (c) consists of persons who have put in several years' service in the Central Survey Offices? "

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—" I understand some of them have put in several years' service."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—" May I know why the Government are unable to accept the recommendations of the Director of Survey and confirm men with 7, 8, 10 or 12 years' service in the staff? "

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—" Reasons of finance, Sir."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—" May I know, Sir, whether it is not a fact that persons who have put in service of 20 years and more are treated as temporary service persons? "

Objections received in respect of the Resettlement Scheme Reports relating to Salem and South Kanara.

* 532 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) how many objections have been received with regard to the Resettlement Scheme Reports which were published in Salem and South Kanara districts some time ago inviting representations from the public; and

(b) what are the remarks offered by the Settlement Officer, the Collector and the Board of Revenue on those objections and representations; and whether copies of the same will be placed on the table?

A.—(a) The number of representations received in the period allowed for the receipt of criticisms was:—

South Kanara	...	97
Salem	...	1,240

(b) Orders on the proposals for the resettlement of the South Kanara district were issued in G.O. No. 42, Revenue, dated 5th January 1935, which has been placed at the disposal of the ' Press.' The objections and representations received on the scheme report for the Salem district which was placed on the table of the Legislative Council in G.O. No. 1892, Revenue, dated 23rd September 1934, are under the consideration of the Government. The Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by placing on the table of the Legislative Council the remarks of the Board of Revenue and subordinate officers on the representations received on the scheme reports.

[25th January 1935]

Particulars of objections received regarding the Scheme Report for South Kanara.

* 533 Q.—Khan Bahadur MAHMUD SHAMNAD SAHIB Bahadur: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state how many and from whom representations have till now been received by the Government objecting to the scheme report of the Settlement department regarding the resettlement proposals of South Kanara?

A.—The attention of the Hon. Member is invited to the answer to clause (a) of question 532. The Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by furnishing the names of the several persons or bodies from whom representations were received.

Medical Administration

Scale of pay of the Medical Establishment under Local Boards and Municipalities.

* 534 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether orders have been passed fixing a uniform scale of pay for the medical establishments under the local boards and municipalities under section 67 (3) of the Local Boards Act;

(b) if so, whether copies of the same will be placed on the table;

(c) whether the pay obtaining in Government institutions for similar posts has been taken into consideration in fixing the new scales of pay;

(d) if the Government scales were not adopted, what the reasons therefor are;

(e) whether the L.M.Ps. and L.I.Ms. are treated alike in fixing the scales for them;

(f) if not, what the reasons therefor are;

(g) whether representations have been received from the persons affected and, if so, how many, and in what way they have been disposed of; and

(h) whether there are any proposals to revise the new scales, and if so, what they are?

A.—(a) & (b) A copy * of G.O. No. 2403, P.H., dated 15th October 1934, is laid on the table.

(c) Yes.

* Printed as Appendix II on pages 521-525 infra.

[25th January 1935]

(d) There was no uniformity in the scales of pay prevailing in the local bodies. Several local bodies had themselves already fixed scales of pay lower than those sanctioned for Government servants. Considering the various scales of pay prevailing and the general financial position of local bodies, fair and uniform scales of pay were fixed.

(e) No.

(f) The standards of training received by the L.M.Ps. and L.I.Ms. are different and the nature and quality of work turned out by them are also different. Local bodies themselves had adopted lower scales of pay for L.I.Ms. than those they had adopted for L.M.Ps.

(g) Representations were received from some persons. They have been referred to the presidents of district boards concerned for necessary action with reference to G.O. No. 2648, P.H., dated 14th November 1934, a copy of which is also placed on the table.

(h) No.

Mr. G. RAMESWARA RAO:—"The first sentence of paragraph 5 of the Government Order runs thus: 'In the case of subsidized rural dispensaries a sum of Rs. 600 a year is paid to a medical graduate, Rs. 500 a year to a L.M.P., A.L.I.M., or L.I.Ms., Rs. 300 a year to a first-class midwife and Rs. 200 for second-class midwife from the provincial funds.' My question is whether in this category the homœopathic doctor is also recognized and if so, the pay he is eligible for."

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I cannot say off-hand; I believe it is the same pay as the allopathic doctors get."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"If so, may I know why there are two scales of pay in clause (e)?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"To make them correspond as far as possible to the existing practice in the district board."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know what exactly the Government mean by saying that there is difference between L.I.Ms. and L.M.Ps.?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"The standard of education, the course, the existing practice of the local boards are all different."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Is it not in view of the fact that one system is allopathic and the other is Indian?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"No, Sir."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know why the Government should make any difference between the two when both are trained? Why should one be considered higher and the other inferior?"

* Printed as Appendix II on pages 521-525 infra.

[25th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"It is considered that the L.M.P. standard is higher."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"Are there not non-L.I.Ms., teaching in the Indian School of Medicine?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"There may be some cases. They are exceptions."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"In view of the statement made by the Hon. Minister, are they going to make any reduction of grants to the rural dispensaries where L.I.Ms. are entertained?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"No, Sir, the amount of contribution payable is clearly stated in the Government Order."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"In view of the fact that the existing incumbents are entertained on a particular scale of pay, may I know what justification Government find for reducing their salaries?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"As far as my information goes, in no cases have salaries been reduced."

Public Health

Charges for the supply of drinking-water from Mettur reservoir to Salem town.

* 535 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) at what stage the scheme for the supply of drinking-water to Salem town from Mettur reservoir is;

(b) whether there is any proposal to charge for the water taken from the reservoir for that purpose;

(c) if so, what it is and what rate they want to charge;

(d) whether the Government charge for the water taken for drinking purposes from Government sources in other districts in this Presidency;

(e) if so, in what places they so charge, at what rate they charge in each of such places, and from which source water is taken in each of such places;

(f) on what principles they charge for the water taken for drinking purposes; and

(g) whether the Government charge for the drinking-water taken from wells dug at Government's cost?

A.—(a) The Council has accepted the arrangement for financing the scheme on the basis of a half grant and half loan and the question of sanctioning the employment of a special staff for the preparation of detailed plans and estimates for the scheme is now under consideration.

[25th January 1935]

(b) Yes.

(c) The maximum rate that is likely to be charged eventually will be at Rs. 2.39 per 1,000 cubic yards. The water charges will, however, be actually levied on a sliding scale on the rates of water-cess to be charged in the Cauvery-Mettur Project area from time to time. When the water-rate to be charged per acre comes up to Rs. 15 per acre, the charge to the municipality will be Rs. 2.39 per 1,000 cubic yards of water. When the water-rate charged is Rs. 5 per acre as is the case at present, the charge to the municipality will be only As. 11 per 1,000 cubic yards.

(d) & (e) Yes. A statement* furnishing the information required is appended to the answer.

(f) & (g) The hon. Member apparently refers to water taken from Government sources by municipal authorities. In the case of existing water-supply schemes no charge is levied where none has been levied hitherto. But if at any future time in connexion with improvements to existing schemes or the carrying out of new schemes any considerable quantity of water has to be diverted from irrigation sources, it will be open to the Government to decide whether any and, if so, what charge shall be levied on that account. Unless the local body is specifically exempted for this purpose or unless concessional rates are specially fixed by the Government in any case, local bodies are charged at the rate of Re. 1 per 1,000 cubic yards of water taken for drinking purposes.

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know by when with regard to several municipalities the water-rate has been fixed at Re. 1 per thousand cubic yards, in the case of Salem Rs. 2.39 charged for the same quantity?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"In Salem, the rate has been fixed with reference to the rates of water-cess in Tanjore."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know water used for drinking purposes is treated on the same level as water used for irrigation?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"The point is this municipality which is being benefited by the Mettur Project should also make a suitable contribution towards the expenses."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"Is it the object of the Government that the municipality should be made to contribute towards the cost of the headworks?"

* Printed as Appendix III on page 525 infra.

25th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"It is considered fair and desirable that the water-rate charged should bear some relation to the water-rate charged to ryots in Tanjore. Otherwise it would mean that the general tax-payer would have to pay for the Salem water-supply."

Religious and Charitable Endowments

Alleged ruination of the Jama Masjid in Coimbatore by the trustee thereof.

* 536 Q.—Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"Because the list is liable to revision at the end of every year."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know why the list as it is maintained at present should not be placed before the House?"

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"As I said, it is liable to revision and it is confidential."

(d) whether any attempt was made to undertake the survey of the soil of any part of the district by the Agricultural Department to help agriculturists of Ganjam to raise different crops?

[25th January 1935]

A.—(a) & (b) The station is an experimental station and it was opened with the help of funds from the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research which is financing a co-ordinated scheme of research in the major rice producing provinces in India. The main object of the research work carried on at this station is the improvement of the quantity and quality of all varieties of rice of major importance in the Ganjam district by the evolution of higher yielding strains and by adopting better cultural and manurial practices. When definite results have been obtained from the experiments, steps will be taken to recommend to ryots such improvements as will increase the yield of crops.

(c) As has been stated above, the station is not a demonstration farm. Though the main crop under experiment is paddy, fodder crops, and other crops such as cotton, sugarcane, fruit crops, etc., are being tried in order to explore the possibilities of growing them after the harvest of paddy.

(d) The soils of the stations have been studied but a soil survey of the district has not been made yet. Local officers can advise where crops can be newly introduced in their areas.

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"I will consider the question."

Registration

Vacancies remaining unfilled in the cadre of upper grade Sub-Registrars.

* 542 Q.—MR. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that there are vacancies in upper grade of sub-registrar cadre, which remain unfilled; and

(b) if so, how many such vacancies there are, when they arose and why they have not been filled up?

A.—(a) & (b) The attention of the hon. Member is invited to the answer to question No. 411. Of the sixteen vacancies now existing eight are kept unfilled till the result of the enquiry shortly to be undertaken into the work, character and conduct of eight sub-registrars is known. The remaining eight vacancies will be filled up by the Inspector-General himself under the powers since delegated to him by Government.

11-15 a.m. B. POKER SAHIB Bahadur:—“ May I know whether communal inequality in the upper grade of sub-registrars will be kept in view in filling up these vacancies? ”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“ I believe promotions are being made according to seniority and merit. If so, communal inequality cannot be considered.”

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—“ May I ask whether in filling up these eight vacancies which will be done by the Inspector-General himself, he will give due consideration to remove communal inequalities that exist in the upper grade? ”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“ I said, Sir, that communal representation does not apply to promotions.”

Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—“ It is said that there is going to be an enquiry into the work, character and conduct of eight sub-registrars. Is it not the case that the supersession of the eight sub-registrars had nothing to do with their work and conduct which is proposed to be investigated now? ”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“ It had everything to do, Sir.”

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—“ I shall try to be more explicit in my question. It is said here that the remaining eight vacancies will be filled by the Inspector-General himself under the powers since delegated to him by Government. May I know whether the Government mean that these vacancies will be filled by promotion alone? ”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“ That is what is meant.”

GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state whether L.Ts. and B.Eds. working as secondary grade teachers in the Government services are being promoted as Junior Deputy Inspectors and school assistants, as hitherto, without being necessitated to appear before the Services Commission?

Excise

Measures taken so far to give effect to the policy of the previous Ministry for the eradication of the drink evil.

* 544 Q.—SWAMI A. S. SAHAJANANDAM: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) whether the policy laid out by the previous Ministry to eradicate the drink evil within twenty years is still in force;

(b) how the Government have given effect to this policy till now;

(c) what progress has been made in this direction;

(d) if no action has been taken, why the Government did not take any action at all;

(e) whether the Government propose to take any action on that scheme; and

(f) if so, in what way they intend giving effect to it?

A.—(a) to (f) The hon. Member's attention is invited to the answer given to question No. 517 at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on 2nd November 1931, which sets out the policy of the Government and the measures taken by them in pursuance of that policy. Of the schemes of partial prohibition stated therein to have been introduced in certain areas, those relating to the Salem and Tinnevely districts have had to be abandoned as they failed to achieve the object with which they were introduced. In recent years, there has been a heavy fall in the consumption of licit liquor, while illicit distillation and kindred offences have increased to a marked degree. This shows that the drinking classes are taking to illicit liquor, owing to the restrictions placed on the supply of licit liquor and its high price. The problem which confronts the Government at the moment is the eradication of crimes connected with illicit liquor, and they are taking steps to deal with this problem. It is impossible therefore to consider the question of introducing any large measures of prohibition unless this problem as well as the problem of finance is solved.

[25th January 1935]

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—" May I know whether this question was placed before the Excise Advisory Committee before the decision was arrived at by the Government? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" There is no specific proposal at all. I do not know what we should have placed before the Advisory Committee."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—" Are we to understand from the answer given that in the opinion of the Government the policy laid down by them to bring about complete prohibition in twenty years is given up as impracticable? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" It is not said so at all in the answer."

Rao Sahib V. I. MUNISWAMI PILLAI:—" It is said in the answer that the 'drinking classes are taking to illicit liquor, owing to the restrictions placed on the supply of licit liquor and its high price.' May I know in what districts that is obtaining and what steps the Government have taken to eradicate this practice? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" Notice, Sir."

Rao Bahadur R. SRINIVASAN:—" May I know, Sir, whether with a view to combat the existing evil of illicit trade and distillation and save the cost of detective staff the Government will consider the question of opening liquor shops and selling liquors of good quality at a lower rate? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" The Government are considering how best to combat the evil."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—" May I ask whether the Hon. Minister will be pleased to say whether he still adheres to the policy of complete prohibition within twenty years for which his predecessor-in-office was responsible? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" The policy adopted by the Government has not been changed."

Rao Sahib V. I. MUNISWAMI PILLAI:—" Will the Hon. the Minister for Excise be pleased to say whether in prohibited areas—I mean the Nilgiris—people, for whom partial prohibition is introduced are having full drinks due to the slackness of the staff? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I am not aware that slackness of the staff has been responsible for those things."

Appointments of Excise Sub-Inspectors, Assistant Inspectors and Inspectors made since 1930.

* 545 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Education and Excise be pleased to state—

(a) how many new appointments of Excise Sub-Inspectors, Assistant Inspectors and Inspectors were made in each year since 1930;

(b) how many of these were made by direct recruitment and how many by promotion from the lower ranks of the department; and

(c) what is the districtwar and communitywar strength of persons so appointed?

A.—(a) to (c) The Government have not the information.

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—" May I know who has got this information, if the Government has not got the information? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" It may be gathered from a number of offices, Sir."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—" Are we to ask those officers, Sir, to give that information to us? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I certainly do not want the hon. Member to ask them."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—" I being not the Minister for Excise, and requiring this information, what am I to do, Sir? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" In view of the fact that the labour involved in gathering the information is so great, the Government did not consider it necessary to get the information."

Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—" With reference to clause (c) of the question, viz., the districtwar and communitywar strength of persons appointed, may I know whether Government will be pleased to call for information? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" Many of these appointments are not made districtwar. For instance, sub-inspectors are appointed by Assistant Commissioners for their divisions. So, it is difficult to give the appointments districtwar, and it is not known for what purpose my hon. Friend wants this information."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—" Will the Hon. Minister state whether any direct recruitment was made to the cadre of Assistant Inspectors and Inspectors in the year 1934? "

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I cannot say offhand, Sir."

Co-operation

Applications from Ceded districts for opening Land Mortgage Banks.

548 Q.—Mr. G. RAMESWARA RAO: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state whether any applications for Land Mortgage Banks have been received from the Ceded districts and, if so, how many and from whom and how they have been disposed of?

[25th January 1935]

A.—A statement furnishing the information required is furnished below:—

List of applications for Land Mortgage Banks in the Ceded districts received in the Office of the Registrar of Co-operative Societies.

Serial number and Land Mortgage Bank for what area.	Application received from whom.	How it was disposed of.
1 Chennur in the Cuddapah district, a portion of Cuddapah taluk.	Ryots of the Chennur village.	Investigations were made by the Deputy Registrar, Land Mortgage Banks. A bank for the area was, however, refused as the area was found unsuitable for the successful working of a Land Mortgage Bank and as the condition of co-operative societies in the area was not satisfactory.
2 Harpanahalli in the Bellary district.	President, Local Co-operative Union, Harpanahalli.	It was found that the area was upland with rainfed tanks scattered here and there and that it was unsuitable for the successful working of a Land Mortgage Bank.
3 Dharmavaram in the Anantapur district.	Some applications were received from the President, Local Co-operative Union, Dharmavaram.	The question of organization of a Land Mortgage Bank at Dharmavaram is engaging attention. Investigations for the organization of the bank have been made by the Deputy Registrar, Anantapur, and the opinion of President, Central Land Mortgage Bank, has been called for. He has not expressed his opinion yet and he has been reminded.

II.—ADJOURNMENT MOTION RE BIFURCATION OF DISTRICT BOARDS.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ Mr. President, Sir, I move that—

‘the business of the House be adjourned for the purpose of discussing an urgent matter of public importance, namely, the proposal of the Government to bifurcate district boards in the Presidency.’

“ The object of my moving this adjournment motion is not that I do not know that the Local Boards Act contemplates bifurcation proposals also. But recently, in the last Legislative Council session, the Hon. Minister has made a statement that he was anxious to carry out the amendments made in the Local Boards Act. All the same, he wanted to be given some interval of time for studying the new Act which was brought into force, and he made us to understand that the district boards are not going to be bifurcated as quickly as we all imagined. But the day before yesterday, with reference to a supplementary question, he has stated that he was going to bifurcate all the district boards or most of them in a month or two. In a challenging manner to a question from Mr. Arasu, he said that there are several other district boards which he is going to bifurcate. In view of the contradictory statements made by the Hon. Minister on the floor of this

[Mr. P. V. Krishnayya Choudari] [25th January 1935]

House, we felt that he should make a definite statement on the issue of bifurcation of district boards. In order to have a statement from him and to elicit information on the question, I just move this adjournment motion, and I hope the Hon. the President will give me an opportunity."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"I second it."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I am really at a loss to understand how the adjournment motion which the Hon. Member seeks to move now, is in consonance with the statement that he has made in its justification. According to the Madras Local Boards Act, the Government have a discretion to bifurcate district boards. If any statement has been made by the Hon. the Minister regarding the question of bifurcation which deserves to be discussed, the particular language in which the Hon. Member has chosen to put his adjournment motion, does not refer to it. In any case, I do not think that there is any urgency in this case, as the question of bifurcation of district boards has been before the Government and the public for nearly ten months past. I do not think the motion is in order."

The amendment was duly seconded.

Clause 8 as amended was then put and carried.

* Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"Sir, I move that the Bill be passed into law. I do not think it is necessary on my part to speak many words to commend the passing of this Bill into law. I know there is a certain class of opinion which is strongly opposed to any amendments that are proposed to be made to the Hindu Religious Endowments Bill. The origin of that opposition, it appears, is really due to the fact that any encroachment on the powers of the courts is looked upon as the greatest danger to the country. I know there are certain functions which it is absolutely necessary to entrust to courts. At the same time, I feel there are a number of other functions, mostly administrative, where entrusting them to courts is not only not effective in its purpose but will lead to all sorts of unnecessary complications and waste of public funds. It is more on account of that that I have proposed to move certain amendments to the Endowments Bill and I hope this Council will give its assent to them.

"There have been and there are certain defects in the present Act which it is absolutely necessary to set right. There are two changes proposed in this Bill which are commended for your acceptance. The first change is not of a radical nature; it is more or less to supply the lacunæ that have been found in the working of this Act and to put in certain provisions which no doubt were understood to be implied. But certain doubts have been raised during the course of litigation and therefore it was felt necessary in order to avoid any misapprehension, misunderstanding or doubt to put in some express provisions. One important change in that connexion was about the provision of kattalais. Every important specific endowment or kattalai—and there are many of that nature—has properties which require careful administration. Doubts have been raised during the course of litigation in courts whether the provisions of the Endowments Act would be applicable to such specific endowments. In a matter like levying fees from the kattalais, in a matter like framing schemes for kattalais, and in the matter of accounts and management of the kattalais, in such cases doubts have arisen. And this Bill as amended by the Select Committee and passed at the second reading makes clear provision for them. In all cases Kattalais are included along with temples and mutts for the purpose of the Endowments Act.

[Mr. K. Koti Reddi] [25th January 1935]

"The second thing is that doubts have arisen in the framing of schemes, both with regard to mutts and excepted temples and non-excepted temples, whether the Board could have the power which in some cases they have been exercising and which the courts in connexion with the suits brought before them have been exercising, viz., to add to the number of trustees, to remove them or to appoint salaried managers if necessary, to frame budgets and things of that type for the proper administration of the temples and mutts. For this purpose, clauses 5 and 6 have been inserted in the Bill. These are amendments, not of a very radical nature, but only intended to clear up doubts.

"There is one other provision, Sir, which one may not call radical but still is a great improvement on the present Bill. It is a well-known fact that although provision is made in the present Bill for the hereditary trustees and trustees appointed by temple committees to keep proper accounts of the endowments they have been managing and that an audit should be made of those accounts, on account of the financial bankruptcy—if I may so put it—of the temple committees, and should I not say, also of the Religious Endowments Board because it is not able to discharge all its pecuniary duties as yet, it is not possible for the temple committees or the Board to appoint auditors to go into the accounts and find out what mismanagement or improper management has taken place. A thorough audit was not possible before on account of the financial difficulties, and a provision is made in this Bill for meeting the costs of audit from the funds of the endowments concerned. That I think is a great improvement. No doubt, personally I should have wished to augment the resources of the Board and temple committees. As a matter of fact I gave notice of an amendment levying a uniform rate of 3 per cent from all the endowments—it is very confusing that certain endowments should be asked to pay $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent and others 3 per cent—but seeing the temper of the House I thought it discreet not to press it. I hope the future Government will take up the responsibility of meeting the necessary expenditure for the Board and similar boards that are likely to come up hereafter, from the provincial funds itself, but till that time comes, it seems to me absolutely necessary for the proper management of temples, mutts and specific endowments, that the finances of the Board should be vastly improved in order to discharge its duties properly.

"One other thing which is of great importance and has given rise to a lot of criticism, i.e., with regard to the notification of temples. Ever since the passing of this Act, in many decisions of the High Court, it has been brought to the notice of the public that the courts really are not the proper persons to discharge the functions that are usually entrusted to them and are of an administrative nature. For many important temples schemes have been framed for their management, and very detailed provisions very often have been made for removing trustees, for substituting trustees, for providing for budgets, for providing for salaried managers, and interferences like that which are considered necessary for the efficient management of those temples. But it was pointed out many a time by the courts themselves that they are not the proper body for entering into the details of the administration of these temples and they have several times wished that a body like the Endowments Board with special experience of all the temples and possessing a universal and comprehensive idea of all the endowments in this presidency would be in a much better position than themselves to deal with these institutions. I do not want to quote from any judgment in support of my statement, but would simply refer to the famous judgment in 47 M.L.J., 714. The present provisions are absolutely inadequate to meet the needs of the situation and hence my Bill.

"There is first the question of cost. It would be absolutely necessary, in order to make a change in the schemes framed, that somebody should go to a court. It is said that anybody who is interested in the temple can go and that the Board also, which, as I already said, is not financially strong, can go. Usually on account of the question of cost involved nobody takes this step and nothing is done. Even if a charitably inclined person takes the initiative and goes to court, he soon gets disgusted with the business on account of the unfortunate delays. The other day, my hon. Friend Rao Bahadur D. Krishnamurti pointed out to us a decision of the High Court on this question of abnormal delays. So, both on account of cost and on account of delay in courts, it is absolutely necessary that power should be vested in somebody who can perform the functions satisfactorily. When that is granted, there is no difficulty in finding out such a body. It is none other than the Endowments Board constituted for the purpose.

"Sir, it is sometimes said that by trying to entrust all these functions to this Board, we would not be improving matters as the Board is a body which is not responsible to public opinion and that it would be much better to entrust the whole thing to the Government itself. I personally see no objection to this course. But it is necessary to do so in view of the fact that the Board is functioning only on behalf of the Government. These institutions were once managed by the Government direct. As a matter of fact before 1847, during the time of the East India Company who was it that was controlling all our religious institutions? It was really the Government. Even now, in Mysore, Travancore and other States it is the Government that is directly managing the religious institutions. I do not see why they should not do hereafter when we, in these democratic days, are going to manage our affairs by the accredited representatives of the people.

"One other point I desire to mention in this connexion. The Endowments Board has not been made a completely independent body yet. It is a sort of semi-Government body. The fault I believe does not lie with the Ministers. If the Hon. the Finance Member can go to the help of the Hon. the Chief Minister, I believe the latter would have no objection to provincializing the Board."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I wish the hon. Member makes remarks relevant to the motion before the House. He had better do that rather than think of provincializing the Endowments Board."

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"Sir, I said that to meet the criticism that the Endowments Board is merely a political body run by the Ministerialist party and hence should not be entrusted with more functions. I suggested therefore that once it is provincialized, no such charge can be made."

"Sir, I have been often asked how, as a person with democratic tendencies, I proposed salaried executive officers for our temples and mutts. If I understand democracy properly I think there is room in it for my proposition. There is room under my scheme for experienced expert officers who are not influenced by political or other considerations in our religious institutions for work of an administrative nature. I therefore do not see where my democratic principles come in conflict with the appointment of salaried executive officers. I hope that this provision for appointing executive officers will enable full time competent men being appointed for the better management of the temples and mutts, some of which are very big institutions, like the Madura and Rameswaram Devasthanams having vast incomes. Honorary trustees are now in charge of them and, however well-intentioned they may be, they may not be in a position to devote the necessary time and attention for the proper management of the institutions. These institutions therefore do require full-time officers to administer them efficiently."

"Sir, before I conclude I wish to answer one charge that was made. I have been asked whether I am not inspired in bringing forward this Bill, whether I am not doing the work of the Government and whether the Government are not getting their work done through me."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"There were opportunities for the hon. Member to answer a charge of that kind. But now that the House has given its decision on those points, there is no necessity for the hon. Member to reiterate his answers. They are irrelevant to the question before the House."

* Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"I leave it there. I may however say that I am not inspired by anybody in bringing forward this Bill. A Bill of this kind seemed to me to be necessary and the Government also felt that it is a proper Bill. I personally see no objection to a Bill piloted by a private Member being supported by the Government, if they think it proper. I commend it to the acceptance of this honourable House."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"I second it."

* Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"Sir, I oppose this motion, not in the hope that my opposition would be supported by the majority of the Members, but in the plain discharge of a duty which I have always felt I owed to myself and to this House and to the large body of worshippers interested in the various devasthanams throughout the presidency. In 1923 when the Panagal Bill was on the legislative anvil, I sent up my criticism to the then Select Committee. I was not then in this House. One of the prophesies which I then risked, but which has now turned out to be no risk at all, was that in course of time the committees and trustees in charge of the various temples would be made the tools or instruments of the party in office to carry out their behests in matters affecting the wellbeing of the political party but not concerning at all the wellbeing of the institutions themselves. That criticism has been made absolutely true by the shape given to the Endowments Act by the Bill which is now passing into law. Under the Bill which now becomes law, it would be open to the Religious Endowments Board operating from Madras to notify a temple or temples and the moment a temple is so notified, the reign of law comes to an end in regard to the institution notified. The existing position of the law is that the trustee's powers and functions are a matter of law, which depend upon the law of the land. Whereas, hereafter, once a temple is notified, the trustee's powers and functions would cease to be a matter of law, but would begin to rest upon what the Hindu Religious Endowments Board chooses to define to be his powers and functions in relation to an executive officer whom they might superimpose upon such trustee. The executive officer is, in turn, made, for all purposes of law, to be a trustee, so that if when there is a trustee already you add another executive officer with the status and legal capacity of a trustee and choose to define the functions and powers as between the trustee already there and the executive officer whom you add, the relative functions and duties of these two functionaries no longer rest upon the law, but upon the executive orders of the Board. That, Sir, according to the experience of all who are versed in such matters, is a retrograde move. If there was one proposition with which judges, lawyers and others interested are always familiar in regard to this topic, it is this that a trustee, during the tenure of his office, has a free-hold in his office. He is not the servant of the committee or the Board. He represents the deity and the administration of the devasthanam is completely vested in him. But, hereafter, he has no freehold in his office. He has no real power except such as may from time to time be conferred or withdrawn by the Board and he is simply to carry out, as a servant at will, the orders of the Board. Sir, it is extraordinary that in this matter it has fallen to my hon. Friend Mr. Koti Reddi to take up the task of piloting this important legislation which would affect very much the big devasthanams down in the south of the presidency rather than the petty temples which alone probably they are acquainted with in the northern districts. Well, Sir, if you think of the Madura Meenakshi Devasthanam or the Rameswaram Devasthanam or the Kallazhahar Devasthanam or the Kudalalagar Devasthanam in the city of Madura or those big devasthanams in the Tinnevely district, such as Tiruchendur, Sankarankoil, Courtallam, etc., or the big Vishnu temples at Alwartirunagari and Sri-villiputtur or the temples at Tirumalai and Tirupati, you will be impressed with the complexity of their administration and also with the nature of the work the respectable men of the locality are doing.

12 noon.

"Matters come up hour after hour, and day after day which absorb the attention of the local committees which assemble week after week to dispose of important business, and oftentimes the trustee in charge has important matters to dispose of and readily he gets the opportunity of disposing of them in consultation with local committees. Now these Temple Committees have had schemes settled for them and in most cases most of these schemes have gone up to the High Court and have been approved by the High Court. Now the Religious Endowments Board in the course of exercising its powers came into conflict with the courts, before whom matters in controversy relating to the devasthanams came. Down in the south at Madura in regard to both the big devasthanams of Sri Minakshi and Sri Kallazhahar, there were attempts made on the part of the Board to usurp the powers of the local committee and the trustee, as well as of the local court, and whenever such usurpation was attempted the Judges saw the absurdity of the pretences of the Board seeking to usurp the powers, the legitimate powers of the trustees, the local committees and the courts. On previous occasions, during the second reading of this Bill, I have invited the attention of the House to the excellent judgments of Mr. Wardsworth, the one relating to Kallazhahar Devasthanam and the other relating to Sri Minakshi Devasthanam. In the course of the conflict the Religious Endowments Board expressed itself to the following effect, viz., that inasmuch as they were unable to satisfy the judges in the encounters with the local authorities, the only go was to pass the Bill containing the provisions which are now passed in the name of Mr. Koti Reddi. That Bill which I suppose they then had up their sleeves, they got the hon. Mr. Koti Reddi to pilot. I am sticking to that statement and I want some responsible person to say that that is not so. I want the Hon. Minister to say if this Bill is not a Bill which the Religious Endowments Board then referred to in the course of that correspondence. My friend, Mr. Koti Reddi, felt that there was nothing wrong in the Government helping a private Member in his effort to advance a satisfactory legislation. In the whole range of experience of this House, after the Montagu Scheme was set up, I do not think there has been any instance of a private Member being as lucky as my hon. Friend, Mr. Koti Reddi. Anyway, it was a phenomenon worth witnessing that time after time, whenever clause after clause was reached, what was put before the House was not anything that my hon. Friend, Mr. Koti Reddi, seemed to be responsible for, but every motion for the amendment of this clause or that clause, or this phrase or that phrase, was the motion of the Hon. the Chief Minister."

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"The Hon. Minister's amendments were all verbal."

25th January 1935]

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"I have also studied these debates and I know something of what I am talking about. Well, now the result of all this was, not being able to hold their own in any encounter before any judge or before any court of law, they say in this Bill, once we notify a temple, the jurisdiction of courts is gone in regard to that temple, the local committee does not function and though not abolished, it hangs in the air in suspended animation. The trustee is either replaced by an executive officer or there is another executive officer added on to him and the powers are distributed between them under the executive orders issued by the Board, and the executive officer who himself in turn is proposed to be dealt with in law as a trustee is liable to be removed at the sweet will and pleasure of the Board. That makes the trustee an absolute servant of the executive officer who is a creature of the Board. And all this administration is intended to be carried on from Madras over all these bigger and smaller temples. I think such a thing is impossible. It is only a device for exercising patronage and for creating appointments of executive officers all over the devasthanams, so that on necessary occasions for the furthering of your unconnected interests, you may utilize the whole army of your men. That is really the purpose and effect of this measure."

"I think, Sir, after all, these religious endowments stand to be protected if administered under the vigilant and fostering care and attention of the residents of the locality who go to the temple for worship and who feel a genuine interest in the management of their affairs rather than under this Central Body from Madras. Take the various occasions when the amendment of the Act of 1863 was thought of. Looking to the various Bills that were framed from time to time, whether the Robinson Bill, the Sullivan Bill, the Carmichael Bill or Sir T. Muthuswami Ayyar's Bill, you will find that whenever a central body like the Hindu Religious Endowments Board was thought of, it was not thought of for such an all-absorbing and comprehensive purpose of managing these devasthanams from Madras, but only for very limited purposes which were not provided for in Act XX of 1863. There were lacunae in the Act of 1863 and it was always felt that there was a necessity to fill up the lacunae by providing for audit and general administration reports and inspection and things of that kind. But never was it deemed feasible or proper that a central body like this should take upon itself the entire management of these devasthanams, through their servants. As I have pointed out it is not for the good of these devasthanams. It is impossible that this Religious Endowments Board could at all give the general public anything like one-hundredth part of the satisfaction given by the courts in the matter of settlement of schemes. One of the provisions of the Bill is that not only the courts' schemes should be scrapped, but their own schemes should also be scrapped. I have been at pains on earlier occasions in connexion with this Bill to point out my absolute conviction about the impotence and incapacity of this Board. If they settle schemes and their only way out of their own schemes is to scrap them by notifying the temples, it only means they are not the people to be charged with the responsibility for settling schemes of big devastanams. I think they are adopting absolutely erroneous lines of legislation and I think the Ministry in lending itself to this move by utilizing its voting power for the successful piloting of this so-called private Member's Bill has taken a very great responsibility."

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I did not intend to participate in this debate but for some irresponsible statements and allegations made by the hon. Member Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar. I feel I should not leave those statements unchallenged. Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar started claiming to be a very wise prophet. He told us this morning that when the Hindu Religious Endowments Act was first passed he predicted that further in-roads would be made by further amendments taking away the powers of the trustees and the people of the locality. Of course if to-day it has been found necessary to enact this amending Bill which I do admit is drastic in some respects, I think it is not due to any ulterior motives or to further the political ends of any party, but because in the working of the present Act during the last few years, it has been found that no provision exists for ensuring that the provisions of the Act would be administered as its original framers had intended. Experience has shown that the Act is defective and that able lawyers like my Friend Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar can make the administration practically impossible owing to the ruinous and protracted nature of the litigation which this Act has given rise to. It seems to me that the only remedy is to move in the direction of the Board being given greater powers, and if it pleases my Friend I will say, autocratic powers in some respects. If my hon. Friend refers to the history of these religious institutions, he will find that during the days of the East India Company, all the religious institutions were managed by the State. Of course as a result of the assuming of the powers of Government by the Crown, the Government of the day considered it desirable to divest themselves of any direct connexion with the administration of these endowments. Unfortunately experience has shown that as far as the interests of these ancient institutions are concerned, the step taken then, has not been a wise one. Whatever might be the justification of the Government policy in the past, I think, in view of the contemplated political changes in the country, it should be the policy of the Government to place these institutions on a sound basis. When the House is now being asked to enact this legislation, I believe we are really on the road to making Government ultimately responsible for the proper administration of these institutions. My hon. Friend has attempted to make the House believe that the passing of this Bill into an Act will mean the end of the reign of law. He has also stated that in future the intention of the supporters of this legislation is to make the trustees impotent. As far as I can understand the scope of this legislation the intention is to appoint persons with administrative experience as executive officers of temples to attend to the secular affairs and business matters connected with their administration. Neither the Hindu Religious Endowments Act, nor the Bill we are now discussing proposes to interfere with the religious rituals in these institutions. This Bill merely extends to other institutions the legislation passed by this House with reference to the Tirupati Devasthanam.

25th January 1935] [The Raja of Bobbili]

"I do not wish to detain the House longer with my remarks, but before I close I wish to say a few words in reply to the further remarks of my Friend that this is an attempt to further the political ends of my party. In the first instance, I have to state that if we are to be guided by previous experience alone I am sure if a political party desires to strengthen their hands, they would never have thought of supporting a Bill of this nature, because, as in the case of the Hindu Religious Endowments Act, we do realize that we are certainly not satisfying those vested interests which my hon. Friend, Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar, claims to represent in this Council. It is only after facing hard facts and after realizing that in the interests of the better administration of these institutions such legislation is absolutely necessary that my party has given its support to this measure. Another point, or accusation made by my Friend is that Government did not have the courage to bring in an official measure and that they have adopted the indirect method of supporting a non-official Bill. I may state at once that whoever might be the sponsor of this legislation, the large amount of support given by this House to this measure is an indication of public feeling that such legislation is necessary in the interests of the institutions themselves; and I should also like to remind my Friend with reference to his statement that I have moved the largest number of amendments to this Bill, that if he only studies them, he will find that practically all of them are drafting amendments and seek to put the various clauses in better language. I do not think it will be possible for the Government to say that because it is a non-official Bill they have no responsibility in the matter. If it will satisfy my hon. Friend, I will say that I am prepared to take the fullest responsibility for this measure and also to face the consequences with which my hon. Friend has threatened me. With these words, I support the motion before the House."

* Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"Mr. President, Sir, I think the hon. Member from Madura has had all the questions raised by him replied to by a responsible member of the House. It is rather regrettable to note that the hon. Member from Madura has a curious conception of the responsibility of a member of this House. He thinks that all responsibility is centered in the front bench of this House and not in any other member of this House. I am sorry that a Nationalist of his temperament should have descended to this kind of argument with a view to discredit the members of this House. I am sure he will regret very much when he goes home and thinks over the matter very calmly and realizes what a great mistake he has made in calling the members of the front bench alone responsible. However, he is neither here nor there with reference to such observations. I am only concerned with one point, and that is this. As a lawyer member of this House he has stated that this Bill wants to take away the power that is legally vested in the legally-appointed trustees and committees—creatures of the law—and vest them in an executive authority, thereby depriving the people concerned of any right to take legal action in the matter. It is only with that aspect of the matter I am most concerned. He further stated that institutions which have been the subject-matter of litigation and for which the courts have framed schemes, would by a mere notification be deprived of the protection of the law and their administration vested in the hands of the executive. These are the arguments which were advanced by the hon. Member. He also referred to one other outstanding fact—the judgment of Mr. Wordsworth, the District Judge. Mr. Wordsworth is a District Judge and a very able Judge. But in this particular matter, we do not know what the circumstances were under which he gave his judgment. But it is rather sad to see that an able lawyer like my Friend should have for purpose of argument forgotten what the High Court has from time to time stated in this matter. The High Court has, in unmistakable terms pronounced that it is not the function of the District Courts or any Court of Justice to go into and determine schemes for the purpose of any religious institution. The High Court presided over by eminent Judges like Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar has gone into the matter and expressed their view in unmistakable terms that it is not the proper function of these courts, but should be left to other agencies to decide. The court is not the proper place to take up the details or the circumstances connected with any religious institution and any scheme that may be prepared will not at all be a proper and acceptable one. I do not want to tire the House by quoting at length the remarks of the Hon'ble Judges, but I should like to refer hon. Members to what is stated in the Madras Law Journal, 47 Madras, 715-720. I shall quote a few lines which will justify the legislation that is now brought forward in order to regularize and stabilize the administration of these institutions—

'In fact, under such schemes the Courts of Law constitute themselves in some manner as Temple Committees and the whole burden of such functions for all time is thrown upon the courts. It is very undesirable that the Courts should be burdened with such tasks.'

'Mark the words 'It is undesirable that the courts should be burdened with such tasks.' They proceed:

'Even in the interests of institutions themselves, it is doubtful if such provisions are calculated to promote their improvements or efficiency. We are also not satisfied that Courts of Law are generally the best fitted to choose proper trustees more especially having regard to the procedure generally adopted in such cases. Further, we are disposed to consider though in the view we are taking it is unnecessary to decide the point, that such decrees are ultra vires having regard to the express provisions of section 92 of the Civil Procedure Code, which makes it imperative that for the purposes of getting certain reliefs in respect of public charities, suits should be instituted by persons interested after getting the sanction of the Advocate-General.'

25th January 1935] [Sir A. P. Patro]

'We do not consider it necessary to alter the scheme at present, but only direct that as soon as such enactment should be passed, no time or opportunity should be lost by the Court acting under the powers reserved to itself under the scheme to make the necessary alterations in the scheme so as to place the temples under the supervision of such agencies as may be constituted and to rid the court of much of the functions and duties assumed under the present scheme.'

'This was the opinion of two eminent Judges of the High Court, 12-30 p.m. Justice Sir Gordon Spencer, Officiating Chief Justice then and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Ayyangar. These are the two eminent Judges whose views I wish to place before the House to show that this Bill is not conceived for the purpose of exploitation or for the purpose of promoting party interests; it has been brought forward in compliance with the remarks of those eminent Judges. The hon. Member from Madura said that at the time when correspondence was going on between the Trustee of the Temple at Madura and the Religious Endowments Board, the Board stated that they would bring forward a Bill; the hon. Member asks now 'Is this the Bill that they referred to at that time?' It is not a day too late that this Bill has been brought forward. If this Bill is not supported by the view of eminent Judges, I would certainly have hesitated to interfere with the decision of the courts. Then I would be the first man to say that the scheme prepared by the court should not ordinarily be disturbed or interfered with; that should be the duty of every public man. But having had the deliberate opinion of the Judges of the High Court on this matter, you cannot help saying that this Bill is very necessary; it is quite right for my hon. Friend in the Opposition to attribute all sorts of motives to those that are in office and power, to say that they are actuated or guided by this motive or that, and that this Bill ought not to be accepted by this House. But, Sir, there is a method in madness; even my friend from Madura should not attribute motives; even for friends of the schools which he represents, there is some limit with regard to decency and public conscience; even though political conscience may be dead for the time being, public conscience would dictate that any remarks should be based on substantial grounds; otherwise, may I inform him that he would be considered to be irresponsible, to say the least. I am sure he will now regret for having made rash statements in support of his case; he has no case whatever; like a lawyer accustomed to make up cases where none exists, he has spoken against the present motion, and the House will consider his case to be very unjustifiable.'

The motion that the Bill be passed into law was put and carried and the Bill was passed into law.

Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—'Mr. President, Sir, as I said yesterday, the problem of unemployment is engaging the serious attention of every democratic country. The time is now ripe for our Government to tackle the question. It was pointed out yesterday that large sums of money are being spent on the Pykara scheme and other schemes. It is no satisfaction to the unemployed to find that the wealth of the country is being increased; it is desirable that some steps should be taken in the big question of unemployment. The question of unemployment is entirely a different one from that of increase of wealth and it is quite possible that wealth can be increased without in any way affecting unemployment. It is desirable that the two questions should be looked at from different points of view. I do not wish to deal at length with this question because there may be speakers who will do so.

* Discussion resumed from the previous day.

[Mr. M. S. Sreshta] [25th January 1935]

"I would like to make a concrete suggestion. I would suggest that the Labour department may be asked to go into the question and see what amount of unemployment is to be found in the country. It will be easy for them along with their own duties to obtain statistics of unemployment in the Province. A suggestion was made yesterday which was more in the interest of the educated unemployed. It will be remembered that in the year 1926 a committee was appointed to go into the question of unemployment among the educated classes. That Committee made some valuable suggestions; I do not know whether any of these suggestions have been carried out or considered by the Government; but the question now before us is not unemployment among the educated classes only but unemployment among all classes. The question of unemployment in the lower classes should be dealt with in preference to the question of unemployment among the educated classes who can, to some extent, take up the question themselves. I hope this resolution, when carried, will help the hon. Member in charge to do something to solve the problem of unemployment. The number of homeless poor in the streets of Madras is a perpetual challenge to the rich who live in luxury and comfort. If some step is taken immediately, it will be possible to stop the increase of this disease which might otherwise become chronic. This question has been dealt with and I know great many minds, expert minds, have been applied to this question and great difficulty has been experienced in regard to the matter. But the difficulty of the task should not be a reason why an attempt should not be made to tackle this great task. I trust the hon. Member in charge of this portfolio, who is a Member who takes considerable interest in such matters, will apply himself to this question and will make his regime memorable by taking some steps to relieve the condition of the poor. In the first place I think some statistics will be necessary and it might be helpful to find out what volume of unemployment exists in the country. If a small staff is attached to the office of the Labour department and charged with the duty of ascertaining the number of unemployed and the directions in which unemployed may be given employment, it will to a great extent relieve the evil which is sought to be remedied by the resolution under discussion. I do not wish to weary the House any more in the matter. But it is unfortunate that this resolution comes wedged in between very important resolutions which attract great notice and I trust nevertheless that the House will take interest in the matter and will carry this resolution unanimously so that the hands of the Member in charge may be strengthened."

[25th January 1935] [Mr. M. S. Sreshta]

* Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:—

"Substitute the words "early steps be taken to relieve unemployment among the educated middle classes" for the words "at least a lakh of rupees be set apart from the Provincial revenues to relieve the unemployed."

"My hon. Friend, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar has always been pleading for the unemployed in this Council and he has been urging upon the Government to take some steps to give relief to these unfortunate people. I appreciate his object and his motive in coming before this House with such a resolution. But, Sir, the scope of the resolution is rather too wide. He wants the Government to deal with unemployment among all classes of people. We have no information regarding unemployment among factory workers, among agricultural labourers and labourers in general. I believe, Sir, that the evil of unemployment among these classes has not assumed very serious proportions in this country; at least this is what the report of the Labour Commission makes us understand. It is true that in western countries, unemployment among these classes of people has become an alarming evil. Unemployment has become a disease of modern industrial civilization; it has assumed serious proportions in the course of the present economic depression, particularly since the year 1929 in industrial countries like the United States of America, England and Germany. But in this country we have no information about unemployment among factory workers and labourers in general and as I said, I think the evil has not assumed alarming proportions. We have in this country a great deal of unemployment among the educated classes. The object of my amendment is to restrict the scope of this resolution to unemployment among the educated classes. The remedy which the mover suggests seems to be simple. He says that the Government should give at least a lakh of rupees from the Provincial revenues to relieve the unemployed people in the City and in the mufassal. I do not think the remedy is so simple or so easy. The evil of unemployment is very complex; it arises from very many causes; it is a very widespread evil and the remedy to tackle this problem must be necessarily comprehensive and of an all-embracing character. In this Council in the year 1925 a resolution was passed asking for a Committee to go into this question; a Committee was accordingly appointed and they made a report; I am afraid no action has been taken on the recommendations made by this Committee. Since that time the evil of unemployment has grown in extent and intensity. The output of our schools and colleges is greatly in excess of the number of places available in Government service; in the various professions as well as in other spheres of work. In a properly organized State, matters would not be allowed to drift in this way. The needs of the various departments of Government service, and of the professions and the openings available in business careers ought to be ascertained. The supply should not be allowed to run far in excess of the demand. Young men should be given the education which is suited to their attitudes and abilities and they should be directed to appropriate lines of activity. But here there is no such thing. It has been repeatedly urged by educationists as well as others that what we want in this country is a re-orientation of policy regarding education. We want a re-adjustment of our educational system in order to meet the economic needs of the country. Our education is too literary and bookish. Sir George Anderson, the Educational Commissioner with the Government of India, in his recent address to the All-India Educational Conference has drawn pointed attention to this matter. He said that what we require in this country is a reconstruction of our school system. Young men who are not fit for higher cultural studies must be diverted to vocational training in separate institutions. A similar suggestion was made by the Punjab University Education Committee, and this suggestion has been endorsed by the Universities Conference which was held a short time ago. I understand, Sir, that the United Provinces Government have propounded a similar scheme and have solicited opinions from persons who are in a position to give opinions on this matter. We must have vocational schools running side by side with general schools; but it is not enough if we merely start such schools. The mere establishment of technical and technological institutions and turning out of young men equipped for various careers will not solve the question of unemployment. It will be a sheer waste, if proper avenues of employment are not found for them by the improvement of agriculture and development of trade and industry in this country. So, a scheme of vocational education must be properly planned, and it must be related to the economic needs of the country. We hear a great deal now a days about economic planning. National planning as well as international planning is being attempted all over the world. We cannot afford to remain without some plan for developing our country. This Government should not shut their eyes to the great and growing evil of unemployment as if it is not their concern, to tackle this problem. Let them reorganize education; so as to make it suit the needs of the present day. Let them have an expert Committee to formulate a plan of economic development. They must provide new avenues of employment in trade, industry, agriculture and so on, to men who are turned out of our schools and colleges. Of course this is a question which the Provincial Government alone cannot tackle; the Government of India also will have to take up this matter because the economic development of a country is intimately related to other questions such as tariffs, banking, currency and transport. I hope, Sir, the hon. the Home Member who is in charge of this portfolio will understand the seriousness of the present situation. Unemployment means a great deal of human suffering. It means a tragic waste of effort and it means also a social danger to the State. In western countries the State has been taking action in various directions, to tackle the problem of unemployment. International action also is being taken. In twenty-four countries they have organized public employment exchange services. Unemployment insurance has recently made a great deal of progress. It has spread to many countries; and about 50 (fifty) million workers have taken to unemployment insurance. In this country also I believe it is the duty of the Government, not merely to collect taxes and maintain law and order, but also to see that people do not suffer and that such evils are not allowed to grow beyond due proportions. Government must make a survey of the situation, collect statistics, employ experts to suggest ways and means of tackling this problem and devise with the aid of the Government of India, and if need be, with the aid also of the Imperial Government the measures that are necessary to ameliorate the present situation."

[Mr. A. B. Shetty]

[25th January 1935]

25th January 1935]

* Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"Sir, I have much pleasure in seconding the amendment so ably moved by my Friend Mr. A. B. Shetty, that the scope of this resolution be, for the present, restricted to pressing cases. I do not stand in the way of considering the problem in all its aspects, but considering the present financial position, I think we must restrict relief only to pressing cases. We find almost every day of our lives that educated people are mostly unemployed; we find that distinguished graduates of our Universities are coming forward very often to accept such paltry salaries as Rs. 15 or Rs. 18 as elementary school teachers, etc. It is high time that the case of these educated unemployed should receive immediate attention. It has been stated that a sum of Rs. 1 lakh may be allotted; I do not think this sum is enough to meet the situation. It is necessary that the Government should come forward with much bigger amounts. The present-day education gives scope to youngsters to take to a habit of quill-driving and nothing else. I think if Government change the present methods of education, this grave situation may be met to some extent. As my Friend has already dealt elaborately with the details, it is unnecessary for me to say more. I have much pleasure in seconding the amendment."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The amendment is:—

"Substitute the words 'early steps be taken to relieve unemployment among the educated middle classes' for the words 'at least a lakh of rupees be set apart from the Provincial revenues to relieve the unemployed.'"

"Both the resolution and the amendment are for the discussion of the House."

* Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Mr. President, if I am in order, I would like to propose another amendment, viz., for the words 'that at least a lakh of rupees be set apart from the Provincial revenues.'"

[25th January 1935]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Order, order. If the hon. gentleman wants to propose another amendment, he may hand over a copy of it to the Chair in writing, so that I may look into it."

* Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Mr. President, Sir, the question raised by my hon. Friend, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar throws open very wide field of activity for the Government and private employers. I have listened with some amount of attention to Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar. While I appreciate the motive which has inspired his resolution, I have not been able to understand what exactly he wants to do with the lakh of rupees, he wanted to be set apart for the purpose of relieving unemployment. I hope, Sir, that he does not want to distribute that amount as doles to the unemployed. I am sorry I have not been able to catch his intention about the spending of that amount. Initial investigation is necessary as to the kinds and extent of unemployment in this Presidency and some money will be needed for such an enquiry."

"In the year 1926 the Government appointed a Committee to go into the question of unemployment among the middle classes, and the report of that Committee contains very good and useful recommendations, and has been at the service of both the Government and the public since 1926. It laid down two main reasons for unemployment; the decreasing attraction that agriculture was affording to the people and the increasing importance attached to Government service. In addition to these two causes, our social system had largely contributed to unemployment among the middle classes. Certain occupations are taboo to some classes of people by social custom. My Friend, Mr. Shetty in moving his amendment has sought to do grave injustice to the manual labourers who also are in need of immediate relief. I do not for a moment minimise the misery of the educated unemployed, but I submit that there is no need to discriminate between them and the manual workers without work and that it involves no additional difficulty or expense to undertake measures of relief for both. Sir, I know thousands of people, hand-loom weavers, who have been thrown out of employment on account of competition by the mill industry. I read that during the last budget debate in the Legislative Assembly, with a view to affording relief to the hand-loom industry, the Government of India proposed to give a subsidy, and I do not know what steps the Local Government have taken to take advantage of it. Certainly I find nothing definite yet, though nearly twelve months have passed. In the Coimbatore and surrounding districts, unemployment among hand-loom weavers is very acute, and thousands and thousands of people have been affected. Sir, in any measures which the Government may take in pursuance of the resolution we are discussing, I would respectfully submit that there should be no distinction made as between the educated middle classes and the manual workers, and that they will be comprehensive enough to include the poor workers."

"Sir, it is not possible for me to suggest ways and means over and above what is contained in the report of the unemployment Committee" of 1926, by which immediate relief can be given to the unemployed in this Presidency, except perhaps by distributing the vast acres of Government's cultivable waste land to the unemployed workers. At the present moment of agricultural depression, it is however doubtful if agriculture would afford a livelihood. Relief can be afforded only in gradual stages. One of the first things the Government will have to do is to encourage private enterprise. Sir, capital in this country is very shy and industry is not developed at all. Our capitalists indulge in the very profitable business of money-lending at increasing rates of interest, with the result that by the time the vicious cycle is completed, the capital, the capital is consumed with no commensurate profit to anybody in this country. Sir, we will have to impose restrictions on the rate of interest so that money-lending by itself may not prove an attraction to those that have capital and that capital may be diverted into more useful and profitable directions, calculated to benefit not only the capitalists but also the people of this country. 1 p.m.

"Sir, as I said, I am not in a position to offer any definite constructive suggestion with regard to this question, more than what is contained in the report of the Committee which the Government appointed in 1926 and they have made very useful suggestions. I do not want to repeat them and occupy the very valuable time of the House. I would only request that the Government will be pleased to take very early steps to implement those suggestions and to see that as early as possible some definite progress is made in the direction indicated."

"Already the Government had allowed eight years to pass by and the report had been resting in the archives of the Secretariat. Though unemployment in this country has not assumed the gigantic proportions which it did in other countries, especially in the West it has acquired, it is but proper and statesmanlike for the Government to initiate measures to meet the ever-growing problem of the unemployed. Before I sit down, I submit that whatever may have been the justification in other countries, for the institution of the 'Dole' it is not a step in the right direction."

The House then adjourned for lunch.

After Lunch (3 p.m.)

IV (a).—ANNOUNCEMENT RE BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Before we proceed with the business of the House to-day, I wish to give an idea of the business to be transacted on the days following. To-morrow morning the Elementary Education Act (Amending) Bill and the Local Boards Act (Amending) Bill will be taken up and the Madras Services Commission Report will not be placed before the House for its consideration; and to-morrow afternoon the House will not sit. On Monday and Tuesday, the discussion on the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report will take place."

IV.—RESOLUTIONS ON MATTERS OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST—cont.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHUDARI:—"Mr. President, Sir, if we are not given copies of the Local Boards (Amending) Bill which is supposed to have been circulated to us—no doubt it was published in the Fort St. George Gazette—it would be difficult for us to take part in the Presidency."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The matter may be raised to-morrow morning when the Bill comes up for discussion."

* Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, I move the following amendment to the resolution proposed by the hon. Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar:—

For the words "that at least a lakh of rupees be set apart from the Provincial revenues to relieve the unemployed in the city and in the mufassal," substitute the words: "that they do take necessary steps to relieve unemployment in the Presidency."

"Sir, my amendment is an amendment both to the original proposition as well as to the amendment proposed by my hon. Friend, Mr. Shetty. The reason why I want to amend the hon. Mr. Shetty's motion is, though we do feel that unemployment is more acute among the educated middle classes than even among the labouring classes, as has been pointed out by Mr. Basu Dev, it is the duty of the Government to relieve unemployment in the case of the uneducated also. I do not want Government to lose sight of the problem when it arises in the case of the uneducated, but as has been pointed out by Mr. Shetty the problem has taken an acute shape in the case of the educated unemployed.

"As regards the original proposition which has been moved by my hon. Friend from the City, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar, though I sympathise with the whole object of the motion, I feel that it is the duty of this House to bring to the notice of the Government the manner in which they should deal with the problem, rather than merely ask them for a grant of a lakh of rupees. The grant of a lakh of rupees is nothing, when such a huge and colossal problem as the question of unemployment is to be tackled. Unemployment, Sir, it is common knowledge, is a condition that is brought about in industrial countries, and living as we do in an agricultural country like India, and especially in a Presidency which can almost be described as a non-industrial Presidency, it is surprising to note that unemployment should stare us in the face as it does to-day.

"Now, as regards the way in which this question has to be dealt with we can profit by the experience of other countries. In the West, it is only during the last century or so that attempts have been made to solve the problem. In England, the question of unemployment was at first considered a local problem. It was also considered that it was a matter of giving relief to the unemployed. When I say it was a local problem, I mean, it was first considered that this problem arose in the industrial city of London itself and when the question was considered with regard to other places outside London, it was said that a similar solution to the one that was obtaining in London should also be applied there. So, it was first considered a local problem and the way in which the public tried to meet it was to give relief to the unemployed; and the way in which this question was first to be solved was to give relief to the unemployed rather than to find employment for the unemployed. Thus, the result was treated more than even the cause. That was why first voluntary subscriptions and help from local authorities were utilized to give relief to those who did not get employment. The question of unemployment again was at first considered with regard to people who were unemployed, not because they were unable to find any employment suited to their capacities, but also because they were unemployed due to old age or illness or other physical defects. Later on, when this question was taken up on a more rational basis, the Government organized for purposes of administration, the Local Government Board, which was intended to work the Poor Law and to co-ordinate the local authorities in the matter of relief. The co-ordination of charity and the organization of relief found its culmination in the Unemployment Workmen's Act of 1905. It was then considered that it was a question of charity, and that people who suffered for want of employment must be relieved either by the State or by the public. But later on it was found that the unemployed felt humiliation; and as relief was considered to be given as a matter of charity, it was felt that the unemployed were to be given work, as work was considered a more honorable term than charity. But those who gave work considered that the work must be of a deterrent character so that those who did not merit relief should not get relief, so as to say, the unemployed were considered more in the category of criminals. Again, later on, public opinion was concentrated on this question and the whole situation was changed by the 1909 Act establishing Labour Exchanges under the Board of Trade; and by the 1911 National Insurance Act. These two Acts have changed the whole aspect of the question and Government have begun to feel that they owe a duty to the unemployed who are suffering for want of employment due to no fault of theirs, but to charity beyond their control, for example, dislocation in trade or by the character which come about either in cycles or in seasons. These are no domestic matters which are beyond the workman himself. He is not to suffer because though he is willing to work he does not get work. There Government owe a duty to the unemployed. Now they have got the National Insurance scheme and also the establishment of the Labour Exchange. Should we not deal with the unemployment question on our industrial centres on the lines now adopted in England. I am afraid Dr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar's proposition does not indicate that we should gain by the experience of the West.

"Now, Sir, in the Madras Presidency, as I stated at the outset, the question of unemployment is not as acute as in the West because we are not an industrial Presidency, yet for various causes, unemployment obtains here also. As I have already stated, one of the causes contribute to unemployment here is the seasonal change that comes about in trade or business. We get it also in the main industry, I would call it of this Presidency, Agriculture. During the past few years, owing to depression and fall in prices, agriculture has ceased to pay. That is why we have been complaining again and again to the Government that they should help the agriculturists by the reduction of the hard tax. When agriculture ceases to pay, when the only industry of this Presidency ceases to pay, it is difficult for people to get employment for fewer labourers will be employed by the landholder. The first step in the matter of relieving unemployment is to make agriculture pay.

"As regards the Government's duty towards the educated unemployed, some part of it was done, when at the instance of this Council, they agreed to a reference of this question to a committee; and we have got the report of the Paddison Committee. We have not yet seen what effect has been given by the Government to the recommendations of that committee. The Paddison Committee's recommendations concentrated on the question of unemployment of the educated middle-classes; and taking into consideration that this Presidency was an agricultural Presidency, that committee recommended that the education imparted in schools should have an agricultural bias, that the educated people should be encouraged to take to agriculture and that agricultural colonies should be formed. I would like to know what Government have done to give effect to these recommendations. Will Government be pleased to state how far they have taken measures to remedy the state of affairs. In other provinces, we find that attempts have been made by Governments to encourage the educated unemployed by settling them in colonies. We have got in the Punjab such a system and in other provinces also attempts have been made to ask the educated people to settle on the land. But the Government of this Presidency have not taken any step in that direction. Even as regards the question of even giving an agricultural bias in education, I am afraid very little progress has been made. Government no doubt have got an agricultural college, but I would suggest to Government to make it possible for the curriculum in the various schools in the districts to be so changed as to give an agricultural bias in the educational system. There are various other methods also by which Government can tackle the question. I propose this amendment so as to make it possible for the Government to take measures for dealing with this question in all its bearings. The first and foremost thing that Government has to do in this matter is to collect statistics. Without statistics nothing can be done. I do not know if Government have attempted to collect statistics. Any money that is spent on taking the statistics of the unemployed will be money worth spending. I therefore have great pleasure in moving the amendment that I have proposed."

Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED:—"Mr. President, Sir, I rise to second the amendment moved by the hon. Member for the University of Madras. I do not want to traverse the ground that has already been traversed by my predecessors. What I am concerned with on this occasion is only this. It cannot be denied that unemployment has been growing increasingly from year to year. Ever since the world depression, we have been expecting that there will be some steadying process which will reduce unemployment. Facts seem to be otherwise. Depression has now given the feeling in many quarters that apparently a conflict between scientific advance and economic progress has set in. In the 19th century it was believed that scientific advance always conduced to economic progress and social development. But to-day there are quarters wherein it is felt that scientific advance has been the cause of modern-day ruin and disease towards which people and nations are heading. I do not think that that opinion is really justified. If you begin to analyse the reasons, you can easily come to this conclusion, that the only fault lies in this that the economic progress has failed to keep pace with the scientific advance and advance of technical branch of science. What is to be done? A balance has to be struck in favour of economic progress as against scientific advance and advance of the technicalities of business, trade and profession. Could that be done by any single Government? I say it is impossible. The question has become international and from the international point of view, it has become well nigh impossible to solve these questions of unemployment. What can be done is really that all the nations could put their heads together and raise the purchasing power of the people all over the world. What could this provincial Government do is my question and could that be done by a lakh of rupees being set apart for a problem of this magnitude? The power of consumption has to be raised as against production. As long as there is going to be this uneven balance between production and the purchasing power of the people and the power of consumption, I do not think we can really solve the question. The exchange problem has much to do with this question of depression. As a provincial Government, they could do nothing possibly in this direction. The question is one that affects very many factors which are being brought to the front by several nations, either by way of preserving themselves as against other aggressive nations or by means of modest means to improve their own economic position all of which have to be taken into consideration. There is a high tariff wall which has in its own way contributed towards this depression. Then there is the competition between one country and another. These are all factors to be taken note of. Considering all these things, it will be highly impossible for any provincial Government to solve the problem with a lakh of rupees. You must go into the causes of these deeply and then consider what a provincial Government like this can do. One important suggestion struck me as I read the address of the Secretary to the Legislative Council, the able address which he delivered the other day at the Annamalai University. We have got here hundreds of graduates, educated men, intermediates and University men whom the university goes on producing and there is no provision which can compel the university to limit the production. On the other hand, they have been complaining that the progress of education has been so small and so little that not more than 10 per cent have been educated. I should like on this occasion to quote the very words as I may not express so succinctly:—

‘With hundreds of educated men on one side starving or unhappy for want of employment and a whole mass of the population on the other, not knowing even to read and write, it is surprising that we do nothing to utilize the former for the education and uplift of the latter. With granaries full of corn, we look with unconcern and callousness on our starving countrymen. The great thing in this world is not so much where we are, as whether we are moving and if so in what direction. Drifting or lying at anchor will never enable us to reach our port of heaven.’

“He then suggests, Sir, a committee of educational captains assisted by a small body of public men and philanthropists should be formed at once, either for the whole Presidency or a group of districts or for each district, for the collection of funds and for organizing a widespread scheme of mass education. I suggest here is one suggestion that the Hon. the Finance Member and the Hon. the Minister for Education can put their heads together and solve the unemployment problem. There is one other point. Nations, particularly capitalist nations, have been trying various experiments to pool their resources in order to solve the unemployment problem. They have tried by restrictions on production, but they have not succeeded. People are claiming, in some quarters, that there is a certain amount of success. In other quarters, opinion is held that in spite of these voluntary restrictions no success could be achieved in the direction of solving the unemployment problem. But one thing which has to be tried is this and I suggest it as seriously as I can. There is in this country, as in other countries, a large reserve which lies idle—a reserve of money I say, Sir. People are not now in the present condition willing to invest those funds for any venture. They are not willing to lend out those moneys for private enterprises. They are afraid on account of the depression to lend out that money and until and unless that reserve which lies idle in the hands of capitalists is brought out into the public and invested in private enterprises and unless the Government is going to collect it and turn it out in useful directions, then only there is hope for unemployment. Facts have proved that the moment the Government of India announce a loan, the whole of it is subscribed within an hour or a day or two. If, in this country, either the provincial Government or the Government of India as a whole is to announce a loan of a few crores of rupees—say five crores—money would be subscribed and that money can be utilized for public works. This is being done in Sweden, America, Germany and many other countries and millions and millions of dollars are set apart every year for public works. If the government in this country would also tap this resource and invest them in public works and works of public utility, then certainly, Sir, the question of unemployment would be solved to some extent. The whole problem is baffling and a lakh of rupees will do nothing. Therefore, as the Government should enter into very large schemes of public utility, which would give 4 to 6 per cent return to Government, they must get hold of the uninvested deposits which are in the hands of the capitalists to-day.”

[25th January 1935]

* Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, to a student of labour and economics, there is no subject which is half so fascinating and at the same time baffling as the problem of unemployment and finding measures to combat unemployment. In a country like India which is two-thirds agricultural, no doubt, questions which have become arresting and which are mainly of industrial nature have not taken an acute phase. But even here, Sir, if we look at the large number of our countrymen who are, by force of circumstances, compelled to emigrate elsewhere and seek labour outside, it seems to me that the problem of unemployment is in a large measure unsuspectingly pressing even here. Unemployment, therefore, in this country must be dealt, Sir, from two points of view, viz., industrial unemployment and agricultural unemployment. With regard to agricultural unemployment, large number of our countrymen that have left our shores speaks eloquently to the fact that agricultural conditions are not alright. For instance, it may be of some surprise to the hon. Members of this House if they are told that as many as six lakhs of South Indians are settled in the province of Ceylon alone. Similarly thousands of people from this Presidency have to take up service in Malaya and other places because their home land does not afford them sufficient employment to eke out their livelihood. Sir, such large emigrations have presented peculiar problems to our country and all over countries like Ceylon and South Africa and Kenya where hundreds and thousands of our Presidency people have settled are planning to drive them back. Some of the Colonial labour questions, I dare say, have received some attention from the Government of India and is still waiting a final solution. We shall, for the present, confine ourselves to the question of unemployment both industrial and agricultural. Sir, at a modest estimate it seems to me that in this Presidency that out of 48 millions of people, leaving the female population apart, out of 24 millions of male population in this Presidency, at least 7 to 8 millions are unemployed. I think, Sir, it is a very modest estimate upon which we can act. As some other hon. Members have asked, one is tempted to ask what has been done to compile accurate statistics with regard to the unemployed people in this Presidency and what steps have been taken by the Madras Government for combating unemployment.

“Sir, various causes have been assigned for the problem of unemployment becoming greater and greater and more pressing every day. One main cause that has been suggested by my hon. Friend, the Member for South Arcot, Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed, is that of mal-adjustment between production and distribution, and that the purchasing power of the people must be increased in order that all that is produced may be consumed. No doubt, that has been in a large measure responsible. But a far deeper cause of unemployment, so far as the industrial world is concerned, seems to be that society has not adjusted itself to the scheme of rationalisation in industry, to the greater introduction of machinery, which, instead of freeing man to enjoy leisure and to use it to develop his art and culture, has only driven him out into the street and to starve. Sir, this maladjustment of the progress of science and benefits of machinery with the progress of society in general has been the root cause of this acute distress. Sir, it was only the other day that Mr. Lansbury forcibly reminded the House of Parliament that all the money that is spent on giving relief to the unemployed persons in England for an entire year would be much less than what was spent on a week's expenditure in the Great War. Sir, this is a problem which every civilised country thinks it fit to tackle and to solve. Therefore, I must congratulate the hon. Member for the City, Mr. Natesa Mudaliyar, for having brought this resolution before this Council in order to focus public attention on the urgent necessity of tackling the question of unemployment and finding out ways and means for the solution of the great problem. Sir, the pessimistic view taken by my hon. Friend, Mr. Basheer Ahmed, that the very character of the problem which is international is at once an obstacle in the way of getting out of it is not shared by me. The problem may be of international character and may be finally capable of only an international solution. But, Sir, a government like ours, just like the governments of various different countries of the world, can solve the problem in a large measure, and I will only content myself by placing a few constructive suggestions very humbly before the Government for them to act upon.

"In the first place, I would invite their attention to a very useful book on 'Planned Economy' by Sir M. Visweswarayya, a great economist and a statesman of the first order, that South India has produced. In his book which he published recently, he has given an idea of what is meant by planned industrial expansion, that no agricultural country by itself can ever have a front rank in the economy of nations, and that if a province like Madras or Mysore or Hyderabad is to expect development of agriculture to go hand in hand with a settled plan of industrial expansion, the Government must deem it their duty to help, to facilitate and to expedite industrial expansion by well thought-out programmes of new industries.

"Sir, there is another method which the Government may act upon easily, which will certainly at least be a palliative for the distress that is prevalent, and that is to embark upon big public works and to have plans and estimates for them. A few months ago, the Hon. the Chief Minister, in reply to an address that was presented to him, said that the Government contemplate embarking upon a scheme of public works, and I thought, Sir, that that will have taken some concrete shape during the last few weeks that have now elapsed. For one thing, I may suggest to the Hon. Member in charge of the Labour portfolio that communications in this Presidency from village roads to trunk roads and between one village and another which are so notoriously lacking that it has invited the attention of several persons who have had experience of local self-government may be improved. That is one proposal which the Government may immediately act upon, namely, the extension of communications between villages and villages and between one town and another, for the purpose of giving relief to the unemployed agriculturists and possibly also to industrialists. Sir, planting of forests, cutting of forests, big public works and irrigation schemes, these are certain things which the Government may take upon themselves the responsibility for ushering in. I think no Government can at this stage say that they have nothing to do with the problem and that they owe no duty to engage themselves with the solution of this question. More and more we see before our very eyes Governments taking measures and taking power for the relief of the unemployed.

"Now, in this country there are large extents of cultivable lands, and I would suggest that Government should take power to compel people who are unemployed to go and work in those labour camps to be opened by them, and bring those lands under cultivation. Again, I would suggest that a conference between the Government representatives, representatives of trade unions and the representatives of employers may be called to think over the idea of reducing the number of hours of work in the various factories in order to provide more persons with work. Sir, this is not a suggestion which can be scoffed at, because this is a proposal which is being acted upon before our very eyes and embodied as one of the rules of the Code in the National Recovery Act, namely, shorter hours, same pay and more men being employed. Sir, labour exchanges and unemployment bureaux may be opened at various centres at least in all the towns and municipalities of this Presidency, so that we may have accurate figures culled out and compiled out for the use of the Government when they want to tackle this question in right earnest.

"Sir, there is also one thing which has largely contributed to giving the unemployed persons an acute and distressing turn, and that is the breaking up of the joint family system among the Hindus. The joint family system was to a large extent acting as an insurance system against unemployment, because a number of persons were being fed and given shelter under the system whereby one person earned while a number of other persons lived at his expense. So, Sir, those are certain proposals which I wanted to place before this House as a method of solving unemployment."

* The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"Mr. President, Sir, I might begin by saying that the object underlying the resolution moved by the hon. Member for the City appears to be altogether unexceptionable, and I may also state that no one would be happier than the Government themselves to do what little we can—as much as we can—to relieve unemployment and to see that there is absolutely no one unemployed in this province. I may further state that the question of unemployment and the relief that is to be afforded is one that is calculated to rouse the sympathy of every one, and it seems to me that it is entirely due to the characteristic large-heartedness of the hon.

[Mr. A. T. Pannirselvam] [25th January 1935]

Member for the City that it has fallen to his lot to sponsor this resolution. As we all know, his large-heartedness and his sympathies know no limitations, and every one of whatever community whether educated or uneducated, whether they be residents of the city or occupants of villages, come within his all embracing sympathy. I am glad to state that he alone among the speakers of to-day has taken into his sympathetic consideration the position of the Government as well, in that he has limited his demand to one lakh of rupees; for while his demand is limited to one lakh of rupees, the recommendations, if the other two amendments were to be accepted, would land us, we do not know, where. But while the resolution is one which has, as I said, our sympathy, we have also in considering the question in concrete to take account of realities. We have been talking of relieving unemployment. Have we, each one of us, in our own minds a clear idea of what we mean by the term 'unemployed?' It seems to me, Sir, that the unemployed can be classified under various heads. We have the educated unemployed and the uneducated unemployed; we have again what I might term urban unemployed and rural unemployed, or to put it differently industrial unemployment and agricultural unemployment. In taking account of these various unemployed, we in our country, which is proverbial for providing charity to every one that comes to our doors, cannot leave out of account that horde of people who, day in and day out, feed at the various choultries that we find scattered in our province, nor can we ignore the numberless beggars of whom it is impossible to have accurate figures.

"I come now to the question of the educated unemployed, of whom the hon. Member for South Kanara has been a stalwart champion and whose cause he ably pleaded to-day almost to the exclusion of others, who are more numerous namely the uneducated unemployed, who also stand in need of relief. The question of the educated unemployed has been engaging the attention of the Government for a considerable number of years, in fact, so far back as 1927, a special Committee was appointed to go into the matter. They considered it in detail and submitted proposals to the Government, in respect of which more than one hon. Member said that nothing had been done by the Government. All that I can say is that the Government has not slept over those recommendations. (Mr. U. C. Subrahmanya Bhatt: 'What has it done?') If the hon. Member from South Kanara will wait, I shall explain what has been done. One of the main recommendations of that Committee was—

'That small farms of land at the disposal of the Government should be made available for middle-class educated young men who possess no land at present on long lease with the option of purchasing them and loans and other facilities for agricultural purposes should be made to such agriculturists for the purpose of developing their holdings.'

"That was the main proposal submitted by the Committee to the Government, as far as I could see. There are also others to which I shall refer immediately but which are only subsidiary. The Committee which had been appointed to suggest ways and means of ameliorating

[25th January 1935] [Mr. A. T. Pannirselvam]

the conditions of the educated unemployed concerned itself with the educated alone, and in submitting that proposal, I should respectfully submit, ignored the claims of the uneducated unemployed. Because the moment you thought of alienating lands at the disposal of the Government to residents of the towns just because they happened to possess a Secondary School-leaving Certificate or for that matter even the degree from the University of Madras, we shall be immediately provoking the jealousies of the village people, and they would have said, 'We have got the first claim on that.'

"We are now concerned with the recommendations of the committee appointed to ameliorate the condition of the educated unemployed. (Interruption.) I am afraid Mr. President, I cannot be answering every interruption that crops up."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The Hon. Member need not yield to those interruptions."

* The Hon. Mr. A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"That question was considered, the various difficulties that were likely to crop up were considered by Government from every point of view, and ultimately when they sought the advice of the Agricultural Advisory Committee, they were informed that there was hardly any land suitable for cultivation for such a scheme. That was the advice tendered by that expert body and so it was dropped. (A voice: 'Easiest solution'.)"

"Next, Sir, the other recommendations were on the lines suggested by the hon. Member for the University, that is, that education should be given an agricultural bias. Instructions were issued on that matter also and I believe my hon. Colleague the Minister for Education did not sleep over the matter. But all I can say, Sir, with the little experience I have had, in trying to give an agricultural bias to secondary education, I am only reminded of the saying that 'one can take a horse to the water, but one cannot make it drink'. In my own district, as President of the District Board, in one high school which I thought was most centrally situated for agricultural purposes, we created a section for agriculture and tried to induce the boys to take to it, but we found that hardly three a year would avail themselves of the opportunity. If that is the example of the interest evinced in agricultural education in a premier district, I believe the experience of the Hon. Minister for Education could not have been very much different. Further, Sir, I should submit that this is a matter which had better be tackled by the University of which my hon. Member is a worthy representative in this House than by the Government itself. The Government could at best issue instructions to the academic body such as the University and other bodies constituted for the purpose and it would be for them to give the agricultural bias or the industrial bias. Apart from that, it seems to me that this is really a question for the future. This proposition is concerned with the uneducated of the present day. Giving agricultural or industrial bias in our schools and colleges might perhaps tend in future to divert the pupil to more useful sources of earning a livelihood than mere government service. But it seems to me that is hardly going to touch the problem of to-day. I do not know how we are to-day better situated than we were when this committee submitted its recommendations and whether we could very usefully go into the question of tackling unemployment among the educated. The hon. Member for the University was blaming the Government for having introduced its policy of retrenchment, and he also had a fling at the Railways for sending out people as a measure of economy. All I can say is that neither Government offices nor for that matter the railway workshops can afford to be charitable institutions employing more men than work in those offices does actually require.

“Turning now to unemployment among the uneducated, and dealing first with the agricultural unemployed, it seems to me that it is again a question which bristles with any amount of difficulties. I do admit that among the agriculturists there is seasonal unemployment, if you like. In certain places they have got work, intensive work, to do during a particular portion of the year, while there is what I might term the idle period during which perforce they have to remain unemployed. At the working period they are expected to put by a certain quantity to meet the needs of what I termed the idle period. As regards the unemployed among the industrial labourers who in a province like ours which is essentially agricultural, are made up to a large extent of people who are drawn during particular periods from the agricultural areas, there again the problem is considerably complicated by the difficulty of distinguishing the real unemployed from those who are able to find shelter in charitable choultries and other eating houses and from those who have made begging a profession. (Mr. V. M. Ramaswami Mudaliar: ‘Labourers!’) I do not for a moment question the statement of my hon. Friend from North Arcot, but the difficulty is how to distinguish the one from the other. I am mentioning all these things not by any means with a view to shirking the responsibility of Government but only to impress on the hon. Members of the House the tremendous difficulties which this problem bristles with and the colossal task which the Government are expected to undertake in trying to gather statistics and figures for the purpose of relieving unemployment. As regards the one lakh of rupees the hon. Member for the City wants to be put down towards this item, I am at a loss to know as to the manner in which that one lakh is to be spent. Does he intend it to be distributed as doles to people who may be classified as unemployed? And assuming that that is done what relief will we really be affording to the poor thereby? It seems to me that talking of one lakh and relief of unemployment at the same breath is very much like the Tamil proverb which speaks of a man attempting to season the water in the ocean with a pound of asafetida. It will hardly touch the fringe of this problem. (Mr. Koti Reddi: ‘At least one lakh.’) This interruption makes me think that the hon. Members are under the impression that the Government have so far done nothing at all towards relieving unemployment. It may be that we have not put down in the Budget any item as so much for the unemployed, but I shall just recount the amount of money that has been spent by Government in what may be termed the relief of unemployed, or rather putting it the other way, in affording work to people who otherwise might have to go on without work. Yesterday the hon. Member for the City was treating us to portions of a book in which it was stated that the State in Germany was providing medical aid to the poor people. Have we not in this province been providing medical aid to the people, rich or poor? You know in Western countries most of these hospitals and dispensaries are really run by private bodies out of public subscription. Here, barring a few missionary institutions and one or two hospitals run by a philanthropic society, has not the rest of all medical relief in the province been afforded by Government at the expense of the exchequer?

“Again, Sir, referring to slum clearance, have we not been doing that? For the last few years we have been endeavouring to acquire house-sites for the depressed classes and help them to put up houses so that they might live in decent dwellings of their own? Is it not clearing of slums? Is that not relief afforded to the poor and the needy?

“Then again, my hon. Friend the Chief Minister has been providing year after year in his Budget for sums to be distributed to the local bodies for the purpose of opening village roads and sinking village wells. Is that not money spent for the purpose of affording relief to the poor and the needy? Does he not thereby afford work to the unemployed in rural areas? Then again, are we not expending money on public works, repairing river banks, etc.? (A voice: ‘That is routine.’) If hon. Members want it, we shall put it down under the glorified title of—if not five-years plan—we can call it one year plan. The Chief Minister has been spending in the matter of village communications and water-supply. (A voice: ‘Very little.’) I am sure the Hon. the Chief Minister will thank the Muhammadan Member for South Arcot for saying it is very little, and if the House will only find the money to make larger contributions for the purpose of developing rural communications none would be more thankful than the Government, and to-day are we not endeavouring to conceive of one all-embracing plan for the purpose of developing road communications? Hon. Members are aware that one engineer has been specially deputed to draw up a scheme which will cover the whole province for the purpose of developing communications.

“Then, Sir, the hon. Member from North Arcot suggested shorter hours of work. There again I believe he is just a day after the fair. The new Factory Act which prescribes shorter hours has already come into force. (Interruption.) I believe the hon. Member should get into the Assembly and move it there. Anyhow the number of hours have been reduced.

"As regards cultivable waste lands, as the hon. Member from South Arcot asserts I know there is very little of really useful cultivable land that is left which can be distributed to persons who have passed the B.Sc. This is to show that in the past the Government have not been ignoring the claims of poor people and have not altogether failed to take steps to provide work for really needy people, and to-day I believe the hon. the Leader of the House has fairly big schemes under his consideration, one of which is the question of silt clearance of the irrigation tanks, a task which if ultimately taken up would cost a considerable amount, every pie of which will return to the pockets of the poor unemployed or the poor labourer and thereby a certain amount of relief will be afforded to him.

4 p.m. "Sir, the coming in at this moment of the Hon. the Law Member reminds me how, just the other day, he launched a big scheme costing Rs. 21 lakhs. Is that not going to afford relief to the unemployed to a considerable extent? Will not the supply of electricity to Coimbatore stimulate industrial activities and afford relief to the unemployed? (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: 'It will give relief only to the industrials abroad.') When once you generate electricity in Coimbatore or Pykara it will stimulate the industries of the place and if foreigners are going to take all the advantage of this industrial activity of Coimbatore we cannot congratulate ourselves on our capacity to rise to the occasion.

"Sir, if I have said all this, it is not by any means to shirk any responsibility on our part or that we are not in the fullest sympathy with the resolution moved by my hon. Friend for the City. (A voice: 'What is your solution?') Sir, I am afraid I am not a magician to throw out solutions at a moment's notice. I can, however, give this assurance to the House that the discussions of this day and the various arguments that have been advanced by various members would receive the fullest consideration of the Government. We shall certainly go into this matter with the assistance of our advisers and see if we can adopt any greater measures than hitherto to ameliorate the condition of or to relieve the unemployed."

Mr. V. P. NARAYANAN NAMBIYAR:—"I move that the question be now put."

Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED:—"I second it."

The closure motion was put and carried.

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"Sir, I had no chance to reply."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The closure motion has been carried. Is the hon. Member proposing to withdraw his motion?"

25th January 1935]

Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—"No, Sir."

The amendment of Mr. T. S. Ramaswami Ayyar was put and carried and then the main resolution as amended was put and carried.

(2) REDUCTION OF TAX ON FRUIT-BEARING TREES.

Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, I move the resolution on the agenda standing in my name, viz., 'This council recommends to the Government that the 2-C tree-tax on the first-class fruit-bearing trees such as the coconut, the mango, the tamarind and the jack trees may be reduced from eight annas to its old rates.'

"Sir, I do not think many words are needed from me to commend this motion to the acceptance of the House. In view of the fact that there is a widespread feeling that there is good deal of economic depression and the fact that we have been able to pass yesterday a resolution recommending the grant of relief to the taxpayer, I do not propose to take up the time of the House by dwelling at length on this motion. I hope the hon. Member will accept my resolution which is a very modest one recommending going back to the old rates."

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"I second the motion."

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Mr. President, Sir, I have not heard any argument in support of this motion. (Laughter.) Perhaps the hon. Mover will be glad to be informed that the Government have recently asked the Board of Revenue to report on this matter and that the matter is under consideration. I cannot say anything further than that, because I have not had time to examine the subject connected with this motion. Until I get facts and figures I cannot say anything definite on the question. But, if the hon. Member wishes to press his resolution, I am afraid I must oppose it. It is interesting to note that the hon. Member did not say if this tax pressed heavily on either the Tanjore district which is probably at the back of this agitation or any other particular district. I am certain that the hon. Member could not have referred to the Ceded districts, for, I suppose there is not a single jack tree in the whole of the Ceded districts. (Loud laughter.) However, I would assure the hon. Mover that the matter will be examined. But if he presses it, I must oppose it." (Laughter.)

The resolution was by leave withdrawn.

(3) CANCELLATION OF G.O. NO. 1238, REVENUE, DATED 14TH JULY 1933.

* Mr. A. PL. N. V. NADIMUTHU PILLAI:—"Mr. President, I beg to move the following resolution:—

'This council recommends to the Government that G.O. No. 1238, Revenue, dated 14th July 1933, raising the classification of irrigation sources in the Tanjore district be cancelled.'

[Mr. A. Pl. N. V. Nadimuthu Pillai] [25th January 1935]

"In moving this resolution, Mr. President, I do not want to explain elaborately to the hon. Members of this House about the present plight of the mirasdars of my district who are groaning under the weight of taxation in these days of economic depression which has taken a firm grip. All over the world drastic remedial measures have been adopted to alleviate the sufferings of the people and especially the agriculturists. But this Government, deaf to all popular agitation and the wail of the Tanjore mirasdars in particular, are trying, I very much regret to say, to increase the burden of the mirasdars by increasing the water-rates and by ordering a reclassification of irrigation sources in this district. By such a reclassification, about 378,200 acres of the second class are to be raised to the first class and about 132,000 acres of third class are to be raised to second class. On account of this, the landholders of this district will be called upon to pay roughly six lakhs of rupees more by way of revenue including the land-cess payable to local bodies. In my speeches on 15th March 1933 and 13th March 1933 on the floor of this House I suggested to Government the desirability and the necessity of the formation of a committee of officials and non-officials to consider the question of reducing the percentage of return from irrigation schemes from 6 per cent to 3 per cent and for tapping other sources of revenue, namely, by developing 15,000 acres of cultivable waste lands irrigated by the Mettur project. Without seeking fresh avenues which are available for increasing the revenue and while substantial relief is given to the agriculturists by the other local Governments like Punjab and United Provinces, the Madras Government are pursuing a course of administration which ignores the fact that the agriculturists in this Province are passing through a crisis unparalleled in living memory. As far as the district of Tanjore is concerned the Government have substantially increased the water-rate by Rs. 7-8-0 per acre on second crop wet under new udu cultivation and they have ordered this reclassification of irrigation sources. The additional revenue the Government propose to take will be roughly ten lakhs including cesses. When the Government have accepted the policy of collecting the increased rates of assessment at a resettlement in three years of gradual increase it is fundamentally wrong that the said increase of ten lakhs which is roughly about 15 per cent increase on the existing assessment should be collected all on a sudden in one year.

"According to Government Order No. 2684 (Irrigation), dated 19th January 1932, the classification of sources could be altered or raised only after the improvements mentioned therein are carried out. Many of them still remain unexecuted: some were taken up only after the cultivation season began and the benefits are yet to be seen. The Government cannot but be aware of the fact that the ryot's rupee costs him now twice as much as it did before the depression. For the payment of the land revenue and interest charges he has to sell double the quantity of paddy or his produce and the outturn from his lands has in no way increased. When such is the state of things the further increase of his existing obligations at the present juncture by increasing the assessment through reclassification of irrigation sources is unjustifiable and illegal. Illegal because by the resettlement a contract is made between the Government and the ryot by the issue of a rough patta which is afterwards confirmed after inviting objections. The resettlement notification has not reserved the right to Government to change the taras and sources of irrigation as they please. ('Hear, hear.') This Government Order violates the terms of the contract without the concurrence of the pattadar. It has been stated by Government that on account of the Mettur Dam the additional levy of taxation by reclassification of sources is to be made and that provision was made for the same at the time of resettlement. But I may inform this House that the Mettur Dam was only the bare part-performance of long-neglected declarations of the Government and so it cannot be used as a scheme for imposing additional liabilities upon the old delta. ('Hear, hear.') This Mettur Project was launched in the interest of the Government as a mere Flood Moderator calculated to avoid recurring loss of revenue and abnormal drought and flood remissions as incurred by Government between 1921 and 1931 throughout Tanjore and Trichinopoly districts. In the deltaic systems of Kistna and Godavari where the Government receive much less by way of land revenue than what they do from this district, Government themselves clear the silt in the rivers. (Mr. P. V. Krishnayya Choudari: 'Question.') The rivers of the Tanjore district have silted up and the Government have not done anything to have the silt cleared. The late Revenue Member did not make any earnest attempt to attend to the burning question of the district, namely, the drainage question. Though the late lamented Diwan Bahadur Arokiaswami Mudaliyar pointed out in the year 1931-32 in this Council, the drainage difficulties of the Pamaniyar and the Korayar, no remedial measures have yet been taken by the Government. In this connexion one cannot ignore the articles written in the Hindu, dated 10th October 1934, by the retired Chief Engineer Diwan Bahadur N. Swaminatha Ayyar and I cannot but quote the following extracts from the same:—

"The Cauvery irrigation system is already highly remunerative and the accumulated surplus revenue will be not 445 lakhs of rupees as stated in the Government administration report but 25 crores, the system having been in operation for 64 years. If we now take into consideration the fact that the main functions of the Mettur Reservoir is to stabilize the already fluctuating river-flood supplies and in so doing the surplus waters are utilized for the irrigation of three lakhs of acres and treat it as part and parcel of the Cauvery Delta System. The figures representing the capital and the net revenue will work out to 809 lakhs and 42 lakhs respectively, that is, a return of over 5 per cent. Thus the entire cost of the Cauvery-Mettur Project will be justified by the revenue already derived from the existing revenue system. If the new Cauvery-Mettur Project is treated as part and parcel of the old delta system the revenues derived from the latter alone more than covers all working expenses and interest charges, leaving the whole of the revenue derived from the new project as surplus profits. It would then be possible and easy for Government to levy water-rates suited to the condition obtaining now and thus help the poor alarmed ryots also to bring about the rapid growth of irrigation in the new area."

[Mr. A. Pl. N. V. Nadimuthu Pillai] [25th January 1935]

"The Government have not realized that the agriculturist contributes the largest share of the revenue of the land and that the prosperity of the Government is intertwined with that of the ryot. By reluctantly suspending only 10 and 15/16 per cent of the land revenue the Government are really increasing the sum payable by more than 15 per cent by imposing a heavy water-rate and reclassification of sources. Thus the Tanjore ryot will have to pay about 5 per cent more than what he is now actually paying by way of land revenue. This policy is clearly blind to the economic condition of the ryot and unless the Government immediately redress the grievances of the ryots and improve their condition by cancelling all new taxation and substantially reducing the land revenue fixed by the last settlement by at least 33½ per cent the present ill-advised policy of the Government is sure to create disaffection among the ryots."

p.m.

MR. G. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, it is needless for me to point out how in these hard times the ryots find it difficult to pay even the existing rate of assessment from out of the produce of the land. The Council has repeatedly pointed out the inequity of levying additional taxation under the present conditions when the existing rate of taxation itself is far too high and unbearable. The Government themselves have admitted that the existing rates were high and passed orders remitting a portion thereof last year and this year. It is therefore surprising that they should have chosen to enhance the assessments by means of these orders, which are the subject-matter of resolution standing in the name of my hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Subramania Ayyar. According to the last settlement report about 158,000 acres which were till then classified under second-class irrigation sources were proposed to be reclassified under third class. By the present reclassification about 365,000 acres of land under second-class irrigation and 125,000 under third class as settled in 1923 are proposed to be raised to the next higher class, the resulting additional burden being more than Rs. 5 lakhs. The enhancement is sought to be justified on the ground of certain powers having been reserved to Government at the time of the last settlement."

"Sir, so far as the lands in the old delta are concerned, the Mettur Project was only intended for the protection of existing irrigation. Several responsible officers have from time to time drawn attention to the defects in the irrigation and drainage systems of the deltaic lands; I do not propose to take up the time of the House by reading out extracts of the views of all the officers. I would only place before the Government the views expressed by some of the eminent officers such as Sir Henry Cotton in 1834, Mr. Thompson as Collector of Tanjore and later as acting Governor of Madras and Mr. Jackson as Settlement Officer in charge of settlement operations. Their reports clearly show that there have been grave defects in the irrigation and drainage system of the delta and notwithstanding such clearly-expressed views, the Government have not done anything to improve the drainage facilities in the old delta. Nor have they given effect to the recommendations of the Cauvery Committee regarding the rectification of the defects. If Mettur could be said to have improved irrigation facilities in the old delta, it is, I say, but a part performance of the obligations due to the Tanjore ryots. I wish to point out here that the Government cannot claim that by a more steady supply of water they have improved the sources of irrigation so as to justify a reclassification of the lands. In the Tanjore delta owing to utter lack of drainage facilities and the silted condition of the river channels which are not properly maintained by the Public Works Department, these defects still exist and it is here that people have been assured a steady supply of water from the Cauvery-Mettur Reservoir. This has not appreciably improved the situation. So far as the old delta is concerned, there has been improvement or rectification and none of the three conditions justifying a reclassification has been fulfilled. The Board's Standing Order No. 1, paragraph 2, lays down that the classification into tarams is based on the outturn irrespective of the source of irrigation. Any revision of the existing classification as to taram can only be made in case there is a change in the outturn. The Government should have therefore waited till the harvest of the fasli is over to satisfy themselves and the ryots that there has been an increase in the outturn such as to warrant the step. There is nothing to show that lands have improved in productive capacity. It is only a theoretical assumption on the part of the Government that irrigation sources have improved and consequently production is bound to increase. I may, in this connexion, point out that there is absolutely no likelihood of an increased outturn. It is notorious that as a result of the supply of stagnant water from the Mettur Dam, the silt which served as a fertilizer has considerably decreased in quantity. I may also point out that the existing rates based on the water-supply are against the recommendations of the Taxation Enquiry Committee which are to the effect that water-rates should vary according to the demand for water and the quality of water that is supplied. I should also like to point out that the action of the Government in raising the assessment during the currency of the 1923 settlement rates is unjust and is a negation of their avowed policy as laid down in their order No. 924, dated 18th June 1924. This order clearly lays down that the maximum enhancement on lands should not exceed 18½ per cent of the previous settlement rates. In Tanjore at the resettlement of 1923 there has been a uniform increase of 18½ per cent over the then existing rates. It will manifestly be unjust to circumvent the order by resorting to reclassification. Referring to the argument that the Mettur Project is intended to benefit solely the Tanjore ryots and that therefore they should pay for it and the ryots in other parts of the Presidency should not be made to pay for it, I submit that the revenue derived from the Tanjore ryots during the last one hundred years and more has gone to fill the general coffers of the State and any benefit that might now be got by Tanjore by the project is something which is legitimately due to it for taxes ungrudgingly paid all these years.

[Mr. G. Ranganatha Mudaliyar] [25th January 1935]

"The lot of the agriculturist in this Province is highly deplorable and that of the ryot is worse still. Circumstances are driving the ryot to ruin and despair. As has been repeatedly pointed out to the Government and as the statistics will show, there is absolutely nothing left to the ryots after meeting the cultivation expenses. With such a condition before them and with the prices of paddy at an abnormally low level and financial depression all round, the step taken by the Government in issuing the order in question and indirectly raising the assessment by about 20 per cent is, to say the least, highly unjust and totally inexpedient.

"With these few words, I second the resolution."

* Mr. K. S. SIVASUBRAHMANYA AYYAR:—"I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name which runs as follows:—

'In line 3 after the words "Tanjore district" add the words and figures "and G.O. No. 474, Revenue, dated 15th March 1935, levying additional water-rates in respect of udu, double crop, etc., and G.O. No. 1853, Revenue, dated 5th September 1932, prescribing rules and rates for the levy of water charge.'

"That the effects of the Government Orders are wide and far-reaching need not be much emphasized, and I need not waste the time of the House in treading over the same ground which the Mover and the Seconder have traversed. They have dealt with G.O. No. 1238 threadbare and I do not propose to take up the time of the House by advancing reasons in support of this motion. G.O. No. 474 aims at levying a uniform water-rate of Rs. 7-8-0 on udu and double-crop lands, etc. I want to bring to the notice of this House some of the irregularities involved in it. The owner of an acre of 8th taram land for which Rs. 5-15-0 is being paid as kist now, for a first crop and half of it for a second, will have to pay hereafter Rs. 7-8-0 for the second crop alone in addition to his assessment for the first. It has been clearly admitted by the Government that the second-crop yield will be much less than the first-crop yield.

"Then with regard to udu cultivation it has been specifically stated by the Settlement Officer at the time of resettlement and approved by the Government that udu is single crop and udu cannot be considered as a second-crop cultivation though harvested two times. The Government on the representation of the mirasidars of the district have passed orders that the lands in which udu has been cultivated hitherto will be exempted from being levied a water-rate of Rs. 7-8-0 for the udu crop; but that instruction has not been strictly followed by the subordinate officers of the Government and in the list published in the District Gazette several lands on which udu cultivation has been hitherto done, have been omitted. Even when this was brought to the notice of the officers concerned, they have not cared to rectify it the reasons being that the old records have been in some cases destroyed; and that the

[Mr. K. S. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar] 25th January 1935]

Government officers did not carefully verify whether in the past a particular land had been cultivated with udu or not since the Government had not derived any additional taxation from udu cultivation.

"I would request the Hon. the Revenue Member to issue instructions to the officers concerned to ask the ryots again whether they have at any time had udu cultivation on their lands and take them into their confidence before a list of survey numbers of lands on which there had been udu cultivation is prepared. 4-30 P.m.

"With regard to G.O. No. 1853, this is what the Hon. Sir Archibald Campbell was pleased to say in reply to the debate on my adjournment motion on 8th November 1932:—

"If, as is likely, we come to the conclusion that it has not really acted as a flood moderator this year, then we shall amend the rules, so that the new rates will not be put on the old delta but only on that portion of the area which has been newly brought under irrigation under the Mettur Project through the Vadavār extension canal."

"Since then, there have been no floods in my district fortunately and the Government have not had an opportunity to test whether the Mettur Dam has acted as a flood moderator or not. But the economic conditions prevailing to-day are worse and not better than those which prevailed in 1932. Therefore the Government are not justified in levying this tax without verifying whether the Dam has acted as a flood moderator or not. I request the Government to reconsider the matter and see that the promise held out to us is fulfilled. In the course of the same debate, the Hon. Sir Archibald Campbell also said:

"The main canals are contour canals and irrigated land is practically all on one side of the Grand Anicut Canal; the result is that the drainage water will flow into existing streams and rivers and we do not have to use drainage channels as irrigation channels, as is done in present Tanjore delta."

"Therefore, Sir, instead of the Mettur Dam acting as a flood moderator, as has been admitted by the then Revenue Member it has added to the drainage problems of the old delta. The new channels are emptying themselves into the old rivers; so much so the drainage problem of the district which is already bad, has been made worse and the ryots are put to very great loss. The Hon. Member has also admitted in the course of the reply to the debate that no provision has been made for the drainage of the Mettur Project area. Therefore the Mettur Dam instead of acting as a flood moderator has added to the drainage problems of the old delta. There is no justification for raising the classification now.

"In the forecast of revenue under the Mettur Project which was placed before the Council, nowhere has it been said that the tax on dry lands in the old delta would be raised. If G.O. No. 1853 is given effect to, these lands will be taxed very heavily and the people will suffer very much. Besides, the inam lands upon whose income many charitable institutions like temples and mosques depend, would be put to very great loss. For instance, I have been informed that the Dharmapuram Adhinam which is in charge of the Vytheeswarankoil temple and which has 3,000 acres now and pays Rs. 3,200 by way of land-cess, kaval fees, jodi and quit-rent will be asked to pay Rs. 25,000 if the Government Order is given effect to. The inam lands which were granted to these institutions by the old Rajas and confirmed later on by the Inam Commissioner would now be taxed contrary to law and the famous Urlam decision. It is doubtful whether the Government's position will stand in a Court of law. Besides, these religious institutions will have to be closed once for all and the intentions of the donors will be frustrated. I would appeal to the Hon. the Revenue Member to see that as the levy of these rates on inam lands is contrary to law, it is cancelled.

"As for G.O. No. 1238, what the Government aim at is to go back on the settlement policy long followed by them, that is to say, to effect a resettlement within ten years of a settlement and thus alter the contract unilaterally though ordinarily the settlement once made should run for thirty years before another resettlement is made. I do not think that the Government, however powerful they may be, can go back upon this contract which should run for thirty years. In passing their orders on the scheme report of the Settlement Officer in G.O. No. 1537, Revenue, dated 25th August 1922, the Government have reserved powers only so far as the upland sources are concerned. I refer in this connexion to paragraph 7 of the Government Order. There is no power reserved in that Government Order so far as the old delta is concerned. The power reserved under paragraph 9 (b) of G.O. No. 2219, dated 12th December 1922, relates only to those portions of land that have been transferred from second class to third class by the Settlement Officer. It is doubtful if the Government have got any power, but if they have got any power it is only with regard to lands which have been transferred to the third class at the time of the settlement by the Settlement Officer. With these words, Sir, I move my amendment and I hope the Government will take into consideration the economic condition of the people and their capacity to pay the enhanced tax now. I appeal to the Government to consider the case sympathetically."

* Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"I desire to second the amendment moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar. The Government have chosen an inopportune time to increase the tarams in the Tanjore district. As has been pointed out by hon. Members coming from other districts, such as South Kanara, this is not the time for increasing the rates at all. The Government claim that the new Mettur Dam has really given better irrigation and drainage facilities to the Tanjore district and therefore they are entitled to increase the rates. As has been pointed out by the hon. Member who moved the original resolution, have not the Government for some years past been collecting large sums of money as land-tax from the Tanjore district and has not this fact been brought to the notice of the public by no less a person than the late Chief Engineer to the Government of Madras? When he put off his official robes and became a non-official he was able to give out to the public the information that the Government had for a long time past been collecting larger sums of money than they were entitled to from Tanjore and the same has accumulated so much that the Government can certainly get on with the Mettur Project without increasing the assessment. I also want to ask another question of the Government. When at a time of depression like this the people clamour for remission of even the normal land revenue, the answer of the Government is: 'It is a question of contract. Take the settlement as a whole for the whole period. In good years you enjoyed the fruits, therefore in bad years you cannot complain and ask us for remission.' When the last settlement took place in the Tanjore district the Government wanted to increase the rates by 25 per cent, but later on, on account of the assurance given by the Hon. Sir Arthur Knapp when he introduced the Irrigation Bill, the Government reduced the percentage of increase to 18½ in the case of all the districts. So in the case of Tanjore also, the percentage was reduced to 18½. After about nine years or so of that settlement in Tanjore, the Government are now raising the tarams and thereby increasing the tax by another 15 per cent. This increase is made at a time of depression when the people are asking for remission. I ask the Government whether this is fair either from the point of view of contract or from the administrative point of view. I would also ask them whether it is sound from a commercial point of view. The Mettur Project has cost the Government a large sum of money and therefore the Government think it is but right that the people for whose benefit the project is intended should pay more. But the answer of the Tanjore ryot to this argument of the Government is that he is not able to pay because he does not get enough return from his land. I do not say that the Mettur Project has not benefited the district. Of course some of the speakers have raised the question and suggested that it is too soon to say whether it has benefited the district or not. Even accepting for purposes of argument that the project has in fact benefited the district, is this the time when Government should raise the tarams? At a time when the ryots find it difficult to pay even the existing tax, is it proper for the Government to raise the tarams and thereby increase the rate of assessment?

"As regards the amendment that has now been moved, udu cultivation being the sowing of two crops at the same time, but reaping them at different seasons, the Government do not give very much more water to the agriculturists who cultivate udu crops than to those who raise a single crop. They may give a little more water but not as much water as the agriculturists would be entitled to if two crops were raised. Why should Government demand as much as Rs. 7-8-0 per acre over and above the tax payable for the first crop? Of course the Government have made a concession in the case of people who have been cultivating udu crops for a number of years by not increasing the rates in their case. In other cases they have increased the rates. I ask the Government whether from a commercial point of view it is sound finance to increase the rates in the case of udu crops. If the Government want more people to cultivate udu crops, they must give facilities for the same by not increasing the rates heavily. Again, it is usual to charge an additional 50 per cent of the land-tax in cases where a second crop is raised. Why not adopt that principle in all cases in the old delta? By raising the tax on second crops and also by not giving facilities for udu cultivation, the Government are frustrating the attempts of the people to take advantage of the water-supply and raise more crops. Will not the Government get more money if they give facilities for people to grow a second crop? I think the present policy of Government is a short-sighted one and I hope the Government will not press their demand for increased taxation at this time of depression."

4-45
P.M.

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Sir, I must oppose this motion as strongly as I possibly can. I am afraid I am not able to reply to the hon. Mover as I did not hear the speech of the hon. Mover of the first resolution; he read his speech and I am afraid his voice did not reach as far as this. But my hon. Friend, Mr. G. Ranganatha Mudaliyar, advanced certain arguments which I would like to criticize. In the first place he made the assertion that the drainage channels and other channels in the old Cauvery delta are in a very bad condition; this is literally untrue; they are in good condition and they have been improved recently pari pasu with the construction of the Mettur Dam. He then went on to say that there was no improvement in supply. Here again, I must join issue with him. This statement also is literally untrue. For instance, this year, had it not been for the Mettur Reservoir, most of the old area under the Cauvery delta would have suffered from severe drought, and want of water. Crops this year were actually saved by the Mettur Reservoir and if that fact does not indicate an improvement in supply, I do not know what fact can. Perhaps it may be said that this is an exceptional case. But the Mettur Reservoir does assure a steady and regular supply where the supply previously was irregular and unsteady; this is especially the case in the months of August, September and the beginning of October when, for many years, supply in the Cauvery was defective. Then the argument was advanced that they could not get the same output of the crop as they had, before the dam was constructed. The argument is that, since the dam was put up, much less silt comes down the river. Sir, this point was examined very carefully by the Engineers which showed to the Government conclusively that the amount of silt that comes down the river at present is very little less than it was before; one of the main reasons for this is that most of the silt which came down the river, came down from the Bhavani and Amaravathi rivers which are below the Mettur Dam and therefore silt has not been lessened by the construction of the dam.

"The next point which was raised was that Government have been penalizing udu cultivation. I think the figures which I will give to the House will be quite sufficient to show that this argument is entirely baseless. I think hon. Members are aware that udu cultivation which had been in existence previous to the construction of the Mettur Dam was not charged double rates. For this purpose the Government ordered that any field in which the cultivation by udu was 10 cents and over should be given water for the entire field only for one crop. Any field in which less than 10 per cent is cultivated by udu is charged only single rate on that portion of the field which was actually cultivated with udu. The result of this is that although only 63 thousand acres were cultivated with udu in previous years, the classification of the fields in accordance with the Government Order amounts to 167 thousand acres. That is to say, there has been an increase of one hundred thousand acres which have to be given the concession which, ordinarily, they would not have been entitled to.

"There was one point which was urged by Mr. Sivasubrahmanya Ayyar and that is with reference to certain inam lands; a representation has just been received by the Government—within the last day or two—on this subject and it seems to show that the matter does require consideration; I assure the hon. Member that it will receive very careful consideration.

"Apart from all this, Sir, I would like to point out to the House that the Mettur Reservoir was constructed with the full approval of this hon. House. The original estimates were placed before it and the House passed the following resolution:—

"This Council approves of the proposal to construct a reservoir on the river Cauvery at Mettur in the Coimbatore district, with the necessary channels and other works, to improve the supply to existing irrigation under the river and to provide for new irrigation over an area 301,000 acres, at an estimated cost of Rs. 612 lakhs."

"This reclassification of the sources is taken as one of the items of revenue. Again in 1928 when the estimates were revised, although the revenue forecast based on the revised estimates was not placed on the table of the House, each Member of the House was given a copy of it; no objection was ever raised to these estimates; the raising of the classification of sources formed part of the estimates. That is a very distinct promise of the House that it would accept the raising of the classification of sources as part of the estimates for the Mettur Dam. Now, hon. Members from Tanjore come forward and try to argue against what they themselves promised twice before this hon. House. I ask hon. Members whether this attitude on the part of the Tanjore rairasidars deserve any consideration whatever; in my own opinion it is a distinct breach of faith. Apart from that, in all the resettlement notifications the Government have reserved to themselves the right to raise the classification of any source if, during the course of the settlement, that source has been improved at the cost of the Government. I have already argued that the Mettur Project has materially benefited all these sources; the Government have spent a great deal of money not only on the new channels; they have spent a great deal of money on the old Cauvery delta also. Why should the rest of the ryots, the taxpayers of this Presidency, be told that owing to our commitments on behalf of the Tanjore ryots for whom a very large amount of money was spent, they have to lose the benefits which, if this money had not been spent on the Mettur Dam, would certainly have been extended to other parts of the Presidency? In my own opinion, previous to the Mettur Dam the Tanjore ryots were quite well-off already; there are other parts of this Presidency which are crying out for water and were not able to get money for this, because our hands are tied, because a large amount of money had to be spent over a limited area of this Presidency. Therefore I must oppose this resolution and I trust that the House will not pass it."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I put the amendment first to the House. The question is—

'In line 3 after the words "Tanjore district" add the words and figures "and G.O. No. 474, Revenue, dated 15th March 1933, levying additional water-rates in respect of udu, double crop, etc., and G.O. No. 1853, Revenue, dated 5th September 1932, prescribing rules and rates for the levy of water charge.'"

The amendment was put and declared lost.

A poll was demanded and the House divided thus:—

Ayes.

APPENDIX I.

[Vide answer to question No. 527 asked by Mr. K. A. Nachiyappa Gounder at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 25th January 1935, page 457 supra.]

Extract from the report of the District Superintendent of Police, Salem.

In my last report recommending the continuance of the Additional Police for one year, I had dealt with the unsatisfactory situation in the village and the absence of any material change. The events in the village for the period from the last report up to this date shows that the situation in the village is such as to justify the continuance of the Additional Police Force for a further period of one year. The leaders of the two factions as well as their adherents have not yet completely realized their responsibilities nor shown any signs of reformation. Several instances of assault and intimidation have been reported by the adherents of both parties during the year showing thereby the continuance of the strained feelings. Cases of stone-throwing in more than half a dozen instances in the course of the last three months as well as cases of petty assaults and intimidation have been reported by both parties. In connexion with a dispute over a pathway among the Adi-Dravidas of the village, the leaders attempted to take sides but were warned off by the local police. There has been an instance of mischief of fire due to the faction and another instance where a villager was intimidated for his refusal to pay Rs. 170 to the leaders in connexion with a divorce affair. In June last a constable was assaulted by one Ponnuswami, an adherent of Chinna Kandan's party, as he had reported a case of nuisance against Ponnuswami. He was prosecuted under section 332, Indian Penal Code, and sentenced to eight months' rigorous imprisonment. The Mariamman festival in the village in August 1934 was not celebrated on account of the leaders of the two factions failing to come to an agreement. From all these instances, it would be clear that the feelings between the two factionists still continue to be strained and that it would not be advisable to abolish the Additional Police for the present. There has, no doubt, been a certain amount of improvement in the situation since my last report, in that the leaders are gradually losing their influence in and around the village, but the situation is such as to require the continuance of the Additional Police for a further period of at least one year.

Extract from the report of the District Magistrate, Salem.

I have discussed this matter with the District Superintendent of Police and the Subdivisional Magistrate. I have considered the representations presented to me by certain of the inhabitants requesting the removal of the punitive police on the grounds that the fall in the statistics of crimes for the village proved that the situation was improved and that a continuance of the punitive police was beyond the financial resources of the village.

It is true that there has been a decrease in the number of serious crimes during the past 12 months but this must in part be due to the presence of the punitive police. By itself, it is no indication that the situation has sufficiently improved to remove the necessity for the punitive police and that if they were removed crimes of violence would not be common again. The incidents referred to in the District Superintendent's report particularly the failure to agree on the Mariamman festival this year suggest that while the influence of the leaders of the faction is dwindling there still remains a strong party feeling in the village. It is recognized by the authorities that it is idle to expect to remove faction from Attaiyampatti by means of punitive police. Faction is almost of the essence of the village life in Southern India. The disquieting symptom about Attaiyampatti is the defiant spirit which is still found among the inhabitants towards the forces of law and order. A police constable has been assaulted in the course of his duty and frivolous complaints have been made about the police. Both the District Superintendent of Police and the Subdivisional Magistrate consider that the spirit of defiance is by no means cowed and that there is a real danger of further outbreaks of violence if the punitive forces are removed.

in the new scales of pay, it should be fixed at that stage. If the existing pay of a medical officer or servant exceeds any stage in the new scales of pay, his pay should be fixed at the next stage below that pay and he should be given personal allowance equal to the difference, the personal pay being absorbed in the next increment. If the existing pay exceeds the maximum of the new scales of pay, it should be fixed at the maximum.

4. The conditions of service of all officers and servants specified in paragraph 1 above in respect to special pay and allowances shall be regulated in accordance with the Madras Special Pay and Allowance Rules and the Madras Travelling Allowance Rules.

5. In the case of subsidized rural dispensaries a sum of Rs. 600 a year is paid to a medical graduate, Rs. 500 a year to a L.M.P., A.L.I.M. or L.I.Ms., Rs. 300 a year to first-class midwife and Rs. 200 for second-class midwife from the provincial funds. The Government have stated that they have no objection to local boards themselves sanctioning an additional subsidy from their own funds if in any particular case owing to the remoteness or unhealthiness of the locality or for any other special reason, the services of qualified medical practitioners or midwives cannot be secured for the subsidies specified above. District boards and panchayats are informed that in future the additional subsidy paid from their funds should in no case exceed 50 per cent of the Government subsidy. In the case of rural dispensaries not subsidized by Government, the amount of subsidy paid by local boards should not exceed the total amount which would have become payable both from the provincial and local funds if the rural dispensaries had been subsidized.

The scheme of subsidized rural dispensaries does not contemplate the employment of compounders or other staff in such institutions. District boards and panchayats are informed that compounders should be employed in rural dispensaries only after consulting District Medical Officers or the Principal, Indian Medical School, as the case may be and only if such appointment is absolutely necessary. The pay of the compounder should not exceed Rs. 25 per mensem.

The pay of the menials paid from contingencies in rural dispensaries should be regulated in accordance with the orders in paragraph 1 above subject, however, to a maximum of Rs. 10.

District boards and panchayats are also informed that scales of pay should not be sanctioned for any person employed in rural dispensaries whether subsidized by Government or not and that wherever such scales have been sanctioned they should be abolished.

6. These orders will come into force on the 1st November 1934.

7. Separate orders will issue fixing the number of posts and designations of officers and servants in local fund medical institutions.

[25th January 1935]

8. Presidents of district boards and panchayats and executive officers of municipal councils are advised to issue a month's notice to the existing incumbents who may be now drawing pay in excess of the maximum in the revised scales that if they are not willing to accept the revised pay they may quit the service.

I.—QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

STARRED QUESTIONS

Co-operation

Alleged misappropriation of dividends in certain co-operative societies in the Ganjam district.

* 549 Q.—Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether there was misappropriation of dividends due to members by several relations of Mr. Venkataratnam, who are managing co-operative societies in Palasapuram, Sompeta, and Hiramandalam in the Ganjam district; and

(b) whether Mr. Venkataratnam knew of the misappropriation and took no action as the parties concerned were his relations?

A.—(a) & (b) The Government have no information.

Qualifications of Mr. Venkataratnam Pantulu, Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Ganjam.

* 550 Q.—Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether Mr. Venkataratnam Pantulu, the Deputy Registrar, Ganjam district, underwent any training in the Co-operative Branch before he was recruited to the department;

(b) whether it is the policy of Government in the Co-operative department to retain an officer in the district where he has lands in several parts of the district and has close relations all over in the district and was there for more than three years; and

(c) whether there are any special reasons for retaining Mr. Venkataratnam Pantulu, Deputy Registrar, in the district in which he started as an Assistant Registrar and Sub-Deputy Registrar?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) & (c) The officer who had been Sub-Deputy Registrar, Ganjam, was appointed in November 1933 to act as Deputy Registrar, Ganjam, as he was the only officer in the department who knew Oriya and had knowledge of the district.

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“In view of the allegations contained in the question, may I know whether the Government will be pleased to terminate the probation of this Deputy Registrar?”

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“On mere allegations or statements, no officer's probation can be terminated.”

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“Will the Hon. Minister be pleased to cause an enquiry to be made into these allegations?”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“Government will make the necessary investigations into the matter.”

Public Works

Electrification of the Government buildings at Vellore.

* 551 Q.—Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government propose to take up the electrification of Government buildings, such as the court-houses, offices and Government officers' quarters at Vellore; and

(b) why there has been a delay in this matter?

A.—(a) The Government propose to provide electric installations in the following residential buildings at Vellore in the next official year, if funds are voted by the Legislative Council:—

- (1) Residence of the Collector.
- (2) Residence of the District Judge.
- (3) Residence of the District Superintendent of Police.
- (4) Residence of the Executive Engineer.
- (5) Residence of the Principal, Police Training School.
- (6) Residence of the Probationary Assistant Superintendent of Police.
- (7) Residence of the Staff Sergeants.
- (8) Residence of the Chief Law Instructor.
- (9) Residence of the Hospital Assistant.

Police Department.

No proposals have yet been received from the Heads of Departments concerned for electrifying office buildings.

(b) Want of funds.

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“May I ask whether the Government are aware that the electrification of offices is as much necessary and urgent as the electrification of the residences of officials, and if so, may I know whether there is any proposal to electrify the Government offices?”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“I suppose electrification of offices is equally necessary, and as soon as proposals are submitted to Government, they will be considered.”

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“May I know if, by the electrification of these officers' quarters, the capital cost of the buildings will be increased, and if so, whether the rent recoverable from the officers concerned will be correspondingly increased?”

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"I am afraid I cannot answer that question offhand."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I point out to the Hon. Minister that the electrification of the courts are an urgent necessity; will the Government be pleased to call for proposals from the department concerned, if they have not already done so?"

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"I will consider the suggestion of the hon. Member."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Sir, it is stated in the reply that the residences of the staff sergeants are to have electric installations; may I know whether the Government are satisfied that the houses of the Inspectors of Police and Sub-Inspectors of Police need not have such electrification?"

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"No proposals have been received, Sir."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know whether the Government have made an investigation as to why it has been considered necessary to have electric installations only to the superior officers, before they can be thought of for the subordinate officers?"

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"These are the proposals at present before the Government."

Mr. DANIEL THOMAS:—"May I know whether the electrification proposals pertain only to Vellore or to other districts also?"

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—"We are concerned here with Vellore alone, Sir."

Local Self-Government

Dissolution of and elections to the Chingleput District Board.

* 552 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- when the normal life of the Chingleput District Board expired;
- when the elections were conducted; and
- when were the elections completed for this district board?

A.—(a) On the 1st November 1934.

(b) & (c) Election proceedings were started on the 8th December 1934 and completed on the 12th January 1935 except in respect of one circle.

Municipalities to which appointment of Commissioners is still pending.

* 553 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

- how many municipalities are yet to be provided with Commissioners;
- what are their names;
- on what principles and in which order the municipalities are taken up for appointment of Commissioners; and

[26th January 1935]

(d) when are the municipalities which have not got Commissioners so far, to be provided with such officers?

A.—(a) Fourteen.

(b) Anantapur, Walajapet, Chidambaram, Chingleput, Chica-cole, Parlakimedi, Palacole, Narasaraopet, Nellore, Karaikudi, Sivakasi, Srirangam, Bimlipatam and Vizagapatam.

(c) & (d) Government have already stated that all the remaining municipalities will be notified for the appointment of a Commissioner before the end of the current year (1934-35), if possible—vide answer to clause (c) of Question No. 20, answered on the 1st August 1934. It is not possible to find suitable men for appointment simultaneously to all these municipalities and the selection of personnel for appointment necessarily involves time. Government have therefore to proceed with the notification of municipalities for commissionership, as and when the personnel for each of them is settled.

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I ask, Sir, whether there is any dearth of applicants for the posts of Commissioners, and if so, what is meant by the statement, 'It is not possible to find suitable men for appointment simultaneously to all these municipalities and the selection of personnel for appointment necessarily involves time'?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"There is no dearth of applicants; before the appointments can be made, the Government have to satisfy themselves that the candidates are suitable."

Mr. B. POCKER SAHIB:—"The answer says: 'Government have therefore to proceed with the notification of municipalities for commissionership as and when the personnel for each of them is settled.' Am I to understand that they fix up the person first and then notify the municipalities for the appointment of commissioner?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"There is no point, Sir, in notifying a municipality until we have an officer ready to take charge; so both have to be done simultaneously."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"Out of these fourteen municipalities given here, is there any to which commissioner was originally appointed but was subsequently withdrawn?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Once a municipality is notified, there is no power for Government to withdraw the notification. There have been cases where commissioners were withdrawn and replaced."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"May I know whether the Government apprehend that if a municipality is notified, they will find it difficult to appoint a suitable person to fill the post of commissioner?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I am afraid my hon. friend has not properly appreciated the position. Under the Act, if a municipality is notified, certain functions of the chairman have to be performed by the commissioner. So, it will be rather awkward to notify a municipality and leave it without a commissioner."

[26th January 1935]

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know whether Mayavaram and another municipality in the Tanjore district to which commissioners were appointed, are now left without commissioners?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"There was a commissioner appointed to Mayavaram, but he was later withdrawn. Orders have already been issued posting another."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"May I know why persons could not be chosen from among Government servants, if local board servants are not available, for being appointed as commissioners?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"It is not stated that local board servants are not available. We have to carefully consider the names of the applicants, their qualifications, etc., and then select them. In the case of some smaller municipalities, like Wallajapet, Parlakimedi, Chicacole and Sivakasi, the position is that we anticipate some difficulty, whether the municipality will be able to pay for a Commissioner. It is not proposed to have any commissioners on scales of pay below those now obtaining in the case of Deputy Tahsildars."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know whether the Government do not think it advisable to consult the Public Services Commission in regard to the appointment of these commissioners?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"No, Sir, this does not come within the purview of the Services Commission."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"There was a proposal to form a provincial cadre for commissioners. May I know at what stage that proposal is?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"If the appointment of commissioners to all the municipalities is completed, that question will be taken up."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"The Hon. Minister says these appointments do not come within the purview of the Services Commission; but will the Government consider the advisability of consulting the Commission in these matters?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Until the service is provincialized, it will not be possible to refer the matter to the Services Commission."

Scale of pay of the Public Health Establishment under Local Boards and Municipalities.

* 554 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether orders have been issued fixing a uniform scale of pay for Public Health establishments under the local boards and municipalities;

th January 1935]

(b) if so, whether copies of the same will be placed on the table;
(c) whether the scales of pay obtaining for such posts in Government departments were taken into consideration in fixing the new scales of pay;

(d) if the Government scales were not adopted, what the reasons herefor are;

(e) whether representations have been received from the persons affected and how they have been disposed of; and

(f) whether there are any proposals to revise the new scales, and if so, what they are?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) A copy ^a of G.O. No. 2884, P.H., dated the 17th December 1934, is placed on the table of the House.

(c) Yes.

(d) There was no uniformity in the scales of pay prevailing in several districts. Several local bodies had themselves already fixed scales of pay lower than those sanctioned for Government servants. Considering the various scales of pay prevailing and the general financial position of local bodies, fair and uniform scales of pay were fixed.

(e) & (f) No.

Orders regulating the leave, pension, etc., of the ex-taluk board clerks subsequently employed by district boards.

* 555 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether orders have been passed regulating the leave, pension, etc., of the ex-taluk board clerks who are under the service of the district boards now; and

(b) if so, whether copies of the same will be placed on the table?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) Copies ^b of G.Os. No. 3265, L. & M., dated the 12th July 1934, No. 4471, L. & M., dated the 6th October 1934, and No. 3941, L. & M., dated the 5th September 1934, bearing on the subject, are placed on the table of the House.

Alleged unjust enhancement of property-tax by the President of Mallur Panchayat Board, Salem district.

* 556 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether representations have been received by the Government from one Kolanda Goundan and some others, residing in the Mallur Panchayat area in Salem district alleging unjust enhancement of the house-tax, etc., due by them; by the President of that Panchayat; and

(b) if so, what action has been taken or proposed to be taken to redress the grievances of the petitioners?

^a Printed as Appendix I on pages 577-579 infra.

^b Printed as Appendix II on pages 579-581 infra.

[26th January 1935]

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The petitions received by the Government have been referred to the President, District Board, Salem, for early remarks.

Treatment as personal allowance the difference between the present pay and the maximum under the revised scale of pay of teachers employed in secondary schools under local boards.

* 557 Q.—Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government propose to give as personal allowance to teachers of secondary schools under local boards the difference between their present pay and the maximum under the new scales;

(b) whether the personal allowance will be given to all who are affected or whether it is to be restricted to any particular class;

(c) what the policy of the Government is in allowing this personal allowance; and

(d) what will be the savings effected in each district or loss suffered after giving personal allowances to the present incumbents?

A.—(a) & (b) The question is under consideration. Proposals for the grant of personal pay have been called for from the Presidents of District Boards and are awaited.

(c) The Government propose to grant personal pay in respect of such cases whose pay prior to 1st November 1934 exceeded the maximum of the new scales of pay provided there is real hardship and the local board concerned recommends the payment of personal pay.

(d) This cannot be calculated at present.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ May I know the reason why Government did not calculate the financial implications of the new scale of pay before its introduction? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ For the purpose of having a general idea, we took the averages into account. With reference to the effect of the new scale of pay in each district board, it all depends on the number of persons who are to be granted personal allowance.”

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“ I want to know whether the Government have calculated the figures about the actual effect of this scale of pay, in order to show whether it will be a loss or beneficial? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ I have stated, Sir, that the loss or extra cost can only be calculated after we know the number of persons to whom personal allowance is to be granted.”

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—“ May I know if the present incumbents who are on a higher scale of pay will be affected by the new scale? ”

26th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ The idea of Government is, just as they did in the case of their ministerial staff, that in all cases of genuine hardship, the difference in pay should be given as personal pay.”

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—“ May I know whether in cases of retrenchment, it is not the policy of Government to effect a cut in the pay of present incumbents rather than reduce the scales? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ If the hon. Member has understood the position aright, he will find there is no cut in pay here.”

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—“ If a person has entered service on a fixed scale of pay, is it open to the Government to now say that that person should receive a smaller scale of pay? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ I am afraid there is great difference between Government service and district board service. In Government service there is a system and a method and definite scales are fixed. In this case, the scales themselves vary much. There are also many cases where persons have been appointed on lower scales, who in three or four years not only got accelerated promotion, but also had higher scales sanctioned for them.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“ May I know, Sir, what the Hon. Minister means by ‘cases of genuine hardship’? What is the criterion please? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ It means in other words that people who have received accelerated promotion or have been given special treatment will be excluded.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“ May I know whether sudden cut in pay is itself not a ‘genuine case of hardship’? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ I am afraid I cannot make myself understood to the hon. Member. In all cases, there will be no ‘genuine hardship’.”

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—“ May I know whether the Hon. Minister has realized this difficulty, viz., that in the case of teachers who are already drawing the maximum provided for them by the new scales, they will not be entitled to any increment in salary for the rest of their service? ”

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ Yes, they will not be eligible.”

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—“ May I know if it is not a matter of contract, just as in the case of Government servants, that when an officer enters on a grade pay, his pay cannot be reduced; that any retrenchment that is made can be only an emergency measure which should be removed when the emergency passes; and that no scale of pay can be revised to the detriment of an officer once he has entered service on a particular grade of pay? ”

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"In the case of some district boards, they have not reduced the pay; they have only imposed cuts to the extent of 5, 10 or 12½ per cent; but that amounts to the same thing."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"Arising from the answer given, viz., that in the case of teachers already drawing the maximum, they will not be eligible for further increments for the rest of their service, does the Hon. Minister realize that such a procedure would damp their enthusiasm and efficiency would suffer?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"The persons concerned will have opportunities of promotion to other grades, I think."

Government Order granting to servants of certain district boards the privilege of retaining their existing rates of pay.

* 558 Q.—Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that orders have been passed granting district board servants the privilege of retaining their existing rates of pay treating the difference in the scales of pay as personal allowance; if so, what the said orders are;

(b) whether it is a fact that only ten district boards have been notified as those whose servants are to get this benefit; if so, why;

(c) whether it is a fact that the servants of the South Kanara District Board have strongly protested against the application of new scales to existing incumbents; if so, whether the Government will be pleased to place a copy of the said protests on the table of the House; and

(d) what action the Government have taken or propose to take in the matter?

A.—(a) The Government have not passed any general order permitting district board servants to retain the old rates of pay sanctioned by district boards before the 1st June 1934.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The President of the South Kanara District Board has forwarded to Government a copy of the proceedings of the conference of the representatives of the Teachers' Associations of the Board Secondary Schools in South Kanara in the matter.

Government do not consider that it will serve any useful purpose to lay these proceedings on the table.

(d) Attention is drawn to the answer to question No. 557.

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"With reference to the answer to clause (a) that 'Government have not passed any general order permitting district board servants to retain the old rates of pay' may I know whether Government have so permitted, in the case of any particular district?"

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"In the case of a majority of districts, as soon as statements were received from district board presidents, orders were passed treating the difference of pay as personal allowance."

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"May I know, with reference to district boards which have adopted the Fundamental Rules, whether it is open to the Government or even to the district board itself, to go back upon the terms of appointment and reduce the pay of the teachers?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"If the hon. Member will bring to my notice any such case of hardship, I will consider the matter."

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"In the case of pandits, may I know whether new qualifications have been recently fixed, i.e., that they should possess certain academic qualifications before appointment? And, if so, do the Government still think that there is a case for reducing their pay even after high qualifications have been fixed?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"So far as pandits are concerned, my idea is that their scales are already low; and I do not think the new scales make any further reduction."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"May I know whether the Hon. Minister is aware of the fact that the scale of pay provided for the pandits is very much lower than the scale of pay now generally drawn by drill-masters and drawing-masters in schools?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I have not made any comparisons as between the two; but the pay of the pandits generally compares favourably with the regular scales existing at present."

Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know whether the scales of pay of teachers were fixed by the Education Department or by the Local Self-Government Department?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"The proposals emanated from the Director of Public Instruction and were considered both by the Education Department and by the Local Self-Government Department."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know, Sir, whether the pay now fixed to pandits is much less than what was obtaining in almost all the local boards previously?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I have already stated that the new scale takes due consideration of the existing scales in the various boards."

Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"May I ask the Hon. the Chief Minister whether the scales of pay laid down by Government for men in district board service in different departments, are lower than the scales of pay for men in similar positions in Government service; and if so, why a distinction is made?"

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Certainly they are lower, but the standard of work done is different."

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"May I know whether in the case of the headmasters of high schools, their maximum pay has been reduced very much?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I think the headmaster's pay is Rs. 170, but I cannot say that it has been reduced. Probably hon. Members are not aware of it. In certain cases, the pay fixed by Government is much higher than the existing scales of pay, for example in Kurnool."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Is it not the policy of Government to see that the employees of district boards and other local bodies are a contented lot and not to create discontent in the services?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I am in entire agreement with the hon. Member, but unfortunately Members of the Council are considering this question only from the case of secondary school teachers; but if they consider the entire scheme of the Government as a whole, both for elementary and secondary school staff, they will find that there is no decrease but an increase of five or six lakhs in the total salary bill."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know, Sir, whether it is not a policy of the Government not to make any invidious distinction between the employees of Government and those of the local boards?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Both as regards qualification and efficiency, the position is quite different in local boards and the Government. Moreover, Government have taken into consideration the present financial position of the local boards and what they have been able to pay."

Representations from the teachers of the Board High School, South Kanara, regarding the recent Government Order with reference to the revision of the scales of pay.

* 559 Q.—Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether he has received representations from the teachers of Board High School in South Kanara concerning the recent Government Order with reference to the new scales of pay; and

(b) what action the Government have taken or propose to take with reference to the applicability of the new scales to present incumbents?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The attention of the hon. Member is invited to the answer to question No. 557.

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"May I know from the Hon. the Minister whether in view of the fact that the salary of pandits would be low under the new scale of pay, he will consider the advisability of revising the same and doing justice to them?"

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"If it is found that compared with the other scales of pay, it is much lower than it at present exists, the suggestion of the hon. Member will be considered."

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Will I be in order, Mr. President, if under Standing Order No. 4, I move an adjournment motion?"

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Just after questions are over."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"May I know, Sir, whether Government consider that the work done by the pandits and munshis is inferior to that done by the gymnastics instructor or the drill-master?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"It is not a question of their being inferior or superior, but the position is that these pandits are at present being paid lower scales of pay than the drill master, and therefore the same is continued."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"Is it not a fact that under the proposed scales they have made it inferior?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Perhaps the scales are inferior because the present scales are also inferior."

General

Alleged refusal to grant privilege leave to Muslim subordinates for the observance of Ramzan.

* 560 Q.—Khan Bahadur MAHMUD SCHAMNAD SAHIB Bahadur: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state whether representations have been received by Government that some heads of departments and superior officers have refused to grant or recommend privilege leave to their Muslim subordinates who applied for privilege leave on account of Ramzan on the ground that it is not a sufficient reason for granting leave?

A.—No such representation has been received.

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"May I know whether it is a fact that though Ramzan has been declared a public holiday by Government, the Presidency College authorities did not declare it a public holiday for that college?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Government have no information, Sir."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"Are the Government aware that the Loyola College authorities who also get grant from the Government declined to declare Ramzan as a holiday for that college also?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Government have no information."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"Will Government take any steps to see that Ramzan is declared a public holiday in all these public institutions?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"I will consider the matter, Sir."

Irrigation

Receipts under the Toludur project.

* 561 Q.—Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYED: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) the total area that was originally intended to be irrigated by the Toludur Project and the actual area that is now being irrigated under the project;

(b) the percentage of profit that was originally expected to be derived from the project after completion of the work and the actual percentage of return now secured;

(c) the water-rate originally proposed and the one now in force;

(d) The causes for the difference in the percentage of return;

(e) the causes for the full area as originally contemplated in the project not having been brought under cultivation; and

(f) the steps, if any, proposed by the Government to extend the area of cultivation under the project?

A.—(a).—

		First crop.	Second crop.
		ACS.	ACS.
Area intended to be irrigated ..	..	26,851	3,000
Area irrigated in 1933-34 ..	..	17,274	2,725
(b) Return anticipated in 1917 ..	..	4.57 per cent.
Return derived in 1933-34 ..	..	2.52	..

(c) It was originally proposed to convert occupied dry lands commanded by the project into wet and to impose on them the rates of wet assessment noted in the margin, and until such conversion was effected, to impose water-cess at the following rates in addition to dry assessment:—

	RS.	A.	P.
(1) For a first wet crop ..	6	4	0 per acre
(2) For second crop ..	3	2	0 ..
(3) For each dry crop, whether first or second ..	3	2	0 ..
(4) For a dufasal crop ..	9	6	0 ..

[26th January 1935]

The introduction of the wet rates of assessment has been postponed pending the completion of field channels and the development of irrigation. The rates of water-cess mentioned above therefore continue to be in force.

(d) The causes for the difference in the percentage of return are—

(i) The area irrigated is much below the area originally anticipated.

(ii) The maintenance charges have been very high owing to the expenditure on repairs to slips at certain places of the reservoir bund and the repairs to the floor of the Toludur regulator necessitated by the floods of May 1930.

(e) The causes which account for the retarded development of irrigation under the project are—

(i) The economic depression since the year 1929-30, which has prevented ryots finding money to spend on reclaiming their lands to make them suitable for wet cultivation.

(ii) The unwillingness of the ryots to excavate field channels at their cost and want of co-operation in the matter of permitting landowners lower down to take field channels through lands higher up.

(iii) Alleged salinity of the water in the two odais which lie in the catchment area of the reservoir.

(iv) Want of adequate means of communication within the area for carting manure and marketing the produce.

(f) The following steps have been taken by Government:—

(1) The Irrigation Development Board has been requested to expedite the estimates for excavating field channels.

(2) The Director of Agriculture has been requested to depute an officer of the Agricultural department to examine the question of the alleged salinity of the water and to report the effect which irrigation has had on lands already irrigated and the remedies possible apart from the use of organic manures.

(3) The Board of Revenue has asked the Collector to submit concrete proposals as regards communications, to inform the President, District Board, what new lines of communications are urgently necessary, to ascertain what the District Board will do, and to report the result with a rough estimate of the cost involved.

[26th January 1935]

Irrigable limit for the first crop under the existing 2 feet shutters for the Godavari Western delta.

* 562 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAIYA: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) what the ultimate irrigable limit fixed for the first crop under the existing 2 feet shutters for the Godavari Western delta is;

(b) what the actual extent of the area under first-crop irrigation in the Godavari Western delta is;

(c) what the surplus area in the same is; and

(d) what the extent of the area for first-crop irrigation for which commitments have already been made by the Government till now is?

A.—(a) The ultimate irrigable ayacut as fixed in October 1924 is 414,500 acres.

(b) The extent irrigated during fasli 1342 was 416,074 acres.

(c) & (d) In September 1932, the Chief Engineer (Irrigation) submitted a comprehensive programme of works for the extension of irrigation in the three sections of the Godavari delta. This programme provided for extension of irrigation to 40,500 acres in the western section. The Government after considering it in consultation with the Board of Revenue and the Irrigation Development Board, recently directed that certain special works included in it should be carried out in the first instance, and the result watched for a few years before the other proposals for extension are investigated. The special works, so far as the western delta is concerned, are—

- (1) Replacing 2 feet shutters over the Godavari anicut by 3 feet shutters.
- (2) Kalipatnam scheme (3,500 acres).
- (3) Vemuladevi scheme (2,000 acres).
- (4) Circars Agricultural Development Corporation, Limited, Scheme (1,500 acres).
- (5) Extension of irrigation to scattered dry fields from existing channels (1,176 acres).

[26th January 1935]

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) The attention of the hon. Member is invited to G.O. No. 42, Revenue, dated 5th January 1935, which has been laid on the table of the Legislative Council.

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ Nothing, Sir.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“ May I know, Sir, what is the value that Government attach to votes of this House on a question like this?”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ It depends upon the vote, Sir.”

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—“ Does Government look upon it as a wastepaper?”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ Sometimes, Sir.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“ May I know, Sir, whether that is the courtesy to be shown by the Government to a vote of this House?”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ It is not a question of courtesy, but it depends upon the vote.”

Rate of jamabandi allowance payable to village officers and village menials.

* 564 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) what the rates of jamabandi allowance now paid are to the village officers and village menials;

(b) how long they are generally made to halt at the taluk headquarters during the jamabandi period; and

(c) whether they are informed of the definite date of checking their accounts during the jamabandi?

A.—(a) The village officers are not paid any jamabandi allowance now. The village menials are paid Rs. 2 each.

(b) & (c) The hon. Member's attention is invited to Board's Standing Order No. 12 (3) and (4).

Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I know, Sir, whether Government is prepared to pay the village officers some allowance as batta in view of the facts explained in the question, Sir?”

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ No, Sir.”

[26th January 1935]

Control of Vehicles

Timings regulating the arrival and departure of motor buses plying for hire.

* 565 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether the system of fixing a definite time for starting and arrival of each of the motor buses for hire from one place to another is followed in all the districts;

(b) if not, in which districts such a system is observed and in which districts it is not observed;

(c) what the reasons are for not observing such a system in certain districts; and

(d) whether representations have been received for the adoption of such a system in the Salem district, and, if so, in what way they have been disposed of?

A.—(a), (b) & (c) The Government have no information.

(d) No.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—“ May I know, Sir, whether Government will be pleased to call for the information? ”

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—“ I do not think any useful purpose will be served by calling for such information. ”

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—“ May I know, Sir, whether such a system is being adopted in all the districts? ”

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—“ I have already replied some days ago that this is a matter in which a uniform system all over the Presidency will not be useful at all and the local authorities will adopt the system that is best suited for each place. ”

Proposals, if any, for prescribing the educational and other qualifications of applicants for motor-driving licences.

* 566 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) how many motor-driving licences have been issued (both newly issued and renewed) in each district during the year 1934;

(b) whether there is any proposal for fixing educational and other qualifications for the applicants for motor-driving licences in future; and

(c) if so, what they are and when they are likely to be introduced?

A.—(a) The Government have no information.

(b) & (c) There is no proposal before the Government for fixing any additional qualifications other than those required by rule 19 of the Motor Vehicles Rules.

Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—“ May I know whether in granting licences they try to find out whether the man has got defective eye-sight or defective hearing or whether he is addicted to drink? ”

[26th January 1935]

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—“ Unless it is found out where a man is addicted to drink or a person is known to be a drunkard, no additional qualifications other than those required by the rules are insisted. But as far as eye-sight is concerned, in some places insistence is made on it. ”

Administration of Justice

Application of the communal Government Order for appointments in the Judicial service.

* 567 Q.—Mr. M. S. SRESHTA: Will the Hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government are considering the question of extending the communal Government Order for appointments in the Judicial services; and

(b) what the ratio is of appointments in the Judicial service held at present by the members of the different communities in the various districts.

A.—(a) The answer is in the affirmative so far as the Judicial Subordinate Service is concerned.

(b) The Government have no information.

Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—“ Will the Government be pleased to call for information? ”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ If the hon. Member will be pleased to let us know in what direction information is required, it may be possible for Government to consider the suggestion. But here, the hon. Member will notice that the judicial service consists of district judges, subordinate judges, district munsifs and their establishments in 26 districts. If the hon. Member would give us in what direction he wants information, that suggestion will be considered. ”

Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—“ In regard to all the appointments? ”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ It will be a task not commensurate with the results. ”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I know, Sir, whether Government will give information as to the cadre of district judges, subordinate judges and district munsifs community-war? ”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ I have no objection, Sir. ”

Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—“ May I know, Sir, whether this information cannot be got with regard to the judicial subordinate services, Sir? ”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ The task is so great. It would be an almost impossible task to collect information for all the establishment in the 25 or 26 districts and for all the courts in each district and their establishments; and the result will not be commensurate with the time spent in preparing the figures. If the hon. Member wants statistics in any particular district or particular court, Government will be very glad to supply the information. ”

[26th January 1935]

Mr. M. DEVADASAN:—"With reference to clause (a) of the answer, may I know whether the subordinates in the judicial service include, munsifs, sub-judges and district judges?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"No, Sir."

Mr. M. DEVADASAN:—"May I know, Sir, whether giving effect to such a principle will be useful to people in service as munsifs, sub-judges and district judges?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"The hon. Member knows, I take it, that the appointment of district munsifs is entirely in the hands of the High Court."

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—"May I know, Sir, whether Government will take power to appoint district munsifs and for that purpose whether they will suitably amend the Act?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"I am sure the hon. Member is aware that to pass an Act it will take at least one year and the new Reforms will be coming into effect; and on a perusal of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report he will find the answer there."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—"Is the Government aware that it will be in the best interests of the efficiency of the service if the appointment is left to the High Court itself and Government does not take it upon itself?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"It is a matter of opinion, Sir."

Memorials urging the location of a District Munsif's Court at Tadepalligudem, West Godavari district.

* 568 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAYYA: Will the Hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether any memorials were sent up to the Government and the High Court for the location of a District Munsif's Court at Tadepalligudem in the district of West Godavari; and

(b) if so, what steps were taken by the Government in the matter?

A.—(a) Yes.

(b) Under section 5 of the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873, the location of a District Munsif's Court is determined by the High Court. Under section 11 of the same Act it is the High Court that fixes, and from time to time, modifies the local jurisdiction of District Munsifs. The memorialists were therefore informed that the question of location of a District Munsif's Court at Tadepalligudem with the necessary rearrangement of the territorial jurisdiction of the District Munsifs' Courts in the district was one for decision by the High Court.

[26th January 1935]

Provision of adequate number of motor garage in the District Court of West Godavari at Ellore.

Wireless Installations

Establishment of a broadcasting service in the province.

* 570 Q.—Mr. A. B. SHETTY: Will the Hon. the Member for Finance be pleased to state what Government have decided regarding the establishment of a broadcasting service in this Presidency?

A.—The Government have not yet come to any final decision in the matter. They have submitted a scheme, based on the recommendations of the Special Broadcasting Adviser, to the Government of India, the subject being—as the hon. Member is doubtless aware a "Central subject" under the existing rules. The matter is at present under correspondence with the Government of India.

Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"May I know, Sir, whether the Hon. the Finance Member will try to expedite the consideration of the scheme and get a final decision in the matter before he lays down the reins of his office?"

The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN SROKES:—"I shall be very glad to do so, but I fear there is very little chance of my being able to do it."

(c) whether the Government will be pleased to place the report on the table of the House?

A.—(a) to (c) The estimates have been prepared. They are under scrutiny by the local officers.

[Note.—An asterisk (*) at the commencement of a speech indicates revision by the Member.]

II.—MOTION UNDER STANDING ORDER No. 4 RE ANSWER TO THE QUESTION ON SOUTH KANARA RESETTLEMENT.

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—“Mr. President, I just want to know whether I can move an adjournment motion arising out of the answer given by the Hon. the Revenue Member that the resolutions of this House will be considered as wastepaper. Is that the sort of courtesy that hon. Members of this House are to be shown?”

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—“The hon. Member's attention is invited to Standing Order No. 19 which deals with an adjournment motion.”

III.—MOTION UNDER STANDING ORDER No. 4 RE REVISED SCALES OF PAY OF TEACHERS.

Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, I desire to move under Standing Order No. 4, that half an hour be granted after the conclusion of the business of the day to discuss the question regarding the revised scales of pay of teachers in local boards as the answers given to questions, Nos. 557 and 558, by the Hon. the Chief Minister were not to the satisfaction of the House.”

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—“The hon. Member is quite in order and it will be taken up just after the business of the House for the day is over.”

[26th January 1935]

IV.—A BILL * TO AMEND THE MADRAS ELEMENTARY EDUCATION ACT (BILL No 17 OF 1934).

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—“The House will now consider the Elementary Education Act (Amendment) Bill and discussion on the amendment of Mr. Nachiyappa Gounder to clause 7, will continue.”

* Sriman M. G. PATNAIK Mahasayo:—“Mr. President, Sir, the particular clause under discussion relates to two things. The first is that admission to schools should be made compulsory and the second is that the retention of the children in the schools should also be made compulsory. The other day Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar said that he did not understand the section well. It provides for compulsion both as regards admission as well as retention of the children in schools. Those are the two things contemplated there. The Elementary Education Act was passed in 1920 and has been in operation for some time. This amendment is sought to be introduced on the ground that most of the children receiving education in the schools have not been benefited to the full extent. Therefore it is thought necessary that they should be kept in the schools for a longer period than at present. That is the reason why this provision is sought to be made. I consider that the provision is entirely misconceived. In the first instance, you can compel a child to attend a school, but unless he finds his education interesting or is useful to him, you cannot by mere compulsion keep a child in the school for any length of time.

“If people do not take to education, what can we do? It shows, that the syllabus is entirely unsuited to the actual life of the communities for whom the education is intended. This sort of consideration has never entered in the minds of Government. With due respect to the Hon. Minister as well as the Director of Public Instruction, I think they ought to have taken up the investigation as to whether the syllabus is useful to the people of the urban areas as well as the rural areas and as to whether it is useful to them in after-life. If it is not useful to them, and if they cannot take any interest in that sort of education, then the best way of keeping the boy in the school will be to make the syllabus instructive and useful. The Director of Public Instruction says that there are two classes of people. Firstly, there is a certain class who do send their children to school whether they find the education useful or not. There are other classes who are unwilling to send because they do not belong to the literary class. They would rather bring up their children in their own profession rather than at school, if they find that education is not useful to them. Therefore, we have to see, where the poorer classes do not send their children to school that the syllabus is made instructive and useful to them in their after-life. That is exactly the thing which the present day syllabuses do lack. They are altogether useless to these people in their after-life. To those who want to pursue the studies, it is a different matter. Even the secondary and collegiate education are not now popular and a time may come when people may abandon secondary and collegiate education

* Discussion resumed from 22nd January 1935.

[Sriman M. G. Patnaik Mahasayo] [26th January 1935]

because there is no use at all in them and the only useful purpose it serves is you can earn some money. The compulsion sought to be made by the clause is something like this: a bull yoked to a cart lies down. The cartman tries to make the bull get up by twisting its tail and if it does not, he belabours the bull and if it fails to get up even then he builds up a fire and applies its flames to its body. That is exactly what the Hon. the Education Minister is advised by the department to do in this case. He tries to pile compulsion upon compulsion. The Hon. the Education Minister should see that the syllabus is made more profitable and useful. In a country like this, an agricultural bias to education is very necessary. Though that opinion was expressed by the Committee of 1926, nothing has been done by the department till now to see that the syllabus is suitably altered to make provision for giving an agricultural bias. The Hon. the Education Minister says 'when people don't take themselves to this education, what am I to do?' The Hon. the Home Member yesterday said that you can take the horse to the water but you cannot make it drink. That is not the way in which the question has to be tackled. What is the present position? You have appointed teachers and Inspectors who are not in sympathy with this sort of education. What you have to do is to try to teach the people in the villages in such a way so that they may take up education. You have not done that. The first thing the department has to do is to provide teaching in agriculture in the training schools. Teachers under training must learn something in agriculture in the training schools. Such instruction can be given by the demonstrators in several places by going to those schools at least two hours a week. In that way, without much expenditure something could be done. Nobody in the department seems to have studied the question. On the other hand, the department has proposed to reduce the number of elementary schools. By so doing, they are trying to retard rather than accelerate the progress of education. I think the whole policy is retrograde. I cannot say the department has knowingly adopted these measures. They have been doing this without knowing that they are retarding the education. Therefore this provision should not be accepted."

Mr. DANIEL THOMAS:—"Mr. President, Sir, the provision now under consideration raises the most fundamental point in the Bill. I take it that the main object or purpose of the Hon. the Education Minister in introducing this Bill for the acceptance of this House is this: for some years past an optional system has been introduced by the original Elementary Education Act giving the option to the local authorities to introduce in special areas the system of compulsory education. That system has been worked for the last 10 or 15 years. Considering the results that were expected by the introduction of this optional compulsory education and assessing the actual results that have been achieved, one could not but be struck with the lack of adequate results. It is admitted, Sir, on all hands that elementary education is a very essential frame-work on which any system of adequate and enlightened citizenship can be based and built upon. On the one hand,

[26th January 1935] [Mr. Daniel Thomas]

Sir, while we are anxious that greater and greater provision should be made for the cause of elementary education, it is also equally necessary that such increasing provision is legitimately expended by the Government for the cause of elementary education in order that illiteracy in this country may be diminished. My hon. Friends, Mr. Nachiyappa Gounder and Mr. Krishnayya Choudari have already referred to the position as it now prevails. Taking the total number of students in any particular province or district attending elementary educational institutions, we find that the number of students in the first standard is nearly three times or four times as much as the total number of students attending in all the other standards. The result is that a good proportion of the students who are supposed to attend the elementary educational institutions do not, as a matter of fact, derive any lasting or permanent benefit by undergoing training in these schools. You take it, Sir, that the Government is spending a certain amount for each student who attends elementary school and you will find on calculation that nearly 50 per cent of the money which is spent by Government on elementary educational institutions goes to waste because the students don't make use of their education in later life. It is therefore, I submit, Sir, an absolute necessity that some provision should be devised to prevent this waste of public funds and at the same time ensure that all monies spent by Government in the cause of elementary education are really spent to diminish illiteracy and ensure literacy. My hon. Friend the Director of Public Instruction referred to the two systems that are under consideration, the system of compulsory education provided under the present Act and also the partial compulsion which is proposed in the proposed Act. He also pointed out that the one does not in any way come into conflict or supersede the other scheme, i.e., that the second scheme, the scheme of partial compulsion, is only an alternative to the other scheme. I submit, Sir, we have up to now the system of universal compulsory education and that has not been more widely taken up by the local authorities. If, as a matter of fact, this has not been more and more largely used by the local and district boards and municipalities, it is due to the absence of the necessary provision for funds. I submit as practical people who know that finance is the life-blood of any proposal or institution which may try to remedy existing defects, you must face the position. The introduction of universal compulsory education on a larger scale than at the present moment would mean the opening of new institutions, employment of additional teachers and the furnishing of the school with the necessary materials and so forth and the amount of expenditure will be something which will be enormous and which the present financial position of the Government would not be able to cope with. In these circumstances, I would submit, Sir, that the present proposal of a partial compulsory scheme comes in as a very satisfactory provision for securing the object we have in view and at the same time not going too long for universal compulsory education. Certain members who have spoken on the floor of the House previous to me have referred to the scheme as a retrograde step as if the scheme of partial compulsory education is intended to be a substitute for or is in conflict with the previous Act.

11-45 a.m. "I do not understand, Sir, in what way that position can be justified or defended. As my hon. Friend the Director of Public Instruction pointed out, it is still open to any district board to introduce compulsory education in any areas that they consider will be best served and whenever and wherever necessary funds can be provided for such a scheme. But, it only provides an alternative scheme, or I may call it a supplementary scheme, for the purpose of enlarging the number of literate students turned out in the educational institutions. How far you can avoid a conflict between the two systems is a doubtful matter. I would submit that if the present system of compulsion is to be an actual link with the proposed system, you must have a universal system of elementary education. No one in this House will say that universal compulsory elementary education is not a desirable thing. I believe the Hon. the Minister for Education would be the first to recognize that if and when the times are suitable, universal compulsory education should be provided for. But, Sir, without waiting for that distant date, it is up to him as a wise and prudent statesman to introduce measures for the present which will enable a much larger percentage of students to be turned out of our elementary schools than at present. It may be by reason of this provision parents who might otherwise have sent their children to the schools will be scared away, and lesser and lesser number of parents will be willing to send their children to the school when they find themselves unable to continue their children's education for long. But, I believe, Sir, that as a matter of fact there is a general feeling on the part of parents to see their children educated, and the thirst for education is spreading more and more. That shows that the provision of compulsory education prescribed by the Government will be such as not to interfere with the grown-up children. The period for permanent literacy will be such as to enable children to complete the period before they attain the age of ten or twelve years, so that I believe parents will not really be at a disadvantage from the economic point of view, by reason of the compulsory period. I will only submit, Sir, one other thing for the consideration of the Government in this matter. When this provision of partial compulsion is to be introduced in larger and larger areas, I believe a certain amount of provision will have to be made by the Government for giving text-books, slates and other necessities to students of the poorer classes. It will be rather hard, Sir, that parents who are in a very poor state should be compelled not only to send their children to school but also to undertake the expense of providing books, slates, etc. I would also commend an observation that has been made by Mr. Natesa Mudaliyar before the House that in the case of poor children, especially children belonging to the depressed classes, it may be necessary to make some arrangement by which some sort of meal is provided for them in the school. I submit, Sir, these are matters of detail which could be worked out after the provision comes into effect. However, I should also submit that there should be a general provision which is fundamentally necessary for the proper achievement of our object. I think, Sir, this is a very satisfactory provision which will substantially help the cause of spreading elementary education in this province."

* Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"Sir, I wish to know whether this modified form of compulsion has been tried in any other province or country, and if so with what result, or whether it is merely an experiment based on the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. It has been mentioned by more than one hon. Member of this House how this proposal for a modified form of compulsion has not been viewed with favour by the public. The fear has been expressed that it will retard elementary education rather than promote it. It will frighten poor parents who now send their children to school at least for some time, and it may have the effect of keeping away some of these poor children from school rather than of securing better attendance. It has also been remarked that it will mean penalization of the partially good parent, and leaving untouched the bad parent who does not care to send his children to school at all. Now, teachers in many places go from house to house and canvass and try to get more children to attend the school. This sort of propaganda on the part of the teacher will become difficult, if not impossible when one proposed measure is given effect to. Now, Sir, compulsion is not the only step required for improving attendance in schools. As observed by Mr. Champion the other day, it is true that the main cause for non-attendance of children in schools is poverty. This difficulty can be best met by the abolition of school fees and by provision of a mid-day meal in the school. It is a question of funds. Some of the mission schools have adopted this means and some others have been giving a grant to the earning capacity of the child. Another suggestion that has been made in this connexion is that our schools must adapt their hours of work to the demands for child labour in an agricultural community. If a child when he becomes able to do work in the field is faced with the alternative of a whole day in the school or a whole day in the field, the result is that often he gives up school altogether. Sir, apart from poverty, which as I said is the root difficulty—the main obstacle which stands in the way of many people sending their children to school or keeping them there for a sufficiently long time—there are other factors to be taken into consideration. One great factor in securing a better state of primary education is the teacher himself. The teacher makes the school. He must be able to spread a desire for education in the village. He must overcome the apathy of the people and try to make the school attractive and get more children to attend the school. It is a regrettable fact that teachers in many cases do not attend to their work properly. Many teachers absent themselves for days and days together without obtaining leave because they know they can do so without being found out. The Deputy Inspector or the Junior Deputy Inspector who is in charge of more than a hundred elementary schools is not able to inspect a school more than once a year. He goes out for inspection after giving due intimation to the teachers and they keep everything ready and prepare themselves for the inspection. It is not possible, under the present circumstances, to pay surprise visits to schools. It is necessary that we must have a more adequate and efficient system of supervision if we want to make the teachers attend schools regularly and do their duties properly. It is hardly necessary for me to add that our schools must be well equipped and well staffed so that people might feel that it is worth while sending their children to school. Villagers, illiterate as they are, are shrewd enough to observe how far the education given in schools benefits their children. They do not seem to attach much value to the education imparted in our elementary schools at present. Elementary education must take a more practical form. It must help children to earn their livelihood in a better way in their after-life. Unless this is done, elementary education will not get the widespread support it deserves. The success and popularity of our elementary schools will necessarily depend upon the efficiency of the staff and the character of the teaching given. The teaching must be adapted to the needs of the child, and it must help him, as I said, to earn a better living in after-life. It will be hardly justifiable to compel children to attend ill-equipped and badly staffed schools. Compulsion must not come in advance of improvement in primary education. It must come after improvement. It is no doubt true that the wastefulness of the present voluntary system of elementary education can be stopped only by introducing gradually some form of compulsion. But, as I said, we must not only improve the character of primary education, we must also try to solve the difficulties due to poverty, in the way of parents sending their children to school, by making education free, by providing for some kind of mid-day meal in the school and by part-time schools which adapt their hours of work to the demands of child labour. No substantial advance is possible unless funds on a large scale have definitely been made available. I hope that the Hon. Minister for Education will see that sufficient funds are provided so that we may make steady and determined progress towards the goal of free and compulsory education for all children."

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" Mr. President, Sir, the clause which is under discussion has been criticised from different points of view. We heard in this House itself the view that the clause did not go far enough, and we heard at the same time the view from another hon. Member that it went too far. Perhaps in these two conflicting statements, we find the best evidence to prove that we have been attempting to evolve a measure characterized by moderation. On the merits of this clause itself, I am sure you will agree with me, Sir, when I say that the expert member, Mr. Champion, has explained in a very clear manner the scope of this new provision and the effect of it and how it is really an improvement on the existing position. It is needless for me to add anything to what has fallen from him. I was glad to notice that the House when they listened to his speech received it with that amount of respect and consideration which is due to a statement which proceeds from an educationist of such unique experience and knowledge. With those critics of the extreme type who say that all steps to introduce compulsion must wait till schools have become so improved and so perfect that they will attract students of their own accord without any measures of coercion, with such critics we have nothing in common. We certainly cannot accept or sympathize with a position of that kind. But I can certainly understand the school of thought represented by my hon. Friends, Mr. Shetty, Mr. Patnaik and others, who, while recognizing that compulsion is the proper method of stopping wastage, say that we cannot rest contented with introducing compulsion alone without taking other measures for making the elementary schools more attractive. I certainly endorse what my hon. Friend, Mr. Shetty, said that improvements in the system of education are necessary and that poor children should be given greater facilities and ill-fed pupils should also be given wherever possible some additional nourishment while in school. All these measures do not require any statutory enactment; but what we are trying to provide for now requires a legislative enactment. These two efforts must go side by side, and I am sure the suggestions of my hon. friends which have been listened to with interest by the Director of Public Instruction will receive from him the most careful attention.

" My hon. Friend, Mr. Shetty, asked me a question whether this new form of compulsion which was recommended by the Royal Commission on Agriculture has been introduced anywhere. I am rather surprised that an administrator of such experience as my Friend, Mr. Shetty, should have thought fit to put a question like that. If there is a recommendation from such an authoritative body as the Royal Commission on Agriculture, why should we the people of this Province wait till somebody else has tried it and put the scheme to test? Let us be the pioneers in introducing this system which has such an authoritative support and have the credit of setting an example for others to follow. I have, however, information to the effect that this system has been tried in one of the Indian States, though I am not in a position to say with what results. But I do not think we need in the least be influenced by the fact that other people have not tried it; and if we are going to be the first to put the scheme to test and if we are going to succeed it will be still more creditable to us than if we were copying the example of somebody else who undertook the scheme before us. The fear has been expressed that this scheme will keep away children from schools altogether. That scare should have been removed by the reassuring statements made by the hon. Member Mr. Champion. It was admitted on all hands that there is a large amount of wastage and that measures are necessary and very urgently necessary to check that wastage, and it is admitted (though not by all) by a very large body of people that compulsion is the only method to prevent that wastage and that the form of compulsion which has been in existence under the present Act for a number of years has not succeeded in producing any results worth mentioning. Will you not therefore give the Government and their advisers an opportunity of making an honest and earnest endeavour to devise some other measures to counteract this evil of wastage? Under this Bill we are endeavouring to devise some such measures. I do not claim for this Bill anything more. We do not say that this is the last word in the perfection of our system of elementary education. Other methods may probably be devised later on, but this is the only method in the field at present. No hon. Member has suggested to us any alternative method by which the object which this amendment has in view could be achieved. I submit, Sir, that the new provision which has been made in the Bill is not open to any objection, on the other hand, it has a great deal to welcome it. It is after all an enabling provision; and the local bodies, if they share with some of the hon. Members here the fear that it would scare away children from the schools, let them not introduce it. If on the other hand there are local bodies who think that the educational interests of the area under their care require the introduction of this new method of compulsion, are you going to stand in their way and prevent them from trying this new method? That is the point of view from which I request the hon. Members of the House to examine this question. I hope therefore that this amendment of my Friend, Mr. Nachiyappa Gounder, which cuts at the root of the whole Bill, will not be accepted by the House."

* Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"I am very glad to hear that the Government are very anxious to try some other alternative form of compulsion, but that alternative should be one which does not mar the present state of things in the least. I heard the hon. the expert Member, Mr. Champion, and I am much thankful for his clear exposition. But I am not able to understand, from what he said, how the new method of compulsion if put to work will not injure the present state of affairs. At present, I know, in the village parts the schools are being run mainly on the efforts taken by the elementary school teachers in going round and bringing in the children to school every day. I am not in a position to speak much about the urban area, but this is what is actually taking place in rural parts. If this new form of compulsion is introduced what I fear is that parents who are already unwilling to send their children to school will not come forward at all to send their children for fear that they will be visited with heavy fines if they were to stop away their children in the middle for some reason or other. Thus the remedy may prove worse than the disease. In rural parts people often want their children to be away from schools to assist them in their domestic work. It is all due to their poverty. In trying to check wastage, this sort of compulsion is brought in but I may submit that this is sure to scare away many of the children who are now attending the schools. Instead of improving the present state of things it will make matters worse. As has been suggested by Mr. Shetty, if the Government could make up their mind to provide for effective supervision and devise some amenities to attract the children to school, such as providing books, supplying midday meal and such things, it would improve matters very much than all these ingenuous methods. Just when the Bill had been considered by the Select Committee, I remember the premier dailies of Madras, The Madras Mail and The Hindu wrote leading articles on this question and sufficiently dealt with the position. I too honestly believe that this provision instead of giving an impetus would bring down the attendance at schools. These things make me stand in the way of this clause being put into the Statute. The Hon. Minister argued that the local bodies who are anxious may adopt this form of compulsion if they choose to do so. But considering the present state of things, I do not think any local body would come forward to adopt this scheme, and there is no use of having an enactment if it is not going to be operative. For these reasons, I am constrained to say that I am not in a position to withdraw my motion."

The amendment was put and lost.
Clause 7 was put and carried.

V.—PERSONAL STATEMENT BY THE HON. THE REVENUE MEMBER.

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"Sir, I understand this morning 12-15 p.m. some remarks of mine have given a certain amount of offence to some hon. Friends in this House. When a question was put to me whether the Government viewed a resolution of this House as a scrap of paper or waste paper, I answered 'sometimes.' Well, Sir, in the first place, may I point out that resolutions are not necessarily to be accepted by Government? And surely my hon. Friends recognize that a resolution of the importance to which they allude could not possibly, in my conception of it, be classed as waste paper. I had no intention at any time to view a resolution in such terms, but, if I had, surely I would not have taken up half an hour or three quarters of an hour of the time of this House to make a reply to it.

"Sir, I must also point out that this expression 'waste paper' was not put forward by me at all, but by two or three hon. Members on that side of the House and, all I said was 'sometimes.' But, Sir, if I have given offence to any Members of this Hon. Assembly by any remarks of mine, I most unreservedly apologize and I trust that the hon. Members who have known me personally know that I would never intentionally insult them in any way."

Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—"Sir, in view of the statement made by the Hon. Gentleman the Revenue Member, I am sure hon. Friends on this side of the House will not press any motion which they want to move because I am sure they realize, as he does, that he used the expression in the heat of the moment the meaning of which he did not wish to convey at the time. However, as my hon. Friend on the left observes, it is best especially in Parliamentary institutions, to steer clear of expressions of this kind. I know, opponents always wish to put the other side in the wrong. It is for that side to see that they do not take the bait offered to them."

IV.—A BILL TO AMEND THE MADRAS ELEMENTARY EDUCATION ACT (BILL No. 17 OF 1934)—cont.

Clauses 8, 9 and 10.

Clauses 8, 9 and 10 were put and carried.

Clause 11.

* Mr. K. A. NACHİYAPPA GOUNDER:—" Mr. President, I move—

'In section 52 (1), lines 5 to 9, for the words "the Commissioner in . . . non-municipal areas," substitute the words "the president of the district educational council having jurisdiction over that area";

'In sub-section 2 of section 51, in lines 1 to 3, for the words "chairman of a . . . district board," substitute the words "president of a district educational council";

'In line 4, omit the figure and brackets "(1)";

'In lines 6 to 8, omit the words "to the Revenue Divisional Officer . . . chairman and";

'In lines 8 to 10, omit the words "in the case of . . . president";

'In lines 10 and 11, omit the words "Revenue Divisional Officer or";

'In the proviso to sub-section 2 of section 51, lines 3 and 4, omit the words "by the Revenue Divisional Officer . . . municipality or," and in line 5; omit the words "district board," and substitute in their place the words "district educational council";

"My object in moving this amendment is to see that the powers for carrying out the scheme of compulsory elementary education and the penalising powers are entrusted to any authority who has got sufficient leisure to exercise them properly. Under the existing Act, these are in the hands of the attendance committees constituted in the respective areas. Since the Government themselves say that they have tested the present system and found it not satisfactory and hence these sincere attempts to change the system, I may suggest that these powers might be given to the district educational councils and their presidents. My reasons are these: As observed on many occasions, there is a lot of confusion and party spirit in the local bodies and so, if penalising powers are given to them, I am afraid that the people who are opposed to the party in power will be made victims even unnecessarily sometimes. Another reason why my suggestion should be adopted is that the local board presidents have a lot of work to do and so it would not be possible for them to devote proper and sufficient attention to this important work. I cannot admit that the persons holding the office of the presidents of district education councils are in any way inferior to the presidents of district boards. Moreover they are to be considered to be experts in this work as they are intimately connected with the problem of elementary education in their districts. That being the case, I fail to see any difficulty in allowing the presidents of district educational councils who have ample time at their disposal to look after these special works which require personal attention. The district educational councils consist of the Collector of the district, the District Educational Officer, the other inspecting officers as well as the president and a few members of the district board besides some nominated members. I must ask whether the president of such a body is not a fit person to be entrusted with these powers and functions. Sir, I believe he is. For these reasons, I trust that the House and the Government will consider my amendment favourably."

Mr. V. T. ARASU:—"I second it."

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I am sorry, Sir, that I must oppose this amendment. I am not going to compare the relative merits of the presidents of district educational councils and the heads of the district boards and municipal councils for the purpose of being given these additional functions. But the Select Committee did carefully consider this point and came to the conclusion that the presidents of district boards and municipal chairmen would be more suitable persons for being given these additional functions. At present the district educational councils have unfortunately no other duties than disbursing the grants put into their hands by the Government. Though statutorily they can undertake other work also they are at present exercising no powers other than this. Being a body with such limited functions, I do not think the heads of those bodies would be suitable persons for enforcing compulsion. At present the improvement and expansion of elementary education is one of the duties assigned to municipal councils and local bodies and it is they that should have this power. I am sorry I cannot accept the amendment."

* Mr. K. A. NACHİYAPPA GOUNDER:—"I am sorry, Sir, the Hon. the Minister has not stated sufficient reasons for not permitting the presidents of district educational councils to take up this work. But since he is not agreeable to this amendment, I do not think any useful purpose will be served by my pressing it. I therefore withdraw my amendment."

The amendment was by leave withdrawn.

Clause 11 was then put and carried.

Clause 12.

Mr. G. RAMESWARA RAO:—"Sir, I beg to move the amendment standing in my name, namely:—

'Add the following proviso at the end of clause 12:—

"Provided that the rules framed under the Act shall be subject to the approval of the Legislative Council."

[Mr. G. Rameswara Rao] [26th January 1935]

Sir, my object in moving this amendment is only to give the Legislative Council an opportunity of understanding these rules as they are framed by the Government. This will give the Council an opportunity to suggest proper alterations in them so that the machinery may be kept in good and proper working order to the satisfaction of all concerned."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—" (After a pause) the amendment falls through for want of a seconder. Clause 12 is . . . "

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—" I second it."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—" Clause 12 is for the vote of the House."

B. POCKER SAHIB Bahadur:—" It was seconded, Sir."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—" I gave sufficient time for the motion to be seconded. When I declared that it had not been seconded, there is no meaning in the hon. Member getting up and saying that it was seconded."

Clause 12 was put and carried.

Clauses 13 and 14 were then put and carried.

The preamble was then put and carried.

12-30 p.m. * The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" Before moving that the Bill be passed into law, I shall, with your leave, re-open some of the previous clauses and move some amendments consequential on the amendments which have been accepted by the House."

Clause 2.

Section 5.

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I move—

' In line 4 omit the figure and brackets " (i)." ' "

Mr. D. H. BOULTON:—" I second it."

The amendment was put and carried.

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I beg to move—

' Omit sub-clause (ii) and the figures and brackets " (iii)." ' "

Mr. D. H. BOULTON:—" I second it."

* Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—" With regard to this amendment I want to know whether they have given up the idea of distributing the seats in a uniform manner throughout the area of the district. Originally it was thought so and I have also given notice of an amendment that the Revenue divisions must be fixed as the basis and the Minister wanted that a taluk should be taken as the basis. By omitting sub-clause (ii), which proposes distributing the seats throughout the area of the district I find, Sir, that the Government have given up that idea.

26th January 1935] [Mr. K. A. Nachiyappa Gounder]

altogether. Therefore I wish to ask whether this was deliberately left out or left out unintentionally."

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" The Bill as it stood originally provided that election by the local authorities to the District Educational Council must be made from amongst the members of the local authority. That clause has been omitted and it is open to the local authority to elect even outsiders, i.e., people who are not members of the local authority itself. That being so, I do not see any purpose in having any distribution of seats for the local areas. If the local authority so chooses it can elect even outsiders. In view of the House having accepted my original position, we thought that clause should be omitted and hence this amendment."

The amendment was put and carried.

Clause 2 as amended was put and carried.

Clause 3.

Section 8 (1)—Proviso.

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—" I beg to move—

' For the first proviso, substitute the following:—

" Provided that a member elected by a local authority under sub-section (5) of section 5 who at the time of such election is a member of such authority shall cease to be a member of the council when he ceases to be a member of the local authority, unless he is re-elected as a member of such authority and such re-election takes effect immediately on the expiry of his previous term of office: " ' "

Sir, this also is consequential on the amendment that has been accepted by the House, viz., that people elected by the local authority need not be members of that local authority. This clause can only apply to people who are elected from amongst the members of the local authority. It has therefore been made clear that outsiders will not be affected by this proviso. It is for that purpose that I am proposing to add the words ' who at the time of such election ' in the second and third lines of the proviso."

Mr. D. H. BOULTON:—" I second it."

* Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—" I cannot find any reason as to why this amendment should be accepted. The original object was that the membership of the District Educational Councils should be restricted only to the members of the respective local authorities and that their membership in the District Educational Council should cease automatically along with their membership in the local authority and so this clause was brought in. But subsequently a concession for the sitting members to continue in the District Educational Council for a complete period of three years if they have not completed their period of three years already, in case they are again re-elected members of the same local authority, was introduced when the Bill was being considered by the Select Committee. Sub-clauses (i) and (ii) having been omitted I do not find any reason as to why this clause should be retained. You are allowing the outsiders also to get into the District Educational Council and when outsiders have been allowed the chance of continuing for three years I ask where is the necessity for bringing in disqualification for the members of local authorities who are elected to the District Educational Council by their colleagues. When pure outsiders who have nothing to do with the local authority have been given the option of getting into District Educational Councils,—that is a good move and I am not discouraging it—and allowed to complete their full period of three years, I ask whether it is necessary to impose restrictions upon the members of the local authority who are not in any way inferior to outsiders. In fairness to the members of the local authority and also the idea that they should not be differentiated or be put on a different basis than outsiders I think it is better that this amendment also is dropped, so that they too may have a full life of three years as they are having at present. But if Government think that in the case of local authorities such a restriction is necessary they may extend the same restriction to outsiders who are elected as members of District Educational Councils. If that is done, both the outsiders and members of local authorities who are elected as members of District Educational Councils will have equal treatment. The amendment which I have given notice of in this connexion if approved will achieve this object. But I am sorry it was not given proper consideration. So, I am sorry, I will have to oppose the amendment."

[Mr. K. A. Nachiyappa Gounder] [26th January 1935]

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"The principle is that members of a local authority when elected as members of a District Educational Council can continue to be members of that body so long as they are members of the local authority. That principle has been accepted by this Hon. House. What I seek to make clear by this amendment is that this proviso should not be made to apply to outsiders but only to that class of members who are on the local authority, but not at the time of their election. There is nothing in this amendment which violates the principle which has been accepted by the House."

The amendment was put and carried.

Clause 3 as amended was put and carried.

Clause 5.

Section 41.

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"I beg to move that—for lines 2 to 7 the following be substituted:—

"(i) sub-section (3) shall be lettered as clause (a) of sub-section (3) and to the clause as so lettered, the following words shall be added at the end, namely:—

'within sixty days from the date of the passing thereof.'

26th January 1935] [Mr. S. Kumaraswami Reddiyar]

"(ii) to the same sub-section, the following clause shall be added, namely:—"

Mr. D. H. BOULTON:—"I second it."

* Mr. K. A. NACHİYAPPA GOUNDER:—"While on this amendment, may I suggest, Sir, that the sixty days allowed should be counted from the date of receipt of the order and not from the date of passing of the particular order? In this connexion I want to refer hon. Members of this House to the limitation which is allowed in civil courts. There when there are appeals to be filed, the time allowed is from the date of the receipt of the particular records which the parties are not in possession of and on which they have to appeal. Here the wording is 'within sixty days from the date of the passing thereof.' Due to laxity or for some reason or other the authorities may fail to send the papers to the parties in time and they may not be able to file their appeals. Even 30 or 40 days are quite enough. But the point is that it should be from the date of receipt of the order. The authorities may retain their orders for a pretty long time in their office and such orders may reach the parties just on the eve of the completion of 60 days. If that is so is the party to lose his privilege of filing the appeal? I would point out to the Hon. Minister that the provision he has made is not proper and that the method which has been adopted with regard to limitation in judicial and other branches of administration may also be adopted here. In those cases they allow time from the date of receipt of order or the copy by the parties, the time from the date of application to the date of receipt of order or copy being deducted. That sort of concession is not shown here. It may work hardship in some cases. To avoid such a contingency I request the Hon. Minister to insert the words 'from the date of receipt of the order'."

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"The point mentioned by my hon. Friend has been carefully considered. There may be many cases in which the order is not communicated at all to the party appealing. If the manager of a school applies for recognition and aid and if such recognition or aid is refused, the order will be communicated to him; and it might become the subject-matter of an appeal by him. If he is given the recognition and aid that is applied for, it may be that the manager of another school is aggrieved by that order, but the order is not communicated at all to such aggrieved manager. It is not possible therefore to provide that the starting point of the period is the date on which the order is communicated. In many cases, the order will not be communicated at all to the appellant. It is only to cover all such cases that the period of 30 days originally suggested by Mr. Krishnayya Choudari has been extended to 60 days at the instance of my hon. Friend Mr. Nachiyappa Gounder. I think 60 days is a long interval which will meet all kinds of cases and prevent any hardship from arising."

The amendment was put and carried.

[26th January 1935]

* The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"Sir, in the same clause I move that—'sub-clause (ii) may be renumbered as sub-clause (iii)'."

Mr. D. H. BOULTON:—"I second it."

"In doing so, I am not proposing to make any very lengthy observations, but I would be failing in my duty if I do not express my indebtedness to the hon. Members of this House who sat on the Select Committee and who took a very keen interest in its proceedings and who were very helpful in the expeditious passage of this Bill through the Select Committee; and again to the hon. Members of this House who have, in view of the importance of the subject with which this amending Bill dealt, shown an equally keen interest and helped me very much in the passage of this Bill through this Hon. House. I may also be permitted to mention a word about the valuable services which the two Special Members nominated to this House for the purpose of this Bill have rendered to me. I have already mentioned about Mr. Champion, the Director of Public Instruction, whose valuable contribution to the debate on this Bill, hon. Members of this House who have listened to his speech are aware of. But of the great help which I have received from Mr. Boulton, hon. Members of this House may not be aware of: I must acknowledge with thanks that from the very earliest stages of this Bill, he has collaborated with me with the greatest possible earnestness. And if to-day the Bill has been successfully steered through this House, not a little of the credit is due to the thought and labour that Mr. Boulton has brought to bear on the ideas and provisions of this Bill. I am glad to take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude to this House and to these hon. Members. As I have already said, I do not claim for this Bill anything more than that it is an earnest endeavour to devise further measures for the purpose of eliminating the wastage which we all deplore and which we want must be eliminated. If this Bill succeeds in achieving this object even in a small measure, I am sure the credit will go all to the Legislative Council. The hon. Member Mr. Shetty wanted us to wait till somebody else has tried and found out the real worth of the present scheme. But we have not done so; we have with courage started the experiment ourselves; and I hope it will prove a success. I do not wish to detain the House any further and I once again move that the Bill be passed into law."

* Mr. C. BASU DEV:—“Sir, I am of opinion that this Bill should be delayed by at least six months. Hon. Members—especially my eloquent friend from Madura, Mr. Muthu Chettiyar, Mr. Patnaik from Berhampur and others have spoken about the hardship which compulsion will cause to the poor classes of people. After all compulsory education is intended for those, as the Director of Public Instruction himself admits, who are too poor to send their children to school and who are not in a position to pay adequate attention to the education of their children. Both these sets of people come under the category of wage-earners who have to earn their livelihood by the sweat of their brow under very difficult conditions of service. May I ask the Minister, therefore, if he is doing the right thing by putting these unfortunate people in a state of difficulty and anxiety?”

“On the last occasion when this Bill was referred to the Select Committee I raised the question of the cost of education to the parents. It is certainly not a correct thing to say that the Government is offering free education. Apart from the fact that no fees are demanded it has to be admitted that the education that is being now imparted is by no means free; nor is it attractive. Education which is intended for the children is in fact benefiting only the text-book writers and publishers—text-books are changed every year, sometimes twice and thrice a year for no other purpose than that of distributing patronage. The unhappy parent will have to buy year after year new books and even copy books which I submit wage-earners cannot afford. My hon. Friend, Mr. Patnaik, very eloquently pointed out the absence of purpose or policy in the education that is now being imparted. Yesterday I had occasion to refer to the report of the Unemployment Committee which was appointed in 1926 which drew the attention of the educational authorities to the need for making education more attractive and for giving it an agricultural bias. I ask the Hon. Minister what he has done to carry out those suggestions. I am sure the Director of Public Instruction will endorse my statement that education at present has absolutely no purpose and no object. If it is only to teach the three R's to the children, I submit with all the emphasis at my command that it is far better and more to the purpose to entrust the whole of elementary education to the village pial schools than spending such enormous sums on elementary education. My hon. Friend, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar, who has every authority to speak on behalf of the people of this Presidency and who is considered to be the tribune of the people, drew pointed attention to the need to afford facilities for poor children by giving them midday meals and I suggest by supplying them with text-books, copying books, slates, etc.

[Mr. C. Basu Dev]

[26th January 1935]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I wish to ask the hon. Member how these points are relevant to the third reading of this Bill."

* Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Sir, I shall presently submit how. I originally gave notice of a motion for the adjournment of the consideration of this Bill by six months. I am not moving it now. I am making these observations so that the Government might delay giving effect to this Bill and make certain necessary arrangements before compulsion is enforced. Before introducing compulsion and before putting this Bill into operation, it is highly necessary that the Hon. Minister should make arrangements for the free supply of text-books or for the abolition of the text-books altogether in the elementary classes. On the last occasion when he moved for the reference of this Bill to the Select Committee, the Hon. Minister promised me that the question of abolishing the text-books for the first two standards would receive his attention."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I am afraid the hon. Member is not relevant."

Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Sir, I am referring to the question of compulsion. Whether modified or absolute, no sort of compulsion will be of any use if arrangements are not made for the supply of text-books. That is my view. I respectfully urge on the attention of the Government that they should make necessary provision to see that compulsion does not sit heavily on the poor parent; though he may have to forego the economic value of his child at least he may have the satisfaction that his child is taught some useful things and that he is not called upon to spend from his all too meagre earnings."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Sir, I must express on this occasion the view that the people of this Province will certainly not be satisfied with this legislation, in view of the fact that there has been a long-standing demand for wholesale revision of the Elementary Education Act. As it is, I must admit that the new and modified form of compulsion that has been incorporated in this Bill will not help to mitigate the wastage in education that is going on now for a certain number of years. There has been fear entertained in the minds of certain people that the modified form of compulsion that has been introduced as far as the education of the school-going children is concerned, will not go a long way unless similar compulsion is given effect to in regard to the free admission of children into the schools themselves. I hope, Sir, that when giving effect to this amending Bill when it becomes law, the authorities concerned will consider the necessity of seeing to it that the provision for compelling school-going children to attend the schools will not be relaxed in any respect. When you introduce compulsion in a modified form, you will come across many practical difficulties. As has been pointed out by hon. Members who have spoken before me, many classes of people will not find it possible to send their children to school from the first year class to the fourth or fifth year class, unless certain facilities are afforded to them. Such facilities have been mentioned by my hon. Friends, Messrs. Shetty and Basu Dev; one is the hours of work during which the children of a particular area or locality will be called upon to attend the schools; the other is the nature of the education that is to be imparted to the children of the various localities, suitable to them, and suitable to the conditions pertaining to that locality. The third thing that was pointed out is with regard to the cost of education. There is no doubt that we have made elementary education free and compulsory. The fact that a child is not compelled to pay one anna or two annas per mensem should not be construed to mean that education is made free. The child has to bear much expenditure, because he has to buy a large number of costly books that are prescribed even for the lower standards. Sending children to schools is very costly and the poor people are not able to bear the cost. When you are compelling children to study in all the four or five classes, when they are not in a position to buy the text-books and to incur the cost of education, their parents are put to the double difficulty of not only incurring the cost of education but paying the penalty that will be imposed by local bodies. These are some of the difficulties which the authorities should bear in mind and I hope—against hope perhaps—that the Hon. Minister would come forward with a comprehensive Bill in the near future revising the whole Act. He must first of all do away with the district educational council."

Diwan Bahadur A. APPADURAI PILLAI:—"I move, Sir, that the question be put."

Diwan Bahadur A. M. MURUGAPPA CHETTIYAR:—"I second it."

The closure motion was put and carried.

The motion that the Bill be passed into law was put and carried and the Bill was passed into law.

VI.—THE MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS (AMENDMENT) BILL (BILL No. 1 OF 1935).

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I understand, Sir, that notice of a motion to postpone the consideration of this Bill has been given. I do not know whether, in that case, within the time at the disposal of the Council to-day, this motion^a can be disposed of."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"There is an amendment given notice of by Messrs. Nachiyappa Gounder and Manikkavelu Nayakar; and if that amendment is moved, naturally the business cannot be finished for another two hours. That is what I feel."

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"In that case, I do not propose to make this motion, Sir."

^a To introduce the Bill and move that it be referred to Select Committee.

III.—MOTION UNDER STANDING ORDER No. 4 RE REVISED SCALES OF PAY OF TEACHERS—cont.

* Mr. T. S. RAMASWAMI AYYAR:—"Sir, under Standing Order No. 4, I desire to raise a debate on a matter of urgent importance arising out of the answers given by the Hon. the Chief Minister this morning to questions Nos. 557 and 558 concerning the revised scales of pay of teachers, which were not to the satisfaction of the House.

"Sir, in answer to the interpellations made this morning, the Hon. the Chief Minister said that the scales of pay have been revised; I want to show that such revision of pay has affected the teachers, and especially the pandits, to their detriment. The new scale of pay for pandits has been reduced to Rs. 30—40 with biennial increments of Rs. 2. The scale for headmasters of high schools has been fixed at Rs. 110—170 with biennial increments of Rs. 10; and in the case of secondary school teachers, it has been fixed at Rs. 30—50 with biennial increments of Rs. 2. In their original G.O. No. 4619, the Government stated that the scale would apply to teachers in secondary schools and that no personal allowance would be granted to existing incumbents, in the case of those that were drawing pay in excess of the scales mentioned. They also stated that the order would come into force on the 1st November 1934; the municipal councils were also advised to adopt that scale of pay in regard to secondary schools under their control. Subsequently as a result of representations made by teachers who were affected by the Government Order, the Government were pleased to issue another Government Order No. 5025, dated 20th November 1934, wherein they said that the order would not preclude the Government from considering the question of granting personal pay to those incumbents whose pay prior to the 1st of November exceeded the maximum of the new scale of pay, 'provided there was real hardship in such cases' and the 'local body concerned recommended the payment of personal pay.' The new scales of pay are very low in certain cases and it compares very unfavourably with the scales of pay adopted by the Government themselves in regard to their employees. I do not know why the Government propose to have one scale of pay for their employees and suggest a lower scale for the local board employees. I am not prepared to accept the proposition that the Government servants are more efficient than the employees of local bodies. If you go into the question of qualifications, you find that in many cases the qualifications are almost the same. After all, the pay is fixed according to qualification, and the Government cannot say that the local board employees are less qualified and that therefore they should get less pay.

"Again, Sir, I cannot at all understand the Government trying to enforce this scale of pay in the case of the present incumbents. It is an accepted canon of finance—even in days of Government retrenchment it was so—that no incumbent of an office should be asked to submit to a reduced scale of pay. Even in the days of depression through which we have just passed when Government appointed a Retrenchment Committee, they sought to enforce only a cut in salaries and did not resort to any revision of pay with regard to present incumbents. They imposed an emergency cut of 5 per cent or 10 per cent, and as soon as the emergency passed, the employees got back their original pay. Wherever the Government thought that the pay was a little too much in any scale, on the recommendation of the Retrenchment Committee or on the recommendation of a special officer appointed by the Government, new scales of pay were introduced; but they were to apply only to new entrants. I want to make this point clear. It is, I think, a breach of contract to say that a person who holds a certain office should be asked to take a smaller scale of pay—both legally and morally. The only justification that an employer can have for such a wholesale revision will be an emergency. When such a principle has been accepted by the Government, I am not able to understand this attitude of theirs in the case of local board employees. No doubt the Government are pleased to say that wherever there is hardship, relief would be given; but what is the relief given in the second Government Order which amended the first? The relief given is this: 'wherever there is real hardship and the local body concerned recommends, personal pay will be given to the employee.' But who is to decide whether there is hardship or not in any particular case? Is the person who pays there is hardship or not to the payee? That is also to be asked whether there is hardship or not to the payee? That is not, I think, the correct way of looking at things. It is the right of an employee to get his pay; it is not for the employer, when once a contract has been entered into, to reduce the pay. Wherever there is a deficit of funds, the chairman or president of a local body would naturally say that there is no real hardship to the employee. After all, it is the wearer that knows where the shoe pinches and it is he who must be able to say whether there is hardship or not. But why put it to this test? Is it not the privilege of the employee to have his old scale of pay? Another difficulty will be this: when the employee thinks that he must have some relief, and the employer begins to go into the question as to whether the employee merits relief or not, it will lead to bad feeling as between the two. I do sympathize, Sir, with the Hon. the Chief Minister in his attempt to husband the resources of the local bodies; but there is a way in which this can be done. As I said, the Government followed certain fixed rules in effecting retrenchment. Why not adopt these rules in the case of employees of local bodies? Considering all this, it is but right that the Government should not allow this Government Order to stand without making a further scrutiny. I understand that Government have addressed the local bodies in this respect; but we have not been told what replies have been received from the local bodies regarding the new scales of pay being introduced. I suggest to the Government, Sir, that they should not give effect to the new scales of pay."

[26th January 1935]

* Mr. T. C. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"Sir, at this late hour, I do not desire to detain the House with any elaborate remarks. But I am bound to invite the attention of the House to the very very inadequate pay provided for some classes of teachers according to the new scales. I desire to draw pointed attention to the case of the pandits. I wonder why the pay of the pandits should be fixed at a lower figure than even that of the pay of the physical training inspectors, drawing masters and commercial instructors. It is an irony that the pandits are not placed in an equal status even with those classes of teachers. The Government have not paid any attention to the qualifications now required in the gentlemen who are appointed as pandits. The graduates on the oriental side of the University and persons possessing equal qualifications can now be appointed to the pandits' places. Training also is insisted on in the case of these pandits; and training is now provided by the Annamalai University. They are on the same academic level as the graduates and L.T.'s, and yet the pay fixed for the pandits is not even half the pay of the L.T. assistants, either in respect of the maximum or of the minimum.

1-30
p.m.

"Under the existing scales of pay adopted by many district boards, which are themselves not overgenerous, pandits' emoluments were better. The instruction will tend to suffer by the very poor pay that is proposed to be given to them. Again, when the medium of instruction in regard to many subjects is now the vernacular, the way in which these pandits are treated is not at all commendable. I hope the Hon. the Chief Minister who comes of an illustrious aristocratic family and who I believe along with the aristocratic families of southern India, is a hereditary patron of indigenous learning, will certainly pay his personal attention to this matter, of the pandits' pay which, as provided here, is certainly very inadequate."

* Mr. K. A. NACHYAPPA GOUNDER:—"Sir, I should also like to say a few words in this connexion. I request the Hon. the Chief Minister to see whether the treatment that is now accorded to local board employees is proper at all. They have been placed on a certain basis and have been hoping that they would be able to get better prospects as time passes. But if reduced scales of pay are thrust on them by a mere stroke of the pen, it is rather very hard indeed. I can understand the imposition of a uniform cut in their pay at the time of exceptional necessity, but not cutting down their pay miserably. I am glad the Hon. Minister has taken a bold step in this direction to save the local bodies. But if he could have applied these new scales only to new entrants it would have been proper and no one could find fault with him. Now, Sir, in the matter of introducing new scales of pay in Government service also, we find that Government have adopted the new scales only to new entrants. When such is the case, I fail to understand why that policy has not been adopted in the case of the local board employees too. Perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister may say that the local bodies would not be able to cope up with the demand for expenditure if the old rates of pay are continued even in the case of existing men. I fail to understand how these local bodies have so long been continuing to pay those scales of pay to their subordinates and yet go on with their administration by keeping a well balanced budget. In an exceptional emergency, just as Government did it is fair for the local bodies to effect a uniform cut in the pay of their employees, but I cannot see any reason why their existing pay should be cut down once for all. Among the reductions of pay of various establishments I find that the reduction which has been brought about in the scales of pay of the secondary school staff is very deplorable indeed. . . ."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"May I tell the hon. Member that the discussion on this motion will close at 1-45 p.m.?"

* Mr. K. A. NACHYAPPA GOUNDER:—"The revised scale of pay that has been fixed is very meagre and there is a widespread discontent on account of this. It is an accepted principle, Sir, that the department of education which is doing a very useful work to improve the state of things should not be discouraged and as such the employees of this branch should be given some special consideration, so that they might be enthusiastic in their work. So, Sir, I request the Hon. the Chief Minister to consider all these aspects of the question once again, and redress the grievances of these people especially in the case of pandits who are doing the work of a pressing nature and more so in these days when there is a cry for vernacularization everywhere. Hence, I urge that they should be treated in a better manner. I once again request the Hon. Minister to reconsider his orders and see that the hardship of these poor people is removed."

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"Sir, as the time at my disposal is very short I shall just deal briefly with the points raised by various hon. Members. I think three objections have been taken against the orders revising the scales of pay. Firstly, that the scales of pay now proposed are lower than those of Government servants; secondly that those scales of pay have been applied to the existing incumbents; and thirdly that in fixing the scales of pay to pandits, they have been more unfavourably treated than the other classes of servants.

"Coming first to the question of the difference in the standard of scales of pay in Government service and those of local boards, I may state that this morning in answer to this question, I referred not only to the elementary school teachers, but to local board employees as a whole. Of course, in the case of secondary school teachers, I do realize that the academical qualifications are the same, but if we take the general standard of the local board employees as a whole, we find either in efficiency of work or in their qualifications, they do not come anywhere near the Government servants. If I may quote an example, I may state that among the 900 taluk board employees, we find there are only about 12 graduates. I therefore think, Sir, that it cannot be conceded that local board employees should be paid the same scale of pay as those in Government service. Apart from that, we have also taken into consideration the existing state of affairs, what the scales of pay now prevailing in the local boards are, what the total cost of their establishment is, and what the financial resources of the local boards are. Taking all these things into consideration, I believe that the scales now proposed by the Government, provide a decent living-wage and that there will be no complaint on that score. Apart from this, I would appeal to hon. Members of this House once again to consider the scheme in its entirety and not to refer only to the case of one class of servants.

"Taking education as a whole, both elementary and secondary, we find that under the scheme now proposed by Government, there will be an increase, as I have already stated on the floor of this House, of 5 or 6 lakhs in the total salary bills of local boards. I have heard special pleadings on behalf of pandits and secondary school teachers, but I find hon. Members have not appreciated the action of the Government in raising the level of remuneration of elementary school teachers. Much has been said of the fact that pandits are proposed to be paid a remuneration lower than that given, for example, to the physical training instructors. I have not got before me the scales of pay previously given in local boards, but I believe I am right in saying that even under the existing state of affairs that position exists. Not only in local board service but also in Government service, the scales of pay given to pandits are lower than those given to assistants in high schools. That is the existing system which has not been brought about for the first time by the recent orders of Government. If it can be shown to me that the remuneration paid to these two classes of employees have been reduced or altered by the recent orders of Government, then I am certainly prepared to reconsider and modify the scales of pay given to pandits."

Mr. T. C. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"In five at least of the districts in the south the maximum that is now provided is the minimum."

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"The important point which I would put before the House is, how do the salaries now paid to pandits compare with those paid to physical training instructors? Have they, for the first time been made lower by the recent orders of Government than the remuneration given to the physical training instructors?"

"Sir, while so much has been said about the secondary school teachers and pandits, it is rather curious to find that nobody has brought to the notice of the House the present state of the elementary school teachers. Sir, on an examination of the present position of the various district boards, I find that these elementary school teachers are being paid a scale of pay much less than that of the peons and daffadars; and seeing the importance of elementary education and the large amount of public money that is being spent on elementary education

every year, Government have come to the conclusion that before we can raise the standard of elementary education, it is necessary to improve the conditions of service. I therefore think, if any impartial observer looks into the scheme as a whole, he will find that these scales of pay have been conceived in the best interests of education in the country. Taking the existing state of affairs and the financial resources of local boards, I do not think, subject to what I have already said, it will be possible for Government to increase the scales of pay now proposed. (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: 'Why not pay the difference?')

"Sir, I have also another point to state. While restricting the standard scales of pay, the scheme will also indirectly have the effect of solving to some extent the existing unemployment among the educated classes. Out of the savings that will accrue to local boards in future, I am sure they will be able to open more secondary schools and thus they will be able to employ more teachers in future.

"Now, Sir, coming to the question of different treatment accorded to local board servants, as compared with Government servants in the application of the new scales of pay to existing incumbents, there again, I have to state that in the local boards there is no uniformity in the scales of pay, nor is the remuneration fixed in proportion to the responsibility of the posts. We find some clerks drawing Rs. 30 and some of them, selection grade clerks, drawing Rs. 120 or Rs. 150 doing the same kind of work, in some of the district board offices. It therefore cannot be said that the local board employees are in the same position as Government servants. Apart from that, you find numerous cases where an employee is taken to service on a particular scale of pay and within two or three years is given accelerated promotion. Of course, Government have issued rules to the effect that without the special sanction of Government there should be no accelerated promotion or advance increments granted. But, local boards have been able to get round these rules by sanctioning a higher scale of pay altogether whenever they want to favour a particular individual, and in other cases to get round the rules whereby large personal allowances were granted to some of their servants. To set right all these things, it is necessary to apply these scales to the existing incumbents also."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The time allotted for the discussion of this motion is nearly over."

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"At the same time, I may say that it is not proposed to apply the scales of pay to the existing incumbents and to reduce the emoluments which they are at present drawing. As a matter of fact in the case of a majority of the district boards, personal pay has been granted in the case of the ministerial staff and various other employees and we are awaiting proposals from a few district boards. As regards the personal pay, as I have already stated more than once, those who have been hit by the orders, will be given personal pay."

[The Raja of Bobbili] [26th January 1935]

"Another criticism is that in the order, local boards have been asked to express their opinion. The reason for that was that the local boards are at present imposing a cut of 5, 10 or 12½ per cent on the salaries. Before they could recommend personal pay and prepare a statement, it will be necessary for them to decide what cut they should impose or whether they should impose any cut at all. One question was brought to my notice and that is whether the matter has been delayed. I shall impose a time-limit and see that the local boards come to a decision at an early date and bring it to the notice of the Government."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"There is no question to be put. The time allotted for the discussion is over."

"The House will now adjourn and meet again at 11 a.m. on Monday the 28th instant."

Secretary to the Legislative Council.

APPENDIX I.

[Vide answer to question No. 554 asked by Mr. K. A. Nachiyappa Gounder at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on the 26th January 1935, page 533 supra.]

G.O. No. 2884, P.H., dated 17th December 1934.

In exercise of the power conferred by sub-section (3) of section 67 of the Madras Local Boards Act, 1920, as amended, the Local Government hereby fix the following designations, and grades of, and the scales of salaries and allowances payable to, officers and servants in the public health establishments under the control of district boards in this Presidency:—

Woman Medical Officer (Maternity and Child Welfare).	Rs. 85—5 (biennial)—150
Health Visitor (Maternity and Child Welfare).	Rs. 50—5 (biennial)—100 .. plus a fixed travelling allowance of Rs. 20 per mensem.
Midwife (Maternity and Child Welfare).	Rs. 25—1 (biennial)—35 .. plus a fixed allowance of Rs. 5 per mensem.
Sanitary Inspector	Rs. 55—5 (biennial)—110 ..	Sanitary Inspectors will be allowed to draw fixed travelling allowance of Rs. 22 per mensem each in cases where their jurisdiction corresponds to that of Health Inspector. In other cases they will be paid travelling allowance as per the Madras Travelling Allowance Rules or a conveyance allowance of Rs. 4 per mensem.
Vaccinators—
First class	Rs. 40—2 (biennial)—50 ..	} The proportion of the first to second class vaccinators is fixed at 2:3. Men vaccinators (first and second class) will be allowed to draw a fixed travelling allowance of Rs. 13-4-0 per mensem each and women vaccinators (first and second class) a fixed travelling allowance of Rs. 20 per mensem when they work in rangas. For other journeys all vaccinators (men and women) will draw travelling allowance as per the Madras Travelling Allowance Rules.
Second class	Rs. 25—3 (biennial)—40 ..
Mechanics, drivers, cinema operators and other skilled servants employed for public health purposes.	Pay to be fixed by each district board subject to the condition that in no case it should exceed Rs. 28 per mensem without the special sanction of Government.
Peons	Rs.
	First four years 12
	Next four years 13
	Next five years 14
	Next six years 15
	Next six years 16
Menials paid from contingencies.	To be paid according to market rates subject to a maximum of Rs. 12 each per mensem.

2. Municipal councils are requested to adopt the above designations and grades and scales of salaries for officers and servants in their public health establishments.

3. The incumbents of the existing posts should be appointed to similar posts carrying new scales of pay fixed in paragraph 1 above. If the existing pay of an incumbent conforms to any stage in the new scales of pay, it should be fixed at that stage. If the existing pay of any officer or servant exceeds any stage in the new scale of pay, his pay should be fixed at the next stage below that pay and he should be given personal pay equal to the difference, the personal pay being absorbed in the next increment. If the existing pay exceeds the maximum of the new scales of pay it should be fixed at the maximum. The pay of existing vaccinators on probation with less than two years' service should be fixed at Rs. 25, the minimum of the revised scale of pay of second-class vaccinators, and they should be given personal allowance equal to the difference, if any, between their existing pay and the revised pay, the personal pay being absorbed in the next increments. The presidents of district boards and executive authorities of municipalities are informed that the Government will be prepared to consider the question of granting personal pay to those incumbents whose pay prior to 1st December 1934 exceeded the maximum of the new scales of pay, provided that there is real hardship in such cases and that the local body concerned recommends the grant of personal pay. They are therefore requested to submit to Government as early as possible lists of such cases in each class of public health establishments under their control with full reasons for the grant of personal pay in each case and with the details relating to service in the form appended to G.O. No. 2648, P.H., dated 14th November 1934.

4. The Government direct that in districts where the existing vaccination staff including reserve vaccinators is in a different proportion from that fixed in paragraph 1 above for first and second class vaccinators, the existing proportion should be continued but presidents of district boards and executive authorities of municipalities should fill up vacancies as they arise in such a manner as to reach the proportion fixed by the Government. In districts where the number of first-class vaccinators under a local body exceeds 40 per cent of the strength of the entire vaccination staff, such of the first-class vaccinators as draw a pay less than Rs. 40 per mensem should be continued as second-class vaccinators.

5. The conditions of service of all officers and servants specified in paragraph 1 above in respect of special pay and allowances shall be regulated in accordance with the Madras Special Pay and Allowances Rules and the Madras Travelling Allowance Rules.

6. Besides the officers and servants mentioned in paragraph 1 above, a few district boards employ health propagandists and rural reconstruction supervisors. The Government consider that there is no necessity for their continuance. All presidents of district boards and executive authorities of municipalities are therefore directed to abolish these posts giving the incumbents notice of discharge in accordance with the rules in the matter.

7. These orders will come into force on the 1st January 1935.

8. Separate orders will issue fixing the number of posts and designations of officers and servants referred to in paragraph 1 above.

9. All presidents of district boards and executive authorities of municipal councils are informed that if any officer or servant other than those specified in these orders has to be employed for public health

Certain questions have been raised in regard to the leave concessions, etc., of the re-employed taluk board servants and Government are pleased to issue the following instructions:—

- (i) Such of the ex-taluk board servants as were absorbed in district board establishments in substantive vacancies without any break of service before or after the expiry of the period of notice, will be eligible to count their past service for purposes of leave. The leave salary of these employees will be regulated under Fundamental Rule 87 or in accordance with the Madras Leave Rules, 1933, as the case may be.
- (ii) In the case of ex-taluk board servants who were re-employed without actual discharge but only in an officiating capacity, the service put in by them prior to the date of commencement of their officiating service will not count for leave. They will be treated as having remained without employ during their break in service.

Order—No. 3941, L. & M., dated 5th September 1934.

Under the rule issued in G.O. No. 3614, L. & M., dated 8th September 1932, no officer or servant of a district board entertained in its service on or after the 1st day of April 1932, shall be eligible to be paid any pension from the fund of such board, nor shall any pensionary contribution be paid on his behalf from such fund. order the sanction of Government is necessary for the payment of pensionary contribution in respect of the employees of the late taluk boards who originally held pensionable posts on the 1st April 1932 or immediately before that date and are now in the employment of the District Boards. District Boards are now applying for sanction for the payment of pensionary contribution in respect of such servants. To obviate the necessity of according individual sanction in each case, the Government are pleased to permit all District Boards to pay pensionary contribution in the case of the employees of the late taluk boards who were holding pensionable posts on 1st April 1932 or immediately before that date and who are subsequently employed under the District Boards. The amount of pensionary contribution payable in each case should be settled in consultation with the Accountant-General. It is, however, open to the employees, with the sanction of the District Board concerned, to exchange their pension for the provident fund maintained by the Boards.

OFFICIAL BUSINESS.

II.—MOTION RE REPORT OF THE JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE.

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—" Mr. President, Sir, I rise to move the motion standing in my name, namely,

'that the Report of the Joint Committee on Indian Constitutional Reform be taken into consideration.'

" In making this motion, I should like to state the attitude which the Government have decided to adopt towards this debate. In the first place, the Secretary of State has requested that, as soon as possible after the debate is over, the entire proceedings of this Honourable Council shall be transmitted to him as early as possible by air mail. The Government do not propose to take part in any division which may occur during the course of the debate. But any official Member may, if he thinks fit as occasion arises, participate in the debate. I propose, being in charge of this resolution, to sum up briefly at the end of the debate. Sir, I move the resolution."

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—" I second it."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—" Before I proceed to allow hon. Members to move their amendments, I wish to give the Hon. House an idea with regard to the moving of these amendments and the order in which they have to be moved. I wish first to take up the amendment standing in the name of the Leader of the Opposition, Dr. Subbarayan, then the amendments that have been given notice of by the Justice Party, the Justice Democratic Party and subsequently those standing in the name of the Depressed Classes, the Christians and so on. The time that is allotted for the discussion of this motion is only two days as hon. Members are aware, and the discussion will have to come to a close to-morrow evening. There is no time-limit imposed by the Standing Orders, and so the hon. Members who are given an early opportunity must realize that there are several other Members that want to speak either on the main motion or upon the amendments moved, and they must try to take as little time as possible and leave as much time as possible to the other hon. Members who want to take part in the discussion subsequently. Further, I would like to inform hon. Members that no more amendments will be admitted."

[28th January. 1935]

* Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—" Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the amendment standing in my name, i.e.,

'Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration, this Council is constrained, after full and earnest consideration of the whole situation, to record its opinion that the scheme of the Joint Select Committee for the future constitution of India does not satisfy the aspirations of the people of this country and is unacceptable and that it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution defective though it be, than to be saddled with the constitution proposed under the Report".'

"Mr. President, Sir, I am aware that I am undertaking a great responsibility in moving, as I do at the end of my resolution, that it is better to be saddled with the present Constitution with all its defects than to accept the Constitution recommended by the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee. I am sure, Mr. President, hon. Members will bear with me if I take a little longer time than usual in propounding the proposition that I wish to lay for the consideration of this Hon. House, and I am also sure that hon. Members will bear with me if I go back to past history for a few minutes before we really get to the resolution under consideration. I am sure all hon. Members are aware that the policy of His Majesty's Government with regard to India was announced as far back as the year 1917 by the famous statement Mr. Montague made in reply to a question of Lord Charles Roberts in the House of Commons that year. Hon. Members are aware also of the condition under which this announcement was made. His Majesty's Government were at that time in the grip of the greatest War the world has ever known, and it was announced by Members of His Majesty's Government, specially by the Right Honourable Gentleman who held the office of Prime Minister at the time that Great Britain went to the War in order to safeguard democratic institutions and in order to prevent German Imperialism taking root in the world. India agreeing with these views of His Majesty's Government agreed to co-operate in the waging of the War, and I am sure hon. Members of this House will admit that Indians—it does not matter to what political party they belonged—did help His Majesty's Government in every way that was possible in their power. The Imperial Legislative Council of the day voted a million pounds for the progress of the War, and in the carrying out of the Mesopotamian campaign and also the campaign in Soudan and Egypt; the Indian Government helped in every way that they could with the consent of the representatives of the people in the Imperial and Provincial Legislative Councils. I do not, for a moment, want the House to entertain the idea that Indians gave this help with any ulterior motive of getting Responsible Government, and if Mr. Montague made the declaration in the House of Commons, he did it, I may say, and hon.

28th January 1935] [Dr. P. Subbarayan]

Members will agree with me, because at that time His Majesty's Government felt that if democratic institutions were to be safeguarded, the help of the East, specially the help of India, would be immeasurably wanted in any future struggle which may take place with regard to the safeguarding of democratic institutions. I may also say that the statement was to a great extent influenced by the letter the present Viceroy wrote to the then Prime Minister in the year 1916, and that letter is reproduced in the Fourth Volume of Mr. Lloyd George's 'War Memories,' in which Lord Willingdon pleaded that a generous treatment of Indian aspirations towards Self-Government was absolutely necessary, if the relations between India and England are to go on in the lines in which they have gone on for a long time.

" In this connexion I should like to quote from the speech of Marquis of Zetland made in the House of Lords on the 13th December 1934 during the debate on the very report which we are discussing to-day. This is what the Marquis of Zetland said:—

'I would ask Your Lordships, if you are not prepared to pursue that path, to be prepared to face the consequences of not doing so. I do not doubt that Your Lordships can hold India by force if you consider that worth doing, but I hope Your Lordships will not misconceive either the nature or the extent of the task which would then be yours. In no part of the world have changes in the political and the social outlook of the people been so rapid or so far-reaching as they have been in India in recent years. Let me only give Your Lordships an illustration of that. Who, whether in India or this country, would have believed it if he had been told only a short decade before that in the year 1930 he would have seen Hindu and Muslim ladies sitting at the Council table at Westminster alongside of the Princes from the Native States, delegates from British India and representatives of the three parliamentary parties in this country? Who again would have believed it if he had been told it only a short decade before that a commission composed of the Members of these two Houses would have been declaring, as the Simon Report did declare, that 'the women's movement in India holds the key to progress?' or who again would have believed it if he had been told that in 1934 a committee composed of Members of the two Houses in this country would have been found expressing doubts as to whether the proposal to give the vote to 6 million Indian women was adequate to meet the circumstances of the case? These things indicate a great ferment in the mass psychology of the Indian people; they indicate a great stirring in the still depths of Indian life, which it would be madness for us to ignore. It may be that idealism is a little out of fashion in the affairs of men, yet I hold that politics devoid altogether of idealism are as dry a husk as statecraft uninspired by any spark of imagination. Let us not keep our eyes riveted exclusively on the foreground of the picture; let us lift our gaze and try and picture the consequences of what we are doing to-day. Twenty, fifty or hundred years hence, the historians of those days will be writing the history of these critical times. What is the story that Your Lordships would wish them to tell? Is it this? By a lack of courage, a lack of faith, the people of Great Britain in the year 1935 were responsible for one of the greatest calamities which could befall mankind, the permanent alienation of the peoples of the East from the peoples of the West.'

"I conclude with that as far as that quotation is concerned. Can anyone who has read the Joint Select Committee Report, with all his conscience say that the Constitution, as propounded by the Joint Select Committee, does satisfy the arguments put forward by the Marquis of Zetland in the House of Lords? I say no, for the simple reason that a Constitution if it is to be acceptable to the people of a country ought to satisfy the majority opinion in that country. (Hear, hear.) I know hon. Members of this House will say that the vote which would be cast on my motion will prove whether the majority accept this Constitution or not. I stand on firmer ground than that and that is this: the recent elections to the Legislative Assembly were fought entirely on the proposal of His Majesty's Government as laid down in the White Paper. And I am sure, Mr. President, hon. Members of this House have heard it said that the Constitution, as propounded by the Joint Select Committee, is in some matters even worse than the Constitution proposed by the White Paper. If the elections all over India were held on the question whether the White Paper was acceptable to the voters enfranchised by legislation passed by the Houses of Parliament, and if they deliberately said that this Constitution was not acceptable to them, which proposition, I am sure, no hon. Member in this House can deny, then, Mr. President, I can ask only this question: Is the Constitution that is being proposed for the future Government of India acceptable to the majority of the electors, not only of this province, but of the whole of India? I can emphatically say no to that. If that is so, if really the relation between the East and the West is to be one of friendliness, is to be one of co-operation, is to be one of helpfulness in all affairs of the world, then I am sure hon. Members of this House will realize that that can only be done on an agreed Constitution, acceptable not only to His Majesty's Government, but to the vast majority of the people of this country.

"I know that it has been said that the intelligentsia in this country do not represent the mass opinion. I would like to ask, Mr. President, whether the voters of the Legislative Assembly do represent the masses or the intelligentsia of this country. There can be only one answer to that, and that is, that they represent the masses and not the intelligentsia; and as has been often said by politicians in the House of Commons, what the intelligentsia think to-day the masses think to-morrow. And therefore even if you take the opinion of the intelligentsia as one that represents the opinion of this country, the answer has already been given that the Constitution as proposed by the Joint Select Committee is not acceptable.

"Therefore, we are left only with this question, whether it is necessary for this Constitution Act to be passed by the House of Commons in spite of the opposition that has arisen in this great land over this scheme. I know there are hon. Members of this House who think that by tinkering here and tinkering there the Constitution may be made acceptable to the general public. I am sure that in that contention they are talking without their book. As I said, I hope the Hon. House will bear with me if I go a little further back. Hon. Members will remember the appointment of the Simon Commission. There was a great outcry and outburst and even leaders of the party to which the present Ministers belong were vocal in support of the boycott of the Simon Commission, because they felt that His Majesty's Government had insulted the people of India by not appointing a single Indian as a Member of that Commission. At that time I felt that if the co-operation of at least the moderate groups in this country were given, we might get a Constitution which would be acceptable to the people of India. I am afraid we were grossly mistaken in that conception. (Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar: 'Hear, hear.') For, the Simon Commission, instead of producing a reasonable constitution, produced a constitution which was not known to the world at any time; consequently, with one voice, public opinion in India condemned the Report. About that time, Lord Irwin went Home on leave and, while there, consulted His Majesty's Government which had then taken a different complexion from what it was when the Simon Commission was appointed; the Labour Government were in office, and the Labour Party had made so many declarations about self-determination for India that they could not possibly accept the Simon Commission Report without consultation with the Indian people. Therefore, they decided that there should be a Round Table Conference composed of the representatives of India and the representatives of Parliament comprising of the Members of the three great parties in Great Britain. When Lord Irwin returned, in putting forth this idea of the Round Table Conference before the country, he emphatically declared that the meaning of the Declaration of 1917 was really conferment of dominion status on this country. I know it has been asked by several hon. Members, specially those belonging to the European Group, 'Can anybody really say what dominion status means?' In that connexion I would like to quote a speech made by the Rt. Hon. Gentleman, Mr. Winston Churchill in the House of Commons on the India Debate in the year 1931. This occurs at the end of his speech on page 1312 in the Official Report of the House of Commons.

"Therefore, the House will vote upon the words of the amendment:

'Provided that nothing in the said policy shall commit this House to the establishment in India of a Dominion Constitution as defined by the Statute of Westminster, etc.'

"The House will vote upon that for or against the amendment, and hon. Members will consider the implication of voting against. It would mean a reversal of these proposals. If they put it in that way, hon. Members will be able to see what it is they are asked to vote against. If the amendment be defeated, it will still be open to any hon. Member who has voted for it to vote for a general vote of confidence in the Government. There is no inconsistency in that; because any hon. Member may say that he would rather have the Government motion with the amendment, but that if he cannot get it with the amendment, nevertheless he must go on. There is no reason why he should not have a free vote on the amendment, and afterwards a vote of confidence in the Government can be given. The amendment affords the one sure foundation upon which those who take their stand, who believe it is their duty not only to advance the cause of Indian self-government but to uphold the rights of Britain and tell the truth to India.

"There, I think, Mr. Churchill has shown that His Majesty's Government were really not prepared to recognize India as one of the partners in the British Commonwealth, and Mr. Churchill thought that a quotation from the Statute of Westminster would frighten any Member because dominion status, as it was understood at that time, included also the Statute of Westminster. But I do admit that at the present time, with the necessary safeguards which all Indians including the Congressmen have agreed to the Statute of Westminster cannot apply. But when India takes her rightful place among the Dominions of His Majesty, she also will come within the ambit of the Statute of Westminster. And why should Great Britain fight shy of including India within the ambit of that Statute? Do they think that if India is recognized as a Dominion she will assert her independence and will secede from the British Commonwealth? I do not think anybody need be afraid of that. I am sure hon. Members have heard of the Independence Movement in South Africa by which the South African Nationalist Party led by General Hertzog declared that their ambition was to be a South African Republic independent of British connexion. Now, however, it would be conceded that in spite of the passage of the Statute of Westminster they are willing to remain within the great Commonwealth, because remaining within the Commonwealth carries with it more advantages than disadvantages.

11-30
a.m.

"I, for one, hope that we, Indians, will always feel that it is better to remain within the British Commonwealth of Nations than go outside. I am sure, if Great Britain treats us in a generous way in the matter of the present Constitution, no time will come when talks of separation will arise. But, as the amendment given notice of by my hon. Friend, Mr. Ari Gowder, points out, if really India is not treated in a generous manner in the matter of the present Constitution, the movement for separation will grow only stronger. It has been said repeatedly that if the Irish situation is difficult to-day as every one will agree, it is due to the fact that the Government treated Ireland in a niggardly fashion and did not give the constitution the Irishmen wanted, at the time, for being a contended partner of the British Commonwealth. I am sure hon. Members who represent British interests in this House will realize that if they do not join us to-day in asking from Great Britain a more satisfactory Constitution than the one propounded in the Report of the Joint Select Committee, a time might come when they would have to forget the existence of this country altogether. I am sure again that they will agree with me when I say that, neither I nor they desire a time when the feelings between India and England would be such that it would be impossible for Indians and Europeans to live in this country as peaceful citizens.

"From that, Mr. President, I wish to go to the wording of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact of the year 1931. It is said in paragraph 2 of that agreement:—'As regards constitutional questions, the scope of future discussions is stated, with the assent of His Majesty's Government, to be with the object of considering further the scheme for the constitutional Government of India discussed at the Round Table Conference. Of the scheme there outlined, Federation is an essential part; so also are Indian Responsibility and Reservations or Safeguards in the interests of India on such matters as for instance, Defence, External Affairs, the Position of Minorities, the Financial Credit of India and the Discharge of Obligations.'

28th January 1935]. [Dr. P. Subbarayan]

"It will be seen, Mr. President, that by that Pact, Lord Irwin, the then Viceroy, did commit His Majesty's Government to a future constitution for India which would be based on the principles expressed therein. But do the proposals of the Joint Select Committee really carry out the pledge given under that Pact? If we examine the proposals, I am sure, we will realize that they do not.

"No doubt, we have Federation; but in that connexion we should remember what the present Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs said in the House of Commons during the India Debate. He said that unless 50 per cent of the States possessing the required population and voting power come into the new Federal Constitution, there is to be no Federation. The present Government of India, as it now exists, ought to go on in its irresponsible way, although His Majesty's Government and the Joint Select Committee in their Report point out that a strong Centre is necessary if the Government in India is to be carried on successfully and that that strong Centre will come only if Central Responsibility is conceded. I should like to ask for a moment hon. Members who represent His Majesty's Government in this House, whether the fact that sufficient number of States do not come in and a Federal Centre with responsibility does not come into being, would make the present Central Government a strong one to control the new autonomous self-governing provinces. If it is granted that you do want a strong Centre and if it is granted that a strong Centre would only be supplied by means of having a responsible Ministry at the Centre, how does it follow that if sufficient number of States do not come into the proposed Federation, the present Government, as it exists to-day, will be a strong enough Centre? That is a contradiction which I am not in a position to explain, because, I am not aware of the intentions of His Majesty's Government. Hon. Members on the other side of the House may be in a better position than I am to explain this dilemma. There are Indian gentlemen to-day occupying the responsible position of Members of His Excellency the Governor's Executive Council. I would like to ask them, Mr. President, what their own feelings are in the matter of the proposed Constitution. (Mr. U. C. Subrahmanya Bhatt: 'Hear, hear.') I know that by the statement made by the Hon. Gentleman, the Revenue Member, the Government are not going to take part in this division, but I do not think that that statement implies that the Hon. Gentlemen who occupy the exalted position of Members of His Excellency the Governor's Council are thereby restrained from saying what they feel on the matter. I would like to quote them an illustrious example . . ."

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"On a point of order, Sir."

* Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—"I do not think there is any point of order in that. I refuse to yield."

"Mr. President, in this connexion I would like to quote as an example to the Hon. Gentleman who just now got up in a hurry without any point of order, the example of Sir Sikhandar Hayat Khan who some time ago occupied as Member the same position as my Hon. Friend occupies here to-day, in the Council of the Governor of the Punjab. This is what he said:

'Great Britain does not know what she is doing, and if ever she is forced to do anything, she does it in such a niggardly fashion that she neither satisfies the one nor the other.'

"That is the position in which His Majesty's Government are placed to-day. They do not openly say that they want to carry their Conservative Wing with them and satisfy them to the extent that nothing is being done in India as to call India a lost Dominion. At the same time they say to the Indian public at large that they are doing something; they are making a Constitution for the future self-government of India which is going to make Indians responsible for their own Government. I am sure, His Majesty's Government would do better if they make up their minds whether they are going to placate the Conservative Opposition at Home or to placate the strong middle opinion which they talk of in this country. Have they to any extent satisfied the middle opinion in this country? I am sure the quotation that I am about to make will prove that they have not. This quotation is not from the proceedings of the Congress, Mr. President, nor is it from the proceedings of any body allied to the Congress. This quotation is from the proceedings of the National Liberal Federation from an article written by one of the leading Members of the National Liberal Federation—a gentleman on whom His Majesty's Government thought fit to confer the honour of being a Member of His Majesty's Privy Council, the Right Honourable Mr. V. S. Srinivasa Sastri. He compared the present Constitution to a fire or a flood and thereby explains what the feelings of this country would be if this Constitution is forced on this land in spite of all the opposition that is made to it. This is what he says:

'No one would claim authorship of a fire or a flood. We may pray against it; we may mitigate its evil; but we have to submit to it. The tyrannous use made by the Conservative Party of their power gives the comparison much point.'

"Sir, this is what the Liberals, who are supposed to represent middle opinion in this country, think of the present Constitution. They compare it to a flood or a fire and, of course, as they themselves point out, we must attempt to evade the flood or put out the fire. But in spite of it, if it does happen, we must suffer. As reasonable men, however, it is open to us to say what should be done if really the Constitution is to be worked. With that in view, Mr. President, I hope, in the short time that is available to me—I know I have taken longer than you said I ought to, but I am sure the occasion is such that my hon. Friends will bear with me if I take a little longer time—to make some criticism of the Report.

"Sir, we shall go now to the Report of the Committee itself. As I have said, there is no mention of Dominion Status either in the Report of the Committee or in the Bill which is said to have been published. As I said before, Mr. President, if really the outcome of the Indian Constitutional proposals ought to be the attainment of Dominion Status as explained by Lord Irwin, now Lord Halifax, in the year 1931, His Majesty's Government need not fight shy of introducing those two words in the Constitution as propounded to-day.

"Sir, it has been said that the Government of India Act of 1919 is repealed by the present Bill. It is also said that the Preamble to the Government of India Act still remains. How, Mr. President? It is said that the Preamble is not being repeated in the present Bill. I do not know if this is so. I have not seen the Bill. But if it is not being repeated, what is the meaning of it? All the same, the representatives of His Majesty's Government say that the Preamble remains. In what position? Just because it is found in one Act of Parliament and not repeated in the present Act, does it mean that the Preamble remains? If His Majesty's Government would realize all the fight that has been made during the past 18 years since the announcement of the intention of His Majesty's Government in the year 1917, it ought not to lie in the lips of the representatives of His Majesty's Government to say that Parliament alone should be the arbiter of the future destinies of India.

"In this connexion, Mr. President, I would like to remind hon. Members of this House how the Constitutions of the three great Dominions were brought about: that of Canada, of Australia and of South Africa. All these three Constitutions were made not by His Majesty's Government, except for the fact that those Constitution Acts were passed through His Majesty's Parliament, but by agreement between the representatives of the people of Canada, of the people of Australia and of the people of South Africa.

"I would like to ask, Mr. President, why we alone are treated in this way. I know it may be said 'we brought you to a Conference in London, and you could not agree among yourselves and therefore we have imposed this Constitution on you,' Mr. President, I would like to ask whom did you bring to London? (Mr. W. K. M. Langley: 'Mr. Gandhi') My hon. Friend Mr. Langley shouts 'Mr. Gandhi.' He has forgotten that Mr. Gandhi did not attend the First Round Table Conference. When Mr. Gandhi attended the Round Table Conference in 1931 he did so by the Irwin-Gandhi agreement which is now given the go-by. Mr. President, who are these people? Were they selected by any representatives of the people of this country? They were selected by His Majesty's Government. Was that the case in the case of Canada, Australia and South Africa? In those cases they were representatives of the people. If His Majesty's Government had taken the trouble to hold an election at the time to the various Councils and if they had said that representatives from those Councils would be elected for the framing of the future constitution of India, I am sure we would have had a different story than we are having to-day (Hear, hear). I know, and be it said to our discredit, that on the problem of representation of minority communities our own representatives, in spite of all the drawbacks of their not representing anybody on the Round Table Conference, were not able to come to an agreement, and even the personality of Mr. Gandhi in the year 1931 was not able to achieve it. My hon. Friend who occupies the exalted position of Membership of His Excellency the Governor's Council cries that we have made it worse. What I would like to ask him is what contribution he made towards the solution of the minority question (Hear, hear). Be it said to our shame that we were not able to come to an agreement (Hear, hear). The hon. Gentleman opposite cries 'hear, hear.' I wish him a welcome to that. I am sure no Member of this House is disputing His Majesty's Government's award on the communal problem though there are some outsiders who do so. I for one do not want to dispute for a moment the Communal Award. With this award, accepted by us, I wish His Majesty's Government would give us a Constitution which would be acceptable to the people and which would make us practically autonomous except in the case of safeguards mentioned in the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee and the White Paper because to me it appears that in the matter of defence and in the matter of foreign affairs we may not at present be in a position to undertake the responsibility. Why should not the Legislatures in India be allowed to carry on the Government of this country untrammelled by the great number of safeguards that have been proposed? I think it is the Right Hon. Gentleman the present Lord President of the Council, Mr. Baldwin, who said that no safeguards are going to get good feelings between England and India. It is merely goodwill which can bring about good relations between these two countries. If that is the opinion of a responsible Member of the British Government, as the Lord President of the Council—he is the leader of the largest party that forms the National Government to-day—I would like to ask through this House, His Majesty's Government, why not be generous, why not place confidence in the future representatives in this House and in the Central Assembly for governing in such a way as to make it possible for India to bring about Dominion Status which would be accepted by His Majesty's Government. It was said even in the Report of the Simon Commission that there should be no further enquiries and that any future Constitution which has to be adumbrated for India should contain within itself seeds of growth. Does the Constitution propounded in this report to-day contain within itself the seeds of growth? I certainly think it does not, for the simple reason that even the coming Federation in spite of its being included in a single Act cannot come except by a vote of both the Houses of Parliament. Then, Orders in Council are to be issued by which the Federation will become an accomplished fact. So the seeds of growth lie not in the opinion of the people of India but in the opinion of the Members of the House of Commons and the House of Lords. Therefore where are the seeds of growth? The seeds of growth do not lie in India, but in England. My proposition will prove that His Majesty's Government are treating India not as partners in the great Commonwealth, but as some one with a begging bowl and they are prepared to give him just whatever it pleases them to give and what they think he reserves. We are really placed in the position of those who are to go before His Majesty's House of Commons and House of Lords to get a little clarity. It is that position that Indians do not want. We want to be placed in a position with these safeguards included by which in course of time we shall be able to control our own affairs as a partner in the British Commonwealth and as a partner who would be prepared, in the words of Mr. Isaac Foot as he broadcast them, to stand for democratic ideals, to stand for the world being brought up in the ideals of democracy and not in ideals of dictatorship or any single man's rule. If that is the opinion of the people of Great Britain, then I would like to ask them through this House whether they are not prepared to treat India in a generous way. Even though we may not agree with the sentiments of the Marquis of Salisbury, I think some of his views with regard to indirect election and the present position of the Legislatures really point out what constitution the proposed one is. He points out that a Legislature elected by communal compromise and by indirect election cannot really be a body which can control the important subjects that would come before the Minister in the Central Government. I agree to that proposition, but I do not agree with his conclusions. His conclusions are 'therefore do not give India central responsibility.' My conclusions on the other hand are 'Give Central Responsibility' but not on the basis you want to give India Central Responsibility. I think the question of indirect election has been sufficiently dealt with in the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy made the other day to the newly elected Legislative Assembly. Therein he says he himself and his Government are agreed that the method of indirect election proposed by the Joint Select Committee does not really carry out the intentions of the Government of India but at the same time he pleads that we should take the constitution as it stands and work it in such a way as to prove that we are prepared to get more. I cannot agree with that contention. We do not want it to be said that we are a group of school children and it is by our behaviour and conduct in the school that we are going to get more. It is that which has caused discontent during the last seventeen years and it is that which we do not want any more. If we say that the constitution is not acceptable, it is because the general mass of Indian people feel that the constitution acceptable to the people of India can only come if the people of India have any say in the framing of the constitution. If for instance His Majesty's Government or the Joint Select Committee, to-day, were prepared to accept the proposals of the British Indian Delegation, there would be a possibility of India accepting the present Constitution. It may be asked why do you state that the Constitution is unacceptable to you instead of demanding improvements in it. It is because we have pleaded and this very House passed a resolution on the White Paper saying that if the amendments suggested by the British Indian Delegation were accepted, this House would be prepared to work the Reforms. What has been the effect of this resolution? None. The Hon. Gentleman the Revenue Member said that the Secretary of State for India is very anxious to get the report of the present debate. What for I would like to ask His Majesty's Government through the Hon. Gentleman the Revenue Member? Is it to be treated in the same way as the debate on the White Paper was treated the other day? That debate was no doubt, I am sure, sent to the Secretary of State but with what effect? The effect of the present debate is going to be the same. You may communicate resolutions, you may communicate debates, you may communicate the fervent cry of the people of India to assert themselves, and you may communicate the idealism that exists in them, but with what results? The result would be the same. We can compare how the thing has gone on.

28th January 1935] [Dr. P. Subbarayan]

12 noon.

"In the year 1931, after the first Round Table Conference people did really feel that His Majesty's Government were going to confer a constitution on this country which would be acceptable to the people of this country and which would satisfy the aspirations of the people of this country. What happened? Nothing. The second Round Table Conference was held with Mr. Gandhi at it and what happened? No doubt the second Round Table Conference began with a blaze of trumpets and they said, 'Now that the Congress has co-operated, we are really going to get a constitution which would be acceptable to the people of India.' But something happened during that time which people did not realize. The National Government came into power and the whole policy of His Majesty's Government changed as day changes into night. The present Prime Minister was full of enthusiasm, was full of idealism and re-asserted that the policy of His Majesty's National Government was the same with regard to India as that of the Labour Government of which he was the head. But what has really happened? Since the National Government came into power, the idea of an agreed constitution has receded farther and farther. In fact, the coming into office of the National Government was really the cause of the breakdown of the second Round Table Conference. I know, that through the intervention of that great statesman of the Empire, General Smuts, the Conference was saved. Was saved in what way? From being a debacle. At the same time, His Majesty's Government had their way. They closed down the Conference. They made it impossible for any agreed settlement and went on with their own scheme. Their own scheme is really put forward in the Joint Select Committee Report. The Conservative opposition towards any responsible Government in India became greater and greater and I am sure hon. Members of this House would agree with me when I say that His Majesty's Government instead of keeping to the even path of their pledges and promises, have succumbed to the hostility of their conservative supporters and have given India not bread which she asked for but stone. (Cheers.)"

* Diwan Bahadur T. A. RAMALINGAM CHETTIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, in seconding the resolution which has just been moved, I wish to say at the outset that the main defect about the proposals that are made for constitutional reform at the present moment is that they have not been made with the consent of the people concerned. As has been pointed out by the hon. Mover himself, when constitutions were framed for the people of other countries, the representatives of the people were called together and on their agreement alone constitutions were framed. But in our case, the first enquiry was made by a Commission consisting of representatives of the Houses of Parliament in England without a single Indian on it. Subsequently, to satisfy the Indian sentiment, a number of people were invited by the Governments of the day, but not one of these people was a representative sent as such by the people. They were only nominees of the Governments of the time and they were consulted in framing the constitution.

"Sir, it has been asked several times in England whether there is an alternative scheme to the one that has been proposed, and whether anybody can put it forward. But everyone who felt any responsibility in the matter felt handicapped, because certain proposals had been made and certain persons had made themselves responsible for those proposals. Suddenly this idea of Federation was sprung on the Round Table Conference and on the people of India at a time when nobody thought that the proposal was coming forward. When progress was made in the matter so expeditiously in the Round Table Conference, it was really very difficult for anybody either here in India or elsewhere to make a proposal for an alternative constitution. So many people were concerned. The idea itself progressed with the result that anybody who had any alternative proposal to make felt that he was in a difficult position. That was the reason why people like me who felt from the beginning that the proposals that were made were not going to be beneficial to the country could not come forward with alternative proposals. That was the difficulty. If a real assembly of elected men had been called to consider and frame a new constitution and make proposals of their own, things would have been quite different. The present proposals for Federation would not satisfy anybody. A number of autocratic States and a number of responsible provinces are to come together to form a Federation. Such a thing is impossible. Not only that, the representatives of the heads of the States who are responsible to nobody are to have the same voice in matters relating to British India as the representatives of British India themselves. Not only that, any legislation that will be passed will not bind the States while the representatives of these autocratic princes will take part in framing legislation for British India. Such a state of things is impracticable. It will not last very long. Sooner or later there will be a breakdown. I do not think any self-respecting Indian in British India would tolerate an arrangement under which the people who would not be affected by any legislation that may be passed will be given a voice in passing that legislation. The representatives of the Indian States will be responsible Ministers also, but for what will they be responsible? For the administration of British India and not for the administration of the Indian States. I ask, Sir, is a constitution like that workable? On the other hand, Sir, the proposal made by the Simon Commission was much better. If British India was treated as a separate unit with a constitution framed for it separately and if after that, for the purpose of common matters a Federation was proposed between British India and such of the Indian States as were prepared to join the Federation, that would have been a more satisfactory solution of the problem.

[Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar] [28th January 1935]

Therefore on this matter, it would be better if we went back to the proposals of the Simon Commission instead of sticking to the arrangement which was sprung on us at the First Round Table Conference.

"Throughout the Report and throughout the discussions they have been always pinning their faith to what is obtaining in Britain, namely, the Party system of Government obtaining in the British Houses of Parliament. These are the things they have been swearing by. Everything has been tested by that standard. Here again, those of us who think differently are handicapped. Because of our up-bringing and of our education, we have always been taught to look to the British Constitution as the model and as the final work in constitution making. Not only that, everybody who makes any proposal bases it only on the British Constitution. Such a thing is foreign to the spirit of our country. I do not think the Party System was ever a permanent state of things here in India. We have been always thinking of going together and not of dividing. If we study our history with any benefit, we will find that we have been always thinking of appointing the best men as a panchayat. We have been always putting the best men at the head of affairs. That has been the idea, but now we are trying to create divisions, create parties where they may not be necessary. Then, Sir, as regards the formation of parties, what are the materials on which these have to be formed? So far as the past is concerned, it does not give us any clue as regards the reason for this formation of parties. Especially in the provincial sphere where several departments are administered by Ministers, there is very little chance of a Party System. In most matters, it will be a question of individuals rather than of parties. Such being the case, is it necessary to import into India the whole arrangement of the Party system, the principle of joint responsibility and so on? All these are matters which a Constituent Assembly of the representatives of the people should consider. That seems to be a matter which is worth considering. If any alternative scheme has not been placed before the Government, the reason is not that no such alternative scheme is possible, but that on account of the way in which things have been arranged by the Government, it was not possible to make alternative proposals which would receive as much attention as is necessary and be considered seriously. The Englishman believes in his constitution. He thinks he has done the best in the world. Here in India we have been taught to believe that the British Constitution is the last word in constitution-making. With that handicap and with the proposals that have been made already and considered from time to time; and with the progress that has been made, it was not possible to put forward an alternative scheme.

"Now let us take the scheme proposed and test it even in the light of the principles which we have gathered from the British Constitution. I am not a person who wants a mere form of Government; the form of Government may be this or that. I do not mind. But what is the real power that we have got? What is the position of the masses and people of the country under the new constitution? More than anything else it is the economic position that counts—whether the people will have enough bread to eat, whether they will have any profession to follow, whether there is any room for improving their standard of life. These things are more important than mere forms of Government. I am sorry to say that the safeguards with reference to commercial discrimination, reservation with reference to the power of the Indian Government to make trade treaties with other countries and similar things will certainly handicap the Indian ryot as well as the Indian manufacturer. In the result there will be very little scope for the development of Indian industries. Then there is the question which has been agitating the minds of many of us, namely, the undertaking by the Government of certain industries, even big industries and the initiation and helping of others. What will happen to such ventures hereafter? If it is said that British imports should not be affected and that British traders should be considered in the same light as Indian traders, what will happen to Indian industries? Will there be any chance of our succeeding against this British trader and the British manufacture? I will only remind hon. Members of what took place in this very Council two or three years ago. There was a protest from the European merchants that the Government was competing with them in their soap manufacture at Calicut and in their Jail manufactures. If they protested even against such small things, what would happen if the Government were to plan a huge industrial programme for the country? These are the handicaps and I do not think the country can make any progress so long as they are there. Under the constitution proposed, persons who have no concern with British India will be the legislators and administrators of British India. We will be handicapped in matters like the improvement of our trade and industries. We have very little voice in the spending of most of the money in the hands of the Imperial Government and the Provincial Governments, because most of it will be non-votable. For these reasons, I object to the constitution now proposed and I do not think it will be acceptable to the people.

"Coming to the Provinces, it is claimed that the proposals make a very large change. What is the position, Sir? Nominally it may be that the four Hon. Members on the front bench opposite will cease to exist and four elected Members of the Council will take their places. But what about their powers? In the first place, so far as finance is concerned, more items are going to be non-votable. Already many of us have felt at the time of the discussion of the budget, the difficulty of non-votable items coming in everywhere. Now more than before, such difficulties will come in because there will be a very large addition to the non-votable items. Not only that, Sir. One of the complaints we have been making from the beginning is that the pay that is given to the officers is very high, absolutely very high; taking into consideration the poverty of the country it is something very deplorable. What does the Joint Select Committee Report say? The pay should be fixed in such a manner that it will attract decent people from England,

[Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar] [28th January 1935]

That means to say, you cannot reduce the present rates of pay; because, the complaint from the Europeans is that even the present salary is not sufficient and they are asking for more allowances, more privileges, etc. If that is the position now, what will be the position under the new constitution? You cannot reduce the salary below the standard required by the European. That is the direct statement made in the report. Not only that, Sir. Almost at every stage it is said that there will have to be a large element of British recruits in every service. It is contemplated that the Governor will be responsible to see that the percentage of European recruitment is not reduced. Even though the recruitment is going to be made in India, for most of the services, it is recommended that it is necessary to get sufficient number of recruits from England also for every service through the High Commissioner. This is going to be a matter of course and not an exceptional case as hitherto. Then what is to be our position later on? People are believing that the moment there is responsible Government, we will reduce the cost of running the Government—by reducing the pay of highly-paid officers—and save money for ameliorative purposes; that will not be the case; there is no room for that; even if we are going to have additional establishment, it should be on the same basis, on the same scales of pay, allowances, etc. That is the position. Not only that, Sir. At the present moment at least, the Members of the Government including the Ministers have got the right of posting either Provincial Officers or Imperial Officers, of making remarks about their work and even of censuring them. But the Select Committee Report says that even the posting is to be done with the concurrence of the Governor; nothing more derogatory to the position of the Ministers is needed. Suppose the Minister is thinking of a certain policy and of a certain person to carry it out; the Governor's Secretary, as he is to be called hereafter, thinks otherwise; he does not agree with the Minister and his policy; he does not want to help the Minister and he thrusts his man; that is possible under the constitution as proposed; he would not help the Minister but will set at naught the Minister's suggestions. With regard to the allowances, with regard to pay, with regard to everything else, it is only the Governor who has to decide. They will be of course called responsible Ministers hereafter, but they will have no responsibility at all with reference to such matters. With reference to the appropriation of revenue also, the arrangements that are proposed for the Provinces include, as I have already stated, a number of new items which are non-votable. That takes away the major portion of this revenue of the Province which can be used for ameliorative purposes which have been clamouring for attention so long, things like elementary education, development of agriculture, development of sanitation, etc. What is to happen to them?

"The ryotwari landholders have been groaning under the taxes. Even at a time like this when there is so much depression, the Government are thinking of raising the taxes on lands by way of resettlement; not only by resettlement but also by reclassification of sources, etc. Only yesterday, I came across an instance; a land was reclaimed at a cost of Rs. 600; there was lot of sand on the land on account of floods; it cost the man Rs. 600 to clear the land and it is being cultivated for the last one or two years with dry crop. The Government say, 'you take water for this land and had better pay Rs. 7-8-0 per acre.' Not only that, Sir. He has to pay in addition to Rs. 7-8-0, the dry rate; that comes to Rs. 9 for raising dry crop. That is the sort of thing that is going on. If it is proposed that such a man should be given some relief, the Hon. the Finance Member jumps up and says 'where is the money you are going to find for this.' A considerable portion of your money is spent on the services with the high salaries. Luckily for us, there is no 'Wild Game Preservation Act.' There are such Acts in other Provinces and they are spending money for that purpose also while the ryots are suffering untold miseries on account of the depredations of wild animals. But we have got unproductive expenditure, unwanted expenditure on some of the items I have already referred to. There is the Forest College which has been training one or two boys of our Province in some years and sometimes not even that; still we are incurring an expense of a lakh of rupees on that College. We find that such expenditure is being incurred and it will not be possible to reduce even such expenditure for the purpose of giving necessary relief to landholders who are groaning under the present taxes, under the depression and under the vicissitudes of the monsoon. That is the position in which we find ourselves.

"Then Sir, at the time of the last debate we had on the White Paper, there was no proposal to have a Second Chamber for this Province. But unfortunately the Joint Committee have thought it fit to impose a Second Chamber on this Province also. For what reason, Sir? They do not discuss it; they simply say that the conditions in the United Provinces and Madras are very similar. Since they have proposed a Second Chamber for United Provinces, they say you better have one for Madras also. Not only that, Sir. There was a proposal in the White Paper that at the end of ten years the Council might consider whether a Second Chamber is necessary or not. The Select Committee say, 'oh, no; no such thing.' You had better not consider that point; we in our wisdom think that Madras should have two Chambers for ever. What is the position of the Second Chamber and where is the need for it? It is going to be a small chamber elected with high property qualifications; what is the property qualification is not stated there; eight or ten people are going to be nominated. That also affects the position of the Ministers in another way; the Ministers are to be members of the legislatures, as it is put; if a person is nominated to the Upper Chamber, if he is also nominated as Minister, it will be perfectly valid; we can get round the provision requiring membership of the legislature for the appointment of the Minister. In England when the Prime Minister wants a man, he can raise him to the peerage and that will satisfy the condition; of course it is not said so here; I suppose one of the objects of this nomination and one of the reasons for bringing in the Upper Chamber is to nominate people and bring them as Ministers without violating the letter of the Constitution. Where will responsibility be in such a case? Even the nominal responsibility that is supposed to be given, goes away altogether. I am glad

[Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar] [28th January 1935]

“Not only that, Sir. We know that ordinances can be promulgated by the Imperial Government. Therefore there is no necessity for provincial ordinances. If any emergency arises, it was thought that the Imperial Government, i.e., the Governor-General, will be approached to promulgate the ordinance. Now it is proposed that the Governor also may promulgate ordinances. There is going to be a new set of Acts known as the Governor's Acts. What is the need for them? The Governor is to be subordinate so far as the special responsibilities are concerned to the Governor-General; the Governor can ask the Governor-General to promulgate an ordinance. Where is the difficulty, Sir, to convince the Governor-General of the necessity for an ordinance? Where is the need for this new sort of autocratic action in the Province itself? If at least, in the Provinces, there is no interference like this, there will be at least a show of responsibility in the Provinces. Even in the Province itself, if you have some one who can autocratically pass ordinances and Governor's Acts quite independent of the ordinary administrative action, where is even the show of autonomy and responsibility? If there is really need for such action, I think it is open to the Governor to represent to the Governor-General the necessity for interference in special contingencies and ask for the promulgation of an ordinance. I think it can be done; the Governor is after all subordinate to the Governor-General and the former has only to satisfy the latter with regard to the necessity.

“There is only one other matter I should like to refer to now, namely, the provision that the rules of business are to be made by the Governor. There are rules of business already and it is hoped in the report that they will continue. Under the present rules of business, though the Ministers are supposed to have responsibility for their departments, every paper has to go to the Governor and to be approved by the Governor; therefore the Ministers can do nothing without the Governor's consent even now, even though they are supposed to be responsible under the Constitution. Of course if the Minister persists in his attitude, then the Governor would not press his view. How many Ministers can you find, who will persist and say that their views ought to be accepted, even when the Governor is not agreeable to that proposal? How many are there who will do so? It is said that there will be discussion in all matters and the Governor will try to influence the Minister to accept his point of view. What does it mean? It means you take away the responsibility you are giving. If the Minister feels his real responsibility and exercises it, it will of course be praiseworthy. But will a Minister be strong enough to go against the wishes of the Governor? It is difficult to say that. I do not know what is happening in the other Provinces. In this Province almost every paper goes to the Governor. Even in small matters the Finance Department has to give its approval and it carries the day as against responsible Ministers. If the Governor's Secretary, as the new officer is going to be called, has to look into every paper, and if his advice is going to have more value than that of the Finance Member or Department, what is going to happen?

[28th January 1935] [Mr. T. A. Ramalingam Chettiyar]

“Well, Sir, these are the points which I wanted to mention. Even though it is said in the report that there is going to be responsibility, really in actual working, there will be very little responsibility both as to what can be initiated and what can be done. In the first place, we will have very little finance left after meeting the items which are going to be non-votable. In the second place, there is this idea of putting the services altogether under the Governor without conferring the right of even posting and censure on the responsible Ministers. Thirdly, the second chamber is being imposed on this province, and no reason has been given therefor. For all these reasons I have mentioned, this report is not acceptable to us. After all, if the present constitution continues, we can at least agitate and say: ‘Well, we have been agitating for the last ten years; we want something more satisfactory.’ Once a scheme like this is imposed on us, we cannot ask for a change in the near future. That is a position to which we do not want to commit ourselves. Sir, I would rather be prepared to struggle on under the present constitution than accept the one that is proposed. It is in that spirit, Sir, that I second the motion that has been made.”

* Khan Bahadur YAHYA ALI SAHIB Bahadur:—“Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the amendment that has been tabled by me and some other hon. Members belonging to the Ministerialist Party of this House, viz.—

and on such consideration the Council while accepting the conclusions of the Joint Parliamentary Committee that there should be Provincial Autonomy for British India and that an All-India Federation should be inaugurated as they will end the present system of diarchy in the provinces and irresponsible system of Government at the Centre, and urging that such inauguration should take place at a very early date, feels bound to express its regret that so far from improving on the White Paper proposals, the Report further restricts the scope of responsibility which would be transferred to Indian people both in the Provinces and at the Centre, the Council therefore further urges that to secure goodwill for the working of the new constitution in a peaceful atmosphere, the following changes at least must be made by the Parliament:—

- (1) In view of the very wide apprehensions that have been raised in the country, almost amounting to a feeling of distrust that the pledges given by Royalty and by representatives of the King Emperor and prominent members of the British Cabinet regarding the political goal of India, are being indirectly withdrawn, it should be made clear in the preamble that the ultimate aim of the constitutional progress in this country must be the attainment by India of Dominion Status in the British Commonwealth;

[Mr. Yahya Ali Sahib] [28th January 1935]

- (2) so far as provincial administration is concerned—
- (a) the Joint responsibility of Ministers should be recognized, as that is the only method of preventing disruptive tendencies and creating a sound party system of Government;
 - (b) while recognizing that the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report has accepted the principle that there can be no real 'Responsibility' unless 'Law and Order' are transferred to the control of the Ministers, it is unnecessary to add to the safeguards already enumerated in the White Paper, further restrictions as contained in the paragraphs 92 and 93 of the Report;
 - (c) the Rules of Business and Procedure should be made on the advice of the Ministers and not merely in consultation with them;
 - (d) the power of the Governor to make Ordinances should be limited to cases where he can do so on the advice of the Ministers; in other cases, this power should be vested in the Governor-General;
 - (e) the Governor's Acts should be only of temporary duration and not be permanently on the Statute Book;
 - (f) the very wide discretionary power given to the Governor in relation to the Services will make it impossible for Ministers to carry on the administration particularly as the phrase "legitimate interests" is incapable of any definite meaning;
- (3) with regard to the Federal Centre, the Council urges that at least those suggestions relating to Defence and Commercial safeguards which were put forward in the Memorandum of the British Indian delegates to the Joint Parliamentary Committee may be adopted. The system of Indirect Election to the Federal Assembly is also an alteration of the proposals of the White Paper Scheme for which there is no sufficient justification; and
- (4) the Council is strongly opposed to the proposal contained in paragraph 473 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report empowering the Burma Legislature to enact any discriminating legislation against Indian subjects.

Sir, I need hardly say at the very beginning that this represents the considered opinion of the party to which I have the honour to belong. Before however I deal in detail with the provisions contained in the amendment that I have moved, I would like to make a few observations, with reference to the amendment that has just now been moved by my Hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition.

Sir, that amendment deals first with an expression of opinion, and says, not that it disapproves the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, but on the other hand that it 'does not satisfy the aspirations of the people of this country.' Then the amendment proceeds to say that the report is 'unacceptable' and lastly it says that 'it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution, defective though it be, than to be saddled with the constitution proposed under the Report.' So far as the first portion is concerned, Sir, the House will see that the Ministerialist party to which I belong, like any other politically-minded person in India to-day, agrees in that view. It is very clear that in so far as the main recommendations in the report are concerned, the politically-minded people in India have expressed general disapproval; at all events, they have not been very enthusiastic about the scheme. In saying this, I think I have said the maximum that could be said with reference to this aspect of the question.

"The next portion of the amendment moved by my hon. Friend refers to the report as being 'unacceptable.' Well, Sir, in the country this word has been used in what I would call a loose sense. Some elements have also used the word 'rejection'; and one is at a loss to understand what exactly is connoted by the statement that the report should be rejected or that it should not be accepted. If it involves a mere expression of the same sentiment as is contained in the earlier portion of the amendment, viz., that it does not satisfy the aspirations of the people, it is nothing worth cavilling at; but if it means more than that, and if it conveys the idea that the extremist section in the country will not be prepared to work the scheme when it is placed on the Statute Book, or to discharge the duties and responsibilities which will devolve on the statesmen of the country and the politically-minded people of the country, then I fail to see exactly whether that idea will be implemented by actions to that end. But, so far as I am able to understand, the extremist section has already expressed its intention to accept office and to work from within the legislatures. (Hear, hear.) I therefore feel that the sentiment expressed here of not 'accepting the report' or 'rejecting' it, amounts to nothing but an academic discussion.

"The really objectionable part of the amendment from my point of view and I believe from the point of view of my party is the last portion, where it is said that 'it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution, defective though it be, than to be saddled with the constitution proposed under the report.' I am at a total loss to understand the significance of that portion of the amendment. If it is suggested that the Joint Committee's scheme does not involve any advance whatsoever on the existing state of affairs, I beg leave to say that I do not agree. We have here the assurance of responsibility, perhaps to the fullest extent, being conceded to us in the provincial sphere; practically full self-government, subject to some necessary safeguards which I shall refer to later, is being granted. The franchise is being extended from somewhere about 3 per cent of the population to something like 14 per cent of the population, i.e., about 28 per cent of the adult population of the country. In other words, the number of persons who will exercise their franchise has been raised from three millions to somewhere between 28 and 29 millions. In addition to this, six millions of females are to be enfranchised. So that, the scheme on the whole enfranchises 35 millions of people, and that cannot certainly be described as involving no progress at all. Then again, Sir, there is the wiping out altogether of the official blocks and the Executive Councils. It may be that according to the report, responsibility at the centre is not what one would wish it to be, having regard to the many appeals that have been made to the British people in that respect; but one must admit that there is a certain amount of responsibility granted at the centre over the whole range of Federal subjects, except in the departments of Defence, and External affairs and foreign relations, about which as the Leader of the Opposition Dr. Subbarayan pointed out just now, there must be some control exercised by an authority which is outside the Legislature. Therefore, Sir, it is not correct to say that in regard to all aspects, to some of which I have referred, the Joint Committee scheme is not an advance from the position in which we are now placed.

"Lastly, the amendment says that 'it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution' than to work a scheme of this kind. I submit, Sir, this part of the portion is particularly surprising. My hon. friend himself has worked the Diarchical scheme as Chief Minister, and the Madras Presidency has always been extolled for having worked the system in perhaps as efficient a way as that patchy system could be worked. I may also here refer to the appreciation recorded in the speech of His Excellency the Governor the other day to this Council, that Madras has always worked the Reforms in peace and efficiency. That opinion, I hope, is held elsewhere too, in respect of this province. Having regard to that, I think it is very unfair to say at all events from this province that 'it is better to work the diarchic system' which has been condemned on all hands. I am afraid therefore that we, on this side of the House, cannot accept the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Leader of the Opposition.

"Coming now to my own amendment, Sir, I must at the outset say that while we do recognize that this is a step forward and a good step forward in the direction of conferring certain political rights on the Indian community, we still feel that there are certain defects in the scheme which we on this side consider are such that their rectification will effect a considerable improvement. The very first point that arises in this connexion is the insertion in the constitution act itself of the objective of the political advancement of this country—the incorporation of the expression 'Dominion Status' in the constitution; we regret to note that it has been completely discarded. It is something like a red rag apparently to British statesmen at present. The reasons are perhaps obvious, and I need not dilate upon them. There is however one aspect of it to which I would like to draw pointed attention. It now seems clear that the India Bill is not going to contain a preamble of the kind we find in the Government of India Act of 1919; and the constitutional pandits appear to have stated that the repeal of the Act of 1919 will not amount to a repeal of the preamble and that even though not re-enacted, that preamble would still continue to be in force. But if the constitutional goal of India is to be shrouded in the preamble of a repealed Act, it will be like having it somewhere in the mid air.

"Now, Sir, I wish only to say that having regard to the assurances that we have received from various provincial Governors who have spoken on this question and from various statesmen who have made their pronouncements, one feels somewhat satisfied, but the state of affairs is that the question of Dominion Status as against Independence, has become a live issue in this country. There are certain elements in this country who persist in saying that even Dominion Status will not satisfy the political aspirations of the country and that they would like to have full and complete independence of the kind that has been described rather incoherently here and there, but the moderate elements, the conservative elements in the country, do feel that the insertion of an objective of this kind will at least enable those elements to satisfy themselves that their genuine aspirations are being granted and recognized by the British Government and by the British Parliament. Sir, I wish only to quote what Mr. Churchill said in the year 1921 in his speech that has been adverted to by my hon. Friend, Dr. Subbarayan. There he said 'We owed India that deep debt and we looked forward confidently to the days when the Indian Government and the people of India would have assumed fully and completely their "Dominion Status." When he was asked in the year 1931 whether he did not give that assurance, he said that when he used the expression 'Dominion Status,' he used it in a ceremonial sense; and when giving evidence before the Joint Parliamentary Committee, his attention was again drawn to it, he said that when he was using that expression he was merely talking as politicians often have to do, an agreeable speech upon a festive occasion.' Sir Wardlaw-Milne, the Chairman of the Conservative M.P.'s India Committee, said as follows in the House of Commons: 'No pledge given by any Secretary of State or any Viceroy has any real legal bearing on the matter at all. The only thing that Parliament is really bound by is the Act of 1919.'

"Again, Sir, the Joint Committee itself with reference to this particular point has stated in paragraph 11 of the Report, 'above all, in the Preamble to the Act of 1919, Parliament has set out, finally and definitely, the ultimate aims of British rule in India. Subsequent statements of policy have added nothing to the substance of this declaration, and we think it well to quote it here in full, as settling once and for all the attitude of the British Parliament and people towards the political aspirations of which we have spoken'; and then the Preamble is set out in extenso. Sir, these expressions to my mind are significant if not decisive, I mean the statements 'that it is finally and definitely settled in the Preamble to the Act of 1919 what the ultimate aim of British rule in India is to be, and that it is settling once and for all the attitude of British Parliament.' That being so, having regard to the doubts that have been raised by the British politicians, and which have been referred to by speakers both in the House of Lords and in Commons when this Report was debated upon in the House, it is natural that Indians should have been perturbed. It may be after all, that some statesmen at some future date may rise and say that whatever statesmen may say orally, those statements do not bind them. I am quite aware that His Excellency in his speech the other day said that the British people do not break any pledges and he also referred to a speech made by the Right Hon'ble Mr. Baldwin in the course of the last month. It is no doubt true that such speeches also are being made and in ordinary circumstances I do not think they will be doubted; nor do we throw any doubt on the part of those statesmen that they would make an attempt to break them, but others who try to water it down may take it into their mind and say, these pledges will not be deemed to be binding individually or collectively on the Government. In this view therefore, I think, that some provision should be made in the Act itself declaring that Dominion Status is the objective. It was also suggested that some time-limit should be fixed within which that stage should be achieved. One agrees with the reasoning contained in the well considered, well reasoned and well balanced Report of the Joint Committee with regard to the inconvenience that would arise from the fixation of a regular time-table with reference to the constitutional evolution.

"Then, Sir, coming to the details with regard to provincial administration, the first observation that I wish to make is that the Report is defective, in that it does not seek to bring into existence a system of joint Ministerial Responsibility. Sir, the intention of the British Parliament as well as Joint Committee of both Houses of the British Parliament was to bring into existence a system of Federation with certain amount of Ministerial Responsibility and bring into existence Provincial Autonomous Legislatures with the executive completely and fully responsible to the Legislature. If that is so, and if that is to work effectively, efficiently and satisfactorily, it goes without saying that a system of collective responsibility on the part of the Ministers is absolutely essential. From the very start, such a system should be initiated so as to make it satisfactory. The only argument I find mentioned by the Joint Committee with regard to this aspect of the matter is that it would be confusing between cause and effect. Nobody can by a Statute create a thing which arises as a result of constitutional usage and practice. It will be for the Ministers and by the interaction of certain influences arising from their responsibility to the Legislatures and by the control of the Legislature in turn over their politics, such an institution should come into existence. I quite well realize the force of the contention but after an experiment has been made and the results achieved, we do not want to start over again with the various unsuccessful stages of that experiments, but should proceed from the point that has been reached and base further progress on the foundations of the achievements of the past. One need not go through all the travails of an invention each time when further research is made based on the results of that invention. I therefore think it will be possible for a constitutional genius to be able to devise some means by which a system of joint responsibility, or the collective responsibility of Ministers can come into existence. The disadvantages of the non-existence of such a feature, I submit are very great. Powers that are going to be given to the Governor in the matter of prerogative over the policy of Ministers and his interfering in the details of the administration, both Ministerial and otherwise, are so great that unless there is some sort of provision for cumulative responsibility on the part of the Ministry for their functioning and going out of office together the disadvantages arising out of the non-existence of cabinet solidarity will be very formidable. It will be possible for forces to work so as to set up a single Minister as against the other Ministers and it will be possible for the Legislature itself to be so influenced as to be able to hit against particular Ministers in preference to the other Ministers, and such a situation would be too demoralizing. I therefore think that in the interests of the healthy growth of constitutional usage and practice, it is absolutely essential that a system of joint responsibility should be started even from the very commencement.

"Now, on the question of the transfer of Law and Order, we are genuinely grateful for the Joint Committee for the very forceful argument that they have put forward, that no responsibility can be complete unless there is a devolution to Ministers of the department of Law and Order. That was the conclusion to which the Statutory Commission had come to and I am glad the Joint Committee has really placed the question beyond the pale of controversial politics. In doing so, however, we regret to notice that in paragraph 92 and the following paragraphs up to 96, some additional powers have been given, which were not contemplated in the White Paper. I feel, Sir, as one who has been in some way associated with the working of the department of Law and Order, that in practical working it will not be necessary in any way to implement the administration with the powers that are contemplated here. It is stated that police orders are to be a matter for the protection and sanction of the Governor-General and the Governors and that the Ministers should have no power whatsoever even to get information with regard to anything. The Joint Committee concedes that they trust that the Ministers will not interfere in such matters. But their apprehension is based on the fact that it is likely that the possibility of the Ministers knowing the names of the informants may deter the latter from giving out the information and as such valuable sources of information will dry up. I feel if an informant is otherwise prepared to come forward and give out the information, for fear that a Minister coming to know of it is likely to harm him in the end, he will not feel deterred from divulging that information.

"Then, Sir, there are other matters in regard to which advertance has been made in my motion, but as there are other hon. Members who would like to deal with them, I only wish before concluding to refer to the question of indirect election to the Federal Assembly. Sir,

[Mr. Yahya Ali Sahib] [28th January 1935]

I am aware that in his speech here the other day, His Excellency Lord Erskine was trying to support the proposal made by the Joint Committee. No doubt, the constituencies of the Federal Assembly will be formidable and the contact between the candidate and the constituency is essential and can hardly be established in such huge size constituencies. That perhaps is the only effective argument that has been put forward against direct election. But as against that there are very powerful and cogent arguments which are much more convincing. The establishment of a Federation is primarily calculated to promote and bring into existence a feeling of national solidarity and create a national outlook on the part of every member of that Legislature. That can hardly be secured for the Central Assembly by a system of indirect election. Under the proposed system, the Centre is really going to be nothing but a pale shadow of the Provincial Legislatures. There would be this further difficulty, that in the matter of running the elections, candidates themselves will be in a state of confusion as there will be an admixture of election issues, Central as well as Provincial; and you are aware of the difficulty in the matter of approaching the electorate with a much too complicated system of Provincial and federal problems. Again, with regard to the object that on account of the largeness and size of the electorate it will be difficult for the candidates to approach them, I recall the observation made by His Excellency the Viceroy's Government in a despatch that was sent by them with reference to this matter, where they say that in India with the existing system of caste organization, social activities; ties of professional obligations, the very structure of the village polity—all these organizations and institutions which are in existence themselves, provide the medium through which the elector can and has always come into contact with the electorate and vice versa and they form something like a good substitute for party organizations which are in existence in the West. That is a consideration which the British India Delegation stressed upon and put forward very powerfully. I believe, the Provincial Governments supported it and the Government of India also supported that suggestion; and His Majesty's Government also were in favour of it; and as a matter of fact the Joint Committee of 1919 whose report led to the framing of the Government of India Act, were in favour of the scheme, even though the Southborough Committee did not approve of it. That scheme has worked very well and there was no administrative difficulty whatsoever. In these circumstances, the mere argument that the size of the electorate would be very large, I submit, dwindles into comparative insignificance; and I feel that it will still be possible as the Viceroy himself has referred to it in his speech in the Assembly for the British Parliament to amend the Bill, and we also here, hope that our Government will voice the sentiments of the whole country, which is practically unanimous in this matter, that the system of indirect election to the Federal Assembly is not at all an improvement.

28th January 1935] [Mr. Yahya Ali Sahib]

"As I expect other hon. Members may be anxious to speak I wish to conclude and in so doing, I desire to draw the attention of the House to the concluding paragraph of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report in the first chapter of the Report where they say:

'By general admission, the time has come for Parliament to share its power with those whom for generations it has sought to train in the arts of Government; and, whatever may be the measure of the power thus to be transferred, we are confident that Parliament, in consonance with its own dignity and with the traditions of the British people will make the transfer generously and in no grudging spirit.'

"It is in that spirit of generosity and encouragement I appeal to the Parliament to view the whole question and to grant us the status and the rights, the powers and the controls, the freedom and the emancipation to which the King has referred repeatedly in the proclamations that have been issued which the British statesmen have promised to us in unqualified terms. I hope they will be conceded in the generous and sympathetic spirit in which the Joint Committee has conceived and developed the whole scheme. His Excellency, Lord Erskine, in the course of his address here, said that 'so long as he is in charge of the administration, he will help this Province and it would be his earnest endeavour to assist as far as in him lies the development of the future of the constitution.' In the coming reforms, as they are foreshadowed, arduous responsibilities are placed upon the Governor and it is only with goodwill and generosity, that the Governor would be able to work the reforms to a success. It is therefore refreshing and heartening to see that our provincial Governor has foreshadowed this liberal and generous policy even before the inauguration of the constitution and I trust, Sir, the country will reciprocate those feelings and receive the offer in the same spirit and goodwill and work it in peace and efficiency."

* Diwan Bahadur A. APPADURAI PILLAI:—"Mr. President, Sir, I rise to second the amendment so ably moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Yahya Ali. In the first place, I have got to submit to this House that the Joint Parliamentary Report is a remarkable document which will go down to history as one of the distinct landmarks in the history of Great Britain and India. The clearness of thought and lucidity of expression, the mastery over details discernable on every page of the Report demand nothing but praise from any one who goes through the Report. (A voice: 'Amen'.) The report discloses an ardent desire on the part of the Joint Committee to study first-hand every detail of administration now obtaining in India as also the details on which changes should be effected in order to safeguard the interests of the communities of all castes and creeds that come under the British rule. In fact, I should think that the Report is a very great document marking a distinct advance on the part of India on constitutional lines. There is no denying the fact that the Joint Parliamentary Committee proposes certain restrictions on the reforms that are to be granted to this country, but they are restrictions that ought to be imposed in any new constitution. They are by no means immutable like the laws of Medes and Persians. I hope, Sir, that if they are worked in the spirit in which they are offered, they will adequately meet the legitimate aspirations of the people of this vast country. There is a passage, Sir, in the Report the correctness of which should be admitted by all right-thinking men concerned in the matter of reforms. 'Responsible Government is not an automatic device which can be manufactured to specification.' With the amount of antagonism racial and religious prevailing in this country composed as it is of several communities, it is not possible, Sir, to evolve a scheme that will at once commend itself to all the parties in the country and it will be nothing short of a miracle to bring about such a reform. It will be therefore very necessary for us to move slowly and to move steadily and surely, and these reforms granting provincial autonomy should really be considered as a first instalment to be improved upon as the country progresses in the matter of self-government. It is in that spirit, Sir, as a Member of the Ministerial Party and as a representative of the minor minority community in this House, that I heartily welcome the Joint Parliamentary Committee proposals and undertake to work it to the satisfaction of the people, looking forward for further reforms in the future. Within the framework of the scheme of reforms that has been put forward by the Joint Parliamentary Committee, it is just possible as has been indicated in the amendments that have been put forward by some of the members of my party to effect the necessary amendments in order to create a more peaceful atmosphere and a ready welcome for the reform proposals.

"The first point is the most vexed question of Dominion Status. It has been the subject of clamour both in the press and on the platform that the grant of Dominion Status should be the ultimate goal of India. Unfortunately, Sir, for some reason or other, the expression of Dominion Status has not been mentioned in the Reform proposals. May I refer you, Sir, to one or two occasions from the previous literature, in which this Dominion Status was promised to the people of this country? In 1921 the Duke of Connaught read the King-Emperor's message to the Indian Legislatures stating that they had the beginning of Swaraj within the Empire and the widest scope and ample opportunity for progress to the liberty which the other Dominions enjoyed. In fact, it was stated in the Instrument of Instructions issued shortly thereafter, that the end was 'that British India may attain its true place among our Dominions.' In his memorable closing speech at the First Round Table Conference, the Prime Minister stated 'I hope and I trust and I pray that by our labours together India will possess the only thing which she now lacks to give her the status of a Dominion amongst the British Commonwealth of Nations, what she now lacks for that—the responsibilities and the cares, the burdens and the difficulties, but the pride and honour of responsible Government.' In October 1929 Lord Irwin was authorized on behalf of His Majesty's Government to state clearly that in their judgment it was implicit in the Declaration of 1917, that the natural issue of India's constitutional progress as then contemplated was the attainment of Dominion Status.

[28th January 1935] [Mr. A. Appadurai Pillai]

By these assurances, naturally there is ample justification for one to expect Dominion Status as the ultimate goal of constitutional progress in this country. It is a legitimate claim, Sir, and I have no doubt that when His Majesty's Government become aware of the unanimous verdict in this country in favour of a demand for Dominion Status, they would certainly yield, and grant in the Preamble or by some other means a guarantee that in course of time if the present reforms work to the satisfaction of the people, Dominion Status will follow as a matter of course. That is the reason, Sir, on which this Party has given the amendment: 'In view of the very wide apprehensions that have been raised in the country, almost amounting to a feeling of distrust, it should be made clear in the Preamble that the ultimate aim of the constitutional progress in this country must be the attainment by India of Dominion Status in the British Commonwealth.'

"Mr. Yahya Ali who moved the amendment has already taken some time over this matter and I shall therefore pass on to the second amendment standing in my name: 'So far as provincial administration is concerned—the Joint Responsibility of the Ministers should be recognized as that is the only method of preventing disruptive tendencies and creating a sound party system of Government.' There has been, Sir, a considerable public opinion for the imposition of Joint Responsibility on the part of the Ministers. Under paragraph 92 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's proposals, His Excellency the Governor, when he finds that the Minister is not in a position to discharge the duties entrusted to his care, can step in and dismiss the Minister. To quote a passage from this paragraph 'If the situation is one requiring immediate action, he can issue any executive order which he may consider necessary. If the situation is one which cannot be dealt with by an isolated executive order—if the Minister in charge of the department appears unable to administer his charge on lines which the Governor regards as consistent with the due discharge of his Special Responsibility—the Governor can dismiss and replace the Minister, or, if necessary, the Ministers as a body, with or without resort to a dissolution of the Legislature. It will be a bad day, Sir, when the Governor chooses to dismiss the Minister. It will, in the course of human conduct, not happen. If it ever does and if a Governor is put to the necessity of dismissing the Minister, it must be a condition precedent that that Minister should join hands with the other Ministers and walk out of the Cabinet. That Joint Responsibility is, I submit, absolutely necessary in order to foster any growth or any sense of constitutional Government. If one Minister is sent out of the Cabinet on account of any difference of opinion, the other Members of the Cabinet will remain unaffected. The proposed amendment has put the matter very clearly and I hope that its acceptance will obviate disruptive tendencies in the Cabinet. I would not like to dwell more on this point.

"The next amendment which I would like to support runs as follows: 'While recognizing that the Joint Parliamentary Committee's

[Mr. A. Appadurai Pillai] [28th January 1935]

Report has accepted the principle that there can be no real responsibility unless Law and Order are transferred to the control of the Ministers, it is unnecessary to add to the safeguards already enumerated in the White Paper, further restrictions as contained in the paragraphs 92 and 93 of the Report.' Safeguards are already prescribed in proposal 25 of the White Paper. These are the conditions:—

- (i) the prevention of grave menace to the peace or tranquility of India or of any part thereof;
- (ii) the safeguarding of the financial stability and credit of the Federation;
- (iii) the safeguarding of the legitimate interests of minorities;
- (iv) the securing to the members of the Public Services of any rights provided for them by the constitution and the safeguarding of their legitimate interests;
- (v) the protection of the rights of any Indian State;
- (vi) the prevention of commercial discrimination; and
- (vii) any matter which affects the administration of the Reserved Departments.

1-15 p.m. "These are the seven conditions which would call forth the exercise of special powers on the part of the Governor-General in respect of the Centre, and the same conditions are applicable with reference to the Governors in Provinces. Sir, these conditions seem to be exhaustive, and it seems therefore rather superfluous to have the further restrictions contained in paragraphs 92 and 93 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report which are adverted to in the amendment proposed by this party. As I have just said, Sir, the additional safeguard is provided in the matter of dismissing a Minister and taking charge of the administration in case of a breakdown, and special powers are taken with reference to police rules. It is the opinion of this party that these additional powers are really superfluous considering the enormous powers already vested in the Governor-General and the Governor under the White Paper proposals.

"The fourth amendment proposed by some of the members of this party is with reference to the Rules of Business and Procedure laid down in paragraph 100 of the Report. It is said in the commencement of paragraph 100:

'The White Paper authorizes the Governor, after consultation with his Ministers, to make, at his discretion, any rules which he regards as requisite to regulate the disposal of Government business and the procedure to be observed in its conduct

"This seems to indicate that the Governor will be under no obligation to take the advice of the Ministers but only act on his own responsibility consulting them if he chooses to do so. It will be better to create a feeling of goodwill for the smooth working of the reforms and remove any possible apprehension on the part of the people by providing not merely for consultation with the Ministers but also for the Governor acting on the advice of the Ministers. There is no dispute with regard to the advisability or desirability of reserving powers in the hands of the Governor to frame Rules to regulate Business or Procedure, but what is wanted is that these powers might be exercised on the advice of the Ministers instead of merely in consultation with them.

"The next point referred to in the amendment is the promulgation of Ordinances. It is stated in paragraphs 106 and 108 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report that Governor should have power to pass Ordinances to meet emergencies. It is proposed that this power of passing Ordinances should be exercised on the advice of the Ministers and that in other cases this power should be vested in the Governor-General. Our amendments also state that Governor's Acts contemplated in paragraph 104 of the Report should be only of temporary duration and not be permanently on the Statute Book. It may be that when the existing legal enactments are not found sufficient to carry on the administration at any time or when the administration is in danger of a breakdown, the Governor should have power to enact Acts, but they should not be permanently placed on the Statute Book, as they will necessarily clash with the set of legal enactments passed by the Legislature. This is a legitimate request made by this Party which I am perfectly sure His Majesty's Government will view with consideration in framing the Constitution.

"The next point which I would particularly urge for the consideration of this House is the prohibition about the entry of Indians into Burma. It is stated in paragraph 473 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report that—'It should be competent for the Burma Legislature to enact legislation restricting or imposing conditions of entry into Burma in respect of all persons other than British subjects domiciled in the United Kingdom. We think this is right.'

"This has raised considerable apprehension in the minds of Indians who are now resident in Burma carrying on trade or employed in the various services. A considerable amount of money has been invested by Indians in Burma who have gone and settled there on the understanding that the present conditions will continue. It will be very hard, Sir, now to turn round and tell Indians that their future entry will be prohibited as soon as Burma is separated from India. It is therefore very necessary that His Majesty's Government should take steps to see that this proposal is not put into force. If entry of Indians into Burma is to be prohibited, that will provoke a corresponding disability on the part of Burmans for entering India, and the result will be very far-reaching. Sir, Burma and India have been having trade connexion for a very long time and that connexion was based on mutual good will. If this state of affairs is to be disturbed by the prohibition of the entry of Indians into Burma, a very difficult situation will be brought about which will probably not be to the best advantage of the people of both India and Burma. It is necessary herefore for His Majesty's Government to so modify the proposals as not to impose any such prohibition but to continue the present conditions of Indian entry into Burma undisturbed.

[Mr. A. Appadurai Pillai] [28th January 1935]

"Sir, I do not wish to take up the time of the House any longer by speaking on the remaining amendments and so with these remarks. I have great pleasure in seconding the amendment moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Yahya Ali Sahib."

The House then rose for lunch.

After Lunch (2-30 p.m.)

* Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"Mr. President, I move—

Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration, the House is of opinion—

- (a) that the constitution of a Second Chamber for Madras is quite unnecessary;
- (b) that the safeguards mentioned in paragraphs 94 to 97 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report regarding the Police Rules and Special Branch of the Police are unnecessary;
- (c) that without a clear statement of the goal of India as being one of Responsible Government with Dominion Status to be achieved within a reasonable time, the Report is unacceptable;
- (d) that the House of Assembly in the Federal Legislature should be constituted on a popular basis even with regard to States' representation. The States' subjects should be given power to send their representatives to that House;
- (e) that in regard to British Provinces the system of indirect election proposed by the Committee should be given up and the people in the Provinces should be entitled to elect their representatives directly;
- (f) that the Defence and Foreign Relations should be transferred to the Indian Ministers automatically within a reasonable time without any further reference to the Imperial Parliament;
- (g) that the powers of the Council of State should not be co-equal with the Federal House of Assembly in respect of Taxation and Finance; their power should be limited to approximate to the powers of the House of Lords in England;
- (h) that the Federal Constitution should come into force immediately in regard to British Provinces with such States as are agreeable to join, leaving the other States to join if and when they like; and
- (i) that the safeguards in regard to Commercial discrimination are totally unacceptable. The right of India for full autonomy in her fiscal affairs should be recognized."

"Sir, in moving this amendment, I first want to point out our attitude towards the resolution moved by the Leader of the Opposition, Dr. Subbarayan. No doubt, Sir, in certain matters there is retrogression. For example, at present, the Governor-General has got the power of making ordinances. Under the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, Governors of provinces are to be given this power. In addition to this, Governors can make Acts called Governor's Acts. Again, conventionally the Governor has not got the power of certifying any transferred half subjects whenever we fail to carry out his wishes. But in the present Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, the Governor is given that power. That is another instance of the retrograde policy adopted in the Report. Again Ministers are proposed on the communal basis. Under the present scheme we have not got such communal representation in the Ministry by way of statute. Again, at present, under our provincial Legislative Council there is no excluded area within the province. But the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report excludes certain portions of the province called backward areas from the jurisdiction of the Legislative Council and entrusts them to the control of the Governor himself. Again, Sir, at present we can express our opinion by means of cut motions on the Governor's Bodyguard and such things. But under the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report that power is taken away. These are all things which we have had under the Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms but they are now attempted to be taken away under the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Again, under the present constitution, the Minister's salary can be voted upon, but the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report takes away that valuable power from the hands of the provincial legislature.

"Then, Sir, the Montagu-Chelmsford Report was against communal representation in various groups and they have stated in paragraph 229 as follows:—

'Division by creeds and classes means the creation of political camps organized against each other and teaches men to think as partisans and not as citizens, and it is difficult to see how the change from this system to national representation is ever to occur. The British Government is often accused of dividing men in order to govern them, but if it necessarily divides them at the very moment when it professes to start them on the road to governing themselves, it will find it difficult to meet the charge of being hypocritical or short-sighted.' In paragraph 230 they say 'The communal system stereotypes existing relations.'

"Even the Montagu-Chelmsford Report about 15 years back thought it fit to definitely express their opinion that communalism should not be encouraged. But under the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report as pointed out under the statutory provisions, the ministers are to be selected by way of communal representation.

"No doubt, though we are taken back in certain matters, still I feel that the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report with the proposed modifications may be a forward step. That is the reason why I feel I cannot be a party to accepting that portion of the resolution of Dr. Subbarayan stating 'that it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution, defective though it be, than to be saddled with the constitution proposed under the Report.' If the amendments which I am going to move are accepted, they will certainly constitute a forward step.

[Mr. P. V. Krishnayya Choudari] [28th January 1935]

"Then, as regards the second chamber mentioned in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, even the Simon Report has made no reference to it. That shows that Madras need not be saddled with a second chamber. I do not know what moved the authors of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report to introduce this unnecessary and costly thing in Madras. Already our finances are unable to meet the several items of necessary expenditure, and what little we are going to get by way of taxation should not be frittered away on such a costly experiment. Another reason is, already the present Council consists of members representing various communities. I do not see any necessity for this additional safeguard having regard to the fact that there are already so many safeguards in the Governor's hands.

"Another argument against the second chamber is that the Central Government having to do with several provinces and Native States need to have two chambers, but not the provincial legislature where such subjects do not come within its scope. There is also one other argument against the second chamber. So far as the Council of State is concerned, the voters having the necessary high qualification number about 2,500 or 3,000, and they are given 35 seats. If that voting qualification is going to be adopted for the province it will be a very narrow electorate and will give rise to all sorts of corruption. It is not desirable in the interests of the country that we should have for 100 or 200 voters the privilege of having a member elected for the second chamber. It is most undesirable and undemocratic.

p.m.

"We have not got adult franchise now even for the lower chamber. Hereafter also there is not going to be adult franchise and that being the case those that are now coming to the lower house will be the same persons that will come to the upper house if there is to be one. Even for the present provincial councils the landed aristocracy find no difficulty in getting returned. Though we have some reserved seats for landholders, they are not content with that and they manage to come in through the general constituencies also. When the landed aristocracy for whom the second chamber is intended in the provinces are well represented even in the lower house or the present provincial legislature, there is no need for a second chamber in the provinces at all.

"About indirect elections, Sir, I just want to say a few words. At present, indirect elections are proposed for the Federal Assembly and with this Mr. Yahya Ali agreed in view of the fact that otherwise the constituencies would be too large for one candidate. But the difficulty is that people are now accustomed to have direct elections. Will they be satisfied with the indirect elections if we now try to substitute it for the direct elections? Any way I feel that it is not desirable to take away this power they now enjoy. Under the existing Constitution, the constituency for a seat in the Legislative Assembly consists of three or four districts. Under the proposed scheme roughly one district will constitute an electorate for returning one Member to the Federal Assembly. When that is the case, when each district will hereafter return one Member, how can it be said that the constituencies will hereafter be wider than they are now?

28th January 1935] [Mr. P. V. Krishnayya Choudari]

"Sir, another argument against the indirect election proposed is this: Suppose the Governor-General dissolves the Federal Assembly and asks the local Councils to reconstitute it. Whom will these Councils return? They will very possibly return the same set of Members. Dissolution under such circumstances would be no good. On the other hand, if there is direct election, the composition of the new body would be different. The system of transfer of votes now contemplated will add to the unrepresentative character of the future Federal Assembly. For instance, if a candidate has ten votes, he will get himself elected and this will introduce a lot of corruption. Aristocrats who can command large sums of money would capture these seats and under such circumstances real democracy cannot exist.

"The Federal Assembly, under the scheme, is going to be flooded with a large number of representatives of the States Rulers. They will represent only the Rajas by whom they are nominated. The subjects of the States will have no voice in the selection of these representatives. The scheme thus gives no right to the subjects of these States to elect men to represent them. But the evil does not stop there. The presence of these nominated States' representatives in the Federal Assembly will act as a spoke in the wheel of the representatives of democratic British India. The real voice of the people of India will not thus be heard.

"Sir, at present we have got fiscal autonomy, but that is being taken away. Hereafter statutory form of legislation takes its place. The little fiscal powers that we now have are going to be denied to us hereafter.

"With these few words I commend my amendment to the House and leave my leader, Mr. K. P. Raman Menon, to further explain the object of my motion." (Laughter.)

* Mr. K. P. RAMAN MENON:—"Sir, I have great pleasure in seconding the motion tabled by Mr. Krishnayya Choudari. In doing so, I wish to justify the position taken up by my party with reference to the motion tabled by Dr. Subbarayan. Sir, after mature consideration, we have come to the conclusion that we cannot agree with him in the latter portion of his motion. Sir, so far as it expresses the dissatisfaction of the people of this country and the failure of the Report to satisfy the aspirations of our people, we are in hearty agreement with the sentiments expressed by Dr. Subbarayan. But so far as the latter portion of it is concerned, I am afraid we have to take a different view. No doubt, he reinforced his arguments by saying: 'What about the resolutions we passed when we discussed the White Paper on the floor of this House? Have the persons responsible for the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report in any way altered the White Paper with reference to the decisions arrived at by this Council? If at all they have altered it, they have done so only to the detriment of our country.' That is a very forcible suggestion made by him. No doubt, it appeals to this House and it makes one think that any suggestion that we make on the floor of this House will similarly fall flat. But, as he himself remarked on an earlier occasion when dealing with the White Paper, the task of the British Government having had to reconcile the irreconcilable Conservative Party has also to be kept in mind. We must remember that now also. No doubt, as he expressed it, I have myself very grave doubts as to whether any discussion that we have here in this House will have any material effect on the Members who are going to consider the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report and the Bill that is said to have been introduced in Parliament. Yet, we would be failing in our duty if we say that we do not want anything according to the scheme put forward. We should be justified in so saying only if we are convinced that the proposed scheme is retrograde and not an advance on the present position. Is the proposed scheme retrograde or is it an advance on the present system of Government? Under the new scheme, first of all there is the provision for what are known as Governor's Acts and the Governor's Ordinances. That, no doubt, is a retrograde move. There is then the Governor's right to overrule the Legislative Assembly as we are going to be called hereafter with reference to any decision that we may take on any particular subject. Then there is the provision that we are not to vote the Ministers' salaries and the salaries of certain establishments. Under present conditions, except with reference to reserved subjects, we are entitled to vote and express our views which carry weight. These are points which support the view that the present proposals are retrograde. But there are other provisions which certainly are in advance of the present conditions. First of all there is the tremendous extension of the franchise. Instead of the present very limited electorate we are going to have an extended franchise. Under the new scheme, therefore, the House will be much more representative than at present. Then there is the fact that the financial control, at least in theory, is vested in this House. We have the power to initiate measures of taxation and to allocate the revenues. Then there is the fact that the official block altogether disappears. There are to be no officials at all in the Assembly and they are not to have the vote. These are facts which really are in advance of the present position. I am one of those who think that, notwithstanding the extensive powers vested in His Excellency the Governor, as His Excellency observed very rightly, they are not powers which will be brought into action from day to day, but will be brought into play on occasions when there is a breakdown threatening. A breakdown of the Constitution should at all costs be prevented and these powers are intended for that. So that, taking all in all, I am of opinion that, as a matter of fact, the system adumbrated by the Joint Parliamentary Committee is really an advance on the present system. That is the reason why myself and those who follow me have taken the attitude that though the report is unsatisfactory and fails to satisfy our aspirations, we are not in a position to say that it should be rejected, to borrow the phraseology of some Members or to say in a milder way that it is not acceptable and that we prefer to struggle under the existing conditions.

"Dealing now with the Report itself, I do not subscribe to the view put forward by the Joint Select Committee that there is such a divergence of opinion here and such irreconcilable and conflicting interests that it is impossible to frame a Constitution which will satisfy the aspirations of all Indians. The Joint Parliamentary Committee Report says that there is practically the existence of two civilizations—Hindu and and Muhammadan—with the age-old antagonism facing them, and the distrust of the minority communities and that for these reasons mainly it is not possible to frame a constitution which will be satisfactory to all concerned. Now, with reference to the age-old antagonism, I am afraid I must point out that it is the European mentality that is responsible for exaggerating this. There is considerable difference between the mentality of the Easterners and the mentality of the Westerners. If you look to the history of Europe, from the 13th century onwards you will find religious persecution of an intensive type going on. This went on in France, England, Switzerland, Germany and so on until very recent times. Notwithstanding all this, the different States are carrying on their administration and England in particular had perfected democratic institutions. In the East religious intolerance of the type never took root. You never hear of Mussalmans burning Hindus and vice versa as was the case in Europe as regards conflicting religions. There the Roman Catholics burned the Protestants and the Protestants, when they had the upper hand, retaliated and burned the Roman Catholics. You do not hear anything in the East corresponding to the Sicilian Vespers or the Massacre of St. Bartholomew and incidents like that. India's dual cruelty, no doubt, existed in the East but not in the mass directed against the weaker section of the population.

"We had more tolerance than the western nations. Coming nearer home, during the time both of the Hindu and Muhammadan Rajas, Muhammadan officers were under the employ of Hindu Rajas and vice versa. No feelings of hatred were entertained by one community against the other. There are instances where the Hindus were captains of Muhammadan armies. Coming still nearer home, under the Zamorin of Calicut there were several Moplahs as soldiers. One entire division of his troops consisted of Moplahs. One Kunhalikutti Marakkayar commanded his fleet and even now his tomb Kottakal can be seen and is a place of pilgrimage. If, as a matter of fact, the hand of the British officer is taken away there will be more affinity between the two races. The Muhammadans in South India are all converts from Hindus and I do not think there is one Hindu who bears ill-feeling or hatred against a Muhammadan. They are perhaps people with different cultures and the Muhammadans go to Muhammadan saints and the Hindus to Hindu saints. They are all substantially the same people and not people belonging to divergent races as mentioned in the Joint Select Committee Report. It may be that the British people are suffering from a sort of mental obsession on account of racial antagonism among the European nations themselves, which is stronger in Europe than here. Take the case of modern Germany. There is always antagonism between Germany on the one side and Jugo-Slovakia and Hungary on the other. That antagonism has been going on for the last half a century. As far as I believe it is not possible in India. Then again I put it to you, Sir, if, as a matter of fact, in Canada where the two races, viz., the French and the English now form one homogeneous whole and can be brought under one system of Democratic Government, is it not reasonable that the British Government should be able to find a system of Government which would reconcile the aspirations of Hindus and Muhammadans in India? British statesmanship is not so bankrupt as to be unable to find a solution for this problem. Again take the case of South Africa. Within a few years after the Boer War between the Dutch and the English, a system of Government was established by which the aspirations of both the peoples were satisfied. If British statesmanship can achieve that, I fail to see why they cannot evolve a system of Government in India by which the aspirations of the two great communities, viz., the Hindus and the Muhammadans can be satisfied.

[Mr. K. P. Raman Menon] [28th January 1935]

"Then, again, coming to portions of the Report itself, I submit the Report is unsatisfactory and cannot be accepted. I submit that portions having reference to Provincial Legislatures, are most retrograde and most objectionable so far as I am concerned and people of my way of thinking are concerned. The Report gives enormous powers to the Governor and says that his powers of making ordinances and Acts are similar to the power of certification which exists at present. I fail to see the analogy between the two. Reading through the Report I find that this is the only argument they have advanced for investing the Governor with power to promulgate Acts. I find no analogy between the two. They say that the Governor may pass an Act which, in his opinion, is necessary for the peace and tranquillity of the Province and the Legislative Assembly can move an address to the Governor if they think otherwise. If no such address is presented, it becomes law automatically. Sir, this is not found in any constitution. I challenge whether such a procedure is found in any constitution in any part of the world.

"Now coming to our own Government, ever since the Regulating Act of 1783 was passed, all acts of His Excellency the Governor were Acts of the Governor in Council and all acts of His Excellency the Viceroy were Acts of the Governor-General in Council. The Council before Legislative Councils were set up consisted of the Executive Councillors and others who formed the Council and the Governor and the Governor-General were bound under the constitution to act according to the advice given by the Council. Later, when the Provincial Legislative Council was formed, there were nominated members on it, and they had some voice in the making of laws. Then again, when the Legislative Councils were enlarged and made partially elective, all Acts were Acts of the Governor's Council and it remains so. So, when Executive Councillors give place to Ministers why should not their advice and the advice of the people whom they represent be taken. Is the Council, the Legislative Assembly, not to have the same force when the Governors are advised by the Executive Councillors? I submit there is absolutely no reason mentioned for the procedure to be laid under the proposed Reforms. No doubt it may be said that the Governor will think twice before he passed such an Act. I ask why should there be such a power at all vested in the Governor, a power which is not inherent in him under the present constitution. With reference to the Ordinances I do not very much care about them. They would be in force only for a few months. So there need not be much agitation about this. With regard to the other matter, there is absolutely no justification that such a power should be vested in the Governor.

"Again it is said that financially we have been given extensive powers. It will be seen from the power given to the Governor anything which in his opinion does not conduce to the peace and tranquillity of the Province can be vetoed. On that ground any allotment can be disturbed and any legislation can be vetoed. So also with regard to any acts which concern the minority communities and which affect the peace and good Government of the Province.

"With reference to legislative action, I have already discussed that point. Now with reference to financial action, he can override the financial resolutions of the Council. That is stated on pages 59-60 of the Report. I cannot find any justification for that, so far as Provincial Councils are concerned. I can understand, so far as the Central Government is concerned, that there may be large questions of policy involving defence, external relationship and so on. But so far as we are concerned, the powers given to the Provincial Legislatures and their ambit of enquiry are very limited. We want the Government to be carried on and peace to be observed. Things are done only for the better government of the people. So why should there be any such power vested in the Governor to enable him to override the resolutions that are passed by the Legislative Council?

"Then again, another point on which I should like to touch upon is with reference to the Provincial Legislative Councils being bi-cameral. No reasons have been put forward. The matter was discussed in this Council and it was decided by a large majority that there should be no Second Chamber in this Province. Perhaps it is unnecessary for me to reiterate the arguments that were advanced then. One of the arguments put forward now is that a Second Chamber would act as a check on any hasty legislation. Another reason adduced for the establishment of a Second Chamber was the safeguarding of any special interests which could be affected by any legislation of the lower Chamber. Now does not power vest in the Governor to dissolve the Council if it passes any such legislation which is against the views of the general public, and does not power vest in him to summon a new Council? For the purpose of protecting particular interests and for preventing hasty legislation it is not necessary to have a Second Chamber. Look at the enormous cost that it involves. There must be a President, a Secretary, a Deputy President and all the paraphernalia of the lower house attached to the upper house also. You must have the necessary accommodation and you must have so many things. There will be more money required for all this. Now more money is required for water-supply in villages and for sanitation in the Presidency. Is there any sanitation at all in the Presidency? Even in Madras, is public health good? Is any additional grant made for public health? Are there not one thousand and one avenues which conduce to public good and for which monies can be spent usefully? When such is the case why should we waste money on a Second Chamber? I submit that Second Chambers are luxuries and there is absolutely no necessity for establishing them.

"Dealing with Federal Chambers, I really fail to see how they can be regarded as representative. The Lower House is supposed to consist of 375 members among whom 125 members are to be nominated by Rulers of States. I shall not deny the merits of those people who represent such interests when I say that they are backward in their political culture and their general outlook of life. They are very far behind what obtains in British India. They may not even know what powers the nominated members from the States have in the Assembly. Even when they are elected they will not come to the standard of members here. What can you expect of them a solid block of 125 members who really do not know what they should do.

3-15 p.m. "Recently there was an incident reported in the Mannargudi Municipality. There was an Adi-Dravida member on the municipality. When the voting time came on a particular question, he did not know what to do. He first voted one way and then voted another way. When he was told he should not do like that, he is reported to have said, 'Do not trouble me with these votings and so on.' I read of this incident in the Madras Mail. I submit that the representatives of the Indian States who will be nominated by their sovereigns will be much in the same position as the member mentioned above. They or many of them will not be in a position to understand the real issues that come before the Federal Assembly and tackle them properly. I do not for a moment want to disparage the Rulers of the States, but I really do not think they will be able to find out suitable individuals. I take it for granted that the individuals who will be nominated will be the best available. But even then, they will be far behind the representatives of British India in their political education and they cannot understand the outlook of the people of British India for long years to come.

"Then, Sir, I come to the question of election to the Federal Assembly and the Federal Upper Chamber. When indirect elections are proposed for these bodies, it is a farce to call these bodies representative assemblies. Well, Sir, what is the argument in favour of indirect elections to these bodies? The only argument is that the constituencies would be very large, in some cases as large as Wales and in others practically equal to half of England. Therefore, it is said that it is not possible to have a representative to represent such a large area. If that is so, how can a man elected by the Provincial Legislative Assemblies represent an area which is larger than Wales and half as big as England. The Provincial Assemblies are admittedly smaller bodies. This argument conclusively shows that indirect election is absolutely no good at all. If direct election will not result in a representative assembly, how can indirect election attain that result?

[Mr. K. P. Raman Menon] 28th January 1935]

Again, Sir, direct election has been the rule all these years and we have been used to it. There is also this advantage in direct election, namely, that if the constituency is large there will be less chances of corruption and malpractices during elections. Further, Sir, is there anything in common between the subjects that come up before the Provincial Legislative Assemblies and the subjects that come up before the Federal Legislative Assembly? The lists of subjects are given in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report itself. The subjects that come up before the Federal Chambers are subjects in which the whole of India is interested whereas the subjects that come up before the Provincial Chambers are subjects in which the particular Provinces alone are interested and not other Provinces with few exceptions. Therefore if we resort to indirect election, the persons who are elected by the Provincial Legislative Assemblies will be carrying their parochial views into the Central Legislature and thus hindering and not helping the Government in any way. As a result of the work done by the Indian National Congress during the last 50 years, the people have now an outlook of life which is more national than parochial. If we adopt a system of indirect election, the national outlook that has been so laboriously built up and is vigorously apparent in the present Legislative Assembly will be totally gone and that is a loss which we can hardly make good. I submit, therefore, that indirect election is a farce and it cannot be accepted at all by the people.

"With reference to the respective powers of the Upper and Lower Chambers as described in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, I should say that it will not be possible to work the system, if the two chambers have co-ordinate powers as now proposed. That is another difficulty that will have to be surmounted.

"Then there are various other matters with reference to Defence, External Affairs and Ecclesiastical Affairs. There is also a distinction sought to be made between the Viceroy and the Governor-General. With regard to Defence, it has been pointed out that Indians are not able to defend themselves. Well, Sir, how can they defend themselves, if as a matter of fact, there is no Indian Army? If India is regarded as a training ground for British troops, if British troops are sent down here to hold the people in check—for practically the British Army is an army of occupation—how can you expect an Indian Army? You will have to create an Indian Army and you can create one if you have the will. If you have not got the will, if you look upon India merely as a place where the British troops can have their war-exercises, if the British Army is merely an army of occupation, there is no good of saying that there is no Indian Army to defend India. Stated plainly, you have no confidence in Indians and you want the British Army to be the army of occupation. It would be more honest if you say that, instead of saying that you want to create an Indian army in 25, 50 or 75 years. I should say, Sir, that the whole thing is bunkum—the anxiety which they express to have an Indian army.

[Mr. K. P. Raman Menon] [28th January 1935]

"Again, Sir, with reference to Defence, it is said that expert advice must be had so far as the Government are concerned. But why should Defence be regarded as a secret thing? Why should not Indians be taken into confidence? Why should they not be regarded as being able to keep secrets? As a matter of fact, they are even now bound to keep official secrets whenever they take office. As Members of Council they are bound by oath to keep Cabinet secrets. If an Indian is appointed as Minister in charge of the portfolio of Defence, he is bound by oath to keep the Cabinet secrets. Why then should he not be trusted in regard to this also when he is trusted in regard to various other matters? In pre-British days there have been numerous examples of Indians being in charge of armies and responsible to the head of the State so far as the armies are concerned.

"With reference to External Affairs such as for instance treaties with foreign powers, the Viceroy's voice may prevail. But is there any reason why he should not be advised by Indian Ministers? No reasons have been stated why it should not be done and unless reasons are given why that should not be done, I for one am not prepared to support the proposition that Indians are unfit to handle the portfolio of External Affairs.

"As regards the question of Ecclesiastical Affairs, I do not quarrel with the decision taken by the Committee. So long as we want the British Army and British officers in India, we do not want to meddle with their religious affairs as we do not want them to meddle with our religious affairs. Therefore I have no quarrel with the decision of the Committee on that matter.

"Again, Sir, with reference to commercial treaties and commitments made by India with foreign countries, it is said that these matters will be beyond the scope of the Federal Assembly and the Council of State. As I have stated already, if, as a matter of fact, Indians can be trusted in so many departments of Government, I fail to see why they should not be trusted in this department also. Is it supposed that the moment they are given the power, Indians will pass discriminatory legislation? I certainly think that it is not the right view. We know very well that millions of pounds of British capital have been sunk in enterprises in India and does anyone think that any Indian politician will ever think of sequestering this capital? Does any one think that discrimination would be carried to such an extent with reference to British goods? Even now, notwithstanding all the propaganda which has been made for Swadeshi articles, so many British articles are sold in this country. India takes more of British goods than any other country. India still remains Britain's best customer. Under these circumstances, it is idle to say that there will be commercial discrimination. It is said that these powers should be vested in the Governor in order that he may hold the scales evenly. (Interruption.) Mr. Langley reminds me of the Congress. The Congress no doubt did at a certain stage propose that foreign debts should be repudiated, but they did not say that all foreign debts should be repudiated. What they said was that an impartial tribunal should be appointed to enquire and find out what was borrowed for Indian purposes and what was borrowed for non-Indian purposes. By whom was that tribunal to be set up? By the British Government themselves. And that tribunal should decide what should be done. Is that a strange request? Have not the British Government done the same thing so far as the contributions for the army are concerned? The Government set up a tribunal and they gave an award allocating the army expenses as between India and England? Similarly if another tribunal is set up and they make an award, I do not think that anything that they may do will be unjust to the people who have sunk their money in India.

"Sir, I have two observations more to make with regard to the Federal Legislature. Of course one can go on talking for hours and hours with reference to the various details of the scheme, but as there are so many hon. Members who wish to speak, I do not want to take up the time of the House much longer. I would therefore confine myself to one or two observations. The most disappointing thing is that the words 'Dominion Status' have been studiously omitted. The demand of the country for ever so many years has been that we should be given Dominion Status. It is said that Dominion Status in Canada is not the same as Dominion Status in Australia and that the meaning of the phrase 'Dominion Status' is so very flexible that no one can say what exactly it is. Of course, the phrase is not explained in any particular statute, but I fail to see that there is any very great flexibility so far as the meaning of the phrase goes. We have a clear idea of what is meant by Dominion Status. It is a status similar to that enjoyed by Canada, Australia, South Africa and other members of the Commonwealth. It is the right of the people concerned to govern themselves according to their own will. It is nothing more and nothing less. We do not want to impinge on the authority of other countries—Canada, Australia and South Africa—in dealing with their own affairs. We want to regulate our affairs according to our likes and dislikes and see that the Government of our country is run on lines which are peculiar to us and which are beneficial to us. The studious avoidance of that word has given great offence to India. I still hope that Parliament before it passes the Bill will find some means to introduce that phrase in the Bill. It is said that the Preamble to the Act of 1919 has not been repealed. Whether the Preamble to the 1919 Act is repealed or not, I will leave it for constitutional lawyers to decide.

"Why not say that Dominion Status is our goal? We do not say that we want Dominion Status at once. The amendment simply states that it is our ultimate goal. I for one think that we should ask for Dominion Status at once. That is the goal we aim at. It must be stated that the goal is Dominion Status. The amendment as it stands does not prescribe a time-limit. The goal may be actually reached in ten years or fifteen years; we want it to be stated that that is our ultimate goal. Indians are very very emotional; they want that their goal should be defined; even this very modest request is denied. This omission is most disappointing to the people of this country. I have great pleasure in seconding the amendment."

[28th January 1935]

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—"Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:—

'Add the following at the end:—

"(a) And, on such consideration, this Council is of opinion that the scheme of representation for the Depressed Classes in the legislatures embodied in the Report is injurious and not beneficial to the interests and welfare of the community and therefore requests His Majesty's Government through the Government of India to exempt Madras Province from the operation of the Communal Award as amended by the so-called Poona Pact and to restore the system of representation for the Depressed Classes proposed in the original Premier's Award."

"Before referring to my amendment, I wish, with your permission and the permission of this House, to advert to the remarks that fell from the hon. Leader of the Opposition regarding the proposals contained in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. He stood for the rejection of the proposals. I cannot answer him better than in his own words when he moved the amendment to the White Paper proposals, when they were brought for consideration before this House in March 1933. On that occasion he moved the following amendment:—On such consideration this Council is of opinion that the proposals in the White Paper are not satisfactory and the following alterations at least ought to be made in the Bill to be placed before the Parliament. The view the Leader of the Opposition then expressed was, however defective the proposals of the White Paper are and however much they need modification, that he was prepared to work any Constitution based upon the White Paper. He did not then say that the present Constitution was better than the one proposed in the White Paper. He went further than that and said that 'all hon. Gentlemen in this House will agree that His Majesty's Government have sincerely devoted their attention to solve this vexed problem and they have done the best they can under the conditions that exist to-day.' I wonder if those conditions have transmuted themselves into something better so as to enable him to say that those proposals should be rejected. In another place he quotes Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru in his favour: 'There is no getting away from the fact that the proposals as they stand to-day have sincerely been put forward with a view to satisfy the national aspirations of this country.' Unless the Leader of the Opposition maintains that the Joint Committee Report is entirely different from the proposals contained in the White Paper, it is difficult for me to reconcile the statement he made this morning with that he made on that occasion. Contrary to the view he took then, he wants now that these proposals ought to be rejected; it is a thing which I cannot understand. No doubt the case for rejection which he put forward has been very neatly and almost practically demolished by the able, eloquent and the simple manner in which my hon. Friend for the Muhammadan Constituency for Nellore, etc., Mr. Yahya Ali spoke this morning. I now see that the Leader of the Justice Democratic Party also is of the view that the proposals ought not to be rejected. In answer to Dr. Subbarayan's

[28th January 1935] [Mr. N. Siva Raj]

remarks, I can do no better than quote what the Rt. Hon. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru says on the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report:—

'I am not prepared to endorse the view which has been put forward in certain quarters that the proposed Constitution will make our position worse off than the existing one. I am not able to understand what exactly is meant by the rejection of the scheme, if the idea of rejection is divorced from any idea of non-co-operating with the constitution or refusing to accept responsibility to the extent to which it gives.'

"I am sure that this House will agree that there is no other person who has contributed to the cause of constitutional reform in this country and to the cause of improvement of the reform proposals so much as Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. No one can deny the ability, the character and the courage with which Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru has been tackling all the problems that came up before the Round Table Conference. He is one of those men in the public life of India whose example ought to be emulated by every public man. He does not pander to the taste of the mob; he is a man who does not care for cheap popularity; he is a man who has trained himself to say things with courage and without caring for popularity; he is a man who does not play to the gallery. The opinion of such a gentleman who has devoted most of his time to the study and practice of Constitutional Law, is well worth having on this occasion. He says:—

'We cannot afford to live any longer upon a mere negative policy. When the Constituent Assembly which is said to be the alternative to the present constitution may come into existence, no one knows. Who will call it, on what franchise it will be called what measure of agreement among ourselves is anticipated, and how we are going to get it accepted by British Parliament, unless we are prepared to shut our eyes to the realities of the situation and to ignore the existence of Parliament, are questions which yet await answer. Meanwhile if the foreshadowed constitution is put on the statute book, condemn it as much as we may, it will work us, if we are not prepared to work it.'

"There is no doubt that Members of the European group will endorse what I say; His Majesty's Government have made up their minds to go ahead; it may be they may have committed many mistakes; it may be that the mistakes they have committed may harm not only Indian interests, but also those of the Britishers in India, but they have made up their minds to go ahead; and they will go ahead. We are not for rejection of the proposals.

"Referring to the amendment that stands in my name and in the name of my colleagues in this Council who represent the interests of the depressed classes here, I wish to say that it is a very modest amendment. In moving this amendment I am fortified by the hope that this Council which has been generous and sympathetic in dealing with problems concerning the welfare of the depressed classes, will view this question also in the same spirit of generosity and sympathy. We have always had the best consideration for our points of view from this Council. This amendment has been drafted after great consideration and with a full sense of responsibility. Sir, I may assure the House that in drafting this amendment, in giving notice of it, and in now moving it, we are actuated by the same sincere motives that worked us up at the time when we went all the way from Madras to Poona and signed the agreement which is known as the Poona Pact. Our justification for bringing forward this amendment is that our experience of the past and our fear of the future are such that we are obliged to bring to the notice of His Majesty's Government and to the notice of the hon. Members of this House, the disappointment that we had within the years that passed between now and the days of the Poona Pact. Sir, we were sincere in saving Gandhi from his wanton death, we were hoping against hope all these days that he is the only person amongst the caste-Hindus who, by whatever force at his command, spiritual or political, can help us in improving our condition. It is with that honest belief we signed the Poona Pact and wanted to save Gandhi's life. Now we find we have saved him for some one else than ourselves; the result is that Gandhi is being used by interested politicians for their own ends. He has been chucked out of the Congress; he is not wanted by the Congress to-day, because he is an inconvenient member of the Congress. But it is really difficult for us to understand what the position of Gandhi to-day is. He is of the opinion that the Congress is not following his policy; he is of the view that the Congress is corrupt to the core and he has made that a ground for not joining the Congress political activities or of being a member even of the Congress at the present moment. At the same time Gandhi blesses those Congress members who have been returned at the recent elections, even though he does not approve of the policy of the majority of the Congress members in contesting the elections. Matters like these have created a fear in our minds; we fear that our future interests are not safe in the hands of our nationalist friends. Quite recently we had the sad spectacle of a depressed class candidate being opposed by the 'mighty' Congress.

3-45
p.m.

" We on behalf of the Depressed Classes Federation issued an appeal to the electorate of the Madras City Constituency for supporting our candidate on the ground that he stood for the policy of supporting any Government in power and bringing constant pressure upon that Government from time to time to see that greater facilities and concessions were afforded to the depressed classes, irrespective of who constituted that Government. That was a fair appeal made to the electorate. While we found that every other party, the Justice Party and the Independent Nationalist Party—of whom Dr. Subbārayan is the leader—thought it advisable to withdraw their candidates because that would mean success for our candidate, the Congress party alone would not do so. That being so, we think that what has been done to-day will be done by any other political party in this country in the future. This has created a fear in us. There is another instance also to show why we have no faith in these general electorates, however much they say that are in sympathy with us. Mr. Deorurkar, a gentleman of the depressed classes community in Bombay, stood nearly five times for an ordinary municipal election on the Congress ticket; but every time he was defeated by the caste-Hindus, even though he was a Congressman. That only shows that whatever may be one's political creed, whether he stands for a local election or for the Legislative Assembly, whether now or even when the Congress accepts office, a caste-Hindu electorate will not elect a depressed class candidate. There are also instances where, if a depressed class man was returned by the general

28th January 1935] [Mr. N. Siva Raj]

electorate, it invariably elected a man who never represented the community as such. Especially in regard to district board elections and municipal elections, we know how very unfairly the depressed class candidates have been treated and how people who did not advocate the interests of the community itself have been returned as depressed class candidates. I might quote here the case of Mr. Veerian. Nobody can deny that he is a very sincere member of our community, a gentleman who has devoted all his time for the welfare of the community. Such a gentleman has not been able to find a place in the Coimbatore Municipal Council because the political masters, who happened to be the caste-Hindus, liked to have their own man in the place of Mr. Veerian. These and many other things have made us feel that we are not safe so far as the general electorate is concerned. The Poona Pact is nothing more than the addition of a panel system in a general electorate. There is no half-way house between a separate electorate and a joint electorate, and the one or the other must ultimately prevail. Even if we are to adopt the Poona Pact, it will all depend upon the electorate itself. If the general electorate is very keen on the election, and if it takes into its head that the election of a depressed class man should be contested, the result will be that the man who supports a particular political party will be elected, but not the man whom the community itself would like to have on the legislature. That is the position so far as the panel system is concerned; and it does not solve the problem of the depressed classes electing their own nominees to the various legislatures. Particularly in this Province, Sir, we feel that it is not possible for any person who is really devoted to the service of our community, who really can advocate the cause of the community, to come in. As a matter of fact, we already see Mr. Satyamurti the drummer-boy of the Congress in this Province strutting about the Presidency and proclaiming to the world that he will be able to put up thirty depressed class candidates next time—all men of his own choice—I do not know for whose benefit? Probably for the benefit of Mr. Satyamurti who to-morrow will turn round and say that while he supports the depressed classes, he will not support the Temple Entry Bill, a gentleman who would not give any opinion on the Temple Entry Bill in the recent Assembly Elections. Thanks to my friend here, I have the latest information about him. It seems in a recent address to the Assembly Members by Mr. Gandhi, Mr. Satyamurti said that the Temple Entry Bill should not be pursued, as the caste-Hindus are not for it. Now, I ask, where do we stand? Mr. Gandhi promised that he would work miracles with the caste-Hindus and we expected that he would; and that is why we were led into accepting this Poona Pact. Now however we find that they have all gone back on that Pact; and especially at a time like this, it is very regrettable that our hands should be bound by what the English people consider a contract or a pact. With reference to that point, I must mention the following circumstances: In the first place, the circumstances which brought the Poona Pact into existence were somewhat peculiar, and that position has been understood and given expression to by the authors of the Joint Select Committee report in their own inimitable language. They say in their report that:

[Mr. N. Siva Raj] [28th January 1935]

"Under the pressure"—note the word pressure—"of Mr. Gandhi's fast, these proposals were precipitately modified."

"The two words that are important in this statement are 'pressure' and 'precipitately.' It was a fact that as Mr. Gandhi was dying, at any rate that was the impression created in us, every moment pressure was brought to bear upon us to agree to some kind of thing which will satisfy Mahatma Gandhi, and nobody could have noticed, more than we who were present there at the time, the artificial atmosphere in which the whole pact was agreed to. Many people have no doubt signed it, not believing in it, and many people also said things in which they did not believe. I know, Sir, and I do not wish to mention the names of many big people who were there, who condemned Mr. Gandhi; at any rate they did not approve of Mr. Gandhi's adopting this method in order to effect the Poona Pact. They all said that he was wrong, that on principle they did not agree with that system of representation for the depressed classes as defined in the Poona Pact. I may again quote Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru who never agreed with him at any time on that method of representation. At the Round Table Conference, when Mr. Gandhi was present, he said:

"He did the very best"—meaning Mahatma Gandhi—"that he could to arrive at a settlement between the Hindus and Muhammadans. I have no doubt that his intentions were of the purest. I did not however see eye to eye with him on the question of the method of representation of the depressed classes. That is to say, it was, in my opinion, most unfortunate that while intending most sincerely to protect the interests of the depressed classes from his own point of view, he should have given rise to the impression that he was opposed to their demand."

"Even at the time of the Poona Pact, while he was no doubt sincere that he could protect our interests by means of this panel system that was devised, he did not foresee that it would be put to the basest use by persons who are interested in their own self-aggrandizement and who for their own purposes of self-advancement, would work the Poona Pact in an entirely different way. Sir, the other point that I wanted to mention about the Poona Pact is the opinion of the Joint Parliamentary Committee. That opinion is better expressed in the report itself; there it very clearly says, after referring to the communal award:

"We may deplore the mutual distrust of which the insistence on this demand by the minorities is so ominous a symptom, but it is unhappily a factor in the situation which cannot be left out of account. Nor do we think that we can usefully add anything to what we have already said on the subject. We accept, therefore, the proposals in the White Paper for the composition of the Legislative Assemblies. As regards the Poona Pact, we are satisfied that it was made between persons who may properly be regarded as representative of the caste-Hindus on the one hand and of the depressed classes on the other; and for that reason we think that it falls within the terms of the announcement made by His Majesty's Government and that it ought not to be disturbed. We say frankly that we do not care greatly for it, and still less for the methods which brought it into existence. We are of opinion that the original proposals of His Majesty's Government constituted a more equitable settlement of the general communal question; but the Pact was made by accredited leaders of the communities concerned, and was acquiesced in at the time by the communities themselves, or at least elicited no protest;

"Those are the views of the Joint Select Committee whose authors are men of experience and men with extraordinary ability. Again, with regard to the Poona Pact, they make another observation, and that is with regard to the representation of the depressed classes in the Bengal Province:

28th January 1935] [Mr. N. Siva Raj]

"Nevertheless, as we have said, objections to the Pact in relation to Bengal have since been strongly urged by caste Hindus from that province; and if, by agreement between the communities concerned, some reduction were made in the number of seats reserved to the depressed classes in Bengal, possibly with a compensatory increase in the number of their seats in other provinces where a small addition in favour of the depressed classes would not be likely materially to affect the balance of communities in the Legislature, we are disposed to think that the working of the new constitution in Bengal would be facilitated."

"So that, Sir, two points are clear from the observations they have made regarding the Poona Pact. The first is that the Poona Pact was brought into existence under peculiar circumstances which they themselves say they did not approve; and in the second place, they are of the view that to a certain extent it requires modification, at any rate in Bengal on account of the pressure that was brought to bear upon them by the caste-Hindus of Bengal. We also say, that having regard to the peculiar conditions that exist in the Madras Presidency supported by the recent experience we have gained with regard to elections in the Madras City, and elsewhere it is necessary—I would like to impress this point on the hon. Members of this House and also on the Leader of the House and the Member in charge of Reforms—that this Council ought to make a representation to His Majesty's Government that the Communal Award as amended by the Poona Pact should be modified in so far as this province is concerned and that the Poona Pact should not be operative in this province. We would much rather be satisfied with the quality of the few men that may go into the legislatures rather than have an increase in their number, as we might have according to the Poona Pact. Our people may be quite willing to unite with any of the political parties in the country; but we want to have representatives of our own. (Mr. K. P. Raman Menon: There may be men to support the depressed classes in those parties.) Sir, there may no doubt be men like the leader of the Justice Democratic Party, as was proclaimed by him in this House the other day, whose sincerity and sympathy for the depressed classes is as great as the sympathy and sincerity of all the ten of us put together here. No doubt, we would like to have such persons with us, but how many such people are there in this Legislature? Particularly when the Reforms come into operation and when the House will have full business, it will be practically impossible for us to get any one of these leaders to evince any great interest in our community, as a community."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member likely to continue for any length of time?"

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—"I should like to have a few more minutes, Sir."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The House will now adjourn and meet again at 11 a.m. to-morrow."

R. V. KRISHNA AYYAR,
Secretary to the Legislative Council.

STARRED QUESTIONS

Local Self-Government

Proposal, if any, to withdraw the Commissioner, Tiruvarur Municipality.

* 57^a Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Minister for Local Self-Government be pleased to state—

(a) whether there is any proposal to withdraw the Commissioner appointed to the Tiruvarur Municipality;

(b) if so, what the reasons therefor are; and

(c) when the Commissioner was appointed to that municipality?

A.—(a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) In September 1934.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know, Sir, whether such a thing was ever contemplated at all?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I do not quite follow the hon. Member's question, Sir."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know, Sir, whether the withdrawal of the Commissioner of the Tiruvarur Municipality was at least contemplated?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"When once a municipality is notified, there can be no question of withdrawing the same."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know whether the Commissioner of the Mayavaram Municipality in the same district was withdrawn?"

The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—"I have already answered that question that the Commissioner previously appointed to Mayavaram Municipality has been reverted and another man already appointed in his place."

[29th January 1935]

Land Revenue Administration

Condition of the second rice crop in South Kanara.

* 579 Q.—Mr. A. B. SHETTY: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state whether Government have received any and, if so, what report regarding the state of the second rice crop in South Kanara and how it has been affected by scarcity of water owing to the failure of the north-east monsoon?

A.—The Government have no information other than what is contained in the weekly season reports which are published in the Fort St. George Gazette.

Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"May I know, Sir, whether the Government will be pleased to call for a special report from the Collector in regard to this matter?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"I have no objection, Sir."

Control of Vehicles

Restrictions on the plying of motor buses for hire from one district to another.

* 580 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Home Member be pleased to state—

(a) whether the motor buses for hire are allowed to ply from one district to another;

(b) if so, whether it is a fact that the District Superintendent of Police, Coimbatore, has refused permission to buses for hire in Salem district to ply in his district;

(c) if so, what the reasons therefor are; and

(d) whether it is a fact that some of the buses for hire of Coimbatore district are also plying in Salem district; if so, how they have been so permitted?

A.—(a) Yes, provided "G" Permits are obtained from the licensing authority of each district.

(b) & (c) The Government have no information.

(d) The Government have no information.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know whether the information will be called for and the defects rectified?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"I should know what the defects are before I can call for a report."

[29th January 1935]

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know whether Government are aware of the fact that even taxis which are engaged, for instance, in the city of Madras, are not allowed to go into any other neighbouring district without a 'G' permit for that district?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"Any motor car that plies for hire has to obtain a 'G' permit; and each 'G' permit holds good only for the particular district in which it is issued. So, if a car has to travel from one district to another, it has perforce to obtain 'G' permits of both the districts."

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"May I know how the Hon. Member expects a person when he engages a taxi in the city of Madras, to apply for 'G' permits when he goes out of the City limits and returns the taxi to Madras?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"It is not for the person who engages the taxi to obtain the 'G' permit but for the person who owns the taxi."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know, Sir, whether the District Superintendent of Police has powers to refuse 'G' permits, if they are applied for?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"In certain circumstances, if the car does not come up to the prescribed standard, he has a right to refuse it."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know whether in view of the fact that the District Superintendent of Police of Coimbatore does not allow buses to ply for hire from Salem district to Coimbatore district, the Hon. Member will call for information with regard to this point and redress the grievance?"

The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. PANNIRSELVAM:—"If the hon. Member will draw my attention to any specific case, I shall certainly call for a report and look into it."

Administration of Justice

Proposals, if any, for the construction of a building for the Bar Association, Ellore, West Godavari district.

* 581 Q.—Mr. C. INDRAIYA: Will the Hon. the Law Member be pleased to state whether there is any proposal now under the consideration of the Government for the construction of a building for the Bar Association, Ellore, in the district of West Godavari?

A.—When the Hon. the Law Member visited Ellore in June 1934, a representation was made to him asking for the construction of a separate building or for the extension of the existing building for the use of the members of the Bar. The matter however did not receive the consideration of Government so far.

[29th January 1935]

Electricity.

Progress of the Mettur Hydro-Electric Scheme.

* 582 Q.—Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER: Will the Hon. the Law Member be pleased to state—

- (a) at what stage the hydro-electric scheme at Mettur is at present;
- (b) when it will be completed and put to use;
- (c) what the places which are to be served by this scheme are;
- (d) what the estimates for this scheme are, whether it includes the amount already spent at the time of construction of Mettur Dam; and
- (e) what is the amount spent in this behalf at the time of construction of the Mettur Dam?

A.—(a) The sanction of the Secretary of State to the scheme is awaited.

(b) In about three years from the date of receipt of sanction.

(c) It is proposed to extend lines and distribute electrical energy during the first few years to the following places:—Salem, Erode, Bhavani, Karur, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, Mannargudi, Negapatam, Kumbakonam, Vellore, Polur, Chittoor, Chidambaram, Villupuram and Cuddalore. Some of these places are at present, or will shortly be, supplied with power from Pykara and when the Mettur Hydro-Electric Project functions they will get power from the latter and Pykara power will then be diverted to other places such as Madura and the West Coast. When load conditions justify the expenditure, additional lines to other towns and villages will be constructed.

(d) & (e) Rupees 1,30,17,800 initially rising to Rs. 1,82,00,000 by the tenth year of operation. The initial estimate includes a sum of Rs. 10,80,000 already spent on providing hydro-electric pipes and gates in the Mettur dam and also an expenditure of Rs. 44,52,000 already incurred and being incurred on extension of supply to Erode, Salem, Trichinopoly and Negapatam. The net initial capital expenditure will therefore be 74.86 lakhs.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know, Sir, as to what the anticipated revenue from this scheme is?"

[29th January 1935]

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"I want notice. It is in the report and I cannot give it off-hand."

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"May I know if the Ceded Districts are ever contemplated in the operation of any of these schemes, Mettur or Pykara?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"It is difficult to foresee whether it would be extended to those districts under these two schemes, but I may assure the hon. Member that the Ceded Districts are not forgotten and whenever an opportunity occurs itself every attempt will be made to find electricity for them."

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know from the Hon. Member whether the charges that are to be made under the Mettur Scheme will be more or less than what is charged under the Pykara scheme?"

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"That question has not yet been considered but I suppose it will not be more."

Railways.

Application of the Kurnool District Board to open a railway line from Kurnool to Atmakur.

* 583 Q.—S. M. K. BEYABANI SAHIB Bahadur: Will the Hon. the Member for Finance be pleased to state—

(a) whether there has been any proposal to open a branch railway line from Kurnool to Atmakur; and

(b) whether the District Board, Kurnool, has requested Government to accord sanction to undertake the above work?

A.—(a) & (b) Yes. The District Board of Kurnool last agreed in 1930 to guarantee a metre gauge line against loss and the proposal was included annually from 1927 to 1930 in the programme of railway construction proposed by this Government, but owing to financial stringency no new lines of railway have in recent years been taken up in the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway area in this Presidency. In March 1929 the District Board requested the Government to have estimates prepared for the construction of a narrow gauge light railway from Kurnool to Nandikotkur and Nandikotkur to Atmakur, but the Board was informed that unless and until the metre gauge line was definitely abandoned the Government were not prepared to consider proposals for a light railway. The District Board has not since moved in the matter.

Land Revenue Administration

Alleged incorrectness of the case presented to His Excellency the Governor by the deputation of the South Kanara Landholders' Association in regard to settlement proposals.

* 586 Q.—Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether it is a fact that a note was prepared by the Revenue Department, meeting the points raised by the deputation from South Kanara to His Excellency the Governor, concerning the mistakes at the last settlement made by the Settlement department which have enhanced the half share of the Government; if so, whether the Hon. Member will be pleased to place a copy of the same on the table of the House;

(b) in what respects the case of the deputation with reference to each mistake is wrong; and

(c) whether the Government will be pleased to give the people of South Kanara a chance to prove the correctness of their case?

A.—(a) Yes. The Government are not prepared to place a copy of the notes prepared by the Revenue Department on the table of the Legislative Council.

(b) & (c) The Government carefully considered the representations made by the deputation representing the South Kanara Landholders' Association, before passing final orders on the proposals for the resettlement of the district. They do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by furnishing the details asked for, or by receiving any further representations at this stage.

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“Sir, in view of the fact that the Landholders' Association of South Kanara has brought forward definite charges of miscalculation and mistakes, why do the Government rest satisfied with making a statement that those mistakes do not exist without giving reasons? Are Government not convinced of the case of the Kanara landholders?”

[29th January 1935]

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“Because, Sir, Government have carefully considered this question and as I have already stated, they came to the definite conclusion that those mistakes were based on no foundation.”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“May I request the Hon. the Revenue Member to give another opportunity to Mr. Bhatt to explain the case of the Kanara landholders.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—“May I know why Government should not give reasons and why they should think that the people should take whatever Government say as gospel truth?”

II.—MOTION RE REPORT OF THE JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE—cont.

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—“Mr. President, overnight I closed with the observation that the members of the Nationalist Group, who have approached Mahatma Gandhi, have gone back upon the pledge that they gave us at the time of the conclusion of the Poona Pact, that they would try their best to see that untouchability in any place or in any form, would be removed at any cost, probably suggesting even at the cost of the life of Mahatma Gandhi. I unfortunately made the mistake of suggesting to the House that it was one of those pigmies of the Nationalist Group that made this suggestion, but I found last night to our utter dismay and our disappointment that this statement emanates from no less a person than the ex-Leader of the Congress and the Saint of Sabarmathi. He, when he had no business to advise the Congress Members of the Assembly, having given up the Congress and left it entirely in the hands of his followers, goes out of his way to advise the Congress members that they ought not to take serious interest in the question of the Temple Entry Bill legislation in the Assembly. He goes further and says, and supports his statement by saying, that public opinion, in spite of his wonderful agitation and magic influence, is not sufficiently strong in supporting that Bill, and that it is not in favour of it. May I ask Mahatma Gandhi and the Leaders of the Nationalist Group as to where was that perspicacity and the clearness which the Madras Mail applauds, and of which Mahatma Gandhi was capable of; and may I ask him where was that perspicacity and the clearness and the sincerity of his opinion at the time he undertook his ‘fast unto death’ in order to take separate electorates away from us. Sir, from the considered and the mature opinion of the Prime Minister and His Majesty's Government as contained in the Premier's Award and an opinion which was subsequently supported by the authors of the Joint Committee Report, and from the unanimous demand of the Depressed Classes community throughout India for separate electorates, Mr. Gandhi should then have known that public opinion was against joint electorates so far as the representations of the Depressed Classes was concerned. Knowing probably that public opinion was against him, he resorted to this unusual method of fasting unto death, thereby evoking the sympathy of a generous-hearted and a credulous people, by presenting the spectacle of a dying man and by presenting the spectacle of a man in the pangs of death, to enter into a pact the real object of which was it is stated to help the Depressed Classes, and to remove untouchability everywhere. As a matter of fact, it is within the knowledge of every public man in this country that Mr. Gandhi, whether in the Press or in the platform, proclaimed that the Temple Entry legislation and the uplift of the Harijans movement, were part and parcel of the Poona Pact, so that one can realize how even they who were behind the scenes and even though it cannot legally speaking be drafted on to the Communal Award, that the Poona Pact was based upon the condition of the Hindus taking every step to remove untouchability and that should they fail to do so, we expected that Gandhi would again fast unto death to get the public opinion of the Hindus in his favour. To-day, we are surprised to hear that he has followed the ordinary methods, of ordinary mortals and says that public opinion is not yet ripe for the Temple Entry legislation. Where do we stand now? We certainly can complain and we are justified in complaining that Mahatma Gandhi and his lieutenants were guilty of a breach of faith. The crime is the more heinous and the betrayal is the more poignant because it proceeds from Mahatma Gandhi. Sir, what else is it but a betrayal? We were led to believe that everything that Mahatma Gandhi is capable of could be done to lift us up and to remove this untouchability, which is a bar on our progress everywhere. We find, that so far as that point is concerned, in the first place, there was a breach of promise and a breach of faith. Sir, in the second place, I adverted to circumstances under which the Poona Pact was drawn up and in which it was brought into existence. The circumstances were such that the leaders both of the Depressed Classes and of caste-Hindus who met at Poona were rather keen on arriving at some agreement somehow, rather than base the solution of the problem of the representation of the Depressed Classes on any general or equitable principle. That is our firm conviction."

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member not moving his second amendment about which also he has to speak?"

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—"Yes, Sir, I am coming to it. As a matter of fact, the exigencies of the time would not permit of any other course and so we had perforce to sign this Poona Pact. Those may be called the extrinsic defects in the Poona Pact. Now, Sir, may I crave your permission to refer to what I may call the intrinsic defects of the Poona Pact. In the first place, hon. Members of this House ought to be struck by the inequity of having a double election, whereas every other community naturally goes through only one election before it can secure a seat in the Council. Secondly, the injustice perpetrated by the necessity, through the means of panel, of putting forward four candidates and having a contested election in every case where the Depressed Class man has got to secure his seat in the Legislative Council, whereas every other community is given the privilege, wherever possible, of getting their candidates uncontested to the Council. Thirdly, the uncertainty of the quality of the candidates who will be returned under this system to which I have already referred. There is no guarantee, and having regard to our experience in the past, having regard to the nature of the members that are returned from the various joint electorates provided for district board elections, and having regard further to the fact that such members who are elected to these municipal councils and local boards, are not allowed to take their seats in those various bodies, we are not certain about the quality of the candidates who may be returned to the Council.

"Then, lastly, Sir, may I advert to this one fact, namely, that in 11-15 the present constitution, one of the important safeguards which we value a.m. most is the safeguard of the protection of the minorities. Now, in order that, the safeguard might be effective and in order that that safeguard may be used for our benefit, it is very necessary, Sir, that opinion ought to make itself felt upon the Governor of the Province and the head of the administration. We do not see how genuine opinion and information which represent the interests of the Depressed Classes can ever be brought to bear upon His Excellency the Governor, if a system like the one provided for under the Poona Pact is to exist and if the members have to depend upon the tender mercies of the majority community. It is feared, Sir, that in the future constitution, the Governor in taking care to see that he does not apply so many safeguards provided for and in his anxiety to take the Council along with him, it is quite possible that he might apply the safeguards in one or two instances only. In his efforts in this behalf, he might be guided by the view of the majority party and we fear that in the present system of Poona Pact, we may not be able to get representatives of the type we would like to have in this Council, through whose means we can exert our influence on the party in power and the party in power in its turn on His Excellency the Governor. Those are the defects of the Poona Pact. Now, Sir, may I appeal to my hon. Friends of the Legislative Council particularly to the Muslim friends and the Indian Christian friends and ask for their support on the simple principle, namely "Do unto others what you wish should be done unto you." We expect that you will give to us an exemption from the operation of the Poona Pact in this Province as you would like to have separate electorate undisturbed. Sir, there is one other group to which I should make a special appeal. Let down as we are and as we undoubtedly have been, between the intolerable inconsistency of Mahatma Gandhi and the intellectual dishonesty of his lieutenants and of his supporters, whither are we to turn for redress except to the fountainhead of justice—His Majesty the King-Emperor and to those Englishmen who value equality, justice and fairplay and who breathe these sentiments in their everyday life? We naturally look to the Englishmen to see that a contract or an agreement which is vitiated by the circumstances that I mentioned before ought not to be brought into operation to the permanent prejudice and unhappiness of a large class of population. Our only hope was Mahatma Gandhi and Mahatma Gandhi is neither a permanent factor in the public life of this Presidency and even if he were, he is not such a consistent person as to pin our faith in him. It is that fear that makes us request this Hon. House—a request which is a very modest one—that without disturbing the Poona Pact elsewhere, without touching it and without in any way infringing the Premier's pledge to the public that in the Poona Pact or any agreement, no amendment would be made except by mutual agreement of the various parties concerned, we merely ask for exemption of the Poona Pact. There is one other matter which, with your permission, Sir, I may be permitted to refer to and that is this, with your permission, I beg to move the amendment given notice of by me and Rao Bahadur R. Srinivasan which runs as follows:—

(b) Add the following at the end—

“and on such consideration, this Council is of opinion that adequate number of seats be reserved in Second Chambers, Provincial and Federal, for representation of the Depressed Classes and requests His Majesty's Government through the Government of India to so modify the proposals.”

“The proposals do not anywhere clearly state what exactly is the method of representation and what are the number of seats that are reserved for the Depressed Classes in these Chambers if and when they come into existence. We would have been satisfied if we had separate electorates. We see much smaller communities like the Muslims and the Indian Christians by the logical extension of the principle of separate electorate get their seats. Because of the absence of separate electorates, our position is left indefinite and so we request this House to support this motion also.”

“In conclusion, I request the Hon. House to see that we are not subjected to political slavery in addition to the social slavery from which we are already suffering. May I also add that unless we are protected against these injurious effects of the Poona Pact, it would not be possible for us to get our legitimate claims satisfied in the future constitution and it is very necessary that the constitution must be made safe for the Depressed Classes. If, however, the constitution is not safe, we fear, having regard to the changing times, the Depressed Classes will become unsafe for the constitution. (Hear, hear.) Thank God, the warning has come in good time and it is not too late. And knowing as we do that in the future when we have got everything to gain and nothing to lose by any movement which will promise to us every facility, even at the risk of breaking the constitution, we feel that our people may take to such movements and it is time that this Council and His Majesty's Government and particularly the Government of Madras realize the implications of our statement here and see that nothing harmful is done to us. Sir, as one great gentleman said: ‘things are what they are and the consequences of them will be what they will be. Why then should men like to be deceived?’ (Cheers.)”

* Mr. H. M. JAGANNADHAM:—“Mr. President, I beg to second the amendment so ably moved by hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Raj.

“Before I commend this to the acceptance of the House and offer my remarks on it, I should like to make a few observations on the general issue. I am surprised at the amendment which the Leader of the Opposition has ventured to put forward. I did not expect that a person who has occupied the position of Chief Minister to this Government, could possibly subscribe to the proposition contained in his amendment. It is unfortunately a fashion in this country for some of our public men to ape as far as possible congressmen and to meekly imitate their utterances. We are aware of the attitude which Congress has taken on the subject of these reforms. We know that it had made up its mind to condemn everything connected with the Round Table Conference. We know that in advance and even before knowing what the White Paper proposals were, Congressmen had determined to condemn them. We are equally aware that while the Joint Parliamentary Committee was still in session, Congressmen had decided to condemn the recommendations of that Committee. Their attitude is perfectly understandable. They can think of nothing but criticisms and condemnation of the proposals which do not emanate from them. There is a proverb in South India that if the daughter breaks a pot it is only of earthenware of no value; but if the daughter-in-law does it, it is a golden one of inestimable value. So also, nothing that Congress has not been directly responsible for, can be of any use to this country; but if Congressmen accept certain positions then they become fundamental policies whose acceptance was considered to be a test of the highest patriotism. The conduct of Congressmen during the last four years amply proves the truth of what I have said. Mr. Gandhi accepted the idea of Federation, and therefore Congressmen did not question that principle. He accepted the proposition that princes must be left to their sweet will in sending delegates to the Federal House of Commons and therefore Congressmen from Vallabhai Patel downwards had not a word of censure against such a proposal. But the detailed safeguards and reservations adumbrated in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report have not been accepted by Congressmen. At any rate, they were not parties to it and therefore there is all this furor in the country. I can, as I said, understand their point of view; but I cannot understand other politicians who have taken part in those deliberations, turning round and suggesting, as the Leader of the Opposition does, that the new proposals are worse than the present constitutional position and that the country would be better under the existing conditions. I do not think I shall be putting it very strongly when I state that no one outside bedlam can possibly think that even the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, restricted as they may be, are not a great advance on the present constitutional position. I think it is time for honest men to speak up and not to further mislead Indian public opinion. The fact is that for a thousand critics who have criticized the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, not more than one has had the patience to read its recommendations or the leisure to understand the implications of some of its proposals. The word is passed from mouth to mouth, from one ignoramus to another ignoramus that somehow the recommendations are very reactionary and the whole country is made to repeat the same story that the constitutional proposals are not wanted and in fact take the country backward. I am only sorry that a gentleman in the position of the Leader of the Opposition, with his record of past services, should make himself a party to this absurd and irrational opposition. I think those who repeat this cry are doing the greatest disservice to the country. They are the real enemies of progress. They create such a situation that when the time comes for working the constitution, they will find themselves not masters but slaves of that situation that they have themselves created. I warn them against these activities. If you find that there are defects in the proposals, by all means, come forward with helpful criticisms and suggestions to improve them or alter them. But do not, if you have any patriotism in you, repeat this parrot cry that it is preferable to 'struggle' under the present constitution. May I ask the Leader of the Opposition, what he means by 'struggling' under the present constitution. How does he propose to carry on the struggle? Is he referring to the Civil Disobedience Movement, with mental reservations? Let us be frank. The Congress apparently takes up the attitude that by creating greater unrest in the country, by bringing about a crisis whereby orderly Government is made impossible, the British Government may be forced to enact a measure or larger reforms. I personally believe that Congress is very much mistaken in its view and that the British Government cannot be coerced in this manner. But I ask the Leader of the Opposition whether that is the position and if not, what does he mean by 'struggling' under the present constitution? It is a matter of some regret to me that I belonging to the humble depressed class should be forced to speak on such matters and that leaders from whom we expect a lead, should so mislead us and try to take us beyond our depths.

a.m.

"Let me say a few words about the amendment that is proposed. Sir, it is a matter of notorious knowledge that the Poona Pact has been forced on us at the point of throwing the sin of causing the death of Mr. Gandhi on our heads and it was the real reason why the depressed classes were coerced into accepting such a pact. I think every one will admit that in politics, there ought to be no room for such considerations and I feel equally certain that after the Pact was signed and the fast was discontinued, many who were parties to that Pact regretted that the Pact was ever concluded. But that is not the full story. The Pact referred not only to the question of seats in the Council and the method of election but also to the treatment which the depressed classes will thereafter receive from caste-Hindus. It was supposed to be the Magna charta of the depressed classes in this country. The entire sympathy of the caste-Hindus will be with them, thereafter, temples should be thrown open; absurd customs restraining depressed classes in a variety of ways, will be abandoned. Pandit Malavia's assurance was given to us that there should be no difference shown between the caste-Hindus and depressed classes thereafter. But to-day what is the position of Pandit Malavia and the caste-Hindus? You talk of pledges being broken by British Government. Here is a pledge given in the sight of 350 millions of Indians, by the bed-side of a man supposed to be dying and by the foremost protagonists of the Hindu community, broken before the ink has dried, broken to the heart by every means possible. The Temple Entry Bill has been withdrawn. The Congress Party refused to make an election issue of this vital question in the recent elections. The depressed classes have been ignored. Not one candidate has been chosen to represent the Congress. I would here recall the fact that when Congress had its programme of Council boycott, depressed class members were put forward by Congressmen and were successfully returned. What is the conclusion that I have to draw therefrom? Are we fit to enter those places which Congressmen feel it beneath their dignity to enter and when Congressmen think of entering these places, are we to be treated as untouchables and excluded? These farces must stop. I appeal to the members of all the communities to note the attitude of the Congress. It was only the week before last that the candidate whom we had put forward was defeated, because Congressmen decided to put forward a member of the privileged class and contested the election. In spite of the fact that he was a depressed class member and pledged to no party, he had not the support from Congressmen and yet Mr. Gandhi is continuously proclaiming his eagerness and sympathy for the depressed classes!

29th January 1935] [Mr. H. M. Jagannadham]

"Now Sir, my objection to the Poona Pact and the method of election guaranteed thereby is fundamental. Congressmen have made no secret of the fact that unless depressed classes toe-the-line with the Congress, they can find no support. We are between the devil and the deep sea. By training, by instinct, and by all that we hold sacred, we are loyal to the British Crown. We know that whatever little privilege we have obtained—and that has not been much—we owe it to the British and we know too that if the British were to disappear straightaway from this country, we will go back to the unenviable position of helots, untouchables and in fact the proscribed of the land. Are we to choose to sit with the Congress, adopt the anti-British attitude and say along with them that even the celebration of the Silver Jubilee of His Most Gracious Majesty should not be observed? Are we to be dragged into disloyal and traitorous depths, and to betray our own interest and the well-being of the country. That is the price which is asked of us, if this is how the most dominant party in the country is to help us in the country's election, and I am afraid, Sir, that some of our men will be enticed into the Congress parlours by assurances of support through those joint constituencies—a situation will arise which will mean to the community further humiliation and the gravest of perils. I, therefore, emphatically assert that nothing can save us, except separate electorates. We are frustful people. We have been betrayed at Poona. We have been betrayed by Congress assurances and we seek now the protection of the British Parliament. We beg of them to relieve us from the Poona Pact. We beg of them most earnestly to restore to us the system of separate electorates, so that we may be free to select our best men who will be loyal to God, Crown and the Country and who will not betray the interests of the community. I am certain that under the Poona Pact, there will be many of our own men returned but who will betray the vital interests of the community and play second fiddle to Congressmen. It will be worse than having no representation at all. I would rather have a few seats nominated by the Governor than the thirty elected members who are supposed to be our representatives but in reality on any occasion will cut our throats. I speak strongly, because I feel strongly. If this Council is in sympathy with the depressed classes, and if the members of the various political groups are really keen on helping the cause of the depressed classes, now, Sir, is the time for you to show it by accepting my amendment and thereby excluding at least Madras from the pernicious effect of the Poona Pact.

"One other vital observation and I am finished. I want to be quite candid. There are differences among the depressed classes themselves. The Adi-Dravidas and Arundatheeyas do not see eye to eye with each other. They differ much and in some places at least their difference is as acute as between caste Hindus and depressed classes. It is unfortunate that it should be so. Living under the lowest scale of civilization prevalent in this country, both of us ought to realize that in unity lies our strength. I am certain that the leaders of both the communities are working to that end; but it will take time and in the meanwhile each of the communities deserves to be safeguarded, till the realization of their common position makes them absolute brothers. I, therefore, have ventured to plead that in such a separate electorate for depressed classes, places may be reserved for members of the minority community. The Arundatheeyas are in a minority and will have no chance whatever of being returned, unless such reservations of seats is made. I appeal to you, Sir, and to all the Members of this Council in the name of all that they hold sacred, in the name of justice, equity and good conscience, I appeal to them in the name of that sympathy which they have so far shown to the members of the depressed classes, that they should support my amendment wholeheartedly and thereby earn the ever-lasting gratitude of the members of our community."

* Mr. M. S. SRESHTA:—"Mr. President, Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:—

"Add the following at the end:—

"And on such consideration, this Council resolves to request His Majesty's Government through the Government of India to give effect to the resolution passed in this Council on the 23rd March 1933, that the number of seats assigned to Indian Christians in the Madras Legislative Council be increased by five, the total number of seats in the Council being increased by the same number."

"As a member of the Indian Christian community, I should like to say a few words about the Joint Select Committee's Report before I approach specifically the amendment standing in my name. I can speak with authority that the Indian Christian community shares the disappointment which is felt all over this country as regards the proposals made in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. I am at one with the Leader of my party, Mr. K. P. Raman Menon, in regard to the remarks which he has made regarding the various points he has touched upon. We feel that it was quite possible to have been less cautious in regard to the matters dealt with in the report. But at the same time we realize the great difficulties in the way of a suitable solution. We realize that the British Parliament had to satisfy various political desires and views, and at the same time they had to satisfy the political aspirations of this country. Unfortunately, the divisions which were found among our own people have made it more difficult for the British Parliament to ignore the views of the die-hards in Britain. Whatever it be, we feel that a serious attempt has been made to solve the problem and we also feel that there has been goodwill on the part of the British Parliament towards India. We also feel that the new Constitution is a great advance over the existing Constitution. At the same time, we trust that every attempt will be made even at this late stage to get rid of these difficulties in the Constitution which have been pointed out by this House.

"So far as the Indian Christian community is concerned, we feel that we have been let down very badly indeed. When the White Paper proposals were being discussed in this House, I moved a resolution to the effect that the number of members of the Indian Christian community in this House should be increased by five, the total number of members being increased by the same number. That resolution was passed, and it was creditable to the House that there was no division on that resolution, because, no doubt, it was felt by all sections of the House that our demand was a legitimate demand. We regret to find that in spite of that resolution without a division having been passed by this House, no notice has been taken of it by the British Parliament, or rather the Committee of the British Parliament, and we trust that the British Parliament even at this last stage when considering these proposals would do justice to our community."

"The number of seats assigned to the Indian Christian community is inadequate in all the legislatures, and particularly so in the Madras Legislative Council. As regards this Council, the following table shows the proposed distribution of seats among the minority communities, the numerical strength of each community, and the number of persons who would be represented by each member. The depressed classes, who, while belonging to the majority Hindu community, stand in a class apart only by reason of their social disabilities, are not included in this table:—

	Number of seats.	Population.	Number of persons per seat.
Total	215	46,740,107	217,396
Muhammadians	29	3,305,937	113,997
Indian Christians	9	1,733,293	192,582
Anglo-Indians	2	28,669	14,334

[Mr. M. S. Sreshta] [29th January 1935]

"This table shows that of these minority communities, the Indian Christians alone do not receive due weightage. That every minority community should receive due weightage is an accepted maxim."

11-45 a.m. "Mr. John Morley, when introducing the Bill embodying the Minto-Morley Reforms, said in the House of Commons with reference to Muhammadans, 'They demand the election of their own representatives to these Councils in all the stages, just as in Cyprus, where I think the Muhammadans vote by themselves . . . Secondly, they want a number of seats in excess of their numerical strength. These two demands we are quite ready and intend to yield in full.'

"The late Mr. K. T. Paul was one of the Indian Christian representatives in the Round Table Conference. He said in the statement submitted by him to the Minorities' Sub-Committee, 'Wherever weightage is given to any community, we should also be given similar weightage. We are not asking for weightage per se. But we are sure that when any community is given weightage, seeing that it is bound to be bigger and more forceful than we are, we certainly feel to be in a position of increased disadvantage. Therefore we ask that we should also be given proportional weightage if that is accorded to any other community.'

"On this principle, Indian Christians should be given more weightage than Muslims, being a smaller community. While the Anglo-Indians are being given proportionately more weightage, we have not been given weightage in that proportion. It is difficult to understand why when this principle of weightage has been accepted in the case of Muslims and Anglo-Indians, the Indian Christians alone should not be given the benefit of that principle.

"Sir, Mr. Paul had a pronounced bias towards nationalism and was apologetic and hesitant in asking for anything that savoured of communalism. His demand for weightage is therefore all the more deserving of the fullest consideration.

"In the present Council there are 13 Muslims and 5 Indian Christians. The Muhammadans are a little less than double the Indian Christians in population, as will appear from the above table. Therefore even in the present Legislature we should have seven seats. But, as since the inauguration of the Minto-Morley Reforms, two of the depressed class members have been Indian Christians, we have practically seven seats. In the new Legislature, the Muslims are to have 29 seats as against 9 for Christians, more than three times as many. The fact is that the Muslims were allowed weightage in the present Legislature in accordance apparently with what Lord Morley said above. And the weightage given to the Muslims has now been greatly increased, whereas the Indian Christians continue to have very meagre weightage.

"Weightage has been given to communities smaller than ours, namely, Anglo-Indians and Europeans. Again, the Sikhs who number about 2½ millions in the Punjab are allowed 32 seats. Indian Christians in this Province are a little more than 1½ millions. If the same weightage as that given to the Sikhs were given to us, we should get 22 seats.

29th January 1935] [Mr. M. S. Sreshta]

But we get only nine! Compared to every minority community therefore, Indian Christians are placed at a very great disadvantage. The Minorities' Pact entered into during the sessions of the Round Table Conference allowed 14 seats for Indian Christians in the Madras Legislature and 30 for Muslims. The aim was evidently to give the same weightage to the Christians as to the Muslims, though 16 would have been nearer the correct number for Indian Christians. The Madras Franchise Committee reduced the number for Indian Christians and Muslims to 11 and 21, respectively. This maintains the correct ratio between these two communities, based on the same measure of weightage. However, the Madras Government in its letter No. 298 of 23rd February 1932 addressed to the Indian Franchise Committee reduced the number of seats for Indian Christians from 11 to 9, while retaining the 21 recommended for Muslims. When the matter went up to His Majesty's Government, the number of seats for Muslims was increased from the 21 already recommended to 30, whereas the number of seats for Indian Christians was retained. The effect of this was that the weightage which was stated by the Madras Government to be considerable for Muslims was made even more considerable by an increase of about 50 per cent, whereas Indian Christians received hardly any weightage, and the endeavour of the Minorities Pact, supported partially by the Madras Franchise Committee, to right an old wrong done to Indian Christians, failed. It is not clear why the Madras Government's recommendation was revised in favour of the Muslims, but not in the case of Indian Christians.

"Sir, as I said, already, I have no quarrel with the Muslims or the Anglo-Indians who get more weightage. We only demand fair treatment for us. We remember with gratitude that they recommended in the Minorities' Pact 14 seats for our community as against the smaller number that we are now granted. But why has Government not granted us the share due to us when they have accepted in regard to the other communities the recommendations of the Minorities' Pact? What is the justification for the differential treatment accorded to us? We admit that the Muslims deserve weightage, but are not Indian Christians as a smaller community entitled to weightage in the same proportion as the Muslims? The only reason for this unequal treatment given to us is that our community is supposed to be of no political importance, although our importance economically and socially has been acknowledged by the Simon Commission and the Memorandum presented by the Madras Government to that Commission. Perhaps the Government would have given us weightage if it was possible to so satisfy us without reducing the number of the general seats. That is why in my resolution I suggest that the total number of seats be increased by 5 and that those 5 seats be allotted to us.

"It has been recognized in all the modern Constitutions such as those of Egypt and the new States established in Europe after the Great War that minorities should receive due representation and also weightage. Therefore it follows that if weightage is to be given and if separate seats are to be given, the principle which has been adopted in regard to Muslims and Anglo-Indians should be extended to the Indian Christians.

"As to why originally the Muslims were given considerable weightage whereas Indian Christians did not receive any weightage is not very clear, but the reason is perhaps indicated by the extract from Lord Morley's speech quoted above, to the effect that His Majesty's Government intended fully to yield to the demand of Muslims that they should get a number of seats in excess of their numerical strength. Evidently at that time the Indian Christians did not make any demand for weightage. Concentrating on education and social service, the Indian Christian community has always been politically lacking in self-assertion. But as to their fitness for weightage, there can be no stronger testimony than that given in the memorandum submitted by the Madras Government to the Indian Statutory Commission: 'Indian Christians have attained a high average level of education they are keen and vigorous and being largely autonomous in their religious and social concerns have much experience in affairs.'

"The Indian Christian community has always been remarkable for its law-abiding and peace-loving character. I have already quoted the opinion given by the Madras Government about this community, in its memorandum to the Statutory Commission. The Indian Statutory Commission itself speaks thus of this community:

'Of the remaining religious communities, the Indian Christians, from the point of view both of numerical and political importance,' note the words 'political importance.' Hitherto we have been treated as politically unimportant. To continue:

'call for special consideration. The many admirably conducted schools and hospitals founded and maintained by Christian missionaries of various nationalities and denominations, some of which we visited during our tours through India, compel a tribute to the splendid services they render. It was the missionaries who were among the pioneers of education for the illiterate; they maintain some of the best medical institutions of the country; and their work among women and children, and for the depressed classes, is of special significance. Not the least admirable feature of their activities is that they have carried on their labours without offending the susceptibilities either of Moslem or of Hindu, and have lived at peace and amity with their neighbours.

'The Indian Christians stand high in the table of literacy. More than one in five of them is returned as able to satisfy the test—a remarkable result, considering that so many are drawn from the lowest strata of Hindu society. The Parsis and the Buddhists are the only Indian religious communities which make a better showing. In English education, the Indian Christians are second only to the Parsis, whose advantages are enormously superior. The achievement is a great one and shows what good work is being done in mission schools.'

"Therefore, Sir, as I have pointed out, our political importance also has been recognized by the Simon Commission. Indeed, its attitude during these years of political trouble has been of great value in the maintenance of Law and Order and it is its desire to be as helpful as possible to constituted authority and to sympathize with national aspirations; but it has been reluctant and hesitant to assert itself and claim even what it is entitled to.

29th January 1935] [Mr. M. S. Sreshta]

"You will remember, Sir, that in the Legislative Assembly the question of adequate representation of the Indian Christian community in the services recently arose. A resolution was moved by the Indian Christian Member of the Assembly to the effect that more adequate representation should be given to Indian Christians and reference was made to a Government Order whereby Indian Christians were ignored. This resolution was passed by a very large majority. This shows that we have the sympathy of all sections of the population. What we are now asking is practically on similar lines. It is admitted on every side that the representation given to the Indian Christian community is too inadequate for any balanced Constitution. If weightage is given to any minority community, the same weightage should be given to the Indian Christian community also, for the reasons I have given and for the additional reason that our community has always been on the side of Law and Order and on the side of national aspirations. Further, Sir, as I said already, if our demand will injuriously affect any other community we are willing to withdraw our demand. But, it is not the case, as our proposal is to increase the total number of seats to the extent necessary to give us equal weightage with the other minority communities. Sir, let justice be done to us. Justice was done to us in the Legislative Assembly and I have no reason to think that this House will refuse to do justice to our community. On the last occasion, the House passed my motion without a division and I hope that the same treatment will be accorded to my motion this time also.

"In this connexion, Sir, I may point out to this House that in the Legislative Assembly the proposal of the Indian Christian representative was supported by all sections. I will just quote what Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar said of our community:

'It has thrown its fortunes with the people with reference to many of its activities and has completely identified itself with the people. It seems to me that a community like that should be better treated than any other community in this country.'

"Mr. F. E. James, M.L.A., made similar remarks. In this House I hope I am not asking far too much when I ask that justice should be done to us so that the Constitution may be well-balanced and so that our community which has some special interests of its own may be able to voice its views in such a manner that they will have some effect on the House. Otherwise, what will happen is that we shall not be able to express our views and injustice may be done to us in various matters. That would be bad not only for our community, but I submit it will not be good for the nation as a whole.

"Therefore I ask that the matter may be carefully considered by this House and after it has been so considered by this House, may it be carefully considered by the British Parliament, so that the wrong which has been done might be redressed. As regards the Poona Pact, the Select Committee report makes some reference to it. It points out that in the Poona Pact there is no agreement among all the members of the depressed classes, and they have considered the arguments which have been adduced against the Poona Pact. I am very glad that they have done so, and hope that justice will be done to the depressed classes. But unfortunately no reference is made to the resolution which was passed in this Council regarding the representation of the Indian Christians. I do not know how it is that no reference has been made, or whether the matter was not considered at all. I trust that at this stage, though it is a late stage, the British Parliament will go carefully into the matter, consider all the arguments advanced in favour of a revision of the number of seats allotted to us and will do justice to us, so that our community may feel that it has not been let down, and that when every endeavour is being made to satisfy all the communities in this country, we alone, the Indian Christians, have not been neglected."

* Diwan Bahadur A. APPADURAI PILLAI:—"Mr. President, Sir, I rise to support the amendment so ably moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Sreshta. He has stated all the arguments that can be advanced in favour of the request of the Indian Christian community to raise its representation from the nine seats granted to it in the Joint Select Committee's report and the White Paper proposals. You will find, Sir, from the statement at page 349 of the Report that out of 215 seats 9 seats are allotted to the Indian Christians including one seat for woman. Unfortunately, Sir, in fixing that number, a very favourable remark made by the Simon Commission has not been taken into account. Sir, I would, even at the risk of reiterating what my Friend, Mr. Sreshta, has already pointed out, quote one or two sentences from the Simon Report:

'Of the remaining religious communities, the Indian Christians, from the point of view both of numerical and of political importance, call for special consideration.'

'A Christian church has existed in India for over 1,500 years. The old Syrian Christian community in Malabar cherishes a tradition that it was established by the Apostle St. Thomas himself. . . . In any case, its great antiquity is undoubted, but it is only in the course of the last half century, since the efforts of Christian missionaries have been concentrated upon the remote village districts, that this religious community has exhibited such rapid growth. It now claims to be the third largest religious body in India, numbering in British India and the Indian States combined about 4½ million souls, of which 2,775,000 live directly under the British Raj.'

"That was the remark made by the memorable Simon Commission, but unfortunately in allocating seats to the Indian Christian community, adequate consideration does not seem to have been paid to the claims of the community for proper representation. Whatever that may be, at the time the franchise proposals were being considered, it was thought that the Indian Christian community would be merged in the general electorate and would not be given separate electorate. This was the recommendation made by the Simon Commission: In Madras, the Indian Christian deputations asked for 'the retention of their separate electorates. We should, in any case, much prefer reservation of seats for Indian Christians to separate electorates, and we hope that when details come to be worked out this may be found to be possible.' But in the White Paper, which followed the Communal Award, we were given separate electorates; but unfortunately the number of seats that were earmarked for us were reduced to nine. Ever since the White Paper proposals were published, the Indian Christian community has been carrying on an agitation even on the floor of this House. My hon. Friend, Mr. Sreshta, brought forward a resolution which was unanimously accepted by this House, thereby showing its generosity in matters where Indian Christian interests are concerned. That was only in keeping with what the Simon Commission has said:

'Their work among women and children, and for the depressed classes is of special significance. Not the least admirable feature of their activities is that they have carried on their labours without offending the susceptibilities either of Moslem or Hindu, and have lived at peace and amity with their neighbours.'

"In accordance with that opinion, we expected the Government very generously to support the resolution moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Sreshta. Unfortunately, however, there has been no effect. The number given to us, i.e., nine seats, is too small to permit a fair distribution among the 26 districts of this province. All the five of us here are supposed to represent the whole of the Presidency. I am supposed to represent not less than nine districts—Madras, North Arcot, South Arcot, Chingleput, Chittoor, Cuddapah, Kurnool, Bellary and Anantapur, covering a distance of nearly 48,000 square miles. My Friend, Mr. Moses, is supposed to represent Ganjam, Vizagapatam, East Godavari, West Godavari, Kistna, Guntur and Nellore, covering an area of about 51,000 square miles, and I am sure that he has not seen some of the portions of Ganjam or Vizagapatam, much less the Agency. That is the anomalous position in which our community is unfortunately placed. It is not therefore possible for us to be in touch with the people or adequately to represent the grievances or the opinions of the people whom we are supposed to represent in this House. It is necessary, therefore, in fairness to our community, which has proved its capacity in the matter of public life, in the matter of local Government and in the matter of administration, that its claims should be recognized and that this disability about which we have been constantly complaining should be removed. We find that in recommending the establishment of a Second Chamber for this Province, the Joint Parliamentary Committee has allotted to us 3 seats out of 54 seats in that Chamber. If 3 out of 54 is supposed to be a suitable and adequate representation for our community on the Second Chamber, working on that basis for 215 seats, we ought to get somewhere about 12 seats in the lower chamber. Apparently, 3 out of 54 has been fixed on the consideration that the Indian Christian community is entitled to better treatment than what has been accorded to it in the White Paper proposals. Proceeding on that basis, I would argue that for the lower House, 9 out of 215 is a very poor number. All that we now ask for is an addition of five more seats to the number already allotted to us, so that 14 seats in the aggregate may be adjusted between the 26 districts which we are at present supposed to represent in this august House. I have great pleasure, therefore, Sir, in seconding the amendment moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Sreshta."

[29th January 1935]

* Mr. T. C. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—“ Mr. President, Sir, I desire to place before the House an amendment which though coming last, is not the least. It has a special importance. It is unlike the other amendments which seeks to enlarge the rights and say that the report under consideration does not go far enough. This amendment I am moving, prays the House to give its verdict that no rights Indians have now in Burma should be taken away and that whatever rights the Indians enjoy there shall be continued when Burma is separated from India.

“ This resolution merely prays that no rights should be abrogated, and that no fresh difficulties should be created in the way of Indians who went to Burma under the flag of Britain and who, by their labour, by their investments, by their energy and by their enterprise, have developed and made the country what it is to-day and that no discriminatory legislation should be allowed in the future. Sir, I desire to slightly alter the wording of the amendment which I have given notice of, so that it may be consistent with another resolution given notice of by my Hon. Friend, the Kumararaja of Chettinad. I like to introduce into my amendment one or two words which find place in the amendment of my Hon. Friend. There is no substantial difference between the amendment which I move and the one given notice of by Mr. Muthiah Chettiyar.

“ Sir, the necessity for placing this subject before this House is that the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report makes recommendations which were unexpected and which seek to discriminate against the Indians. Paragraph 473 of the Report was already referred to by my hon. Friend, Mr. Appadurai Pillai, when he dealt with the motion which he seconded. That paragraph contains two ideas. Although it may not be necessary to read the whole of it, I am desirous of bringing the material portions therein to the notice of this House:—

‘ The memorandum to which we have referred deals also with a particular problem affecting the right of entry of Indian subjects into Burma. It points out that there are in Burma over a million persons either domiciled in India or originating from some Indian province. Some are in permanent service of the Government, but the greater number are labourers who only intend to stay in Burma for a few years and who, by accepting smaller wages, tend to oust the indigenous labourer and to lower his standard of living.’

“ That is one charge.

‘ Others are Indian money-lenders who advance money on the security of agricultural land and crops and whose operations, especially in times of depression, are such as to bring about an extensive transfer of ownership from an indigenous agricultural population to a non-indigenous and non-agricultural class.’

[29th January 1935] [Mr. T. C. Srinivasa Ayyangar]

“ That is another charge.

‘ It is clear that in these circumstances it would be unreasonable to include in a new constitution for Burma provisions which would in effect give to all persons domiciled in India an unrestricted right of entry into Burma.’

“ That is their conclusion; and their recommendation is:—

‘ It is accordingly proposed that it should be competent for the Burman legislature to enact legislation restricting or imposing conditions of entry into Burma in respect of persons other than British subjects domiciled in the United Kingdom.’

“ Now Sir, one would naturally expect that if on grounds of administrative convenience or on the ground of economic development, when a large tract of country which was under one administration, is sought to be erected into a new unit of administration, the convenience and the facilities which exist for the people who have helped or who have come on the land and invested their money or made their residence there shall not only be protected, but the same facilities shall continue in the future also for all subjects of the Crown. The Report does not do any such thing. On the other hand the report goes the wrong way.

“ Burma, ever since its conquest and the constitution of the Chief Commissionership of Lower Burma, has always been an Indian Province. 12-11 p.m.
Now, for all practical purposes of Indians, it is sought to be erected into a foreign country with powers to make hostile and discriminatory legislation against Indians. Is that fair? It is certainly not. Is the charge that is levelled against the Indians in the Report founded on fact; and can it be made out? Can any one sympathize with the authors of the Report to any extent in their recommendations? I propose now to quote some authorities, not emanating from the side of the people who are sought to be hit but opinions of administrators and show that there is really no foundation for the charges which are levelled. For some years past there has been a cry for the separation of Burma. I do not now want to enter into the question of the separation of Burma and deal with the merits or demerits of that proposal. It is primarily for the Burmans concerned and also for the Government of Great Britain who, for purposes of Imperial policy, may think of separating Burma. Into that question, I do not go. I deal only with the question of the proposals for discriminating against Indians. If we study the history of Burma in respect of the question of Indian migration there, you will find that soon after the conquest of Burma in 1852, the British Government found that large tracts of land were forest land, unoccupied land, that communications were difficult and facilities for import and export trade did not exist, while at the same time, the country contained abundant resources which awaited development. It required labour, it required capital and it required people who would come and stay there and brave the difficulties. Unlike certain other countries where the pre-existing development attracts exploiters, this was a country in which the necessity for development attracted the people. The Indians were induced to go there in the interests of Burma. In those days it was the settled policy of the Government to make a sojourn to Burma as attractive as possible to the people.

[Mr. T. C. Srinivasa Ayyangar] [29th January 1935]

"The Report says that the connexion between Burma and India whether traditionally or historically was of the least. I wonder where the learned authors got their idea from. I will quote from the Census Report of 1911, a report prepared at a time when political passions were not roused, when, as lawyers would put it, no troubles or disputes existed. The testimony is all the more valuable. This is from the Census Report prepared by Mr. Morgan Webb, I.C.S.:—

'As far back as the history of Burmese national life can be traced by means of its chronicles and its legendary lore, migration from India has been one of its most prominent and continuous features. Both the Burmese and the Talaings owe their evolution from a number of small, wild, scattered, disunited and nomadic tribes into large and cohesive kingdoms, to their contact with Indian colonists who had settled in numerous small colonies in the valley of the Irrawaddy. The earliest attempts at any form of Government beyond a mere tribal organization commenced under Indian auspices at Tagaung, at Prome and at Thaton. The religion of Burma equally with its system of government was obtained from Indian sources. Indian influence is to be found in every branch of Burmese life, not only in its religion and in its government, but also in its architecture, its festivals, its ceremonials, and its more intimate and domestic phases. The further back in point of time the investigations are carried the greater is the degree of Indian influence perceived.

"I do not want to trouble the Council with a historical dissertation except to draw their attention to this important statement made officially and after investigation at a time when no troubles existed between Burmans and Indians or between Burmans and Indians on the one hand and Britons on the other.

"I understand that even to-day in this country of Burma whose area is 230,000 square miles, three-fifths is forest land. What must have been the case 80 years ago. A much greater extent was forest land. Then communications had to be opened; roads had to be built and railway tracks laid. All this required labour and it was India that supplied it and Indian capital mainly that worked it. When the country was reclaimed and brought under cultivation, Burma started on a progressive march of economic development. Time will not permit me to go into this interesting history but let me satisfy myself with giving a few figures concerning the development during the last 30 years. In 1900 the acreage under cultivation was 72 lakhs of acres; in 1910 it was 138 lakhs of acres, in 1920, 150 lakhs of acres and in 1930, 190 lakhs of acres. In the export trade of Burma, nearly Rs. 11 crores worth of rice is imported into India. The largest single consumer of the agricultural produce of Burma is India. India consumes about Rs. 8½ crores worth of petroleum, kerosene and other mineral products and Rs. 9½ crores worth of teak. In a port in the district of Ramnad, the main business is the import of timber from Burma. Along with the extension of rice cultivation, came the rice-milling business. From 1892 to 1925 the number of rice mills increased from 52 to 529 and one-third of the mills are owned by Indians. Now with the clearance of the forests and with the growth of the timber trade and industry in which the Government have sunk vast sums of money, came along the saw mills. The number of saw mills increased from 41 in 1892 to 116 in 1930. Considering all the factories there in Burma, the number has increased from 21,000 mills to 87,000 mills between 1892 and 1925. The question is who contributed to the vast development of Burma and what was the effect of this development? Did the development hinder the Burman from becoming rich? Have the Indians, Europeans or other non-Burmans who exploited the country been mere profiteers and have the Burman population been made to suffer in any way? It has not been the case at all. I will quote from no less an authority than Sir Harcourt Butler, former Governor of Burma.

'Without the assistance of the Chettiyar Banking system, Burma would never have achieved the wonderful advance for the last 25 to 30 years. The Chettiyars provide the necessary finance to the agriculturists in practically every village throughout the Province, and while enabling the Burman to greatly increase his production, they have at the same time, undoubtedly inculcated the idea of thrift and economy by their insisting on regular payments as regards both principal and interest. The Burman to-day is a much wealthier man than he was 25 years ago and for this state of things, the Chettiyar deserves his share of thanks.'

"I want to say a few words on the question of the banking system of the country. The European, the Chinese and foreign incorporated banks have their establishments in the big cities. But the industrial and agricultural operations of the rural parts of the country require a quite different system of banking which is supplied by the Chettiyar community who have ramifications all over the country and have about 1,500 firms in both Upper and Lower Burma. Without the co-operation and the co-ordinated effort of the great European banking houses in the cities and the Chettiyar firms in the country parts, the banking system of the country would not have been perfect and all this great economic development of the Province would not have been possible. I will quote a passage from the Report of the Burma Banking Enquiry Committee:—

'The Chettiyars are the mainstay of agricultural finance in this Province. They not only do a large, generally, the largest part of lending direct to agriculturists, they also finance to a considerable extent others who do such lending, etc. They have not only rendered a service in the past, playing in the development of Burma, a necessary part which no other class has offered to play; without their support or the substitution of some other banking system towards which no steps have as yet been taken, the internal and external trade of the country would break down and the rice crop could not even be produced.'

"Under these circumstances, the question arises whether the Chettiyars have helped Burma and the Burman people or whether they have deprived them of their land or their means of subsistence. Have they in any way stood in the way of the progress of the Burman people? One charge particularly made in the Report is that they lend money in a way by which, during times of depression the land tends to pass from Burman agriculturists to non-agriculturists of India. Nothing can be farther from the truth. Many of us know that the Chettiyar Banking community receive deposits as any bankers do, add the same to their own capital and utilize both for their banking business in Burma. Therefore, to the Chettiyars nothing is more welcome than liquid cash. To have their cash investments converted into land is a most unwelcome thing to them. If to-day large tracts of land have come into their possession, it is in spite of their desire and in spite of their need as bankers. They do not want agricultural land and they cannot want it if their banking system is to progress. The possession by Chettiyars of land in Burma is due mainly to the fall in the price of paddy and the depression engendered. The difficulty of recovering their money has led to their taking possession of the land by way of liquidation of their claims. If the Burmans were obliged to sell their land to others, their liabilities could never have been discharged. If a reasonable price was available, these Chettiyar bankers who came into possession of the lands would be the first to take advantage of it, sell their lands and get their money back. No adequate enquiry has been made; no proper investigation of the circumstances that led to the transference of the lands even attempted and not even authoritative documents examined before the charge has been levelled. A hasty conclusion has been arrived at and a recommendation which is as much unjust as it is undeserved has been made.

"As regards the question of labour, we find very very strange observations made in the Report. Apart from prior official documents I will show how inconsistent the Report itself is.

12-30 p.m. "I shall read a passage from the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Paragraph 434 of the Report says:

'The difficulty of regulating the economic relations of India and Burma in the period immediately following separation has presented itself to us as the most serious obstacle to a recommendation in favour of separation.'

"Mark these words:

'We were much impressed by the views of the Delegates representing commercial interests, both European and Indian on the disturbance of India-Burma trade which might result from separation.'

"But they offer a palliative. That seems to be a trade agreement, under which, in spite of separation, there ought not to be tariff operation and the present basis of free tariff for imports and exports that subsists now between Burma and India shall continue for some years. But how has this economic development been brought about? The report itself in another place says—paragraph 433:

'The negotiations for a Trade Agreement might also be extended to the regulation of the immigration of Indian labour into Burma for the first few years after separation.'

"That clearly shows that the Indian labour is considered absolutely essential for Burma and therefore they seek to provide for a continuance of it. As the Joint Committee Report frequently quotes the Statutory Commission in respect of their recommendations, I shall read a passage from the Statutory Commission Report, regarding the part played by the Indian labour as well as by the bankers of India in the development of Burma. The Statutory Commission Report says:

'The cosmopolitan port of Rangoon contains indeed an Indian element largely due to emigration from Madras which is actually larger than the Burmese population. . . . As the emigration and immigration statistics of the ports show, the Indian comes and goes and the steady excess of immigrants over Indian emigrants may to a measure rather of economic development than of any Indian penetration of Burma. If the Indian immigrant does stay, he tends to be absorbed into the Burman population. Whether he stays or returns, he plays a part in the economic life of Burma, which the Burman is not very willing to undertake for himself; for, the Burman is not equally willing to face hard work for small pay. . . . The Burman has so far been content to leave large scale commerce and industry entirely in foreign hands.

[Mr. T. C. Srinivasa Ayyangar] 29th January 1935]

Rangoon in the volume of exports and imports ranks only below Calcutta and Bombay. The wealthy merchants there are Europeans, Indians and Chinese.'

"The Statutory Commission, after having mentioned that the association of Burma and India is a longstanding one, proceeds to consider whether the proposal for separation may be made. One of the questions which it formulates is this:—'Have ties been formed between India and Burma, the breaking of which would injure either or both partners?' In dealing with this question, some observations are made which shew that in any view no discriminatory laws should be allowed to be passed as against Indians. The Statutory Commission observe:

'Burma is also dependant for much of her prosperity on Indian labour. India is the largest single consumer of her produce. A considerable part of the capital and enterprise which have developed her trade is Indian.'

"Further on, they say:

'The political and constitutional development which she has now reached has come to her as a part of India and her reliance for securing further advance is based on promises made by Britain to India.'

"For some reasons which are not convincing, a recommendation for separation is made. However, I am not directly concerned with the question of separation. But I am concerned with the other question whether discriminatory legislation should be made or not. The Statutory Commission which is an authority for the Joint Committee Report says:

'In view of the vital importance of Indian labour to Burma and of Burma rice to India, and of the need to Burma of Indian coal and gunnies, a trade convention is necessary . . .'

"The report further on says:

'The presence of Indians in Burma, is due not to any special privileges extended to them but to the plain fact that Indians can perform many services which the Burman is unable or unwilling to perform for himself. The new constitution for Burma should make due provision for the protection of the legitimate interests of Indians domiciled in Burma.'

"I say the recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee in that respect is against the view expressed in the prior documents. I ask whether it is just and proper that such a power to discriminate against Indians should be given in the circumstances. In asking for rights of free entry, residence, acquisition of property and privileges in the matter of franchise, education and various other things which are mentioned in the amendment, our claim is the result of our long connexion with Burma. We want, Sir, what, even prior to the British connexion, Indians fewer in numbers then enjoyed in Burma; after the advent of Britain and the advent of the steamship, emigration has been on a vaster scale, with the consequence of a quicker, and far wider development of the country with advantage to the Burmans and Indians. As I feel, Sir, that there are other Members of the House like my hon. Friends, Messrs. Murugappa Chettiyar, Muthiah Chettiyar, Vasudeva Pillai and others who have more intimate acquaintance with Burma and the conditions in Burma and of the commercial and industrial pursuits in that Province than I have, I wish to close my remarks and I submit the following amendment for the acceptance of the House:—

Add at the end—

“and, on such consideration, this Council is of opinion that proposals for separation of Burma should not be given effect to unless sufficient safeguards are provided in regard to free entry, residence, education, franchise, representation on the Legislature, services and professions, banking, trade, and ownership of lands and other properties, for Indians in Burma””

* Mr. M. A. MUTHIAH CHETTIYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, I rise to second the amendment moved by my esteemed friend from my district, Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar. He has so very ably dealt with the question that my work has been lightened. He is one who lives in the midst of persons who are connected with Burma; that is the chief reason for his having such a sound knowledge of things in Burma. The question of Indian Nationals abroad has always taken serious turns occasionally and crises like this are often found in places like South Africa, Ceylon, Indo-China and other foreign places. It is surprising that there should be a crisis for Indian Nationals in our own country, for Burma has been part of India all along, and that persons who have been living in our own country should be told ‘you are foreigners from to-morrow.’ This is the difficult situation in which our Indian brethren are placed in Burma; they have lived in Burma, worked in Burma and carried on their avocations in life, like trade, commerce and employment. They have been thinking that Burma will always be part of India. It is true that the question of separation has not come suddenly in 1935 from the Joint Parliamentary Committee. It is a question which has been agitating the minds of Burmans for the last four or five years; though it was mooted out on previous occasions also, it has been seriously agitating the minds of the people in Burma for the last five years. I may say that the Nattukkottai Chettiyar community did not take part in the question of the separation of Burma. They remained neutral. The Burmans themselves have not decided whether they want separation or not. That question was fought out and the opinion was keenly divided and it was most surprising that in the Legislative Council of Burma, the debate went on for six days, without a decision being taken—most surprising in the history of legislative bodies. If a vote had been taken, anti-separationists might have succeeded. Of course, I cannot prophesy what would have taken place, if vote had been taken; opinion was so keenly divided. But Indians did not raise any great protest—even those who felt that separation would end in disaster to Indians. They did not take any active part at all, though they felt strongly in the matter. But I do not think there is any Indian who felt that injustice would be meted out to Indians in Burma. All of us are for seeing that justice is meted out to us and that our political and economic rights are safeguarded in the future Burma. We have always been thinking that the work we have done for the development of Burma would not be forgotten. Burma would not have been what it is to-day but for Indian capital and for Indian labour. Ever since the annexation of Burma, immigration was increasing and the Government took part in encouraging immigration. More than that, merchants and bankers who carried on business there and invested money, had the assurance that their rights would be secure. Burma being one of the Provinces of India, they have been carrying on their professions peacefully. They own extensive property; they built towns; almost all the towns have been built by Indians; most of the buildings that exist in Rangoon do belong to Indians; extensive property is owned by Indians throughout the Province of Burma, landed property as well as house property; they pay taxes, enormous taxes to the Corporation and Municipalities in Burma. If we take the details with regard to the population of some of the towns, it will be surprising to note that the majority of the population in Rangoon, the capital City, is Indian and a considerable portion of them is from the Madras Presidency. In some other towns like Moulmein, Insein and Bassein, you will see that Indians are 40 to 50 per cent of the population. The interests of Indians in Burma are enormous. I do not want to weary the House with all the details as most of the Indians here do realize the importance of the wealth and prosperity of those Indians who are connected with Burma; the prosperity of thousands of families of poor Indians rests with their prosperity in Burma. There are thousands of poor families who are working there as labourers and in other kinds of employment there; some of them happen to own lands there and have remained there for years; of course, some of them come away after their short stay at Burma; all of them depend upon Burma. But it must be said that Burma has been benefited greatly by the advent of Indians into that country.

“Sir, the sub-committee of the first Round Table Conference laid down clearly that there should be no discrimination against Indians; and it was this which made us hope that we would have justice in the future constitution. Now the Joint Select Committee Report has given a rude shock. A Chettiyars’ Conference was held and strong protest was made against the attitude of the Committee towards Indians in Burma and their resolutions have been sent to the British Government so that the wrong may be righted. Besides the labourer and the capitalist, there are large sections of Indians who are responsible for running the services of Government in Burma. The British people when they annexed Burma could not get men enough to carry on the administration and so they had to get men from India; and these men have been continuing in service for decades together. And now they are to be told that they will not be given free entry and they cannot have employment as in the past, in the future administration of Burma. This is a thing which they never dreamt of. Already there exist certain restrictions against them. The Joint Parliamentary Committee have not only retained them, but they have gone a step further in yielding to the Burman agitation and accepting their proposal to empower the Burma legislature to pass a law restricting the free entry of Indians to act as a safeguard against the invasion of Indians in the services. This is enough to show that they want to discriminate against Indians as such, who want to take service there.

"I shall refer in particular to the position of the Chettiyar community in Burma. In Burma, the Chettiyars have a banking system spread all over the country, in every nook and corner. There are now about 1,400 firms, and they have been largely responsible for bringing into cultivation large tracts of forest land. As has been pointed out by the previous speaker, the acreage of land under cultivation has increased from 70 lakhs of acres in 1,900 to 190 lakhs of acres in 1934. Not only have they been responsible for this large increase in the area of cultivation, but they are also responsible for the financing of agricultural operations. My statements are borne out by the authoritative report of the Banking Enquiry Committee. But for the money the Chettiyars advance annually for cultivation it would not be possible for the cultivation to be completed. Added to this, the next factor is important. Indian labour from India has been found necessary to complete the cultivation and the harvest. In paragraph 473 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report it is stated impliedly that the Indian banker is avaricious of taking over the lands, upon which they advance money in the first instance. We emphatically protest against such a statement. The Indian banker there is the Nattukottai Chettiyar, or the Guzarati or the Multani. They are averse to possessing any land, for it is not in their tradition and they would have only liquid cash always. But they have been forced to own lands as otherwise the crores of money they have advanced on them were at stake. The Nattukottai Chettiyars alone have invested about 80 crores in that province and they have been forced to own land much against their wish. They now find it very difficult to manage all that land. It is a great problem for them to pay the land revenue. They pay about a crore of rupees by way of land tax, income-tax and other taxes. On account of the great depression, they have been finding it very hard to pay these taxes. The question whether the Chettiyars are anxious to own land or not will be clear from the following statement of the Chairman of the Banking Enquiry Committee. He says 'the present increase of lands in the Chettiyars' hands is a reflection of the depression in the business of paddy cultivation and it is not an indication that the Chettiyars are greedy to get possession of land.' Mr. Grentham, the Chairman of the Committee has been in Burma for over 20 years and is well acquainted with the banking system of the Chettiyars. The Chettiyars are only looking forward to the day when the price of land will go up and when it will be possible for them to realize a fair proportion of the money invested by them. The Conference held in Chettinad also passed resolutions protesting against the insinuation that the Chettiyars are anxious to own lands. In paragraph 473 of the Report the Committee say that they want to restrict the free entry of Indians on the ground that Indian labour is cheap and would oust Burmese labour, and they want to restrict the entry of all classes of Indians except those of 'good standing.' That high-sounding phrase

[29th January 1935] [Mr. M. A. Muthiah Chettiyar]

'good standing' is very difficult to define and I am sure it will not help us at all in any way. For later on, in another place dealing with the question of admission to services they say that the power of the Burma legislature to impose conditions or restrictions on entry into Burma should prove a sufficient safeguard. So I do not think Indians will gain anything by this phrase 'good standing.'

"There is one other point that I should like to stress, viz., the question of alienation of land. The Burma White Paper has been approved by the Joint Select Committee. In the Burma White Paper it is said that any legislation restricting free alienation of land will not be considered as discriminatory legislation. This is enough to ruin all those persons who are in possession of land. Unfortunately some Indians and Indian bankers have come into possession of land in Burma and it will take many many years before they are able to dispose of it. Till then there should not be any restriction. That is my point. If it is said that land shall not be alienated to anybody except to agriculturists, it will be very difficult for the non-agricultural class who have now come into possession to sell that land. It is to this the Indian community takes very strong exception. On the other hand, we should have a safeguard definitely stating that we have the right of free alienation of lands that are now in the hands of Indians and lands that may come into our possession in the future. Otherwise all the money that has been turned in the shape of land is at stake.

"With regard to representation in the legislature of Burma, the Indian percentage is sought to be reduced. The percentage at present for Indians is 10 per cent; it is proposed to reduce it to 6½ per cent whereas for the Karen community, the percentage is raised from 6 to 10. All we want is that adequate representation should be given to the Indian community. The Chettiyars' Association and the Indian Landholders' Association also require separate representation on the Legislative Council. It is but fair that the Chettiyar community having such a large stake in the country should be given adequate and separate representation on its legislature, which is to decide the destinies of the people under it.

"It is but meet that a resolution of this kind should be considered by this Council—for thousands of families in this Presidency are connected with Burma and their fortunes are dependent on the constitution that is going to be proposed for it—and its views expressed in no uncertain terms. I hope this Council will agree to pass this resolution."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I do not propose to allow any other amendments to be moved; for these seven amendments have taken already a day and a half and I wish the House, considering the short time before it and the long list of hon. Members who are anxious to speak, will be satisfied with as little time as possible for each individual member.

"The main motion as well as the seven amendments are for the discussion of the House."

[29th January 1935]

Mr. KOTI REDDI:—"May I ask whether it would not be possible for Government to allot one more day for this, for there are still many members who are anxious to speak."

1 p.m. * Mr. F. BIRLEY:—"Mr. President, Sir, there is only one amendment to the Hon. the Revenue Member's motion now before the House to which I can lend my almost unqualified support and that is the amendment sponsored by my hon. Friend, Mr. Devadasan. And having supported that view I had no difficulty in deciding on my attitude with regard to the amendment which my hon. Friend Dr. Subbarayan had the temerity to father. I am prepared to admit that there are many points in the hon. Dr. Subbarayan's speech, with which I am very largely in sympathy although I cannot admit the Irish analogy. Although perhaps there were evidences that such a situation might arise in the future, I feel that the action now taken by His Majesty's Government will preclude any possibility of the development of a situation in this country, such as has developed in Ireland. My hon. Friend Dr. Subbarayan referred to the attitude of the representatives of British interests in this House and this reference has caused us some surprise and perhaps a little pain. I am a little uncertain as to whether my hon. and learned Friend's remarks constitute a threat or a promise, but I think that he is a very poor judge of character if he thinks that the representatives of British interests in this House can be cajoled or bribed or intimidated or even sandbagged into the adoption of an attitude which is not in complete accord with their honest convictions. I feel sure that when my hon. Friend, whom we all know is a sportsman, fully realizes the implications involved in his remarks, he will be sorry not only that he uttered them, but he ever conceived such a thought. There is nothing reactionary about our attitude. We are face to face with the actualities of the situation in our everyday life and we require neither threats nor promises to enable us to read the writing on the wall and to appreciate fully the situation which has developed under our very eyes.

"It is, Sir, within the knowledge of the Members of this House that we non-official Britons domiciled in this country have for many years worked wholeheartedly with our Indian fellow subjects of the Empire in the great cause of political advance for India. But we have always been on the side of orderly progress as opposed to an ill-defined policy leading to nowhere—except perhaps to chaos. In these circumstances, Sir, and in this spirit, we welcomed the Simon Commission, we welcomed the Franchise Committee, we welcomed the Round Table Conferences and we welcomed the White Paper. We saw in these evidences of the desire of the British Government for progress—and for progress on proper lines. And now, when in the fulness of time the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report embodying the final results of years of patient research and enquiry has appeared, the recognized bodies of non-official Britons in India have given it in general their approval and their blessing.

[29th January 1935] [Mr. F. Birley]

"Now, Sir, there has been plenty of plain-speaking from the left in this House and elsewhere and it is high time that there was some equally plain-speaking from the right; and talking of plain-speaking I read a few weeks ago in a report of a meeting of Indians domiciled in England that a speaker had expressed the view that it was an impertinence for the British Parliament to take upon itself the task of drafting a constitution for India. May be the individual who voiced this opinion was a person of little consequence and may be it would be politic not to say anything more about it. But we are talking plainly now; so I will express the view that whoever shares the view of our friend in London resembles the ostrich who buries its head in the sand to hide itself from its pursuers. He is either ignorant of the history of India during the past hundred years or he deliberately disregards it. In any case, whether it is palatable or nauseous the British Parliament has the sole right and the sole power to decide the nature of the future constitution of India, and having recognized that I would ask the members of this House to consider the present political situation in England. There is on the one hand a body of British statesmen actuated by the keenest goodwill towards Indian aspirations and on the other a body of politicians whose goodwill towards India embraces no shadow of sympathy towards any form of political advancement. I would ask to which of these two bodies should the members of this House lend their support and encouragement. And the answer is obvious. And yet, this house is seriously considering resolutions which on the face of them play into the hands of the enemies of our legitimate desire for constitutional advance. And it is not as my hon. Friend Dr. Subbarayan argued a question of placating opinion. Sir Samuel Hoare has long recognized that it is a waste of time attempting to reconcile the irreconcilable and he knows that the Joint Committee report was condemned before it was published, just as the Simon Commission report and the White Paper were. It is a question of practical politics. The Bill has to be manœuvred through Parliament and it would be a tactical error of the first magnitude to play into the hands of the reactionaries in England. And it goes even farther than that because I am sure that the great majority of the members of this House and of the people whom they represent are satisfied that the proposals contained in the Joint Committee report are substantially advantageous to this country.

"Then, Sir, with the detailed criticisms of the report I have much more sympathy and it would indeed be a miracle if the entire proposals contained in the report completely satisfied all shades of opinion. The interests which I represent are not completely satisfied and in common with several other minority communities we are agitating for certain modifications. As there is no time to-day to discuss these, I would like to speak about something of more general interest.

"I may say at once however that we find it difficult to reconcile the agitation against the safeguards with the broad statesmanlike view which should characterize the views of great Indian leaders. If any explanation in the matter of safeguards were needed His Excellency the

[Mr. F. Birley] [29th January 1935]

Governor's speech in this House last Monday should have disarmed criticism.

"In my office I frequently come across contract forms for the purchase or sale of goods and these forms are so hedged in with pains and penalties that a timid man or an inexperienced one would only sign them in fear and trembling.

"And yet in actual practice if the seller delivers the goods and the buyer takes delivery and pays for them the contract is duly fulfilled and the pains and penalties are inoperative.

"The analogy is perfect—the penalty clauses in a business contract are the exact counterpart of the safeguards in the constitution and so long as the Ministers who are elected by the people of the country to govern deliver the goods correctly, the safeguards, like the penalty clauses in a contract, are never even thought of.

"The penalty clauses are inserted to protect both buyer and seller and the safeguards are there to protect the people of this country from ill-advised action which might lead to disaster, not to the British Parliament but to the people of India.

"The commercial safeguards are more my immediate concern than the constitutional safeguards. And here again, I would ask my friends in this House to view this subject broadly and to consider that these safeguards have been framed in the common interests of India and Britain.

"It is literally true that British commerce established in this country has viewed with alarm the uncompromising attitude of certain sections of Indian opinion, and in our representations to the Round Table Conference and to the Joint Committee we have pressed not for any favours but for the ordinary rights of citizens of the Empire in a country which is and which, please God, will remain an integral part of the Empire. Our representations were sympathetically received not only by the British Members of the Round Table Conference but also by the great majority of the Indian delegation, and the Joint Committee have to some extent recognized our claims for just treatment based on reciprocal just treatment of Indian nationals in Britain. We have asked for the continuance of our right to live and work in peaceful amity with our neighbours in this country and there is nothing in the proposals of the Joint Committee which purports to give us anything more than this right.

"In conclusion, Sir, I am glad to find that there is in this House a generous attitude of mind towards these proposals for constitutional reform and some recognition of the care and forethought based on centuries of political experience embodied in the Joint Committee report, the predominating factor in which is the true desire for the ultimate good of India."

* Mr. YAKUB HASAN SAHIB:—"Mr. President, Sir, as one who had been fighting for more than two decades and who had perhaps made the greatest individual sacrifice for the freedom of India, I feel very sorely on this subject. In order that I may speak with due restraint, especially in view of the present unsatisfactory state of my health and weakness, I have thought it advisable to jot down a few notes and I will try to keep myself within them.

"The Parliamentary Declaration of 1917 has made the British Government so enamoured of doing things by stages in respect of the constitutional reforms in India, and in order that the fall may not be too precipitate and sudden, they have let down India in the present case by stages. Retrograde and disappointing as the White Paper was, it was more liberal than the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, and by the time the Government of India Bill emerges through the onslaught of the diehards in both the Houses of Parliament, it will only be a mockery of what was so alluringly offered to India in 1929. In these days of short memories it is necessary that the British Government are reminded that the demand of Dominion Status was made by the All-Parties Conference held at Calcutta in December 1928. It was the first occasion when the representatives of all parties assembled and in one voice asserted that India will not be satisfied with her position in the British Empire if she was not given the status of a Dominion in the British Commonwealth of Nations. I had the privilege of seconding the principal resolution so ably moved by the late lamented Congress stalwart, Mr. Sen Gupta. Mahatma Gandhi, who had practically retired from the Congress, was brought back to the Congress and it was through the great personal devotion that he commanded even in the extreme section of Congressmen that the Congress was practically coerced into accepting with a narrow majority a constitution that was capable of ensuring for India the status of a Dominion, if that constitution was granted within a year. Such a united demand was bound to be irresistible and the Viceroy was summoned to the headquarters of the Empire so that the Cabinet may with his advice find out the ways and means of meeting a unique situation that had arisen on account of the united stand that all parties had taken in India in respect of the freedom of India. The then Lord Irwin (now Lord Halifax) went to England to meet the Tory Cabinet but it so happened that he had eventually instructions from the Labour Government—a party whose sympathy and good intentions for India are gratefully gratifying to India. Lord Irwin was instructed authoritatively to put on the Parliamentary announcement of 1917 an interpretation which the National Government now refuses to incorporate in the preamble of the forthcoming Act. On the other hand, against all the canons of Act-making, it is proposed to retain the preamble of the old Act, while the Act itself is to be repealed so that the 1917 announcement may continue to be conveniently interpreted to suit different occasions and India might still be at the mercy of the British Parliament for further dolos of reforms.

"It was not for the settling of a constitution of a kind that is now adumbrated in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report that India was invited to the Round Table Conference. Nor is the proposed Bill the outcome of an agreement between the British Government and the representatives of India, the principle of which was unmistakably propounded in the first Round Table Conference. In fact the British Government was so impressed with the unrepresentative character of the Indians assembled in the First Round Table Conference and they so vividly realized that any agreement arrived at with Indians, who were not in a position to deliver the goods, would not be binding on India that after the conclusion of the First Round Table Conference Gandhiji was set at liberty and the famous Gandhi-Irwin Pact was made to make it possible for the Congress representative to attend the second Round Table Conference.

"Does this constitution give India the substance of Independence and can any Britisher who has a particle of honesty in him and who is endowed with such a thing as conscience, say that the elaborate safeguards provided in the report are purely in the interests of India?"

"Sir, far too much is made of the failure of Mahatmaji to bring about an agreement on the communal question in the second Round Table Conference. The question of the representation of minorities in the legislature and administration was of minor importance when the freedom and the birthright of India to govern herself and manage her affairs without outside interference was at stake. Eventually any communal settlement, however partial it might be to certain minorities and unsatisfactory to the majority community, would have been readily agreed to if the main object of full responsible Government was attained. Communal adjustments can satisfactorily be made only in self-governing India, but for the working of the kind of constitution that Great Britain wishes to impose upon India the communal award of the British Premier would prove ideally helpful. Besides this, in the proposed federal legislature the Britishers will have additional allies, and as if landowners and capitalists, 'people with stakes in the country' were not enough in the present constitution to thwart the progressive element in British India the handbound representatives of the rulers of States need to be brought in to act as additional check on the popular element in the central legislature!"

"Only free India can be federated India and no spectacle could be imagined to be more edifying and proud than to see the representatives of the provinces and those of the States sitting side by side in the Indian Houses of Parliament and functioning unitedly for the good Government and national advancement of free India. It was the prospect of India's possessing the Dominion Status in the commonwealth of British nations that induced the Princes to agree to join the Federation in the first Round Table Conference and induced the British Indians to agree to the principle of Federation. The present hesitation on the part of some Princes to lend their support to make Federation an accomplished fact is, I think, to a large extent, due to the fact that the picture of Federation that they were led to form mentally in the first Round Table Conference is cleanly wiped out by the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. In fact His Highness the Maharaja of

29th January 1935] [Mr. Yakub Hasan Sahib]

Patiala has recently said that as British India is not satisfied with the constitution outlined by the Report the Princes hesitate to be a party to an arrangement which is unacceptable to British India.

"The question of accepting or rejecting the constitution in the making of which Indian opinion was not given any weight, does not arise in my opinion. The Government is powerful enough to impose any constitution they like on India and if 150 years of British Rule has not done anything else it has at least created and fostered the 'Dependency' mentality in some Indians to a sufficient extent that there can be no fear of the forthcoming constitution not being worked. (Hear, hear.) But there is a difference in the working and working of a constitution and as the spokesman of the Justice Party has pointed out, the proposed constitution requires substantial modifications 'to secure good will for the working of it in a peaceful atmosphere.'

"Has the Government read a warning in the new orientation of the Indian National Congress in respect of the legislature? If the working of the constitution means accepting it, the Congress will, I am sure, accept the challenge and will work the constitution both at the centre and in the provinces. The Congressmen and Congresswomen will not, like the Swarajists of old, refuse to accept office. They will as a majority party form the Ministry in every province and will defy the Governor at every step to use all his special powers and safeguards to counteract the ministry. (Hear, hear.) In providing safeguards, Governor's Acts and what not, Government have no doubt anticipated the future attitude of the Indian nationalists in the legislatures. While the constitution will be worked internally by Congressmen and Congresswomen in the manner I foresee, the atmosphere outside will hardly be such as to be called peaceful. Intense agitation will be carried on in which all communities and parties will join without any reservation and India will not rest till the proposed enactment is fully repealed. (Hear, hear.)

"The affront given by the Report, Sir, is already so great that all parties and communities have condemned the report unitedly. (Hear, hear.) There are no doubt still some people who are under the delusion that the eleventh-hour representations of a Council like this will induce the Britishers to improve the Bill, that is now before the Parliament. But when their hopes are dashed to the ground, as they are sure to be, the reaction will only make the national solidarity doubly solid. (Hear, hear.)

"Sir, now that the spokesman of the depressed classes and Indian Christians have had their say on this question, as a Muslim and the Leader of the Madras Legislative Council Muslim Party, I may be allowed to say that the oldest Muslim political body in this Province, the Madras Presidency Muslim League, has adopted a resolution in the following terms:—

This Council of the Madras Presidency Muslim League is strongly of opinion after bestowing its careful consideration on all aspects of Joint Parliamentary Committee Report that the proposals contained in the Report, which are based on distrust and suspicion of the people of this country, are more reactionary than even the White Paper proposals (hear, hear), that any constitution based on the same will perpetuate the political, economic and commercial subjugation of the people of this country in a worse form than under the present system of Government, that the so-called reforms will be too heavy for this country to bear, that therefore the proposals are unacceptable (hear, hear) and deserve to be rejected. (Hear, hear and cheers.) "

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The House will adjourn and meet at 2-30 p.m."

After Lunch (2-30 p.m.)

* Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—"Mr. President, Sir, I am glad that the Hon. Member representing the European Group has stated the case from the point of view of business and from a commonsense point of view. I think that is the view that is held by many of the thinking people in the country; I am glad that at this stage of the debate, Mr. Birley has given expression to the view of an experienced businessman. I have listened with some attention to what my hon. Friend, Mr. Yakub Hasan, has said. I thought then that he was addressing from the Congress platform or addressing in the breach, because I could not, I regret to say, find much substance in what he spoke except long string of words and phrases. If on the other hand there was any constructive criticism, I should have been glad to hear that from him. But to my disappointment, I was not able to get anything from out of the long speech that he made here. I do not on this occasion propose to enter into a discussion of the theories that were propounded by an experienced Congressman such as Mr. Yakub Hasan, but I confine myself now only to meeting the points which were raised by the hon. Member, Dr. Subbarayan, in support of the motion that he so ably placed before this House. Even Mr. Birley in his remarks said that his group was not altogether satisfied because some of the points pressed by them before the Round Table Conference were not all accepted. I am not surprised at the way in which the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report was received and the varying degrees of criticism both in India and in England. In England, it is the other extreme, viz., the cry of 'surrender' of British Rule in India; in India, the watchword went round saying 'reject the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report.' These are the two extreme views expressed in regard to this Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. Now, I want to place before you the aspect how our opinion is strong in England itself. The Daily Mail began to hunder and say that the stage has come when Britain is going to lose India and all connexion with India; it further says 'this marks the end of British India which has been the greatest achievement of the British people in modern history.'

[29th January 1935]. [Sir A. P. Patro]

"I have discussed, Sir, the merits of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report on several occasions and therefore it is unnecessary for me to enter into the various provisions or recommendations made in the Report. Therefore, I would like to deal with the points that were raised by the hon. Mover of the first amendment, Dr. Subbarayan. He has spoken with great warmth and earnestness in advocating the case which he has placed in his amendment. But there is not much of logic in the arguments that he advanced in favour of his position. He explored the regions of the past and wanted to know if he could find any ground to support the position which he has taken up. I would ask the House to refer to the Preamble of the Act of 1919 which summarizes all the proceedings before and definitely lays down the policy of Parliament, namely, the progressive realization of responsible Self-Government by successive stages. That is what has been laid down there. It does not help his case. So, he did not explore the history of this matter. I would therefore relate what happened in our country as soon as the scheme of 1919 was promulgated and action was taken on that. There was a section of people in this country who ran away from the post of their duty and did not work the Reforms for what they were worth in the interests of the people. So, they lost all the experience and knowledge necessary for the purpose of working Parliamentary institutions in this country and attaining their national ideals. Therefore, a resolution was tabled in the Legislative Assembly asking for an enquiry into the condition of the country for revising the Reforms which were inaugurated by the Montagu-Chelmsford Scheme. Now, as a result of that agitation in the Legislative Assembly, the Muddiman Committee was appointed, and that Committee by a majority said that the time had not come for a revision to take place but suggested certain amendments in regard to the procedure and other minor matters. Nevertheless, the agitation continued in the country; the political forces were gathering strength and when agitation reached a certain stage, the British Government thought it wise that an investigation should take place under the provisions of the Act of 1919. So, we had the Statutory Commission appointed. We all know that the hon. Mover of the first amendment courageously co-operated with the Simon Commission even though his colleagues in the Ministry had not the courage to face the difficulties of the situation, and in response to the various invitations made by the Simon Commission, a large volume of very important evidence was placed before them, and we have had the Simon Commission Report. But the Simon Commission Report was dealt with fortunately or unfortunately by a Government which was in Office but not in power. The Socialist or Labour Government was in Office at the time, and it was not possible for them to take any action either to implement or to carry out any of the recommendations made by the Simon Commission. Thus this important work has fallen to the lot of that sincere, courageous and far-seeing statesman, namely, Sir Samuel Hoare, who, in spite of difficulties and onslaughts and in spite of the very foul attacks that have been made both in India and in England, stood firm and piloted the scheme that we find to-day adumbrated in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. The National Government is able to keep the ship steady on its keel in the midst of stormy weather and rough onslaughts of the extremists in India and the die-hards in England.

[Sir A. P. Patro] [29th January 1935]

"Now, if we briefly go into the amendments that have been proposed in this Council, we will at once see what a difficult task the Council has before it, and in a matter like this, it is impossible to reconcile the various conflicting views and demands of the various classes and communities. And hon. Members could easily understand how gigantic is the task of framing a Constitution for the whole of India embracing 350 millions of population. It is from that point of view I beg to appeal to the House to review the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. It is not a mere matter of rejecting the recommendations of the Joint Committee because they do not agree with my view or your view, but the matter has to be considered as a whole and reviewed. The position is this. Let us now briefly analyse the amendments before this House. From the number and variety of amendments proposed ranging from the extreme demand to reject the Report and to be satisfied with the present system of 'hated' diarchy to the other of proposing the acceptance of the same, there is a large and difficult area of conflicting views. The theoretical or political idealism of the one to reject the scheme and the practical working man's conception of the other 'get what you can and fight for more' must be reviewed dispassionately to see whether it is possible for the parties or individual members of parties to arrive at a common agreement. There is a great deal that the hon. Dr. Subbarayan could do to reconcile the various elements. I wish very much that he tried his hand at this in order to bring into harmony the various conflicting views and demands of the several groups in this House for a common resolution. He failed last time when the White Paper proposals were considered. I suppose that when he made the attempt and failed and when he found most appalling results from the arbitration or conciliation he attempted, he has grown wiser and more prudent in not attempting to do so on this occasion.

"Now, Sir, the hon. Member from Madura (Opposition) sitting on the Opposition desired that Parliament should legislate on the general lines of Mr. Atlee's draft. He conveniently forgot that Mr. Atlee, in his recent broadcast speech, has recommended that the present scheme should be worked to the best advantage of the people and remarked that it would be a great mistake if it is not worked at all, or if the idea of rejection or non-acceptance of the same is entertained in this country. My hon. Friend, Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed (Opposition), desired that some of the proposals in the Report should be substantially modified and said that otherwise he will reject the scheme. The hon. Member from Ramnad (Opposition) sitting again in the Opposition, expressed the desire that Burma should not be separated from India. Hon. Members representing the Indian

Christian community advocated larger representation in the legislature for that community, while the hon. Members representing the depressed classes stated that they did not wish to support the Poona Pact and asked for separate electorates for themselves with a view to have their interests protected and advanced under the new Reforms. The hon. Member from the Nilgiris (Opposition) and the Whip of the Justice Democratic Party proposed amendments which would go to show that they do not accept the motion of Dr. Subbarayan, but that they desire certain modifications in the Scheme. The amendment tabled by the Justice Party accepts the conclusions of the Joint Parliamentary Committee that there should be Provincial Autonomy for British India and that an All-India Federation should be inaugurated early so as to terminate the present system of diarchy in the provinces and the irresponsible system of Government in the Centre. That Party urges further that a searching examination should take place at an early date and suggests that certain modifications should be made in the Scheme.

"Sir, an impartial observer will see from the above what the claims of the various groupes are and how far they are in consonance with one another. If this is the case in our Province, among us the representatives of the people here, you can imagine what the other provinces would ask to be included in the Scheme and what the independent Indian States would be asking for. Now, Sir, apart from the views that have been expressed here in this House, there is great unanimity in the acceptance of the basic principles of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. And though that is so, there is demand that the Report should be amended in certain important directions.

"Let us now see the expressed opinions of those who are outside the Council and those who have had opportunities of working similar schemes and gaining experience. We have opinions expressed in the Bihar Council that the general basis of the scheme is acceptable. Mr. Sachidananda Sinha is not a weak person. He is a stalwart public man. His opinion is that it is wrong to reject the Report, say whatever you may. He said in the Bihar Legislative Council that complete unanimity is not attainable in this country. He said 'Judging by past experience and in the light of stern realities of life obtaining in India at present, the scheme had to be worked by almost all constitutional parties. I would not be surprised if the Congress Party itself would undertake to work the new Constitution.' Again, we have the opinion of the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru from whom my hon. Friend, the Mover of the amendment, claims inspiration. He was in England for all the Round Table Conferences and he was also in the Delegation assisting the Joint Parliamentary Committee. He took an active part in all these gatherings and he said openly that he does not belong to any political party and that he is a 'political orphan.' In other words, he does not belong to any clique or group or party caucus. The views of such an independent person are worthy of attention. He said:

'Defective as the proposed Constitution is, falling short as it does of our expectations based as it is on a system of checks and counter-checks, I am not prepared to say that it is either unworkable or that it is not likely to be worked even by those who are at present loudest in their condemnation of it. We cannot afford to live any longer upon a mere negative policy.'

"In this article which he recently contributed there is a direct answer. The House could easily infer from this how difficult it is to arrive at an agreed Constitution in the variety of opinions prevailing in the country.

"The hon. Mover quoted the Marquis of Zetland and asked whether the Report satisfied the aspirations of the people as stated by the Noble Lord. The answer is self-evident because Lord Zetland is a party to the Report and considered the Scheme was intended for the good of India. The learned Member forgot that the Noble Lord was endeavouring in the Lords to convince the die-hard opponents of the Indian Reforms. That was the position of Lord Zetland when he said that the Proposals should be accepted. He was appealing to his own countrymen to satisfy the national aspirations of Indians saying that there is a strong feeling in the country and that unless it was met in a proper manner, the Scheme would not be accepted. He was only appealing to them not to come across the progress of Indian nationalism. I dare say anyone in that position would do the same thing to satisfy the opposition.

"The hon. Mover then made a reference to the recent elections and said: 'Here is the voice of India, the voice of India.' Here again he forgot the fact that the result of the recent elections is not the real test of public opinion, because, in India, in the villages and hamlets, very little attention is paid to what is going on in the Assembly at Delhi or at Simla. Therefore, I say that is not the real test of public opinion. The real test should be in matters which affect the daily life and the living of the people. The test should be in matters which affect the day-to-day administration and their daily life. It is no test to take the opinion of a limited number of voters. Sir, while I do not discount the value and importance of the views of even this electorate, I do say that if you go further and ask us to believe that that is the real test of the popularity of a particular political institution, I am going to say with all the sincerity that I can command, that it is not the test. The real test on the other hand is this: what is it that the village organizations, the taluk organizations and the district organizations which reflect the opinion of the people in regard to their daily needs, think? Let not my hon. Friend be misguided into thinking that this supposed success is a permanent thing. If at all there was success on the other side it was due to the fact that the accumulated sins of omission and commission of one side were open to be exposed and criticized and taken advantage of. That is not the real test. The real test lies in the success at the elections to the institutions which affect the daily life and the interests of the people.

"It was said that an agreed Constitution is the only thing that will be acceptable to the country and not a Constitution imposed upon the country. I agree in principle that no Constitution which does not meet the general aspirations of the people should be allowed to be introduced in India. The Government of India also have agreed with this view. They have stated very strongly in their Despatch on the Simon Commission Report as follows:

'The time has passed when it was safe to assume the passive consent of the governed. The new system must be based as far as possible on the willing consent of a people whose political consciousness is steadily being awakened.'

Now, the question is whether any agreed scheme is practicable. Soon after the Simon Report was published attempts were made to prepare an alternative scheme. A session of the Congress was held in Madras and it passed a resolution to the effect that the conflicting interests of Hindus and Moslems should be reconciled and that a committee should be appointed and an All-Parties Conference should be held with a view to work out a Swaraj Scheme. Invitations were accordingly issued by the President of the Congress to prominent persons all over India and the Conference was in being for over one year. Leading persons gathered there, though they were not elected by any constituency and may not be good enough representatives in the eyes of the hon. Mover, and after a good deal of deliberation they produced what is known as the Nehru Report.

"The Nehru Report was submitted to the President of the Congress. You will find that in that Committee there were such eminent men as the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Mr. Jinnah, Dr. Ansari, the late Maulana Muhammad Ali, Mr. Aney, Mr. Kurashi, Mr. Mangal Singh, Dr. Kitchlew, Mr. Syed Muhammad, Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, Mr. Subash Chandra Bose and others whose names will go down in the history of the country. But what was the result? The Mussalmans first took objection to it; other minority communities also, such as the Sikhs, rejected it. This report was supposed to be an agreed report; the constitution which was called the Swaraj constitution for India, was placed before the public; but what was the result of it all? No one now thinks about the Nehru Report or the constitution then drafted. I am not criticising it; my idea is to show that the position taken up by the hon. Mover of the amendment is not at all sound. The main question, therefore, is not the question of an agreed constitution. Hon. Members will remember that in 1930 and 1932 there were two all-party conferences held, one at Allahabad and the other at Delhi. Representatives of various communities and interests met there, but what was the result? The conferences failed and an agreed constitution was impossible to be arrived at.

"I will now refer you to a recent statement made by His Highness the Aga Khan. His Highness the Aga Khan as the leader of the British Indian Delegation presented a Memorandum to the Joint Parliamentary Committee on behalf of the delegation. With reference to this, in his statement, he says:

'Of course that memorandum did not receive support from India; it did not evoke in India as much interest as was due to it, in order to impress on the Joint Parliamentary Committee the force underlying the recommendations made in it for an immediate advance.'

[Sir A. P. Patro] [29th January 1935]

"That is another instance, as I said, where joint action failed. Then, what is it, I ask, that is to be done for an agreed constitution? All will undoubtedly agree that an agreed constitution, if possible, would be all important; but the House will realize that the foundation of any such agreed constitution should not be unstable sand or mere emotion, but should be reason born of practical experience."

"Now, Sir, I quite agree with Dr. Subbarayan when he says that Dominion Status ought to have been inserted. It is a great mistake made, a great blunder committed by the British Government not to have included the words 'Dominion Status.' But as I already said, I am not one of those who are enamoured of the expression 'Dominion Status.' The Right Hon'ble Srinivasa Sastri said very truly that 'Dominion Status is to be found in the Royal Proclamation of 1919 and also in the Instrument of Instructions issued to the Viceroy.' When British statesmen have had a knowledge of the expression as used in these documents, they ought to know what it meant. It does not lie in them now to say that it is indefinite or undefinable and therefore they will not accept it. It is not statesmanship to say that Dominion Status cannot now be accepted. I should think, Sir, this is a very serious thing which the British Government have been responsible for. If only they had taken care to know the feeling in India in regard to this expression 'Dominion Status,' I am sure they would not have hesitated to put it in the Bill. His Excellency the other day explained the reasons why it was not introduced in the Bill. It is this omission that has roused the Right Hon'ble Sastri to a volcanic temper and to a passionate declamation of the report, at the confederation at Poona. He observed that while the Liberals were chronic co-operators, they were not invited to the Third Round Table Conference and the Joint Memorandum was not accepted and that therefore they could not now co-operate for the enactment of the Constitution. The goal of India towards full responsible government should have been indicated. While speaking on this matter, it is interesting to refer to what another distinguished Indian, a disinterested Indian, one who commands general respect throughout India, Mr. K. Natarajan, the talented editor of the Indian Social Reformer has said. He is an independent person who belongs to no party; he is a great thinker; and what does he say? In the Indian Social Reformer, dated 12th January 1935, he says:

'There is indeed something pathetic about the fondness of the fabled old lady for the word "Mesopotamia." Mesopotamia is now Iraq. Mr. Baldwin himself does not know what Dominion Status will be in the next few years. There is nothing in Dominion Status that would satisfy the soul of India; India is ages older than Britain. Her legitimate position is equal partnership in an Indo-British Union.'

It is also interesting to see what the London Times states in regard to this matter:

'The reason for the omission is presumably for the reason that Dominion Status is not susceptible of definition in a precise constitutional document and they (Government) do not want to leave any loophole. Dominion Status in its fullest form is synonymous with nationhood which is perhaps a better word, that is what everybody who used it with authority has always intended as the goal of Indian progress and Sir Samuel Hoare will make this clear.'

This apologia will not satisfy India: Even 'nationhood' has not been substituted for 'Dominion Status.' If there was any substitution of 'nationhood,' then there would have been no need for this apologia on the part of the London Times.

"Sir, this scheme, as I said, marks a very great advance; and it is the opinion of the Leader of the Justice Democratic Party and many other speakers in this House. They declined to associate themselves with that part of the resolution which would confine the country to the present position."

"It is unnecessary to enter into the details of the great advance in constitutional progress under the new Scheme. No scheme will satisfy all people. Reference was made to the special powers vested in the Governor; and in the course of the debate it was discovered that there is confusion in the matter of the jurisdiction of these special powers. The special powers relate only to the special responsibilities of the Governor and the Governor-General. If, as I pointed out elsewhere, the Ministers are men of experience and statesmanship, of knowledge and courage, if they have a following in the House, the position of the Governor will become less difficult in the exercise of these special powers. On the other hand, the Governor will be obliged to co-operate with the Ministers in the discharge of his high responsibilities. Therefore, viewing it from the aspect of the 'Council of Ministers,' it seems to me that these special powers do not contain anything that is detrimental to the interests of the administration. His Excellency the Viceroy and the Governor have told us the circumstances when these powers would be invoked. An important point in this connexion is that the powers are there only for meeting emergencies. That power must remain somewhere; it cannot be that when such an emergency arises, either the Council should be dissolved or the Constitution itself should be broken up. Such powers are, therefore necessary, and it is amazing to find that the Leader of the Justice Democratic Party forgot, in his anxiety to make out a case, that the Mappilla rebellion took place in Malabar."

"Again, Sir, the hon. Member Dr. Subbarayan drew analogies from the Constitutions of Canada and Australia and said: 'These Constitutions are the result of negotiations by the people with Great Britain; and, therefore, why not India be allowed to have the same privilege?' I wish the analogy drawn by him was really a correct one. But take the political conditions of Canada and Australia when the Federation was formed. They were quite unlike the Indian conditions. In India, one important factor is that there are many Indian States which are independent and are governed by treaties with the Crown, not with the Government of India. Their existence, therefore, is quite a distinct factor in India. Secondly, India in its various units, viz., the provinces, have no autonomous or independent governments. On the other hand, the whole administration is carried on from the centre; the centre has the right to control, direct and superintend every one of the provinces. The centre is the one agency where real power is vested in this country. The units agreed to part with their power for common protection. Therefore, I say these two distinct factors should be kept in view in drawing analogies from other Dominions. In fact it is really unfair and dangerous to draw such analogies.

"Now, Sir, it is surprising that diarchy is approved by the hon. Member, Dr. Subbarayan. In his great eagerness to see that a proper Constitution is formed, he, however, put it when he said: 'Oh, we do not want these new schemes.' I am sure, Sir, that is not, however, what he meant. Perhaps, he only expressed a strong resentment or disagreement with the proposals. I am sure, when the Bill becomes an Act and the Scheme comes into operation, he will not be one of those who will run away without working the Act, or will non-co-operate. I am certain that he and other Members who have expressed the same views and criticised the Scheme in the same way, will be prepared to work the scheme, to the best advantage of the country. Sir, it is a great opportunity to the country to work the Reforms, to accept what is given and to fight for more.

"His Excellency the Viceroy is a tried and trusted friend of India who has advocated India's political advance towards Dominion Status even as Governor of Bombay in 1916. His letters to the Right Hon'ble Lloyd George are ample proof of it. Believe me when I say that he would never take a false step in the constitutional development of India. His advice based on long and distinguished experience, sound statemanship and love of the country, is most invaluable to the people. Practical service and successful working of the Scheme is the surest way for the attainment of India's political goal, attainment of swaraj.

3-15 p.m. "The Constitution Bill has been laid before the House of Commons and in a few days, the House of Commons will have the opportunity of going into details. It is open to us even now to start such constitutional agitation as is necessary, to make suggestions. I am not one of those who will advise that we should keep quiet without giving suggestions and that we should not ask for improvements in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. We must ask in a constitutional manner. Otherwise, the opportunity would be lost to us. Agitation on constitutional lines is necessary with a view to see that the necessary amendments or modifications of the Scheme are placed before Parliament."

* Mr. P. RATNAVELU THEVAR:—"Sir, regarding the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, the attitude of the Indian National Congress, which I have the honour to represent in this superannuated House which has lost its representative character, is well known. It has been authoritatively formulated by the Congress itself and further explained by Babu Rajendra Prasad in his recent article in the Manchester Guardian. It is admitted that the Congress represents the nation more than any other organization. The verdict of the Congress and therefore that of the country is one of rejection of the Report, knowing full well that such rejection must involve struggling under the present Constitution until it is replaced by a Constitution framed by the people's representatives in a Constituent Assembly. The report is a reproach to any nation. No progressive political party in the country has accepted it. There may be interested persons here and there who merely echo their master's voice and refuse to stand by the clear verdict of the country, and these are mostly job-hunters who want to exploit the masses."

Mr. W. K. M. LANGLEY:—"On a point of order, Mr. President. Can the hon. Member use the words 'job hunters'? Is it parliamentary?"

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I did not hear what the hon. Member was saying."

* Mr. P. RATNAVELU THEVAR:—"These people may boast of their experience in running the administration, but the country knows that the experience which they boast of is only experience in maladministration. Let not Great Britain forget that the parties in the country who can admittedly deliver the goods are Mahatma Gandhi and the Congress. The Secretary of State for India boasts that 'criticism in India must not be taken to mean that the Indians will obstruct the Reforms. The Viceroy and all the Governors tell me that on the contrary, they will work them.' As regards this, the answer has already been given by the most moderate of moderate politicians; at one time the 'prize boy of Government,' a gentleman honoured by His Majesty's Government itself with a Privy Councillorship; one who has held high offices in the Empire, the Right Hon'ble V. S. Srinivasa Sastri. He has compared the constitution to 'fire' or 'flood' which, however anxious you may be to prevent, you are bound to accept, if for no other reason, at least to mitigate its consequences. As the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru has pointed out in his article in the January issue of the Twentieth Century, 'if the foreshadowed constitution is put on the Statute Book, it will work us if we are not prepared to work it.'

"Interested parties may accept the Report with qualifications and suggestions which are mostly made for the purpose of appearing before the country as patriotic men and as not being far behind those progressive parties which have refused to look at it. But the opinion of the country is unmistakable. The Constitution, if enacted, would be one imposed on a weak people by superior force, and not one accepted by the willing consent of the people. For decades, this ancient country which was the cradle of civilization has been agitating for responsible government. More than ten years ago, the Assembly under the leadership of that great leader, the late Pandit Motilal Nehru, passed a resolution for a Round Table Conference. Since then, the country has passed through unprecedented sufferings—imprisonment, lathi charges, confiscation of property and humiliation of all kinds, for the purpose of getting the substance of liberty. Is it for this Constitution that all these sufferings have been undergone? It is stated that no alternative scheme was ever evolved. What about the Nehru Constitution? Was it ever seriously considered?"

[Mr. P. Ratnavelu Thevar] [29th January 1935]

"I am not surprised at the attitude adopted by the representatives of the depressed classes. I would like to ask the hon. Members who have spoken as their representatives, whether they represent anyone but themselves. They have gained rather than lost by the Poona Pact. They will have as many as thirty representatives in this House instead of eighteen which they obtained under the original award. If really the representatives have the interest of the nation in general and the community in particular at heart, they could achieve a great deal for the welfare of the classes whose interest the Congress has placed in the forefront of its programme. I challenge the hon. Member from Ganjam (Sir Patro) to resign his seat here and stand for re-election on this issue. I am prepared to do it.

"Sir, it is not all that cry 'Lord, lord' that shall enter the kingdom of Dominion Status or whatever the Whitehall declines to define. Let us honestly say that so far as this country is concerned, this Constitution is non nobis."

MR. M. DEVADASAN:—"Mr. President, Sir, I should like to speak a few words on the motion of which I have given notice and in doing so, I want to give my opinion on the main motion itself and the various amendments that have been moved to it. Since 1927 our country has passed through various political vicissitudes. At first the Simon Commission came here and it was opposed. Then we had the First Round Table Conference, the Second Round Table Conference, the Lothian Committee to consider the question of franchise and subsequently the Third Round Table Conference. The British Government issued the White Paper. We in this Council discussed the White Paper and condemned it. Now the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee based on the White Paper is issued to us and that too is being discussed and condemned. Sir, it is a truism to say that history repeats itself. The Joint Parliamentary Committee Report is now condemned. It is needless to point out that as there are several castes and creeds in our country, as there are the Indian States and the British Provinces, we are all not agreed on the question of reforms. My hon. Friend, Dr. Subbarayan, said that we were not agreed even in this House. When that is the case, are we prepared to accept the Reforms proposed in the Report? The term of this House has been extended twice as the new Reforms were expected to be introduced shortly and as new Councils were expected to be elected under the new Constitution. I ask, are we going to oppose the introduction of the new Reforms, postpone the election of the new Council and continue to be members of this Council indefinitely and thereby prevent other members from coming in? We would be doing a great injustice to the people of the country if we opposed the Reforms and thereby continue to be Members of this Council without any limit of time. The resolution of my hon. Friend, Dr. Subbarayan, has been discussed threadbare and it will be found that the latter portion of the resolution will be welcomed not by Indians but by Europeans belonging to the group of Mr. Churchill. They advocate no further reforms and when they see the resolution they will gloat over it, because, if we Indians do not want any further reforms, it will be good to the Europeans.

29th January 1935] [Mr. M. Devadasan]

"Coming to the subject under discussion, I must say that I support the Reforms. In 1928, when the Simon Commission came to India, we, members of the depressed classes in Tinnevely, made a representation to them to the effect that if even under the present system of British Government we should be subjected to tyranny of caste traditions of inequality, no further reforms should be granted to India. Since then considerable changes have taken place and much water has flown under the bridges. The country has passed through several political vicissitudes. We have had the fast of Mr. Gandhi and the Poona Pact which has been condemned by Mr. Siva Raj. I do not want to support the reforms, because it is opposed by other parties. I support the Reforms, because we, members of the minority communities, do not want it to be understood as not wanting the Reforms. We do not want to be thought as standing in the way of the progress of the country. Also, Sir, you know very well that large sums of money have been spent upon the Simon Commission, upon the members of the Round Table Conference and the Lothian Committee and other members who went on deputation. You will find that £29,409-3-4 has been spent in the production of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Time after time, our country has been subjected to very heavy expenditure on account of Conferences, Commissions and Committees. That being the case, are we justified in postponing the Reforms indefinitely and continuing to sit as Members of this Council? As a constitutionalist, I for one, would like to have the Reforms introduced as quickly as possible.

"I shall give my reason as to why I support the Reforms. I say quite candidly and gladly and without any fear of contradiction and without any idea of giving any offence to anybody who holds a different opinion from mine that the Reforms recommended in the Joint Parliamentary Committee are an advance on the present constitution. I will show how. In 1909, before the Minto-Morley Reforms were introduced, there was not even a single Indian Member in any Cabinet. As a result of the Minto-Morley Reforms, Indians were appointed as Members of the Executive Council. Again after 1919, when the Montford Reforms were introduced more Indians were appointed as Members of the Executive Councils and were enabled to take part in the administration of the country. The Reforms proposed by the Joint Parliamentary Committee wipes out as my hon. Friend, Mr. Yahya Ali, pointed out, the Indian Civil Service element from the Cabinet. Do not you think that it is an advance on the present constitution? I hope hon. Members will excuse me if I am wrong in my estimate; I am only stating what I feel in the matter. I hope you will agree with me for the reason I have given that the proposed Reforms are an advance on the present constitution. Till now there has been divided responsibility between the Reserved Half and the Transferred Half. But hereafter there will be absolute responsibility for Indian Ministers who will have to be responsible to the Legislature. His Excellency the Governor said the other day that self-government was being given to Indians in the Provincial sphere. Therefore, it is a notable advance in the administration of the country. Even in the Central Government there is a marked change from a unitary form of Government to a dyarchical form. I am sure that this will be accepted as a step in the direction of getting full self-government in the near future. Another important advance has been recommended and that is the formation of the Federation. The country has till now been divided into classes and classes, creeds and creeds and Indian States and British Provinces. Hereafter, there will be only one Federation consisting of British Provinces and Indian States.

3-30 p.m. "I must submit that it may not be practicable to form a Federation in the near future. But with the determination and character of His Excellency the Viceroy, Lord Willingdon, I think the formation of a Federation is not impracticable. The Princes themselves have recognized the necessity of forming a Federation and they have given their consent to enter the Federation. Even in the Bill which has been introduced in Parliament, there is a provision to the effect that within 20 years the Princes will be forced to enter the Federation. If Federation is achieved, our country will have taken one step more in advance than in the past.

"I wish to deal only with a few points as many more Members are willing to speak; I do not wish to weary the House. One great defect in the proposals is the recommendation of indirect election. I do not agree with that recommendation. It is for the proper growth and development of democracy that there must be direct election. For the representatives to be in direct touch with the people of this country, there should be direct election. In the past there has been direct election, and I do not find any reason why indirect election should be substituted for direct election.

"As regards franchise, I must say that a much larger number of people will be enfranchised than in the past and if adult franchise is introduced, the country will be a democratic country. I wish that there should be adult franchise for the entire country.

"My hon. Friend, Mr. Ratnavelu Thevar, observed that the members of the depressed classes spoke for themselves and that they did not represent the members of their communities. I strongly protest against that statement, coming as it does from Mr. Ratnavelu Thevar. We, members of the depressed classes, have got as much responsibility as any other Member of this House. I must submit that we have got more interest in this country; our interest in the country is as ancient as the country itself; that being the case, not to call us accredited leaders or representatives of the people is to do injustice to the members of this group.

"Before closing my speech, I must heartily endorse the remarks made by my hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Raj, who wanted that the Poona Pact should be abolished. It is not too late now to amend suitably the provisions of the Bill that has been introduced in the Parliament, before it becomes law. The provision can very well be amended now so as to suit the interests of the depressed classes in this Province.

29th January 1935] [Mr. M. Devadasan]

"Though, as a representative of the depressed classes, I am bound to support the interests of the depressed classes, as an Indian Christian I am morally bound to support the cause of Indian Christians. Mr. Sreshta desired that there should be 5 more Indian Christians in this House than the number provided for. Considering the status of Indian Christians in this Province, I submit that they are entitled to 5 more seats. The arguments that have been advanced by my hon. Friend himself are quite sufficient and I do not want to supplement his remarks. There is one point which is found in the Parliamentary Committee Report which was not touched by my hon. Friend. The interests of the minorities have been well provided for and even with regard to the selection of Ministers, the Governor has to select Ministers from among important minorities; even for Judicial services, the claims of important minority communities will be considered. So, I say that the safeguards that are provided for in the interests of minorities are quite necessary. I shall cite one instance in support of this special responsibility which is vested in the hands of the Governor. Sometime ago, there was trouble in Madras between Adi-Dravidas and caste people. On that occasion it was stated—I speak subject to correction—that the Adi-Dravidas in Puliantope should be deported from Puliantope so that other classes may be left to live in peace. At that time the Governor himself intervened and saw that there was no clash between the caste people and the Adi-Dravidas. Therefore, when the interest of the depressed classes is in danger, special powers to the Governor as are provided for in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report are necessary.

"Then, coming to the Federal Assembly and the Council of State, there should certainly be provision for the representation of the depressed classes on them. I hope the Government of Madras will inform His Majesty's Government that there should be adequate safeguards for the representation of the minority communities on the Federal Assembly and the Council of State. In view of the introduction of Provincial Autonomy and of Federation and of widened franchise calculated to establish democracy in this country, I say that the reforms adumbrated by the Parliamentary Committee are very much advanced. I request hon. Members to support the Reforms adumbrated and thus expedite the introduction of the Reforms without any delay, so that the trouble we have already taken may not be in vain."

III.—ANNOUNCEMENT re MEETING NEXT DAY (30th JANUARY 1935.)

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Since there are a large number of Members who are anxiously waiting to speak, it is proposed to meet tomorrow also for the discussion of this motion as well as the amendments."

Khan Bahadur P. KHALIF-UL-LAH SAHIB Bahadur:—"Mr. President, Sir, one important feature which attracts the notice of any one who has had a running view of the report is the studious avoidance of the words 'Dominion Status' in the voluminous report. It is not as if the Committee were unaware of the demand so vociferously made from India regarding the attainment of Swaraj as its political goal. It has been in the air for so long a time and has been pressed upon the Members of the British Parliament ever so many times. Not only that, Sir. His Excellency Lord Irwin has given the pledge to the effect that Dominion Status is the goal of the Indian Reforms. If, in spite of all this, we find the non-mention of the words Dominion Status in the whole Report, we are led to the inevitable conclusion that the avoidance was studied and deliberate. It may be so only for one reason, namely, the suspicion in the Committee's mind about the Indian people. I may say, Sir, that there is absolutely no room for any suspicion of this sort. The dyarchic system of Government which was the result of the Montford Reforms was certainly not fully appreciated and still Madras has anyhow shown proof of working the constitution that was really unworkable. In spite of the experience of the working of the Reforms for the last 15 years, if it has not made the Members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee repose some trust in Indians, I can only say that the Report will fail to evoke similar trust in the minds of Indians about the Englishmen also. That is so far as the words 'Dominion Status' are concerned.

"Coming next to the reserve powers of the Governor, I may say that the provision of such powers also smacks of the same feeling of suspicion and want of genuine good feeling on the part of the Committee. I am not one of those who are afraid of the misuse of these reserve powers. That will depend only upon the opportunities that may arise in India on the working of the Reforms. I am sure that our past experience would clearly have established the fact that we shall give absolutely no opportunity for the exercise of these powers. Apart from the fact that it smacks of suspicion that is prevailing in the minds of the Members of the Committee, there is no need to fear the vesting of so many new powers in the Governor for emergencies.

"Lastly, Sir, I shall come to the question of the Second Chamber for the Provinces. As one of the Members of the Madras Parliamentary Committee responsible for the recommendation of a Second Chamber for the Province, I think it is my duty to mention the reasons which induced us to make this recommendation. First of all, as a student of Constitutional History and of Constitutional Law, I ask my friends who object to the provision, the reason for their objection. So far as I know, I can only say that in all democratic institutions even from the Grecian and Roman times up to the modern day, there has always been provision for Second Chamber. In my opinion, Sir, democracy without a Second Chamber will not be a full democracy at all. (Mr. Abdul Hamid Khan:—Where is democracy?) My friend, Mr. Abdul Hamid Khan asks me 'where is democracy?' Democracy is in the making and in the making of it, it must be properly made. If it is to be properly made, provision for a Second Chamber also ought to be made. Take the Swiss Cantons. Even though the Cantons may be much smaller in area than our small Provinces in India, there too we find provision for

29th January 1935] [Mr. P. Khalif-ul-lah Sahib]

Second Chamber: Leaving these countries apart, coming to India, I say there is special reason why the provision for Second Chamber is necessary to suit the Indian conditions. India consists of various creeds and communities and, thanks to Dr. Moonji and his school, the differences between the two great communities, the Hindu and the Muslim, that are sought to be bridged by the earnest efforts of Mr. Muhammad Ali and others, are only accentuated and the communal rancour is growing every day, thanks, as I said, to Dr. Moonji.

"The Congress ought to have exercised its utmost in this behalf, and I feel bound to say it has failed to do its duty there. The Congress would have done better if it had set at rest these communal differences before pressing for Reforms. If these differences are set at rest and we begin to live amicably like brothers, then it will be time enough to demand for absolute Swaraj. Till then, to talk of nationalism is to talk from the mid air. So, I say, the provision of Second Chamber, so long as there are differences, so long as there is a difference between the depressed classes and the high caste Hindus, so long as Muslims and Hindus do not agree on many things, so long we cannot honestly claim absolute self-government.

"In this connexion, Sir, I must say that I am a humble believer with the late Mr. Gokhale that the Indo-British connexion is an indissoluble one, so far as one can see at present. I think I can see much farther than my Friend Mr. Hameed Khan. He sees only through one view, but I have got my eyes wide open and can see all round. I cannot afford to shut my eyes to what is happening every day throughout the length and breadth of India. I must face facts before I make recommendations suiting the imagination of certain people. So I say that second chambers in India are absolutely necessary for a proper constitution on democratic lines.

"I have already stated, Sir, that in certain matters, namely, the non-mention of the words 'Dominion Status' as well as the provision of reserve powers, the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report has fallen short of our expectations. Not only in that, but also in various other respects, it has fallen short. I have referred to the communal question. I think I must certainly take this opportunity to thank the Prime Minister for his Communal Award, for the justice he has sought to render to the largest minority community in India, the community to which I have the honour to belong. I will go further than that and say that special safeguards ought to be provided not only for the numerical strength of representation to be given in the local Councils, but also some statutory provision should be made in the matter of appointments in the services also. This thing is particularly necessary in view of what is happening in Madras of late. Wherever we may turn our eyes, the Muslim is nowhere in the Government of the country. Why? Because no such provision finds a place in the Government of India Act. Until such a provision is statutorily made as will satisfy the requirements and the importance of the community, I do not think that proper justice will be done to the minority communities. Equally so will be the case with other minority communities in this country. So I say that special statutory provision should be made not only in the matter of representation of minority communities in the Legislatures, but also in the matter of representation of those communities in the services and in the administration of the country. I hope, Sir, that Parliament, when it considers the Bill, will clearly see the defects pointed out by the various representatives in this House and elsewhere and try to remove the spirit of suspicion and want of trust which is so obvious in the whole Report of the Joint Select Committee. I should, therefore, make an appeal through this House that Parliament will make things quite clear and remove that feeling of suspicion and distrust. India has proved in the working of the constitution in the past its fitness for working any constitution that may be given, and India has awakened to a realization of its position, and unless and until Parliament grants to India what it really deserves, Parliament shall not have done its duty to India."

* The RAJA OF KHALLIKOTE:—"Mr President, Sir, let me at the outset thank you for giving me this opportunity to express my feeling of admiration for the strenuous work and labours of the Right Hon. Sir Samuel Hoare at the three Round Table Conferences and the Joint Parliamentary Committee which has resulted in the publication of the Report which we are discussing to-day. The contact that I have had with the Secretary of State at the Third Round Table Conference and later in the Joint Parliamentary Committee deliberations enables me to say without hesitation that he is very sympathetic to the natural aspirations of India and is willing to do everything in his power to advance the cause of Indian self-government within the limitations of conditions existing here and in England. It is a great thing to have such a sincere and determined Secretary of State for India as Sir Samuel Hoare. It is India's good fortune that she has at this time a Viceroy who has very deep sympathy with our aspirations. In any appraisal of political progress of our country, we cannot forget the great contribution of His Excellency Lord Willingdon and it is our duty to acknowledge with thankfulness his resolute efforts to get for India a satisfactory constitution. I might be permitted to refer here to his letter as Governor of Bombay to Mr. Lloyd George, the then Prime Minister of Great Britain, which shows that he visualized about 18 years ago that the natural aspirations of India had to be fulfilled very soon and this has come true. I do not wish to quote his letter to the Prime Minister as I have very little time at my disposal and as every hon. Member of this House must have studied it.

"This task of preparing a constitution for India has engaged the attention of British and Indian politicians for nearly eight years. Commissions, conferences and committees have thoroughly thrashed out the question, examined representatives of every interest and paved the way for the emergence of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report.

[The Raja of Khallikote]

"The Report has been received with mixed feelings in India and England. Since its publication two months ago, many have spoken and written on it and our brother legislators in some other province have discussed the Report and passed resolutions thereon. In England the Churchill group have criticised it and in India the Liberals and the Congress and the other parties have expressed their views. With all this before us, it will be easy for us to formulate our opinion. We cannot but recognize that there is a wide feeling of dissatisfaction from various points and in my plea for accepting the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report as the basis for the new constitution, I shall endeavour to show how this dissatisfaction is misdirected.

"The most outstanding grievance made out against the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee is that they nowhere mention the goal of India as Dominion Status. Though, as a statement of fact, this view is correct, yet if we peruse the pronouncements of British statesmen, we will recognize that the goal of Dominion Status is implicit in the announcement of 1917 and I have every faith in the sincerity of British statesmen that they will lead India to that goal, if the co-operation they want is extended. We have already proofs that we have in India Dominion Status in action and it does not matter if the label is there or not, when recognition is given to India as an original Member of the League of Nations. Moreover, those who argue that the goal should be defined now are not insistent that immediately India should have the same constitution as the other Dominions. They recognize a transitory state and I am of the opinion, Sir, that the constitution that we are to have on the basis of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report is to meet that condition and, therefore, we must accept it and work the new constitution with a view to make it a success and to improve on it as time passes and as world conditions become favourable for such improvement. While I hold that the omission of the word "Dominion Status" is not in itself a sufficient cause for dissatisfaction and rejection of an otherwise acceptable scheme, I think it my duty to urge our Viceroy and Sir Samuel Hoare to see that such a goal is specified in the constitution Bill. This will take away much of the force of the opposition. It will be a statesmanly step worthy of the great Parliament of Great Britain and a new era will dawn on India's relations with England. We all have at heart the good of the Commonwealth of Nations known as the British Empire and as one who is proud to be a citizen thereof, I think India's equality in that Commonwealth should be ensured in accordance with the noble sentiments expressed by our Viceroy, Lord Willingdon.

"The next point of criticism against the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report is, that instead of being an advance it is a retrograde scheme. Sir, I must honestly confess that I have not been able to appreciate this argument. It is well known that the new constitution is based on the three broad principles of Provincial Autonomy, Federation with partial responsibility in the centre, and certain safeguards for the functioning of the constitution. No one with any sense of truth can deny that the scheme is an advance on the present system. In the provinces, we are to have a Government to be completely manned by elected representatives of the people and almost all the subjects are to be administered by them. If this is not an advance on the present dyarchic system, I wonder what it is. Those that now criticise the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report have been the very individuals who have been inveighing against dyarchy and it is a psychological phenomenon how they have now come to love a system which had been an anathema for the last 15 years. Even at the centre, the inauguration of the Federation and the handing over of some responsibility to the people's representatives, a long forward step is being taken and we cannot scorn at it. It is foolish to reject half a loaf because we have not the full bread. I fear many of the opponents of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report are deliberately evading the realities of the situation. Sir, I heard with very great interest the eloquent speech yesterday of my hon. Friend, the Leader of the opposition, when he was trying to justify his statement that it is better to struggle under the present constitution than to accept the scheme adumbrated in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. I think my hon. Friend overdid his case when he said that we are getting stones instead of bread. If the future constitution is stone perhaps the present constitution is sand and mud, but even this was so attractive to my hon. Friend that until recently he was holding office and responsibility and it remains to be seen what he will do when the stones are given.

"The third point which the opponents raise is the provision of safeguards and special responsibilities of the Governors and Governor-General. On this subject, there is any amount of misunderstanding. The opponents say that these safeguards show distrust of Indian Ministers, Legislators and the people. The best rejoinder is, these very same people show the same distrust in the Government and read into the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report more than is intended. My own reading of the Report has convinced me that these safeguards are necessary for the preservation of the constitution and that they will be judiciously and very carefully exercised by the Governors. I am also convinced that the large portion of these safeguards in the Report was necessary because an attempt was being made to reduce to writing many of the conventions that prevail in England under the system of Parliamentary responsible Government. I am also convinced that the existence of these safeguards will not kill autonomy, nor will they be used in the ordinary course of circumstances.

"With regard to special responsibilities of the Governors and the Governor-General, my view is that many of them exist in other constitutions of even republican character and some have been introduced because of the conditions in India. None of these are, in my opinion, of such a nature as to stifle self-government and should not be irksome to any responsible political party that may be in power.

29th January 1935] [The Raja of Khallikote].

There must be some ultimate power to be exercised by someone in the event of a crisis of a complete breakdown of the machinery of Government and these special powers and safeguards, etc., are only there to serve this purpose and to be exercised only in very extraordinary circumstances. Has not the Secretary of State just the other day said that 'reasonable Indians wanted large extensions of self-government which reasonable people in Britain were willing to concede'? This, in my view, is a true reading of the situation. I believe that goodwill begets goodwill and I am sure that even a Governor armed with plenty of powers is amenable to the powerful influence of hearty co-operation. I submit, Sir, that the opponents of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report are only overdoing their case when they emphasize more on them than on the corresponding grant of powers to Ministers. With a responsible and strong Ministry and with an equally responsible and powerful party behind it, I feel confident that there will be little or no occasion for a Governor to exercise his special powers or responsibilities.

"These are the broad points of criticism of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report and how I would meet them. But I wish to bring to the pointed notice of this Hon. House that the scheme depends for its success on the co-operation of all. For the Federation to function well, the co-operation of the Princes of India is necessary. I have every hope that the deliberations of their Chamber will ultimately result in the promise of such a co-operation. I wish to add that to make Federation a success and fully representative, some method should be devised by which the people of the Indian States will be heard and represented instead of leaving it entirely to nominations by the Princes. In the Provinces, co-operation must be the lever to work the two Chambers. I have no doubt whatever that this Hon. House and the Presidency it represents, which has the unique privilege of successfully working even the condemned diarchic scheme, will rise to the occasion and see that the fuller autonomous system of Government is made a stupendous success.

"I do not wish to tax your patience, Sir, by a very close examination of all the details of the report. Yet, with your permission, I shall draw the attention of this Hon. House to a few outstanding details. The first in importance in this category is the recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee to constitute Second Chambers of Legislature in Bengal, Bombay, Madras, United Provinces and Bihar. I cordially welcome the recommendation, for in a large province like Madras where the vested interests are always in danger, such a check is necessary to prevent hasty legislation. I had never any doubts about the need of a Second Chamber for Madras and if any one had, the history of the latest Estates Land Act Amendment Bill is enough to dispel them. That Bill has been pronounced in certain quarters to be expropriatory in character and though only a few inamdars might suffer by it, it shows how great is the danger ahead and how necessary is a Second Chamber. With all the resources at his command, a Governor may not be able to prevent ill-advised legislation and I am sure, Sir, that the thoughtful among us will agree with the wisdom of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's recommendation. With the steady influence of a Second Chamber, the chances of the Governor exercising his special powers will, I am sure, become more remote.

"While on this subject, let me express our gratefulness to the Joint Parliamentary Committee for having drawn attention of the Parliament to the necessity for the inclusion in the Instrument of Instructions of the Governor a provision about expropriatory legislation. We, landholders, are thankful for this but we feel that the Statutory safeguards should be given to us, in view of the positive indications of a socialist menace in India. When we ask for this, let it not be understood, Sir, that we are against all economic progress of the people. I wish to assert that we, as the natural and true leaders of the people, have every sympathy with the claims of the masses for good living and good Government, and we are prepared to do all that lies in our power to improve their lot, but as to what we can do depends upon the continued existence of our position, and we are entitled to ask that that position is in no way jeopardized. We, therefore, require that there should be a statutory recognition of our existing provision under the Permanent Settlement and that there should be no legislation, whatsoever, in the whole of India to violate or infringe this right, which, we, as a class, have been enjoying for over a century under the British Crown. It should not, of course, be forgotten that we, as the landholders of this country, constitute a very small minority and, therefore, we require this special protection.

"Another point of detail, yet of great importance is the system of indirect election to the Federal Assembly. I have read with great interest the arguments which the Joint Parliamentary Committee have adduced in this behalf, but I am of opinion that direct election even with unwieldy electorates is preferable in the best interests of India to the system of direct election, which will lead to many evils. One special consideration in this matter I would like to place before the Government. If under the extended franchise the electors vote only for the Provincial Assembly and not for the Federal Assembly, they will develop a far too limited provincial outlook which is prejudicial to the best interests of India. The members of the Federal Assembly who will have no direct touch with the masses will cease to be proper representatives of the people; therefore the main purpose of the election will be defeated. Election by the Provincial Assembly will lead to cliques and other undesirable developments and I think that the direct election is the best system for India in the long run. The Report has very thoroughly discussed the advantages and disadvantages of the method of election to the Federal Assembly with special reference to the conditions prevailing in India. It is true that with an extended franchise and with the number of seats already allotted constituencies will be very big and unwieldy and it will be impossible for representatives to be in close touch with their electorate. I feel I must quote here a sentence from paragraph 198 of the Report, which runs as follows:

'Where a single constituency may be more than twice as large in area as the whole of Wales, a candidate for election could not in any event commend or even present his views to the whole body of electors, even if the means of communication were not, as in India, difficult and often non-existent, and quite apart from obstacles presented by differences in language and a widespread illiteracy; nor could a member after election hope to guide or inform opinion in his constituency.'

"In spite of these difficulties I still feel, that the method of direct election to the Central Legislature will be the best and it is interesting to note that the Government of His Excellency Lord Willingdon supported this view. The Report admits that no permanent procedure can be fixed for any long period and has given a scope for this question to be further reviewed in the light of experience gained in the practical working of the Constitution. It is satisfactory to note that the Central Legislature itself will have a chance at some future date of submitting its views before Parliament.

"Then, Sir, a problem that has been raised is that of finance. The new constitution will entail some expenditure at the initial stage but I am sure with experience of the first period of working we shall be able to adjust to the needs of the Provinces and the Centre. I do not approve of any talk that would prefer stagnation to progress, because of the cost. On this question of finance, particular stress is laid in certain quarters on the burden that will be laid on the taxpayers by the creation of two new provinces and the separation of Burma from India. On the latter subject, I have nothing to say. Their case requires special treatment, and I have not the time at my disposal to deal with it.

"A more intimate question to me is the creation of the new Province of Orissa along with Sind, as autonomous units in the Indian Federation. Sir, when the White Paper scheme was discussed by this Honourable House I expressed our delight on the decision of His Majesty's Government to create Orissa as a separate province. The Joint Parliamentary Committee has examined this question again and justified that decision. The Committee has also recommended a fixed subvention from the federal revenues so that the province may not suffer financially. Sir, let me express once again on behalf of the ten million Oriyas our grateful thanks to the Joint Parliamentary Committee and His Majesty's Government for this recommendation on their part of our claim to live as a unit in India, with an identity and interest, all our own. Only those who have suffered from the vivisection of their country, the suppression of their nationality and language can well realize the feelings of joy that are evoked in the hearts of the Oriyas at the creation of a province of their own. Some of the wise men of this country are making bones over the cost of the province. I am sorry for them. They cannot realize that a few lakhs by way of subvention is worth nothing when compared with the new life that will be given to a nation that had a glorious past. Like the moneylenders they count in only rupees, annas and pies. When such is the attitude of our countrymen what wonder if the Oriyas feel deeply and profoundly grateful to His Majesty's Government and the Joint Parliamentary Committee. The White Paper gave us a tiny province, as I said in my speech then, fixed boundaries excluding some of the tracts where Oriyas predominate and thus gave us no scope for expansion or development. But thanks to the Joint Parliamentary Committee our appeals have been heard and a substantial portion of the country that was demanded by the Oriya delegation which waited on deputation on a Sub-Committee of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, presided over by the Secretary of State, has been granted to us. When the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report was published two months ago, we were pleased to note that the Committee have done the right thing by Orissa. I do not want to trouble the hon. Members of this House with all the details of facts and figures, which will show to any impartial observer that the tracts recommended by the Joint Parliamentary Committee for inclusion in Orissa are preponderantly Oriya, and therefore that recommendation cannot be criticized. Any criticism that may be made on the floor of this House regarding the boundaries of Orissa, I cannot help thinking, is bound to be unfair, one-sided and partial. While discussing the White Paper I said that our cause, just as it was, would receive more favourable consideration in the larger Councils of India and the Empire and I am proud to realize to-day that my prediction has come true and our hopes have been realized. Only justice has been done to the Oriyas and I do not think that anybody should grudge this. I take this opportunity to appeal to His Majesty's Government and the Parliament not only to stick to these just decisions but also to consider the claims of Mandasa, Jalandhara and Budarsingi Estates to be included in Orissa. I also appeal to His Excellency Lord Erskine and the Madras Government to help the Oriyas in expediting the formation of the new Province and for getting the justice that is their due. I have every faith, Sir, that notwithstanding all the counter agitation the Government will stick by the just decision of the Joint Parliamentary Committee on the southern boundary of the Orissa Province.

"While I am glad that we are going to have a separate province for ourselves with enlarged boundaries, I cannot but express a certain amount of regret I feel that after the new province is inaugurated I shall not be here to address this Hon. House. My sphere of activity will be shifted to Orissa, and, though that may not mean the breaking up of the old ties of friendship (personal and political) I will miss the many friends that I have made in Madras in that new sphere. The parting will be sad to me. The experience few of us have gained in the working of this great Presidency, will stand us in good stead to inaugurate and work our infant Province of Orissa. The separation may be near or little distant, that depends upon the speed with which the new province is inaugurated. I see signs that the process will be speeded up, for has not the Viceroy promised to do all he can to speed up the reforms? I hope the Government will quickly enact the new India Bill on the basis of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report with such modifications as may be rendered absolutely necessary. Defective it may be, but what is perfect in this human world? But provided it is given a fair trial and we all put our shoulders to the wheel we can make it a success. On behalf of the landholders and the Oriyas I assure the Government of our whole-hearted co-operation in the working of the new constitution. We offer this co-operation unstintedly, because we are convinced that in that lies the salvation of our country. We believe in the sanctity and utility of the connexion between India and England. We are convinced that with Britain's co-operation and goodwill we shall become worthy members of the family of nations, of which our beloved Emperor is the head. His message of faith and hope is still fresh in our ears. In the spirit of that message we ought to accept the new constitution, with the sincere hope that in this Silver Jubilee year of His Majesty India will see the dawning of the new era."

* Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, the motion moved by my Hon. Friend, the Revenue Member, has been subjected to so many amendments—one does not know whether we have reached the end of them yet—has been looked at from so many points of view, that I do not envy my Hon. Friend, Mr. Souter, in the task that he has before him, viz., of summarizing the debate of this Council and deducing from it some well-defined views to be submitted to those above. If His Majesty's Government wanted to know what the feeling of the country is in regard to the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report and the recommendations contained therein, I venture to say, Sir, that they have already in their position ample materials and more than ample materials to know what that view is. Distinguished patriots who have earned a right to speak on behalf of the people as a result of great sacrifices and unremitting labour on their behalf have given their views as to what the recommendations are. All political organizations from the oldest to the youngest organization, organizations holding most extreme views as well as those holding very conservative views, those which are national in their outlook as well as those which are communal, all of them are agreed in saying that the reforms are unworthy of England to offer and unworthy of India to accept. If His Majesty's Government had still any doubt in the matter as to what the general feeling of the country is about the reforms, they have had recently a very clear verdict of the entire country in the recent elections to the Legislative Assembly. I am sure, Sir, that even the debate that has taken place in this Council would tell them how far from satisfactory the contemplated reforms are. Sir, it is undoubtedly going to happen that whatever we may say or do the recommendations contained in the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report would find a place in the Statute Book. If that is so, what is to be our attitude towards it? I shall not traverse the ground covered by the previous speakers, namely, of discussing the merits of the various

p.m.

[Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar] [29th January 1935]

recommendations. But I would submit this for the consideration of the House that even the best of constitutions will leave very much to be desired even if such constitutions have been framed by people who have to work them. If that is so, Sir, what shall we say, of a constitution imposed on us from outside without consideration to our opinions and feelings and which is going to be passed in spite of us. It goes without saying, Sir, that a constitution like that imposed from without can never be satisfactory. But then what shall we do with regard to it? That is the question which is agitating all of us. I would just recall to the mind of the Members of the House what happened in regard to the present reforms under which we are working. At the time of their introduction we criticized them in the strongest language possible. Did not the great national organization say that they were inadequate, disappointing and unsatisfactory and not worthy of being worked. Yet people were not wanting not only in this Province but all over India to work those defective reforms. With what result? Can we say that we are nearer the goal now than we were at the beginning? It is very difficult, Sir, to answer that question in the affirmative. My submission therefore is that it is not now a question of our acceptance or rejection of the Act that is going to be passed for us. The strings are not in our control. The thing is going to happen. But, unsatisfactory as the Act might be, we shall still be justified in using it as far as we can for the benefit of the people and for the achievement of the object we have in view, call it what you like—full self-Government, Dominion Status, Purna Swaraj or anything else you like, the right to control our own destinies. By saying that, Sir, I should not be understood to say we accept the new constitution as satisfactory and shall be content with it. Not a bit, emphatically no. But we feel that we have every right for utilizing everything that comes in our way to advance our country, to achieve our goal. Let me say in all humility, that in all these matters there are many aspects to be borne in mind. You may have a very good measure; but still if you have incompetent people, people without any imagination to work them, not only may they be unable to work it for any good but may do infinite harm to the country. On the other hand, you may have a very bad measure. And, yet, if you have earnest and competent people, men with vision and grit in charge of it, I venture to think that even with very poor weapons, they may be able to achieve something good for the people who are entrusted to their care. So that, for me, it is not a question of rejection or non-acceptance. What we shall be having is a thing for which we have a right; we have a right not only for that but very much more. But the grudging Government beyond the seas do not see the justice of our demands and are not willing to concede what is really our birthright. So that if we get anything it is a thing for which we have a claim and we need not be ashamed to further with the aid of that the cause we have so much at heart. (Hear, hear). Sir, you have amendments, very important amendments, I take it before this House. One says we shall rather struggle under the present constitution than work the new reforms. Another says that they will be found satisfactory if revised or modified in some ways. But, whatever the constitution we may have to work, certain conditions are necessary if any success is to attend our efforts. Assume for a moment that Dr. Subbarayan's motion finds favour and the present Bill before the parliament is dropped and we are allowed to continue to work under the present constitution. If we are going to work it as we have been working it for some years past, I despair of our salvation in any reasonable time. No, Sir, for any useful result to follow we must revise our notion of Ministers and of their duties and privileges. The Ministers, whoever they may be, must be loyal to one another and act as one body. They must share their responsibility together. That I think is a primary condition of any successful administration. Further, these Ministers should sit somewhat lightly in their seats and not allow themselves to be pinned to their places without consideration for the interests of the country. Yet another point I would submit is that the Opposition should not be too covetous of the places on the treasury bench and unduly eager to take their place there, even if that meant a set back to the progress of the country. If we find the Ministers are putting up a fight in the interests of the country and if, in that fight, they have to meet the opposition of the reserved half or of the Governor, then I would say it is up to the Opposition to support the Ministers in office and put up a united front against those who stand in the way of the progress of the country. We have heard of the appeal made by the Labour Leader, Mr. Lansbury, that England does not know what India needs. I am not prepared to agree with him that England does not know what India wants. The main demands have been given expression to more than once from various platforms. Assuming that the British Government did not or does not know what India wants, I cannot bring myself to believe that they took or meant to take such steps as would have certainly given them, in unambiguous terms, an idea of India's needs. For instance, if the Round Table Conference had not been held in England but in India, and our representatives had been chosen with a little attention to their really representative character than to their 'Jo-hukum' tendencies, and they had been left to be more in touch with Indian public opinion than with British influences pulling them in different directions (I would include among Indian representatives men like Mr. Birley who have a stake in the country and Anglo-Indians), I venture to think that the result would have been more satisfactory than it has been. May I just quote what His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor was pleased to say in his Christmas message to the people? These are his words: "May I add very simply and sincerely that if I may be regarded as in some true sense the head of this great and widespread family sharing its life and sustained by its affections, this will be a full reward for the long and sometimes anxious labours of my reign of well nigh five and twenty years." Here is a great person who visualises all the people under his sway as members of one family. It may be so with His Gracious Majesty. But I very much doubt, Sir, whether in the minds of his advisors India has any place in the family of nations over which His Majesty holds sway. If India is considered to be a member of the family, do you think the head of the family could not appreciate the needs of India, one of the members of the family? Does not the head try his best, Sir, to meet the wants of all the members—specially the weakest of the family. I doubt, Sir, whether the time has yet come for the British statesmanship to realize their responsibility in the matter and do their right duty to the country whom Providence has committed to their care. Sir, there can be no doubt whatsoever that right must win in the end. No matter what obstacles are put in the way we are bound to win and shall win. But the only way in which we shall win is not by depending on the charity of the people outside but by relying on ourselves, setting our house in order reconciling our existing differences and formulate a demand acceptable not only to the majority population but to important minorities as well. We must have a constitution suited to Indian tradition and Indian genius. If that is done nothing shall stand in the way of the achievement of our goal. Sir, it is said in one of our great scriptures that on whatever side there is righteousness that side is bound to succeed. On the field of battle, on Kurukshetra, there was on the one side the large army led by the Kauravas. On the other side, there was a considerably smaller army led by the Pandavas. But the latter had right on their side. Not all the might on the other side was able to extinguish the righteous people or their cause.

29th January 1935] [Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar]

[Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar] [29th January 1935]

P.m.

"Sir, it may be that some die-hards and others with vested interests may do their best to perpetuate our slavery and bondage to safeguard and advance their selfish end. But success, I am sure, will be ours in the end. The only question is whether this success will be with the co-operation and good-will of the Britishers or whether it will be in spite of them. Well, Sir, if they are friends and help us to win our birthright, the relationship between both of us will be cordial, with the result that none of us will have any reason to regret the association with England which Providence has willed. On the other hand, if England adopts a short-sighted policy and in consideration of her vested interests, like trade, appointments for her sons and things like that, stand in the way of our achieving the goal which we all cherish so much, that can never be, Sir, to her advantage for the Divine Law is no respecter of persons or countries."

* Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"Sir, the speeches that have been made on the floor of this House on the motion that has been raised by the Hon. the Revenue Member, especially the speeches on the other side, those that were directed to show that they differed from the hon. Member Dr. Subbarayan's amendment, I should say, proceeded upon a great misapprehension. The Bill before the Parliament is yet to become law, and there is no question now of any section of Indians or any others concerned either boycotting the Constitution or working it. That question does not arise on any of the motions now before the House. So far as that point is concerned, it has been made amply clear in the country that whether the Constitution is acceptable to us or is only an imposed Constitution which we regard as prejudicial to us, if we do not work it, the Constitution will work us, and therefore there might even arise a rivalry among the various political parties in this country as to which of them should capture such political power as might arise under the Constitution however bad it might be. That question does not arise at all, and in so far as criticisms have been made against the motion of the Leader of the Opposition, as if what was lurking underneath that motion was a general boycott of the Constitution if and when it came, I think it was misdirected. The only question now is whether it is for India now to give its consent to the Joint Parliamentary Scheme so as to give an impression to those concerned in England that we really want this Constitution and want the Parliament to go ahead with it and grant us this Act. That is the real question. In regard to that, our unhesitating attitude—it is not an attitude which falls to the lot of the Members of this House from their place here to define, it is an attitude taken up by the whole country, every section and every interest—the attitude is, if you ask us, whether we would be satisfied with this Constitution and whether we would take to it with good-will, we should say that this is not the Constitution we want. We want various amendments and modifications without which we think it would be very prejudicial to the welfare of India. That is the answer. Therefore, inasmuch as it has been felt on very good grounds, that there is no chance of our obtaining the proposed amendments accepted by Parliament, the only go for us before yet the Bill becomes law is to give a warning to England that "this is not the sort of Constitution for which we were deluded into collaborating with you all these seven years. We do not want it. We expected something very much better and we were deluded into believing that we would get something very much better. You have disappointed us and almost broken faith with us, and therefore, if you impose it, you impose it entirely upon the unilateral responsibility of Parliament and not with the consent of India." That is the position of Dr. Subbarayan's amendment, and that is all that we ask the vote of the House for. It does not mean that if some or all of the amendments proposed by the various sections in this House were engrafted into the Joint Parliamentary Scheme, the mind of India would not change. In fact, there is no section of the House that has actually moved on the floor of this House a motion for the acceptance of the Joint Parliamentary Scheme as it stands. Every section of the House has asked for very substantial modifications, and without it, it is said by the most conservative and stable section, the Justice Party proper, that there will not be the good-will forthcoming which is the sine qua non for the successful operation of the Constitution that is threatened to be set up. Sir, therefore all the remarks from the beginning to the end that have been levelled against Dr. Subbarayan by speaker after speaker suffered under this obsession, namely, the obsession that underlying his motion there is the suggestion of boycotting the Constitution when it is imposed upon us. Nothing of that kind. All that we say from our place, when we support that motion, is that we cannot be a consenting party to the passing of such a Constitution by the Parliament. That is all that we say. You impose it upon us, and like others it will fall to us also to work it, so far as may be, with the utmost good-will that it might possibly evoke, but with the necessary friction which it could not fail to evoke also.

"Now, Sir, why are we going so far as to suggest that it is the duty of this House not to give our consent to the passing of this measure. One ground is, Sir, that we were induced into participating in this great task of building up a Constitution for this country on assurances and pledges which have been absolutely violated. Sir, when the Simon Commission was sent out to this country as an All-White Commission, everybody knows that practically the whole of this country, including the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and the entire Liberal or Moderate group of politicians of this country, was against it, and the Simon Commission was boycotted by practically the whole of the country. People like my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, here who then co-operated, co-operated under hopes which have since been blasted, and my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, is to-day a sadder and a wiser man (hear, hear). Now, Sir, when that All-White Commission came and was boycotted in that fashion almost universally by the politically-minded India, what was the result? There was a great effect produced upon the Government, and Sir John Simon himself in melancholy tone confessed recently in the course of the debate in the House of Commons that his Report did not get even a five minutes chance anywhere in the world for discussion. It was put on one side as no better than any other that anybody else with no authority wrote on the subject. Then, His Majesty's Government thought it fit to attempt to renew their labours in regard to this Constitution building on a better basis, the basis of good-will between Great Britain and India, the basis of common consent of Great Britain and India. Though no doubt no popular legislatures elected representatives to confer with British representatives, the Government themselves nominated persons who in their estimation were fit to be deemed representatives. And there were the First and Second Round Table Conferences. At the end of the First Round Table Conference, when the Prime Minister of England addressed the Conference on the 19th January 1931, he emphasized that the further conferences and consultations would go on on the same basis on which the First Round Table Conference had gone on, the basis of equality and freedom, the basis of consent, consent between Great Britain on the one side and India on the other. Then, agreed conclusions were reached which were all formulated very clearly by the Prime Minister in his closing speech. His Majesty's Government made a declaration, and that declaration was formally read on that occasion by the Prime Minister. That declaration—I am not repeating word for word—that declaration definitely pledged Great Britain to seeing to it that the Constitution that would be set up would be such as would not impede the progress of India to the attainment of full freedom which had already been promised, namely, the freedom of a self-governing dominion. That was the famous pronouncement of His Excellency the Viceroy, the greatest of modern Viceroy, Lord Irwin as he then was, and that was repeated and reaffirmed by the Prime Minister in his own way. That being so, Sir, the Second Round Table Conference was summoned with the added advantage of an invitation to the Indian National Congress, and this was after the Gandhi-Irwin Pact. In the course of that Pact, the conclusions of the First Round Table Conference and the assurances already made by the Prime Minister were referred to in one short paragraph, and there the kernel of the whole thing is that in so far as safeguards for a period of transition were going to be proposed, they would be safeguards in the interests of India. It is on that promise that Mr. Gandhi as the sole representative of the Congress was induced to take part in the Second Round Table Conference. The Second Round Table Conference also confirmed the conclusions of the First Round Table Conference. And then after the Second Round Table Conference was over, His Majesty's Government which had by then changed, took opportunity to get the policy of the British Government in regard to India endorsed by Parliament. It was endorsed once at the end of the First Round Table Conference when the debate was started in the House of Commons on the 26th January 1931, endorsed over again in the debate initiated after the Second Round Table Conference on the 2nd December 1931, and thereafter the new Government, the Conservative Government going under the name of National Government in England, was feeling its way and it was trying to revise its mind.

"After having deliberately promised at the end of the Second Round Table Conference also that the conference and consent method was going to be persisted in and continued to the very last, a deliberate effort was made to strangle that method and to interpose even at that stage a select committee of Parliament. That raised a storm over the whole of India and led not to civil disobedience or non-co-operation on the part of the Congress, which were already there, but to non-co-operation on the part of the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar and Mr. Joshi. These three eminent invitees and nominees of Government who had taken a very great and responsible part in the task of this constitution building, resigned their seats in the Round Table Conference, and those of them who were members of the Consultative Committee presided over by the Viceroy, resigned their seats on that body also. Then the British Government retraced their steps and said: 'We will continue the conference method; we will reaffirm the consent formula; we will not try in our own way to build constitutions for you and ask you to live in these structures of ours.' That is how the Third Round Table Conference came about. Thereafter the Joint Select Committee was set up and before this body also, we were definitely assured that we would bear a definite part of being consulted as equals so as to ensure that the final constitution that would be recommended by the Joint Parliamentary Committee would rest not upon the decisions of the great parties in England alone but upon the joint decisions based upon the consent of all those parties as well as of India.

[Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar] [29th January 1935]

"Having said that, Sir, what has been found subsequently to transpire? Whom would you regard as the accredited spokesmen of India from the point of view of the Government here or in England other than the chosen nominees of Government here? A small select set of people were eventually invited to England to participate in the Joint Select Committee's deliberations. These gentlemen headed by His Highness the Aga Khan presented a Joint Memorandum which is called the British Indian Memorandum. What is the effect given to that Memorandum? The effect given to it is that none of its recommendations has been given any weight. I say, Sir, that if there was any sincerity in the pledges and promises on which our great leaders were invited over to England, if there was any sincerity, a hundred per cent weight ought to have been attached to that weighty document, the Joint British Indian Memorandum. It was the minimum conjoint demand of British India. But all the recommendations have been thrown overboard, and to-day where are we? We are face to face with a Constitution which is very much worse than the White Paper Constitution which was sought to be improved in the directions pointed out in the British Indian Memorandum. It is a Constitution attempted to be forced upon this country by Great Britain. What, Sir, is the sanction which encourages them to flout Indian consent and Indian good-will in this extraordinary fashion? What is the sanction which encourages them to deal with us in this strange fashion? Sir, I cannot think of any sanction behind it other than force. It is force, nothing but force. But, even according to Mr. Churchill, force by itself would be no good in the government of this vast country or in the building up of Constitutions for this vast country.

"Now, Sir, let us see how far they have kept faith with us in carrying out the assurance that the Constitution which would be set up would not impede the progress of this country to the point of the realization of the ultimate goal. That was the assurance of the Prime Minister. I can easily satisfy this House that, if this Constitution is passed and it becomes law, the poor people of India who constitute at least 90 per cent of the total population would never get any chance for any legislation which would go to ameliorate their lot; because, vested interests are sought to be placed in such entrenched positions in all the legislatures under this Constitution without any time-limit, without any opportunity for modification, that they will never be a consenting party to the passing of any legislation which would adversely affect the moneyed classes or the landed aristocrats. In the Central sphere, as if special representation for landlords, commerce and industry were not enough, there is the crushing brake introduced in the shape of the enormous weightage, given to the States out of all proportion to what they would be entitled to on their population basis. In the Lower House in the Central sphere, fully a third or 125 out of the 375 seats, and in the Upper House 40 per cent of the 260 seats have been allotted to them. Is that not a monstrously excessive proportion for the States? What is the States' population? It is less than a fourth of the total population of Indian India and British

[29th January 1935] [Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar]

India. Sir, it may be that there are so many common interests between the States and British India that the ultimate solution of the Indian problem would have to be in the direction of an All-India Federation; but, British India, the dominant partner, certainly cannot be made to pay for such an ultimate solution an unduly heavy price at the start of the Federation. Sir, to insist that as a condition precedent to the setting up of Federation not less than half the number of States from a population point of view and from the point of view of half the seats in the Federal Upper House should initially join, is to put a handicap at the start of the whole of the scheme.

"Sir, until the First Round Table Conference began to sit, all the previous discussions and efforts in Constitution-building for India were, to set up responsibility in the Centre as well as in the Provinces only in regard to British India. Sir, in the Montagu Report in the concluding chapter, the future position was very clearly envisaged as a sisterhood of Indian States (referring to the British Indian provinces) with Central responsibility and Provincial responsibility, in which there would be in the fullness of time a place for the Indian States also in respect of such matters as to which alone they might agree to reach agreed decisions. This was the picture then everybody was going on drawing to solve the question of British Indian responsibility. Then came the Princes, for whatever reasons of their own, who expressed their consent to join an All-India Federation on their own terms. In this tripartite partnership, is British India alone to be denied the right of self-determination and is the right of self-determination to be exercised only by Great Britain and by the States? That is what it has come to mean. The States will not come except on their own terms, except on terms of such excessive weightage which means so much of taking away from what is justly and fairly due to British India which contains more than three quarters of the population and whose interests are really far more valuable interests.

"Sir, similarly in regard to the British partner. No doubt this country owes a very great deal to Great Britain. If hon. Members of this House would turn to the terms in which I have couched the amendment I intended to move, they would see that I want Anglo-Indian good-will to be ensured and it is for ensuring that good-will that I have made my suggestion. For this mutual good-will between Great Britain and British India, even though we owe a deep debt of gratitude to Great Britain for the great blessings of peace and tranquillity that have been conferred upon this country, I think, Sir, we cannot be asked to pay an unduly heavy price to Great Britain. Gratitude by itself cannot be regarded as a sufficient basis for this future partnership. Fairness and equity between partners in regard to the future would be a more enduring basis than mere gratitude for past boons.

"Sir, we have not been very impatient. The promises to India did not date really from the Montagu Declaration of 20th August 1917. These promises, hopes and aspirations have been encouraged almost from the commencement of British rule. I would, with the permission of the House, read only two extracts, notable extracts, from which there has been a great decadence in the whole century or more which has followed.

"The Marquis of Hastings in his private journal wrote as long ago as the 17th May 1818 this famous passage:

'A time not very remote will arise when England will on some principles of policy wish to relinquish the domination which she has gradually and unintentionally assumed over this country, and from which she cannot at present recede. In that hour it would be her proudest boast and most delightful reflection that she had used her sovereignty towards enlightening her temporary subjects, so as to enable the native communities to walk alone in the paths of justice, and to maintain with probity towards their benefactors that commercial intercourse in which we should then find a solid interest.'

"The other passage that I am referring to, is the famous passage in the course of the speech before the House of Lords during the debate in 1833 on the India Bill by Lord Macaulay:

'When the interest of India requires the change, that we ought to refuse to make that change, lest we should endanger our own power, this is a doctrine of which I cannot think without indignation. Governments like men may buy existence too dear. . . . It would be on the most selfish view of the case far better for us, that the people of India were well governed and independent of us, than ill-governed and subject to us, that they were ruled by their own Kings, but wearing our broad cloth and working with our cutlery than that they were performing their salaams to English Collectors and English Magistrates, but were too ignorant to value, or too poor to buy English manufactures. To trade with civilized men is infinitely more profitable than to govern savages. That would indeed be a dotting wisdom, which in order that India might remain a dependency would make it a useless and costly dependency, which would keep a hundred millions of men from being our customers in order that they might continue to be our slaves. . . . We are free, we are civilized, to little purpose, if we grudge to any portion of the human race, an equal measure of freedom and civilization. Are we to keep the people of India ignorant in order that we may keep them submissive, or do we think that we can give them knowledge, without awakening ambition, or do we mean to awaken ambition and to provide it with no legitimate vent? Who will answer any of these questions in the affirmative?'

I ask Mr. Langley and I ask Mr. Metherell, will they answer these questions in the affirmative? Lord Macaulay continued:

'I have no fears. The path of duty is plain before us, and it is also the path of wisdom, of national prosperity, of national honour. . . . It may be that the public mind of India may expand under our system till it has outgrown that system, that by good Government we may educate our subjects into a capacity for better Government, that having become instructed in European knowledge, they may in some future age demand European institutions. Whether such a day will ever come, I know not, but never will I attempt to avert or to retard it. Whenever it comes, it will be the proudest day in English History.'

"Again, in the memorable proclamation . . ."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"Is the hon. Member not concluding now?"

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"No, Sir; I will take time."

The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The hon. Member may continue his speech to-morrow. The House will now adjourn and meet again at 11 a.m. to-morrow."

I.—CONDOLENCE RESOLUTION ON THE DEATH OF DR. B. S. MALLAYYA.

* The Hon. Sir HOPETOUN STOKES:—“ Mr. President, Sir, I have once again the sad duty of proposing with your permission and the permission of the House a resolution of condolence on the death of one who has only recently entered the Legislative Council in the by-election which arose from the resignation of his seat by Mr. Sami Venkatachalam Chettiyar. Dr. Mallayya, whose death we have to deplore, was educated at the Government College, Mangalore, and after acquiring himself brilliantly in the Medical College, he joined the medical service of Government as Health Officer of Madura. He served on the staff of the Government Maternity Hospital and also as Assistant Professor of Surgery in the Medical College. In 1922, he resigned Government service and took up private practice.

“ He was for a number of years a member of the Madras Corporation and he took a keen interest in questions of public health and water-supply. In politics he was a consistent supporter of the Congress and was elected to the Third Legislative Council as one of the representatives of the City. Once again, as I have stated, he was returned to the Legislative Council only, as it seems, a few days back. The Council has suffered by his death, the loss of one who, by his keen interest in public affairs, might have proved, if he had been spared, of the highest value. Sir, I move the following resolution:—

‘ That an expression of the sincere regret of this Council at the death of Dr. Bantwal Srinivasa Mallayya, M.L.C., and of deep sympathy with his bereaved family be placed on record and conveyed to them ’.”

* Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—“ Mr. President, Sir, I associate myself with all that has been said by the Hon. the Leader of the House. I am sure we all regret the death of Dr. Mallayya because his career as a legislator was only just beginning once again. As the Hon. the Leader of the House has mentioned, Dr. Mallayya was very much interested in all questions connected with public health and sanitation and he was no mean authority on these matters. I am sure his help on the floor of this House would have been most valuable to Members in charge of the administration of medical and sanitary subjects. I am sure every one deplores that Dr. Mallayya was not destined to play the part which he would have played on the floor of this House. I am sure the sympathy of every Member of this House goes out to the bereaved family in the great loss that they have suffered.”

* The Hon. the RAJA OF BOBBILI:—“ Sir, it is my sad and painful duty to associate myself with the resolution moved by the Hon. the Leader of the House. The late Dr. Mallayya was a well-known doctor in the City. He was very popular both with the rich and the poor. He was one of the oldest members of the Madras Corporation and he always took a leading part in the affairs of that body. He has also served as a Member of the Legislative Council previously. He has always taken a keen and lively interest in matters connected with medical administration. It is a great calamity that he should be snatched away from us so shortly after his re-entry into this House a few days back. With these words, I beg to associate myself with the sentiments expressed by the Hon. the Leader of the House and the Leader of the Opposition.”

* Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—“ Mr. President, Sir, on behalf of the Justice Democratic Party, it is my melancholy duty to associate myself with the Hon. the Leader of the House, the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. the Chief Minister to express our sorrow on the demise of Dr. Mallayya. Of late, the cruel hand of death has been taking away a number of the Members of this Council from our midst and let us pray that Dr. Mallayya will be the last. We all know that Dr. Mallayya had a jovial temperament. Especially at question time in this Council he was very sharp and doing useful work. With these few words I associate myself with the sentiments expressed by the other Hon. Members.”

* Mr. J. K. METHERELL:—“ With sincere regret, on behalf of the European Group, I associate myself with the resolution that has been proposed by the Hon. the Leader of the House.”

* Rao Sahib N. SIVA RAJ:—“ Sir, on behalf of the group of Members representing the Depressed Classes to which I have the honour to belong, I beg to associate myself with the sentiments that have been expressed by the previous speakers at the passing away of one of our old friends. The death of Dr. Mallayya has removed from the public life of this Presidency and of this City in particular a very genial personality and a good fighter. I have been Dr. Mallayya's colleague in more than one institution outside this Council. Both of us have been members of the Madras Corporation and some other institutions too. Wherever he was, he was a factor in bringing about good relationships amongst various members. I feel particularly bound to express our sense of admiration at the way in which the late Dr. Mallayya fought the recent election. We, the members of the Depressed Classes, on the one hand and Dr. Mallayya on the other—both of us fought the recent by-election in a sporting spirit, exactly as players do on a football field.”

Mr. U. C. SUBRAHMANYA BHATT:—"May I ask whether the Government will consider the advisability of putting off the collection of these charges till better times come up, especially in view of the hard conditions now prevailing?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"I will consider the suggestion."

Famine condition in the western taluks of the Bellary district.

* 590 Q.—Mr. A. RANGANATHA MUDALIYAR: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government have received reports that the crops of the western taluks of the Bellary district have proved a failure this year; and

(b) if so, the measures taken by Government to relieve distress by starting suitable works for execution?

A.—(a) The hon. Member is referred to the answer given to question No. 309 answered at the meeting on 25th October 1934. Since then, the Commissioner for Land Revenue and Settlement has inspected the area and found that the crops in the Harpanahalli taluk have improved.

(b) The earlier stages of distress were dealt with by the expansion of ordinary local fund and Minor Irrigation works. A sum of Rs. 25,000 was granted to the District Board, and the District Board was also permitted to divert the unspent balance of the current year's grant on trunk roads and second-class roads, in the district to an extent of Rs. 18,000.

As the distress continued and as a larger number of labourers attended the local fund and other works started to provide employment, it was decided that the test works under the provisions of the Famine Code should be opened to ascertain whether the labouring classes were in such a state of distress that 'relief works' should be opened to save them from starvation. It is now nearly three weeks since the test works were started and the attendance of the labourers at the works continues to be considerable. The Commissioner for Land Revenue and Settlement has just toured in the district and the Government await proposals regarding the starting of relief works.

Mr. G. RAMESWARA RAO:—"May I ask whether any report has been received from the Famine Commissioner who has been touring in the district?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"We have recently received a report from the Commissioner of Land Revenue and Settlement and I understand that the Board of Revenue have sanctioned the conversion of three test works into relief works in Bellary."

[30th January 1935]

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"May I request the Hon. the Revenue Member to see that in future not more than 14 days elapse between the starting of test works and the converting of them into relief works as the Famine Code mentions that ordinarily a fortnight will be taken?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"This period of 14 days is the minimum period. It does not necessarily follow that after 14 days the test works should be transformed into relief works. It depends on the situation at the time."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"May I ask whether the Government are aware that the same sort of conditions prevails in the Penukonda taluk of the Guntur district also?"

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"The Government have no information."

Mr. P. V. KRISHNAYYA CHOUDARI:—"Will the Hon. Member be pleased to call for a report from the Collector of Guntur?"

Famine relief measures in the Bellary district.

* 591 Q.—Diwan Bahadur M. GOPALASWAMI MUDALIYAR: Will the Hon. the Member for Revenue be pleased to state what steps have been taken to relieve famine distress in the district of Bellary?

A.—The attention of the hon. Member is invited to the answer to question No. 590 which gives particulars of the works undertaken for the relief of distress among agricultural labourers.

The Board of Revenue has postponed to April 1935 the collection of the January kist of 8 annas in the Hospet, Hadagalli, Harpanahalli, Kudligi and Rayadrug taluks.

To meet the scarcity of fodder prevailing in this district as well as in Anantapur district the Government have sanctioned a special scheme for the collection and supply of hill grass from the forests in the Bellary, Cuddapah and Kurnool districts through the departmental agencies. An officer of the grade of Extra Assistant Conservator of Forests together with the necessary staff has been appointed to supervise the collection, pressing and baling of hill grass and its despatch to the places selected by the Collectors as centres for distribution to the ryots. The Government have also sanctioned a sum of Rs. 10,000 to meet the costs of collection and distribution. Forests reserves have also been thrown open, wherever necessary, for free grazing.

Mr. K. KOTI REDDI:—"May I ask that the fodder that is now collected will be supplied to the famine-stricken parts of Cuddapah district also? The answer refers only to Anantapur and Bellary."

[30th January 1935]

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"The answer says that grass is being collected from the forests of Bellary, Cuddapah and Kurnool and that the Government have sanctioned a sum of Rs. 10,000 to meet the costs of collection and distribution. If Cuddapah requires any particular relief in this way and if the Collector reports so, the Government will certainly take that matter into consideration."

(b) the measures taken to destroy such man-eaters?

(b) The attention of the hon. Member is invited to Board's Standing Order No. 196. A maximum reward of Rs. 50 is prescribed in this Standing Order for the destruction of each tiger in certain districts, of which the South Kanara district is one. There is also a special instruction to disbursing officers that they should deal liberally in regard to the killing of tigers and panthers in localities where those animals are exceptionally destructive of human life. Special rewards in excess of the maximum may be offered for the destruction of man-eaters.

Mr. A. B. SHETTY:—"May I ask whether the Government have taken note of the large destruction of animal life and the destruction of human life in South Kanara by tigers and man-eaters and whether they propose to take any special measures in this matter?"

[30th January 1935]

The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—"This question refers to the number of human beings killed. So far as animals are concerned, a question has already been answered in this Council."

* 595 Q.—Mr. P. M. THANGAL: Will the Hon. the Minister for Public Works be pleased to state—

(a) whether the Government have ordered that a bridge in or near Kallikavu in Malabar should be built immediately;

[30th January 1935]

(b) if so, whether before arriving at that decision the Government considered the comparative importance of this bridge as well as of the Koduvalli bridge (between Tellicherry and Cannanore) and of the Puthur bridge north of Kottakal; and

(c) whether the Government have consulted the District Board or the Collector as to the respective importance of these bridges; if so, whether they will be pleased to lay their opinions on the table; if not, what are the special reasons for ordering that this bridge should be so urgently built?

A.—(a) Yes.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—“ May I ask whether there is any proposal to extend this Photo-Stat system?”

The Hon. Mr. P. T. RAJAN:—“ At present there is no proposal.”

Mr. V. M. RAMASWAMI MUDALIYAR:—“ May I ask the Hon. Minister to give us an idea of the number of clerks thrown out on account of the introduction of this system and who have now been absorbed?”

of the Registration department who were thrown out of employment as a result of the introduction of the Photo Stat system of copying documents in Malabar district;

(c) if so, the reasons why preference is not shown to the permanent and acting clerks of the Registration department of Malabar, thrown out of employment;

(d) whether the Government will place on the table the orders already passed in regard to the re-absorption of the acting clerks of the Registration department thrown out of employment; and

(a) how many tons of 'Magnesite' were mined for the last ten years in the Salem district;

United Kingdom,
United States of America,
Netherlands,
Belgium, and Germany.

Its uses in India appear to be in the manufacture of epsom salts, mabor cupels for gold and silver assays and in making magnesite composition floorings but such uses appear to be limited.

Mr. K. A. NACHIYAPPA GOUNDER:—"May I know in what way the Government propose to exploit the deposits?"

The Hon. Diwan Bahadur S. KUMARASWAMI REDDIYAR:—"By way of oil."

III.—MOTION RE REPORT OF THE JOINT PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE—cont.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"As several hon. Members are waiting to speak, the hon. Member (Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar) will be as brief as possible."

* Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, yesterday I was giving an extract to the House from the Private Journal of the Marquis of Hastings. He wrote of a time not very remote when England will wish to relinquish her domination over this country. It is now 117 years since then. Is England anywhere near wishing to relinquish her domination? May I at this stage recall the famous passage in the memorable proclamation of Queen Victoria?

'In their prosperity will be our strength, in their contentment our security, and in their gratitude our best reward.'

"It is long after these ancient pronouncements that we reach the declaration of the 20th August 1917 and the many subsequent pledges and promises that have followed it. I do not want to take up the time of the House by quoting Mr. Churchill's pronouncements of 1921. They will stand out as monumental statements of British policy, but the Churchill of 1934-35 is not the Churchill of 1921. The Montague policy was appreciated in 1921 as one of enormous utility and service from the view point of the national interests of the British Empire. In 1934, the Montague policy is appreciated as the policy of danger. The full and complete Dominion Status of the Indian Government and people which England owed to India as a deep debt according to the Churchill of 1921 is now something very far below that of Australia and Canada.

"Sir, the Prime Minister of England in speaking to his motion in the House of Commons at the end of the second Round Table Conference asked for and obtained the approval of Parliament to the Government's Indian policy, according to which the British Cabinet was carrying on and had to continue to carry on negotiations with India through the Round Table Conference method until the stage arrived when the proposed agreement was initiated—a very well-known stage in the negotiation of treaties. He said that thereafter the House of Commons was to be asked whether it agreed. If it did not, most Governments would regard the disagreement as a vote of no-confidence and take steps accordingly. That was in December 1931. The National Government has since been feeling very much stronger on the saddle. The Conservative majority in Parliament is taking far too great an advantage of its strength. It is doing so because one of two things was sure to happen. The situation in India after these seven years of equivocation and struggle would so get out of hand that England was sure to lose India by the irresistible pressure of facts in not more than two generations. That was what the Right Hon'ble Stanley Baldwin said in his recent Queen's Hall speech. The other contingency was that if the Socialist Party meanwhile came into power in England, by no means an unlikely event, they would or might allow India to exercise self-determination and grant her the constitution she wanted, giving the substance of freedom. These dangers had to be averted in advance. If the Joint Parliamentary Committee constitution were now imposed, it would be more than difficult for the Labour Government to scrap it, and it would be impossible for India to emerge out of it with sufficient strength to wrest her freedom within any time that human ingenuity can foresee.

"Sir, it is important to see how far the proposed Constitution is an advance towards our promised goal as it is claimed to be, and how far it prejudices the advance of India to full responsibility for her own Government. The declaration of the British Government read by the Prime Minister at the end of the first Round Table Conference announced the placing of responsibility for the Government of India on Central and Provincial Legislatures with transitional safeguards and reserve power so framed as not to prejudice the advance of India through the new Constitution to full responsibility for her own Government. The Prime Minister pointed out that the purpose of the Round Table Conference was 'to achieve the self-government of India.' It was not merely to take incomplete or doubtful steps for the time being, leaving the uncertain future to take care of itself. Sir, it followed that the Constitution Act should itself provide for the automatic disappearance or extinction of the reserve power and safeguards at the end of the period of transition, which period should be specified in the Constitution Act. It further followed that the safeguards and reserve power should be no more than what was strictly necessary to the development of a free constitution. They must merely lie in the reserve and ultimate background, and not defeat the development of responsible Government.

"Sir, all sides of this House have very properly tried to view the opinions of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru as affording the safest guidance. Let us therefore clearly realize what his opinions are. His feeling is that the spirit of the first Round Table Conference was no longer there, and that the Conservatives have been given a heavy price for their support. The following are among his main points: Dominion Status must be pledged definitely, especially in view of the attempts in Parliament to disown the Prime Minister's and Viceroy's declarations. The Secretary of State for India in Council should be abolished and the powers of the Secretary of State under the new Constitution should vest in the Dominions Secretary. A definite programme of Indianization of the Army within 30 years should be handed over to responsible Ministers. The Army Member should be elected from the Legislature and he and the Federal Ministers should together settle the Military budget. In case of disagreement between them, the Instrument of Instructions should provide a final appeal to the Governor-General. Reduction of military expenditure is essential. The Director of the Reserve Bank should nominate a panel out of which the Governor-General should nominate the Governor and the Deputy Governor of the bank in consultation with his Ministers, and 75 per cent of the capital of the bank should be raised in India. The High Courts should be under the Central Government. There should be no indirect election at the centre. The Lothian Report's arguments against indirect elections are convincing and conclusive. The Joint Parliamentary Committee recommendations regarding commercial safeguards and fiscal autonomy constitute a serious limitation on the powers of the legislatures. India must be allowed to develop freely her industries and fiscal policy, leaving it to the two countries to come to mutual agreements. The only safeguard for British trade and commerce is Indian goodwill and nothing will foster that goodwill so much and so quickly as a complete Dominion Status Constitution, with no more than the minimum transitional reserve power and safeguards. Regarding public services, the Governor-General should recruit and not the Secretary of State. Fundamental rights must be declared in the Constitution Act. Regarding constituent powers, our fortunes should no longer be dependent upon Parliament or His Majesty's Government. Without resort to Parliament, prescribed majorities of Central and Provincial Legislatures should be made competent to evolve full freedom for India in accordance with the time-table to be now fixed. There is no justification for safeguards relating to Police legislation in the Provinces. This and other safeguards in the Provinces constitute serious deductions from the promised full provincial responsibility. Terrorism must be dealt with by Indian Ministers. Then alone there will be a healthy public opinion created, which would result in the eradication of the evil. Second Chambers for Provinces are undesirable. They would give undue weightage to landlords and monied classes and block social and economic legislation and thus create conflict.

"These are the opinions of the Right Honourable Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. It is no wonder that when the scheme is found to require so many vital amendments, the other esteemed Right Honourable gentleman Mr. V. S. Srinivasa Sastri on behalf of the Liberal Party of this country has emphatically refused even an atom of co-operation to the British Parliament for the promulgation of so retrograde a constitution.

[Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar] [30th January 1935]

Sir, we naturally turn with equal confidence for guidance to our esteemed citizen, Sir P. S. Sivaswami Ayyar. He has propounded five tests and declared that the Joint Parliamentary Committee scheme does not satisfy any of them. They are:—‘Does the scheme hold out any prospect of attaining Dominion Status even within a generation or a period of thirty years? Does it hold out any prospect of the assumption by India of the responsibility for her own defence? Does it provide India with the power and the means of utilizing her slender financial resources for the development of her nation-building services? Does it confer upon India sufficient freedom for the development of her industries and economic life to the fullest limit of her resources? Does it tend to prolong or practically perpetuate the dictation of administrative policy by the Secretary of State and his control and interference in Indian administration?’

“Sir, it would be impertinent on my part to try to state my opinions in my own words after such weighty pronouncements by our accredited leaders. This, however, I must mention, that when Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru wrote his article for the Twentieth Century, he expected a greater division of opinion in India than has since manifested itself. Sir, the Right Honourable Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru must now feel greatly disillusioned. The Joint Parliamentary Committee proposals have welded together the various communities, interests, and political organizations in this country to an extent which must now set not only Sir Sapru but also the Governments in India and England and Parliament itself to seriously consider whether the Joint Parliamentary Committee scheme should not be thrown aside as the Simon Report was thrown aside, and whether a far better and really genuine scheme should not be drafted afresh with India's good-will and consent.

“Sir, everybody knows now that the Servants of India Society, the National Liberal Federation, Mr. Walchand Hirachand, Sir Nalini Ranjen Sarkar, the Committee of the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce, the Committee of the Indian Merchants, Bombay, Mr. Joshi, on behalf of Labour, the All-India Muslim Unity Board's Working Committee, the All-India Muslim League, the recent meeting of the Council of the All-India Muslim League under Mr. Jinnah's chairmanship, Sir Abdur Rahim, the present President of the Indian Legislative Assembly, and above all, the All-India Women's Conference held at Karachi, all these have now unanimously and with one voice condemned the Joint Parliamentary Committee scheme as absolutely unacceptable.

“Sir, it may be acceptable to Sir Patro who was chained as an auxiliary to the hind-wheel of Sir John Simon's chariot throughout the black flag processions. Sir Patro who was never high in the estimation of his countrymen almost fell into an abyss in 1928. He has since been repeating time and again his fruitless endeavour to catch the foreign eye by detracting his countrymen and underrating their opinions and rendering homage to the three great fountain-heads of all that

[Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar]

30th January 1935] matters in his view, the Secretary of State, the Governor-General and the Governor for the time being. (The Hon. Rao Bahadur A. T. Pannirselvam: ‘Question.’) But, though Governors come and Governors go, every Governor has a continuous directory which keeps him from being misled by interested intriguers. Sir, the Justice Party of whom Sir Patro is so stout, strong and tall a pillar, met at Coimbatore in confederation under the presidency of the third Minister, Diwan Bahadur S. Kumaraswami Reddiyar—I do not find him here in his seat—about eight years ago and passed resolutions of great importance. They resolved to censure the then Governor, Lord Goschen.

Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—“Is there any sense in the hon. Member referring to all these matters, irrelevant as they are?”

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—“That is not a point of order, Sir.

“They resolved to censure the then Governor, Lord Goschen, to abjure Ministerial office for ever and ever so long as the Montagu scheme held the field, and to give the members of the South Indian Liberal Federation liberty to enter the Congress as the only way to obtain for this country the freedom that it required and deserved.”

Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—“As a matter of personal explanation, Mr. President. My friend must have known that the resolution was a protest against the way in which the administration of this province was carried on at that time.”

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—“Sir, the temptation of office was too luring for the Justice Party to adhere to their solemn vows. They sent their drummer-boy Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliyar soon after to Bombay to propagate and vindicate their pledges and conclusions before the Bombay Non-Brahmans' Conference. These are the credentials of the party whose shining lights of to-day want England to be led into believing that they voice the public opinion of India.”

Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—“What are you to-day?”

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—“I am voicing the opinion of the whole country. (Cries of ‘Oh, oh.’) (Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. Patro: Woe to the country.)

“Sir, Sir Patro criticized the speech of my hon. Friend the venerable Muslim Leader, Mr. Yakub Hasan, as if it was worth no attention and contained nothing but words without matter. Sir, without offence to other speakers, may I say that Mr. Yakub Hasan's speech was the speech in the whole of this debate and Sir Patro's carried no conviction.”

Rao Bahadur Sir A. P. PATRO:—“Beach oratory.”

Mr. F. BIRLEY:—“Mr. President, Sir, on a point of order. Is this a discussion on Sir Patro or the Joint Select Committee Report? (Laughter).”

[30th January 1935]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"On both, because Sir A. P. Patro made certain observations, and the hon. Member is at perfect liberty to refer to them."

Mr. K. R. VENKATARAMA AYYAR:—"Sir, the All-India Federation, if it is to serve as an instrument for the welfare of the whole of India, the welfare of the people of British India and Indian India, should be constituted in our Central Legislatures quite differently, because the Princes are in a sense but the counterparts of the representatives of British vested interests. In his article in the Daily Telegraph, Sir Austin Chamberlain brought this out quite clearly. He said:

"In all that concerns us most, the interests of the Princes of India are the same as ours; the presence of their representatives in the two Chambers of the Legislature will be a conservative and stabilizing element which would further be fortified by the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee in regard to the method of election of the two Chambers and the indissolubility of the Upper House."

"Major Graham Pole has therefore rightly pointed out in his recent article in the Modern Review that, difficult as it may be to get Labour legislation through the present Central Legislature, it will be infinitely more difficult under the proposed new constitution.

"Sir, several years ago in the course of the discussions in Parliament, Mr. Wedgwood Benn very properly laid great emphasis upon sincerity and speed as the essential conditions of a successful solution of the Indian constitutional problem. I have already addressed the House in regard to British speed. The British have been moving very fast indeed from the time of the Marquis of Hastings and of Sir Thomas Munro to the days of Lord Birkenhead and Sir Samuel Hoare. Now, Sir, as to sincerity, Parliament having conceded the goal of British policy in India to be Dominion Status, that being the authoritative interpretation of the preamble to the Statute of 1919, where is the sincerity in the refusal to recite that goal again in terms of Dominion Status after all the wrangle that has been going on these several years? With the goal enunciated in the forefront of the Constitution Act, every provision in the constitution would fall to be tested in the light of its advancing or retarding the attainment of the goal. Without it, the provisions of the constitution would be attempted to be justified, as indeed they have been by the Secretary of State in his New Year's Broadcast speech as mere steps for the better government of India by Britain. That is formulated as the final test of British policy, better government by Britain and not self-government by India.

"Sir, the sentence in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report that the 'preamble to the Act of 1919 stands' and no subsequent pledge has added to it has been easily allowed even by Lord Halifax to influence him. Sir, that sentence cannot be left to go unchallenged. The preamble of 1919 subjected India to repeated doles to be thrown into the begging bowl of India by Parliament as and when Parliament thought fit. But there was a pledge far more sweeping in character by Parliament in 1931, namely, that the policy of the British Government and the common purpose common to the British Parliament and to India was by means of the Round Table Conference 'to achieve the self-government of India,' so as to leave no future power in the British Parliament to grant or to withhold at will. That was why they went forward to pledge that at the end of the transition period the reservations and safeguards should automatically disappear. But now while the Constitution Act is to be an Act in final form, there is no time-limit fixed for the removal of the reserve power and no constituent powers are conferred upon the Indian Legislatures enabling them to evolve full freedom for India.

[30th January 1935] [Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar]

"Now, Sir, the safeguards have afforded an effective test of British sincerity. The Joint Parliamentary Committee's modifications of the White Paper which was sufficiently bad in itself, have made the safeguards, as Lord Reading has pointed out in the House of Lords, as effective as they possibly could be to set at rest all fears and apprehensions on the part of the British Diehards. Mr. Birley says that the safeguards are likely to be as inoperative as the small type printed conditions in merchants' contract forms. His Excellency the Governor assures us almost to the same effect in his own choice language. But Lord Eustace Percy has assured the British public quite recently that the so-called safeguards were not attempts to prevent misuse by Ministers of the powers vested in them by law but that they were frontiers beyond which the Governor-General or the Governor might not share with his Ministers the powers which the law vested solely in him. On this secure basis, he says, rested the Joint Parliamentary Committee recommendations for strengthening the powers of the Governor-General and the Governor in all matters which affected Law and Order, the Judiciary and the Public Services, especially the Police Service. The Joint Parliamentary Committee report itself says that the safeguards 'represent a retention of power, as substantial and as fully endorsed by the law, as that vested by the constitution of the United States in the President as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, but more extensive both in respect of their scope and in respect of the circumstances in which they can be brought into play.' The condolence offered to us in the succeeding sentences of the Report is that the safeguards are not inconsistent with some form of Responsible Government, and that more will depend upon the manner and spirit in which the constitution is worked, rather than its formal provisions.

"Sir, when Sir Samuel Hoare was giving evidence before the Joint Select Committee, Conservatives of all shades pulled together to extract out of him all that they wanted to make sure that the responsibility of Ministers, whether in the provinces or in the Centre, was effectively counteracted by the arbitrary overriding powers conferred upon the Governor-General and the Governor.

"As Sir Austin Chamberlain has pointed out, some services have been reserved indefinitely. The combined effect of reservations and safeguards, indirect elections to the Centre, Second Chambers in the Centre and the provinces with co-equal powers with the Lower House, representation of special interests, and weightage to the States in the

[Mr. K. R. Venkatarama Ayyar] [30th January 1935]

Federal Houses, is to withhold political power from the bulk of our people, the masses, for whose welfare Great Britain professes so much solicitude. The economic deterioration of this country and the strengthening and expansion of British commercial interests will soon be so manifest that it will become more and more difficult under the proposed Constitution, with the passage of time, for this country to assert or obtain the full measure of freedom to which she is entitled. There is a mere political structure set up without provisions for preventing the economic exploitation of the masses.

"Sir, the trusteeship of far-off Parliament for the welfare of the Indian masses of which so much is made in England had better not be audibly asserted on this side of the waters. We have become sick of the repetition ad nauseum of this obsolete anachronism. Do the illiterate masses of our countrymen look to us and trust us or do they look to Churchills and Pargacrafts or even Austin Chamberlains and Samuel Hoares for the amelioration of their lot? Sir, one of the conditions laid down by the Statutory Commission and adopted by the Joint Parliamentary Committee is that the Constitution now made should contain within itself the seeds of further growth and full development. This condition has not been fulfilled. There is no constituent power given to the Indian Legislatures in regard to the removal of the reserve or getting rid of the limitations in due time. There is no fixing of any time-limit for the full development.

"Sir, the whole Report breathes distrust and suspicion. Would there be an Indian Governor under the Constitution? If so, he should be a super-Indian among Indians to deserve to be entrusted with the special powers and responsibilities of the Governor. The British answer to this question would test the sincerity of the scheme which provides fetters and frontiers for Ministers. As Lord Lytton has pointed out: 'If you give responsibility, you must give full responsibility; or else, do not transfer power at all.' The whole scheme bristles with safeguards, reservations, special and discretionary powers, and it is impossible to say that what is given with one hand is not taken away with the other.

"Sir, the British Government have shown an extraordinary change of front. They were saying till the other day that the Constitution now to be passed must rest upon common consent, the consent of Great Britain as well as of India; but now, Sir, that condition has gone; they are formulating now the other thing as the condition—would there be anybody in India to work this Constitution, if imposed on India? This is now deemed enough, but would it be working with minimum or maximum goodwill, with more or less opportunities for friction, conflict and breakdown?

"What is the sanction behind this change of front? Force and nothing but force.

"One final word, Sir. We stood by Britain during the Great War in her hour of sorest trial. We feel now that she is hampering our progress towards our promised destiny, by the offer of this odious Constitution. No doubt, the ablest men in England have concentrated all their talents and energies to devise it. But their concentration has been not as to how much of freedom to confer but on how much could be safely withheld in the face of impending danger and how best to ward off further or future danger by preventing the growth of freedom in India. Sir, this Constitution has been drafted for the benefit of England and not of India, as if it concerned only the Conservative Party, as if India were part of British territory and as if we Indians were a nation of slaves with no right to determine our lot. His Majesty's Opposition in Parliament have during the stages, when the Constitution was being drafted, shown a more scrupulous regard for Indian interests and British pledges. We owe them a deep debt of gratitude.

"Sir, we are not by this resolution drafting a Constitution ourselves. We are only stating our deliberate opinion and sincere feeling in regard to the proposed Constitution. Sir, we have been asked, where is the alternative Constitution? I say, Sir, to Sir Samuel Hoare 'You are enamoured of your ugly child and you won't look at the other beautiful poor and helpless child challenging a comparison.' If you drafted your Bill on the basis of the White Paper as modified by the British-Indian Memorandum or as modified by the Labour Party's draft with 'direct' substituted for 'indirect' election, would it or would it not be a workable alternative? Sir Samuel Hoare's answer is that such a Constitution goes too far, not that it is in its nature unworkable. We are entitled with equal conviction to say in turn that it would be the best basis that would meet immediate requirements and that it would be a workable Constitution. If Parliament cares to give us anything worth having, it is yet open to it to proceed along such lines, but the way to proceed is not by ignoring the other man's view or evading it, but by meeting it—meeting argument by argument—so as to make sure of an unchallengeable decision out of the clash of arguments. Sir, Mr. Baldwin repeatedly declined the invitation of Mr. Lansbury in the House of Commons to answer and satisfy the Labour Party. Similarly, Lord Ponsonby pointed out in the House of Lords that His Majesty's Government thought that all they had to do was to appease their rebellious partymen and that the attention due was not paid to the views of those who would form the next Labour Government.

"Sir, they talk of disunion in India among Indians. Are they, in Great Britain, united in their attitude towards India; even men of the same party? It looks as if the bulk of the English people would unite to do justice to India only if they were again in the throes of a Great World War or paralysed by a more effective, sustained and widespread campaign of civil disobedience. Sir, that would be a very sad reflection on British character and a great detraction to British statesmanship.

"Sir, we are not asking for the moon. We do not want the Governor-General and the army to pack out at once, nor do we want Indian capitalists and landlords to make a prey of the cultivators and industrial labourers. We want at once the largest measure of Responsible Self-Government that is possible in the present circumstances, with automatic provision for the full development of the Constitution in the shortest possible time under which the majority of Indian citizens on an eventual scheme of adult suffrage would govern the country through directly elected representatives in our own Parliaments.

"Sir, I hope that whatever the result, the Labour Party would move its amendments, and press them to a division. I hope that Lord Lothian would press for direct election. I hope and trust that everybody in Great Britain who yet cares to carry on commerce with this country, will do his utmost not to alienate our goodwill on which must depend all commerce.

"Sir, I am not going to conclude my speech as Sir Samuel Hoare once did in tones of triumph. I am not going to say "Let the dogs in England bark, the Indian caravan passes on." On the other hand, I hope and pray that to the same extent as we desire to be friendly, they in England will also be inspired by a desire to return our friendliness, and being the stronger side, by a readiness to give way more than ask us to yield, so that, we may move hand in hand, helping each other and advancing our mutual interests as equal partners in the Great British Commonwealth of free nations.

"Now, Sir, consistently with these opinions, sentiments and feelings, I can only beg of the House to discharge its duty fearlessly and conscientiously by rejecting the proposed Constitution, and making substantial suggestions for a sound and stable Constitution for the good of our great country, so that there might be no difficulty felt in England as to what it is that India really wants."

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Mr. President, Sir, the Member in charge of the motion, my Hon. Colleague, told the House at the very commencement of these proceedings that the Government will not interfere in this debate and that the Members of the Government will not vote if it comes to a question of vote on this motion; and, if I rise to speak in spite of that statement, I do so entirely on my own responsibility and I speak for myself. I, therefore, request the Hon. House not to interpret in any way what I might say, as the views of the Government of Madras. I rise, Sir, because I feel I owe a duty to myself and to my country in which I have long been, according to my humble capacity, trying, and endeavouring, to render such services as I am capable of. When the destinies of India are in a balance I feel that the occasion is too great and too momentous to sit silent without giving expression to what I feel in a matter like this. In doing so, Sir, I do not propose to enter into details and I do not propose to question the right of the people of this country to ask for such changes as they deem fit and necessary for the political progress of this country. For instance, when they ask for Dominion Status, whatever that might mean, I do not in the least object to their appealing to England that if she could not grant Dominion Status immediately, it ought to be possible for her to make it the goal of India. Let it be given whenever it pleases the British Parliament, but some day let it be the goal of India. I do not object to that. Nor do I object to those others who plead for direct elections and though I do not base my plea on the grounds on which they have based theirs; I feel, personally speaking, that direct elections have an advantage of their own in that they will furnish the best political education to the voters of this country, who are illiterate and ignorant (Voices from the Opposition: "Hear, hear"). There are many other amendments, incorporating all these demands, such as for instance, the one that has been moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Raj, and others, with which I have no quarrel. But, when I come to the motion tabled in the name of the Leader of the Opposition I feel, Sir, that instead of rendering a service to the country, if that motion is carried, positive injury will be done to the people of this land. (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: "Question.")

Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED:—"May I rise to a point of order, Sir? Has the Hon. Member, speaking as an ex-officio member, not as an elected member, the right to canvass for a certain position, when the Government Member in charge of the motion

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"There is no point of order in that."

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Sir, I have, at the very outset, submitted that I am speaking for myself. Now, Sir, on the floor of this House so many sins of the Government in England, of commission and omission, so many sins of the Party in Power to which I had the honour to belong for a long time, have been mentioned and even references of a personal nature were made. I hope I will not descend to that level. It is just possible that while you find any number of deficiencies in the formation of the Government of this country, any number of acts of commission, which may not be accepted by the people of this land—for, which Government is there which can satisfy the entire population in its own country—at the same time, however, are we to forget what has been done in our own generation? I see some of my friends opposite to me are quite young, compared with a man of my age, and it may not be possible for them to realize in all prominence what has taken place within the last thirty or forty years. Mr. President, Sir, I hope you will not take it that I am striking a personal note when I refer to events of the last thirty or forty years, but it has been my lot to go through them as it must have been the lot of a few others in this House; but all members may not be aware of these events, or at any rate may not be capable of keeping them in their view. That reminds me of what I have been able to notice in England. When in 1919 I visited England, I found everybody talking of the War and the horrible atrocities that were perpetrated during the Great War. Not a single voice could be heard of joy and not a single man or woman was happy. But in 1933 when I visited the place again, the old generation has almost passed away and the younger generation knew nothing of the War or its horrors. Something of that kind evidently is passing through the minds of the members of the younger generation here in these days. It is only right on their part to ask for more, but they are now placed in better circumstances than some of us who had to toil through various phases. We had to struggle for the freedom of this country, such as we have been able to get during the last thirty or forty years. (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: 'Gained by experience'). Certainly we must all gain by experience. Yes, you must use that experience in the right way and not in the wrong way. Experience can be two-fold; it may be an experience that will lead you on to the right way or it may lead you on and drown you in the sea."

Mr. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED:—"Exactly, it is a matter of opinion."

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Yes, it is a matter of opinion and I am giving expression to my opinion."

"Let me tell you something about what I have seen in one generation in our own country. I have known the days when there was no Legislative Council in this place and I have known Legislative Councils filled entirely by officials; I have known Houses of Legislation in this country which were filled by officials assisted occasionally by one or two non-official members who had no voice; I have known Houses where there were non-official members but all of whom were nominated; I have known Houses where there were non-official members, but who had no voice even for asking supplementary questions; I have known Houses in which members could not discuss the Budget. Where are we to-day? Is there not within the last thirty or forty years such a great change in the Legislative Councils of our country, and is it right to speak of sincerity and speed in the progress, quoting Major Graham Pole for sincerity and speed? But you have not really and honestly considered that there has been in reality sincerity and speed in the action of the Government at Home in giving these Reforms to the Legislative Councils within a single generation. Examine the history of Canada; examine the history of Australia—South Africa is a new country and so is Ireland—and when you come to older countries or older colonies, you will notice how long it took them to come to the present position that they enjoy to-day. In England itself, how long did it take, how many centuries did it take for the British people to acquire rights and privileges which they are now enjoying. Never mind about the Legislative Councils. What about the international position which India has acquired within the last ten or fifteen years? Did not our members sit in the Conferences, in the Imperial Conferences in London? Did not our citizens sign Peace Treaties? Is not India a Member of the League of Nations? (Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed: 'In what capacity?') Is that not, I ask, a good that has been acquired by India?"

Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Dummies may be there."

noon.

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Well, dummies can be there, if one feels a dummy. I have no objection to leave it to my hon. Friend to take that credit. Do you call a man like the Rt. Hon. Mr. V. S. Srinivasa Sastri a dummy, who has been quoted in season and out of season in this House, quoted by leaders of opposition when it suited their purpose, who has sat in the Imperial Conference and exchanged swords with no less a statesman than General Smuts."

* Mr. ABDUL HAMEED KHAN:—"Will you take his place?"

30th January 1935]

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Yes, I succeeded him in South Africa and I believe I succeeded him well. (A voice: 'Question.') You are at perfect liberty to question what you like."

"I may refer to another circumstance. Take the Executive Councils. In season and out of season, we have been told in this House and elsewhere that Indians were not admitted into the Executive Councils. But in 1911, when that old scion of the Bobbili house was chosen as a Member of the Executive Council, do hon. Members forget the joy that swept over the country? Do hon. Members forget within their own generation, within 15 or 20 years, that an Indian was made Governor of a province, that an Indian was made a Member of the House of Lords, and that an Indian was made a Member of the Ministry of Great Britain? These are all small changes to men who do not see behind them. But to those who have gone through the old period, and to those who have taken part in the struggle for gaining these, it is impossible to understand either the criticism or the reasons on which such criticisms are based."

"Let us go a step further. What does the main amendment say? It says that the Reforms that were offered, as contained in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, are unsatisfactory and unacceptable, and my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, would be content with the existing state of circumstances. He would rather continue in the diarchy which is in existence to-day, rather than accept the Reforms. Well, Sir, I ask if this is a service to this country? What have you been doing all these years since diarchy has been introduced? Within two years of the introduction of diarchy resolutions were moved in the Assembly. (A voice: 'Question.') There is no question about it and it has been referred to. After introduction, it was in 1922, within two years after the system was introduced a motion was made to repeal the diarchic system. We have been told that we the Executive Councillors, are an irresponsible and irremovable body of bureaucrats, white bureaucrats to my right, and brown bureaucrats ourselves. (Cries of: 'Oh!') Yes, and you wanted the removal of this diarchic system and the removal of these Executive Councillors. And what are you doing now, when a scheme is presented to you abolishing these Executive Councillors and replacing them by Ministers chosen by the Governor from the elected members of the Legislative Council? (Voices: 'Not necessarily.') You will have the old system because you must be moving amendments. Is it sense, is it service to the country? I ask, is it consistent with your character all these days?"

"There are three main points, fundamental points in these Reforms. One is the replacement of diarchic system by complete autonomy. (Voice: 'Worse, worse.') Worse for those who have no conception of what they have done before. Let me leave it at that. Then in the Centre, we are being given responsibility over certain subjects. As regards subjects over which responsibility is not to be given, Hon. Members of the Opposition themselves admitted that they had no objection so far as Defence, Ecclesiastical and Foreign matters are concerned; as regards the rest, they are going to have responsibility. When they were charged with irresponsibility in the Assembly, hon. Members of the Opposition were not slow to tell the House that they would have been more responsible if they had been allowed to go into office. Such an opportunity is given now in the Reforms and yet you do not want to take that opportunity.

"Another thing, and that is more important than what I have been speaking of. Sir, Federation is a new conception. I want to lay some emphasis, personally, on this. To me, it means the birth of a nation, which can have no succeeding parallel. (A voice: 'Still-born.') Still-born, my friend says. Those that do not deserve it, are still-born themselves. Well, Sir, here is the birth of a nation. When, in the history of India, I ask, was there a time when from the snowy heights of the Himalayas right down to Cape Comorin, which is washed by three seas, there was the conception of a single nation of 350 millions living under one rule, and under one law? From the time of Asoka, from the time of Harsha and Vikramaditya down to the period of the Moghuls and our own Krishna Deva Raya, did any one rule the whole country? Did they speak one language? Did they call themselves one nation? There must be some relation to facts. If facts irritate my friends, I will not be responsible. (Voices: 'No, no. It amuses us.') It will not be the monopoly of one alone, I will be equally amused at you. It is difficult to amuse some people. It is the monopoly of some not to see things in the right spirit but always to complain this is not done or that is not done, ignoring altogether everything that has been done.

"I should like to refer to one of the objections which has been raised. One objection is that there is no constituent power in the Council. Another objection is that there have been too many checks and special powers and responsibilities invested in the Governor. A third is that whereas in countries like Canada, Australia and South Africa, the wish of the people was taken into account and the constitution was actually drawn up by those people and the British Parliament served only as an instrument to pass those laws without the slightest amendment, that has not been the case in India. I do not deny that in the last charge there is a substratum of truth. It is true that the Australians and the South Africans did prepare their own Bills and took them to England by an agreed system. Now, may I in all earnestness ask, where is the analogy between India and those three countries which you have mentioned? Have you got any Hindu-Muslim problem there? Have you got that wonderful institution of which every citizen should be ashamed, the system of Depressed Classes and Untouchables, in those countries? I suppose they have no such problems to hinder their rights, which to our shame, we must own. But we venture to claim equality with those countries which know nothing of these things. (Voices: 'What about Indians who are there?') They are the penalty of our sins. It is you that made them the slaves of this land and drove them away from this country in search of food. How can you expect better treatment when you yourselves do not give them a good treatment here?"

* Mr. T. C. SRINIVASA AYYANGAR:—"Was it this gospel that you preached there?"

* The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"Next, Sir, I have carefully gone through as many books as I could to find out, if there were any country in which those circumstances were to be found. Those institutions of which I have just spoken are not to be found there. That is not all. There are other and important circumstances which impelled those countries to form into a federation, a federation of those states which enjoyed Self-Government for a time and even Responsible Government to a large extent. Mr. Ramalinga Chettiyar observed the other day that it is to be a federation of provinces in which representative institutions have come into existence long ago and in which Responsible Government is enjoyed at least in Diarchic form, and of those states where no such things obtain. The very basic principle and foundation of federation in those countries was the consent of each self-governing country to part with some of its rights and privileges and to confer them upon a central body, known as Federation. Where is the analogy to this country? What is the good of comparing things which have not been in touch with similar circumstances, either in the nature of the population or culture or civilization or forms of government they have been enjoying? There are other circumstances also which induced Canada, Australia and South Africa to federate; the fear of war in South Africa, and civil war in Canada were the main and important reasons which induced those countries to federate because they found defence a matter of great difficulty. There have been various other circumstances which necessitated one federation, as it was considered feasible to have inter-provincial communication brought into existence. Federation also facilitated defence as union was strength. In fact, it was the scheme of Murray in preparing a plan of railway communications in South Africa and Canada which facilitated matters. It was those circumstances that induced them to come near each other. In our country, we are having political difficulties, not because we had any difficulties in the finance of India, not because we are lacking in communications, not because there was a war which compelled us to come together to form a strong body. Without any of these difficulties certainly the analogy does not hold good. Next, assuming for argument's sake that there is a comparison between those countries and our own, where is the harm in giving the choice to the people of this country? I, for one, would not object. If only my friends opposite would undertake and would pledge their word to say within one year and six months that they would come to an agreement between themselves on any agreed scheme, it would be a different matter. Will Muslims agree to give up their claims? If not, how can the agreement be arrived at? Will the Hindu Sabhites agree to give seats to the Depressed Classes or to the Muslims? What is the good of talking of an agreed scheme and of the will of the people, when they cannot come together, even after three and a half years have been wasted and still they could not come to an agreement? (A voice: 'They were not intended to come to an agreement.') Is it not necessary that others should intend to? What have our people done to come to an agreement? Have not the All-Parties Conferences been dissolved to our utter shame? What is the good of complaining against things which are impossible in our nature to correct?

12-15 p.m. "So much about the comparison between the countries concerned. I wish to say one word more about these checks. These checks have existed in all constitutions. They are intended not to be operative, but there must be some rule, especially under the British constitution, somebody will have to say the last word. When a conflict arises, and when a deadlock is foreseen and cannot be avoided, somebody will have to step into the arena and say what is right and what is wrong. When such constitutions become impossible, anybody with the slightest knowledge of Constitutional History will realize that there have been persistent, numerous checks in all Constitutions including the Constitution of England. Now, Sir, in Canada, has there been equality in the Constitution? I should like to read just a passage from Mr. A. B. Keith's book, and this refers to a period of ten years after the Canadian Parliament was constituted, and the Canadian Dominion was formed. He says:

'The Parliament of Canada has a mere scintilla of constituent power. It cannot amend the provisions as to the executive Government, including the vesting of authority in the Crown and in the representative of the Crown. It cannot touch any of the provisions affecting the Senate save its quorum. It cannot even alter the quorum of the House of Commons, it can regulate its franchise, but it can only change the numbers of the House subject to the rule that Quebec must have 65 members and the other provinces must have proportional representation varied with the decennial census. It required an Imperial Act to enable it to appoint a Deputy Speaker and to enlarge its privileges as to giving to Committees powers to take evidence on oath. It is helpless to improve relations between the Senate and the lower House, and, when it became imperative to provide for an increase in the numbers of the Senate and the groupings of Senators on a slightly changed basis, Imperial legislation had to be invoked. More than that it cannot alter a single clause of the distribution of powers between the provinces and the central power; however urgent some change may be, and however little objectionable it is in principle, it is impotent. When its laws necessary in the interests of the Dominion are ruled invalid, the legislature cannot, as in England, step in and validate the matter. Nor are the provisions in much better state. True that unlike the Dominion, they can alter the Constitution freely in all points save those affecting the position of the Lieutenant-Governor as head of the provincial Government. But what is really important is the question of relations between the provinces and the federation, and here they are as impotent as the federation.'

"I can cite, Sir, passages both from the History of Australia and of South Africa showing that these restrictions do exist there. To give you one instance, in the year 1907, the Australian Commonwealth wanted to pass a Bill for the purpose of helping their commerce, and they said that if imports are sent from England to Australia it should be on only one condition, namely, that no Asiatic labour should be employed on the ships. England at once set her foot on that and said, 'whatever advantage such an agreement or Bill might give to the

[30th January 1935] [Sir K. V. Reddi Nayudu]

British public or the British nation, England for one would never consent to make such a discrimination amongst its own subjects.' Turning to South Africa, I can call another instance. There is a section of the South Africa Act with which I am very familiar, and that is section 152. That section says that whenever the franchise of the Cape Indians has to be changed the House of Assembly in South Africa has no power, and a restriction has been placed that it must be changed by a resolution of both the Houses with a two-thirds majority, and if it is by a Bill it has to be reserved for the pleasure of His Majesty the King Emperor. Now, the checks and other things existed there, not because that they should curtail every power that is to be given to India but that they might be of some use at some time when a crisis arose. I am perfectly confident that my Friends may look upon me as a Member of Government and as speaking like one. But you will agree with me or at least you will admit that I have done something in the cause of the country, however humble and insignificant my own services may be. But to look at everything with a jaundiced eye, to suspect everything and charge everybody with suspicion is in my humble opinion not charitable. Leave that alone, Sir. I think, Mr. President, I must bring my speech to a close. Before doing so, however, I should like to refer once more to that stalwart politician, in whose footsteps I followed to some extent. Reference has been made to what he is reported to have said in a paper or in a public meeting. We are told that the Right Hon'ble V. S. Sastri is an undoubted patriot who has rendered immense service to the country, who has been chosen as an Ambassador of India to Australia and to Canada. We are told that he saw nothing but flood and fire in the scheme of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report, flood and fire which we are told, one could only try to escape from; or save something from it and by trying to save everything would either be drowned in the flood or get burnt in the conflagration. My own humble opinion, Sir, is to the contrary. I too have, and I would like to give, my vision of this Bill. Hon' Members are at perfect liberty to judge it for themselves. I do not ask them to accept my statement of the vision without criticism, without introspection and inspection, but do not throw it away simply because it comes from one on the Treasury Bench. My vision, Sir, is something akin to it but altogether different in other respects. I see before me in this Bill or in this Joint Committee's Report, the Himalyas, that mountain for which there is no parallel or equal in the whole world. I too see some water flowing down from it; I too see some fire. But, I believe that these waters which are rushing down the Himalyas are rushing down not to drown this village or that, this man or that man, but to supply water to the plains of the United Provinces and of Bengal, to enrich and to irrigate them, so that the people of this country might be fed. I too, Sir, see a fire on the Himalyas. But it is not the fire which my Right Hon'ble Friend sees. That is a fire which I interpret as the bonfire of the hillmen who are celebrating the coming event, the birth of a Nation (hear, hear). I go a little step further, Sir. I look higher up and see a temple there, the Temple of Liberty. There I see the Goddess of Liberty, Gowri herself dancing in ecstasy with Nataraja, but holding in her hand the Golden Key, the Key of Liberty, for this country. The doors of the temple are open. Let me implore my countrymen not to refuse, not to hesitate, to go into that temple. Let me appeal to my countrymen in the words of Burke, 'Don't scuffle on the steps of the temple.' (Cheers)."

[Sir K. V. Reddi Nayudu] [30th January 1935]

* Mr. C. BASU DEV:—"Mr. President, Sir, after I saw the imposing array of amendments to the Report and heard the flood of eloquence on the floor of this House declaiming against the iniquitous inadequacy of the proposed Reforms, I am rather nervous, Sir, to intrude on this atmosphere of offended pride and indignant protest with my humble suggestions for the betterment of the 90 per cent of the population whose sole anxiety, not a sentimental one, but a live and real anxiety day in and day out, is to find work and thereby to earn their daily morsel of food. Sir, before I refer to those suggestions, I would with your indulgence like to make a few observations. The spokesmen of the three big parties in this House tabled and spoke on the amendments, claiming to speak on behalf of the peoples of this country, with what justification I shall presently examine. Dr. Subbarayan followed by his lieutenants went furthest and declared that the present Diarchic system is better than the proposed Reforms. I heard him patiently and closely but found not a word said in support of his contention. I expected to find some arguments drawn from his experience as the Chief Minister of this province for over four years. I was sadly disappointed. He and his friends relied upon the verdict of the country in the recent Assembly Elections. I do not know, Sir, to the verdict on what issue they referred; if it is the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, allow me to remind them that the Report was published twelve days after the elections were fought. It cannot be the White Paper because Dr. Subbarayan had given his blessings to it on a previous occasion on this very floor. Dr. Subbarayan admitted that the electorate for the Assembly Constituencies consisted of masses also. Does the Hon. Member seriously suggest that the masses could read or understand the various difficult and complex recommendations of either the White Paper or the Report and that they gave considered judgment on them. It is to say the least, Sir, an irresponsible and incorrect statement worthy of the Tilak Ghat orator. Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar of Madura made an ungenerous and uncalled for personal attack on my esteemed friend Sir A. P. Patro. Sir, he referred to the diaries kept in the Government Houses to warn the Governors against the intriguers; if only the notes of interviews at the Government House are available to the public they would disclose to what extent these protagonists of nationalism urge the cause of the country and to what extent they were asking for official favours like titles, offices, etc.

"The hon. the Leader of the Opposition referred in uncomplimentary manner to the personnel of the Round Table Conference. Sir, nothing is more unjust than to reflect upon the intelligence, the honour and the integrity of the men and women who went to England to represent the cause of India. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru when he was invited to serve on the Nehru Committee by the accredited leader of the Indian National Congress, was a highly estimable person, representing Indian public opinion but when he was nominated by the Government to the Round Table Conference he lost colour and his contribution to the Round Table Conference had no weight in the opinion of our Congress friends. Sir, this is a method of argument which my humble intelligence cannot follow.

"Sir, Gentlemen on the other side of this House referred to the verdict of the country at the recent Assembly elections on those who participated at the Round Table Conferences. In the matter of public opinion and politics in this country there are two distinct Indias: the Hindu India and the Muslim India. Whatever may be the interpretation of the verdict of the Hindu India, Muslim India had given its verdict in an unequivocal manner when it elected almost all the Round Tablers who sought election to the Assembly. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. M. A. Jinnah, Sir Abdur Rahim (Member of the British Indian Delegation), Mr. Ghulam Hidayatullah and others were returned with great majorities. Perhaps with the exception of Dr. Shafat Ahmad Khan, no Round Tabler was defeated. This, Sir, is the verdict of Muslim India. Whatever my hon. Friend, Mr. Yakub Hasan, Leader of the Muslim Council Party, may say here, the Indian representatives of the Round Table Conference spoke with sincerity and urged with energy and conviction what was good for India. I doubt if India could have got a better and an abler set to advocate her cause if she was asked to elect her representatives. It was ungenerous to attack the personnel of the Round Table Conference and my surprise was great indeed when I heard Dr. Subbarayan utter his indictment against his own political mentor, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru.

"Sir, with regard to the verdict of the Hindu India in the recent Assembly elections, may I ask my hon. Friends at what cost that verdict was obtained? Have they asked their Congress candidates what they had to spend to obtain success at the polls? Enormous sums of money were spent and, even in the case of one of the most popular Congressmen, Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu, in the districts of Kistna and West and East Godavari against a very insignificant opponent, over Rs. 40,000 were spent. The verdict obtained at such an enormous cost especially when the opponents could not spend or work with the same vigour as the Congress candidates, I submit is worth nothing and the less said of it the better. I leave the matter at that.

"Sir, I was referring to the amendments, tabled by the spokesmen of the three big parties in this House. They were rather imposing and the parties chafed at the checks which the Report recommended, and wanted uncontrolled power or responsibility, as they called it. Sir, speaking from my experience of the conditions of people who have to struggle for their daily bread and who form over 90 per cent of the population of this Presidency, I beg to say, with all the emphasis at my command, that the claim of these parties to speak on behalf of the people of India is not justified in the least. During the last

[Mr. C. Basu Dev] [30th January 1935]

14 years the Montford Scheme has been in operation, I ask what these parties have done to ameliorate the conditions of the masses. Under the cloak of communalism and communal justice in certain quarters and with a magic word of patriotism and nationalism in other quarters, politicians and political parties have imposed upon the innocent and credulous men and women only to conserve their personal interest and the interest of the wealthy and not for doing anything to protect and promote the welfare of the people. Recently at Coimbatore; in Bombay and now in Ahmedabad, thousands of workers have been thrown into difficulties and into miserable hardships. What have these public men in their parties done to help them out of their misery? Middlemen are ruining agriculture. What has been done to protect the poor ryot? I submit that nothing has been done or even seriously attempted to alleviate human misery. It is therefore political dishonesty of the worst type to claim to speak on behalf of the people. The European employer and the European generally is more liberal and sympathetic towards the masses and the masses, having as at present no voice in the administration of their country, are reluctant that the trusteeship of their interest should be transferred without adequate safeguards, like the Declaration of Fundamental Rights and other items indicated in the amendment that I have given notice of. Sir, a Declaration of Fundamental Rights has been an invariable feature in the post-war Constitutions but I was surprised that the Members of the Joint Parliamentary Committee did not recommend but disposed it of with scant courtesy in about half a paragraph. They say:

'The Statutory Commission observe with reference to this subject: "We are aware that such provisions have been inserted in many Constitutions notably in those of the European States formed after the War. Experience, however, has not shown them to be of any great practical value. Abstract declarations are useless unless there exist the will and the means to make them effective."'

Further on, they say:

'... its legal effect will be to impose an embarrassing restriction on the powers of the legislature and to create a grave risk that a large number of laws may be declared invalid by the courts, because inconsistent with one or other of the rights so declared.'

Again, they say:

'There is this further objection that the States have made it abundantly clear that no declaration of fundamental rights is to apply in State territories; and it would be altogether anomalous if such a declaration had legal force in part only of the area of the Federation.'

These rights are of two kinds—justifiable and non-justifiable. With regard to these rights, whatever sanctity may be attached to them, on occasions of State emergency, every one is agreed that they may be abrogated. But, these rights will act as a check upon legislators and warn them in time that they should proceed with caution. With regard to non-justifiable rights, it is not proper to dismiss them as being abstract declarations and therefore useless. I would, with your permission, like to refer to the opinion of my talented friend and author Mr. A. Krishnaswami, son of our distinguished public man

Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliyar, expressed in his 'New Indian Constitution' in support of my contention that it is necessary to include a Declaration of Rights. He says:

'The positive assistance which these rights render in realizing social aspirations may now be dealt with. It has been aptly pointed out that law is the result of a "process of action between constitutionally organized initiative and spontaneous social forces." By incorporating such rights, the Constitution serves as a constant reminder of the direction in which legislation must proceed. Like the Laputan flapper, it draws the gentle attention of its august master to the task that lies ahead. A clause that "every German has the right to work," or that "youth shall be protected against exploitation as well as against neglect of their moral, mental, or physical welfare," will contribute its quota to the social forces at work. It is true that aspirations of the type quoted above cannot be immediately realized. But the path leading to the Holy Grail is bound to be straight and narrow, and the quest for it long and wearisome. The framers of constitutions are therefore content with having blazed the trail, leaving it to succeeding generations to follow it up.'

He goes on to say further:

'There are certain special and additional reasons for the incorporation of some fundamental rights in the Indian Constitution. It has been affirmed that in democracies, "power springs from the people." This statement may be justified where democracies are based on adult franchise, and where every individual has an indirect share in the administration of the country. The Indian Constitution does not purport to base its institutions so widely on popular will. It has been shown in another chapter why immediate adult franchise has been discarded as impracticable, and the suffrage has been extended to a limited set of men and women. The need for guaranteeing fundamental rights to individuals and sections are denied the opportunity of influencing the political administration in the country.'

'Moreover, there is another limitation imposed on democracy in the Indian Constitution. Certain positive functions are vested in Governors of Provinces and in the Governor-General, who can either by overruling or even without reference to the legislature enact laws. Even if it be admitted that a popular legislature need not guarantee to itself or to the people on whose behalf it functions certain inalienable rights, it cannot be denied that where an individual is entrusted with these special powers their exercise should be hedged in by a declaration of fundamental rights. There must be a guarantee to the citizen or group, not only against legislature, but also against "supreme executive" violation of his or its minimum rights.'

'I do not think I should pursue this question of Fundamental Rights any further. I think I have made out a strong case for the inclusion of a declaration of Fundamental Rights in the Constitution itself.'

'I have one or two other observations to make, Sir, and I shall be 12-4 very brief. I have said in the amendment tabled by me that the proposed representation of labour is inadequate. Compared with the representation of the vested interests like landholders and the commercial interests, the representation given to labour has been very tardy and ungenerous. The Joint Parliamentary Committee have advanced the argument that the representatives of the depressed classes would also to some extent reflect the labour point of view and that the Labour strength therefore is more than the exact number which have been reserved for labour. With regard to this argument, if separate electorates had been the feature of the representation of the depressed classes, probably it would have been acceptable to me. But as long as the representatives of the depressed classes have to be elected by joint electorates, I submit with all the emphasis at my command that the representatives of the depressed classes will not have the labour outlook which the Joint Parliamentary Committee have presumed.

"I raised another point. I said that persons elected to the special seats reserved for labour should themselves be workers and that it is not safe to entrust representation of labour to trade unions in their present unsatisfactory state. Sir, there is a move on the part of interested persons to confine the constituencies for the special labour seats to unions. That might satisfy public opinion or help certain persons who want to impose upon the workers and say that they are doing everything to help the labourers and advance their interests. Trade unions are not the organizations which could properly represent the actual workers. Trade unions in this Presidency are about 31 or 32 in number and they have a total strength of about 30,000, but the actual industrial population is certainly very, very much more and it is not proper or just to form constituencies for the special seats reserved for labour at this juncture. With regard to outsiders posing themselves as representatives of labour, I submit, Sir, the time has now come when the workers themselves should be trained to take up the task of representing their interests. Hon. Members who are interested in the welfare of labour and who are sympathetic to labour have ample scope to help the actual workers to take their legitimate and natural place as their own representatives. I do not know, Sir, what exactly the Government are now doing with regard to the question of fixing the constituencies for the special labour seats. I hope that the Government would, before they come to any decision on the matter, consult the people who are interested in the workers, and also the workers and see that the workers get their proper and true representatives.

"Sir, I associate myself with my hon. Friend Mr. Siva Raj in his demand for adequate representation of his community in the Upper House and ask for adequate representation of labouring class so that the labour point of view also may be properly represented there.

"Sir, much has been said with regard to the necessity for a direct form of election to the Federal Assembly and I do not want to repeat the arguments. But I take this opportunity of associating myself with all that has been said on this matter.

"With regard to the franchise in the urban and industrial areas, I submit that wage-earners should be given the franchise and also it is necessary to enfranchise persons who not merely live in whole houses but also in portions of houses. In the matter of the qualification of the voters, the Joint Parliamentary Committee have made an unjust distinction between Province and Province. Whereas in Madras a person will have to occupy a whole house for the whole of the periods before he can be enfranchised, in Bombay and Bengal any tenant of a house or a portion of a house has been given the privilege of voting. I respectfully request His Majesty's Government to enfranchise tenants, whether they are tenants of whole houses or portions of houses. One word more and I am done. I must impress upon His Majesty's Government the great necessity to give the masses adequate representation in the governance of this country and also to add adequate safeguards to protect them. The apprehension of Major Attlee about the dangers of the rural population and the wage-earners being placed at the mercy of a dominant political class is not imaginary but very, very real."

* Mr. H. B. ARI GOWDER:—"Mr. President, Sir, I would not have been anxious to add to the volume of literature on this subject, if I had not been told that my amendment^a requires some elucidation. First of all, I should say that the proposed Constitution falls far short of the hopes raised in India, hopes with regard to the grant of equality of status with the other Dominions. These hopes were raised during and just before the Round Table Conferences. I have said in my amendment that to the extent to which that equality of status is withheld by England, to that extent will the movement for separation grow in strength. This is not a mere warning; this is merely a restatement of the facts as they are. Anyone who critically observes the trend of political events in the country will see that there are two schools of thought—the Congress and the non-Congress. The Congress stands for Independence whereas the other parties stand for Dominion Status. But Dominion Status presumes the right to separation, and therefore means Independence in the near future. I hope the Hon. the Law Member also is for Independence inasmuch as he is for Dominion Status. The question arises whether it is better to give Independence to India or Dominion Status. There are many difficulties in the grant of independence from the point of view of the Diehards in England. We are asked, "How is it possible for England alone to give up India when so many other Imperial nations have their sway over numerous coloured peoples who are very useful to them in times of war and peace?" We are told that unless those nations give up their possessions, England alone could not possibly relax her control over India. There is yet another argument. India is weak and if she is left free she will simply change her masters. Or, on the other hand, if India grows in strength, she would probably be a menace to the peace of Europe, because India has sympathy with the pan-Islamic movement and Japan has her designs in Asia. These two combined, will be a tremendous power and if this combination knocks at the eastern gate of Europe, Europe cannot escape from the danger unless all the European countries federate themselves at Geneva or Vienna and combine to meet the eastern menace. These are some of the difficulties which stand in the way of the Diehards in England seeing eye to eye with us. What is the solution of the difficulty? The Diehard has got one and only one view and that is to keep India under subjection for ever. Keeping that in mind, he has proposed a Constitution in such a way that it is impossible for India to get away from

^a The amendment runs thus:—

Mr. H. B. ARI GOWDER:—

Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration this House feels profoundly disappointed with the Report, constituting, as it does, a clear set-back to the progress of the country. This House is deeply concerned to think that, unless equality is made the basis of an Indo-British partnership, the movement for complete independence will receive the support of the country at large."

[Mr. H. B. Ari Gowder] [30th January 1935]

the Empire. On the other hand, there is the growing national consciousness of India, a consciousness which is encouraged by the moral support of the world and the active sympathy and support of a large section of Britishers themselves. An India growing in strength like that can never be kept under subjection for ever. If therefore India is to be granted equality of status, what form should that status take? In what way should it be translated in the Constitution? I know it is too much to expect the Britishers to amend the constitution very much, but if one or two provisions are added to the Constitution, I think it will be a good thing. I think, Sir, that there should be a provision that the Secretary of State, the Governor-General and the Governors should be elected by the people. If that provision is made, the safeguards proposed now may all be there. The Houses of Parliament also should be so constituted as to give adequate representation to Indians. If these changes are made in the proposed Constitution, I am sure responsible Indians will have no objection to the Constitution.

"In this connexion, I should like to say a word with regard to the speech made by the Hon. the Law Member this morning. Let me assure him that the public have no use for the kind of speech that he has made now. He has evidently and admittedly lost touch with the younger generation. Every time he or Sir Patro speaks, I am sure there are hundreds of people who go from the right to the left. This is the greatest compliment that could be paid to the eloquence with which they make their speeches. If they really want to serve the cause for which they expect the co-operation of the people, they should not make any more speeches of the kind that the Hon. the Law Member has made just now."

* MR. P. V. RAJAGOPAL PILLAI:—"Mr. President, Sir, as the time at my disposal is so short, I shall confine myself to the amendment of which I have given notice and which affects the vital interests of the depressed classes. I shall not weary the House by reiterating the origin of the Poona Pact. But suffice it to say that the leaders of the depressed classes who were invited to Poona in their eagerness and anxiety to save the life of Mr. Gandhi signed the Pact without closely studying its implications. Under the Premier's Award, we were given 18 seats in this Council under a separate electorate with a right to vote for and contest other seats in the general electorate. Under the Poona Pact, although we are allowed 30 seats, yet we have to face two elections, a primary election in which we have to choose a panel of four candidates and then a subsequent election in a joint electorate in which the candidate getting the highest number of votes will be declared elected. Sir, this would create several factions and disruptions amongst the depressed classes themselves, because the mentality of the people is such that those who vote for a certain candidate will form themselves into a separate group and this trouble will be going on for years to come. Besides this, it is well known that several influential, rich and educated Hindus have lost their all in election campaigns. When such is the case, is it possible for poor depressed class candidates to face two elections? We are already suffering on account of the reservation of seats in a joint electorate with regard to elections to local bodies and we therefore do not want such a thing to be repeated in the matter of elections to the Legislative Councils. If the arrangements proposed under the Poona Pact are put into force, the real representatives of the depressed classes will not be elected. It is therefore our earnest desire that the arrangements for the election of our representatives should be such that there will be no room for undue influence from outside. With your permission, Sir, I shall read one or two sentences from the Census Report of 1931:—

"Despite their lowly status, these communities play a large and important part in the life of the Presidency. It is they who furnish the backbone of agricultural labour in the chief rice-growing districts. In one form or another, they have been the victims of an agrestic serfdom wherever they have been. This generally took and still takes the form of compulsory advances from their employers which could never be repaid in full and thus tied the borrower to the soil. This was most noticeable in Tanjore. But a parallel system of advances produced the same effect in South Kanara. It must be laid to the credit of Ceylon and other estates that they have done more to raise the self-respect of the South Indian depressed classes worker than any other single circumstance." (Pages 342-343 of the Census of India, 1931.)

"In another place, the Census report says:—

"Government activities in aid of these unfortunates have met with some lip sympathy but a good deal more practical opposition, as the treatment of the Labour Department budgets in the earlier years of the decade shows. The department had practically to fight for its life and Tanjore mirasidars led deputations to Governors protesting against activities designed to benefit the pre-dial serfs of the district."

"It would be admitted by all that the masses are steeped in ignorance and poverty. It is not an easy task to stir up the political sense in them; it will take some years. We also consider that there is no chance of our obtaining social rights without political rights. I am not unaware of the fact that sooner or later there should be joint electorates. But I think the time is not ripe for the depressed classes to have joint electorates. In these circumstances, I think, it is very essential that our interests should be protected until such time as the members of the depressed classes are sufficiently educated, and there should be separate electorate for at least 10 years, if not for 20 years. I, therefore, commend for the acceptance of the House the amendment that was so ably moved by my hon. Friend, Mr. Siva Raj."

"Before I resume my seat, I wish to say a few words in reply to the uncharitable observations made by Mr. Ratnavelu Thevar. He said that Mr. Siva Raj did not represent anybody but himself. I think the recent transplantation of Mr. Thevar to the other side, has affected his memory. He seems to have forgotten that Mr. Siva Raj, as one of the leaders, was invited to Poona to sign the Pact, in order to save the life of Mahatma Gandhi. I wish to impress on Mr. Ratnavelu Thevar that the Members of the depressed classes in this Council are the real leaders of the depressed classes and this fact has been recognized not only by this Government but also by Mahatma Gandhi, Pandit Malavaiya, Mr. Birla and other eminent men of the country."

* MR. BASHEER AHMED SAYEED:—"Mr. President, Sir, after so much of discussion on the report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee,

[Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed] [30th January 1935]

I do not think it is worth while indulging in any long speech. I find there is impatience on the face of several of my hon. Colleagues who are now here. But I wish to submit a few observations on points which I think have not been touched by any of the previous speakers. My points will be very brief and I shall not tire the House. The simple question, after all that is said and done, that still remains unanswered, is this: whether the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report has proposed any real transfer of power from the British voter to the Indian voter. This is the fundamental issue so far as I am concerned. A thorough study and even a re-study of the whole Report and the various proposals made therein, do not leave one with the conviction that there has been any substantial transfer of power from the British voter to the Indian voter. No doubt, Sir, in response to the agitation that was carried on for years in this country, franchise is sought to be enlarged. This is a great advance. No doubt, the irremovable Executive is being transformed into the Ministry. Leaving those two points of improvement, and some minor advances here and there, if we search for anything further that has been done in the Provincial sphere, we are to search in vain for any other improvement. If the agitation, the sacrifice and the loyalty that has been shown by this country from year to year for decades, is to be rewarded only with that little extended franchise and conversion of the Executive Councillors into Ministers, only my hon. Friends on the other side could be satisfied. We on this side are not at all satisfied with the little pittance that has been very grudgingly given. We on this side say that the report and the proposals have to undergo very many drastic changes and serious modifications, if it is going to give any substance of provincial autonomy or responsible government to this country. This country has been demanding Dominion Status by which is meant no other than full responsible government. It is too late now in the day to say that the Government of His Majesty did not promise or make any pledge in that direction. It was stated by His Majesty's Government and British statesmen that the ideal was a self-governing India by development and in progressive stages. This is enough to convince any constitutionalist that there was a definite promise of the grant of Dominion Status in an increasing and progressive manner. Even in the year 1919 the proclamation of His Majesty also stated that India would be a self-governing dominion very soon. I shall repeat the words of the proclamation of 23rd December 1919; His Majesty said that the Act of 1919 is opening the way to full responsible government hereafter and the right of her (Indian) people to direct her affairs and safeguard her interests. Speaking of the elections to the Indian Legislative bodies at the end of the year 1920, Professor Keith said that it heralds the time when India will desire full autonomy and will rank as an equal partner with the Dominions and the United Kingdom itself as a Member of the British Commonwealth. Therefore, the test is whether there is the grant of real advance and whether the substance of self-government or full responsible government has been given to this country. That is the real test. If we only apply this test, we are driven to the irresistible conclusion that apart from tinkering here and tinkering there, nothing substantial has been given to us by the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee. The opinion that the proposals do not satisfy the people has been expressed all over the country. It is not for me to repeat that opinion. What do we really find? What is the measure of self-government that has now been given to us in these proposals? Let us examine a little. The Ministers' salaries are, to-day, under the present Constitution, votable. If we refuse the salaries of Ministers, they have to leave office and they have to go unless they are thick-skinned. But according to the proposals that have been made by the Joint Committee, the salaries of Ministers will be non-votable. The question of joint responsibility has been repeatedly emphasized by this House and by the Madras Government Memorandum; but it is surprising to find that the Committee have not mentioned a word about joint responsibility; they have hedged the very idea with so many reservations and restrictions that no one is able to find where exactly this joint responsibility of Ministers is provided for. The memorandum submitted by the Madras Government to the Statutory Commission as well as the recommendations made by the Committee appointed by the Legislative Council, stated that 'the Government of the Province should vest in the Governor acting with the Ministers.' The proposed Constitution says that the whole Executive Government should vest in the Governor and he shall have only advisers in the Ministers. In fairness, I ask whether this is progress or regress. If it is progress, how is it? No one has told us that the Executive Government vesting in the Governor solely is an improvement upon the Executive Government vesting in the Governor acting with the Ministers. Even such a fair and moderate proposal made by the Government of Madras when the Simon Commission enquiry was going on, does not find a place in the proposals of the Joint Committee. Again, we say, that the safeguards and the reserve powers are too wide and are detrimental to the growth of responsible Government in this country. It has been stated ad nauseam and His Excellency the Governor also referred to it in his speech the other day, that safeguards always existed in all constitutions in the world. It is true that in the absence of indigenous and full-grown self-governing institutions in this country, we are trying to model ourselves on the British institutions as best as possible. The reading of the British Constitution, of British History and of the development of the British Constitution, leaves us only with the conviction that all through, the British Parliament has claimed superiority and supremacy over the Crown. If kings have been beheaded, if Charles lost his head and if James lost his throne, it was because they exercised powers which really vested in the people and in the Parliament. I repeat that if there had been depositions and beheadings in the history of England, it was because the ultimate power did not vest in His Majesty the King, but in the British Parliament. The king has been repeatedly told by the British Parliament that he was a mere figure-head; that he had no powers practically; that if it all there were any powers they were only theoretical, never to be exercised; that Parliament was supreme over the Crown and Parliament was the real sovereign power. It was contended that if those reserve powers and if those safeguards are to be written down, they will look more hideous and far-reaching than those that are now laid down in the proposals of the Joint Committee. But it cannot be denied that because the king was shorn of his powers of despotism, and powers of supremacy, that England calls itself a free country. But for that, where is the justification for us to call England a free country? That is exactly what has been asserted by all the dominions and what is wanted by those people who are trying to follow the British model and the British example. We, in this country, want that there should be absolute freedom, absolute liberty, substance of it at least—if not the whole of it—substance of freedom and substance of full responsible government is all that this country aspires for. It has been trotted out that we are going to enjoy full responsible government under the present reform proposals. May I ask whether the responsible powers that we are going to enjoy, are not much less than those that are now being enjoyed by the irresponsible executive? To-day the Legislature can, with a month's notice of a Bill, amend the existing Police Acts and amend the Police orders and regulations. We shall not be able to do so hereafter, as this subject has been vested in the Governor as special powers. I ask where, in this, is progress and where, in this, is the transfer of power to the Legislature? Where is the real transfer of power and full responsibility to the people and their chosen representatives? We have not been given any power really, except in the very few matters which I have already referred to, enfranchisement of a larger number of Indians and a larger number of Ministers in the place of the present Executive Councillors, but clearly with less powers and less responsibilities. Beyond these, there seems to be little or no advance envisaged in the Report. Of course, I agree that nomination has been abolished; there, of course, has been some progress; and there will be no ex-officio Members too hereafter. I do not know if these are all the improvements that we wanted and fought for. I ask whether these complete the ideals that we looked up to. We, in this House, who represent the large mass of electorates, look for far greater things, for the real transfer of power and responsibility into our own hands, larger powers to the people, larger powers to the Legislatures and larger powers to the Ministers elected by the people.

[30th January 1935] [Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed]

[Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed] [30th January 1935]

p.m.

"Let us take another aspect. Now, Sir, the present position is that the Governor-General alone can have ordinances enacted in emergencies; but what do the advanced proposals suggest? The advanced proposals say that the Governor also shall have the right to issue ordinances; he will issue ordinances not merely in exercise of his discretionary powers which is supposed to cover his 'special responsibilities'; but he will issue ordinances on the Ministers' advice as well. Is this an advance, I want to know? Is this 'responsibility'? Are the Ministers going to be empowered to advise the Governor to issue ordinances? Is this going to be the discharge of their 'responsibility'?

[30th January 1935] [Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed]

to the House? Sir, Dominion Status meant and always means that the executive should be responsible to the Legislature. This has been amply and fully defined by the Imperial Conference of 1926. If even the Legislature is to have some restrictions placed on its powers, then it cannot be called 'full responsible Government' though that was the interpretation that was sought to be put upon it by Members of the Government of India some time ago. Sir Malcolm Hailey said that 'full responsible Government' was conceivable with restricted powers and restricted rights for the Legislature; but that is not the sense in which 'Dominion Status' or 'full responsible Government' is understood in any part of the world. In fact, Sir, constitutionalists and able statesmen of His Majesty's Government have stated that 'full responsibility' means full responsibility of the executive to the elected Legislature.

"In the Central Government, Sir, what is sought to be done is claimed to be an advance; but in what respect is it an advance? If it is going to be 'full responsibility' at the centre and if there is going to be any real 'autonomy' in the provincial sphere, then how could that autonomy be consistent with the proposed diarchy in the centre? The Central Government is sought to be converted into a diarchic system of Government. The Madras Government Memorandum which was submitted to the Statutory Commission stated clearly that the diarchic system had proved a failure and it ought not to be extended, and, therefore, there was no question of the diarchic system being brought into the centre. In spite of that, what is sought to be done is to introduce a modified or restricted form of diarchy which is not liked by any person, constitutionalist or politician in this country.

"Sir, we have often been told—and the Hon. the Law Member has told us—that we are a disunited people, that we cannot be called one nation, that we ought to suffer in this state for ages and ages and that what has been sought to be done is the utmost that we deserve. I consider that this is a counsel of despair and despondency. It is quite in fitness with his age and with his growing years; but for us who are yet to see life, who are yet to take upon ourselves the responsibilities of the future, for us who are going to be the persons that will govern this country—the older generation is really passing away now—we must cherish a hope for the better. It is not a counsel of contentment or a counsel of satisfaction that is needed at the present hour. We want that the legitimate aspirations of our countrymen should be realized and fulfilled at no distant time. As Mr. Ari Gowder very rightly pointed out, the Hon. the Law Member has really outlived the age and the time. I do not think he has kept in view the aspirations of modern India, much less the aspirations of political India; and above all, he seems to have forgotten the very lessons which he claims to have studied when he said he followed in the footsteps of that great person, the Right Honourable Mr. Sastri. My hon. Friend counselled us that we ought to be satisfied with these proposals. Human nature is not that; we shall make no progress if we are to act upon his counsel.

[Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed] [30th January 1935]

"Then, Sir, the question of the recruitment of the services has been repeatedly emphasized by several statesmen, politicians and political organizations in this country. To-day, most of the services—central as well as provincial—except the subordinate services, are recruited by the Secretary of State. The rules and regulations for recruitment are all framed with his consent, and he is the supreme authority so far as these services are concerned. The proposals of the Joint Select Committee say that this system should continue. The Madras Government, in their memorandum, stated that there should be recruitment made by the Provincial Government and provincialization of the services; that the whole of the question of services should be transferred to the Local Government who would constitute a Services Commission and that the Services Commission should be saddled with the responsibility of recruitment to the various services. The Joint Committee, however, say that the status quo should prevail; and if this is to be called 'advance,' I can only say that it is difficult for us to be satisfied with this 'advance.' But if it is to them satisfactory we can have no quarrel; we shall not be satisfied, and I am sure we cannot be reasonably expected to be.

"Sir, agitation has been going on for ages that there is no point in the Government spending from public revenues on the Ecclesiastical department. No proposals are to be found in the report regarding the Ecclesiastical department, which ought to find no place in the policy of this country. But it has to be continued; why? No reason is forthcoming.

"With regard to the question of indirect elections, much has been said already, and I do not, therefore, wish to say anything further on this issue.

"The reserve powers of the Governor-General, we submit, are too wide and the safeguards to be imposed, are not in the best interests of India. There has been no proof, no convincing argument, that the safeguards now sought to be imposed and vested in the Governor-General are in the best interests of India. A challenge has been thrown on this point time and again, but that challenge has yet to be accepted.

"With reference to fiscal autonomy, I must say it is all moonshine. There is no fiscal autonomy vouchsafed in the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. We have been fighting for it for a long time now and there is no sign of it in the Report. And yet, the Government claim that the proposals are an 'advance' on the present constitution. Where is real 'advance' to be found except in very trivial things?

"Sir, there are supporters in this House of the idea of having second chambers. My Friend, Mr. Khalif-ul-lah, from Trichinopoly seems to be also a supporter of the second chamber idea. He seems to have stated that a second chamber would be a safeguard against minority interests being overridden. I do not understand that argument. The Joint Select Committee has stated nothing in favour of a second chamber, beyond saying that they recommend it for this Province as well. They have not had the courtesy of referring to the resolution which was passed by this Council or even the memorandum of this Government submitted to the Statutory Commission which said that this Government were not in favour of a second chamber. I submit that the Select Committee have not bestowed any thought on these two points. If the lower House is to be representative of all the stable elements in the country, of the vested interests, of all sections, divisions and classifications and communities of the people of this country, what are the other interests or persons that are left to be represented in the second chamber, I ask. The second chamber may, no doubt, be a necessity if the lower House is to be constituted wholly on a territorial basis and contains only territorial representatives. If the lower House is going to be a sort of museum, as some would call it, or a menagerie, as others would call it, of all the interests and elements in the country, where is the place for a second chamber? I do not understand it, unless it be that it will be a safeguard against the exercise by the lower House of even the little powers that are to be given to it. I submit that unless Parliament is going to amend the Bill in the light of the discussion in this House and in the light of the opinions expressed all over the country, it will be very impossible for the proposed constitution to be worked. I do not think there will be contentment or peace and order in the country unless and until the legitimate aspirations of the people are satisfied. But we know at the same time that all that is said or done in this country falls on deaf ears so far as British statesmen and Parliament are concerned. So long as National Government intend to keep to their present office and do all that will keep them in power there is absolutely no chance of any reform or change or modification being made in the proposed Constitution. It is under the impression that nothing is going to be done in spite of what may be said or done here, that we are discussing the Report here to-day. It may legitimately be asked what purpose is served by this discussion? The whole thing, I consider, is a farce; and yet we are forced to take part and do what best we can in this big farce.

"Sir, my friend, the nominated Member for the depressed classes, stated that he signed the Poona Pact under coercion, and duress and that the Pact is not legal or binding. Very strange theory, Sir. The fact that it was signed under duress of coercion is yet to be proved. My friend and those who think with him now seem to carry a hang for Mahatma Gandhi or anybody for the matter of that. Even then it was quite open to them to say of Mahatma Gandhi whom they call the enemy of the depressed classes and who, they say, has done nothing for them, that he was not sincere, that they would not accept his advice, and to have refused to sign the Pact. It mattered little to them whether he lived or died. But I venture to suggest that my friend has now changed sides. It suits him now to say that the Poona Pact is not to his interests and he has lost all sense of propriety and has taken to abuse, in the vilest manner, Mahatma Gandhi and his followers. May I remind him, Sir, that but for the movement started by Mahatma Gandhi against untouchability, the attitude of the orthodox Sanatanists would not have changed, as it has done to-day, and instead of having attained to their present position, which is a great advance on the past, they would still have been relegated to the cherris and paracheris in the remote corners of villages. Their present position, it cannot be denied, they owe to the movement against untouchability started by Mahatma Gandhi. But, may I ask, what is the part that Mr. Siva Raj, the nominated Member of the Depressed Classes, played, when he was on the Committee of this Council appointed to submit a memorandum to the Statutory Commission? He was a party to the recommendation—I shall read the relevant portion of the same:—

‘We have considered whether special electorates can be formed for these classes. The number of electors belonging to them is only 4 per cent of the total number of electors on the existing franchise. It may be possible to form some urban constituencies—a possibility which requires investigation. But considering the seats that can be allotted to the depressed classes, their constituencies are generally bound to be unduly large. With the low level of education and wealth among them it will be very difficult for candidates to get into touch with their constituencies. Representatives of the depressed classes are in favour of an element of election at some stage.’

That is what Mahatma Gandhi has provided for them and even more than that.

‘We, therefore, propose that panels of candidates to the extent of twice the number of members required may be elected by recognized associations of the depressed classes in the different districts and that the members to be returned to the Council should be selected by the Governor from the panels.’

If he wanted their representatives to be chosen by the Governor, Mahatma Gandhi has given them a greater privilege; and he has given a further privilege also, viz., that the panel can be elected by their own community instead of by ‘recognized associations.’ In addition to that, the depressed classes to-day enjoy 30 seats under the Poona Pact, whereas there were only 18 seats allotted to them under the old arrangement, i.e., in the Communal Award.

“Sir, Mr. Siva Raj who to-day waxes eloquent, has stated, according to that Report that he was of ‘opinion that the number of seats to be allotted to the depressed classes should be on the population basis and that their members should be eligible for places in the ministry.’ If instead of giving the number of seats on the population basis, Mahatma Gandhi has given twice the number, has he committed any sin against them? I do not think that it was a wrong on his part to have given the depressed classes the right to represent their people instead of being the Governor’s nominees.

“On the whole, Sir, I would only say that so far as the present proposals are concerned, it is difficult for the country to accept the recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report as they are framed and it will not be possible for them, even if they are thrust on the country, as it is going to be, to work them in any contented spirit or with any satisfaction. I say that unless and until the Government of the day brings influence to bear upon Parliament and unless the British Parliament is going to modify substantially in very many respects the proposals as they now obtain, there is very little hope or chance of this system working with any great success. I hope Government will take a warning from this.”

The House then adjourned for lunch.

After Lunch (2-30 p.m.)

* Rao Bahadur C. NATESA MUDALIYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, I thank you very much for having given me an opportunity to say a few words on the Joint Parliamentary Committee’s Report. I am also thankful to you for having extended the sittings of this Council by a day for giving opportunities to many of our Members to speak.

“Sir, I and some of the members of the Justice Party gave notice of some amendments to the motion on the Report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee to the effect that Provincial Autonomy and Central responsibility should be granted immediately. We agree that the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report is not an improvement upon the White Paper proposals. On the other hand, it is a set back. While we are not blind to all the defects enumerated by the Leader of the Opposition, we said that for the peaceful working of the Constitution, the Report requires modifications, the minimum number of which we suggested. The Justice Party expect to work the Constitution, however unpopular it may be, because the Justice Party stands for co-operation. Sir, Dr. Subbarayan referred to the Justice Party non-co-operating with the Simon Commission. He forgot perhaps that some of the stalwart members of the Justice Party co-operated with the Simon Commission. Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar was telling yesterday that the Simon Commission was not co-operated with by anybody in this country. No, I assure him that the Justice Party followers all over this Presidency co-operated with the Simon Commission. It may be, here and there, some Justicites did not do so; a wing of the Justice Party took up that attitude for the moment; but the Justice Party as a whole co-operated with the Simon Commission, as according to the creed of the Party they cannot but do so.

“Then, Sir, the Justice Party has got the prestige and the boldness to take up any unpopular measure and work it up successfully. As Mr. A. Ranganatha Mudaliyar stated yesterday, there is no measure which will be agreeable to all. Yet, the Justice Party took up and worked the system of Diarchy, against which there was so much opposition and Councils were boycotted by some political parties; but the Justice Party thought, as constitutionalists and co-operators, that they must work the constitution and have in fact worked it successfully. Of course, I do not want to leave out of consideration in this connexion Dr. Subbarayan who also worked it successfully and who, I may say, is only an offshoot of the Justice Party. It was said that we, the Justicites, passed a resolution to take in the Congress people. It was not because that we were weak, but because the Justice movement comprises all phases of political opinion; and it is an ocean into which the Congress and the Nationalist rivers may flow. That is the idea with which we are inviting all people who are fighting for communal representation to come into our fold. The opposition to-day is stronger for communal claims than the Justicites themselves. They also said that we passed a no-confidence motion on the then Governor. Sir, the same Justice Party people took the lead in entertaining the very Governor to bid him farewell, an entertainment unknown most probably for many years in the history of the city of Madras when a departing Governor was given an entertainment by all the citizens. As Sir Patro said, the then existing conditions might have been such as to incite a no-confidence motion, but everyone knows that we are co-operators and that the Justice Party could work any Constitution however unpopular it may be. Even those political parties who want to reject the Report, including Dr. Subbarayan's party, know that the Justice Party accepts the proposals in the Report with the minimum number of modifications suggested, because they are sure when Dr. Subbarayan comes into this Council with a large number of his followers, and also if the Congress Party come into this Council in large numbers, they will certainly accept office and work this very Constitution that will evolve from this Report, however unpopular it may be. So, Sir, the Justice Party or Dr. Subbarayan's Party, whichever party comes into the Council with a large majority—or even the Congress Party—is going to accept it and work it, though not now, at least a year or two afterwards when the Reforms are introduced. Thus, Sir, I have made the position of Justice Party clear in this respect. I do not want anybody to say that the Justice Party accepted to work the Constitution contained in the Report as it is and without any modifications. The modifications suggested by the Justice Party in the amendments, are almost as many as the defects enumerated by Dr. Subbarayan. In the recent elections somebody spread the rumour that, because some magistrate who came within the portfolio of the Law Member, who was drafted from the Justice Party, ordered the removal of the thali of a lady, the Justice Candidate, Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliyar removed it. (Laughter.) I request all politicians to think that we, whether we are sitting on this side or on the other side, have the same ideals. The party as a whole wants communal representation and the elevation of all the communities and advancement of our country, though communal claims are stronger on the opposite side than on this side. It will be very good if Dr. Subbarayan comes to a compromise and if a common formula which would be acceptable to the whole Council is arrived at. The modifications made by the Justice Party proper and our wing, the Justice Democrats, are almost identical. So far for the Justice Party to which I belong.

“Then, Sir, coming to the Report proper, I have my own views in regard to it. It savours of humiliation, ingratitude, breach of promise to and distrust of the people of India. Let not the British people think that they have come down here to give a barbarous and uncivilized people some privileges little by little. Let them know that we Indians, with high culture and civilization even extending back to ten thousand years ago, carried our civilization to ancient Egypt, Babylonia, and to the ancient Rome and Greece. About five thousand years ago, even in our own land, during the time of Bhishma, we had Legislative Assemblies, we had Council of Ministers; and even the system of our village self-government shows that we are capable of governing our own country. At one time, the countries in Europe competed with one another to have a sight of India because of her wealth and perhaps of her culture and civilization. The Spanish, the Dutch and the Portuguese, all travelled, travelled and travelled over all the seas merely to have a sight of India; and one traveller when he had hopes of seeing India, thought the object of his life was very nearly finished. That was their idea about India. I may also state that ten thousand years ago, we carried our civilization even to ancient Britain, and the Welsh people there may be considered as South Indians and nobody else. That is so far as our civilization is concerned.

“Coming to recent times, what about the Empire of Vijayanagar, whose splendours and grandeur are so well described by the foreign travellers, not to speak of Muslim civilization which carried light to far off Europe where, as historians say, there was darkness for a century before it. If only the British people and their representatives in Parliament know about the Hindu and Muslim civilizations, I am sure they will give us full self-government immediately. The pity is, they do not know much about us. It is indeed a humiliation to us that we are treated like this.

“Then, Sir, at the time of the seige of Arcot, our Indian soldiers wanted nothing for themselves except kanji and gave the best part of their food to their British brethren. I may say, with my limited study of Indian History—I mean British Indian History—it is our Indian soldiers that won India for England. Even in the recent Great War, India contributed one hundred million pounds for defraying the expenses of the War. Indians suspended all their political agitations; Indian soldiers fought for England in France, Flanders, Palestine, Mesopotamia and where not. Now to grudge to give us self-government savours of ingratitude.

“Recently, Sir, in appreciation of the services rendered by Indians in the Great War, promises were made for the political progress of India leading to Dominion Status. From time to time, even from the time when our beloved Queen Victoria made her Proclamation, promises were being made for the political advancement of India.

“Then Sir, Lord Irwin (now Lord Halifax) referring to the promise of 1919 said: ‘It is His Majesty's will and pleasure that the plan laid down by Parliament in 1919 should be the means by which British India may attain its due place among his Dominions’; and then he goes on to say, ‘I am authorized on behalf of His Majesty's Government to state clearly, that in their judgment it is implicit in the Declaration of 1917, that the natural issue of India's constitutional progress, as there stated, is the attainment of Dominion Status.’

[Dr. C. Natesa Mudaliyar] [30th January 1935]

"Again, Sir, in His Majesty the King's Message to the Legislature in 1921, the following is stated: 'For years, it may be for generations, patriotic and loyal Indians have dreamt of Swaraj for their Motherland. To-day you have the beginnings of Swaraj within my Empire, and widest scope and ample opportunity for progress to liberty which my other Dominions enjoy.' That is the Message from the King Emperor. No doubt we are determined not to go out of the British Empire and we want all the highest privileges under the British Empire under the suzerainty of the King-Emperor. Recently also, after the Round Table Conferences, the Prime Minister of England has stated: 'Finally I hope and trust and pray that by our labours together India will come to possess the only thing which she now lacks, to give her status of a Dominion among the British Commonwealth of Nations.'

"Sir, how is it that they forgot all these promises which were made only recently? The words 'Dominion Status' seem to be a red-rag to the British politicians to-day. As Sir K. V. Reddi Nayudu said this morning, the old generation in England is now gone and a new generation has come; most probably the new generation has forgotten all the promises which the old generation made. It cannot be so, for, most of the statesmen who made the promises are yet holding good positions in the State.

45 m. "Coming to the question of the distrust shown in the present Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, probably they forgot that there are so many loyalists in this country. Even the Civil Disobedience people—I do not belong to them, but I belong to another school of politics and I condemn civil disobedience—with all their disobedience, what did they do? Sir, even when the civil disobedience movement was at its highest pitch, was there one act of violence in this country? Again, Sir, all the people and the parties, whether they are Congressmen, Nationalists, or Justicites, all will combine together to put down terrorism. India is not for terrorism. India cannot tolerate terrorism. No one will be allowed by the people of India to raise one finger against the British Crown. I want India to be permanently connected with England. Why then this distrust?

"Sir, in the proposed legislation, according to the Report, the Governor is everything; the Ministers are nothing and the people are nothing. The Governor can make his own rules about business and procedure without the advice of the Ministers. Services are completely under the control of the Governor and the Ministers cannot post them or promote them even. Without this power the Ministers cannot carry on the administration. Let us come to the police. The Report says that there is meaning in Provincial Autonomy without Police being handed over to the Ministers. Now, Sir, the safeguards are so many that the Ministers are nothing; the Home Member is nothing; but the Inspector-General of Police is everything. Then, Sir, the Governor can prevent the Ministers from introducing any Bill into the Council. He may also compel the Ministers to withdraw a Bill that has been already introduced. He can make ordinances without the advice of the Ministers; he can make Acts without consulting the Legislature. The Governor becomes the Dictator, and the Ministers become dummies. I hope the suggested changes will be made for the peaceful working of the Constitution. Even with some defects, we have to work it. Justice Party means co-operation. (Laughter.) Now, Sir, under the present Diarchy there are three Ministers at least with a semblance of power and four Executive Council Members, two of whom are Indians drafted from the people and the other two European Civilian who must have developed sympathy for Indians; all the four have full powers. These seven persons forming the Cabinet are more useful to the people than the eight dummy Ministers that are proposed, perhaps for a show. (Laughter.) Why should we be against Dr. Subbarayan when he says: rather than having this kind of Provincial Autonomy, we can struggle under the present Constitution? The present Constitution is somewhat of a semi-potent diarchy. (Laughter.) This will be better than a set of impotent dummies. Then again, even these dummies have no joint action. They have only separate action. The Governor can ask Ministers separately to remain or go. He can even dispense with them all, and take over the administration. So far for the Provincial Government.

"Then, Sir, coming to the Central Government, the whole administration, whether it is Finance, Exchange, Currency, or Railway, and in fact, everything, is under the control of the Legislative Assembly. The Minto-Morley Scheme proposed to have an Indian in the Council so that he may have a voice in the inner council. Now, there are three Indian Members in the Governor-General's Council; but the three Indian Members will cease to exist when the Ministry is formed in the Centre. Now, they are having the military budget placed before the Legislative Assembly. Whether they succeed or not in carrying out their motions on it, they can make their observations. But hereafter, no Indian will have any voice in the inner councils of the Government. In the military budget, they have no voice. Completely, Defence goes out of their control. Then with regard to the Railway Board, the Railway budget is now placed before the Assembly. In future, the statutorily appointed railway authority will come to govern the railways. Currency and Exchange will be in the hands of the Reserve Bank. The financial adviser may so manipulate the currency question that India will be depleted of crores of rupees. (Hear, hear.) I say 'may.' What I say is, at least, let there be a Defence Member. Other Central transferred subjects are Education, Health, Agriculture and Posts and Telegraphs. The rest are taken care of in the Provinces. The Ministers are to levy taxes; but they have no control over 80 per cent of the taxes, because these should go to the Governor-General to support the Defence, Pensions, Public Debt, etc. When we wanted a powerful Provincial Autonomy, we are threatened to be given an absolutely impotent one. When we want a responsible Centre we are threatened with an even more powerful one. If the Centre is to be what it is, let us be left where we are, for India's sake. Then, Commerce and Trade are in the hands of Ministers. They are hedged in with so many safeguards that it is impossible for India to develop her industry. Unless she is industrially developed there is no hope for her in the commerce of the world. No, Mr. President, let us stay where we are. I do not mean that Dr. Subbarayan's resolution should be passed. Let a common formula be arrived at which will be acceptable to the whole Council. All that I say is that we should pass one unanimous amendment. Sir, we have got at the head of the administration a very great statesman. I mean our Viceroy. Let him study the speeches we have made in this Legislature, all loyalists, and interfere so that modifications are brought in such a way that the Constitution that is coming will be workable in a peaceful manner. I do not want to say more because there is no time. I thank you, Mr. President, very much for giving me an opportunity of having my say on the Report. I will only conclude my speech with the words in the proclamation of Her Majesty, the late Queen Victoria the Good, referring to Her Majesty's British Indian subjects:—

'In their prosperity, lies our strength, in their contentment, our security.'

* Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, we have before this House a number of amendments containing a number of recommendations voicing the main defects of every section of the House. The main defect, voiced forth by every section of the House on the Report, is that the Report and probably the Bill are silent on Dominion Status as the goal of India. Responsible Parliamentarians and statesmen like the Archbishop of Canterbury have said:—

'I noticed that Lord Snell complained that no mention was proposed of what is called Dominion Status. I think it is time we get rid of such a misleading phrase. It has proved itself capable of infinite misunderstandings, both in this Country and in India. No one knows whether it is constitution or position. If it is to mean constitution, is it conceivable, considering the circumstances of India and the necessary relations with the Imperial Parliament which these circumstances involve, that, in any time which any of us can contemplate, India should have a constitution similar to those which have been achieved in countries so entirely different as South Africa and Canada? Therefore it is no use thinking there can ever be a constitution in India identical with the constitution of the Dominions.'

"In the face of this and in the absence of any definite objective defined in the Bill, how can we rely on the statements made by Sir Samuel Hoare or anybody else? Unfortunately Sir, like the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Hon. the Law Member also has given expression to similar ideas."

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—"On a point of order, Sir, I never said that. I said that Dominion Status is the goal for India. I left it at that."

* Diwan Bahadur C. S. RATNASABHAPATI MUDALIYAR:—"With all due respect to the Hon. the Law Member, I may say that we have been having the British connexion for the last one and a half centuries and in spite of it, the caste system and other disabilities have existed. Can anyone expect them to vanish on a wave of a magic wand? Sir, I do not suppose that the Hon. the Law Member expects that under a deluge or Pralayam, India will be wiped out of existence. As long as India exists, the Hindus will exist and the Muslims will also exist. Both will be there as long as the country continues to exist. On that ground, are we to be denied our birth right? I think the Hon. the Law Member was under some illusion when he made that speech. He was referring to the flood and fire alluded to by Mr. Srinivasa Sastri, to the Himalayas and to Gowri Devi with her torch. He spoke about Nataraja dancing in ecstasy and he referred to the President and Members sitting with the Press reporters on either side. I think all this must be an illusion, in the judgment of Hon. the Law Member. I say it with all respect due to him and I hope he will not misunderstand me. (Laughter.)

"Coming to the question of Second Chamber it is unfortunate that even though this Council by a resolution decided against the constitution of Second Chamber it is proposed to be thrust upon us. The amendment of the Justice Party is discreetly silent about this. However I am sure I am voicing the opinion of the other sections of this House when I say that the House still adheres to its original verdict. This I am sure goes without saying so long as that resolution remains part of the Council proceedings without its being rescinded. The Ministerial amendment, besides pleading for the recognition of joint responsibility among the Ministers, says that no additional restrictions and further safeguards than those already provided for in the White Paper should be made, that the Governor's powers to make ordinances should be limited to cases where he can do so on the advice of Ministers and that the Governor should not be vested with discretionary powers in regard to the services since it would make it impossible for the Ministers to effectively carry on the administration. So I do not propose to deal with these.

"Coming to the Central Legislature, I strongly feel that there is no justification for indirect elections. His Excellency the Governor the other day remarked that the extension of franchise would result in unwieldy constituencies and hence preferred indirect elections to the Assembly. Perhaps, he is not aware that twelve Members who are now returned from this province represent 25 districts. They have to work up two or three districts, and in some cases four, for their seats. Under the proposed Constitution, we are to have 30 seats for the same area, and therefore the constituencies would become smaller than what they are at present. So, I do not in the least feel that it would be more difficult than at present to seek election on the direct system. Hence I am opposed to indirect elections.

"As a commercial man myself, let me next take up the question of safeguards in regard to commercial discrimination. The Britisher's connexion with India began with the East India Company. So he is still very much concerned with trade, and wants to perpetuate the same for ever to the detriment and ruin of this country. But on our part, whatever may be the form of Government, we cannot any longer allow ourselves to be exploited. Hence the safeguards in regard to commercial discrimination are totally unacceptable and the right of India for full autonomy in fiscal matters should be recognized.

"Perusing the Report as a whole, one cannot but draw the conclusion that it is conceived in a spirit of distrust of us, as my hon. Friend from the City, Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar himself said. Hence, in conclusion, I would urge, as my hon. Friend the Member for the Nilgiris said, that unless mutual confidence and equality are made the basis of Indo-British partnership, the movement for complete independence will receive the support of the country at large."

* Mr. V. P. NARAYANAN NAMBIYAR:—"Mr. President, Sir, rising to speak on the recommendations made by the Joint Parliamentary Committee, I feel that Hon. Members have been called upon to discharge a special responsibility. But it is not special responsibility of the kind embodied in the Report, for we have also to take note of the feelings in the districts about the Reform Proposals. Perhaps, the discussion here will not achieve anything, but let it not be said that Indian opinion was not stated, sufficiently stated. Moreover, at this hour of supreme importance in the history of our country, we owe to ourselves to frankly interpret the true feelings in the province. Now, fully realizing the greatness of the occasion and my position as a Member privileged to represent one of the most enlightened districts in the Presidency, I say, and say with all the emphasis that I can command, that any constitution based on the lines of the Report will be wholly unacceptable to all shades of Indian political opinion and will, far from allaying, very much intensify the present political discontent in the country. The Congress has rejected the proposals, the Liberals have shunned them, and the numerous amendments of the Justice Party on matters of vital importance prove that that Party too is not satisfied with the Report. Why then impose upon the people of India such a Constitution? If it is for the benefit of the Indians, Indians must agree to it. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has, if I may say so, rightly pointed out that the recent Assembly elections, which were fought on the definite issue of the White Paper, prove that the country is not for the proposed Constitution. I thought that that position would not be disputed. But it was given to the Hon. Member from Ganjam to say that those were 'emotional elections.' Has the Hon. Gentleman done anything anywhere in the matter of the Assembly elections? Did he go to the villages for the purpose? I had been to the villages, dozens of villages, scores of villages; and I have witnessed the spectacle of hundreds of villagers, men and women, going and recording their votes in favour of congress. I am free to own that the voters did not understand all the details contained in the White Paper. But they went with a determination to strive for power, real power. What amused me most was the Gallant Knight from Ganjam exclaiming, 'for correct verdict, look to the districts boards, look to the municipalities, and look again to the panchayats.' Sir, a dying man clings to a straw. I always thought that it was a well recognized sound rule that local bodies ought to be free from politics. Their interest lay in civic rights and amenities. The hon. Gentleman, Mr. Basudev, is another speaker who did not read anything in the Assembly elections. He said that Congress candidates won because they lavishly spent money and cited in particular the return of Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu. I am sorry he referred to the name of a gentleman who is not here to defend himself. All that I say to the hon. Gentleman, Mr. Basudev, is that when the pistol misses fire don't knock down with the butt end of it. I am not in the confidence of Mr. Nageswara Rao in the matter of his finances. But the return of election expenses made by Mr. Nageswara Rao does not justify the statement of the hon. Gentleman, Mr. Basudev. However that be, the main test to be applied is whether the Constitution is on the lines indicated by Indians. The Round Table Conference met specially for the purpose, and the Indians who were invited to it were chosen, and not elected, representatives. Yet what followed? In the words of the Rt. Hon. Srinivasa Sastri, who played a great part in the deliberations of the Conference:

'The ability and wisdom of Indian Delegates the Joint Committee commended, but not a single change they suggested was accepted, nor anything they objected to dropped.'

"The hon. Member from Ganjam had a cheap gibe against the distinguished patriot referring to his exclusion from the Third Round Table Conference. But the importance that eminent statesmen attach to the utterances of the Rt. Hon. Sastri would be clear from the speech of the Prime Minister of England at the Second plenary meeting of the Second Session of the Round Table Conference. Just after the speech of the Rt. Hon. Sastri at the meeting this was what the Prime Minister said:

'We now come to the end of these sittings, and it only remains for me to-morrow to make the Government Statement and to say you au revoir. Although it is after 2 o'clock in the morning I cannot leave this Chair without one word of tribute to that magnificent statement to which we have just listened (referring to the statement of the Rt. Hon. Mr. Sastri). That statement shows an insight into the heart of India; but, my friends, it does more than that; it shows an insight into the heart of Great Britain, and approached in that way, your approach is bound to be irresistible.'

"Never mind the experience of the gallant band of Round Tablers. What was the fate of the modest amendments this House adopted when the opportunity to discuss the White Paper was given? Not only have our suggestions been ignored, but, Second Chamber, against the introduction of which this House had on a former occasion voted, has now sprung up. The speakers who have been at pains to support the Joint Parliamentary Report have but denounced the Congress and the Congress cry of 'reject the proposals.' But not one has shown that any shade of Indian political opinion has fully agreed to the Constitution outlined in the Report. I was glad to find the hon. Gentleman from Ganjam placing reliance upon the words of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. But with reference to the proposed Constitution, what Sir Tej Bahadur has said is as follows:—

'As I have said before, it would be wrong to suggest that the Constitution foreshadowed in the Report has been received with any degree of enthusiasm or even approval in any quarter in India.'

[Mr. V. P. Narayanan Nambiyar] [30th January 1935]

"Sir, again the Constitution foreshadowed in the Report does not contain the seeds of growth. It is as anti-national and anti-democratic as possible. The Royal Message delivered in 1921 to the Legislature was in the following words:

'For years, it may be for generations, patriotic and loyal Indians have dreamt of Swaraj within My Empire. To-day you have the beginnings of Swaraj within My Empire, and widest scope and ample opportunity for progress to liberty which My other Dominions enjoy.'

"This inspiring Message filled the heart of every Indian with pride and joy. But with the dawn of 1935 Dominion Status has disappeared. There is nothing in a word, but why has it been abandoned? The answer is furnished in the following sentence in the speech of the Prime Minister at the Final Session of the First Round Table Conference. The sentence is:

'You have spoken here subject to reconsideration, subject to the reaction which your public opinion will show to your work; we, Government and Parliamentary representatives alike, have spoken in the same way, and we must also listen to reactions.'

"The disappearance of Dominion Status marks the triumph of Winston Churchill. And if the reactionary elements in England should be the guiding factors in determining the ultimate goal of our country, any constitution in pursuance of that is not worth having and is indeed anti-national. But one word to the Britishers. Whatever be your intentions, India is determined to have Swaraj. We will have it.

"Sir, after having said so much I shall now refer to some particularly objectionable features which render the proposed Constitution undemocratic. Though in the provinces powers have been transferred to the Ministers, the transfer does not carry us a great way. Instead of Reserved Subjects becoming Transferred Subjects, Transferred Subjects, in effect, have become Reserved Subjects (Hear, hear). As the Government exists to-day the Governor has no power of interference with the Transferred Subjects. The will of the Legislature is supreme. But hereafter it is not to be so. Again, how about the Governor's Acts? The Simon Commission did not provide for them as put forward now. However all these be, I thought that the power for the King to make laws and to tax had ended with the days of the Stuarts. But it is not so with reference to India, for in paragraph 109 of the Report we find the following statement of position:—

'Lastly, it is proposed to give the Governor power at his discretion, if at any time he is satisfied that a situation has arisen which for the time being renders it impossible for the Government of the Province to be carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution Act, to assume to himself by proclamation all such powers vested in any Provincial authority as appear to him to be necessary for the purpose of securing that the Government of the Province shall be carried on effectively. This proclamation will have the same effect as an Act of Parliament, and will cease to be in force at the expiration of six months unless previously approved by resolutions of both Houses of Parliament, though it may be at any time revoked by similar resolutions.'

1.15 p.m. "Much has been said about the transfer of Law and Order. But a careful reading of the paragraphs devoted to the subject leaves the impression that the Minister is only a figure head. His Excellency the Viceroy assured the Inspectors-General who met in Conference at Delhi that though Law and Order was to be transferred to Ministers the Police would be sufficiently protected. I have not the time to go into details, but I must invite attention of this House to paragraph 95 of the Report where it is said as follows:—

'We have no reason to suppose that Indian Ministers will not adopt the same convention; but the difficulty arises, not because Indian Ministers are likely to demand or disclose the names of informants or agents, but because the informants or agents themselves would not feel secure that their identity might not be revealed. So long as this doubt exists, the consequences are the same, whether it is ill-founded or not. We therefore, recommend that the Instrument of Instructions of the Governors should specifically require them to give directions that no records relating to intelligence affecting terrorism should be disclosed to any one other than such persons within the Provincial Police Force as the Inspector-General may direct or such other public officers outside that Force as the Governor may direct.'

"When from convention it has been found necessary to move on to Instrument of Instructions, certainly, there is in it something more than meets the ear. Sir, with such provisions, with joint responsibility in a nebulous state, with safeguards which at the time of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact were demonstrably meant for the interests of India becoming now in the interests of India and England, with commercial discrimination, and without control of services, where do we get the democratic institutions that would work out a Free India? The real interests of the people do not occupy the first place, nor the second place, nor even the third place on the slate of the Government. And why is that so? The speech made by the hon. Member, Mr. Birley, does furnish the answer, because there is no escaping out of the fact that the Parliament in England must control the destinies of India.

"To-day a small island at one end of the earth governs a great country at the other end, but for all times it will not be possible to lay down that the principles governing the free institutions in the West are not applicable to the East of Suez. Even if it were possible to perpetuate the present monopoly of power the national honour of Great Britain demands that such an attempt should not be made. The people of India are an ancient race who had attained a high degree of civilization long before the ancestors of European Nations. Also some of the best troops that fought the battles of the Empire were drawn from the Indians themselves. Though it is 150 years since the destinies of the two countries came to be linked together, Indians are still a disarmed race and the frightful poverty of India is admitted by all, including the most inveterate official optimist. There is no good blaming Mahatma Gandhi and the Congress. At the Final Plenary Meeting of the Second Round Table Conference the Prime Minister spoke, addressing Mahatma Gandhi particularly, as follows:—

'But look at the effect of the two of you coming together in order to co-operate and express your gratitude to a Scotsman. My dear Mahatma, let us go in this way; it is the best way; you may find it will be the only way.'

"Though these words were spoken just before Mahatma Gandhi left England, the Mahatma, who to-day represents the honour of India and the glory of India, was almost with his landing on Indian soil

lodged within prison walls. Already great harm has been done. The faith of Indians in British Rule, so strong at one time, has been seriously weakened and large numbers of young men are coming forward who do not believe in it at all. The situation is one that must fill all thoughtful minds with serious apprehensions about the future; and unless Great Britain realizes it properly it is difficult to see how it is to mend. The earlier race of statesmen in Great Britain contemplated with pride the birth of a Free India. For, Lord Macaulay, speaking about the possibility of Indians demanding Western institutions, said—

‘Whether such a day will ever come I know not; but never will I attempt to avert or retard it, whenever it comes, it will be the proudest day in English history.’

‘The day has come and what is the answer of England? We shall wait and see. His Excellency the Governor during the course of his first address to this Council said—

‘I see no reason why the shining example already set to the rest of India by this historic Presidency should not even be improved upon.’

‘Sir, I fervently pray that the shining example set to the rest of India by his historic Presidency by the complete return of Congress candidates will result in the birth of an emancipated people on the banks of the Jumna. Then and only then, will there be, as Lord Sankey wanted, ‘Peace on earth and goodwill among men.’ Finally, may I appeal to Great Britain to make it possible for Indians to tell MOTHER INDIA—

‘Thy future calls thee with a manifold sound,

To crescent honours, splendours, victories vast;

Waken, Oh! Slumbering mother, and be crowned,

Who once wert Empress of the Sovereign past.’ (Applause.)

* Mr. S. A. A. ANNAMALAI CHETTIYAR:—“Mr. President, Sir, if I take part in this debate it is with a view to draw the attention of the House to certain questions relating to the proposals of the Joint Parliamentary Committee in regard to the separation of Burma, questions which have been dealt with only by a few members so far. I may state at the outset that I do not propose to question the wisdom of the proposal to separate Burma. But accepting that position, I must point out that the position of Indians in Burma according to the proposals of the Report will be very precarious and that is the reason why so many protests have been made by them. Anyone who has followed the development of Burma must admit that the contribution made by Indians in a number of ways for this development can hardly be exaggerated. Without their financial help, Burma would not to-day be one of the foremost agricultural provinces of India. Without Indian labour, the millions of acres would not have been brought under cultivation and so much prosperity would not have come to Burma. Indians however do not desire to rest their case merely on their past contributions. They merely suggest that the considerations which have prevailed with the Government of Great Britain and the Joint Select Committee in providing safeguards should be equitably and impartially applied to Indians and Britishers alike in Burma. Nor is this demand against Burmese wishes as expressed at the various sessions of the Round Table Conference. In the first Conference relating to Burma, it was laid down that the 'legitimate interests of Indians and other minorities must be safeguarded' and that 'adequate attention should be paid to the question of immigration of Indian labour and provision should be made for the regulation of the conditions of both work and life of immigrants.' They further say:

[30th January 1935] [Mr. S. A. A. Annamalai Chettiyar]

'They also especially stress the importance of there being no discrimination as regards Indians entering Burma.'

"It was further agreed at the Burma Round Table Conference that 'the Act should provide that there should be no discrimination, legislative or administrative, against any existing commercial interests carrying on business or trading in Burma.' The recommendations of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report violate these principles. I need only refer to paragraph 473 of the Report which proposes 'that it should be competent for the Burma Legislature to enact legislation restricting or imposing conditions of entry into Burma in respect of all persons other than British subjects domiciled in the United Kingdom.' The Report puts it forward as an axiom that 'it would be unreasonable to include in a new constitution for Burma provisions which would in effect give all persons domiciled in India an unrestricted right of entry into Burma.' We are not told why it would be unreasonable and whether it is any more unreasonable than to give this same right to every British subject domiciled in Great Britain. The Committee further observes that there is a 'special category of persons in Burma, of United Kingdom domicile, for whose protection in India provisions will require to be made in the constitution of India.' In the case of companies established already in Burma with United Kingdom personnel and capital, the Committee suggests that there should be no restricted right of entry into India. The reason for this strange suggestion is that they were established when Burma was a province of India and 'it would evidently be inequitable if after separation they are in a less 'favourable position than if they had established themselves in Bengal or Bombay.' I ask: Does not the same reasoning apply to Indians who have established themselves in a province of India—Burma? This is a question of national interest and self-respect. We do not want South African conditions and Kenya conditions brought about in Burma also. Everywhere in every Dominion or Colony, Indians are discriminated against. The latest is what is happening in Ceylon. I am certain that when these facts are placed before the public, every Indian will resent these discriminating provisions. I request the House to accept the amendment and vindicate the status and self-respect of Indians."

[Mr. S. A. A. Annamalai Chettiyar] [30th January 1935]

Mrs. K. ALAMELUMANGATHAYARAMMA then spoke in Tamil of which the following is an English rendering:—

"Mr. President, Sir, for the last two or three days some of the hon. Members of this Legislative Council have been making speeches. They have been speaking only on the forthcoming political reforms and other political rights, but not on the question of the welfare of women. Therefore it is my duty as their representative to point out that their interests are not sufficiently recognized.

"As women form about half the population of India, it is necessary that, for the progress of the country, our women should have a share in all the public activities. It is the British Government that helped to spread the light of education among women of India. It is the Montague-Chelmsford Reforms that first granted women the franchise. It is my duty to offer my thanks to the Government for women franchise, on behalf of women in the Province. In the Joint Committee Report now published the number of women qualified to vote is given, but the number of women eligible to vote is not equal to it. I regret to note that according to the recent census, out of 60 lakhs, only 20 lakhs of women are qualified to vote. It is not enough that the Members of the Joint Committee alone state simply that the 40 lakhs of women should send an application to be enrolled and get their franchise. I therefore request the Government to recommend that the remaining women also should automatically receive franchise without sending any application according to the suggestion of the Joint Committee. Though the Southborough Committee did not recommend franchise to women, Parliament gave scope for provincial councils to admit women to the franchise. According to the present census, it is stated that about 70 lakhs of men and women are qualified to vote and out of that total number, 3 per cent are in British India. Parliament required the Electoral Rules made under the Government of India Act to be so drawn up as to enable the provincial councils to pass resolutions admitting women to the franchise on the same terms as men, and resolutions for that purpose have been passed in every Province except the North-West Frontier Province. In paragraph 124, of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, the Statutory Commission's proposal that without increasing the franchise on the basis of the population, the number of women voters may be increased by 10 per cent, is referred to.

[30th January 1935] [Mrs. K. Alamelumangathayaramma]

"The first session of the Round Table Conference recommended 25 per cent of the population to be enfranchised. I request that in consideration of all these facts Government should come forward to increase the franchise for women. I not only rejoice but feel grateful that franchise has been extended to women with property, education and literary qualifications and to the wives of men in military service and their pensioned mothers and widows. But I find that the franchise to women is not given in all the provinces on the same basis.

"In paragraph 135 of the Report, the Committee has recommended the proposal of the White Paper, viz., (1) that 'the application requirement should be dispensed with in the case of women qualified in respect of a husband's property in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces and in urban areas in the United Provinces, the Punjab and Assam, a literary qualification should be substituted for the educational qualification.' According to the proposal of the White Paper, Madras is not included for the recommendation of franchise to women on the basis of property and educational qualification. Therefore I request the Government to take measures to extend the same privilege to the women of the Madras Presidency as recommended in the case of women of other provinces above mentioned.

"It is admitted by all administrators that women's advancement is essential for the country's progress. At present, Indian women are making rapid progress in all directions. Qualified women like men are serving as principals, professors and teachers in colleges, high schools and elementary schools. They are not behind men in administrative capacity. They have also qualified themselves in law and are practising as advocates. In Burma, there are also women Registrars. They are also as efficient as men in various branches of medicine. They are serving in the Postal department. In other spheres of work also the women are taking important part. Besides these, they are working vigorously for the general welfare of the country. They are holding conferences in different places where women of different parts of India meet, discuss and pass resolutions. They are taking part in and conducting provincial conferences, All-India conferences and World conferences with a capacity which is pleasantly surprising and causing admiration among men. The Simon Commission said: 'The women's movement in India holds the key of progress and the results it may achieve are incalculably great.' It must be admitted that the forthcoming political reforms are partly the result of the exertions of women. In the Franchise Committee as well as in the Round Table Conferences, Mrs. Radhabai Subbarayan and Mrs. Begum Sha Nawaz have pleaded for the franchise of women and their other rights. I need not further speak at length on the work turned out by women of India, particularly by Christian and Muslim women. Last December, women from different parts of India and from England attended the last All-India Women's Conference held at Karachi. Mrs. Corbett Ashley and Dr. Maude Roydon who attended this conference have referred to the Joint Committee Report. They said Indian women are taking part in different spheres of work and that the reforms fall far short of their expectations. They promised to do all that lay in their power to promote women's interests. Recently Lady Layton, in a broadcast speech in London on January 15, said, 'Despite stupendous handicaps, a rapidly growing band of women in India was bringing about a social revolution on peaceful lines. The attitude of activity of women's Indian Association, the National Council of Women and the All-India Women's Conference were changing the face of India and challenging the Government to carry out the long-needed measures of reform in education, conditions of labour, etc.'

[Mrs. K. Alamelumangathayaramma] [30th January 1935]

3-45
p.m.

"I request the Government to provide proper facilities for women to enter the Provincial Councils, the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State so that they might work for the welfare of the country and especially for their sisters.

"It is stated that 6 seats are to be reserved for women in the Madras Council. I wish to plead for 10 seats.

"On page 346 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report, it is mentioned in Appendix II that in the Federal Assembly, for a population of 45.6 millions in the Madras Province, 2 seats are reserved for women and 4 seats for depressed classes. Women also should have 4 seats.

"It is essential that in the future Reform Councils at least a few members should be social reformers. Some should come forward to work for social reform; besides these their chief aim should be to promote political reform.

"In the Reform Councils with the enlargement of membership a variety of difficult and complicated problems are likely to come up for discussion from time to time. This needs greater deliberation and mature judgment before the measures are finally disposed of. As a check and safeguard against hasty legislation—which may have to be revised afterwards—the existence of Second Chambers is considered a reasonable device. Though some of the hon. Members have pointed out the defects of the system, I feel that Second Chambers are a matter of necessity in the present circumstances. When this question of bi-cameral system came up for discussion before this Council in December session of 1932, I, among others, spoke at length in favour of it and therefore I need not dilate further on this proposition once again."

* The KUMARARAJA OF VENKATAGIRI:—"Mr. President, Sir, the Joint Parliamentary Committee report covers such a wide field and deals with such a wide range of subjects which have vital bearing on all the important questions that affect the nation, that one is tempted to emulate Kemal Pasha who has established a record for the longest speech ever made. I do not propose to do so however great the temptation may be. Although I paid great attention to the speech of hon. the Leader of the Opposition, Dr. Subbarayan, and although I listened with great care and attention to the speeches delivered by various Members in support of his amendment—particularly that of my hon. Friend from Madura, Mr. Venkatarama Ayyar, who made valiant though vain efforts to justify the position adopted by them, I fail to find any justification in support of the position taken up by them. That an institution like the Congress which continues to have faith in the efficacy of direct action and civil disobedience as weapons to ultimately secure swaraj for the country should prefer the present constitution which is unsatisfactory, which promotes and secures to that party a congenial atmosphere for adoption of a policy in which it has faith, is understandable. But the fact that parties like that of my hon. Friend Dr. Subbarayan's and others who have no faith in such weapons should have decided to prefer to struggle under the present constitution—particularly in view of the experience they possess and after having realized how defective the present constitution is, is indeed deplorable.

[The Kumararaja of Venkatagiri]

"I am afraid, Sir, it is to a certain extent due to the big landslide in favour of the Congress during the recent elections, which however was due to various causes such as the considerable disappointment caused by the White Paper proposals in many political circles. Our party, Sir, the Justice Party to which I have the honour to belong, has wisely decided not to go into the same lobby with my hon. Friend, Dr. Subbarayan, and to work, just as the Congress has decided to do, the Constitution with a view to serving the interests of the country and particularly with a view to accelerate the progress of the country towards Dominion Status. It is indeed very satisfactory to hear from British statesmen, like the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin and from His Excellency Lord Erskine a reiteration of the pledges given to India by various British Governments. Still, it is regrettable to note that the words 'Dominion Status' have been omitted from those utterances. It is to be earnestly hoped that even now Sir Samuel Hoare will make a real and strenuous effort to have the objective of India, viz., Dominion Status, embodied in the preamble to the Act. The expression 'Dominion Status' has been interpreted in certain circles as implying a right to secede from the British Empire. Those who have studied the preamble to the Westminster Statute will remember that there is no such implied right. Whatever it may be, Sir, even assuming that the Westminster Statute implies such a right, I contend that there can be no such contingency of secession arising in the case of India, in view of the position which will be occupied by the Princes of India under the new Constitution and also in view of the loyalty of Indians, which is an article of religious faith with most Indians in this country—whatever party they may belong to—including many in the Congress, which, rightly or wrongly, has lost faith in the sincerity of the British Government to grant swaraj for this country. Sir, the Archbishop of Canterbury in his speech the other day enquired whether India wanted 'Dominion Status' or a Dominion Constitution. I submit, Sir, we require both. We want to be one of the members of the British Commonwealth, enjoying a status equal to that of the Dominions.

"One of the other amendments given notice of by my party states that in regard to improvements in the Centre, we stand by the Joint Memorandum. I consider it, however, very essential that I should repeat certain proposals made in that Memorandum submitted to the Joint Committee by the Indian Delegation. They are: firstly, the acceleration of the Indianization of the army. I consider whatever may be the proposals made in regard to other matters, that unless there is a very efficient army under the control of Indian officers as the result of a process of Indianization—of course subject to conditions of efficiency to be decided by a committee of experts—any substance of independence or power to be secured by the country by whatever method of agitation, cannot be retained. Therefore, it is very essential not only that Indianization of the army should be accelerated, but that immediately after the inauguration of the Federation, the portfolio of defence should be placed in the hands of a non-official Indian.

"Sir, my friend, Mr. Birley, yesterday made an eloquent plea for fair treatment in regard to commercial matters. I entirely subscribe to that view; but at the same time, let me also emphasise the need for embodying in the Instrument of Instructions a clause which will say that the Governor-General should use his discretion sympathetically in matters in which the interests of indigenous industries which are in an infant state, are involved.

"Sir, as regards safeguards, they have been described by Sir Samuel Hoare—to whom I wish to pay a tribute for his sincerity to do his best to give us that measure of responsible government which circumstances now prevailing in England permit him to do—as hedges not to obstruct but to guide one along the road. While that description may be a correct one, it cannot be denied that these safeguards have created a considerable amount of apprehension in this country. I am afraid that unless certain changes proposed by us are effected, the necessary goodwill in this country which is so essential for the successful working of the constitution may not be found. In this connexion, I must emphasise the need for forming parties on definite principles, so that it may not be possible for any future Governor, however misguided he may be, to abuse the powers vested in him. I would also like to stress the need for joint responsibility. Without joint responsibility there will be a tendency on the part of various politicians to form themselves into separate groups and thereby provide scope for the misuse of these safeguards.

"When I was dealing with the question of the army, I forgot to refer to a particular observation made by the Joint Parliamentary Committee in regard to martial races. It is very necessary, Sir, particularly when we are going to have a federal constitution, that recruitment to the army should be made on a provincial basis. I still contend that we, Madras, are in no way inferior to the other classes who predominate the army. (Hear, hear.)

"Coming now to the question of a Second Chamber for this province which I have been advocating for the last so many years, I feel indeed gratified that the Joint Parliamentary Committee has recommended the creation of a Second Chamber. I believe that hon. Members who dislike the idea of a Second Chamber will concede that if I advocate a Second

30th January 1935] [The Kumararaja of Venkatagiri]

Chamber, it is not because I am not as sincere as they are, to see India progress towards her goal within the shortest possible period, but it is because I feel that there should be an institution which will act as a check, when as the result of any misunderstanding or on account of want of proper appreciation of the issues involved in any legislation, the legislature passes a predatory law. Objection was also taken to the establishment of the Second Chamber on considerations of economy. If that is to be the guiding consideration, I should advocate a sort of dictatorship which will dispense with the need of a legislature of the size proposed in the Joint Committee Report. By this I should not be understood as advocating a dictatorship; I say this only as an answer to that argument.

"Sir, I should submit that powers to consider Money Bills should also be vested in the Second Chamber. In this connection I have to point out that we are advocating this change, not because it will be a House in which the landholders will be predominating in numbers, but because we expect that Chamber, especially in view of the very extended franchise and in view of the fact that it will consist mainly of members possessing very high qualifications and also possessing mature experience, to act properly. Perhaps it may happen in the future that many of the members who are now in this House may find it impossible to find a place in the Lower House. As a landholder, Sir, I am also thankful to the Joint Committee for having proposed that any legislation dealing with permanent settlement should be reserved for His Majesty's pleasure. This is a question which has been agitating the landholders for a considerable time and numerous memorials have been submitted to the authorities on various occasions. For that reason I refrain from dealing at any length with those memorials. Suffice it to express the confident hope that the authorities will again consider the various memorials submitted to them and introduce a provision in the Bill or in the Instrument of Instructions which will secure to us the rights which we have long enjoyed. In this connection, as a sort of personal observation I may say that, if I advocate permanent settlement, it is not because I expect it to benefit me personally, but only on principle. If permanent settlement is to be scrapped and the peishcush to be paid by my estate is to be fixed, I can assure this House that the amount I will have to pay will be much less than what I, viz., Venkatagiri Samasthanam, is at present paying.

"Sir, the Rajah of Khallikote in his very able speech of farewell wanted the authorities to reconsider the demand of the Oriyas to have Mandasa and other areas included in the new Orissa province. I shall be failing in my duty that I owe to the Andhras, if I do not utilize this occasion for expressing in general the acute dissatisfaction and discontentment that prevails among the Andhras on the recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report to have Jeypore, Berhampur and other areas included in Orissa. (Sriman M. G. Patnaik Mahasayo: Why?) I have no time to deal with it at any length.

[The Kumararaja of Venkatagiri] [30th January 1935]

This question has been dealt with at some length and therefore it will be very unnecessary for me to deal with the question now, excepting that I hope the authorities will reconsider the question of the inclusion of Jeypore and Berhampur and thereby do justice to the Andhradesa.

"Before I resume my seat, let me express the hope that under the guidance of a Benevolent Providence, the policies and the actions of the parties both in this country and also in England, will be so shaped as to further strengthen the link that binds India and Britain together and make her a contented member occupying a status of equality with the other Dominions in the British Commonwealth."

* Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—"Mr. President, Sir, hon. Members who have listened to the debate during the last three days would recognize that whatever may be said against my amendment, there is a general sense of dissatisfaction on all sides of the House with regard to the proposals made by the Joint Parliamentary Committee for the future constitution of India. No recognized party in this House is prepared to say that what has been provided for in the Constitution is the satisfactory thing which the Indians look forward to. My hon. Friend, Sir Parasuram Patro asked a pertinent question, whether my statement means that I shall be prepared to work the Constitution, if the Constitution is thrust upon us even without the amendments proposed in a moderate way by my hon. Friends of the Justice Party. To that, I cannot do better than quote a passage from the recent article written by the Right Hon'ble Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, whom Sir Parasuram described as my political Guru. The sentence is this:

'As one great British statesman said on one occasion, no politician can afford to look more than a week ahead.'

"That is my reply to my hon. Friend's question. I think my hon. Friend, Mr. Yakub Hasan, when he spoke yesterday dealt with this matter sufficiently and I need not go further than to say that even the Congressmen, like the present President of the Congress, have said that they will see whether they were prepared to work the Constitution or not when the Constitution Act is placed on the Statute Book. This is what the present President of the Indian National Congress stated in a speech he delivered at Patna: If he were asked whether the Congress were going to work the proposed Constitution, he would reply, 'that was a hypothetical question which could not be answered twelve months in advance of the inauguration of the new scheme of things. The Congress has however resolved that they would not permit mischief-makers to work mischief and commit wrongs in the name of the people through the legislatures. Whether the Congress would work the Reforms or not, this much was certain, that they would not allow men of that type to flourish in the Legislatures. Whether the new Legislatures should not be completely boycotted by the Congress would depend upon the situation and the atmosphere existing at the time of the inauguration of the new Reforms.'"

[30th January 1935] [Dr. P. Subbarayan]

"Therefore, Mr. President, we could see that even the Congressmen themselves have not made up their mind and perhaps they had in mind the quotation from the British statesman I made a moment ago that they are not prepared to say even a week ahead, what they are going to do a week hence. I am supported in my statement that the British Government have succumbed to the threats of the Conservative elements in England by a recent letter written by Professor Arthur Berriedale Keith, than whom no better living authority exists on Dominion Constitutions. This is what he says:—

"The Government, it seems to me, has made the mistake of adopting a policy which endeavours to blend two irreconcilable elements. It desires to satisfy the people of India that it is conceding responsible government, and the Conservatives of England that it is imposing such checks as will render responsible government innocuous, by depriving it of the characteristics of true responsibility."

"Therefore, I can at least stand on this ground, that the greatest living authority on Constitutions in the British Dominions, agrees with the statement I made in proposing the amendment I made the other day. I am sure Hon. Members will realize that British statesmen have fallen to the threats of their own Conservative opposition in the House of Commons.

"My hon. Friend, Mr. Birley, asked me whether I intended to threaten or cajole the Europeans into accepting the proposition I made. I never dreamt of ever threatening or cajoling them, and if you look at the prosperous manner in which they are sitting on the other side, I do not think, you will entertain the idea that they can either be cajoled or threatened. It was far from my mind to do that. I only wanted to point out that if friendly relations are to continue and if we are to live as friends in this country, which I am sure they and I desire alike, they ought to support Indian aspirations in the matter of at least getting these two blessed words 'Dominion Status' inserted in the present Constitution. That is all I ask for. I am sorry they should have run away with the idea that I was either threatening or cajoling them, as I never intended to say that a time would come when their position in this country would be such that they might have to pack up their goods and return home. That was far from my mind. I feel that in every country in the world it is a recognized fact that we ought to help any one who wants to either trade or settle in the other land and we ought to treat him in as friendly a manner as possible, subject to this condition that the paramount interests of the country must always be respected by him. I am sure my hon. Friends representing the European group in this House would subscribe to that proposition, because I am sure that in the Dominions of His Majesty which are self-governing to-day, in Canada, Australia and South Africa, no one would be allowed to settle unless he agrees to abide by the laws that exist in those countries.

"In this connexion, Mr. President, I was sorry to hear the speech of my Hon. Friend, and at one time my Chief, the present Law Member. He talked as if—I should have thought he should not have done it after having been in South Africa—the treatment accorded to our own nationals in South Africa was due to the treatment we accord to our depressed brethren in this country. As I said before, no one is more ashamed than I am of the way in which we have treated the depressed classes in this country, and we are perhaps having our retribution for that to-day in our struggle but at the same time, the Hon. Member ought to realize that as British subjects, if we have to settle down in South Africa, our rights have got to be respected as much as those of other citizens in South Africa and I am sure . . .”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ On a matter of personal explanation, Sir. My hon. Friend must have noticed that as long as I was in South Africa I spared no pains to advocate the rights of Indians there. This answer that he was referring to in this Council, I gave in answer to an interruption when I was asked, what about the fate of our countrymen in South Africa. I said that we are paying retribution of our sins here.”

Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—“ I am still unconvinced in spite of the elaborate personal explanation of the Hon. Gentleman, the Law Member, of his statement that Indians in South Africa should be treated in a manner that the South African . . .”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ Mr. President, I never said that they should be treated like that. I said that they should be treated in accordance. . .”

Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—“ Order, Order . . .”

The Hon. Sir K. V. REDDI NAYUDU:—“ Why do you usurp the powers of the President?”

Dr. P. SUBBARAYAN:—“ I am not usurping the powers of the President. I will yield only if the President asks me to yield and I was not going to yield to the Hon. Gentleman, because he rises.”

4-30 p.m. “ Then, Sir, this leads me on naturally to the contention of my hon. Friends of the depressed classes, who said that they want the Poona Pact to be rescinded. I am afraid it is rather too late in the day to talk of rescinding the Poona Pact. If hon. Members belonging to the depressed classes agreed to the Poona Pact, they did it with their eyes open in the year 1932. And having done that, as all the communities have agreed to it they cannot now go back. Whatever His Majesty's Government may do, they will at least keep this one pledge that with regard to the Communal Award they will not alter even a tittle unless an agreement is come to among all concerned. (Hear, hear.) Mr. President, I know that there is not a possibility of my motion being carried and I do not regret that for a moment. But, as I have said, I think there is at least this much to be said for it, that the electorates in the last Assembly elections, have convincingly decided that the motion that I have proposed is the only possible one that is acceptable to the country. With regard to the coming constitution, I cannot do better than quote the conclusion of the article of the Right Hon. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru in which he says: ‘ Meanwhile, if the foreshadowed Constitution is to be on the Statute Book—condemn it as much as we may—it will work us, if we are not prepared to work it.’ ” (Cheers.)

* The Hon. Mr. C. A. SOUTER:—“ Mr. President, Sir, for the last three days we have listened to speeches, eloquent or otherwise, and I probably alone of all this Council, may claim that I have heard every word of them. Naturally, I hope hon. Members will pardon me if I say that I am weary. They also must be so. I do not propose therefore to take up a large portion of the time of the House in talking about the debate. I should like the House to understand that what I am going to say is entirely my own opinion. So far as I know, the Government of Madras has not been asked to give its opinion on the Joint Parliamentary Committee's Report. Therefore, any comments or opinions that come from me must be taken as my own. Now, Sir, what I propose to do is to act the part more or less of a District Judge in summing up to a jury. I propose to go through the course of the debate and to point out the salient features of it.

“ Well, Sir, to begin with the hon. the Leader of the Opposition's amendment, I may frankly confess that I was disappointed in it. I consider that Dr. Subbarayan then had a very great chance to do something really good. He seemed to me to miss it. For myself, I was not impressed by his speech. It was too general in character. To my mind it did not proceed in sufficient detail and he asked a resolution to be passed by this hon. House which one hon. Member described, I think, perfectly correctly, as a counsel of despair. I do not think that this hon. House would be acting up to their traditions of the past if they were to pass a resolution of that type. But those who followed on the same day as the Leader of the Opposition did go into some greater detail, which I will comment on shortly. But, at the other end of the scale, away from the extremists, we had hon. Members who were wholeheartedly in favour of the Report as it is. In between them were various grades of opinion, some very nearly accepting it wholeheartedly like the Raja of Kallikote, others who did so for the most part, and others again that were not so wide in their approval. It seemed to me during the course of the debate that the main points, which were raised were those relating to Dominion Status, Safeguards, Indirect Elections, Second Chambers, Government Service so far as the provinces are concerned and the Governor's Acts and Ordinances.

“ As regards Dominion Status, except for one hon. Member who said that the Preamble of the Government of India Act of 1919, might be a substitute for these words, except on that occasion I cannot remember, although I made copious notes of all the speeches, hearing a single member attempt to offer a concrete definition of what is meant by Dominion Status. Honestly, Sir, I can quite understand the hon. Members not doing so, because so far as I can understand it, this phrase has never been used in any legal enactment. It is not used so far as I know, in the wording of any Dominion Constitution and I can quite see the difficulty of His Majesty's Government in trying to use a phrase like this to a future Dominion, which I hope India will some day be, and apply to a future Dominion in terms which would not clash with existing facts in other Dominions. Can we point here, to any of His Majesty's Dominions, for instance, which has a problem of the same type, of the same magnitude as the Indian Princes? Now, if you lay down the phrase 'Dominion Status', you must remember that the Indian Princes must be included in the term whatever it means. I can quite see that that might present an enormous and insuperable difficulty in defining the phrase with any definiteness. Therefore, if some such formula such as was suggested by Dr. Natesa Mudaliyar, or some such formula to that was found and could satisfy what the hon. Members here also vaguely call Indian aspirations, then I am pretty certain that very sympathetic consideration would be given to such a formula.

"Then, Sir, the next point that was raised concerned the safeguards. Here, I would only refer hon. Members to what His Excellency said the other day. Personally, I was perfectly convinced that not one of these safeguards will ever be used unless it is definitely necessary. We must remember that those safeguards are only held in reserve. They are not instruments of obstruction to the Government. No Governor, I am convinced, would be allowed by His Majesty to retain his office very long, if it was found that he was using these safeguards to the detriment of the province over which he was governing and I cannot honestly think, that those apprehensions which so many Members of this hon. House expressed regarding those safeguards, have any foundation at all. And correlated to these safeguards are the proposed Ordinances and Governor's Acts. Here again, the same, exactly the same reasons apply. Those powers of the Governor can and must be used only when there is extreme necessity for them. Otherwise we might as well scrap the whole Constitution. What is the use of framing a constitution in such detail as the present proposed constitution has been framed, if the Governors who are going to carry it out could see that it is rendered entirely nugatory? I look at the matter in that light, that there is no Governor who will stay long in his appointment if he acts in such a manner.

"The next point that I have noted is the question of Indirect Elections. Here, I am afraid, that I cannot see eye to eye with all that His Excellency said the other day. I would personally prefer Direct Election, if it could be undertaken without undue inconvenience. And I think the proper attitude for us to adopt is to say, 'all right; we will take Indirect Elections to start with; let us see how ordinary elections work. We have large constituencies here and if we find we can elect members to our own Councils without undue difficulty from large constituencies, then let us have Direct Elections to Central Parliament.' That ought to be the proper attitude. For there is no doubt about it, that with the size of the constituencies, direct elections are difficult.

30th January 1935] [Mr. C. A. Souter]

The only thing is, to overcome those difficulties in the best way we can. Let us see how the thing works to start with, and if it is unsatisfactory let us agitate for a change. That is how I would look upon the matter.

"Then, as regards Second Chambers, I confess at once that as a Member of the Franchise Committee which sat in conjunction with Lord Lothian's Committee I was against the Second Chamber. They seemed to me then to be unnecessary. (Hear, hear.) But (cries of 'No but'). But, if I say that for instance an Assembly of the nature of that at present sitting can with an overwhelming majority pass a resolution which cuts down the revenues of the province by 25 per cent, the whole revenues of the province by 25 per cent by one stroke, there seems to be some reason for a check of that sort. (Hear, hear, and laughter.)

"I hear hon. Members saying that I am obsessed. Believe me, I am not obsessed. All that the Revenue Member has to do is to collect the revenue. The man who ought to be really obsessed with it is the Finance Member. Well, Sir, I am now convinced by the arguments in the report in favour of the Second Chamber. I admit that my previous opinion was based mainly on the question of expense. If that can be got over, and if the future Legislative Assembly here would not pass proposals like those I have mentioned, I have no doubt that the question of expense will not arise. That, Sir, must conclude my remarks. I do not know what the hon. Movers of the amendments propose to do, or what the next procedure is to be. I presume that votes will be taken on the amendments that have been put forward, in which case it will not be possible for us to finish within the quarter of an hour left if I continue my remarks. I will not therefore take up the time of the House further." (Cheers.)

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I will put the main motion and afterwards the amendments to the vote of the House. The question is—

'That the Report of the Joint Committee on Indian Constitutional Reform be taken into consideration'."

The motion was carried.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The first is Dr. Subbarayan's amendment. The question is—

'Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration, this Council is constrained, after full and earnest consideration of the whole situation, to record its opinion that the scheme of the Joint Select Committee for the future constitution of India does not satisfy the aspirations of the people of this country and is unacceptable and that it is better to remain and struggle under the existing constitution defective though it be, than to be saddled with the constitution proposed under the Report."

The amendment was lost.

[30th January 1935]

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"The second amendment, i.e., that of Mr. Yahya Ali, is for the vote of the House. The question is—

Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration the Council while accepting the conclusions of the Joint Parliamentary Committee that there should be Provincial Autonomy for British India and that an All-India Federation should be inaugurated as they will end the present system of diarchy in the provinces and irresponsible system of Government at the Centre, and urging that such inauguration should take place at a very early date, feels bound to express its regret that so far from improving on the White Paper proposals, the Report further restricts the scope of responsibility which would be transferred to Indian people both in the Provinces and at the Centre; the Council therefore further urges that to secure goodwill for the working of the new constitution in a peaceful atmosphere, the following changes at least must be made by the Parliament:—

(1) In view of the very wide apprehensions that have been raised in the country, almost amounting to a feeling of distrust that the pledges given by Royalty and by representatives of the King-Emperor and prominent members of the British Cabinet regarding the political goal of India, are being indirectly withdrawn, it should be made clear in the preamble that the ultimate aim of the constitutional progress in this country must be the attainment by India of Dominion Status in the British Commonwealth:

(2) so far as provincial administration is concerned—

(a) the Joint responsibility of Ministers should be recognized, as that is the only method of preventing disruptive tendencies and creating a sound party system of Government;

(b) while recognizing that the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report has accepted the principle that there can be no real 'Responsibility' unless 'Law and Order' are transferred to the control of the Ministers, it is unnecessary to add to the safeguards already enumerated in the White Paper; further restrictions as contained in the paragraphs 92 and 93 of the Report;

(c) the Rules of Business and Procedure should be made on the advice of the Ministers and not merely in consultation with them;

(d) the power of the Governor to make Ordinances should be limited to cases where he can do so on the advice of the Ministers; in other cases, this power should be vested in the Governor-General;

[30th January 1935]

[The President]

(e) the Governor's Acts should be only of temporary duration and not be permanently on the Statute Book;

(f) the very wide discretionary power given to the Governor in relation to the Services will make it impossible for Ministers to carry on the administration particularly as the phrase 'legitimate interests' is incapable of any definite meaning;

(3) with regard to the Federal Centre, the Council urges that at least those suggestions relating to Defence and Commercial safeguards which were put forward in the Memorandum of the British Indian delegates to the Joint Parliamentary Committee may be adopted. The system of Indirect Election to the Federal Assembly is also an alteration of the proposals of the White Paper Scheme for which there is no sufficient justification; and

(4) the Council is strongly opposed to the proposal contained in paragraph 473 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report empowering the Burma Legislature to enact any discriminating legislation against Indian subjects."

The amendment was carried.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I will now put the uncovered portions of Mr. Krishnayya Choudari's amendment. The question is:

Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration, the House is of opinion—

(a) that the constitution of a Second Chamber for Madras is quite unnecessary;

(b) that the safeguards mentioned in paragraphs 94 to 97 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report regarding the Police Rules and Special Branch of the Police are unnecessary;

(c) that the House of Assembly in the Federal Legislature should be constituted on a popular basis even with regard to States' representation. The States' subjects should be given power to send their representatives to that House;

(d) that the Defence and Foreign Relations should be transferred to the Indian Ministers automatically within a reasonable time without any further reference to the Imperial Parliament;

(e) that the powers of the Council of State should not be co-equal with the Federal House of Assembly in respect of Taxation and Finance; their power should be limited to approximate to the powers of the House of Lords in England;

(f) that the Federal Constitution should come into force immediately in regard to British Provinces with such States as are agreeable to join, leaving the other States to join if and when they like; and

[The President]

[30th January 1935]

(g) that the safeguards in regard to Commercial discrimination are totally unacceptable. The right of India for full autonomy in her fiscal affairs should be recognized."

The amendment was carried.

* The Hon. the PRESIDENT:—"I will now put Mr. Siva Raj's amendment to the vote of the House. The question is:

(a) Add at the end:

"and, on such consideration, this Council is of opinion that the scheme of representation for the Depressed Classes in the legislatures embodied in the Report is injurious and not beneficial to the interests and welfare of the community and therefore requests His Majesty's Government through the Government of India to exempt Madras Province from the operation of the Communal Award as amended by the so-called Poona Pact and to restore the system of representation for the depressed classes proposed in the original Premier's Award."

(b) Add the following at the end:—

"and on such consideration, this Council is of opinion that adequate number of seats be reserved in Second Chambers, Provincial and Federal, for representation of the Depressed Classes and requests His Majesty's Government through the Government of India to so modify the proposals."

The amendment was declared carried.

Mr. Basheer Ahmed Sayeed demanded a poll, and the House divided thus:
