The Honourable Sir George Rainy: (a) and (b). The Financial Commissioner of Railways is an officer of the Railway Department of the Government of India and is one of the four officials who constitute the Railway Board. Subject to the control of the Finance Member of His Excellency the Governor General's Council, to whom he has the right of access, he exercises the full powers of the Government of India with regard to railway expenditure. It is part of his duties to see that railway matters likely to affect the general finances of India are brought to the attention of the Finance Department.

MAINTENANCE OF SEPARATE CAPITAL AND REVENUE ACCOUNTS FOR BRANCH LINES.

101. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government kindly state whether separate Capital and Revenue Accounts are maintained for branch lines built as remunerative propositions, and if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : When branch lines are built as integral parts of the main line, no separate Capital and Revenue Accounts are maintained for them. But instructions have been issued that a statement comparing the actual earnings derived from a new branch line yearly till the fifth financial year after opening, with the estimate in the Traffic Report, should be submitted to the Railway Board.

ANTICIPATED RETURNS ON NEW RAILWAY LINES.

102. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the statement made by Mr. A. A. L. Parsons at page 1280 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IX, will Government kindly state whether they have since considered the question of devising a system by which to ascertain how far the anticipated return on new lines at the end of the assumed period has been realized at the end of that period ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes.

CRITERION LAID DOWN BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR A PRODUCTIVE RAILWAY, ETC.

103. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the criterion laid down by the Secretary of State for India for a productive railway that the project should be one which is estimated to yield a return within a maximum period of five years of 4 per cent. per annum on the capital invested including therein among others all arrears of simple interest incurred up to that date, will Government kindly state categorically :

(a) what is the maximum period adopted at present;

(b) what is the percentage aimed at; and

(c) whether arrears of simple interest incurred up to the date of the end of the maximum period is taken into account in arriving at the stipulated return ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: (a) In determining whether any new extension should be taken up, we now generally consider the return likely to be obtained immediately after opening and in the sixth year after opening.

(b) The percentage at which it appears likely that the Government of India can borrow during the period in which the money will be spent.

(c) No. We usually add interest during the construction period to the estimated capital expenditure for the purpose of determining the financial prospects of the new construction, but not interest for the further period up to the time when traffic on the extension is expected to have been fully developed.

AMOUNT OF THE CAPITAL AT CHARGE ON STATE RAILWAYS AT THE END OF 1926-27, ETC.

104. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government kindly state :

(a) the amount of the capital at charge on State Railways at the end of 1926-27;

(b) the amount included in (a) but not bearing interest; and

(c) the sources from which the amount in (b) was obtained ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to Account No. 25 of the Finance and Revenue Accounts for 1926-27 which gives full information on the subject.

REDUCTION OF THE CAPITAL COSTS OF THE MOHPANI COLLIERY.

105. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government kindly state the reasons for the reduction of the capital costs of Mohpani Colliery from 10,29,370 at the end of 1919-20 to 8,13,981 at the end of 1925-26 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is referred to the remarks against Mohpani Colliery in Column 17 of Appendix B of the Report by the Railway Board for 1926-27.

MANUFACTURE IN INDIA OF ARTICLES IN COMMON USE ON RAILWAYS.

106. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the question of the manufacture in India of articles in common use on Railways which was referred to the Tariff Board as far back as March 1925, have Government ascertained what is delaying the submission of the Board's Report, and if so, what are the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The report has been received. It is included in Volume VIII of the Statutory Enquiry into the steel industry, of which the Honourable Member has been supplied with a copy.

NUMBER OF WAGONS AND COACHES ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY AWAITING RENEWAL ON THE 31ST MARCH 1927.

107. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing, by types or classes, the number of wagons and coaches on the Bengal Nagpur Railway awaiting renewal on 31st March 1927 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sending the Honourable Member a statement giving him the information which he requires.

ALLOWANCE FOR THE USE MADE BY THE NEW BRANCH LINES OF THE ROLLING STOCK OF THE MAIN LINES.

108. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the statement made by Mr. A. A. L. Parsons at page 1261 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IX, in which it is stated that an allowance of 5 per cent. of gross earnings is made for the use made by the new branch lines of the rolling stock of the main lines, will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the percentage was fixed at a time when the ratio of working expenses to gross earnings was very much lower than at present ; and if so, have Government made any enquiries into the sufficiency of the allowance under the altered conditions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The percentage is of very old standing. Government have not made any recent enquiry into the sufficiency of the allowance, but have no reason to believe that as an all-round rate it is inadequate.

DESCRIPTION BY SIR CHARLES INNES OF TRAVEL ON THE INDIAN RAILWAYS AS THE CHEAPEST TRAVEL IN THE WORLD.

109. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the following extract from the Railway Member's speech at page 1427 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume IX :

> " But the fact remains and cannot be refuted, that travel on the Indian Railways is the cheapest travel in the world. I have the figures here and as I think they will prove of interest to the House, I shall read them out.

Average rate per passenger per mile in :

	Pies.
Norway	16.38
U. S. A.	15.58
Sweden	12.6
England	9.22
France	7.14

are Government aware that the lowest fare is not necessarily the cheapest fare ? If so, will they kindly lay on the table any information which may be in their possession to show that the average rate of 3.73 pies in India is not only the lowest but also the cheapest in the world ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I regret that I am unable to argue with the Honourable Member whether the adjective " cheap " has the particular comparative meaning which he appears to suggest, nor am I in a position to make the suggested comparison. I notice, however, that Dr. Webster gives as one of the definitions of " cheap "—" at a price as low or lower than the usual price of the article or commodity, or at a price less than the real value ". It is no doubt in both of these senses that Sir Charles Innes described travel on the Indian Railways as the cheapest travel in the world.

TOTAL AMOUNT DEBITED TO THE CAPITAL ACCOUNT ON ACCOUNT OF EXPENDITURE ON SURVEYS OF NEW LINES FORMING PART OF A STATE-WORKED RAILWAY.

110. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government kindly state approximately the total amount debited to the Capital Account to the end of 1926-27 without financial adjustment on account of expenditure on surveys of new lines forming part of a State-worked Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : About 7 1/3rd lakhs.

POLICY OF THE SOUTH AFRICAN GOVERNMENT REGARDING THE PURCHASE OF RAILWAY MATERIALS.

111. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Are Government aware that the policy of the South African Railways administration is to purchase as much material as possible in South Africa, and a preference of 5 per cent. is given in favour of the South African manufactured articles ? If so, have Government considered the question of adopting a similar policy on Indian Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, except that Government understand that the preference is 10 per cent. where the raw materials are entirely or mainly produced within the Union. The question whether a similar policy should be adopted for India was recently considered in connection with the revision of the Stores Purchase Rules.

FREE LUGGAGE ALLOWANCE GRANTED TO ADULT THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN RAILWAYS.

112. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Are Government aware that on the South African Railways each adult third class passenger is allowed to have 50 lbs. luggage free of charge ? If so, have Government considered the question of adopting a similar allowance on the Indian Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware what the free allowance is on the South African Railways. They do not propose to raise the present allowance on State-managed Railways which is 15 seers or about 30 lbs. in addition to bedding and other small articles.

CONTROL OF RAILWAY POLICE ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN RAILWAYS.

113. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Is it a fact that the control of the Railway Police in South African Railways is vested in the General Manager of the South African Railways ? If so, have Government considered the question of placing the Railway Police in India under the control of the Railway Board ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I regret that I cannot undertake to answer as regards the control of Railway Police on South African Railways. The Railway Police in India were originally controlled by the railway authorities, but the system did not prove satisfactory and was abandoned. Government are not considering any change from the existing system of control.

SUPPLY TO INDIAN RAILWAYS FREE OF CHARGE OF COAL FROM STATE-OWNED MINES.

114. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to Earl Winterton's statement in reply to a question in the House of Commons last April, that many of the State-owned mines in India supplied coal to Railways which was not charged for, will Government kindly specify the mines and the railways in question and state the circumstances in which no charge is made to railways for coal supply from State-owned mines ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware that any State-owned mines in India supply coal to Railways which is not charged for.

CONCESSIONS GRANTED TO MILITARY OFFICERS BY RAILWAYS.

115. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Will Government kindly state the grounds on which Captains and subalterns of certain British and Indian services are granted the concession of travelling first class on payment of second class fares with a luggage allowance on 1½ maunds as for a first class ticket at the cost of the Railway Department and not at the cost of the Army Department ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The cost of these concessions is borne by the Rail- Department, in accordance with the practice under which similar concesions are paid for by the railway companies in Great Britain.

ISSUE OF A PAMPHLET CONTAINING RULES AND CONDITIONS GOVERNING RECRUITMENT TO THE HIGHER SERVICES ON RAILWAYS.

116. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : With reference to the reply given on August 31st, 1926, to starred question No. 267, will Government kindly state what decision has been arrived at in regard to the issue of a pamphlet, setting out in full detail the rules and conditions governing recruitment to higher services on railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The issue of such a pamphlet is under active consideration, but awaits a decision on one point on which the Railway Board are in consultation with the Public Service Commission.

EDITORIAL NOTE "RAILWAYS IN SOUTH AFRICA AND IN INDIA" IN THE Week OF MAY 10TH, 1928.

117. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the editorial note "Railways in South Africa and in India" in the issue of the Week of May 10th, 1928, in which it is pointed out that "in South Africa railways and harbour administration is required to conform to business principles, with due regard to agricultural and industrial development within the Union" ? If so, have Government considered the question of adopting a similar policy in India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have not seen the article mentioned by the Honourable Member.

ADOPTION OF THE DIVISIONAL SYSTEM ON COMPANY-MANAGED RAILWAYS.

118. Mr. D. V. Belvi (on behalf of Mr. N. C. Kelkar) : Is it a fact that the reorganization of work on State-worked Railways on a divisional basis has proved to be a success from the point of view of both economy and efficiency ? If so, what steps have Government taken to introduce a similar reorganization on Company-worked State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government consider that the introduction of the divisional system has been a success on the Great Indian Peninsula, East Indian and North-Western Railways. Its adoption on Company-managed Railways is a matter for the decision of the Boards of Directors of those Railways ; and since a divisional system is less necessary on smaller and more easily managed railway systems, Government are not prepared to put pressure on the Home Boards to adopt it.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSSALMANS AS ESTABLISHMENT CLERKS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

119. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, were taken by the officers of the East Indian Railway to carry out the orders contained in letters No. I.E.-277|10|E., dated the 17th December, 1921, and No. T.E. 227|161|1-E. of 1st December, 1922, issued by the Chief Superintendent, Calcutta, regarding the appointment of Mussalmans as establishment clerks, since the amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway with the East Indian Railway ? If not, why not ?

(b) What is the total number of establishment clerks in the 6 Divisions of the East Indian Railway and to which community do they belong ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The orders to which the Honourable Member refers were to the effect that when opportunity occurred Muhammadan clerks should be engaged as assistants in the Establishment Branch of the Delhi and Gaya District Offices with a view to their being trained as establishment officers. They have ceased to be in force since the amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway with the East Indian Railway, for there is now no District Office at Gaya, and Delhi is no longer under the East Indian Railway Administration. At present the position is that since the amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway with the East Indian Railway the number of establishment clerks on the East Indian Railway has been reduced and as vacancies which occur have generally been filled first from the clerks who were discharged there has been no recruitment of establishment clerks—Muhammadan or otherwise—from outside.

(b) The total number of the establishment clerks employed in the Divisional Offices of the East Indian Railway is 237. Government regret that for reasons which have been previously explained they are not prepared to supplement the details with regard to communal representation given in Appendix F in Volume I and Appendix C in Volume II of the Report on Indian Railways for 1926-27 by figures for individual offices or appointments.

I may, however, assure the Honourable Member that the Agent, East Indian Railway, is alive to the desirability of recruiting Muslims for appointments in all offices under his control when suitable candidates come forward for employment. In certain branches of the East Indian Railway service, there is at present a preponderance of Muslims.

Mr. President : Has question No. 120 been put ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Yes.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not in his place.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I am not aware of any arrangement of seats.

Mr. President : A block has been allotted to the Congress Party and I thought the Party has assigned seats to its members. If they have not done so yet, I hope they will do so now and let me know of the arrangement.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I am not aware of any arrangement of seats. I put question No. 120.

SKEEN MEMORANDUM ON THE MILITARY SITUATION IN INDIA.

120. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to statements in a section of the Press to the " Skeen memorandum " on the military situation in India, and the Indian army's military preparedness or unpreparedness for war on modern lines ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to publish the " Skeen memorandum " on modernizing the Indian Army ?

Mr. G. M. Young : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 120, 121, 122 and 176, also Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 158, and Colonel Crawford's question No. 178 together, and to take this opportunity of making a statement on the matters raised in these questions. I am afraid the statement will be rather a long one ; but I hope that the House will allow me to trespass a little on its patience, as it would be difficult to return a complete answer to these questions in a few words.

The document referred to in the questions was a lecture given by a General Staff Officer, at the four Command Headquarters, on army finance and economy within the army. The main object of the lecture, and of its subsequent circulation, was to stimulate a special campaign of economy which has been initiated throughout the various formations of the army. In order to assist in this object, mention was made of existing deficiencies in equipment, and of the estimated sums required to overtake those deficiencies during the next few years. The essence of this economy campaign within the army is to encourage the military authorities all through the army to look for and suggest methods of economizing on their own initiative, and so to assist the Government in providing the funds required to meet the army's growing needs, without increasing military expenditure beyond its present limits. The agreement referred to in Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question is an informal arrangement, under which savings effected by the military authorities as a result of this special economy campaign, may be appropriated towards the equipment programme.

The lecture is a confidential document designed for official use only, and Government are not prepared to publish the whole document in extenso merely because a copy has been purloined by somebody, and parts have already appeared in the Press. I will, however, endeavour to give Honourable Members full information on the various points.

The programme or scheme of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, mentioned in the questions, is merely a part of the continuous policy of Government, during the incumbency of the present and the late Commanders-in-Chief, in regard to modernising the equipment of the army in India and making good certain shortages which resulted from acceptance of the recommendations of the Indian Retrenchment Committee. There is no separate scheme for modernization in the army. Modernization is proceeding continuously from day to day. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief made this clear in his budget speech last March when he was informing the House about the progress of mechanization—a word which is practically synonymous with modernization in this context. The army of the United Kingdom has for the last few years been making continuous experiments with different patterns of mechanical transport machines. The army in India carefully follows the experiments made in England, testing the results, and modifying them, where modification is necessary, to suit Indian requirements. The task of keeping pace in the modernization of equipment with the progress made at home has been made more difficult in the past few years owing to the acceptance by Government of the recommendations of the Indian Retrenchment Committee. When Government accepted those recommendations, it was recognized, and stated, by Lord Rawlinson that the economies then made in equipment would have to be counterbalanced sooner or later by further expenditure in order to keep pace with the requirements of defence. In fact, in giving their support to the proposals of the Incheape Committee, the Government of India took a definite risk, in recognition of the then paramount need for retrenchment, by decelerating to some extent, the rates of provision and renewal of part of the army's equipment. It was realized from the beginning, however, that this state of affairs could not continue beyond a certain point. The matter was kept under constant observation, and by 1926 we had reached the point when we could no longer go slow, but, on the contrary, had to begin catching up again. By the end of 1927, we could see our way clear. Much progress had been made in redeeming what I may call the Incheape shortages, and we could predict with some confidence that those shortages would be soon obliterated altogether without our having to add appreciably to our military estimates. But meanwhile we were confronted with new problems arising out of the rapid developments in modernization, and, in particular, the mechanization of foreign armies and of the army of Great Britain. It was to keep pace with these further developments also, if possible, without increasing our present scale of military expenditure, that the economy campaign to which I have referred was devised in the cold weather of 1927-28. At the same time there was no hope of reducing that expenditure below its present level. That is why His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the late Finance Member have informed Honourable Members on more than one occasion, that they saw no prospect in the immediate future of a further reduction in the army estimates, but that, on the other hand, there was a possibility that those estimates might be increased. This was the position, Sir, when my Honourable friend, Colonel Crawford, asked me last March, whether the equipment of the army was in a satisfactory position, particularly in respect of mobility and defence against an attack from the air accompanied by the use of gas. These questions were put towards the close of the debate on the Army Department grant, when there was, of course, no opportunity for preparing a detailed statement. In replying, while I informed the House that Government were doing all they could towards ensuring that, when the time came, our army would go into the field fully equipped, I declined to make any admission of insufficiency in particular items of equipment. To that reply I adhere, and if a similar question were again put to me in the course of a debate, I should give a similar answer. But in the meanwhile there has been the public controversy on the subject, to which Honourable Members have drawn attention, and many incorrect statements about the condition of army equipment have appeared in the Press. In view of this circumstance, and as our equipment programme is now still further advanced than it was in March, I have had prepared a memorandum which explains as fully as possible, from the technical point of view, what we have been doing in the last few years, where we stand now, and what we propose to do in the near future. I lay this memorandum on the table of the House. It goes considerably into details, and I think it will supply Honourable Members with all the information that they require. But if, after reading it, they find that there are other technical points on which they would like to be informed, I shall be very glad to give them what information I can.

MEMORANDUM.

The policy followed by the Army in matters of organization and equipment is concisely stated in a resolution of the Legislative Assembly in 1921 in connection with the Esher Committee's recommendations, which runs as follows :

> " That the purpose of the army in India must be the defence of India against external aggression and the maintenance of internal peace and tranquillity. To the extent that it is necessary for India to maintain an army for these purposes, its organization, equipment and administration should be thoroughly up to date and, with due regard to Indian conditions in accordance with the present day standards of efficiency in the British Army, so that when the Army in India has to co-operate with the British Army on any occasion there may be no dissimilarities of organization which would render such co-operation difficult ".

This policy means the replacement of the older classes of artillery equipment, aircraft, transport, etc., by more modern types. The main feature of it is the substitution of mechanical for animal transport wherever possible.

ARMY TRANSPORT in war consists of :

(a) FIRST LINE TRANSPORT, which carries with the troops what they require in actual battle. Animal transport is used for this because the fighting line cannot have any transport which is unable to cross any country where men and horses can go ; but, where M. T. can be used (as in the case of certain technical units) there M. T. will be substituted for animal transport.

(b) Next, THE TRAINS which carry daily replenishment. These are at present mainly A. T. carts, but there are some horsed wagons. Both can only move a short distance at a comparatively slow rate. The results are that the length of columns in the line of march is inordinately long whilst the ability to operate away from the Line of Communication road or rail transport behind is restricted to a small distance. The sole advantage provided by A. T. over M. T. has been a superior power of operating off a good road. Fortunately we have now in sight mechanical transport on the 6-wheeler principle, which in most cases has been proved to be as good across-country as the A. T. cart. As this M. T. is more powerful, economical and speedy (all combining to improve mobility) the A. T. cart is now to be displaced from the role which it has so honourably filled for years and will to a considerable extent disappear—except in cases where the use of an M. T. vehicle would be uneconomical. The gradual replacement of these carts is high in the Army programme, but pack transport has still to be retained for use in country where neither M. T. nor A. T. carts can be employed. Thus the amount of animal transport retained will be cut down to a minimum, the principle followed being rather to organise for a more serious campaign and to improvise for a minor one, than vice versa.

(c) Lastly, Army Transport includes transport required for MAINTENANCE, i.e., to connect rail head with the trains which have been mentioned previously, and here in all large operations the employment of M. T. beyond railhead is obligatory.

A few remarks on the general policy of replacing animals by M. T. may be of interest.

It is financially impossible to maintain in peace all the M. T. required in war. Vehicles which cannot be used economically in peace tend to get out of date, with consequent complications in the supply of spare parts, and eventually have to be scrapped long before their useful mileage has been completed. The principle therefore adopted in all armies is to utilise the form of Transport obtainable from civilian sources on some form of subsidy basis, the advantages of which system need no explanation. It is the displacement of the horse by M. T. in civil life which, quite as much as the advantages to be gained in war, has been the driving force behind the increasing mechanization of the Army at Home.

In India repeated efforts have in the past been made to obtain M. T. by this means, but have proved abortive because the development of M. T. in India for civil needs was not sufficiently advanced. The last few years has, however, seen a remarkable expansion in M. T. of all descriptions all over the country, which encourages us to hope that the time is now ripe for a renewed effort to obtain a part of our requirements on a subsidy basis.

In particular we hope to get the country to use 6-wheelers and are offering encouragement by a system of subsidy which has recently been published throughout India. The more this subsidy scheme takes on and the larger the reserve in useful civil life, the more can we depend on this reserve for war and therefore the less the number of vehicles we have to hold uneconomically in Army reserve. A large number of enquiries in connection with such subsidies has already been received.

The replacement of animal transport by M. T. will cause the former to diminish. There is little prospect of this change causing any large immediate saving in peace. In war, however, the resultant economy and efficiency are beyond computation. The three results are, therefore, (1) greatly increased mobility in war, (2) slight economy in peace, (3) great economy in war. The pace at which His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief introduces these measures will only be conditioned by the funds available and the success of the subsidy scheme. So far it is merely a matter of simple substitution (as funds permit) of M. T. for the animal transport on which we have relied in the past.

4. Before proceeding to describe the other directions in which mechanization is proceeding, it is desirable to make a digression. Frequent criticism may be read of India's failure to follow Home models in these matters. Great as are the disadvantages of not doing so, yet, in this matter for the present and until experiments at Home crystallize, we have to keep the following factors in front of us always :—

Firstly, India is not a highly industrialized country. She has not the power of producing war machines nor the reserves of men required both to man and keep them in the field. For the present, therefore, a commercial vehicle (if such will meet the needs we foresee) must be used.

Next, India's war problem by reason of geographical and climatic conditions has special aspects and requires special treatment. So far these factors do not necessary favour the employment of the special machines which are being evolved to meet the problems facing the Home authorities. Eventually as communications improve and develop our own needs will tend more and more to call for the same equipment as the other Imperial Armies find essential, but for the moment mobility is our main requirement, and mobility in semi-developed country. Mobility is the main principle underlying all our projected reforms and we have to keep it in view always.

Now, if funds were unlimited, there would be less need for care. They are, however, rigidly restricted and therefore caution in any steps we take is obligatory. And this applies more particularly to the introduction of new equipment, until we are quite certain that it can be usefully employed in our particular conditions.

To illustrate this—Tanks have been tried. Two tanks now lie at AHMEDNAGAR, requiring such heavy repair to put them on the road and promising such little result when repaired that their re-conditioning is indefinitely postponed. We believe however that a type will eventually be developed which will suit us, and when that day comes it would be folly not to take advantage of it.

5. Mechanization of Artillery. This principle has always been accepted as regards medium artillery. Tractors were hauling guns at the manœuvres and review at DELHI as far back as 1925. Before and since then we have been searching for an efficient gun-haulage vehicle. The "Dragon", a track vehicle, in fact the chassis of a Tank, is employed at Home; but these very powerful tractors are for our purposes unnecessarily powerful (and thus expensive) and the tank trials referred to have not been successful enough to warrant large expenditure on this type.

The KEGRESSE a machine on the half-track principle, has been given full trial from 1924, but under our conditions definite draw-backs have appeared. In 1926 the six-wheeler came on the market and specimens were at once ordered and tried out; as a result, in 1927, exhaustive trials in carrying loads and gun haulage showed we had reached a stage when a start with "mechanization" could be safely made.

As regards Field Artillery, the fact that a start has been made in mechanization has appeared in most newspapers.

The Army see definite and material savings in upkeep and in the Remount Services; also, in war, the advantages, in cases where guns thus drawn can be used, more than justify the innovation, even were it to cost money.

6. The advantages of partial mechanization as applied to Transport and Artillery have been dealt with, but this by no means exhausts the subject.

Members will have read of the doings of the mechanized or "Armoured Force" at Home, as representing the last word in the conception of what is required in a war of the future. Remarkable as these doings were, it must be remembered that the force is still in an experimental stage, and that finality has not yet been reached either in regard to types of machines or in regard to their tactical employment. While we in India agree with the general idea underlying this force, the differing conditions here may demand developments along somewhat different lines.

7. There are other matters which are engaging the attention of H. E. the Commander-in-Chief; experiments in the use and reliability of smoke for screening purposes under our conditions are proceeding; anti-aircraft defence and anti-gas measures are matters requiring careful thought and both are receiving it whilst we are carefully watching experiments at Home in the provision of means of defence against armoured fighting vehicles. Obviously, however, it is not in the public interest to be as precise in these as in the other matters. The situation as regards rifles and other small arms may now be considered satisfactory. Steps are being taken to keep the R. A. F. in India up to date for which sums provision is being made from Army savings with no net addition to the Budget.

8. It has been suggested by ill-informed persons that the Army in India is conservative, if not reactionary, and that it fails to keep pace with or to profit by developments at Home. The fact is that the conditions are entirely different. The Army at Home, with unlimited technical, scientific and industrial resources behind it is in the best possible position to carry out experiments of all kinds, the results of which are freely placed at our disposal. We are not similarly placed and consequently whilst we watch the results of experiments at Home, and ourselves try out any new equipment resulting therefrom which may appear suitable to our needs, we have to be quite sure of our ground before we apply on a large scale the results of experiments which at Home have only been tried out or adopted on a comparatively small one.

Those who criticise any apparent slowness to move on our part, would be the first to condemn, and rightly condemn, the waste of money which would result from any change of policy, hastily thought out and put into effect, which might prove unsuitable to our particular conditions. As to its suitability or otherwise H. E. the Commander-in-Chief, who is in possession of all the factors in the problem, must be the arbiter. The existing arrangement by which the Army in India secures most valuable information from Home, without being forced to lower its own standard of preparedness to obtain it, is financially the most economical, and the most suitable to conditions at present existing. It is carried out in the closest consultation and in complete agreement between the responsible authorities here and at Home.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: In view of the statement of the Army Secretary that efforts are being made to make up for the Inchcape Committee's shortages, is the House to understand that Government are trying to revert to the position which existed before the Inchcape Committee reported?

Mr. G. M. Young: My statement refers solely to shortages in equipment. These shortages were caused, as I have said, by decelerating to some extent the rates of provision and renewal of part of the army's equipment. I think I have explained sufficiently in my statement what the situation is. We have now very nearly caught up again.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Will Government kindly state definitely whether the policy of progressive reduction in military expenditure has been abandoned as referred to in part (ii) of my question No. 158 (starred) to which the Honourable Member has made a reference?

Mr. G. M. Young: I think I have already said that in the immediate present there is no prospect of a further reduction.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: May I ask whether Government have allowed the Army Department to appropriate towards army expenditure the economies resulting from reductions in the salaries of British officers and British soldiers?

Mr. G. M. Young: I must ask for notice of that question.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: As the Honourable Member has said that all economies made would be allowed to be used towards making up the deficiencies now observed in regard to equipment, is the House to understand that the economies that are not due to the efforts of the Army Department will also be allowed to be utilised by the Army Department?

Mr. G. M. Young: I am not quite sure that I have understood the question. There is, as I have already explained, an informal arrangement by which economies, effected in this special economy campaign amongst the various formations of the army, may be re-appropriated towards the equipment programme. The reduction of salaries which my Honourable friend refers to does not form part of the special economy campaign, which is mainly economies in equipment and transportation.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: Am I to understand that the Finance Department has allowed only the economies resulting from the efforts of the Army Department itself to be re-appropriated for army expenditure?

Mr. G. M. Young: It is the business of the Army Department to effect all the economies it can in the various branches of the army administration and those economies no doubt will be applied to meet army needs.

ARTICLE IN THE Pioneer OF JULY 1ST ENTITLED "THE ARMY SCANDAL", "SIR W. BIRDWOOD'S SCHEME".

†121. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article in the Pioneer of July 1st, on page 1 from its special correspondent, entitled "The Army Scandal", "Sir W. Birdwood's Scheme"?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to publish the scheme of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief?

MODERNIZATION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

†122. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following observations of the Pioneer's Simla correspondent?

"No attempt is made to minimize the truth of the assertion that India is not as ready for war as it should be and the Skeen memorandum and the programme planned out by the Commander-in-Chief are held in military circles to be definite proof of their ability to grasp the situation".

(b) Is any scheme of modernization going to be put into effect?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to make a statement on the same?

(d) Do Government propose to take the Assembly into confidence in regard to the scheme?

(e) Is it a fact that the scheme will cause more military expenditure for India than she has been burdened with?

‡Nos. *123 to *137.

REVISION OF THE PAY AND DUTY ALLOWANCE OF DIVISIONAL ACCOUNTANTS OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

138. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Are Government aware of the anomalous character of the last revision made in the salaries of the Public Works Department Divisional Accountants by which a Divisional Accountant gets a start of Rs. 100 only whereas his 1st clerk in the Bombay Presidency starts with Rs. 105 and the Head Clerk of the Executive Engineer junior in grade to him starts on Rs. 130?

(b) Is it a fact that the maximum pay of a Public Works Department Divisional Accountant was Rs. 240 per mensem in 1864 and has now been raised only by Rs. 60, i.e., 25 per cent., whereas the maximum pay of the Head Clerk of the Executive Engineer's office has been raised from Rs. 80 to Rs. 180, i.e., 125 per cent.?

(c) Do Government propose to direct a more equitable and suitable revision of the pay and duty allowance of the Divisional Accountants compatible with their status and responsibility?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 120.

‡For answers to these questions, see at the end of questions for the day.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) and (b). The facts as regards the minimum and maximum rates of pay of divisional accountants are as stated by the Honourable Member. A Divisional accountant placed in charge of the accounts of a Public Works Division gets a special pay of Rs. 20 in the earlier stages of his career, which is reduced to Rs. 10 on his reaching the Rs. 140 stage and is extinguished on his attaining Rs. 150. Government have no information regarding the pay of 1st clerks and Head Clerks of Executive Engineers' Offices in the Bombay Presidency.

(c) The pay of divisional accountants was revised only in 1925 and Government do not consider a further revision to be necessary.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Will the Government kindly make enquiries to find out the effect of the course referred to in the answer to clause (b)?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: Government have no intention to make such an enquiry.

ISSUE OF INSTRUCTIONS TO INCOME-TAX OFFICERS REGARDING FIRMS WHICH HAVE BEEN REGISTERED.

139. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the Central Board of Revenue has issued instructions to Income-tax Officers to the effect that they should, in the case of firms which have been "registered" in any year, ascertain from such firms whether they desire a renewal of registration in the succeeding year if they find no application for re-registration in such cases?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to direct the Commissioners of Income-tax to inquire into such cases in which the Income-tax Officers have failed to carry out these instructions?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: (a) Yes.

(b) The Government are not aware of any necessity for the issue of general instructions on the subject which should in any case be issued if at all by the Central Board of Revenue. If any person considers himself aggrieved by failure to observe the instructions in question he should address the Commissioner of Income-tax, and if dissatisfied with the result should approach the Central Board of Revenue.

PUBLICATION OF THE TOUR PROGRAMMES OF INCOME-TAX OFFICERS IN SIND.

140. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that after the transfer of income-tax assessment work from the Revenue Department to the Income-tax Department, instructions have been issued to officers of the Income-tax Department in moffusil areas to publish their tour programme and not drag assessees to long distances from their places of business to attend the Income-tax Officer's camp?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative are Government aware that no tour programmes are published by touring officers of the Income-tax Department in Sindh and that parties are called upon to attend an Income-tax Officer's camp or headquarters stations from every long distances especially in the Karachi and Tharparkar districts and further that in several cases people are dragged from camp to camp?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The Commissioner of Income-tax reports that tour programmes of officers of the Income-tax Department are posted at the Income-tax Offices and sent to the Muktyarkars of all Talukas to be posted on their Office Notice Boards. As far as possible cases are dealt with near the residences of the assessees concerned. The Income-tax Officer, Thar and Parkar, camped at 29 different places in his charge last year.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Government be pleased to direct that the programmes be published in the newspapers ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Unless the need for that is established, Government have no intention of doing so.

PAYMENT OF BHATTA AND TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES TO WITNESSES SUMMONED BEFORE INCOME-TAX OFFICERS.

141. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any instructions have been issued to Income-tax officers for payment of bhatta and travelling expenses out of their contingent grants in cases in which witnesses are called to appear and give evidence before the Income-tax Officers at their own instance and not the instance of assessees ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative do Government propose to enquire in how many cases summonses have been issued to witnesses who are called by the Income-tax officers suo motu and in how many cases they have not been paid bhatta and travelling expenses ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the last sub-paragraph of paragraph 67 of the Income-tax Manual. The expenditure in question would properly be charged to contingencies.

(b) The Central Board of Revenue are ascertaining what the practice is in the different provinces, and will issue such instructions as are found to be necessary.

PRODUCTION BY ASSESSEES OF BOOKS, DOCUMENTS AND EVIDENCE BEFORE INCOME-TAX OFFICERS.

142. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Are Government aware that in Sind people are called upon by Income-tax Officers under sub-section (4) of section 22, Indian Income-tax Act, to appear before them with books, documents and evidence regarding their income without issuing in the first instance notices under sub-section (2) of that section and serving them on such persons as required by law ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative, do Government propose to undertake an enquiry regarding the extent to which this practice has obtained in various provinces in general and in Sind in particular and to direct Commissioners of Income-tax to take suitable notice of such cases ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No, except possibly in rare instances by oversight.

(b) Does not arise.

ISSUE OF ORDERS BY INCOME-TAX OFFICERS TO PARTIES TO GIVE THEM INTERVIEW IN THEIR OFFICES.

143. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Are Government aware that several notices are annually issued by Income-tax Officers to parties to give them interviews in their offices ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state under what provision of the law this practice is allowed ?

(c) If the reply be in the negative, do Government propose to undertake an enquiry regarding the extent to which this practice obtains and to issue orders for putting an end to it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b) and (c).

The Income-tax Officer has power to require any person on whom a notice has been sent under section 22 (2) to appear either in person or by representative, or to produce evidence, or cause it to be produced, under section 23 (2) ; or to produce evidence or cause it to be produced under section 22 (4), and has all the powers of a Civil Court in regard to the summoning of persons and documents under section 37. No doubt many notices and summons are issued under these sections. In many cases, Income-tax Officers may informally invite assessees to attend their offices in person or by representative to discuss matters. If any person considers that an illegal requisition (as distinguished from a request) for his appearance has been issued, he should address the Commissioner of Income-tax, and if dissatisfied with the result should approach the Central Board of Revenue, but, of course, if he disregarded such a requisition or a mere request he would not be liable to any penalty. I will only add that it is most desirable, I might say essential, that wherever a return is not accepted, the Income-tax Officer should discuss the proposed assessment with the assessee or his accredited representative. Income-tax Officers have been instructed, as far as possible, to adopt this course, which saves trouble to all concerned and obviates unnecessary appeals. The Government are not aware of any circumstances necessitating an enquiry into this subject.

DURATION OF TIME ALLOWED BY INCOME-TAX OFFICERS BETWEEN THE SERVICE OF NOTICE TO PARTIES AND THE DUTY FIXED FOR THEIR ATTENDANCE.

144. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any instructions have been issued to Income-tax Officers regarding the period of time that must be allowed between the service of notices under sub-section (4) of section 22 or sub-section (2) of section 23 of Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and therewith ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of these instructions ?

(c) Are Government aware that so far as Sind is concerned and especially in Karachi the duration of time between the service of such notices and the date fixed for attendance varies in a large majority of cases from less than a single day to two, three or four days ?

(d) If the reply be in the affirmative do Government propose to issue instructions to allow reasonable time ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The Government are informed that such short periods are seldom fixed.

(d) Does not arise.

PERIOD ALLOWED FOR THE SUBMISSION OF RETURNS IN THE CASE OF NOTICES ISSUED UNDER SECTION 22(2) OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922.

145. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Are Government aware that in a large majority of cases notices issued by Income-tax Officers under sub-section (2) of section 22 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, a period of 30 days for submission of returns has not been allowed in Sind and in the Punjab ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to take necessary action in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Government have no information on the subject.

(b) The Central Board of Revenue are making enquiries and will issue such instructions as may be necessary.

CURTAILMENT OF THE ORDINARY PERIOD OF 30 DAYS BETWEEN THE DATE OF SERVICE OF A NOTICE UNDER SECTION 29 OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922, AND THE PAYMENT OF THE TAX.

146. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any instructions have been issued to Income-tax Officers regarding the cases in which they should curtail the ordinary period of thirty days between the date of service of a notice under section 29 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, and the payment of tax, under section 45 of the Act ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to place on the Assembly table a copy of these instructions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No such instructions have been issued by the Central Board of Revenue. The Income-tax Officer has full discretion under sections 29 and 45 of the Indian Income-tax Act (XI-22) to fix the period in question.

(b) Does not arise.

SCALE OF PENALTIES TO BE INFLICTED IN THE CASE OF ASSESSEES FOR DEFAULT IN MAKING PAYMENT UNDER SECTION 46(1) OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922.

147. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that a scale of penalties to be inflicted by Income-tax Officers has been prescribed by the Central Board of Revenue for assessees in default in making payment under section 46 (1) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to lay on the Assembly table a copy of the orders issued ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No such instructions have been issued by the Central Board of Revenue. The Income-tax Officer has full discretion under section 46 (1) of the Indian Income-tax Act (XI-22) to fix the penalties in question subject to the statutory maximum.

(b) Does not arise.

MANNER AND PLACE OF ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE ORDERS PASSED BY ASSISTANT COMMISSIONERS OF INCOME-TAX UNDER SECTION 31(3) OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922.

148. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any instructions have been issued to the Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax regarding the manner and place of announcement of the orders passed by them under section 31 (3) of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to lay on the Assembly table a copy of these instructions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No such instructions have been issued by the Central Board of Revenue.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Government issue instructions to that effect ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The issue of instructions is not considered necessary at present by Government.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : What are the reasons why they do not consider the issue of instructions necessary ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Well, Sir, I have said already that Government see no reason to issue any instructions in the matter and I am not prepared at the present moment to discuss the matter with the Honourable Member.

ORDERS UNDER SECTION 31 OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922.

149. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that in Sind orders under section 31 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, are often passed long after the hearing of the appeals, and that they are forwarded to appellants through Income-tax Officers ?

(b) Are Government aware that in a large majority of cases they reach the appellants after the period of one month referred to in section 66 (2) of the Act and that it has not been possible for assessees to seek references to the High Court in proper time ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of cases of such late service in which the Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, has refused to refer to the High Court cases under section 66 (2) of the Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

(d) Is it a fact that the bar of limitation was reckoned from the date of the orders of the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax under section 31 of the Act ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Orders under section 31 are not often passed long after the hearing. The Commissioner noticed in May last that delays were caused by communicating them through Income-tax Officers and ordered that they should be communicated immediately to the parties direct.

(b) The orders are communicated within 30 days after the date on which they are passed in the vast majority of cases.

(c) In 1927-28 one application was rejected as time-barred. The assessee had 17 days in which to make his application after the appeal decision was served on him. None has been rejected as time-barred in 1928-29.

(d) Yes.

ISSUE OF NOTICE TO INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES TO RECEIVE REFUND ORDERS.

150. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if instructions have been issued to Income-tax Officers that they should issue notices to the assessees to receive refund orders of the tax due to them in consequence of orders passed under section 31 or section 27 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative will Government be pleased to place on the Assembly table a copy of the instructions issued to them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No such orders have been issued by the Central Board of Revenue.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will orders be issued ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Honourable Member puts his question in a certain form. If he wanted to know whether orders would be issued by Government in any particular matter he should have framed his question in a different manner which might have given Government an opportunity of considering the point.

ISSUE OF NOTICE TO INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES TO RECEIVE REFUND ORDERS IN CASES IN WHICH THE TAX IS REDUCED OR CANCELLED.

151. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that in a large majority of cases no notice is issued to assessees to receive refund orders in cases in which the tax is reduced or cancelled on appeals under section 31 of the Act or the assessment is re-opened under section 27 of the Act ?

(b) If the reply be in the affirmative do Government propose to issue instructions in this behalf ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The Government have no information. The Central Board of Revenue have called for information on the point and will issue such instructions as may be necessary.

DELAY IN THE PAYMENT OF REFUNDS DUE TO INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES.

152. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Are Government aware that considerable delay occurs in the payment of refunds due to income-tax assessees whose taxes have been reduced or cancelled in consequence of orders under sections 31 and 27 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state showing for each district in Sind, the number of cases in which such delay exceeded thirty days ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) As a general case, no

Name of Circle.	No. of cases of delay over 30 days.
Karachi City, A—Division	.. nil.
Karachi City, B—Division	.. nil.

PENALTY INFLICTED ON INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES IN SIND, FOR DEFAULT IN MAKING PAYMENTS OF THE TAX.

153. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to place on the Assembly table a list showing for each of the years 1922-23 to 1927-28 the number of cases in each Income-tax Officer's charge in Sind, in which penalty has been inflicted in consequence of default in making payments of tax for which less than thirty days for payment were allowed in exercise of the discretion vested in them by section 45 of the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A statement is laid on the table. In no case, however, was the penalty imposed before the expiry of thirty days from the date of the notice demanding payment.

Statement showing for each of the years 1922-23 to 1927-28 the number of cases in each Income-tax Officer's charge in Sind in which penalty has been inflicted in consequence of default in making payments of tax for which less than 30 days for payment were allowed.

SPEECH DELIVERED BY LORD BURNHAM, REGARDING INDIAN MARKETS FOR BRITISH GOODS.

154. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following remarks recently made by Lord Burnham, as President of the Incorporated States Managers' Association of the United Kingdom :

(i) " The incurable modesty of the Government of India is so great as to reach the point of absurdity. It blushes to have good records said about it, and I confess good records are very few and far between. When I stood on the Sutlej Barrage—the work of British Engineers—and saw the water pouring out into Bikaner State, I felt proud of belonging to the country, which has conferred immeasurable benefits on the people of India " ?

(ii) " British manufacturers should do more to expand their trade with the Indian Empire. There was bound to be an increasing demand for luxuries as well as commodities " ?

(iii) " India offered one of the greatest opportunities for Imperial trade " ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : My attention was not drawn to the speech until I saw the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : A supplementary question, Sir. Government's attention has now been drawn to the statement that the Sutlej Barrage is the work of British engineers, and I want to know whether that statement is correct.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not accept any responsibility. I neither deny nor affirm the statement made in the speech.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : That was not my question. My question is whether that statement is correct or not, that the Sutlej Barrage is the work of British engineers. Is it the work of British engineers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that it will be the result of a very admirable piece of collaboration between British and Indian engineers.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask if this statement is not correct, will Government be pleased to write to the gentleman in question that the statement made by him is not correct ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. Government do not consider it incumbent upon them to take any action.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether this is the result of the vacant minds which the members of this Commission were expected to bring to India ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do Government propose to represent to His Majesty's Government the desirability of withdrawing this gentleman from the Simon Commission having regard to the prejudiced views which he has expressed ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that notice of this question was given a long time ago, why did not the Honourable the Home Member try his level best to get a copy of the speech in order to answer the question properly and fairly to the people of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I presumed that the Honourable Member, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, had incorporated in his question all that was pertinent to his enquiry.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do Government propose to communicate to the Secretary of State for India the feelings of this House about the particular gentleman ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already stated that Government do not consider it incumbent upon them to take any action.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government convey to His Majesty's Government the very objectionable nature of the practice of members of the Simon Commission doing propaganda for British trade ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that Lord Burnham came to this country for the purpose of supporting British trade and British luxuries and to see that Indian people are induced to purchase these luxuries from England and that English people are to supply their goods to this country, do Government propose to take steps to stop Lord Burnham going about beating his drum for this purpose ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am unable to accede to the Honourable Member's hypothesis.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does the Honourable Member realise with regard to clause (ii) of this question what Lord Burnham said that British manufacturers should do more to expand their trade with the Indian Empire and that there was bound to be an increasing demand for luxuries as well as other commodities ? Will the Honourable Member put a stop to this as it is detrimental to the interest of India ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : Considering that the Government identifies itself practically with the Simon Commission and arranges for their reception, does not the Government consider it a duty to remove all misapprehensions about the statements which the members of the Commission make in England and in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir ; the members of the Commission are quite capable of speaking for themselves.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Will the Government cease to arrange for their receptions ?

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask if the Govermnent is interested in allowing these false statements to remain unchallenged ?

AMENDMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, SO AS TO ALLOW PERSONS WHO ARE NOT LAWYERS TO BECOME CHIEF JUSTICES OF INDIAN HIGH COURTS.

155. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that a Bill has been introduced in the House of Lords, amending the Government of India Act, the object of which is to throw open the office of Chief Justice of Indian High Courts to persons who are not lawyers ? If so, are they aware of the reason for introducing this innovation ?

(b) Do Government propose to invite Indian public opinion on the subject, before the measure is passed ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The effect of the Bill is to make it clear that persons legally eligible to be puisne judges shall be similarly eligible for the office of Chief Justice.

(b) As the Honourable Member is aware, the text of the Bill was published in this country on June 14th, and since then Government have received information of resolutions by various Bar Associations. They have also received a copy of a resolution passed by a public meeting in Bombay and, as the Honourable Member is aware, notice of a Resolution relating to the Bill has been received for this Session.

No further proceedings on the Bill can in any event be taken till Parliament next meets and there will therefore be full opportunity for opinions with regard to it to be expressed.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact, Sir, that the Government of India during the Viceroyalty of Lord Minto sent a despatch to the Secretary of State, objecting to the appointment of the members of the Indian Civil Service as Chief Justices of Indian High Courts ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware of any such despatch. If the Honourable Member will give me notice, I shall consider whether I can give him a reply.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that there is a great commotion in the country with regard to the appointment of the members of the Indian Civil Service to be Chief Justices, do Government propose—of course I have great respect for the members of the Indian Civil Service—for the benefit of the country, and to satisfy the people that the administration is carried on fairly well, to correspond and consult with the associations and representatives of the people of this country in this House, and ask them whether they approve of the appointment of members of the Civil Service to be Chief Justice of any High Court ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I shall transmit to the proper quarter any expression of opinion on the subject, which I may receive.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Is it or is it not a fact that the first suggestion that the office of Chief Justice should be open to members of the Civil Service came from the Secretary of State for India and the Government of India readily accepted it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think the Honourable Member is aware that I am precluded from referring to matters which are the subject of correspondence with the Secretary of State unless and until the documents are duly published with his consent.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Does the Honourable Member recognise, considering the great importance of the question and the great interest taken in it by the people, that the Indian people have a right to know what is the attitude of the Government of India towards this question ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already stated that there is still ample opportunity. If any one desires to express an opinion on this matter, I shall be pleased to communicate it to the Secretary of State.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to publish the documents relating to the correspondence on the subject between the Government of India and the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. I can give no undertaking on that point.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Is the Government aware that there is a great deal of public opinion on this matter and that it is but fair that the country should know exactly what has passed between the Government of India and the Secretary of State ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I take note of the Honourable Member's statement that there is a great deal of public opinion in the matter. But I did recently see in a nationalist newspaper of wide circulation an emphatic comment on the lack of public interest in the matter.

DEPUTATION OF THE INDIAN POLICE ASSOCIATION TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY.

156. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a deputation of the Imperial Police Association recently submitted a representation to the Government at Simla, regarding the pay, prospects, and other alleged "grievances" of the European Police ? Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of this representation, and the reply thereto ?

(b) Have Government taken any steps, or propose to take any steps on this representation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The facts are as stated by the Honourable Member, except that the deputation represented the Indian Police Service as a whole, and not merely its European members. Government do not consider it necessary to lay on the table any papers on the subject.

(b) The different matters discussed with the deputation are being considered.

LOCATION OF ANOTHER MILITARY FORCE IN NORTH BIHAR ON THE NEPAL FRONTIER.

157. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it in contemplation to locate another military force in North Bihar, on the Nepal Frontier ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that a large tract of land is being acquired near about Ruxaul, District Champaran, for the purpose ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for locating the force in this area ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). No.

(c) Does not arise.

SKEEN MEMORANDUM REGARDING MODERNISATION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

†158. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a memorandum No. 25316|1|S.D.-2 marked "confidential", has been issued by Lieutenant-General Sir Andrew Skeen or by the Army Department, to certain Headquarters Command, in course of which it is stated :

(i) "Owing to the developments that have taken place in foreign armies, and with which we must keep pace, we have now reached a state when the Army in India needs to spend during the next few years a minimum of 8 crores of rupees on the modernisation of armaments, and equipments, in addition to the sum normally available for the purpose" ?

(ii) "The Government of India have recognised that in view of the urgent need for equipping the army on modern lines, the policy of progressive reduction must be temporarily abandoned, and have recently come to an agreement with the Commander-in-Chief on this subject" ?

(b) Do Government propose to place a copy of this memorandum, or any other similar memorandum on the table ; and indicate the kind of agreement arrived at ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 120.

SEARCH BY THE CUSTOMS OFFICIALS AT DOVER OF THE BAGGAGE OF MAULANA MUHAMMAD ALI.

159. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that as soon as Maulana Mohammad Ali landed at Dover, certain persons announcing themselves as custom officials took hold of his belongings, and subjected them to a vigorous search, including even his papers and letters ?

(b) Do Government propose to enquire into this complaint, and find out whether all Europeans and Indians visiting England are subjected to this sort of search ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

(b) The Government of India have not received any complaint and do not propose to make any enquiry. The search of luggage of all passengers arriving at English ports is regularly carried out and does not call for comment.

WEEKLY MAIL AIR SERVICE FROM LONDON TO INDIA.

160. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that it is proposed to enter into an agreement with the Imperial Airways, Ltd., to organise a weekly mail service from London to India, and to grant a subsidy for the purpose ?

(b) What is the annual amount of subsidy agreed upon, and when is the weekly service likely to come into existence ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) No. The Government of India are considering the question of establishing an air mail route in India itself, but they have not been conducting negotiations for this purpose with any company, and do not intend to make any agreement of this kind without calling for tenders.

(b) Does not arise.

DUTCH AIR SERVICE TO BATAVIA, via INDIA.

161. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware of any official proposals of the Netherland's authorities for a Dutch Air Service to Batavia, viâ India ? And have the Government agreed to this proposal ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The Government of India have received no official proposals for a regular service and in consequence no question of agreeing to such a service has arisen. They have been informed that a Dutch Company proposes to organise trial flights, via India between Holland and the Dutch East Indies in 1929.

SEPARATION OF THE ASSEMBLY OFFICE FROM THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

162. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Do Government propose to lay on the table a copy of the scheme put up by Honourable the President of this House, regarding the separation of the Assembly Office from the Legislative Department of the Government ?

(b) When is the proposal likely to come into effect ; and what is the additional annual expenditure, if any, involved ?

Mr. President : With regard to this question, I may inform the Honourable Member that I propose to make a full statement on the separation scheme to-day after questions, and the Honourable Member had better wait till I make the statement.

NOTICE ISSUED BY THE PASSPORT OFFICER, SINGAPORE, REGARDING PASSPORTS FOR INDIANS WISHING TO TRAVEL TO NON-BRITISH TERRITORY AFTER THEIR ARRIVAL IN MALAYA.

163. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the following notice has been issued by the Passport Officer, Singapore :

"As from the 1st September, 1928, no emergency certificate of nationality will be issued to British subjects or non-British subjects for travel to any non-British territory, all British subjects, more specially Indians, who intend to travel to other places, after their arrival in Malaya, should obtain passports in their country of origin, as the Malayan Passport Offices will not issue passports to persons, who are not domiciled in Malaya, without previous reference to their country of origin" ?

(b) Do Government propose to enquire into the matter ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes.

(b) No enquiry is necessary, the position is simply this. As a special concession, Indians travelling between India and Malaya are exempt from passports. In the case of Indians, therefore, prior notice is doubly necessary that those who desire to travel beyond Malaya should forearm themselves with passports in their own country.

VISIT OF DR. SUDHINDRA BOSE TO INDIA.

164. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that Dr. Sudhindra Bose has been given a passport on condition that he should stay in India for not more than six months, and that he would not engage in any political activities ? If so, why this restriction ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The visa on Dr. Bose's passport was for a visit of six months only. The Government of India are not aware that any other condition was imposed. The restriction was imposed because Dr. Bose's past record was considered doubtful.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House for the information of Honourable Members here the past record of Dr. Bose, to which the Honourable Member just referred ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not in personal possession of any very close record of Dr. Bose's past ; but I would inform the Honourable gentleman that Dr. Bose renounced British Indian nationality a few weeks after the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know why the Honourable Member has made a statement which he is not prepared to substantiate on the floor of the House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not admit that I am not prepared to substantiate it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Honourable Member has just said that he does not personally know the record of Dr. Bose.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I pointed out that the reason for the restriction on the visa was because Dr. Bose's past record was considered doubtful and I have given a relevant fact which is a reason for leading to that conclusion.

Pundit Motilal Nehru : Is that the whole record ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. But the point, I think, is sufficient to establish what I have stated in my reply.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Is it not a fact that when Dr. Bose renounced his British Indian nationality, it was about the time when there was quite an agitation in America about Indians settled in America that they could not belong to British Indian nationality as well as to American nationality at one and the same time, and therefore he had to make a choice and not because of anything to do with the war ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware what Dr. Bose's motives were ; I am merely reciting the facts.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I am not concerned with the motives at all ; I am mentioning a fact and I want Government to investigate that fact, that Dr. Bose could not be at one and the same time an American citizen and a British Indian citizen and he had no choice ; but is it not open to Dr. Bose to resume his British Indian nationality and to come and settle in this country if he so chooses ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : As Dr. Bose had been given a passport to stay in India for not more than six months on condition that he would not engage himself in any political activities, will Government be pleased to say if he will be allowed to stay in this country for a longer period if some respectable people come forward and give an undertaking that he will behave himself properly ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If Dr. Bose proposes to return to India the conditions under which he may return will be considered in due course.

Mr. K. Ahmed : If Dr. Bose or any of his friends write a letter to the Government of India asking that his case may be dealt with fairly and properly, so that he may return to his own country and stay here permanently, will Government be pleased to consider the matter favourably ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir. I can assure the Honourable Member that his case will be dealt with properly and fairly.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Is it a fact that Dr. Bose has asked for an unrestricted visa to enable him to visit India whenever he desired and permission, if he chooses, to settle down here permanently ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that the reply I have already made substantially meets the Honourable Member's inquiry, which is, that if Dr. Bose desires to return to India the whole case will be very carefully considered.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Has any reply been given to that effect to Dr. Bose ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must ask for notice of that question.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS AS PROBATIONARY SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

77. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim: With reference to starred question No. 6 asked by Mr. Abdul Haye on the 18th August, 1927, will Government be pleased to state why the Government orders regarding the reservation of the one-third vacancies for Mussalmans were not observed in filling up the 6 posts of the Probationary Superintendents of Post Offices ? Will the Government be pleased to state how many appointments of Probationary Superintendents of Post Offices were made from 1st April, 1927 to 1st May, 1928, and how many of them were Mussalmans ? Was the loss suffered by the Mussalman community in filling up the 6 posts from August 1925 to April 1927 borne in mind while filling up the subsequent vacancies ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : There are no Government orders reserving one-third of the vacancies for Mussalmans.

Five appointments of Probationary Superintendents were made between the 1st April, 1927, and the 1st May, 1928. Two of these went to members of the Muslim community.

The orders of Government relating to the adjustment of communal inequalities are always kept in mind when vacancies are filled by direct recruitment.

GAZETTING OF THE POSTS OF ALL POSTMASTERS IN DISTRICT TOWNS AND SUB-DIVISIONAL HEADQUARTERS.

79. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Do Government propose to raise the posts of all Postmasters in District towns and Sub-Divisional Headquarters to gazetted Postmasters in order to improve their social and official position ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The reply is in the negative.

PAY WHILE ON LEAVE OF NON-GAZETTED OFFICERS AND CLERKS OF THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

80. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : With reference to the Government reply to the question of Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava regarding pay while on leave of non-gazetted officers and clerks of the Postal Department are Government aware that the non-gazetted officers and clerks whose pay was less than Rs. 300 and who held a permanent post on the 8th October 1924 suffered loss by the alterations in the rule ? If so, do Government propose to cancel the first alteration in order to redress the grievances of those officials who had a permanent post on the 8th October 1924 ? If not, why ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The Government realise the effect of the alterations. Fundamental Rule No. 87 was intended only to safeguard to the officers concerned a special concession previously allowed to them by article 340 (c) of the Civil Service Regulations. By an error in drafting, however, the Fundamental Rule originally went further than this and introduced a new undesigned additional concession. The alterations now in question were necessary to correct this error. In (b) Is it a fact that candidate clerk Yahia Zaman in the Bhagalpur Division was removed and subsequently recruited in the Monghyr Division ? Is it a fact immediately after his recruitment as a candidate in the Monghyr Division M. Yahia Zaman was deputed for training in telegraphy in supersession of the claims of other candidates senior to him ? Is it a fact that M. Yahia Zaman alone was examined instead of all the candidates being examined when the test papers of likely candidates were called for by the Postmaster General of the Bihar and Orisa Postal Circle ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) 5 and 4. 6 went to Hindus and 2 to Muhammadans.

(b) (i) Yes.

(ii) There was no supersession, Mr. Yahia Zaman was the second candidate on the list and was selected because the first was not willing to learn telegraphy.

(iii) As Mr. Yahia was the candidate selected by the Divisional Superintendent for telegraph training the Postmaster-General called for his dictation papers for scrutiny. As he was the senior candidate willing to undertake telegraph training, the question of calling for the papers of other candidates did not arise.

RECRUITMENT OF NON-MATRICULATES AS CLERKS IN THE PATNA DIVISION OF THE BIHAR AND ORISSA POSTAL CIRCLE.

127. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that non-matriculates are recruited as candidates for clerkships in the Patna Division of the Bihar and Orissa Postal Circle ? If so, why ? How many such candidates have been taken in since 1926 up to 30th June 1928 ? Is it a fact that the Patna Division is comparatively backward in education ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Non-matriculates are not ordinarily recruited as candidates in the Patna Division. A few exceptions to the rule were made with the previous sanction of the Postmaster-General. From June 1926 up to June 30th, 1928, five such candidates were taken, out of a total of 27 appointments made. As regards the educational condition of the Patna Division the Government of India are not in a position to make comparisons and I suggest that the question might more suitably be asked in the Provincial Council.

INADEQUACY OF THE PAY AND PROSPECTS OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

128. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that there is much discontent amongst the Superintendents of Post Offices, regarding the inadequacy of their pay and prospects ? If so, what remedial measures are proposed to be taken in the matter ?

REVISION OF THE PAY OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

129. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the revision of pay of Superintendents of Post Offices sanctioned in their letter No. 11-P.T.E., dated the 15th March 1926, from the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Industries and Labour, to the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs, India, did not satisfy the demands made by them from time to time since 1921 and that the Postal Officers' Association expressed dissatisfaction and declared the revision disappointing by a telegram, dated the 20th March, 1926, to the Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour ? If so, what action have Government taken in the matter ?

REVISION OF THE PAY OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

130. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the revision of pay of Superintendents of Post Offices sanctioned in 1926 has benefited a very small number of such officers and that the majority of them stand where they were before ? What do they propose to do for benefiting the latter ?

EFFECT OF THE REVISION OF THE PAY OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

131. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a statement in the following form ? :

Total number of Superintendents of Post Offices on the 1st April 1926.	Effect of revision of 1926.
	No. of officers receiving Rs. 50 by the revision.	No. of officers receiving Rs. 20 by the revision.	No. of officers receiving Rs. 5 by the revision.

ANNUAL INCREMENTS OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

132. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that in the case of the first class Postmasters the rate of annual increment is Rs. 30 whereas in the case of Superintendents of Post Offices it is Rs. 20 up to a certain stage and then Rs. 25 ? If so, why this differential treatment specially when the latter have to tour about in one or more districts which the former have not to do ? Do the Government propose to remove this anomaly ?

FREE QUARTERS, FREE CONVEYANCE, ETC., FOR SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

133. Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that first class Postmasters have certain amenities of life, namely, free quarters, free conveyance, etc., and that these amenities are not given to Superintendents of Post Offices ? Is it a fact that the former have a higher start (Rs. 350) than the latter (Rs. 300) ? If so, do they propose to remove this anomaly ?

DAILY ALLOWANCES OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

134. *Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that Superintendents of Post Offices in spite of being classed as first class officers get Rs. 4 per diem allowance instead of Rs. 5 allowed to first class officers of other Departments ? If so, do they propose to revise the amount to make it commensurate with their position ?

COUNTING TOWARDS INCREMENTS OF OFFICIATING SERVICES OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

135. *Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the officiating services of certain Superintendents of Post Offices before their confirmation as such were not counted towards increment of pay and that such officers memorialised the Honourable Member for Industries in October 1926 ? If so, how does their case stand at present ? Why are the final orders delayed in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : With your permission, Sir, I will deal together with questions Nos. 128 to 135 inclusive, as these are identical with unstarred questions numbers 428 to 434 and 436 already asked by Kumar Ganganand Sinha on the 21st March, 1928. I would refer the Honourable Member to the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra's replies given on that date to those questions. A copy of the statement already furnished to the previous questioner in reply to his question No. 431 will now be forwarded to the Honourable Member for his information.

NAMES AND NATIONALITIES OF PROBATIONARY SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES IN THE BIHAR AND ORISSA POSTAL CIRCLE.

136. *Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to give the names and nationalities of the Superintendents of Post Offices appointed in the Bihar and Orissa Postal Circle since its creation in 1924 ?

(b) Is it a fact that of the ten appointments in the rank of Superintendents in the said Postal Circle as many as seven went to non-Biharees and that in making several of these appointments the Postmaster General was not consulted at all though the rules require nomination by the Postmaster General before a candidate is appointed ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Presumably the Honourable Member refers to the appointments of Probationary Superintendents. A statement showing the names and nationalities of ten Probationary Superintendents who were attached to the Bihar and Orissa Circle for the purpose of training, will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

(b) Of the ten Probationary Superintendents, 3 belong to the Province of Bihar and Orissa. The rules do not require nomination by the Postmaster-General.

EXCESSIVE NUMBER OF MUHAMMADAN SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

137. *Raja Raghunandan Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that out of the total strength of twelve posts of Superintendents in the Bihar and Orissa Postal Circle, there are five Muhammadans against seven Hindus and that out of these seven Hindus only two are Biharees ?

(b) What is the proportion of the Hindus to the Muhammadans in Bihar and Orissa ?

(c) If the proportion of Hindus in Bihar and Orissa be much higher than the proportion of their representation in the ranks of Superintendents of Post Offices, how do the Government justify the latter ? Do they propose to stop the appointment of Muhammadans to Superintendentships for sometime till the disparity is made up ?

(d) Is it a fact that ever since the establishment of the Postal Administration in India only two Biharee Hindus have been appointed Superintendents of Post Offices ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Of the 12 Superintendents of Post Offices attached to the Bihar and Orissa Circle, 4 are Muhammadans, 1 is an Anglo-Indian and 7 are Hindus, of whom 2 are Bihari Hindus.

(b) Approximately 8 to 1.

(c) Superintendents of Post Offices belong to an All-India cadre for which recruitment is made in accordance with the general orders of the Government of India regarding representation of different communities. Their posting is not made on communal considerations. Government do not propose to take the action suggested by the Honourable Member.

(d) The information is not available.

SEPARATE OFFICE FOR THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Mr. President : With the permission of the House, I desire to make a statement on the question of setting up a separate and independent department for the Assembly.

12 Noon.

As an elected President, I am responsible to the Assembly and to no other authority. No President can afford to ignore or withstand the wishes of the House, either expressed or implied. It is no doubt true that he wields large controlling powers, and his rulings on points of order and procedure must be accepted as final, at least for the time being ; but it is to be remembered that, after all, the will he imposes upon the House is not his personal will, but it is the law of the House itself ; and in all that the President does he is naturally restrained by a desire to have his action fully endorsed by the House as a whole. In fact, the ruling motive in his mind always is to act fairly between all Parties and to give satisfaction all round. Since I assumed charge of this office, I have found the Assembly and its President labouring under a serious handicap in two essential particulars, and this makes smooth and satisfactory working of the legislative machinery very difficult. The President is an impartial interpreter and administrator of the rules of the House, but these rules are not made by it, nor has it the power to amend them to suit its requirements. They are amended from time to time by the Governor General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State, and neither the Assembly nor its President has any right even to be consulted. In the interpretation of the rules, the President has to rely on the advice of the Secretary of the Assembly, and in the administration thereof by the office he has to rely on the efficiency, independence and reliability of the staff and the Secretary. Every Member of the House has in the discharge of his duties to deal both with the Secretary and his staff, and if he fails to get satisfaction, the fault is naturally laid at the door of the President, who is supposed to be the controlling authority. It goes without saying that if the business of the House is to be carried on to its satisfaction, the Secretary and the staff must in some form be responsible to the House and its President, and not be subordinate to any outside authority. The President must feel that he is getting independent and impartial advice from the Secretary; the Secretary and the staff must also feel that they are there solely to serve and further the best interests of the Assembly.

As matters stand at present, the Secretary of the Assembly owes no allegiance to it or to the President; he is for all practical purposes responsible to the Governor General in Council. In every question at issue between the Government and the representatives of the people, he is bound to identify himself with Government. He is invariably nominated a Member of the House and, as such, he joins a Party, votes with them, works for them, and is one of them. Neither the Assembly nor its President has any authority over him and can, therefore, in any way control his conduct in any matter connected with the Assembly. The President cannot in the nature of things, therefore, regard the advice of the Secretary in connection with the business of the Assembly as coming from a wholly impartial, unbiassed and independent source, and it is natural for the same reason that the Assembly should desire radical reform in the present state of things. I am glad to be able to say in this connection that His Excellency the Viceroy has, at my request, discontinued the practice of nominating the Secretary as a Member of the Assembly from this Session. But this, as the House will understand, is merely a palliative and the root cause of the trouble remains unaffected.

As regards the staff, I will only make one observation. My experience is that they feel difficulty in approaching the President freely, or in seeking his advice in the discharge of their duties lest, by doing so they should run the risk of offending their official superiors to whom they are subordinate. If, therefore, the Honourable Members have not received the facilities, convenience, guidance and assistance they are entitled to for the proper discharge of their duties, I want them to believe me when I say that it is not due to any want of will on the part of the President, but to the limitations and handicaps in his way. I know that the President could be more helpful to the House if the House had the power to amend its own rules of business, but this is out of the question under the present constitution. But even under existing circumstances, he could give more facilities and convenience to Honourable Members and otherwise be of greater help to them if the Secretary of the Assembly was, in fact, such Secretary, and the office of the Assembly was independent and unconnected with the Government of India. Apart from these considerations, the very idea that the Secretary of the Assembly should be occupying a position of subordination not to the House but to an outside authority is in itself, to say the least, analogous.

It did not take me long to realise all this after I assumed charge of the office in August 1925. The Presidents' Conference, which met in the following January, passed at my instance a resolution advocating the creation of a separate office for the Assembly, quite independent and unconnected with Government. I communicated that resolution to the Government of India for favourable consideration and action. No reply was forthcoming to my communication, and I waited for more than a year in the hope that Government would take some definite action in the matter. I then prepared and forwarded to them in September last a detailed scheme embodying concrete proposals for setting up a separate department or office for the Legislative Assembly. The most essential demands contained in the scheme were three :

(1) That the Assembly office should be separated from the Legislative Department of the Government of India, and be treated as an independent department and not merely as an office attached to any department of Government.

(2) That its principal officers and establishment should be under the control of the Assembly through its President.

(3) That the financial proposals of the new department should be included in the annual budget without any scrutiny by the Finance Department, the Assembly to be the final judge as to whether the proposed expenditure was necessary.

It was known to Government that I was very anxious to put the scheme through as soon as possible and had, therefore, expected that Government would treat my communication as urgent and deal with it accordingly. But I heard nothing from them till about the middle of April following. In his letter, dated 16th April, the Secretary of the Legislative Department informed me that the Government of India had reached certain provisional conclusions on my scheme, and that His Excellency the Viceroy would be glad to know my views on them. When I left Delhi in March last, I had personally explained to His Excellency that I did not know how the Government were going to deal with my scheme, but it was necessary that the President of the Assembly and the Government should be in agreement before any Despatch was sent to the Secretary of State, and for that purpose I should have an opportunity of discussing the matter with him at some stage.

The Government of India found themselves unable to accept the essential demands contained in my scheme. They were of opinion that the Assembly office must be an office attached to one of the existing departments of Government, and not be an independent office or department, their Legal Expert having advised them that the requirements of the constitution demanded that it should be linked with the Imperial Secretariat. I am unable to agree with this view of their Expert; but, even so, there is nothing to prevent the Government from including the new department in the portfolio of the Governor General, and by convention to allow it to function independently of the Government as has been done to some extent by the Punjab Government in connection with the Council Department of the Punjab Legislature.

With regard to the second demand, the Government of India were of opinion that, in order that the Secretary and the establishment could act efficiently and fearlessly, neither the President nor the Leader of the

House should have any control over them. I fail to understand how they propose to bring this about. What is to happen to the power of punishment, suspension and dismissal now vested in the Governor General in Council ? If these powers are not to be transferred to the Assembly and its President under the new arrangement, they must and will remain with the Governor General in Council. In that case the separation of the office has no meaning, and it is not worth having. As for the third demand in the scheme, I have been unable to understand or appreciate the reason given by Government for its rejection.

In reply to the Secretary's letter informing me of these provisional conclusions of the Government on my scheme, I wrote back to say that I would go to Simla and discuss the whole question with His Excellency, pointing out at the same time that it was difficult for me to understand how the President was to run the show if he was to have no control whatever over the officers and the establishment of the new department. I accordingly did so, and had two interviews with His Excellency. At the second interview, when the question was gone into somewhat more thoroughly, the Secretary was also present. I regret to say, however, that after conversation and correspondence no agreement was found possible.

Let me now, for the information of the House, outline the main points on which Government should, in my opinion, agree if the Assembly department is to be given a substantial measure of independence of the Government of India. They are :

(1) If the Government of India maintain that they have no power to create a department to function independently, let the new department be included in the portfolio of the Governor General with a view to meet the technical legal objections raised by the Legal Expert of the Government of India.

(2) That the principal officers of the department should be appointed by the Governor General on the recommendation of the President.

(3) That these officers can be dismissed, or otherwise punished, on an address by the Assembly to the Governor General to that effect.

(4) That the members of the establishment should be appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Secretary.

(5) That they can be dismissed or otherwise punished by the President in consultation with the Secretary.

(6) That the financial proposals of the department prepared by the Secretary and countersigned by the President should be included in the annual financial statement as a matter of course, and it should be left to the Assembly to make such modifications in them as they think proper.

I have no doubt whatever that without any amendment of the Government of India Act it is permissible to establish a separate department of the Assembly on the lines indicated above, either by convention or by necessary delegation in that behalf, if the Government choose to do so. I do not feel sorry, however, that negotiations have fallen through because the Assembly thereby get an opportunity to express its considered opinion on the points in dispute between me and the Government. May I, therefore, hope that the House would before this Session terminates discuss the whole question in all its aspects and record their own conclusions. I do not know if Government would be prepared to treat this business as official, or, at any rate, give a Government date for its discussion. If they are not so prepared, I would request His Excellency, indeed, I have already requested him, to allow non-official time for the purpose.

Before I close, I should refer to two or three matters arising out of the correspondence I had with Government in connection with the scheme :

(1) Government seem to contend that the Clerk of the House of Commons and his establishment are immune from the control of the House as well as the Speaker. This is, in my opinion, a mistaken view. The Clerk and other principal officers of the House are liable to dismissal on an address by the House to the Crown and the numbers of the staff, the right of regulating salaries, pensions, retiring allowances and fixing the age of retirement, &c., are regulated and determined by a Commission with the Speaker as Chairman. The Speaker has also the right to require the dismissal of any member of the establishment. These are some of the methods by which the House and the Speaker exercise control over the department, and the measure of independence that they enjoy is secured to them by the House itself and can be taken away by the House at any time. Conditions in India are different, and the Legislatures are endeavouring to evolve a system of separate and independent offices in their own way.

(2) In spite of the fact that no agreement has been reached between the President and the Government on the principles underlying my scheme, a Despatch has already been sent to the Secretary of State. I should have thought that the Government of India would have referred the points in dispute between them and the President to this House and, in fact, I had pointed out to them that if they sent a Despatch without affording an opportunity to the House to express its views, the House was bound to resent such action very strongly.

(3) I will add one word more before I close. I regret I am not in a position to inform the House how far the provisional conclusions of the Government of India communicated to me by the Secretary in April last have been subsequently modified. I asked for a copy of the Despatch to enable me to know what exactly the final attitude of Government was in this matter, but the Government of India found themselves unable to comply with my request.

I apologise for the length of this statement. The importance of the subject is my only excuse.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is this not an occasion, Sir, for the President to resign and take his vacant place on the Opposition front benches ?

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, in view of the difficulty created by Government....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Standing Orders and Rules are quite clear that no questions can be addressed to the President.

Mr. K. Ahmed: I am not putting any question to the President. I ask whether the Government of India Act, 1919, should not have been satisfied before the report was introduced.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. President, I have listened with close attention to the communication which you have just made to the House, and after consideration I shall, with your permission, take the earliest possible opportunity—I hope to-morrow—to make myself a statement explaining the position of the Government.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces: Non-Muhammadan Urban) : May I ask if the Honourable Member will be prepared to lay the Despatch which the Government have addressed to the Secretary of State also on the table of the House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. I regret that for the reasons—on the part of the Government of India referred to in Mr. President's statement—I shall be unable to lay the Despatch on the table.

(Some Honourable Members rose to address the House.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has promised to make a considered statement to-morrow and the Honourable Members had better wait till he makes the statement.

PETITIONS RELATING TO THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS BILL.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, under Standing Order 78 I beg to present 208 petitions signed by 15,249 members of the Bar as per statement also on the table relating to the Bill to regulate and improve Law Reports which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 1st February, 1927.

RESOLUTION RE THE CABLE AND WIRELESS BEAM MERGER.

Mr. K. C. Roy : (Bengal: Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :

" That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to lay on the table all correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Government of India relating to the cable and the wireless beam merger scheme, certain conclusions of which were recently announced both in London and in India ".

Mr. K. Ahmed : (Rajshahi Division: Muhammadan Rural): In Simla, you mean ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : I am extremely sorry that my Honourable friend Haji Chaudhuri Mohammad Ismail Khan is not in his place. Otherwise, he would have moved the Resolution of his own, relating to greater facilities for the education of girls in the centrally administered areas, and the Resolution would have appealed to the chivalry and good-sense of the House. My Resolution is of a purely technical character, but is of the most national importance to India. India occupies a unique place in the British Empire. It is the central link of all Imperial enterprises ; it is the central link in Imperial airways ; it is the central link in Imperial wireless communications. I, therefore, make no apology, Sir, for bringing this matter to the notice of the House. Honourable Members of this House are fully aware that for the last 25 years His Majesty's Government have been busy in developing wireless communications and the culmination of their efforts was reached in 1923 when His Majesty's Government undertook to construct the Rugby beam station. The House is no doubt aware that it is one of the most powerful stations in the world,—I believe it is second to none. The station was recently visited by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The station was also visited by many distinguished Indians who had been to England in recent years. When this big station was thrown open to traffic, the competition became very keen between the beam and the cable companies. So keen was the competition that the magnates of the cable companies saw their way at once to reduce the cable rates between England and India and other parts of the Empire. But, Sir, the matter did not end there. The war of rates and speed continued and the British Government was approached by the cable companies and the cable magnates with a view to arriving at a modus vivendi. Early this year His Majesty's Government convened a Conference under the presidency of Sir John Gilmour to find out the best way of meeting the wishes of the cable magnates. The purpose of the Conference, Sir, was :

" to examine the situation which has arisen as a result of the competition of the Beam Wireless with the Cable Services, to report thereon, and to make recommendations with a view to a common policy being adopted by the various Governments concerned ".

To this Conference all the Dominions were invited, and so was India. The Conference has now reported, and I have got a copy of its report in my hand. It is one of the most intricate documents that I have ever seen. I could hardly make anything out of it. In this document, Sir, India is mentioned in four places. The first is on the title page where it is stated that Sir Atul Chatterjee represented India ; secondly, Sir, it is stated that there is such a thing as the Indian Radio Telegraph Company; in the third place, the Government of India have an institution called the Indo-European Telegraph Department, and in the fourth place—and this is the most important of all—India is the biggest consumer of wireless beam service. I shall make a few comments on these four points.

More than once, Sir, this House has raised the question about the representation of India at these Imperial Conferences. On this particular one, the delegation on behalf of India consisted of Sir Atul Chatterjee and two telegraph experts. Sir Atul Chatterjee is known to every Member of this House. I yield to none in my respect for him. But at the same time I feel that in a Conference of this sort which combined politics and business, he was not a proper representative. In my own opinion, the Government of India should have sent a delegation composed on the same basis as those of other Dominions and the British Government. They ought to have sent a representative of the people based upon elective qualifications and not a brown sun-dried bureaucrat.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is this not an occasion, Sir, for the President to resign and take his vacant place on the Opposition front benches ?

They ought to have sent a representative of the people based upon elective qualifications and not a brown sun-dried bureaucrat.

[Mr. K. C. Roy.]

The second point I come to is the Indian Radio Telegraph Company. Members are aware that this Company is a Bombay Company. Much was made, Sir, when this Company was first started. Sir Narasimha Sarma was then a Member of Government. I was told that it was going to be a rupee company with an Indian directorate. I was myself opposed to the scheme. I was for its being State-owned and State-worked. I made representation to Sir Narasimha Sarma. But, Sir, what is the position to-day ? If the London Times is correct—I have always believed that the news of the London Times is invariably correct—the control of this Company has passed into the hands of the British Marconi Company. I should like to have an answer from Mr. McWatters on this point. We do not also know the extent of the liability which this Conference has imposed upon this country. Possibly, Mr. McWatters will be able to enlighten us on this point.

The third point is the Eastern Telegraph Company. This is a very old story. This was subjected to the utmost scrutiny by the Incheape Committee to whose report my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas contributed a notable minute. All I should like to say on this is this, that although this question has been pending for the last 7 to 8 years, no conclusion seems to have been reached by this Conference.

My last point, Sir, is the most important one, and that is, India is the biggest consumer of wireless service. I shall give the figures as given by this Conference. The House will be surprised to note India's position in this matter. From March to May Canada took 6 million words, the Australian service 9 millions, the South African service 9 millions, the Indian service 10½ millions. Those who sneer at us, those who are not willing to meet us half-way in politics, will realise the vast political importance of India and the part which India plays in this Imperial game.

I come now to certain recommendations made by this Merger Committee. Before I do so I wish to make one remark, and it is this. As far as I can understand—I am a novice in finance—the British Government is out to make money. The Australian Government is out to make money. But what is the position of India ? India has been paying subsidies to cable companies. It was nearly Rs. 2,90,000 when Lord Incheape reported. Since then it has been reduced. But we must get something out of this new transaction and not continue to pay subsidies to these cable companies Now, Sir, I come to some of the principal recommendations of this Conference. The first and foremost recommendation is the formation of a Merger Company. All the cable companies and the Marconi Wireless are merged in a single company. Part of this was done when the Conference was in session and practically this forced the hands of the Conference to come to an agreement with the cable companies. I do not know what our delegate Sir Atul Chatterjee said about it, or how he liked it. I do not know the views which he expressed on this merger. But we want to find out whether we in India have any interest in this Merger Company. And then, Sir, it is not the habit of the British Government to have only one company. They are firm believers in company promotion, because there are no less than 80 members representing the British Federation of Industries in the House of Commons. So they promoted a company called the Communication Company. They were interested in this Communication Company. But what is our interest in it ? The third one is the most important one from our point of view, and that is the formation of an Advisory Board. This is an Advisory Board which is supposed to protect the interests of the consumers because it will be the ultimate authority in fixing the rates. Is India going to be represented on it, and, if so, how many seats are you going to have on it ? There are only two countries which approximate to India in the consumption of wireless beam services, and they are Australia and Canada. India is the biggest consumer and we ought to have our representation on this Advisory Board in proportion to our interests as the biggest consumer. I will only deal with one small point and that is the position to be taken up by the Dominions and His Majesty's Government when there is trouble or a crisis. Provision has been made in the contract that the Army will assume the responsibility of these wireless posts in times of trouble. Well, what is our position ? Will the Government of India receive orders from His Majesty's Government as to how to take possession of these wireless posts and use them for Imperial and military purposes, or is India going to have the same status in respect of these wireless institutions as the Dominions of His Majesty's Empire ? Unless Dominion status is conceded to us in this respect now and here, I think the Government of India should not be a signatory to this new arrangement.

One word more. Sir John Gilmour, the Secretary of State for Scotland, who presided over this transaction, a shrewd Scotchman who managed one of the biggest deals that the British Government has done in recent years, announced in the House of Commons that no decision would be taken on any of the recommendations of this Conference, unless the Dominions and India had been consulted. I therefore ask my Honourable friend to lay the papers on the table of the House in order that he may take the sense of the House and then give the consent of the Government to the new conditions to be imposed upon the British Empire by these Merger Companies. After reading the report carefully, I may say that I am not at all satisfied that the Indian interests have been protected. I should like to ask the House to take the lead of South Africa. South Africa has made reservations, has made definite reservations. Both the delegates of South Africa and the Government of South Africa have made reservations as far as I can understand from this book, and I think the House will do well to make reservations till they are satisfied with the national and financial aspects of the problem.

Sir, I commend my Resolution to the acceptance of the House.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural): When I was travelling up this morning from Kalka I came across an interesting advertisement in a journal under the heading that business has no politics. It proclaimed the superior merits of a particular British brand of confectionery which is alleged to have a world-wide market. But, Sir, if anybody knows how to combine business with politics, certainly the Britishers do, and the present is an instance in point. The real fact, as has been stated by Mr. Roy, is that when the beam service entered into competition with the cable services the profits of the cable services began to dwindle down. This is expressly stated in the report to which he has made reference. I will just quote a few sentences from the report on this point.

"Before the opening of the Beam services, the cables were working with a large margin of annual surplus, and there is evidence that the introduction of cheaper rates has already led to an appreciable increase in the total volume of telegraph traffic. But in spite of this it has been represented to us that the cable undertakings affected by the wireless rate reductions and the Indo-European land-line service have been brought to a serious position by the two-fold reduction in their receipts resulting from the operation of the lower rates introduced as a means of countering Beam competition and also from the loss of a considerable volume of traffic to the Beam services ".

When the position came to the knowledge of the British people, they began to contrive some measure to counter the effect. It may be that very influential people are financially interested in the cable services. It may be—I do not know—Ministers of Government, Secretaries of State, ex-Viceroys even, may have something to do with the cable companies. It is no wonder, therefore, that that blessed word " Empire " was brought into requisition and an Imperial assembly was called and our good old friend, Sir Atul Chatterjee was there to represent India.....

Mr. B. Das : (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : To represent the Government of India and not India.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Now, Sir, I have the highest regard for our present High Commissioner, and I will not say anything that might in any way mean any reflection on him. But, Sir, we know his limitations, and before we can hold him responsible for anything done in this matter, we ought to have the terms of the instructions which the Government had sent him in connection with this Conference. It may be that he was absolutely helpless in the matter. If the Government do not really desire to conform to the views of the people as formulated in this House, well, it hardly matters whether India is represented by a Chatterjee or by a Lord Cushendum.—I would really be obliged to any Honourable Member who would give me the correct spelling of the name of that noble Lord who represented, very appropriately represented, India at a recent International Conference, (An Honourable Member : " Lord Cushendun.")—because that noble Lord put his signature to the Kellogg pact plighting his word that I and my descendants will never engage in any future war. Now, Sir, as I said, it matters very little whether a Cushendun or a Chatterjee represents India at these farcical Imperial or International Conferences where India's name is unnecessarily dragged in. I want the Government to be a little more honest. What do they mean by trotting out the name of India on these occasions unless they send somebody who can be acknowledged in this House to truly voice the feelings and sentiments of Indians? I should like to know exactly what the instructions of the Government of India were, and what the reasons were that led the so-called representative of India to affix his signature to a most fantastic report which frankly seeks to establish "predominant British control"—I am quoting the words from the report itself—predominant British control on what is called the merger scheme. I do hope that the Government will be a little more decent in their dealings on such occasions in future. In these words, I strongly support the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Roy.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : (Nominated Labour Interests): I wish only to add a few words to what has been said by my Honourable friends Mr. Roy and Mr. Neogy. It is necessary that the Government of India should tell us what attitude they have taken in this matter. We also want to know whether the Government of India have done their best to protect Indian interests. Unfortunately, the Government of India in the past have several times failed to protect Indian interests. They failed to do so the British Government made a contract with the Imperial Airways Company. That contract was made without the knowledge of the Government of India and without the Government of India having an opportunity to safeguard Indian interests. I do not know what is the real object of this merger. My Honourable friend Mr. Neogy said that the present scheme was intended to safeguard the British domination. Well, Sir, I know one thing and that is that they do want to safeguard the British domination at least in competition with another nation, namely, the United States of America. There is at present keen competition between the United States and the British Government for getting control over the communications of the world, and by this merger the British Government want to keep the control in their hands. I do not care whether the British people control the communications of the world or the people of the United States do. What I care about is that the interests of India should be safeguarded. In India we do not believe in transferring our communications to private agencies. We must therefore see that all the machinery that we have for maintaining communications shall not be in private hands and shall not be transferred to any merger or private companies. We are anxious that the communications with India and in India shall always remain under public control and shall not be in private control. There is no doubt, as my friend Mr. Neogy has said, that the object of this merger is to profit certain capitalists in Great Britain. This was shown very clearly by the fact that the shares of these companies went up tremendously as soon as it was announced in Great Britain that the Government had approved of this merger. It was quite clear that these companies were not making as much profit as they wanted to, and, as soon as it was found out that the scheme for merger would be sanctioned, the prices of the shares went up. These are some of the points on which we want information from Government. We are anxious, in the first place, that communications with India should not pass into the hands of private companies. We are also anxious that we should not sacrifice Indian interests in order that Great Britain should succeed in its competition with the United States in controlling the communications of the world and that her capitalists should make huge profits.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : Sir, I want to offer a few remarks on this question of merger from the point of view of the Indian consumer. As Mr. Roy has pointed out, India is one of the largest consumers of the beam service. We have some sort of a feeling that in this Imperial Wireless and Cable Conference the interests of the Indian consumers have been sacrificed in order to give a new lease of life to the Cable Company and swell the dividend of the Communication Company that will arise out of the merger scheme. I shall explain how. At present the cable rate to India is 1*s*. 5*d*. per word ; by the beam service it is 1*s*. 1*d*. Before the introduction of this beam service the cable rate was 1*s*. 8*d*. When we remember that about 9½ million words are transmitted every year from England to India, we can form an idea of the advantage of the beam service to the Indian consumer. Mr. Pilcher calculated that for 8 months from September 1927, the figure amounted to one hundred thousand pounds. If the Cable Company was going down in competition with the beam service, and if for strategic and other reasons it was necessary to have them, efforts should have been directed towards a solution that would not deprive the consumer of the cheap rate that the beam service afforded. In this connection I should like to read to you an extract from the Economist of the 4th August. It observes :

"Indeed should there not be some means of assuring the public that, while there is a legitimate case for protecting the cables, that protection should not go so far as to stand in the way of further achievements of science being brought to the benefit of the public. The recommendation of the Cable Conference does not commend itself to us as being in the interest of the consumer".

It seems to us that greater attention has been paid to the stabilising of the dividend of the Communication Company than to the interests of the public. The Communication Company has been assured of a net annual revenue of about the one million eight hundred and sixty-five thousand pounds and of any profit they make outside that, 50 per cent. goes to the company and 50 per cent. goes to the reduction of rates or such other purpose as the Advisory Board may consider necessary. It seems to me therefore any further prospect of reduction of rates is a very remote possibility. We do not know what instructions were given to Sir Atul Chatterjee and what share he had in formulating the recommendations. One thing is very clear. So far as the safeguarding of the interests of the consumers is concerned, his efforts do not seem to have met with any conspicuous success. The best way of safeguarding the interests of the consumers would have been to insist upon State ownership and State management of the Wireless. As was pointed out in the House of Commons in 1911, the Imperial Conference passed a Resolution in favour of State ownership and State management of the wireless services. In 1913, a committee under the presidency of Lord Parker, made a similar recommendation. In 1920, the Imperial Telegraph Committee under the Chairmanship of Sir Henry Norman, also recommended in favour of State ownership of the wireless service. In 1921, the Imperial Communication Committee made a similar recommendation. It is obvious that State management and State ownership are the best means of ensuring cheap rates, for it obviates the necessity of providing an inflated dividend to the Merger Company. The only other point I want to mention is that in the Advisory Committee that will be set up, there should be a representative of India, and that representative should be a non-official and not an official of the type that we had in the Imperial Cable Conferences, having regard to the fact that India is one of the biggest consumers of the beam service.

Sir James Simpson : (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Mr. President, I rise to support this Resolution. (Swarajist applause.) Let my Honourable friends opposite make no mistake. I have no desire to embarrass the Government and I support this Resolution entirely from a business point of view, and I am not going to mix up business with politics like my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy.

Sir, the trading interests in India are intensely interested in this ger scheme, and naturally we would like to have details. In fact I to add der we are entitled to have the full details. We believe that any such Roy and scheme, will make for greater efficiency and economy, and that until tell us wi is more perfect in all weather conditions, we realize the Cable Comknow whet t be depended upon. My Honourable friend behind here was Indian inter this Resolution on the ground that there ought to be a State have several t wireless and cables. I would object to it on that ground. I to be that. We have no objections to the merger in the respect that Cable Companies should be helped by the wireless companies. But, Sir, we hold that new inventions should cheapen cable costs, and we trust that principle has not been lost sight of in this merger scheme. All we ask is for details, and I have much pleasure in supporting the Resolution.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, the Honourable Mover of this Resolution need have made no apology for bringing this matter before the House. Indeed I welcome his Resolution because it gives the House an opportunity of taking cognisance of a matter which is unquestionably of the first economic and political importance, and I agree with everything which the Honourable Mr Roy said about its importance in relation to India. The exact terms of his Resolution leave me in a slight difficulty. We published, as the House knows, the full summary of the report of the Conference as soon as it was given out in England, and we have placed on the table of the House some weeks ago the full report of the Conference. Apart from that, we have received week by week from the Secretary of State the detailed proceedings of the Conference which were naturally sent to us to keep us au fait with the position from week to week. Those proceedings, as the House will of course realize, contain a great deal of confidential matter—figures and information given by the various companies which were given under strict seal of confidence—and it would therefore be impossible so far as those records are concerned to publish in India what has not been published in other parts of the Empire. In fact we have already published everything which has been published either in the United Kingdom or in any other parts of the Empire. However, I think I shall not be misinterpreting the Honourable Mover's object in moving this Resolution if I take it that he is asking Government to give him and the House such information as they can on this very technical and intricate subject without disclosing matter which must remain confidential. In particular there are two aspects of the question which have been emphasised in the speeches made to-day on which I think the Honourable Mover and the House would like to have assurances. The first is that the public, and the commercial public in particular, should have some assurance that they are not going to be charged excessive telegraphic rates because of this merger, and further that they will be able to get the due advantage which they are entitled to expect from future developments and improvements in wireless. And secondly, the House is perfectly entitled to ask what is the position of the Government of India in the matter and whether our financial interests have been properly secured. It is particularly to those two aspects of the question that I will direct myself in the observations which I wish to make.

The House has been told quite correctly, I think, by Mr. Roy the cause of this Conference, that is to say, it is the competition which has arisen within the last two years between beam wireless and cables, but I can assure him without any breach of confidence that it was not the applicable companies or of commercial magnates which caused this Conference to be called. This competition has reduced Cable and Wireless rates very considerably in the course of the last year or two, but that is not the end of the matter. The difficulty arises in the first place from this, that one of the private companies which own a very important part of the communications are to-day in a position, if they wish to do so, to liquidate and to pay off their shareholders at present market rates, and they would then have their cable assets to dispose of elsewhere. I think it is likely that these companies, if no action at all had been taken, would have been very reluctant to face the prospect of several years of competition in which they would inevitably in the long run have failed, and therefore they would be tempted at once to liquidate their position. In that case, what would happen? I need not enlarge upon the strategic aspect of cables, although that is important, but I will approach it from the commercial point of view. The position at the moment is that the wireless beam system is not capable of giving a complete commercial service. It is subject to fading, it is subject to interruptions. It does not communicate with all the parts of the world which are connected by cable communications. For these three reasons alone, it is obvious that at present, and as far as we can see in the future, a complete commercial service in the interests of the public could not be provided by wireless alone; and therefore I would ask those who would view with complacency the disappearance of the cables in the hope that they would get a cheaper wireless service to consider that if one element of the competition is removed, you are left with a monopolist who will probably not give you so cheap a service as you think. Now, this is the problem that was before the Conference and I think it is unanswerable that some immediate action had to be taken. The general sketch of what the Conference proposed is this. I can explain it in a very few words. First of all, the merger of the interests of the two big private companies which control the greater part of the cable system and have the largest interests in the beam wireless, namely, the Eastern Cable Company and the Marconi Company. That was a necessary preliminary to setting up a separate company, called the Communications Company. The Communications Company will buy, if the scheme goes through, from the Marconi Company and from the Eastern Cable Company their communication assets in return for payment in shares. They will buy from the various Governments concerned, the British Government, the Canadian, Australian and New Zealand Governments, their actual cable assets in return for cash, and they will lease from the British Government the beam wireless which is at present worked by the British Post Office.

That is the broad outline of the scheme, and I hope I will now attempt to deal with the first question which I put in the foregoing part of my remarks. Have we security against being charged excessive rates? Now, the first point to which I wish to draw attention is the formation of this Communications Company. The object of that was that you would separate off the interests which are concerned with communications only, the cables and the wireless from the other numerous interests in which the Marconi Company and also the Eastern Cable Company are engaged; that is to say, we do not want the rates which are to be charged to the users of telegraphic communication to be in any way influenced by the profits of the Marconi Company from the sale of their wireless machinery or otherwise by their profits from patent rights and so on or, shall we say, by the results of their management of the Peruvian Post Office? That is one of their minor lines. The first part of the problem was to ascertain the value of the capital assets of the Communications Company, because the House will realise that the question of rates must depend on the proper capitalisation of the company. And for this purpose the Conference called in the assistance of two financial experts, Sir Otto Niemeyer and Sir William Mackintosh, the latter being one of the best known chartered accountants in England, in order that all material should placed before them by the companies confidentially—every detail of their business. They had to ascertain what in their opinion was a fair capital value of the assets, and they fixed the figure of 30 millions. The total capital of the Merger Company, I may mention, is 53 millions, so that the capital of the Communications Company is a good deal less. In the second place, these two experts fixed what they called the standard net revenue at one million, eight hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds. The object of that was this. The standard net revenue was intended to represent what at the present time is the actual net earning capacity of the Communications Company. That is the net earning capacity of the Communications assets at the present time, irrespective of any economies which may be made in future by combination of control or by any fresh developments in wireless. There is, therefore, a reasonable prospect that something more should be earned beyond the standard net revenue. That standard amounts roughly to 6 per cent. on the capital of the Company.

Then the next point is that any earnings beyond the standard net revenue are to be divided 50 per cent. to the company and 50 per cent. to be disposed of under the control of an Imperial Advisory Committee. I think it is reasonable that some portion of the excess earnings should be left to the company, otherwise the company will not have the same incentive to enforce economies in working their concern. But the remaining 50 per cent. will be left entirely at the disposal of this Imperial Advisory Committee, and I can assure the House that India, if she becomes a party to this scheme, will be represented on the Imperial Advisory Committee; in fact it is distinctly stated in the report that that Committee will represent all Governments who were parties to the Conference. This Imperial Advisory Committee has these functions. First of all, it has power to veto absolutely any increase over existing rates. That is a very important point. No increase in present rates can be made without the permission of this Committee. In the second place, they have the absolute disposal of the 50 per cent. of anything earned in excess of the standard revenue. They can devote this to the reduction of rates or for any other purpose, such as research, in order to earn a greater revenue in future. In the third place, this Advisory Committee has to be consulted on all matters of policy. In the fourth place, they are to be given power to obtain any information they require from the company, and to order an investigation into the company's accounts, if they so desire. Beyond this, other checks have been provided for. It has been provided that two Directors, both of the Communications Company and the Merger Company shall be approved by Government, and one is to be the Chairman of the Communications Company. Then there are other minor matters which will be provided for in any detailed agreement that will have to be framed, such as guarantees that excessive prices will not be charged by the Marconi Company to the Communications Company for the use of patents. Guarantees will be provided that neither the Marconi Company nor the Cable Company shall dispose of their interests in the Merger Company so as to alter the status of the Merger Company, and that British control be retained.

Now I think that the House will agree that if we accept the principle of a merger at all, every check which human ingenuity can devise has been framed in order to obtain adequate security for the public that excessive rates will not be charged. But turning to the principle of the merger itself, what the Conference has aimed at has been unity of control and private management. Now through unity of control we get the possibility of introducing all the latest developments of big scale business. We get the opportunity of scientific co-ordination, and we also eliminate wasteful competition, while as far as the question of private management is concerned, on which opinions may of course differ, it may be held—and I certainly myself agree—that in a matter of this kind, which demands peculiar initiative and flexibility in dealing with developments of wireless, private management is probably better than State management ; but whether the House agree on that or not, they would certainly agree with me that private management is better than an attempt at State management by the departments of a group of six Governments. That of course is a perfect impossibility. I think myself, and I hope the House will agree with me, that a public utility company under private management and subject to proper public control is the best method of dealing with the situation which has arisen.

Now turning to the point on which much was made by the Honourable Mover, namely, the question of India's representation on this Conference, I have heard some very hard and unexpected things said about Sir Atul Chatterjee. I have the highest opinion of his personal qualifications, and in this connection I would remind the House that he was both the Secretary and the Member in charge of the Department in India which dealt with Posts and Telegraphs, and therefore from the technical side alone he was singularly well qualified to deal with the subjects which came up for discussion (Hear, hear). In the second place, we had by chance the good fortune to find in England at that time our Director of Wireless, Mr. Edmunds, who was on his way back from the International Radio Conference at Washington. For the first two months of the Conference we had the great advantage of having him also present. Our third representative all through that Conference was Mr. Simpson, who is Director-in-Chief of the Indo-European Telegraph Department at the India Office. I think from the technical point of view and from every point of view our delegation compares very favourably with that of any other Government concerned. During the early part of the summer we received a communication from the Associated Chambers of Commerce asking us for an assurance that the interests of the public, and particularly of the commercial public, would be prominently kept in view at this Conference and we gave them that assurance. We were able to do so because, as I have said, we received from week to week the proceedings of the Conference from which we knew that those interests were being prominently kept in view. For instance, the Conference not only received a memorandum but gave a personal hearing to the representations of the Empire Press Union on which India was specially represented. They also received memoranda from other commercial bodies in England, but more than that, as soon as we received this representation from the Associated Chambers, we sent a message to Sir Atul Chatterjee instructing him at once to bring the matter prominently to the notice of the Conference, and we ascertained that he had done so. I think therefore that so far as representing the interests of the public is concerned, we did everything that can reasonably be required of us.

I now turn to the second point about the security for the interests of the Government of India itself in the matter. The Government of India are concerned in two ways. First of all the Indian Radio Telegraph Company which operates the beam wireless from Poona is an Indian company and holds a licence for ten years from the Government of India. Now it was provided in the flotation of the company that sixty per cent. of the capital should be reserved for Indian subscribers. The majority of the directors are Indians, and the company is a rupee company and in our agreement with the company we have laid down that in any fresh flotation, it shall also be provided that sixty per cent. of the new capital should be reserved for Indians. What the present position of the company is I am obviously not in a position to say, because shares do change from day to day ; but the fact remains that the company, which was only floated rather more than a year ago, was at that time reserving 60 per cent. of its capital for Indian subscribers. But the position now is this. If we adhere to the recommendations of this Conference, I take it that the Communications Company will acquire the holding in the Indian Radio Telegraph Company which the Marconi Company now holds. They will therefore be one of the parties forming the new Indian Radio Telegraph Company, and that company will have to apply to us for a fresh licence to operate and I take it they will apply for a licence for 25 years, because that is the period of time for which the British Government have offered to lease the Beam Wireless to the Communications Company. Therefore the position is this, that if we are approached to grant a new licence for 25 years, we can impose such conditions as we choose. Our present licence for instance lays down requirements as to the employment of Indians in the company and as to the training of apprentices and so on, and all those conditions can equally well be imposed on any new company which takes the place of the present company. So, as far as the Beam Wireless is concerned, I do not see that we can lose anything by adhering to these proposals. But there is a second way in which the Government of India are interested, and even more directly. The Government of India, as the House well knows, are the owners and operators of the Indo-European Telegraph Department. This is a department of Government which owns the cables to the Gulf. It owns land lines through Baluchistan and Persia and it joins on at Teheran with the land system of the Indo-European Company, a private company which operates lines through Russia and Germany to England, thus forming an alternative through connection between Karachi and England, alternative to the Eastern Company's route through the Red Sea. Now the Indo-European Telegraph Department obtains its revenues in two ways. First of all, it obtains direct revenues from the Gulf traffic and from the local traffic with Persia. This is in no way affected by the merger or indeed by wireless competition at all. The second way in which it gets receipts is by the indirect earnings on the through traffic between England and India and connecting with the Far East. The procedure there is that all receipts are paid in by each of the three companies concerned into a joint purse and paid out again in certain proportions which were fixed some years ago on the basis of the then division of the traffic. I may say that the present proportions are quite favourable to ourselves. Now the only way in which we are directly affected by these proposals is that we shall have as one partner in the joint purse the Communications Company instead of the Eastern Cable Company ; but anyone who has read the report will have observed that it is specially stated in paragraph 42 of the report that the joint purse system will not be affected by the present proposals.

[Mr. A. C. McWatters.]

In fact it could not be affected because under the joint purse agreement it is specially laid down that no alteration in the terms of the agreement can be made without the consent of all three parties. That, roughly speaking, is the position of the Government of India in the matter. There are those who believe strongly in State management and who will probably welcome the fact that no portion of our Indo-European Telegraph Department has been taken over. It remains completely outside. At the same time we out here are anxious to clear up one or two points in connection with the Government of India's position on which we do not feel absolutely certain. For instance, the exact terms on which the joint purse arrangements will be settled with the new Communications Company. At the moment, as the House is quite well aware, we are entirely uncommitted in this matter, although we expressed ourselves as generally favourable towards the solution suggested by the Conference and we remain also at this moment so favourably disposed. We have not committed ourselves until we have examined the whole question completely ourselves ; and I may say that any suggestions which have been made or may be made to-day will no doubt help us in any representations which we may have to make.

I think, Sir, that that is practically all that I have to say, except this : that whether we agree to what is proposed by the Conference or not, there is no doubt whatever that the Merger and the Communications Company will come into existence, because it does not rest with us to prevent its coming into existence. If the British Government and the Dominions desire to take part in it, they will so far as they are concerned come in, and they could form it without us. But one thing we should lose undoutedly and it is this : we should lose our representation on the Imperial Advisory Committee, and I think it will be very unfortunate if we did.

That, Sir, is all I have to say to the House. I hope I have not wearied the House in what is an extraordinarily difficult and technical matter. I should have been very glad indeed to have accepted my Honourable friend's Resolution if I could have done so, but, as I have explained, we really have no correspondence in our possession other than correspondence which has been definitely treated as confidential elsewhere. We have given the House all the information we could, and I myself have tried to give such explanations as, on a difficult matter of this sort, I could give. Sir, I hope that the Honourable Member will not care to press his motion.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty Five Minutes Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty Five Minutes Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I heaved a sigh of relief when my Honourable friend Mr. McWatters, whom I am very glad to see as a Member of this House, and whom I have known for so many years but have not had the pleasure to meet on the floor of this House, said that India is not committed to any pact over this merger system. Sir, that is some relief to me. I am always suspicious of Imperialist policies, Imperialist airways,

Imperialist wireless systems or of anything which is prefixed by the word " Imperialist ". Sir, two years ago, when this House, much against the will of this side of the House, assented to the system of Imperial preference, some of us deplored that event, and in this matter under discussion I see another version of Imperial preference and nothing else. It may not be Imperial preference for British commodities, but it is nothing but an Imperial monopoly over wireless. That means a certain British combination gains a monopoly all over the Empire in certain transactions and in which India will have no voice. I am surprised to read—and I would draw the attention of the House to a particular passage in this note—that the cable system is so lightly dealt with. Yet the report of the Wireless Conference drew attention to it :

" It is obvious also that the cable services have a value for strategic purposes. To sum up, therefore, it may be said that wireless offers a cheap service, but not all-sufficing ".

My Honourable friend Mr. McWatters also alluded to it, and he did mention that the wireless system might at times fail and the cable system ought to be perpetuated. He also alluded to the Indo-European Cable Company. This House knows well that India has sunk so many millions in the Indo-European Telegraph Company, money over which, when my friend Mr. Rogers speaks later in the course of the debate, he will say that we have no control ; we have no control over the management of the Indo-European Telegraph Company. This company does not pay to the tax-payer of India any dividend. So far it has been running at a loss, and at a loss against the postal revenues, and to-day if India becomes a party to this Merger company, India loses her revenue over the Indo-European Cable Company.

But this one word " strategic " makes me most suspicious. What is the policy behind this Imperial Merger Wireless Company ? Is it not intended for strategic purposes ? Will it not be utilised in case of emergency for Imperial war purposes ? And is it not going to provide another method of communication for war purposes at a future date ? In future, whenever Government bring forward their final proposition in this matter, they ought to make it clear that the Wireless Merger Company is nothing but a pure commercial concern. Even if Government from that side were to give me an assurance that it is nothing but a commercial concern, I would not believe it. I know that most of this organization will be utilised for war purposes, and this will be a second line of safety in transmission of messages.

My friend Mr. Neogy alluded to the small part that our former friend Sir Atul Chatterjee played in this matter. If I understood him aright, I take it that the High Commissioner was a signatory to this Conference report. Yet my friend Mr. Neogy did allude to the fact that the High Commissioner was not made a signatory to the Kellog Pact which decided momentous international problems and international affairs in which India as an original Member of the League of Nations, has no doubt a big stake. It is very surprising how the Government of India, which would give Sir Atul Chatterjee permission to put his signature to a small Imperial Conference report such as the report of this merger conference, could not see their way to send him as the representative of India to sign the Kellog Pact. That further shows what confidence the Government of India have in the High Commissioner and what confidence the Government of India place in the representatives of the people of India so as not to take them into confidence in matters of high policy, whether it is International or Imperial. Sir, I find the word " monopoly " mentioned in this report very often, and I say this merger is nothing but a monopoly. Of this Marconi combination the world heard so much before the war and there was a great deal of scandal about it, as my friend Mr. Neogy rightly pointed out, in which Ministers, Prime Ministers and Secretaries of State and others were concerned. To-day we find this very Marconi combination again coming out in another disguise as the sole controller of this merger. Well, I say, let Marconi exploit England : I have nothing to say against that. But I will be no party to a Marconi combination to exploit India. Honourable Members may have recently read in the Press that there is another big Imperialist monopolist, who is not a British Imperialist it is true—Hugo Stinnes of Berlin has been recently arrested for trying to organise a monopolist organisation in Germany, and trying to misuse public money. So we must look with a grain of suspicion on every combination whether it is organised by the friends of Cabinet Ministers for Imperialist or strategic purposes.

[Mr. B. Das.]

Sir, I did listen to my Honourable friend, Mr. McWatters, and I did feel that he was trying to ascertain what were our views so that if he finds that there is a great amount of suspiciousness in our minds, he would try to represent that view point at least, when he will send another representative to take part in the next stage of discussion for this Merger combine. But personally I am of the opinion—and I believe Honourable Members on this side of the House will be of the same opinion—that India should not be any party to any kind of Imperial monopolist system where there will be no power or position given to India. We hear there will be too many Imperial stunts in it. Not only will there be an Imperial Advisory Committee, but there will be Imperial Directors, and we understand the British Government—I did interject a query when my friend Mr. McWatters was speaking, and he did say the British Government would have two Directors. Why should not each Dominion and India have a Director ? Supposing we agree to this merger system, why cannot India have a Director on that Board of Imperial Directors, and why cannot India also have representatives on that Imperial Advisory Committee ? I make this suggestion provided this House at a future date gives its assent to our joining this Imperial wireless merger system. I hope when the Government Member next speaks he will give us some idea what will be the effect on the Indo-European Cable Company system. I know it too, and the Honourable Mr. McWatters has already alluded to this, when he said that the Indo-European Telegraph Company had some existing arrangement with the Eastern Cable Company and got a share of that company's revenues by the share of a joint purse whether it carried all the messages or not. But the question is whether its total income which is so insufficient that it lands my country in such a loss, will not be reduced by this new Imperial merger system. The House would be glad to know what was the expressed opinion of the representative of the Indo-European Cable Company at that conference. In another Committee where I had the pleasure of being a member—the Public Accounts Committee—we were told that negotiations are going on and that very shortly the Indo-European Telegraph Company may be acquired by the Government of India I think that has been the expressed opinion of this side of the House, viz that it is best that we acquire full control over the Indo-European Cable Company and not allow.....

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : May I interrupt for a moment ? I cannot understand the Honourable Member. We already own the Indo-European Telegraph Department. It is a department of Government. We own it already.

Mr. B. Das : It is a department of Government, but it is not managed by the Government of India. It is managed by a Board of Directors over whose actions the Government of India have no control.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : May I again interrupt for a moment ? The headquarters of the Department is at the present time in London. The only point at issue is whether the head of the office should be in India or in London. There is no question of ownership or management. It is managed by Government.

Mr. B. Das : With all due respect to my Honourable friend, Mr. McWatters, I think he will have to revise his views. As far as I remember the recommendations of the Inchcape Committee and other Committees, the money invested in the Indo-European Cable Company may be that of the Government of India, but there is not sufficient control over its management and organisation, and this side of the House has very often insisted that the headquarters of this Company should be transferred to India, and that the Company should be controlled directly by the Government of India. I do not mind my Honourable friend Mr. Rogers controlling it from here. We will have every confidence in his control. I would therefore like, when the Government reply again, that they should give us some information as to whether there will be a great fall of revenue if India eventually becomes a party to this merger system. Personally, I am very suspicious that we will always be losers from the strategic point, from the Imperialist point and from the financial point, if we become a party to this scheme.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, there are one or two points in connection with this merger of the cable and wireless services on which I would welcome some explanation from the Honourable the Industries Member before we proceed further with the subject. One has reference to the capital of this Merger Company and the dividend to be declared under its auspices. If I remember aright, the Honourable the Industries Member said that the figure of dividend was arrived at after considering the earnings of the company to-day. Now, while going through the Parliamentary debates for last May, when this subject was debated in the English Parliament, I find that one of the Members speaking on the motion under consideration there said that this project seems to aim at their " stabilisation of a dividend return on the capital of the group at the position in 1926-27 before this competition had actually begun." This statement made on the floor of the House of Commons remains uncontradicted so far, and I do not understand how it was possible for the Honourable the Industries Member to say that the figure of earnings taken is the figure of earnings of to-day. This, Sir, is of importance, particularly when we remember that two years ago there was no keen competition as is the case now. The figures of two years ago must have been based upon various items of which one that concerns India the most was the rate of 1*s.* 8*d.* per word for cables, and that rate to-day is reduced to

[Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji.]

1s. 1d. If the figure for guaranteeing the dividend is to be taken on the basis of the earnings of to-day, it is certain that the proposed figure of £2,000,000 dividend to be guaranteed would be much reduced if the earnings of to-day were taken.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : £1,875,000.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Whatever the figure—I may say that my figure was taken from the report....

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : My figure is taken from the report of the Conference.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I accept the figure of the Honourable the Industries Member though I think my point remains. If the earnings of two years ago were taken, if the earnings before this competition began were taken, then the Empire and this country would pay more : but if you take the figures of to-day you would certainly pay less. That is one point. Another point to which I should like to have a reply is with regard to the proposed capital of this Merger Company. It is going to have a capital of £54,000,000. Now, this large capital was no doubt necessary when you had to put up costly cables and costly installations. But there is no justification for a very big capital when you are going to conduct the beam service with its short wave length which, if I remember aright, requires only £250,000 to work all the four Empire stations, and when each beam station can be put up at a cost of about £60,000 each. If that is the case there is no justification for this very big figure of £54,000,000 for capital, unless it is intended that all those sins of commission and omission which the Marconi Company and the cable companies before that had committed are to be covered up under this new scheme.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The figure of £53,000,000 and odd is the capital of the Merger Company and not of the Communications Company.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : The point that I was trying to make remains unaffected by the interruption of the Honourable the Industries Member. My point was that this was an attempt to cover up the many faults of the earlier companies by taking advantage of this new scientific invention and also of the enthusiasm of the people for the new scientific service,—to cover up the sins, as I said before, of commission and omission of the wireless companies, because we find that one of the speakers in the House of Commons distinctly referred, without being contradicted, to " the tragic history of British wireless policy, or perhaps it should be, lack of policy ". Is it right that the sins of private companies should now be glossed over by the Government helping a scheme which is intended for that purpose and at the cost of the taxpayers, it may be, of India and of other parts of the Empire ? These are just one or two points on which I should like to have a definite pronouncement from the Honourable the Industries Member.

But, in addition to these points of detail, there is one point of principle on which I should like to have his opinion. While referring to the question of the Indian Radio Company he said that 60 per cent. of the capital was to be guaranteed for Indian subscriptions. Is that right ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters: At the time of flotation 60 per cent. was allotted for flotation in India.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : And it was subscribed ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : That I cannot tell you. That is the condition of flotation—that it was allotted. I do not know the actual details as to how many people took it up.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I know if the Government of India approve of the principle of reserving a certain amount of capital for Indian shareholders in cases where public utility companies and other companies which are likely to benefit by the policy of Government are concerned ? Is it the policy of Government that they approve of and adopt the principle of fixing a proportion of Indian capital to non-Indian capital in regard to public companies ? There is one other point and that has reference to the position of the High Commissioner in connection with contracts of a character similar to the one we are discussing. We find that our High Commissioner is utilised by the Government in England for purposes which suit them and that he is left alone when something that can bring glory and distinction to India in regard to International and Imperial affairs comes up for signature. (An Honourable Member : " What is the evidence "?) The evidence has already been referred to by my Honourable friends Mr. Neogy and Mr. Das. It is to my mind a matter of humiliation for India that while it was found possible for representatives of Canada, Australia and South Africa to go to Paris for the Kellog Pact, Sir Atul Chatterjee was prevented from crossing the Channel to put, as an Indian, on behalf of his country his signature to this memorable pact. There is no justification for utilising the post of High Commissioner in England for purposes that suit the British Government and leaving him out in the cold wher matters of international import are being considered. Sufficient has been said here to convey to Government the feeling of the House on this matter, and I hope the Government will benefit thereby.

Sir, I support the Resolution moved by my friend Mr. Roy.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I would like to offer a few remarks on this question. The Resolution has, I think, been moved more with a view to finding out what were the instrucitons of the Government of India to their representative in London at this Conference. If that be the motive of the Honourable Member who gave notice of this Resolution, I do not think I shall be very wrong if I infer from the Honourable Mr. McWatters' statement that the Government of India gave the High Commissioner for India in London a sort of watching brief on this Committee.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Something more than that. He had a general watching brief, but we also sent definite instructions, first, to watch over our financial interests as regards the Indo-European Telegraph Department, and, secondly, to watch over the interests of the public as regards rates.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Both these points I intended to refer to as I proceeded. The first one is a general one, namely, to see that owing to the merger or any scheme which may be devised the public in India have not to pay more for their telegrams hereafter. The second one is a more particular one, and affects the finances of the Government of India. Now, I feel that if there was curiosity to know further details regarding the instructions of the Government of India to the High Commissioner, according to Mr. McWatters, there is practically nothing else to know, and that brings me to the question of the personnel selected by the Government of India to represent them in this matter.

I do not know if my friend Mr. K. C. Roy exactly meant all that his words indicated when he referred to Sir Atul Chatterjee in his speech. But I venture to say that, if the Industries Department had taken care to consult the Standing Advisory Committee in this connection, the Committee themselves would have suggested the name of Sir Atul Chatterjee. I am not one of those who spare criticism of Government or of their officers whenever I think it is deserved, but I do feel that it is wrong to criticise officers of Government who are not in the House to reply, and especially to criticise a person of the standing of the High Commissioner for India in England, especially after knowing Sir Atul's special qualifications which have been enumerated before this House by Mr. McWatters. I only hope that both Mr. Roy and my friend Mr. Neogy did not mean what their remarks indicated, and I trust Mr. Roy will think fit to explain his remarks to us and, if possible, withdraw them in fairness to Sir Atul Chatterjee. I cannot help feeling that India could not have a wortheir person as its High Commissioner than Sir Atul Chatterjee, and for this Conference there could not have been a more appropriate person selected than Sir Atul Chatterjee, irrespective of his position as High Commissioner for India. But I feel in this matter that those Members who referred to Sir Atul Chatterjee may have been carried away by the sin of omission, if I may use the phrase, on the part of the Government of India in not appointing an Indian to represent the Government of India for signature of the Kellog Pact at Paris. There I am sure this House will be at one with the critics of the Government of India. But that does not mean that Sir Atul Chatterjee's nomination to this Committee is to be criticised. I for one feel that this House, if it could come to an open vote, would unanimously approve of Sir Atul Chatterjee's nomination on this Committee.

The only question, Sir, is whether the Government of India have succeeded in adequately protecting the interests of those who use the cables hereafter. There is no doubt that if it was not necessary to come to some arrangement with the cable companies, the radio companies would be able to lower the rates and thus make available a much cheaper telegraphic service to the public. But until the radio service is more perfect the cable companies have to be maintained, and for strategic purposes also the cable companies at the moment are necessary. It therefore was a difficult problem facing this Committee in London, and although the details regarding the fate of the Indo-European Telegraph Department or the Indian Radio Company here are not available, I cannot help saying generally on the scheme that the Committee have arrived at the most feasible solution of the difficulty which they could possibly devise. I am one of those who would like India to take her proper part in all such questions, but we have to realize that we have not an Indian cable company at all, barring of course the Indo-European Telegraph Department, and even the Radio Company has come into existence only during the last two or three years and is, comparatively speaking, a rising concern. Until therefore details regarding the fate of the Indo-European Telegraph Department and the Indian Radio Company are available, it is impossible to criticise this scheme in detail. But I would like to draw the Honourable Member's attention to paragraph 42, to which he himself referred, in the latter part of which it is said :

> " The Government of India will not be affected by the acceptance of the recommendations detailed below although the precise terms of these arrangements may possibly require revision ".

It is in the revision of the precise terms that I am afraid some injurious effect may happen to the finances of the Government of India. I am sure that the Department concerned will watch this very carefully and, if I may suggest to them, it may be useful after this discussion to consult the Standing Committee attached to the Department before this Department give their concurrence to any suggestions which may come forward from London. I have only one word more, Sir, to say with reference to my Honourable friend Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji's remarks. It is perfectly true that the Indian Radio Company did offer 60 per cent. of its shares to the Indian public here. The whole lot was not taken up. But we still to-day have a substantial holding in the name of Indian shareholders and that is about all that has been possible up to now. I believe that the guarantee given by the Government when they gave the licence has been fully carried out, although in the light of what has developed subsequently, it may be a matter of regret to the Indian public that they did not take up all the 60 per cent. which was made available. But the fault of it can hardly be laid at the doors of the Government.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I am grateful to you for giving me this opportunity of supporting a Resolution which has been moved by one whom I greatly revere. For the last 34 years of my life I have on rare occasions followed him ; we were so apart from each other. In fact he took me to be a naughty boy and he could hardly control me. But here I think he will forgive all my past when I come to support him as also to tell him that this Resolution also does not please me, for this Resolution is very meek and humble. He asks the Government only to lay on the table all the correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Government of India. Now, Sir, we know the meaning of this phrase " laying on the table." But even in this matter of laying on the table, I am sorry that my friend has been disillusioned by the Honourable Member for Industries who says that certain confidential correspondence cannot be put on the table. This is the position in matters where we want either to interpellate or to move Resolutions recommending certain things to the Governor General in Council, and it were better for our dignity if we had not moved any Resolutions like this. No doubt this is a very technical subject about which I must confess before this House that I can hardly deal as ably as other Members have done. But at the same time I must say that there is another aspect of this Resolution which has been lost sight of and which ought to have been echoed in this House by at least one Member, and therefore I stood up, that is, the political aspect of the question. Now, Sir, I would like to know how this beam service, wireless service, cable service, with countries outside Asia or outside India is at all beneficial to the people of India, to the real people of India—I do not mean those who go to Europe every year in order to have a holiday, but those countrymen of ours, I mean those real countrymen of ours who till the soil and who find everything for us and for whom we come here saying that we are representatives of the people. Now, Sir,.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : What about the Bengal Tenancy Bill and the Swaraj Party ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I shall be obliged if the Chair controls such effusions.

3 P.M.

A side issue has sprung up owing to the speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy. It is with reference to representation of India in this matter. Now, Sir, I may also say the very same thing which has been said by many others about the highest regard for the personality of Sir Atul Chatterjee. I can also claim some amount of friendship with him as a humble man, and probably we had some connections longer than many here present. Be that as it may, I beg to submit that we know the meaning of Indian representation in such matters. We have had representatives of the type of Lord Sinha and the Maharaja of Burdwan and several others. Does the Honourable Member on the other side, do the Government seriously contend, that they are really representatives of the people and are selected to voice the aspirations of the people ? If they were honest in this matter, they would have selected you, Sir, or any reputable leader Pandit Motilal Nehru. Sir, if they really wanted Indian representatives, they would have chosen men like that, and not men from their own service, who are more bureaucratic, if I may be permitted to say so, than English bureaucrats. But be that as it may, I say this only to remind the Honourable Member in charge of the Department that the mere fact of Sir Atul Chatterjee being represented there does not make us believe that really you meant to give India representation, and that you meant to benefit India.

Now, Sir, it has been said that India is the biggest consumer of the wireless service, and if it is so and if India's interest is at all to be considered, I submit that the Member in charge of this Department has no other alternative but to place before the representatives of the people the correspondence which he considers to be confidential and submit to us confidentially that correspondence, if not to all of us, at least the Honourable Mover of this Resolution, whose honesty they cannot doubt.

Then, Sir, the Honourable Mover has said that this cable service is a central link in many ways, but I submit to the House that this is a central link in one thing, and that is in the matter of Imperial domination. It is a central link of British Imperialism, it is a central link of India's slavery.

I support this Resolution because I consider that by all these means of communication England has been able to perpetuate our present condition of slavery, and therefore I support my Honourable friend, the Mover of this Resolution.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, was pleased to observe about the real object of the merger. The real object of the merger is submerging Indians and India's interests.

Of course there are gentlemen who in supporting the Resolution have been pleased to observe that they would not embarrass the Government. They would look to the business part of it apart from politics, and so forth. These platitudes we are accustomed to hear, and I need hardly reply to them.

With these few words I beg to support the Resolution.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I had no intention of intervening in this debate but for the remarks that fell from my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas about the value of India's representation through Sir Atul Chatterjee. I do not think we are discussing the personality of Sir Atul Chatterjee at all. To me it is a question of principle. I want to insist that in all international agreements, in all international conferences, if they are to be binding upon us in the present and in the future, we must be represented along with officials by non-official representatives of India, who can speak for nationalist India. It is not a question of anybody's ability or anybody's bona fides, but it is a question of principle. These officials of the Government of India, whether they are Indians or whether they are Europeans, go under certain instructions ; they are bound by those instructions and cannot go behind those instructions. I have seen the best of them making representations or at least speaking in the name of the Government of India under instructions of the Government of India. Therefore, I do not subscribe to the proposition that however able an Indian may be in the service of the Government he can properly represent India and bind it for all times to come in an international agreement. I wish the Government to recognise that in the matter of international agreements, and international conferences, India will refuse to be bound by any agreements or decisions arrived at unless non-official India is properly represented at these conferences. I take this opportunity to state here that non-official India is to be reckoned with, and it must be allowed a proper representation, in all international gatherings and conferences.

Coming to this particular matter under discussion there is a provision in one of these agreements which has been brought to my notice by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy. In one of these agreements it is said that " it is agreed that British control in all these companies must be paramount." May I ask this House, whether in agreeing to that provision, Sir Atul Chatterjee voiced the sentiments of India, the nationalist India ? Why did he agree to that provision ? If he agreed to that provision, it must have been under instructions from the Government of India. Therefore, I submit, it is a very serious matter that officials of the Government of India, which is admittedly a Foreign Government, whether Indians or Europeans, should bind India in these agreements behind the back of nationalist India. We have seen it in the case of the airship service also. We have seen it in many cases. The world is at the present moment revising all its programme of trade and in all these conferences that are being held in different parts of the world, India is always represented by officials appointed by the Government of India and under instructions of the Government of India or the Secretary of State. Are we going to be bound by those decisions ? I submit not, and that is a question of principle. In considering this Resolution, I want to say nothing about the technical side because I do not know anything about it. But I am perfectly certain that we on this side of the House are voicing the sentiments of the nation that in all these international agreements with which India is supposed to be bound up now, hereafter and for all times to come, we must be represented by a competent representative of non-official India and not by official Indians. We know we have many competent and able Indians in the service of Government. We do not question their bona fides, but they are trammelled by the conditions of their service and we cannot expect them to go against the instructions which they have received from their masters, namely, the Government. I have some personal experience in this matter, and I can say that Indian official can be an exception in this matter. He is bound by his instructions. Therefore, what we are fighting for is a question of principle. We are making no reflections on the honesty or ability of Sir Atul Chatterjee. We want to assert on the floor of this House that in all these international agreements relating to trade or cable services or anything else, India must be represented by non-official Indians. There are men like my Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, my Honourable friend Mr. Birla and many others who can represent India quite adequately and honorably in all commercial agreements. Why cannot the Government select any one of them in order to give help to the officials who are deputed for that particular piece of work ?

As the Government ignores practically all non-official India and takes upon itself to settle all these agreements we must continue to protest against this procedure and object to these agreements so that these agreements may not be altogether binding upon us for all time to come. That is the only question of principle which I wanted to enunciate in this debate.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Sir, the House has got to deal with two very astute Scotsmen in this matter. One is the author of the Report, Sir John Gilmour, and the other is the spokesman of Government, Mr. McWatters.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I am an Irishman.

Mr. K. C. Roy : However, an Irishman in Indian matters is as bad as any Scotsman. But he is one of the most brilliant members of the Indian Civil Service, and I am not very anxious to cross swords with him. My task however has been considerably lightened by my supporters. I am particularly indebted to Lala Lajpat Rai who has given us his opinion about Indian delegations in no uncertain terms. It was not several years ago, when I was a Member of the Council of State, that a similar proposition came from Sir Phiroze Sethna. I then expressed the same opinion as Lala Lajpat Rai, and I adhere to every word that Lala Lajpat Rai has said to-day.

Now I come to the remarks of Sir James Simpson whose presence I welcome. He has come with a great reputation to us and will prove a great asset; but I should like to enlighten him on two points. First of all there is the principle whether a company of this sort should be State-owned and State-worked. In 1923, the British Prime Minister laid it down as an emphatic proposition that it is necessary in the interests of national security that there should be a wireless system in that country capable of communicating with the Dominions and owned and operated by the State. This is the principle that has been denounced by the Baldwin Ministry in 1928. Now I ask my Honourable friend Sir James Simpson to find out the reasons.

Then another thing which interests the commercial community is cheaper telegraph rates, to which my Honourable friend Mr. McWatters has referred in a very subdued tone. What is the recommendation of the Gilmour Committee? Not the cheapest nor the minimum rate. Nothing of the kind. They say : " We will guarantee the communities concerned an efficient service at a reasonable rate." I ask Sir James Simpson to find out what is the difference between a minimum rate and a reasonable rate. I am quite sure, Sir, India will materially suffer as a consumer by this new convention.

Then, Sir, much has been said about the representation of India at this Conference. I am reverting to it again because Mr. McWatters made a special point of it. Perhaps very few know that I have known Sir Atul Chatterjee longer than any other Member of this House, and I have nothing to say against him.

Mr. President : Longer than Mr. Amar Nath Dutt?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Longer than him, and I have known him longer than any other Member of this House.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I dispute that.

Mr. K. C. Roy : You knew him in the United Provinces. I knew him before that when he was in a college in Calcutta. I yield to none in my personal respect for him; but the question of the Indian delegation is a matter of principle with me. Does Mr. McWatters know that England was not represented by the Postmaster General nor by the Secretary of the Post Office ? England was represented by the Secretary of State for Scotland, a hard-headed business man whose aid was necessary. And he was assisted not by a permanent official from the Post Office or from the Treasury. He was assisted by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasury. Shall I give him one or two more instances ? Who represented Canada ? Sir Campbell Stewart, a newspaper magnate who only recently owned a large block of shares in the London Times. And who was the High Commissioner who represented his Government at this Conference? The High Commissioner of New Zealand. New Zealand has very little to do with these companies. I hope I have convinced Mr. McWatters that the delegation sent to England to represent India's interests at this Conference was not the right sort of delegation.

Now, Sir, I come to Mr. McWatters' conclusions. I really envy him because he has given us such a lucid exposition of the report without bestowing an additional word on any other subject. I am simply lost in admiration of him. If he had joined the newspaper press, he would have been in a better position than he is as a Member of the Government of India. He has given us nothing—no news whatever, except a few lines about the Indian Radio Telegraph Company being handed over to Marconi's or to the merger, whichever it is; but that news also is so vague that this House should stand on its right to know what has happened in this matter. I know there are difficulties and I know that he is not in a position to disclose to us the internal affairs of private corporations; but we are entitled in this House to know the full instructions which he, as head of the department, issued to the Indian delegates and other official papers and until then, until he has shown them to this House or to the Standing Committee attached to his Department, I am not going to withdraw my motion.

Now, Sir, a word about Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I have already replied to him as regards the character of the delegation about which he stressed so much. There is only one other point. He wanted to know the object of my motion. I think he has known enough of Parliamentary life to know that it is the usual Parliamentary formula to raise a debate to get the sense of the House on a given matter, and that is my sole and whole object. I leave the decision on my motion to the sense of the House.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Sir, I think it is perhaps only natural that on a subject of this kind the debate was apt to wander somewhat far away from the real subject of the discussion. The Resolution asks Government to lay on the table certain papers and even the Honourable Mover of the Resolution has admitted that the bulk of the papers, practically all of the papers, which I mentioned could not be laid.

With regard to our instructions to the High Commissioner, in reply to a definite question from Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, I have given the answer that our instructions were simply this, that he was to look after the interests of the Government of India, particularly in respect of the Indo-European Telegraph Department, and specially to consider the interests of the telegraph-using public. Those were our definite instructions. So, as far as that part of the Resolution is concerned, I maintain that I have done everything that this House could expect us to do, and also I have endeavoured to throw such light as I could—I hope I did not mix it up in a maze of words—upon the very difficult technical and financial arrangements which are involved in these proposals ; and in spite of what Mr. Roy has said, I am going to continue in the same spirit to answer one or two questions which have been put to me since I made my first speech to-day. The Honourable Mr. Das specially referred to the fact that these proposals had been forced upon our Indo-European Telegraph Department. I am afraid in some of the things he said he was not quite clear in his own mind about the Indo-European Telegraph Department and the Indo-European Company, which are two very different things. The Department acts with the Company as I explained ; but the Company is a purely private company and it, like our department, remains entirely outside the merger ; so that they are affected in exactly the same way vis-a-vis the Communications Company as our Indo-European Telegraph Department will be. I explained that as regards our direct income from the Gulf traffic and from the Persian traffic we were in no way affected by it ; but where we are affected by it is in its reverberation upon our joint purse. I pointed out, as stated in paragraph 42 of the report, that the joint purse system would remain unchanged ; and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas quite fairly pointed out the last sentence of the paragraph which said that the precise arrangements might possibly require revision, and it was for that very reason that I said in my first speech that the Government of India proposed to enter into correspondence with the Home Government before they considered the question of giving their final adherence to the proposals ; it was exactly for the reason that we wanted to be absolutely certain of our position vis-a-vis the new Communications Company, and how we would be placed, that we have not as yet given our definite adherence to these proposals.

Now, Sir, Mr. Haji asked me two definite questions ; first of all, in connection with the method by which the standard net revenue had been obtained—£1,875,000—and he appeared to quote from some paper dated about May, which referred to the figure having been obtained on figures of earnings of two years back. To begin with if it is a paper dated May, it has nothing whatever to do with the subject of this Conference, because the proposals were all of a later date than that. In the second place, I would point out that he has forgotten that this figure relates both to cables and wireless services, and two years ago the wireless was practically not in existence. So obviously the rate we are referring to now had nothing to do with the earnings of two years ago. Then again he asked me definitely whether the fact that the Government of India had insisted or arranged for 60 per cent. capital of the Indian Radio Telegraph Company being allotted in India was part of a general policy. I would point out that this company had to receive a licence from the Government. They could not operate without a licence from Government. Therefore, in this case, there was a special reason, apart from any general policy, why Government was perfectly entitled to lay down conditions of that kind.

I do not wish to deal with any questions which seem to me to go outside the subject of this discussion, or to argue again the merits of the representatives whom we chose. I think I answered that as well as I could in my original speech. The majority of the representatives of the various Governments were of course officials. As a matter of fact, this Conference took place at very short notice. I think we had about a week's notice. The matter was considered to be of great emergency. So that in the normal course such official representation as was available was adopted by a majority of the Governments concerned.

I think, Sir, that I have nothing else to say. I think that I have really in substance done what the Honourable Mover of the Resolution wants me to do, but I am sorry I cannot accept the Resolution.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the following Resolution be adopted :

' This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to lay on the table all correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Government of India relating to the cable and the wireless beam merger scheme, certain conclusions of which were recently announced both in London and in India ' ".

RESOLUTION RE THE HAJ PILGRIM TRAFFIC.

Haji Abdoola Haroon (Sind : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to move the Resolution that stands in my name. It runs as follows :

"This Assembly recommends to His Excellency the Governor General in Council that a mixed Committee of officials and non-official Muslims, with a clear non-official majority, be appointed to hold an open enquiry and take evidence, with a view to investigate the entire question of the facilities for pilgrims proceeding to the Hedjaz from Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi ports, the duties and powers of the Protectors of Pilgrims and the Haj Committees and all matters pertaining to the pilgrim traffic, and to make the necessary recommendations for providing better arrangements for the pilgrims and mitigating their hardships and inconveniences".

Sir, before I say anything on this Resolution, I think it my duty to point out that the Haj is a subject in which both the Government and the people should take the liveliest interest. It is a fact that about 30 to 40 thousand Mussalmans reach Jeddah every year by ships from Karachi, Madras, Calcutta and Bombay. Pilgrims from many foreign Islamic countries come to India and they embark for the Holy Lands from the Indian ports. If we provide them also with facilities in this connection they will carry a good impression with them as those of our Indian pilgrims who have seen the arrangement and management of the Egyptian and Java Governments for the facilities of the pilgrims carry a good impression with them.

The Government are aware of the fact that more Mussalmans live under the British Government, and therefore the British Government's duty towards Mussalmans is greater than even any other Moslem State. With these prefatory remarks, I shall pass on to the Resolution.

Sir, no year passes by in which the Moslem newspapers in India do not publish the complaints of the Mussalmans regarding various hardships of the pilgrims. It is an old sore, and in the interest of the Government it is necessary that this question should be thoroughly investigated once for all.

Now Sir, I submit some of the hardships of the Haj pilgrims :

1. The Passage Money.—The passage money is too high. Before 1914 the passage rate of all the companies was about Rs. 40 (single) for deck. In 1914 when there was no competition of the shipping companies it rose from Rs. 40 to 100. The passage fare Rs. 120 (return) was the maximum of the war time. After the war the Government fixed Rs. 195 as the maximum and the shipping companies (Messrs. Turner, Morrison and Company and the Nimazi Company) settled among themselves and generally charged Rs. 195 during the pilgrim season. When the Shustri Company fixed their rate of steamers for Jeddah the above two companies reduced their rates. But last year this company also joined them and all the three having settled among themselves generally charged Rs. 195.

2. Hardships in the Ships.—As regards space, I beg to submit that the pilgrims sit on board of such vessels in greater number than the accommodation is set apart for them. A good many Hajis do not find seats even to sit on. It also happens that sharp and well-versed people go and monopolize a lot of space and the other poor and ignorant people go about begging for a little space and no one listens to them.

Under the present arrangement, the luggage of the pilgrims is so mixed up that several Hajis do not find their luggage and consequently have to beg their daily bread in the ship.

There is a general complaint that no attention is paid to the cleanliness, proper ventilation, lights, etc., in the holds where most of the Hajis are packed up. According to rules some space in the ship is allowed for the pilgrims for rest and fresh air, but it generally happens that that space is also occupied by the pilgrims. When a complaint from the members of the Haj Committee is made to the captain of the ship, he replies that he is powerless and he cannot fight with the Hajis.

There is no Muhammadan Hindustani shop or contractor in the ship to sell bread, butter, mutton, tea, etc., at a reasonable price. The first few days most of the Hajis get sea-sick and are not fit to prepare anything for themselves and thus go without food for a number of days. The ships convey no stock of ice, and aerated waters in sufficient quantity.

The fuel wood supplied to the Hajis is sometimes damp and thick. The trouble of breaking it and getting it dried is very great.

In the ship, the sweet water is not so freely distributed and there is great scarcity of it. Besides about 1,200 pilgrims or so get sweet water at one place and at a limited time which causes great trouble to the pilgrims.

Latrines and bath rooms are not in sufficient numbers and generally there is no light in them. Females are not provided with separate latrines.

There has been a complaint regarding the manner in which the dead pilgrims (both males and females) are, under the present arrangement, thrown into the sea.

3. Disinfection and Medical Inspection.—The separation of female pilgrims from their relations or husbands at the time of disinfection and medical inspection is one of the troubles met with by the pilgrims before embarkation. This separation begins from the time the disinfection and medical inspection commences and lasts even in the ship when several women are seen crying and requesting other pilgrims to go in search of their husbands or relations.

4. Treatment at disinfection embarkation and disembarkation.—It is admitted on all hands that the majority of the pilgrims being illiterate people do not know all the rules and regulations of disinfection, embarkation and disembarkation, and thus when they give any cause to the authorities concerned they are very harshly treated.

5. Hardships at Kamaran.—Before the war all pilgrims had to be medically examined at the port of embarkation. Thereafter, owing to both Kamaran and Jeddah being then under the Turkish Government, pilgrims had to be examined at one of those ports. If they were examined at Kamaran, they had not to be examined at Jeddah and vice versa. In any case the pilgrims were charged pilgrim dues once only either at Kamaran or at Jeddah. Now since the war, the pilgrims have to be examined at both places, Kamaran as well as Jeddah, and have to pay pilgrim dues at both ports. There does not seem to be any need for examination at Kamaran as it is now a British port. By the time the pilgrims reach Kamaran, they have already been on board the ship for over 10 days, the period of segregation. In any case pilgrims are examined at Jeddah by the Hedjaz Government, so that an examination at Kamaran by the British Government would appear to be purposeless. I may here mention that the Javanese pilgrims have not to go to Kamaran.

6. Thefts at Kamaran.—At Kamaran a pilgrim has to undergo a quarantine of 24 hours and he has to suffer the troubles of transhipment and to carry a small portion of his luggage with him leaving his belongings in the ship. The ship authorities are not responsible for the theft of the things left on board, for such are the conditions printed on the tickets, and consequently actual thefts are committed without any redress.

7. Pilgrim Camps.—The question of the pilgrim camps at the various pilgrim centres is very important. I have sufficient experience of the pilgrims' camp at Karachi and I can say that there is much to be done there for the facilities of the pilgrims with regard to accommodation, sanitation, medical arrangements, issuing of passports, inoculation, water arrangements, etc.

8. Haj Committees.—At present it is not known what the duties, powers, and responsibilities of the members of the Haj Committees are, and in the absence of this the Haj Committee members can do no practical good to the pilgrims. Unless the question of the Haj Committees is thoroughly reconsidered no good will come out of their appointment. It is therefore necessary that the question of the formation of the Haj Committees should be reconsidered and the duties of such Haj Committees be properly defined by some rules and regulations.

9. Procedure for getting Single Tickets very difficult.—The procedure for obtaining single tickets for those who are bona fide not returning to India is a difficult one. It is with great difficulty that these tickets are obtained at present.

10. System of Return Tickets.—The present system of getting a refund of the difference between the single and return fares in case of those who do not return to India should be considered and the system made easier.

11. System of deposits and unclaimed deposits.—It is also necessary that the present system of receiving deposits from the Haj pilgrims and the disposal of the deposits be enquired into. In what manner thousands of rupees lapse to the Deposit Fund at the various pilgrim centres is also a question that should be thoroughly investigated. Thousands of rupees are realized from interest on deposits. In what manner that interest is utilized is also a question that should be investigated.

12. Jeddah Arrangements.—Other Governments have their special arrangements for their pilgrims at Jeddah regarding protection, medicines and other necessities of the pilgrims. Similarly, there should be a special department on behalf of the Indian Government at Jeddah to look after the convenience of the pilgrims.

Conclusion.—Before concluding I beg to submit that I am quite sure that, constituted as I suggest the Committee should be, the vexed question of the hardships of the Haj pilgrims will be solved in a manner which is likely to result in the best interests of India.

With these words I commend this Resolution to the unanimous acceptance of this House.

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah (Member for Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I feel that it will be regarded as superfluous if I should try to give an assurance to the House in general, and to my Muslim brethren in particular, of my deep interest on behalf of the Hajis. Indeed I should deem it my duty, nay, a privilege, if I could do something to alleviate their sufferings, so far as they are reasonable, legitimate and genuine. When this Resolution was put into my hands my mind worked in a particular direction for the purpose of solving the object which the Honourable Mover has in mind. It seemed to me, and I may say that it still seems to me, that the better way of tackling the problem would be in a manner that I shall venture to explain. Honourable Members must be aware that at the present moment, although the Haj pilgrimage is a central subject, the responsibilities of the Government of India in that matter are discharged through the agency of the Provincial Governments, and may I add that most of the Provincial Governments are aided in their turn by what are termed as Haj Committees, with of course a preponderating Muslim element thereon. I have so far not received very definite complaints in regard to what the Honourable Mover has depicted in his very interesting speech. It seemed to me therefore not only fair but very necessary that to elucidate the real position I should agree on the floor of the House to communicate to the Provincial Governments this Resolution, together with any debate that may ensue thereon, and ask them to express their own views after consulting their Haj Committees ; and, on receipt of those reports from the various Provincial Governments, it was again my intention that I should lay the whole correspondence on the table of the House.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What about the conference you have already had and the questions asked in this House during the last two years ? Was not the Honourable Member in a position to deal with the Provincial Governments and the Haj Committees previously with regard to all the grievances ?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah : Yes, they were referred to the Haj Committee ; and after laying them on the table of the House invite for consultation with me the Muslim Members of the Legislature and discuss with them the issues which emerge as a result of those reports. If as a result of such discussion it was found necessary to appoint a Committee, there would be ample material for the investigation of the Committee. I may remind the House that on two previous occasions it was my privilege to be helped greatly by my Muslim brethren in the Legislature. When, in 1925, I attempted to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act with a view to the introduction of the system of return tickets, and then again in 1927 when I made another attempt for the purpose of amending the same Act so that the pilgrims who were detained at the port of embarkation for a period beyond that which was regarded as reasonable should be entitled to compensation from the shipping companies, I adopted the procedure of seeking the help of the Muslim Members of the Legislature for the purpose of fortifying myself, with real Muslim public opinion. I may also inform the House that in connection with the consideration of this Resolution I came to the conclusion that the time had come when not only the Provincial Governments should be aided by Haj Committees with a preponderating Muslim element thereon, but that the Government of India should also call to its aid a Committee more or less of the type of what is known as a Departmental Advisory Committee. Indeed we have already the Standing Emigration Committee whose work and whose utility are beyond description. They render such useful help that I am tempted to think that if a similar Committee was installed for the purpose of helping the Department in charge of pilgrimage great benefit would be derived and such of the complaints which do not now reach the ears of the Government of India through responsible sources may come to us through the medium of that Advisory Committee, and we shall then be in a position to act according to their advice. This, Sir, was the brief outline of the plan which I had envisaged in my own mind when this Resolution was tabled and I claim, if I may say so, that there is some merit in the suggestion that I have put forward. At any rate it deserves some consideration.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Tabled by all the Muslim Members of the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah : But if the Honourable Muslim Members of this House feel strongly that a committee of enquiry should be appointed, I shall certainly not oppose it. (Cheers.)

I have not paid one of my rare visits to this House, for the purpose of opposing the Resolution, or for exhibiting anything like an uncompromising attitude. (Cheers.) If the Muslim Members of this House feel that they will be satisfied with nothing short of an appointment of a Committee, I repeat that, on behalf of the Government of India I shall accept their verdict (Cheers). But at the same time let me inform the House that I am prepared to accept the Resolution subject, of course, to the usual conditions. The first condition, as Honourable Members will realise, is one which will lie in their own hands. I mean the appointment of a Committee should be approved by the Standing Finance Committee, and the funds therefor voted by this House. The second is more or less the usual condition, namely, that the Government of India will reserve to itself discretion in regard to the choice of the personnel and the terms of reference to that Committee. And one last condition which Honourable Members will recognise is one of importance, and it is this, that the activities of this Committee will be confined only to arrangements made in India. (An Honourable Member : "What about quarantine conditions?") This condition is necessary, I was going to explain, in order to avoid the Committee, if appointed, claiming to investigate such matters as the quarantine arrangements made at Kamaran, which is in the Persian Gulf, or in the Hedjaz which, as Honourable Members know, is a foreign territory. (An Honourable Member : "Is it?") That is how I understand it. Well, it will obviously be impossible.... (Mr. K. Ahmed : "Protected by the British.") Everybody is protected by the British. It will, therefore, be obviously impossible to bring the affairs of Kamaran and the Hedjaz within the ambit of a Committee set up by the Government of India and whose jurisdiction must certainly begin and end with British India. I just wanted to make this position sufficiently clear. If my Muslim brethren are willing to accept those conditions, and if they insist on the appointment of a Committee as the only step towards the investigation of the grievances of the pilgrims, I repeat that I am quite willing to accept it. (Cheers.)

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan): Sir, I rise, with your permission, to lend my support to the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Haji Abdoola Haroon. Before I do so, I have to thank the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah for the frankness with which he has put his case and for the sympathy he has shown in the troubles of the Hajis. Sir, it fell to my lot in the very beginning of my career as a Member of this Assembly to study all the Acts, the rules and the regulations regarding Hajis from the earliest times. I have studied them with industry and care, and I think I can understand the implications of these Acts and these rules and regulations. I thought at that very moment that these rules and regulations were not made with reference to the life, the feeling and the sentiments of the people who were concerned with those laws and for whom they were made. Fortunately, soon after that, I had to fight for the opening of the Haj season that year and we had to force our way to Hedjaz because the Government discouraged the Haj in that season. I had to travel myself to the Hedjaz. Although I was offered some very comfortable position on my journey to the Hedjaz, I preferred to go through all the minute details through which the poor pilgrims had to pass.

4-0 P.M.

Mr. President : Order, order. I do not desire to interrupt the Honourable Member, but I hope he will realise that the issue between the Government and the House is not whether a Committee should or should not be appointed. The Government as I understood the Honourable Member is prepared to appoint a Committee if the Muslim Members want it and if they accept the conditions indicated by him. So the discussion should better be confined to the acceptance or otherwise of the conditions which the Honourable Member has just mentioned.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : I was just going to refer to that. It is only for that reason that I have risen to speak. You will see that the object of the Resolution is to get a Committee to go into all these details and find out for this House all the grievances which the Hajis really suffer from, from the time they leave their homes till the time when they reach the place up to which the British Government have got their influence.

Mr. President : The Government has no objection to the appointment of a Committee.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : If they left out the troubles at Kamaran, which is so far as I know under the influence of the British Government, although I have been told that it is directly under the control of the British.....

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah : No, no

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : However it is certainly under the influence of the British if not under their direct control. I am certain about that. Therefore, I was telling you, Sir, that we have got to see whether the rules and regulations which are at present in vogue for the Hajis are to be overhauled all through or not. That is the point. If you only want to touch the question so far as the Indian port is concerned, it is not of much avail. We have got to go beyond that. We have got to go to that limit up to which we find that the British Government can influence the authorities who are working in those places. That is the real point. I was going not to ask for the appointment of a Committee. If it had been my Resolution I would have asked for the election of a Committee by this House. However, it is not the Resolution before the House. Therefore I confine myself to pointing out.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to move an amendment.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : I have not done so. However, my point is that we have got to go over the whole thing. I am trying to bring out before the Honourable Member in charge of this Department that it will not do to touch one part and leave the other part at the mercy of the authorities who are dealing with it at present. Of course we do not want that the British Government should be dragged into a matter in which they have no concern. That would of course be beyond the power of the British Government, but so far as we can go we ought to go. If we are satisfied by our private talk with the Honourable Member in charge that the British Government cannot go into that question, if we feel that the British Government is helpless there, we cannot press it ; but if we are not satisfied as regards that point we shall certainly press the point. One point I was going to urge most strongly is that the Honourable Member will remember when constituting the Committee that the Committee which is required to be formed is one of official and non-official Moslems with a majority of non-officials. That of course has to be seen because it is then and then alone that you will be able to know the public mind. If on the other hand you make your choice.....

The Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah : I have not tried to discuss any single item in the Resolution. I have not expressed any difference of opinion so far as the constitution of the Committee is concerned and I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. President : I think it would be a much better course for Honourable Members representing the community to meet Sir Muhammad Habibullah before the next non-official day approaches and discuss the whole question with him. There is hardly any difference of opinion between Government and non-official Members in this matter, and I do not see why they could not come to an understanding on the question and save the time of the House.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : I don't think we should leave this opportunity. This Resolution may be passed and there is nothing.....

Mr. President : If Honourable Members do not want to come to an agreement with the Government they are entitled to do so, but if there is a chance of agreement there is no reason why it should not be taken.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee : If the particular restrictions were removed from the offer made by Government, the Resolution might be passed to-day. I do not want to miss this opportunity.

Mr. President : The object is to get something from the Government. That can be more effectively had by the course I have suggested.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 6th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 6th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Intensive Military Preparations on the North-West Frontier.

165. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a report that intensive military preparations are taking place on the North-West Frontier of India, that a number of new forts have been erected, the Razmak Fort in Waziristan has been enlarged to accommodate 12,000 men, a special camp has been set up in the Tochi River Valley, that 60,000 men are being recruited in Delhi and Lahore, that aerodromes are being hastily constructed in the vicinity of the Afghan Frontier, and motor roads are being built all over the Frontier territory ?

(b) How far is the report correct ; and will the Government kindly state the arrangements that are being made on the North-West Frontier, and the nature of the emergency which they are intended to cope with ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) No emergency whatever has arisen nor are any special arrangements of the nature suggested being made on or in connection with the North-West Frontier.

The whole report is baseless and mischievous, and I am obliged to the Honourable Member for giving me this opportunity of saying so.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What are the reason or reasons why the Army Secretary said yesterday that the military expenditure will not be decreased this year ? Is not that the reason stated in the question ?

Sir Denys Bray : I cannot see that the question arises in any shape or form.

Duplication of the Imperial Mail Service from Bombay to Calcutta.

166. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the Railway Board is about to duplicate the Imperial Mail Service between Bombay and Calcutta, because overseas tourists are booking heavily ? Will Government kindly state the amount of profit or loss incurred on this special service, including the charges of the publicity organisation in London ? What is the total amount of expenditure under this last head, since its inauguration ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Owing to the heavy booking in London it is proposed to duplicate the Imperial Mail Service from Bombay to Calcutta this winter. The Imperial Mail from Calcutta to Bombay was duplicated on several occasions last winter, and if it is necessary the East Indian Railway authorities will no doubt put on a second train again this winter. But, except for two additional carriages, no extra stock is at present being built specifically for this service. The net earnings from the Service for the year ending on the 31st July 1928 were between 2 and 2¼ lakhs ; this figure does not, however, include depreciation due for this period, which may be taken at about Rs. 25,000. The figure also includes nothing on account of the new publicity organisation in London. The booking for the Imperial Mail in London is done by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company. The cost of the London Publicity Office from the 1st September 1927, to the 31st of March, 1928—the latest period for which figures are at present available—was £833, in addition to which £2,000 were spent on advertisement. But since the booking arrangements for the Imperial Mail Service are, as I have explained, in the hands of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, only a negligible portion of this expenditure, if any at all, can be said to have contributed to the use and popularity of the Imperial Mail Service.

QUANTITY AND VALUE OF STEEL CASTINGS FOR RAILWAY ROLLING STOCK ORDERED FOR THE INDIAN RAILWAYS DURING THE CURRENT YEAR.

167. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to make a statement showing the quantity and value of steel castings for railway rolling stock ordered for the Indian Railways in the present year ?

(b) How much of this is represented by axle-boxes ?

(c) To what extent does this represent the approximate annual requirements of the Indian Railways in steel castings ?

(d) What proportion of (i) the axle-boxes, (ii) underframe castings, and (iii) wagon castings, actually ordered is to be of Indian manufacture ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sending the Honourable Member a statement giving the information which he requires.

NUMBER OF UNDERFRAMES TO BE MANUFACTURED AT THE PENINSULAR LOCOMOTIVE WORKS AT TATANAGAR DURING 1928-29.

168. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) How many underframes is it proposed to be manufactured at the Peninsular Locomotive Works at Tatanagar during the year 1928-29 ?

(b) To what extent will the steel components of such underframes be of Indian manufacture ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) 162.

(b) Orders have been placed in India for all steel sections, except three sizes, for which the Tata Iron and Steel Company has not yet got suitable rolls, though I understand they are getting them. The steel castings and the axle-boxes, after a call for tenders in India, are being ordered from Indian firms. I wish to add to that, that I am not quite sure, owing to present conditions at Jamshedpur, whether we shall actually be able to get the steel sections from the Tata Iron and Steel Company this year.

TENDERS FROM THE KUMARDHUBI ENGINEERING WORKS FOR STEEL CASTINGS FOR RAILWAY ROLLING STOCK.

169. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Have the Kumardhubi Engineering Works tendered for steel castings for railway rolling stock required by the Indian Railways since 1926-27 ?

(b) If so, for what quantities, and with what result, on each occasion ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) I am sending the Honourable Member a statement giving the information that he wants.

SPEECH MADE BY SIR RAJENDRA NATH MOOKERJEA REGARDING THE WAGON PURCHASE POLICY OF THE INDIAN STATE RAILWAYS.

170. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a speech made by Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjea at the annual meeting of the Indian Standard Wagon Co., Ltd., held on the 16th June last, regarding the wagon purchase policy of the Indian State Railways ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to make a statement with reference to the different points raised in that speech ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I am afraid that my answer will be rather long in reply to this question, but this is a point on which I am anxious that the House should have full information.

(a) Government have seen Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjea's speech.

(b) With perhaps one exception, the position of Government with regard to the points mentioned by Sir Rajendra Nath Mookerjea has already been made clear in a number of statements. I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply which I gave to Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar's question No. 5 on the 18th of August 1927, to the replies Mr. Parsons gave to Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan's unstarred question No. 149 on the 1st of March 1928, and to Sir Darcy Lindsay's starred question No. 484 on the 19th of March 1928 ; also to the debates which took place last Session on the Steel Industry (Protection) Bill, and to a speech which I made on the 20th September 1927 at the general meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce held at Calcutta.

The exception I have referred to relates to Sir Rajendra's complaint that manufacturers are handicapped in programming their work by delay in settling tenders, and on this point I am glad of the opportunity which the Honourable Member's question gives me to explain the position. Last year there was unavoidable delay in placing orders for this year's requirements because the Railway Board had first to know what decision would be taken on the report of the Tariff Board regarding the grant of protection to the manufacture of wagons and underframes. But I hope there will not be a recurrence of this disturbing factor, and I can definitely say that the Railway Board are anxious to meet the convenience of manufacturers in this matter as far as they possibly can. It is for this reason that they have arranged to take up their rolling stock programme, and place it before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways, six months in advance of the other parts of the programme, so that in ordinary circumstances they should be enabled to call for tenders for their rolling stock requirements of the succeeding year in the autumn of the previous year. They are also fully alive to the desirability of coming to a decision as early as possible on tenders when they are received. It must, however, be realised that there are two factors, one of which I hope will only operate temporarily, which prevent the Railway Board from issuing their call for tenders, and from dealing with the tenders when they are received, as expeditiously as they themselves would wish. In the first place, the designs of some of the types of wagons have not yet been completely standardised and even when the number of wagons required in the following year has been settled it is not possible to call for tenders, or, in fact, for the firms to tender, until the designs have also been settled and detailed plans have been drawn out. This cause of delay will, I hope, soon cease to operate as the result of the action which is being taken to standardize designs. Secondly, in accordance with present arrangements, which were adopted in order to assist the wagon building industry in India, a combined call for tenders is issued for the wagon requirements of all Railways in India, and it is clearly necessary to consult individual railway administrations on the offers which are received before the offers to be accepted can be selected. The necessity for this consultation obviously means that somewhat longer time must elapse between the receipt of a tender and its acceptance than would otherwise occur.

NUMBER OF WAGONS OF DIFFERENT TYPES ORDERED FOR THE RAILWAY SINCE THE TERMINATION OF THE BOUNTY SYSTEM.

171. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) How many wagons of different types have been ordered for the Railways since the termination of the bounty system, and with whom have the orders been placed and at what rates ?

(b) What steps, if any, have been, or are proposed to be, taken to ensure that a " substantial portion " of the materials used in the manufacture of each wagon is of Indian origin ?

(c) In interpreting the term " substantial proportion ", do the authorities satisfy themselves that such proportion represents a maximum of Indian materials that could possibly be utilised in such manufacture ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I lay on the table a statement giving the information required so far as it is at present available. It shows the orders placed since the termination of the " bounty system " up to the 31st July 1928. I have not yet been able to get the full details required by the Honourable Member with regard to the orders placed abroad, but I am obtaining them from Railways and will furnish the information as soon as possible.

(b) The call for tenders requires the tenderers to satisfy Government that a substantial part of the manufacture will be done in India and that in making purchase of material for constructions of wagons and underframes, Indian manufacturers will be given an opportunity to tender. The general conditions of the contract also require the contractor to state the particulars of the material and parts which he proposes to import for the work and these particulars are carefully scrutinised before orders are placed. It also provides, as an essential condition of the contract, that a substantial part of the process of manufacture shall be done in India and that no important parts other than those detailed in the annexure to the tender shall be used in the work without the previous consent in writing of the buyer. It further provides that before making purchase of the material which the contractor states that he proposes to import, the contractor shall give Indian manufacturers an opportunity to tender.

(c) The details which the contractor is required to give of the materials which he proposes to import, enable the authorities dealing with the tenders to examine whether there are any such materials or parts which can be obtained in India. In fact, it is for this purpose that these details are demanded. I shall like to add that practically all the steel sections used in the manufacture of wagons can be, and are, obtained in India, though there are a few sections which cannot at present be rolled. I understand the firms concerned are taking steps to provide the necessary rolls. On the other hand wheels and axles cannot at present be manufactured in India.

AMENDMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT SO AS TO MAKE MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN SERVICES ELIGIBLE FOR APPOINTMENT AS CHIEF JUSTICES OF THE HIGH COURTS.

172. Lala Lajpat Rai :
Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla :
Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta :
Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they were consulted by His Majesty's Secretary of State for India before the introduction in Parliament of the Bill to amend section 101 of the Government of India Act so as to make members of the Indian services eligible for appointment as Chief Justices of the High Courts ?

(b) If so, did the Government of India agree to the above amendment and when ?

(c) If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, will Government please state why this matter was never mentioned in the House in answer to questions and Resolutions relating to the disqualifications of Vakils in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The Bill was the result of consultation between the Government of India and the Secretary of State.

(b) The Government of India agreed to the amendment in March 1926.

(c) The matter was referred to in the Honourable Sir Malcolm Hailey's speech in this House on the 19th February 1924. The questions asked, and Resolutions moved, in the Houses of the Legislature related only to the removal of the disqualifications of Vakils.

VISIT OF DR. SUDHINDRA BOSE TO INDIA.

173. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that Dr. Sudhindra Bose, Lecturer in the State University at Iowa, was granted a passport to India on the understanding that he would leave the country within six months ?

(b) Who was responsible for imposing this restriction to six months ?

(c) Why was that restriction imposed ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if they intend removing the restriction ? If yes, when ?

(e) Is it a fact that Dr. Bose has asked for an unrestricted visa to enable him to visit India whenever he desired and permission if he chose to settle down here permanently ?

(f) If the answer to (e) be in the affirmative, when is Dr. Bose to be given that permission to settle in India permanently and unrestricted visa to visit India whenever he chose ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer that I gave to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question on the same subject, yesterday.

(b) The restriction was imposed by the Secretary of State.

(e) He has enquired as to the possibility of securing an unrestricted visa and becoming naturalised as a British subject.

(f) The matter will be considered when Dr. Bose again proposes to visit India.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Government of India be pleased to state what are the reason or reasons why Dr. Bose will not be allowed to stay in his own country, so that the country may know exactly what the situation is, and whether the criticism of the action of the Government by this side of the House is justified or not with regard to the Government's refusal to allow Dr. Bose to remain in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think the Honourable Member has correctly apprehended the facts of the case.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does that justify Government in withholding permission from Dr. Bose to come and stay in this country ?

REPORT PUBLISHED IN THE Hindustan Times OF JULY 7TH UNDER THE HEAD LINES " RACIAL ARROGANCE IN EXCELSIS," ETC.

174. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to :

(i) a report published in the Hindustan Times of July 7th under the head-lines " Racial arrogance in excelsis " ; " Colonel's fury " ; " Scene in a Railway Compartment " : and (ii) the Colonel's threat to report the station master on night duty to " his friend ".... a member of the Railway Board ?

(b) Has any action been taken against the station master for declining to carry out the Colonel's command against an invalid old Goanese lady of seventy who was incapable of moving from her seat or the berth on which she was seated without aid ?

(c) Are Government aware that the public opinion as expressed in the Press has approved of the station master's conduct and condemned the Colonel's rudeness ?

(d) What are the facts of the case according to the Government's information ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the article referred to, which contains a remark more or less to the effect stated in (a) (ii).

(b) and (c). No ; nor has any complaint been made to the Railway Board or any member of it.

(d) It seems to have been a petty squabble about berths. None of those concerned has subsequently reported the matter either to the railway authorities or, as I have said, to the Railway Board.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Railway Board take any action if a report is made to it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir ; certainly not.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Then why did the Honourable Member say that none of those concerned has reported the matter either to the railway authorities or to the Railway Board ? What does this answer signify ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It signifies what it says, that no report was made either to the Railway Board or to the Railway Administration.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : When the Honourable Member will not take any action if any report is made to him, what is the use of making a report to the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : To my mind, there would be absolutely no use in making any report to the Railway Board for they would certainly refuse to take any action in a petty squabble about berths which appears to have been quite satisfactorily handled by the station master.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is not the duty of the Railway Board to save its employees from the bullyings of gallant Colonels ?

IMPROVEMENT OF THE ORGANIZATION AND EQUIPMENT OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

175. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India are in close consultation with His Majesty's Government constantly examining the problem of improving the organization and equipment of the Army in India in order to make good any deficiencies, give it the benefit of the latest modern developments and bring it into line with the British Army in Great Britain ?

(b) If the answer to the above question is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to place the correspondence on the table ?

(c) If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, Sir. Consultation with the War Office and the India Office has been maintained, not only by weekly correspondence, but also by personal discussion, for which there have been frequent opportunities during the last few years.

(b) and (c). As my Honourable friend will readily understand, it would not be practicable or desirable to lay on the table of this House the voluminous, and in many cases secret, correspondence and memoranda extending over a number of years on this subject.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask, Sir, whether the Honourable Member himself discussed any question with the military authorities in England on behalf of the Government of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I was not deputed by the Government of India to discuses any question.

INADEQUACY OF MODERN EQUIPMENT FOR THE ARMY IN INDIA.

(b) Is it a fact that India is regarded as having a shortage of mechanical and technical equipment ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) is " Yes ", what steps are being taken to remedy the said shortage and what would be the cost that the remedial measures would entail ?

CHANGE IN THE CHIEF COMMAND OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

177. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a recent statement which appeared in the Pioneer that a change in the chief command in India might shortly be expected ?

(b) Is that statement true ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) is in the negative, are Government aware that the publication of such unfounded statements is calculated to do harm and create a false impression in hostile countries ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to instruct the Publicity Department to issue timely contradictions ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) I have seen the article in question and other statements in the journal to a similar effect.

(b) The statements are entirely unfounded and untrue. There is no truth whatever in the assertion that His Majesty's Government contemplate or contemplated, deputing an officer from England either to investigate the situation or to take over command : and there is also no truth whatever in the statement that either Sir George Milne or Sir Claud Jacob is to visit India during the next cold weather. As regards the Commander-in-Chief, it is perhaps hardly necessary for me to repeat what has already been stated in Parliament, that His Excellency enjoys the full confidence of His Majesty's Government and the Government of India.

(c) The statements were undoubtedly mischievous.

(d) In this instance, the Honourable Member's questions and the questions asked in Parliament have provided the occasion for an official contradiction. Whether Government should, of its own accord, contradict statements of this kind in future, as the Honourable Member seems to suggest, would depend in each case partly on the importance of the subject and partly on the reputation of the newspaper making the statement.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Government has now admitted that mischievous statements have been made by the Pioneer, the most loyal paper at one time, though it has now turned to the side of the Swarajists, will the Honourable Member inform this House, both for their benefit as well as for the benefit of the country, why that paper has gone over to the other side ? Is it with a view to get more circulation than before ? Will the Honourable Member be pleased to explain the reason so that we may know the attitude of the Pioneer and why it has turned against the Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : If the Honourable gentleman will put a question to that effect on paper I will give him a reply.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The Honourable the Army Secretary has just admitted that the Pioneer has made a mischievous statement, and in view of that fact, I think it is only right that Government should make an inquiry into the reason or reasons why it made such a statement.

INADEQUACY OF MODERN EQUIPMENT FOR THE ARMY IN INDIA.

†178. Col. J. D. Crawford : (a) Has the attention of the Government been called to articles in the Press on the subject of the inadequacy of modern equipment for the military forces in India ?

REPORTS OF THE TARIFF BOARD ON THE MATCH INDUSTRY AND THE OIL INDUSTRY.

179. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to state when they expect to publish the Reports of the Tariff Board regarding :

(a) the match industry in India, and (b) the oil industry in India ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 120 given on the 5th September, 1928.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Tariff Board's Report on the match industry was published on Saturday the 1st September last.

(b) The Board's Report on the oil industry will be published at an early date.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I know, Sir, if the Government of India's decision will also be made available to the public at the same time as the publication of the Report ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The decision of the Government of India will be made available to the public simultaneously with the publication of their Report.

THE PILGRIM DEPARTMENT, BOMBAY.

180. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state (1) when the Pilgrim Department in Bombay was opened ; (2) what control, if any, administrative or otherwise, is exercised by the Government of India over this Department ; (3) what is the total strength of personnel in this Department and of what caste ; (4) who is the direct authority who recruits officers in this Department ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Part (1)—About 1882.

Part (2)—Under the Devolution Rules, pilgrimages beyond India are a central subject. In respect of the Pilgrim Department in Bombay, the Local Government only act as the agents of the Central Government who retain powers of superintendence, direction and control. The budget of the Department is sanctioned annually by the Government of India.

Part (3)—Ten, of whom seven are Muhammadans, two Hindus, and one Christian.

Part (4)—The Commissioner of Police, Bombay.

PILGRIMS SHIPS.

181. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : How many pilgrim ships carried Hajis to Jeddah this year, their total number, number of casualties on board the steamer both ways ? Did these steamers carry any qualified surgeon ? Who supplies medicines to the pilgrims on board the ships ? What are the respective tonnage of these ships ? Do they carry Marconi wireless ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Only one ship, the S. S. " Humayun " sailed from Calcutta with 379 pilgrims for Jeddah this year. There were no casualties on board the ship on her outward voyage. No ships returned to Calcutta with pilgrims. The tonnage of the S. S. " Humayun " is 4,513 tons gross and 2,731 tons net. Similar information in respect to pilgrim traffic this year passing through the ports of Bombay and Karachi has been called for from the Government of Bombay and will be furnished to the Honourable Member later.

As regards the rest of the Honourable Member's question I would invite his attention to sections 195, 201 and 242 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923, and rules 54—58, 70 and 80 of the rules relating to pilgrim ships. These rules are contained in the General Instructions for Pilgrims to the Hedjaz, a copy of which will be found in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT OF PILGRIM SHIPS WHEN NOT CARRYING PILGRIMS.

182. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that all pilgrim ships which carry Hajis to and from Jeddah are employed during the out-Haj time for the carriage of cargo ? On whose recommendation did the Government of India license these steamers for the carriage of pilgrims ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall deal with questions Nos. 182, 186 and 190 together. Enquiries have been made from the Government of Bombay and information will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

SICK AND DISEASED PILGRIMS.

183. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state where the sick and the diseased pilgrims are sent on their return from Mecca to Bombay ?

(b) How many pilgrims have been admitted into hospital since 1925 and with what result ?

(c) In view of the fact that sick pilgrims from all provinces of India are sent for treatment to these hospitals, will the Government be pleased to state what arrangements have been made to interpret the languages and dialects of the patients to doctors and others ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Such pilgrims as are willing are sent to hospital.

(b) So far as information is available, 209 pilgrims were sent to hospital, of whom 88 died, 2 are still under treatment and the rest have been discharged.

(c) Members of the Pilgrim Department and servants of the shipping companies, who can interpret in Urdu, Persian, Bengali, Malayalam, Tamil, Gujrati and Marathi, act as interpreters, whenever necessary.

REPATRIATION OF HAJ PILGRIMS WHO LOSE THEIR RETURN TICKETS.

184. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will Government be pleased to state when and at whose instance the return ticket system was introduced on Haj pilgrim ships and what happens when pilgrims loose their tickets ? Are they repatriated free ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The return ticket system was introduced in 1925 at the instance of the Government of India with the approval of the Indian Legislature by means of an amendment of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to section 208-A of the Act. If a pilgrim loses his return ticket and is destitute, he is repatriated by the Government of India free of charge. Shipping companies have however in the past granted free passages to some pilgrims who had lost their return tickets. To avoid loss of return tickets the British Consul at Jeddah has now introduced a system under which these tickets are deposited by pilgrims at the British Agency.

ABOLITION OF THE DEPOSIT SYSTEM IN THE CASE OF HAJ PILGRIMS.

185. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state when the deposit system which was introduced in 1923 was abolished ? Is it not a fact that by this system pilgrims could avoid the troubles and other hardships consequent on the loss of return tickets ? If this deposit system was changed on the passing of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act of 1925, do Government propose to change the particular section of law which stands in the way of this system ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The deposit system referred to by the Honourable Member has not been abolished. In fact under section 208-A of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, which was inserted by an amendment Act of 1925, a statutory provision has been made giving the option to a pilgrim either to purchase a return ticket or to make a deposit. This option was given as a result of the recommendation of the Select Committee of this House which considered the amending Bill in 1925 and which had a majority of Muslim members. If the representatives of the Muslim community, both inside and outside the Legislature, now express a preference for the deposit system, their views will receive careful consideration.

ERECTION OF A PILGRIM CAMP OUTSIDE THE MUNICIPALITY OF BOMBAY.

†186. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are contemplating to erect a pilgrim camp outside the Municipality of Bombay ? If so, why ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Government selected a spot for erecting a camp at Odala near the Parsee Colony at Dadar (Bombay) and that has been rejected by the Public Works Department at the instance of the powerful Parsee community of that locality ?

(c) Are Government now selecting another spot ?

(d) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reason why the Government propose to erect the camp outside the municipal limits although the landing stages for pilgrims are within the city municipal limits ?

(e) Are Government aware that the life of the pilgrims in a camp outside the municipal limits will be insecure and they will be put to great inconvenience for want of the proximity of bazars, mosques, hospitals and on account of the difficulty in getting the necessaries of life ?

(f) Will Government state the reason why musafirkhanas which are in the heart of the city are not being utilized for pilgrim camps ?

COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE LADY SUPERINTENDENT OF THE PILGRIM DEPARTMENT IN BOMBAY.

187. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there have been several complaints against the present Lady Superintendent of the Pilgrim Department in Bombay, by many pilgrims and particularly by the several members of the Haj Committee, Bombay ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 182.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No complaint has been received against the permanent Lady Superintendent of the Pilgrim Department, Bombay, from any pilgrim. Only one complaint was made by a member of the Haj Committee, but, on enquiry, it was not substantiated.

FEMALE ASSISTANT TO THE LADY VACCINATOR IN THE PILGRIM DEPARTMENT, BOMBAY.

188. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a Christian lady was appointed as a female assistant to the lady vaccinator this year in the Pilgrim Department, Bombay, though qualified Muhammadan females were available ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Muhammadan lady who was engaged during the past seven years did not apply for appointment this year. Three applications were received for the post, two from Muhammadans and one from a Christian. The latter was selected as she was also qualified as a nurse.

VISITORS ON BOARD PILGRIM SHIPS.

189. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : In view of the fact that respectable persons gather together in Bombay during the outgoing and incoming pilgrim season to see off and receive their friends and relatives, will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that not a single respectable Moslem gentleman is allowed to enter the wharf or board the ship even after representation and entreaties at the time of embarkation and disembarkation of pilgrims though many European ladies and gentlemen are frequently allowed on board the ship even without a question ? If so, why ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Information regarding the specific complaint made in the Honourable Member's question has been asked for from the Local Government whose reply is awaited. I may, however, inform the Honourable Member that Government are considering the question of issuing a limited number of passes to enable visitors to go on board pilgrim ships.

RUDE TREATMENT OF PILGRIMS IN BOMBAY.

†190. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that pilgrims in general are roughly and rudely handled at the port of embarkation at Bombay at the slightest and even unconscious violation of the existing embarkation regulations ?

APPOINTMENT OF MUHAMMADANS AS SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES IN THE BOMBAY CIRCLE.

191. Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Is it a fact that no Muhammadan has been selected in the Bombay Circle for the posts of

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 182.

Superintendents of Post Offices since 1913 although there are highly qualified Muslim candidates for the same ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state

(i) the percentage of Muhammadans in the Bombay Circle ; and (ii) the number of appointments of Superintendents of Post Offices held by the members of different communities ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) It is a fact that no Muhammadan has been selected in the Bombay Circle for the post of Superintendent of Post Offices since 1913.

(b) (i) 17 per cent.

(ii) The figures are as follows :—

Hindus	12
Muhammadans	1
Parsis	5
Anglo-Indians	5

RAILWAY EARNINGS FROM THIRD CLASS PASSENGERS DURING CERTAIN SPECIFIED PERIODS.

192. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table :

(a) a statement showing the amount of railway earnings from third class passengers during the period intervening between July 31st, 1928, and the date with effect from which the third class fares have been reduced ?

(b) and also a statement showing the railway earnings from third class passengers during the corresponding period last year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid the figures for the period up to the end of July will not be available until some time next October. I will send them to the Honourable Member then. I should warn him, however, that the period of two or three months selected by him is in the opinion of the Railway Board much too short to allow any specific deductions to be drawn from the figures.

Mr. President : Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim.

(There was no reply).

Mr. President : Mr. Ghuznavi.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : May I put question No. 193, Sir, which appears on the paper against the name of Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, may I bring to the notice of the Chair that No. 193 is put down in Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim's name when it is Mr. Ghuznavi's question. Is this the way we have work done in the Legislative Department ? Does the Home Member realise.....

Mr. President : As I explained to the Honourable Member yesterday, the Chair has no control over the Legislative Department.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But does the Home Member realise, Sir, that such a thing should not occur in the Legislative Department which is supposed to be sacrosanct, and which is thus lacking in efficiency ? Do Government propose for the benefit of themselves and the country to remove these lazy assistants and get a fairly intelligent lot such as are available in this Assembly and elsewhere, who will do their duty better than them ?

Mr. President : Whose question is 193 ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : It is my question, Sir. But in my copy of the list of starred questions it appears in Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim's name.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member willing to put question No. 193 ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, Sir.

ELECTRIFICATION OF THE KALKA-SIMLA RAILWAY.

193. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the figures of the earnings of the Kalka-Simla Railway, and also explaining if the Railway is being run at a loss or at a profit ?

(b) If the Kalka-Simla Railway is being run at a loss, do Government propose to consider the desirability of electrifying the Kalka-Simla Railway, with a view to its being worked at a profit ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Honourable Member will find the figures he requires on page 172 of the History of Indian Railways corrected up to 31st March 1927, a copy of which is in the Library. He will see that there was a gain to the State in six out of the last ten years for which figures are there given, and a loss in the other four years.

(b) An investigation into the desirability of electrifying the railway is proceeding.

(1) LACK OF ARRANGEMENTS FOR SIGNALLING MESSAGES AT BRANCH POST OFFICES IN SIMLA.

(2) PROVISION OF MORE LETTER BOXES IN SIMLA.

194. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that the Simla public are hard hit owing to the various branch post offices in Simla not being equipped for signalling messages ?

(b) In view of the fact that all telegrams from Simla are despatched from the General Telegraph Office after being collected from the different branch offices and that such a procedure causes unnecessary delay and vexation, do Government propose to take steps to make arrangements for signalling at every branch office in Simla ?

(c) Do Government propose to take steps to provide more post boxes in Simla ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Of the 7 local combined post and telegraph offices in Simla, all except two, Combermere and Simla North (Elysium), are connected to the Central Telegraph Office by wire.

(b) In the case of the two offices mentioned the average delay in transferring messages by hand is 20 and 15 minutes respectively. This delay does not justify offices being connected by wire and would not be reduced if they were.

(c) Additional letter boxes will be provided by the Postmaster-General, Punjab, as required.

PROVISION OF FRUIT VANS AND REFRIGERATORS ON ALL FAST TRAINS.

195. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that fruit vans are not at present provided in all the most important trains ?

(b) Are the Government aware that this prevents fresh fruit being conveyed from place to place conveniently ?

(c) In view of the above facts, do Government propose to provide fruit vans and refrigerators in all important fast trains ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware of any disinclination on the part of any railway administration to provide fruit vans wherever sufficient traffic in fresh fruit offers. I shall be very glad if the Honourable Member will bring a specific case to my notice. My impression is that all railway administrations are most anxious to encourage this class of traffic.

COOLING SYSTEM IN RAILWAY CARRIAGES.

196. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that the cooling system in railway carriages is very much appreciated by the travelling public ?

(b) Do Government propose to introduce the cooling system into all carriages in all important railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the Honourable Member will let me know to what cooling system he refers, I will try and send him the information for which he asks in the second part of his question.

STRIKE AT THE RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT LILLOOAH.

197. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of Hindus and Muslims among the labourers who went on strike at the railway workshops at Lillooah ?

(b) Have the Government investigated the causes of the Lillooah strike ? If so, what steps do the Government propose to take to prevent the recurrence of similar strikes ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have not got the information for which the Honourable Member asks, and do not think that any useful purpose would be served by collecting it.

(b) Though at the outset the alleged cause of the strike was the discharge of four workmen from the Lillooah workshops, Government believe that the real cause was the refusal by the Agent of the East Indian Railway of certain demands which were put forward by the men under threat of direct action. These demands have been investigated, and, as a result, the Agent has announced certain increases in the pay of certain classes of the lowest paid staff in the Lillooah and Calcutta workshops and his intention to institute an enquiry into the housing conditions of the workshop staff at Lillooah. With regard to the last part of his question, the Honourable Member is now aware of introduction of a Trade Disputes Bill in the current Session.

PERCENTAGE OF EDUCATED WOMEN IN TRAVANCORE AND COCHIN.

198. *Lala Lajpat Rai : (a) Are Government aware that in the Indian States of Travancore and Cochin the percentage of educated women is much larger than in any British province ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House a comparative statement showing the percentage of educated women in Travancore and Cochin and in the different provinces of British India ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes, according to the last census, this is generally true.

(b) A comparative statement is given on page 179 of the first volume of the Census Report, a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Which percentage is greater and which is smaller ?

TREATMENT OF CLERKS IN THE KARACHI BRANCH OF THE IMPERIAL BANK OF INDIA.

199. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a letter by " Fair Play " in the Sind Observer, Karachi, dated the 1st June 1928, regarding " Imperial banking hours " ?

(b) Is it a fact as stated therein that clerks in the Imperial Bank, Karachi Branch, work from 9-30 A.M. to 7-30 P.M. and that on several occasions after having half an hour's rest they work in office till midnight ?

(c) Is it a fact as stated in the letter that clerks of the Imperial Bank, Karachi Branch, are refused leave even in the case of serious illness of their relations and have been advised to resign and go ?

(d) Is it a fact as stated in the letter that the Imperial Bank in India has no fixed rules for its staff as in other Government offices, banks and firms ?

(e) Is it a fact that the grades of salaries of the employees in the Imperial Bank of India (Bombay Circle) have been abolished in June 1926 and that the clerks depend for promotion only on the recommendations of the Local Agents ?

(f) Is it a fact that shroffs in the Imperial Bank (Bombay Circle) have to submit a letter of responsibility for deficit of cash arising in their absence while going on leave for short periods ?

(g) Do Government propose to take any steps to have these wrong methods of administration of the Imperial Bank improved ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) I have seen the letter referred to by the Honourable Member.

(b) to (f). The Government have no information and they are not at liberty to inquire into the matters alleged, as the Imperial Bank of India is not a Government institution.

(g) Does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Government be pleased to advise the Imperial Bank ?

(The Honourable Member remained standing after putting his supplementary question.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must resume his seat after asking the question.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No, Sir.

RECRUITMENT OF MUSSALMANS AS POSTMEN AND MENIALS IN THE CHITTAGONG DIVISION AND THE CHITTAGONG HEAD OFFICE.

200. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim: Is it a fact that Mr. Booth, the late Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam, while visiting Chittagong found in December 1919 that the Mussalmans are ill-represented in the postmen's and menial service and in order to bring the matter on a satisfactory footing he ordered recruitment according to the numerical strength of Mussalmans ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the number of such appointments filled up in the Chittagong Division and the Chittagong Head Office by Mussalmans and others from that date ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Yes, but Mr. Booth's orders referred to the Chittagong Head Office only. Since they were passed the following recruitments have been made in Chittagong Division :—30 Hindu and 5 Mussalman postmen, 30 Hindu and 4 Mussalman menials ; in the Chittagong Head Office 5 Hindu and 1 Mussalman postmen and 12 Hindu and 5 Mussalman menials.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSSALMANS IN THE POSTS AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENTS (BENGAL AND ASSAM CIRCLE).

†201. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Is it a fact that Mussalmans are very ill-represented in the Posts and Telegraph Departments, particularly in the Bengal and Assam Circle ? If so, do Government propose to issue immediate orders to reserve at least the first ten vacancies of gazetted posts in the Circle for Mussalmans, and also the non-gazetted, clerical and menial appointments in each Division, and then fill up the vacancies according to the numerical strength of each community in the Bengal and Assam Circle ? If not, why ?

Mr. President : Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Question No. 201 has not yet been answered, Sir.

Mr. President : It has been answered.

ILL-TREATMENT OF THE RAILWAY EMPLOYEES IN THE MORADABAD AND LUCKNOW DIVISIONS BY CERTAIN SPECIFIED OFFICIALS.

202. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Superintendent, Power House at Lucknow, the Assistant Superintendent, Power House at Moradabad, and the Running Shed Foreman, Moradabad and

Shahjahanpore, are in the habit of using abusive language, behaving discourteously towards and maltreating the railway employees in the Moradabad and Lucknow Divisions ?

(b) Are Government aware that a feeling of general discontent and dissatisfaction is prevailing amongst the railway employees in consequence of the maltreatment of the officers mentioned above ?

(c) Do Government propose an independent and impartial enquiry into the matter and to direct the superior authorities to take proper action against the officers mentioned above ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have received no representations to this effect. In any case it is a matter with which the Divisional Superintendent is quite competent to deal adequately if it is represented to him.

(b) No.

(c) The Government understand that certain representations have been made to the Agent of the East Indian Railway, and they do not propose to interfere with his discretion to deal with them.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do Government propose to abolish the Railway Board for their uncompromising attitude ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think proposals to that effect usually come from the other side of the House and not from Government.

RIOT AT BAMANGACHI.

203. Colonel J. D. Crawford : With reference to the shooting at Bamangachi on March 27th, will Government be pleased to state whether any charge was laid by the police against any of the individuals taking part in the riot and, if so, what was the result ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Government of India understand that no criminal case was started against the persons concerned in the riot.

NO-TAX CAMPAIGN IN BARDOLI.

204. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if prior to the conversations between His Excellency the Governor of Bombay and His Excellency the Governor General any correspondence had passed between the Governments of India and Bombay in connection with the no-tax campaign in Bardoli ? If the answer is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay the correspondence on the table ? If not, why not ?

(b) Did any correspondence on the same question take place between His Majesty's Government in Great Britain and the Government of India, and if so, do Government propose to place the same on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Government of India were in close touch both with the Government of Bombay and with His Majesty's Government over the question. They do not propose to lay the correspondence on the table.

CONTRACT GIVEN TO MESSRS. BURN AND CO. BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY FOR THE SUPPLY OF BASIC PIG-IRON.

205. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact as stated by the "Indian Trade Journal" for June 1928 that contracts for the supply of 3,540 tons of basic pig-iron at Rs. 60 per ton were placed by the East Indian Railway with Messrs. Burn & Co., Ltd., during the week ending the 26th May 1928 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the "Indian Trade Journal" for May 1928 shows that the current market rate for basic pig-iron was : Tata's Rs. 40 a ton, and Burn's, Rs. 60 a ton ? If so, why was the contract not placed with the Tata Company at Rs. 40 a ton, instead of placing it with Burn & Co., at Rs. 60 a ton ?

(c) Was the Tata Company asked to give their quotations for the supply ? If not, why not ?

(d) Who is responsible for the loss of about Rs. 70,800 of the tax-payers' money by giving the contract at a higher rate ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes, except that the contract was placed with the Indian Iron and Steel Company of whom Messrs. Burn & Company are Managing Agents.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. Open tenders were called for in India, but the Tata Iron and Steel Company were unable to quote, and did not put in a tender. The contract was given to the lowest tenderer.

This also gives the reply to (c).

(d) As will be gathered from the foregoing answers, there is no question of a loss of the tax-payers' money ; the best offer was accepted by the East Indian Railway. I have ascertained that the quotation of Rs. 40 per ton given in the "Indian Trade Journal" for May 1928 was for "off grade" iron which does not come within the specified limits of analysis for good basic pig-iron, and is used merely as a substitute for scrap iron. The present price for the Indian Iron and Steel Company's basic pig-iron to their guaranteed analysis is Rs. 61 per ton.

INDIANISATION OF THE STAFF OF THE SECURITY PRINTING PRESS, NASIK.

206. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that in the Nasik Security Printing Press, the highest salary drawn by a European officer is about Rs. 1,875 monthly, while that of an Indian is only Rs. 280 ; and that the total salary bill of Europeans comes to about Rs. 14,275 ; that of domiciled Europeans and Anglo-Indians to Rs. 3,275 ; and that of Indians to Rs. 3,467 only per month ?

(b) Have Government received any representation from the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay, on the subject ?

(c) What steps have Government taken, or propose to take, to Indianise the Nasik Security Printing Press ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The highest salary drawn by a European officer, viz., the Master of the Security Press, is Rs. 3,875, a month. The total monthly salary drawn by Europeans, domiciled Europeans and Anglo-Indians is Rs. 18,280, and that by Indians Rs. 22,546.

(b) Yes.

(c) The industry recently established in the Nasik Security Press is one entirely new to India, and the Indians possessing the knowledge of engineering and acquaintance with fine printing required in the higher posts are not at present available. The applications received from Indians for employment in the higher posts in the Security Press were either from men without experience in any technical line, or from men who had not made good in their previous employment. The Europeans employed in the higher appointments in the Press are men who have reached their present position by virtue of long service and technical experience, and these Europeans are now endeavouring to communicate their technical knowledge and experience to Indians already employed at the Press who are being trained in the various branches of the business. Several of these already show great promise, and among them should be found some who in course of time will succeed worthily to the higher posts.

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask where the Europeans employed in this Security Printing Press gained their technical experience ? Did they gain it in India or abroad ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am unable to answer that question fully, but, so far as I am aware, many of them had gained their experience abroad.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Do Government propose to send abroad certain of the Indians working in this Press to acquire the necessary experience ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am unable to give any definite answer to that question at present. But my Honourable friend will remember that that was a point raised by the Standing Finance Committee when they were dealing with a proposal for additional staff for this particular institution. I have no doubt that Government will give due consideration to the matter when they are dealing with that recommendation.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : What is the number of Europeans who get Rs. 18,000 a month, and what is the number of Indians who get Rs. 20,000 a month ?

Mr. President : No one, Indian or European, gets Rs. 20,000 or Rs. 18,000.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I want to know the total number.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I regret, Sir, I am unable to give the numbers because I have not got the figures in my head. If the Honourable Member will put down a question on paper I shall see that it is answered.

TRAINING OF INDIANS IN FLYING IN ENGLAND.

207. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that three scholars have been selected by the High Commissioner for India in London for receiving flying instructions at the De Havilland Flying School, Stag Lane Aerodrome, Edgware, Middlesex, and two scholars have been selected by the Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that 2 of the scholars come from Bengal, 2 from Bombay, and 1 from Madras ?

(c) How have these selections been made, and what facilities, if any, were given to the other Provinces to offer their quota of scholars for training ? Have any rules been framed on the subject, and have they been published for general information ? Can a copy of them be laid on the table ?

(d) What is the amount of stipend, etc., if any, given to a scholar ; and can the number of scholars be increased ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The selection of candidates in England was made by the High Commissioner for India after the selected candidates had been examined by a Selection Committee constituted for the purpose. The selection of candidates in India was made by the Government of India after the selected candidates had been examined by the Public Service Commission. Applications for the vacancies in India were invited by advertisements in the leading newspapers in India, and applications were received from all the major provinces except Assam and Burma. A copy of the rules and the prescribed form of application will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

(d) The amount of the stipend is £240 per annum. The Government of India contemplate the offer of five further scholarships in the next two years.

POLITICAL PROPAGANDA BY A PROMINENT GOVERNMENT SERVANT IN THE Round Table.

208. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following statement in the Pioneer, dated Thursday, July 19th, under the title " Current Comment " on page 2 :

" .....A prominent servant of Government is responsible for the quarterly articles in the Review " The Round Table ".....The articles have been almost without exception, inimical to the legitimate aspirations of Indians."

(b) Is it a fact that Government servants are forbidden to take part in political propaganda ?

(c) Do Government propose to enquire who the writer of the articles mentioned in clause (a) is ?

(d) Do Government propose to ask him to desist from further propaganda in the Round Table ?

(e) Will copies of the Round Table for the last three years be placed in the Library ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the Government Servants' Conduct Rules.

(c) and (d). No, as they are not aware that any breach of these rules has been committed.

(e) Copies will be placed in the Library.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether the Director of Publicity is permitted to write to the Round Table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Under the restrictions laid down by the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, he is.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Does he actually write to the Round Table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I understand that he has contributed some articles to the Round Table.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Was the article on India in the last issue of the Round Table written by him ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must have notice of that question. I have read several articles by him in the Round Table which, in my opinion, are quite within the Government Servants' Conduct Rules.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I believe Mr. Coatman is here, and he can answer the question himself.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Are the Government aware that the Governor of a Province, who has since retired, used to write to the Round Table during the period of his Governorship and also during the period when he was Inspector General of Police of a particular Province ? Will Government enquire into it if they are not aware of it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware of the fact, but I am prepared to accept the statement of the Honourable Member.

EMPLOYMENT IN THE MALAY STATES FOR REPATRIATED INDIANS FROM SOUTH AFRICA, TRINIDAD AND OTHER PLACES.

209. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Government of India have requested the Madras Government to negotiate with the authorities of the Malay States with a view to finding employment for a number of repatriated Indians from South Africa, Trinidad and other places ?

(b) Is it a fact that a large number of repatriated Indians arrived in this country some time ago and the majority of them, finding that the conditions in India were not suited to them, were anxious to return to their places of domicile across the seas ? If so, what was their exact number ?

(c) What arrangements have been made for their return to their places of domicile ? If none, why not ?

(d) Has any work been found for them in the Malay States ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Government of India have asked the Government of Madras to ascertain from the Emigration Commissioner for Malaya whether he would be prepared to offer facilities to certain returned Indian emigrants at Matiabruz to emigrate to Malaya. So far as the Government of India are aware, the majority of these returned emigrants come from Trinidad, Mauritius and British Guiana.

(b) The majority of the people who emigrated from India to various Colonies in the past under a system of Indenture were entitled to a free return passage. Many of these avail themselves of this right and a number of emigrants return to India every year. The number, however, who have expressed a desire to leave India again is small : about eight hundred during the last nine years as compared with 56 thousand who came back to the country.

(c) I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to section 2 (1) (b) (i) of the Indian Emigration Act which defines the conditions under which a returned emigrant may be assisted to return to the part of the world to which he originally emigrated. Two Colonial Governments, viz., the Government of Fiji and the Government of British Guiana have aided 350 and 173 returned emigrants to go back to their respective Colonies. The rest of those now at Matiabruz have, it is understood, expressed a desire to go to Malaya, and their request has been referred to the Emigration Commissioner as already stated.

(d) The reply of the Government of Madras, through whom the Emigration Commissioner for Malaya has been approached, is awaited.

REPATRIATION OF INDIANS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

210. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if they propose to take steps to put a full and immediate stop to the repatriation of Indians from South Africa ?

(b) if they are aware that the scheme of repatriation has failed and the repatriated Indians are anxious to return to South Africa ?

(c) if they are aware that several of the repatriated Indians are domiciled South Africans, mostly born and bred in South Africa ?

(d) if they are aware that the repatriated Indians find they have neither friends nor family attachments nor work in this country ?

(e) if they will ascertain the opinions in writing of the repatriated Indians whether they like to stay in India or go back to their places of domicile ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer parts (b)—(e) of the question first. The answer to part (b) is in the negative.

(c) Some of the assisted emigrants were born and brought up in South Africa ; but the majority of them are either people who emigrated from this country originally or their children.

(d) The Government of India have received no report from the Government of Madras to the effect that the majority of assisted emigrants have neither friends nor relations to go to. As regards work, the Honourable Member is probably aware that a Special Officer has been appointed in Madras to find work suited to the inclination and aptitude of those who apply for it. The reports so far have been that the returning emigrants do not want work : their anxiety is to get to their relations and friends as soon as they land in Madras.

(e) Government do not consider that such an enquiry is necessary, but if the Honourable Member has knowledge of any widespread dissatisfaction with conditions of life in India among returned emigrants, they will be glad to look into the complaints if the Honourable Member will be so good as to pass these on to them.

(a) From the replies given to parts (b)—(e) of his question, the Honourable Member will infer that the answer to part (a) is in the negative.

EXCLUSION OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY FROM THE AGE OF CONSENT COMMITTEE.

211. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state why the members of the Legislative Assembly were excluded from the "Age of Consent" Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In view of the nature of the enquiry contemplated, Government considered it desirable to constitute a Committee which could not be regarded as already committed to any particular views. The report of the Committee and any legislation that may be undertaken in pursuance of its recommendations must necessarily come before the Assembly for the fullest consideration and discussion. If, however, the House so desires, I shall be prepared to add from its Members to the Committee.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Were any Members of the Legislative Assembly on the Royal Agricultural Commission, on the Taxation Enquiry Committee and on various other Committees whose reports were discussed in this House ?

Mr. President : I am afraid that question does not arise out of this reply.

PAY OF THE BRITISH TRADE AGENT OF GARTOK AND HIS STAFF.

212. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: (a) What is the monthly salary of the British Trade Agent at Gartok and his staff or establishment ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement, in full detail, showing the total amount of annual expenditure in their salaries, travelling allowance and conveyance allowance of this British Trade Agent and his establishment, and in running a travelling post office and in employing a police force for this British Trade Agent ?

(c) Are all these expenses borne by the British Exchequer or by the Government of India ?

(d) Is any contribution made by the British Colonies towards the cost of maintaining this British Trade Agent at Gartok and his establishment ?

(e) What are the duties of this British Trade Agent at Gartok ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) The pay of the British Trade Agent, who is not a whole time Government servant, is Rs. 100 a month for the months April to December.

The pay of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon is Rs. 200 per mensem throughout the year.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

(c) By the Government of India.

(d) No.

(e) To visit the trade marts in Western Tibet, to protect and promote the commercial interests of traders from British India, and, generally, to watch the operation of the Trade Agreement.

Expenditure on the British Trade Agency at Gartok.

Serial No.	Head of Account.	Expenditure per annum.	Remarks.
		Rs.
1	Pay of Establishment	3,300*	*(i) British Trade Agent for 9 months at Rs. 100 per mensem = Rs. 900. (ii) One Sub-Assistant Surgeon for full year at Rs. 200 per mensem =Rs. 2,400.
2	Travelling Allowance	6,247
3	Supplies and Services ..	1,389
4	Contingencies including Post Office, pay of menial establishment, etc.	4,740
	Total ..	15,676

N.B.—Since 1924 no Police force has been employed for the Agency.

SUMMER AND WINTER HEADQUARTERS OF THE BRITISH TRADE AGENT AT GARTOK.

213. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the summer headquarters of the British Trade Agent is at Gartok and his winter headquarters at Simla ?

(b) Who supervises the work of this British Trade Agent ?

(c) What is the distance from Simla to Gartok via Rampur Bushir, Poo and Chini ?

(d) What are the distances from Almora and Naini Tal to Gartok respectively ?

(e) Is it advantageous in the interest of the Government that the winter headquarters of this British Trade Agent be removed from Simla to Almora or Naini Tal ?

(f) Is the route from Almora or Naini Tal to Gartok shorter than that from Simla to Gartok via Rampur Bushir, Poo and Chini ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes.

(d) Approximately 250 miles from Almora.

(e) The change would not be in the interest of Indian trade as a whole, as it would not keep us in the same touch with the more important wool and trade centres in the northern portions of Western Tibet.

(f) Yes.

REMOVAL OF THE WINTER HEADQUARTERS OF THE BRITISH TRADE AGENT AT GARTOK FROM SIMLA TO ALMORA OR NAINI TAL.

214. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the British Trade Agent at Gartok has to do his duties at the big marts of Gyanima, Chhakra, Taklakot, Duba, Shib, Chilam (Tibet) which lie near Milam (Almora) and where a trade of Rs. 26 lakhs is done collectively at all these marts for a period of only two months, i.e., from 1st July to 31st August every year when the markets are open ?

(b) Is it also a fact that there is a post office named Gartok Post Office which is for the sole purpose of this British Trade Agent and which always remains with him ?

(c) Is it also a fact that if the winter headquarters of this British Trade Agent be removed from Simla to Almora or Naini Tal the whole expenditure of the conveyance of the equipments of the travelling post office (Gartok Post Office) will be saved to Government ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) His duties are concerned with the marts mentioned but also with the marts in the central and northern portions of Western Tibet.

(b) There is a post office at Gartok, but it is not for the Trade Agent only ; it is open to the public, and is indeed a necessity for our Indian traders in Western Tibet.

(c) The equipment of the post office is small and the expenditure on conveyance trifling. Even if the Trade Agent's winter headquarters were removed to Almora or Naini Tal, a post office at Gartok will still be a necessity for our traders.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE CONCESSION GRANTED IN 1922 TO BRANCH LINE RAILWAY COMPANIES OF TREATING SUPERTAX AS A WORKING EXPENSE.

215. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the grounds on which the Secretary of State has decided that super-tax cannot properly be treated as a working expense in making up accounts with Branch Line Railway Companies ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the amount which they expect to gain by this change ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that this decision of the Secretary of State is in contravention of Government orders, dated 5th October 1922 ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Government of India have agreed with the decision of the Secretary of State ?

(e) If the reply to part (d) above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for arriving at that decision ?

(f) Are Government aware that the decision of the Secretary of State, as now notified, will, in the case of those Companies which require to draw rebate for the purposes of a 5 per cent. dividend, effectually prevent this payment of a dividend at that rate to their shareholders ?

(g) Are Government aware that shareholders in Branch Line Railway Companies construe the decision of the Secretary of State referred to in (a) above as being a breach of the undertaking arrived at between the Branch Line Railway Companies and the Government of India in 1922 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Because super-tax is essentially a tax on profits, and profits cannot be ascertained until working expenses have been met. This being so, there seems no good reason for relieving a Branch Line Company from a tax intended to be of general application.

(b) I am afraid I cannot give exact figures, but the amount is probably in the region of a lakh of rupees.

(c) It would be more correct to describe it as the withdrawal of a concession which was granted as a special case to Companies existing at the time the concession was given.

(d) The Government of India have accepted the views of the Secretary of State and given effect to them in the orders which they have issued.

(e) I have explained the grounds for the decision in my reply to (a).

(f) This is correct.

(g) No. I may add that I met representatives of some of the Branch Line Railway Companies in Calcutta recently and discussed this question with them. I think they realised that the orders which have recently issued amount to a withdrawal of a concession which was granted in 1922 ; at any rate this is a correct statement of what has occurred. At the same time I informed the representatives of those Companies that if they chose to make further representations to us we would consider them very carefully.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Was this question considered by the Central Advisory Council for Railways ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think so. I do not think the question has ever been placed before the Central Advisory Council. I am at the moment considering a suggestion that it should be so placed, which emanated from the Honourable Member himself. I feel a good deal of difficulty about that because the question at issue seems to be rather a question of law than a question of general policy. However, I will undertake to consider very carefully the request which has been made.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : On what grounds was the concession made in 1922, if it is a question of law ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not quite sure on what grounds the concession was made in 1922, but I will look into the papers and let the Honourable Member know.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Does the Honourable Member not think that that is very pertinent to the decision that the Secretary of State has now arrived at, by which he has thought fit to change a concession which was deliberately given in 1922, the law at that time being exactly the same as it is to-day ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I doubt if it is pertinent. If the decision now reached is that the law is such and such, even if the previous practice has not been in accordance with the law the law should now be obeyed.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Is the law adamant about this ? Has it not proved to be flexible if the Government of India wanted it to be so ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not sure that the law can be flexible and not adamant ! I may say that when I met the representatives of several Branch Line Companies in Calcutta, I made them a definite offer that if they would like to test this matter in the High Court, we would take such steps as we could to make it inexpensive for them to bring a test case. I do not know if they propose to adopt that course or not.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : If I understood the Honourable Commerce Member correctly, he is prepared to put this case before the Central Advisory Council.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I did not go as far as that. What I said was that I felt a good deal of difficulty about this matter. When we are dealing with a matter of general policy, that would be a suitable question to refer to the Central Advisory Council, but when there is a question of law involved, then I am afraid the Central Advisory Council would not be in a position to give the advice that was needed.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Does the Honourable Member imply that a discussion in the Central Advisory Council would injure the position of the Government of India in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I cannot imagine how it could in this particular case.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : In view of that, may I suggest to the Honourable Member that the correct thing to do would be to let the Central Advisory Council discuss this.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have promised that I will consider that. I am afraid I cannot go further than that at the present moment.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I am content to leave it at that just now.

NUMBER OF STRIKES ON THE RAILWAYS DURING THE LAST 12 MONTHS.

216 Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) How many strikes have taken place in all the Railways in India during the last 12 months ?

(b) Where did those strikes occur ?

(c) Why did those strikes occur ?

(d) How many men were killed during the strikes ? And how ? And why ?

(e) Were the families of those killed recompensed ? If not, why not ? If so, how much ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Four.

(b) On the Bengal Nagpur Railway at Khargpur.

On the East Indian Railway at Lillooah with subsidiary strikes at Howrah, Ondal, and Asansol.

On the South Indian Railway at Golden Rock, Trichinopoly, Negapatam, and Podanur Workshops, and on the metre gauge generally among the lower paid classes of the running staff.

On H. E. H. the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway at Secunderabad.

(c) The strike at Khargpur on the Bengal Nagpur Railway was due to the mens' dissatisfaction at reductions of establishment which had been found necessary.

With regard to the strike on the East Indian Railway, I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to the Honourable Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi's starred question No. 197 to-day.

On the South Indian Railway the strike among the workshop staff was due to dissatisfaction on the part of the men at reductions of establishment rendered necessary by the transfer of the workshops from Negapatam to Golden Rock. The lower paid classes of the running staff are understood to have struck in order to enforce a demand for higher wages.

The causes of the strike in the workshops at Secunderabad on the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway are obscure.

One man was killed during the riot caused by the strikers at Tuticorin, and one man was killed near Trichinopoly where a large mob collected and attacked the engine crew after the engine had collided with a motor bus at a level crossing.

(e) So far as the Government of India are aware, no payments have been made to the families of rioters who were killed ; nor is Government aware of any reason why compensation should be paid in such cases.

I may inform the Honourable Member that the period that I have taken for these figures is from the 1st September 1927 to the 1st September 1928.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will Government consider the question of giving compensation to these people ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : That is not, I think, a question which it would ordinarily fall to me to answer, because we are dealing here with persons killed in the course of action taken to quell a riot. All I can say is that Government is not aware of any reason why compensation should be paid to the relatives of rioters who are killed while causing a riot.

APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE TO ENQUIRE INTO THE GRIEVANCES OF THE EMPLOYEES ON THE INDIAN RAILWAYS.

217. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if they propose to appoint a Commission of Enquiry consisting of officials and non-officials selected by or from the Central Legislature to investigate the grievances of the employees on the Indian Railways ?

(b) If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) No.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the discussion which took place in this House on the 27th February last on a motion moved by the Honourable Colonel Gidney during the course of the Railway Budget, and also to a speech which I made in another place on the 5th of September 1927 on a Resolution moved by the Honourable Dr. Rama Rau recommending the appointment of a Committee on the lines suggested in the question. I there gave the reasons why Government did not consider that such a Committee would be either desirable or effective as a means of dealing with any grievances brought forward by employees on Indian Railways.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member inform this House whether any action has been taken in regard to the discussion we had on the Railway Budget last February on this very matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think if the Honourable Member will wait till he hears the answer to the next question, that will give him the information he wants.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is not a fact that during the discussion about this Inquiry Committee, Government stated that the appointment of an Inquiry Committee would lead to discontent among the staff.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not know to what statement made on behalf of Government the Honourable Member refers, but if he has verified it, I am quite prepared to take it from him. It is not within my recollection at the moment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : If that statement is correct, may I ask whether the present unrest is due to the appointment or non-appointment of ....

Mr. President : That is a hypothetical question.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : In view of the accumulating grievances of the Railway employees, strikes and things of that kind, will Government be pleased to reconsider their own position and view in the matter and appoint the Committee asked for ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I cannot hold out any hope, I am afraid, to my Honourable friend that Government will find it possible to do that.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do Government propose to ask a member of the Railway Board to go round and make an inquiry into the grievances of the railway employees, if they do not propose to appoint a Committee.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : All these matters have been engaging the constant attention of the members of the Railway Board and the Government of India. I do not at the present moment see that it would serve any particular purpose to send round a member of the Railway Board ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I know whether the present unrest is the result of the constant attention paid to these matters by the Railway Board ? (Laughter.)

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN REGARD TO PAY AND PROSPECTS OF EMPLOYEES ON THE RAILWAYS.

218. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that racial discrimination exists on the Indian Railways in regard to pay and prospects ?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all the facts relating to racial discrimination under the following heads :

(i) Among the Indian, Anglo-Indian and European guards ?

(ii) Among the station masters and signallers ?

(iii) The other employees ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state when they propose to put an end to these racial discriminations ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the debate which took place last session on the motion moved during the discussion on the Railway Demands by Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru. The position with regard to racial discrimination and the policy of Government with regard to it was then explained in speeches made by the Honourable Railway Member and myself. I should add that, as was then promised, all instances mentioned which appeared to suggest that there remain vestiges of racial discrimination either in the terms of initial employment or in the terms given after employment in railway service are being actively examined with a view to the removal of any cause for complaint in this direction. The Railway Board have also addressed the Agents of all Railways on the subject generally, reiterating their determination that all traces of racial discrimination should be completely eliminated, asking them to make an examination of their rules and practice, and pointing out that their examination should not be confined to the individual cases brought to notice in the course of the debate on the Budget but cover the whole field. I lay a copy of the letter which was sent to Agents on the table.

Letter from the Secretary, Railway Board, to the Agents, North Western, Eastern Bengal, East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula, Bengal Nagpur, Bombay, Baroda and Central India, Madras and Southern Mahratta, South Indian, Bengal and North Western, Rohilkund and Kumaon, Assam Bengal and Burma Railways, No. 624-E., dated the 20th July, 1928.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION.

I am directed to invite your attention to the debate on "Racial Distinctions in Subordinate Establishments" reported in the Official Reports of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Friday, 24th February 1928, Vol. I, No. 16 (pages 779-782), and Saturday, 25th February 1928, Vol. I, No. 17 (pages 786-808).

2. You are aware that it is definitely the policy of the Government of India that all traces of racial discrimination should be completely eliminated, either in the terms which are offered for initial employment, or in the treatment after employment of subordinate staff.

3. In the debate, it was alleged that, though different grades for particular nationalities may no longer exist in graded establishments, direct admission to the higher grades, both on initial employment and on transfer from a different class, is in practice restricted to particular communities. The Railway Board desire that your methods of appointment direct to grades above the lowest applicable to each class of staff may be examined, and that you will inform the Board what steps you propose to take to remove whatever grounds may at present exist for this allegation.

4. Another point brought forward was that distinctions persist in the matter of medical relief. Practical considerations require that the staff should be classified in some manner for this purpose ; but I am to request that your regulations may be examined, and your arrangements adjusted if necessary, so that the same standard of attendance and accommodation may be available to all subordinate staff, irrespective of race but coming, however, within the same class according to pay.

5. It will be also noted that the Railway Board have invited information regarding cases in which there appears to be a suspicion of racial discrimination. The examination of the position, which you will now make, should not therefore be confined only to the two aspects to which reference has been made above.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India will appoint a Committee of Inquiry to find out whether there is racial discrimination on the Indian Railways or not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No. The Government of India consider that the action which they have taken should sufficiently meet the case.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether racial discrimination will be removed simply by issuing a letter to the Agents ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have no reason to believe that the Agents will in any way disobey the orders of the Railway Board ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask when it was that the Government of India first decided that there should be no racial discrimination ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Will the Honourable Member kindly give me notice of that ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Honourable Member please state how long it will take to get rid of the existing racial discrimination, roughly ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think the Honourable Member will realise that it is impossible to give an answer to a question of that kind. The complaint has generally been that owing to certain rules and certain practices on Railways certain communities have had a preference in getting appointments ; it is a question, therefore, of revising the rules and revising the practice. It is impossible for me to say within a month or two months or three months when the revision of those rules will be complete. All I can say is that we are doing our best to fulfil the pledges that we gave at the time of the last budget debate.

12 NOON.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Will the Government of India give a proof of their intentions by starting with the Railway Board itself ?

EXPENDITURE PER HEAD OF THE POPULATION IN INDIA ON LIQUORS AND INTOXICANTS.

219. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Have Government noticed the following quotation from a recent issue of the Manchester Guardian :

"The annual statement on the drink bill of Great Britain, issued by the United Kingdom Alliance, shows that last year there was a total net decline on the consumption of beer of 400,000 bulk barrels. There was an increase of 11,500 proof gallons in the consumption of spirits, and in wine an increase of 136,000 gallons. It is estimated that the amount spent on intoxicating drink for 1927 was £298,800,000 which compares with £301,300,000 for 1926, and the expenditure per head of the population has fallen from £6 17*s.* in 1926 to £6 15*s.* 3*d.* for last year" ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state corresponding figures for consumption of country liquor and imported wines, giving the total drink bill for India during the last year for which figures may be available, and the expenditure per head of population in India on liquors and intoxicants ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) I lay on the table a statement showing the figures of consumption for the years 1925-26 and 1926-27 as returned by the provincial Excise Departments. The Government of India do not possess the material necessary for preparing an estimate of the amount of expenditure by consumers represented by these figures, and of its incidence per head of the population.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that with many Provincial Governments it is a habit to encourage drinking among the people in order to derive more revenue from excise ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I regret, Sir, I am unable to answer that question.

Mr. B. Das : Will they go into the matter and verify the correctness of the question which I put ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Honourable Member is no doubt aware that under the existing constitution Excise falls in the realm of transferred subjects, and the Government of India do not possess any powers of superintendence, direction and control in the matter.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Do not the Government of India possess the power of collecting information from the provinces ? Have they no power even to make a request ?

Mr. President : Order, order. I think I may inform Honourable Members that it is destructive of the very edifice of responsible government which we all seek to create to discuss in this House questions on subjects which are transferred to Ministers in the provinces. The Provincial Councils are the places where these questions can be discussed. In the interest of responsible government itself, it is not desirable that such questions should be discussed in this House, except in cases where the Government of India have got the power of superintendence, direction and control. It is a different thing there, but where responsibility is completely transferred to Ministers, it is not desirable in the interests of the constitution itself that those questions should be discussed in this House. It is a different thing when mere all-India statistics or the all-India position are inquired into by questions.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that a Resolution was passed in this Assembly recommending the abolition of drink, do Government propose for the benefit of the country to stop.....

PANEL OF CHAIRMEN.

Mr. President : Order order. In accordance with the provisions of rule 3 of the Indian Legislative Rules I announce that I have nominated the following Members to be on the Panel of Chairmen :

Lala Lajpat Rai,

Mr. K. C. Neogy,

Sir Victor Sassoon, and

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC PETITIONS.

Mr. President : Under Standing Order 80 of the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders I have to appoint a Committee on Public Petitions. I have, therefore, to announce that the following Honourable Members will form the Committee :

Mr. Jamnadas Mehta,

Mr. K. C. Neogy,

Mian Abdul Haye, and

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz.

According to the provisions of the Standing Orders, the Deputy President, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, will be the Chairman of the Committee.

SEPARATE OFFICE FOR THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

The Honourable Mr J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, with reference to the communication which you made to the House yesterday I should like with your permission to take this earliest opportunity to explain briefly the position and intentions of Government. It must be apparent that there are certain aspects of the case on which Government are unable to concur in the views which you have expressed. It would be inappropriate on my part to endeavour at this stage to deal in detail with any matters of controversy, and I propose to limit myself to a concise statement of fact. You, Sir, on the 17th August, 1927, presented to Government a scheme for the setting up of a separate establishment for the Assembly. On the conclusion of the Simla Session of 1927, the examination of the scheme was taken up in the Government of India and certain provisional conclusions were reached early in 1928. The rough draft of a despatch embodying these conclusions was prepared before the end of the Delhi Session. As the Government of India were not able to accept the scheme of the Honourable the President in its entirety, it was thought desirable to place him in general possession of the points of difference between him and Government and, further, to give him an opportunity by means of informal conversations with His Excellency the Governor General of expressing his views on this point. As the result of these conversations some points of difference were eliminated, but others remained. The despatch was revised and was sent to the Secretary of State on the 28th July. Honourable Members are of course aware that it is not permissible at this stage to lay the despatch before the House, but without indiscretion I may allow myself to say that there is much in the Honourable the President's scheme with which Government find themselves in agreement and that they have endeavoured to deal fairly in the despatch with all the points on which agreement has been reached between their view and that of the President. Honourable Members will realize that while Government are awaiting a reply to that despatch, they are not in a position to discuss this matter fully ; but lest Honourable Members should feel that the case is being decided without their having a chance of expressing their views, Government are ready now to give an undertaking that before any scheme which the Secretary of State is prepared to approve is put into operation, Honourable Members will, if they so desire, be given an opportunity of expressing their views. Whether the best procedure for the examination of the scheme will be by a general debate in this House, or whether the House would not be well advised in the first instance to depute the performance of this task to a Committee representative of all the parties and groups in this House is a question for the House to decide. I venture to suggest that, as a general debate in the circumstances which I have mentioned would seem unlikely to lead to concrete and practical results, the latter would be the better course ; and inasmuch as I should hope to be able in due course to lay the papers necessary to enable Honourable Members to form a considered judgment in the matter, I am willing, if the House so desires, to move for the appointment of such a Committee and a day will be made available for the purpose at as early a date as possible during the present Session. This Committee could then be constituted and, as soon as Government is able to lay the papers, would be in a position to take up the examination of the subject. Finally, Sir, I would like to draw the attention of the House to a fact to which you have referred that, pending the settlement of this matter, His Excellency the Governor General, with a view to meeting the wishes of the Honourable the President, has decided that the Secretary of the Assembly should no longer be a Member of the Assembly.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, may I, with your permission, ask the Home Member to clear up certain points in his statement which he has just read to the House. The matter is a very important one, and we have to consider on this side of the House very carefully what our own position is going to be in regard to it. You were pleased to read a statement to the House yesterday, and a copy of it has been made available to us by the Press. We know exactly, and, may I add, we appreciate fully, the action which you have taken as the custodian of the rights of this House. I wish the statement which has just been read by the Honourable the Home Member were as informing. I wish also that I had a verbatim copy of it before me. But I have listened to it with all the attention that I am capable of and I wish to know whether I have understood it rightly. What I have been able to gather from that statement is that the reform which you are trying to introduce is to be put off sine die. I will explain why I draw that inference. It appears that a despatch has already been sent to the Secretary of State on the subject over the head of this House and without observing the common courtesy of showing it to the President who mooted the whole question and who was entitled in all fair play to know how his point of view was put and how his arguments were met. I further understand, Sir, that this mysterious despatch is to be considered by the Secretary of State for India and decisions are to be arrived at behind the back of this House, behind the back of the President, and when those decisions are received here, then an opportunity will be given to this House to express its own opinion ; for what purpose and to what end goodness only knows, when the matter has already been decided. I also understand from the statement that the Honourable the Home Member has an alternative proposal, namely, that of the appointment of a Committee which he is willing to appoint at once ; and to give us a day but for what purpose I have not been able to follow ; whether it is only to discuss the personnel of the Committee or also to discuss the matter which gives rise to the appointment of the Committee. Well, whatever that may be, I hope the Honourable the Home Member will make it clear. When the Committee is appointed, what has it to do ? It is not very clear what will follow. Of course the Committee will meet, it will make its recommendations ; those recommendations perhaps will be considered by the House. Then perhaps there will be another reference to the Secretary of State if the recommendations of the House are to be paid any attention to. And then a thousand other things might intervene. All that seems to me to be highly probable is that by the time that these preliminaries have been gone through this House will probably have ceased to exist and Lord Birkenhead will probably have shifted himself from Whitehall to Leadenhall if the news of this morning is correct. Sir, there could be nothing simpler than to put the proposals before this House before any despatch was sent to the Secretary of State. In that case it would have been very easy to have the decision of the Secretary of State on the considered opinion of the House about the proposals made by the President in time to inaugurate the new reforms before the Delhi Session. As it is I find that if the procedure which is indicated by the Honourable the Home Member is followed we shall never come to the end of it ; at least this House will not. It seems to me, Sir, that this procedure leads us nowhere and I therefore wish to ask a definite question, and I hope the Honourable the Home Member will reply. Is he willing to give us an opportunity and a day to discuss the whole question on the merits on such materials as we have ? I know we shall not have the benefit of what the Secretary of State has got to say. But I also know that even when a despatch is received from him we would probably not have the benefit of looking into it, because despatches are sacrosanct. But, Sir, we are perfectly prepared to go into the whole matter on the materials contained in your statement which is more or less exhaustive. We want no further facts to make up our minds. I pause for an answer before I put another question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I regret that there should have been anything obscure in the statement which I have just made to the House. To explain further, I must, I think, to some extent recapitulate. The Honourable and learned gentleman opposite has asked precisely what my proposals were. I indicated to the House that there were two possible courses if they wished to take action in the matter. One was to have a general discussion ; the other, if they preferred it—and I indicated certain grounds which made the second alternative probably a better one—the second alternative was the appointment of a Committee. If the House prefers the first alternative, it is entirely a matter for the House to decide. But I should point out that for the reasons which I have set out in my original statement it is impossible for the Government to take a useful and contributory part in the debate. We are unable to lay before the House the details of the scheme submitted to the Secretary of State ; we are unable to discuss it. Further, we should not be in a position to deal with any specific points raised with regard to it by Honourable Member in other parts of the House. It was for those reasons that I ventured to suggest and I have no wish to influence the judgment of the House—I ventured to suggest that the preferable course would be the appointment of a Committee. That Committee, as I indicated, would not during the present Session be able to have material before it, which will no doubt be necessary before final conclusions are arrived at ; but the suggestion is made with the object which Government entertain of doing all they can to expedite the matter. In other words, a Committee having been constituted would be in being for the purpose of considering any proposals that may be approved by the Secretary of State or to suggest certain other proposals of their own. I hope that what I have said removes the obscurity which my Honourable friend mentioned.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : My question has not been answered. What I asked the Honourable the Home Member was, with all the disadvantages under which we are placed, will he be pleased to give us a day to discuss this matter thoroughly on the material which we have. It is very unfortunate that we have not got the decision of the Secretary of State before us, but, as I submitted, we cannot help it ; and we cannot wait for it, because it may be that this House may not be in existence when that decision is received. So we should make the most of what we have and my simple question is this. Will the Honourable the Home Member find us a day for the discussion of this matter on the materials now before the House in this Session ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On the materials now before the House ? Does the Honourable gentleman mean the President's statement and my reply, or other materials ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : That is all ; that is quite enough.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If the House desires to have a discussion on the basis of these materials, Government will certainly be prepared to make a day available. But I must repeat that Government, in a discussion of that kind, will not be able to take a contributory part in the discussion.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : That is a misfortune. But I think there will be the advantage of the Secretary of State having the views of this House before him when he is making up his mind finally upon the scheme. I thank the Honourable the Home Member for the promise he has given of a day to discuss the matter.

Mr. President : I should like to throw out one suggestion to the Honourable Members. Would it not be more convenient if the Leader of the House and the leaders of the various parties meet together and decide on a course of action ? If that suggestion is agreeable, I am perfectly prepared to call a conference in my room to-morrow.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I should, for my own part, be very glad to comply with such a suggestion, if the business of the House permits of such a conference to-morrow.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I don't quite understand the position. I think that we ought to have a debate on the question, because what we want to know is the views of the House on the statement made by the President. I cannot understand why Government cannot place the despatch before the House. There is nothing secret in it. It is merely a question of establishment, and if the House cannot be trusted with this simple matter, I wonder what matters the House could really be trusted with. It is merely a question of what part of the establishment should be under the President and what part under the Government of India. There seems to be absolutely nothing confidential or secret about it that Government should choose to keep away from us. If the House is not worthy of that much confidence, I wonder how the Government can place any confidence in the House to pass legislative measures. It seems to me merely a pretence—pardon me for the use of this word—a mere pretence to postpone ad infinitum the settlement of this question. It has already taken two or three years, and may still take another two years, and as my learned friend (Pandit Motilal) has stated, by that time the House may be defunct and nothing would come of it. I therefore want something tangible to be done immediately to take the views of the House so that these views may be sent to the Secretary of State for action. I do not want the views of the House to be taken after the Secretary of State has decided the question. These may be red tape methods of the bureaucracy, but they do not commend themselves to us who want practical business to be done on the floor of this House. I am quite prepared for a conference, as suggested by the Honourable the President, but at the same time I am strongly in favour of a general discussion on the floor of this House, so that the Members may be in a position to express their views on the statement made by the Honourable the Home Member. We ought to have an early date for that discussion, and all the Members of this House ought to have a chance of expressing their views on that statement.

Mr. President : I think nothing is going to be lost by the leaders of the various parties meeting the Leader of the House and discussing the matter. As to the date for discussion of the question, Government are agreeable, but they say they will not be able to take any very useful part in the discussion. That is what I understood the Leader of the House to say. If the Leader of the House has no objection, I propose to call a conference at 12 to-morrow.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I understand that the conference will consist of yourself, myself, and the leaders of the various parties in the House ?

Mr. President : Quite so.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Subject to the observations I have already made, for my own part I shall be very glad to accept the suggestion, but it will depend on the business arising to-morrow.

Mr. President : I will see that an hour is fixed to suit all leaders. It need not necessarily be 12 o'clock.

THE PUBLIC SAFETY (REMOVAL FROM INDIA) BILL.

Mr. President : The Honourable Mr. Crerar. (The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar rose in his place.)

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I have to raise a point of order. I object to the motion that the Honourable the Home Member is going to make. The Leader of the House, Sir, is going to move :

"That the Bill to provide for the removal from British India in certain cases of persons not being Indian British subjects or subjects of States in India be taken into consideration ".

I submit that under the Standing Orders that motion cannot be taken up, if there is anyone in the House who objects to it on the ground that sufficient notice as required by the rules has not been given. I draw the attention of the House to Standing Order 38, which says what motions may be made after a Bill has been introduced, and then it goes on to provide :

"Provided that no such motion shall be made until after copies of the Bill have been made available for the use of Members ".

I beg the House particularly to bear in mind these words, " made available for the use of Members ". And any Member may object to any such motion being made until copies of the Bill have been made available three days before the date on which the motion is being made. The motion is being made to-day, 6th September, and copies were not issued to Members before the 4th September, and therefore three clear days have not preceded the motion that my Honourable friend is going to make.

Now I may be allowed to anticipate his answer. Probably his answer will be that the Bill had been published in the Gazette sometime before, but I submit that such publication cannot take the place of the provision that the Bill must be made available for the use of Members, because these are words which have a special meaning assigned to them by the Standing Orders, and the Bill must be made available in the particular manner provided and in no other.

Now I draw attention to Standing Order No. 12, at page 13 of this book, that is :

"The Secretary shall make every effort to circulate to each Member a copy of each notice or other paper which is by the Standing Order required to be made available for the use of Members ".

Then sub-section (2) is :

"Notice or other paper shall be deemed to have been made available for the use of every Member if copies thereof are deposited in such manner and in such place as the President may from time to time direct ".

To the best of my information there was no direction of the President on this subject and this Bill was not deposited in any particular place. I therefore submit that the Standing Order has not been complied with and under Standing Order No. 38 I am competent to raise an objection, unless the President in the exercise of his discretion suspends that Standing Order. There is no doubt that you have discretion to suspend the Standing Order and allow the motion to be made, but I submit this is not a case where you will exercise that discretion, firstly, because it is a very important measure and there is no reason why it should be rushed like this. Secondly no harm can be done, because if my objection succeeds, it will mean a delay of three or four days, till the next official day.

It may be asked why I am raising this question at all. It is because of the absence of many Members from the House, it is because of the empty benches that I am raising this point. It is always the case that in the beginning of a Session the attendance is very meagre. I think it has always been more or less an understanding or a convention that no important measure should be introduced until all Honourable Members have had the fullest opportunity of attending the Assembly and taking part in the debate. Now this is a matter upon which it is desired to have a full dress debate in the House and I would therefore ask you, Sir, not to exercise your discretion and suspend the Standing Order. The Standing Orders are entirely in my favour and there is no question that a publication in the Gazette or anything else can take the place of a Bill being available for the use of Members in the particular manner which has been provided for by the Standing Orders. The Government Gazette of course is a very important document, more important specially for men in service than for others. But so far as I am concerned, it is most uninteresting reading and I never even open it unless my attention is drawn to any particular thing therein. So, I submit that the publication in the Gazette cannot take the place of a Bill being made available for the use of Members in the manner which has been prescribed by the rules. Therefore, I submit that this Bill should not be taken into consideration.

Mr. President : What is the urgency of this measure ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : The Government regards this matter as a matter of great urgency.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Is there going to be a great influx of these undesirables within three days ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Bill itself is a very urgent matter. The Government regard not only the Bill itself but also its progress through the House as matters of great urgency.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : My only point is that the Government must comply with the rules and Standing Orders.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On a point of order, Sir. The Honourable Member has raised a point of order on the ground that the copies of the Bill were not being made available to the Members. He anticipated one or two objections that would be naturally raised. In the first instance the Bill was published in the Gazette on the 25th August. Copies of that Gazette were sent to every Honourable Member. (Honourable Members : "No, no.") Copies of the Bill were deposited in the lodgings of Honourable Members present in Simla. I venture to submit that Honourable Members have had in point of fact the opportunity of having this Bill in their hands for three days and more. I venture to submit that in the exercise of your discretion the point which you should take into consideration is whether in fact ample notice has been given to Honourable Members, whether ample opportunities have been given to Honourable Members of having this Bill in their possession. When the Honourable Member spoke of what he called the depleted benches on that side of the House, I venture to think he was introducing an entirely extraneous matter which has no bearing on the question now before the House.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I say, Sir, that the statement made by the Honourable the Home Member that copies of this Bill were deposited at the lodgings of Honourable Members here is far from being correct. I wanted a copy of this Bill on the 2nd, but I could not get it. I asked for a copy at the Notice Office on the 3rd instant and was told that they did not possess it.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I want to bring to the notice of this House the bad practice that exists at the present moment of depositing these documents at the lodgings of Members. I support my Honourable friend Mr. Kunzru that it is not right to state that the copies of these Bills were deposited at the lodgings of Members three days from to-day. It is not right. I may say that the general practice of these papers being sent to Members is so vicious that really Members have no time to study the papers. These papers generally reach our lodgings not before 10 o'clock at night, and they generally relate to the business of the next day. That is the way in which the Legislative Department has been discharging its functions and its duties.

Mr. President : I hope you do not hold the President responsible for it. (Laughter.)

Lala Lajpat Rai : I must say that it becomes extremely difficult for us to study anything in time.

There are two questions involved in this discussion, one is the technical question which has been raised by my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, and the other is the question of propriety or the haste, the indecent haste with which the Government want to rush this Bill through. Of course the latter has been brushed aside by the Government. The Government must have had this matter under consideration before them, for a long time, they must have arrived at a decision long ago. Why was it not possible for the Government to announce, at least a fortnight or a month before the date of the Assembly, that the Government were going to introduce this Bill ? This is a very difficult matter and also a very important matter. Honourable Members have to consult the different laws of other countries. The Honourable the Home Member says that it was published in the Gazette on the 25th August. Surely the Honourable the Home Member does not expect the Members to restrict themselves to their homes on the 25th August for the purpose of reading the Gazette. They have other important business to attend to. My Honourable friend Pandit Nehru when he talked about the empty benches on this side did not want to make it a point for argument. He simply stated why he was keen that the Bill be not taken into consideration to-day. He was absolutely frank on his part, and I wish the Government were equally frank on their part. We want the business done expeditiously and in a better spirit, but the Government wants to conceal everything and to spring surprises upon us. I do not see any need of hurrying the measure. The Assembly is going to sit till about 23rd of this month and surely this business can be taken up on any other day, say Monday next. We do not want to delay the Bill, but at the same time I think the Members are entitled to raise this question if it enables them to consider this matter properly fully. This matter requires careful study. The Government have of course been preparing their case for months. If they were in our position, they would feel the helplessness of our position. The Government have got their Secretaries and other experts to help them in this measure. But we have to do the whole thing ourselves. I think it is absolutely fair that we should be given a fair chance to study the Bill. I therefore beg you, Sir, not to exercise your discretion and not to suspend the Standing Order and allow the Bill to be taken into consideration at once.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : I am alarmed and surprised at the suggestion of Honourable Members on the other side that there is no urgency in this matter. It has been on the lips of everybody for several months past.....

Mr. President : The question is not whether there is any urgency for the measure or not. The question is whether copies of the Bill have been made available to Honourable Members three days before to-day. That is the only question.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : On that, Sir, I want merely to say that I got my copy all right in the Government of India Gazette considerably more than three days before to-day. (An Honourable Member : " Is it racial discrimination ?")

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : I want to say something on this point of order. It is purely a technical matter on which you are asked to give your ruling. I appreciate the appeal of the Honourable Member, Lala Lajpat Rai, and I am giving my views purely from the technical angle. Under rule 18, the Governor General has published the Bill in the Gazette and it has made it unnecessary for the Government to ask this House for leave to introduce the Bill or to supply copies of the Bill under Standing Orders. Would it or would it not be considered a fact that the publication in the Gazette is the supply of the information to Members and that the posting of that Gazette is enough ? Government cannot of course guarantee that every copy of a Bill despatched to a Member is going to reach that Member ; and I submit that, because the Government of India did not introduce the Bill in this House but used the right they have under rule 18 to publish it in the Gazette, it should be taken that that Bill was in the hands of Members when it could reasonably be expected that the Gazette was delivered.

Lala Lajpat Rai : The wording there is with reference to leave to introduce a Bill, not for the purpose of dispensing with circulation.

Sir Victor Sassoon : You must read the final part of Standing Order 38 as following the first part. You cannot detach it and say that it also governs rule 18. That is how I read it. The Honourable Member has taken the last part of Standing Order 38 which deals with the case when a Bill is introduced in this House and does not deal with the case when the Government has not introduced the Bill because it has used its right of publication in the Gazette.

Mr. President : It might help us to know from Government whether any directions have been issued by the President under Standing Order 12.

Mr. L. Graham (Secretary, Legislative Department) : I am under the impression that no directions have been issued by the President. The procedure followed in this case is what has been the custom of this House, that the Bill should be published in the Gazette and every effort made to make the Bill available to individual Members of the House. Copies were sent to all Honourable Members' addresses in Simla so far as Honourable Members had favoured us with those addresses.

Mr. President : I wonder if the Honourable the Law Member will kindly help the Chair in this matter.

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das (Law Member) : I have not got the rule with me now to which the Honourable Member referred.....

Mr. President : Will Secretary pass the rules to the Honourable Member ?

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das : It does not matter. I would only point this out, that the rule to which the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru referred is as regards the deposit of the notices under the direction of the President. I would only point out that that rule merely refers to notices and matters of that description with regard to which there is no provision for publication in the Gazette. The provision regarding the publication of a Bill in the Gazette makes it different from the publication of notices or the giving of notices to Members. I should have thought that the publication of the Bill in the Gazette is sufficient notice and does make the Bill available to Members which it does not in the case of a notice because there is no provision for publishing notices in the Gazette.

Mr. President : The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition says the words " made available " has a special meaning under Standing Order 12.

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das : I know. That is what I was referring to. The Leader of the Opposition relies upon Standing Order 12 for the purpose of attaching a particular meaning to the words " made available " as regards Bills. But the way I look at it is this. Under Standing Order 12, Standing Order 12 really does not refer to making available a Bill for this reason, that when it speaks of making every effort to send to each Member a copy of every notice or other paper, it refers to other papers of the nature of notices, because there is no provision under which a notice can be published in the Gazette. There is provision by which Bills can be published in the Gazette. There must therefore be some difference between making a notice available to a Member and making a Bill available to a Member. That is how I take it. That Standing Order 12 cannot be made use of for the purpose of giving a meaning to the words "made available" with reference to a Bill. The two things stand on quite a different footing. A notice cannot be published. There is no provision for publishing a notice and therefore every effort must be made to circulate a notice or papers of the nature of notices to every Member; whereas in the case of a Bill there is provision for publication in the Gazette which in itself amounts to making it available to Members. Therefore Standing Order 12 cannot be made use of for the purpose of interpreting the meaning of the words "made available" with regard to a Bill.

Pandit Motilal Nehru: May I say a few words in reply to the Honourable the Law Member?

Mr. President: This is not a matter which admits of reply.

Pandit Motilal Nehru: If you will permit a reply, Sir. (Mr. President assented.) It is quite evident to me, Sir, that the Honourable the Law Member committed himself to an opinion without looking at the rule and then when he looked at the rule he had to hold to that opinion. But what really is the meaning of this section is quite evident on the very face of it. Publication in the Gazette is not intended for the Members specially. It is intended for the general public. The Members who are specially concerned in this matter must get a special notice which is provided for in the Standing Orders. That will be made quite clear to you, Sir, if you refer to Standing Order 43. Both publication in the Gazette and copies being made available to Members are mentioned in this Standing Order. It runs:

"The Secretary shall cause every report of a Select Committee to be printed, and a copy of the report shall be made available for the use of every Member of the Assembly".

That is one thing. Then the next sentence is:

"The report with the amended Bill shall be published in the Gazette".

Now the two things are not the same. If one takes the place of the other what is the use of mentioning both these things here? The Honourable Member has put it just the other way about. It is because notices are not published, he says, in the Gazette, therefore a special provision is made for notices. It is more correct to say that because publication in the Gazette is not the kind of special notice in the case of Members that special provision has been made for such notice.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar: Sir, may I just make one observation with regard to what was said by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. He contended just now that publication in the Gazette was merely notice to the general public. I think that point of view must be modified in view of the fact that special copies of the Gazette are addressed to individual Members of this House as Members of this House and not as members of the general public.

Mr. President: This is a very difficult question as the Honourable the Law Member has pointed out and if I were to postpone the decision on this question, it would not be necessary to come to any decision and all difficulties would be over. For in that case, the consideration would stand postponed to the next official day. But I do not propose to take that course. I propose to give my decision and take the fullest responsibility for it. There is absolutely no doubt that this motion cannot be made unless copies of the Bill have been made available to Honourable Members three days before to-day. The question is whether in this case copies of the Bill have been made available to Honourable Members three days before to-day. I am clearly of opinion that the publication of a Bill in the Government Gazette cannot dispense with the obligation which is laid by the Standing Orders on the office to make copies available to Honourable Members. That expression has a special meaning attached to it by the Standing Orders, and in the absence of any directions by the President as to the manner in which a Bill is to be deposited and the place at which it is to be deposited —directions which should have been taken and carried out—I am afraid I must hold that the copies of the Bill have not been made available to Honourable Members three days prior to its consideration. I therefore rule that this motion cannot be made to-day unless the Standing Orders are suspended. As no request has been pressed in that behalf, it is not necessary for the Chair to consider that point.

THE INDIAN INSURANCE COMPANIES BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways): Sir, I rise to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912, for certain purposes, and to provide for the collection of statistical information in respect of insurance business other than life assurance business, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir James Simpson, Lala Lajpat Rai, Mr. H. G. Cocke, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. G. D Birla and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 10th September 1928, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five. I should like, Sir, with your permission, to add three more names of members who might be appointed to the Select Committee, namely, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder and Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.

This Bill, Mr. President, is limited in its scope. It proposes to do two things and two things only—in the first place, to remove a defect in the law affecting life assurance companies, and in the second place, to provide for the collection of certain statistical information in respect of all classes of insurance business. The first of these objects is provided for in clause 3 of the Bill and the second in clauses 2, 7, 8 and 9. On the remaining fifteen clauses of the Bill I need not dwell, for, they are purely subsidiary and adjectival. The whole substance of the Bill is to be found in the five clauses I have mentioned.

I will take first clause 2 of the Bill, which provides for one of the two important objects. I have said that there is a defect in the existing law relating to life assurance in India, and I will endeavour to make it plain to the House what that defect is. Section 6 of the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act of 1912 provides that:

"The life insurance fund shall be as absolutely the security of the life policyholders as though it belonged to a company carrying on no other business than life assurance business and shall not be liable for any contracts of the company for which it would not have been liable had the business of the company been only that of life assurance, and shall not be applied directly or indirectly for any purposes other than those of life assurance ".

It would have been difficult, I think, Sir, to express the intention of the law more emphatically than it is done in that section. It is clear as daylight that the intention of the Legislature was to provide the utmost possible security for the life policyholders, and for that purpose very emphatic language was used. It appears, however, that whatever the intentions of the Legislature may have been they have been frustrated and that in certain circumstances the law does not in fact provide that measure of security for the life policyholders which was undoubtedly intended. The circumstances in which the security fails is when a life assurance company goes into liquidation. When that happens the rules in the sixth Schedule to the Act would apply, and the liabilities and assets of the company would have to be valued in accordance with these rules. The result is that a considerable part of the life fund might be removed from the security of the life policyholders and devoted to other purposes. There is unquestionably, it appears, a defect which is common both to the Indian Act and to the British Statute upon which it was based. It was brought to notice about 18 months ago, I think, by the Board of Trade Committee which was examining the insurance law in the United Kingdom with a view to its consolidation and re-enactment. I think perhaps I can make the meaning plain to the House most clearly by taking concrete examples, and the first I shall mention is the one which the Board of Trade Committee had in view in their report. Let us suppose there is a composite company which is doing both life business and fire business. We will suppose that the life business is successful, and that large reserves have been built up in the life fund. On the other hand, we assume that the fire business has been unsuccessful, and that as a result of successive losses the company becomes insolvent and goes into liquidation. Now, under the law as it stands, the reserve assets of the life fund would apparently have to be used to pay the liabilities of the fire business and the assets which the life policyholders believed had been fully secured to them as the security for their policies would thus be diverted to another purpose. I mention that as one of the dangers which exists under the present law. But it is not, as far as I can discover, an imminent danger in India, and I fully admit that this danger in itself would not furnish any adequate reason for asking the Legislature to make an emergent change in the law. The immediate danger which we have to apprehend in India is something rather different. It occurs when a company is in liquidation, but not as in the case which I took as an illustration, an insolvent liquidation, but a solvent liquidation. Under the law, as it stands, there is apparently nothing to prevent the shareholders of a solvent and prosperous life assurance company putting it into voluntary liquidation. If they did so, then the rules in Schedule VI would at once apply, and the result would probably be that a large portion of the life fund, which was intended by the Legislature as the absolute security of the policyholders, would be lost to them and divided up amongst the shareholders. The information which has reached the Government of India has left no doubt in their minds that the danger is a real one and that it might, at any moment, become imminent. I can only imagine that ingenious per-

1 P. M. sons who had read the Board of Trade Committee's Report and had detected the loophole in the law, have set their wits to work in an effort to squeeze through it. I do not wish, Mr

President—and I hope that the House will not press me on the subject—to dwell on the evidence which satisfied the Government of India that precautions were necessary. Obviously, if I were pressed on that point, it would raise the question of individual companies and any statement made here might have effects which would be most unfair to these companies and do a great deal of harm. One thing, however, I think I ought to say very distinctly. It is not those who have been responsible in the past, or so far as I know, still are responsible for the management of the companies who have attempted to take advantage of the defect in the law. In so far as attempts have been made at all or are likely to be made, it is by persons who hope to obtain control, not by those who already possess the control. I think it is right, Sir, in the interests of the Indian insurance companies, against whom I am not saying a single word, that that should be made perfectly plain. And I would ask the House to take it from me that the Government of India did not act without very distinct information before them, that there was a danger, that the danger was real and that it might become imminent. It was for that reason that they decided to bring forward legislation on this subject during the present Session. I think, Sir, the House will agree that it would be a very serious matter indeed if any prosperous Indian insurance company were put into voluntary liquidation in the circumstances stated, and obviously the temptation to put the company into liquidation would be the stronger the more prosperous the company was. I am afraid that, if that took place, public confidence in life assurance generally would be most seriously shaken, and the cause of life assurance in India would receive a setback from which it would take years to recover. That certainly is the feeling of the Government of India and it is for that reason, as I have said, that they felt it necessary to legislate at once.

As regards the particular proposal embodied in clause 3 of the Bill, I may say that it follows closely the clause in the draft Bill prepared by the Board of Trade Committee in the United Kingdom. Broadly speaking, what is proposed is this, that, when a company is in liquidation, it must be ascertained in what proportion in previous years the profits have been divided between the shareholders and the policyholders, and unless the Judge sees fit to make any special direction, then any surplus profits ascertained in the liquidation will be divided in the same proportion. On the face of it that seems to me an equitable way of dealing with the matter and the recommendation of the Board of Trade Committee, we can be sure, has been the result of a very close consideration by a number of thoroughly competent people. I do not think it would be easy to devise a more equitable method of dealing with this particular difficulty.

As the House are aware, Mr. President, the question of the amendment of our insurance law has been under consideration for a considerable time. When the Government of India decided that this particular matter must be dealt with, they also considered whether any further substantive changes in the law should be made, and they came to the conclusion that so far as this Bill was concerned, it would be unwise to make any further changes in the substantive law which controls the operations of insurance companies. A number of proposals have been made for modifications, but they have not been included in this Bill. The Government of India felt that they were justified in asking the Legislature to take emergent steps to cure this particular defect in the law, but did not think they would be justified in asking the Legislature to pass as an emergent measure any far-reaching changes on that subject. Now, on this point the House will naturally, Sir, ask me a question. If this is the one change which is emergent and if it is all included in clause 3, what are the other remaining 19 clauses doing in the Bill ? That is a perfectly fair question and I will do my best to answer it. All the other clauses are really part of a single scheme, namely, the collection of certain statistical information regarding insurance business. For some time past, as all Honourable Members are aware, there has been a persistent demand that insurance companies belonging to other countries, which carry on business in India, should disclose particulars of their Indian business. Now, Sir, that in itself seemed to the Government of India not an unreasonable demand. It is perfectly natural that people should want to know what is the character and the volume of the insurance business which is being carried on in India to-day. So far as the indigenous companies are concerned among the life insurance companies, that information is disclosed in the statistics that we publish every year. It is quite true that some of the Indian companies perhaps do a certain amount of business outside British India, but I should imagine that it is only a small portion of their business, and the figures that we publish give substantially the business which they are doing in British India. But as regards companies which are established in other countries, it is quite obvious in the case of an important British company, let us say, or of an important American company, that the total figures of the business they do all over the world can give us no idea at all of the amount of business they do in India. Therefore, as I say, it seemed to the Government of India that the demand for further information was in itself a reasonable one. But although that is so, it would not supply a reason for including provisions on the subject in a Bill which we are asking the Legislature to pass at the earliest possible date. The demand may be reasonable but in the ordinary course it might have waited for the general revision of the insurance law which is certainly impending. But there is a special reason why the Government of India thought it right to include these provisions about the collection of statistics in this Bill in order to give the Legislature an opportunity of considering whether steps ought not at once to be taken to obtain these statistics. The reason is this. As I have said, a general revision of our insurance law will quite certainly have to be passed before very long, and what was very forcibly impressed upon my mind during the hours I have devoted to studying the question is that we cannot legislate wisely unless we know the facts. There is a great deal of statistical information which Government ought to have and which the Legislature ought to have before we undertake a general revision of the insurance law. Perhaps I might be allowed to give one or two illustrations of this. One of the proposals made for the revision of the law is that all life companies operating in India should retain assets in India equal to some proportion of their liabilities. Now, I am not expressing any opinion at all about that proposal, but when it comes up for decision as to whether effect should be given to that proposal or not, it will be most important that we should know what the liabilities of the companies are and to what extent their assets are invested in India at present. Take another example. It has sometimes been said that the growth of indigenous life assurance companies is hampered by the competition of outside companies. Now, personally I find it very difficult to assess the value of that complaint unless I know what the relative volume of business transacted by the indigenous companies and by the external companies actually is. It may be that the indigenous companies are still transacting only a small proportion of the total amount of life business transacted in India. On the other hand, it may be that the indigenous companies already transact more than half the business actually carried on in India. At present we have estimates on that subject and we have guesses, but they are quite unsatisfactory as data and nobody is bound to accept any of them. It seemed to me, therefore, that, at any rate, as regards the amendment of the law relating to life assurance, it is very important that as soon as possible the Government of India and the Legislature should be in possession of statistics showing the character and the volume of the business which is actually transacted in India. The sooner we get it the sooner it will be possible to deal with the general question of the revision of the law.

Honourable Members will have observed that the Bill is divided into three parts. Part II includes certain amendments to be made in the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act and Part III is devoted to companies carrying on business other than life assurance business. At present the position is that the companies which do not do life assurance business are not subject to any special regulation beyond that to which they are subject under the Indian Companies Act. Although there are a number of clauses in this part of the Bill, they are all of them subsidiary to the proposals for the collection of statistics and they have been inserted for no other reason, that is to say, we are not in this Bill proposing to bring these companies under special control apart from the collection of statistics. If Honourable Members will read the actual clauses, they will see that with the exception of the ones which I have named at the beginning of my speech they all deal with quite unimportant and subsidiary matters although they are necessary for their own purpose.

Now, Sir, before I sit down, I want to say a single word as regards what I am sure is in the minds of a good many Members of this House. I quite recognise that in many quarters of this House there is a feeling that it is high time the law relating to life assurance was revised and brought up to date and that life assurance companies of all kinds were brought under control. I respect that feeling and I also share it to a very large extent. I do not think that we can safely postpone that amendment of the law very much longer, but I am satisfied, after giving this question all the attention I could give it, that for the present we cannot get on with that question and that we are not likely to be able to get on with it until the British Parliament has legislated on the basis of the Report of the Board of Trade Committee. I think it is right that I should say so much for the information of the House. I do not wish to argue the matter because that would be to travel outside the scope of the present Bill. That Bill, as I have already said at the outset of my speech, is limited in its scope. All that we propose to do is to correct a defect in the life assurance law which it has become very urgently necessary to correct, and to provide for the collection of certain statistical information which it is very necessary that we should possess before we undertake the general revision of the insurance law.

Sir, I move.

Mr. President : The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912, for certain purposes, and to provide for the collection of statistical information in respect of insurance business other than life assurance business, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Sir James Simpson, Lala Lajpat Rai, Mr. H. G. Cocke, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. G. D. Birla, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, Mr. M. S. Seaha Ayyangar, Mr. Nirmal Chunder Chunder, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 10th September, 1928, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five ".

[Mr. President.]

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 8th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Saturday, 8th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

INCREASE IN THE PAY AND PENSIONS OF GOVERNMENT PEONS AND MENIAL STAFF.

220. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (1) Have Government received a petition from an Association called the Government Peons' and Menial Service Union asking for improvement in the conditions of service applicable to this class of public servants ?

(2) If so, will Government be pleased to mention :—

(a) when they received this petition, and

(b) what action they have taken on it, particularly with respect to the demands of these men for increases in pay and pension ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (1) Yes.

(2). (a) The petition was received on the 4th July, 1927.

(b) The requests made by the petitioners related to pay, pension, classification of their service as " superior " and admission to the General Provident Fund. The requests relating to pay are still under consideration. Those relating to pension and classification are being rejected pending a decision on proposals relating to inferior servants in general which are engaging the attention of the Government of India. The request to be admitted to the General Provident Fund is being rejected because the Government of India are not prepared to consider it in the absence of evidence of a corresponding desire among inferior servants in general.

CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE DELHI COURTS.

221. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) (a) Is it a fact that in the District and Sessions Judge's Court, Delhi, the permanent pensionable posts in the clerical line are held by the Hindus and the Muslims in the ratio of 10 to 1 ; out of which Kayasths alone are six in number ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the clerical establishment of all the Civil Courts subordinate to the District Judge, Delhi, 42 permanent pensionable posts are held by the Hindus, and only ten by the Muslims, and one by a Christian ?

(2) If the above figures are not correct, will the Government be pleased to give the correct figures of the above clerical establishments ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (1). (a) No. The posts are held by Hindus and Muslims in the ratio of 10 to 2, of which 5 posts are held by Kayasths.

(b) No. The number of permanent pensionable posts in the clerical establishment of all the civil courts, subordinate to the District Judge, Delhi, is 35, out of which 28 are held by Hindus, 6 by Muslims and one by a Christian.

(2) The correct figures are given above.

CLERKS OF COURTS AND READERS IN THE DISTRICT AND SENIOR SUB-JUDGES COURTS, DELHI.

222. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Is it a fact that the Clerk of the Court and the Reader to the District Judge, Delhi, are both Hindus ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Clerk of the Court and the Reader to the Senior Sub-Judge, Delhi, are both Hindus ?

(c) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of appointing one Muslim in each Court to either of the above posts ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) The appointments do not rest with Government but are made by the District Judge.

PERMANENT PENSIONABLE POSTS IN THE COURT OF THE SENIOR SUB-JUDGE, DELHI.

223. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Is it a fact that all the permanent pensionable posts in the Court of the Senior Sub-Judge, Delhi, are held by the Hindus ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes.

NUMBER OF MUSLIMS IN THE ESTABLISHMENTS OF THE CIVIL COURTS IN THE DELHI PROVINCE.

224. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Do Government propose to issue instructions to make up the disparity of Muslims in the Civil Courts' establishment, Delhi Province, and for that purpose to suspend recruitment of either paid or unpaid Hindu candidates till Muslims secure a decent proportion ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member will understand that the recruitment of office establishment cannot in cases of this kind be controlled in detail by Government. It must largely be left to the discretion of heads of offices. I am prepared, however, to bring the Honourable Member's question to the notice of the Chief Commissioner.

PERSONS IN THE CIVIL COURTS, DELHI, WHO SERVED IN THE GREAT WAR.

225. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state as to how many of the present incumbents of the permanent pensionable posts in the Civil Courts, Delhi, have served :

(i) as combatants during the Great War,

(ii) as non-combatants at the base in S. and T. Corps ?

(b) The relations of how many of the present incumbents of permanent pensionable posts in the Civil Courts, Delhi, have been killed or wounded in action during the Great War ?

(c) Do Government propose to grant preferential treatment in the matter of appointments or promotions to those who actually fought or whose relations took part in the Great War in the District Judge's Court and in the Courts subordinate to the District Judge ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). The Civil Courts in Delhi are closed till the 10th September, 1928. The information will be obtained and supplied to the Honourable Member after that date.

(c) These appointments are not made by Government.

LOCATION OF THE WIRELESS BRANCH OF THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS IN DELHI, ETC.

226. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : With reference to answers to starred questions Nos. 867, 481 and unstarred question No. 439, dated 5th September 1927, 19th March 1928 and 21st March 1928, respectively, will the Honourable Member in charge be pleased to state :

(i) what are the administrative and executive conveniences obtainable for the Wireless Branch by remaining in Simla which is not possible for the Branch to obtain if it migrated or was transferred to Delhi ;

(ii) when there is a saving of about Rs. 1,000 or so per annum by retaining 7 clerks only excluding 2 junior officers of the Wireless Branch in Simla, why the whole of the Director General, Post and Telegraph's camp office also is not retained in Simla in order to save thousands of rupees per annum ;

(iii) why the Wireless Branch clerks will not get the benefits in the shape of advance increment in their pay and bonus, etc., if they are required to be transferred to Delhi as was allowed to clerks of other branches of Director General's Office when transferred from Calcutta to Delhi ;

(iv) why the Wireless Branch cannot be migrated to Delhi along with the other branches of the Director General's camp office from the next Simla-Delhi move season or the whole Director General's camp office cannot be retained in Simla with junior officers ;

(v) whether any decision has yet been reached on the question of the future location of the headquarters of the Wireless Branch ; if so, what ; if not, why not and how long it will take ;

(vi) why the Director General's Office is not divided into two parts ($\frac{1}{4}$ and $\frac{3}{4}$) one, that is the migratory portion including the Wireless Branch with headquarters fixed in Simla and the other that is the non-migratory portion with headquarters fixed in Delhi except the Director General and the next senior officers with their camp clerks only moving between Simla and Delhi to avoid unnecessary expenses and disturbance in the work ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (i) The Director of Wireless is required to move with the Government of India between Delhi and Simla and has to spend a considerable part of the cold weather in touring. By having his office in Simla he is able to be in touch with it for a longer period than if it were in Delhi.

(ii) The Director-General's camp office is not retained in Simla because it is required in Delhi.

(iii) The clerks of the Wireless Branch who were originally recruited in Calcutta have already received compensation for their transfer from Calcutta. In the event of the Wireless Branch being transferred to Delhi, the question of suitable compensation would be considered.

(iv) The Wireless Branch cannot be moved to Delhi because it is more convenient to keep it in Simla ; the Director-General's camp office cannot be retained in Simla because it is required in Delhi.

(v) No. It is considered that no change in existing arrangements is desirable at present.

(vi) If the migratory portion had its headquarters fixed in Simla, it would cease to be migratory. The arrangement suggested by the Honourable Member is not feasible but some modification of the present system is under contemplation.

LOCATION OF THE WIRELESS BRANCH IN THE SAME BUILDING AS OTHER BRANCHES OF THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

227. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Honourable Member in charge be pleased to state :

(i) why the Wireless Branch of the Director General, Post and Telegraph's Office is located in a separate building since the date of its formation—1920 ;

(ii) was the Public Works Department ever asked for the allotment of rooms for the location of the Wireless Branch in the same building in which other branches of the Director General's camp office are located ; if not, why not ;

(iii) whether the Wireless Branch on the whole is part of the migratory portion of the Director General's Office ; if not, why not ;

(iv) what are the additional expenses per annum by locating the Wireless Branch in a separate building ;

(v) why the Wireless Branch which is part of Director General's Office and not of the Telegraph or Telephone Offices is allowed to occupy rooms in the Central Telegraph Office building ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (i) Because sufficient accommodation for it was not available in the same building as the remainder of Director-General's Office.

(ii) No ; because it was considered unlikely that accommodation would be available.

(iii) No ; because the additional expenditure would not be justified.

(iv) None, so far as can be estimated.

(v) The Central Telegraph Office building is the property of the Posts and Telegraphs Department and is used in such manner as the Director-General thinks fit.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE WIRELESS DIVISIONAL OFFICES, ETC.

228. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : With reference to the Honourable Mahmood Suhrawardy's question No. 83 answered by the Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters on the 29th February 1928 in the Council of State, will Government be pleased to state the reason for the absence of Muslim clerks in the two Divisional Wireless Offices and the low percentage of Muslim employees at the wireless telegraphy stations ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The clerks in the Wireless Divisional Offices have been recruited in various ways as required and the most suitable candidates were selected.

The staff of the wireless stations is largely composed of operators and higher grades promoted from the operator class. The majority of the operators have been selected from among those telegraphists who volunteered and the proportion of Muslim volunteers has been very small.

CIRCULATION TO POST AND TELEGRAPH OFFICIALS OF THE ORDERS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA CONTAINED IN HOME DEPARTMENT OFFICE MEMORANDUM NO. F.-176/25-ESTS., DATED THE 5TH FEBRUARY, 1926.

229. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : With reference to the Honourable Mr. Mahmood Suhrawardy's question No. 82 answered by the Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters on the 29th February 1928 in the Council of State, will Government be pleased to state why the orders of the Government of India contained in Home Department Office Memorandum No. F.-176|25-Ests., dated the 5th February 1926, was not strictly followed ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The orders were circulated to post and telegraph officials by the Director-General in November last, and since then appointments are being made in accordance with them.

RATES OF PAY OF THE CLERICAL STAFF OF ATTACHED OFFICES LOCATED PERMANENTLY IN DELHI.

230. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : With reference to my starred question No. 480 answered on the 19th March 1928, will Government be pleased to furnish :

(a) a clear interpretation of the first part of the reply which reads " AT PRESENT WORKS IN SOME RESPECTS LIKE AN ATTACHED OFFICE " ;

(b) the difference between the rates of pay of the clerical staff of the moving and non-moving attached offices of the Government of India :

(c) the names of the moving attached offices and non-moving attached offices of the Government of India, with the headquarters of the latter class ;

(d) if any attached office is required to be located permanently in Delhi, whether the rates of pay already sanctioned for the clerks should also be reduced and brought on to the rates of pay recently sanctioned for the clerks of the Director General, Posts and Telegraph's Office in order to equalize the scale of pay of the same class of employees ;

(i) if so, why ;

(ii) if not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The Honourable Member's attention is drawn to the second sentence of the reply given by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to his Starred Question No. 480 on the 19th March, 1928.

(b) The rates of pay vary according to the circumstances of each office. To collect the detailed information would involve an expenditure of time and labour which would not be justifiable.

(c) The list will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

(d) If the headquarters of an office are changed, its rates of pay will require reconsideration, but it is not possible to say beforehand what changes, if any, may be necessary in individual instances.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A GOVERNMENT GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL IN PESHAWAR, ETC.

231. Lala Lajpat Rai : (a) Have the Government received any memorial from the inhabitants of Peshawar praying for the establishment of a Government girls' high school in that city ? If so, what orders have been passed on that memorial ?

(b) Is there any provision in Peshawar for the education of girls on non-sectarian lines ? Do Government propose to make any provision for the purpose ?

(c) Is there any Government College in the North-West Frontier Province ? If not, do Government propose to consider the advisability of starting such an institution there ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Chief Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, received such a memorial. The memorialists were informed that a high school for girls is already in existence in Peshawar and that the number of girls in the high classes of that school and in the top classes of middle schools from which girls pass to the high classes is not sufficient to justify the establishment of another high school.

(b) Yes, up to the middle school stage. Government do not consider that at present any further provision is necessary.

(c) No. There is a Government training college, but no Government arts college. Government do not consider that there is any necessity at present to start a Government arts college in the North West Frontier Province.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is it not a fact, Sir, that the Islamia College, Peshawar, which is aided by Government is open to all classes of the population of the North West Frontier Province, irrespective of caste and creed, that there is a large number of non-Muslim students in the College, Hindus, Sikhs and Christians, that the Local Administration is fully represented on the management, that the Director of Public Instruction generally presides over the meetings of the Council of Management and that in fact the Islamia College is as good and as free and liberal in its constitution as any Government College in the country ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Honourable Member, Sir, being a prominent trustee of the College, is doubtless in a position to confirm or to deny what he has stated just now. I am quite prepared to accept the statement which he has made.

Lala Lajpat Rai : May I ask the Honourable Member if the Islamia College is more a political college than an arts college ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That, Sir, is a question which I am unable to answer. Perhaps the Honourable the Foreign Secretary may wish to answer it.

Sir Denys Bray : No, Sir.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Are the Government aware that the results of that college, whether a political college or an arts college, are much better than those of several other colleges in the Punjab ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not in a position, Sir, all at once to institute a comparison between the results achieved by the Islamia College at Peshawar and the Punjab colleges, but if the Honourable Member is anxious that a research may be undertaken into this question, I am quite prepared to undertake it.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Honourable Member on behalf of the Government kindly say if there is any course of study in politics in the school or college ? If there is none, will my Honourable friend, the questioner, kindly enlighten the House ?

REPORT OF THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE.

232. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken and what progress has been made in giving effect to Government's conclusions announced by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in this House on the 8th March 1928 on the Indian Sandhurst Committee Report ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The conclusions of Government are being carried into full effect forthwith as announced by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in this House last March : that is to say, 10 vacancies at Sandhurst, 3 at Woolwich and 6 at Cranwell will be offered to Indians who pass the second half-yearly examination of 1928. This examination will be held in Delhi in November. The syllabus of the new examination has been made widely known, and the manner in which applications should be submitted has also been widely notified. The rules to regulate the filling of 5 or more vacancies a year by selected Viceroy's commissioned officers are under preparation, and will be put into force simultaneously with the examination for direct appointments.

REPORT OF THE INDIAN SANDHURST COMMITTEE.

233. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will Government be pleased to state what action, if any, has been taken on the Assembly's decision of the 10th

March last on Government decisions on the Indian Sandhurst Committee Report ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The only decision taken by the Assembly on the debate of March 10th was that the House do now adjourn. I understand that the Honourable Member is referring, however, to the general disapproval of Government's policy implied in the motion for adjournment on March 10th. Government considered very carefully the result of the debate, and also the individual criticisms made by Honourable Members in that and other debates on the subject : but decided not to modify their scheme of indianization in any essential respect.

IMPROVEMENT AND EXPANSION OF THE INDIAN TERRITORIAL AND AUXILIARY FORCES.

234. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to give effect to the decisions of Government announced by the Commander-in-Chief on the recommendations of the Territorial and Auxiliary Forces Committee, and what further steps are contemplated in the direction of improving and expanding both the Forces in India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I would refer the Honourable Member to the Army Department notification No. 1055, dated the 20th August 1927. Orders have been issued to carry out the increased training for four selected units of the Indian Territorial Force and the attachment of officers of those units to regular units of the Army. A permanent Indian staff is being provided for those four units and eleven others. Units of the University Training Corps have been raised at Nagpur, Karachi and Dacca, and the Delhi unit has been expanded. The Sapper and Miner Section of the Burma Battalion will be formed this month. The remaining items in the programme could not be given effect to until the Indian Territorial Force (Amendment) Act, 1928, and the amended Rules under that Act came into force on September 1st. Orders have been issued since that date creating the 4 urban units, and constituting Central, Provincial and Unit Advisory Committees. The only item outstanding concerns the grant of a higher form of commission to selected officers, and orders on this will, I hope, issue very shortly.

As regards the second part of the question it is too early to say at present what further steps will be taken or what extra provision, if any, will be made in the Budget for 1929-30.

QUESTION REGARDING THE HIGHER ADMINISTRATION AND INDIANISATION OF THE ARMY IN INDIA COMING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF ENQUIRY BY THE INDIAN STATUTORY COMMISSION.

235. Mr. K. C. Roy : Will Government be pleased to state whether the question of the higher administration and the Indianisation of the Army in India will come within the scope of the enquiry by the Statutory Commission ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the terms of the Royal Warrant appointing the Commission and the invitation to submit memoranda issued by the Statutory Commission with its appendix. The scope of the enquiry is a matter for the Commission to decide, having regard to its terms of reference.

APPLICATION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE REGULATIONS TO THE PROTECTOR OF PILGRIMS, KARACHI.

236. Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) With reference to the Government reply on 31st January 1927 to my starred question No. 112 (8) appearing at page 201 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. IX, No. 8, will Government be pleased to state whether the Civil Service Regulations apply to the Protector of Pilgrims, Karachi ?

(b) If the reply to the above is in the affirmative, do those regulations permit the present Protector of Pilgrims to continue in service when his age is about 60 years ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a)—(b). The Honourable Member is presumably referring to those provisions of the Civil Service Regulations that relate to superannuation. But the appointment of the present Protector of Pilgrims is temporary and non-pensianble and the question of retiring him under the Civil Service Regulations does not therefore arise. Government can retain him in service so long as he is able to discharge his duties efficiently.

HAJ COMMITTEES AT BOMBAY AND KARACHI.

237. Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to furnish the following information regarding Haj Committees at Karachi and Bombay, respectively :

(a) the duties, powers and responsibilities of the members of the Haj Committees at Karachi and Bombay ?

(b) By what rules and regulations are the appointments of the Protectors of Pilgrims made both at Karachi and Bombay ?

(c) Whether the Haj Committees at Karachi and Bombay are consulted by the appointing authority while appointing the Protectors of Pilgrims ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Haj Committees at Bombay and Karachi are intended to render assistance to pilgrims ; they also function as consultative bodies.

(b) Protectors of Pilgrims, Bombay and Karachi, are appointed by the Local Government under section 8 of the Bombay Act II of 1887 as amended by Bombay Act V of 1915.

(c) Enquiries have been made from the Local Government.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there any report made by the Assistant to the Pilgrims on the subject of the grievances and complaints made by the pilgrims, and what steps have Government taken on that report ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I do not know who the Assistant to Pilgrims is. The Honourable Member presumably means the Protector of Pilgrims. He assumes that the Protector of Pilgrims has to forward to Government day by day a catalogue of complaints. As a matter of fact the function of the Protector is to redress complaints and not to refer them to the Government of India.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What redress has been made by him ? Has the Honourable Member's Department checked the number of complaints and grievances raised by the pilgrims about which questions have already been put in this Assembly ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : If the Department to which I have the honour to belong were to devote itself to the checking of complaints sent in by pilgrims we should have to employ Secretaries by the hundred and staff by the million.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does the Honourable Member realize that the Member in charge of the Department of which he is the Secretary stated in his presence in this Assembly the other day that there were a number of complaints of inconveniences for the last two years felt by pilgrims going to and coming from Mecca, and for that reason a Committee is going to be formed, which the Honourable Member in charge has virtually accepted ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I congratulate the Honourable Member on his memory of recent events.

(1) DEVELOPMENT OF CIVIL AND COMMERCIAL AVIATION IN INDIA (2) AIR MAIL SERVICE FROM CAIRO TO KARACHI.

238. Colonel J. D. Crawford : Will the Government be pleased to make a full statement regarding the steps that have been taken to assist the development of civil and commercial aviation in India with particular reference to the extension throughout India of the projected scheme for an air mail service from Cairo to Karachi ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I am afraid that it is not possible for me, within the limits of an answer to a question, to make a statement of the kind desired by the Honourable and gallant Member. I shall be glad to furnish him with such information as I can regarding any particular measures taken in the last year or two and would add that the question of the development of air mail routes in India has been recently examined by the Standing Advisory Committee attached to the Department of Industries and Labour.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Can the Honourable Member give me any information as to what steps have been taken to improve the ground organization against the possibility of air lines to India being started ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : If the Honourable Member will ask me that question in private I will give him full details. But we have spent a good deal of money in the direction of improving grounds, for instance, in bringing up the aerodrome at Dum Dum to a state fit for use all the year round and in proceeding with subsidiary aerodromes.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I know when it is expected that tenders will be invited for carrying on civil aviation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I am afraid I cannot give the Honourable Member details. We discussed the whole subject yesterday with our Standing Advisory Committee and we hope that some progress will very soon be made.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : May I know why the Honourable Member cannot give the answer in this House ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The reason is that the proposals discussed with the Standing Advisory Committee will have to go before the Standing Finance Committee, which we hope it will do in the course of this Session.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I have the approximate date ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : That will depend entirely on the decision of the Standing Finance Committee.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Are Indians being trained in aviation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I do not know whether that arises ; there is another question on the paper to which I shall be replying. The answer is in the affirmative. We have a number of Indians in training in England.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member inform the House whether it is a fact that there is not a single aerodrome in India that is capable of being used during the monsoon ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I very much doubt if that statement is correct. In any case, as I have just told the Honourable Colonel Crawford, we are making the Dum Dum aerodrome an all-weather aerodrome and are spending something like 2½ lakhs on that.

Mr. M. S. Aney : When do Government propose to summon a meeting of the Standing Finance Committee ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : That does not rest with me but with the Honourable the Finance Member.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is the intention to hold a supplementary meeting of the Standing Finance Committee this Session if it is possible to collect the members for that purpose.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I know, Sir, if this matter will be brought up before the next meeting of the Standing Finance Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I understood from my Honourable colleague that that was his intention.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : That is the intention. We have arrived at agreement in our own Advisory Committee and we now propose to approach the other Committee, the Standing Finance Committee.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire if the condition will be stipulated with firms tendering and undertaking to run civil aviation lines that the service will be Indianized in a certain period of time ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The discussions in the Standing Advisory Committee did deal with the subject of training of Indians and Indianization.

APPOINTMENTS MADE TO CERTAIN SUPERIOR SERVICES BY NOMINATION SINCE THE INSTITUTION OF COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS IN INDIA.

239. Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state, how many posts, in the Imperial Forest Service, the Indian Police, and the Superior Services of Indian State Railways, have been filled by nomination, since the institution in India of competitive examinations for admission to these services ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state, how many Indian Christians have been nominated to these Services, during the period, named in (a) above ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Indian Forest Service 1

Indian Police Service 13

Indian Railway Service of Engineers and the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways. 14†

(b) Indian Forest Service .. .. .. Nil.

NOMINATIONS TO THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE IN 1928.

240. Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state, the names, religion, position on the list and the total number of marks, obtained by the five Indian candidates, appointed to the Indian Civil Service by nomination, on the result of the last competitive examination held in India for admission to that Service ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state, the place on the list and the total number of marks secured by Mr. S. M. Burke, an Indian Christian candidate for the last competitive examination, for admission to the Indian Civil Service ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). A statement containing the information required by the Honourable Member is being placed in the Library.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to state whether any consideration, other than communal, guides the choice of the Government in making nominations to these services ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The main consideration is that of efficiency.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIAN CHRISTIANS TO THE SUPERIOR PUBLIC SERVICES.

241. Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that a certain proportion of appointments in the Superior Public Services, are filled by nomination by the Governor-General, in order that adequate representation may be secured for the minority communities ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to bear in mind the claims of the Indian Christian community, which is the third largest community in India, from the point of view of numbers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Recourse is had to appointment by nomination if it is necessary to prevent any undue preponderance of particular communities.

(b) On more than one occasion Indian Christians have been appointed by nomination to the Superior Services, and I do not think that the community has any cause to consider itself neglected.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee: Have any Indian Christians been nominated by nomination to the Indian Civil Service ?

Mr. President : Persons can be nominated only by nomination.

†Excludes recruitment in England.

EMPLOYMENT OF MR. B. K. SINGH IN THE DEPARTMENT OF CIVIL AVIATION.

242. Dr. B. S. Moonje : 1. Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the leaderette " Indians in Civil Aviation " appearing in the Amrita Bazar Patrika in its issue of Thursday, 12th July, 1928, Dak Edition ?

2. If so, will the Government be pleased to make enquiries and let the House know if it is a fact :

(a) That Mr. B. K. Singh, a Bengali gentleman of a respectable family of the District of Hughly, served in the Great War as a member of the Indian Volunteer Corps.

(b) That he served for two years in the Aeroplane Department of Messrs. Vickers Ltd., Crayford Works.

(c) That he was elected an Associate Member of the Royal Aeronautical Society of Great Britain in 1918.

(d) That he has completed the course and passed the examination as " Aero-rigger and Mechanic " from the School of Aeronautics and Engineering, Sheffield, and also passed the examination of the Society of Engineers in Aero-Engineering and the examination of the Mechanical Engineering of the British Society of Engineers, Sheffield.

(e) That he applied several times for a suitable post in the Department of Civil Aviation of the Government of India and if so with what result ?

3. Do Government propose to employ the services of the said Mr. Singh in the Department of Civil Aviation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : 1. Yes.

2. The Government of India have been unable to trace any application from Mr. Singh for a post in the Civil Aviation Department, and they do not propose to conduct an inquiry into Mr. Singh's qualifications.

3. The answer is in the negative.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A BOARD OF INTERMEDIATE AND SECONDARY EDUCATION FOR RAJPUTANA AND AJMER-MERWARA.

243. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Do Government propose to establish a Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education for Rajputana and Ajmer-Merwara ?

(b) If so, when will it begin to function ?

(c) Is the personnel of the Board settled ? If so, will the public be represented on the Board, and what form do Government propose to give to that representation ? Do Government propose to include the representatives of the public of Ajmer-Merwara on the Board, as is the case with the United Provinces Board of Intermediate and Secondary Education ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Government have under consideration a proposal for the formation of a joint Board of High School and Intermediate Education for Rajputana (including Ajmer-Merwara), Central India and Gwalior.

(b) and (c). The scheme, though accepted in principle, has not yet sufficiently materialised for me to make any statement on it.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON AGRICULTURE REGARDING DEVELOPMENT OF AGRICULTURE IN AJMER-MERWARA.

244. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda: (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following recommendations made by the Royal Agricultural Commission in its report issued recently ?

(Page 659) " Ajmer-Merwara in consideration of its long history of famines, should in our view receive special consideration and might well be made a model both in Agricultural and Veterinary matters, to the States of Rajputana by which it is surrounded ".

(P. 661) " In Ajmer-Merwara a Deputy Director, with special experience of live-stock or dairying or preferably both would seem to be required."

(P. 572) " We are of opinion that Ajmer-Merwara should have a definite agricultural organization ".

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what action Government propose to take on the above recommendations, and when ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: (a) Yes.

(b) The recommendations are under the consideration of Government.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF THE SUB-JUDGE, AJMER, AND THE CITY MAGISTRATE, AJMER.

245. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda: (a) Is it a fact that when the recommendation of the Local Government of Ajmer-Merwara to increase the salaries of the Additional District and Sessions Judge for that province was placed before the Standing Finance Committee of the Indian Legislature in August 1927, the Committee agreed to the proposed increase on the clear understanding that the question of the adequacy or otherwise of the pay of the Subordinate Civil and Criminal Courts whose appeals were submitted direct to the Additional District and Sessions Judge would also be considered ?

(b) Will Government state if in pursuance of this decision of the Standing Finance Committee, the Local Government of Ajmer-Merwara was asked to consider the adequacy of the salaries of the subordinate courts concerned, and if so, what action has been taken with regard to the revision of the salaries of the Sub-Judge, Ajmer, and the City Magistrate, Ajmer ?

Sir Denys Bray: (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) The proposals of the Chief Commissioner have just been received and are now under consideration.

THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF AGRICULTURE, ROME.

246. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda: (a) Is it a fact that India pays an annual subscription of £800 towards the expenses of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome ?

(b) Is India entitled to nominate a member to the permanent Committee of the Institute ?

(c) Is it a fact that no such member is now appointed and that the British representative on the permanent Committee is in charge of the interests of India ?

(d) Is it also a fact that the Royal Commission on Agriculture is of opinion that " No one representative would be in a position to deal with the vast quantity of technical information which the Institute has collected ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House a statement of what the British representative has done during the last three years for the benefit of agriculture in India ?

(f) Do Government, in view of measures to be taken for the improvement of agriculture in India as recommended by the Royal Commission on Agriculture, propose to appoint a whole time member of the Permanent Committee of the Institute to give India, the full benefit of the research and technical work done by the Institute ?

(g) If not, will Government give this House an idea of the return India is getting for its annual contribution of £800 ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: (a) to (d). Yes.

(e) and (g). A note giving the information required has been laid on the table of the House.

(f) Not at present.

The British representative on the Permanent Committee of the International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, has played an important part in shaping the general policy of the Institute. This has also benefited India since the activities of the Institute have been directed towards collection of information which has proved of great value to India. Attention is invited in this connection to paragraph 578 of the Report of the Royal Commission on Agriculture. To mention only one example, valuable information has been collected in regard to legislation on agricultural subjects and on rural matters generally undertaken in other countries. The British representative has also been instrumental in getting the Institute to establish a separate Bureau of Tropical and Colonial Agriculture which has greatly enhanced the usefulness of the Institute to India.

CONTRIBUTION BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TO THE IMPERIAL INSTITUTE LONDON.

247. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda: Is it a fact that the Government of India contributes £1,200 annually to the funds of the Imperial Institute, London ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters: The answer is in the affirmative.

FLOODING OF THE RAILWAY QUARTERS AT MORADABAD.

248. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: (a) Is it a fact that railway quarters at Moradabad were overflooded during the rains in July last ?

(b) Is it also a fact that one of the railway employees living in the quarters was swept away and died ?

(c) What steps, if any, were taken by the Government to avoid overflooding of the quarters ?

(d) Was any compensation given by the Railway to the family of the person who was swept away during the flood ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: Government have received no report of any such occurrence. We are sending a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the East Indian Railway, so that he can look into the question whether any action is required at Moradabad, and whether any compensation is warranted.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: Did the Railway Board take any action in this matter after receiving notice of my question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think that we have already sent a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the East Indian Railway.

CASE OF EAILWAY DRIVERS WHO HAD PASSED THEIR EXAMINATIONS AT THE CHANDAUSI RAILWAY TRAINING SCHOOL.

249. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that certain railway drivers who had passed their examinations at the Chandausi Railway Training School were re-examined by the Staff Inspector at Moradabad only about a week after they had come out successful from the Chandausi School, and, having been declared as unqualified, their promotions were stopped ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: The answer is in the negative. Actually after 7 drivers had returned to duty in the Moradabad Division from a course of training at Chandausi, an enquiry was received by the Divisional Superintendent whether he had any drivers whom he could recommend for the passenger service, and the Staff Inspector (Power) recommended 5 men out of 16 so far tested. But there was no question of declaring any one unqualified or of stopping any one's promotion. On the Moradabad Division there is no such thing as special pay for passenger drivers.

Mr. B. Das : Do I understand that these five drivers chosen by the Staff Inspector were chosen from passed students of the Chandausi School?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They were not chosen only from passed students of the Chandausi School, but I believe one man who was chosen had either passed the examination, or was subsequently found to have passed. The selection was made from all drivers in the Moradabad Division for there was certainly no idea of depriving any driver who had had no opportunity of going to the Chandausi School of a chance of selection.

Mr. B. Das : Will Government see their way to securing drivers who have passed from the Chandausi School ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons: Certainly not. The qualifications for passenger train drivers do not depend entirely on their having passed the course in the Chandausi School. The authorities have to choose the best qualified men available, since the safety of the public has to be considered.

HANDING OVER OF THE LAL BUNGALOW IN DELHI TO A CHRISTIAN CLUB FOR RECREATION PURPOSES.

250. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that the Lal Bungalow, a mausoleum of Prince Jahangir, son of the Emperor Akbar the II, and other Princes and Princesses of the Moghul Dynasty, which lies outside Delhi on the way to the mausoleum of Hazrat Nizam Uddin Oulia, and which is one of the buildings protected under the Old Monuments Act, has been handed over to some Christian Club to be used by them for recreation purposes ? Is it also a fact that the stone monuments of two graves inside the bungalow have been removed from their places ? If so, do Government propose to put a stop to this act of disrespect to the dead, which has created a great deal of agitation amongst the Musalmans of Delhi, by taking the building from the Christian Club and handing it over to the association (" Auqaful Musalmin ") of the Muslim Trust at Delhi ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government are inquiring into the matter and hope to communicate the result to the Honourable Member as soon as possible.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Has the New Delhi Golf Club got something particularly Christian about it ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is a question which might be addressed to my Honourable friend opposite.

REMARKS MADE BY THE HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE COURTNEY TERRELL, CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE HIGH COURT, PATNA, IN CRIMINAL APPEAL NO. 23 OF 1928.

251. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following remark made by Mr. Courtney Terrell, Chief Justice of the Patna High Court, in Criminal Appeal No. 23 of 1928, decided on the 16th May 1928, and reproduced by the Searchlight of Patna, dated the 1st August, 1928 :

" But it appears from what we know of the former case that it was not a case of any great magnitude ; and having regard to the habits of the people in this particular part of the world, where the giving of false evidence, however deplorable it may be, is not considered an offence, which is fatal to a man's reputation, to say the least of it, I do not think that much importance need be placed on that fact " ?

(b) Do Government propose to take necessary steps either to have the remark withdrawn, or to remove Mr. Courtney Terrell from his office ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have seen the article in question.

(b) No.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Do Government approve or disapprove of the remark set out in this question ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that the Honourable gentleman is asking me to express an opinion regarding the conduct of a Judge in a court of law in the exercise of his judicial functions.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am asking a question about a fact. Do the Government approve or disapprove of the remark in question ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : An expression of approval or disapproval would necessarily be an expression of opinion.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Is there no truth in the statement made by the Searchlight regarding the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I can only refer the Honourable Member to the answer given by me. It is impossible for me to express either approval or disapproval of the remark, as I am precluded from doing so by the rules of procedure.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is any part of the duty of the Government to enquire what foundation there is for the remark of Mr. Justice Courtney Terrell ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think it is part of the duty of Government to enquire into a statement made by a Judge of the High Court in the discharge of his functions.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Is a Judge of a High Court then above the law ? Is he not bound by the law he administers ? Is it not the duty of the Government to take notice of the conduct of a Judge, if necessary ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not prepared to add to the answer I have already given.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Is Government aware that the remark passed has caused great discontent among the people of India, and is it not the duty of Government to remove that impression ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government do not see any reason to interfere in the matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I should like to know what objection Government have to referring the matter through the proper channel.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I can only recapitulate what I have already said. The Government of India would not be acting properly in interfering in the manner suggested by the Honourable Member.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: Is the Honourable the Home Member precluded by any rule from expressing his disapproval of these remarks made by Mr. Justice Terrell ? Is the Honourable the Home Member aware that the late Prime Minister of England, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, castigated Mr. Justice McCardie in connection with certain observations he made in the discharge of his duties as a Judge ? He said that that would completely satisfy the people that the British Cabinet entirely dissociated themselves from the remark made by that learned Judge. Now I ask, is the Honourable the Home Member prepared to follow that precedent in this case or not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The purport of the Honourable Member's question is to invite me to pass an opinion involving a reflection upon the conduct of a court of law in the exercise of its judicial functions. I have already pointed out that under Standing Order 29, I am precluded from doing so.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that Mr. Justice Terrell formed his opinion of the people of this part of the world by reading a copy of Miss Mayo's Book, " Mother India " during his voyage to India, and also by his association with the police officials at Patna ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask one supplementary question, Sir? Are Government aware of the fact that since Mr. Justice Terrell assumed charge of his office, which was on the 1st of April, a very significant date, the people are fast losing confidence in his judicial administration ?

Mr. President : Order, order. No ironical criticisms are permissible.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I am asking a question, Sir, whether it is not a fact that the people are fast losing confidence in Mr. Justice Terrell and in his administration of justice ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : May I enquire, Sir, whether that question is in order in view of Standing Order 29 ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour: Is the Honourable Member prepared to examine ..... (Order, order.)

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : A point of order has been raised.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member's question is whether the Government are aware that the people of India, especially the people of that province, have lost confidence in a particular Judge. I think that question is perfectly in order.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have seen a number of comments in the Press with regard to this judgment, but I am not prepared to infer from them that the consequence which the Honourable Member has suggested has eventuated

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do Government realise that the people of India construe these remarks of the Honourable Judge as defamation of the people of India. (Hear, hear and Applause.)

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar: I have already explained that I have seen many comments to that effect in the Press, but I am not in a better position than the Honourable Member to draw any inference from them.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: If, Sir, the feeling among Indians be what I have indicated, are Government content to leave it at this on a technical ground, or, are Government prepared to offer some explanation or express their opinion which would assuage the feelings of the people of India ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : In this connection, may I ask the Honourable the Home Member to examine the precedents of the British Parliament, particularly the precedent I have referred to, before committing himself to the view that the Government of India are not prepared to take any action in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar: My reply to both the questions is that the Government of India cannot accept, as an executive Government, responsibility for the statements made by a Judge of a High Court.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Will the Government be pleased to take such action as they may think proper in order that the Honourable Judge may make amends for this wanton insult to the people of India ? (Hear, hear.) Are the Government prepared to take any action at all ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour: May I put a supplementary question, Sir?

Mr. President: The Honourable Member must wait.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar: I have already said that the Government are not prepared to take any action in the matter.

Mr. President : Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: May I put one more supplementary question, Sir ?

Mr. President : The next question.

EMPLOYMENT OF INDIANS BY THE EMPIRE MARKETING BOARD.

252. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that on or about the 20th February 1928, the Secretary of State for Dominion

Affairs and the Colonies, stated in the House of Commons, re garding the Empire Marketing Board, that " as regards the staff em ployed, the services of Indians with special qualifications are utilize from time to time to undertake work of a temporary character in connec tion with the Board's educational and publicity activities "?

(b) Will Government kindly state how many Indians are so em ployed, and at what pay, out of the total strength of the staff ; and als why Indians are employed " to undertake work of a temporary character " only ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) The Government of India have no information.

CASE OF MR. CAMPBELL alias MR. GEORGE ALLISON.

253. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Campbell, otherwise known as Mr. George Allison, served a sentence of 18 months' imprisonment in India for breach of the Passport Act ? Will Government kindly explain the exact nature of the offence with which he was charged ?

(b) Is it a fact that throughout his term of imprisonment, he was refused permission to meet his lawyer ; and was also refused his kit, and actually removed from India against his will ? If so, under what law ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) He was convicted of entering British India on a forged passport, and was sentenced to 18 months' rigorous imprisonment under sections 471 and 476 of the Indian Penal Code, and 3 months for a breach of the passport rules, the sentences running concurrently.

(b) As to the first part, Government have no information and, as to the second part, he was removed from British India by the Government of Bombay under section 5 of the Indian Passport Act, 1920.

NUMBER OF HINDUS AND MOSLEMS EMPLOYED AS SUPERINTENDENTS, POSTMASTERS AND CLERKS IN ALL THE POST OFFICES IN SIND.

254. Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of (i) Superintendents, (ii) Postmasters, (iii) Inspectors and (iv) clerks in all the Post Offices in the Province of Sind ?

(b) How many of these appointments are held by Moslems and Hindus respectively ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). The figures with respect to Superintendents and gazetted Postmasters are as follows :

Superintendents—4 of whom 1 is a Moslem and 2 are Hindus.

Gazetted Postmasters—2, who are neither Moslem nor Hindu.

The remaining information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member as early as possible.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF THE MINISTERIAL STAFF IN THE CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT, THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT AND THE CHIEF ACCOUNT OFFICE, SALT, BOMBAY.

255. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether it is a fact that several representations for revision of time-scale on the part of the ministerial staffs of the Bombay Customs, Income-Tax and Chief Account Office, Salt, were received by them ?

(b) If the reply to (a) is in the affirmative what is the decision of Government regarding the representations ?

(c) If the revision has been refused the reasons and grounds for such refusal ?

(d) Whether it is a fact that the clerical time-scales of all the Central Departments in Bombay except those under the Central Board of Revenue have been revised since 1921 ?

(e) If the reply to (d) is in the affirmative what are the reasons and grounds on which such differential treatment is based ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The pay of the ministerial staff was last revised, in the Customs Department, in 1920 ; in the Income-tax Department, in 1922 ; and in the Chief Account Office, Salt, in 1921. Representations received from these staffs since then have been rejected.

(c) On the ground that the existing scales were considered adequate.

(d) Yes.

(e) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer under (c).

PAY OF PROBATIONERS AND RESERVISTS IN OFFICES ADMINISTERED BY THE CENTRAL BOARD OF REVENUE IN BOMBAY.

256. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether they are aware that in Bombay Offices administered by the Central Board of Revenue, there are posts of probationers, reservists, etc., who are granted either a start of salary less than the standardised start of Rs. 60 per month or no increment for a couple of years even if the usual start of Rs. 60 is granted ?

(b) If so, whether Government are aware that this has no parallel in any of the Bombay offices ?

(c) Whether there are any representations for the redress of these grievances ?

(d) The decision by Government on these representations ?

(e) The grounds and reasons on which such decisions were based ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The Government of India are not aware of the arrangements in all other Bombay offices.

(c) No.

(d) and (e). Do not arise.

METHOD OF MAKING SELECTIONS FOR PROMOTION AMONGST THE ORDINARY CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICES.

257. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether there are any definite orders as to the mode of appointing officials to the higher grade from amongst the ordinary clerical establishment ?

(b) If so, to place a copy of the said order on the Assembly table ?

(c) If there are no definite orders then to state the principles on which such selections in making appointments are based ?

(d) Whether the appointments are made according to strict seniority unless the seniormost has been found to be deficient in merit required for the post ?

(e) If the principle as stated in (d) above is not at present followed in practice whether the same will be followed in future ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c), (d) and (e). Discretion in making selections for promotion vests in the Heads of Departments concerned. Government are not aware what the precise practice of the Heads of Departments is, but, as they do not contemplate interfering with the discretion of those authorities, they see no purpose in calling for the information.

ESTABLISHMENT OF PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT BUREAU OR LABOUR EXCHANGES.

258. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have stated in their report to the International Labour Office that they propose to consult the Provincial Governments regarding the establishment of Public Employment Bureau or Labour Exchanges ?

(b) If so, what steps have they taken to do so ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) A reference was made to Local Governments in July last.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India have asked the Local Governments to obtain the views of the labour organisations before they send replies to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I forget the exact terms of our letter, but I shall be pleased to show it to the Honourable Member.

SICKNESS INSURANCE.

259. *Mr. N. M Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have addressed the Provincial Governments regarding sickness insurance ?

(b) If not, when do they propose to do so ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). A draft letter is in issue, which I have shown to the Standing Advisory Committee attached to the Department of Industries and Labour.

APPOINTMENT OF INDIAN REPRESENTATIVES AT GENEVA.

260. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the reply given by Government to parts (a) and (c) of the starred question No. 10 on 1st February, asked by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas regarding the appointment of Indian representatives at Geneva, will Government be pleased to state what decision they have arrived at on the matter ?

Mr. L. Graham : The proposal that there should be a permanent Indian Representative at Geneva was discussed with the High Commissioner by the Honourable the Law Member on the occasion of his recent visit to England. It is understood that the High Commissioner was not altogether in favour of the proposal and that he is engaged in framing alternative proposals with a view to attaining the same object.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : How will these alternative proposals of the High Commissioner be made known to this House ?

Mr. L. Graham : When we have received them, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : How ?

Mr. L. Graham : Presumably the Honourable Member will ask another question.

HOURS OF WORK AND WEEKLY REST DAY FOR RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

261. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 31 on 1st February last regarding the hours of work and the weekly rest day for railway employees, will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to a decision on the matter ?

(b) If so, what is the decision ?

(c) If no decision is reached, will they be pleased to state why the delay is being caused ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan's unstarred question No. 55 of 4th September, 1928.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : The Honourable Member has in replying to this question referred me to the answer to unstarred question No. 55 put by Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan on the 4th September, 1928. As the reply to question No. 55 is not before me, will the Honourable Member kindly read that answer ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If I have your permission, Sir, I am quite willing to read the reply to unstarred question No. 55. The reply to that question is :

"The Railway Board have approved the adoption by the State-managed Railways of the resolution passed at the 1927 session of the Indian Railway Conference Association, a copy of which is appended to this reply, and have been informed that the Boards of Directors of practically all Company-managed Railways have also given their assent to that resolution. Railways are proceeding with their preparations to give effect to that resolution".

I shall be very pleased to send to the Honourable Member a copy of that resolution if he has not already got one.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether the Honourable Members of this House are not inconvenienced by giving a reply in such a way that they cannot ask a supplementary question. The Honourable Member referred me to a certain resolution passed at a railway conference which is not before me ?

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member put that question to the Chair ? If so, the reply is that Members are inconvenienced.

DEDUCTIONS FROM THE WAGES OF WORKERS.

262. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 34 on 1st February last regarding the deductions from the wages, will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to a decision in the matter ?

(b) If so, what is the decision ?

(c) If no decision is arrived at, will they be pleased to state why the delay is being caused ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The question of legislation in India for the regulation and control of deductions from the wages of workers is by no means a simple one and there were many details which required very careful consideration.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask how long Government will take to consider this question and when the first consideration of this question was begun ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The question has been under consideration for several years and, as the Honourable Member no doubt knows, a very elaborate enquiry was conducted by the Bombay Government on this subject, and that is one of the reasons why delay occurred in the early stages. We have received the Local Government's very elaborate report and have been considering that in connection with the replies received from other Local Governments. I hope there will not be much further delay now before the question is settled.

PROMPT PAYMENT OF WAGES.

263. Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 35 on 1st February last regarding prompt payment of wages, will Government be pleased to state when they propose to introduce such legislation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The matter is still under consideration, but the Government of India hope to be able to arrive at an early decision.

EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

264. Mr N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state what action they propose to take regarding the provision of educational facilities for the children of the railway employees as a result of their consideration of a recent report made on the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is the intention of Government to obtain the advice on the question of the Central Advisory Council for Railways at a meeting which will shortly be summoned.

RECRUITMENT OF SEAMEN AT BOMBAY.

265. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to remove the grievances of seamen in Bombay regarding recruitment ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of Bombay are arranging to transfer the recruitment of serangs and butlers from the licensed brokers to the Shipping Master, and to introduce registers in the Shipping Office for the purpose. To ensure that the proposed registers are properly maintained and that no corrupt practices are employed when crews are signed on, the Government of Bombay have proposed the creation of an additional post of Assistant in the Shipping Office from the 1st November, 1928, for one year in the first instance. The proposal has been approved by the Standing Finance Committee.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether it is part of that proposal that the licence of the recruiting broker will be taken away ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I must ask for notice of that.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the question has engaged the attention of the Government of India for the last five or six years since Mr. Clow presided over the Recruitment Committee and nothing has been done hitherto, do Government propose in the interests of the country and of these men to take early steps to give effect to its Report and to appoint officers to engage seamen instead of issuing licences to brokers who are corrupt themselves and corrupt the morality of these seamen ?

Mr. President : Order, order !

AMENDMENT OF THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT.

266. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to address the Provincial Governments asking for their suggestions for the amendment of the Workmen's Compensation Act ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The Government of India have introduced a Bill during the current Session of the Assembly to amend the Act so as to remove certain defects and to introduce minor changes which are likely to raise no important controversial points and which will be generally recognised as improvements. They will thereafter consult Local Governments regarding a number of other suggestions which involve the modification of the principles underlying the present Act or of its more important features.

RECOGNITION OF THE UNIONS OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

267. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 42 on 1st February last will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to a decision regarding the recognition of the Unions of railway employees ?

(b) If so, what is the decision ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government have come to the following conclusions :

(1) The fact that a Union has been registered under the Indian Trade Unions Act should predispose an Agent to accept it as representing the interests of its members and their views.

(2) The decision whether, and, if so, to what extent, a claim of any particular Union to represent matters affecting the staff of the railway may be admitted must be dependent on the extent to which the Union in question is actually representative, in its numbers, influence and standing, of the staff as a whole or of a particular class or particular classes of the staff.

LEAVE AND PENSION RULES APPLICABLE TO INFERIOR SERVANTS.

268. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to a decision on the question regarding the leave and pension rules applicable to inferior servants ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state what that decision is ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No decision has been reached as regards leave. As regards pension the only decision so far taken is that the temporary increase of small pensions already in force should continue till 1st November, 1929. In the interval it is hoped that the classification rules will be issued and the Government will then re-examine the matter in the light of the situation thus created and the action taken in regard to the same matter by Provincial Governments in general.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, why the Government of India have delayed this matter so much ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Because the matter is of considerable importance the consideration of which is bound to take a certain amount of time.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether this matter which is being delayed is of more importance or the matter of the increase in the salaries of higher officers ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Here the point at issue is a question of principle, not a question of making certain alterations in rates of pay.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the principle is that the people are poor in one case and, in the other, rich ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is not the principle. The principle is that the pension and leave rules of these people have for about a century been on different lines from those of officers in superior pensionable service.

ALLEGED ASSAULT BY THE FOREMAN OF THE VACUUM BRAKE SHOP ON MOHAMMAD HUSSAIN, A WORKMAN OF THE CARRIAGE AND WAGON SHOPS AT MOGHULPURA.

269. Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 479 on 19th March last regarding a workman being beaten and kicked by a foreman, will Government be pleased to state what punishment was given to the foreman referred to ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The pay of the foreman has been reduced by Rs. 25 per mensem for a period of six months.

LOSS CAUSED TO THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY BY THE STRIKE AT LILLOOAH, ASANSOL AND ONDAL.

270. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state what is the approximate amount of loss caused to the East Indian Railway by the strike at Lillooah, Asansol and Ondal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : There was no dislocation of traffic as a result of the strike, and it consequently cannot be said to have affected the earnings of the East Indian Railway. I am unable to say, to what extent, if any, there may prove to be some loss to the railway administration owing to the postponement of repairs which should otherwise have been carried out. But I do not think it need be feared that any loss from this cause will be appreciable.

ENQUIRY BY THE AGENT OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY INTO THE GRIEVANCES OF THE MEN EMPLOYED AT THE LILLOOAH WORKSHOPS.

271. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Agent of the East Indian Railway has enquired into the grievances of the men employed at the Lillooah Workshops ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state what has been done to remove them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The rates of pay of certain classes of the lower paid workmen in the Lillooah shops have been raised from the 1st of August, 1928, and the Agent is making an enquiry into the housing conditions of the workmen in Lillooah.

NUMBER OF LOCOMOTIVES FITTED WITH ELECTRIC SEARCH-LIGHTS.

272. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) The total number of railway locomotives in use in India ;

(b) How many of them are fitted with electric search-lights ;

(c) When the remaining locomotives will be so fitted up ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : On the 31st March last 2,785 out of the 3,352 locomotives working mail, passenger and mixed trains had been fitted with electric search-lights, and we expect the balance of 567 to be so fitted by the end of this year.

There are (approximately) 2,250 locomotives employed in working goods trains. I believe a certain number have already been fitted with electric search-lights, but the great majority have not. The Railway Board have already taken up the question of fitting all train engines, including goods train engines, with electric search-lights with Railway Administrations and are considering making them compulsory by 1932.

REPRESENTATION FROM THE IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT DUFTARIES ASSOCIATION REGARDING QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

273 Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Imperial Secretariat Duftaries' Association at New Delhi had sent a representation to the Government of India pointing out certain inconveniences experienced by its members in the quarters such as (1) absence of bath, (2) absence of wall and door in kitchen, (3) absence of water pipe, (4) low courtyard walls and (5) absence of electric lights ?

(b) What will be the approximate cost of removing these inconveniences ?

(c) Do Government propose to take steps for removing the inconveniences ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) About Rs. 86,000.

(c) Yes, so far as items (1) and (3) are concerned. They do not consider the other items necessary.

PRACTICE OF EMPLOYING ASSISTANT GUARDS TO DO THE WORK OF GUARDS WITHOUT EXTRA REMUNERATION ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

274. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that on the Bengal and North-Western Railway assistant guards drawing salaries of less than Rs. 20 per month are asked to perform the work of guards for months together without any extra payment for more responsible work ?

(b) If so, do Government propose to draw the attention of the Agent to the desirability of modifying this practice ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Assistant guards who have passed their guard's examination and are fully qualified to act as guards are put in charge of goods trains generally temporarily to relieve regular guards when sickness or exceptionally heavy traffic renders such a course necessary. No allowance is given.

(b) A copy of the Honourable Member's question has been sent to the Agent.

MILEAGE ALLOWANCE OF GUARDS AND ASSISTANT GUARDS IN THE SONPUR DISTRICT, BENGAL AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

275. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that on the Bengal and North-Western Railway especially in the Sonpur District the number of cases of guards and assistant guards being deprived of the mileage allowance, are unduly large ?

(b) Is it a fact that frequently the allowance is forfeited even though the guard is not responsible for the train being late ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The answer is in the negative.

CONSERVANCY CHARGES LEVIED FROM DUFTARIES BY THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT IN NEW DELHI.

276. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the members of the Imperial Secretariat Duftaries' Association occupying quarters in New Delhi have to pay a conservancy charge of 8 annas a month ?

(b) Is it a fact that in Simla such a charge is not taken from the duftaries ?

(c) What is the total amount collected from this charge at New Delhi ?

(d) What steps do Government propose to take to free the duftaries at New Delhi from the burden of this charge ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) No conservancy charges are levied from duftaries by the Health Department in New Delhi.

(b) No charge is levied from the duftaries in Simla.

(c) and (d). Do not arise.

GRANT OF FAMILY TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE TO DUFTARIES DURING THE MOVES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA BETWEEN SIMLA AND DELHI.

277. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether the duftaries are not given travelling allowance for their families during the move of the Government between Simla and Delhi ;

(b) Why is this allowance denied to duftaries ; and

(c) When do they propose to arrive at a favourable decision in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The position is as stated.

(b) The terms of their appointment do not include the concession.

(c) The matter is receiving consideration and a decision is likely to be reached shortly.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why this distinction was made, that the higher officers should get travelling allowances, while menials do not get any travelling allowance ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As I informed the Honourable Member, the terms of the appointment of duftaries do not include the question of travelling allowance. The matter is now being examined and we hope a decision will shortly be reached.

CONSTRUCTION OF FAMILY QUARTERS FOR DUFTARIES IN SIMLA.

278. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether duftaries in the Imperial Secretariat at Simla are not provided with family quarters in Simla ;

(b) what they propose to do to remove the inconvenience ; and

(c) when the inconvenience will be removed ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) There are no quarters that can be strictly described as family quarters. As a matter of fact, there are no quarters specially set aside for duftaries nor are there any quarters definitely marked as " single " or " married ". The quarters intended for this class of men are generally known as menials' quarters. These are allotted to various Departments and offices of the Government of India on a pro rata basis and it is left to the Departments to put single or married men in the quarters allotted to each, according to the number which each quarter can accommodate.

(b) and (c). These do not strictly arise ; but I would add for the information of the Honourable Member that Government do not contemplate the construction of further quarters.

Mr. B. Das : Will it hamper the Government much if they spend a lakh or two in building quarters for these menials ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The question is as regards the number of quarters, not as regards their quality.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are aware that in 1924, Sir Alexander Muddiman replied that the question was under consideration and the matter had not been lost sight of by Government and whether in two years' time the Government have come to any decision on the point ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Yes, Sir ; I was aware of that and I gave the Government's decision that they did not consider the building of any further quarters necessary. I may add that the proportion of quarters relatively to the number of men is greater in the case of duftaries than in regard to other classes of Government servants.

HOURS OF WORK OF DUFTARIES IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

279. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether an office order has been issued in the office of the Director General of Post and Telegraph Department increasing the hours of work of the duftaries in that office to 8 instead of 6 ?

(b) Whether they propose to take steps to reconsider the order and rescind it ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) An office order has been issued limiting the hours of working duftaries to 8 hours.

(b) Government are not prepared to take the action suggested.

(1) HOURS OF WORK OF DUFTARIES IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.
(2) LOCATION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES IN DELHI.

280. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of any orders issued (a) on the fixing of office hours of the duftaries of the Government of India (attached and subordinate offices) both in Simla and Delhi and in summer and winter and (b) about the permanent location in Delhi of the attached and permanent Departments ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The question of office hours is, within limits, one for each Department to decide for itself, but ordinarily the hours of attendance are so fixed as to apply to all members of the staff, including duftaries.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer which I gave on the 15th February, 1928, to Mr. Kelkar's question No. 93.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : May I know what is the number of the Honourable Member's august association of duftaries ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would ask the Honourable Member to give me notice of that question.

ACCIDENT IN THE MEDIDHI COLLIERY.

281. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) The number of persons killed, (b) and persons injured in the accident that took place in the Medidhi Colliery on the 9th April 1928 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to publish the report of the Chief Inspector of Mines and of the enquiry made under the Indian Mines Act ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Six persons were killed and forty persons were injured.

(b) Government have received no report of the formal inquiry made by the Chief Inspector of Mines. Section 22 of the Mines Act entrusts the Local Government with the responsibility of deciding whether the report of the Court of Enquiry should be published or not, and the Government of India understand that no decision has yet been reached.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is not the responsibility of the Government of India, which is responsible for the industry of mines, to receive the report on this incident ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The report of the Chief Inspector was made to the Local Government and it was on the basis of that report that under the statutory powers entrusted to them they ordered a court of inquiry. We shall receive from the Local Government that report with their comments on it, and I would ask the Honourable Member to await until the Government of India receive the Local Government's comments, and they will certainly then decide what further action, if any, is necessary. I should like to add that this was a very serious accident and the Government of India share with the Honourable Member his concern at so serious an accident happening and they will examine very carefully what changes in regulations or other changes may be necessary when they receive the report.

ACCIDENT IN THE MEDIDHI COLLIERY.

282. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that some time before the accident took place in the Medidhi Colliery the Manager had warned the Chief Mining Engineer of the imminence of the danger ?

(b) Is it a fact that no immediate steps were taken to warn the persons of the danger ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The Manager made no report to the effect that danger was imminent.

(b) Yes.

ACCIDENT IN THE MEDIDHI COLLIERY.

283. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is it a fact that after the Medidhi accident during the inspection by the Additional Deputy Magistrate in the evening, Mr. Pierce, the Manager, had told him that he had sent a report regarding the accident to the Magistrate's office in the morning but when after the inspection the Magistrate went to the Manager's office, he found the Manager hastily drafting the report ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : It has been ascertained that though the Manager told the Additional Deputy Commissioner on the day of the accident that he had that day sent in a notice of the accident, that officer did not receive a notice till the next day. Government have no information concerning the incident referred to in the latter part of the question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government will inquire about the incident ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I think, Sir, this will be dealt with in the report of the court of inquiry.

REPRESENTATION OF WORKERS AT ENQUIRIES INTO ACCIDENTS IN MINES.

284. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that in the statutory enquiry made after the Medidhi accident there was an assessor associated to represent the employers but there was no assessor to represent the workers ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Indian Colliery Employees' Association was allowed to watch the proceedings, but its representatives were not allowed to ask questions ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to amend the Indian Mines Act, providing for the representation of workers through the Indian Colliery Employees' Association during such enquiries ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Section 21 of the Act requires the appointment of a person or persons possessing legal or special knowledge to act as assessor or assessors. Two such persons were appointed to act as assessors in this case and neither of them acted in a representative capacity.

(b) The representatives of the Indian Colliery Employees' Association were not allowed to question witnesses, but they were permitted to suggest questions to the Court of Enquiry.

(c) Government do not consider it desirable to undertake legislation for the purpose of securing representation for a particular association, but I shall consider whether other steps should be taken to ensure the representation of interests which are directly concerned in inquiries of this character.

(1) LABOUR LEGISLATION.

(2) REVIVAL OF THE LABOUR BUREAU IN THE DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR.

285. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the consideration of several questions for legislation is delayed in the Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that some years back the Government of India had abolished the Labour Bureau in the Department of Industries ?

(c) Has the Government any intention to revive the Bureau for the prompt disposal of questions regarding labour legislation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) I take it that the Honourable Member is referring to labour legislation. The progress in dealing with questions falling under this head has not always been as rapid as the Government of India would have liked, but as the Honourable Member is aware, it is ordinarily necessary to consult a large number of interests in cases of this kind.

(b) Yes.

(c) Not at present.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether Government propose to strengthen their staff which looks after questions of labour legislation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I have replied to the Honourable Member as regards the bureau, but I may also say that at present there are no proposals for increase of staff.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : When will Government consider such proposals ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Government will certainly consider the question—but of course it is a matter also for the Finance Department and for my Honourable friend Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to consider.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are satisfied about the consideration of these questions and their disposal ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No, Sir. The Government are not entirely satisfied, but as I have explained the delays are not by any means all with the Government of India ; they are largely due to the size of the country, the different conditions in the different provinces and the necessity for consulting a large number of interests, which make labour legislation in India a longer process than it would be in a smaller country.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are prepared to consider to what extent the delay is due to the fact that they have not got sufficient staff at their disposal to consider these questions ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I think that the Industries and Labour Department would be delighted to increase their staff.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I should like to add to what has fallen from my Honourable colleague that the eve of the reform of the existing constitution would, from the point of view of the Finance Department, be a most inappropriate time for adding to the establishment of the Industries Department.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether the Government of India think that labour legislation should wait for the new reforms which some people think are coming ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Government of India cannot obviously offer any opinion on the subject.

CONVICTION OF THE ACTING TRAFFIC MANAGER OF THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA RAILWAY OF A CRIMINAL OFFENCE.

286. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the fact that the Acting Traffic Manager of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway was recently convicted of a criminal offence and that he was fined Rs. 30 by a Magistrate ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether this person will still be retained in the railway service ?

(c) If the reply to (b) is in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state what departmental notice of the offence of this person will be taken by the Government ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Government understand that there is no question of his leaving the service of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Company.

(c) None. The officer in question is not serving under Government. The offence appears to have been an entirely trivial one of pushing two men out of his office, and seems to have been adequately dealt with by the Presidency Magistrate.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government do not consider it to be necessary to deal with an officer who was convicted in a criminal court ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have nothing to add to my previous reply. The Presidency Magistrate seems, without the intervention of Government, to have dealt with the offence, such as it was, quite adequately.

GRIEVANCES OF GUARDS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

287. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the series of articles on the grievances of railway guards on the South Indian Railway in the July, August and September issues of the Indian Railway Magazine ?

(b) Is it a fact that guards when they reach the maximum of their grade are not promoted to the higher grade even if there are vacancies but are made to work higher class trains with the pay of the lower grade ?

(c) Is it a fact that when they work the trains that are to be worked by a higher class guard, they are not even paid an acting allowance ?

(d) Is it a fact that cash carrying trains have, under the rule, to be worked only by second class guards but that they are now being worked by third class guards on the South Indian Railway ?

(e) Is it a fact that when a guard after some years of service seeks a change to a stationary life like that of a station master he is asked to accept a lower salary ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have not seen the articles referred to.

(b) The Agent informs me that on the South Indian Railway guards are promoted in accordance with seniority when vacancies occur in the higher grades. No special arrangement as to allotment exists except that mail and express trains are worked by first class guards. Long distance passenger trains are generally worked by second class guards and local trains by third and fourth class guards.

(c) The position is that acting arrangements are not generally made as the cadre in each class provides for relief.

(d) The practice is for the second class guards to work trains carrying cash on the main line, and third class guards to work such trains only on a few short branch lines.

(e) If guards of their own accord ask for such a change, and it is found possible to meet their wishes, they are transferred only on the pay drawn by their contemporaries in the grade to which they are transferred so as to avoid supersession of those already in that grade.

OVERWORKED GUARDS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

288. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of second class guards that used to work the section between Tinnevelly and Trivandram in 1924 and in 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that there has been an all round reduction in the number of guards and that it has led to considerable overwork of the existing staff ?

(c) Is it a fact that guards on the South Indian Railway have to work 12 hours in the day and are able to stop in their homes only three nights out of the nine ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Three in both years.

(b) No.

(c) Guards' runs ordinarily extend only to 8 hours. Where they exceed 8 hours adequate rest is provided. They are generally given one day's continuous rest in a week in addition to rest at headquarters and outstations averaging 63 and 42 hours respectively during the week.

TREATMENT OF INDIAN GUARDS AND DRIVERS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.

289. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that Indian guards on the South Indian Railway are not provided with decent running bangalows at terminal stations ?

(b) Is it a fact that there are no running bangalows at Madras, Chinglepet, Katpadi, Mayavaram, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Erode and Madura ?

(c) Is it a fact that what is called a running bungalow at Shenootta is a bunk made of an old third class carriage and that it is unlit, unswept and has neither cook nor call boy (to wake up the sleeper when he has to go to work during the night) and that this bunk has to be used by guards from Tinnevelly, Virudhunagar and Quilon ?

to remedy the defects pointed out by Mr. Ranganatham Pillai and to award him a reward for his services ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I have not been able to get hold of a copy of this back number of the Indian Railway Magazine.

(b) to (l). The Railway Board are asking the Senior Government Inspector to let them have a report. I will let the Honourable Member know the result.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Leader of the House) : Sir, with your permission I desire to make a statement as to the probable course of Government business during the next week. As originally directed by you, Sir, the House should sit to transact Government business on Monday, the 10th, and Wednesday, the 12th. If the House accepts my motion for taking into consideration the Public Safety Bill on Monday, the 10th, we may anticipate that the detailed consideration of the clauses and the motion for passing the Bill will occupy the greater part of Wednesday, the 12th. On the other hand, should the House accept the motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee with instructions to report within three days in accordance with the motion of which my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, has given notice, you, Sir, have kindly agreed to transfer the sitting of Wednesday, the 12th, to Friday, the 14th, in order to leave Wednesday, the 12th, available for the sitting of the Select Committee. Other Government Bills, which it is hoped to advance on Wednesday or Friday, as the case may be, are as follows : 12 Noon.

The Trade Unions (Amendment) Bill,
The Indian Succession (Amendment) Bill,
The Repealing and Amending Bill,
The Match Industry (Protection) Bill,
The Income-tax (Amendment) Bill,
The Madras Salt (Amendment) Bill, and
The Bill to amend section 505 of the Indian Penal Code.

In respect of all these it is proposed to make motions for consideration and passing. A motion for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Patents and Designs Act will be made on the same day and a motion to refer to Select Committee the Trade Disputes Bill will also be made if time allows. Tuesday, the 11th, is allotted for non-official Resolutions and Thursday, the 13th, is allotted for non-official Bills.

PETITIONS RELATING TO THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I beg to present 90 petitions signed by.....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise on a point of order. It is a question of principle, and I feel I must raise it. This Bill as well as the other Bills have not been served on me....

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. President : We have not reached those Bills yet. I have called on Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda to present certain petitions.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I beg to present 90 petitions signed by 2,700 women of the Bombay Presidency to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, which was introduced in this Assembly on the 1st February 1927.

THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT BILL.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, I rise to move that the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be re-committed to the Select Committee, with the addition of the names of Mr. Birla, Pandit Nilakantha Das, Mr. Shillidy, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, and Mr. Yusuf Imam, with instructions to report within three days, and that the motion for the consideration of the Bill be the item on the agenda of the 20th September, 1928.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Sir, I rise to a point of order. Sir, this Bill as well as the other Bills have not been made available to me within three days.....

Mr. President : The Bill has been before the country for over a year now, and I am surprised that the Honourable Member should get up in this House and say that he has not received a copy.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I beg to say, Sir, that although this Bill has been before the country for such a long time, it has not been served on me after I was gazetted. I was elected only very recently, and it has not been served on me three days before now. Under Standing Order 38, the Bill has to be served on every Member after it is introduced or on any subsequent day. Standing Order 38 reads thus :

"When a Bill is introduced, or on some subsequent occasion, the member in charge may make one of the following motions in regard to his Bill, namely :

(a) that it be taken into consideration by the Assembly either at once or at some future day to be then specified ; or

(b) that it be referred to a Select Committee ; or

(c) that it be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion :

Provided that no such motion shall be made until after copies of the Bill have been made available for the use of members, and that any member may object to any such motion being made unless copies of the Bill have been so made available for three days before the day on which the motion is made....."

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Available to whom ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Available to the Member.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : To the Members.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Available to the Member or Members. I used the words "Member or Members".

Now, Sir, even yesterday I tried to get a copy of this Bill because our papers reach Longwood late, at 10 P.M., but I did not get a copy. I asked some of my friends if they had got copies of the Bill, and they said they also had not got any copies. When I came here I saw copies of these Bills this morning. Under these circumstances, I submit, Sir, that under Rule 38 it has not been served on me at least three days before now. Of course, the President has the power to suspend the Standing Order ; otherwise I am entitled to object to this Bill being proceeded with.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the objection just raised by my friend is wholly unsustainable. The rule relating to the three days' notice of Bills before being taken into consideration is contained in Standing Order 38, but that applies only where the Report of the Select Committee on a Bill has not been presented. Now, the procedure regarding this Bill is governed not by Standing Order 38, but by Standing Order 44, as on this Bill a Select Committee has presented a Report. The exception as to want of notice is contained in Standing Order 38 and not in Standing Order 44, and I therefore submit, Sir, that the objection altogether fails.

Mr. President : Has the Honourable Member got anything to say to the arguments of Mr. Iyengar ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am just reading Standing Order 44, Sir. There has been no final Report of the Select Committee on this Bill. On the contrary after the Bill had gone through the Select Committee, the Report has not been circulated.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Report of the Select Committee was formally presented to this House, and the Honourable Member is not entitled to say that there was no formal Report of the Select Committee. The Standing Order on which the Honourable Member relies does not apply to this case and therefore I must rule him out.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Sir.....

Mr. President : The motion which the Honourable Member moves is quite different from the motion which stands in his name in the order paper. Will he read his motion once again ?

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : The additional members are Mr. Birla, Pandit Nilakantha Das, Mr. Shillidy, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, and Mr. Yusuf Imam.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member read the whole motion ?

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I beg to move, Sir, that the Bill to regulate marriages of children among the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the whole Select Committee, with the addition of Mr. Birla, Mr. Nilakantha Das, Mr. Shillidy, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, and Mr. Yusuf Imam, with instructions to report within three days, and that the motion to take into consideration be the first item on the 20th September.

Mr. President : That is not on the paper.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I have added certain names, Sir. The motion on the agenda is that the Bill to regulate marriages of children among the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the Select Committee.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. President : That is all right. So far the Honourable Member is perfectly in order. The rest may come in by way of amendments.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Very well, Sir. My object in making the motion is that, while the provisions of Standing Order 38 are fulfilled, this motion may come before this Session of the Assembly. The matter has been before this House for nearly two years. This Bill has been circulated twice, once by executive order, and again after amendment by the House, and it has been discussed and debated from all points of view and in all its aspects. I therefore request that, now that the Bill has been fully thrashed out, the Select Committee may consider the Bill and report it for the consideration of this House this Session.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member was really in earnest about his motion he should have moved for the consideration of the Bill.

Motion moved :

"That the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the Select Committee".

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Will you kindly permit me, Sir, to propose an amendment—

(a) that the number of members necessary for the quorum should be 5,

(b) that the report should be presented within 3 days,

(c) that it should be considered as the first item on the 20th September, and (d) that the addition of the names of Mr. Birla, Mr. Nilakantha Das, Mr. Shillidy, Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava, and Mr. Yusuf Imam, be accepted by the House.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member pass on his amendment to the Chair ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I feel it my duty to make a few observations before I give any intelligent vote on the motion before the House, and I hope you will permit me to do so. It will just take a very few minutes and I will try to confine my observations to making my suggestions—I beg your pardon, Sir, my very humble suggestions in the hope that the Select Committee may bear them in mind at the time when they reconsider the Bill when it is recommitted to them, as I take it this motion requires. I am aware, Sir, that I am a mere humble Member of this House (Cries of "No") and I am not a gifted speaker and I do not emulate the polished periods of my friend, Munshi Iswar Saran there. I know I have already made myself odious to some, though I am not guilty, I am not conscious of it. But my good friend, Mr. Birla, said last time that there was a fight between two leaders, than which nothing can be farther from the truth. I am very sorry and that is why I say I am here, Sir, I as a plain blunt man, loving my country perhaps more deeply than wisely; and it is my love for my country that makes me sound a note of warning. It is not that I do not want reforms ; but I want sound, well-thought-out reforms ; and therefore I make these few suggestions, as I regard it a duty I owe to my country.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. M. K Acharya.]

I want first of all that the Select Committee should realise how they have altered the old Bill to whose principles they were committed. The first Bill that was introduced by my friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda last year in this very place and to which I in my own humble way gave my hearty support, was of an entirely different character; and I believe it is only to the principle of that Bill that we are committed and not to the principle, as I consider it, to the altered principle of the Bill as it came from the Select Committee. Sir, I beg to point out that the principle of the original Bill, the express object of the original Bill, was to regulate the marriages of children amongst Hindus. The principle was only such regulation; and the method by which it tried to do so—I am simply mentioning the fact—the method proposed by the original Bill was to make marriages under certain ages invalid. The original Bill recognised what the Select Committee's revised draft does not recognise, that such invalid legislation would be considered by certain communities as interfering with their religion; and therefore the original Bill went up to His Excellency the Governor General in Council; and got his sanction under section 67 (2) B because, in the words of that section, it was a legislative measure "affecting the religion or the religious rights and usages of any class or community in India." It was recognised that the sanction of His Excellency was therefore necessary. It was unfortunate that later on the point seems to have been completely overlooked. It seems to be imagined that it is not a matter affecting religious rights. I am not against affecting any kind of religious custom whatever; but let us realise the truth of the fact that this is a measure affecting the religious customs of a large number of people. And the original Bill said therefore in the provisions of the Bill that it would make an exception; and it provided that in the case of those who had conscientious objections, that they could go to a magistrate and get a licence. These words were in the original Bill because it recognised, I repeat, that there were conscientious objectors to the measure. And therefore I supported the Bill because, as to the subject matter of the Bill, I am still as much in favour as ever I was. I fear that my friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda must feel very very ill grateful to his friends on the Select Committee. They have turned his Bill, shaken its root and branch, and have produced a Bill which is utterly different from his original Bill. The new Bill is not to regulate marriages or to prevent child marriages. What does the title of the new Bill say ?.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member give me one minute ? The Honourable Member from the Punjab has just passed on to me his notice of amendment. There are four clauses to that amendment. The first part deals with the question of quorum. That question has already been decided by this House when the Select Committee was appointed. The Bill is being recommitted to the same Select Committee of which the quorum has been fixed, and therefore that part is unnecessary.

Lala Lajpat Rai : All right, Sir.

Mr. President : With regard to the second part, which now becomes the first, viz., " that the Select Committee should report within three days ", I rule that it is in order. The third, which would be the second if admitted, wants that the Select Committee Report be considered as the first item on the agenda of the 20th September. With regard to that, I should like to hear the Honourable Member. It seems to me that the precedence of Bills to be placed on the agenda is determined by the Standing Orders. Standing Order 7A says:

" The relative precedence of Bills falling under the same clause of sub-order 2 shall be determined by ballot to be held at such time and in such manner as the President may direct ".

The procedure regarding ballot has also been laid down by the President and I do not know how by any amendment you can get round the Standing Order which lays down the precedence of Bills to be placed on the agenda.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I stand corrected on that point. I thought that the President could give us a special day by considering that it is a postponement of to-day's business to another day.

Mr. President : The President has no power to give any day. It is the Governor General who can do so.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Very well, Sir. I withdraw that clause.

Mr. President : Then that goes out, and the fourth clause which now becomes the second, is, that the following members be added to the Select Committee :

" Mr. Birla, Mr. Yusuf Imam, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Thakurdas Bhargava, Mr. Shillidy, Mr. Nilakantha Das and Mr. Rafique ".

There are now only two parts left : (1) that the Select Committee do report within three days and (2) that certain names be added to the Select Committee.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : As I was saying, Sir, the Bill as reported by the Select Committee and sent up to this House is different from the old Bill ; and I hope when it goes back to the Select Committee and comes up a second time, it will be changed in some very important points. I beg to point out, Sir, that the title of the Bill as reported by the Select Committee is to " restrain the solemnisation of child marriages ". It is not to prevent child marriages. It is not to bring about healthy social reform. It seems to be vindictive against those who are bold enough to come out openly and solemnise child marriages. In fact, my good friend, Diwan Chaman Lall, has stated that the punishment should be deterrent—something which would strike terror into the heart of those who celebrate the marriage of their girls before 14 or 16. He says practically the punishment must be vindictive. Now, Sir, the object is to restrain solemnisation of child marriages. There is no objection to child marriage. The objection is to the solemnisation, that is, to the sacramental character of it, which in my humble opinion, speaking seriously, this House cannot interfere with. It is the sacramental character of it, the religious character of it, which to a Hindu is far more valuable than even his life. I beg to point out that neither the Select Committee nor this House has any business to interfere with it. But that is the wording which the very learned, talented, gifted members of the Select Committee have chosen. They have stated that the solemnisation of child marriages shall be restrained. I put the question. Supposing there is no solemnisation, but a boy of 17 and a girl of 13 live together as man and wife ? People in America, we are told, do so, by the author of " Companionate Marriages ". Supposing a boy of 17 and a girl of 13 live together as man and wife. They do not solemnise the marriage. They will take care that they do not. Will this Bill touch them ? Are we to promote such things ? Secondly, what will happen to the many boys below 18 and many girls below 13 who are now married ? The girl attains her puberty, and I suppose she will go and live with her husband in her 13th year. Will this Bill touch them ? There will be thousands of such girls going and living with their husbands as wives. There is no new solemnisation. All that has taken place already. But this Bill, this very wise Bill, drafted by this very talented Committee—of " all talents " that is—does not take any account of these cases. If a man says that his girl of 11 or 12 should be betrothed, though there will be no true marriage in the sense the lover wants it, there is absolutely no provision in this Bill to help that man over his conscientious objections. All that this Bill says is : " You cannot solemnise the marriage. If you are so particular, you can allow your girl and the bridegroom-elect to live together, but this Bill shall not allow solemnisation. If any man dare come and take any part in the marriage—beware of imprisonment, fine and things of that kind ! " Is this the kind of legislation which is to be introduced in this country, the country of the sages, where for millions of years balanced judgment had held the day and ruled the world ? (Laughter). You can laugh it away but I am very much afraid of what is going to happen. And then comes, Sir, the penalty. The Select Committee have not invalidated the marriage, but the boy is to be sent to jail if the girl is below 14. Is a Hindu girl going to be protected by her husband being sent to jail ? Can she, will she like to divorce him ? Hindu children have much better ideals than that. The Hindu girl will not only say " Raja va rajyahino va yo me bharta sa mê prabhuh " but also " Sâdhurvâ yadi vasadhuh "—" Prince or beggar, whoever has married me before the sacred fire, he is my Lord and my God ", nay, " whether he be guilty or guiltless, he is my Lord ". Send the husband to jail. If the wife be no social reform heroine, if she be a real Hindu girl, she will commit suicide the next day. Is that what you want to be done ? Is that protecting the girl ? I do not for one moment question the good intentions of my friends. But I want that their good intentions should take a really sane and proper turn. This is not protecting the girl. It is ruining the girl for life. When the boy comes back from jail, what will happen ? My friend there exclaims " But why should the young man break the law and go to jail at all ?" Why indeed ! The Penal Code says, " Don't thieve, don't do this wrong thing, don't do that ". But even learned men do it. The forbidden fruit always tastes sweet ; above all self-assertion, like love, laughs at locksmiths ! What will now happen if a young man marries a girl under 14 ? If he is a high-principled youth, and is keen, I will advise him to marry, and to take cheerfully whatever happens. A very learned and very responsible Vakil of the High Court told me just this in Madras. He has sent up a very, very good and long opinion. He told me " Let us disobey and take the consequences ".

There is thus at the very outset this difference between solemnisation of a child-marriage and the prevention of a child marriage. Prevent child marriages by every fair means, but why do you prevent solemnisation ? This distinction is not purely out of the imagination of my own superstitious brain ; for I find that the same thing has been said by, I am very glad to say he is a European, Hilton Brown, Esquire, M.A., I.C.S, Collector and District Magistrate of Salem. He says :

" To myself the Bill, as it stands, appears unnecessary and useless both in general and particular. To begin with, in the case of some 90 per cent. of the population of India, it is superfluous, as child marriages are not practised by these communities. Further, the Bill sets out to make the solemnization or contract of child marriage a criminal offence. But what is there criminal in such acts ? The mere contract or solemnization of marriage between very youthful participants can hurt nobody and indeed a marriage arranged by selection at an early age by interested and experienced persons may prove a very good thing for the protagonists and perhaps much better than the haphazard methods prevalent in the West."

which our friend over there seeks to introduce. This is the opinion of Mr. Hilton Brown. In this connection let me parenthetically add that I am very sorry that copies of all these opinions are not available to us. I wanted to get a copy of these opinions ; and I was told that they were still in print and copies were not available. I very much wish that even though they may not be available to us, they would be available to the members of the Select Committee ; and that very careful attention would be paid to those opinions. Another opinion on the same lines is again, I am very glad to say, from a European, from the Collector of my own place, Mr. E. F. Thomas, C.I.E., I.C.S., Collector of Madras. He has written as follows :

" In this connection, I desire to point out that several gentlemen who have given their views in the matter request that the Government should not countenance the passing of the Bill and thus interfere with the religious neutrality proclaimed by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in her gracious Proclamation of 1858. I agree with the views of these gentlemen ".

This then is what another very responsible officer of Government had got to say. Therefore, it is not purely out of my own imagination that I object to penalising solemnisation. I do not want to read all these opinions seriatim, though there are several like these two. I only want the Select Committee to pay attention to these opinions. I may say that all or the majority of European Collectors in my province have dealt seriously with the question ; I am very glad to say they are Europeans—all honour be to them—they have all realised the danger ; they have consulted public opinion and they have strongly protested. I want the Select Committee to pay attention to this fact.

The first point, as I said, is that this Bill prevents not child marriages but the solemnization of child marriages, which is an entirely different thing ; and therefore it would help child marriages in secret while preventing solemnization. There are two mistakes, as I consider, which the Select Committee must rectify ; firstly, in changing the old wording from " regulating child marriages " into " solemnization of child marriages "; and secondly, in its unwarranted change of the age contained in the original Bill from 12 to 14. When the old Bill was circulated for opinion, objection was taken to the method of invalidating the marriages. Instead of rectifying this method, this wonderful Select Committee has gone and changed the whole tenur of the Bill, and raised the age to 14 ; and they do give no reason. They say :

" After much discussion, we decided that this age for boys should be eighteen years. For girls we considered the ages of eleven, twelve and fourteen, and finally came to the conclusion that we should adopt the age of fourteen ".

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

Their explanation is this ; and it is adding insult to injury ; they say :

" We recognise that these ages will be regarded by many people, whose opinion is entitled to great weight, as being too high "— very gracious of them to admit that—

" but we also recognise that there is a strong body of opinion, particularly among those who advocate social reform, which will not willingly accept any lower age ".

That means that the majority of the Committee have pampered to the demands of the social reform party and have simply rejected, although entitled to great weight, the opinions of others I am aware that there is a general feeling—I myself thought so once—that marriage before 14 and 18, or girls and boys living together before those ages, was very, very injurious to the health ; that it caused a lot of diseases and so on. Of late I have been interesting myself a little bit in the question ; and with the fanaticism characteristic of an old superstitious fellow like myself, I have been trying to know what great doctors and scientific authorities on the subject of sexual intercourse had to say.

This is a matter of serious import, and I hope the House will pay due attention to it. Here is what Havelock Ellis, a recognised authority on this matter, says in his " Studies in the Psychology of Sex ". (An Honourable Member : " Is it psychology or biology ? "). It is psychology, biology, philosophy, all put together as far as I can see. Any way the title of the book is " Studies in the Psychology of Sex " ; and I think it is a very good title because biology obeys psychology, because the body obeys the mind and not the mind the body. Mr. Ellis says :

" There is no proper analogy between the age of legal majority which is fixed, approximately, with reference to the ability to comprehend abstract matters of intelligence, and the age of sexual maturity which occurs much earlier, both physically as well as psychically, and is determined in women by a very precise biological event, the completion of puberty on the onset of menstruation..... The sound view in this question is clearly the view that it is the girl's puberty which constitutes the criterion of the man's criminality in sexually approaching her. In the temperate regions of Europe and North America the average age of the appearance of menstruation, the critical moment in the establishment of complete puberty, is fifteen..... The male is capable of procreating from about the age of 13 until far beyond eighty and at this advanced age the offspring even if not notable for great physical robustness may possess high intellectual qualities. The range of the procreative age in women begins earlier (sometimes at eight) though usually it ceases by fifty or earlier, in only rare cases continuing to sixty or beyond ".

I was greatly surprised that a case was reported of a child of eight having been pregnant. (An Honourable Member : " Therefore you will fix the age at 8 "!) Not at all ! But to continue the quotation :

" Several investigators have devoted their attention to this question. Thus, Spitta (in a Marburg Inaugural Dissertation) reviewed the clinical history of 260 labour cases in primipara of 18 and under as observed in Marburg Maternity. He found that the average health during pregnancy was not below the average of pregnant women while the mortality of the child at birth and during the following weeks and the mortality of the mother was by no means high. Picard (in a Paris thesis, 1903) has studied child birth in 38 cases below the age of 16, and he found that although the pelvis is certainly not yet fully developed in very young girls, the joints and bones are much more yielding than in the adult, so that parturition, far from being more difficult, is usually rapid and easy. The process of labour itself is essentially normal in these cases and even when abnormality occurs, it is remarkable that the patients do not suffer in the way common among older women. The average weight of the child was 3 kilogrammes or about 6 lbs. 9 ounces.....The recovery of the mother was in every case absolutely normal, and the fact that these young mothers become pregnant again more readily than primapara of a more mature age, further contributes to show that child birth below the age of 16 is in no way injurious to the mother. Gache has attended 91 cases of labours of mothers under 17 in the Rawson Hospital, Buenos Ayres ;.....Gache found these young mothers not more exposed than others to abortion or to other complications of pregnancy.....It is clear that young mothers do remarkably well while there is no doubt whatever that they bear unusually fine infants. Klienwa'chter, indeed, found that the younger the mother, the bigger the child. It is not only physically that the child is superior. Marro has found (Puberta, p. 257) that the children of mothers under 21 are superior to those of older mothers both in conduct and intelligence provided the fathers are not too old or too young. The detailed record of individual cases confirms these results both as regards mother and child. Thus Milner records a case of pregnancy of a girl of 14. The labour pains were very mild and delivery was easy. E. B. Males of New Jersey has recorded the history reproduced in Medical Reprints of a coloured girl who became pregnant at the age of 11. She was medium size, rather tall and slender but well developed and began to menstruate at 10. She was in good health and spirits during pregnancy and able to work..... "

—I hope my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour will listen to this carefully. I know he takes a great interest in marriage statistics.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Why don't you lend me a copy of your book ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Dealing further with this matter, this is how the quotation goes on :

" Mother and child both did well and there was a great flow of milk. Whiteside Robertson has recorded a case of pregnancy at the age of 13 of a colonial girl of British origin at Cape Colony which is notable from other points of view. During pregnancy she was anæmic and appeared to be of poor development and doubtful normal pelvic conformation. Yet delivery took place naturally at full term without difficulty or injury and the lying in period was in every way satisfactory. The baby was well proportioned and weighed 7½ pounds..... The facts brought forward by obstetricians concerning the good results of early pregnancy as regards both mother and child have not yet received the attention they deserve. They are however confirmed by many general tendencies which are now fairly well recognised. The significant fact is known, for instance, that in mothers over 30 the proportions of abortions and miscarriages is twice as great as in mothers between the ages of 15 and 20, who are also superior in this respect to mothers between the ages of 20 and 30 ".

(An Honourable Member : " That is only one opinion ".) This is from a well-known book written by a scientific writer. He gives you so many cases and so many references. I shall be prepared to accept the opinion of one intelligent, thoughtful and selfless man as against the opinion of 350 millions of ignorant and uneducated men. That is my philosophy.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What is the practice in England ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : The movement there is for getting rid of adult marriages and for introducing early marriages. You are now trying to introduce exactly what they are trying to get rid of in England. I am quoting again. The writer says :

" There is undoubtedly at the present time a considerable amount of prejudice against early motherhood. In part, this is due to a failure to realise that women are sexually much more precocious than men, physically as well as psychically. The difference is about 5 years..... In a very large number of women the sexual impulse remains latent until aroused by a lover's caress. The youth spontaneously becomes a man ; but the maiden, as has been said, must be kissed into a woman. In women also specially, in those who live a natural and healthy life, sexual excitement also tends to occur spontaneously but by no means so frequently as in men ".

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

The author therefore comes to the conclusion that it is wrong, criminal, to obstruct the free flow of the erotic impulse which nature has provided for every girl ; criminal to obstruct the pure, holy and delightful kiss of the husband that will awaken her into womanhood. I will now quote from a female writer and therefore a much better authority. She is Ellen Key. She is the very famous author of the work called " Love and Marriage " which has been translated into most of the European languages and has run through several editions. She is one of the most prominent leaders of the feminine movement in the Continent of Europe and advocates free love, free divorce and motherhood without marriage. She is not an old superstitious Indian. This is what she says :

" It is evident to every thoughtful person that a real sexual morality is almost impossible without early marriage ".

(Laughter). You may laugh and laugh. Sir Hari Singh Gour and I may pass away ; but humanity is not going to pass away ; and truth shall not perish. This is the conclusion to which this lady has come. She says that real sexual morality is almost impossible without early marriage. She goes on to say :

" For, simply to refer the young to abstinence as the true solution of the problem is, as we have already maintained, a crime against the young and against the race, a crime which makes the primitive force of nature, the fire of life, into a destructive element ".

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Refer it to the Select Committee. We shall consider it there.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am reading this in order that the whole House and the world at large may know the facts. This Bill is a much more serious matter than any others on which you may be legislating.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether this book cannot be taken as read ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member, though in a minority, is entitled to express his views, however unpallatable those views may be to the majority of Members.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Thank you, Sir. Ellen Key writes :

" The young know, if any can know, that no form of love is more beautiful than that in which two young people find each other so early that they do not even know when their feeling was born and accompany each other through all their fortunes, sometimes even to death, for now and then life vouchsafes this crowning fortune. Never do greater possibilities exist for the happiness both of the individuals and of the race than in a love which begins so early that the two can grow together in a common development ; when they possess all the memories of youth as well as all the aims of the future in common ; when the shadow of a third has never fallen across the path of either ; when their children in turn dream of the great love they have seen radiating from their parents ".

Yet, this Legislature will intervene and take away the girl of 11 from the boy of 18, and the boy from the embrace of his married wife and send him to jail. Can you think of a greater horror ? Yes, I am writing for some copies to my friend Babu Charu Chandra Mitra of Calcutta, to whom I am indebted for these quotations ; and I hope to send a copy as soon as I get it to the Select Committee. I beg of the Select Committee to ponder more carefully on this subject. It does not matter, let it take three months, but let truth be investigated. Lala Lajpat Rai is, I know, a lover of truth, and I beg of him not to be in such hurry to deal with the problem in 72 hours. These writings I have referred to are not of the nature of novels : these are all scientific books, not to be taken as mere novels. Therefore, Sir, let truth be sifted. I do not, Sir, for a moment question Lalaji's good intentions. Because of his good intentions I honour and I respect him ; and therefore I appeal to him to have a little patience. Let us all sift the matter, let us come to some very wise reform which will help us to keep safe our dignity and our sanity. This Select Committee has said in effect, " Several people are in favour of 12 or 13 but the larger number of votes are for fourteen, and therefore we agree with the latter ". Is this the way to sift truth ? I want the Select Committee therefore to study the whole question as to what the right age is. It is said that fifteen is the proper physiological age in temperate countries. Probably thirteen may be the right age in India and other warm countries. Of course legislation never fixes the maximum age, so that nobody is going to say that every girl should become a mother at thirteen. What I say is, " Do not rush into legislation without sufficient facts ".

Mr. B. Das : You want to fix the age at nine ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I want whatever is good, whatever is beneficial, whatever is in the best interests of the country. If it be fifty-five, I am prepared to accept it (Laughter).

Another point, Sir, and I am done. I want the opinions to be very very carefully sifted. We are just getting the opinions, and I am sorry that even I have not been able to tabulate them. There are heaps of memorials with thousands of signatures on them copies of which have been sent to me with the request that I might raise before you their subject matter. I am sure copies of these were sent to the Government of Madras and to the Government of India. The Government of Madras, however, never makes mention in their despatch of these huge memorials they have received. There is not a single word in their letter about these memorials. They simply state that the Legislature in Madras passed such and such a Resolution, and there is no reference made to the huge number of petitions presented to the Government of Madras and to the Government of India ; and so I beg the Government of India to place all these petitions before the Select Committee. And now, Sir, I want to say a word on the Select Committee. (Laughter). I know I am not a favourite of some here. I am sorry orthodox Hindu opinion is not adequately represented on the Select Committee. There have been only Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Kumar Ganganand Sinha to represent the orthodox Hindus ; but all the rest are more or less ardent reformers. I beg that, in all fairness, this House may put in a few members who will at least sympathetically consider the orthodox opinion that may be presented among the various opinions received or any opinions that may come up through the Government hereafter : and I appeal to the House to put some such on the Select Committee. I wanted to suggest the name of a friend of mine,

1 P.M. Mr. Belvi, or Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar. I am, personally, quite willing to stand out ; for I should think twenty times before going on a Committee like this. Therefore I am not making this speech with a view to going on the Committee from which I am quite willing to be out. But I do beg of you, Sir, as the guardian, not only of the rights and privileges of this House, but of the rights and privileges of future generations, to kindly help us in arriving at some sane legislation. Let us not hurry through this matter, and for God's sake do not attribute personal motives to me. I know very well that social reformers have good intentions ; but good intentions as we know pave the way to a certain place—which is not Heaven, by whatever name you call it. So apart from good intentions, let us be guided by sound judgment and balanced views, verily in the interests of the children we want to protect. For after all it is a crime to suppress the erotic instincts of a girl ; and they were not fools who used the Sanskrit word " Broonahatti " in connection with the killing of the erotic instinct. Blessed are they who will not suppress nature, who will think very deeply, a thousand times before they dare thrust their artificial rules above the laws of Nature ; blessed are they who will help to bring their little children together unconsciously into those life-long unions which probably know no end even when the body passes away ; for, according to man's higher view, love is immortal; love is devine. Let us help the growth of this higher Love. With this object, I say to this Select Committee, please endeavour to produce something which will be better than the draft which the old Select Committee in their great enthusiasm have submitted, but which a great majority of the opinion that we have got is strongly against. Defer consummation if you like till the age of 14, but do not prohibit marriage. I appeal to the members of the Committee, Sir, to do their duty not only in the interests of the hour but in the interests of futurity, to establish sane precedents for all eternity.

Mr. President : The original motion was :

" That the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the Select Committee ".

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" At the end add the following words :

' and that the following members be added to the Select Committee : viz. Mr. G. D. Birla, Mr. Yusuf Imam, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Thakurdas Bhargava, Mr. Shillidy, Mr. Nilakantha Das and Mr. Rafique, and that the Committee be instructed to present its report within three days '."

The question is that that amendment be made.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be recommitted to the Select Committee, and that the following members be added to the Select Committee: Mr. G. D. Birla, Mr. Yusuf Imam, Mr. Abdul Haye, Mr. Thakurdas Bhargava, Mr. Shillidy, Mr. Nilakantha Das and Mr. Rafique, and that the Committee be instructed to present its report within three days."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I want more names to be added.

Mr. President : I am afraid the Honourable Member is now too late.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I was rising when the question was put.

Mr. President : The motion has been carried by the House. I regret very much that it is not possible for me to allow the addition of any further names now.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I thought I moved the addition of more members.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member merely made a suggestion. He did not move an amendment.

THE INDIAN DIVORCE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act be referred to a Select Committee.

I shall very briefly state to the House the reasons which have led me to sponsor this Bill. It is a Bill of a purely non-communal character, so far as the Hindus and Muhammadans are concerned, and I shall very briefly, therefore, inform all Members of this House what is the underlying principle of this measure that I ask the House to refer to Select Committee. As Honourable Members are aware, this Bill affects both Christians and non-Christians, Europeans and Indians, and for the purpose of convenience, if I may be permitted, I shall group the various communities affected by this Bill. They would comprise, first, Europeons resident in India, possessing and retaining their British domicile, that is to say, Europeans temporarily resident in India. In the second place, we have the European domiciled in India, permanently resident in India. In the third place, we have Anglo-Indians who are statutory natives of India and for all practical purposes are classed as Indians. In the fourth place, we have Indian Christians who are resident and domiciled in India. In the fifth place, we have Hindus and Brahmo Samajists and other Hindu reformers who have married under the Special Marriage Act of 1872, amended or unamended, and they are also subject to the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act.

So far as the first class of persons is concerned, that is to say, the European residents of India not possessing Indian domicile, they are subject to the English law and the Indian Divorce Act and the procedure which it prescribes, namely, that its rules, regulations and practices shall be in accordance with English law, and so far as they are concerned it shall affect them. Now what is the English law on this subject ? The English law of divorce was passed something like 80 years ago, and since then the Continent of Europe, all the British Colonies and America have reformed their divorce laws. But England was the only country that lagged behind. As I have stated in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, in 1909 a very influential Royal Commission was appointed of which His Excellency Lord Reading was one of the members, but he had to resign because he was appointed as the Lord Chief Justice of England and later on as the Governor General in India. The President of the Divorce Court, Lord Gorrel, who had been presiding in the Divorce Court for twenty years, was President of the Commission, which by a majority of 9 said that the English law of divorce was an anachronism and it had not kept pace with the modern usages of other modern nations, and consequently they advocated the reform of the English law of divorce. In accordance with the recommendations of the Royal Commission, Lord Buckmaster, ex-Lord Chancellor of England, drafted a Bill which was introduced in the House of Lords and carried by a striking majority, but when it came to the House of Commons that popular Chamber did not find time, and the result was that Lord Buckmaster had to renew his Bill in the House of Lords for the second time. Again for a second time that Bill was carried in the House of Lords by a striking majority. Honourable Members are aware of the pronounced views of the Secretary of State for India, Lord Birkenhead. A very influential deputation of English lawyers and statesmen waited upon Mr. Baldwin the Prime Minister of England, asking him to give facilities for the promotion of this Bill in the House of Commons. But according to the newspaper report the Prime Minister of England said that this was a controversial measure and on account of the crowded agenda of the Government, it would be impossible to find time for that Bill. The position therefore is that so far as England is concerned it remains a hundred and more years behind the other civilised communities of Europe and America in regard to the law of divorce. So far as the English people are concerned, represented as they are by members of the Upper House in England, they have given a definite and emphatic opinion in favour of reform in that direction. Honourable Members are aware that though this is the situation in England, the English Colonies of Canada, South Africa and Australia have forged ahead and modernised their law of divorce and brought it into line with that obtaining on the Continent of Europe and in America. Unfortunately, when the Indian Divorce Act was enacted, we were still regarded as a dependency and a possession of England and we borrowed en bloc our laws and our procedure from the English law. It so happens that in the Indian Divorce Act, though it purports to be a codification of the Indian law of divorce, we find that there is a clause which makes the English law applicable to Indian cases. Now, Sir, the position of the Indian Divorce Act therefore is that it is tied to the ancient chariot wheels of the British laws which have remained unreformed for over a century, and this country suffers from the backwardness of England in regard to marriage laws. It is a fact which is recognised by every body on the Continent and it is a by-word with persons of all civilised communities that England is the only country in the world which lags behind in this progressive legislation dealing with the law of husband and wife.

Well, Sir, I am not going to weary the House by reading to it the passages from the Report of the Royal Commission appointed to consider this question, but I will sum up the conclusions of the Royal Commission in a few words. The Royal Commission said—remember that the Judges of the Supreme Court dealing with thousands of divorce cases sat upon that Royal Commission and a great many lawyers who had to deal with divorce cases were examined as witnesses by that Commission—after examining the evidence, the Royal Commissioners permitted themselves to say that in a majority of cases, divorce in England has become a put-up job, that the honesty which should be the backbone of marriage has been divorced from these divorce proceedings, and that for the purpose of removing this lamentable anachronism from the English Statute book it was necessary and indeed imperative that the English law of divorce should be immediately reformed.

Now, Sir, as I have said, in the Colonies because they had laws of their own they have broken themselves free from the English law and have brought their laws into conformity with the Continental and American practice ; but on account of that unfortunate provision in the Indian Divorce Act, that the English law will be followed in the matter of Indian divorces, the Indian Government have not been able to do anything to reform its Statute-book so far as this law is concerned. Sir, I have introduced this Bill with a twofold object. I feel that the time has now come when India should assert her right of legislating for her own people and should no longer be tied to the apron-strings of England, depending for her laws on that distant land. But at the same time I feel as a lawyer that I do not wish to hasten the pace of Indian legislation in a way which would in the slightest degree interfere with the vested rights of British residents in India. Speaking therefore as the author of this Bill, I wish to explain to this House how far my Bill will affect the British residents of India not domiciled here whom I have categorised as No. 1 in my classification. So far as these gentlemen are concerned, they are subject to the English law, and my intention is, Sir, if this Bill goes to Select Committee, to draw up a report and exclude them for the time being from the provisions of my Bill. The effect of that would be that the opinion of the Europeans in India would be focussed on the report of the Select Committee and I hope, Sir,.....

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will you exclude Indian Christians also ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am coming to that. I am dealing with British people now. This report, I hope, will be perused by people in England and will serve as a further incentive for the purpose of introducing a reforming Divorce Bill in the House of Commons. That is my sole object. Now as regards the second class, namely, people who are domiciled in this country, that is to say, the European community permanently domiciled in this country, I beg to submit that there is no reason whatever why they should not bring their law into conformity with the Colonial and European practice. There is no reason whatever why in their case the provision in the Indian Divorce Act should continue, that they should follow the British law. I am going to nominate, with the permission of the House, a few Europeans on the Select Committee and if they still desire—I am speaking of the second class of people, namely, Europeans domiciled in India—if they still desire that they should be excluded from my reforming Bill I shall be prepared to do that also.

Now, Sir, I come to the permanent residents of India, the Anglo-Indians and the Indian Christians and those specially married under the Act of 1872. So far as they are concerned, they are the permanent citizens of this Empire. They have absolutely no connection with England and they are for all practical purposes in the same position as the colonists in Canada, South Africa or Australia ; and if the modern practice which obtains in those Colonies and which I wish to transfer to the Statute-book is enacted into law, I do not see how they would lose anything by it. They have on the contrary everything to gain because they will then have a self-contained Indian Statute in conformity with the usage of modern civilised nations. So far as those married under the Act of 1872 and Act XXX of 1923 are concerned, I venture to submit that they should welcome a reforming measure of this kind because on account of its natural justice it is a reform which was overdue in this country and has been overdue in England for several decades—if I may be permitted to add, for perhaps a century or more.

Sir, I feel fortified in pressing this motion, because when I look at the collective opinions which have been given upon my Bill I find that while there is not a single opinion which has been given against the principle of my Bill the only objection that has been raised in certain quarters is that we must await the amendment of the English law before amending our own law. That of course, I admit, is a weighty objection and if the Select Committee desire that this Bill should pend future legislation by the British House of Commons, I shall certainly not press for consideration of this Bill in this House after the Report of the Select Committee is published. Sir, I only desire to focus public opinion and so far as the first two classes of people are concerned—British residents in India and the British domiciled community in this country—I have already given them the assurance, which I repeat, that, if they so desire, the Select Committee will merely record their opinion as to the utility of this Bill in this country and await the decision of the House of Commons on the English Divorce Act. So far as the three other communities are concerned, that objection cannot apply in their case and if the Select Committee decides that their practice should be brought into conformity with the laws of other civilised people, then, Sir, I would ask the Select Committee to amend the Bill so as to limit it to those classes and come here with a much limited Bill and ask this House to pass it into law.

I hope, Sir, I have explained as clearly as I could the object I have in view and I ask the Honourable the Home Member not to oppose my motion to go to a Select Committee, because the motion is not a very ambitious one. It is a motion which commits the House to no definite views beyond the abstract principle of the Bill which has been applauded by everybody to whom the Bill has gone for opinion. I will only read one line and that will satisfy the House that what I have said is perfectly correct. The General Secretary of the European Association, writing to the Government of India on this Bill, says that while the principle of the Bill so far as it affects Europeans which I have placed in the first class, " may be supported on the grounds of natural justice, public expediency and policy " he suggests certain amendments, and the Honourable Members will find that the other communities whom we consulted also agree on the main principle of the Bill. I shall give very brief details : The Chief Commissioner, Delhi, says " I approve of the Bill ". The Chief Commissioner, Coorg, is in favour of the Bill. The Associated Chambers of Commerce say they do not desire to express any views regarding the Bill : they are certainly not opposed to it. The Chief Commissioner of the North-West Frontier Province agrees with the general principles. In Assam, both official and non-official opinion is generally in favour of the Bill. In Bengal the High Court Judges say that this is a matter of policy and they have no observations to offer on the Bill. Then we have the opinion of Burma : while they agree with the principle of my Bill, they counsel awaiting the decision of the British Parliament. In the United Provinces, the Governor in Council agrees with the views of King J. that it is premature to introduce into the Indian Divorce Act controversial amendments which have not yet been enacted in England that is to say, await the decision of the English Parliament. In Bengal the Governor in Council approves generally of the proposed Bill. In Madras, His Excellency the Governor in Council is of opinion that the decision on Lord Buckmaster's Bill should be known before the above measure is proceeded with—Sir, I am entirely agreeable to that course. If the Select Committee decides that this measure should be taken up and passed after the House of Commons have decided that question, I am quite prepared to hang up this measure and await the decision of the House of Commons.

The Central Provinces: the Governor in Council is in favour of the Bill. All the Judges are in favour of the Bill.

Bombay : the Governor agrees with the Judges of the High Court.

Judicial Commissioners of Sind are in favour of the Bill.

Bihar : here they say that the Bill is premature, and that they must await the decision of the House of Commons.

Punjab : the Governor in Council agrees with the views expressed by Mr. Justice Addison. Mr. Justice Addison says that the Bill undoubtedly represents educated modern opinion on the subject and there is much to be said in favour of it. That is the view of the Government of the Punjab.

Then there is finally another letter from the Government of Bengal at page 24 of the compilation to which I have already adverted.

I have told the House, therefore, that in the collected compilation embodying the opinions of the various representative bodies and Governments, the unanimity is in favour of the principle of my Bill, while very weighty opinion is in favour of the view that before taking any decisive action in the matter we should await the decision of the British Parliament. Well, Sir, if this Bill goes to the Select Committee and the Select Committee publishes its Report and advises recirculation, I shall be agreeable to adopt that course, and we have very valuable opinion in this country that it would draw the attention of the people at Home to a feeling in the matter which, I submit, may bring about the acceleration of that measure which has long been pending in the British House of Commons. I therefore submit that this House should not resist the motion which I have the honour to move.

Sir, I move.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr President : The House will now resume the further discussion of the following motion of Sir Hari Singh Gour :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act be referred to a Select Committee."

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. President, I regret that I find it incumbent upon me to oppose this motion. I do not propose to deal with the intrinsic and fundamental merits of Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bill. In those provisions there is a great deal of which enlightened opinion will approve, but with these issues I do not at present propose to deal. I propose to deal with what seems to me the immediate and practical issue before the House, namely, whether it is expedient and desirable that steps should be taken to enact the provisions of the Honourable Member's Bill. As I propose to speak on, and to confine myself solely to, that narrow, through very important, issue, I do not think it will be necessary for me to detain the House at any length. I have three principal points to lay before the House for its consideration. The first relates to the present state of the law ; the second to the absence of any demand for the amendment of the law from the communities directly and immediately concerned ; and the third to the effect of a reference to a Select Committee. As regards the first point, I take it that all Honourable Members are aware that under section 7 of the Indian Divorce Act all courts in India granting reliefs under that Act are required to conform to the principles and practice of the English law in the matter. There have been anomalies in that law. In recent years they came specially into prominence and again, as Honourable Members are aware, the recent legislation carried out with a good deal of effort and labour has resulted in removing those anomalies and uncertainties. Apart from the general provision, section 7 of the Indian Divorce Act, which lays down the principles and practice which the courts generally shall adopt in the administration of the law in India, I would also remind the House that, so far as persons of English and Scotish domicile are concerned, that principle was reaffirmed in the Indian Colonial Divorce Jurisdiction Act, which provides that, in respect of persons having a Scottish or English domicile, the grounds on which a decree of dissolution of such a marriage may be granted by any of the courts having jurisdiction in India shall be those on which such decree may be granted by the High Court in England according to the law for the time being in force in England ; and any such court in exercising such jurisdiction shall act on principles and rules as nearly as may be conformable to those on which the High Court in England acts and gives relief. Now, Sir, my point is that, in the present state of affairs, we have a law in the matter which is perfectly clear, perfectly uniform and perfectly free from doubt. Now, I think it would be very undesirable, as things at present stand, to disturb that state of affairs. I will read to the House some observations passed on the Bill by an Honourable Judge of the Patna High Court which seem to me very pertinent :

"The net result of the passing of the proposed Bill of Sir Hari Singh Gour would be that Indian Courts would be granting decrees of dissolution of marriage (thus affecting status of parties which it is important to remember) on two different grounds : that is to say, to Christians (British born), who could for certain reasons claim to have an Indian domicile in the legal sense, on grounds much in advance of those for which a similar decree could be given in England at the present time, and to the same class of people, but probably officers and officials who, although resident of India, could not say that they were domiciled in the strict legal sense, on grounds the same as those (being much restricted) for which a decree would be granted in England. The Bill would not only introduce differences between the law of Divorce in England and that in India but it would have the effect of creating differences in the law in matrimonial causes as administered to different sets of Christians in India itself. * * * * It would be against the best interests of the community to grant divorces in India on grounds different from those upon which parties could obtain the same relief in England, even if India were a self-governing Dominion. But to pass the proposed Bill, thus in effect giving the Indian Courts dual jurisdiction to grant dissolution of marriage to persons professing the Christian religion, would be inadvisable and would probably lead to a large number of collusive petitions, as it would be a great temptation to the parties desiring to dissolve their marriage for reasons which would not entitle them to a decree of dissolution in England, to allege an Indian domicile."

Well, Sir, my point, so far, is this, that the law at present is clear, certain and uniform and that the enactment of Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bill in advance of legislation in Great Britain would introduce an element of very strong discrepancy.

I now pass on to what from the practical point of view is perhaps the most important consideration of all. Any kind of legislation which impinges upon social customs, usages and status ought not to be undertaken without the greatest caution and deliberation, and that is particularly true of the law relating to divorce. It regulates the most intimate personal relations of the community affected. Before the House can reasonably be asked to accept this measure, I venture to say that it ought to stipulate, that there should be a reasonable body of evidence to show that the communities concerned desire an amendment of the law. (Hear, hear). Now, Sir, there is no evidence of that kind before us. Nearly every Local Government has expressed the same view, the view which I think most of us will naturally entertain, namely, that there is much that is admirable in the specific provisions of the Bill but there is not the slightest evidence that the persons affected desire any amendment. So far as non-official opinion is concerned, that is to say, non-Government opinion is concerned, I notice that the Archdeacon of Calcutta, the Bishop of Lahore and various other ecclesiastical authorities have expressed their strong opposition to the Bill. I frankly recognise that in all creeds and denominations there is a tendency for ecclesiastical opinion to be very conservative.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Are they in favour of any divorce at all ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Nevertheless, I think it is reasonable for us to take notice of that fact, because the Archdeacon of Calcutta and the Bishop of Lahore might reasonably be presumed to be in very close touch with, and to represent faithfully, the opinions and desires of their people, and the same point of view has been expressed by them. I note that the European Association of Bengal have expressed precisely that view. The European Association is definitely of opinion that legislation should not be undertaken prior to a strong indication on the part of the public affected that such reform is desirable.

Now, Sir, I am not impinging on or in any way traversing the intrinsic merits of Sir Hari Singh Gour's measure when I say that there is no evidence from the point of view of the demand from the communities directly and deeply affected for the enactment of any such measure. I repeat that that is a point of view to which the House ought to give the very greatest weight.

I now pass to my third, my concluding point. Sir Hari Singh Gour has made, what I hope I may call without any suggestion of offence, an extremely dexterous appeal to the House. He suggested that if the House refers this Bill to a Select Committee it does not really commit itself to any thing more than approving the principle of the Bill, and indeed he said he would be content with that. I would point out—at any rate this is the view I take of the case—I would point out that when this House refers the Bill to a Select Committee it does something more than merely approve the principle of the Bill. A motion of that kind carried by this House undoubtedly also imports the intention of this House that the Bill so referred should proceed through its normal stages to enactment. Sir Hari Singh

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

Gour has said that his main object in moving this motion is to focus public opinion. Well, I venture to suggest to him that by the moving speech made by him in this House, by the public speech made by him on the floor of this House he has achieved his object. I do not think that the achievement of that object would be in any way facilitated or carried further by a reference to Select Committee. The Select Committee would sit in private, the Bill will be discussed round a table, but so far as that publicity is concerned, that focussing of public opinion, that stimulation of public opinion which Sir Hari Singh Gour desires, he will achieve nothing more than what I think he has already very effectively achieved. I therefore oppose this motion. (Applause.)

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Mover wish to withdraw his motion ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, Sir. After hearing the speech of the Honourable the Home Member I beg leave to withdraw my motion.

(At this stage Colonel J. D. Crawford rose in his place.)

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to oppose the motion for leave to withdraw ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : I would like to place on record the views of the community which I represent.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member wishes to oppose this motion for leave to withdraw he is perfectly within his right to do so.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : My object in rising to oppose this motion for leave to withdraw the motion is this. Here is a piece of social reform very closely affecting a minority community in this country and it appears to me to be my duty as a representative of that community to place on record the views of our community on the particular measure which Sir Hari Singh Gour has brought before the House. There is no doubt that the wider grounds for divorce which Sir Hari Singh Gour has incorporated in his Bill have a certain amount of general support, but we in India are faced with the fact that the introduction of grounds of divorce which are different from those admissible in England would cause very great confusion to the European community in this country.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must confine his remarks to the motion now before the House, namely, that leave be given to Sir Hari Singh Gour to withdraw his motion. If the Honourable Member confines himself to criticisms of that motion he will be in order.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : My point is simply this, that you will see that the representative of a minority community in this House has had an opportunity of expressing his opinion on the Bill which my Honourable friend has brought forward, in order that that opinion may be placed on record. I trust, Sir, that you will uphold our rights in this matter.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member cannot discuss the question raised by the Bill on this motion. I have confined the debate only to the last motion and I propose to put it to the vote. If the Honourable Member can successfully defeat that motion, he will be in a much better position to place all his views on the Bill on record.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : I oppose the motion for withdrawal for this reason, that I desire that this motion should be defeated on the floor of the House, and therefore I ask your indulgence to let us place before the House the views of the communities that are going to be mainly affected by it so that the House may be able to reject this motion on the floor of the House and show that the proposed legislation is not wanted.

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member is fortunate enough to convince the House to defeat this motion, he will certainly be entitled to put all his views on record. Does the Honourable Member oppose the motion for withdrawal ?

The Revd. J C. Chatterjee : I oppose the motion for withdrawal because I do desire it to be defeated.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member can only speak on the last motion. If that motion is defeated then the original motion will be open to debate.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : After hearing the few words from my gallant friend, I think it is but fair that this motion for withdrawal should be defeated so that the opinions of minorities could be placed on record. That is a sufficient reason for defeating the withdrawal of this motion.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That leave be given to Sir Hari Singh Gour to withdraw his Bill."

The motion was negatived.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Sir, I have to thank the House for the opportunity given to a minority community to express its opinion on a problem of particular importance to itself. I hope the precedent now created will be one that will always be maintained. The Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour is known to the House as an ardent social reformer on all matters. He has now spiked his guns upon matters which very largely affect my own community. I might say that I welcome the fact that Sir Hari Singh Gour is an ardent social reformer, and in most cases I am inclined to side with him. In fact the grounds which he would desire to add to those already existing are not ones to which we are opposed in principle. For instance, my own Association has said, that the case for giving these additional grounds may be supported on the grounds of natural justice, public expediency and policy, and that shows that they themselves are not generally opposed to an advance in this matter. But we do find ourselves in a difficulty. The introduction into the Indian Divorce Act of additional grounds for divorce differing from position which we are bound under the English law to occupy will make for confusion ; and I myself am well aware of the confusion which arose only some four or five years ago and of the great difficulty placed upon certain people, and I am not anxious to see that those difficulties should again arise in this case. So far as the residential European is concerned, he is, so far as our legal advisers tell us, subject to the Indian Divorce Act with regard to judicial separation and suits for restitution of conjugal rights, and it would obviously be improper that he should be able to get judicial separation on grounds which differ from those on which he could get it in his own country. It is obviously an improper position and one which I am quite certain the House would not agree to. Then, when we come to the question of those Europeans domiciled in this country, I in my capacity as General Secretary of the European Association was called upon to consult European opinion throughout the whole of India, and we did not receive any replies which showed us that there was any real demand for this particular reform at the moment, with the result that it would be unwise to support legislation for which there is no real public demand. On those grounds we suggested in our reply that the present legislation was premature and we considered that in the main legislation of this nature should generally be initiated by Government itself. Now those are the reasons which make us believe that at the moment it is injudicious to carry this Bill to the final stages of enactment ; and if we are not prepared to go that far and do not think that it is desirable to go that far at present, surely it would serve no useful purpose in going to a Select Committee even though we had the assurance of the mover of the Bill that he would exclude Europeans and domiciled Europeans from it and that his only purpose to-day was to focus public opinion on this matter. I think, in so far as my community is concerned, we must await reform in England before we undertake a reform of this nature in our divorce laws in this country, and I trust we will get the support of the House to that suggestion, that is, that we should wait for reform in England before we undertake reform out here.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Sir, the Honourable Member from Nagpur has no doubt given evidence of his remarkable enthusiasm for social reform. But in this particular Bill I am afraid the Honourable Member has displayed a desire not for social reform but social revolution. Sir, so far as society in any part of the world is concerned, it is generally conservative. Even in the United States of America students of Judge Lindsay's publications will bear out that he has more opponents than friends even in that trans-Atlantic Continent where social reform is supposed to come in a flood. In this conservative country, much as some of the Anglicised people may applaud the Honourable gentleman's desire for social revolution, he will meet with resistance from the people at large ; and so long as this House represents public opinion I am afraid he cannot get a vote of support from this House ; and when a minority, a very strong minority, is entrenched on our side, I do not think the Honourable Member could do anything better than in Shakespeare's language " like a crab backward ". He wanted a withdrawal ; he did not get it. I hope he will make no more attempts at social revolution. It is as well that the Honourable gentleman has feet to climb instead of wings to soar, and by slow degrees, by more and more, he can climb to the submit of our times.

3 P.M.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : I regret I have to oppose the motion proposed by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour. I am very sorry that I feel it my duty to do so, especially as I admire very much the great efforts he has been making at social reform. My reasons for opposing his motion to refer his present Bill to Select Committee are three-fold. The first, Sir, has been dealt with by the Honourable the Home Member and I will not go into it very much further, except to say that now that Sir Hari Singh Gour has declared his intention of excluding domiciled Europeans and Europeans resident in this country, and because the Hindus married under the Act he has referred to do not desire divorce, the only community that is really going to be affected, and very largely affected by this Bill, is the Anglo-Indian community and my own community, namely, the Indian Christian community, which is of course very much larger than the other communities likely to be affected by this Bill if it ever passes into law. I may say as the General Secretary of the All-India Association of Indian Christians that in our community there has not been any considerable desire whatever for any amendment in the social law which Sir Hari Singh Gour very kindly wants to force upon us. I ask him to mention any instances where any responsible leaders of our community, who will as I have said be mostly affected by this Bill, have asked for any such reform. Should such a reform be demanded it would come very much better either from Government or from members of communities that are likely to be affected by this Bill. Therefore, Sir, I submit that since there is no demand for this Bill and it is unwanted, it ought not to have been brought up.

Secondly, I feel it is my duty to oppose it very strongly because I believe that if this Bill were enacted into law, it would be divorcing religion still further from the social every day life of our people. Now, Sir, the majority of Christians in this land, whatever their denomination and whatever their nationality may be, are married by the Christian ceremony of marriage. That ceremony, as is very well known, lays down that when a man and a woman agree upon marriage, they should come to the Church with full knowledge of all that the contract entails, and have to promise that they will stick to each other till death do them part. But if Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bill were to be passed into law, all those people who seek divorce under this Act—I hope there will be very few—will really have been perjuring themselves at what ought to be regarded as the most solemn moment of a man's life. If this Bill were passed it would be more honest to amend the marriage service to read, instead of " till death do us part " into a promise that the contracting parties take each other till one or other of them becomes insane or epileptic or is committed to jail or acquires the habit of drunkenness, and so forth. This would make the marriage service an extremely unwieldy and ludicrous ceremony.

Then again on religious grounds I feel I must absolutely oppose it, because to the majority of Christians in this land, and especially to the Roman Catholic Church, marriage is a sacrament. It is therefore not right that we should at any time support a Bill that strikes at the very root of that idea, and I believe strikes at the very root of society. It may be that some people do desire certain changes in the law of divorce, but after all it is the thin edge of the wedge, and once this process is started we do not know where it will end, and to my mind the Honourable Mr. Ranga Iyer has put it rightly when he said that it would mean a revolution in society.

Finally, I would oppose it on another grounds, namely, that I believe it to be premature. Although Lord Birkenhead and the House of Lords will consider it a compliment that my gallant friend considers them more enlightened than the House of Commons, I still believe that the House of Commons is the true representative of the British nation, and I submit that if public opinion in England had really desired an advance on the divorce law, there could have been found other reformers who would have pressed it in the House of Commons. Can we really believe that a measure discussed by a Royal Commission could not have been brought forward merely because of pressure of business? I am sorry that my friend is so enamoured of certain practices that prevail on the Continent of Europe and on the Continent of America, but I do believe with the Archbishop of York, who headed the minority on the Royal Commission, that the existing English law is the soundest on this subject. I therefore submit that we in this country have no desire to advance so rapidly as they have done in certain other countries which my friend so much admires. I sincerely hope that this Bill will be rejected once and for all.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indians) : Sir, representing as I do a minority community in this House, I wish to say a few words on the Bill before the House as presented by that social performer—I mean social reformer—Sir Hari Singh Gour. My remarks will be very brief. I wish to associate myself with the remarks made by my Honourable and gallant friend, Colonel Crawford. While I readily admit that no religious ceremony such as the one connected with that of marriage ever meant the wedding bells to be converted into funeral bells, and while I am in agreement with the necessity of introducing into the Indian Divorce Act the various points mentioned in section 3 of Sir Hari Singh Gour's amended Act ; I support what Col. Crawford has said with regard to the resulting confusion of having two distinct legislations on divorce—one in England and another in India. Though Government did not ask for the opinion of the Anglo-Indian and Domiciled European Association, I consulted many members of my community, and the consensus of opinion is that the amended Bill of Sir Hari Singh Gour is a very excellent one but it is bound to lead to great confusion in certain marriages contracted by members of my community, and it is mainly for this reason that I oppose the Bill and would advise the Mover to wait till the alteration is made in England. I think Sir Hari Singh Gour would have been better advised had he waited and not pushed the matter to the extent of being, as it were, compelled to withdraw his Bill. If I may be permitted, I should like to give him a little piece of advice in the shape of a little story.....

Mr. President : Order, order, the Honourable Member may do it in the lobby. (Laughter).

Lieut.-Col. H. A. J. Gidney : I do not think I need go to the lobby for this purpose. It is quite an innocuous story I can assure you and I think, Mr. President, even you will agree with this when I sum it up as meaning :

" Leave well alone ".

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I hope the minority communities have sufficiently ventilated their views, and I therefore renew my request.

Mr. President : The question I have to put is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act be referred to a Select Committee ".

The motion was negatived.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(AMENDMENT OF SECTION 43.)

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, the motion that stands in the agenda in my name is that the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code be taken into consideration.

But, Sir, with your permission, I propose to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code be referred to a Select Committee.

Sir, the Bill which I propose now to be referred to a Select Committee is a very simple one. The object of the Bill has been sufficiently explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. I think that I should on this occasion say only a few words to explain my object in bringing forward this Bill and also to explain what the Bill contains. You know, Sir, that the working classes all over the world are poor and when they have to protect their interests against their employers, who are generally very rich and also politically influential, it is necessary for them that they should act in a concerted manner. An individual worker cannot protect his interests against an individual employer, so the worker finds that it is necessary for him to join other workers and thus act all together. Concerted action is taken on some occasions through their trade unions which are either registered or sometimes unregistered. But in a country like India where the workers are illiterate and ignorant, on a large number of occasions they have to take concerted action without any permanent organisation. When the workers act in a concerted manner according to the present laws some of their actions are considered to be illegal. Unfortunately, the laws are made by the Government, which is influenced by capitalists, and the workers have very little voice in passing these laws. Not only are their actions made illegal by the present laws, but also when they take these actions jointly or in a concerted manner, even such civil actions are treated as criminal conspiracy. Sir, the workers suffered from this injustice for many years, but at last in European countries, especially in England, some relief was given to them. The workers were given an immunity from suffering the consequences of some of their actions taken during trade disputes or in furtherance of trade disputes even though these actions were taken jointly or in a concerted manner. For instance, in England they got some immunity by the Act of 1871, the Act which enabled unions to be registered. Then by the Act of 1875, the Act known as the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act of 1875, as amended by the Trade Disputes Act of 1906, immunity was given both from the consequences of civil conspiracy as well as from the consequences of criminal conspiracy. Sir, I propose to read the English law on this subject as it is given in a circular issued by the Government of India on the 12th September 1921 on the subject of legislation for the protection of trade unions. I am reading this from the circular because there should be no question about the law being correctly stated. The English law on the subject is contained in section 3 of the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act of 1875 as modified by section 1 of the Trade Disputes Act of 1906. As thus amended the law reads :

" An agreement or combination by two or more persons to do or procure to be done any act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute shall not be punishable as conspiracy if such act committed by one person would not be punishable as a crime."

[Mr. N. M. Joshi.]

This gives immunity from the criminal consequences. Immunity from the civil consequences is contained in the following :

"An act done in pursuance of an agreement or combination by two or more persons shall, if done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute not be actionable unless the act when done without such combination or agreement is actionable."

So you will see, Sir, that the English law gives the workers acting together in furtherance or in contemplation of trade disputes, immunity from the consequences of the law regarding civil conspiracy and criminal conspiracy also.

The Indian Act, called the Registration of Trade Unions Act, also gives immunity from the consequences of civil conspiracy and criminal conspiracy to the members and officers of registered Trade Unions. The sections of the Act which contain this law are sections 17 and 18 of that Act. I shall read section 17 only because my Bill is concerned with that portion.

"No officer or member of a registered trade union shall be liable to punishment under sub-section (2) of section 120B of the Indian Penal Code in respect of any agreement made between the members for the purpose of furthering any such object of the trade union as is specified in section 15 unless the agreement is an agreement to commit an offence."

Section 18 gives immunity to the members and officers of registered trade unions and to trade unions from civil suits in certain cases.

Now, Sir, my Bill is a very modest one. I am not suggesting that the Trade Unions, their members and their officers should be free from the consequences of civil conspiracy when the acts are civil. What my Bill proposes to do is that when two or more workers act in a concerted manner and when their acts are interpreted according to the present law as illegal, their acts should not constitute a criminal conspiracy. I am not suggesting that their acts should not be treated as a civil conspiracy.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : There is no such thing as a civil conspiracy.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Very good ; I am glad to hear that. But I am suggesting that those civil acts when taken in a concerted manner should not be treated as a criminal conspiracy. When the acts themselves are civil they should not be treated as a crime simply because the acts were done in a concerted manner by more than two persons. This is my Bill, and as I have stated, it is a Bill which removes one of the injustices which we find in our legislation. Some people think that this Bill is a concession. It is a wrong idea that this Bill gives any concession. This Bill removes one of the injustices which we find in the present law, and if the removal of an injustice is a concession, then my Bill is seeking to give a concession. This Bill seeks to achieve the object which I have placed before this House just now, in the manner given in section 2 of my Bill, namely, by adding a proviso to section 43 of the Indian Penal Code. I have made this provision because I thought this was the proper manner in which my object could be achieved. But as I am dealing to-day only with the principle of the Bill, I am quite ready to hear the opinions and the suggestions of the Members of this House as to how my object should be achieved.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Your motion is for consideration.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : The Honourable Member was perhaps absent from this House when I made this motion. The Bill was introduced and circulated. Opinions have been received and I have read them. A good number of opinions are in favour of my Bill. I have to admit that some of the opinions are against my Bill. But, Sir, after reading these opinions I found that most of the opinions against my Bill are expressed through prejudice and for want of proper study of my Bill. If you go through those opinions you will find not any discussion or criticism of the provisions of the Bill, but absolutely irrelevant matters. Some say that if my Bill is passed there would not be much encouragement for the registration of trade unions. Some say that my Bill cannot be a good one because there is unrest in the country, and any Bill introduced into the Legislature in favour of workers at this time must be a bad Bill. Some say that in England there is a tendency for tightening legislation against workers and it is wrong in India, in their opinion, to relax the restrictions placed upon the workers. Then there are other reasons given—there is an officer who suggests that the Bill must be a bad one because it proceeds from me, from a gentleman who has received money from Moscow.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is not that a good reason ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : In my judgment this is a very irrelevant consideration.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Is it true ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I do not wish on this occasion to go into that question.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Why not ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I shall make only one remark on that : I have yet to know a man who treats money as untouchable on account of the source from which it comes. As a matter of fact, Sir, perhaps you may know that most countries in Europe are against Russia, not because they do not want her money, but because they do not get money from Moscow which they wanted. Sir, I shall deal with that subject when somebody else starts it in this House.

Another man says that the Bill must be a bad one because perhaps I am seeking to protect myself and my other colleagues who are taking part in the textile workers' fight in Bombay. Sir, I do not want this House to be influenced by such opinions expressed by people, not from knowledge but on account of prejudice. I have already explained, Sir, what my Bill is. That the Bill is desirable, namely, that it is necessary to give immunities to the workers, is proved by the very fact that Government themselves have given immunity to the members of registered trade unions, and I only ask that this immunity should be given to the other workers. Therefore, nobody here can be against the immunity itself, because the Government themselves have given that immunity to the members and officers of registered trade unions. Therefore, the only objection which some people take is that the immunity should not be given to others. Now, Sir, I do not know why, if immunity is necessary for the members and officers of registered trade unions, it is not desirable for those who do not organise themselves into a union or a trade union or a registered trade union. Sir, you know, and the House knows, that in our country the workers have been kept ignorant, and I do not think that any Member of this House will hold the workers responsible for their ignorance and for their illiteracy. If anybody is responsible for their ignorance and illiteracy, it is the Government itself, and, Sir, some of us also for not having done our duty towards them. You cannot therefore penalise the workers, because they have not organised themselves into a registered trade union on account of their ignorance and illiteracy. Moreover, the very fact that in England when immunity was given it was not given to members and officers of registered trade unions or of any trade unions, but immunity was given to all workers who do certain things in furtherance of trade disputes is a good reason that the same thing should be done here. I do not know why that immunity should be restricted to the members of registered trade unions in this country. Some people say that if you give immunity to all, where is encouragement for the registration of trade unions ? I am not at all against the registration of trade unions, and that fact can be proved easily. The Indian law for the registration of trade unions was enacted as a result of a Resolution which I had myself moved in the Legislative Assembly. So the House can rest assured that I am not at all against the registration of trade unions. But what I feel, Sir, is this, that registration cannot or should not be made a reason for denying to the workers some of the immunities if they do not form themselves into registered trade unions. Let the unions be registered as it is a good thing to register a union. But some people may not register their trade unions, and some may suffer from the misfortune of not being members of any union. I therefore think, Sir, that there is not much force in the argument that we should not give these immunities to the workers because there will not be any encouragement for registration. Moreover, Sir, the real encouragement for registration does not consist of the immunities given ; the real advantage of registration is that the union gets a corporate capacity so that the union can hold property and sue and can be sued. (Sir Victor Sassoon : " That is one of the disadvantages ".) Sir, this is the advantage of registering a trade union. There may be other advantages, such as that some employers who want to refuse recognition to some unions can do so on the ground that the union is not a registered one. And, Sir, the Government of India thought that the greatest advantage of the legislation was that the employers would recognise the union. When the Government of India issued that circular they never thought that these immunities were a real encouragement for registration. But they thought this, that unions will be encouraged to register because that will give them recognition. I shall read, Sir, only a few sentences from the circular issued by the Government of India in 1921.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What has that got to do with the Bill in hand ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Well, Sir, I will tell you what that has got to do with it.

" Registration will give a legal recognition to the union with definite rights and privileges which unregistered unions do not possess. For instance, unregistered unions might find it difficult to obtain the recognition of employers."

So not much encouragement will be lost by passing this Bill. The encouragement to register trade unions consists in various other factors which will remain and which they will enjoy. Then, Sir, the present law itself, which gives immunity to the members and officers of registered trade unions, does not really give much to the registered trade unions because in the present circumstances even registered unions, when they have to act together in a trade dispute, have to act with people who are not members of registered trade unions. There are hardly any registered trade unions in India which include all the workers in one industry. For instance, in the textile industry in Bombay, we have registered trade unions, but even these registered trade unions all put together cannot have more than say one-tenth of the total textile workers of Bombay as members. So what is the value of the immunity given to the registered trade unions when in a trade dispute the largest number of people are not members of the registered trade unions ?

Mr. President : Order, order. I have given the Honourable Member sufficient latitude. I hope he will bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Well, Sir, I am explaining the objects of my Bill, and I hope you will show me the indulgence of letting me complete my explanation of the objects of my Bill. There are one or two other remarks which I would like to make. That law, on account of which the civil acts of workers are treated as a criminal conspiracy is a recent Act. That Act was passed in the year 1913. Before 1913, section 120-A. and B. of the Penal Code did not exist and no harm was done before 1913 because section 120-A and B did not exist.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : There was a law of abetment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Well, Sir, my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, thinks of the law of abetment. But if the law of abetment had served that purpose, the Government of India would not have been unwise enough to pass legislation enacting section 120-A and B. Sir, that is a recent legislation. Before 1913 civil acts done in connection with a trade dispute could not have become criminal conspiracies even though they were done in a concerted manner, and before 1913, no disaster fell upon this country. I therefore think that by passing my Bill the country is not going to suffer much. As a matter of fact, the country will gain something because the workers in this country will get freedom to act in a manner which will enable them to protect their interests. I therefore, think, Sir, that this legislation of 1913, which made civil acts of workers, done in a dispute, criminal conspiracies must now be amended and I trust that this House will approve of my Bill.

There is only one word more that I would like to say, and it is this. There is a kind of safeguard provided in the Criminal Procedure Code against prosecutions under this section, and that safeguard is that prosecutions require the sanction of the Government. Well, Sir, this may be a safeguard when the employers do not happen to be the Government, or when the Government happens not to be influenced by the Indian capitalists. But, Sir, we are living in a day when it is quite possible that on many occasions, in industrial disputes, the Government itself may be the employer. In many provinces, and even in the Government of India, the capitalists may have a very great influence with the Government of the day. I therefore feel, that this safeguard is an illusory one, and perhaps, day by day, it may become still more illusory, because the capitalists of this country are bound to influence the Government more and more. Moreover, in India, the Government is a very large employer of labour. Perhaps the largest employer of labour is Government, and therefore the safeguard that the prosecution requires the sanction of Government is not worth much. Then, Sir, it may be said that so far there have not been many prosecutions under this section. It may be so, but you know, Sir, that things are changing, that industries are developing in our country, and that the relations of the employers and their employees are not the same to-day as they were perhaps some years ago, for the very good reason that the workers are being organised and the workers are also being educated. If we want to secure the interests of workers from the effects of such legislation, it is better that the law is made to-day. That is the reason why I have introduced this legislation now. There may not be any case to-day, but the policy which I want to follow is that prevention is better than cure. There are many persons who have expressed the opinion that the need for such legislation has not arisen. Perhaps they do not believe in the maxim which I have just quoted. They want the evil to grow first and then to cure it. That is not a policy which will meet with my approval, and it should not meet with the approval of this House either. If we know that there is an evil, let us use a remedy for it before we begin to suffer from it. I feel, therefore, that this Bill should be referred to a Select Committee.

Mr. President : Motion moved :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code (Amendment of section 43) be referred to a Select Committee."

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, this is a very short Bill and to my mind a very simple Bill which I propose to oppose root and branch. I shall oppose its going to a Select Committee, I shall oppose even its being considered, and I do so for one very good reason. That reason is the smoke cloud of words and legal quotations which my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, has found necessary to use in introducing this Bill before this House. A simple little Bill like this which merely asks that the protection which labour already enjoys by merely forming itself into registered trade unions should be widened to those associations which are not registered—that this simple little demand should need the deep researches that he has found fit to make must show, I think, that he is not too sure of his case. I do not propose to follow my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, in his legal peregrinations. I will merely point out that on his own showing a country like England which according to him is under the influence of capitalists has allowed the protection which he is asking for, whereas another country which no one can say is under capitalist influence, I refer to Russia, does not allow it. (An Honourable Member : "How do you know ?"). They do not even allow their workers facilities for registration. Government there is the only employer and does not allow its workers to strike whether registered or unregistered. The position is a very clear one. The law of this country allows privileges to leaders of labour who constitute themselves into a registered trade union. My Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, has given us a list of some of the advantages of a registered trade union. I was waiting, and I waited in vain in spite of interrupting him, to find out what disadvantages there were to labour forming itself into registered trade unions. My Honourable friend could not give us one disadvantage. Therefore, if any body of labour can form itself into a registered trade union and get these advantages, why should it not do so ? We have thought fit—we the Legislature of this country—to give concessions to these registered trade unions. Very well. If anybody wants these advantages, let them register themselves, and in spite of what Mr. Joshi says, they do register themselves. Now, here I find myself in a difficulty as regards the position of Mr. Joshi. I have had very pleasant dealings with Mr. Joshi not only in this Assembly but also in Bombay as he is the leading light, I believe the President, of the most important textile union that is there, a body which Mr. Joshi is endeavouring to run on sound lines. When Mr. Joshi comes to me either directly or through one of his officials and asks that the Millowners' Association should recognise his union and generally suggests that we should restrict our recognition to his trade union.....

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I never suggested that.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Well, it has been suggested by one of his officers—it has been even suggested that it would be to the advantage of the Millowners' Association if they restricted their support to his trade union. It has certainly been suggested by Mr. Joshi, and I must say I have felt inclined to support his suggestion with my friends, that if we not only recognised but supported his union, he would not only get a much bigger personnel, a much larger number of members for his union, but he would also then be in a position to restrain the exuberant spirits of his union if they asked for things that were unreasonable. I thought that was a very good argument. If we supported him, he could say "Look at what I have done. Look at the concessions I have got from the mill-owners. If you are unreasonable and disregard my advice, I will not be able to get you any more concessions". Now, one of Mr. Joshi's great difficulties is that there is apparently, in Bombay at any rate, a great desire on the part of a certain class of persons to run trade unions. In the textile industry, there are a number of trade unions as Mr. Joshi has told us. He did not tell us how many of these unions were registered and how many were unregistered. I do not know if there are a number of unregistered ones, but I do know that they are all competing with each other by making promises to their men, and a mushroom unregistered union can register itself and become a registered union. So we have to differentiate as I think it is obviously better, and I support Mr. Joshi here, that we should support his sound union, even though Mr. Joshi has this disadvantage,—neither he nor his officers have the requisite technical knowledge. They sometimes are misled by their supporters. They are asked to bring forward cases which cannot be substantiated. I do not blame Mr. Joshi. He is not a technical man, and I know he is doing his best to get over those difficulties. I hope the time will come when the union will be able to afford to have a highly technical officer who will be able not only to put their case logically and effectively before the Millowners' Association, but would also be able to sift the rather vague demands of some of their members which cannot be supported by facts. Now, Sir, if Mr. Joshi is so anxious that his trade union should benefit, if he is anxious, as I take it he is, that there should be one union for the textile industry, why should he by this Bill not only allow competition from other registered trade unions but allow competition from any body of people at any period or time, whether organised or otherwise ? That is what I cannot understand. Why should he by this Bill encourage extra competition against his own registered trade union ? That is one of my reasons for opposing this Bill. I see no reason why we should encourage competition to a well-run registered union such as the one of which Mr. Joshi is the president. I cannot see the advantage. Even if there is to be a mushroom organisation that it is considered can carry out the work for labour better than Mr. Joshi's union can, it has only got to register itself. As I said before, Mr. Joshi has not given us one disadvantage to registering a trade union, and when he says that the people are ignorant and they do not know how to do it, all I can say is that Mr. Joshi is very unflattering to himself and his associates who go about the country advising labour generally. Whenever there is any considerable labour trouble anywhere, one of these gentlemen who know the law just as well, probably better than I do, is generally on the spot to advise labour ; and therefore I think that he has been unjust to himself and to all the energy that he and his friends consume in touring about the country whenever there is any labour trouble when he says that the workers are too ignorant to realise the advantages which existing legislation affords them in registering themselves into trade unions.

Sir, I oppose the motion for reference to a Select Committee.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I rise to oppose the motion also on behalf of Government. When this Bill was before this House on the last occasion, Government did not disguise their opinion that the principles of the Bill were thoroughly unsound and would have to be opposed. They did not, however, oppose the motion for circulation, as a result of which we have a body of opinion which, with due respect to Mr. Joshi, is very generally and wholeheartedly opposed to this Bill. I do not think within my experience of the Government of India I have seen a more condemnatory set of opinions on any Bill which has been circulated, although there are a few, I admit, in his favour. For instance, the whole of the nine Local Governments are definitely opposed to the Bill. Practically every commercial body of importance is opposed to the Bill. The great majority of the High Courts are opposed to it. Even in Mr. Joshi's own province of Bombay, apart from the Local Government, out of 28 bodies consulted, 23 are opposed to it including the High Court, the Bombay Chamber of Commerce and the Indian Merchants' Chamber, and so on.

But I do not wish merely to count heads. On the merits of the Bill or the demerits of the Bill, Government are satisfied that the Bill is harmful ; and our main reason for considering it harmful is this, that it strikes at the very root of the trade union legislation which this House passed only two years ago. The object of that legislation was to introduce some sort of order and responsibility into the growth of trade unions in this country, and this House decided that the best method of procedure was to encourage the growth of registered unions and to confer on those registered unions certain rights and privileges. The principle of Mr. Joshi's Bill was discussed at that time. Mr. Joshi himself, I believe, tried to get it introduced into our present Trade Unions Act, but the House by a majority decided to proceed on the basis of giving privileges to registered trade unions with the object of encouraging the responsible growth of trade unions in this country ; and our objection to this Bill is that we feel sure that if it is passed and unregistered trade unions are allowed to receive the same protection as registered trade unions do in this respect, there will be much less incentive for trade unions to register and that the whole growth of the trade union movement, which I know Mr. Joshi has at heart, will receive a very serious set-back.

In the second place, apart from its effect on the trade union movement, we consider this Bill a dangerous Bill, because it confers not only on unregistered unions but on any combination of two or three people the power to commit illegal acts short of offences and obtain immunity for them provided they can do so under the colour of some trade dispute or in restraint of trade. Now we think that a very dangerous provision indeed. We see no reason whatever why these privileges should be conferred on groups of people which are not allowed to a single individual. There were reasons for giving these privileges to registered trade unions, as I have said, by way of encouragement to register and because we knew that we would be dealing with responsible people : but in the wide provision of Mr. Joshi's simple Bill, there is lurking a very real danger to law and order, and for that reason also we are opposed to this Bill.

And, finally, Mr. Joshi himself has practically admitted, though he tried to gloss it over, that the Bill is really unnecessary because there are sufficient safeguards against the introduction of prosecutions to make it quite certain that the various worthy people trying to assist trade unions outside recognised trade unions are not likely to be harassed by Government. For all these reasons, because we consider that the Bill strikes at the root of the policy underlying our Trade Unions Act, because we think it goes so far as to be really dangerous to law and order, and because we regard it as unnecessary, I have to oppose this Bill.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, so far as the principle of the Bill is concerned, I beg to submit that the principle is quite unexceptionable. So far as the policy of the law is concerned it may be doubtful whether the policy should favour this Bill. It has just been remarked that there is no law of civil conspiracy. If a person breaks his contract he is liable, but if two or more persons conspire to break a contract their liability is not any the greater. So far as criminal conspiracy is concerned, we have got section 120-B. As Mr. Joshi has remarked, that section was only enacted in 1913, and at the time that change was made in the law it was never contemplated that that change would have any reference to trade disputes. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons attached to that Bill which subsequently became law, it was stated :

> " Experience has shown that dangerous conspiracies are entered into in India which have for their object aims other than the commission of the offences specified in section 121-A. of the Indian Penal Code, and that the existing law is inadequate to deal with modern conditions. The present Bill is designed to assimilate the provisions of the Indian Penal Code to those of the English law with the additional safeguard that in the case of a conspiracy other than a conspiracy to commit an offence some overt act is necessary to bring the conspiracy within the purview of the criminal law. The Bill makes criminal conspiracy a substantive offence, and when such a conspiracy is to commit an offence punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, and no express provision is made in the Code, provides a punishment of the same nature as that which might be awarded for the abetment of such an offence. In all other cases of criminal conspiracy the punishment contemplated is imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months, or with fine, or with both."

So that you will find from a perusal of this Statement of Objects and Reasons that the Bill which subsequently changed the law on this point never contemplated that it should be applied to the case of ignorant labourers and illiterate workmen who do not know anything about conspiracy and its results. So far as the criminal law of England is concerned, the law of India has not been assimilated to it, because a safeguard which does not exist in the criminal law of England has been provided for in the Indian law. The reason for that is that in India the law of criminal conspiracy did not grow up till 1913, and even now this provision of the law has not been applied to many cases. And the Legislature has itself recognised that the law is very difficult and complicated and has provided a safeguard in enacting section 196-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, whereby the right to prosecute has been given to the Government and not to a private person. This is the state of the law, and when we consider that section 10 of the Indian Evidence Act provides that one person who is stated to be a member of a conspiracy becomes vicariously guilty of the acts of others, certainly there is no doubt that the law of conspiracy is very dangerous. It is all the more dangerous in regard to persons who are quite illiterate and ignorant.

Now, Sir, section 17 of the Trade Unions Act provides that the provisions of section 120-B of the Penal Code will not apply to members and officers of trade unions. But this protection is quite useless, because this section only applies to agreements made between members of the union. Suppose five persons are charged under the provisions of section 120-B, and two of them are members of a trade union and three are not, the result will be that the members of the trade union also will not be protected, because the agreement which is sought to be proved will not be an agreement between members of the trade union but between members and non-members, so that whatever protection has been vouchsafed by law becomes nugatory if the supplementary concession is not given to non-members of unions. Then the issue so far is rather overshadowed by the fact that in the opinions that have been received certain objections have been taken on this score that if the Bill was enacted registration would be discouraged. So far as the principle of this Bill is concerned we are neither concerned with registered trade unions or unregistered trade unions. The principle of the Bill is that in the interests of trade if two or more persons conspire together to do something which is not an offence but which only gives rise to civil liability, then those persons are not guilty of criminal conspiracy. The question arises, why should it be confined to the trade only. I submit that so far as the definition of the word "illegal" is concerned, the definition is too wide. This is not my opinion alone. I would refer you to the opinion of the High Court Judges of the Punjab High Court. You will find there also that the change in the law did not contemplate any sort of conspiracy between workers. The opinion of the Judges of the Punjab High Court appears on page 10 of the opinion paper No. 1, and they say :

4 P. M.

"The wording of section 120-A, Indian Penal Code, as it stands, is certainly much too wide. If, for example, A, B, C, D, joint owners of a plot of land, first agree to sell it, and then agree to commit a breach of the contract and some overt act is done in pursuance of the latter agreement, they would apparently be guilty of the offence of criminal conspiracy. I doubt if this was intended. Fortunately there is a safeguard against abuse of this section in section 196-A of the Criminal Procedure Code, according to which sanction is required for institution of proceedings.

Chapter V-A was, I believe, enacted to meet different kinds of conspiracies and it is at least doubtful if combinations of workers or employers were then in contemplation. The proposed Bill only purports to bring the law in India on a line with that in England, and as such does not seem to be open to objection as to its principle."

I fail to see a combination of workers to do a particular act which gives liability for a civil suit and which if not criminally actionable in England should be made a criminal offence in India. So far as the principle of the law is concerned there is absolutely no difference between the jurisprudence of India and England. Almost all these institutions have come from England, and if any piece of legislation in favour of workers also appears there, there is no reason why this House should raise objections of this kind.

Sir, it has been said that registration will be discouraged. I would submit, this is far from being true. If, for the registration of a trade union, this immunity were the only temptation, then it could be said that registration would be affected. But there are greater rights in the members and officers of a trade union. Immunity from civil action has been provided in section 18, and section 19 also gives certain kinds of rights to trade unions. Therefore it is wrong to say that registration will be affected prejudicially. Without admitting that this would be the result, and conceding it for argument's sake, does it stand to reason that we should be a party to certain agreements of workers to do particular acts which would only give rise to civil liability to be made into an offence ? Sir, I would submit, that whatever the policy may be, the principle underlying the Bill is quite unexceptionable. Then, Sir, it is said that in a trade union there are certain restrictions and because of those restrictions, some immunity has been given. But this is entirely wrong. As I have already submitted, the law in England is quite explicit on the point and does not affect the membership of a union which is said to be the basis of giving this immunity. The principle why this immunity should be given is that it is wrong to assume or to declare that a civil wrong becomes criminal if two or more persons combine in doing it, and when this law was enacted these things were never taken into contemplation. Therefore it is not a sort of concession, it is not in principle a deviation from the law of the land, but it is an act of justice, justice to those who deserve it most. It is asked why are these trade unions not registered ? Why do you not organise these workers ? Whose fault is it ? It is not the fault of the workers at any rate. I have read among some of the opinions which have been given against this Bill that they are afraid of Mellers Spratts and other Communists. I do not understand why the issue should be clouded by reference to these extraneous matters. If this is the issue and if the Government thinks many undesirable people are associating with the workers, then the course is open to the Government to see that these persons are prosecuted, or if the Public safety Bill is passed, the matter may be treated in other ways. But to add to the crimes which are provided by the penal laws of this country is not wisdom by itself. I would therefore submit that so far as the principle of the Bill is concerned, it is quite unexceptionable and it should be referred to a Select Committee. I understand there are some defects in the Bill as proposed. The proper place for this exception in my opinion is under section 120B and not under section 43 which in its operation is much wider than the provisions contained in section 17 of the Trade Unions Act. But this is exactly the reason why the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee. When the Legislature and the House have once accepted the principle of the Bill, namely, that the civil acts of certain persons who are members of trade unions will not constitute a criminal offence—I think that is the only principle involved in the Bill—then on the basis of the provision contained in section 17, this Bill ought to be referred to a Select Committee.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, I move that the question be now put.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, the Honourable Member in charge of Industries and the Honourable Member who represents the Millowners' Association have tried to show that my Bill is not a useful one as it does not give encouragement for the registration of trade unions. I have dealt with that point sufficiently. I have shown that the real encouragement to registration does not consist in the immunity. It consists in giving the registered trade union a corporate capacity.

Sir, I am not surprised that these two gentlemen should express astonishment that I, though an officer of a trade union, should move this Bill. One of the gentlemen belongs to a powerful trade union called the I. C. S. Association. The other belongs to another powerful trade union called the Bombay Millowners' Association. Sir, I am an officer of a trade union, but I think I can say that I am not a narrow-minded or bigoted trade unionist. I consider that a trade union is only a means for the protection of the interests of the workers and where I find that in protecting the interests of the workers as a whole the interests of a trade union may suffer I shall not hesitate to sacrifice the interests of that trade union if they are sacrificed at all by my Bill. Sir, I hope this House will approve of the motion which I have moved.

Mr. President : The question is:

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code (Amendment of Section 43) be referred to a Select Committee."

THE HINDU MARRIAGES DISSOLUTION BILL.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill to remove certain doubts regarding the dissolution of marriages of persons professing the Hindu religion, be referred to a Select Committee.

I sponsored a Bill which has been rejected by this House a few minutes ago, and in that connection Honourable Members were asking me whether I was going to include Hindus or exclude Muhammadans and mistook that Bill for this which I am now asking this House to commit to a Select Committee. I hope Honourable Members will now realise that the two things were quite distinct. One had nothing to do with Hindus and Muhammadans, and this has nothing to do with anybody but Hindus.

Sir, on the last occasion when this Bill was circulated, I pointed out that I was doing elementary justice, and that my measure was not a measure of social reform, but of primitive humanitarianism, and that my measure had not only the support of the Smritikars or the sacred text writers, but equally of usage for a thousand years, and in my Statement of Objects and Reasons I quoted the sacred texts, upon which I based my small measure.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): You have not understood them correctly.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: In the collection of opinions Honourable Members will find the old Pandit's spirit reviving. When you cannot answer a text, you abuse your text writer or your opponent by saying you have not understood it. For three thousand years this battle cry of one man not understanding the other has been agitating the Smritikars and the Shastris with the result that the Hindu law is in an utter state of chaos and confusion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Question ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour: But there is one point upon which the text writers are clear. Their language is unequivocal, and their opinions are emphatic. Far back in the dawn of history when the Aryan settlers came to this country there was written that great book, the first Code, the Code of Manu, and in that great book, the most sacred of all legal writings, which is regarded as even an appendix of the Vedas, we find the law of divorce given in unmistakeable terms. Let me quote to you.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): We do not want to hear the Vedas from you. Are you a Brahmin? We do not want to hear the Shastras from a Sudra.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: Now, Sir, it is said,—this is from the translation of the Sacred Books of the East, Vol. 25, page 341.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt: Not the original ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour: If the husband went abroad for some sacred duty, she must wait for him 8 years; if he went to acquire learning or fame, 6 years; if he went for pleasure, 3 years. Now, that was the utmost limit for the woman to wait for the return of her husband, and then she was free to remarry, and on the husband's return the conjugal relation was at an end. The learned commentators, e.g., the learned Dr. J. Bühler, the translator of Manu, cites a long series of quotations from the sacred writings of Gautam, another writer of great repute in Chapter XVIII, verses 15 and 17, and Vashisht, Chapter XVII, paras. 75 and 80, it is explicitly written,—and Kalukbhat, the reputed commentator of Manu, which is recognised by the orthodox and the reformers alike as the most authentic commentary on this great work of Manu, points out that this separation of the husband and wife ipso facto dissolves the marital tie, and after the periods mentioned by Manu the wife is free to remarry. I have mentioned, Sir, these facts for the purpose of informing the House that I am trying here to re-establish the sanctity of a primeval law. It is a law which has been the law of this country for ages past and it has been the law which has been inculcated by the most sacred text-writers upon our Dharmasastras Therefore, I feel, Sir, that I stand upon concrete foundations and in asking this House to support my motion I have at my back the combined authority of the sacred text-writers ever since the dawn of history. I realise, Sir, that in the later decadent periods bad practices came into force and the law of divorce fell into desuetude as the tyranny of man became more oppressive and the rights of women were trampled upon under the iron heel of man's domination. It is only, I submit, in later periods that this law was in practice held in abeyance. I have said it was held in abeyance but only in certain communities, for to-day it is the established law of all except the twice-born and even amongst the twice-born the practice of the dissolution of marriages is in places customary. I therefore feel that, if I have to cite authorities from the sacred writings, I have the best and the largest and if, Sir, I have to rely upon the usage of my nation, I can confidently say that from the days of a thousand years before Christ, which is the computed period of the compilation of the Code of Manu, down to the second century, when Yagnavalkaya wrote his celebrated treatise, this law was the current law of the land, it was only in the eleventh and twelfth centuries that it became weakened and later on fell into desuetude, as the nation decayed. It is said, Sir, by the great historian of Greece, Grote, that the decline of Greece was heralded by the decline of liberty and the rights of women were the first to be curtailed, which afterwards were destroyed by the invader from Macedonia. I feel, Sir, that what was true of Greece was equally true of my own country. So long as we were free, we gave freedom to men and women, and as that freedom was restricted and confined, we ourselves became chained in the manacles of liberty and we became in course of time a degraded and decadent nation. I hope, Sir, that my fellow-countrymen will realise that the time has now come when we must re-establish our national life and purge the society of scourges that weaken and dismember it, and that we cannot possibly stand before the world as a civilised nation unless we are able to reform, reconstruct, and if necessary, re-establish, institutions for the purpose of bringing social freedom into line with modern conditions of life. And what have I asked for in my Bill ? I have asked, as you are well aware, that if a woman is mated to a husband who is impotent, imbecile or suffering from ulcerous leprosy, then the court should have the power of decreeing a dissolution of marriage. In doing so, you will find, Sir, that I have paraphrased the very language of Vashisth who goes even further and says that if the husband goes abroad after having espoused a maiden, let the madien wait till the menses have passed three times and then choose another bridegroom. The period of three months is considered sufficient to dissolve the tie of marriage. I have cited that great Rishi Vashisth who is regarded as one of the 20 sacred writers by which the community is bound. He has cited the same law. I therefore feel that in asking this House to express its approval of this elementary right which is incorporated in this Bill, I have asked for too little and certainly not for too much. I am perfectly conscious of the volume and strength of orthodox opinion arrayed against me, expressed on the last occasion inside this House, and given expression to in the recorded opinions outside of it. May I, Sir, ask you to consider for one moment that after it has been conceded that marriage is a sacrament—I grant, Sir, that marriage is a sacrament—the very sacred writers have laid down, and laid down with the same pen, that it is a sacrament subject to the condition that it is liable to be dissolved under certain conditions. Can my orthodox friends appeal to one part of the text and forget the other ? Can my friends take away from the text the conditions laid down subject to which the text must be read? And, Sir, in their orthodoxy—I was going to say in their orthodox bigotry—they use expressions and give vent to sentiments which I have great difficulty in understanding. I asked one of my orthodox friends as to what objection he could possibly raise to this Bill. He said, " There is no objection to the Bill at all. It is a very good one." Then I said, " Are you going to vote for it ? " He said, " I am not going to vote for it, because orthodox opinion is against it." I said, " By voting for this Bill you will convert that orthodox opinion in your favour." He said, " Yes, that is perfectly true, but the new elections are coming on. This Bill will be used against me ". I am sure that this Bill will be used against me as a large number of Bills of which I have been the unfortunate author have been used against me in the past. But I fear no one, I place truth before my own convenience or advancement, and, if I feel that I am fighting for right and for truth, I do not care if my friends, the orthodox people, repudiate my responsibility and repudiate me as their representative. I stand, and stand committed to asking this House to follow the light. I ask this House to be fearless in their decision, and if they have any objection, if they can conceive of any objection to this enunciation of the most elementary principle, to the declaration of the most fundamental human right, then I ask them " Come forward and say on what grounds you can object to my Bill." I will not listen, and I refuse to listen to the vain plea that orthodox opinion is against it. If you consider orthodox opinion, orthodox opinion has been against all reforms. It has been from time immemorial in favour of human sacrifices. It has been in favour of Suttee. It has been in favour of infanticide. It has been in favour of baby marriages. I ask you, are you going to truckle to this opinion without examining whether it is reasonable or in consonance with the requirements of modern society ? We all have, and I appeal to my Hindu friends, they all have their sisters and daughters married or to marry. I ask them to consult them and see what is their point of view. If they are tied to a husband who is an arrant, raving maniac, and tied at an age when they had no consciousness of what they were doing, when they could not realise the responsibility that was thrown upon their shoulders, can you refuse to them the right of release from that entanglement into which they were thrown by their misguided parents and guardians ? I ask you, Sir, again, from time immemorial,—and I regret to have to say it was provided in the sacred laws that if the husband was impotent the wife was free to go to the sapindas of the husband till she conceived and was delivered of a son.

That practice was prevalent equally in the West, though in a somewhat modified and different form. It has been repudiated and rightly repudiated by modern society, but when you have repudiated that vicious custom, have you placed anything in its place ? You have left a vacuum. Have you given in its place any other equivalent as a suitable substitute ? I say, Sir, that the Smritikars have provided for it. If the girl of 5, 6, 10 or 20, it does not matter, is wedded to a husband who is impotent, what is she to do ? Some of my orthodox friends will say " What she has to do she must do in secret ". Now, I ask my Honourable friends, would it not be more honourable that she should come out in the open and say, " I abhor secret intrigues. I am an honest and honourable woman. This man is no good for me and I therefore wish to be released from his bondage and I want to take to myself another husband ". Can any being with a human heart refuse to her this elementary right to provide for herself a husband when she finds that her husband is incompetent ? Take the third case. The husband at the time of the marriage is suffering from ulcerous leprosy. The Smritikars have said "any other incurable disease " which I have left out. I am confining it only to leprosy in my Bill. Now, Sir, you remember what a malignant type of disease leprosy is. It affects not only the wife but the progeny. Do you think, Sir, it is not a matter of State policy for the Government to prevent the marriage of leprous persons ? Is it not the policy of Government to see that leprosy is stamped out of the land ? We have a large number of humane and benevolent societies coming out to this country to cure the disease. We heard a few minutes ago that prevention is better than cure, and I submit that it would be conducive to the better growth of the nation, to the healthier growth of the nation and to the progress of India if leprous husbands and men were prevented by Statute from contracting marriages; but such is not the law.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What about other diseases ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I want you to make an amendment to that effect. Now, Sir, my friend Mr. Dutt has very rightly asked " What about other diseases "; diseases like consumption, or tuberculosis. I am perfectly aware of the terrible dangers of such diseases which are disseminated from man to man, and I feel that if my daughter or my sister had to marry a man who was suffering from galloping consumption and she had to lie in bed with him her fate was sealed. She dies and not only dies, Sir, but dies a miserable death.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I meant other diseases.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : My friend Mr. Dutt is perfectly right in coupling with leprosy other serious diseases, and I hope that he will have the courage of his convictions.

I do not wish to tire this House by going through the volumes of evidence. I am sure that all my friends will feel with me in thinking that this great national injustice to the weaker sex must be redressed. I am, Sir, speaking to the Government Benches and appealing to their human feelings and asking them for their support in the cause of humanity and in the name of the dumb women who are married in this country and who have no means of escape from the impotent, the mad and the leprous husband. They will bless the day when you will pass this measure, they will bless the people who will support me in the passing of this measure. Sir, I feel that I have been trying to gild the gold and paint the lily. I may be forgiven for taking the time of this House in doing so because I feel that sometimes an axiom of Euclid has to be demonstrated upon the blackboard. But, Sir, I am perfectly certain in regard to the elementary rights which this Bill demands to be given to our own female relations that there will not be one dissenting voice, and that this motion of mine will be carried by the unanimous verdict of this House.

Sir, I move.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I am afraid it is rather late in the day to make a speech. I rise to oppose this motion. I yield to none in my desire to give the greatest possible freedom to the women of India, as much freedom as men possess. That is my doctrine and that is my belief. But in spite of that I am opposed to this Bill, as it has been drafted, because I am very strongly opposed to these indiscriminate attempts to introduce changes into the Hindu law or to explain it, particularly where the Hindu law is very clear. My friend has really made out no case for this Bill at all. I do not mean any reflection upon him, no disrespect to him, but much of his eloquence was entirely misplaced. Some of us on this side of the House are for giving the greatest possible amount of freedom to women, we are among the most advanced social reformers, but as I have already said, I deprecate these ill-considered, hasty measures involving reform by bits and driblets being adopted without considering their consequences upon the other parts of the Hindu law.

Sir, my friend says the Bill is intended to remove certain doubts regarding the dissolution of marriages among persons professing the Hindu religion. Has he shown where the doubt exists ? Has that doubt been expressed in any court of law in any case that came before it ? He has not shown one single case where a doubt has been expressed about this matter. He himself says the law is very clear. He has quoted certain sections of Narad and Vashisth in his Statement of Objects and Reasons, and he says that for three thousand years this has been the law of the country ; and he has also said that most of the Hindus, whether Dwijas or non-Dwijas, practise this law. Where then is the necessity of introducing this measure, and where are those doubts for the removal of which this Bill has been introduced into this House ? I quite agree with my friend that the law is absolutely clear. In fact the Hindu law goes further than this Bill goes, and that itself ought to be a reason for its rejection because it practically limits the operation of those classes of cases in which a Hindu wife can remarry in the life-time of a husband. Has there been any case in which a remarriage of that class has taken place and has been set aside by a court of law ? In that case perhaps there might have been some justification for the introduction of this measure, but my friend has not quoted one such case. Moreover, the drafting of this Bill is extremely clumsy in so far that it practically limits the rights of women to remarriage under certain circumstances only. Looked at on that light it is a reactionary measure. It is not a measure of reform. It is to my mind in effect an interference with the Hindu law as it has been quoted by him.

Then, Sir, you will see from clause 2 that one of the reasons for dissolution of marriage is " imbecility ". This is an English word which the people of this country do not understand, and the Honourable Member has not given any explanation of what he means by imbecility. It may mean anything. It is such a vague expression that I do not think that it should be put in any legislation affecting the social structure of the Hindu community. I therefore submit that my friend will be well advised if he withdraws this Bill for the present.

Mr. President : Will he be allowed to withdraw ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : I think we shall allow him so far as we are concerned. But I wish to give him in all sincerity one piece of advice, and that is this. If he wants to be a real social reformer amongst the Hindus he ought to go a bit slow. He is going too fast for us. He ought to allow public opinion to be created and to be developed on certain points, and he ought to begin with fundamentals. My friend was talking of marriages with lepers and marriages of persons infected with incurable diseases. Why not then begin with those things ? Why start with the dissolution of marriage ? Marriage comes first and dissolution comes after. If he wants to regulate Hindu marriages he should lay down provisions in the first place by which marriages should be regulated, before he deals with the dissolution of marriage. That I think is beginning at the wrong end. We have rightly begun first of all with the question of child marriages ; that is the proper end to begin from. Then, later on, after that law has been assimilated and accepted by the community at large, he can come up to us with certain other proposals by which undesirable marriages could be stopped or avoided. In that way, if he goes on with the reform of the marriage laws of the Hindus, I think he will be able to build up a sound structure which in the process of time will be accepted by the whole community. But if he takes up just any measure of reform which comes into his head and puts it into the form of a Bill, then I think he is putting hindrances in the way of reform rather than furthering the cause of reform, because he will be unnecessarily causing alarm in the mind of the community. We have to carry certain sections of the Hindu community with us. But in certain matters of essential reform upon which the life and death of the community depend we think the Hindu community has been sufficiently educated and we are prepared to ask for legislation to help us to remove any doubts which may exist. In the case of child marriages there are doubts and therefore we want the help of the Legislature to remove those doubts. But in the case of dissolution of marriages, in the way in which my friend has sought to provide for it according to his own Statement of Objects and Reasons, there are no doubts. He himself says, this is the law of the land, and it has been the law of the land for 3,000 years. Then if that is the law of the land, where is the doubt and why introduce this Bill ? Are we going to re-enact the whole of the Hindu law and codify it bit by bit without considering the consequences of such codification on other parts of the Hindu law, for instance, the law of succession ? I might point out that one of the laws hastily enacted by this Legislature and introduced by my friend has caused such confusion in the rules of succession and inheritance that perhaps some of us will be compelled to bring forward a measure either to repeal or amend that measure. I therefore beg of him not to go on with hasty legislation. After all marriage is a very important matter. Let us by all means exert to regulate marriages on a human and sound basis ; then afterwards we can proceed with the dissolution of marriages too. I state upon the floor of this House that I am not against the principle which he wants to embody, but I submit that that principle is already recognized by Hindu law. If anybody wants to take advantage of those provisions of the Hindu law, there is nothing to prevent him or her doing so. There is therefore no need to bring in a proposal to legislate on a matter which is already provided for in the Hindu law. He has not shown at all that any doubt has been thrown on the validity of those provisions of the Hindu law which he quotes.

I therefore beg of him, that instead of having this Bill rejected or doubt thrown upon its propriety, he should withdraw this Bill and postpone its introduction if so advised to a later period.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, my learned friend who has spoken on the subject is a lawyer, but I must tell him that he has betrayed some ignorance of the elementary procedure of the courts. He has asked me to cite a single case. Will he go down and read the Civil Procedure Code and he will find pages and pages where the British courts have laid down that they have no matrimonial jurisdiction, and the question as regards dissolution of marriage is therefore a question for caste autonomy, and when it is decided there, all that the civil courts can do is to declare the fact whether a dissolution has or has not taken place.

Lala Lajpat Rai : There is a law that punishes bigamy.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : There is such a law, but I do not understand my friend's reference to it. We are not dealing with the question of bigamy, but of dissolution of marriages.

Now, the position therefore is that a doubt is created in this way. So far as the Hindu law is concerned, it is perfectly clear, as I have pointed out that for a long period of time custom has modified that law, and that custom has made dissolution of marriages impossible. The result has been, therefore, that only in certain local areas and among certain castes marriages are dissolved according to the rules of the caste, and when they are dissolved the parties whose marriages have been dissolved are free to go to the civil court and obtain a declaration regarding dissolution of their marriages. That is all the jurisdiction that courts have got, the substantive law being, as I have pointed out, and the custom having overridden the law, there is doubt as to whether the custom has so overshadowed the whole law that the law has ceased to exist or that the law must shine in its pristine purity in spite of the excrescences of custom, and that is a doubt which can only be resolved by this House and the Central Legislature.

My Honourable friend says with one breath that I am going too fast for a social reformer and if I wish to carry the mass of Hindu society with me I must move more slowly. In one sentence my friend says that my Bill is very moderate, and in another that it is a reactionary Bill. It cuts down the very principles of Hindu law which allows dissolution of marriage in a large number of cases. Well, Sir, I am accustomed to hearing these sophistries. They do not emanate from my friend, but when you have come to one conclusion and you have to find reasons for supporting those conclusions, the resultant effect is a confusion of ideas, and that is exactly what has overcome my Honourable friend on the other side. Having come to the conclusion that he must oppose this Bill, he had to find some reason for it, and while he says in one sentence that the subject of my Bill is already provided for by Hindu law, in another sentence he says it does not go far enough, and in the third sentence he says it goes too far.

5 P. M.

And these are the three contradictions as my Honourable friend Mr. Kabeeruddin Ahmed puts it in the speech of my Honourable friend which at any rate might have had the merit of consistency. Sir, I do not wish to press this motion upon this House if the bulk of my countrymen are opposed to it. I tabled this Bill with the concurrence of a large number of my friends. If I should name them, they would probably say that they have since changed their minds. (Laughter.) But I can assure you, Sir, that there is a bulk, and a large body of public opinion behind this measure: (Honourable Members : " No, no.") If this House was not a house of mere men, but a House in which women were sufficiently represented, I am sure they would have torn my Honourable friend's arguments to pieces and it would have been difficult for my friend to emerge from the doors of this House (Laughter), because I am perfectly certain that he would have been surrounded and mobbed by the fairest of the fair sex who would have said : " How can you deny to us our elementary rights ?"

Lala Lajpat Rai : Nobody denies that right.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : But, Sir, my Honourable friend is perfectly right. The time is not yet ripe and because that time is not yet ripe, I take his advice and I will renew this measure on a more propitious occasion.

Mr. President : Order, order. If the Honourable Member wanted the leave of the House to withdraw his motion, he should not have made this speech.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I want to give reasons why I am withdrawing the motion.

Mr. President : Order, order. Does the Honourable Member ask for leave to withdraw ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That leave be given to Sir Hari Singh Gour to withdraw his Bill."

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 10th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 10th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN :

Mr. Jehanghir K. Munshi, M.L.A. (Burma : Non-European).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Administration of the Fines Funds on Railways.

293. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if there are any rules governing the administration of the Fines Funds on Railways ; and if so, will the Government be pleased to lay a copy of it on the table ?

(b) Is it a fact that the bulk of the Fines Fund is contributed by the Indian employees of Railways ?

(c) Is it a fact that the late Agent of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway (Sir Ashley Biggs) sanctioned out of the Fines Fund a sum of Rs. 5,000 for a farewell entertainment to himself ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I have been unable to discover any rules except an old circular of 1880, which lays down that all fines levied from employees on the revenue staff of State Railways should be credited to a fine fund, that no disbursements from the fund should be made except under the order of the Manager or other chief official of the Railway, and that the fund should be utilised for the benefit of the emplyees and their families. It also contains a few provisions about depositing the assets of the fund in the Government Savings Bank. If the Honourable Member wishes, I will send him a copy of this circular, but he must understand that a good deal of it is obsolete. At present the position is that the administration of the fund is left to the Agent of the Railway.

(b) Yes.

(c) No. On the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway the fine fund is devoted entirely to the benefit of the subordinate staff, and the late Agent neither gave nor was given a farewell entertainment, nor was any grant made from the fine fund for such purpose.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Am I to understand that the Government is making rules for the administration of the Fines Fund ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We are considering the whole question, Sir, as the result of the suggestion which the Honourable Member himself made at the last budget debate. We are considering with Agents the question of forming some kind of committee, on which the employees themselves will be represented, to manage the fund under the Agent.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I repeat, Sir, a supplementary question which I asked sometime ago as to information about the use of the Fines Funds. Where is that information to be obtained, as the figures are now deleted from the Railway Board's Report ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : At the moment, Sir, I cannot say that the information is available anywhere : but when we consider what the future administration of the Fines Fund is to be, I will then consider also how this information should be made available to this House.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, whether the Railway Board will consider the advisability of issuing a report on the administration of the Fines Fund ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am certainly prepared to consider the question, Sir.

ADMISSION OF THE INDIAN RAILWAY MAGAZINE TO THE PRIVILEGES OF THE PRESS ROOM OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

294. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a list of journals to whom the privileges of the Editor's table of the Government of India are extended ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Indian Railway Magazine (Madras) has been devoting itself during the last 3 years to a discussion and consideration of railway questions ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Indian Railway Magazine has twice applied to the Government of India to be favoured with the Editor's table privileges so far at least as the Railway Department is concerned, so as to facilitate its work and that its application was supported by Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar and that both the applications were rejected ?

(d) Do Government propose to include the said magazine in the list of journals to whom the Editor's table papers of the Government of India are supplied ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a), (c) and (d). As the term used by the Honourable Member is open to more than one interpretation, I must explain that the supply to the Press of communiqués and notifications of the Government of India and similar papers is a matter distinct from the free supply of reports and publications generally. The procedure in the former case is that the papers in question are laid in the Press Room at the headquarters of Government, where they are available to the representatives of such News Agencies and Journals as are given this privilege. A list of the agencies and newspapers whose representatives at present have access to the Press Room is laid on the table. The Editor of the Indian Railway Magazine was informed of this some time ago, and was instructed, if he wished his representative to be admitted to the Press Room, to make application through the Local Government ; but no such application has been received and the Government of India have, consequently, not considered the matter further. The free supply of Government publications is a separate matter. As the editor has already been informed, these have been rigorously curtailed on grounds of economy, and Government do not see their way to supply any of their publications free of charge to the Indian Railway Magazine.

(b) Yes.

List of Newspapers and News Agencies whose representatives have been admitted to the Press Room of the Government of India.

1. Reuters.
2. Associated Press of India.
3. Simla Times.
4. Times of India, Bombay.
5. Statesman, Calcutta.
6. Press Press of India.
7. Hindustan Times, Delhi.
8. The General News Agency, Delhi.
9. Pioneer, Allahabad.

RECEIPT BY TELEGRAPH PEONS OF PAYMENT FOR MORE THAN ONE TELEGRAM DELIVERED AT ONE ADDRESS.

295. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the Director General of Post and Telegraph Department has issued a circular that a batch of 5 telegrams or fraction thereof delivered at the same time and to the same addressee should be counted as one telegram for the purpose of determining task work earnings ;

(b) whether this practice will not reduce the earnings of the messengers ;

(c) whether Government have in some other way arranged to increase the emoluments of the messengers to compensate for the loss caused by the new circular ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, to a small extent.

(c) No compensation is called for. Government have decided that the earnings which have been lost were irregular.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether, though the earnings were irregular or not, these people are suffering a loss in the earnings which they used to make for many years ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I have said already in answer to (b) that there was a loss to a small extent. I may explain to the Honourable Member that the practice, which relates to telegraph peons receiving payment for more than one telegram delivered at one address, was contrary to the Post Office regulations, and the practice, which had grown up in a few Circles, was irregular and its discontinuance has been ordered.

RECRUITMENT OF INDIANS TO THE GENERAL SERVICE IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that no Indian is recruited directly to the General Service in the Telegraph Department ?

RECRUITMENT OF INDIANS TO THE GENERAL SERVICE IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

297 *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that it is only Europeans and Anglo-Indians that are directly recruited to the General Service and that Indians can enter the General Service only by recommendation and selection from the Station Service ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 296 and 297 together. The reply is in the negative. The Honourable Member is referred to the revised rules for the recruitment of telegraphists, a copy of which will be supplied to him.

NUMBER OF INDIANS IN THE FIRST DIVISION OF THE TRAFFIC BRANCH IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT, ETC.

298. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) how many Indians as distinguished from Anglo-Indians are in the First Division of the Traffic Branch in the Telegraph Department ; and

(b) the number of Indians and the number of Europeans and Anglo-Indians in the Second Division of the Traffic Branch of the same Department ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Indians—3 ; European—1 ; and Anglo-Indians—10.

(b) Indians—4 ; European—1 ; and Anglo-Indians—30.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why the number of Indians is so small ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : It is due to the previous system of recruitment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Is that number likely to be increased very soon ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : Yes.

NUMBER OF MEN REVERTED FROM THE EXPERIMENTAL WIRELESS BRANCH TO THE TRAFFIC BRANCH OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT, ETC.

299 *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of men reverted from the experimental Wireless Branch to the Traffic Branch from which they were chosen ?

(b) How many so reverted are Indians and how many of them are Europeans or Anglo-Indians ?

(c) Is it a fact that men are being compelled to do night duty almost every other night in contravention of the rules laid down for night duties and are being compelled to work overtime far in excess of that prescribed in the rules ?

(d) Do Government propose to inquire into the conditions under which these men are forced to work in excess of that required of them by the rules ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : It is presumed that the Honourable Member refers the staff employed in the Madras-Rangoon Wireless Wheatstone Experiment. If so, the replies to the question are :

(a) 4 men reverted to the Traffic Branch.

(b) All the 4 are Indians.

(c) Service in the Wireless Branch is such that wireless operators must necessarily carry out regular duty at night and on holidays in excess of that required in the Traffic Branch of the Department and this additional requirement was considered in fixing the special wireless allowances which have been granted also to the wireless Wheatstone staff. As this is a necessary feature of the wireless Wheatstone Experiment, operators who are not willing to conform to these conditions cannot be retained. The system of calling for volunteers has been adopted and there has been no compulsion in the selection of candidates.

(d) In view of the answer to (c) this question does not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask on what principle the selection for reversion was made ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : The selection for reversion was made in this way. These particular men were not willing to comply with the conditions of work which were necessary for working the Madras-Rangoon Wireless Experiment.

TERMINATION OF THE CONTRACT WITH CERTAIN ANGLO-INDIAN SCHOOLS FOR TRAINING TELEGRAPHISTS.

300. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) With reference to reply given on 1st February last to my starred question No. 27, regarding the termination of the contract with certain Anglo-Indian schools for training telegraphists, will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to a decision regarding the revised method of recruiting telegraphists ?

(b) If so, what is that revised method and have the contracts referred to been terminated ?

(c) If no decision is arrived at, why is delay being caused ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). Yes. The Honourable Member is referred to the revised rules for the recruitment of telegraphists, a copy of which will be supplied to him in connection with his starred question No. 296.

Notices terminating the contracts within the calendar year 1929 have already issued.

(c) Does not arise.

TRAINING OF INDIANS AS WIRELESS OPERATORS.

301. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 29 on 1st February last regarding the employment of Indians as wireless operators, will the Government be pleased to state whether any Indians are now under training as wireless operators and, if so, how many and how many of the total are Anglo-Indians ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : On 15th August, 1928, there were 16 telegraphists under training for wireless. Of these 11 were Indians, and of the remainder 2 were Anglo-Indians.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether steps were taken to select Indians from different provinces ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I shall have to ask for notice of that question.

ABOLITION OF RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE CIRCLES.

302. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India extended the date of abolition of the R. M. S. Circles from 1st July to 1st November on a representation from the staff of the office of the R. M. S., Northern Circle, stating that in consequence of the short notice of the decision of Government in the matter the employees would be inconvenienced in respect of the education of their children and in getting housing accommodation in the rainy season ?

(b) Are Government aware that the postponement of the abolition till the 1st November will not remove the inconvenience of the employees in the matter of the education of their children ?

(c) If the reply to (a) and (b) is in affirmative, do Government propose to extend the date to 1st April, 1929, and if in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons which render it absolutely necessary to abolish the office ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). A representation has been received and the whole question is under examination.

ADVANCED INCREMENTS GRANTED TO OFFICIALS OF THE OFFICES OF THE DIRECTOR-GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS, AND THE ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS, ON THEIR TRANSFER FROM CALCUTTA TO DELHI.

303. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact :

(i) That the Government sanctioned 5 advance increments to each official of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, and Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, on their transfer from Calcutta to Delhi ?

(ii) That the cost of living in Delhi is cheaper than that in Calcutta ?

(b) If the reply to (i) and (ii) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to grant the same number of advance increments to the officials to be transferred to Lahore, Lucknow and Karachi from Ambala ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) (i). No.

(a) (ii). Yes.

(b) In view of the reply to part (a) (i) above, this does not arise.

TUBERCULOSIS IN DELHI.

304. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the note addressed by Major Webb, I.M.S., Assistant Director of Public Health, Delhi Province, to the members of the Delhi Municipal Committee, on the prevalence of tuberculosis in the city and particularly to the opinion expressed in the note as follows :

"I am of opinion that you cannot and will not effect the real solution of the problem of tuberculosis in your Delhi until the congested state of the city has been relieved" ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India have not seen Major Webb's note but have seen a summary of it in the newspapers.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to state if any action was taken on the report made at the instance of Government by Dr. Arthur Lankaster in 1915-16 on tuberculosis in India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes, Sir ; the report of Dr. Lankaster was circulated to Local Governments.

The Rev. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to place some copies of Dr. Lankaster's report on tuberculosis in the Library ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I shall consider that suggestion.

SCHEME FOR CITY EXTENSION SUBMITTED BY THE DELHI MUNICIPALITY.

305. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that the Delhi Municipality submitted last year a scheme for city extension, along the land lying vacant outside the city wall, between the Delhi and Ajmere Gates ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what action they have taken or propose to take in connection with the scheme ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No such scheme has been submitted to the Government of India.

(b) Does not therefore arise.

Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Have the Government of India seen in the public Press extracts from the scheme or comments on the scheme submitted by the Delhi Municipality ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India have not seen any reference in the public Press to this particular scheme. Of course, they have had before them schemes relating to the removal of congestion which exists in certain parts of Delhi.

PROVISION OF DRAINAGE AND WATER SUPPLY TO THE WESTERN EXTENSION OF DELHI CITY KNOWN AS KARAUL BAGH.

306. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that the western extension known as Karaul Bagh is still without drainage and water supply ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state when they propose to provide the grant asked for by the Delhi Municipality for the provision of these facilities ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The schemes for water supply and drainage in the Western Extension have been recommended by the Municipality and the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, for inclusion in the 5-year programme of expansion of medical and public health facilities in Delhi Province and the Government of India hope to be able to consider these schemes along with the rest of the programme.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to give some assurance as to when this drainage scheme is likely to be started considering that it is now over ten years since this settlement was established by Government themselves ?

Mr. President : No argument is permissible.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be prepared to give some assurance as to when this drainage scheme is likely to be completed ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I cannot give an assurance as to when the drainage scheme is likely to be completed, seeing that I am not in a position to give an assurance when it is to be taken in hand, but I can give the Honourable Member an assurance that we shall consider the scheme as soon as possible.

HOUSE SHORTAGE AND HIGH RENTS IN DELHI.

307. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Has the attention of Government been called to an article that appeared on page 6 of the Statesman of the 20th June, 1928, under the heading " House Shortage and High Rents " and a similar article in the Pioneer of the same date under the heading of a " Delhi Letter " ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the statements made in that article are substantially or partially correct ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have seen the articles mentioned.

(b) Only 8 bungalows, and not 20 as stated, have been rented in Civil Lines for officers of the North-Western Railway. It is probably true that the establishment of the Clearing Accounts Office at Delhi has increased the difficulty of finding accommodation. The Railway Board are now considering what steps should be taken to house the clerks of this office.

INFLUX OF OFFICERS, CLERKS AND OFFICE SERVANTS INTO DELHI CONSEQUENT ON THE TRANSFER OF CERTAIN OFFICES TO THAT PLACE.

308. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the approximate number of officers, clerks and office servants brought into Delhi with the transfer to that city of the following offices :

1. Office of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs.
2. Railway Accounts Clearing Office.
3. Divisional Offices of the North Western Railway.
4. Northern India Salt Department ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what housing accommodation has been provided for the officers, clerks and servants connected with the offices named in (a) above ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information required by the Honourable Member is being collected and will be furnished to him as soon as possible.

NUMBER OF BUNGALOWS RENTED BY THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY IN THE CIVIL LINES AND DARYA GANJ, DELHI.

309. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to state the number of bungalows rented in the Civil Lines and Darya Ganj by the North Western Railway for the accommodation of officers or offices ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 8 bungalows have been rented in Civil Lines for officers of the North-Western Railway. No bungalows have been rented in Darya Ganj.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Have any bungalows been rented for railway offices in the Civil Lines, such as the Railway Mail Service office and so forth ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Railway Mail Service offices are not railway offices, Sir. I am quite unable to give an answer except with regard to the North-Western Railway, the figures for which I have already given to the Honourable Member.

PROVISION OF HOUSING ACCOMMODATION IN DELHI FOR THE OFFICERS AND STAFFS OF THE GOVERNMENT OFFICES TRANSFERRED TO THAT PLACE.

310. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take to provide housing accommodation in Delhi for the officers and staffs of the Government offices transferred to it ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Presumably the Honourable Member has in mind the offices mentioned in question No. 308. As far as the offices of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, the Northern India Salt and Revenue Department are concerned, which have now been located in the temporary Secretariats, there is no intention to provide further housing accommodation in Delhi. When Army Headquarters move to New Delhi, the accommodation thus set free should be sufficient for all these demands. The possibility of making some suitable arrangements for quarters for the ministerial staff of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office is under investigation.

WATER SUPPLY OF DELHI CITY.

311. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Has the attention of Government been called to the debate which took place at a special meeting of the Delhi Municipality held on the 11th July, 1928, on the subject of the water supply of Delhi City and the resolution passed at that meeting, urging representations to the Delhi Joint Water Board, for reduction of the water rate charged from the Delhi Municipality as the rate was said to be considerably in excess of the cost incurred by the Municipality when it maintained its own water works ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what is the cost of pumping per thousand gallons of water, incurred by the Joint Water Board, and the rate charged for supply by it to the Delhi Municipal Committee ?

(c) If the cost incurred by the Joint Water Board is in excess of the price guaranteed to the Municipal Committee, will Government be pleased to state, how the loss so incurred is met ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Not specifically ; but they understand that a copy of the proceedings of the special meeting was received by the Chief Commissioner in the ordinary course.

(b) The cost of supplying water in 1926-27 on 11 months' working including interest and repayment of loan and sinking fund was 3.27 annas per thousand gallons. The final figures for 1927-28 are not available as yet but the rate is not likely to be above 3.10 annas per thousand gallons. The rate charged to the Delhi Municipal Committee is 3 annas per thousand gallons.

(c) The loss incurred is met in the manner provided for in section 13 (4) of the Delhi Joint Water Board Act, 1926.

AVERAGE COST OF PUMPING WATER AND THE AVERAGE DAILY VOLUME OF THE OUTPUT OF WATER IN DELHI.

312. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that when inviting the Delhi Municipality to participate in the Joint Water Board Scheme, the Chief Commissioner in his letter No. 0156-W., dated Raisina, the 13th October, 1923, to the Deputy Commissioner, Delhi, stated that the Chief Engineer had estimated that the actual pumping cost of water, taking interest on half the capital figures, was likely to work out to some figures between 2 annas 6 pies to 2 annas 9 pies per 1,000 gallons on 8 million gallons, and that the rate would diminish as the volume increased ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state, what the actual average cost of pumping water has been for the last three years and the average daily volume of the output of water during this period ?

(c) If the average cost of pumping has been in excess of the estimate furnished by the Chief Engineer, will Government be pleased to state, what are the reasons for such an excess ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what was the cost of pumping per thousand gallons of water incurred by the Delhi Municipality, and the average daily output, before the Municipal Water Works were acquired by the Joint Water Board ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Final figures for 1927-28 are not available at present. The Joint Water Board began to function with effect from 1st May 1928 only.

(c) The Chief Engineer's estimate was based on an assumed daily supply of 8 million gallons and when that figure is reached, it is hoped that the cost will be within the Chief Engineer's estimate. The present supply is about 7 million gallons.

(d) The Delhi Administration Reports give the quantity supplied and cost of supply as follows :

1921-22	4.18 million gallons	2.30 annas.
1922-23	4.21 million gallons	2.68 annas.

These figures do not include any thing for administration, interest on capital, depreciation charges and sinking fund. The two years for which figures are given are the last two years during which the Municipal Committee was in exclusive charge of the water works.

CONTAMINATION OF THE WATER SUPPLY OF DELHI CITY.

313. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the statements made by the Medical Officer of Health of the Delhi Municipality, to the effect that the water supply of the city in some of the most congested parts had been found to be contaminated with acid and gas forming bacteria detected in samples of 60 c. c. of drinking water, and that he believed this to be due to a number of water pipes passing through drains and sewage pipes ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Delhi Municipality have for some time been urging the Government of India to give them an adequate grant or loan, to improve the system of water distribution in the city ?

(c) In view of the contamination of the water supply of the city and the serious dangers to public health resulting therefrom, will Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take to assist the Delhi Municipality in dealing with this urgent problem ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The improvement of the water supply in Delhi City is one of the items recommended by the Municipality and the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, for inclusion in the 5-year programme to which I have already referred in a previous answer given to-day. The Government of India recognise the importance of the scheme and are considering the request of the Municipality for financial assistance towards giving effect to it.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Are Government aware of the serious epidemic of typhoid that has visited Delhi this summer and which still continues to some extent ? Are Government also aware that this was partly due to the contaminated water supply ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government have seen reports, Sir, in the Press to the effect that there has been a severe epidemic of typhoid in Delhi. They have made inquiries on the subject from the Chief Commissioner, and he did recognise that to some extent the contamination of the water supply was responsible for the infection. The statement made by me that Government propose to take this matter up for consideration urgently is proof of their recognition of the importance of the matter.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Am I then to understand that Government will take up the question of the consideration of the grant for improving the water supply independent of the five-year programme which may be indefinitely delayed ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I do not think, Sir, that the exclusion of this particular item from the five-year programme is necessary to the recognition of its importance or urgency.

FEEDER RAILWAYS IN SIND, ETC.

314. Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the proceedings of a mass meeting of the people of Bhiria (Nawabshah District) that have appeared in the Daily Gazette of Karachi, dated 31st July 1928, under the title of " Feeder Railways in Sind " and " Need of a Station at Bhiria." ?

(b) What step, if any, do the Government propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Government understand that the representation from the people of Bhiria is now under consideration by the North-Western Railway authorities, but as this town is already only 5 miles from the existing main line between Samasata and Hyderabad, it is not likely that the suggested alteration of the alignment can be justified.

SETTLEMENT OF MOPLAHS IN THE ANDAMANS.

315. Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what is the number of Moplah settlers in the Andamans at present, men, women and children respectively ?

(b) In view of the Government's acceptance of the conclusions of Sir Alexander Cardew's Committee to discontinue the Andamans as a penal settlement, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for still keeping the Moplahs there ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) There are at present 2,967 Moplahs in the Andamans : 1,526 men, 587 women and 854 children.

(b) The policy of the Government of India in regard to the Andamans is stated in the Home Department Resolution No. F.-20-26-Jails, dated the 27th February 1926. I would particularly invite the Honourable Member's attention to paragraph 5 of the Resolution. The Moplahs at present in the Islands are those who have either elected to stay on or have volunteered to go there on the terms offered in the Home Department Resolution No. F. 188-24-Jails, dated the 4th October 1926.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How is it that after the Cardew report to the effect that the Andamans should be discontinued as a penal settlement for the Moplahs, Government have still kept these people there and how is it that Government now say that the Moplahs have volunteered to go there ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The recommendation of the Jails Committee was that the Andamans should be discontinued as soon as practicable as a penal settlement. The Moplahs who are at present there have gone there on a purely voluntary basis.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to allow any other convicts to go there or in the alternative state why these persons only should be allowed to continue to live in a place which is insanitary, unhealthy and brings demoralisation to humanity ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think that the people who wish to stay there should be removed except in some such circumstances as are contemplated in the Bill which I hope to bring before the House later on.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that the Cardew Committee stated in their report that the place is insanitary, unhealthy and that it brings demoralisation to humanity ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the Government Resolution that I have quoted in which matters have been gone into in full detail.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact, Sir, that these are stated in that report and in view of that fact, how do the Government propose to allow the Moplahs to remain there ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The places in which the Moplahs are settled are not, in the opinion of the local authorities and competent medical authority, insanitary. The general opinion is that the conditions prevailing there are very much better than those which the Moplahs had in their own country.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Has there been any other authorised report made by medical men after the report of the Cardew Committee ? Was not the latter report written after a most sifting inquiry and submitted to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think, Sir, that that question arises out of the inquiry as to the number of Moplahs in the Andamans at present.

Mr. President : The question arises in this way. My recollection is that the Honourable Member answered a previous question by saying that these places were not insanitary ; but we have the report of Sir Alexander Cardew's Committee to show that these places are insanitary and so the Honourable Member now wants to know whether there has been any further report of any medical authority, and that question is perfecly legitimate.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In regard to certain parts of the island where malaria has been prevalent (I may explain that those parts are close to the coast) steps have since been taken to reduce the malaria with excellent effects and further measures in that direction are being taken.

TOTAL STRENGTH AND RELIGION OF HIGH COURT JUDGES IN INDIA.

316. Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state the total strength of High Court Judges in each Province in India and the number of Hindus, Europeans, Muhammadans, Parsis and Sikhs respectively ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The information is contained in the statement which I have placed in the Library.

TOTAL CADRE OF INSPECTORS, PREVENTIVE OFFICERS AND APPRAISERS IN THE CUSTOM HOUSE, KARACHI.

317 Haji Abdoola Haroon : Will Government be pleased to state what is the total cadre of Inspectors, Preventive Officers and Appraisers at the Karachi Customs station and how many of them are Muhammadans?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A statement furnishing the information required is laid on the table.

Statement showing the total strength of Inspectors, Preventive Officers and Appraisers in the Karachi Custom House and the number of Muhammadans employed.

	Total strength.	Muhammadans employed.
Inspectors	4	..
Preventive Officers	37	5
Appraisers	22	1

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDIAN CINEMATOGRAPH COMMITTEE.

318. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) if they have considered the recommendations of the Indian Cinema Committee ? and (b) if they propose to create a Central Cinema Department ?

(c) if the answer to (b) be in the affirmative, when do they propose to create the department ?

(d) if the answer to (a) be in the negative, when do they propose to consider the recommendations and whether they propose to consult the Assembly in regard to them during this session ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have taken the recommendations under their consideration, but some time must elapse before it is possible to secure the views of Local Governments and to reach final conclusions on the proposals. Consequently Government will be unable to lay any measure based on the Committee's recommendations before the House during the present Session.

Mr. B. Das : Has the attention of the Honourable Member been drawn to the statement published in the Press that Mr. S. N. Mullick, who was delegated by the Government of India to the League of Nations' Assembly, made a statement there that western films had a harmful effect on Indian children and Indian cinema-goers and that he was supported by Dame Lyttleton of England and the Persian representative ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think, Sir, that that arises out of the original question whether Government will lay before the House any measures based on the recommendations of the Committee.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact, Sir, that one of the recommendations of this Cinema Committee is that western films have a harmful effect on Indian children and cinema-goers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I submit, Sir, once more that that question does not arise. When Government is in a position to lay its considered conclusions and also specific proposals for legislation, if any that may be necessary, before the House, this question might arise in the course of debate. I submit it does not arise as a supplementary question to the original question asked by Mr. Ranga Iyer.

Mr. B. Das : Why does not the Honourable Member accept a fact when it is a fact and one which has already been mentioned by the representative of the Government of India before the League of Nations ?

PROPAGANDA IN INDIA BY BOLSHEVISTS AND COMMUNISTS.

319. Mr. Kikabhai Premchand : (a) Are Government aware of the allegations of Bolshevist and Communistic activity in disseminating their principles throughout India and inspiring the numerous strikes which we witness all over the country ?

(b) Do Government propose taking any steps to check such propaganda among the ignorant and credulous workers and thus stop the hardships and privations caused to these labourers arising from any strike situation ?

(c) If Government do not possess adequate powers, do they contemplate arming themselves with extra ones to end any insidious attempts by Bolshevist and Communistic agitators at the destruction of authority and to safeguard the peaceful working of industry in the country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Government have the matter under their careful consideration, and so far as concerns one aspect of the case I would refer the Honourable Member to the Bill published in the Gazette of India of the 25th August.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government is aware that officers and district officers on Indian Railways permit the spread of Bolshevik ideas in this country by refusing to remove the legitimate grievances of workers and by refusing to deal with real trade unions in this country ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I ask whether the Honourable Member will make inquiries in this matter.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it a fact, Sir, that many times it has been found in the newspapers—and probably the information with the Government will show—that strikers and leaders of this party have been receiving funds from the Bolshevik country and other countries, such as England and elsewhere, in order to carry on this kind of propaganda and strikes all over the country ? Will this Bill put a stop to that money being received from England from the Labour Party ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That particular question does not arise. As the Honourable Member will see, it does not come within the scope of the Bill.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government prepared to lay on the table all the materials which they may have on this question ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will the Safety Bill prevent the activities of strikers in this country as far as money coming from the Bolshevik country as well as from labour leaders in England is concerned, in order to foment the inspiring of numerous strikes in the country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is a matter for debate on the motion which stands in my name on the paper to-day.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know why Government are unable to place all evidence on record on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Because, Sir, some part of this is of a very secret character and it would not be in the public interest to publish it.

Mr. Abdul Haye : In view of what has already been said on the floor of this House on this subject I do not propose to put my questions Nos. 320 and 321. With your permission, Sir I will put my question No. 322.

Mr. President : Would it not be desirable, in view of the fact that a date has been promised by Government to discuss the whole question,† that the Honourable Member should wait till the discussion takes place in this House ?

Mr. Abdul Haye : I agree to your suggestion, Sir.

‡Nos. 320*—322*.

PROMOTION OF GUARDS FROM B CLASS TO C CLASS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

323. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that the Traffic Manager's Circular No. 476-E., dated the 18th June, 1922, exempts the B Class guards of the North Western Railway, of more than 15 years' approved service from the assistant station masters' examination for promotion to Class C ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Circular also lays down that a list of recommended men, only in order of seniority will be maintained in the Traffic Manager's office from which promotions from class B to class C will be made ?

(c) Is it a fact that certain persons have been promoted to class C when they had even less than one year's service to their credit and drew as much as Rs. 75 per month ?

(d) Is it a fact that during the promotions made in February last the claims of the men with more than 15 years' approved experience were set aside against men of one year's service, and if so will the Government state reasons for this ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The North Western Railway Administration have not been able to trace any Circular No. 476-E. of 18th June 1922. Under the existing rules men who had 15 or more years' approved service as guard on the 28th July 1921 can be recommended for inclusion in a list maintained in the headquarters' office of men from whom selection for promotion to Class C is made without having passed the assistant station masters' examination.

(b) No. Seniority is not taken into consideration in making such promotions. The rule mentioned gives no Class B or special Class B guard with 15 or more years' service any title to be promoted to Class C, but merely provides that specially capable and deserving men with this amount of service are not debarred from such promotion by the fact that they have not passed the assistant station masters' examination.

†Separate office for the Legislative Assembly.
‡Withdrawn.

(c) No. I understand that one such man has been put in to officiate in Grade IV.

(d) The rule which I have explained was strictly followed when promotions to Grade C were made in February last.

INCLUSION OF CERTAIN SUBJECTS AS OPTIONAL SUBJECTS IN CERTAIN SPECIFIED IMPERIAL SERVICES EXAMINATIONS.

324. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state which of the subjects, studied by a student of B. Commerce of an Indian University, are included in the following Imperial Services examinations :

(i) Finance.

(ii) Military Accounts.

(iii) Indian Audit.

(iv) Indian Customs ?

(b) Do Government propose to include the following subjects as optional subjects in the above examinations :

(i) Accountancy and Auditing.

(ii) Banking, Money, Currency and Public Finance.

(iii) Industrial and Commercial organisation.

(iv) Economic development of the Empire and India ?

(c) Do Government propose to include these subjects in examinations for the I. C. S. also ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) One common examination is held for candidates for admission to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, the Military Accounts Department and the Imperial Customs Service, at which each candidate is required to take English and the viva voce test, and not more than two of the following subjects :

Political Economy and Economic History.
Mathematics (Pure and Mixed).
Physics.
Chemistry.
Indian and English History.

One of the following classical languages with its literature :

Latin, Greek, Sanskrit, Arabic and Persian.

I regret it has not been possible for me to ascertain the curricula of B. Commerce Examinations of various Indian Universities in the time at my disposal.

(b) The question of the revision of the syllabus of the Indian Audit and Accounts Service Examination is being considered by the Public Services Commission.

(c) Certain proposals for the revision of the list of subjects for the Indian Civil Service Examination are now under consideration. If these are finally approved Nos. (ii), (iii) and (iv) of the subjects mentioned by the Honourable Member will be included in one or more of the papers dealing with economic subjects. The inclusion of a paper on Accountancy and Auditing would not appear to be called for.

CRUELTY TO A CONSIGNMENT OF MONKEYS SENT FROM LUCKNOW TO BOMBAY BY THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

325. Dr. B. S. Moonje : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(1) the names and addresses of the sender and consignee of a consignment of three crates of monkeys transhipped at Jhansi Junction into the Delhi—Bombay mail train on the 29th July 1928 and reported to have been booked at Lucknow for delivery at Bombay ?

(2) the dimensions of each crate and the number of monkeys in each ?

(3) whether it is a fact that the legs of the monkeys protruded through the openings in the bottom of the crates and that, in spite of this, the crates were dragged along the floor of the luggage compartment at the time of loading at Jhansi ?

(4) whether it is a fact that the crates were loaded into a luggage van the only ventilation in which was through the fixed side venetians.

(5) what action Government propose to take against the sender and consignee of the consignment and the railway officials responsible for accepting and forwarding it ?

(6) what action Government propose to put a stop, once and for all, to this abominable cruelty to dumb animals ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are asking the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to let them know the facts and I will communicate with the Honourable Member as soon as his reply is received.

STRIKE AT BAMANGACHI ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

326. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) What were the immediate causes of the strike at Bamangachi on the East Indian Railway ?

(b) How many employees of the East Indian Railway took part in the strike ?

(c) For how long did such strike continue and what was the total amount of loss occasioned to the East Indian Railway by reason of such strike ?

(d) How many employees who participated in the strike movement have resumed work and how many of them have been discharged by the East Indian Railway and why ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Railway Police had to open fire on the strikers at Bamangachi for maintaining law and order and if so under whose orders such a course was adopted and with what result ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I presume the Honourable Member refers to the strike in the Lillooah workshops as there was no strike in the Bamangachi Locomotive Yard.

(a) The immediate cause of the strike was stated by the General Secretary of the East Indian Railway Union at Khagaul to be the discharge of 4 workmen ; but the strike was probably due in reality to the refusal of certain demands of the workmen.

(b) 11,296 employees went out on strike in the Lillooah Carriage and Wagon workshops ; in addition 596 men at Ondal, 1,530 men at Asansol, 890 men of the Stores and Electrical Department at Lillooah, and 2,003 men at Howrah, struck work in sympathy with the Lillooah workshop men—a total of 16,315 men.

(c) The strike at Lillooah commenced on the 7th March and terminated on the 10th July. 19 days after the termination of that strike, the men at Lillooah again refused to work and the shops were closed for 9 days. On the 8th of August they were re-opened and the men came back to work.

It is impossible to say what loss, if any, was caused to the East Indian Railway by reason of the strike. Traffic was not interfered with.

(d) Out of the total of 16,315 men, about 15,000 have resumed work. 53 men were dismissed from the Lillooah shops for creating a disturbance in the shops on the 30th July, and about 650 men at Asansol and Ondal were dismissed for not having resumed duty in accordance with the Agent's orders. Of these 650 men, nearly 400 have been re-engaged and others are being taken back as vacancies arise. The balance is made up of men of all departments who have not yet come back to work.

(e) Fire was opened by the Eastern Frontier Rifles under the orders of the Superintendent of Police. The casualties were 2 killed and 2 injured.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, may I ask what is the proper amount of the charges which Government continue to pay to the strikers and also the charges necessary for the payment of the workers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Will the Honourable Member please put down a question ? He can hardly expect me to have these figures in my head.

Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Was it the finding of the Magistrate of Howrah who held an inquiry into this matter that the occasion warranted the railway police or the constituted authorities to open fire on the strikers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : These, Sir, are questions which are now in issue in a case which is at present sub judice. I am therefore not in a position to make at this stage any statement in the matter.

REDUCTION OF FARES ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY, ETC.

327. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether it is a fact that the earnings from the East Indian Railway passenger service have increased after reduction of fares ?

(b) Will a comparative statement be made shewing the earnings from the passenger services of the East Indian Railway before and after the latest reduction of fares for a period of one year or more ?

(c) Is it a fact that no reduction of fares has yet been made on the Eastern Bengal Railway passenger services to bring the table of fares to the same level as prevails on the East Indian Railway and, if not, why not ?

(d) Is it in contemplation to revive the system of issuing six-monthly 1st, 2nd and intermediate class return tickets to the passengers on the Eastern Bengal Railway ? and if so, when ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The reductions in intermediate and third class mail fares only came into force on the 1st March 1928, and in third class fares generally on the 1st May 1928, and I am afraid it is not yet possible to say whether they have led to an increase in passenger traffic.

(b) These figures are already given in Volume II of the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative; the Eastern Bengal Railway has only just begun to pay its way.

(d) Eight-monthly return tickets for first and second class passengers are issued. It is not proposed to issue return tickets for intermediate class passengers.

ATTACHMENT OF INTERMEDIATE AND THIRD CLASS COMPARTMENTS FOR FEMALE PASSENGERS CLOSE TO THE ENGINES ON THE EAST INDIAN AND EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAYS.

328. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether it is a fact that intermediate and third class compartments for females are often put very close to the engines in many passenger train on the East Indian Railway and Eastern Bengal Railway ?

(b) If the answer to the previous question is in the affirmative, will it be made a regular system to put the intermediate and third class female compartments in all passenger trains in all Railways at a safe distance from the engines in order to minimise the risk of accidents to females by reason of the derailment and collision of railway trains ?

(c) Whether or not it is a fact that one or two coaches just behind the engines are generally telescoped as the result of collision and derailment of railway trains and, if so, will the Railway Board consider the necessity of directing one or two loaded or unloaded wagons being attached to the engines of all passenger trains as a matter of precaution ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Not so far as Government are aware, but they are not of course informed of the actual marshalling of individual trains.

(b) No.

(c) The coaches nearest the engine generally suffer most in a head-on collision or derailment. The Railway Board are not prepared to accept the suggestion made by the Honourable Member which would inter alia reduce the speed of mail and passenger trains and leave less accommodation available for the public.

SHIFTING OF THE RAILWAY STATION AT GOALUNDO.

329. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : How often has the Goalundo railway station been shifted every year on account of the deterioration of the bed of the Padma River and what expenditure has been incurred during the last three years, and by whom ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member, when received.

DOORS OF INTERMEDIATE AND THIRD CLASS COMPARTMENTS ON THE METRE GAUGE AND BROAD GAUGE RAILWAYS.

330. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : (a) Is it a fact that doors of all classes of compartments on the metre gauge railways and the doors of intermediate and third class compartments of the broad gauge railways invariably open outwards with the result that accidents to passengers take place in running trains ?

(b) Is it a fact that very recently a respectable Indian woman was thrown out of the intermediate class compartment of a running train of the East Indian Railway and was killed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The design varies. Doors sometimes open out and sometimes inwards.

(b) Government have received no report of any such occurrence.

ROYAL COMMISSIONS AND COMMITTEES APPOINTED SINCE 1921.

331. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy: Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) How many Royal Commissions and Committees have been appointed for India since 1921 up to now ?

(b) What was the personnel of such Commissions and Committees ?

(c) What is the expense that has been incurred and paid out of the revenues of the Central Government in connection with each of such Commissions and Committees so far ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY ON SCHOLARSHIPS TO EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN STUDENTS IN THE OAKGROVE EUROPEAN SCHOOL, ETC.

332. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : (a) What is the amount which the East Indian Railway Administration spends for scholarships to Anglo-Indian and European students in the Oakgrove School ?

(b) What is the amount spent by the East Indian Railway on scholarships to children of Indian employees and where are they available ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Rs. 5,000.

FEES FOR CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES AT THE OAKGROVE EUROPEAN SCHOOL, ETC.

333. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : (a) Is it a fact that while the monthly charges for board and tuition of a non-railway child at the Oakgrove school are Rs. 50, the charge for a railway child paid by the parents is only Rs. 14 to Rs. 21 per month according to the pay of the parents ?

(b) Who pays the balance of Rs. 36 to Rs. 29 ?

(c) Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway meets the entire deficit of the Oakgrove European School ? Does the East Indian Railway meet the entire deficit in the Indian schools also ? Is it a fact that the Indian schools maintained by the Railway are given a fixed grant, and the local committees have to find money for making up the deficit or to reduce necessary expenditure ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. The special reduced rates apply only to children of employees of the East Indian Railway.

(b) The deficit resulting from the admission of children of the East Indian Railway employees at reduced rates is met by the East Indian Railway revenues.

(c) The East Indian Railway meets the entire deficit of the Oakgrove School. Indian schools maintained by this Railway are given fixed grants, which are supplemented by special grants where necessary, and the local committtees are responsible for keeping expenditure within income as supplemented by these grants.

TOTAL EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY ON THE OAKGROVE EUROPEAN SCHOOL IN 1926-27, ETC.

334. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : What was the total expenditure incurred by the East Indian Railway Administration on the Oakgrove European School in 1926-27 and what was the highest grant to an Indian school maintained by the Railway during the same period ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Rs. 1,15,916 and Rs. 4,500 respectively.

GRANT OF PREFERENCE TO STUDENTS OF THE OAKGROVE SCHOOL IN THE SELECTION OF APPRENTICES FOR THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AND THE TECHNICAL SCHOOL AT JAMALPUR.

335. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Is it a fact that in the printed prospectus for the technical school at Jamalpur it is stated that in the selection of apprentices for the East Indian Railway workshops and the technical school, students from Oakgrove School will be given preference ? Are the students from the Indian railway schools equally qualified, and do they get such preference ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. A similar preference is given to students from Indian railway schools.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask, Sir, if the students of these European schools are to be given preference, what happens to the scheme for Indianisation ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I have explained, Sir, a similar preference is given to students from the Indian railway schools.

FAMINE IN BENGAL.

336. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the fact that famine has broken out and desolated some Districts of Bengal ?

(b) Is it a fact that many persons have died and are still dying of starvation in the famine-stricken areas ?

(c) What is the actual number of deaths from starvation so far ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Government are aware that distress prevails in certain districts of Bengal, but the Local Government have not found it necessary to declare famine formally.

(b) No. Reports of such deaths appeared in certain newspapers, but upon investigation were found to be incorrect.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Has the Government seen certain affidavits sworn in the courts of law showing that the people died of starvation ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I cannot add anything, Sir, to the answer which I have just given, and which is based on a report submitted by the Government of Bengal after careful investigation. I have a note on the subject here and, if my Honourable friend is interested in the question, I shall show it to him after the morning session is over.

NUMBER OF PERSONS UNDER DETENTION AND INTERNMENT AS POLITICAL SUSPECTS.

337. Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy : Will Government be pleased to make a statement giving the names and numbers of the persons who are now under detention and internment as political suspects in the different provinces of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The number is 7, viz.:

Panna Lal Mukharji,
Jatindra Nath Das,
Pratul Ganguli,
Ramesh Chandra Acharji,
Santa Singh,
Basaundha Singh, and Gajjan Singh.

REFUSAL TO GRANT LEAVE TO THE MUSLIM EMPLOYEES OF THE LOCO WORKSHOPS AT BHATINDA TO SAY THEIR ID PRAYERS, ETC.

338. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the news published in Muslim Outlook, dated 7th June 1928 at page 3 under the headings " Persecuting Muslims " " Not allowed to say Id Prayers " ?

(b) Is it a fact that on the occasion of the last Id-ul-Zuha the Moslem employees of the Loco Workshop at Bhatinda were not given leave to enable them to say their Id prayers even ?

(c) If so, will Government please state what action they have taken in the matter ?

(d) Are the employees of Loco Workshops allowed any holidays during the year ? If so will Government please lay on table a list of such holidays ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Moslem employees of the Loco Workshop at Bhatinda were made to work on the day of Muharrum, i.e., 29th June 1928, and no holiday was allowed to them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes ; by the Honourable Member's question.

(b) There is no Locomotive Workshop at Bhatinda. The Honourable Member is presumably referring to the Locomotive Shed at that station. Government understand that the Muslims employed there were offered leave from 8 A.M. to 11 A.M. on the occasion of Id-ul-Zuha provided they came to work at 5 A.M., but they refused the offer.

(c) None.

(d) I am sending the Honourable Member a list of shop holidays in Locomotive Workshops on the North-Western Railway. It would be impracticable to allow men in Locomotive Shed holidays on specific days without interfering with the train service, but I understand that they are allowed 15 days' casual leave in a year in lieu. I am, however, verifying this point.

(e) Government are informed that permission was given to Muslims employed in the Locomotive Shed at Bhatinda to stop work after 1 P.M. on the 29th June 1928, but they did not avail themselves of the permission.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How is it that there is no off day on an important festival day like the Id-ul-Zuha for Muslims ? Is it not a public holiday ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have already explained that it is impossible to allow holidays on specific days because, though the holiday may be important, the train service has still to go on.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Do the Government approve of this policy of the railway authorities not allowing holidays to Mussalmans, or for the matter of that to Hindus, on such important occasions as Id-ul-Zuha, Muharrum and the Dussera ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Provided that the train service can be carried on, which is the first essential, I think it is desirable that as far as possible a railway employee should be given some leave of absence on his special holidays. But in certain classes of railway employment, of which work in locomotive sheds is one, it is not possible, as I have already explained in my answer to the main question, to give a full day. In that case, I think that the local authorities were quite right in doing what they did in the two instances mentioned by the Honourable Member, namely, attempting to give at least 3 or 4 hours off to members of the commuunity affected.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Do the Government know, Sir, that on the Id-ul-Zuha Mussalmans have to offer their prayers in the morning, which are finished by 11, and in the evening they have to offer sacrifice ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am quite prepared to take that as a correct statement from the Honourable Member. He is in a better position to know than I am.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to send these questions and answers to the railway authorities so that in future the workers in the Locomotive Shed at Bhatinda and elsewhere may get benefit of the holidays ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have already explained to the Honourable Member that it would be very difficult to allow these holidays in full in locomotive sheds. I am quite prepared to have copies of the questions that have been put and of my answers to them sent to the Agent of the North-Western Railway.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to appoint extra men on festival days like this in order that these poor people, these unhappy people, working in the locomotive sheds day and night may get the benefit of a holiday ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is probably not aware that work in these sheds is mostly skilled work and that we cannot take anybody that turns up.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Does the Honourable Member mean that the Government want to make an interference with the religion of the people in this matter, which is totally against the Proclamation of Queen Victoria of 1858 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir. As I have tried to explain, the object of the railway authorities is, as far as possible, without interfering with the train service, to allow people time off on these religious holidays.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose for the benefit of the service of the country, to include in the 15 days' leave allowed in a year one or two days on account of Id-ul-Zuha prayers and other important days of prayer and festivity ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have already explained to the Honourable Member the difficulty of allowing a full holiday to all the staff in the locomotive shed. I am afraid I cannot add anything further.

Mr. K. Ahmed : That is not an answer to my question.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : May I know if this office is closed or kept open on Christmas day ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Certainly, Sir.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it open or closed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : You have to carry on the necessary work in locomotive sheds on every day of the year, including Christmas day on which trains run ; and as the train service during Christmas time is on the whole heavier than at other times, in all probability they are open for longer hours on Christmas day than on many other holidays.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do you allow a holiday on Christmas day to the Christians who are working in the locomotive office ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I cannot say definitely. I should imagine that the local authorities do exactly the same thing that they do on a Muhammadan or a Hindu holiday, that is to say, to the extent to which it is possible they give the men a few hours off.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : May I ask, Sir, if these men are given an extra allowance for working on Id-ul-Zuha and other festivals ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must ask for notice. I really do not know.

PRESENT SYSTEM OF FILLING UP SELECTION GRADE APPOINTMENTS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

339. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao : With reference to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, on the 20th March 1928, to my starred question No. 489, will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) how the present system of filling up the selection grade proved unsatisfactory ;

(b) the main defects of the present working system, which led to the introduction of the selection grade examination ;

(c) whether F. A., B. A., etc., examinations held by the University are not sufficient tests for the knowledge of English, which have ever since been depended upon ;

(d) what are the so-called responsible duties, which would be required of the time-scale officials, to get selection grade in addition to those performed by them ;

(e) whether the length of experience and performance of duties similar to those assigned to selection grade officials, are not sufficient proof of the requisite knowledge of the Department ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). The present system referred to by the Honourable Member was considered unsatisfactory as it did not provide the tests mentioned in part (a) of the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra's reply to the Honourable Member's starred question No. 489 of last March.

(c) Possibly, but English is not the only test.

(d) and (e). The responsibilities of an officer in charge of a large post office must obviously be greater than those of an officer-in-charge of a small one, and the fact that an officer has managed his charge of a small office is not in itself proof that he is equally fitted to manage a large office.

EXAMINATION FOR TIME-SCALE CLERKS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

340. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao : With reference to the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra's reply to starred question No. 489 on the 20th March 1928, regarding the examination for time-scale clerks in the Postal Department, is it a fact that some record or sub-record clerks are holding selection grade appointments, whereas the majority of them are in the ordinary time-scale ? If the reply to the above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state why it has been considered necessary for the latter (who have been performing their duties satisfactorily for years) to pass an examination in their old age, in order to secure the selection grade posts ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Yes. Government do not consider that the satisfactory performance of the duties of less important posts is necessarily a proof of fitness for the selection grade, and an examination has therefore been prescribed as a test of such fitness.

SELECTION GRADE APPOINTMENTS IN THE OFFICE OF A SUPERINTENDENT, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

341. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao : (a) Is it a fact that the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs has ruled that the head clerks or accountants in the Office of the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, should hold a selection grade appointment (160—250) ? If the reply to the above is in the affirmative, do Government propose to exempt from the examination those head clerks and accountants in the time-scale in the Superintendents' Offices who have been working in these posts for years together, and have given sufficient proof of their efficiency and put in over 20 years' service ?

(b) If the reply to the above is in the negative, will Government give reasons for the same ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The orders of the Government of India are that " of the two selection grade appointments in the office of a Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, one should always be held by the head record clerk, and the other either by the head clerk or the accountant, according to the fitness of either for the selection grade ".

(a) and (b). Government are not prepared to accept the Honourable Member's suggestion since they do not admit that seniority combined with a satisfactory record is sufficient to establish a claim to a selection grade appointment.

MENTAL DEFECTIVES.

342. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the statements made by Lieut.-Colonel Owen A. R. Berkely-Hill in the course of his presidential address delivered at the fourteenth Indian Science Congress held at Lahore in January, 1928, drawing attention to the entire lack of facilities for medical care of or attention to the mentally defective ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have seen a report of the address which was delivered in January 1927, not 1928.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Are Government prepared to take any action on that address ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government do not at present contemplate any immediate action in the matter, because the provision of institutes of this kind necessarily involves very great expenditure, and so far, considerations of economy have precluded us from taking action in that direction.

REGISTRATION OF MENTAL DEFECTIVES.

343. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any provision exists for the notification and registration of mental defectives in India ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to enquire into the number of mental defectives in the centrally administered territories ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Not so far as Government are aware, but I would remind the Honourable Member that it is a provincial transferred subject and is one for the Minister concerned under each Local Government.

(b) Government are not aware that the number of mental defectives in centrally administered territories is so large as to justify a special enquiry.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government make some sort of inquiry to find out whether the number is large or small ? In my opinion it is large.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : We have a certain amount of information on the subject, and that information indicates that the number of mentally defectives in the centrally administered territories is not large.

MEDICAL CARE, GUIDANCE AND PROBATION OF MENTALLY DEFECTIVE CHILDREN.

344. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will Government be pleased to state what facilities, if any, exist for the medical care, guidance, and protection of mentally defective children in the centrally administered areas ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Mentally defective children are treated in the ordinary general hospitals.

TRAINING OF PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICERS IN PSYCHOLOGY.

345. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is any psychological training required of officers recruited to the Government Departments of Public Health in the centrally administered areas ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to provide facilities for such training to selected officers of the Public Health Department ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No.

(b) There is no such scheme at present under the consideration of Government.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : A supplementary question, Sir. Will Government give due consideration to the suggestion contained in this question as to the advisability of getting their Public Health officers trained in psychology ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : To be quite candid, Sir, I do not really know what psychological training means. It may mean anything from Couéism or Hypnotism to Christian Science. But so far as the treatment of mental defectives is concerned, the Honourable the Home Member has already stated that their number in the centrally administered areas is not so large as to justify the adoption of any special measures.

TREATMENT OF MENTAL DISORDERS IN THEIR EARLY STAGES.

346. The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any provision for the treatment of mental disorders in their early stages exists in dispensaries or the outdoor departments of hospitals in the centrally administered areas ?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to consider the making of such a provision in selected dispensaries and the out-door departments of hospitals ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes, in the out-door departments.

(b) Does not arise.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Am I to understand that my Honourable friend really maintains that the Sub-Assistant Surgeons in charge of these out-door dispensaries have any real knowledge or experience of treating these mental disorders ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : In the first instance I do not admit the correctness of the assumption that only Sub-Assistant Surgeons deal with these mentally deficient or diseased cases. In the second place, I have already stated that our expert advice is that such facilities as exist are adequate to the requirements of the situation.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : May I ask who these expert advisers are who have made a statement that existing facilities are sufficient ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Director-General of the Indian Medical Service, the Public Health Commissioner to the Government of India, the Deputy Director-General of the Indian Medical Service and others. (Laughter).

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Am I to understand that Government disown the opinion expressed by Lieut.-Colonel Owen A. R. Berkely Hill who is supposed to be the chief expert on the subject of mental diseases in this country ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India assume no responsibility for the opinions of this expert.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : May I ask whether this expert is not in their employ and whether he is not in charge of the biggest mental hospital in India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : He is a member of the Indian Medical Service, but he is not in the direct employ of the Government of India.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION IN AJMER-MERWARA.

347. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are the Government aware that no agricultural college exists in Ajmer-Merwara to impart education in agriculture to students in that province ?

(b) Are Government also aware that the rules for admission of students not domiciled in the United Provinces to the Agricultural College, Cawnpore, which is the nearest institution to which students from Ajmer-Merwara desiring agricultural education, can go, provide that in the case of such students, " a fee of Rs. 1,500 per annum, for the two or four years course, will be charged per student to the Local Government " ?

(c) Will Government state if they are willing to provide this fee of Rs. 1,500 per annum for selected students from Ajmer-Merwara seeking admission to the Cawnpore Agricultural College ?

(d) If the reply to part (c) is in the negative, what arrangements do Government propose to make for the education of students from Ajmer-Merwara, who seek agricultural education ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) Government would be prepared to consider requests for the payment of the fee mentioned if students of exceptional promise are recommended by the local authorities.

(d) The question does not arise.

VEGETABLE OR " VANASPATI " GHEE.

348. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : With reference to Government's reply, to question No. 13 given on 1st February 1928 (vide Volume I, page 9 of Legislative Assembly debates) that the suggestion that the artificial or " Vanaspati " ghee be coloured in such a way that it cannot be mixed with or passed off as natural ghee without detection was being considered, will Government be pleased to state if Government have arrived at any decision in the matter ? If so, will Government state what that decision is and when Government propose to give effect to it ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The suggestion, which was made by the Government of the Punjab, has been referred to the other Local Governments and their views are awaited.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government know that there is a great deal of import of vegetable ghee which is passed off as natural ghee in India ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I am unable to add to the answer I have already given.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : May I know when the Local Governments were addressed on this matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I could not say offhand from memory as to the date on which a circular was addressed to Local Governments, but I will inform the Honourable Member if he will remind me.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that great objection has been taken on the public platform and in the newspaper Press with regard to the passing off of vegetable ghee and other adulterated ghees as natural ghee, and do Government propose to put a stop to this practice for the benefit of the country ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government have seen a number of references in the public Press to the subject and I take it from the Honourable Member that the platform as well as the Press are fully acquainted with it. As regards the latter part of his question, I think that in view of the fact that we have consulted Local Governments the Honourable Member will agree that it would be less than courteous to them if the Government of India were to make up their minds without waiting for their replies.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE PAY AND PROSPECTS OF TEACHERS IN GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

349. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Have Government taken any action to improve the pay and prospects of teachers in Government Schools in Ajmer-Merwara, since question No. 878 on the subject was asked on 12th March 1927 ?

(b) What are the present rates of pay of teachers in Government Schools in Ajmer-Merwara and what are the rates for the same class of teachers in the (i) United Provinces and (ii) the Punjab ?

(c) Is it a fact that teachers in Ajmer-Merwara work the curricula prescribed by the United Provinces Education Department but get very much lower rates of pay than the teachers in the United Provinces ?

(d) Has the attention of the Local Government and the educational authorities of Ajmer-Merwara been drawn to the reply to my speech during budget discussion given by the Honourable the Finance Member of the Government of India on 4th March, 1927, when he gave the assurance that I had his special sympathy when I laid stress upon the superior importance of good teaching even over good accommodation in which the teaching was given ?

(e) Will Government state when steps will be taken to give the same rates of pay to the teachers in Ajmer-Merwara as are given to teachers in the United Provinces so as to secure a more suitable and qualified class of teachers ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (e). A scheme for the revision of pay of teachers in Ajmer-Merwara is under consideration.

(b) A statement giving the information available is laid on the table.

(c) The curricula adopted for schools in Ajmer-Merwara closely follow those for schools in the United Provinces.

(d) No, but Government do not doubt that the Honourable Member's speech has been read by the authorities concerned with the interest and attention that it deserves.

Statement showing the rates of pay of teachers in the Provincial and Subordinate Educational Services in the United Provinces, Punjab and Ajmer-Merwara.

Province.	Rates of pay of the Provincial Educational Service.	Rates of pay of the Subordinate Educational Service.
	Rs.
United Provinces.. ..	250—25—675 with selection grade at Rs. 700—50—800.	Ranging from Rs. 50—150 to Rs. 200—25—450.
Punjab	250—25—500/25—600 with selection grade at Rs. 650—30—800.	Ranging from Rs. 35—3—50 to Rs. 200—10—250.
Ajmer-Merwara	200—20—500 and Rs. 350—25—650.	Grades ranging from Rs. 25 to 275.

INSPECTION OF EUROPEAN SCHOOLS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

350. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (1) With reference to paragraph 147 of the Report on the Administration of Ajmer-Merwara for 1926-27 dealing with European education, will Government please state :

(a) the number and type of European schools under the supervision of the Principal of the Ajmer Government College ; and

(b) the number of pupils, boys and girls, in these schools classified as below :

(i) European,

(ii) Anglo-Indian,

(iii) Indian Christians,

(iv) non-Christians ?

(2) Will Government please give the total annual expenditure on inspection of these schools situated in Ajmer-Merwara and within the R. M. R. jurisdiction outside Ajmer-Merwara and give reasons why this extra expenditure is being incurred where there is a whole time Provincial Service Education Officer in Ajmer, viz., the Assistant Superintendent of Education ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : A statement giving the information required is being laid on the table of the House.

Statement regarding the inspection of European Schools in Ajmer-Merwara.

(1) (a) One high school and four primary schools for boys and one high school and two primary schools for girls.

(b) The enrolment on the 31st March 1927 was 654 out of whom 591 were Europeans or Anglo-Indians. No further details are available. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to statement table No. 54-European Education accompanying the Administration Report to which he has referred.

(2) Rs. 1,020.

This expenditure is incurred on the inspection of European schools since it is desirable to have a European or Anglo-Indian to inspect such schools, the Superintendent of Education not having time to do so.

THE NEW VICTORIA HOSPITAL, AJMER.

351. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that a new and more up-to-date hospital called the New Victoria Hospital has recently been built at Ajmer to take the place of the old Government hospital and that the Civil Surgeon, Colonel J. W. Watson, to whose efforts the new hospital owes its existence and who is doing all he can to maintain it in an efficient manner is greatly handicapped by inefficient financial support from Government ?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article published on page 1 of the Arya Martand of Ajmer, dated the 2nd of August 1928, describing the difficulties and inconvenience suffered by the public seeking medical aid in the new hospital owing to lack fo sufficient accommodation for indoor patients and inadequacy of the staff of medical attendants ?

(c) Are Government aware that collections for the building and the equipment of the Victoria Hospital, Ajmer, amount to nearly four lakhs and that Government have contributed only one lakh of rupees ?

(d) Do Government propose to take action on the request of the public to extend accommodation for indoor patients, strengthen the staff and build quarters for them and take over the entire maintenance of the hospital ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes. The financial position of the hospital is being examined by the Local Administration and proposals are expected shortly.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) The question will be considered on receipt of the proposals.

RETRENCHMENT OF THE POST OF ASSISTANT COLLECTOR OF STAMPS IN THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

352. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour Department be pleased to say whether it is a fact that owing to the transfer of the Stamp Branch from the administrative control of the Controller of Printing and Stationery, the post of the Assistant Controller of the Stationery Office is under retrenchment ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Assistant Controller of that Office had to deal with all cases relating to Stamp Department as well as a large portion of the cases relating to Stationery Department ?

(c) Is it a fact that the work of the Central Stationery Office has increased due to the arrangement recently made for the supply of stationery to Railways ?

(d) If the answer to (c) above be in the affirmative will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a proposal was submitted to Government for the creation of a gazetted officer's post in the Stationery Office as the Additional Assistant Controller ?

(e) If the answer to (d) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to say whether Government contemplate the creation of an officer's post in the Central Stationery Office is necessary in view of the fact that the present Assistant Controller has been relieved of the work of the Stamp Department and is free thereby to take up the increased work of the Stationery Department ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes. The post of Assistant Controller of Stamps in the Central Stationery Office was retrenched with effect from the 1st July 1928.

(b), (c) and (d). Yes.

(e) The matter is under consideration.

SUPERINTENDENT IN THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

353. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour Department be pleased to say whether the post of Superintendent was in existence when the headquarters of the Controller of Printing, Stationery and Stamps were in Calcutta ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Superintendent had all along to deal with all important cases of the three departments of Printing, Stationery and Stamps, till the headquarters of the Controller were transferred to Delhi ?

(c) Is it a fact that on the transfer of the headquarters of the Controller to Delhi the Superintendent had not to deal with any case relating to the Printing Department ?

(d) Is it a fact that on the transfer of the Stamp Department to Nasik the Superintendent has not to deal with any case relating to the Stamp Department ?

(e) Is it a fact that the transfer of the Printing and the Stamp Departments considerably reduced the volume of duties of the Superintendent of the Stationery Office ?

(f) Is it a fact that each section and branch of the Central Stationery Office has a head assistant who supervises the work of the section or branch under him and submits cases direct to the Assistant Controller or to the Deputy Controller of that office and is primarily responsible for the work of the section or the branch under him ?

(g) If the answer to questions (c), (d), (e) and (f) above be in the affirmative, has the Honourable Member ascertained by facts and figures that the post of Superintendent of the Stationery Office is necessary ?

INCREMENT REGISTERS OF THE EMPLOYEES OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

354. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour Department be pleased to put up the increment registers of the employees of the Central Stationery Office during the months of January and February of each of the years 1926, 1927 and 1928 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the increment register of the month of February 1927 passed through the Assistant Controller ?

(c) If the answer to (b) above be in the affirmative, is it a fact that the Superintendent of the Stationery Office was then officiating as the Assistant Controller of that office ?

(d) Is it a fact that the increment registers of 1926 and 1928 did not pass through the Assistant Controller of the Stationery Office ?

(e) If the answer to (d) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to say why the reply to question 200 (b) at page 1063 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume I, No. 22 of 1928, was in the negative ?

(f) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to say what departmental action he contemplates taking against the person or persons who furnished him with false information ?

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN CLERKS FROM THE STATIONERY BRANCH TO THE STAMP BRANCH IN THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

355. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Labour and Industries Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Babus Nando Dulal Chatterjee, Sachijiban Gossami and Ajitnarayan Chowdhuri were originally appointed in the Stationery Branch in the Central Stationery Office ?

(b) Is it a fact that the persons named in (a) above were transferred to the Stamp Branch prior to the 7th March 1928 ?

(c) If the answer to (b) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the circumstances under which the fact was not mentioned in the reply to question No. 196 (f) (ii) at page 1060 of the Legislative Assembly Debates, Volume I, No. 22 of 1928 ?

(d) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether the Superintendent of the Central Stationery Office is responsible for the concealment of this fact ?

(e) If the answer to (d) above be in the affirmative, what disciplinary action does the Honourable Member propose to take against him for furnishing a misstatement to this Assembly ?

(f) If the answer to (b) above be in the negative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to substantiate his answer by placing on the table the salary bills submitted monthly to the Accountant General, Central Revenues, during 1927 ?

LOSS INCURRED BY GOVERNMENT ON DETERIORATED STATIONERY.

356. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour Department be pleased to state :

(i) the cost of stationery articles purchased in England, and

(ii) the cost of stationery articles purchased in India, during 1922, 1924 and 1926 by the Deputy Controller of Stationery (i) with the concurrence or (ii) without the concurrence of the Controller of Printing and Stationery ?

(b) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the total value of the stationery articles which have been lying stocked in the Central Stationery Store, which are not fit for issue or which are not demanded by the Government offices any longer ?

(c) Will he be pleased to say (i) when and (ii) under whose orders these stationery articles were purchased ?

(d) Is it a fact that this stock since deteriorated through long storage and is not fit for issue ?

(e) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether any action was taken by the Controller of Printing and Stationery (Mr. E. E. Coombs, O.B.E.) to utilise these items of stationery to avoid loss to Government previous to their deterioration ?

(f) If the answer to (e) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the circumstances under which his action met with failure ?

(g) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state how he proposes to adjust this heavy loss to Government ?

(h) Is it a fact that this heavy loss was incurred by Government due to the negligence and want of supervision on the part of the Controller of Printing and Stationery ?

(i) Will he be pleased to state what action does he propose to take against the person or persons who are responsible for this heavy loss to Government ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 353, 354, 355 and 356 together. Inquiries are being made and the results will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

NUMBER OF BRANCHES OF THE IMPERIAL BANK IN THE PUNJAB, ETC.

357. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the following information :

(a) Number of branches of the Imperial Bank in the Punjab Province :

(b) Number of Hindu and Muslim employees in the superior and clerical staff respectively in each branch of the Imperial Bank : and (c) Names of branches of the Imperial Bank in the Punjab, where there are either no Muhammadan clerks or Muhammadan officers ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 18 on the 30th June 1928.

(b) and (c). The Government have no information and they are not in a position to secure it as the Imperial Bank of India is not a Government institution.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUHAMMADANS IN BRANCHES OF THE IMPERIAL BANK IN THE PUNJAB.

358. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : Is it a fact that there is only one Muslim clerk in the staff of the Imperial Bank branch at Multan (Punjab) ? If so, will the Government be pleased to give the total number of clerks in that branch classwise, and state on what principle such appointments in the various branches of the Imperial Bank are made that the Muhammadan element is reduced to such an extent ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Government have no information and, as just explained, are not in a position to secure it.

NUMBER OF CASES OF EMBEZZLEMENT DISCOVERED BY THE LOCAL FUND AUDIT DEPARTMENT IN THE PUNJAB AND THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

359. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total number of embezzlement cases discovered by the Local Fund Audit Department in the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province during the last 5 years with names of auditors who detected these embezzlements :

(b) whether the auditors who detected the largest number of embezzlement cases during each year were given any reward to serve as an encouragement to them in the future : and

(c) what is the total strength of auditors (junior and senior) in the Local Funds (Accounts) Audit Department of the Punjab and how many of them are residents of the Multan Division ?

RECRUITMENT TO THE LOCAL FUND AUDIT DEPARTMENT IN THE PUNJAB.

360. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : Is it a fact that while recruiting new hands in the Local Fund Audit Department of the Punjab no regard is made to recruit men from every quarter of the Province ? If not, will the Government please say how many hands were recruited during the last five years and whether any of them belonged to Multan, Muzaffergarh and Dera Gazi Khan Districts respectively ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I propose to reply to questions Nos. 359 and 360 together.

The Government of India have no information. Local fund audit is a provincial subject and the Accountant General works in connection with it as an agent of the Government of the Punjab.

OPENING OF A BOOKING OFFICE IN MULTAN CITY.

361. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that a booking office was proposed by the railway authorities to be opened in the City of Multan (Punjab) and the delay in opening it is causing great hardship to the public ?

(b) Do Government propose to issue orders to the Divisional Transportation Officer, Multan, in view of the inconvenience to the public of Multan, to open the booking office without any further delay ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government understand that it is proposed to open a booking office in Multan City when a building in a suitable locality can be obtained.

SCHEME FOR A PROVINCIAL HOSPITAL INITIATED BY COLONEL BRIERLEY, CHIEF MEDICAL OFFICER OF THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

362. Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Are Government aware of a scheme for a Provincial Hospital initiated by Colonel Brierley, Chief Medical Officer of the North-West Frontier Province ?

(b) If so, how far has the same been completed and how much of it is yet incomplete ?

(c) So far what donations, if any, have been made for the scheme by the people and the Municipalities of the Province and the Government of India ?

(d) What amount has been so far spent on the buildings and what amount is still required for the completion of the scheme ?

(e) What grant, if any, has been made by the Local Government and the Government of India towards the completion of the building scheme during the last year ?

(f) What grant, if any, do Government propose to make in the next year's Budget ?

(g) What is the estimated annual amount required for the maintenance of the Provincial Hospital ?

(h) What portions of it are contributed annually by the Provincial Municipalities, the Provincial Government and the Government of India ?

(i) Do the Government of India propose to make a fresh donation towards the completion of the buildings and also increase their yearly grant to make up a substantial portion of the deficit in the maintenance charges ?

(j) Are Government aware of the fact that this hospital is greatly taken advantage of by the trans-frontier border tribes and serves as a great humanising institution ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) and (d). The total cost of the building scheme is Rs. 8 lakhs, of which work to the extent of Rs. 5,64,000 has been completed.

(c) and (e). The grants up to date are—

	Rs.
Peshawar Municipality	3,10,000
Central Revenues	2,50,000
Public subscriptions	1,31,646
Lord and Lady Reading	50,000
	7,41,646

(f) and (i). Are under consideration.

(g) and (h). Rs. 63,000, of which the Peshawar Municipality pay Rs. 43,000 while Government propose to pay the rest. Maintenance charges will be considerably more when the scheme is completed.

(j) Fully aware.

ADMISSION OF INDIAN CADETS TO THE INDIAN CORPS OF SIGNALS AND THE ROYAL TANK CORPS.

363. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are Government aware that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief stated in this House on the 8th March, 1928, that Indian cadets trained at Woolwich would be "divided between Artillery, Engineers, and possibly Signals"? Has it been decided since then to admit Indian cadets to the Indian Corps of Signals ?

(b) Will Indian cadets be eligible for admission to the Royal Tank Corps ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer to both questions is in the affirmative, except that there is at present no such thing as the Indian Corps of Signals. It has been decided, however, that if Indian cadets from Woolwich elect for service in Signals, an Indian Signal Unit will be raised.

(b) No, Sir, the Royal Tank Corps is a corps of the British Service.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : If it has been decided that an Artillery unit and an Air Force unit should be formed here, why should not an Indian Tank Corps also be formed here ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It is perfectly true that it has been decided to form Indian Artillery, Engineer, Signals, and Air Force units, but it has not yet been decided to form an Indian Tank Corps unit.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is that matter still under correspondence between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : It is under consideration, but I do not think any correspondence has yet taken place.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it still under the consideration of the Government of India themselves ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes. It is under consideration. It will always remain under consideration by the Government of India.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are the Government of India considering the matter in order to represent it at an early date to His Majesty's Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I cannot disclose the precise intentions of the Government of India in this matter at the moment, but, of course, the consideration of the formation of an Indian Tank Corps unit is a thing which has always been present.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I beg to enquire for how long it has been under the consideration of the Government of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I could not say definitely, but the question of Indianising the Army has been under consideration for a very long time, and I should imagine the question of having an Indianised Tank Corps has been under consideration ever since there was a British Tank Corps.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether the matter is being considered in connection with the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The matter has been considered in connection with the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee and no doubt, as I have said, it will remain under consideration ; but with the formation of these other new Indianised units that I have mentioned, it is probable that Government will have enough on their hands, when they get the officers.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are we to understand that His Majesty's Government has for the present turned down the proposal of admitting Indians to the Royal Tank Corps or forming a separate unit in connection with the Indian Army ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Am I then to understand that the matter was not represented to His Majesty's Government in connection with the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask why that was not done when the Indian Sandhurst Committee definitely recommended that there should in future be no racial discrimination in regard to the admission of Indians as officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member has misunderstood me. His question was, " Am I to understand that the matter was not represented to His Majesty's Government ? ". I said, No, Sir, that he was not so to understand.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Has His Majesty's Government turned 12 NOON. down the proposal of the Government of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member has already asked me that question.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : How is it that, although the Government of India have made representations to His Majesty's Government and their proposal has not been given effect to, it is then claimed that His Majesty's Government have not turned down the proposal ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The matter is still under consideration, as I have already told the Honourable Member.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Has the matter been under consideration for the last seven or eight years ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The whole question has been under consideration for the last seven years. A decision has been reached on the other matters, but in regard to the Tank Corps no decision has yet been reached.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : What is the delay due to ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I have already stated, I cannot disclose that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Honourable Member give any special reason for not dealing with this matter when other matters have been dealt with ?

Mr. G. M Young : I said that a decision has not been reached. I did not say that the matter had not been dealt with.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Has the decision of the Government of India not yet reached His Majesty's Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I said a decision on the matter had not yet been reached.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have the proposals of the Government of India reached His Majesty's Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No specific proposals have reached His Majesty's Government lately.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Were any proposals made in connection with the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee in this particular matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is asking me definitely whether the Government of India have proposed the raising of an Indian Tank Corps unit. That is a matter which I cannot give full information about. All I can say is that this matter is under consideration.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : I do not want full information. I want to know whether any proposal on this subject has been sent up by the Government of India to His Majesty's Government with reference to the Indian Sandhurst Committee's Report.

Mr. G. M. Young : Government are unable to disclose the fact that they have made or not made a specific recommendation to the Secretary of State.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it not a fact that His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief stated in this House that the proposals made by the Government of India in connection with the Indian Sandhurst Committee's Report were before His Majesty's Government ? If so, what is the objection to the Honourable Member's answering my question now ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am not certain even now what my Honourable friend's question is. I was referring to the general proposals in regard to the Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee, not to any specific proposal in regard to the Tank Corps.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : There is only one proposal remaining. In what other form can the Honourable Member be asked to give information on this particular point ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That particular point remains under consideration. A decision has been reached in regard to all the others.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is that particular point under the consideration of the Government of India or under that of His Majesty's Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already answered the Honourable Member that I cannot tell him whether a specific recommendation has been made to His Majesty's Government or not.

THE INDIAN INSURANCE COMPANIES BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Life Assurance Companies Act, 1912, for certain purposes, and to provide for the collection of statistical information in respect of insurance business other than life assurance business.

THE PUBLIC SAFETY (REMOVAL FROM INDIA) BILL.

(The Honourable the President then called upon the Honourable Mr. Crerar to move his motion. The Honourable Mr. Crerar rose in his seat, when Pandit Motilal Nehru rose on a point of order.)

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to a point of order. The point which I beg to submit for your consideration, is that this Legislature has no power to pass the law which is embodied in the Bill before the House. The motion is to provide for the removal from British India in certain cases of persons not being Indian British subjects or subjects of States in India I submit that this Legislature is positively barred under the law from passing any such law, and that being the case I submit that the motion cannot be allowed.

What does the Bill aim at ? The Bill aims at the exclusion of His Majesty's British subjects, European British subjects, without any trial and without any conviction, from any part of British India, on the mere declaration of the Governor General that the individual concerned is a person to whom the Bill applies. I submit that under section 65 of the Government of India Act, sub-section (2), last paragraph, no such law can be passed by this Legislature. That sub-section runs thus :

" Provided that the (Indian Legislature) has not, unless expressly so authorised by Act of Parliament, power to make any law repealing or affecting—....."

I leave out the immaterial passages :

" and has not power to make any law affecting the authority of Parliament or any part of the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom, or affecting the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of British India."

Well, Sir, as is well known, every Englishman is born with the constitutional protection which has been accorded to him by various charters, which are matters of history. The continuance of those rights which are given by those charters form the consideration of the allegiance of the British subject.

Mr. President : Where does the Honourable Member find that ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am prepared with the authorities to substantiate that, but I thought it was very evident. I will refer you to page 302 of Volume I of Halsbury's " Laws of England ", note (x) :

" Ligeance is the mutual bond and obligation between the king and his subjects whereby subjects are called his liege subjects because they are bound to obey and serve him."

Therefore it is a mutual obligation. From that I think it has been held by writers on constitutional law that protection and allegiance are interdependent, and that one is the foundation for the other. It will appear to you, Sir, and to the House, that no Englishman can be forced to give allegiance unless the protection of the fundamental rights guaranteed to him by the various charters of liberty is accorded to him.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member's point is that protection is the price for allegiance ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : So it is. If the House will permit me to point out, there are, as the House is aware, four great charters of English liberty, the Magna Charta, the Petition of Rights, the Bill of Rights and the Settlement Act. Now the provisions of these are very similar, those of the earlier Acts having practically been repeated in the later Acts. Now confining ourselves in the first place to the Magna Charta, you will find that the rule is laid down in section 39 :

" No free man shall be taken or imprisoned or dissezed, or outlawed, or exiled, or anyways destroyed ; nor will we go upon him, nor will we send upon him, unless by the lawful judgment of his peers, or by the law of the land."

Then section 40 runs :

" To none will we sell, to none will we deny or delay, right or justice."

That is part of the contract made by the King. The King grants these rights. Now what happens if these rights are not secured to the subject ? Article 61 of the same Magna Charta says in effect that if these rights are not secured to the subject, the subject shall have the constitutional right of rebellion. I will quote from " English Constitutional History " by Taswell-Langmead (page 121) :

" The question, how should the compact between the king and his people be enforced, was at once difficult and pressing. The king was left in possession of the regal power and dignity : experience had shown the ease with which former sovereigns had broken their most solemn written engagements ; and the insincerity of John was notorious. At this period there were no effective constitutional checks against the king ; and so a rude device was hit upon, in its nature really impracticable, by which John granted, in effect, to all his subjects a qualified liberty of rebellion. The whole baronage were to elect a Council of twenty-five barons charged to take care with all their might that the provisions of the Charter were carried into effect. If the king or any of his officers should violate the Charter in the smallest particular, these barons, or four of their number, were to complain to the king, or in his absence to the justiciar, and demand instant redress. If no redress be given within forty days, the said five-and-twenty barons, together with the commonalty of the whole land shall distrain and distress us in all possible ways, by seizing our castles, lands, possessions, and in any other manner they can, till the grievance is redressed according to their pleasure, saving harmless our own person and the persons of our queen and children ; and when it is redressed they shall obey us as before."

On the one hand there are these rights, and on the other hand they are secured by another right which is tantamount to a right of rebellion. So I submit that the allegiance of every British subject depends under the constitution of England upon protection ; and if any law is proposed in India which affects that allegiance, the Indian Legislature has no right whatever to pass it.

Mr. President : Is it the contention of the Honourable Member that the House of Commons has no power to make such a law ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : No. Parliament is supreme. Parliament can repeal the Magna Charta itself and the other Charters I have mentioned ; but this is a subordinate Legislature deriving its authority from Parliament. Parliament has chosen to restrict the law-making power of this House—of both Houses of the Indian Legislature. One of the most important restrictions, one that every Englishman ought to value, is that contained in section 65 of the Government of India Act I have just laid

Mr. President : I quite understand that it is not a matter for the vote of the House.

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das : I would go further and challenge my friend to show a single instance in any Legislature, either of this country or of the Colonies or at home, where it has been held—where the Speaker has disallowed the introduction of legislation on the ground that the House had no jurisdiction to pass it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Was such a thing attempted before ?

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das : The next thing I want to say is that I wish I had had a little time to look up this matter. It has come as a surprise. But I know this, that this very point about allegiance was taken by the late Mr. C. R. Das in the High Court of Calcutta before Mr. Justice Jenkins. I forget the exact point but it was about the right of trial by jury which has been denied in certain repressive legislation. His point was that the right of trial by jury under the Magna Charta was bound up with the right of allegiance, and he argued exactly the same point, but it was entirely disallowed by the High Court. I am sorry I am not in a position at the moment to refer you to that particular case. It is a reported case and is a case which created a great sensation at the time. I am unable to recall it exactly.

Mr. President : Do Government want time ?

The Honourable Mr. S. R. Das : No, we do not want time. We do complain that notice of this objection was not given to us, so that we might be in a position to give you the exact authority on this point. I submit that there is nothing in my friend's point. First of all it is not a point of order. Secondly, even if it is a point of order, there is nothing in the arguments of my friend that this Legislature has no jurisdiction to pass this law. The particular section of the Government of India Act which my friend has referred to has been in existence ever since a Legislature was brought into existence in this country, and it has never been suggested that either Bengal Regulation III or the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, which was passed only the other day, were ultra vires of this Legislature because they conflicted with the right of allegiance.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I very reluctantly intervene in this debate and my reasons are two-fold. The Honourable the Law Member has stated that it is not for this House and yourself to decide whether any Bill of the Indian Legislature is or is not ultra vires, and that if it is ultra vires that is a matter for adjudication by the Courts. Now, Sir, I happened to be the author of a Bill known as the Supreme Court Bill, and I sought leave to introduce it in this House. The Government opposed it on the ground that it was ultra vires of the Indian Legislature to establish a Supreme Court in India, and the question was referred to the President, Sir Frederick Whyte. I refused to abide by the decision of the Government, and I claimed the right to move my Bill unless I was overruled by the President. The President overruled me and held that my Bill was ultra vires of the Indian Legislature. That is the answer to the Honourable the Law Member.

Mr. President : What year was that ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I think it was 1922 or 1923. I think any of the old Members here, Mr. K. Ahmed or Mr. Neogy, will bear me out.

There was a discussion on the floor of the House. I said it was the duty of the President to decide and I would not take any decision from the Executive Government whether any Bill was or was not ultra vires of the Indian Legislature. I therefore venture to submit that it is your duty to decide whether any Bill moved by either side of the House is or is not ultra vires of the Indian Legislature.

Having said so, Sir, I feel constrained to offer a few remarks upon the objection raised by the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru. The powers of the Indian Legislature are defined and limited by section 65 of the Government of India Act, and my Honourable and learned friend is perfectly right in referring to section 65 (2) of that Act. Now, if you will kindly look at that Act, Sir, you will immediately find these facts, that the Indian Legislature has no power to make any law—I am leaving out the unnecessary words—affecting the unwritten law or constitution of the United Kingdom whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person. Now, Sir, the first question I wish to ask of the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition is this. Where is there any law, unwritten law or constitution of the United Kingdom which entitles a European British subject to reside in India ? That is a short question. If he has got the inherent right to reside in India, he has equally the inherent right of residing in all parts of the British Empire, and as the unwritten constitution of England makes no distinction between British subjects, Europeans or Indians or Colonials, a fortiori it follows that if that were the law an Indian could not be excluded from residing in South Africa, in Canada and in Australia. If the allegiance of a British subject were conditioned and dependent upon the protection as understood in the terms of his right to reside in any part of the British Empire, I wish to ask what becomes of the laws, the emigration laws, that have been made, excluding British people, undesirable British people, paupers and others, European British subjects, from entering Canada, Australia and the Union of South Africa, and what becomes of the laws which exclude Indians from all parts of the Colonial British Empire ? Therefore, I submit the unwritten laws could not and were not intended—and indeed there is nothing explicit or implicit in any of the laws to which my friend had referred, the Magna Charta included—to extend to Englishmen and for the matter of that a British subject, European or Indian, the right to enter and stay in any part of the British Empire. And this being the case, no such limitation can be spelt into the proviso on the legislative power of the Assembly. The question is a general one. Has the British subject the inherent right of living in any part of the British Empire ? That is a short question and unless you are prepared, Sir, to rule that it is the inherent right of every British subject, European or Indian, to reside anywhere he likes in the British Empire and that right flows from his allegiance to the British Crown, I am afraid the Honourable Pandit Motilal's objection seems to be on that point unsound. I regret.....

Mr. President : Has the Honourable Member seen the Dominion Acts on the subject ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I have not seen them just now, but I made a study of that subject, and I think I have referred in one of my published books to this very question.

Mr. President : Does any provision in any of the Dominion laws similar to the one that we are considering, namely, section 65, exist ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : The question you put Mr. President is whether in any similar provision to the provision contained in this Bill.....

Mr. President : That is not the question. The question I put to the Honourable Member was whether a provision similar to section 65, which prevents the Indian Legislature from enacting any law which affects the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain where on may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom, exists in any of the Colonial laws.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, my argument is that there is no law of the United Kingdom regarding residence to be safeguarded by the proviso. I speak subject to correction, but as far as my memory serves me, I believe some such provision occurred in the South African Constitution before its union and it also occurred in the Commonwealth Act of Australia before 1900. I think, and it also occurred in the old Canadian Constitution of 1870 or thereabouts. What we have got here is copied from all these old Colonial Statutes, and if reference is made by you, Sir, you will find similar provisions occur there also ; and it is in pursuance of this provision that the question was raised by the Indians in South Africa when they were ordered to clear out of that country that they have an inherent right and the Supreme Court of South Africa held—I do not know whether anybody has got the cases decided by the Supreme Court of South Africa—the Supreme Court of South Africa held that the Colonial Government had an absolute right of excluding any person, British or not, and consequently the Indians could not assert their inherent right of residence in South Africa ; and it is in consequence of that, if you remember, Sir, that the controversy between India and South Africa became acute, which has since been settled by negotiation.

Mr. President : I understand that no other Honourable Member wishes to throw any light on this difficult and intricate question.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I had no notion I should have to deal with this alleged point of order forthwith.

Mr. President : As the Government do not want any time, what has the Chair to do ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : In view of the legal point involved, in the absence of any notice of such a point being raised as a point of order, I submit for your consideration whether it would not be desirable that the debate should be adjourned to 3 O'clock, in order that this point may be considered.

Mr. President : The question raised by the Leader of the Opposition is one of great constitutional importance. It is no doubt true that the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition has not given notice either to the Chair or to the Government. I am not prepared to say that he is bound to give such notice, but the fact remains that both the Chair and the Government are taken by surprise. The Government were not prepared to meet the arguments advanced by the Leader of the Opposition who has cited a large number of authorities, and it is only fair that both the Government and the Chair should have time to consider this great [illegible]ession of the Leader of the House, because that would give me only an hour or so at the outside, and I frankly confess it is not possible for me within that short time to deal adequately with the question that has been raised. But the course that I propose to adopt is this. I propose to allow the discussion of the Bill to proceed. Section 65 merely says that this Legislature has not the power to make any laws. Before the final stage of the Bill is reached it is open to the Chair, if on examination it is found that it has the power, to intervene and say that this last motion, namely, that the Bill be passed, shall not be made. Therefore, the course I propose to adopt is at present to go on with the motion of Mr. Crerar with the amendments that may be moved in this House and thus get time for myself and also time for Government to consider this question raised by the Leader of the Opposition. It may be necessary, and I think it will be necessary, for me to hear once again both the Opposition and the Government on the floor of this House, on this important question after they have made full preparations to argue the case. The question being of the greatest importance, I do not wish to give my judgment or decision at 3 O'clock to-day or to-morrow or even the day after. I propose to allow the motion for consideration to be moved by the Honourable Mr. Crerar and reserve my judgment on this question. It may be, as I have already said, [illegible] consultation with the Leader of the Opposition and the [illegible] House think of asking Honourable Members to argue the case once again before me on the floor of this House.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malavya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : There will be a tremendous waste of time if you should later on come to the conclusion that this House has not the power to proceed with the Bill.

Mr. President : That is inevitable. The Government not only attach great importance to this Bill but they consider it very urgent, and they do not wish that the progress of this Bill should in any way be held up. That is the position of the Government as I understand it, and I do not wish to come in the way of the Government in this matter. I allow the Government to go on with the Bill and if at a later stage, after studying the authorities and after hearing the parties, if necessary, I find that this Legislature has no power, I will not allow the Honourable the Home Member to make the last motion, namely, that the Bill be passed.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malavya : May I submit, Sir, that the matter may be allowed to stand over till to-morrow morning which will give you and the other side sufficient time to consider the point of order. If, on the other hand, we proceed with the Bill now and spend our time [illegible]tions and if to-morrow or the day after you come to the conclusion Hon[illegible] House cannot deal with the Bill as it stands, it will be impossible [illegible] prejudice[illegible]sate the Members of this House for the loss of time that they [illegible] them. The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will explain in each case what I quote. I take the first document. It is evidence which was produced in the High Court of Allahabad, in the revolutionary and conspiracy case of 1924. This is an extract from the propagandist manifesto issued by the Communist Party in India.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is aware that he will have to place these documents and papers on the table of the House if he wishes to refer to them ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am quite prepared, Sir, to place these documents on the table of the House.

"Mass action thus began, will develop into organised agrarian strikes, into food riots, the plunder of corn-stocks and assaults upon large estates with the idea of confiscation. The down-trodden peasantry must be made conscious of their right to live like human beings and our propaganda should be aimed at making them understand that they should conquer this right by military action. Such action properly organized on a large scale will arouse them from their age long mental and spiritual slavery and make them conscious of their own right. Reactionary passivism must be repudiated. What burst out spontaneously at Gorakhpur, Rae Bareli, Chauri Chaura, Malabar, Central India and what is going on in the Punjab must be developed by every possible means.

"Peasant revolts should spread like wild fire from one end of the country to the other. We must formulate our program to correspond to the economic interests of the masses, then go forward boldly with that program till we reach our goal."

I now propose to read some extracts—and I am prepared to lay the document—from a draft programme of the Communist International, which was recently laid before the Annual Congress of the Communist International which met in July this year. I understand that this draft programme has since been approved in principle.

"The conquest of power by the proletariat is not the peaceful 'conquest' of the existing bourgeois State machine by means of a parliamentary majority. The conquest of power by the proletariat is the violent overthrow of bourgeois power, the destruction of the capitalist State apparatus (bourgeois armies, police, bureaucratic hierarchy, courts, parliament, etc.) and its replacement by a new organ of proletarian power, primarily as a weapon for the suppression of exploiters.

The Soviet State presupposes the complete disarming of the bourgeoisie and the concentration of arms in the hands of the proletariat: it is the State of the armed proletariat. The organisation of the armed forces is carried out on the basis of the class principle, which corresponds to the whole system of the proletarian dictatorship and guarantees the role of leadership to the industrial proletariat. This organisation rests on revolutionary discipline, but at the same time provides for the maintenance of close and constant contact between the members of the Red Army and Navy and the masses of the toilers, and for their participation in the administration of the country and in the work of building up Socialism.

The victorious proletariat utilises the conquest of power as a lever of economic revolution, i.e., the revolutionary transformation of the property relationship of capitalism into relationships of the socialist method of production. The starting point of this great economic revolution is the expropriation of the landlords and capitalists, i.e., the conversion of the monopolised property of the bourgeoisie into the property of a proletarian State."

The other items included in this programme are the overthrow of the rule of the feudal rulers, the nationalisation of large enterprises, the confiscation of landlord, church and monasterial lands and nationalisation of all the lands.

"When the revolutionary tide is flowing, when the dominant classes are disorganised, the masses are in a state of revolutionary ferment, the intermediary strata are inclining towards the proletariat, and the masses are prepared for action and for sacrifice, the task of the Party of the proletariat is to lead the masses into the direct attack upon the bourgeois State.

This includes strikes, strikes combined with demonstrations, the combination of armed demonstrations and strikes, and finally the general strike conjointly with the armed uprising against the political power of the bourgeoisie. This struggle must be subjected to the rules of military art: it must be conducted according to a plan of war and in the form of a military offensive."

Now, Sir, on that document I propose to read some extracts from another document which is an interesting commentary. This is a letter written by a gentleman commonly called M. N. Roy, copies of which have been laid in the Library of the House.....

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Are the Government aware that the authenticity of that letter has been denied, that Mr. M. N. Roy has dissociated himself from the authorship of that letter and that a telegram has reached India to the effect that the letter is a faked letter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I propose to deal with that. The Honourable Member has anticipated the point which I was about to make immediately. I understand that some doubts have been cast on the authenticity of this letter. I saw in a Reuter's telegram a statement—whether correct or not I cannot vouch for—that the British Communist Party had addressed a reproach to Mr. M. N. Roy to the effect that he had given ground to Government to take action by the introduction of compromising matter of this kind. The answer which the Communist Party is alleged to have received is that the letter was not written by M. N. Roy. Well, Sir, there may be some measure of literal accuracy, but not of truth, in that statement, for the letter in point of fact is for the most part typewritten. It is here. It is addressed on the outer cover " to be delivered personally to Muzaffar Ahmad, 21, European Asylum Lane, Calcutta." The words " to be delivered personally to " have been expunged and the cover bears the postmark of Aden, the 16th May. It has also an interesting covering letter. The letter itself is apparently one of a number of copies intended for circulation to the various committees of workers' and peasants' parties instituted in India. (An Honourable Member : " What is the date of the letter ? ") The covering letter is to the following effect :

" Dear Muzuffar,

Please give some kind of note to the bearer of this letter to you, so that he can carry it back so as to show that he has discharged his mission. If you have any talk with the bearer you might indicate your opinion as to his usefulness as a helper in our communications. It is very important to establish something in this connection."

Nor is that all.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May we know the date of that letter ?

1 P.M.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is dated the 15th February.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Is that letter signed by Mr. M. N. Roy ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There is a point of further significance which I wish to lay before the House quite frankly. The letter, as I have said, is mainly typed, but there are certain corrections. We have already now in our possession certain letters in the handwriting of M. N. Roy.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Is it signed by M. N. Roy ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : My point is this, that these authentications and corrections have been compared and identified with the manuscripts we possess.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

Now, Sir, as the letter has been laid in the Library of the House, I do not propose to quote very extensively from it. There are one or two passages which I think I should bring to the special notice of the House.

"With these considerations we do not share the illusion that the Communist Party can be organized in India legally. But as mentioned above, we are not in favour of self-liquidation. Fight for legal existence, but build the party illegally. Remain a legal body as long as possible, but build up a powerful underground organization. Preserve your legality as long as you can, but don't have it at the expense of activities essential for the growth of the party. The existence of the Communist Party should be known, every worker and peasant must know it, but don't emasculate the party with the banal and cowardly doctrine of bourgeois nationalism that all our activities are above board, we have nothing to hide. Every little act of a real Communist is a blow to Imperialism, and the Imperialist knows it; therefore, if the Communist does not act illegally he must pass his life in prison. There is no 'fair play', no gentlemanliness, in the revolutionary struggle. How to organise an illegal party? I am afraid that the failure to answer this question contributes to the dangerous legalist deviation. Political party is a comparatively new thing in India; and there prevails a rather faulty idea about it. An illegal organization is traditionally associated with terrorist conspiracy, bombs and revolvers. It is not understood how a party can be illegal and carry on political activities."

I emphasise that point because a marked feature of Roy's propaganda and of his manifestoes, which have reached us, is the insistence on the necessity of both legal and illegal activities in the Communist Party in India. Then he refers to the Workers' and Peasants' Party.

"Undoubtedly a party develops more quickly and wields a much greater influence, if it can function legally. Illegality is specially disadvantageous in India where the working class is largely illiterate, and therefore the propaganda must be carried on mainly orally..... Therefore we proposed the formation of the Workers' and Peasants' Party through which the Communist can function legally, through which agitation and propaganda can be carried on legally, and the workers and peasants can be organized to defend the interest of their class."

But he leaves no doubt on the point that his conception of the matter is that these legal organisations are merely the cloak and the means for a simultaneous policy along illegal lines. He speaks of the importance of the Party press. And this is a rather significant passage :—

"Our Party press, built up on this principle, applied in practice with the necessary international support will rapidly develop and be a powerful factor in the political life of the country."

"International support" presumably meant foreign subsidies. Well, Sir, I do not intend to weary the House by reading to any greater extent from that document, but I trust the Honourable Members will study it for themselves. One thing you will observe and that is, that the Communist propaganda deals with a certain amount of dexterity with the question of Nationalism which is not entirely an easy question for a convinced Communist to handle. But as their energies and activities are directed not only against organised society generally but also against the British power, it is natural that they should endeavour to find allies in the National movement. But no one can suppose, taking into account their other doctrines, that any form of Nationalism in India or elsewhere will profit by them. The fraud is too apparent. No Government and no organisation of society which does not comply with tenets and prescriptions of Communism would be exempt from its hostility. The attack is being specially directed upon India, and I contend, and I contend very strongly, that in this matter the interests of India and of Britain are identical.

Well, Sir, I have spoken on the doctrine and the tenets of Communism. I shall now say a few words upon its extension to India. I think that the history of it can most conveniently be dated from 1920, when the Communist International published a Thesis which expressly contemplated the direction of activities towards India and the East. In 1922, Mr. Roy directions of acitivies towards India and the East. In 1922, Mr. Roy naps of the Honourable Members present at the time of the Gaya Congress. Then came other manifestoes which were published in 1923. By this time a certain amount of activity was going on in the country. Government found it necessary to institute a prosecution. The prosecution took place in 1924 and the extract which I read was from the judgment passed in that case. It resulted in the conviction of 4 persons, who were all correspondents of Mr. Roy, for conspiracy to wage war against the King. The result of that prosecution was that Communist activities to a certain extent slackened and suspended themselves. But since 1926 there have been renewed activities, and a great deal of stimulus has been given to the movement in this country by the arrival of certain British Communists. I have already informed the House the other day of the arrival of the person who passes under the aliases of Allison and Campbell.

It was he who first started the formation of Workers' and Peasants' Parties in India in a really active form. After his incarceration and removal from India, another British Communist—in fact two others—came and those activities have been continuously carried on for the last year and a half to the very great detriment, as I believe, of the country.

Now, Sir, it will probably be alleged against this Bill that it is to the prejudice or detriment of labour activities and labour organisations in this country. I do not propose to deal at length with that, but I should ask the House to consider in their own minds whether fomenting of industrial disorder—and that undoubtedly is one of the objects of the activities of the Communists—whether this fomenting of industrial disorder, quite irrespective of any economic merits there may be in the dispute, is going to be of any value to labour, and whether, on the contrary, apart from the suffering and privations which are immediately caused, it is not ruinous to the cause of labour and ruinous to the prospects of the healthy development of labour organisations in this country on a sound basis. I observe that the British Trade Union Congress has recently passed by a very overwhelming vote a decision to purge English Trades Unionism of Communism (Hear, hear), and the effect of this measure.....

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated Labour Interests) : May I ask, Sir, whether in England they have passed an Act deporting Communists? (An Honourable Member : "Yes". Another Honourable Member "Aliens.")

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The British Trade Union Congress by a very large majority have decided that British Trades Unionism should be purged of Communism, and in so far as this Bill will assist that consummation in India I contend strongly that this would be to the benefit of the labour movement in India. (Hear, hear.) Now, Sir,.....

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Has a measure similar to this been introduced in the British Parliament?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Let me attempt to summarise briefly what all this means in its relation to the Indian social edifice. India

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

States are to be destroyed, religious endowments, whether of temple, mosque or church, are to be confiscated, religion itself has to go, landlords and landed proprietors should go, industry and trade in any capitalist form are to be abolished, the professions are to be submerged. In this House there is not, so far as I know, a single Member who would survive unless he consented to be submerged.

Now, Sir, I turn very briefly to the provisions of this Bill. I would ask the House to pay special attention to the fact that no Indian can possibly come within its danger. Its purposes are strictly limited, and as I say, no Indian subject can possibly come within its danger. It may be alleged that this will give further discretionary power to the Executive Government. I do not deny that that is the case. But I contend that the circumstances are such that discretionary power must be given to Government on whom lies the primary responsibility of dealing with this extremely difficult and dangerous situation. The question before the House then is, what is its attitude towards doctrines and activities which definitely aim at the complete subversion of Indian society as it now stands ?

The answer surely cannot be doubted. If the danger were in the form of open, undisguised direct action, I trust that the Government would be supported by the unanimous authority of this House. If the danger is insidious and subterranean, I submit that the answer ought to be equally in the affirmative.

Now, Sir, I do not propose to detain the House much longer. I do not know whether the existence of the grave dangers which I have pointed out, or their even graver potentialities, will be challenged. Such a challenge, I submit, could proceed only from a determination to ignore the plain and incontestable facts of the Communist propaganda, the aims and objects of which have been avowed and reiterated by its agents and instruments in the most unequivocal terms, or it must proceed from a failure to appreciate their significance. I do not know whether these plain and obvious facts will be challenged. But it may be said that there is no urgent necessity for any measure of this kind to deal with them. The view of Government on that point is simply this, that they cannot accept the responsibility of allowing the present state of affairs to continue unchecked even for a few months or a few weeks ; that they should be armed with these powers with the least possible delay, and that it would be inexcusable folly and dereliction of duty on their part to wait until mischief very hard to remedy had been wrought.

The fundamental question is this, whether the avowed objects and expedients of the Communist doctrine and activities are to be taken seriously or not. My contention is that they must be taken seriously and dealt with without delay. I do not think that any observer, even from the outside and regarding only the surface of things, will readily believe that the course of events, especially in the industrial world, during the last few months represents merely normal incidents and vicissitudes of industrial depression or trade disputes. Some of these troubles are no doubt economic in their origin. But the prolongation of strikes long after any party had anything to gain by their continuance is not normal. Train disasters accompanied by shocking fatalities and other violent sabotage are not normal incidents. But they are entirely in accordance with the tenets of the doctrine which I ask this House to condemn and to oppose. I have convincing evidence that a sinister and external influence has been and is at work. It is not within my power to expose in a public utterance the ramifications of its working of which I have knowledge, for the obvious reason that to do so would be to give valuable information to the enemy and to weaken and impede, or even defeat, our own defensive measures. I must ask the House to credit me when I say—speaking with a very heavy sense of my own responsibility in this matter—that we have not to deal with mere visionary and fantastic theories, the realisation of which postulates a complete destruction of the existing social order, but with a persistent and definite design to take the first and then the ultimate steps to put them and their postulates into operation. I do not think, Sir, that the responsibility of taking the necessary measures to deal with such attempts should be left to Government to sustain alone. It is a responsibility which every citizen should be prepared, so far as in him lies, to share. (An Honourable Member : " After Swaraj ".) It is a responsibility of which I now ask this House to take its part. (Applause.)

(After some time Mr. President rose in his place.)

Mr. President : The question that I have to put is.....

(At this stage Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta rose in his place.)

Mr. President : No Honourable Member rose in his place and therefore I began to put the question.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I thought, Sir, that the Chair was, as usual, first reading out the motion just moved by the Honourable the Home Member.

Mr. President : The House now stands adjourned till 2-30 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name. It runs as follows :

" That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

I shall not be long in trying to convince the Honourable the Home Member of the necessity of an amendment which he may consider to be a little dilatory, as I have come to learn from his speech that he is eager that this Bill should be passed as early as possible. But I think I shall be able to convince him that there is no necessity for any indecent haste in a matter like this. No doubt we have precedence for legislation being rushed through and passed in one sitting of the House. But I beg to submit that no case has been made out as yet for such indecent haste, and I hope that no case has been made out as yet for such indecent haste, and I hope with this enlarged Council that it will not be attempted to be carried through with such haste. What I ask for merely is circulation for eliciting public opinion thereon.

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

Sir, certain facts have been given to us about which we had no knowledge before we heard the Mover of this motion. I hope he will excuse us if we do not accept either his ipse dixit or the ex parte evidence that he has placed before us, without careful, sifting and consulting public opinion, in order to arrive at the truth or otherwise of all that has fallen from him. I mean no disrespect to him by saying so.

Sir, you will be pleased to see that though the Bill is a very short one containing seven sections only of which three or four deal with the procedure and such matters as " whereas " and so forth, it covers grounds embraced by at least a half of the Indian Penal Code. I hope I shall be able to convince the House of what I say that this is a comprehensive Bill that it ought not to be precipitated in the way in which it has been attempted to be done. It begins with " whereas it is expedient ". Wherein the expedieney lies we do not know, and for whom it is expedient I do not know. Certainly the Honourable the Home Member means that it is expedient for the safety and good government of India,—and in that I am at one with him (The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : " Hear, hear "), because we are as much interested in the good government of India as the Honourable the Home Member (Honourable Members : " Hear, hear "), if not more. The House will be pleased to see that in section 2, sub-section (1) we have the words " directly or indirectly ". I have a great objection to words like these ; unless we are assured that words like these are absolutely necessary, for such vague words may be interpreted in various ways according to the whims and caprices of the courts. Then the phrase occurs, " advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the Government established by law in British India ". Now that covers a whole chapter of the Indian Penal Code. Then the world at large is involved, in the words " abolition of all forms of law or organized Government whether in British India or elsewhere ". By the words " elsewhere ", we are not only asked to be patriotic but also philanthropic and that under compulsion, namely, we have a duty towards ourselves to discharge and we should see that there will be no revolution or any such thing not only in India, but we must go further : we must look to Soviet Russia, we must look to China, we must look to the trans-Atlantic countries. Sir, since the coming of Englishmen to India there has never been such philanthropy, I should say philanthropic legislation introduced in the Indian Legislature, in which Indians have been asked not only to guard their own interests but to guard the interests of the peoples of the world at large. Then come, Sir, the words " or the assassination of public officials ". There is a Chapter in the Indian Penal Code about assassination. Then the words occur, " or the promotion of enmity between different classes of His Majesty's subjects ". They also find a place in the Indian Penal Code. Then, " or the destruction of property or unlawful interference with the ownership of property ", which cover another Chapter of the Indian Penal Code. A very few of the sections of the Indian Penal Code have been omitted such as assault and defamation. It were better, Sir, if these sections also had found a place here. I am only trying to convince the House, of the all-comprehensive nature of this legislation though it has been couched in a very few sections, and I would ask the House that we should not pass this legislation in such indecent haste. Then in sub-section (b) of section 2, we have a bait thrown out to our capitalist magnates and to landholders. Only a few minutes ago, Sir, I had the honour of having the opinion of one of the biggest territorial magnates, from whom I learnt that all these statements about industrial and agrarian disputes are mere false pretences, and they are not aware of any menace from the so-called Communistic activities. Then occur the words " and other disputes of a like nature " with intent to subvert " organized government ". Subversion of organized government, that is the thing which is probably in the minds of the framers of this Bill. Then in sub-section (c) we have " is a member of "—mark the words—" is a member of or is associated with....." This is not only vague, but it can be stretched to such a length that any one living in India can be made to say that he is associated with it. The word " member " is not enough. It goes on, " or is associated with any society or organization, whether in British India or elsewhere, which advocates or encourages any such doctrine ". This then is really a fight against doctrines. The other sections deal with the method of removal, etc. Sir, with reference to such comprehensive curtailment of the liberties of the people of India, what are the reasons given in the Statement of Objects and Reasons ? " Evidence has accumulated....." With whom, we do not know. If we had been taken into confidence, certainly we would have given our heartiest support to any desire on the part of the Honourable the Home Member to protect our lives and property in our own country. Sir, I remember that just a day or two after the Bill was published in the Gazette of India I had a conversation with—I am not disclosing any secret I hope—the Director of Information. He inquired of me what would be our attitude. I clearly told him that we had no facts before us to justify our sanctioning such legislation. If I remember aright, I was told that he would see that we get such information as was possible. But, Sir, up till now we have not received any such information.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What about those quoted by the Home Member ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : " Evidence has accumulated recently of the subversive intentions and activities of the Communist International generally....." Here, Sir, before I go any further I must admit before this House that I know very little or nothing—though I have been in public life for more than a quarter of a century—I know little or nothing about this Communist movement about which we hear so much in Europe. But in India, Sir, I have travelled through the length and breadth of this country several times ; I have never met a Communist. At any rate no Communist have ever come to me and I do not really know whether their intentions are like those which are set out here, namely, " the subversive intentions and activities of the Communist International generally, and in particular of the efforts it is directing against India ". What are the efforts ? Now, Sir, we had some illuminating news from the Honourable the Home Member. But those facts in themselves, even if they were true, I beg to submit, are not sufficient to warrant giving legislative sanction to a Bill like the one before us. We have heard, Sir, the name of M. N. Roy in connection with this and the Honourable the Home Member read from a typed copy certain things, and he was convinced that this must have come from that gentleman, M. N. Roy. Very few of us here have heard the name of this M. N. Roy save and except that it is given by the Government. It is said that he sent some letter to some one in India in order to bring in Communistic activities in India. But I do not think that any of us here have received any letter like the one referred to, much less our less educated brethren, who are likely to be influenced by such subversive doctrine. If that be so, Sir, I beg to submit that the very fact of such a letter does not at all warrant introduction of legislation like this. Apart from that, we have grave doubts about the genuineness of the letter itself, of which the Honourable the Home Member could not assure us. On the other hand, we have such information with us which warrants us coming to the conclusion that that letter is nothing but a pure and simple fabrication and a forgery, and a forgery with a purpose. I shall read before this House Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru's statement first :

" I have received a cable from the office of the League against Imperialism in Berlin informing me that they are authorised to state that the letter alleged to have been written by Mr. M. N. Roy which was published from Simla recently is an absolute fabrication."

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Did not Mr. Jawahar Lal Nehru state or was he not reported to have stated that he could not say whether the letter was genuine or not ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : No. I shall read further. If the Honourable the Home Member had waited for a few minutes more, he would have seen :

" When this letter was published in the press I could not of course say whether it was genuine or not. I do not know what Mr. Roy's views may be in regard to the Communist work in India. It struck me as a peculiar horror that this letter which is stated to be dated some time in December last should suddenly be given publicity eight months later. On the face of the letter it contains statements which appear improbable. The manner and the tone of publication increases the element of suspicion " and so forth.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Where is it stated ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Wait and you will see :

" The Trade Disputes Bill and the so-called anti-Bolshevik measure coming at about the same time made it clear that the publication was designed to frighten a number of people and then facilitate the passing of the measure. The cablegram I received from Berlin stated that after enquiry it has been found that the letter is a fabrication and justifies the suspicion that it raised. I trust that no one will be deluded by this letter."

Then here is a Reuter's telegram, dated September 4th :

" Reuter learns that Mr. M. N. Roy has informed the London branch of the Indian National Congress that he did not write the letter mentioned in the message of 1st September."

In fact there was an enquiry by the London branch of the Congress about the genuineness or otherwise of this letter. That this letter is a pure and simple fabrication, no one can now be in any doubt. (An Honourable Member : " Question "?) That it is not a genuine document should be deduced from such historical incidents as the Zinovoff letter which brought about the fall of the Labour Government. This sort of dodge is not a new thing. Whenever repressive legislation is to be brought about, whenever Government want to be armed with any repressive measure and weapon, they generally find bomb factories and arms and ammunitions. That has been the case in Bengal before the deportations and the introduction of repressive legislations. The Government found some bomb factories, and discovered some arms and ammunitions very opportunely. I am emboldened to think that this is one of those insidious steps of publishing a letter just before the introduction of a repressive measure and asking us to believe that it is a genuine document. I challenge that it is a genuine document. Even if it had been a genuine document, so far as I know my countrymen, they will throw it into the waste-paper basket and will not pay even the least attention to a document like it. For more than 2,000 or 3,000 years we have never known what a revolution is. We never want a revolution. We do not want subversion of the ordered state of things however miserable may be our lot under the present system of administration. This much assurance I can give to the Honourable the Home Member, and he can take it from me, that I shall be one of the first men to support his measure if he can really convince us that there is danger to person and property, not only of Indians but of any foreigner in this country, be those foreigners exploiters of this country or others. I shall support the Government in any measure to arm them with any power if I am convinced of the necessity of such measure.

Sir, there are some words in the Statement of Objects and Reasons which I want to bring to the notice of the House. It is said there :

" destroying by violence both the Government established by law and the present economic organisation of society, and substituting what they describe as the dictatorship of the proletariat ".

What do the words " dictatorship of the proletariat " mean ? I do not know what these words mean in Europe and in fact in India for generations past, this proletariat—if by proletariat is meant the working classes and the labouring classes—have been subjected to such inhuman treatment and have been reduced to such poverty that every right thinking man will try to raise their standard of living and comfort. In fact it is one of the elementary rights of a human being to have a full meal and to clothe himself properly. That has been denied in India for at least more than a century. To what this is due to, it is unnecessary for me now to discuss. But if these poor people rise to an appreciation of their own miserable condition and if anybody shows any sympathy with them and if it is made penal for any foreigner to sympathise with their lot, then, I beg to submit, Sir, that this is not only an unnecessary but an inhuman legislation. The ill-clad and the ill-fed peasantry of our country—and remember India is mainly an agricultural country—is a standing commentary of your trusteeship which was characterised on the floor of this very House by my friend Diwan Chaman Lall as a fraudulent trust.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But in Bengal the rumour is that they have taken one lakh of rupees for the Swaraj Party's fund from the Zemindars in order to pass the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : From what I have already said you will see that if it is your intention to suppress Bolshevik or Communist propaganda in this country you must supply us with facts in order to enable us to be with you. But if you do not do that, we shall go to the country and ascertain public opinion to find out if the public wants legislation like this, and if we find our country wants legislation like this we shall be with you. But if both these alternatives fail, I regret I for one shall not be able to be with you in a matter like this. We have heard many things about the destruction of religion, of order, of property, of the state of society and so forth. Now, Sir, whenever any new thought or any doctrine comes into the world, we have seen that in this world of ours people do not accept easily a new doctrine. I do not know what the doctrine of the Communists is fully, but I believe their doctrine cannot be any thing but food and clothes for everyone in this world, and with this doctrine I think no one can have any quarrel whatsoever. If that be so, I beg to submit that to wage war against such doctrines, to legislate against such doctrines, will not be proper for any Legislature. Now in the history of civilisation one will notice that the prophets have always been persecuted ; they have been put on the cross or had to flee for their lives from their persecutors. I do not know whether this Bill is to throttle a doctrine which wants to give food and clothes to the poorest and to share as much as possible the goods of this world equally, whether this doctrine is to be put down by its opponents and persecutors in the way in which it is being attempted to be done. If that is so, I may warn the Honourable the Home Member that you cannot crush a truth. You may imprison it, but remember that it acquires an electrical elasticity within the dungeon-walls and shakes the whole world when it comes out, as has been the case with all the religious teachings in this world. Do not put a ban on this world wave of thought. I would be the first man to have all the foreigners deported from my native country. Why did they come here at all ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : To hand over a purse and distribute money among the Swarajists.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Any way they are here now and for more than 100 and 200 years we have lived side by side and probably we are destined to work side by side for many hundred years yet to come. (Cries from the Congress Party Benches of " No, no.") Because that has been our lot. India has given home and shelter to many foreign and alien nations. Even the Aryans were an alien race. The true inhabitants of this land were the so-called non-Aryans. So in India every one will find a home, a peaceful home. But to exclude a certain section of foreigners for the benefit of another section of foreigners is a thing which I do not support. Our real apprehension in this matter is this, if I am to be frank, we think that they will deport men who have any pro-Indian feeling under the guise of this. We cannot invest the six Honourable Members of the Viceroy's Executive Council with such wide powers. We have seen how the power given to any executive authority is always abused. It is not always that we will have good men of the type of the Honourable Mr. Crerar at the helm of affairs ; others may come in whose honesty we may not have the same faith and who really may not be the same good men as the Honourable the Home Member. So, Sir, before arming the executive with such drastic powers over the liberty of any man in this country, I beg to submit that we must be satisfied that there is necessity for legislation like this immediately. What I ask for is this : let us go to the country and let us ascertain public opinion and then come to a judgment ; and then, if our judgments vary, of course the legislation will take its course. But what is the use of asking us to accept certain facts about which we have no knowledge and with which you come to-day before us and ask us to believe too much every word of which probably has been supplied to the Home Department by some underling of the C. I. D. ? In fact, if there was a law like this, many of us are old enough to remember that probably men like Sir William Wedderburn, Charles Bradlaugh or Robert Caine and others who used to come to the Congress would have been deported ; I do not know if even Sir Henry Cotton would have been free from it. So, Honourable Members of this House who have any sympathy with Indian aspirations will not also be safe, unless they themselves be Members of the Executive Council.

Another very objectionable feature of the Bill occurs in section 7. Sir, there is no law of habeas corpus in India, except the meagre provisions contained in section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code ; but that section has been so framed that it is almost of no avail, and in fact such things as Regulation III of 1818, and the analogous Regulations of Madras and Bombay have been exempted from it. Of course the Code of Criminal Procedure is a later act although there is no such reservation in the Regulations : but here the Government has been very careful to introduce a provision that no such writ of habeas corpus can be had under section 491, i.e., that section will not be applicable to any one against whom such an order has been passed. Not only that, but the Executive Council has been clever enough to guard itself against any damage that they may be liable to pay for their unjust orders ; and they have said " and no suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding whatsoever shall lie against any person ". Sir, they are afraid of their own machinery of the courts of justice, which has been at times too docile to oblige them, and, if I may be pardoned, the Executive Government is also too docile to allow them to indulge in their freaks as we have witnessed recently in a High Court. I do not wish to take up more time of the House on this subject, and I appeal to the Honourable the Home Member to give us a little more time to consider the necessity of legislation of this character. The whole world is not going to be upset by a month or two or three, and I think there can be no objection to the acceptance of my amendment which I have just placed before the House.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Sir, the Honourable the Home Member made a speech on which I for one, seldom accustomed to congratulate the Treasury Benches, should very sincerely congratulate him. I congratulate him because, Sir, it is so difficult to speak against logic, it is so difficult to speak against common sense ; it is equally difficult to speak against justice, and when the Honourable the Home Member comes to this House and makes such a speech, we must certainly congratulate him. His speech, Sir, lacks common sense ; his speech lacks logic, and his speech lacks justice.

The Honourable the Leader of my Party had raised, before this debate began, a point of order, which has yet to be decided on by the Chair,—all compact with common sense. We are here, Sir, speaking in a Legislature, which, we have been told time and again, is subordinate to another Legislature in another part of the world. We are, Sir, at the same time asked to legislate on things on which the House of Commons, " the Mother of Parliaments ", as it is called by the House of Commons people, and " a barren woman ", as it is called by Mahatma Gandhi in his book, the " Hind Swaraj ",—that august Mother of Freedom dare not take up an attitude which the Honourable the Home Member has taken up in this House to-day. Sir, those who have had the privilege, those who have had the opportunity, of witnessing the meetings of the House of Commons, will agree with me that, were a motion of this kind brought forward by

Sir, those who have had the privilege, those who have had the opportunity, of witnessing the meetings of the House of Commons, will agree with me that, were a motion of this kind brought forward by

[Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer.]

Mr. Joynson Hicks, the well known "Jix", had such a motion been brought forward in that august Mother of Parliaments, you could imagine the storm that would have risen from the opposition, you could picture to yourself the storm in the country. Sir, it was a well-known poet of the nineteenth century that spoke of England :

"It is the land that freemen till
That sober suited freedom chose,
A land where girt with friend or foe
A man may talk the thing he will."

Well, that is England, and when Englishmen come to India they do not want their own countrymen here who do not belong to what I may call, the bureaucratic club.

This is a legislation, Sir, that is directed not against my countrymen. It is a legislation directed against their own countrymen who do not join in the unholy business of exploitation. It is a legislation directed against their own countrymen, because an Englishman in India hates to see another Englishman going against England's Imperialism in India. It is a malicious piece of legislation. It is a racial piece of legislation, racial in this sense that there can be only one race in this country—the Imperialist race, and not the Socialist race. It is a legislation directed, instigated, I should say, partly by that group that sits over there, more powerful than the bureaucracy, the Anglo-Indian group, and when I say the Anglo-Indian group, I do not include in it the group to which my friend Colonel Gidney belongs. I use the word "Anglo-Indian" in its old classical sense. I use the word to mean the non-official British in India.

Sir, that group has instigated the Government publicly, openly instigated this Government to deport Mr. Spratt. (An Honourable Member : "Why not ?") I hear a voice from the European Benches : "Why not ?" That is exactly my whole case. (An Honourable Member : "Shame.") My friend over there (pointing to the Congress Benches) says "Shame". They are perfectly entitled to have their own countrymen deported from this country, from their point of view. From our point of view they are not entitled. I am coming to that point.

I am very glad, Sir, that the Anglo-Indian group has endorsed my statement that they have instigated the Government to take action against Mr. Spratt. Sir, students of Indian history will remember that the same group in another century wanted to deport another gentleman. I would ask those Anglo-Indian gentlemen who are in this House to read Lord Curzon's stately volumes, "The British Government in India". And if they read the second volume of Lord Curzon's works, they will find that Lord Curzon has referred to that wonderful incident, I think an incident about which Anglo-India can never be ashamed, even though India may be ashamed. Sir, in spirit, that is nothing more than the deportation which they ask now of Mr. Spratt and which they wanted then of a Viceroy of India. (Mr. D. V. Belvi : "Lord Ripon.") My friend Mr. Belvi has supplied the gap. Of the fate that Lord Ripon was threatened with, every student of Indian history knows, and we must be grateful to Lord Curzon for having placed the fact on record. They wanted to deport Lord Ripon. And why ? Because Lord Ripon came to this country with an idea of abolishing that racialism in the administration of justice. Here I would ask Honourable Members in this House to read that fascinating book of Lucian Wolfe which they will find in the Library : "The Life of Lord Ripon". I would also ask them to read Lord Curzon's book. But I shall presently for their benefit quote a passage from the one book as well as the other regarding the occasion, for the contemplated deportation of a great Viceroy, and the same mentality prevails there to-day. If a Viceroy dares to venture conclusions with the Anglo-foreign group he will be deported, even as Spratt will be deported or an alien rat will be deported. Has the Anglo-Indian community at any time, I ask, stood for the reign of law ? The Honourable the Home Member was talking of "discretionary power". I should say they stand for the reign of indiscretionary power ! They not only want the strength of a giant, but they want to abuse it like a giant. Who does not remember the Ilbert Bill agitation, the storm which was raised in European circles when Lord Ripon proposed—I am now quoting—"to remove from the Code at once and completely every judicial disqualification which is based merely on racial distinctions" ? "The Viceroy" says Lord Curzon in the volumes to which I have just referred, "was personally insulted in Calcutta." The Anglo-Indians—by which I mean the European Civil Service as well as the non-Civil Service people,—insulted the Viceroy in Calcutta ! Lord Curzon goes on to say that "the Government House was partially boycotted by the British community", not by Indians of the type of my esteemed friend Pandit Jahawar Lal Nehru but "by the British community." "The Services" Lord Curzon goes on to say "were exasperated and estranged". And what next ? Lord Curzon goes on to say : "A plot was hatched for kidnapping the Viceroy, hustling him on to a ship and sending him on to the Cape." That was before the famous Frenchman pierced the Isthmus of Suez. (An Honourable Member : "You cannot do that under this Bill.") Yes, I agree with the Honourable the European Member, you cannot do that under this Bill, but you can do something worse. You can make the Viceroy a tool in your hands to sanction the deportation of anybody you like. (An Honourable Member : "Not Indians.") Any one of their own community. I am not talking of Indians so far as this Bill is concerned. Indians are deportees in their own country, whether they are deported or not deported. I am referring, Sir, to an incident which took place in the nineteenth century and which is taking place in this century in a ghastlier form. I use the expression "in a ghastlier form", because under this Regulation, which is no more or no less than an Externment Regulation, they want to deport their own countrymen who do not join them in singing "Rule Britannia", because they fell Britain rules the slaves as truly as Britain rules the waves. They would chant a new hymn of how "Britain rules the slaves" ! Must those, I ask, who do not sing that old song of "Rule Britannia" be deported ? Mr. Spratt, Sir, is as honourable a gentleman as I could find on the opposition benches. (Honourable Members : "More honourable.") My friends over here say "more honourable". I know he is a pleasant man to talk to, and if he is such a dangerous character, is not the law strong enough to proceed against Mr. Spratt ? That is the man they want to catch. They want to deport him without delay. That accounts for the anxiety of the Honourable the Home Member. They want to deport him just as they deported another gentleman, an Englishman, from Bombay. It may be asked : "Why should they not take action against him, if they choose, and take also, in future, similar action against the opposition members in the House of Commons" ? But, I say, there is the ordinary law if they want to take action against Mr. Spratt or against any Englishman or Russian, though I do not know either from the newspapers or from the speech of the Honourable the Home Member of any Russian going about in this country ; that evidence at any rate has been denied to us and Russians are not fools to come to this country. (An Honourable Member : "Question.") As Great Britain has cut off all diplomatic relations I do not think Russia issues passports to Russians going to England or other parts of the Empire even as England does not issue passports to Englishmen or other British subjects to go to Russia. Sir, I was referring to the law, and when another piece of repressive legislation was being enacted, a gentleman whom the King delighted to honour made the following observations which are appropriate on this occasion. He made it in the old Imperial Legislative Council, and what he said can be quoted word for word here :

"Not only is the measure in my humble judgment uncalled for and impolitic but it is also superfluous....."

(An Honourable Member : "Who is he ?")

So said Sir Rash Behari Ghose,—not a Swarajist—

"..... as the Indian Statute-book gives the Government ample powers to put down sedition."

The Honourable the Home Member was referring to a certain letter. If it was seditious, why was not action taken against the newspapers which published it ? Why was the Associated Press permitted to publish it and to broadcast it all over India ? If Mr. M. N. Roy's letter is seditious, why has action not been taken against the Statesman of Calcutta for publishing it ? My friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt was quoting the opinion of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru. Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru knows as little about that letter as any gentleman sitting on this side of the House. I think the views of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru about the authenticity or unauthenticity of that letter could be no better or no worse than the views of any other gentleman on the subject. One may be prepared to grant, as Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru has granted, that that letter, judging from the clumsy circumstances of its publication, might be a faked document. One may be equally prepared to grant, as the Home Member has granted, and I agree with the Home Member that his views as well as Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru's views on the subject might be alike. I am prepared to grant, that the letter is authentic. But, then, supposing a lunatic writes a letter from abroad, supposing you get another lunatic to telegraph it to the Indian newspapers, and supposing a few other lunatics publish it, can sane men bring forward a legislation worthy only of lunatics ? Sir, Mr. M. N. Roy's letter may be an authentic document, he may be a revolutionary—I have not had the honour of knowing the gentleman. There are revolutionaries at home and abroad. I do not for a moment say he is a revolutionary—I do not know him. I do not know anything about his letter. There are revolutionaries abroad, there are Indian exiles abroad. Are they not entitled to be revolutionaries ? Are they not entitled to send letters, and is not the Government entitled to proscribe these letters ? Is not the law of proscription strong enough ? Sir, I thought that the Honourable the Home Member, knowing his business as he does, would not have come and said : Here is the letter of Mr. M. N. Roy compelling this new legislation. It may be an old letter, it may be a new letter, but he would not have come to this House for more power He would have taken action against the Statesman of Calcutta for publishing it just as he has taken action against the Forward of Calcutta in another matter. I would, Sir, have asked him to take action against the Associated Press for broadcasting this seditious document, if the Associated Press is, as claimed by my Honourable friend, Mr. Roy, an Indian and not a pro-Government agency. I believe it is not a Government agency, and I presume that this is not a Government document But then why has action not been taken for preaching sedition openly Why should the Honourable Member come to this House and say, "Give us the power to deport Tom, Dick and Harry, honourable Anglo-Indians Indo-Britishers ?".

Mr. K. Ahmed : What about the Muslim Outlook and its editor ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : The Honourable gentleman over there knows more about that paper of whose existence I am not aware (Laughter.) To continue the quotation from Sir Rash Behari Ghose, he said, "You will find the iron hand concealed in the velvet glove in section 108 and also in section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code which enabled the Magistrate of Calcutta only the other day to take action in certain matters. Unlawful things could be dealt with under sections 12 to 132 of the Criminal Procedure Code, while open sedition may be punished under sections 124A, 153A and 505 of the Indian Penal Code. The Indian Penal Code is meant not only for Indians but also for offending Englishmen. Therefore, why should the Anglo-Indian group ask for an Externment Regulation even as there is an internment Regulation This is no more, and no less than Regulation III of 1818 for foreigners They could as well have promulgated a new Ordinance and a new Regulation. That would have been more simple instead of coming to the Legislature and asking for new power. Sir, it is a craze of modern autocracies to ask for more power. More power was asked for even by a King of England, I believe it was George III. It was during King George III's administration, however, that the House of Commons moved a Resolution that "the power of the Crown has increased, is increasing and ought to be diminished." If you delete the word "Crown" and use the word "Executive in India", I think that Resolution might as well be carried in this House. I could read to you, Sir, the opinion of prominent legal authorities on a lawless measure of this kind. This measure is only worthy of a bureaucracy which seeks legislative sanction to increase its powers and which has already unlimited powers.

"It is a commonplace," said Lord Hewart to the American Bar Association,—

"that the rule of law involves at least two things ; one is the absence of arbitrary power on the part of Government, and the other is equality before the law.

"But is it quite certain that this system of ours—the rule of law, equality before the law and the exclusion of arbitrary power—is quite free from risks of invasion and diminution ? Has there not been during recent years, and is there not now a marked and increasing development in bureaucratic pretensions, the essence and aim of which is to withdraw more and more matters and topics from the jurisdiction of the courts and to set them apart for purely official determination ?"

Lord Hewart delivered that speech to the American Bar Association America is a country where liberty has run riot, and the Government America dare not clothe themselves with extraordinary powers against American citizens which the Government here asks us to give the gainst British follow-subjects. When a danger of that kind is dreaded n self-governing countries like America, how much more fearsome must his arbitrary power be to an executive which is not responsible to the people ?

Sir, it is unnecessary for the Honourable the Home Member to come nd talk to us of the constitution of society, of India's culture, and so n and so forth, being put in jeopardy. I wish the Honourable the Home Member had read the observations of my friend, Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru, in the Unity Conference at Lucknow. If he had read that speech of Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru, he would find in that speech a suitable reply to the speech he was pleased to deliver here. Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru observed in effect : " Can a few alien gentlemen, call them Bolshevists, set India on fire ?" That one sentence contains the reply o all the arguments, to all the pretensions, to all the claims that the Honourable the Home Member lays before us. Indians are competent o protect India's culture which could not be killed by alien invasion in the course of centuries, which cannot be protected by legislation of this kind. India's culture does not want alien protection by legislation of this kind. I would not have much respect for India's culture if it could be put in danger by half a dozen seditionists or revolutionists or republicans or Bolshevists or Communists from foreign lands. India's culture had better be left alone by the Honourable the Home Member.

Then he talks of India's society. India's society is not put in a steel frame, though Mr. Lloyd George, when I had the honour of lunching with him was not.... (An Honourable Member : " What about champagne ?") (Loud laughter.) The Honourable Member who interrupted obviously thinks of lunch and of champagne and of Welshmen who are not generally teetotallers.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What about yourself ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I thought the Honourable gentleman knew something about myself. Has the Honourable gentleman concluded his very interesting enquiries ? (Laughter). Mr. Lloyd George, who used that historical phrase, " steel frame ", said, " I got into a lot of trouble over that phrase ", and you know, Sir, how phrases are used in the House of Commons.—I thought that the constitution of Indian society did not stand in need even of the steel frame of Mr. Lloyd George's bureaucracy in India. Indian society has stood the onslaught of time, the onslaught of alien invasion. It has withstood even the Europeanisation of Indian customs, and it does not stand in need of protection by legislation of this kind.

Then the Honourable the Home Member talked of the last world war. Then I think there is going to be another world war, it is rather pathetic of the Honourable the Home Member to talk of the last world war. To-day it is a dream and a nightmare, and Indians have their own opinions of what they did in the world war and what they got in return. Indians during the last world war loyally stood by England, saying " England's calamity is not our opportunity " but India's calamity to-day is obviously the Home Member's opportunity, otherwise he would not have brought forward legislation of this kind. (Laughter). Sir, at a time when at Lucknow all the parties have sworn by a resolution which stands for Dominion home-rule and the British connexion, surely the Honourable the Home Member need not have acted as if the whole country were disloyal and indicted a whole race by bringing forward legislation of this kind fearing that a few wandering Englishmen or continentals can set it on fire. I consider, Sir, that this legislation is an unhappy reply to the plea for Dominion status, for Dominion Home Rule. It is not an encouraging response to an attitude of loyalty to the British Throne which all the parties in the country have truly shown. Surely, if India is loyal as Lucknow gave proof that India is loyal, it is not for the Honourable the Home Member to say that a letter from Mr. M. N. Roy could disturb the equanimity of India or shake the loyalty of its people ; it is not for the Home Member to say that the one or two other documents that he mentioned could set the whole country ablaze. Sir, this Bill is an aspersion on the whole race ; it is a piece of legislation which I say the Home Member in his calmer moments will not be prepared to support. Then, Sir, he talked of " Communism in action ". Was that the phrase the Honourable the Home Member used ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar " Communism ".

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Not communalism ? (Laughter.) The Home Member could have more appropriately thought of communalism in action if Communism were in such a diabolical action as communalism, I might have sympathised with the Home Member. The Home Member has made some study of the Indian constitution and of Indian culture : and In has, as he ought to know, no genius for Communism. That is a foreign growth. You cannot transplant it either from the Soviet Opposition in England's Parliament or Soviet Russia to this venerable country. Therefore, the Honourable the Home Member, if he knew Indian culture as some of us do, would not have liked to bring in a thing which Indian culture and Indian society do not want, do not support and do not ask for. Therefore, frankly speaking, the Home Member was not really concerned about India's culture or India's society ; he was observed with Communism which is on the brain of the Government. Then he talked of a conspiracy case of 1924.—and we are now in 1928. But, Sir, he ought to tell us who are the " conspirators ", to use an expression which I may not ordinarily like to use but I use that phrase under quotation. Who are the so-called conspirators to-day ? As for the 1924 incident, were they not hanged or were they not imprisoned ? Were they proceeded against or were they not proceeded against ? Having punished those people declared guilty in 1924, no man with a sense of the law, leave alone logic, with a sense of justice, leave alone administrative virtue, would have come to this House and said, " Oh, the conspiracy case of 1924 ". If the conspirators had escaped, if they had not been punished, if no action had been taken, might have pardoned the Home Member for making that statement.

And then he talked of " peasant revolt ". Sir, I had the honour of taking part in a peasant revolt. I may yet have the honour of taking part in numerous peasant revolts, for I do believe that there is a crying necessity for helping to bring about a higher standard of life for India's impoverished, doubly-oppressed peasants. Does the Honourable the Home Member know that there was really a peasant revolt in the United Provinces ? He referred to Chauri Chaura. Well, I shall come to it presently if time permits, but I am talking now of the peasant revolt. There was a peasant revolt in Rai Bareilly when I happened to be in charge of a newspaper in Allahabad called The Independent. A few peasants were shot. I do not want to go into the details of that case. I stood for the peasants, wrote against the violence that was inflicted on the peasants and I of course had to pay the penalty. Peasant revolt can be put down ; it has been punished. " You have the Seditious Meetings Act, have you not ? " I put that question to the Honourable the Home Member. Is not the Seditious Meetings Act intended to put down the peasant revolt ? I put that question again to the Honourable the Home Member. As compared to his predecessors in office he is a younger man, a newer man to this House, and I would ask him to go through the entire literature bearing on that subject. Was not the Seditious Meetings Act meant to put down the peasant revolt ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Then the Honourable the Home Member does not know the subject ! I am afraid the Honourable the Home Member is rather raw to that subject, if I may say so without offence. If only he could remember what his own Government did ! Perhaps he lacks information. The Honourable the Home Member ought to be aware that four of the principal peasant districts of the United Provinces were suppressed. He may not like that word " suppressed ", but they were dealt with under the Seditious Meetings Act, and the Governor in Council acting with his Ministers supported the application of that measure. The Government of India supported it. The most effective manner in which the peasant revolt was dealt with in the United Provinces, in spite of the opposition of the Indian papers, was under the Seditious Meetings Act.

And then he talks of the landlord and the capitalist. I ask, is the British Government meant only for the landlord and the capitalist ? Have not the Indian peasants the right to carry on an agitation in this country ? Have we not the right, I ask, to bring friends from abroad so that the Indian peasants may know that all Englishmen are not tarred with the same brush ? I consider, Sir, that a Spratt, that an English socialist, is incidentally making India more fond of Britain by telling Indians in India that all Englishmen are not tarred with the same Imperialist brush. This is, Sir, a Tory legislation meant to put down the little help that we might get, if not to-day, then in the future, from the British socialists. As a staunch adherent of the Socialist Party in Great Britain I do think that this is aimed at my British comrades. I say it is a malicious piece of legislation which could not stand a moment's oration from the Tory Benches in the House of Commons. It is not a question, Sir, on which the Tories dare go to the country and take the verdict of the country. Let the Tories go to the great English public during the general election on this particular issue, and they will have meted out to them the same fate that was meted out to Labour on a former occasion. Sir, it is well and good for Englishmen here who are more Imperialistic than their own Imperialistic countrymen at home to take up this attitude of absurdity towards their own countrymen. If the Honourable the Home Member had the common sense to confine this legislation to Russians, because the British Government has cut off all relations with Russia, I would say the Honourable the Home Member is richly endowed with the quality of statesmanship. But he wants to take action against our British fellow-subjects under a law which is no law, because there is no trial here, nothing of the kind. A ukase will be issued by the Viceroy of India, as it used to be issued by certain types of monarchs in the nineteenth century in Europe. A ukase is issued and the " undesirable " gentleman is deported, even as the Anglo-Indian community wanted to deport a Viceroy. That is a kind of legislation which no Legislature can support. Any Legislature which respects other people's rights and liberties will throw such legislation into " the waste-paper basket "—to quote, Sir, your own historic phrase uttered on another historic occasion.

Mr. K. Ahmed : You will be tried by a first class magistrate ; there is the Evidence Act and the Criminal Procedure Code to be followed.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Honourable gentleman stand up and put his question ? (Laughter.)

Sir, then the Honourable the Home Member shed some tears, as the old crocodiles according to the fable, over " the privations and the sufferings of labour." Surely the Honourable the Home Member is not assisting labour by passing a legislation of this kind, but proclaiming to the world that Indian labour is in the hands of a few European Communists, which is far from true. That is his advertisement of Indian labour to the wide world, that it is like potter's clay in the hands of a few European Communists. Sir, I do think that the people who will have the heartiest laugh over the speech of the Honourable the Home Member are the Communists in Russia—if only my friend the Publicity Officer will spend a little Government money and send a cable to the newspapers of Moscow about this. There will be nothing to encourage them better than the speech of the Home Member ! Who could have imagined that a pamphlet could have made all the mighty bureaucrats of India panicky ? Who could have imagined that a leaflet could have made them shake in their shoes ? Surely, if the communists of Russia had been told that the Government of India was panicky—all foreign Governments are panicky —if they had been told that the Government of India were quaking, they might not have believed it, but to-day the Honourable the Home Member has furnished a proof. He has really issued an invitation for war to the Communists of Russia. He has really advertised that India is under the influence of Communism. He thinks India is ablaze with Communism. His whole speech was soaked with Communism. We thought we were going to get some proof of the existence of Communism, but we were told about stale pamphlets which were reproduced partly in newspapers and for which the newspapers have not been punished, obviously because the pamphleteer and the pamphlet have not been seditious. Then he dwelt on the course of events in the industrial world. I would ask him to read, if he has not refreshed his mind, the reply that was given to this House by Mr. Parsons about the course of events in the industrial world. Was it Communistic or was it economic ? Sir, the course of events in the industrial world can take care of itself.

Then he talked of protective legislation. I should think, Sir, that this is not a protective but a destructive legislation—and a destructive legislation of this kind, aimed not at me, not at my friend Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru, not at my other friends in the Congress, not at Mr. Subash Chandra Bose, not at my friend Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra, not long ago a Regulation prisoner,—who, we were told, by the way, was a terrible anarchist, though he does not look an anarchist. We all know, Sir, how Regulation III was abused and it was a Home Member of the Government of Bengal who said 14 or 20 years after, speaking about Mr. Dutt of Eastern Bengal and Assam, that he never believed he could have been involved in a revolutionary conspiracy and he was really sorry that the Regulation was used against him. We can have similar confessions about these deportations 20 years after from these very energetic persons. But what we are really concerned with is not their confessions, but the dealing of justice ; and in this matter, Sir, we are entitled, the House is entitled, to hear the opinion of two Europeans, independent Englishmen in India, who can be deported, just as Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra was deported. I should give the two sample opinions of the Editor of the Pioneer, Mr. Wilson, and of the Editor of the Herald, Mr. Horniman. Both of them, as this House is aware, are the bête noire of the powers that be. It was only the other day, replying to a question of mine, that the Army Secretary enlightened the House with very interesting information that at least so far as the Government were concerned the Pioneer had ceased to be a newspaper of any " reputation "! We all knew the reputation that the Pioneer used to have until lately. One need not be surprised, Sir, now under this Bill the Editor of the Pioneer could be deported without trial as a Bolshevik agent ! Let us hear what the Pioneer has to say on this subject :

[Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer.]

" It is an extension on a larger scale of the infamous Regulation III. The seventh century in England witnessed the attempt to make the judiciary dependent upon the executive. It cost one King his head and the other his Crown. The liberty of Englishmen was vindicated by independent Judges against all encroachments of the executive, whether regal or parliamentary and it is no exaggeration to say that these particular provisions in this new Bill are a retrograde step towards a doctrine which has long been viewed with righteous hatred in Great Britain."

Well, Sir, this is what an Englishman says and not a bureaucrat. The latest attempt to revise the principle of liberty of persons has been met with the strongest denunciation. The Pioneer very wisely and truly and justly concluded :

" If the liberty of British subjects is to be in the hands of officials, it will be a bad day for India."

Of course by " India " it means the few independent Englishmen in India. Now, let us hear what Mr. B. G. Horniman has to say on the matter :

" The true reason is that the bureaucracy wants to get rid of non-Russian, non-Indian British public workers who are an inconvenience to the capitalist policy of domination and exploitation. A few weeks ago the Bengal Chamber of Commerce was fulminating against the activities of Mr. Spratt"

—a fact which my Honourable friends over there have since approved and endorsed—

" The Anglo-Indians in Calcutta, Bombay and Madras demanded with one voice his removal from the country. The demand was preposterous because no British subject can under any law whatsoever be removed from this country without trial. The Government saw their limitations and now seek to have unbridled powers to deal with such persons. It will thus be clearly seen that it is not against the agents of the Communist International, of whom there are none in India, that the Bill is directed, but it is against the British subjects who, instead of joining the ranks of their exploiting countrymen, come here to organise resistance to exploitation."

Now, then, Sir, I must speak out the Congress view. We Congressmen have an idea, a very old idea, perhaps older than the quotations which the Honourable the Home Member placed before us from certain communications. I think the Honourable the Home Member is aware, and if he is not aware of Indian politics as he does not seem to be much aware, he ought to acquaint himself very soon about the real Indian politics. He must be aware that Indian politicians wanted to organise, as the late lamented Desbandhu Das described in the speech at the Gaya Congress, a pan-Asiatic federation, a federation of Asiatic culture. With a Regulation like this of externment on the Statute-book, how can we think of a pan-Asiatic federation, a federation of Asiatic culture ? It is all well and good for the Honourable the Home Member to come to this House and talk of Indian culture. Indian culture has always been in touch with Asiatic culture. There is give and take. Cultural currents have been flowing into this country, and when we propose to organise, when we aspire to have a pan-Asiatic federation of oriental culture, the Honourable the Home Member comes up with this legislation. Once this Bill is passed, which foreign delegate will care to come to this country ? Therefore, Sir, I submit that it is a sinister attempt, the immediate object being the deportation of " undesirable " Englishmen, undesirable from their point of view and not from our point of view, but the ultimate object of the Government in bringing forward this Bill is to cut off India, to isolate India from other countries. The Himalayas are obviously not big enough for the bureaucracy for that purpose. For the purpose of isolating India, they want a mightier Himalaya, they want a bureaucratic legislation to supplement the internment Regulation. This legislation should not be approved by this House.

Before concluding, I submit that the economic aspect to which the Honourable the Home Member referred is not based on Bolshevism or the activities of Communist or semi-Communist agents or their suspected victims, but it is based on hunger. " Hunger ", said a great Irishman of the eighteenth century, I refer to Edmund Burke, " is the prolific cause of revolutions ". The strikes have taken a revolutionary turn as the Home Member perhaps fears they have or they are likely to. I do not think so. It is based on the hunger of the Indian people. Readers of Miss Mayo's " Mother India " are aware what a poor country India is. Even that wonderful woman has not denied the poverty of the peasants, the poverty of the working men, of India. The Government are unwilling to increase the standard of life of the peasants, they are unwilling to improve the lot of the industrial and agricultural labourers. Is there any other country in the world with this terrible difference between labour and the gentlemen-at-large with a little money, a little income, as in India ? In no country in the world is labour so poor, is life so wretched, is existence so miserable, as in India ; and that, Sir, has to be tackled and nothing else, if the root cause of present discontents is to be removed. This Legislature cannot tackle it. I know a few Englishmen came to this country to investigate the condition of things and published it in their own country much to the disadvantage of the bureaucracy in India. I know they come constantly and go back and tell their countrymen that India is no longer a land of pagoda trees. It is a land of regrets not only for Englishmen but for Indians also ; and, Sir, the Government do not want this kind of home truths to be published in England as it is being published to-day. This legislation is aimed at our friends in England. I believe, as the Honourable the Home Member truly said, " the interests of India and Britain are identical ". I know that Britain is going the Socialist way. It is bound to go because Englishmen want more bread and butter ; and India is bound to go the same way because our interests are identical. To-day you do not have a Socialist opposition in this House as you have in the British House of Commons. His Majesty's Opposition in the House of Commons is Socialist. This legislation is aimed at Socialism in this country (Sir Denys Bray: " No ! ")— not as preached and practised by Indians. I heard the Honourable the Foreign Secretary say " No ". I am afraid I must answer that question. The Foreign Secretary said, when I stated that this legislation is aimed at Socialism, " No ". I was saying it is legislation aimed at Socialism not as carried on by Indians but Socialism as it might be assisted occasionally by our friends in England who visit India. And then, Sir, look at the far-reaching character of the legislation :

" Anyone who is a member of or is associated with any society or organisation which advocates or encourages any such doctrine or activity as is described in clause (b) seeking to foment or utilise industrial or agrarian disputes or other disputes of a like nature with the direct object of subverting the authority of law or organised government in British India or with any object the attainment of which is intended to conduce to that result."

How wide, how elastic this is—" any object the attainment of which is intended to conduce to that result " and " a member of any organisation ". For instance, many members of the House of Commons and British public life are members of what the Honourable the Home Member was, I thought, not bold enough to tell this House, namely, the anti-Imperialist League. I do not happen to be a member of that organisation though I had the invitation from that organisation to attend numerous meetings of its members held in England. As I did not agree with certain of its principles I did not join that organisation, but I have some admiration for certain members of that organisation whom I happen to know, and I should think that India would be none the worse nor England for sending these people to this country. Some of them are not so bad as the Honourable the Home Member might imagine. Some of them do want to abolish the Empire, but they want to bring into existence a Commonwealth of Free Nations and I do think that they are as great friends of England as Sir Campbell-Bannerman was. He saved South Africa for England and, even so, their intention is to save the Empire for the future by recreating it into a Commonwealth of Free Nations. Under the new law, some of my friends in England, if I happen to invite them to this country, can be deported the moment they land in Bombay.

I think some Honourable Members in this House might be inclined to say : " That is just the right thing, because when they go back they will speak in the House of Commons and before the British public how wretchedly India is governed ". That, I believe, Sir, is a case of extremes meeting. (Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : " Hear, hear.") My Honourable friend from Chittoor says, " hear, hear ". I know he shares that opinion and I know others in this House do share that opinion. " Why put obstacles in the way of the Government ? Let dog eat dog. " That is their attitude and that is one way of looking at this new move ; but it is not the way for a legislature to look at it ; it is not the way for lovers of justice to look at it, because justice is neither racial nor is it governed by latitudinal or longitudinal limitations.

One strong objection, Sir, and that is almost the last observation that I have to make on this subject is this : the Bill says :

" all charges and expenses incidental to the removal from British India of any person in respect of whom a removal order has been made and of his dependants, if any, and of his or their conveyance to such place outside British India, etc., etc., shall be borne by the Governor General in Council " that is to say, by the Indian tax-payer. Sir, it was on a former occasion that this House resisted but resisted in vain—as the bureaucracy nullified our verdict—that we protested against giving a free passage to every new born babe in a European home in India under the Lee dispensation ; and now we are asked to give free passage also to English undesirables. That is a thing that the Indian tax-payer can not very much relish. Why should the tax-payer pay for their passage ? There is terrible unemployment in England and some of those unemployed might come to this country on the cheap and just for the satisfaction of getting a free passage deliver one or two Communist speeches. (Laughter.) Not only are they to be given a free passage, but their children and their dependants ! India is " our large Dependency " in European verbiage, but surely she need not provide for the dependants of English undesirables also. We have very much provided for the desirables and for the children of the desirables. It is cruelty to the Indian tax-payer to call on him to provide for the undesirables.

Lastly, Sir, I shall say this : let the Home Member wait for another year if he is a sportsman. I have said some very hard things against him and I have almost questioned the fact that he is a statesman, but I ask him at least to be a sportsman. If he were a sportsman I would ask him to wait for another year and to await the general election ; and then after the general election, well, if the Tories are returned, which I d[illegible] he might perhaps be supported by His Majesty's Government ; b[illegible]ns that ought to give a sporting chance to the great country from whic[illegible] Court comes ; and if the Socialists are returned to power and if then he int[illegible]s foll to promote a legislation of this kind, they will not like th[illegible]as in colleagues in England to be deported from India, he will either cease [illegible] the Home Member or the measure will cease to exist. In any case I will ask him to be a sportsman and not try conclusions with the destinies of his own countrymen in India because India's interests, in his own words, are identical with England's [illegible]rests. England wants Socialism and liberty to preach it, and India [illegible]nts Socialistic friends from England to come out here and teach her [illegible] preach it.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I beg to move the following amendment :

" That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Lala Lajpat Rai ..... "

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Please omit my name.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : You agreed.....

Lala Lajpat Rai : I have since changed by mind.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I suggest Mr. Jayakar ?

(Mr. Jayakar nodded dissent.)

Mr. D. V. Belvi : On a point of order, Sir. I want to know what has become of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt's amendment for circulation of the Bill in order to elicit public opinion ?

Mr. President : Mr. Amar Nath Dutt's amendment is there.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Are we now considering the whole Bill on its merits ?

Mr. President : I have called upon Sir Hari Singh Gour to move his amendment to refer this Bill to a Select Committee and I then propose to throw open the discussion on the whole Bill. The consideration stage,

[Mr. President.]

Select Committee stage, and the motion of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt—the whole Bill will be discussed on these three motions and it will be open to Honourable Members to deal with the whole question.

The Honourable Member, I hope, has ascertained from the Members whose names he is reading out that they are willing to serve on the Select Committee.

4 P.M.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I did so, including Lala Lajpat Rai, though he has since changed his mind.

Mr. President : Then the Honourable Member must drop his name.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, Sir. I have consulted all the Members before hand.

Now, my motion is :

" That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of (omitting Lala Lajpat Rai) Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla, Sir Victor Sassoon, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, the Honourable the Home Member and the Mover, with instructions to report within three days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the committee shall be four."

Sir, to this I would formally move an amendment that in place of Lala Lajpat Rai the name of Mr. K. C. Roy be substituted.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : I am not prepared to serve.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should not go on suggesting names.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I had previously consulted Mr. Roy before mentioning his name.

Mr. K. C. Roy : That is absolutely incorrect.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I told the Honourable Member.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I feel, Sir, in moving this amendment I have to accept the principle of the Bill, but at the same time would suggest certain safeguards without which I consider the Bill unacceptable. Now, Sir, so far as the acceptance of the principle of the Bill is concerned, I wish to state to the House quite frankly why I am constrained to accept it. I am not at all enamoured either of the Bill or of its phraseology, or indeed of its conception. I should have thought that the Government after the reforms, if they wished to bring any repressive legislation to be placed on the Statute-book, would overhaul all their repressive laws and come to this House and say that this is a collective Code of repressive laws which we want you, as representatives of the people, to agree to. We have Regulations ; we have the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, and we have the limitations of section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Added to that, we shall have this short ad hoc Bill which would be added to the already abundant armoury of the Government. Honourable Members are aware that I have been struggling ever since 1922 to purge the Statute-book of all these repressive laws and to insert in the Code of Criminal Procedure a salutary check upon executive vagaries, but I have been unsuccessful. When I have said this, I feel, Sir, that my first inclination when I saw this Bill was that I should stoutly, vehemently and consistently oppose it, but I will explain to the House why I am constrained to give a qualified support to this Bill. The Honourable the Home Member has mentioned to this House Mr. M. N. Roy's letter. I wish to point out, Sir, to the House that, whether Mr. Roy's letter is genuine or a forgery, the fact remains that a letter of that kind was received in this country, and I wish to point out to this House that in the Bolshevik Manual the despatch not only of this kind of letter but of stronger letters is advocated, and if I can show to this House that the Bolshevik conspiracy for the purpose of overthrowing religion, family life, destruction of social order and the paralysation of all industries of the country is the very fulcrum upon which the Communist propaganda is based, then I shall have given to this House the reason why I reluctantly feel compelled to accord my support to the broad principle of this motion. Now, Sir, I want to point out to this House that the Bolshevik propaganda against religion, family life, social order, and the industries of the country is laid down in unmistakable terms. Here is a book called " The Assault of Heaven " by A. Valentino, which I have obtained from the Assembly Library. Now this is what is said in this book : It is a book which gives quotations from the original instructions issued by the Bolshevik organisation. On pages 238 and 239 we find the following instructions :

" The methods, the form and the tactics of the anti-religious campaign are determined by the general situation. The latter is changing in such a direction that soon even the blind will see that he must resolutely fight the priest, whether he be called pastor, rabbi, mullah or pope. At some further stage that struggle will inevitably become a struggle against God whether he be called Jehovah, Jesus, Buddha or Allah."

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask the Honourable Member to what religion he belongs ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : The organisation of India.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Perhaps the Honourable Member has a religion to protect.

" Perhaps in Europe the time has not yet arrived for such forms of anti-religious propaganda as are possible with us but it is not far away. We must prepare for it."

Then on page 142 we have the following instructions given :

" The comrades are reading while in the corners there hang ikons. Some even say : ' I am an atheist but my mother, my uncle, my wife are devotees. What can I do with them '. The answer is : Pay no attention to them. The room is yours and you can throw all the idols away and not listen to all the aunts and old hags."

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Sensible thing, I think.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: At page 146 we have the following instructions :

" Drunkenness and religion are the two damned problems of the majority of small industrial places."

Sir, I have said enough to show that, so far as the Bolshevik organisation is concerned, it is anti-religious ; anti-religious in the sense.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : The Bill does not provide for attacks against religion.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am talking about the Bolshevik propaganda.

Lala Lajpat Rai : The word " Bolshevik " is not used at all in any way.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : You should have pointed that out in the Select Committee. Why don't you join the Select Committee and move the amendment ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : I am against the Bill root and branch.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Then you cannot say the Bill should be better than it is.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I am not saying that. I say the motion is not contained in the Bill.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Move an amendment.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Why should I ? You move an amendment.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Then, Sir, we have another testimony furnished by another book called the " Socialist Movement ", and I will read to you two short passages which will speak for themselves. At page 70.....

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Who is the author ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Don't take any notice of them ; go on please.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : At page 70 we read—this is a quotation from the Bolshevik Manual,—Instructions given for the dissemination of Bolshevik ideas throughout the world :

" In almost all European and American countries the class conflict has entered on the phase of civil war. In these circumstances Communists can place no reliance on civil legality. They are in duty bound to create everywhere a parallel illegal apparatus, which will assist the party at the decisive movement to fulfil their duty towards the revolution....."

Mr. K. Ahmed : What will happen then to my friend Mr. Birla ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour :

" In all countries where it is impossible on account of a state of siege and exclusion regulations, for Communists to carry on the whole of their work legally it is absolutely necessary to combine legal with illegal activities. The duty of disseminating Communist ideas includes the special obligation of an intensive systematic propaganda in the Army. Where this agitation is repressed by prohibitive regulations it is to be illicitly carried on. To abandon this task would be equivalent to a betrayal of revolutionary duty, and incompatible with membership of the Third International."

At page 60 we read other instructions :

" The methods of force. The revolutionary era compels the proletariat to make use of the means of battle which will concentrate its entire energies, namely, mass action with its logical resultant, direct conflict with the governmental machinery in open combat. All other methods such as revolutionary use of bourgeois Parliamentarism will be of only secondary significance."

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I know who is the author ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : It is a book called " Socialist Movement " by Arthur Shadwell.

An Honourable Member : When was it published ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : In 1925. I will pass it on to my friend who can examine it.

At page 80, Sir, we find the following passage :

" (1) Widespread propaganda and agitation for the ideas of the class war, the social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat and mass action for the overthrow of the capitalist order of society and the bourgeois State.

(2) Opposition to the policy of conciliation with the bourgeoisie and to the hope of a peaceful transition from Capitalism to Socialism, which poisons the trade union movement."

Then, Sir, it has been pointed out that you must attack trade unionism as well, because, unless you attack trade unionism you will never be able to bring about the overthrow of the bourgeois Government.

I am now reading from page 72 :

" But every party which wishes to belong to the Communist International must develop a systematic and persistent Communist activity within the trade unions, works committees, co-operative societies, and other mass organisations of workmen. Within these organisations it is necessary to organise cells, which, by continuous and persistent work, must win the unions, etc., to the cause of Communism. The cells are bound to expose everywhere in their daily work the treason of the social patriots and the vacillation of the Centre. The Communist cells must be completely subordinated to the party as a whole."

Sir, I hope I have explained sufficiently how, after reading this manual which lays down the fundamental creed of the Communist Party, can I possibly oppose a measure which is intended to defeat the dissemination of Communist ideas in this country ? Honourable Members may say, " Communism is a vile thing, but what evidence have you got that Communism is being preached in this country ? Well, Sir, I have lived sufficiently long in this country to know that while I have seen strikes of one or two days' duration I have never seen a strike that has silenced the whole of the textile industry in Bombay since the middle of April last. I have never seen a strike which was financed from Moscow, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, admitted the other day that he had received money from Moscow.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I inform the Honourable Member that I have received more money from England than from Moscow ?

An Honourable Member : That does not matter.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I repeat what I said before, and my statement is confirmed, that my Honourable friend had to admit, though he is himself an anti-Bolshevist, that he had received money from Moscow for the purpose of keeping up these strikes.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Because you would not give money.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I further find that a national industry which is the pioneer in making iron and steel in this country, I mean the Tata Iron and Steel Works in Jamshedpur, has been silenced on account of these strikes. Now, I wish to give the reason. These prolonged strikes are aided and abetted by Red money received from Moscow and if these people come to this country or send their money, that is part of their world-wide propaganda.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Was not the British General Strike a much more formidable and terrible thing than the strikes in India ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : My Honourable friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, asks, was not the British General Strike a far more formidable thing than the Indian strikes ? Remember that British industrialism is 350 years old, whereas Indian industrialism is scarcely 30 years old, and that while British capitalists can withstand British strikes for years, the Indian capitalists are not able to withstand Indian strikes for even a year or two. There has been a complete paralysis, a complete prostration of the textile and iron and steel industry, and I wish to ask you, is it not an answer to the Communist organisation, to the Communist propaganda sedulously, secretly and subtly preached from across the frontiers of India ? I have been asking my Honourable friends if they would account for the general paralysis of the trade of this country, railway strikes, systematic derailment of trains and loss of innocent lives in Bengal and in Southern India.

Now, Sir, if you will only read this book—I have not got time to give you more extracts from it—you will find that it is on a certain plan and with a preconceived purpose that these strikes and mischievous sabotage take place throughout the length and breadth of the country. Can we tolerate this display of Empire-wide lawlessness ? Can we ignore this display of conspiracy for the purpose of overthrowing law and order ? Sir, I am not a lover of the bureaucracy. I have always fought against the bureaucracy, but when I see in front of me that a house is on fire, I shall be failing in my duty if I did not contribute a pail of water which I hold in my hand for the purpose of extinguishing it.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Does the Honourable Member really see it in front of him ? (Laughter.)

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, it is very easy to be sentimental, and I am sure that if I had been a little more sentimental, my Honourable friends on the opposite side would have cheered me to the echo (Ironical Cheers), but truth is truth, and when I see these danger signals ahead of me I do not care whether M. N. Roy's letter is genuine or fabricated, because I see the handwriting on the wall. I see an exhibition of this lawlessness which is not accountable for by any ordinary economic outburst. It is not due to mere economic causes, but is of set purpose, helped, financed and supported by an outside world-wide Communist organisation. When I feel this I feel that I should be guilty of gross dereliction of my duty if I did not support some measure for the purpose of suppressing this world-wide anarchical organisation, I now turn to the present Bill. Having demonstrated the necessity for some Bill of the kind, the next question with which we are confronted is, can we trust the Executive to exercise their unfettered and unbridled power to turn out of this country any person at their sweet will and pleasure ? If I had not been opposed to it I would certainly not have given notice of this amendment for the purpose of adding safeguards in the Bill, so that while the guilty do not escape, the innocent do not suffer, and if I was free to go into detail, I have thought out a scheme for the purpose of hedging this Bill round with sufficient safeguards against its abuse by the executive. My friend, Mr. Lal Chand, asks what are the safeguards that I have in my mind. I will show them to you. In the first place I would very much like that the provisions of the Habeas Corpus Act should be inserted in section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for the purpose of safeguarding the rights of all Indian British subjects, and then the Government may be free to utilise Regulation III of 1818 against dangerous foreigners. The other thing is that I am opposed to the permanent expulsion of anybody from my country and I would limit the expulsion to a period of two years. It may be two or three years.

An Honourable Member : Twenty years.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Then, Sir, I am also indisposed as at present advised to give the Government unlimited power, because I feel that the Government must be not only responsive but in this matter responsible to the Legislature, and I would therefore suggest that the period of this Bill should be limited to two or three years, it being continued after that period if necessary in accordance with a Resolution of the Legislative Assembly. Then, Sir, I have another suggestion, that we might give an appeal to the High Court on a question of law, or that all these externments might be placed before the Advisory Committee of the Legislative Assembly attached to the Home Department.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : And advocates might be allowed to appear before them ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : And Mr. Amar Nath Dutt might be heard ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, advocates might appear. Lastly, there may be a reference to two Judges of the High Court. I have put this last because I feel that the precedents that have been created by the Executive Government of asking the Judges to report on political cases is unsound. The Judges should not be used by the Executive Government as their law officers. If they advise in favour of expulsion, they incur the popular odium and the confidence which the public ought to feel in the impartiality of their highest judiciary would be seriously impaired.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : How would you prove him to be objectionable ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : My friend asks me how I shall prove the externee to be objectionable. Well, I shall examine the evidence, I shall examine witnesses and I shall consult Mr. Lalchand Navalrai if necessary. (Laughter.)

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Home Member agree to your suggestion ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : It is not for the Home Member to agree. I make no terms with the Government. This is my suggestion : and if the Home Member and the Select Committee do not agree, then I shall be bound by the decision of the Select Committee, and if the Select Committee agree to any of these proposals, then Home Member or no Home Member, I shall press them home from the floor of this House.

An Honourable Member : Report them.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I have two more objections to this Bill, and one of them is a serious objection as regards the principle. Clause 7 of this Bill does not exempt Indian British subjects or the subjects of an Indian State from recourse to the High Court if nolens volens they are also externed and they challenged the right of the executive to extern them on the ground that they are British Indian subjects and therefore not within the comprehension of the Act. I pointed out, Sir, to the Legisaltive Department some days ago this serious flaw in the drafting of clause 7, and they admitted that it was a flaw and promised that it would be set right. The only place where it can be set right is the Select Committee : and therefore I say that so far as this Bill is concerned, it requires to be overhauled. There are other provisions in this Bill. My friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, drew the attention of this House to clause 2 (a). Now I do not see eye to eye with the Home Member and I shall ask him in the Select Committee to justify the insertion of this clause, for as the Bill is worded it applies to any person who directly or indirectly is concerned in " the promotion of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects ". Now, can you promote the indirect promotion of hostility ? That is the language of section 353-A, but that has been the subject of a judicial difference of opinion and it led to the passing of the Prophets' Protection Bill. And when you borrow the language, the ambiguous and uncertain language of one Statute and transport it into another Statute, you do not solve the ambiguity : you double it. It will be my duty to ask the draftsman to justify that clause, what its meaning is and whether it is not susceptible of improvement. And there are other details in the Bill which I will not mention. I am not at all pleased with the drafting of this Bill. The same phrase has been repeated several times over and it is in accordance with Parliamentary conveyancing procedure that you must not repeat the same clause half a dozen times. I do not wish to go into detailed criticism of this Bill. I have pointed out to the House that while we must accept the broad principle of this Bill we must limit its scope and further limit its extent and give some salutary check to prevent its abuse by the executive. It is for that reason that I wanted the Select Committee to be strongly representative of the legal talent in this House and I asked many of my legal friends if they would join with me.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : You never asked me.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I asked several of my legal friends whether they would join with me in improving this measure which I think might be so improved as to become substantially, if not entirely, innocuous, and that is I sumit the best thing we can do in the circumstances. We can place the executive on trial and if they abuse their powers given to them under the Act, we can immediately refuse to renew it after a period of years. No harm is done and at the same time the menace with which the peace of India is seriously threatened, that menace might be controlled and averted. If we do not give at this moment the assistance that the Government want, the Government could say : " Let all your industries be paralysed, your industrial life destroyed ; we asked you for power and you refused it ; now it is too late ". The Bolshevik organization begins from the moment the child is born. Subtle education is given to the child as soon as he is able to imbibe fresh ideas, and then it goes on and on in a crescendo till the man is able to perform what is stated here to be the illegal purpose of destroying all property, destroying all social order, destroying religion and destroying family life. If you think that this is not a menace to this country, I am surprised, and I should be surprised if you think that such a danger to the peace and advancement of this country and to the growing industrial prosperity of this land is not a menace. Sir, it is these considerations which impel me to make the motion which I now move.

Mr. President : This debate must now go over to Wednesday, the 12th. To-morrow is a non-official day.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 11th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 11th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

NUMBER OF INDIAN AND BRITISH INTERNAL SECURITY TROOPS.

364. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will Government be pleased to state the number of (a) Indian and (b) British internal security troops ?

Mr. G. M. Young : All troops stationed in India are available for internal security purposes in peace time. It would not be in the public interest for me to give particulars of the troops allotted to internal security in the event of war, since that would enable anyone, by a simple mathematical calculation, to discover the strength and composition of the troops which it is proposed to put into the field.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he is aware that it is stated in the life of Lord Rawlinson that in 1921 there were 28 British and 21 Indian battalions detailed for internal security ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The answer is in the affirmative.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : What is the objection to giving the present figures, as these figures are bound to be changed in time of war ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I would point out that it is not of very much consequence now how many troops it was proposed to put into the field in 1923, but it is of some consequence how many troops we propose to put into the field now.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Since I am asking for only the normal distribution, what is the objection to telling us now how many troops have been allotted for internal security as the proportion in the various sections is bound to be changed during the time of war ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I think my friend is drawing me into an argument, and I think he has missed the point. The allotment of troops for internal security is not the normal allotment in peace time. The troops are definitely allotted for internal security in the event of war, and, as I have already stated in my answer, all troops are available for internal purposes in peace time.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the Honourable Member aware, Sir, that when the Indian Army was increased in 1885-87, the Government of India informed the Secretary of State how many troops were wanted for internal security and that this information has been published in a despatch of 1887 ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am quite prepared to take facts from the Honourable Member.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : When both the Government of India and the Commander-in-Chief have at various times stated the number of troops allotted for internal security, what is the objection to giving that information now ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have already answered that question.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The Honourable Member has not answered it.

RATIO OF INDIAN TO BRITISH SOLDIERS IN (a) THE FIELD ARMY, (b) COVERING TROOPS AND (c) INTERNAL SECURITY TROOPS.

365. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will Government be pleased to state the ratio of Indian to British soldiers in (a) the field army, (b) covering troops and (c) internal security troops ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The figures are apt to fluctuate. At the present moment there are slightly more British than Indian troops in the battalions earmarked for internal security. In the field army the proportion of British soldiers is about 1 to 3 Indian soldiers, and in the covering troops the proportion is about 1 to 6.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : What is the proportion of the internal troops ? I could not catch what the Honourable Member said.

Mr. G. M. Young : I shall repeat my answer. The figures are apt to fluctuate. At the present moment there are slightly more British than Indian troops in the battalions earmarked for internal security.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the proportion still 1½ to 1 as it was in Lord Rawlinson's time ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have not got exact figures with me, but I think it is about that.

SCALE OF PAY AND LEAVE RULES OF OFFICERS, INDIANS AND EUROPEANS, ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

366. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to give the scale of pay of officers in the superior cadre, Indians and Europeans, and the leave rules in force on the Bengal and North Western Railway, along with a statement of the staff drawing Rs. 100 and above per month ; together with a comparative statement on the above points on State Railways in India ?

(b) If it is not convenient to supply this information in reply to a question on the floor of the House, why should it not be available to Members who desire to have it from the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member will find the information which he requires as to scales of pay in the establishment rolls, copies of which are in the Library. I am seeing if I can obtain for him a copy of the leave rules in force on the Bengal and North-Western Railway. The leave rules on State-managed Railways are the Fundamental Rules. The Railway Board have not got the figures of staff drawing Rs. 100 and over on the Indian Railways, but those for staff drawing Rs. 250 per mensem and over or on scales of pay rising to Rs. 250 per mensem and over, will be found in Appendix F of Volume I of the Reports by the Railway Board on Indian Railways.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is the Honourable Member aware that when I wrote to the Railway Board asking for information on this point, they wrote back saying that the information cannot be supplied to me ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not remember myself seeing the Honourable Member's letter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will you kindly make inquiries in the Railway Board and see if such a letter was sent to me ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I hardly think it necessary to make such an inquiry. I have now given the Honourable Member the reference to the places where he can find the information that he desires.

FIRING ON STRIKERS AT BAMANGACHI.

367. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Have Government received any report from the Government of Bengal regarding the Bamangachi shooting affair ? If so, do they propose to lay a copy on the table, or in the Library ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Government of Bengal have investigated all the circumstances connected with this case, but they have been advised that no conclusions should be published until the completion of the trial in which one of the leaders of the strikers is being charged with perjury and bringing a false case against the Chief Deputy Mechanical Engineer, East. Indian Railway. In the circumstances the Honourable Member will understand that it is not possible at present to lay any papers.

CONFISCATION OF THE BOOK ENTITLED " POLITICS OF OIL ".

368. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a book entitled " Politics of Oil " sent to India by a London bookseller was confiscated on its arrival in Bombay, under a notification issued under section 19 of the Sea Customs Act ?

(b) Is it a fact that although written by a member of the Communist Party, the book has nothing whatever to do with Communists ?

(c) Is it a fact that " it was the source of publication, and not the publication itself which had caused the Government of India to exclude it " as stated by Earl Winterton in the House of Commons some time back ?

(d) Why was the book confiscated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) One copy of this book was intercepted.

(b), (c) and (d). The book was intercepted on the strength of a notification which prohibits the importation of publications issued by or emanating from any organization affiliated to, controlled by or connected with the Communist International. The book has since been examined and I understand that, though designed to illustrate the evils of Capitalism, it is not of such a character that it is necessary to exclude it from India. If further copies are sent they will not be intercepted.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it the practice, Sir, to examine a book after confiscating it or before confiscating it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It is impossible to examine a book before interception. The examination naturally takes place after interception.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do I understand the Honourable Member to say that this book was proscribed before it was confiscated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : It was notified in the general notification which prohibits publications of all kinds emanating from a particular source.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know the date on which this book was proscribed under that notification ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must ask for notice of that question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Honourable Member aware that in the House of Commons, when replying to similar questions, the Under Secretary of State stated that it is the source of the publication and not the publication itself which was the guiding factor with the Government of India in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir ; that was correct in this instance.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does that represent the policy of the Government in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have explained that the notification referred to is of a general character relating to documents emanating from a particular source.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I take it, therefore, that if a book of poems or a novel had emanated from that particular source that would have been confiscated quite as much as this book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that the particular source referred to is in the habit of publishing " belle lettres ".

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do I understand the Honourable Member to say that if further copies come into this country, they will not be intercepted ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Further copies of this book will not be intercepted.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that this book was written at the instance of the Labour Research Department under the Labour Publishing Company ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I understand that that is correct.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Any publication coming from that source, I take it, is bound to be confiscated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If it comes within the terms of the notification.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does it then presuppose an examination prior to confiscation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Not a detailed examination before interception.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Was that the case in this particular instance ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The book was not examined in detail at the time of interception because it came from the source which comes within the terms of the notification generally.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Who was the officer who examined it prior to its confiscation ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Did anybody read the book at all or was it confiscated because of the source from which it came ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already explained that it came within the general notification.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Who is the authority who examined the book prior to its confiscation ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do I understand the Honourable Member to say that the book was intercepted before it was examined ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The book was intercepted before it was examined.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Who is responsible for this foolish mistake ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : When did the later examination take place, and when was it confiscated ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As regards the date of confiscation, I should like to have notice of the question. I cannot at present recollect the date.

PUBLICATION OF THE REPORT OF THE TARIFF BOARD ON THE OIL INDUSTRY.

369. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Do Government propose to publish the Report of the Tariff Board on the oil industry ? If so, when ? If not, why not ?

(b) What was the amount of expenditure involved in the enquiry ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Report will be published on the 12th September.

(b) The cost of the enquiry inclusive of that of printing the Report and evidence is estimated to have been approximately Rs. 51,000.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that the Burma oil industry has sent out a letter stating that the industry does not require any protection from the Government ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not think that that arises out of the answer I have just given. I think the Honourable Member would do well to wait until tomorrow. It is not a long period for which to exercise his patience.

U. Tok Kyi : How long did the Government take to consider the application from the oil companies before they made a reference to the Tariff Board ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the time taken from th date when the matter was first brought to our notice was very nearly si months.

U. Tok Kyi : Cannot the Honourable Member give the exact date o the receipt of the application ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If the Honourable Membe wants the exact date, he must give me notice.

PRESENT POSITION OF CIVIL AVIATION IN INDIA.

370. Mr. B. Das : Will the Government be pleased to state the pr sent position of civil aviation in India, and detail the progress made sinc the appointment of the Director of Civil Aviation ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The attention of th Honourable Member is invited to the reply given in this House to que tion No. 238 put by Colonel Crawford.

AERODROMES AT BOMBAY AND CALCUTTA.

371. Mr. B. Das : (a) Is it a fact that the aerodromes at Bomba and Calcutta are unfit for all the year flying ?

(b) If the answer is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased t state what steps have been or are being taken to make these importan aerodromes first class landing grounds, and the approximate cost thereof ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) A scheme for improving the Dum Dum aerodrome at Calcutt at a cost of [redacted] from loan sources, has been approved, and work is now in hand When the K. C. N. [redacted] throughout the year.

The Government of India have not yet reached a decision regardin the acquisition of the site at Juhu near Bombay, which is used as an aero drome and are therefore not in a position to undertake the improvement necessary to render it fit for regular use.

ESTABLISHMENT OF AIR MAIL SERVICES.

372. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government state what progress has bee made in floating a rupee capital Indian company for the purpose of inaugu rating internal flying passenger services ?

(b) Is it a fact that tenders are being or are about to be asked for b the Director of Civil Aviation and will Government be pleased to state th present position and when it is expected to start civil aviation ?

(c) Are Government aware of the possibility of foreign competitio and is the Director of Civil Aviation doing everything possible to expedit the inauguration of civil flying services ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) It is not the intentio of Government to float any companies of the type to which the Honour able Member refers. But if subsidies are given for the establishment o air mail services, they will be granted only to companies which hav rupee capital and a majority of Indian Directors, and the Government o India understand that this policy has already led to some activity in the direction of company floatation.

(b) Government are examining a scheme for the development of air mail routes in India, but I am not in a position to say when a call for tenders will be issued. I am not sure what the Honourable Member is referring to by the starting of civil aviation, but if he means the starting of the subsidized aeroplane clubs, I hope that these will be actively functioning by the beginning of the cold weather.

(c) I am again in some doubt as to the meaning of the Honourable Member's question. So far as subsidized services are concerned, there can be, in view of the assurance already given, no question of foreign competition. The inauguration of civil flying services depends on decisions of the Government of India and other authorities and the Director of Civil Aviation is not in a position to expedite or anticipate these decisions.

EXPENDITURE ON THE DIRECTOR OF CIVIL AVIATION AND HIS OFFICE.

373. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what amount has been spent on the Director of Civil Aviation since its inauguration ?

(b) Will Government please state whether the progress made is satisfactory compared with the cost of the air establishment ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The expenditure incurred on the Director of Civil Aviation and his office from the 11th January 1927, the date of its inauguration, to the 1st August 1928 amounts to Rs. 93,424.

(b) The answer is in the affirmative.

EDUCATION OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES IN THE DELHI PROVINCE.

374. Lala Lajpat Rai : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state :

(1) the total population of the depressed classes in the Delhi Province : and

(2) their educational position ?

(b) What steps do the Government of India propose to take to improve their position and what facilities do they propose to provide to them for a wider dissemination of education amongst their ranks ?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of opening an industrial school at Delhi to provide facilities for the sons of the depressed classes to receive general education along with training in certain trades such as motor driving, leather manufacture, black-smithy and weaving ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) (1) The number of persons in the Delhi Province belonging to communities ordinarily classed as "depressed" is approximately 70,000.

(2) There are 26 primary schools in Delhi managed by the Arya Samaj and various Christian missions mostly for the children of the depressed classes. Education is now compulsory in almost the whole of the municipal area both for the depressed classes and for others, but no separate statistics of members of the depressed classes attending schools have been maintained so far. Three municipal board schools have been opened in the sweepers' and chamars' quarters in the City and 300 boys of these classes are receiving education there. There are 24 scholarships of Rs. 4 per mensem each, tenable at middle schools, and 6 of Rs. 6 per mensem each at the high schools for boys of the depressed classes. In addition, 2 scholarships of the value of Re. 1 per mensem each and 1 of Rs. 4 per mensem have lately been sanctioned.

(b) The matter is receiving consideration.

(c) There is already a Government industrial school at Delhi in which special facilities in the shape of stipends are given to boys of the depressed classes.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does my Honourable friend, the questioner realise the situation that, if the members of the depressed classes are trained in motor driving, black-smithing, etc., their services will not be accepted by the people in general, and particularly by the orthodox Hindu members of the community ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : Of course, they will. You come and try.

DICTUM OF MR. JUSTICE MADGAONKAR OF THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT IN THE CASE OF EMPEROR vs. JAGARDEO REGARDING THE BINDING NATURE OF TREATIES.

375. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the dictum of Justice Madgaonkar of the Bombay High Court in the case of Emperor vs. Jagardeo reported at page No. 1054 of the Bombay Law Reports, Vol. 27 (1925), the dictum, namely, that " It is now too late in the day to raise the question of the binding nature of treaties and the duty, in matters civil and criminal, of enforcing and abiding by their terms, incumbent on all contracting powers (British Government and Indian States) and their courts not less than in the case of laws passed by the Legislatures. For the purpose of the present application, this treaty, in my opinion, is as much law-binding on the courts as a statute law or the law of the Legislature " ?

(b) Have Government accepted the view put forth in the above observations ? If not, do they propose to take any steps to have it set aside ?

Sir Denys Bray : The reply to part (a) and to the first question in part (b) is in the affirmative. The rest of the question does not arise.

Munshi Iswar Saran : May I know, Sir, why Government has expressed some kind of view about an observation made by a High Court Judge in a decision in the Bombay High Court, while Government on a previous occasion stoutly declined to express any view as regards the observation of the Patna Chief Justice about the veracity of the people inhabiting that part of the country ?

Sir Denys Bray : If by inadvertence I have been too communicative I must apologise to the Honourable Member.

TOTAL NUMBER OF PERSONS AGAINST WHOM ACTION WAS TAKEN UNDER THE FOREIGNERS ACT, 1864, DURING THE LAST 10 YEARS.

376. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government state the total number of persons, province by province, during the last 10 years against whom action was taken under the Foreigners Act of 1864, stating the precise nature of the action that was taken ?

(b) Will Government state how many of the persons against whom action referred to in (a) above was taken were residents or subjects of Indian (Native) States ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Section 3 of the Act gives concurrent powers to the Government of India and the Local Governments, and I regret that I am not in a position to give the Honourable Member information regarding action taken independently by Local Governments. Such information as is available from the records of the Government of India is being collected and will be communicated to the Honourable Member shortly.

PROVISION OF LAND FREE OF COST TO THE ROHILKHAND AND KUMAON RAILWAY.

377. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is the Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway Company provided with land free of cost by Government ? Is it a fact that under the terms of the contract the Company is required to pay to the Government on demand the cost price of the land purchased by the latter ? If so, why was this land free of cost ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I refer the Honourable Member to clauses 6 and 8 of the Contract of 1882 which give the provision with regard to land in detail. Briefly, these clauses provide that the Secretary of State shall provide land in his possession free of cost to the Company, and that the Company shall pay to him the cost price of any land purchased by him for the line. These clauses only refer to the original line which ran from Bhojeepura to Kathgodam. For extensions of the original line, land is, generally speaking, provided free of cost. The answer to the last part of the Honourable Member's question is that these happen to be the terms mutually agreed on at the time the contracts were made, and no doubt, if they had not been accepted, the Company would have required a quid pro quo in other directions.

TOTAL ADDITIONAL REVENUE EARNED BY THE IMPERIAL INDIAN MAIL RUN BETWEEN BOMBAY AND CALCUTTA.

378. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state, for the latest year for which figures are available, the total additional revenue earned by the Imperial Indian Mail run between Bombay and Calcutta against the estimated total additional revenue of Rs. 35,000 per annum given at page 16 of the Proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee for Railway, Volume II, No. 5 ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am obtaining the figures for the year ending the 31st of July 1928 for the Honourable Member, and will let him have them as soon as I can.

SIR A. L. DICKENSON'S REPORT ON RAILWAY ACCOUNTS.

379. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government state what progress has been made in the consideration of Sir A. L. Dickenson's report on railway accounts ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : About half the report has been examined already. The recommendations of the Railway Board on traffic accounting were placed before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways at their last meeting and those on stores accounting will be considered by the Committee at their next meeting a few days hence.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ACWORTH COMMITTEE.

380. *Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government lay on the table a statement showing the progress of the consideration of those recommendations of the Acworth Committee which have not yet been carried out ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I lay on the table a summary of the recommendations of the Acworth Committee and of the action taken thereon.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
1	(a) Changes in the constitution, status and functions of the Railway Board. (b) A Member of Council in constant touch with Railway affairs to be at head of Railway Department and with this object. (c) A new Department of Communications for Railways, Ports, Inland navigation, Road transport (so far as dealt with by Central Government) and Posts and Telegraphs should be created. (d) Member for Communications to be experienced administrator, able to represent his Department both in Legislature and with public, but need not be technical expert.	Page 86, para. 1.	The Railway Board has been re-organised generally on the principles underlying the Acworth Committee's Report except that recommendation 1(c) has not been accepted.
2	Delegation of increased power of day-to-day management to local Railway administrations. Railway Department to be relieved from control by India Office and Government of India except on large questions of finance and general policy.	Page 86, para. 2.	Large financial powers have been delegated by the Secretary of State to the Government of India in Railway matters and the Railway Administrations have also been granted increased powers.
3	(1) Finance Department, control over internal finance of railways to cease. (2) Railways to have separate budget, be responsible for disposal of own income and for provision of net revenue to meet interest on debt incurred or to be incurred by Government for railway purposes.	Page 86, para. 3.	The separation of Railway from General Finance has been in force for the last three years. The question will again come under consideration.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
	(3) Railway budget to be presented to Assembly by Member in charge of Railways instead of by Finance Member.
4	(1) Subject to independent audit by Government, Railway Department to employ own accounting staff and be responsible for own accounts. (2) Present accounts and statistics to be thoroughly overhauled and remodelled with assistance of experts.	Page 86, para. 4.	(1) The separation of Accounts from Audit has been tried on the East Indian Railway as an experimental measure since December 1925 and it is hoped to put forward proposals for the adoption of this system on all State-managed Railways. (2) The question of Statistics has been thoroughly investigated and revised and improved methods introduced. A comprehensive investigation into the accounts was made by Sir Arthur Dickinson recently and his report is at present under investigation.
5	(1) Title "Railway Board" to be replaced by "Railway Commission". (2) Technical staff under Member for Communications to consist of one Chief Commissioner and four Commissioners. (3) Of four Commissioners one to be in charge of finance and organization and staff of office and the other three to be in charge of Geographical divisions and devote substantial portion of time to personal visits to their divisions.	Page 86, para. 5.	The old title "Railway Board" has been retained. The reorganisation provides for a Chief Commissioner, two Members and a Financial Commissioner. It has been considered more convenient that the work entrusted to Members should be on the basis of subjects and not on a geographical basis.
6	Technical staff attached to Commissioner to be— (1) strengthened especially on traffic side. (2) Divided into six sections each under a Director. One responsible, under Commissioners, for Ports, Inland Navigation and Road Transport.	Page 86, para. 6.	The re-organisation provided for the staff considered necessary at the time. Should further strengthening be required, the question will be reconsidered.
7	Salaries in highest posts of railway services inadequate to attract right men and to keep those already in service.	Page 86, para. 7.	Individual cases are considered on their merits.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
8	Number of Engineering Inspectors to be reduced and money utilised for new appointments of Inspectors of Traffic.	Page 86, para. 8.	No action taken so far.
9	(1) Member for Communications to take steps to modify present position in regard to rights of management reserved to guaranteed companies under contracts. (2) Railway Commission (Sic.) to have greater powers in matters like initiation and enforcement of reforms and some control over appointment and retention of principal officers.	Page 86, para. 9.	(1) and (2) No action has been taken.
	(3) Local executive officers to have greater freedom from interference in affairs of every-day management.	..	(3) The powers delegated to Agents include powers to re-delegate powers to authorities subordinate to them.
10	Less rigid regard than hitherto to claims of seniority.	Page 87, para. 10.	This policy is being followed.
11	To secure to Indian public adequate voice in management of their railways, Central and Local Railway Advisory Councils to be established, constituted as follows :— C. A. C.—Not more than 25 members, of whom 3 or 4 represent Departments of Government concerned ; 8 or 9 nominated, according to scheme to be arranged, by associations representing trade and industry ; similar number to represent agricultural interests and travelling public to be added by nomination of one member by each of Provincial Legislative Councils. L. A. C.—Constitution similar to Central Council perhaps half the size. If at Headquarters of each railway, Agent to act as Chairman ; if at each important railway centre. Agents of all railways concerned to be members and one of them Chairman. These councils to be established early without waiting for introduction of full scheme put forward.	Page 87, paras. 11-13.	A Central Advisory Council has been established and Local Advisory Committees introduced on all Railways.
12	Pending radical improvement of situation by provision of adequate facilities, various ad interim measures to be adopted to mitigate to some extent hardships to which 3rd class passengers are subjected at present.	Page 87, para. 16.	Various measures have already been taken to improve the amenities of 3rd class passengers and the question is always kept in the forefront of railway policy.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
13	Adoption of reasonable general increase in rates and fares and withdrawal of present sur-taxes on railway traffic.	Page 87, para. 17.	The sur-taxes on railway traffic were withdrawn and an increase in rates and fares adopted as suggested in 1922 for the time being. More recently, reduction in rates and fares have been effected.
14	Provision of greater facilities for training of Indians for superior posts in railway service and acceleration of process of employment in such posts.	Page 87, para. 18.	This recommendation is being given effect to.
15	Branch lines, as far as possible, to be constructed and worked by main line to which tributary ; Formation of separate branch line companies to be encouraged only if State is unable or unwilling to provide funds itself.	Page 87, para. 19.	The policy of the Government of India is on the lines of these recommendations.
16	A Tribunal consisting of experienced lawyer as Chairman and two Members representing railway and commercial interests respectively to be established with jurisdiction over questions of reasonableness of rates and facilities, instructions to investigate conditions attached to present "Owners" and "Railways" risk-notes and to frame new and standard forms for future use. An appeal to lie under certain circumstances to the Governor General in Council from decisions of Rates Tribunal.	Page 87, para. 14.	A Railway Rates Advisory Committee has been in existence since 1926.
17	(1) Steps to be taken to reduce delay in settling claims for loss or damage. (2) Both local officials and Railway Commission to devote utmost efforts to stamping out serious and widespread abuses in connection with allocation of railway wagons.	Page 87, para. 15.	These recommendations have been adopted.
18	As soon as financial conditions permit forward movement by Government with railway development, Indian States to be called into Council and invited to assist in working out common plan in common interest.	Page 87, para. 20.	No action has been taken in this direction, but the Railway Board are in agreement with this recommendation.
19	An enquiry to be undertaken into the effect on inland waterway communication of alleged unfair railway competition.	Page 87, para. 21.	No action has been taken.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
20	A thorough investigation by a commission of most competent experts of the railway world of the gauge question with reference to the potential future development of the Indian system as a whole. (Note.—Sir H. Burt in a separate minute records his doubt as to the necessity for and value of the proposed investigation).	Page 88, para. 22.	No such investigation has been started or is at present contemplated.
21	System of management by companies of English domicile to be discontinued on termination of existing contracts and these companies not to be permitted to increase further their share capital.	Page 87, para. 23.	The East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways have been taken over by the State, and the Burma Railways will be taken over in the beginning of 1929.
22	No steps to be taken towards establishing combined companies, both with English and with Indian domicile.	Page 87, para. 24.	The principle has been accepted.
23	(1) Undertakings of guaranteed companies to be entrusted, as and, when contracts fall in, to direct State management.	Page 88, para. 25.	(1) This has been done in the case of East Indian, Great Indian Peninsula and Burma Railways, the only railways the contracts of which have fallen due in the meantime.
	(2) Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway to be absorbed with East Indian Railway on termination of contract of latter in 1924.	..	(2) Done.
24	(1) System of both State and Company management to be continued, Government not being committed to policy of State management only for all railways.	Alternative page 88, para. 25-A.	See above.
	(2) Indian domiciled Companies to be created to manage East Indian and possibly Great Indian Peninsula Railways. Cases of other lines to be considered on merits when contracts become terminable.	..	Do.
25	(1) Whole capital for future development of railways to be raised directly by State.	Page 88, para. 26.	(1) This is the position at present.
	(2) Provincial Government should not take any part in the work.	..	(2)
26	(1) Much capital must be raised direct by State and done by Central Government.	Alternative page 88, para. 26-A.	See remarks against item No. 25 above.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
	(2) From 1924 fullest use to be made of Indian domiciled Companies in the manner proposed as means of providing funds from independent sources. (3) Having regard to large amount required no channel offering money on reasonable terms to be neglected, for instance, negotiation of further debenture loans through existing companies.	Alternative page 88, para. 26-A.	See remarks against item No. 25 above.
27	(1) Money required to rehabilitate existing railways to be raised even at present prices, as fast as it can be economically spent.	Page 88, para. 27.	(1) Being done.
	(2) Immediate raising of capital for extensions of existing system not recommended.	..	(2) The Retrenchment Committee's recommendation that a portion of the money not required for rehabilitation and development on open lines may with advantage, be devoted to the construction of new lines promising an adequate return is being acted on.
28	(1) As in 27 (1) above	Alternative page 88, para. 27-A.	See remarks against item No. 27.
	(2) Rather than new development be arrested assistance of private enterprise to be enlisted to provide capital for new lines.
29	Government issues for railway purposes— (1) In England to take form of ordinary sterling loans. (2) In India rupee loans to be earmarked for railway purposes.	Page 88, para. 28.
30	Government borrowings for State and Guarnteed railways to be by direct Government loans advertised, whether in England or India, as being for Railway purposes.	Alternative page 88, para. 28-A.	No action has so far been taken to raise specific railway loans.
31	Adoption of Mackay Committee's recommendation that in periods of easy money, funds be raised in excess of immediate requirements in order to obviate recourse to market at time of stringency.	Para. 88, Para. 29, Para. 29-A.	No action has, so far, been taken.

Item No.	Recommendation.	Reference to summary of the Report.	Action taken.
32	Establishment of systematic organisation to familiarize Indian population with idea of subscribing to Government loans and specially to reach through local Indian agencies, mass of people to whom idea of investment has been strange hitherto.	Page 89, para. 30.	The post office already offers standing facilities for investments in Government of India securities as well as in cash certificates. The Imperial Bank of India usually offer facilities for investments in any new loan during the period of original subscription. One or two local Governments have on occasion issued loans locally and have no doubt employed local propaganda. There is no other systematic organisation at present.
33	Assistance of all banks in India to be enlisted when money is required. Independent offers of loans on special conditions not to be lightly set aside.	Page 89, Alternative para. 30-A	In the current year the authorities of the Imperial Bank of India enlisted the co-operation of leading Bankers in Calcutta and Bombay. The action to be taken depends upon the circumstances prevailing at the moment.

NAMES OF INSTITUTIONS TO WHICH GRANTS WERE MADE BY THE BOMBAY AND SIND CUSTOMS.

381. Haji Abdoola Haroon : With reference to the "Central Board of Revenue's Review of the Customs Administration in India in 1926-27" printed at the Simla Government of India Press, 1928, will the Government be pleased to state the names of the institutions to which the amounts of Rs. 20,200 and Rs. 5,520 were paid in Bombay and Sind Customs respectively in the year 1926-27 as grants-in-aid as shown at page 27 of the above Review ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The names of the institutions which received the amounts mentioned were the Customs Clubs, the Lascars' Home, and the Prince of Wales' Seamen's Institute at Bombay ; and the Kiamari Maternity and Child Welfare Centre, the Karachi Civil Hospital and Nursing Aid Association and the Customs Recreation Club at Karachi.

INITIAL PAY OF SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS IN RAJPUTANA.

382. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Will Government kindly state whether Rule 22 of the Fundamental Rules is applicable in fixing initial pay of officers in services where an efficiency bar is prescribed in a time-scale and who have passed the prescribed examinations ? If not, will Government kindly state why the benefit of Rule 25 has not been given to the Sub-Assistant Surgeons in Rajputana who are Government servants and why

[illegible] past permanent services have not been taken into consideration as interpreted by the Government of India's order, vide the footnote of Rule 25 which reads as under :

" On each occasion on which an officer is allowed to pass an efficiency bar which had previously been enforced against him, he should come on to the time-scale at such point as the authority competent to declare the bar removed may fix for him, subject to the pay admissible according to his length of service." (Government of India, Home Department, No. 917-Ests., dated 2nd October 1922 ; also Auditor General's No. 997-A. and A.|255-21, dated 16th May 1921) ?

Sir Denys Bray : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The second part does not therefore arise.

INITIAL PAY OF SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS IN RAJPUTANA.

383. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) With reference to Sir Denys Bray's reply given on 20th August 1926 (page 163, Volume VIII, No. 4, Legislative Assembly Debates) to Doctor K. G. Lohokare's supplementary question to my question No. 165, has the attention of the Government been drawn to the letter of the Honourable the Agent to the Governor General in Rajputana referred to on page 182 of the Printed Proceedings of the Standing Finance Committee for 12th-15th January 1925 (Volume IV, No. 3) which reads " These men entered the service with an implied understanding that their pay would be regulated according to the United Provinces scale " ?

(b) Will Government, in the circumstances, state the reasons why that understanding has not been carried out by Government ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes.

(b) It is in view of this understanding that the United Provinces scale of pay has been extended to Sub-Assistant Surgeons in Rajputana. But the claim to have their initial pay on this scale fixed on the basis of their past permanent service as in the United Provinces instead of according to the ordinary rule contained in Fundamental Rule 22, has not been conceded for the reasons given in my reply in August 1926. Government are, however, prepared to consider, on their merits, proposals for any other form of relief which the Local Administration may make in respect of officers with good records in whose cases the application of Fundamental Rule 22 has in its opinion resulted in undue hardship.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Will the Government kindly state why, when these Sub-Assistant Surgeons were employed on the understanding that their pay would be regulated by the United Provinces scale, has their initial pay not been fixed after taking into consideration their past permanent services, as has been done in the United Provinces ; and does this not amount to a breach on the part of the Government of the understanding on which these Sub-Assistant Surgeons were taken into employment ? Will the Government kindly reconsider this matter ?

Sir Denys Bray : The question appears to bear such serious significance that I trust the Honourable Member will give me notice.

COMPULSORY RETIREMENT OF SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS DEPUTED TO INDIAN STATES IN RAJPUTANA.

384. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Is it a fact that Sub-Assistant Surgeons recruited in Government service and deputed to Indian States in Rajputana and no longer required by those States are being compuls retired ?

(b) If so, will Government kindly state whether this is done und Article 426 of the Civil Service Regulations or under any other Rule ?

(c) If under the Civil Service Regulations, will Government kind state if this unwillingness of Indian States to keep these officers in the service means a reduction of establishment ?

(d) If not, will Government state the reasons for not acting accordi to the provisions of Articles 428-429 for selections for discharge ?

(e) Has the attention of Government been drawn in this connection t section 3 of Appendix 8 of the Appendices to the Civil Service Regulation (printed on page 22, Edition 1922) ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) The Sub-assistant Surgeons were actuall recruited to man the dispensaries in the various States in Rajputan but were treated as Government servants lent to Indian States. Whe the States took the dispensaries under their own control, Governmen made every effort to provide continued employment for the Sub Assistant Surgeons, but in cases where employment unfortunatel could not be provided, there was no alternative but discharge from Gov ernment service on compensation pension.

(b) Under Article 426 of the Civil Service Regulations.

(c) Yes.

(d) Does not arise.

(e) Yes, but in these cases compensation was given.

(1) INTRODUCTION OF COMPULSORY PRIMARY EDUCATION IN THE CITY OF AJMER.

(2) MEDICAL EXAMINATION OF THE PUPILS OF PRIMARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

385. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the note on education in Ajmer-Merwara that appeared in the Arya Martand of Ajmer in its issue of the 16th August 1928, complaining that while compulsory primary education has been introduced in one of the provinces under the direct administration of the Government of India, viz., Delhi, no such measure has been introduced in Ajmer, which is also under the direct administration of the Government of India and is an equally advanced province ? Will Government kindly state when action will be taken :

(1) to introduce compulsory primary education in the city of Ajmer, and

(2) to introduce a system of medical examination of the pupils reading in the primary and secondary schools of Ajmer-Merwara ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (1) The Government of India have seen the note referred to. The Honourable Member will probably recognise that conditions in Ajmer and Delhi are not exactly similar. The question of extending the principle of compulsion to elementary education in Ajmer-Merwara is, however, receiving the attention of Government.

(2) The question is under examination by the local authorities.

Mr. President : There are certain questions in the name of Mr. Aney (questions Nos. 386-389) with reference to the separation of the office of the Assembly. I hope he will wait till the whole question is discussed in the House.

(Mr. Aney thereupon did not put his questions).

INEFFICIENCY OF THE INDO-CEYLON CABLES.

390. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the protest made by the Times of Ceylon and the Hindu of Madras in its issue of August 13th. against the inefficiency of the Indo-Ceylon cables ?

(b) Is it a fact that messages sent from Ceylon to Australia can all too often reach their destinations in half the time that it takes to get a message from Ceylon to India ?

(c) Is it a fact that the cause of the delays and the breakdowns is due to the antiquated system of cables connecting India and Ceylon ?

(d) When do the Government of India propose to lay an under-water cable between Talaimannar and Rameswaram ?

(e) What are the defects in the present cable system connecting Ceylon and India and how and when are they going to be remedied ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) Government have no information.

(c) No.

(d) and (e). There are two under-water cables between Talaimannar and Rameswaram of the deep-sea type. No. 1 laid in 1885 and No. 2 in 1895.

Repairs and renewals of sections have been carried out from time to time, and as recently as October 1927, twelve miles of new cable were inserted in Cable No. 2.

Both cables are in good condition and working satisfactorily.

MUSLIM GRAVEYARD OUTSIDE DABAGRI GATE IN PESHAWAR CANTONMENT.

391. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the area of land situated outside Dabagri Gate in Peshawar Cantonment and shown in the Survey of India Department plan of the said Cantonment of 1866 as a "Muslim graveyard" was purchased by the Government for this purpose or whether it existed before the advent of the British as a cemetery and as such belonged to the Muslims of the place ?

(b) In case the said land was purchased by Government and subsequently assigned to the Muslims for a graveyard, will the Government be pleased to state the names of persons from whom it was purchased and the amount of compensation paid to them by the Army Department for this piece of land ?

†On Mr. President's suggestion, these questions were held over for the present.

(c) Is it a fact that the Army Department of the Government of India has recently addressed a letter to the General Officer, Commanding-in-Chief, Northern Command, to make over this land to the Awkaf Committee of Peshawar after consultation with the local civil authorities ? If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the result ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The graveyard is believed to have existed before the formation of the Cantonment. It was not purchased by Government.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) No, Sir. There is apparently no body or Committee in Peshawar which can be said to represent the Muslim community as a whole, and until some agreement can be reached which is acceptable to all concerned, the land has simply been demarcated and left as it is.

ACTION OF THE SPECIAL MAGISTRATE IN THE MUNICIPALITY OF PESHAWAR IN HOLDING HIS COURT IN THE EVENINGS.

392. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Are the Government aware that a retired Assistant Commissioner re-employed as a Sub-Registrar in Peshawar, has been appointed a Special Magistrate in the Municipality of Peshawar ?

(b) Is it a fact that owing to heavy work devolving upon him by holding two offices, he is compelled to work at night and the public is thus constrained to attend his court at night for registration purposes ?

(c) Is it a fact that both the Bar and the Muslim Associations have protested against the action of this officer in holding his court in the evenings ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state what action has been taken by the local authorities on the representations of these two Associations ?

(e) Do the Government intend that in future no Sub-Registrar will be appointed as a Special Magistrate ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) and (d). The Special Magistrate used to hold court until a late hour, but when the inconvenience to the public was brought to notice by the Bar and Muslim Associations his case work was lightened and it is understood that his court is now closed by 6 P.M. at the latest.

(e) No, Sir. It seems hardly necessary to lay down a general rule.

RECRUITMENT FOR THE SUPERIOR SERVICES OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY OF MUSLIMS FROM THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

393. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Are the Government aware that the staff employed East and West of the Indus at present in the superior service, in the Traffic, Loco. and Carriage Departments in North-West Frontier Province of the North Western Railway Administration is preponderantly non-Muslim and that the proportion is inconsistent with the numerical strength of the Muslims in that Province ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of North-West Frontier Muslims who have either been given service or admitted for training by the Divisional Superintendent, North Western Railway, Rawalpindi, during the past five years ?

(c) Do the Government intend to issue orders that in future Muslims of the North-West Frontier Province are to be recruited for the various sections of the Railway Administration according to their numerical strength in the Province ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) I must point out to the Honourable Member that recruitment of officers for superior service on the North Western Railway is determined by the requirements of the Railway as a whole and not of any particular section of it, and that the number of officers of a particular community stationed on sections of the North Western Railway, which are within the limits of the North-West Frontier Province, varies from time to time according to the posting arrangements of the Railway.

(b) If I am right in assuming that the Honourable Member is, as in the first part of his question, referring to officers in the superior service, the answer is that Divisional Superintendents do not either give service to such officers or admit them for training.

(c) The policy of the Government of India with regard to the redress of communal inequalities in the superior services is, I think, known to the Honourable Member and to the House, and is in force with regard to the railway services.

PAUCITY OF MUSLIM CLERKS AND ACCOUNTANTS IN THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT, NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

394. Mr. Ismail Khan : (a) Are the Government aware that the number of accountants and clerks in the Military Accounts Department, North-West Frontier Province, is about 4,275 of whom only 370 are Muslims ?

(b) Is it a fact that on the representation made by the Muslim Association, Peshawar Cantonment, in 1925, the Financial Adviser to the Government of India (Military Finance) instructed the Controller, Military Accounts, Peshawar, by his letter, dated 13th February 1926, to notify to the said Association when vacancies occur in his office and that in future those vacancies are to be filled by direct recruitment ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether these instructions are being acted upon ?

(c) Is it a fact that recently 13 vacancies occurred in his offices which were not notified to the said Association and so they were filled up by non-Muslims ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The figures quoted by the Honourable Member relate to the whole of India in 1926 and not to the Peshawar District alone.

(b) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative except that the instructions related only to such vacancies as are filled by direct recruitment. As regards the second part, I understand that the instructions are being followed.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Have Government any objection to the Municipality of Meerut getting a license for supplying electricity in the areas known as Sadar Bazaar and Lal Koti Bazaar ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I have just explained, Government have certainly no objection.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Will Government issue orders to the Cantonment Authorities to allow the Municipality to include these areas in their license ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I do not see how the Cantonment Authorities can allow the Municipality to do anything.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : The Municipality of Meerut has got a license to supply electricity, and it is a controversial matter now pending between the two Boards whether the Cantonment Board of Meerut should have a license for Sadar Bazaar or the Municipality of Meerut should have it. If the Government have no objection, will they issue instructions to the Cantonment Authorities of Meerut that Government have no objection to the Municipality of Meerut including these areas in their license for the supply of electricity ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That is implicit in the reply I have already given, namely, that Government have no objection to the Cantonment Authorities obtaining their supply from other sources.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : My question was, will Government issue instructions to that effect ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have declared publicly the intentions of Government in this matter now. I do not propose to issue any separate instructions.

INCREASE IN THE SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE OF TASK WORKS PEONS IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

399. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have come to some decision as regards the increase in the subsistence allowance given to the task works peons in the Telegraph Department ; and if so, will they be pleased to state what the decision is ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No decision has been arrived at.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask why there is delay ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : It is a very complicated question which, I think the Honourable Member will realise, is affected by conditions all over India. But I can assure him that my Honourable friend, Mr. Rogers, is dealing with the matter as expeditiously as possible.

DELIVERY PEONS OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

400. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken to give the privileges of superior service to the delivery peons of the Telegraph Department ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No steps have been taken. The Honourable Member's attention is invited in this connection to the reply to starred question No. 550 by Mr. Chaman Lall in the Legislative Assembly on the 22nd February 1927.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Why have no steps been taken ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : For the reasons given in the answer to the question to which I have referred the Honourable Member. Briefly, the position is that Government consider that as regards education, as regards duties and as regards responsibilities, no exact parallel can be drawn between telegraph peons and postmen.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government will be prepared to put this question to arbitration ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Why ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Because Government are quite satisfied that their opinion is correct in this matter.

DAILY PAID MEN IN THE STORES BRANCH OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

401. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that in the Stores Branch of the Telegraph Department there is a large number of employees who are treated as daily paid men although they have put in many years of regular service ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what is the total number of such daily paid men and how many of them have served for ten years and more and how many have served between three years and ten years ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what steps they are taking to give such of these employees as have served for more than three years the privileges of permanent service ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) The total number is 337, of whom 61 have served for ten years or more and 126 between three and ten years.

(c) Government are taking no steps in the matter as they consider that the existing system is the most satisfactory for the class of work required.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is a proper system of recruiting their employees that Government should keep a large proportion of men who have served more than three years as temporary men ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : That must depend on the class of work which the men are doing. In the case of day to day work of this kind, the system adopted here is, I understand, followed in most departments and in most private firms.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government are aware that it is such treatment of their employees that leads to industrial unrest in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No. I do not admit that in this particular case.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government will enquire whether such treatment of their employees leads to unrest ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I can only say this that in this particular case we have had no complaint whatever at any time.

GOODS SHED AT BURHANPUR RAILWAY STATION.

402. Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : (a) Will the Government state in what year the goods shed at Burhanpur railway station was constructed ?

(b) Will the Government state the approximate amount of exports and imports at this station when the goods shed was constructed and the amount of export and import during the year 1926-27 ?

(c) Are Government aware that for want of sufficient accommodation the goods are kept on the passenger platform and on the temporary sidings and are exposed to damage, and that this causes great inconvenience to the passengers and gives chances for accidents ?

(d) Are Government aware that the merchants have been representing their grievances for several years and no action has been taken to provide an adequate goods shed, sidings, etc. ?

(e) Will the Government state whether they propose to take early action in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information on these points, but I am sending a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in order that he may consider whether the goods traffic at this station justifies the provision of further facilities.

RAILWAY BETWEEN KHANDWA AND AKOLA.

403. Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : (a) Will the Government state how far the scheme of connecting Khandwa to Akola by a railway line has progressed ?

(b) Do Government propose to extend the work under construction between Akola, Hiverkhed up to Khandwa or will it terminate at Hiverkhed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The project for a broad gauge line from Basin through Akola to Hiverkhed is ready, and is at present being discussed with the authorities of His Exalted Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railways. There are no immediate proposals for continuing the line from Hiverkhed to Khandwa.

STOPPAGE OF THE CALCUTTA MAIL AT BURHANPUR.

404. Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : (a) Are Government aware that the stoppage of the Calcutta Mail at Burhanpur was suspended on account of the diversion of the train because the Neelodda bridge was washed away in 1926 ?

(b) As the bridge in question has been constructed and the train is running by the old route, do Government propose to consider the desirability of stopping the train at the Burhanpur railway station ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not been able to obtain a copy of the time tables for 1926 from which to verify the statement in the first part of the Honourable Member's question, but I am sending a copy of the question to the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in order that he may consider the suggestion made in the second part.

NOMINATION OF MEMBERS OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES TO THE LOCAL BOARDS AND MUNICIPAL COUNCILS IN DELHI PROVINCE, ETC.

442. Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the principle of nominating members of the depressed classes to the Local Boards and Municipal Councils in Delhi Province was accepted by Government ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving the names of the members of the depressed classes nominated to the various Local Boards and Municipal Councils in Delhi Province ?

(c) (i) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the members of the depressed classes made a representation to the Chief Commissioner of Delhi for the nomination of a member of the depressed classes to the Delhi Municipal Council ?

(ii) If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the reply given to this representation by the Chief Commissioner of Delhi ?

(d) (i) Will the Government be pleased to state, if it is a fact that the localities inhabited by the depressed classes in Delhi are in a most insanitary condition ?

(ii) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the amount of money spent by the Delhi Municipal Committee during the years 1925-26, 1926-27 and 1927-28 on sanitation, education, roads, lighting and water supply in these localities ?

(e) (i) Will the Government be pleased to state if any representation was made to them by the members of the depressed classes in Delhi for improving these localities ?

(ii) If the answer to the above is in the affirmative, will they be pleased to state what action they took on this representation ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Government has accepted no such principle.

(b) No representative of the depressed classes has so far been appointed a member of the local bodies in question.

(c) (i) Yes.

(ii) A copy of the reply given to the Hindu Depressed Classes Mission in March last is placed on the table.

(d) (i) and (ii). The depressed classes are not confined to any particular area but live in various places in Katras or compounds. The insanitary conditions referred to by the Honourable Member are due partly to congestion and defective housing and partly to the unhygienic habits of the occupants themselves. No separate account is kept showing the amount spent in these areas on the conveniences mentioned by the Honourable Member. Public latrines have been erected, water supply has been placed within easy reach, public schools have been thrown open for the children of this class and free primary education has been established. There are two considerable settlements of the depressed classes in the Municipal area. In one, where the land belongs to Government, arrangements for proper sanitation, water supply and street lighting have been made and drains constructed. The other is owned privately but a special staff was engaged last year to deal with its sanitation. The locality has been lighted and water taken to the nearest point. Proposals to acquire the whole of this latter area with a view to improvements are under consideration. Besides, a large area of land has lately been leased on favourable terms for the establishment of a colony for this class.

(c) (i) and (ii). No special representation has been received. Complaints which have reached the authorities from time to time have been dealt with as far as possible.

FROM THE HONOURABLE MR. A. M. STOW, O.B.E., I.C.S., CHIEF COMMISSIONER, DELHI, TO THE GENERAL SECRETARY, HINDU DEPRESSED CLASSES MISSION, No. 1812-EDN., DATED DELHI, THE 12TH MARCH 1928.

Question of the nomination of a representative of the Depressed Classes to the Delhi Municipal Committee.

In reply to your letter No. 3371, dated the 9th January 1928, to the Deputy Commissioner, Delhi, forwarding a memorial on the subject noted above, I have the honour to say that I have made enquiries into the statement contained in your letter to the effect that, in most of the Provincial Legislatures there are nominated representatives of the depressed classes. The Punjab Government, to whom I referred the matter, have replied that there is no seat in the Punjab Legislative Council specially reserved for a representative of these classes, and that no provision exists for their separate representation on Municipal Committees in the Punjab Municipal and District Boards. Arrangements in Delhi are based on legislation and rules current in the Punjab, and I do not, therefore, propose to make any special arrangements for Delhi until the question is mooted in the Punjab and a decision arrived at.

COLLECTION OF CUSTOMS REVENUE AT VIRAMGAUM.

443. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing the collection of customs revenue at Viramgaum from 1st January 1928 to 30th June 1928 or such later date as they can give ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to indicate in the statement referred to in (a) above the articles on which they received customs revenue and also the names of the Ports at which the imports were received in India ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if the full revenue has been collected in cash ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (c). The total amount of duty assessed from the 6th July 1927 to the 31st July, 1928, is Rs. 55,00,652 (gross) out of which Rs. 33,82,154 represents duty for the period from the 1st January to the 31st July, 1928. The amount recovered from the 6th July, 1927, to the 31st July, 1928, is Rs. 23,90,054 (gross), out of which Rs. 23,70,917 was recovered since the 1st January, 1928.

(b) (i) Sugar, matches, cotton and silk piece-goods, tobacco and cigarettes, motor cars, paper bales and bangles are the principal articles ;

(ii) Ports of Baroda, Navanagar, Porebandar, Junagadh and Morvi.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Do I understand that all these amounts have been collected in cash and there are no outstandings ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have given the figures of collections in my reply and I have nothing to add to what I have said.

PROSCRIPTION OF THE PAPER Al Mujahid PUBLISHED IN CHAMARKAND.

444. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government please state if it is a fact that a paper called Al Mujahid is published from Chamarkand in Bijaur (Indian tribal territory) ?

(b) Is it proscribed in India ?

(c) What are the reasons for taking such action against the paper ?

(d) Have the premises of that paper been raised or are they going to be raided ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) and (b). Yes, Sir.

(c) Because it is published with the avowed intention of exciting disaffection against Government.

(d) Not so far : Chamarkand lies unfortunately in a remote and unpoliced corner of our unadministered tribal territory.

Mr. President : Sardar Kartar Singh.

(The Honourable Member was absent.)

Sardar Gulab Singh : May I put the question, Sir ?

Mr. President : I cannot give permission because I have not been informed. Has the Honourable Member been asked by Sardar Kartar Singh to put his question ?

Sardar Gulab Singh : Yes.

Mr. President : He has not sent any intimation to the Chair.

(e) Will the Honourable the President be pleased to communicate to the House the actual expenses for a year incurred by way of tours by the said Sir Frederick Whyte, the former President of the Assembly, and the present President ?

(f) Has the attention of the Honourable the President been drawn to this observation of the said newspaper : " For what purpose is it one of those conventions that he pretends to make " ?

(g) Will the Honourable the President be pleased to state whether he is making a convention or following a precedent ?

(h) Is it not a fact that the Joint Committee of Parliament expected of the President of the Indian Legislative Assembly to tour over the country in connection with the work of the Provincial Legislatures ?

Mr. President : This is a question addressed to the Chair. I think ordinarily questions are not permissible in that form, but I have allowed this question to be put down on the paper with a view to enable me to make a statement on the subject of this question. I hope the Honourable Member will wait till I make my statement.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Yes, Sir.

DISCONTENT AMONG GRADUATE CLERKS IN THE POST OFFICES IN PRESIDENCY TOWNS.

457. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that serious discontent is prevailing among graduate clerks in the post offices in Presidency towns ?

(b) Are the Government aware that the graduate clerks in the Presidency post offices who were enlisted before 1926 and rendered 3 to 4 years' service are getting less than Rs. 74 whereas raw graduates enlisted in 1926-27 are getting Rs. 74 and Rs. 80 per month ?

(c) Do Government propose to take steps to rectify the above anomalies at an early date ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Government are not aware of any serious discontent. Some representations received are under consideration.

(b) The facts are substantially as stated by the Honourable Member.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to Mr. V. V. Jogiah's unstarred question No. 100 in the Assembly on the 6th September, 1927. The matter is still under consideration.

†For answers to these questions, see at the end of the list of starred questions for the day.

CHARGES FOR TOURISTS' CARS ON THE DIFFERENT RAILWAYS.

458. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that at present there is not much demand for tourists' cars on the different railways ?

(b) Are the Government aware that this is due to the exorbitant rates charged for tourists' cars ?

(c) Do Government propose to cheapen the rates of tourists' cars so as to make them popular ?

(d) Do Government propose to provide second class tourists' cars as well ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The information in possession of Government shows that there is a very large demand for these cars, particularly in the cold weather.

(b) No.

(c) As has been explained, there is a very large demand for these cars during the winter at the present rates. During the summer months the rates are reduced by 50 per cent. by the State-managed Railways and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway.

(d) Government do not contemplate putting on second class tourist cars at present. Experiments are shortly to be made on certain Railways with third class tourist cars.

ISSUE OF MONTHLY TIME-TABLES BY THE EASTERN BENGAL AND THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAYS.

459. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that great hardships are caused to the travelling public by the absence of monthly time-tables on the Eastern Bengal Railway and the East Indian Railway, especially because very great changes are sometimes effected in the time-tables of these Railways before six months are over ?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to direct that these Railways issue monthly time-tables showing only the timings of the different trains at the cost of one anna per copy ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is probably true that some inconvenience is caused when the timings of trains are altered between issues of the six-monthly time-tables now usually prepared on Railways. The Railway Board will consider whether it is possible to remove this inconvenience either by the issuing of more frequent time-tables or by other measures.

PROVISION OF PROPER LIGHTS AND FANS IN THE SHUTTLE TRAIN BETWEEN CHEOKI AND ALLAHABAD.

460. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware of the great inconvenience of the travelling public in the shuttle train between Cheoki and Allahabad for the want of the proper provision of fans and lights ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, do Government propose to make arrangements for providing proper lights and fans in the above-mentioned train at any early date ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government have received no complaint to this effect.

(b) A copy of the Honourable Member's question will be sent to the Agent, East Indian Railway, who will I am sure rectify any defects there may be in the service.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask the Honourable Member to suggest to the Agent that the best way of removing this defect would be to take the Bombay Mail to Allahabad instead of asking the passengers for Allahabad to get out at Cheoki ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will communicate the Honourable Member's suggestion to the Agent.

[At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was taken by Lala Lajpat Rai, one of the Panel of Chairmen.]

WATER WORKS FOR KASAULI.

461. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are Government aware that some years back there was a scheme for starting a water works at Kasauli ?

(b) Is it a fact that the public of Kasauli are in want of a proper supply of drinking water ?

(c) Do Government propose to consider a scheme to draw water for the public from a place near Jabli station on the Kalka-Simla Railway ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am making inquiries and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

ACCIDENTS ON RAILWAYS IN 1927.

462. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of railway accidents during last year with the number of casualties in each case ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have sent the Honourable Member a statement showing the number of accidents which occurred during 1927-28 together with the number of casualties from those accidents. Full details will be found in Appendix D to Vol. II of the Railway Board's report for 1927-28 which will be published in November.

PROMOTION OF SUBORDINATE EMPLOYEES OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

463. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether there are any rules for making appointments in the higher grade from among the subordinate employees of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ; if so, what are these rules ;

(b) whether there have been innumerable complaints from the Great Indian Peninsula Railway staff of (i) indiscriminate promotions to the junior men superseding the claims of many competent men though senior in service, and (ii) of making direct recruitment thereby superseding the claims of the officials in service ; if so, what action has so far been taken on these complaints ;

(c) whether in future definite instructions will be issued to the heads of the Departments of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration requiring promotions to the higher grades from among the senior and competent men ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Promotions are made in accordance with seniority combined with suitability and merit. Other things being equal, the senior man is given the promotion.

(b) No, though no doubt complaints have been received from individuals who have not received promotion owing to the principle explained in my reply to (a) I understand each such complaint is investigated by the Deputy Agent.

(c) No. As I have explained, seniority and competence are taken into account in making promotions and no further instructions seem to be needed.

CLASSIFICATION OF GUARDS, ENGINE DRIVERS AND TICKET COLLECTORS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

464. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the guards, the engine drivers and ticket collectors working on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway are divided into two classes or grades, viz., " A " and " B " ;

(b) whether it is a fact that employees in " A " grade are Europeans and Anglo-Indians and those in " B " grade Indians ;

(c) whether the division is based on racial grounds ; if not, what are the rules governing this classification ;

(d) what are the qualifications and scales of pay of the employees of each class ;

(e) whether it is a fact that rules relating to leave, and other privileges governing the two grades are different ; if so, what are the rules applicable to each grade ;

(f) the reasons for this differentiation ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parson : (a) Guards are divided into two grades " A " and " B " and into classes within those grades. Drivers are divided into four classes " A ", " B ", " C " and " D ". Ticket collectors are divided into two grades, lower and higher.

(b) The Agent informs me that this is not the case. No grade or class is restricted to any particular race.

(c) No. But I find in the rules governing the classification, which I obtained in order to answer the Honourable Member's question and of which I am sending him copies, a provision that when a qualified European or Anglo-Indian ticket collector works temporarily as a guard he will be paid the minimum pay of a probationary guard Grade " A ". The Railway Board are instructing the Agent that this rule must either be cancelled or made applicable to all ticket collectors irrespective of race.

(d) The rules, copies of which I am sending the Honourable Member, state the qualifications and scales of pay for guards and drivers. Ticket collectors are graded according to educational qualifications and suitability and the scale of pay of the lower grade is from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 and of the higher grade from Rs. 60 to Rs. 90.

(e) and (f). The leave of staff engaged after the 1st of July, 1925, is regulated by the Fundamental Rules applicable to Government servants generally. The staff of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway who were taken over by Government on the 1st of July, 1925, remain under the old Company's rules as part of the arrangement under which they were taken over. In neither case is distinction made according to grades.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : With reference to the answer to part (b) may I ask whether the Government of India have scrutinised the figures of guards and drivers in class " A " and found out whether these classes are made to keep up the racial distinction in substance, if not in name ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Government of India do not know what the particular composition is. I understand the position to be that in the past a large number of Europeans or Anglo-Indians were taken into grade " A " and that ordinarily Indians were not taken into grade " A ". Therefore at present the composition in grade " A " is largely either European or Anglo-Indian. That is not now the rule and as men retire from that grade and others come in, the composition will be varied.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member assured himself that Indians are recruited direct to " A " grade ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Agent has assured me that they are now recruited to " A " grade.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: May I ask, in view of the fact that there is an impression that these grades are made in order to keep up racial distinctions in substance though not in name, whether Government will make an inquiry and place the figures on the table of this House ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not see any reason for making such an inquiry. I have explained the exact position, and I think the impression to which the Honourable Member has referred relates to what has happened in the past. I have no reason to believe there is now racial discrimination in this matter.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will not that impression be removed if the Honourable Member gives figures for Indians in grade " A " during the past year ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I feel rather hopeless about removing the Honourable Member's impressions on this matter, whatever statistics I get for him.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The Honourable Member's impression may not be removed but the general impression that prevails in the country is that though the distinction has been nominally removed it really remains. May I ask the Honourable Member to reconsider his decision and place the figures on the table ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know if the Honourable Member is aware that this state of things also exists on the East Indian Railway ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : And also on the Bengal and North-Western Railway ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : And also on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway and the Rohilkund and Kumaon Railway ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the Honourable Members who have put questions about a number of other Railways should give notice of them. As regards the question put by my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi, I will look into the matter and consider whether it would not be desirable that the figures he wants for the past year should be given.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : In view of the fact that similar questions have been put in this House about the East Indian Railway, would Government mind inquiring into the state of things on that Railway also ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the Honourable Member should give notice of a question on that matter if he wishes it to be inquired into.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do not Government know that I have repeatedly put questions on this subject in the House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : It is quite clear, Sir, from Mr. Joshi's question what is the precise point that he wants to be enquired into, and what are the figures he wants. It is by no means clear what would be the exact point in connection with the East Indian Railway. It is for that reason that the Honourable Member should give notice.

INORDINATE DELAY ON THE PAYMENT OF SALARIES TO THE SUBORDINATE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

465. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the subordinate employees of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration have been complaining for the long and inordinate delay in the payment of their monthly salaries ;

(b) the dates on which the salaries are paid to the employees of different grades and at different stations ;

(c) whether they will take steps to see that payment of salaries is not in any case delayed beyond the first week of every month ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No such complaints have been received.

(b) I am sending the Honourable Member statements showing dates on which different grades are paid on various divisions.

(c) It is not possible to arrange that payment of salaries is in no case delayed more than 7 days beyond the close of the period by the work of which the salaries have been earned. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration are taking steps to secure that there should be no avoidable delay.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask with regard to (a) whether no such complaints have been received either by the Agent or by the Government ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Certainly no complaints have been received by the Government of India or by the Railway Board. The information which I gave the Honourable Member in my reply is that which I received from the Agent.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is it not a fact that complaints in these matters are ordinarily made to the Agent and not to the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat the question ?

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is it not a fact that complaints of this nature are ordinarily made to the Agent and not to the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Yes, Sir, it is certainly a matter with which the Agent should deal.

Mr. M. S. Aney : If that is so, is it not the duty of the Railway Board to inquire from the Agent whether complaints of that nature have been received ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : And that is why, as I have already explained, I did make inquiries from the Agent.

GRANT OF A WEEKLY REST DAY TO THE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

466. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration has proposed to increase the daily working hours of the staff in order to give a weekly off-day ;

(b) what are the exact proposals of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration to give effect to the Geneva Convention ;

(c) whether Government will see that a weekly off-day is given without increasing the present hours of work ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). A large number of the staff on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway already work for 60 or less hours per week in accordance with the terms of the Washington Convention. It is not proposed to increase the number of hours they work in each week, but, in order to give them the benefit of a weekly rest day in accordance with the Geneva Convention, the introduction of a system of rostering has been suggested under which they will work 12 hours a day instead of 8 on two days in the week and 8 hours a day on the remaining four days. To this extent the working hours on certain days would be increased, but the men would receive in one week a continuous rest of 40 hours and in the next two weeks a continuous rest of 32 hours without any increase in the number of their working hours.

(c) Government consider that the proposals of the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway are well devised to give effect to both the Washington and Geneva Conventions, but they understand that he has informed the staff concerned that if they can put forward alternative proposals they will be considered.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is not in the interests of the passengers themselves that railway servants should not be asked to work twelve hours a day ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not think that there is any fear that if the arrangements which the Agent has proposed are put into force by which the staff will only work on two days in the week for twelve hours and will then have a longer period of rest, the interests and safety of passengers will not be properly looked after. The Honourable Member appears to suggest that steps should be taken to give effect to the Geneva Convention and at the same time to reduce the hours of work below those laid down by the Washington Convention.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government of India are aware that the hours fixed by the Washington Convention are maximum hours and are not hours which must necessarily be exceeded ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Government of India are aware of the position, and as the Honourable Member will see from my original reply, the hours of work on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway are generally 56 and not 60.

GRANT OF CASUAL AND PRIVILEGE LEAVE TO THE SUBORDINATE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

467. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the production of the certificate from the Railway Doctor is invariably insisted upon by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration from their subordinate employees for obtaining either casual or privilege leave in case of illness ;

(b) whether it is a fact that the officials who become suddenly ill are denied the request of casual leave for a period up to three days, even though supported by a certificate from a registered medical practitioner under whose treatment he may be ;

(c) whether the certificate referred to in part (b) above is sent for countersignature to the Railway Doctor who refuses to countersign it inasmuch as the official is returned to work after a short illness ;

(d) whether it is a fact that the subordinate officials working at Wadi Bunder in Bombay are not given any day's casual leave even for most urgent and sudden emergency unless they previously apply ; if so, whether the Government will take steps to remove the grievance of the staff ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No medical certificate is required for casual leave or privilege leave from whatever motive it may be applied for.

(b) From the reply so far received to my enquiry I have not been able to ascertain what the exact position is. I am therefore making further enquiries from the Agent and will communicate again with the Honourable Member.

(c) The countersignature of the Railway Medical Officer is required ; it is not refused without good reason.

(d) No. The ordinary rule is that if a man absents himself without leave, leave will not subsequently be granted for the days of absence. This is of course necessary to prevent dislocation of work ; but this rule is not enforced in cases of sickness or of absence on account of unforeseen circumstances.

GRANT OF PERSONAL PAY AND ADVANCE INCREMENTS TO SUBORDINATE OFFICIALS ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

468. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that the Railway Board has accepted a principle of giving advance increments and personal allowance in the case of officials whose yearly promotion has been retarded through no fault of their own for a period of five years and can claim a special grant of advance increments and personal allowance ;

(b) whether they are aware that there are a number of cases of subordinate officials on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway who have been clocked (sic) on one scale of pay through no fault of their own ; if so, whether they apply the same principle in respect of subordinate staff also ; if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Ordinarily, personal pay is not granted to an officer, unless he has been at least five years on the same pay ; but this is by no means the only, or the most important, criterion. I will send the Honourable Member a copy of the instructions with regard to both personal pay and advance increments, if he wishes.

(b) The orders apply equally to subordinates.

DISCHARGE OF FIVE MEN EMPLOYED AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

469. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that five persons working at Wadi Bunder in Bombay on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway were discharged at the end of 1926 under plea of reduction in establishment ; if so, how many years of service each of them had put in ;

(b) whether new men have since been employed ;

(c) whether those discharged men were re-employed ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am collecting the information and will communicate with the Honourable Member in due course.

DISCONTENT AMONG THE SUBORDINATES OF THE ELECTRICAL BRANCH OF THE INDIAN POSTAL AND TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

470. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Are the Government aware of the great and long-standing discontent existing among the subordinate ranks of the Electrical Branch of the Indian Posts and Telegraphs over their pay, prospects, and conditions of service under the dual control of the Traffic and the Engineering Branches ? Do the Government propose taking any steps to improve the efficiency of the Branch and remove the disabilities now obtaining ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Government understand that certain representations from the subordinate ranks of the Electrical Branch of the Posts and Telegraphs Department have just been received by the Director-General and will be considered by him in due course.

ABOLITION OF THE PUNISHMENT OF FLOGGING.

471. Mr. M. S. Aney (on behalf of Lala Lajpat Rai) : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article relating to " Flogging " which appeared in the People, dated September 29th ?

(b) Will the Government state its attitude towards the abolition of the punishment of " Flogging " ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have seen the article referred to.

(b) Government consider that whipping whether as a judicial punishment or as a jail penalty cannot be entirely dispensed with. While they hold that the Whipping Act of 1909 should be retained on the Statute-book I would inform the Honourable Member that Government issued instructions in 1925 through Local Governments and High Courts requiring magistrates to confine the application of section 3 of the Act in practice to cases in which both the status of the offender and the nature of the offence make the punishment of whipping suitable. As a jail penalty whipping is now inflicted only for mutiny or for conduct seriously affecting the discipline of the prison or for incitement thereto, for serious assaults on any public servant or visitor or, after other punishments have failed, for other offences of a specially grave nature.

CLOSING OF THE MALL AT DERA ISMAIL KHAN TO THE INDIAN PUBLIC.

472 Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the local authorities of Dera Ismail Khan have closed the Mall Road of that place to the Indian public, on the ground that its surface was sinking ? If so, why is the road not repaired ?

(b) Is it a fact that military lorries, Europeans, motor-cars of Europeans, their horses, dogs, sweepers, khansamas, bearers, etc., are allowed to pass over the Mall, but not Indian gentlemen ?

(c) Is it a fact that the citizens of Dera Ismail Khan held a public meeting about the 21st August 1928 to protest against this objectionable order, and the President of the meeting said that he " went to the road in order to copy the order, but was stopped by a policeman on duty, who said that he had orders that it was meant to be read and not copied " (vide the Leader, dated the 25th August 1928) ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay a copy of this order on the table ; and also state what steps, if any, are being taken to withdraw it ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Mall Road in Dera Ismail Khan Cantonment has been temporarily closed to the public by the Cantonment Board under the powers vested in them under section 192 of the Cantonments Act, owing to the fact that through lack of rain the road surface was breaking up.

An exception was, however, made in favour of all persons, whether Indian or European, who actually reside on the Mall Road, and who obviously could not be debarred from its use.

A copy of the order in question is laid on the table.

The Government have no further information but they presume that the road will be repaired as quickly as possible, when the order will be withdrawn.

Notice.

Owing to the lack of rain and the breaking up of the surface of the Mall, it is hereby declared under section 192 (2) of the Cantonments Act, 1924, that the Mall is temporarily closed to all traffic with the exception of persons actually resident in the Mall.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know if the Honourable the Foreign Secretary has anything to say on this question ?

Sir Denys Bray : It would be impossible for me to put the answer more neatly.

NUMBER OF APPLICATIONS MADE BY ASSESSEES IN THE DELHI PROVINCE UNDER SECTION 27 OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT, 1922.

473. Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many petitions were made by the assessees in the Delhi Province under section 27 of the Income-tax Act 11 of 1922 for a fresh assessment on the ground of sufficient cause during the last three years ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many out of these petitions were accepted by the Income-tax Officer, Delhi ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state how many assessees whose petitions were rejected under section 27 filed appeals from the orders of rejection during the last three years ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of these appeals were successful ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The number of applications presented by assessees under section 27 was 278 in 1925-26, 201 in 1926-27 and 104 in 1927-28.

(b) Of these, 70 were successful in 1925-26, 45 in 1926-27 and 14 in 1927-28.

(c) and (d). The information is not available. It will be obtained and supplied to the Honourable Member.

GRANT OF A RIGHT OF APPEAL TO PERSONS WHO RECEIVE NOTICES UNDER SECTION 22 (2) AND (4) OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT AS AGENTS OF NON-RESIDENTS LIABLE TO ASSESSMENT.

474. Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the cases of persons who receive notices under section 22 (2) and section 22 (4) of the Income-tax Act as agents of non-residents liable to assessment under section 42 of the said Act, but who deny being agents of such persons and are unable to comply with the notices but are assessed under section 23 (4) by the Income-tax Officer and have no right of appeal ?

(b) Do Government propose to make a provision for appeal in such cases ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Central Board of Revenue have not received any representations on the subject to which the Honourable Member refers. It is not the case, as he suggests, that no appeal lies in such cases. Anyone who is assessed under section 23 (4) may apply to the Income-tax Officer under section 27 to re-open the assessment on the ground that he was prevented by sufficient cause from making the return required by section 22, or from complying with notices issued under section 22 (4) or section 23 (2). If the application is rejected he has an appeal to the Assistant Commissioner under section 30 (1). He may also if necessary move the Commissioner to exercise his revisional powers under section 33. If a point of law is involved, he may claim a reference to the High Court under section 66 (2) and if necessary move the High Court to direct the Commissioner to make a reference to it under section 66 (3).

The fact, if established, that a person was " unable to comply with a notice " would obviously be a " sufficient cause " for not complying with it.

(b) Does not arise.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT AT THE MEETING OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONERS, AND ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

RECRUITMENT OF THE CLERICAL STAFF IN ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

407. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Indian Stores Department and the offices of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, and the Director General of Observatories are offices attached or subordinate to the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(b) Is it a fact that each of these offices gets its staff from the Public Service Commission direct and not through the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(c) Is it also a fact that similarly there are attached offices of the Departments of the Education, Health and Lands, Finance, Commerce and Home ?

(d) Is it a fact that all of the attached offices subordinate to the Departments mentioned in (c) also get their recruits direct from the Public Service Commission and that they have got their own officer who deals with the establishment cases ?

(e) Is it a fact that none of the main offices which has got attached offices has any officer simply dealing with the appointments, leave and transfers of the clerical establishment of the attached offices ?

(f) If the reply to (a) and (c) are in the affirmative, will the Government please state if Army Headquarters are not subordinate or attached offices to the Army Department ?

(g) Is it a fact that every Branch of the Army Headquarters has got its own Officer Supervisor who deals with the establishment ?

(h) If the reply to (g) is in the affirmative, will the Government please state the reasons for keeping the post of the Officer Supervisor in the Army Department who is doing recruitment work for the Army Headquarters ?

(i) Will the Government please let this House know why the Officer Supervisors in the different Branches of the Army Headquarters should not get the staff direct from the Public Service Commission as is done in the Civil Departments ?

(j) In view of the above facts, do Government propose to consider the advisability of abolishing the post of Officer Supervisor with its staff in the Army Department to relieve the Indian tax-payers from this burden ?

(k) If they cannot abolish this post, do Government propose to consider the advisability of abolishing other Officer Supervisors' appointments in all the Branches ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes, so far as the Indian Stores Department is concerned. The recruitment of the staff for the offices of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, and the Director General of Observatories is not done through the Public Service Commission.

(c) and (d). Yes, except that the Commerce Department has no attached office.

(e) Yes.

(f) Not in the sense in which the description is applied to the offices mentioned in (c).

(g) Yes.

(h) There is no post of Officer Supervisor in the Army Department. The recruitment work for Army Headquarters is performed by the Establishment Officer but it forms only a part of his duties.

(i) As a matter of administrative convenience in order to obtain a single co-ordinating authority the Army Headquarters clerical staff is controlled by the Secretary, Army Department, and all questions concerned with recruitment are dealt with in his office. For Army Headquarters to recruit direct from the Public Service Commission would throw a very great burden of work on the Public Service Commission and would undoubtedly result in much overlapping and uneconomical working.

(j) No.

(k) No. The duties of Officer Supervisors are by no means confined to appointments and are sufficiently onerous to justify their retention.

RECRUITMENT OF THE CLERICAL STAFF FOR ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

408. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government please state the number of clerical appointments made by the Officer Supervisor of the Army Department in all the offices under him since January, 1925, and how many of them are Muhammadans, Hindus and Sikhs ?

(b) Will the Government also be pleased to state how many times this officer asked for men from the Public Service Commission since then ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of—

(1) Muhammadans,

(2) Sikhs, and

(3) Hindus

asked for on each occasion ?

(d) Is it a fact that this officer when he did not once get Muhammadans asked the Public Service Commission to send Muhammadans even though they had none and the Public Service Commission was specially asked to supplement the list of passed candidates by Muhammadans only from the unpassed men who appeared at the last examination ?

(e) Will the Government please state how many times he asked for Sikhs ? If not, why not ?

(f) Is it not a fact that the Sikhs are included in minority communities ? If so, was any Sikh candidate sent for from the Public Service Commission in the letter referred in (d) ? If not, why not ?

(g) Is it a fact that the assistant in the office of the Officer Supervisor entrusted with this work is a Muhammadan and that he always asks for Muhammadans only and never any man from the Sikh or Indian Christian community ? If so, will the Government please put some senior assistant other than the Muhammadan or a Hindu in charge of this work ?

(h) Do Government propose to appoint Sikhs in future vacancies in the Army Headquarters ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a)

Total appointments made ..	738
Hindus	305
Muhammadans	211
Sikhs	47

The figures necessarily include appointments which have been given to the same men on different occasions or in different offices throughout the period of 3 years.

(b) The exact number is not known, but it is probably several hundreds.

(c) No particular community is normally asked for.

(d) The Army Department did on one or two occasions ask for Muhammadans. The Public Service Commission were unable to comply fully with the request. The Army Department never asked for unpassed men.

(e) As far as I know Sikhs were never asked for because there was always an ample proportion of them in the office as compared with Muhammadans and Hindus.

(f) Yes. No Sikh candidate was asked for for the reasons at (e) above.

(g) The assistant is a Muhammadan but he works under the orders of the Establishment Officer and has no control in selecting the castes required. It is untrue to say that requisitions are confined to Muhammadans. The last part of the question does not arise.

(h) It will be apparent from (a) that Sikhs are being appointed in a sufficient proportion.

SIKH STENOGRAPHERS AND REPORTERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

409. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that there is not a single Sikh stenographer or Reporter in the Secretariat ?

(b) Is it a fact that Public Service Commission is going to hold an examination for this ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to take Sikhs alike Muhammadans for appointment in the offices as stenographers ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No Sikhs are permanently employed as Reporters or Stenographers in the Government of India Secretariat at present, but two are officiating as Stenographers.

(b) Not in the near future.

(c) The question does not arise.

DUTIES OF THE MUHAMMADAN MEMBER OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION.

410. Sardar Kartar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is the duty of the Muhammadan Member appointed on the Public Service Commission to look after the interests of the Muhammadan community alone ? If so, who is the Member to safeguard the interests of the other minority communities ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative : the second part does not arise.

TRAINING OF INDIAN YOUTHS IN THE SECURITY PRINTING PRESS, NASIK.

411. Sardar Kartar Singh : Has the proposal to train Indian youths in the Security Printing Press, Nasik, and then send them to England for further training for ultimate appointment in that line, been matured ? If so, from which Province and community and how was the last recruitment made ? What are the prospects of that line ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No such proposal has hitherto been considered by the Government of India. The question was raised by the Standing Finance Committee at its meeting on the 30th August 1928, and it will receive in due course the most careful consideration of Government. With reference to the last part of his question, I shall hand to the Honourable Member a statement showing the pay now drawn by the employees of the Security Printing Press in superior pensionable service.

LAVATORIES IN THE THIRD AND INTERMEDIATE CLASS COMPARTMENTS ON THE KALKA-SIMLA RAILWAY.

412. Sardar Kartar Singh : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the lavatories in the third and intermediate class compartments on the Kalka-Simla Railway ? Are Government aware that they are so narrow and small that it is not possible for a healthy man to conveniently enter through the door and if he does with difficulty he cannot make use of them ? Do Government propose to take early steps to remove this difficulty ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The lavatories in all classes of passenger stock on the Kalka-Simla Railway are unavoidably small owing to the restricted dimensions of vehicles on a narrow gauge railway ; but owing to the frequent halts, no great inconvenience should be caused thereby.

RECRUITMENT OF THE IMPERIAL AGRICULTURAL SERVICE FROM POST-GRADUATE STUDENTS OF THE AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE AT PUSA.

413. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) How many post-graduate students are taken each year in the Pusa Agricultural Institute and how many have so far been trained since the existence of the Institute and how have they been provided for ?

(b) Is it a fact that no post is guaranteed to these students as is done in Roorkee and other colleges ? If so, why not ?

(c) Has any student after qualifying himself from this Institute been taken in the Imperial Agricultural Service ? If not, what is the object of establishing this Institute ?

(d) How many Sikhs have so far been trained and in what capacity were they taken after passing the final examination ?

(e) Do the Government propose to recruit their future Imperial Agriculture Service men from this Institute ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a), (b), (c) and (e). The Honourable Member is referred to the replies given to parts (a), (b), (d) and (e) of question No. 406 asked by Mr. Mukhtar Singh on the 12th March 1928. Since that question was answered the number of post-graduate students trained at the Pusa Agricultural Institute has risen to 108.

(d) 5 Sikhs in all have so far been trained. Of these two are serving in the Punjab Department of Agriculture, one is Director of Agriculture, Patiala State, and another is employed in the Khalsa College, Amritsar.

APPOINTMENT OF SIKHS TO THE INDIAN METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

414. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that in September, 1927, a couple of appointments of Assistant Meteorologist were made in the Meteorological Department ?

(b) How many Sikhs were applicants ?

(c) Why has no Sikh so far been appointed in this Department ? Do the Government propose to take steps to give a share of representation to Sikhs in this Department ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) One appointment of Assistant Meteorologist was made in the Indian Meteorological Department in September 1927.

(b) One.

(c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given to part (b) of Sardar Gulab Singh's question No. 312 on the 7th February 1927.

REPRESENTATION OF SIKHS IN THE INDIAN RAILWAY SERVICE OF ENGINEERS AND THE TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT OF THE SUPERIOR REVENUE ESTABLISHMENT OF STATE RAILWAYS.

415. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that some A. T. S. (Imperial) and Engineers (I. S. E.) are to be recruited in the near future ?

(b) How do Government propose to represent the Sikhs in these lines ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is a negligible number of Sikhs in these lines ? If so, do Government propose to take early steps to bring up the required number of Sikhs in these vacancies so as to give them a full share of representation ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. There will be an examination next January.

(b) The recruitment is being carried out under the regulations published in the Government of India Railway Department's Resolution No. 4048-E., dated the 6th July 1927. The examinations prescribed by the regulations were held by the Public Service Commission on 28th November 1927. The representation of minority communities, including Sikhs, is secured by a provision in the regulations that one-third of the vacancies will be reserved for the redress of marked communal inequalities by nomination from among candidates who have attained the qualifying standard at the examinations.

(c) There are at present 2 Sikhs in the Indian Railway Service of Engineers and one in the Traffic Department of the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways. As has been stated, the regulations provide for the reservation of one-third of the vacancies to redress marked communal inequalities provided properly qualified candidates from the communities concerned are available as a result of the examination.

ADMISSION OF SIKH STUDENTS TO THE COLLEGE OF MINES IN DHANBAD.

416. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a College of Mines has been opened at Dhanbad ?

(b) While admitting students do the Government recruit a proportionate number of candidates from each community and Province every year ? If not, why not ?

(c) How was the recruitment made last year and how many Sikhs were admitted ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the reply given on the 12th March 1928 by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to question No. 407 asked by Mr. Mukhtar Singh on the same subject. Eight Sikh students were admitted to the School last year.

NUMBER OF SIKH SUPERINTENDENTS AND ASSISTANTS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES.

417. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government kindly refer to the answer to question No. 663 on the 3rd September, 1925, and say how many Sikhs have so far been appointed in each office in these grades ?

(b) Is it a fact that no Sikh was passed in the First Division in the last examination held by the Public Service Commission to bring their number up to the standard ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) A statement is being placed in the Library.

(b) None of the qualified candidates were Sikhs.

NUMBER OF SIKHS APPOINTED TO THE POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

418. Sardar Kartar Singh : How are the appointments in the Political Department filled up ? Will the Government please state the number of Muhammadans and Sikhs appointed in this line since 1925 ?

Sir Denys Bray : Appointments to the Political Department are made by His Excellency the Viceroy by selection from members of the Indian Civil Service and of the Indian Army holding the King's Commission, and also the Provincial Civil Service in cases of special merit.

Seven Muslims and one Sikh have been appointed since January 1925.

NUMBER OF HINDUS, MUHAMMADANS AND SIKHS EMPLOYED IN THE OFFICES OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL, PUNJAB AND N. W. F. CIRCLE, AND THE DEPUTY POSTMASTER GENERAL, RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, AMBALA.

419. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) With reference to answer to question No. 513, dated the 18th February, 1927, will the Government please state what steps they have taken to increase the number of Sikhs in those offices ?

(b) How many vacancies occurred up till now and how many Sikhs have been taken in each office ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information asked for by the Honourable Member is being collected and will be furnished to him in due course.

SIKH INSPECTORS IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE IN THE PUNJAB.

420. Sardar Kartar Singh : In view of the fact that there are very few Sikh Inspectors in the R. M. S. in the Punjab, will the Government please state how many vacancies in this cadre occurred since January last and how many Sikhs have been recruited ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Six vacancies occurred, and one of them was filled by a Sikh.

TOWN INSPECTORS OF POST OFFICES IN THE PUNJAB CIRCLE.

421. Sardar Kartar Singh : What is the total number of Town Inspectors of Post Offices in the Punjab Circle and how many of them are Muhammadans, Hindus and Sikhs ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The total number of Town Inspectors in the Punjab Postal Circle is 15. Of these, 2 are Muhammadans, 11 are Hindus and 1 is a Sikh.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS IN THE SURVEY OF INDIA.

422. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) What is the total number of Superintendents, Assistant Superintendents, and Extra Assistant Superintendents in the Survey of India Department and how many of them are Anglo-Indians, Muhammadans, Hindus and Sikhs ?

(b) Is it a fact that a couple of Muhammadans were appointed as Probationary Extra Assistant Superintendents on a communal basis ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is no Sikh in this service ?

(d) Do Government propose to take as many Sikhs in future vacancies alike Muhammadans as will give them their full representation in this service ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) A statement giving the information required has been laid on the table of the House.

(b) Two Muhammadans were appointed last year to secure the representation of minority communities. No Sikh was selected as none of the three who appeared for the examination qualified.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government will consider the claims of Sikhs in conformity with the standing orders on the subject of communal representation in the services.

Statement giving information regarding the number of Superintendents, Assistant Superintendents and Extra Assistant Superintendents in the Survey of India Department.

—	Europeans.	Anglo-Indians.	Hindus.	Muhammadans.	Sikhs.	Total.
Superintendents	21	10	3	..	..	34
Assistant Superintendents ..	13	..	..	..	..	13
Extra Assistant Superintendents ..	..	51	30	9	..	90
Total ..	34	61	33	9	..	137

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKH SUPERINTENDENTS IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

423. Sardar Kartar Singh : Is it a fact that out of 19 R. M. S. Superintendents in India there is no Sikh ? Do Government propose to appoint Sikhs in future vacancies ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. Qualified Sikhs will be considered with other candidates in filling future vacancies.

NUMBER OF APPOINTMENTS MADE BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION, ETC.

424. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing all the appointments made so far by the Public Service Commsision since its creation ?

(b) Will the Government kindly show in the statement the number of vacancies offered to the members of the Muhammadan, Christian and Sikh communities separately in each grade along with other communities ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think my Honourable friend is under some misapprehension as to the position. In the first place, the functions of the Public Service Commission extend only to making recommendations for appointments. The actual appointments are made by Government. In the second place, the responsibility for preventing the preponderance of any one class or community rests with the appointing authority and not with the Public Service Commission, who give preference to candidates of minority communities only when they have instructions to do so.

I have, however, obtained from the Commission statements which give an analysis of the results of the various examinations held by them and of the nominations made by them, and I shall be glad to send the Honourable Member a copy of these statements if he so desire.

SUPPLEMENTARY LIST OF PASSED CANDIDATES ISSUED BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION.

425. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Public Service Commission issued a supplementary list of passed Muslim candidates ?

(b) How many Indian Christians and Sikhs were passed by the Public Service Commission on a communal basis at that time or afterwards ?

(c) If the reply to (b) be in the negative, do Government propose to issue a supplementary list of passed candidates from Indian Christians and Sikhs to ensure their adequate representation like Muhammadans ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I understand the Honourable Member's question relates to recruitment to the Government of India Secretariat. The answers are :

(a) Yes.

(b) None.

(c) Government will ask the Public Service Commission to furnish a limited supplementary list of Indian Christians and Sikhs if and when the need arises.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS IN THE OFFICE OF THE RAILWAY BOARD.

426. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government please say why the Railway Board has been permitted to recruit its own staff in the upper, lower and third divisions of the ministerial establishment and why it does not take the help of the Public Service Commission which is the recruiting agency ?

(b) How many Sikhs have been entertained in this office since January 1927 as against Muhammadans and Hindus ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Much of the work in the Railway Board's office is of a technical nature, and it is therefore necessary that the Railway Board should be free to recruit qualified staff from Railways.

(b) 1, 14 and 11 respectively.

THE BUTARI-PATTI-LAHORE RAILWAY.

427. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government please state if the Railway Board has received the project report and estimates of the proposed Butari-Patti-Lahore Railway from the North-Western Railway and come to any decision in regard to the construction of the line ?

(b) If so, will they communicate its decision to the House ?

or

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state what progress has been made in the construction of the Butari-Patti-Lahore Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The project report and traffic estimate are expected by the Railway Board in October and it will then be decided whether the line should be taken up.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS IN CLERICAL APPOINTMENTS IN THE POST OFFICE.

428. Sardar Kartar Singh : Is it a fact that about two years ago the Government issued orders that in recruiting candidates for clerical appointments in the Post Office special consideration should be given to the minority communities ? If it is so, is it a fact that the minority community in the Punjab is the Sikhs, and is it a fact that Muhammadans are specially given every third vacancy in a Division in order to carry out the Government orders ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The Honourable Member presumably refers to general orders which were issued by the Government of India in the Home Department which provided that, in recruiting for the clerical establishments of the Government of India Secretariat and offices subordinate thereto, there should be a reservation of one-third of all permanent vacancies for the redress of communal inequalities. These orders have been circulated and effect is being given to them in the Posts and Telegraphs Department. It is a fact that the Sikh community is one of the minority communities in the Punjab. The local arrangements for recruitment in the Posts and Telegraphs Department are as understood by the Honourable Member, but the whole question is being re-examined and the Honourable Member will be advised in due course of the orders issued in connection with it.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS AS PROBATIONERY SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

429. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that ordinarily graduates are entertained in the Post Office as Probationary Superintendents ?

(b) If so, for what services was one Mr. S. N. Sahibzada, a matriculate, taken on as a Probationary Superintendent in the Punjab in February last ?

(c) Do Government propose to take a Sikh similarly in the next vacancy ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) Though Sahibzada Syed Mahmood is not a graduate he was considered specially suitable for the appointment on the grounds of his personal qualifications and good general education.

(c) The matter rests with the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, with whose discretion Government are not prepared to interfere.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS AS SUPERINTENDENTS IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

430. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Do Government propose to take a Sikh in the next first vacancy in the R. M. S. Superintendentship in view of the fact that there is none in this service ?

(b) If not, why so ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) It is not a fact that there is no Sikh Superintendent in the Railway Mail Service.

(b) Does not arise.

EMPLOYMENT OF SIKHS IN THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF AUDITOR, NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

431. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government please refer to an advertisement by the Chief Auditor, North-Western Railway, Lahore, dated the 24th July 1928, in the Tribune, dated the 5th August 1928, inviting applications from Muhammadans only ignoring the fact that the Sikh representation in his office is equally small and they form the minority ?

(b) If the reply to (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to issue orders that in future vacancies the Sikhs should be recruited until they are adequately represented ? If not, why not ?

(c) Are Sikhs sufficient in number in that office ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement stating the reasons why Sikhs are not recruited in that office ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Enquiry is being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

APPEAL OF MR. SHER SINGH, LATE CLERK, POST OFFICE, PESHAWAR.

432. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if Mr. Sher Singh, late clerk, Post Office, Peshawar, submitted on the 21st May 1928 an appeal addressed to the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, India ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said appeal was withheld by the Postmaster-General, Punjab, vide his No. X. F. S.-13|N., dated the 12th June 1928, on the ground that the language of the appeal was disrespectful and improper ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to point out the portions of the appeal taken exception to by the Postmaster-General ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Sher Singh, late clerk, Peshawar Post Office, alleged in his appeal, dated 21st May 1928, that the Postmaster, Peshawar, concocted a case against him with the help of some of his subordinates in order to win a reward and to get money from the person involved by unfair means ?

(e) Is it a fact that Mr. Sher Singh alleged in the same appeal that the Postmaster, Peshawar, within a few months of his taking over charge dismissed more than half a dozen officials with certain motives in view ?

(f) If the reply to (e) above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the names of the postal officials removed and the names of those out of them who appealed to the Postmaster-General and were reinstated in their posts ?

(g) Is it a fact that Mr. Sher Singh stated in his said representation that the present Postmaster at Peshawar was twice reverted from a Superintendentship on account of his unfitness and misconduct ?

(h) If the reply to (g) above is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the particulars of cases in which the said Postmaster was involved and the name of the Postmaster-General who reported his misconduct to the Government ?

(i) Is it a fact that the said Mr. Sher Singh stated in his representation that the present Postmaster, Peshawar, visited 19 places out of which 16 places were visited without the permission of superior authority ?

(j) If the answer to (i) is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the 19 stations referred to in the question and the particulars of the 16 places to which the Postmaster went on private trips without leave ?

(k) In case the Postmaster went to all the places referred to above with due authority, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the leave orders in respect of each occasion of absence ?

(l) Is it a fact that the said Mr. Sher Singh stated in his representation that on all the visits referred to above the mail contractor's car was used free of charge ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) Government have not seen the appeal.

For the rest the Government see no reason to question the discretion of the Postmaster General in withholding the appeal, which he has reported was couched in most disrespectful and improper language. Mr. Sher Singh has been informed that he should submit an appeal couched in clear, concise and respectful language. No such appeal has been received and in the circumstances the Government are not in a position to deal with the further points raised in the question, nor do they consider any enquiries necessary in such cases where the normal procedure for the representation of grievances has not been adopted.

TOWN INSPECTOR OF POST OFFICES, PESHAWAR.

433. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the length of service of the present Town Inspector, Peshawar, and the particulars of the postal branches in which he worked during his service ?

(b) Is it a fact that the present Town Inspector of Peshawar did not work in any branch of the post office except as a typist prior to his appointment as Town Inspector ?

(c) Is it a fact that one Mr. Sher Singh, late clerk, Peshawar Post Office, stated in his representation to the Director-General that half of the excess drawn by this undeserving official was appropriated monthly by the present Postmaster, Peshawar ?

(d) Is it a fact that the permanent pay of the present Town Inspector was Rs. 60 on his appointment as Town Inspector and that he began to draw Rs. 160 from the date of his officiating appointment ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state if they propose making any enquiries into this serious allegation against the conduct of the present Postmaster ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Government have no information and, in the circumstances explained in my answer to question No. 432, do not consider it necessary to make any enquiries.

REPRESENTATION FROM MR. PESHAWARI MALL, LATE TOWN INSPECTOR OF POST OFFICES, PESHAWAR.

434. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Peshawari Mall, late Town Inspector, Peshawar, attached a statement with his representation to the Postmaster-General, Punjab, showing details of borrowings of the present Postmaster, Peshawar, from Mr. Peshawari Mall ?

(b) Is it a fact that these transactions include borrowing of hard cash and details of articles purchased for household use ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Peshawari Mall stated in his said representation that the Postmaster, Peshawar, evaded payment of his dues and that his demand for his money resulted in his transfer from the post of Town Inspector ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Peshawari Mall stated in his representation that he was made to pay a sum of Rs. 54 by the present Town Inspector, Mr. Acharaj Ram, a most junior official ?

(e) Is it a fact that Mr. Peshawari Mall sent a list of witnesses to prove his allegations but those witnesses were never examined by the Deputy Postmaster-General although he visited Peshawar twice in this connection ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to place on the table the statements recorded, if any, by the Deputy Postmaster-General connected with enquiries into the allegations set forth by Mr. Peshawari Mall in his representation ?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state the result of the enquiries by the Deputy Postmaster-General on which his finding was based keeping in view the fact that no statements were recorded nor were any witnesses examined ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The Government have not received any representation from Mr. Peshawari Mall to whom it is open to utilise the usual departmental procedure if he has any grievance.

In the circumstances Government are unable to answer the Honourable Member's questions, nor do they consider any special enquiries necessary.

PAYMENT OF RENT FOR THE BUILDING OCCUPIED BY THE OLD CITY POST OFFICE, PESHAWAR, AFTER ITS VACATION.

435. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Peshawar City Post Office was shifted to a new building in the year 1927-28 and, if so, from what date ?

(b) Is it a fact that the charge of the old City Post Office building was not personally given over to the owner by the Postmaster, Peshawar, resulting in loss of and damage to several articles belonging to the owner ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government had to set right the damages and to pay for the articles lost and, if so, will the Government be pleased to state the total expenditure incurred in this connection ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the rent of the new and old Peshawar City Post Office building and is it a fact that from the date of occupation of the new building the rent of the old vacated building is also being paid by the Government ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state the aggregate amount that will have to be paid for the old building from the date it was vacated ?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to state if according to the terms of lease the old City Post Office building could be vacated after a month's notice without being liable for payment of rent for the unexpired period of lease ?

(g) If the reply to part (f) of the question is in affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for which the Peshawar City Post Office old building was not finally vacated and payment of rent stopped ?

(h) Will the Government be pleased to state if the old Peshawar City Post Office building was sublet to the proprietor of the building at a monthly rent of Rs. 40 and, if so, from what date ?

(i) Is it a fact that the Postmaster, Peshawar, reported to the Post-master-General that the rent of the old building could not be assessed beyond Rs. 35 against Rs. 135 paid by the Government and that the offer of Rs. 35 was the highest except that it was the proprietor only who offered Rs. 40 in order to take back the possession of the building and to be paid Rs. 95 a month extra for nothing by the Government ?

(j) In view of the fact stated above, do Government propose to stop the payment of rent for the old building since it was vacated ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

RENT FOR THE BUILDING OCCUPIED BY THE NEW POST OFFICE, PESHAWAR SUDDER BAZAR.

436. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the date on which the new Post Office, Peshawar Sudder Bazar, was opened ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to ascertain and state the rent of the building prior to its occupation by the Post Office as entered in the office of the Executive Officer, Peshawar, and for which house-tax was being paid ?

(c) Is it a fact that the rent of the two shops now converted into one by demolition of the partition wall was Rs. 14 a month against Rs. 30 paid by the Post Office ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if there was any justification for doubling the rent for the simple reason that the proprietor had to make small alterations and repairs at a cost not exceeding Rs. 300 ?

(e) Is it a fact that the proprietor of the building presented to the Postmaster, Peshawar, a billiard table the cost whereof appears debited to the account of the proprietor and, if so, was it permissible to accept it ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

ALLEGED USE FOR PRIVATE PURPOSES OF THE SERVICES OF POSTAL OFFICIALS BY THE POSTMASTER, PESHAWAR.

437. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, had to issue a warning to his subordinates to the effect that drastic action will be taken against officers using postal officials for their private services ?

(b) Is it a fact that the representation of Mr. Sher Singh, late clerk, Peshawar H. O., and the appeals of Mr. Peshawari Mall and Ram Lal and Ghulam Hussain, Postman, Peshawar Post Office, contained allegations to the effect that Dheru and Azadmir, the whole time inferior servants of the Post Office, are being used by the Postmaster, Peshawar, as private servants, the former as a bearer and the latter as a motor driver ?

(c) Is it a fact that Azadmir, one of the two persons named above, was paid Rs. 15 per mensem by the contractor for motor driving service and this sum was accepted by the said official with the knowledge of the Post-master and without the permission of the competent authority ?

(d) Is it a fact that Sher Singh alleged in his representation, dated 21st May 1928, that the said Azadmir conveyed mails on motor to six stations during the months of February and March 1928 without obtaining leave on the dates stated in the allegation and that the signature of Azadmir is affixed to the mail list of the officers which supports the allegation ?

(e) In view of the facts stated above, will the Government be pleased to state the action they propose to take against the Postmaster, Peshawar, in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : As regards (a) it is a fact that the Director-General issued a warning to the effect mentioned by the Honourable Member.

For the rest, as regards the representation of Mr. Sher Singh, I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given to his question No. 432. No appeals have been received by the Government of India from Mr. Peshawari Mall, Ram Lal and Ghulam Hussain, and the Government are not accordingly in possession of the facts concerning the points mentioned by the Honourable Member, nor do they consider it necessary to make special enquiries when the persons concerned have not themselves exhausted the ordinary procedure prescribed for representing grievances.

GOVERNMENT SERVANTS AND MEMBERSHIP OF THE ANGLO-INDIAN ASSOCIATION.

438. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the All-India Anglo-Indian Association is one of the political associations in India like the Muslim League and the Hindu Sabha ?

(b) Is it a fact that a meeting of the Anglo-Indian Association was held in Calcutta in connection with the Simon Commission and other political rights of the Anglo-Indian community ?

(c) Is it a fact that Government servants are forbidden either from being the office bearers of such political associations or from taking any active part except on behalf of the Government ?

(d) Is it a fact that the present Postmaster, Peshawar, is the Secretary of the local branch of the All-India Anglo-Indian Association and that he took an active part in the deliberations of the Calcutta meeting referred to above ?

(e) If the reply to part (d) of the question is in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the action they propose to take against the present Postmaster, Peshawar ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) So far as the Government of India are aware the Anglo-Indian Association has been constituted mainly as an aid to the moral and material progress of the community. I would in this connection draw the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given by Sir Malcolm Hailey on the 8th March 1924 to Mr. B. C. Roy's question No. 611.

(b) The Government of India understand that meetings of the Association were held to consider among other things the preparation of a memorandum for presentation to the Indian Statutory Commission.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to rules 22 and 23 of the Government Servants' Coduct Rules.

(d) Government have no information and do not consider enquiry necessary.

(e) Does not arise.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. RAM LAL AS AN ACCOUNTANT IN THE PESHAWAR POST OFFICE.

439. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 31 by Mr. B. P. Naidu in September 1927 Session, will the Government be pleased to state whether the seniority referred to in the reply means seniority of position in the gradation list in the same cadre irrespective of date of passing the examination ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government do not allow supersession by juniors in the same Postal Clerical Cadre on the plea of priority in passing the accountants examination ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Gayan Chand, one of the most senior clerks in the Peshawar Post Office, worked in the Accounts Branch for nearly 15 years and gave satisfaction in his work ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Gayan Chand passed the accountants' examination in 1927 creditably and one Mr. Ram Lal passed in 1926 with grace marks ?

(e) Is it a fact that the said Mr. Ram Lal is a very junior official and worked in the Accounts Branch under Mr. Gayan Chand and was trained by the latter ?

(f) Is it a fact that in defiance of the Government orders referred to in reply to the question quoted above the Postmaster, Peshawar, appointed Mr. Ram Lal as accountant in 1928 and kept Mr. Gayan Chand to work under him without declaring the latter as inefficient ?

(g) Will the Government be pleased to state if in 1928 there was any other certificated accountant in the Peshawar Post Office senior to Mr. Ram Lal available to be posted as accountant ?

(h) In view of the unjustified supersessions of seniors by juniors in the same cadre by some officers of the department for want of communication of Government orders to them officially, do Government propose to communicate these orders by a General Letter to all Superintendents and 1st Class Postmasters to protect the interests of senior men ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Seniority means seniority of position in the gradation list.

(b) Yes.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(c), (f), (g) and (h). The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member when received.

APPOINTMENT OF POSTAL CLERKS AS TOWN INSPECTORS OF POST OFFICES.

440. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) With reference to reply to unstarred question No. 124 of last March Session, will the Government be pleased to state the pay of postal clerks before and after their appointments as Town Inspectors in the revised scale of Rs. 160—250 in 1927 as also the difference between the two pays referred to above separately in each case ?

(b) Is it a fact that if clerks on a substantive pay of Rs. 145 were appointed Town Inspectors in the Rs. 160—250 grade the additional cost to Government would have been far less than what it has been by the appointment of junior postal clerks as Town Inspectors ?

(c) In view of these circumstances, do Government propose to appoint the senior deserving officials without waiting for the result of 1st selection grade examination in order to reduce the cost to the Government and to do justice to the senior officials ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) A statement giving the information will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

(b) It is possible that in the circumstances mentioned by the Honourable Member there might have been some saving in cost.

(c) Government are not prepared to alter the existing arrangement pending the results of the first selection grade examination.

PROVISION OF A MOTOR GARAGE IN THE PREMISES OF THE POST OFFICE, PESHAWAR, ETC.

441. Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the map of the Peshawar Head Post Office does not show any provision for a motor garage in the premises of the Post Office ?

(b) Is it a fact that a room adjacent to the Postmaster's quarters is being used as a motor garage ?

(c) Is it a fact that the present Postmaster fitted doors to the said garage and that the cost thereof was borne by the owner of Peshawar City Post Office new building in whose accounts the said expenditure would be found debited ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if the conduct of the Postmaster, Peshawar, in this respect was objectionable and, if so, what action they propose to take in the matter ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : The information asked for by the Honourable Member is being obtained and will be furnished to him in due course.

REMARKS OF PROFESSOR REILEY REGARDING NEW DELHI.

445. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that Professor Reiley, who recently visited India to study the architecture of Delhi, told a gathering of Manchester Rotarians that " none wanted New Delhi ", and he " severely criticised the New Parliament House, which was not comparable with the original design, and suggested a gasometer " (vide the Englishman, dated the 30th July 1928, page 7) ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Yes.

THE AGE OF CONSENT COMMITTEE.

446. Mr. M. K. Acharya : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state :

(i) the purpose for which the Age of Consent Committee has been appointed ;

(ii) the special qualifications, if any, of its members ;

(iii) whether any representations have been received from the Presidency of Madras or elsewhere, requesting the Government to nominate as member a representative of orthodox Hindu opinion on it ;

(iv) and if the answer to clause (iii) be in the affirmative, why the Government have not chosen to accede to the request ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Chairman of the said Committee, at a recent public meeting held at Simla, spoke strongly in favour of the proposed marriage reform legislation and strongly also deprecating orthodox opposition to it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The Home Department Resolution No. F.-382 27, dated the 25th June 1928, a copy of which has been placed in the Library, states the terms of reference to the Committee and also the qualifications of the members. Government have received representations asking for the nomination of a representative of orthodox Hindu opinion, and have accordingly appointed Rai Bahadur Pandit Kanhaiya Lal.

(b) Government understand that the answer to this part of the question is in the negative.

APPOINTMENT OF A SIKH AS A JUDGE OF THE HIGH COURT, LAHORE.

447. Sardar Kartar Singh : In view of the fact that no Sikh has ever been appointed as High Court Judge in the Punjab, do Government propose to appoint a Sikh in the next vacancy ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Permanent appointments to the High Courts are made by His Majesty under section 101 of the Government of India Act. Courts of justice are not representative institutions, and the main consideration in filling up vacancies in high judicial appointments must always be that of efficiency. Subject to this the claims of Sikhs no less than those of members of other communities receive and will continue to receive due consideration.

PROVISION FOR ORPHANS AND WIDOWS OF GOVERNMENT SERVANTS OTHER THAN MEMBERS OF INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

448. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : (a) Have Government framed any rules to provide maintenance to orphans and widows of Government servants, other than members of I. C. S., who die in harness ? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay them on the table ?

(b) Do Government propose to take steps to provide rules for granting maintenance by grant of pension or otherwise on proper lines to the said orphans and widows ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A Family Pension Fund has recently been instituted for pensionable European and Anglo-Indian members of the superior civil services other than the Indian Civil Services.

The benefits derivable from this Fund in the way of family pension will, it is intended, be provided by the subscriptions of the members of the Fund themselves. The rules of the Fund were published in the Gazette of India, Part I, dated the 25th of August 1928, a copy of which will be found in the Library. Another scheme which has a similar object in view and which would apply to other categories of Government servants employed under the Governor General in Council is at present under the consideration of the Government of India. Detailed calculations connected therewith are being prepared by the Government Actuary and are nearly ready. The leading feature of the particular scheme to which I refer is that provision should be made for the dependants of Government servants by substituting payments of lump sums for the whole or a portion of the pension which is being earned.

ARTICLE IN THE Times of India REGARDING THE FOUNDER OF ISLAM.

449. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : (a) Are Government aware that in an issue of June last, the English paper Times of India wrote contemptuously against the Founder of Islam, by which the feelings of His Majesty's Muslim subjects have been disturbed ?

(b) Have Government taken any action against the paper ? If not, what steps do Government propose to take to bring the paper to its senses ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Nothing of the sort has come to the notice of the Government of India.

(b) Does not arise.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE INDIAN FOREST SERVICE.

450. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Baksh Shah : (a) Will the Government please state the total number of employees in each of the provinces in the Imperial Forest Service and how many of them are Muhammadans ?

(b) Will the Government please state whether any action is being taken by them to maintain the communal rights of the Muslims by putting the number of Muhammadans in the above service up to the mark ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) A statement giving the information required regarding the Indian Forest Service has been laid on the table of the House.

(b) A number of vacancies are reserved to be filled by nomination for the purpose of adjusting communal inequalities which may arise as a result of the competitive examination which is the principal avenue for recruiting for the Indian Forest Service. In this connection, I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the statement made by the late Sir Alexander Muddiman in the Council of State on the 2nd March 1925.

Statement showing the number of Indian Forest Service officers and Muslim Indian Forest Service officers in service on 1st January 1928.

ENHANCEMENT OF PENSIONS OF MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

452. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will Government please state if it is a fact that, in the early part of 1925, when Lord Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, sanctioned the proposal submitted by the Government of India to enhance the pensions of departmental officers, he did so on the express condition that the Indian Medical Department be included in this scheme along with the other Departments ?

(b) If the reply is in the affirmative, will Government kindly state why the orders of the Secretary of State were not carried out ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No, Sir.

(b) Does not arise.

PROBATIONARY ASSISTANT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENTS ON THE BURMA RAILWAYS.

453. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the number of probationary Assistant Traffic Superintendents recently recruited by the Burma Railways through advertisements in the papers ?

(b) the qualifications and nationality of those who were accepted and entertained ?

(c) the number of Anglo-Indians who applied for these posts and their respective qualifications ?

(d) if any Anglo-Indians were asked to appear before the Selection Board ? If so, how many ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am making enquiries and will communicate the result to the Honourable Member.

TIME SCALE OF PAY FOR THE NINE TRANSPORTATION OFFICERS OF THE OLD OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY TRANSFERRED TO THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

454. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact

(i) that there are 9 Transportation Inspectors belonging to the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, who have been absorbed into the East Indian Railway after the amalgamation of the two Railways and who are borne on graded pay ?

(ii) that on all Class I Railways these are the only 9 Inspectors who are still on graded pay ?

(iii) that all or some of these 9 Inspectors have specially been selected as Instructors in the Transportation School, Chandausi ?

(iv) that the Government is considering the introduction of a new scale of pay for these men which will not materially benefit them ?

(b) Do Government propose to take early steps to remedy this inequitable condition and introduce a more beneficial time scale of pay with an efficiency bar as obtains in other Government Departments ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information will be collected from Railway Administrations, and will be communicated to the Honourable Member when it is ready.

INTRODUCTION OF A SYSTEM OF RE-EXAMINATION OF THE STAFF ON THE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND SECTION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

455. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that great discontent and dissatisfaction prevail on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section of the East Indian Railway on account of the newly introduced system of re-examination of the staff which is demanded, before promotion to higher grades is allowed, in duties they have been performing for many years and for which these men possess certificates of having passed the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway examinations ? If so, why has this system been introduced ?

(b) Do Government propose to take any action to remedy this ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Honourable Member has been misinformed. The true facts are that it is only in exceptional cases when there are indications that a man is working inefficiently that he is required to pass another test in the interests of public safety.

(b) Government do not, therefore, propose to take any action.

PROMOTION OF EMPLOYEES OF THE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND SECTION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

456. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that as the higher grade appointments especially in the Loco. Department of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section of the East Indian Railway fall vacant they are offered to the men from the East Indian Railway section ?

(b) Is it a fact that the rights and claims of even the most senior and deserving men of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section are thereby ignored ?

(c) If so, do Government propose to take any steps to safeguard the interests of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section employees so that all such vacancies occurring in the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section be given to the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section men ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is not a fact that no staff of the former Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway have been promoted to the higher grades on this section since its amalgamation with the East Indian Railway. In fact a considerable number of former Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway men in the locomotive subordinate supervising staff have been transferred to former East Indian Railway areas to their financial benefit. Difficulty is experienced in getting suitable senior locomotive running staff of the former Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway to take up subordinate supervising posts even on this section owing to their mileage rates being so favourable as to render them liable to financial loss should they make the change.

Government cannot agree to the suggestion that all vacancies occurring in subordinate supervising posts on the former Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section should be reserved for men of this Railway. They must be prepared to serve anywhere on the East Indian Railway.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF MENIALS IN BOMBAY.

266. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Have Government received a petition from the Government Peons, and Menial Service Union of Bombay for an improvement in the conditions of service applicable to this class of public servants ?

If so, will they say (1) when they received the petition, and (2) what action they have taken on it, particularly with regard to the demands of these men for increases in pay and pension ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply already given to starred question No. 220, asked by Mr. M. R. Jayakar in this Session.

CLAIM AGAINST THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT BY MR. MEHERJI BHICAJI OF PORTUGUESE EAST AFRICA.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply already given to starred question No. 220, asked by Mr. M. R. Jayakar in this Session.

CLAIM AGAINST THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT BY MR. MEHERJI BHICAJI OF PORTUGUESE EAST AFRICA.

267. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Is it a fact that one Mr. Meherji Bhicaji, a British Indian subject, carrying on business in Portuguese East Africa, a few years back, had lodged a claim for reparation on the 22nd

July 1919 with the Controller, Local Clearing Office (Enemy Debts), Government of India ?

(b) Is it a fact that the claim was in connection with the loss of 150 cases of soap valued at £158-9-8 ordered by the party and shipped by the German s. s. " Etruria " in June 1914 from Lisbon to Lourenco Marques ?

(c) Is it a fact that the consignment in question did not reach the party, as owing to the outbreak of the War, the vessel took refuge in Rio de Janeiro and the soap was utilised by the crew of the steamer ?

(d) Is it a fact that the claim was ultimately turned down in April 1928 on the ground that the loss of the consignment was not directly due to enemy action and as such it did not give rise to a claim for reparation as defined in the Treaty with Germany ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to inform me as to what claims are included in the Treaty with Germany for reparation ?

Mr. L. Graham : The answer to (a) is in the affirmative, except that the claim was lodged with H. B. M.'s Consul General, Lourenco Marques, and forwarded by him to the Reparation Claims Department of the Board of Trade.

The answers to (b) and (c) are in the affirmative.

The answer to (d) is in the affirmative, except that the claim was actually rejected on 25th November 1925.

The communication of 21st April 1928 was a reply to an enquiry from the claimant received through the Reparation Claims Department of the Board of Trade as to the fate of his claim.

The answer to (e) will be found in Annexure I of Part VIII of the Treaty of Versailles, copy of which is attached.

It will be seen from clause (9) that damage to property must be directly in consequence of hostilities or of any operations of war in order to give rise to a reparation claim.

ANNEXURE I.

Compensation may be claimed from Germany under Article 232 above in respect of the total damage under the following categories :—

(1) Damage to injured persons and to surviving dependents by personal injury to or death of civilians caused by acts of war, including bombardments or other attacks on land, on sea, or from the air, and all the direct consequences thereof, and of all operations of war by the two groups of belligerents wherever arising.

(2) Damage caused by Germany or her allies to civilian victims of acts of cruelty, violence or maltreatment (including injuries to life or health as a consequence of imprisonment, suite deportation, internment or evacuation, of exposure at sea or of being forced to labour, wherever arising and to the surviving dependents of such victims.

(3) Damage caused by Germany or her allies in their own territory or in occupied or invaded territory to civilian victims of all acts injurious to health or capacity to work, or to honour, as well as to the surviving dependents of such victims.

(4) Damage caused by any kind of maltreatment of prisoners of war.

(5) As damage caused to the peoples of the Allied and Associated Powers, all pensions and compensation in the nature of pensions to naval and military victims of war (including members of the air force), whether mutilated, wounded, sick or invalided, and to the dependents of such victims, the amount due to the Allied and Associated Governments being calculated for each of them as being the capitalized cost of such pensions and compensation at the date of the coming into force of the present Treaty, on the basis of the scales in force in France at such date.

(6) The cost of assistance by the Governments of the Allied and Associated Powers to prisoners of war and to their families and dependents.

(7) Allowances by the Governments of the Allied and Associated Powers to the families and dependents of mobilised persons or persons serving with the forces, the amount due to them for each calendar year in which hostilities occurred being calculated for each Government on the basis of the average scale for such payments in force in France during that year.

(8) Damage caused to civilians by being forced by Germany or her allies to labour without just remuneration.

(9) Damage in respect of all property wherever situated belonging to any of the Allied or Associated States or their nationals, with the exception of naval and military works or materials, which has been carried off, seized, injured or destroyed by the acts of Germany or her allies on land, on sea or from the air, or damage directly in consequence of hostilities or of any operations of war.

(10) Damage in the form of levies, fines and other similar exactions imposed by Germany or her allies upon the civilian population.

CLOSING OF THE MALL IN DERA ISMAIL KHAN TO THE INDIAN PUBLIC.

268. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Is it a fact that the Mall has been or is proposed to be closed to the Indian public in Dera Ismail Khan ? If so, what are the grounds on which such action has been taken or is under contemplation, and under what law have Indians been discriminated against ?

(b) What steps have Government taken to prevent this discrimination ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No, Sir.

The Mall Road in Dera Ismail Khan Cantonment has been temporarily closed to the public by the Cantonment Board under the powers vested in them in section 192 of the Cantonments Act owing to the fact that through lack of rain the road surface was breaking up.

An exception was however made in favour of all persons, whether Indian or European, who actually reside on the Mall Road, and who obviously could not be debarred from its use.

(b) Does not arise.

PENALISING OF STRIKERS.

269. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that some years ago the Government of India proposed to the Secretary of State for India that strikes should be made a criminal offence but that Lord Morley rejected the proposal ? If so, will Government place a copy of the correspondence on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not been able to trace any such proposal, though in 1906 there was a suggestion that the withdrawal of railway servants from their duties without notice be penalised. Government regret that they are not prepared to lay a copy of the correspondence, which took place at that time, on the table.

EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

270. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Has the question of the education of the children of railway employees been placed by Government in accordance with the promise given by them during the Railway Budget debate on the 25th February last, before the Central Advisory Council for Railways ? If so, what are the recommendations made by the Advisory Council ?

(b) If the answer is in the negative, will Government state when they propose to convene a meeting of the Advisory Council for the consideration of the question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will place the question before the Central Advisory Council for Railways at a meeting during the course of the present month.

PAY OF THE HEADMASTERS AND TEACHERS OF INDIAN HIGH OR MIDDLE SCHOOLS MAINTAINED BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

271. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Have any grades or incremental scales been laid down for the salaries of the headmasters and teachers of Indian high or middle schools maintained by the East Indian Railway except in the case of the Khagole (Patna) High School ? If not why not ?

(b) Is the enforcement of the scale fixed for the headmaster and teachers of the Khagole High School conditional on funds being available ? Have the East Indian Railway provided the necessary funds ?

(c) Is there any other class of subordinate Indian employees on the East Indian Railway for whose salary no grades or incremental scales have been fixed ?

(d) Is it a fact that even temporary men engaged for construction work have been allowed incremental scales of salaries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Enquiry is being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

DEATH FROM SNAKE BITE OF DAFFATRAY SHIVLAL, A CABIN MAN EMPLOYED ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

272. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether on the 16th April 1928 a cabin man by name Daffatray Shivlal working at Umbarmali 69 Mileage Cabin on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway met with his death by snake bite ;

(b) whether the deceased had to walk to and from the Cabin at odd hours at night to join his duties or to the station to get into the train ;

(c) whether this was due to the non-stoppage of trains at the wayside cabins for the convenience of the cabin staff ;

(d) whether trains were so stopped till very recently ;

(e) if so, the reasons for discontinuing the old practice ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information. The matter is within the competence of the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to whom a copy of the Honourable Member's question has been sent. I may add that in the opinion of the Railway Board the stoppage of trains at wayside cabins is certainly undesirable.

WORKING HOURS OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY STAFF EMPLOYED AT GHORPADI NEAR POONA.

273. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) what are the working hours of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway staff working at Ghorpadi near Poona ;

(b) the number of men working at Ghorpadi ;

(c) whether it is a fact that one of the platforms at Ghorpadi is without any shed and the staff have to work in the sun and rain without any protection ;

(d) whether the work of loading and unloading is done simultaneously ;

(e) whether it is a fact that the transhipment clerks at Ghorpadi have not been provided with any table, chair, stool or any other material on which they could make the usual entries of goods loaded and unloaded ;

(f) whether the staff working at Ghorpadi have been provided with quarters ;

(g) if not, whether they have to stay at Poona as there are no houses available at Ghorpadi ;

(h) whether the staff at Ghorpadi have to be away from their homes from early morning till late in the evening ;

(i) whether any furnished tiffin-rooms have been provided there for the use of the staff ;

(j) whether the tiffin-rooms at Ghorpadi are mere enclosures constructed of old corrugated iron-sheets, without any windows, plinth or flooring ;

(k) what is the minimum quantity of daily work that has to be done by each transhipment-clerk and each cooly at Ghorpadi ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information. A copy of the Honourable Member's question will be sent to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, who will no doubt remove any defects there may be in the arrangements at Ghorpadi.

DISCHARGE OF TEMPORARY CLERKS EMPLOYED AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

274. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that there are many clerks who have been serving in the Great Indian Peninsula Railway at Wadi

Bunder in Bombay under the Goods Superintendent for several years but who have not been confirmed ;

(b) if so, what is the number of such clerks with years of service to their credit ;

(c) whether it is a fact that in July 1928 the services of five of such clerks were dispensed with without giving even a day's notice and without any fault of theirs ;

(d) if so, whether there were many clerks junior to those whose services were thus dispensed with ;

(e) whether it is a fact that it is proposed to dispense with the services of many more such temporary clerks who have put in service of ten years and below ;

(f) whether it is a fact that with this object in view they were unusually examined in subjects such as mathematics and dictation ?

OFFERING OF PERMANENT EMPLOYMENT TO PAID CANDIDATES WORKING AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

275. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that the paid candidates serving at Wadi Bunder on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in Bombay have not been made permanent even after some of them have served for three years ?

(b) if so, what are the reasons for the same ?

PROMOTION OF PAID CANDIDATES WORKING AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

276. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that the paid candidates working at Wadi Bunder on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway were given a promotion of Rs. 5 after having served for six months ;

(b) whether this system or rule has been changed ; if so, when and for what reasons ;

(c) whether the staff were informed of discontinuing such promotion ;

(d) if not, why not ?

DISTINCTION IN THE RATES OF PAY OF CLERKS EMPLOYED AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

277. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that at the Wadi Bunder Goods Depôt of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway a distinction in the rates of pay is made in the case of the clerks such as cashiers, loaders, weighers, raters, etc., doing precisely the same kind of work and having their responsibilities, the nature of work and hours of attendance in no way different ?

(b) If so, whether some of these officials though junior in service are drawing more pay than others who have longer years of faithful service to their credit and possess equal qualifications—educational or otherwise ?

(c) If so, what are the reasons for keeping such distinctions in the pay ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the principle of equal pay for equal work is not and cannot be recognised and given effect to in the case of the officials serving at Wadi Bunder under the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration ?

PAY OF THE STAFF EMPLOYED AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

278. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) what are the scales of pay of the officials working at Carnac Bunder of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway and of those working at Wadi Bunder Goods Depôt of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway;

(b) whether it is a fact that there is no difference in the nature of work, hours of attendance or the responsibilities in the case of these officials at Carnac Bunder and Wadi Bunder ;

(c) whether it is a fact that the scale of pay of the Wadi Bunder staff is even lower than that of the staff of the East Indian Railway working at the Howrah Goods Depôt despite the heavy cost of living in Bombay ;

(d) whether it is a fact that at Wadi Bunder there are only 7½ per cent. posts carrying a pay of Rs. 100 or above while this percentage is far greater in all other railway offices in Bombay, such as :

Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway at C. C. Depot.	46
East Indian Railway at Howrah Depot	45
Great Indian Peninsula C. T. M. Office	44
Great Indian Peninsula Audit Office	39
Great Indian Peninsula General Store Office ..	29
Bombay, Baroda and Central India C. T. M.'s Office ..	53
Bombay, Baroda and Central India Audit Office ..	53

and so on ;

(e) whether it is a fact that there are so many officials working at Wadi Bunder who have put in 15 years of good service to their credit but are drawing a salary of Rs. 50 or 60 only per month ;

(f) whether the officials at Wadi Bunder have been requesting for a substantial increase in their pay ;

(g) if so, what action has been taken in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 274 to 278 and 282 together. Government regret that they are not prepared to impose on the Railway Administration the work of compiling the information necessary to answer the Honourable Member's question.

ADMISSION OF THE PUBLIC TO THE SHED OFFICES AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

279. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether they are aware that the members of the public are freely allowed to enter in the Shed Offices at Wadi Bunder, thereby causing unnecessary trouble and annoyance to the typists and hindering them in the due performance of their work ;

(b) whether it is a fact that on more than one occasion the typists at Wadi Bunder were assaulted and molested by the members of the public ;

(c) if so, what precautions have been taken to prevent the repetition of such occurrences in future ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No members of the public are allowed to enter the office where typists work.

(b) A Delal made a forced entry into the office on one occasion only.

(c) In view of reply to (a) above, the question does not arise.

RECOVERY OF LOSSES IN THE CASE OF SHORTAGE OF PACKAGES FROM THE STAFF OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

280. Mr. N M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the staff of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have given debits of heavy sums for the alleged shortages found at destination or junction stations in the "Seals Intact Wagons";

(b) whether any enquiries are made to trace the short packages and, if so, what enquiries are made ;

(c) whether it is a fact that in several such cases of shortages, the junction stations report such shortages while the packages found their way onward in excess ;

(d) whether it is a fact that packages which are sent to unclaimed Goods Offices happen to be those which are reported to be short ;

(e) whether it is a fact that in view of the fact that a strict watch has been maintained by the Watch and Ward Department everywhere no theft or fraud is ever possible to be committed by the staff ;

(f) whether it is a fact that the staff is made to make good the losses on this score without proving their responsibility in any way ; if so, do they propose to issue orders to stop recovery of losses from the staff ; if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no knowledge of the facts and regret that they cannot undertake to enquire into these matters, which are entirely within the competence of the Agent of the Railway.

LOADING OF WAGONS AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

281. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that at Wadi Bunder, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, the wagons which are utilised for loading are examined by the Carriage and Wagon Department, shed foreman and the loaders ;

(b) whether it is a fact that in cases where any deficiency is noted owing to defect in the wagons, the loader alone is held responsible and punished ; if so, why so ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information but are sending a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, for such action as may appear to him to be necessary.

CHIEF GOODS INSPECTOR AT WADI BUNDER, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

282.† Mr. N M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) when the post of Chief Goods Inspector was created at Wadi Bunder, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and for what reasons and with what duties ;

(b) what is the work which the Chief Inspector does ;

(c) whether it is a fact that this post was created when the Railway was feeling the necessity of reducing the expenses of running the Depôt in view of the depression in traffic ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 274.

NUMBER OF TELEGRAPHISTS NOMINATED TO THE TESTING BRANCH IN THE BOMBAY CENTRAL TELEGRAPH OFFICE TO LEARN TESTING, ETC.

283. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement of figures up to 31st July 1928, as required in the following table ?

	Anglo-Indians.		Christians.		Parsis.		Jews.		Mohamedans.		Hindus.
	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.	Technically-qualified.	Non-qualified.
(1) Number of Telegraphists nominated to the Testing Branch in the Bombay Central Telegraph Office, to learn testing work, under Article 51 of Posts and Telegraphs Manual (Traffic-Instructions), Volume XI, Parts I and II, during the last 10 years.
(2) Number of such Telegraphists returned as incompetent or otherwise unsuitable during the above-mentioned period.
(3) Number of Telegraph Masters appointed in charge of the Testing Branch of the C. T. O., Bombay, during the last 10 years.
(4) Number of Telegraph Masters so appointed, reverted, as incompetent.
(5) Number of Telegraphists transferred to the Engineering Branch (outdoor) from C. T. O., Bombay, during the last 10 years.
(6) Number of Telegraphists reverted from the outdoor Engineering Branch, Bombay, as unsuitable, during the above-mentioned period.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The time and labour involved in collecting the information would, in the opinion of the Government, be out of all proportion to the value of the information when collected.

LINK WITH THE COALFIELDS IN BENGAL.

284. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the paragraph published in the issue of the Statesman of the 21st August 1928, page 13, under the heading " Link with Bengal's Coalfields—Chord Railway—Preliminary work of scheme completed " ?

(b) If so, will Government please state if the statements made therein are correct ?

(c) If correct, will they please state by what time the railway line is expected to be completed and opened for traffic ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The statements made are substantially correct.

(c) The end of 1930 or beginning of 1931.

REMOVAL OF OFFICERS OF THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT FOR FAILURE TO PASS THE DEPARTMENTAL EXAMINATION.

285. Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state how many officers of the Income-tax Department in each Province have been removed from service for failure to pass the departmental examination since the reorganisation of the Department in 1922 ?

(b) Will the Government be further pleased to state if there is any duly constituted Examination Board to supervise the conduct of the examination or is the matter entirely left to the sweet will of the examiner ?

(c) Are the Government aware that there is a most growing belief in the country that the departmental examination of the Income-tax Department is being now made stiffer beyond any justification with a view to materialise the policy of retrenchment afoot in the Department ?

(d) Do the Government propose to investigate into the present system of the examination and training and to remedy the defects, if any, at an early date ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The information will be obtained and communicated to the Honourable Member.

(b) There is no Examination Board for the examination of officers of the Income-tax Department.

(c) No.

(d) Government do not consider that an investigation is necessary.

ISSUE OF WEEK-END RETURN TICKETS BY THE BENGAL AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

286. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the Bengal and North-Western Railway Company does not issue week-end return tickets to any class of passengers ?

(b) Do Government propose to introduce this system ; and if so, since when ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) Government have no information. They will send a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the Railway, with whom the decision rests.

LUGGAGE RULES OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

287. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that great hardship is experienced by passengers who cannot book their luggage for want of time owing to operation of rules 2 and 14 of the Luggage Rules mentioned in the East Indian Railway time-table ? Is there any proposal to amend the rules so as to relieve them of the penalty ? If so, in what way ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are aware that there is some dissatisfaction with the existing rules. The question whether the rule should be altered to admit of the free allowance being given if the luggage is not booked at the starting station is under the consideration of the Indian Railway Conference Association.

WORKING CONDITIONS OF THE RAILWAY EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

288. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Will the Government be pleased to collect and lay on the table the following information regarding the working conditions of the railway employees on each of the State Railways separately ?

1. Into what groups, categories or sections are the workers on the Railways divided ?
2. What characterises each of these groups ?
3. What is the correlation as to wages between the highest and the lowest of these groups ?
4. What systems of labour remuneration are generally employed on the Railways and particularly in:

(a) The principal workshops,
(b) The railway yards,
(c) For locomotive crews,
(d) For train crews,
(e) For traffic crews,
(f) For telegraphists,
(g) For road repair works,
(h) For administration office employees,
(i) For lower subordinates designated as menials ?

5. How are the rates of remuneration fixed for piece-workers and time-workers ?
6. Are the rates of train runs taken into consideration in fixing the rates of remuneration for locomotive and train crews and traffic gatemen ?
7. What purely bonus systems are in existence (enumerate them) ? On what principles are they based and what percentage of additional earnings do they yield ?
8. How are the locomotive and train crews paid for waiting time ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I propose to reply to questions Nos. 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 308, 310, 311, 312, and 317 together. Government are not prepared in response to the Honourable Member's demand, to impose on the Railway Board and Railway Administrations generally the excessive and costly labour of collecting and tabulating the extremely voluminous information which the replies to these questions would entail.

TOTAL NUMBER OF FEMALE WORKERS AND PERSONS UNDER 12 YEARS OF AGE EMPLOYED ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†289. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the total number of female workers and persons under 12 years of age respectively employed on each of the State Railways ?

NUMBER OF POSTS ASSIGNED TO EACH GRADE OF EACH OF THE DIFFERENT CATEGORIES OF EMPLOYMENT ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†290. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the number of posts assigned to each grade of each of the different categories of employment on each of the State Railways ?

POSTS EXCLUSIVELY FILLED BY EUROPEANS AND ANGLO-INDIANS ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†291. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What grades of what posts have been exclusively filled hitherto by Europeans only and by both Europeans and Anglo-Indians only on each of the State Railways ?

NUMBER OF EUROPEANS AND ANGLO-INDIANS EMPLOYED ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†292. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the existing number of Europeans and Anglo-Indians employed on each of the different grades of the different categories of employment on each of the State Railways ?

NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES EMPLOYED BELOW THE AUTHORISED MINIMUM OF THE DIFFERENT GRADES OF DIFFERENT CATEGORIES OF EMPLOYMENT ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†293. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : How many employees are employed below the authorised minimum of the different grades of different categories of employment on each of the State Railways ?

WORKERS EMPLOYED ON DAILY RATES OF PAY ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†294. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) Is it a fact that employees performing the same nature of work in different State Railways are employed on different scales of pay ? Is it a fact that employees performing the same nature of duties are employed on daily rates as well as on monthly rates of pay ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for this difference ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

(b) Are the Government aware that the employees who have put in equal length of service on daily rates of pay have inferior privileges to those who are remunerated on the monthly rated system ? Are the Government aware that the employees on daily rates of pay are treated as casual labourers although they may have put in more than three years ?

PLACING OF SOME EMPLOYEES OF THE ENGINEERING WORKSHOPS ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY ON DAILY RATES OF PAY.

†295. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is it a fact that some engineering workshop employees who were on the monthly rated system on the Bengal Nagpur Railway have been put on the daily rated system at Sini with the consequent loss of their privileges in respect of leave, holidays, foreign passes, etc.? Will the Government be pleased to state how many such changes in the systems of remuneration have been made on the various State Railways in India within the last five years ?

MINIMUM WAGES OF EACH CLASS OF WORKERS ON THE STATE RAILWAYS.

296. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have instituted or propose to institute any enquiry as to the amount of minimum wages required by each class of workers on the State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer is in the negative.

REGULATION OF THE WAGES AND ALLOWANCES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

297. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the working class cost of living index prepared by the Labour Office of the Government of Bombay every month, in considering the adequacy of the wages paid to the staff on the State Railways ? Do the Government propose to direct that similar cost of living indices should be prepared for all important railway centres in India with a view to regulate the wages and allowances of the railway employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are aware of the cost of living indices prepared by the Labour Office of the Government of Bombay. The figures there given are not taken specifically into account in determining the rates of pay to be offered for various classes of employment on State-managed Railways, and Government do not consider that the compilation suggested in the last part of the question would be of great use for the purpose suggested.

WAGES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

298. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Are the Government aware :

(a) that the wages of the railway workers are not fixed with any reference to cheapest or dearest localities ;

(b) that there are no basic rates of pay with sliding scales for each class of employment according to the different localities ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The wages of a good many classes of railway employees are fixed with regard to local conditions. In view of the varying conditions in different parts of India Government do not consider that there would be any advantage in attempting to fix a basic rate of pay for each class of employees.

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

CLASSIFICATION OF TIME RECORDER ATTENDANTS AND SEAL CHECKERS AS MENIALS ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

†299. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is it a fact that time recorder attendants and seal checkers who possess a knowledge of English are classified as menials and given their scales of pay on the Bengal Nagpur Railway ? Will the Government be pleased to state what other staff whose nature of duties require a knowledge of English and ability to prepare intelligent statements are designated as menials and given those scales of pay on each of the State Railways ?

GRANT OF CERTAIN CLASSES OF ALLOWANCES TO EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†300. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) What staff are given the following allowances, on what basis and in what places on each of the State Railways ?

Over-time allowance.
Relieving allowanee.
Travelling allowance.
Local allowance.
Mileage allowance.
House allowance.
Clothing allowance.
Day allowance.
Night allowance.
Regular attendance bonus.

(b) Is it a fact that low paid employees who perform the same nature of duties in the same places or stations are not all granted any of the allowances mentioned in the preceding question ?

REMUNERATION OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES AT HIGHER RATES FOR NIGHT DUTY, ETC.

†301. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Are the Government aware that on most Railways duties performed during nights or after fixed hours of duty are not remunerated by higher rates ? In what Railways is this grievance not prevalent and for what categories of employment ?

PAY OF CLERKS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

†302. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Are the Government aware that clerical employees on State Railways are placed on inferior scales of pay as compared with those of other Government establishments, like Postal Departments ?

MONTHLY WAGES BILL OF THE STAFF EMPLOYED IN EACH OF THE DIFFERENT GRADES OF DIFFERENT CLASSES OF EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†303. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the amount of the average monthly wages bill paid to the staff employed in each of the different grades of different classes of employees on each of the State Railways ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

POSTS ON DIFFERENT STATE RAILWAYS FILLED UP BY SENIORITY, DIRECT RECRUITMENT, ETC.

†304. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) What are those grades in each class of employment which are thrown open to employees on the basis of seniority only ?

(b) What are those grades the vacancies in which are filled up only on the occurrence of permanent vacancies ?

(c) What are those grades filled up by direct recruitment on the results of competitive tests only ? What are the grades thrown open only to the employees in the lower grades on the basis of competitive tests ?

(d) What are those posts filled up by direct recruitment without competitive tests, and without the sole consideration of claims of seniority without any fault in working ?

NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES IN EACH OF THE GRADES OF DIFFERENT CLASSES OF EMPLOYMENT ON STATE RAILWAYS WHO REACHED THEIR MAXIMUM THREE OR MORE YEARS AGO, ETC.

†305. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of employees in each of the grades of different classes of employment, who reached their maximum three or more years ago, without further increases ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of employees in each of the grades of different classes of employment, whose annual grade increases or promotions have been stopped during the last three years respectively for slack or inefficient work, on each of the State Railways ?

REDUCTION OF EMPLOYEES AS A PUNISHMENT ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†306. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) How many employees have been reduced as a punishment measure in spite of appeals, within the last three years on each of the State Railways ?

(b) Is it a fact that when Railway employees are withheld their increments, their future increments are also in most cases adversely affected ?

NUMBER OF DAYS ELAPSING BETWEEN THE CONCLUSION OF THE PERIOD OF WORK AND THE ACTUAL PAYMENT OF WAGES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

307. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the maximum and minimum number of days normally elapsing between the conclusion of the period of work and the actual payment of wages, among the different staff on each of the State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : A statement is being prepared shewing with as much accuracy as possible the number of days which normally elapse between the conclusion of the period of work and the actual payment of wages of different classes of staff on each of the State Railways. It will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

FACILITIES FOR THE GRANT OF ADVANCES AND RATIONS TO EMPLOYEES OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†308. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What facilities are granted to the employees on State Railways for easily obtaining advances and rations, in cases of hardship ?

INFLICTION OF FINES ON AND DEDUCTIONS FROM THE WAGES OF EMPLOYEES ON THE STATE RAILWAYS.

309. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Do the Government propose to introduce any legislation regarding the abolition of or the regulation of infliction of fines and deductions on the State Railways employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have under their consideration the question of introducing legislation for the control and regulation of fines. It is not their intention to introduce any special legislation for railway employees.

FINES REALISED DURING THE LAST THREE YEARS FROM EUROPEANS, ANGLO-INDIANS AND INDIANS EMPLOYED ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†310. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the total amount of fines realised from European, Anglo-Indian and other Indian employees respectively during the past three years on each of the State Railways ?

(b) How much of the fines so collected were from the European Supervising Staff and how much amounts from the fine fund were spent for the sake of non-Indian Staff exclusively ?

FORMS OF SERVICE BONDS OR AGREEMENTS EXECUTED BY THE DIFFERENT EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†311. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the different forms of service bonds, or agreements required to be executed by different employees on each of the State Railways ?

(b) Is it a fact that the terms of service agreements are so framed as to leave the employees without any protection in a court of law from the employers against unjust dismissals ?

FURNISHING OF CHARGE SHEETS TO EMPLOYEES OF STATE RAILWAYS BEFORE REDUCTION, REMOVAL OR DISMISSAL.

†312. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : (a) Are the State Railway employees before they are reduced, removed, dismissed, or otherwise seriously punished furnished as a rule with charge sheets, their cases enquired into and opportunities given to them for examining witnesses for and against personally or through the representatives of the accused employees ?

(b) Is it a fact that no rules governing the infliction of punishments on State Railway employees are in force unlike Rule No. 14 of the Home Department, dated June 1924 ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

(c) How many employees during each of the last three years have been discharged against their appeals for reasons not connected with reduction of establishment, on each of the State Railways ?

(d) How many employees forfeited their service gratuity and both service gratuity and provident fund bonus, respectively, during the last three years ?

LEAVE RULES OF THE SUBORDINATE AND MENIAL STAFF ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS, ETC.

313. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : 1. What leave rules govern the subordinate and the menial employees on each of the State Railways ?

2. Is it a fact that the Government have been proposing to revise the State Railway rules but have been postponing the revision for some reason or other ?

3. Is it a fact that racial discrimination exists in respect of leave rules in some of the State Railways ? Is it the case with Government servants ?

4. What is the existing leave reserve allowed for each different class of employees ?

5. What holidays are allowed for different classes of employees ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) On the North-Western and Eastern Bengal Railways the Fundamental Rules apply. These rules also apply to the former employees of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway now working on the East Indian Railway, and to all employees engaged on the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways after those Railways were taken over for State management. Employees of the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Railways, who have now come into Government service, remain under the rules framed by those Companies.

(2) Yes ; but the revision has taken longer than was expected because it was found necessary to revise at the same time the rules governing other conditions of service.

(3) The Fundamental Leave Rules (which apply to all Government servants whose pay is debitable to civil estimates) provide that Government servants of non-Asiatic domicile are subject to special rules which are generally more favourable than the ordinary leave rules.

(4) and (5). The leave reserves for, and holidays allowed to, different employees vary according to the different classes of employees, and Government regret that they are not prepared to undertake the exhaustive investigation which would be necessary to give an answer to the Honourable Member's question.

NUMBER OF HOSPITALS MAINTAINED BY EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS, ETC.

314. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : 1. How many hospitals are maintained by each of the State Railways for the benefit of their employees ? Of these how many are zenana hospitals ?

2. Is it a fact that medical certificates issued by competent registered medical practitioners without the countersignature of a railway doctor are considered invalid by the Railway Administrations ? If so, do the Government propose to remove this anomaly ?

3. Have the Government ever made or propose to make any enquiry into occupational diseases of the railway men ? Is it a fact that locomotive men are subject to special diseases ? Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the recent enquiry conducted by the medical officers on the State Railways in Sweden into the several diseases and ailments incidental to the occupation of railway employees ?

4. At what intervals, are what employees subjected to periodical medical examinations ?

5. Is any consideration taken, before discharging a medically unfit employee, of the fact of his having contracted any defect in vision or any ailment due to the nature of the duties performed, so as to find him suitable employment and suitably compensate him ?

6. What steps have been taken by the Railway Board towards the adoption of a uniform hospital policy on Indian Railways and considerable expansion of facilities for indoor treatment to railway employees ?

7. Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a report of the work done by the Standing Committee of the railway medical officers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

(2) Yes. There is no anomaly in the practice.

(3) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. Government are not prepared to express an opinion on the second part. They have not seen any report of the enquiry stated to have been made in Sweden.

(4) The rules with regard to periodical medical examinations are now under revision. A copy of the revised rules when issued will be sent to the Honourable Member.

(5) Yes.

(6) It would not be correct to say that the Railway Board have adopted a uniform hospital policy on Indian railways but as the result of a special enquiry into this subject by a senior medical officer in 1925 certain broad principles were adopted for application to all new proposals for hospital accommodation on the State Railways with a view to ensuring adequate medical treatment for all classes of the staff.

(7) A memorandum is being prepared and a copy will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

CENSUS OF THE CHILDREN OF SCHOOL-GOING AGE OF THE EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

315. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Have the Government taken any census of the children of school-going age of the railway employees on each of the State Railways ? If the reply be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a report of the census taken ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part is in the negative, and the second does not arise.

NUMBER OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS STARTED BY EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

316. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What are the total number of educational institutions started by each of the State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I would refer the Honourable Member to the statistics given in Appendices I and III of the report on the expenditure of the Railways on the education of the children of employees in 1925-26, a copy of which is in the Library.

TOTAL NUMBER OF RAILWAY QUARTERS OCCUPIED BY THE INDIAN, ANGLO-INDIAN AND EUROPEAN EMPLOYEES ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

†317. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : 1. What is the total number of railway quarters occupied by the Indian, Anglo-Indian and European employees respectively on each of the State Railways ?

2. What different types of quarters are provided on each of the State Railways and what are the characteristics of these quarters ?

3. Do the Government propose to house all the employees with suitable quarters in view of the limited number of employees on the Railways ?

4. Is it a fact that rooms provided for gangmen on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway have an area of only 64 square feet and is it also a fact that quarters provided for the subordinate staff at Khargpur have an area of 12′ × 8′ and 16′ × 10′ respectively ?

STATION COMMITTEES ON STATE RAILWAYS.

318. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : 1. How many Station Committees are in existence on each of the State Railways in India and how many railway employees come within the jurisdiction of these Committees ? What is their constitution ?

2. Do the Government propose to amend the constitution of these Station Committees so as to bring them within the scope of the Local Self-Government Acts of the respective Provinces ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : So far as the Railway Board are aware there are no station committees in the sense intended by the Honourable Member on the State-managed Railways in India. The remaining parts of his question do not therefore arise.

CONDONATION OF BREACH IN SERVICE OF SUBORDINATE EMPLOYEES ON STATE RAILWAYS.

319. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What is the maximum period of break in service an Agent of a State Railway is authorised to condone for the purpose of gratuity ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The maximum period is one year in the case of break in service of subordinate employees caused by an unconditional resignation for the employee's own purposes, if such break occurred before September 1911 when the gratuity rules were first introduced. In case of breaks after that date, Agents have no power to condone such as are due to unconditional resignation or dismissal ; but in other circumstances, they have full powers.

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 288.

AMENDMENT OF THE GRATUITY RULES OF STATE RAILWAYS.

320. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Is it a fact that railway employees have no right to claim their service gratuity as a right ? If so, do the Government propose to amend the State Railway Gratuity Rules so as to remove this hardship ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, and to the second in the negative. Government do not consider that the existing rule causes any hardship.

RULES GOVERNING THE ISSUE OF UNIFORM, FREE PASSES, ETC., TO THE STAFF ON THE VARIOUS STATE RAILWAYS.

321. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : What rules govern the issue of uniform clothing, free passes and P. T. Os. to the staff on the various State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware of the rules governing the issue of uniforms on the various State-managed Railways, a matter which is left to the individual Railway Administrations. The rules governing the grant of free passes to the staff also vary on different Railways, though they are required to be in accordance with the provisions of Appendix 3 of the State Railway Open Line Code, Vol. II. Privilege Ticket Orders are governed by rules framed by the Indian Railway Conference Association, a copy of which I will show the Honourable Member if he will call at my office.

CONSTITUTION OF A CENTRAL WAGES BOARD, ETC.

322. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the frequent resolutions passed by the All-India Trade Union Congress and All-India Railwaymen's Federation urging upon the Government to amend the Indian Railways Act inserting provisions for the constitution in India of a Central Wages Board for settling disputes concerning wages and for making it obligatory on Railway Administrations to establish joint Industrial Councils on the lines of the English Railway Act of 1921, with necessary modifications ? Will the Government be pleased to state what action they propose to take in this matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have not been able to trace the resolutions mentioned by the Honourable Member.

WITHDRAWAL OF RECOGNITION FROM RAILWAY UNIONS.

323. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Will the Government be pleased to state what Railway Unions have had their recognition withdrawn by the Agents of the respective Railways and for what reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Railway Board are not in possession of the information. But they are making enquiries and will communicate with the Honourable Member in due course.

OPENING OF EMPLOYMENT BUREAUS ON EACH OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

324. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take steps to open employment bureaus on each of the State Railways so as to obtain re-employment for workers brought under reduction of establishment or retrenchment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is the general practice of Railways to give preference to men who have been discharged, provided their previous service has been satisfactory, in filling subsequent vacant posts the work of which the discharged men are competent to perform. The Railway Board are prepared to consider whether any improvements of organisation are required to assure that this practice is adhered to.

RECOGNITION OF RAILWAY UNIONS.

325. Mr. V. V. Jogiah : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Railway Unions which are not recognised by the respective Railway Administrations in spite of being registered under the Indian Trade Unions Act ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Railway Board are not in possession of the information. But they are making enquiries and will communicate with the Honourable Member in due course.

GENERAL BRANCH OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

326. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the reply to part (a) of unstarred question No. 202 at page 1064 of the Legislative Assembly Debates of the 7th March 1928 is an extract furnished from the Office Manual of the Central Stationery Office ?

(b) Is it a fact that the General Branch of the Stationery Office has all along been under a Head Assistant and has very recently been under a senior assistant ?

(c) If the answer to (b) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state what he meant by the words ' general charge of the office establishment ' and ' under his direct supervision ' used in reply to question referred to in (a) above ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) Government are not in possession of the information required.

(c) Does not arise.

DUTIES OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE GENERAL BRANCH, CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

327. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the main duty of the General Branch of the Stationery Office is (i) to receive and issue letters and (ii) to deal with establishment cases ?

(b) If the answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the nature of the cases which are dealt with by the Superintendent personally ?

(c) Do Government propose to transfer the work of dealing with bills for payment of supplies, vouchers for supplies and delivery vouchers to the Head Accountant from the Superintendent ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra to his unstarred question No. 202 on 7th March, 1928, for a general account of the Superintendent's duties. Government are not in possession of more detailed information.

(c) The allocation of work of this kind is a matter for the head of the office, and Government do not propose to interfere.

ALLOCATION OF WORK TO HEAD ASSISTANTS OF DIFFERENT BRANCHES OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

328. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Do Government propose to transfer to the Head Assistant of the C and S Section work connected with shipping documents ? If not, why not ?

(b) Do Government propose to entrust the Head Assistants of the respective Branches of the Stationery Office with the work of issuing reminders and submitting requisitions ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). The answer is in the negative. The allocation of work to Head Assistants is a matter for the head of the office.

RULES REGULATING PROMOTIONS AND GRANT OF LEAVE.

329. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that recommendations for promotions and sanction for leave are guided by a set of rules and regulations ?

(b) If the answer to (a) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to say whether the Head Assistant or the senior assistant of the General Branch of the Stationery Office is required to know these rules and regulations ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

ATTENDANCE REGISTERS OF THE MENIALS OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

330. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the attendance registers of all Branches of the Stationery Office are under the supervision of the Head Assistants of the respective Branches ?

(b) Is it a fact that the attendance registers of the menials of the Stationery Office is under the supervision of the General Branch of the Stationery Office ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Head Assistants of the Branches are authorised and competent to rectify irregular attendance in their Branches ?

(d) If the answers to questions (a), (b) and (c) above are in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the reasons for submitting those attendance registers to the Superintendent of the Stationery Office ?

GENERAL SUPERVISION OF THE BRANCHES OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE, ETC.

331. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Head Assistants of the Branches of the Stationery Office are responsible for the work and the correct observance of the office procedure within their respective Branches and are authorised to submit work direct to the officers of that Department ?

(b) Do Government propose to relieve the Superintendent of the Stationery Office of his duty of general supervision over all Branches ? If not, why not ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Head Assistant or the senior assistant of the General Branch of the Stationery Office marks all letters and cases received in that office and arranges for their distribution to the different Branches of that office ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) above be in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state what class of letters and cases are distributed to the Branches by the Superintendent as stated in the reply to unstarred question No. 202 of the 7th March 1928, and furnish the number of such cases and letters received and distributed every day on an average ?

(e) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether it is a fact that an account of all service stamps utilised in the Central Stationery Office is maintained in the General Branch of that office ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : I propose to answer questions Nos. 330 and 331 together. Government are not in possession of the information required, which relates to matters of administrative detail lying within the competence of the head of the office.

ABOLITION OF THE POST OF SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

332. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Do Government propose to appoint a committee to enquire whether the post of the Superintendent of the Stationery Office can be abolished by distributing his general duties to the Branches ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Government do not consider the appointment of such a committee to be necessary.

PRESENTATION OF THE ACCOUNTS OF RAILWAY-OWNED COLLIERIES ON A COMMERCIAL BASIS.

333. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what action they are going to take, and when, in re-casting the accounts of the railway-owned collieries on a commercial basis ?

(b) If so, when can the accounts of the railway-owned collieries be expected to be available, presented on a commercial basis ?

(c) Meanwhile will Government furnish figures showing the approximate cost of production per ton in the different railway collieries based on a commercial basis including such items as depreciation allowance for exhaustion of minerals ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Government are now considering the recommendations of Sir Arthur Dickinson in this behalf and hope to come to a conclusion on them in the course of the winter.

(b) It is hoped that it will be possible to present the accounts for 1929-30 on a commercial basis, in which case they should be ready in May, 1930.

(c) A reference is invited to Appendix B in Volume II of the Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways for 1926-27. The figures there given for working expenses include an allowance for a sinking fund for the eventual extinction of the capital cost of the collieries when the mines are completely worked out.

CONSUMPTION OF COAL BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY, ETC.

334. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state what is the present consumption of coal by the Bengal Nagpur Railway, and what proportion of the supply of such coal is met from the output of the collieries owned by this Railway ? Are the consumption of coal by the Bengal Nagpur Railway, and the output of their collieries already opened for working, likely to increase in course of the next 5 years ; and if so, to what extent ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am making enquiries and will communicate the result to the Honourable Member in due course.

PURCHASE OF COAL FROM THE MARKET BY THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

335. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that an undertaking was given by Government that in the matter of coal consumption of the Railways, 50 per cent. of the requirements will be met by purchase from the market ? If so, why is the Bengal Nagpur Railway not working upon the percentage ? Do Government propose to ensure larger purchases of coal by that Railway from the market than at present ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No such undertaking has been given. The Honourable Member is probably referring to a statement which was made by the Honourable the Railway Member on the 14th April, 1927, to a deputation of the Indian Mining Federation accompanied by representatives of the Indian Mining Association, whom he told that the instructions at the time to the Chief Mining Engineer were to adjust the development of the railway collieries in such a way that 50 per cent. of the railway demand was purchased and 50 per cent. supplied by the railway collieries. This statement of course referred to the collieries of State-managed Railways ; it did not, and could not, bind the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company to adopt any similar practice, and Government are not in a position, nor do they wish, to fetter the discretion of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company in this respect.

EXEMPTION OF THE PROFITS OF RAILWAY COLLIERIES IN BIHAR AND ORISSA FROM ASSESSMENT UNDER CHAPTER V OF THE CESS ACT.

336. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that the railway collieries in Bihar and Orissa are exempt from assessment of their profits under Chapter V of the Cess Act (Bengal Act IX of 1880) ? If so, will Government state the grounds of such immunity ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative, and the second part does not arise.

ABANDONMENT OF CERTAIN PARTLY-DEVELOPED RAILWAY COLLIERIES.

337. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Did Government receive from the Indian Mining Federation of Calcutta any representation suggesting the abandonment of certain partly-developed railway collieries ? If so, what action do Government propose to take on the suggestion made ?

(b) Will Government state what has been, according to the latest available figures, the amount of capital expended on the railway collieries in the Talchar fields and in Religari-Dari ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes. Government do not propose to abandon any of the collieries acquired.

(b) I am collecting the information and will communicate with the Honourable Member on receipt.

CONSUMPTION OF COAL BY CLASS I RAILWAYS.

338. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state the amount of coal consumed by Class I Indian Railways during the years 1919-20 to 1927-28, both years inclusive, and what proportion of coal out of the total consumption was each year purchased from the market during these years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sending the Honourable Member a statement showing for the years 1921-22 to 1927-28 inclusive the coal consumed by locomotives and the coal issued by railway collieries. The figures for the years 1919-20 and 1920-21 are not readily available. The difference between these two figures may be taken approximately to represent purchases from the market, and the statement shows the percentage which these purchases bear in each year to the total consumption. I should explain that the figures of consumption do not include coal consumed for other than locomotive purposes, for instance, for pumping engines, workshops, etc., since these figures were not tabulated prior to 1927-28. It would be reasonable to assume that coal consumed for these purposes represents about 8 per cent. of the total consumption, and that the quantities of market purchases are larger to this extent.

NUMBER OF PERSONS EMPLOYED IN RAILWAY COLLIERIES ON CERTAIN SPECIFIED SALARIES, ETC.

339. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state how many persons are employed in the collieries owned by the State and the Guaranteed Railways drawing a monthly salary of Rs. 1,000 and above, between Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 250 to Rs. 500 ? Of these three grades of appointments how many are held at present by Europeans, Indians and Anglo-Indians, respectively, under each grade ? How many appointments were made during the last two years under each of these grades and how many of these appointments went to Indians ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information desired by the Honourable Member has been called for and will be communicated to him on its receipt.

UNWORKED RESOURCES OF COAL OF 13, 14, 15, 17 AND 18 SEAM LEFT WORKABLE IN THE JHARIA COALFIELDS.

340. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state what are the unworked resources of coal of 13, 14, 15, 17 and 18 seam still left workable in the Jharia coalfields ? What is the authority on which the estimates given are based ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The required information has been called for and will be supplied to the Honourable Member if it is available.

PROVISION OF A RAISED PLATFORM AND SUITABLE WAITING ACCOMMODATION AT MUGMA ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

341. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that in an important coalfield station, Mugma, on the East Indian Railway, the public interested has been asking for the last 7 years for the provision of a raised platform and suitable waiting accommodation ? Is it a fact that the platform and the waiting accommodation were sanctioned by the East Indian Railway twice—once in August 1926 and again in November 1927 ? If so, have the facilities sanctioned been already provided, and if not, why not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

DISCONTINUANCE OF THE STEAMER SERVICES MAINTAINED BY THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

342. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that for some time the Eastern Bengal Railway used to run its own steamers in competition with the passenger and goods traffic services of the India General Steam Navigation Company and the Rivers Steam Navigation Company in Bengal and Assam ?

(b) If so, will Government make a statement giving a short account of this practice of the Eastern Bengal Railway, and of any other Railway in India which may have undertaken similar navigation service in inland waters ?

(c) Did the aforesaid navigation companies ever make any representations to Government regarding their competition with the Eastern Bengal Railway ? If so, when, to what effect, and with what results, were such representations made ?

(d) Were any agreements ever made between the said Companies and the Eastern Bengal Railway regarding traffic and earnings of the competing steamer services ? If so, when and to what effect were these agreements made ?

(e) What are the circumstances in which the steamer services maintained by the Eastern Bengal Railway came to be discontinued in the different local areas ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Steps are being taken to collect such information as is available and I will communicate it later to the Honourable Member.

REMOVAL OF THE IMPERIAL RECORD DEPARTMENT FROM CALCUTTA TO DELHI.

†343. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Government please state the approximate date by which the removal of the Imperial Record Department from Calcutta to Delhi will be completed ?

(b) Will the Government please state what is the amount of the annual rent for the buildings in which the Imperial Record Department, Calcutta, is now located ?

(c) Is it a fact that the retired Superintendents of the various departments of the Government of India enjoying pension have been employed for the weeding of the Crown records ?

(d) Is it a fact that three upper grade assistants and two lower grade clerks of the Imperial Record Department are now engaged in the classification of the Company records ? Is it a fact that Sir Montagu Butler, in his capacity as the Secretary of the Government of India in the Department of Education, Health and Lands, held that classification of Company records is more difficult than the work of weeding ?

(e) If the answers to the above questions be in the affirmative, do Government propose to raise the pay of the permanent Government servants commensurate with their responsibilities ?

DUTIES OF CLERKS IN THE LOWER GRADE OF THE IMPERIAL RECORD DEPARTMENT.

†344. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the clerks in the lower grade of the Imperial Record Department have often to conduct searches among the old records for tracing information required by the Government in their dealings with the Indian Powers or for other purposes ?

(b) Are the Government aware that these searches require considerable historical knowledge and acumen and constant application on the part of the workers and that a search sometimes lasts for months together ?

(c) Is it a fact that a heavy amount of correspondence with different Governments, Universities and private individuals has to be conducted in the Imperial Record Department in connection with the annual sittings of the Indian Historical Records Commission and that this work is done by a lower division clerk ?

REVISION OF THE PAY OF THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE IMPERIAL RECORD DEPARTMENT.

345. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Will the Government please state how many graduates there are among the clerks in the lower grade of the Imperial Record Department, what is the period of their service and what is their present pay ?

(b) Are there any rules for promoting the clerks of the lower grade to vacancies in the upper grade ? How many vacancies normally occur in the upper grade annually and how many are expected to occur annually in the next 6 years ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to unstarred question No. 345.

(c) Is it a fact that the scales of pay of Rs. 50—3—125 and Rs. 120—10—260 were sanctioned for the Imperial Record Department in 1920 on the analogy of the scales of pay in the secretariat offices of the Government of Bengal and other offices of the Government of India located in Calcutta ?

(d) Is it a fact that the scales of pay in most of the offices of the Imperial Government in Calcutta except the Imperial Record Department have since been revised ?

(e) Is it a fact that the scale of pay in the Imperial Record Department, New Delhi, is lower than that of any attached or subordinate offices of the Government of India located in Delhi ?

(f) If the answers to the above questions be in the affirmative, will the Government kindly state the reasons for this differential treatment of the staff of the Imperial Record Department and do the Government propose to revise their scales of pay ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

PAY AND GRADING OF MAIL GUARDS OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

346. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the scale of pay of R. M. S. mail guards was higher than that of the overseers and branch postmasters ?

(b) Is it a fact that the pay of the overseers and branch postmasters have been subsequently increased but no corresponding increment has been given to the R. M. S. mail guards ? If so, why ? Do the Government propose to increase their pay ?

(c) Is it a fact that R. M. S. mail guards are now ranked with postmen ? If so, do the Government propose to put them in a higher rank than that of a postman ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) No.

(b) Yes, because the duties of mail guards are on the whole less onerous and less responsible than those of departmental branch postmasters and overseers. Government do not propose to increase the pay of mail guards.

(c) Yes. Government do not propose to put them in a higher rank than that of a postman.

PETITION RELATING TO THE SPECIAL MARRIAGE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, under Standing Order 78 I have to report that a petition signed by the Joint Honorary Secretary on behalf of the Parsi Federal Council has been received relating to the Bill further to amend the Special Marriage Act, 1872, which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 9th February, 1928.

12 NOON.

[Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla.]

unless some constitution is framed by the Government of India laying down a certain policy and certain methods by which this Committee could work, I do not think any useful purpose will be served by continuing these Committees. I hope this will be one of the terms of reference, the methods to be laid down for these Haj Committees if they are to continue their existence.

In conclusion I can say, Sir, on behalf of my Muslim brethern—and I am sure they will agree with me—that we will be satisfied with nothing short of the appointment of this Committee, and I hope the Honourable Member will accept the suggestion which I am making of appointing a committee at a very early date.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : I regret, Sir, that the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah is not able to be present in the House to-day to deal with this Resolution. He has to be in another place and that renders his absence from this House unavoidable.

Mr. President : Is the other place meeting to-day ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes, Sir. As regards the amendment which the Honourable Member from Bombay has moved, I am in a position to state on behalf of Government that with that amendment we are prepared to accept the Resolution. I do not think that it is necessary for me now to state in detail what the grievances of the Hajis are or to anticipate what the activities of the Committee will be. Now that the principle of appointing a committee has been accepted, I think we had better leave the grievances as well as the best method of dealing with those grievances to the Committee. The Honourable Member from Bombay who spoke just now pointed out the conditions which the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah laid down the other day as conditions precedent to our acceptance of the Resolution for the appointment of a committee of enquiry. As regards the first, namely, that the Government will have a measure of discretion both as to the terms of reference and the personnel, there never was any difference of opinion. As regards the second condition, namely, that the funds for the appointment of the Committee must first be voted by the Legislature before the Committee can function or be appointed, as regards that condition also, there was no difference. The difference really related to the scope of the survey of the Committee and Honourable Muslim Members were perhaps under a misapprehension as to our real intentions in that behalf. They thought that the scope of investigations of the Committee would be limited rigidly to arrangements in India. But, as Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla has pointed out, we met the other day outside the House and we made it clear on behalf of Government that it was not the intention of Government to impose any such rigid limitation. At the same time, we asked Muslim Members who met us the other day to realise that it is delicate ground that we are treading on when we try to go into the adequacy or otherwise of arrangements in territories which really are the territories of another power and not the territories of the Government of India ; and so we said, Sir, that investigation into that part of the grievances of the Hajis will have to be conducted with due discretion and with proper regard for diplomatic and international propriety. The Honourable Muslim Members who met Sir Muhammad Habibullah the other day readily accepted this condition. My only excuse, Sir, for stating in brief the conditions which the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah laid down the other day and the exact implications of those conditions is that I do not wish that hereafter there should be any misunderstanding as regards the attitude of Government and as regards any action that they may take hereafter. I am very glad, Sir, if I may sound a personal note at this stage, that the initiative of Government in this matter has met with the approval of the Muslim Members of the House and that they are convinced that the solicitude of Government for improving the conditions under which Hajis perform this religious duty is as great, as profound and as deep as that of any Muslim Member of this House.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : May I enquire, Sir, if the allotment of funds is a condition precedent to the appointment of the Committee ? Is this a usual condition and is it going to be a condition for every Committee hereafter ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not, Sir, in a position to state the principle on behalf of Government, but it seems to me that it is only a rational safeguard to postulate, namely, that if your Committee is to function, the Legislature must vote the funds for it.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is it the usual custom or precedent to allot funds before Committees are appointed or whether Committees have been appointed and funds asked for later on ? And is it going to be a general custom in the future, or is it meant for this particular Committee ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Our practice, Sir, in the Department which I have the honour to represent is to secure as far as possible the approval of the Standing Finance Committee to any proposal for the appointment of a Committee before we actually proceed to appoint that Committee. The Honourable Member who spoke just now and who is also a member of the Standing Finance Committee had testimony of it the other day, because in connection with a Committee which we intend appointing to go into the affairs of the Forest Research Institute at Dehra Dun, we placed the proposal before the Standing Finance Committee before we took steps towards the actual appointment of the Committee ; but, lest there be any misapprehension on this point or lest any misgiving on this point arise in the minds of the Muslim Members of the House, I wish to make it perfectly clear that Government do not anticipate any difficulty either from the Standing Finance Committee or from the Legislature in so far as securing funds for this Committee is concerned.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I suppose it will be the custom in the future and that this custom will be followed in appointing All Committees.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What about the Royal Agricultural Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That was a Royal Commission, not a Committee appointed by the Government of India.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the word 'open' before the word "enquiry" in the third line of the Resolution be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the following Resolution, as amended, be adopted :

' This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that a mixed Committee of officials and non-official Muslims, with a clear non-official majority be appointed to hold an enquiry and take evidence, with a view to investigate the entire question of the facilities for pilgrims proceeding to the Hedjaz from Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi ports, the duties and powers of the Protectors of Pilgrims and the Haj Committees and all matters pertaining to the pilgrim traffic, and to make the necessary recommendations for providing better arrangements for the pilgrims and mitigating their hardships and inconveniences '."

The motion was adopted.

RESOLUTION RE PAY OF JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURTS.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the Resolution which stands in my name and which runs as follows :

" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that steps be taken for improving the scale of salary of all High Court Judges."

Sir, surprise has been expressed in certain quarters at my sponsoring the Resolution and curiosity has not been idle in its quest for motives and reasons for my doing so. Sir, at the very outset I must tell the House that I have no personal axe to grind. I am neither a Judge nor a Munsif, nor ever aspire to be one. I am not the brother or brother-in-law, son or son-in-law, father or father-in-law of a Judge. I am not a barrister, vakil or advocate practising before a Judge. I am a landholder and a merchant who has very little to do with a Judge of the High Court, but who, as a member of the public, is profoundly convinced that British rule in India like any other rule in the world, depends for its stability and continuance on the strength and impartiality of the highest courts of justice in the land.

There is an outcry against the Chief Justice of the Patna High Court. There has been an outcry against the Chief Justice of the Punjab High Court. Questions are asked in the House whether the eternal Miss Mayo is responsible for the aberration of a Judge. There are insinuations and innuendoes that prejudices and preconceptions are imbibed by Judges hobnobbing in clubs with the die-hards of Anglo-India. But no one pauses to inquire why the days, the good old days, are gone by of the sturdy race of Judges jealous of the dignity of their office who lived in splendid isolation and never cared to be within miles of the Government House, not to speak of the clubs in which some of the Judges of to-day are compelled to take rooms to live in.

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was taken by Mr. Deputy President, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.)

The fact of the matter is that the altered conditions of to-day affecting the position, dignity and emolument of the Judges do not offer sufficient inducement to first-rate men to accept a Judgeship. In my Resolution I deal with only one aspect of the case, namely, how the salaries of Judges having been adversely affected by the altered conditions of to-day should be increased or at any rate brought up to the pre-war level. Let me make my point clear by giving the House a brief history of the salaries of the Judges of the High Courts.

In 1886, the salary of a Judge was originally fixed at Rs. 50,000 a year in the Calcutta High Court, and Rs. 45,000 in other High Courts. In 1881, Lord Cranbrook equalised the pay of European Puisne Judges of all High Courts by reducing it to Rs. 43,200 a year. In 1883, Lord Kimberly abolished the invidious distinction between European and Indian Judges in this respect and fixed the pay of all Judges, Indians and Europeans, at Rs. 45,000 a year, or Rs. 3,750 a month. In 1899, Lord George Hamilton, the then Secretary of State for India, raised the pay to Rs. 4,000 a month, the figure at which it now stands. After referring to the great dissatisfaction which prevailed among the Judges of the Calcutta High Court and to the pay of the Member of the Board of Revenue and of the Secretaries, Lord George Hamilton observed as follows :

" The raising of the salaries of the Puisne Judges generally from Rs. 3,750 to Rs. 4,000 a month seems, therefore, to me a desirable measure, as tending to remove inequalities which have an invidious appearance between offices of like importance and dignity in the Judicial and Executive line respectively, and in some degree compensating for the greater expensiveness of living which is generally admitted to have been a marked feature of recent years in the Presidency towns."

Now, while the reasons put forward by the Secretary of State for India in 1899 for an increase in the salary of High Court Judges still hold good, the conditions which obtained in 1899 are certainly not those which obtain in 1928. The expenses of life in the Presidency towns and the principal cities of India have risen by leaps and bounds. The cost of living since 1899, when the pay of a Judge was fixed at Rs. 4,000 a month, has enormously increased, it being 67 per cent. above the pre-war time. The inequalities and the invidious appearance which Lord George Hamilton had sought to remove in 1899 have re-appeared in a more accentuated and aggravated form since the Reforms. A Judge of the High Court occupied a position second only to that of the Head of the Administration of the Province. Now, in the Warrant of Precedence a Judge of the High Court occupies a position below that of a Member of the Executive Council and a Minister of the Province for whom it was thought necessary to provide a salary of Rs. 64,000 a year or Rs. 5,333-5-4 a month in consideration of labour which, by common report, is not more arduous than that of Judges. Successive reforms by the creation of the posts of Members of the Executive Council and Ministers enjoying a salary of Rs. 64,000 a year have impaired the status and prestige of Judges, not only in the eyes of the public, but a Judgeship has ceased to be an attractive prize and a fit goal for professional ambition and the ambition of young men adopting a judicial career. Instances are not unknown (and may be found even in this very House to-day) of legal luminaries who, though proof against the attractions of the Bench, succumb to the glamour and glory of an Executive office with a salary of Rs. 64,000 to boot.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Without a pension ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, though without a pension. Since 1899, when Lord George Hamilton, by reference to the pay of the Member of the Board of Revenue and the salaries of officers in the Executive line, deemed it a desirable measure to increase the salary of a High Court Judge, there has come into existence almost in every province half a dozen executive offices carrying emoluments higher than those of High Court Judges, and since 1899 there has been an increase of pay and allowance in almost every branch of the public services. The salaries of Munsiffs, Subordinate Judges and District Judges have been increased, but the Commissions and the Committees since 1899 have left the Judges of the High Court severely alone. In 1899, there was no such thing as the super-tax. The salary of a Judge less income-tax prior to the birth of the super-tax was something like Rs. 3,800 a month, but after the introduction of the super-tax it comes to something like Rs. 3,500 a month. Thus we see that, although there is an increase of salary all-round, the High Court Judges have not had an increase, but a decrease in salary. It is notorious that since 1899 there has been an enormous increase in the cost of living : the rise in house rent had to be checked by legislation. The price of all necessaries and the wages of servants have increased beyond all proportions and the incomes and emoluments of the professional, mercantile and other non-official classes have risen beyond conception. It has consequently become increasingly difficult for a High Court Judge to live in a manner befitting that position and the dignity of the high office. There is a movement, Sir, everywhere to increase the salaries of Judges. The salaries of Judges have been recently increased in America. Besides, in America, the salaries of Judges are income-tax free. (An Honourable Member : " What is the salary there ? ") That I do not exactly know. At any rate they are income-tax free. Sir, there is ample justification in the altered circumstances of to-day for the Government of India to take steps to introduce a reasonable increase in the salary of High Court Judges commensurate with their dignity and importance and for the Secretary of State for India with his experience as a lawyer and judge to follow the example of his predecessor in office, Lord George Hamilton.

Sir, I think I have made my point clear and I have been able to make out a good case for the consideration of this House.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am one of those who have suspected the motives of my Honourable friend in moving this particular Resolution, but my suspicion was not that he had any claim to any relationship as father-in-law with any of the present Judges of any Honourable High Court. I thought that perhaps my Honourable friend was developing an ambition of becoming a Labour Leader in this House. I almost thought I should warn my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, to look to his laurels ; because, if my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi comes forward with such proposals, with such grievances of a very depressed class of public servants, then I am afraid my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi may lose his job in this House. My Honourable friend, as I said, was developing an ambition to become a Labour Leader. He found that the postal peons, the railway ticket collectors had already come under the protecting wings of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi, and so he set about trying to find a suitable subject to take up in the House in order to establish his claim as a Labour Leader. Only the other day we were discussing the grievances of a rather equally depressed class of public servants, the Imperial duftaries, who also happen to be under the leadership of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi. Now my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi comes forward and places before us the harrowing tales of sorrow and privations of the Honourable Judges of the different High Courts. Sir, I flatter myself that I have a sort of dependable memory, but I do not remember to have come across any such question ever having been raised in this House during the last eight years that I have been a Memb.

of the Assembly. It may be that the learned Judges have only lately banded themselves into a trade union and appointed my Honourable friend as their spokesman. Sir, that is a comfortable thought to me, because I have no sympathy with Communistic ideals, and I should very much dislike the idea of the learned Judges falling a prey to the ministrations of Mr. Spratt, declaring a strike or resorting to sabotage, to which reference was made only yesterday by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour. I very much hope that my Honourable friend's connexion with the latest trade union will keep the Judges out of harm's way and that we will have no occasion to add " judicial unrest " to agrarian and industrial unrest, which is one of the conditions laid down for taking action under the new security Bill which has been fathered by the Honourable the Home Member. Sir, as I said, during the last eight years nobody ever thought of bringing up this question. The Honourable Members have exercised their ingenuity on all sorts of questions, but never did it strike any Honourable Member in this House to bring up this particular question. My Honourable friend was talking of the economic difficulties of the learned Judges. May I remind my Honourable friend that only a few years ago an eminent Commission was appointed to go into the famine conditions that were supposed to be prevailing among the higher Civil Services in this country ? Need I say that I am referring to the Lee Commission ? Well, if my Honourable friend were to look up the Report of the Lee Commission, he would find that even that Commission, charged as they were with the duty of finding all sorts of excuses for raising the salaries and emoluments of the higher officers of the Government of India, did not find it possible to make any recommendation on the lines suggested by my Honourable friend. I have to admit that the question of the Judges' salaries did not arise in a direct manner, so far as the terms of reference of that Commission were concerned, but inasmuch as a proportion of the Indian Civil Service men have to be found seats on the Benches of High Courts, this question indirectly arose for the consideration of that Commission. If my Honourable friend will turn to page 109 of the Lee Commission Report, he will find a note signed by all the English members of the Commission, where they say that they cannot recommend any increase they were referring in that connexion to the remittance concessions which they were recommending for officers drawing a pay up to Rs. 4,000, and there they say :

" We cannot, however, recommend any increase for Judges of the High Court or Members of Council whose salaries are fixed by Statute."

That is the view which they took. If my Honourable friend will turn to the note of the Indian members of that Commission he will find that they took quite another view. They did not think it right to make any recommendation which would discriminate between the Indian and the European members of the judiciary. They particularly referred to the fact that it was only when a man was in the middle stage of his service that he stood in need of relief. This is what they say :

" The general trend of evidence given before us is that hardship is felt mainly in the middle married grades and that the officers in the earliest and latest stages are not hard hit."

Apart from that, my Honourable friend will find, if he turns to page 42, that the Commission considered the special pension of £1,200 per annum, after a short period of service extending only to 11½ years, as quite adequate for the Judges of the High Court. Therefore, in putting forward this claim to-day, my Honourable friend is trying to be more royalist than the

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

King himself, because, it can never be said that if there was any consideration which could be brought forward for the raising of the salaries of these high officials, a man like Sir Reginald Craddock would have omitted to mention it in his special note.

Now, Sir, I turn to section 104 of the Government of India Act under which the salaries and emoluments of the Judges of High Courts are fixed My Honourable friend will find that it is provided there that the Secretary of State may fix the salaries, allowances, and so on :

"and may alter them, but any such alteration shall not affect the salary of any Judge appointed before the date thereof."

So that, even if there were any increase, the present incumbents will not be benefited at all, because I do not think there will be any disposition on the part of any Honourable Member present here to question this interpretation of the expression "affect". Whether the salary is raised or lowered, it comes within the description of the word "affected", and therefore if the salary is increased, it will not benefit the existing incumbents. Thus, Sir, the trade union to which I have made reference does not stand to gain anything by any change which may be made as a result of the recommendations which this House may adopt. I thought, Sir, my Honourable friend was a very great friend of Sir John Simon. I remember to have seen a complimentary telegram addressed to him by that Honourable gentleman broadcast in Delhi. My advice to him would be to approach his distinguished friend in this matter and lay the case of the Honourable Judges, or rather instruct the members of the trade union of the Honourable Judges to place their case before the Simon Commission. I am very much afraid that my Honourable friend has mistaken his forum.

Sir, my Honourable friend was referring to the salaries enjoyed by the Executive Councillors and Ministers. My Honourable friend Mr. Roy has already pointed out that so far as non-official Indians appointed as Executive Councillors are concerned, they do not enjoy any pensions on the termination of their office.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : What about the official members ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am coming to that. I may remind my Honourable friend of one particular instance from which he will see that it is not exactly the salary that is the main attraction of a Judgeship. My Honourable friend, I daresay, knows Sir Ali Imam. He was a Member of the Executive Council of the Governor General. Shortly after relinquishing this appointment, if I am not very much mistaken, he accepted a Judgeship of the Patna High Court on a salary of Rs. 4,000 a month.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : For only a month or two.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : It may be so, but it shows that there was nothing derogatory in the salary attached to a Judgeship, a point of which my Honourable friend was seeking to make too much.

Now, Sir, coming to Ministers, I know of instances in which Ministers have been voted only a rupee per month as salary. I do not think the analogy of Ministers' salaries was a very strong argument to bring forward in asking for an increase in the Judges' salaries.

Mr. K. Ahmed : That is what the Swaraj Government in future may think.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : My Honourable friend Mr. K. Ahmed has come to my help. Supposing it were open to a distinguished lawyer either to become a Judge of a High Court or a Member of the Executive Council, or a Minister in a Province. What would be his choice in this matter ? If he accepted a Judgeship, he would be sitting on that high perch and my Honourable friend Mr. K. Ahmed would be making his humble and respectful submissions from the Bar. Look at the other picture. There is my Honourable friend the Home Member, drawing a salary, I do not know, of how many thousands, and I see him every day that I am here, trembling in his shoes in trying to answer my Honourable friend Mr. K. Ahmed's supplementary questions. If a choice were given to a learned lawyer, I can easily imagine that he would readily agree to forego Rs. 2,000 a month rather than face the onslaught of my Honourable friend's supplementary questions.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi was referring to the splendid isolation in which Judges used to live in the olden days, and he was referring with great disapprobation to the practice which some of the Judges have of living in clubs in close association with executive officers. I am prefectly at one with him in condemning this practice. But may I remind my Honourable friend that the present Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court, in spite of the fact that he gets a salary of Rs. 6,000 a month which is Rs. 1,000 more than is admissible to the Chief Justices of other High Courts, lived for a considerable period in a particular club sacred to the die-hard Britisher—official and non-official and it was only when this objection was brought to his notice by certain members of the Bar that he agreed to hire a house in Calcutta ? So that, Sir, even if you were to raise the salary of the Judges to Rs. 6,000, there is nothing to prevent them from living in clubs.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Instead of raising the salary you can give them a house allowance.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : It comes to about the same thing. My Honourable friend was giving the figures of 1866. I have not made any antiquarian research of that kind, but this much I think I can safely say that so many clubs were not in existence in those days.

An Honourable Member : Question.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Clubs were in existence in 1866.

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Even in 1832.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Well, Sir, whatever it is, it all depends upon personal temperament. It does not depend upon the salary. You may pay Rs. 10,000 a month to a Judge, but that will not ensure the Judge being altogether impartial and independent.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Quite so.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : But here my Honourable friend seems to be thinking only of the European members. I should like my Honourable friend to tell me of any instance in which an Indian Judge has usually lived in a club. (The Honourable Member resumed his seat for a while.) May I take it that he has no such instance to give ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I believe Mr. Hasan Imam lived in a club. I can give you a number of such instances. I will provide you with a list to-morrow.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I will go into that with my Honourable friend to-morrow.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Then the debate may be adjourned till to-morrow.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Now, my Honourable friend wants this House to make a recommendation to the Government of India that the salaries of the Judges should be increased. But does my Honourable friend realise that the bill has got to be footed by the Provincial Governments and not by the Government of India ? Because, even in the case of the Calcutta High Court, which is under the administrative control of the Government of India, all its expenses have to be borne by the Government of Bengal. It will not, therefore, do for my Honourable friend to ask the Government of India to be charitable at the cost of the Provincial Governments. I dare say, my Honourable friend realises the very difficult financial position of the province from which he and I come, and I hope he will hesitate before making a recommendation of this kind for the acceptance of the Government of India.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. Deputy President, my intervention in this discussion will be of the briefest, as I intend to confine myself to explaining very shortly the attitude of the Government towards this Resolution, and I do not intend to enter into the merits. Much of what the Honourable the Mover has said has a cogency and a force which, I think, will be admitted by Honourable Members whatever opinion they may hold upon the particular proposition which is put before them. No one will deny the immense importance to the country of the adequate discharge by distinguished lawyers of the great and responsible duties which fall upon the Judges of the High Courts No one will deny that to secure services of that high order the country will not lose by paying what is adequate. No one will deny, in view of the important duties which the Judges of the High Courts perform that it is desirable that their emoluments should be so fixed that they may be enabled to maintain the dignity which ought to attach to their high office. I am sure these are propositions with which none of us will disagree. I am not, however, prepared on behalf of the Government of India to announce to the House any definite attitude towards this Resolution. If the House desires to pass an opinion upon this matter we shall be very glad to be in possession of that opinion. But, we could not come to any conclusion without consultation with the Local Governments, because, as Mr. Neogy pointed out, the salaries of the Judges of the High Courts are defrayed from provincial revenues. It would be unfair, therefore, to proceed to any conclusions ; the Government of India would not feel itself justified in making any recommendations to the Secretary of State, who, as has been pointed out, is the final authority in this matter, without a close consultation with Local Governments. If, however, this House is disposed to pass an affirmative decision upon this Resolution, I shall be glad to send a copy of the debate to the Local Governments, who are concerned, and enquire their views in the matter. My attitude, therefore, is that the Government of India are not at present in a position, nor could they be without the enquiry to which I have referred, to come to any definite conclusions in the matter. But if the House desires to express an affirmative conclusion, we shall be very glad to take the action which I have indicated, namely, to consult Local Governments in the matter.

Sir James Simpson (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I have pleasure in supporting this Resolution, and on behalf of my Honourable colleagues who sit on these Benches I would just like to say in a few words that we fully approve of and endorse the proposal for improving the scale of salary of all High Court Judges. I understand my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy is, in the midst of his many activities, connected with the Law. I would take it after the sparkling speech to which he has treated the House this morning that he has abandoned all ambitions to be raised to the dignified ease of the High Court Bench and that he prefers to continue in the spectacular limelight of the Labour Leader. (Mr. K. C. Neogy : "I have no such ambition.") My Honourable colleagues here and myself consider that the Honourable the Mover has fully made out his case and has proved that this increase is long overdue. If there is one body of our public servants who command our utmost respect and who possess our implicit confidence, it is the Judges of the High Courts and we ought to be prepared to pay them sufficiently in order to get the best class of men. The Leader of the House has told us that this is a matter for Local Governments and that they must foot the bill. And I dare say that it would also be necessary to consult the Secretary of State. I would invite the House to pass this Resolution unanimously so that the Leader of the House may send it down to Local Governments with the strong approval of this House and also stamped with the strong approval of his own Government.

I have much pleasure in supporting this Resolution.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, after the very ominous speech delivered by the Honourable the Home Member, committing the Government of India to nothing and throwing the burden upon this House, it becomes the serious duty of this House to consider whether this Resolution should be supported and what would be the consequences of supporting this Resolution. Honourable Members are aware that all provinces more or less have been working at a heavy deficit during the last four or five years and year after year we have been treated to provincial and inter-provincial discussions about the revision of the Meston Award. Now, law and justice have always been a reserved provincial subject, and if we were to pass a Resolution by adopting the Honourable the Mover's suggestion, the result of that would be an increase in the court-fees throughout the provinces concerned, and I ask Honourable Members here very seriously to consider whether they are in a position to face a rebuff, and pay extra court-fees upon litigation. The present state of court-fees is about the highest in the whole world, which is 7½ per cent., and 5 per cent. upon higher values.

If you increase the salary of the Judges, you will be muicted in still higher court-fees which is a provincial subject.

1 P. M.

Another point that Honourable Members must bear in mind before they support this Resolution is this. Honourable Members must remember that if they raise the salary of the Judges, they must, of necessity, have to increase the salary of the judicial establishments.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

You cannot raise the salary of a man from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 4,500 or Rs. 5,000 without raising the salary of the Registrar, the Deputy Registrar and the clerical establishments. If you raise the salary of the High Court Judge, the Home Member who controls him will immediately demand a higher salary because he will say that his duties are of a more onerous and responsible character. Then comes the Governor himself. He will say "Look at myself. What 4 is to 8, 5 is to 10. Therefore, you have to raise my salary too. I am also hard hit. It is not merely the Judges who have to keep up a costly establishment. We have equally to keep up a costly establishment and entertain the public." This is the thin end of the wedge. We have been stoutly resisting the recommendations of the Lee Commission. In spite of our recommendations, the country has been saddled with heavy taxation.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : In this matter the Lee Commission refused to make a recommendation.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : That Commission, while making all sorts of recommendations in favour of raising the salaries of certain superior services, deliberately refrained from making any recommendation in favour of the raising of the salary of the High Court Judge. It is only about three or four years ago that the case of the High Court Judges was placed before an extremely sympathetic, and I might almost say, magnanimous committee—a committee with no responsibility whatever to the tax-payer of this country beyond saddling upon it the heavy additional taxation which was the net result of its alarmist recommendations.

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Will the Honourable Member give me an idea of what a proficient Barrister gets at the Bar ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The Honourable Colonel Crawford has put me a question. What about the merchant princes who earn millions, may I ask ? There are members of the Bar who earn millions, but that is a precarious calling. When you are on the Bench, you occupy a position of power, of dignity and, I might almost say, of comparative ease. You cannot compare the emoluments of public services with the earnings in trade and in the professions. Therefore, the comparison cannot possibly be made.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Can you get a good Barrister to take up a position on the Bench ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : My friend has put me a very pertinent question. My answer is "Yes". I shall ask my friend another question. Do you think that a small paltry increase in the salary would make a difference to a successful barrister ? If you increase it to Rs. 4,250 or even Rs. 4,500, would that be a sufficient compensation ? Some interruptor asked the Honourable the Mover of this Resolution what was the salary of the Judges of the United States of America. He was not able to answer that question, but I can. I have got the Statesman's Year Book. You will find from it that the Judges of the Federal High Courts draw a salary of $5,000 per year or about Rs. 18,000 a year. The salary in the Supreme Court is $20,000. Now you are going to have a Supreme Court here ? (An Honourable Member : "Are we ?") The scheme of the Associated Chambers of Commerce and other schemes have recommended a Supreme Court for India. If you now raise the salary of the Judges of the High Court, you will also have to raise the salary of the Judges of the Supreme Court. America is the richest country in the world. The salary of the Judges there is in many cases less than the salaries in India. India is notoriously one of the poorest countries in the world. I therefore ask Honourable Members here most seriously to pause before they cast their vote in favour of this Resolution. I have every sympathy with the Judges of the High Court but, at the same time, remember that our sympathy to the Judges of the High Court should not make us oblivious of the poor tax-payer who is already ground down under taxation. Litigation is no longer and never was a luxury and the passing of a Resolution of this character would be a denial of litigation as it would inevitably lead to a large increase in the court-fees leviable under the Court-fees Act. Therefore, I most reluctantly but very emphatically oppose this motion.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I rise to oppose the Resolution of my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi and my reasons mainly are that the High Court Judges perform duties which do not require more salary than they already get and I may say that in a poor country like this, the salary of no official, be he a member of the Bench or be he a member of the Executive Council, should be more than Rs. 1,000 a month. I shall place before you facts in order to convince you that no increase of salary of the Judges is necessary. I ask you to consider the method of recruitment of High Court Judges. They are either recruited from the Civil Service or from the subordinate judicial service or from the members of the Bar. I shall first take up the case of the members of the Bar. It is optional to the members of the Bar to accept or not a seat on the Bench. If they think that they cannot forego their income of Rs. 20,000 or Rs. 30,000 a month and to do their duty to the country they need not come down to accept a salary of Rs. 4,000 a month. Only conscientious and dutiful men will accept the office at a sacrifice. As regards the subordinate judicial service the less said the better. Their salaries range from Rs. 800 to Rs. 1,200 per mensem. The Subordinate Judges do not get more than that, and when the Subordinate Judge gets an Assistant Sessions Judgeship or an officiating District and Sessions Judgeship for some time, he is elevated to the Bench of the High Court on a salary of Rs. 4,000. A man who having failed to secure a decent income at the Bar joins the subordinate judicial service on Rs. 200 or Rs. 300, and it is sufficient if he gets more than Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,200 at the time of his retirement. He did not expect more than that. And when he gets Rs. 4,000 it is more than enough for him. As regards the members of the Civil Service who are recruited to this branch of the service, if they choose to go to the executive side of the service, it is open to them. Why do they at all choose the Bench, the comfort of the Bench I should say, instead of the worry and trouble of an executive officer ? If they do so, I beg to submit they ought also to accept the salary which has been fixed, and which may be lower in future years—time and opportunity permitting Indians to attain Swaraj. I am surprised to find that in this matter the Resolution has come from a gentleman who has no connection either with the Bench or with the Bar, and one may be led to think that it is a very disinterested Resolution and for that certainly he deserves our best wishes ; and no one can ascribe any motive to him that he has either a son or a father or a father-in-law in whom he is interested, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, suggested.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I never suggested that.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : But my suspicion is that there must be something behind it which has made my Honourable friend come forward with a Resolution like this. It may be the prompting of some friend on the Bench, it may be that some one in whom he is interested may have a case on the Bench and that case before a Judge who is in want : it may be to help people like these. But, Sir, one of the grounds that have been put forward for an increase in the salary is this, that they should be placed above all temptations. Now am I to understand that Judges who sit on the Bench are the victims of temptation, and are there instances that owing to their want they have accepted bribes ? Since the establishment of the High Courts, Sir, we have not come across any case of a High Court Judge who has been tempted to accept a bribe.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy (Burdwan and Presidency Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Nobody has suggested that.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : So I think they are above temptation, and therefore this ground of placing them above temptation does not apply. But there is one temptation above which they ought to be placed but above which they cannot be placed by an alien Government. That is this, namely, going out of their way to help the Executive and terrorizing public men, as was the case the other day in the Patna High Court. (Hear, hear.) We have instances of Judges who forget their high office.....

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable Member in order in referring to the conduct of a Judge of a court of law in that manner ?

Mr. Deputy President : He is not referring to the conduct of a Judge as a judicial officer.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I understand that he was referring to a statement made by a Judge.

Mr. Deputy President : He did not refer to such a statement at all.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : And attempt to suppress criticisms of decided cases. Sir, this is the type of men whom my Honourable friend wants to befriend and whose salaries he wants to increase. I appeal to every Indian to see that that type of Judges are suppressed and their salaries made such that they may not be tempted to accept such offices. (Laughter.)

Now, Sir, I would have been very glad if my friend, the Mover of the Resolution had taken up the cause of the lowerpaid clerks of the High Courts, but he would not do that. It is not necessary for him to do that. He comes to the rescue of the Rs. 4,000 men, but not to the rescue of the Rs. 40 or Rs. 60 men.

Then look at the work of these High Court Judges. How many days in the week do they work ? They work only five days in the week, and that for only five hours.

An Honourable Member : Some of them sleep.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Some of them were asked whether they would work on Saturdays and they refused. You will also note that often where two Judges sit in order to decide a case, one of them sleeps and the other at times only heckles the lawyers, and then comes to judgments which are at times far inferior to those of the members of the subordinate judiciary, as will be seen from the various reports of the Privy Council where the judgments of High Courts have been set aside and the judgments of the subordinate judiciary have been restored.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order. Is it proper for the Honourable gentleman to pass an indictment of that kind in this House ?

Mr. Deputy President : Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, this is relevant in this way. My argument is that the class of men who are recruited to the Bench do not deserve even Rs. 4,000 and therefore I was discussing the question of the quality of their work. My friend on the other side says that the salary of Judges in every other country has been increased, but he has been quite discreet in not giving us the amount of salary that Judges in other countries of the world get. Sir, you will be pleased to see that such eminent lawyers as Sir Hari Singh Gour, my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy.....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : And yourself.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : That is, those who are lawyers are opposing this Resolution while laymen are supporting this Resolution. Even the Honourable the Home Member has kept his mind open in this matter, and it is very right and proper for him and I appreciate his disinterested attitude in this matter. But one thing shows which way the wind blows, " that it is for you to say that you want things like this and then we shall go on with the recommendation which will increase their salary ", or something like this. So, Sir, it is our paramount duty in this House to oppose this Resolution and show to the Government that really we are not in favour of a Resolution like this and convince thereby the Home Member and the Government that there need be no such inquiry as he proposes to make from the Provincial Governments whether or not the salaries should be increased : and in doing so I would request the Government at least not to vote in this matter so as to show that they are really disinterested. They should not put in pleas of disinterestedness and then throw the whole blame upon us when it is passed and say, " You passed a Resolution like this....."

Mr. K. C. Neogy : If the question is raised at all, it should be considered whether the Judges' salaries should not be reduced.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : So I hope that the Honourable the Home Member will send a whip to all the official Members not to vote on this Resolution and that he will allow the matter to be decided according to the votes of the non-official representatives of this House.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, with your permission, I should like to state at this stage, that, in view of the attitude which I took in the matter, namely, that Government could not commit itself to any definite conclusion, it is the intention that official Members should not vote in any division on this Resolution.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Sir, it is with a certain amount of nervousness that I listened to the speech of the previous speaker when he launched an attack on the High Court Judges, when he launched an attack on their inefficiency, on their incompetence, on their insomnia or rather on their sleepiness Sir, I thought the Honourable gentleman was not in a responsible Legislature ; I thought he was indulging in a sort of drawing room conversation after an excellent dinner. Sir, that is a speech that I strongly repudiate. I repudiate the reflections on the High Court Judges of India. Sir, the High Court Judges of India have performed their duty in a manner of which India and Great Britain and the Empire and the civilized world may be proud. Sir, the Judges of India are, alike on the point of impartiality and on the point of competence, worthy of their place in any part of the world. All those reflections, coming as they come from this side of the House, must be repudiated by me because I do not think they reflect the opinion of everybody on this side of the House.

*Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer.]

An Honourable Member : What about Justice Terrell ?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I hear a voice from Orissa which is in the neighbourhood of Bihar. Sir, a prophet is not always honoured in his own country. I do not have the privilege of knowing Mr. Justice Terrell. I have read the judgment of Mr. Justice Terrell ; I have also read rather carefully the statements that appeared, the observations that were made by certain learned advocates in a particular case. Sir, the judgment has been delivered, comments have been made in the newspapers. I for my part am not here to pass any judgment on Justice Terrell. I for my part am of opinion that Justice Terrell is perfectly entitled to make whatever observation he thinks fit in his capacity as a Judge. If, through a certain lack of tact, if by necessity he made certain observations on certain aspects of life, I am sure the Honourable Member from Bihar will be satisfied that he has also been criticised in the Press as well as elsewhere. Whether I share in that criticism or not is not a matter which is germane to the issue.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : You are just like the Home Member, non-committal in your attitude.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Another Honourable Member from Bihar is expressing his opinion against my unwillingness to make a pronouncement on Justice Terrell. Suppose Justice Terrell were as bad as two gentlemen from Bihar or from the neighbourhood of Bihar would like to make out ; suppose he were guilty of all that they would like to say. I would like to ask, does one swallow make a summer ? Suppose Justice Terrell were as bad as he is painted, can you say the same of all the High Court Judges in this country ? I for my part refuse to make that statement ; I for my part refuse to draw general conclusions from a single particular incident ; I for my part even refuse to take notice of that particular incident because that does not help the view point that I want to present to this House.

In regard to the increase of the salary of the High Court Judges I am at one with my Honourable friend from Nagpur. I do not think, Sir, that India can afford to increase the pay of the High Court Judges ; not because they are not competent. I would have been tempted to support the Honourable Member from Bengal if instead of salary he had said " house allowance ". But I am to-day dealing with the Resolution as it appears on the paper. I would certainly be willing to make it convenient for High Court Judges to live not in clubs but in their own bungalows. But, unfortunately, I see no such amendment on the paper, and I have to deal with the Resolution as it appears on the paper. Sir, I do think the High Court Judges are among the most hard-worked people. I do think they are entitled to consideration. But, unfortunately, taking the totality of circumstances into consideration : taking the fact of life as it exists in India : considering the difference in the standard of life between highly paid officers and low paid officers : I think there should be a general increase of all standards of life. I think this question should not be isolated. I think the whole question has to be gone into, beginning, say, with labour. And here I was delighted to listen to the observation of my friend from Madras who referred to the spectacular lime-light in which Labour leaders moved. I do not know if the Honourable the Mover of this Resolution appeared in that light, because I did not listen to the whole of the speech. But I would like to treat even High Court Judges as coming under the category of honest labour. I want the whole question of labour—from the humble labourer to the highly paid labourer, the impartial labourer, the High Court Judge—I want the whole question to be gone into because there is a good deal of discontent in the country, even in the higher services. I know that members of the higher services do find it difficult to maintain their standard of life, and even the members of the lower services find it difficult to maintain their standard of life. I think, Sir, the whole question has to be gone into by the Government and the excellent attitude that has been taken on this subject by the Home Member—I do not share the opinion of my friend from Nagpur who described it as menacing : I should call it a very excellent attitude—the attitude taken by the Home Member encourages me in thinking that the whole question will be gone into. Incidentally, I may point out, not by way of embarrassing the Mover of the Resolution as much as by way of presenting a fact to this House, that the Chief Justice of Australia, who is also the Lieutenant Governor, gets £2,500 a year. And when Australia does not pay any higher than we do, it may be urged with a certain amount of reason why there should be an increase of the pay of High Court Judges here without also taking into consideration at the same time the question of increasing the standard of life of all those who are working in the Judicial Department. From the bottom to the top, I think the whole question has to be considered as to the advisability of increasing the pay of everybody concerned. If the Government would go into that question in that manner I think they would considerably satisfy the discontented people in the Judicial Service. Sir, the author of that fascinating book " The Lost Dominion ", who was, I think, a learned Judge himself, said that members of the Indian Civil Service are banished into that penal settlement called the Judicial Service. That observation, Sir, though anonymously made, tends to lend colour to the statement of the Honourable the Mover of the Resolution that there is discontent throughout the service. It is a matter for the consideration of the Government whether their salary should not be increased.

One or two questions put by the Honourable and gallant Member who is not present in his seat may be answered. He referred, Sir, to the fact that a barrister draws a larger income from his practice than a High Court Judge gets by way of salary. But, Sir, is it not the case even in England ? Was it not a fact, Sir, that that distinguished barrister, Sir Rufus Isaacs, was drawing a much more fabulous income as a practising barrister than when he went to the gadi of the Lord Chief Justice of England ? That is the case all the world over and I think barristers will not be found wanting to make that sacrifice for the prestige of their own profession, for, Sir, I think it is a legitimate ambition of every barrister to conclude his legal career as a Judge. With these observations, Sir, I bring my speech to a close.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I had no intention of intervening in this debate, but certain remarks which have been made by some of my Honourable friends leave me no option but to ask your permission to make one or two submissions in regard to them. It is to be deeply regretted that certain Honourable gentlemen have considered it right and proper to cast reflections on High Court Judges and on High Courts generally. It is perfectly easy for any Honourable gentleman either to support this Resolution or to oppose it without exposing himself to the charge of not approaching the question in the proper spirit. I venture to submit, Sir, that a tradition ought to be created that, as far as possible, High Courts and High Court Judges should not be lightly drawn into the debates on the floor of this House. I venture to submit that no one will be prepared to assert that on the whole the High Courts in India have not discharged their duty satisfactorily and properly. It may be that certain Judges in a fit of forgetfulness permit themselves to make extra-judicial statements. I wish to assure the House that I deplore those statements as much as anybody else, but they do not justify any one attacking the High Courts and the High Court Judges as a whole in the manner in which they have been attacked.....

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh (Chota Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Why not ?

Munshi Iswar Saran : My Honourable friend says, "Why not". For the simple reason that if you in this House try to detract from the position and the dignity of the High Court, you really do all that lies in your power to shake the confidence of the people in the justice that is being administered to the various parties that appear before the High Court without fear or without favour. That is the reason why we should not attack them. Yes, those of us who are by temperament, fond of attacking, might very well attack the Members of the Executive Council to their heart's content, and I shall have no objection to that. But I submit, Sir, that the High Court Judges should be left alone. I do not think it is necessary for me to dwell at greater length on this aspect of the matter. It is enough that I have recorded my protest against the kind of remarks that certain Honourable Members have permitted themselves to make on the floor of the House.

Now, the question is, shall we increase the salary of the High Court Judges ? The reason of some of my Honourable friends is that, if we increase the salary, we may be able to induce really the top men to take High Court Judgeships. Sir, I venture to think that that is not a sound argument. If you take a top man, the increase of the salary, say from Rs. 4,000 to Rs. 5,000 or even Rs. 6,000, will not be enough to induce him to accept a High Court Judgeship. A High Court Judgeship is accepted either for the comparative rest which it affords to the man who accepts it, or certain men are drawn to the post by the dignity of the position which a High Court Judge rightly enjoys, or there are again men who take up High Court Judgeships at great pecuniary sacrifice in order to discharge what they consider to be their duty. I therefore submit, Sir, that a mere increase in the salary by the paltry sum of Rs. 1,000 or even Rs. 1,500 will not be enough to induce a man like Pandit Moti Lal Nehru or Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru or men of that class to take it up.

Then, I am told,—I was not present here, I am sorry,—that the Honourable the Home Member—I am not attacking him—has given a warning to us that the bills of the salaries of High Court Judges have to be paid by the Provincial Governments, and I have it on the authority of my friend Mr. Neogy that in Bengal where the Chief Justice gets a salary of Rs. 6,000—other Chief Justices, I think, get only Rs. 5,000—a house was being built for him as his official residence, and when the matter came up before the Bengal Council, they turned down the proposal with the result, as my friend tells me, that the roof could not be put on the walls, and that the land, together with the unfinished building, had to be sold. If that is the attitude of the Provincial Councils, I wish to ask my Honourable friends here to be very careful before they pass this Resolution. My Honourable friend also told me that in that case Government did not think it proper to certify that particular item which they could have very easily done. Certification, Sir, as you know, is a matter now of no very great difficulty. Certifications come very easily, and if the Governor of Bengal had been convinced of the urgent necessity and importance of the item which had been rejected by the Local Council, one ventures to think that the Governor of Bengal would have certified this amount. When I say that certifications come easily, an Honourable friend on the other side shakes his head. I suppose my friend who sits on the official Benches expects them to come with greater frequency and only then he will feel that there is not very great difficulty about certification.

I venture to think, Sir, as far as this Resolution is concerned, Honourable Members of this House will, before voting on it, take into consideration the fact that, while we make the proposal it is really the Provincial Governments which have got to pay, and if the Provincial Governments are reluctant to pay, then our Resolution, like all other Resolutions, will remain as a pious wish expressed by this House.

I, Sir, oppose the Resolution.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Sir, I oppose this Resolution and beg of the House to reject it. My Honourable friend Sir Munshi Iswar Saran

.....

Munshi Iswar Saran : I am not a Knight.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : I withdraw it. My Honourable friend Munshi Iswar Saran said that a tradition must be created in the country so that the High Court Judges may be above all criticism. But, I think, Sir, this is impossible as long as the High Court Judges are recruited from a foreign country. What is the position of this country to-day ? Even a briefless barrister in the Patent Office in London may be appointed as the Chief Justice of a High Court in this country, if he happens to be in the good book of the Secretary of State for India. Sir, when it is said that High Court Judges must not be criticised and attacked, they must be above all suspicions. The Honourable the Mover has said, " on justice depends any Government organization ".

That is all right ; but where is the justice in this country ? I think the High Courts are established in this country not to administer justice but to terrorise people so that they will not act against the Government (An Honourable Member : " No "). Well, I quote certain passages from the judgment of a High Court Judge, and you will see whether the judgment is written by a qualified man or by quite an ordinary man in the street. Sir, this is a passage from the judgment of a High Court Judge :

" The subject of the charge is a silly little article in an insignificant little paper written by a silly noisy little man."

This is one passage. Then there is another passage :

" It is, in short, a biological product and is not the result of political conditions."

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, on a point of order, is the Honourable Member in order ?

Mr. President : I think the motion deals with High Court Judges in their judicial capacity alone.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Sir, I bow to your ruling. But I do not understand why, when there are people in the House who have been allowed to talk in favour of High Court Judges, why am I not entitled to say something which may be against them ?

Mr. President : Because you have passed certain Standing Orders.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : However, Sir, I may very well say that such a judgment, though written by a High Court Judge, is a silly little product of a silly little mind. If this is the judgment of a High Court Judge, I think the man ought to be dismissed at once if there is any justice in the country and if the Government cares to do justice to the people. I may refer my Honourable friends here to the judgment written by the Chief Justice of the Patna High Court in the Mahabir sedition case, which they might have read.

Sir, I have nothing more to add, but I say that the high salaries in this country are already a disgraceful affair so far as the condition of the masses of the people is concerned. Millions of people are starving in this country. I say, several millions of them are living on roots and leaves of trees from the jungle, and here I find that several thousands are being pocketed by each member of the bureaucracy every month. Sir, this is all a disgraceful affair, and I do not think there is any justification to increase the salary of the High Court Judges who are already getting much more than they deserve. With these remarks I beg of the House to reject this Resolution.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I wish to take part in this debate because I have some experience of the High Court and I do think that this motion is wholly gratuitous and should not have been brought before this House. I do not see why the present salary of the Judges of the High Court is not adequate. We are all men who have some business habits and we know what expenses we have got to meet and we have got to keep up a certain standard of comfort. We know these things, and with a full sense of responsibility, with as full a sense of responsibility as sometimes flows from the Treasury Bench, I assure the House that the present salary of the High Court Judges is ample, and there is not the slightest necessity for increasing it by a single rupee or a single pie.

The whole question really is, whether the best men are attracted by the existing salary. That is not a question that is answered by raising the salary by a thousand or two thousand rupees. If by the best men you mean the men who get the biggest incomes at the Bar, they certainly will not be attracted by raising the salary by one or two thousand rupees. Their income must be four or five times, and sometimes even ten times, that of High Court Judges. That sort of men will not be attracted. I do not know either that it follows that the men who get the best income at the Bar are necessarily the best men to be recruited for High Court Judgeships. I have known that the best advocates are not necessarily the best Judges, and the men with the best incomes do not necessarily make the best Judges, and therefore it is not to be supposed that there is any connection between the income which a man makes at the Bar and his capacity to discharge worthily the functions of a High Court Judge. The whole thing is misconceived. The fallacy is that if you raise the salary by a thousand or two thousand rupees, you will straight away get better Judges. It depends entirely on the selections. If the Honourable Mover of this Resolution is dissatisfied with the actual selection of the Judges, then he must find the cause elsewhere,—that the patronage is not in proper hands or that the patronage is not properly exercised, or that there must be some other reason, such as that the appointments are made not necessarily on grounds of efficiency but on other grounds. These are questions on which there has been considerable divergency of opinion,—and opinions have been expressed both in this House and elsewhere, but I do not wish to take part in that discussion because I do concede that there are many good Judges, some bad Judges and some indifferent Judges. It will not do to cast a reflection on Judges generally and I do not propose to take that line. But taking the proper line in this matter, I do suggest that this is a most ill-timed motion, when we want money for various purposes and when it is not a question of gift or generosity, but a question of whether it is really necessary to pay Judges more. I say the existing salary of Rs. 4,000 is very much more, not only than a Judge deserves, but than an Executive Councillor deserves, or any man in India deserves. I think there should be a maximum salary for any State official. I do not want that it should be £22½ a month or Rs. 300, as in Soviet Russia but I do suggest it should be fixed at Rs. 1,000. And when Indianisation sets in, unless Indians agree to a reduction of salary, it is not possible to eliminate the difficulties of the position. You want Europeans to get more salaries in order that you may get more salaries : thus an unwholesome competition is kept up. This is not the way to do it. Therefore, Sir, the whole thing is really whether the best men are not attracted by the present salary. I say as good a man as you can get can be got for Rs. 4,000. But if you are dissatisfied with a Judge here and a Judge there, the reasons ought probably to be found elsewhere and not in the matter of salary. If you reduce the salary by a thousand rupees you will get the very same men and equally good men. I am perfectly certain that if a Bill is brought in and the salaries of Judges are reduced, say by a thousand rupees, all the existing Judges will not retire and will not send in their resignations. That after all is the test. Because the Government tell us the competition rate is the proper rate : you can get men for the pay you are offering. Well, you can get men for the present salary, and without casting the slightest disrespect on the many eminent Judges in the various Courts, and without referring to any flaws in the constitution of any particular High Court, I may say that the Honourable Member is not right in making himself their champion. It is true he entered into an elaborate and eloquent plea of how he had no personal axe of his own to grind, but why on earth he takes up this attitude, I cannot understand.

The time of the Assembly ought to be very much better spent than in devoting it to a consideration of this most injudicious question whether the salary of Judges of High Courts ought to be increased or not. Judges in the land ought to be independent. They ought to know that once they accept the appointment there is neither promotion, neither increase nor decrease in the salaries. Many constitutions of the world have accepted the principle that there should be neither reduction nor increase in the salaries of Judges of High Courts. They ought to know that their salaries are stable. That is the way in which the judiciary ought to be recruited and maintained. It is wholly wrong to give to the Judges the idea that their salaries can be increased by means of a motion made in this Legislature. They will then go round and ask Members to move motions any they will canvas votes. That is a most inappropriate kind of thing to do. I do not know whether the Judges themselves relish this motion. I suppose they will disown that they want their salaries to be increased. I do not suppose they made any application to the Honourable the Finance Member or to the Honourable the Home Member or to the Viceroy for the purpose of an increase in their salary. Therefore it cannot be said that they have a grievance and unless this grievance is redressed, they will go on strike and the judicial administration will come to a standstill. I therefore, Sir, without entering into the numerous and very pertinent observations which some of my friends on my side have made and without expressing either disagreement or agreement with those observations, wish to conclude by appealing to the House to resist this sort of motion which is merely made—I do not know for what purpose—which is merely made at the instance of some Judge or other of the High Court who perhaps does not deserve to be a Judge of the High Court. Unless it was made at the instance of a High Court Judge I cannot understand how such a motion comes to be made, and I suppose the Honourable Member will certainly repudiate my suggestion, and I accept that repudiation in anticipation. There is not the slightest doubt, however, that the suspicion will be there in the country and it is not right to encourage Judges to expect that in the year of grace 1928 they will get Rs. 1,000, and in the next year they will get another Rs. 1,000, and so on. If so, they will go on making applications. I do not wish to add anything further except to say that I have got very great respect for all the High Courts and most of the Judges, and I do believe that the Judges themselves in the first instance will agree with me, and if this Resolution were circulated for their opinion, they would certainly not want any increase of salary. They will perhaps explain why they want an increase, if they want it. At the present moment no grounds have been given either by way of rise in prices or of any other kind, or that they have got to employ a larger staff of servants or live in palaces or own half a dozen motor cars. I have not been able to understand the reason why they want an increase. Rs. 4,000 is quite ample for a Prince in this land to live on. I cannot understand why Rs. 4,000 is not sufficient and why public money should be wasted in this manner. We can get quite good Judges for Rs. 3,000 or Rs. 2,500 or even for Rs. 2,000. I have not the slightest doubt about it. I would therefore appeal.....

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : How much would you accept if you were made a Judge of a High Court ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : I would accept Rs. 1,000 or even Rs. 500 or even honorary for that matter, if you ask me to serve in a Swaraj Government, I will then do so with the greatest pleasure. I speak with the fullest sense of responsibility. It is an idle thing, it is a criminal thing—extravagance is criminal—to waste money in this fashion. Suggestions are made that High Court Judges will have to be increased because their work increases, because one Judge is entertained another will have to be entertained, and then temporary Judges are made permanent. I find the tale of Judges grows longer and longer day by day. The High Courts are not able to get through their work expeditiously. There is no disposition on Government's part to curtail the number of Judges. In this state of things what is the responsibility of any private Member in this House in making this motion ? And after all, this Resolution ought to come from the Government, because the question of public expenditure and matters relating to services, etc., ought to come from the Government. This is not a social service. This is not an unofficial matter. Private members, non-official members, have no right, I submit, to bring forward a Resolution of this kind. Technically perhaps they can, but they have no right to deal with this question. It is a matter really for the Government to bring forward. If Government want to make any such proposal, let them do so ; let them take the responsibility. But let them not get—I do not suggest it—let them not get a private Member to move a Resolution and remain neutral. I expect the Government Benches to vote against this Resolution.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Sir, I think it is high time that we brought this debate to a close. (Hear, hear).

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : It was unnecessary.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am grateful, Sir, to my Honourable and gallant friend Mr. Ranga Iyer. (An Honourable Member : "How is he gallant ?") for his reasonableness, for the sweet and reasonable speech which he has delivered to-day. Of course, although the express wording of my Resolution does not mention house allowance, the spirit of the Resolution embraces house allowance, and, Sir, I should be only too glad to accept any amendment which my Honourable friend moves on the lines which he suggested. (An Honourable Member : "Where is the amendment ?"). As to my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour, I am not at all surprised at his opposing my Resolution. He has got the Supreme Court in his head and he is afraid that the salary of the Judges of his unborn darling child may be affected if an increase in the salaries of High Court Judges is given. I am sorry he is not hearing me.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am hearing you.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Coming to my Honourable friend.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is that all you have got to say about me ? What about the court-fees that will be raised ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Why should they be raised ? Coming to my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, I do not think I should take his remarks seriously. He would like to have Judges without salaries, Honorary Judges like Honorary Magistrates. I am not opposed to his suggestion, but I would humbly advise him to give effect to it after the dawn of the millennium under the Swaraj Government. It is true that the salary of Ministers is reducible to one rupee or nothing, but does not affect my argument that the creation of the offices of Members of Executive Council whose salaries cannot be reduced and that of Ministers have adversely affected the position and status of the Judges. From my friend's occasional remarks, occasional lapses in this House addressing the Chair in a form familiar to the lower courts it is not unkind to presume that his practice has been miles away from High Courts. (Laughter). Therefore, his knowledge of High Court Judges is obviously based on secondhand information which is not always accurate, and in the present case it seems to me to betray a woeful lack of taste.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : What about your own secondhand facts obtained from the Judges ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am coming to you presently. My gallant and Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, (Laughter) has substituted satire, sarcasm and affected witticism for sound logic. He has advised me to address the proper forum, namely, Sir John Simon. Thanks. I would thank him for his gratuitous advice and I hope I will profit by it. He has referred to Sir Ali Imam's acceptance of a Judgeship. Does my friend know that he has been indirectly supplying the case in support of my Resolution ? (Mr. K. C. Neogy. Who are the others ?). Just a minute. Sir Ali Imam, who stuck to the office of Law Member for over five years, found it impossible to stick to the uncomfortable position on the Bench for more than six months, and he quickly jumped from it to the Membership of the Executive Council of Bihar.

Sir, I am also grateful to my Honourable friend, Munshi Iswar Saran (Some Honourable Members : "Not gallant ?"), and I thank him for entering a protest against the reflection upon the Judges of the High Courts by certain Honourable Members in this House. I am not surprised at his doing so, for that is what is expected from a level-headed.

Sir, only word to the ex-Advocate General of Madras, my Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar. He has forgotten entirely, I believe he was not in the House when I made my speech, that the salaries of the Judges have not been revised since 1866. Even in 1899 the salaries were exactly the same as they were in 1866. Practically for 60 years the salaries of the Judges have not been revised and no notice has been taken by any Committee or Commission regarding those salaries.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : This contradicts your main speech.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : No. I meant "not been increased" I stated that they were not increased and they have almost remained at the same level since 1866. That is my point. Well, Sir, I would ask one thing of my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour. If an Executive Council Membership were offered to him and also a Judgeship, will my Honourable friend tell this House which one he would accept ? (An Honourable Member : "The latter".) I am sure that is not his view. (Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : "He will be offered neither of the two".) (An Honourable Member : "He would like to go to the Supreme Court.") He will not be offered a Judgeship because he is over age. That is the reason. He has no chance for a Judgeship or for a Judge's salary.

Sir, with these words, I would ask the House to carry this Resolution, if possible, unanimously (Some Honourable Members : Oh !) or at least to pass it by a large majority. (Some Honourable Members : "Withdraw". Sir Hari Singh Gour : "Otherwise it will be thrown out". An Honourable Member : "Withdraw as you have made your speech".) I will not withdraw.

Mr President : The question is :

"That the following Resolution be adopted :

'This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that steps be taken for improving the scale of salary of all High Court Judges'."

RESOLUTION RE EDUCATION OF GIRLS AND WOMEN IN THE TERRITORIES ADMINISTERED BY THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Mr. President : Sardar Jowahir Singh.

The Rev. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : Sir, the Honourable Member is absent from the House and he has already requested you in writing to kindly permit me to move the Resolution in his name. Therefore, Sir, with all due respect, I request your permission to move the Resolution that stands in the name of my Honourable friend.

Mr. President : The Rev. J. C. Chatterjee.

The Rev. J. C. Chatterjee : I beg to move the following Resolution :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he be pleased to sanction a substantial grant, capital as well as recurring, for the furtherance of girls' education in the centrally administered territories, and that as a first step towards this, a well staffed and up-to-date college be established for the training of women teachers.

This Assembly further recommends that a competent Committee, including prominent women, be appointed to go into the subject and to make a report."

This Resolution which by your indulgence I have the privilege to move is concerned, I believe, with what is the most vital of our national problems, namely, the furtherance of women's education on right lines and to some extent bringing within the reach of girls and women of this land the benefit of education which is the birthright of every citizen in a civilised country. I believe, Sir, that the problem of the education of our girls is far more important than any other national problem, and when one hears so many discussions taking place, bitter struggles for the demand of self-government, many committees sitting to write reports, constitutions being drawn up, men saying hard things to each other, it seems to me that there is somewhat of an unreality in all these wranglings, for, Sir, I ask how can any country attain to full responsible government or Swaraj when it is only working as it were with only half its man-power. I believe that so long as we do not bring education to our people, and especially to our womanhood, we shall never be able to settle our national problems, we shall never be able to attain Swaraj or self-government, and even if some fairie could give it to us, that self-government could be sustained so long as the better half of our nation is not educated and is not sensible to its responsibilities or its opportunities.

The Resolution which I have just moved is divided into three parts. I shall endeavour, as briefly as possible, to show the importance and the necessity of each part. The first part of the Resolution asks the Governor General in Council to sanction a substantial grant, capital as well as recurring, for the furtherance of girls' education in the centrally administered territories which, as we all know, comprise the Province of Delhi, the North-West Frontier Province, Ajmer and Coorg. I know that my Resolution of necessity must be confined to these provinces as education is a transferred subject in the other provinces. I do not believe that the Central Government which ought to set an example and give a lead to Provincial Governments in all matters relating to nation-building has in this matter of women's education given a lead in the centrally administered territories. For instance, the Punjab does a great deal more for education than any of the centrally administered territories under the Government of India's direct control. Then, Sir, there is another point. Government have acknowledged on all occasions that they have the greatest sympathy with women's education, but it is difficult to realise that they have done all that they could have done or should have done in this matter. For instance only last week, Mr. P. W. Marsh, I.C.S., Collector and District Magistrate of Aligarh, when opening an Anglo-Vernacular Girls' School in that town said that till now the education of women has depended almost entirely on private generosity. Now, Sir, I shall quote a very few figures and show that that statement is not by any means exaggerated. I take my figures from the official report just issued by Government for Education in 1925-26, and in that report we are told that in the whole of British India there are 176,000 educational institutions of all kinds for the education of males, whereas for the education of women and girls there are only 27,110 educational institutions of various kinds. Sir, I do not in the least contend that the number of educational institutions for boys is sufficient. We all know that in an enormous country like ours this number is hopelessly inadequate; but it is surprising that, as the result of the combined efforts of Government, of local bodies and private effort in this country, the number of girls' schools in the country is hardly a seventh of the number—the very meagre number—of boys' schools in the land. We find that for every ten schools for boys, there is not even one for girls. The proportion would be just under one. Then, again, if we go on to the question of national expenditure on education, we find the disparity just as great or even greater. In the same year 1926 Rs. 14,12,85,861 were spent from all sources on the education of males, whereas only a little over Rs. 2 crores was all that could be found for the education of women and girls. Considering that the education of girls in this country is so far behind that of boys, the reasonable and the logical course would have been that we should spend seven times as much on the education of women and girls and provide seven times as many institutions for the education of women and girls as we can do for the boys and men of this country. Now, Sir, my gallant and Honourable friend from Nagpur has some-time referred to the women of this country as the depressed classes. Far be it from me, that I should characterize the fair sex of my country as the depressed classes—to say the least, it would not be quite safe for me—but I may be pardoned when I maintain that at all events in the matter of education the vast majority of women and girls of this country are very backward. Now, Government rightly and at all times profess, and also try to give effect to their professions, to help the backward communities. Therefore it stands to reason that they should do their utmost to help forward the education of what I may with a certain amount of trembling and hesitation describe as the most backward community so far as education goes. But that is not what really happens in practice. If we take the figures given in the report that I have quoted from, we find that in the case of boys' education Government contributes 46.9 per cent. of the total expenditure on boys' education. In the case of girls' education private effort has to find no less than 23 per cent. of the total cost of girls' education, whereas in the case of boys' education private effort is responsible only for 12 per cent. of the total expenditure. Government contributes to the cost of girls' education only 45 per cent. of the total cost on education. I maintain, Sir, that to be fair, Government ought to contribute something like 200 per cent. of what is contributed by private sources for the education of girls, which is so backward. Every one here more or less realizes the extent of our national disaster because of the illiteracy and the ignorance of the vast majority of the women of this land, but I wonder how many people do realize fully the exact degree of that terrible disaster. I find that in the year 1916 there were only .9 of the womanhood of India who could at all read or who could be described as literate ; that is to say, not one in a hundred was able to sign or write her name at that time. Ninety-nine women out of a hundred could not read and write. We should have thought that in the last ten years, in which there has been so much progress in the country in other directions, the situation in this respect could have improved, but the report for 1926 tells us that the proportion of literate women has only risen to 1.3, and in the words of that report this progress is described as extremely slow and much below the rise in the percentage for males. I do not desire to weary the House by quoting more statistics and figures. I believe I have said enough to convince the House that the problem is most urgent and that we are right in asking the Government to give practical effect to their sympathy and to provide money for education or rather for greater educational facilities at least in the centrally-administered areas. I am asking for money for the centrally-administered areas in the first instance, because I believe Government itself would agree that the Central Government, with all the distinguished men that it includes and with all its great resources, ought to set the lead and an example to the provinces. It is however surprising that in the centrally-administered territories there is not a single—I believe I am right in saying—a single arts college for women or a single training college for women except at Delhi. I do not think that there is any part of the centrally-administered territories where compulsory primary education is provided for girls. Sir, if it is possible in States like Baroda and even in the distant and rather outlandish State of Bikaner—for we read in this morning's paper that Bikaner has resolved to provide for compulsory education for boys and girls in that State—it certainly ought to be possible for the Central Government to provide funds for compulsory primary education in the small territories which they directly administer. Speaking of my own Province of Delhi, where I believe the Government of India reside for some part of the year, the Municipality, I can assure you, has been anxious to provide compulsory primary education for girls, but they are unable to do so because the grant that is given for education by Government is very inadequate, and rightly or wrongly as it is still considered that boys' education should come first. As they are not able to provide for all the expenditure required for boys' education, they feel very doubtful if they should undertake compulsory education for girls. Now that is a thing to which I invite the attention of the Assembly and of the Government—Delhi is a place where they can start to-morrow, if they so like, compulsory education for girls and with very good effect.

The second part of my Resolution asks for the establishment of a well-equipped training college for the training of women teachers. A training college, so far as this Resolution goes, is not intended to mean a college for training women graduates only : I believe it is intended to include a training course, be it normal classes, be it junior Anglo-vernacular classes, or be it classes for the training of graduate teachers. Now, everyone knows that in this country so far as women's education goes, next to the question of money, the most urgent problem is the paucity of suitable trained women teachers : and unless we have women teachers, how are we going to have scholars taught ? I will quote a few further figures. If you look up this 1926 report, you will find that in the whole of British India there are only 134 women in training colleges for teachers. Considering that some of these prospective women teachers are likely to get married and therefore in a sense will be lost to the teaching profession, we thus find that for the whole length and breadth of the country containing 300 millions of people there will hardly be a supply of 100 well-trained teachers a year. Now, I ask, Sir, is that a state of affairs considered complimentary or satisfactory for any civilized country ? I am not one of those who would place all blame for everything on the shoulders of Government ; I am not here to maintain that the paucity of women teachers is entirely due to the lack of sympathy or the lack of facilities provided by Government. But I would say this that after all there is something that can be done by them. Now, what are the reasons why there are not more girls willing to go into training colleges for women teachers ? The first thing is that there is hardly any, at any rate in North India—I do not know about South India—a self-contained training college for women, there may be one such in the South. But the general practice in North India is that one or two or at the utmost three women are admitted to men's training colleges. I maintain that the customs of the country are such that it is not very encouraging for the majority of girls of good families to go into these training colleges. And, even if our customs did permit of that, it is extremely doubtful whether two or three women in a large men's college can derive the benefits of corporate life or get the full benefits of training when they are in such a hopeless minority. What we therefore want is a well-staffed, well-equipped training college, or at any rate training classes attached to an arts college in one of the central places in India. I hope that Government will seriously consider the desirability and the urgent need for establishing such a college, possibly in Delhi, which being the hub of the universe at the present time will draw, I hope, qualified women graduates from all parts of the country. I dream of a great college for women on the banks of the Jumna, something like, though not quite like, the one described by Tennyson in the "Princess". But even a college cannot be started or maintained without money, and that is the reason why I am trying to press on Government the need for funds to start a college of this kind.

In the final part of my Resolution I have asked for the appointment of a competent committee, including prominent women, to go into the entire subject and to make a report. Sir, it was in the year 1925 that the Director of Public Instruction of Bengal extended a memorable invitation to women in the following words :

"You have asserted yourselves in the field of politics. How long is to be before you assert yourselves in the field of secondary and higher education? How long are you going to tolerate a man-made syllabus, a man-made system, a man-made examination and a controlling authority in which women have no voice as the dominating arbiter of your educational destinies?"

That invitation and challenge was taken up by the educated women of India without delay. They have become fully alive to the dangers of this man-made system of education. They realize that if the slavish imitation of boys' education continues, the girls of this country will never be educated on right lines. Their answer was demonstrated in the two all-India Conferences held this year and last year on women's educational reform. Any one who either attended these conferences, read reports of their doings or had anything to do with them would be convinced not only of the ability of our women and of their fitness to guide the lines on which right education should be based for our girls, but will also have realized the determination of this handful of educated and noble women of our land to bring education within the reach of all their less fortunate sisters. Before the country undertakes—I hope with the help and sympathy of Government—an all-India campaign for the education of women and girls, for wiping out illiteracy amongst women, it is absolutely necessary that we should lay down the right lines on which such education should proceed. We have read notices, or rather extracts, from a great many memoranda submitted to the Educational Committee of the Simon Commission, and several prominent educationists in writing their memoranda have gone out of their way to state that the present system of education in this country is rotten. Well, if after so many years a system of education for boys which has advanced a great deal and may therefore be described as already having settled down to some extent, is rotten, let us not make a mistake in perpetuating an imitation of that system for our girls. There is yet time in which to think—and especially for women themselves to consider—what are the right lines on which the education of girls in this country should proceed. That is the reason why I have asked for the appointment of a competent committee to carefully go into and weigh the subject of women's education and lay down the right lines on which it should proceed. I shall not be satisfied until that committee, which I hope will be appointed by Government, comprises within its membership an adequate representation of educated women. No one, as I have said, who has seen the work of the all-India Conferences of women and the many constituent provincial Conferences that preceded them, will deny that there are enough women in the land who can adorn such a committee and contribute valuable help in working out the lines on which education for women should proceed.

Sir, I need not add very much more to what I have said. I am perfectly confident that such an enlightened House as this will not hesitate to accept unanimously this modest Resolution for the furtherance of women's education. I have not moved this Resolution merely to get something out of Government, although I sincerely hope that we will get not something but a great deal from Government for this work. I believe, Sir, that the gods and also governments help those who help themselves, and I have therefore moved this Resolution in the hope that the debate that will be raised upon it will bring this important subject to the renewed notice of the country, and that every one who is keen on the enlightenment and advancement of our land or for the attainment of what is known as Swaraj, will take the lead from this House and work with renewed zeal for this noble cause. Speaking personally, if I may be pardoned for making a personal reference, when one realizes and fully believes that all that is best in one's life has come first and foremost from the training and from the help of an educated mother, and realizing how difficult it would be to contemplate life without the help and companionship of an educated wife or the sympathy or the interest of educated sisters—and I believe many Members of this Honourable House have had these benefits—it is hard to imagine how any one should not be keen to bring within the reach of every man in this land the same training, the same companionship, the same enlightened sympathy, which some of us have had the good fortune to enjoy. I cannot do better, Sir, than to conclude my remarks by repeating the noble words spoken by Her Excellency Lady Irwin in the course of a speech delivered at the opening of the second all-India Women's Conference held this year at Delhi. Her Excellency said :

"The furtherance of education for women is a great constructive work, for it means nothing less than an attempt to build a City of God in the homes of this country. It is the noblest concern of women, nobler even than the great profession of medicine, since it ministers to the hearts and minds and not only to the body."

Sir, this Resolution is a humble attempt to help forward the building of a City of God in the homes of our land, and I commend it to this House.

Sir, I move. (Applause).

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair which was occupied by Mr. Deputy President, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.)

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division Non-Muhammadan Rural) Sir, I beg to move :

"That for the words from 'for the furtherance of' to the words 'training of women teachers' the following be substituted :

'for providing free and compulsory primary education of girls between the ages of 6 and 11 in the centrally administered territories as early as possible, and as a first step to that end to establish at once a sufficient number of women teachers' training schools in that area'."

I am in agreement in principle with the learned Mover of this Resolution, but it would have been much better if my friend had not dragged in Swaraj. We on this side believe that it is an impossibility to have the people of this country educated without Swaraj. Swaraj comes first and education comes afterwards. To give an instance in point, I may point out that only yesterday the Home Member was cursing the Russian people, but I find, Sir, that even in the cursed Russia they have made education of girls and boys compulsory. But in this country we have been crying, I think, for the last fifty years and no attempt has yet been made in that direction.

I will not enter into details as to the state of affairs in this country about education, but with your permission I may be allowed to say only a few words. In this country there are 5,12,873 villages ; out of which you have primary schools only in 22,635. It means that for every 23 villages you have one school ; it includes boys' school as well as girls' school. Taking the figures only for female education, we find that including towns and villages the total number of institutions for girls' education are 5,146. That gives you one school for every 100 villages. That gives the state of affairs in the whole of this country. I would not deal with the Delhi Province, as my Honourable friend the Mover of the Resolution comes from Delhi. Let me deal with another province, the North-West Frontier Province, and let us see what is the state of affairs in that province.

Mr. Deputy President : Which province are you dealing with ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : The North-West Frontier Province. This is a province administered by the Government of India directly and for this province the Government spends Rs. 2,80,55,190, out of which a decent sum of Rs. 1,28,486 is spent for girls' education. That gives us a very decent percentage of .4 per cent. This shows, Sir, how far the Government is sympathetic towards girls' education. If you take the figures for 1921-22 and 1926-27 you will find that in 1921-22 the percentage of girls was .5 that is, 5 girls reading out of 1,000 girls. That has been increased during 5 years to .7 per cent,—a very decent figure, of which the Government of India should be proud. We find, Sir, on page 34, that the percentage of female scholars to the female population of school-going age in 1921-22 was 3.7 per cent., and in 1926-27 it is raised to 4.8 per cent. If we take the number of scholars in the whole province in primary schools the number of scholars is 4,544 only and in middle schools 2,082. This really shows the state of affairs in a province in which the Government is spending such a high amount. This is why by my amendment I have asked Government to make the education of girls compulsory and free. I am very glad that only towards the end of this Resolution we have asked for the appointment of a committee. If the Honourable the Mover had put it in the beginning, I would have opposed it, because I know that nothing would be done and the matter would be left to the committee which the Government may be pleased to appoint. Therefore in the first part of the Resolution I have asked for the compulsory education of girls within the ages of 6 to 11. I am fortified in my remarks by the latest pronouncement of the Royal Agricultural Commission. We find, Sir, that the Royal Agricultural Commission in their Report on page 522 have said :

" The value to the community of the education of its women lies particularly in its effect upon the spread of lasting literacy amongst the young."

In a way they have clearly pointed out that if we want any progress to be made in education we should try to establish girls' schools and give them a sound education. Unless this is done, there is no possibility of spreading education even amongst the boys. If the women of this country had been educated we would have seen that the number of boys educated in the schools would have fairly increased.

They have also stated on page 503 as follows :

" We are convinced that the progressive adoption of the compulsory system is the only means by which may be overcome the unwillingness of parents to send their children to schools and to keen them there till literacy is attained."

This clearly shows, Sir, that there is no other method by which we can educate our women than by compulsion, and therefore it is very necessary that the education of girls should be made free and compulsory. Unless this is done progress in the education of women will be impossible.

Then, Sir, the other point that I have tried to make out in my amendment is with regard to the establishment of training schools for women teachers. I have asked for the deletion of the portion relating to the establishment of an up-to-date college. I should be perfectly satisfied with the establishment of training Schools for women teachers at the present time, because it would be too much for us to aspire to, to have a college now when we cannot expect to have a sufficient number of schools established in the area under the direct control of the Government. I may point out, Sir, that since Education has become a transferred subject, there has been some improvement in every province in the education of boys and girls, but the Central Government has not kept pace with the progress made in the provinces. That clearly shows how far the Government of India is sympathetic towards the aspirations of the people of this country.

Now, Sir, I find an interesting thing on page 139 in the Report for the Progress of Education in India, 1917—22. In the North-West Frontier Province the total expenditure on training schools for males in 1916-17 was Rs. 17,095, and the Government, perhaps in order to show that they have done something towards the education of women teachers, have split up this expenditure in 1921-22 for training schools for males and training schools for females. And what do we find, Sir ? Under the head expenditure on training schools for females we find the figure of Rs. 8,874 is just about half of Rs. 17,095. Thus Government have provided a school for training women teachers without incurring a single pie. That also shows the sympathetic attitude of the Government to establish training schools for women teachers.

Further, we also find in the Administration Report of the North-West Frontier Province for 1926-27 that out of the total number 261 of teachers in girls' schools, there are only 92 trained teachers and the rest are untrained. If you refer to the Report of the Delhi Province you will find a remark on page 55 :

" There is a Government training school for girls at Delhi, where women teachers are trained for Vernacular primary and middle Schools. It had 28 teachers under training as against 32 last year."

So the number of teachers has been reduced by 4. Perhaps it might be said that women teachers are not willing to be trained as teachers. I know, Sir, what happens in my province. I do not know much about the Delhi Province nor of the North West Frontier Province, but I think the condition will be the same all over. Unfortunately, the people of this country have got into their heads that they must educate their boys and girls, and in order to attain their object they establish private schools. If a private school wants to send a teacher for training in a training school, the first thing the committee of that private school is asked to do is to contribute a stipend from its own funds for the training of the teacher. I do not know what is the rule in Delhi, but that is the rule in the United Provinces, and the Government of India cannot be expected to be more sympathetic than the United Provinces Government in this matter. If this method is also adopted in the provinces directly administered by the Government of India, the natural result would be that the management of a private institution would not be able to afford to lose a teacher as well as to pay for her salary. People go about, beg money from those who can afford it, and then with very great difficulty, try to manage private institutions, and this is another difficulty placed in their way. The natural result is that they have to remain satisfied with untrained teachers. You cannot make adequate progress in education unless and until the teachers are properly trained. There is not the least doubt that women are willing to be trained as teachers in these schools, and consequently the Government ought to provide better facilities for their training. This point has been recognised.....

Mr. Deputy President : I do not wish to stop the Honourable Member, but I should like to know how long he will take.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Only a few minutes more, Sir.

I was referring to a remark on page 133 in the Report of Progress of Education, 1917-1921. This is what is stated there :

"If the quality of teaching in girls' primary schools is to be improved, it must be through the agency of women teachers, intelligent enough to accept advice from the Inspectress and, if possible, trained for the teaching profession. As yet so poor is the quality of the material that the Chairman of one District Board condemns all the schools in charge of women as without hope, but is more sanguine about a girls' school that is in charge of an old pundit."

This clearly recognises the urgent necessity of establishing training schools in the country.

Further on on page 134 you will find in the United Provinces the number of women teachers has increased from.....

Mr. Deputy President : The Resolution before the House does not deal with the question of women teachers in the United Provinces, nor can the Honourable Member discuss that subject here. I would therefore ask the Honourable Member to confine himself to girls' education in the centrally administered territories.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Sir, the point that I was trying to make was not about the United Provinces, but I was only showing that in the United Provinces and the Punjab the condition of womens' education and the condition of training women teachers is much better than in the centrally administered territories. Sir, as the time at my disposal is over, I would ask the Government not merely to accept the proposal for the appointment of a committee, but also to introduce free and compulsory education in the areas which are administered by the Central Government.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 12th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 12th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ATTACHMENT OF INDIANS WHO PASS OUT OF SANDHURST AS 2ND LIEUTENANTS TO A BRITISH UNIT.

475. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if under the rules a man who passes out of Sandhurst and gets the King's commission is posted in the first instance to a British unit as a 2nd Lieutenant ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if all the Indians who passed out of Sandhurst up to date were so employed ? If so, did any one out of these candidates obtain any bad remarks during the period he was with a British unit ?

(c) Is it a fact that no sooner were they transferred to an Indian unit a large number were given bad remarks for their work ?

(d) Is it a fact that after a period of 2 years 4 months service a 2nd Lieutenant gets his full Lieutenancy ?

(e) Are there any cases in which Indian officers have not been promoted after the said period ? If so what is their number ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state if during the same period any European 2nd Lieutenant has been similarly treated. If so, will Government please state the number of such cases ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes, except that the officers are not posted, but attached, to British units.

(b) The answer to the first portion is in the affirmative. While attached to British units, two Indian officers received reports which were considered to be below the average.

(c) No, Sir.

(d) A 2nd Lieutenant is eligible for promotion to Lieutenant after 2 years and 3 months commissioned service, if recommended.

(e) Yes. The promotion of two Indian officers has been deferred pending submission of special reports on them. I may add for the Honourable Member's information that if these reports are satisfactory, the officers concerned will be promoted with effect from the date on which they would ordinarily have been eligible for promotion.

(f) No recent cases have occurred.

CONSUMPTION OF OPIUM IN DELHI.

476. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to page 15 of the Annual Report of the Central Social Service League, Delhi for the year 1927 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the League of Nations has fixed 6 seers consumption of opium for every 10,000 population ?

(c) Is it a fact that the consumption of opium in Delhi in 1923-24 was 20 seers per 10,000 and that it has been increasing year by year and stood at 32 seers per 10,000 in 1927 ?

(d) If the answer is in the affirmative, would the Government be pleased to state what action they propose to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No ; but the Government are trying to obtain a copy of the Report.

(b) The standard of consumption for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes laid down by the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations is 600 milligrammes per annum per head of the population (roughly equivalent to 6 seers per 10,000) in countries where medical relief is fairly well organised.

(c) Yes.

(d) The figures of consumption in question are figures of consumption of licit opium only. The rise in the figures is attributed partly to an increase since 1923-24 of visitors to Delhi, but mainly to the success of administrative measures directed against the consumption of illicit opium in that area. It is not established that the actual consumption of opium in Delhi has seriously risen and, while anxious to see a reduction in the actual consumption, the Government of India, who have already given their particular attention to the matter, are not satisfied that any action by them to that effect is at present necessary or feasible.

LOCATION OF THE OFFICE OF THE DIVISIONAL SUPERINTENDENT, NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY IN DELHI.

477. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will the Government please state if the Divisional Superintendent's Office, Delhi, is located in a portion of the Imperial Bank Building in Chandni Chowk ?

(b) Will the Government please state if several of these rooms were designed and used as godowns for the storage of packages ?

(c) Is it a fact that these ill-ventilated godowns with only one door are used as offices and clerks work there for about eight hours daily ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if owing to working in these rooms many clerks and inferior staff have ruined their health and some have actually died ?

(e) Will Government please state if the number of absentees due to sickness is higher in this office in comparison with other offices due to work in unsuitable premises ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) to (e). Government have no detailed information, but I may add that it is proposed to locate the Divisional Superintendent's office at Delhi elsewhere as soon as arrangements can be made.

MEDICAL TREATMENT OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY IN DELHI.

478. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that for over 3,000 railway employees in the Delhi Province and their families there is only one Sub-Assistant Surgeon who sits in the Delhi Civil Hospital ?

(b) Is it a fact that the fee charged by the Sub-Assistant Surgeon from employees drawing Rs. 100 or thereabouts and living in the city is Rs. 2 per visit and by the Chief Medical Officer Rs. 16 per visit while according to rules it should be annas 8 and Rs. 3, respectively ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The North-Western Railway employees in the Delhi Province number approximately 3,750. To attend to this staff, the Railway Administration pays an allowance to the Civil Surgeon of Delhi, and also contributes to the Civil Hospital, Delhi, to the Hindu Rao Hospital, the Tis Hazari Police Hospital, and the Paharganj Dispensary. They have two whole-time Sub-Assistant Surgeons.

(b) Railway employees are entitled to free treatment in their homes from the medical staff mentioned.

HOUSING ACCOMMODATION FOR CLERKS OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE, DELHI.

479. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : Will Government be pleased to state if any and if so what arrangements are being made for the housing of clerks and other servants serving in the Clearing and D. S. Offices at Delhi ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Proposals are now being formulated, for providing accommodation for the clerks in the Clearing Accounts Office.

OVERTIME WORKED BY EMPLOYEES OF THE DIVISIONAL AUDIT OFFICE, DELHI.

480. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if for more than a year employees in the Divisional Audit Office, Delhi, have been working overtime for more than an hour daily without any overtime allowance ?

(b) Do Government propose to enquire into the matter, and take necessary steps to remove the hardship ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Enquiry is being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

†481*—483*.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON AGRICULTURE.

484. *Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : (a) Have Government resolved upon giving effect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture ?

(b) If so, which of the recommendations will be given effect to, and when ?

†For answers to these questions, see at the end of the question list for the day.

(c) Do the Government propose to put in a supplementary demand for giving effect to any of the recommendations in the current year ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state which of the recommendations will be taken up by the Central Government and which of them will be left to the Provincial Governments ?

(e) In giving effect to the recommendations, do the Government propose to bring in any experts from outside India and if so, how many and on what salaries ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Government of India are still considering the Report.

(b) and (c). Do not arise.

(d) The question as to which recommendations concern the Government of India and which the Local Governments is under consideration in consultation with Local Governments.

(e) As the Report is still under consideration, the Government of India have come to no conclusions in regard to the points raised by the Honourable Member.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : May I know when Government expect to come to some conclusions in regard to this matter ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government are waiting until they have had an opportunity of discussing generally the main recommendations of the report with the Provincial Ministers, a conference of whom has been convened for the 1st October.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : May I know whether, so far as the recommendations affecting the Government of India are concerned, the Government of India propose to take immediate action or action in the near future ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No recommendation made by the Commission is of such a character as to affect the Government of India exclusively. Whether it is a recommendation made about the formation of an Agricultural Research Council, or the improvement of Pusa, or the establishment of a Veterinary College, in giving effect to all these recommendations, the Government of India, even if the responsibility is exclusively theirs, have to work in conjunction with Local Governments and, therefore, until the Government of India have had an opportunity of discussing these matters with the representatives of the provinces, they cannot come to any conclusion.

REMOVAL OF THE POST OFFICE AT COONOOR FROM "MINSTED" TO "ROSE HALL."

485. Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : (a) Is it a fact that the post office at Coonoor in the Nilgiris was removed to "Rose Hall" in May last before the expiry of the lease of the old building ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state who paid the rents of the old building "Minsted" for the period until the termination of the lease after the post office was removed to the new building ? Is it a fact that the buildings "Minsted" were let out by the postmaster to the staff of the Raja of Pittapuram and rent collected from them ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Yes.

(b) The owner of "Rose Hall" paid the rent of the old building until the termination of the lease. As regards the latter part of the question Government have no information.

CONCLUSIONS ARRIVED AT BY THE ALL-INDIA DEPARTMENTAL CONFERENCE ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ROYAL COMMISSION ON AGRICULTURE.

486. Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : Will the Government be pleased to state what conclusions have been arrived at by the All-India Departmental Conference held in connection with the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Agriculture ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No such conference has been held.

ENQUIRIES INTO ACCIDENTS ON RAILWAYS.

488. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : In view of the fact that railway accidents are so frequent do Government propose to establish a rule that in future in the case of every accident there should be (1) a Coroner's enquiry, and (2) a judicial enquiry by a mixed committee of officials and non-officials ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Enquiries into railway accidents are governed by rules made by the Governor-General in Council under section 84 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890. These rules were published in Notification No. 120-T.-18, dated the 21st March, 1923, in Part I of the Gazette of India of 24th March, 1923, and prescribe the conditions under which the Senior Government Inspector, who is an officer of Government appointed under section 4 of the Indian Railways Act, holds enquiries into accidents. The rules also empower a District or other Magistrate and the Police to make separate enquiries into the causes of an accident. The Magistrate's enquiry is a public enquiry. Government consider that these orders ensure the fullest possible enquiry into accidents and their causes and do not propose to modify the rules.

The suggestion that non-officials should be associated in these enquiries was very carefully enquired into by Government and discussed with the Central Advisory Council for Railways in August 1926. On the advice of the Council the further consideration of the suggestion was dropped.

DELIVERY TO THEIR RELATIVES OF THE BODIES OF PERSONS KILLED IN ACCIDENTS ON RAILWAYS.

489. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Do Government propose to direct that in regard to casualties in railway accidents in future arrangements be made to deliver the bodies of the deceased to their relations for disposal ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The present rules already provide for this whenever it is practicable. They lay down that it is the duty of the railway police to hand over the bodies of the deceased to their relatives whenever their relatives can be found. If unfortunately the relatives cannot be communicated within sufficient time, it is incumbent on the railway police to give the dead a decent burial or cremation.

RULES RELATING TO SEAMEN EMPLOYED IN THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

500. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether they have issued any instructions to the Director, Royal Indian Marine, Bombay, to introduce any new set of rules regarding the seamen on Royal Indian Marine ships sometime in March last ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to place the rules on the Assembly table ?

(c) Whether the rules are framed under any Act of the Legislature ?

(d) Whether the rules are meant to prepare the Royal Indian Marine seamen to become members of the Indian Navy at a future time ?

(e) Whether they are mere disciplinary rules ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a), (b) and (c). The recent re-organisation of the Royal Indian Marine necessitates the revision of the rules made under section 4 of the Indian Marine Act, 1887. The rules so made will be statutory rules, made by the Government of India, and, as required by the same section, will be published in the Gazette of India. Copies will be placed in due course in the Library. Government do not think it necessary, in addition, to lay them on the table of this House.

(d) No, Sir, the rules will apply to the personnel of the Royal Indian Marine as at present constituted. New rules and regulations under the Naval Discipline Act would be required if the Royal Indian Marine were converted into a Navy. As Honourable Members are aware, the Naval Discipline Act has not yet been applied in India.

(e) Rules under section 4 of the Act will be disciplinary rules.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether Government can state the exact meaning of the words " in due time "?

Mr. G. M. Young : Does the Honourable Member refer to the words " in due course " which occur in my reply ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Yes.

Mr. G. M. Young : As soon as they have been published in the Gazette of India.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : When will they be published ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : In due course. (Laughter.)

Mr. G. M. Young : Very shortly.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the Government can make available the old rules if the new rules are not yet made ?

Mr. G. M. Young : There are no old rules under section 4.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Do I understand that there are no rules governing the conditions of service of these Royal Indian Marine men ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No rules were made under section 4 of the Indian Marine Act because formerly seamen of the Royal Indian Marine were not enrolled.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : How were the conditions of service of the Royal Indian Marine men determined if there were no rules ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I have explained before now, these men used to serve on agreements which governed the conditions of their service.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I get a copy of that agreement ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I think so, Sir. I shall try to obtain a copy for the Honourable Member.

PAY, LEAVE AND PENSION OF SEAMEN EMPLOYED IN THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

501. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table rules regarding the pay, leave and pension of the Royal Indian Marine seamen ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that rules regarding pay, leave and pension of the Royal Indian Marine seamen are to be revised so as to give the men the same rights and privileges as those of Government servants in other Departments ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether the seamen are required to sign a pledge, and, if so, what ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The rules regarding the pay, leave and pension of the Royal Indian Marine seamen will be incorporated in Marine Regulations, a copy of which will be placed in the Library.

(b) I am not sure that I understand this part of the question. Certain alterations in the existing rules have been made to improve the conditions of service in the Royal Indian Marine in connection with its recent reorganization, but no further revision is contemplated.

(c) Seamen are enrolled, and, like all other enrolled personnel have to take the prescribed oath of allegiance.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do the Indian lascars and seamen of the Royal Indian Marine at Calcutta get any gratuity, leave and pension ? Is it a fact that they are treated as daily labourers working for 30 or 40 years even without getting any pension, leave and gratuity ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat his question ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do seamen or lascars engaged in the Royal Indian Marine at Calcutta get any leave, pension or gratuity after having served for 30 or 40 years ? Are they treated as day labourers even after that service, or do they really get any leave, pension or gratuity ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The personnel engaged in the Royal Indian Marine are enrolled. They get pay, pension, leave and so forth. Formerly, as I have explained, they served on civilian agreements under which they did not get any pension. They got pay of course.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that attached to Fort William in Bengal there are about 79 lascars and seamen belonging to the Royal Indian Marine who have applied for the same to the Government of India and to the Department of my Honourable friend, as well as to His Excellency the Viceroy, and that the matter has been under consideration for some time past, and that they have not got any relief with regard to their memorial for leave, gratuity and pension, dated the 3rd January, 1927 ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have no information about the application in question, but I will make an inquiry.

RECOGNITION OF THE UNION OF THE SEAMEN OF THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE IN BOMBAY.

502. Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether the Royal Indian Marine seamen are precluded from forming a trade union under the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926, or under any other law in force ?

(b) If they are not so prohibited, then why did the Director, Royal Indian Marine, Bombay, decline to recognise the union when its office-bearers interviewed him at the end of March last ?

(c) If the men can form a union, do Government propose to issue instructions to the Registrar of Trade Unions, Bombay, to register the same and to the Director, Royal Indian Marine, to recognise it ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Royal Indian Marine seamen are enrolled as combatants under the Indian Marine Act, 1887. No combatant personnel in any service are permitted to join a trades union.

(b) and (c). Do not arise.

STARTING OF AN ASSEMBLING PLANT IN BOMBAY BY MESSRS. THE GENERAL MOTORS CO., LIMITED, OF AMERICA.

503. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to ' Messrs. the General Motors Co., Limited ' of America starting an assembling plant in Bombay and the leading article on this subject in the Sind Observer, Karachi, dated 28th July, 1928 ?

(b) What is the policy of the Government in allowing foreign firms to start business and industries in India ?

(c) Do Government propose to legislate that foreign firms starting industrial enterprises in India should have rupee capital, a majority of which should be offered to Indians for being subscribed to, and with a majority of Indian directors ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) Yes.

(b) Government's policy in this matter is not to raise obstacles to the free inflow of foreign capital into India, but to grant monopolies or concessions only to companies incorporated and registered in India with rupee capital, such companies to have a reasonable proportion of Indian Directors and to afford facilities for training Indian apprentices.

(c) No.

PAY OF SUB-WAY INSPECTORS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

504. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the late Mr. Harchandrai Vishindas, M.L.A., had raised the questions of pay and prospects of Sub-Way Inspectors on the North-Western Railway in this House on 26th February, 1926, and he was replied to by Mr. G. G. Sim that the copy of the questions would be sent to the Agent, North-Western Railway, who would consider the representations made to him on the subject ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Central Delegate Council of the North-Western Railway, recognized Union, which met at Quetta on 28th, 29th and 30th July, 1927, had made a representation on the subject to the Agent, North-Western Railway ?

(c) Are Government aware that the Agent in his reply to the General Secretary of the aforesaid recognized Union said that the pay of the Sub-Way Inspectors had been fixed after considering the nature of duties they were performing ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state in what respects the duties of Sub-Way Inspectors are of a less responsible nature than those of Sub-Inspectors of Works, Sub-Inspectors of Interlocking, Sub-Inspectors of Block, and Sub-Inspectors of the Train Examiners and Bridge Departments of the Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c) Government have not received nor would they expect to receive a report from the Agent of the Railway with regard to any such representation.

(d) Government are not prepared to express any opinion on the comparative responsibilities of Sub-Way Inspectors and the other officials mentioned by the Honourable Member.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Does not the Honourable Member think that the duties of the Sub-Way Inspectors are more risky than those of the other classes referred to in this question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Sir, as I have stated, Government are not prepared to express any opinion. I certainly cannot express any personal opinion as I am not aware of the details of the work of these various classes of employees.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Honourable Member then say whether Government will reconsider the case of these Sub-Way Inspectors and examine the reasons given by the Agent ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir. It is a matter which I think the Agent can very well decide himself. He is certainly in a much better position to do so than Government.

PROMOTION OF SUB-WAY INSPECTORS TO PERMANENT WAY INSPECTORS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

505. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Is it a fact that some Sub-Way Inspectors are waiting on North-Western Railway for promotion to the

P. W. I.'s cadre after having passed all the qualifying departmental examinations ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state, why they are not being promoted when they are fully qualified for the post of P. W. Is. ?

(c) Is it a fact that of late the North-Western Railway has taken to the practice of recruiting Apprentice P. W. Is. ?

(d) If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for debarring railway qualified men from promotion and giving preference to apprentices for the higher grade of P. W. I.'s posts ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information required by the Honourable Member has been called for and will be furnished to him on receipt.

PAY OF CERTAIN CLASSES OF EMPLOYEES OF STATE RAILWAYS.

506. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to place a statement on the Assembly table showing the scale of pay of the following staff on various State Railways in India :

Sub-Way Inspectors, Sub-Inspectors of Works, Sub-Interlocking Inspectors, Sub-Block Inspectors, Sub-Train Examiners, and Sub-Bridge Inspectors ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The designations of such staff vary on the different Railways, but the Honourable Member will find the information he requires regarding the scales of pay in the establishment rolls, copies of which are in the Library.

REPRESENTATION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY ON THE INDIAN MINING ASSOCIATION, CALCUTTA.

507. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway is a member of Indian Mining Association, Calcutta, as being the owner of a few collieries ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Railway Administration in question is represented on the Committee of the Indian Mining Assocaition by one of its responsible officers ?

(c) If the reply to (a) or (b) be in the affirmative, has the action of the East Indian Railways the approval of the Government ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am making enquiries and will communicate the result to the Honourable Member in due course.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : When does this House expect to get replies to these questions ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As regards question No. 507, I do not think it will take any long time, Sir. We had not got the information in the Railway Board's office, and we therefore asked the Agent of the East Indian Railway for it. It ought to be available in the course of a week or ten days anyhow.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Does it take long to make inquiries in such matters ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It takes the usual time to write a letter, post it and get a reply to a simple inquiry.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Is the Honourable Member aware or not aware that these Departments of Government are at present members of these private institutions, namely, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and the Indian Mining Association ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member appears to be refering to the next question, Sir, on which I have a reply already.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it not a fact that the question referred to was sent in about two weeks back ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not got the exact date, Sir. Certainly as soon as we received question No. 507, we immediately asked the Agent of the East Indian Railway for the information.

REPRESENTATION OF STATE RAILWAYS ON EUROPEAN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE.

508. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that the different State Railways are members of the European Chambers of Commerce in India, and that their responsible officers take an active part in the deliberations of these Chambers as members of Committees, etc. ?

(b) If so, has such action of the railway authorities the approval of Government ?

(c) Have Government received any representation protesting against such action of the Railways ? If so, on what grounds have such protests been made, and with what result ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The East Indian and Eastern Bengal Railways are members of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, the North-Western Railway of the Karachi Chamber of Commerce, and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce. The Bengal Chamber invite each of the Railways whose headquarters are at Calcutta to a seat on their Committee once in every three years. The North-Western Railway representative regularly sits on the Committee of the Karachi Chamber. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway representative is invited to a seat on the Committee of the Bombay Chamber every alternate year.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes. The Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, have recently addressed Government and represented that the views of such Chambers of Commerce are likely to receive unduly favourable consideration. The general question of Railways being represented on Chambers of Commerce is under examination, but I would assure the Honourable Member that there are no grounds for the implication made by the Indian Chamber.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire what special advantage the Railways get by becoming members of these Chambers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think the question is rather what special advantage the Chambers get by the railway representatives being on their Committees.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : How is it, Sir, that these Departments of the Government are members only of the European Chambers and are not members of the Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, and the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not aware, Sir, that the Railways have ever received an invitation from these two Chambers to become members of their bodies.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Is it necessary for the Chambers to send invitations to the Railways to become members, or is it for them to apply for membership of these Chambers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member is probably better aware than I am of the procedure adopted by these Chambers, of which I have never been a member ; but I imagine that if these particular Chambers wish to have railway representatives, there are means by which their wishes can be conveyed to the Railways.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire, Sir, if they got invitations from the European Chambers of Commerce to become members of their Association ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I cannot answer that, Sir ; it would probably mean delving into correspondence of a long time back which I have not so far seen.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire whether, if the Indian Chambers sent invitations to these Railways to become members they would accept such invitations and join as members of the India Chambers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The matter will be considered as part of the examination of the position which we are now making, owing to the representations received from the Indian Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire whether, in view of the fact that these Departments of Government are members of these various European Chambers, the representations which Government get from time to time from these Chambers should be taken as impartially representing the public point of view ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As I have said, Sir, there are no grounds for thinking that these particular Chambers receive unduly favourable consideration because members of the Railways are either on their Chambers or on their Committees.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Is it a sound policy for Departments of Government to become members of a private Association ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As at present advised, Government see no objection to that policy. It is desirable that the Agents of our big Railways should be in close touch with big commercial organizations.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Honourable Member aware that the interests of the Indian Commercial community do not always coincide with those of the European commercial community, particularly in their relations with the Railway Department ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have not discovered that so far as their dealings with the Railway Department have come to my notice. I am not prepared to express an opinion on the more general question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member read the evidence given before the Acworth Committee on this point, particularly by the Indian mining interests in Calcutta ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I probably have read the evidence at some time.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member kindly look up that evidence and state in this House whether the charges brought forward on that occasion were not well-founded ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I will look up the evidence, but I think it unlikely that I should be prepared to express my own opinion.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : When do Government propose to come to a decision in regard to the representation of the Indian Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I cannot give the Honourable Member an exact date, but the attention of the House having been specially drawn to this matter I shall certainly see that no avoidable delay occurs.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether the European Chambers of Commerce take part in politics, especially anti-labour politics, and whether the Agents of these railways who are Government officers are permitted to be responsible for the views of European Chambers of Commerce, especially anti-labour views ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : So far as I am aware, Sir, the Agents of these railways take practically no part in the business of the Chambers unless it happens to be railway business. I am not certain of it, but that is my impression from discussions with the Agents particularly in Calcutta.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : In view of the reply given by the Honourable Member that Government does not see any objection to these Departments becoming Members of the Chambers of Commerce, may I inquire if the Government of India as the Government of India will consider the desirability of becoming a member of the Indian Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have stated that we would consider the suggestion of the Railways concerned becoming members.

PERCENTAGE OF VACANCIES IN THE INDIAN FOREST SERVICE FILLED BY PROMOTION OF OFFICERS OF THE PROVINCIAL FOREST SERVICE.

509. Mr. K. C. Neogy : What is the percentage of vacancies in the Indian Forest Service now filled by promotion of officers of the Provincial Service ? Is it a fact that the Lee Commission recommended an increase of this percentage ? If so, have Government given effect to this recommendation ? If not, what are their intentions in the matter ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No percentage of vacancies in the Indian Forest Service is reserved now for promoted officers of the Provincial Forest Service. 12½ per cent. of the total Indian Forest Service cadre was set apart in 1921 for the promotion of Provincial Forest Service officers as a result of the recommendations of the Islington Commission. This proportion of posts is now held by Provincial Forest Service officers and it is the intention of Government to fill each vacancy in this portion of the cadre by promotion from the Provincial Forest Service. This will give, during the period 1928-34, officers of the Provincial Service 10 vacancies out of 24, or 41.66 per cent. of the total number of vacancies.

2. No increase in the percentage of posts or vacancies to be filled by promotion from the Provincial Forest Service was recommended by the Lee Commission.

INSECURITY OF THE ROADS IN THE PESHAWAR DISTRICT.

510. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Are the Government aware that roads in the district of Peshawar are unsafe after dusk and that all traffic is consequently closed at that hour ?

(b) Are the Government aware that owing to the depredations of outlaws and local budmashes villagers in the vicinity of Peshawar consider their life and property as perfectly insecure ?

(c) Is it a fact that a small mounted guard is sent daily in the evening to patrol the Grand Trunk Road near the city only for a short time and up to a short distance ?

(d) Is it a fact that the establishment of two cinema companies showing American films has led to the growth of crimes in recent years ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Owing to the proximity of the unpoliced tribal territory, where the population are armed and ill-controlled, the roads in the Peshawar District can never be considered as safe as the roads on this side of the Indus. Apart from the barbed wire perimeter of the Peshawar Cantonment the only road closed after dusk is the Peshawar Kohat Road, which goes through tribal territory.

(b) No, Sir. Conditions are better now than they have been for several years.

(c) Yes.

(d) No.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Will the Government please state how the state of affairs in the North-West Frontier Province in respect of crime and safety of life and property compares with the state of affairs in Bengal, from which province the Honourable Member comes, and how many broad daylight dacoities such as the one committed in the Calcutta Post Office have been committed during the last few years in the Frontier Province ?

Sir Denys Bray : The Honourable Member is surely not addressing me, but my friend Mr. Ghuznavi.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I want the Government to compare the state of affairs in respect of crime in the North-West Frontier Province with other provinces, and to state whether the North-West Frontier Province is more unsafe than Bengal or even the Punjab ?

Sir Denys Bray : I should be glad of very long notice of that question.

ROBBERIES AND DACOITIES COMMITTED IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE FROM 1885 TO 1926, ETC.

511. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the highway robberies and dacoities committed in the North-West Frontier Province from 1885 to 1926 and also a statement showing the strength of the police during the same period ?

(b) Do Government propose to take steps to increase the strength of the police in that area ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I am afraid I cannot undertake to furnish the Honourable Member with these statistics for a period of over 40 years. For more recent years they are published in the annual Police Administration Report, to which I would refer the Honourable Member.

(b) Additions have been made to the force from time to time as found necessary. I understand that 35 Sub-Inspectors and Head Constables and 422 foot constables have been added to the police force since 1924. The question whether further increases are required is now under the consideration of the local authorities.

NUMBER OF ACCOUNTANTS AND CLERKS IN THE MILITARY ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

512. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of accountants and clerks serving in the Military Accounts Department in India and the number of Muslims among them ?

(b) Is it a fact that on a representation made by the Muslim Association, Peshawar Cantonment, in 1925, the Financial Adviser to the Government of India, Military Finance, instructed the Controller, Military Accounts, Peshawar, to notify to the Association when vacancies occur in his office ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state if the instructions referred to above have been followed ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The required statement is placed on the table.

(b) and (c). I would invite reference to the reply given by me to part (b) of a similar question (No. 394) asked by my Honourable friend Mr. Ismail Khan.

Statement showing the number of accountants and clerks serving in the Military Accounts Department in India on the 1st September, 1928, and the number of Muslims among them.

ARTICLES IN THE Times of India REGARDING THE RECENT TOUR OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

513. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: (a) Will Government kindly state the total amount of public expenditure incurred by Sir Frederick Whyte in touring over this country during his tenure of office as President of this House, as well as the places visited by him ?

(b) Are Government aware that the visit of the Honourable Mr. Patel to provincial capitals is welcomed by the Presidents of the local Councils, and by the non-official members generally ?

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a remark made by the Times of India in its issue of the 24th August, 1928, in which an attack is made upon the Honourable the President of the Legislative Assembly for his recent tour ?

(d) Do Government propose to take any action against the paper, as its remark constitutes an attack upon the dignity of the House and its President ?

Mr. J. Crerar: (a) A statement is laid on the table.

(b) The matter is not within my special cognizance, but I am quite prepared to accept the view suggested in the Honourable Member's question.

(c) Yes.

(d) Government are not aware that the article gives legal grounds for taking action.

Statement showing the tour expenses of, and places visited by, the Honourable Sir Frederick Whyte during his tenure of office as President of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: Is it not a fact that the Selborne Committee recommended the step which Sir Frederick Whyte and the present President have followed ?

Mr. President: I have already informed Honourable Members that I propose to make a statement on the subject.

ARTICLE IN THE Times of India REGARDING THE RECENT TOUR OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

514. Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury: (a) Has the attention of the Honourable the President been drawn to the article published in the Times of India of 25th August, criticising the Honourable the President of the Assembly for undertaking the recent tour in the Provinces ?

(b) Will the Honourable the President be pleased to state if there is any bar to such a tour being undertaken by the President ? If so, was such a bar applied in the case of Sir Frederick Whyte ?

(c) Is the Honourable the President aware that the Selbourne Committee expressed the wish that the President of the Assembly should keep himself in touch with the provincial Presidents ?

(d) Is the Honourable the President aware that the Indian Press has welcomed the Honourable the President's tour as conducive to a better understanding of the working of the various Legislatures and the application of a uniform practice and procedure ?

(e) Is the Honourable the President aware that since the inauguration of the reformed Councils the utility of the Honourable the President's tour has never been questioned in this House nor has the expenditure incurred therefor criticised ?

(No answer was given to this question.)

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury: My question has not been answered.

Mr. President: You will get the answer in due course.

CONCESSIONS TO OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

515. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: (a) Is it a fact that a Lieutenant on probation in the Indian Medical Service who is seconded while holding a resident appointment in a recognised civil hospital in England, reckons such period, up to maximum of one year, towards service for pension ?

(b) Is it a fact that the above regulation was amended by Army Instruction (India), Part B. 135 of 1927, and this concession was extended to officers who have held resident appointments in some recognised civil hospitals in India as well, and that the period will count not only towards pension, but also towards promotion and increment of pay up to a maximum of one year ?

(c) Is it a fact that this concession is only applicable to officers who are appointed on or after 1st July 1926 ?

Mr. G. M. Young: (a) and (b). The answer is in the affirmative.

(c) Both concessions, that is those mentioned in (a) and (b) respectively, are applicable to officers only who are appointed on or after the 1st July 1926.

COUNTING TOWARDS PENSION, PROMOTION, ETC., OF SERVICE RENDERED UNDER THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS BY OFFICERS WHO VOLUNTEERED FOR SERVICE IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE DURING THE WAR.

516. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : 1. (a) Is it a fact that during the war, several officers of the Medical Service holding civil appointments under Provincial Governments, and who held resident appointments in civil hospitals, volunteered for the I. M. S. and later some of them were permanently recruited in the I. M. S. ?

(b) Is it a fact that when these officers were asked to volunteer they were given a definite promise that every consideration would be shown to them in the matter of their future service ?

(c) Is it a fact that some of these officers had 4 or 5 years of permanent Government service without any break, before they were recruited in the I. M. S. ?

(d) Is it also a fact that these few officers are now not being allowed to count their previous Government service towards pension, promotion and increment of pay although officers who have been appointed after the War are allowed the privilege of reckoning such period of civil appointment up to maximum of one year ?

2. Is it a fact that in no other department, e.g., Police, Forest, Education, etc., if an officer is transferred from the Provincial to the Imperial service, does he lose any period of service spent under the Provincial Government ?

3. Is it a fact that I. M. S. officers who had been originally engaged for plague duty and were afterwards appointed to the I. M. S. count the period of their plague service for pension ?

4. In view of these facts do Government propose in the case of these few officers, who were recruited from the Provincial Medical Service to the I. M. S., to grant them the concession of counting their previous service under the Provincial Governments towards pension, promotion and increments of pay in the present service in the I. M. S. ?

Mr. G. M. Young : 1. (a) Yes.

(b) No, Sir. The terms on which volunteers were called for referred purely to temporary service during the war, and no guarantee of permanent service in the I. M. S. was, or indeed could have been, given. All those who volunteered could have returned to their civil careers if they had wished and could have counted all their military service towards pension, promotion and increments of pay in their own cadres.

(c) The details of the previous service under Local Governments of those who succeeded in obtaining permanent commissions in the I. M. S. are not immediately available, but it is probable that the Honourable Member is correct.

(d) The reply to the first portion is in the affirmative. The privilege referred to in the second portion has only recently been granted to officers appointed on or after the 1st July, 1926, in respect of certain prescribed civil appointments held before recruitment to the I. M. S.

2. I presume that the words " in no other Department " in this part of the question are a clerical error for " in every other Department ". Answering this question in this sense, I may say that when an officer is transferred from a Provincial to an Imperial Service such as those mentioned by the Honourable Member, he continues to serve under the Provincial Government concerned and there are special rules to govern the treatment of his previous service. The case is entirely different when an officer belonging to a Civil and Provincial Medical Service does not rejoin that service but is permitted, on his own application, to join an Imperial Military Medical Service.

3. Yes.

4. I will have the Honourable Member's proposal examined so far as pension is concerned. I would point out, however, that the officers in question joined the I. M. S. on their own application and with no prospect of receiving any such concession.

DISMISSAL OF A LARGE NUMBER OF EXPERIENCED PATWARIS, GIRDWARAS, MERABS AND NAIB TEHSILDARS BY THE SETTLEMENT OFFICERS, PESHAWAR.

517. Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) Is it a fact that a large number of experienced old Patwaris, Girdwaras, Merabs and Naib Tahsildars have been dismissed by the Settlement Officer, Peshawar ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to lay a statement on the table showing the reasons for such dismissal and the number of appeals preferred before the Revenue Commissioner that have been accepted ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Enquiries have been made and the information asked for will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT, OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

ELIGIBILITY OF CIVILIAN JUDGES FOR THE OFFICE OF CHIEF JUSTICE OF A HIGH COURT.

481. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that according to the practice and law in force in this country Civilian Judges have not been eligible for the office of the Chief Justice of High Courts ?

(b) Are the Government aware that Indian public and legal opinion has taken exception to the Indian High Courts Bill before Parliament introducing a change in the said practice and law by making Civilian Judges eligible for the office of the Chief Justice of High Courts ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state if any correspondence has taken place between His Majesty's Government and the Government of India on this subject ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the said correspondence ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have approved of the contemplated change in the practice and law in regard to the eligibility of Civilian Judges for the Chief Justiceship of High Courts ?

(f) Do the Government propose to take the opinion of the High Court Judges and leading barristers, Bar Associations and public bodies on this subject ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The law as hitherto interpreted precludes persons other than barristers of England or Ireland or members of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland from being appointed as permanent Chief Justices of High Courts. There is, however, no bar to the appointment of Civilian Judges to act as Chief Justices.

(b) Government are aware that exception has been taken in the Press and in public meetings to the provisions of the Bill.

(c) The Bill is the result of consultation between the Government of India and the Secretary of State.

(d) Government are not prepared to lay the correspondence on the table.

(e) The Government of India are in agreement with the amendments included in the Bill.

(f) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by me to part (b) of question No. 155 asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh on the 5th September 1928.

LEAVE AND PENSION RULES FOR INFERIOR SERVANTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

482. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to state if they propose to give the employees of the Government of India classed as menials and whose service is regarded as " inferior " the same privileges as regards leave and pension as are given to the employees whose service is regarded as " superior " ? If " yes ", when ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Government of India are actively considering what reasonable amelioration of leave and pension terms they can afford to give to their inferior servants, and hope to reach a decision on both issues within a year. They are not prepared to grant them the same leave privileges as are now enjoyed by their " superior " servants, because these have been shown by experience to be in certain respects unduly liberal. Till the Classification Rules are published, the Government of India have themselves no power as regards pensions, beyond undertaking to continue the existing temporary increases in small pensions till 31st October, 1929 ; but they intend in the meantime to formulate pensionary terms for their inferior servants in the light of what Provincial Governments, within whose limits the majority of their inferior servants settle on retirement, grant, under their recently conferred powers, to the inferior servants under their control.

THE CHANDPUR-BIJNOR-MUAZZAMPUR-NARAIN RAILWAY.

483. Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) When the new railway construction in District Bijnor (United Provinces) will be complete ?

(b) How many miles this new extension from Chandpur will be covering ?

(c) What progress has been so far made ?

(d) What is the plan of the new construction ?

(e) Whether it will connect besides Bijnor (the district headquarters) that part of the district where the annual Mela (fair) is held on the banks of the Ganges which thousands of people attend ?

(f) If the answer to (e) is in the affirmative, whether Ganj, the neighbouring village for the Mela, will have a railway station ?

(g) Whether the Government are aware Ganj is a place of great religious importance with " Vidur Kuti " (the hut of Vidura of Mahabharat times) in its neighbourhood ?

(h) Are the Government aware that the building of a station in Ganj will be a paying proposition besides giving facilities to pilgrims ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The Chandpur-Bijnor-Muazzampur Narain Railway is expected to be completed by the 31st July, 1929.

(b) About 37 miles.

(c) About one-fifth of the work has been completed.

(d) The alignment is via Haldaur, Bijnor and Kiratpur to Muazzampur Narain.

(e) and (f). The line will not pass through Daranagar Ganj.

(g) Government have no information on this point.

(h) The alignment which appeared to be most profitable was adopted. So far as I am aware, no proposal for joining up Daranagar Ganj was investigated, and it seems unlikely that it would be profitable since the distance to Jhalu from Bijnor is only some seven miles.

PROTECTORS OF PILGRIMS.

487. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Protector of Pilgrims in all the Provinces is the de facto head of the Pilgrim Department and that he has no direct control or any say in the matters of recruitment for permanent positions under him ? If so, why ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : There is a Protector of Pilgrims at each of the three ports, Bombay, Karachi and Calcutta. He is not the head of the Pilgrim Department. Protectors of Pilgrims at Bombay and Karachi are consulted before making appointments under them.

RULES REGULATING THE APPOINTMENT, WORKING AND DISMISSAL OF VENDORS EMPLOYED AT RAILWAY STATIONS.

490. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) What are the rules for the appointment, working, and dismissal of the vending licencees at stations ? Are they the same on all Railways, or is there any difference ?

(b) Do these licencees have any stability or are their licences liable to be cancelled at the will of the officers ?

(c) Are Government aware that these licencees have to spend a lot on the purchase of the crockery, utensils, etc., before taking up the work ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The rules vary on each railway. I am seeing if I can obtain for the Honourable Member information on the subject ; it is not at present in the possession of the Railway Board.

LICENCES FOR SELLING PAN AND CIGARETTES AT RAILWAY STATIONS ON THE MORADABAD DIVISION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

491. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that during the time Mr. Flowerdew was Divisional Superintendent in Moradabad Division, it was ruled that the licence for selling pan and cigarettes at stations be reserved for retired employees, such as signallers, ticket collectors, guards, etc., who had no extra income while station masters, goods clerks, parcel clerks, etc., were excluded from this benefit, while catering and other such licences were left with those who have experience of the job ?

DISCHARGE OF CERTAIN VENDORS EMPLOYED AT MORADABAD STATION ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

492. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Are Government aware that the Hindu and Muhammadan vendors of eatables at Moradabad station have been turned out ? Is it a fact that the Muslim vendor was an ex-guard who was injured in an accident, while the Hindu vendor was an old experienced halwai who holds several shops on the Oudh and Rohilkhand section ?

(b) Is it a fact that this Hindu vendor wanted some more rooms for his catering, store, etc., which were refused to him but have been allowed to the new vendor ?

TEA VENDORS AT STATIONS IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

493. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that several tea vendors (who had to get new counters and stalls prepared at a heavy cost) at stations are being turned out in the Moradabad Division and are being replaced by new vendors ?

(b) Do Government propose to provide counters, stalls, crockery, catering utensils, from Government store, so that these vendors may not have to suffer such heavy losses when being turned out ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I propose with your permission, Sir, to reply to questions Nos. 491 to 493 together. Government are not acquainted with the position in regard to vendors in the Moradabad Division, but will obtain the information for the Honourable Member from the Agent of the East Indian Railway.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST RAI SAHIB RALLA RAM, RETIRED STATION MASTER OF HARDWAR.

494. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that Rai Sahib Ralla Ram, the retired station master of Hardwar and the holder of the catering licence at the Lhaksar station, took a lot of his friends along with his sons, and heavy luggage, in his son's marriage party from Hardwar to Amritsar, or, Lahore without tickets possibly in a second class carriage, and got one extra second class attached to the train from Hardwar and travelled both ways without tickets ?

(b) Is it a fact that an enquiry was made and the whole matter came to light, but the case was dropped ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information. They are drawing the attention of the Agents of the East Indian and North-Western Railways to the allegations in order that any action that may be necessary may be taken.

SALE OF CINDER BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

495. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that for the sale of cinder on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, time was allotted to contractors and now the East Indian Railway sells it through its highly paid officials ? Which of the two courses shows a profit to the Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am making enquiries from the Agent of the East Indian Railway and will communicate with the Honourable Member later.

OPENING OF NEW STATIONS IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

496. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that some new stations were proposed to be opened in the Moradabad Division and the buildings were even constructed on the sites, but they are not yet opened, while the buildings of others are lying in an incomplete stage ? Will the Government say why this heavy expenditure was incurred for buildings for stations which have not been opened ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Agent is being asked to report what the exact position is, and I will communicate with the Honourable Member on receipt of his reply.

UNCOVERED OVERBRIDGES AT HARDWAR AND LHAKSAR ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

497. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Are Government aware that the overbridges at Hardwar and Lhaksar stations are uncovered and there is no shade to protect the passengers during the rains, loo, and strong cold winds during the winter ?

(b) Do Government propose to arrange to provide earlier coverings, etc., on them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not aware of the exact position on these stations. They are sending a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent of the East Indian Railway, who will no doubt consider whether the arrangements require improvement.

WATER SUPPLY AT RAILWAY STATIONS.

498. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Are Government aware that the water supply at stations on the Railways is still insufficient, and no one cares for it ? Do Government propose to order an increase in the number of watermen, to ensure a sufficient supply of pure water on the train as well as on the stations, and to charge the Travelling Ticket Examiners, Crews, and other railway employees to see that there is sufficient pure water at times on the platform ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am unable to accept the Honourable Member's suggestion that the improvement of the arrangements for water supply at stations is being disregarded. On the contrary it is a matter which is continuing to receive the special attention of all Railways. For example, the North-Western Railway have employed 500 additional watermen this year over and above the hot weather scale of last year, and tube wells have been installed at 32 stations. On Railways as a whole many extra taps and hundreds of improved type covered ghara stands have been erected, while in certain instances special water inspectors have been engaged. Opinions regarding travelling watermen vary on different Railways. For example, the Bengal Nagpur Railway, which is among those which have tried this experiment, have come to the conclusion that water arrangements in trains are not satisfactory, and their local Advisory Committee have concurred with them. Consequently, they have returned to the system of providing watermen at stations at convenient intervals. I should add that this, as well as other matters affecting the comfort of the third class passenger, will shortly be discussed with the Central Advisory Council for Railways.

TIMINGS OF THE MORADABAD-SAMBHAL BRANCH TRAIN SERVICE.

499. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Are Government aware that the present times of the Moradabad-Sambhal branch train service are highly inconvenient for the travelling public of both the places ?

(b) Are Government aware that owing to the bad times of the train nearly half a dozen motor buses and motor cars have been introduced between the two places ?

(c) Do Government propose to direct the authorities concerned to alter the timings according to the convenience of the travelling public ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member's question is the first indication that Government have received that the timings of this service are not convenient, and that competition by road motors is therefore being encountered. They cannot themselves undertake the arrangements for timetables, but are asking the Agent to have the matter looked into.

THE PUBLIC SAFETY (REMOVAL FROM INDIA) BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion and amendments moved on the 10th September, 1928 :

Motion of Mr. J. Crerar that the Bill to provide for the removal from British India in certain cases of persons not being Indian British subjects or subjects of States in India, be taken into consideration.

Amendment of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt: that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

Further amendment of Sir Hari Singh Gour that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla, Sir Victor Sassoon, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, the Honourable the Home Member and the Mover, with instructions to report within three days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be four.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh Brar (Punjab : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, to my mind, no man in this House, who has a little interest or a little love of his country at heart, who feels the pain of those poor cultivators who work in the fields and those working classes and depressed classes and feels their pain like his own, can do anything but accept this measure which is meant to protect him from a curse which is expected to disturb the peace and the comforts that he now enjoys. Well, Sir, the objection to the Bill is that it is against the tradition and culture of the Indian people, and I hope the Bill will not be opposed by the Honourable Members. But there may be some people here who dislike, I am sorry to say, the British connection ; there may be very few, or perhaps there may be one or two only, who are as afraid of the British connection or the British Empire as a bull is afraid of a red rag ; I do not know why. We have got to live here ; we have got to live under the Government ; we have got to get protection ; if we have got to live together and co-operate, I do not see, what can be the reason, for not giving such a small power to the Government (An Honourable Member " Oh ") to deal with those inhuman and barbarous people called Red Agents, the Bolshevik Agents. But even in their case, Sir, if our friends have real sympathy for our own country, even if they have a hatred for England, they ought for the sake of their poor untouchables and for the sake of their poor working classes and for the sake of their poor depressed classes, to support this Bill, for which, I am sure, those poor classes will be ever grateful to the House, which is responsible for their welfare and for their peace and contentment. This Bill, in my opinion, only seeks to kill those nasty germs which are expected to spread amongst those poor classes, whose trouble and pain, I am sure, is not felt by many Members here ; and if that poison is allowed to spread amongst the agricultural classes and the cultivators and in the classes from which the Army is drawn, I think the peace of India will be in great danger. What will happen, Sir ? When some of my friends are enjoying their life in big palaces, in those luxurious motor cars, and having their chota peg towards the evening, some people will walk in out of those classes, who have no palace—I think they have to find some way for living—then they will come forward and they will come with determination that they must share their motor cars, etc., with people who are not allowing them to enjoy their own peace. Now, what will be the remedy ? It will be too late then, Sir, to invent or to pass a Bill at that time. Why not kill that enemy now ? Why not kill that Sampka bacha now ? It is coming no doubt ; otherwise, I am sure, the House would not have been so alert. Why such a big row for such a small thing ? Well, Sir, it is your responsibility. Do not think that the responsibility lies on the Back-benches here. You will be responsible there. You will be far away from those places when the police, the unfortunate police, your Indian police, will be ordered and to open fire. Already they have had to do so at some places and they have had to destroy many lives, have had to kill many people. Does not loss of life and property and shooting on the railways on the Bengal Nagpur Railway at Kharagpur, and at Bombay, Madras and Calcutta occur very frequently? Instead of doing something about it, if you oppose this Bill, the opposite Benches will be responsible for that and they will be attacked severely for it. Well, Sir, you are responsible for that and I hope you will realise the responsibility which lies on you and you will not mistake to safeguard their interests, and you will not miss that chance. You belong to the intelligentsia class, you represent the people here. Think it over and over, do not be afraid that Mrs. Annie Besant or Mr. Horniman will be removed. If Mr. Horniman is removed, another Mr. Spratt or somebody else will come. Do not be afraid of that. I am sure the Government, which is dealing with these matters, and dealing with them tactfully and dutifully (Ironical cheers from the Opposition Benches) will not make a mistake and carry out such things which will displease the Honourable Members over there. They will try their best, and they are trying their best, as far as I can see, to please all the Swarajist Members and also all the other Members.

Well, Sir, the genius of India and the temper of those poor classes has no connection whatever with the pernicious, atheistic and destructive teachings of Moscow. The masses do not think about it, but there are a few Members here who have something wrong with them, some sort of brain fever, who are always afraid of these little powers. The powers are only going to be used to remove all that evil influence which is expected to spread in India. If you are responsible, and the responsibility lies on your shoulders, Government is sure to take severe measures, more severe than what is being introduced here now.

Well, Sir, I cannot myself imagine a greater calamity than to allow Bolshevism to spread amongst our poor classes. The damage which has already been done by these principles is great and we do not want any more damage done amongst those poor people. Almost in every country in Europe they have suffered from the same thing, and they have all found out the result is due to the Bolshevist agents, and then we have seen and know all that has occurred. Why then should we not protect all those poor people? The Honourable Members here know that the working classes are very simple. They are always ready and reasonable to compromise their grievances, and you know very well when it happens you are living in a village that they are not educated. They do not know all those tricks and they come ready to compromise and settle their case, but when some of our friends who simply like to stir up trouble among those classes come among them they like to see the tamasha. These people are stirred up by the foreigners and I would even go so far as to say by the Indians who join that barbarous organisation to cause revolution, but none of them would like to walk on that painful road.

We have already got some bitter plague, viz., the communal plague, I should call it in India, which causes great trouble every now and then, and if you add another disturbing factor to that plague, then the responsibility lies on you and you must take that responsibility.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is ignoring the Chair and addressing the Honourable Members.

Sardar Bahadur Captain Hira Singh Brar : We hope that the Members of this House realising the principles of this Bill will whole-heartedly support the Bill and will not try to oppose it in any way as I have requested them in my humble request. Perhaps I am taking up the time of the House. (Cries from the Opposition Benches of "Oh, no, go on, go on, this is your maiden speech and we are all very interested.") Most Members would perhaps like to delay this Bill and in that sense I have spoken what I wanted to, but of course if that is the case I think some Honourable Members on the opposite side will do that for me, and so with these few words I support this Bill and hope that it will be sent to Select Committee as suggested by the Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour.

Mr. Srish Chandra Dutta (Surma Valley cum Shillong : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move my amendment, namely :

"That the following names be added to the Select Committee proposed by Sir Hari Singh Gour.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not entitled to address the House unless he is called upon.

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Mr. President, the group to which I have the honour to belong approves of the principle of this Bill, but does not necessarily approve of all the details of the Bill, and we therefore shall support the reference to Select Committee. I propose, therefore, to limit my observations to the principles of the Bill and endeavour to avoid a Select Committee speech on its merits and demerits.

The reception of this Bill by the Benches opposite has, I confess, somewhat confused me, but it may be that that is largely due to the number of political cross-currents that are now in existence. One thing may be noticed and that is there is a singular lack of knowledge as to the existence of similar provisions in other parts of the world. My friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, who is generally so well informed, appears to think that if a measure of this sort were moved in the House of Commons, the very Speaker would faint with surprise. It is perfectly true that the measure that does exist in England only refers to aliens and does not refer to other members of the British Empire. But my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer went even further. He referred to that land—I do not want to misquote him—he referred to that land where "liberty runs riot". He referred to the United States of America and he appeared to think that under no circumstances could any measure of this description find its place on the Statute-book of the United States. Unfortunately for my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer such legislation does exist in the Statutes of the United States (Hear, hear) in the form of emigration laws and such laws are based on even wider terms than occur in this Bill. In reply to the categorical question that Mr. Ranga Iyer put, I say that this Bill excludes Indian British subjects and if I may be allowed to answer his question, the American Act does not refer to or exclude any particular nationality at all. I should not at all be surprised, if, for instance, in the event of an American citizen going to Moscow and getting trained in their nefarious propaganda the American Government had the power to refuse to readmit him into America and to request him to return to his spiritual home. Further, I would like this House to appreciate this fact, and that is, that the legislation actually in force in Australia and in South Africa is based not on British legislation, but is based on American legislation and at the present time both South Africa and Australia have the right to refuse admittance to an Indian Communist and a British Communist or a Communist of any other kind. My Honourable friend Pandit Motilal Nehru seemed to me the other day to be very much exercised in spirit at what he considered to be an attack on the inherent rights of Britishers under this Bill, and in view of the apparent apathy of Members of this group to which I belong, he very nobly stood forward as the champion of the Britisher in India. (Hear, hear.) We are very grateful to the Honourable Member for his kind solicitude and we shall not forget his chivalrous action, nor shall we fail to call on him for help when we feel that the position of Englishmen in India is likely to be affected by legislation under the present constitution or any possible future constitution (Hear, hear) and I feel sure that we will not call on him in vain. (Laughter.) As regards the Englishmen in India, I mean the Englishmen established in India, we do not propose to pursue a policy of apathy and if this House will allow this Bill to go to the Select Committee we shall do our best, with the help of the Honourable Member, Pandit Motilal Nehru, to make it acceptable. But as regards the type of Britisher who is affected by this Bill, we do not consider that he needs any consideration. (Hear, hear.) We consider that the Communist or the Bolshevik Englishman is one who has foregone all claims to national consideration. He is a man whose views and whose principles are not bounded by the limitations of nationality. His views spread over the great horizon, over the great international horizon, a horizon of course of the Russian brand. I therefore do not consider that we need in any way protect him. As regards the wider question as to whether the mere fact that he is a Britisher should make us overlook the points that I have just mentioned, and whether in doing so, we are being inconsistent, I am prepared to take up that challenge. I maintain that Members of this group have always supported Indian public opinion against racial discrimination in South Africa. In supporting the demand which is now being brought forward by the Government what are we doing? We are merely consistently supporting our antipathy to racial discrimination and saying to this House, why should we not be allowed to send away a South African Communist when they are allowed to deport an Indian Communist. (Hear, hear.) I therefore maintain that our policy is absolutely consistent, as I hope it will always be.

This, however, is not the only apparently topsy-turvy attitude of criticisms of this Bill. Let me take the attitude of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : I have not spoken yet. (Laughter.)

Sir Victor Sassoon : Judging from what my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi has told me in the past and judging from the amendments that I see standing in his name on the paper I understand that he does not approve of the principle of this Bill at any rate at the moment. I think I am therefore quite correct in assuming that he is at the moment in doubt until his doubts have been removed by my and other speakers' arguments when he would no doubt be entirely in favour of this Bill. I do not know why Mr. Joshi is against the Bill. Though I have not heard him speak, yet judging from the interruption he made during the speech of my Honourable friend Captain Hira Singh, he is apparently dazzled by the prospect of sharing a motor car and a chota peg if Bolshevism is successful in India. Let me assure Mr. Joshi not only on behalf of Mr. Birla and myself, but on behalf of all the capitalists of India that we shall be only too glad to give a free ride in our motor cars and give a chota peg in addition (Laughter.) Now let me draw Mr. Joshi's attention particularly to the remarks of Sir Hari Singh Gour. Sir Hari Singh Gour quite rightly pointed out that if Communist principles are to prevail in this country, then not only will the capitalists and upholders of religion in this country be " liquidated "—that is the proper technical Communist expression—but the trade unionists of the type of Mr. Joshi will be sooner or later efficaciously and possibly painfully eliminated. (Laughter.) Honourable Members must not laugh, it is not only Mr. Joshi who will suffer. The intelligentsia is by no means likely to escape unscathed and with the exception possibly of a few—again I quote a Communist technical expression—" declassed intellectuals " who may be considered necessary temporarily to carry on the administration of the State, they too may find themselves in the same position as the capitalists, the upholders of religion and Mr. Joshi.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Will they not destroy the idols of the temples, and orthodox Hindus will revolt against them ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : I might quote a phrase from a book I have been reading lately on the life of Lenin, and a book by no means unsympathetic to Lenin or his life. It says that not the least of the sacrifices demanded by the Revolution is the sufferings of all cultured classes. And yet here apparently, I hope I am wrong, we find Mr. Joshi opposing a Bill which in effect at least in one of its effects—makes it a policy of discriminating protection in favour of the indigenous agitator against the imported foreign product. Here is Mr. Johsi, who for months has been fighting tooth and nail against a body of Communists in Bombay who have been very ably advised by a British Communist—here is Mr. Joshi, in spite of the apparent lack of success of his efforts apparently—I say apparently till he makes a definite statement on the subject—apparently declining to be protected.

12 Noon.

And here let me deal with a possible criticism. It may be said that however true these remarks of mine may be, there is no urgency for this measure, that there is not at the present time a large number of foreign or British Communists in India, and that we should wait until the number is sensibly increased before we take steps. Sir, the success or the failure of an army on the field of battle depends very largely on its Commander-in-Chief, it depends possibly in some cases entirely on the ability of the man who directs the battle. The Communists who are settled over here are not members of the rank and file : they are trained leaders, trained propagandists ; and the success which has attended the efforts of the Communist band, not only in the Bombay textile industry, in spite of the efforts of my friend Mr. Joshi, proves that their leadership—and I am perfectly prepared to give credit where credit is due—that their leadership has been by no means futile.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : What proof have you got ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : And I would like to say that the leadership which is directing the energies of the Red contingent in Bombay is not confining itself to Bombay alone. It is co-ordinating the disruptive forces throughout India. Every move is a move carried out under a well-thought out policy.

[Sir Victor Sassoon.]

Mr. B. Das : How do you know ? Are you in their confidence ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : In spite of my friend Mr. Das's lack of appreciation of the poor brain that I may have, I can appreciate efficiency when I see it, and what I think is likely to happen is this ; that the success which has attended the efforts of the foreign element,—and in this case I call the British Communist element a foreign element, for it is foreign to India as it is foreign to Britain too—the success of this foreign element will naturally encourage them to strengthen the weak spots in their organisation by bringing out further help. It is because I want the Government to be in a position to break up this organisation before it has been able to establish itself, before it has been able to teach our Indian fellow-citizens how to carry on this poisonous work, that I maintain that this Bill is by no means introduced too soon, that it is not a moment too soon to put this Bill on the Statute-book.

Now, Sir, one naturally asks oneself, what is the solution of this riddle, this apparent desire of Members of this House to commit not political suicide but literal suicide. In my opinion the reason is a twofold one. In the first place, a convention has risen among the Benches opposite that no measure proposed by the Government can possibly be a good one.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : 90 per cent. of them are not.

Sir Victor Sassoon : And further that where a Bill is apparently a good one that is all the more reason to treat it with suspicion as containing some Machiavellian intent.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Quite right.

Sir Victor Sassoon : That I think is the first cause of the opposition from Members of this House who come from a class which one would naturally assume would be in favour of the principle of this Bill. Now what about the second cause ? I think the second cause is this—a complete lack of belief that a country like India containing millions of small landholders and peasant proprietors all of whom are imbued with the very strictest and deepest religious principles,—a lack of belief that such a land could possibly prove favourable soil for this Bolshevik seed, and that even if some misguided individuals were to be tainted by the Red poison, such a band could only constitute a small group of cranks, who would never be tolerated by the masses of this country should they say publicly what their real opinions and views were. I cannot disregard such an argument because I too have shared that view until very lately. I am not one of those men who have Bolshevism on the brain. I have not gone about assuming that in every rising against capital, in every expression of dissatisfaction against the Government, the Bolsheviks' hand was the cause. I do endeavour to look at such expressions of dissatisfaction in a cool, dispassionate way and attempt to analyse them, and I have great sympathy with the view which I have just given voice to, because until a very short time ago I shared that view. This House, Sir, may be aware of the fact that my business interests necessitate my paying regular visits to China. Two years ago I had an opportunity of meeting in Canton supporters and members of the Nationalist Government of Canton and although I do not wish to boast to this Assembly I too was invited to lunch by men who in China are held in very high political repute. I think I must hasten to add, however, that unlike Mr. Ranga Iyer I was only offered a lemonade ! My nationalist friends said to me " You British people are saying that we are Red. We are not only not red ; we are not even pink ; we are Chinese. We are waging a war on the militarists of the North—a war to a finish—and we need help. We should be only too glad to receive help from you British. We have asked you to help us ; we have asked the Americans to help us ; we have asked the Japanese to help us ; but nobody has expressed themselves as prepared to help us except Soviet Russia ; so we have accepted their aid, and from them we have received munitions and arms ; we have received advisers, military and civil ; they have established military schools for us and schools of propaganda ; they have taught us administration and they have taught us efficiency. We are forced, if we are to succeed in our struggle with the North, to accept their help because you will not give yours to us. But because we accept their help, that does not mean that we accept their principles ; and in our opinion the people of China will no more absorb these foreign principles from Russia to-day than they have absorbed foreign principles from anywhere else in the past or likely to in the future—principles of this kind which are entirely antagonistic to the whole social fabric of China and its population ". That, Sir, was two years ago. I have returned only a few weeks ago from China. When I left the Assembly at Delhi I went straight out to China and there—not in Canton, but on the Yangtse River—Shanghai and Hankow—I again met and was introduced to nationalist friends who were high up in the counsels of the Government and some of whom were actually members of the Government ; and then I found they had a very different tale to tell. They told me that after their rapid success and advance on the Yangtse River—an advance, the success of which was almost unprecedented,—their Russian advisers were no longer prepared to continue in the same loyal and helpful manner as before, but insisted on calling the tune, and the tune was that China should develop not on the nationalist lines of the Nationalist Government, but on the internationalist lines of Soviet Russia. The Nationalist Government of China after investigation realised that through Soviet propaganda the part of China under their sway was riddled with small Communist cells and they further realised that when you are dealing with Communists you cannot hope successfully to convert them by ordinary methods of persuasion. As Mr. Ranga Iyer said when referring to the Roy letter, " It was the letter of a lunatic to a lunatic " ; and there was a good deal of truth in what Mr. Ranga Iyer said. According to my Chinese friends, Bolshevism is a form of madness like hydrophobia, and you can no more expect to argue with success with an avowed Red than you can expect successfully to argue with a mad dog outside this Assembly. They therefore decided that there was only one way of dealing with these Reds and that was the way in which the Reds would have dealt with them. They took the most drastic action. I was informed in Hankow by the General to whom that work had been allotted, that he had had to send soldiers not only to the towns but right into the villages to execute any Chinese Communists found there : and in spite of this drastic action which has necessitated the execution of thousands of Chinese, the danger is by no means killed—it is only scotched. That is why, Sir, knowing as I do how in practice by allowing this movement free play, how quickly it gets out of hand, that I ask this House to follow the adage of my friend, Mr. Joshi, that prevention is better than cure. I want the House to realise that it is not only in China that the Red menace is growing, but that they have already planted their seed in Japan ; they are now concentrating on Japan. At the present time, I am told, one Katayana, known as the Japanese Lenin, who has been trained in Moscow, is either on his way or about to go to Japan to lead a concentrated attack on the forces of organised government. Knowing the Japanese Government, I do not think he will be allowed to go in unless he disguises himself ; but it may be that he will follow the example of his namesake, Lenin, and control it from outside Japanese territory, just as Lenin controlled the movement in Russia from Finland. That Russia is beginning to plant its seed in India is, I think, a fact that cannot be gainsaid. They began planting their seed in Japan while they concentrated on China and they will begin planting their seed here while they are concentrating on Japan.

With your permission, Sir, and with the permission of the House I shall say one word on the Roy letter. Mr. M. N. Roy, is reported to have said that he did not write that letter. I am inclined to agree with him, and the reason why I am inclined to think so is that when the Chinese Government raided the Soviet Legation in Peking they seized a number of documents, some of which have been reproduced and translated and some of which I had an opportunity of looking at ; and among those documents were a series of instructions to Communist cells of the character of workmen's and peasants' organisations. Speaking from memory, one of those set of instructions was practically identical with the one which has been read as the letter sent by Mr. Roy ; so although, judging from the evidence that the Home Member has given, this document was interlined with manuscript alternations in the handwriting known to be Roy's, apart from that I should think that probably it was merely a letter of instructions which he indented for from the department of propaganda ; and therefore in this particular case it is probably absolutely true that he did not actually write it. I have read further letters of instructions ; one of them incidentally was a letter of instructions as how to deal with trades union leaders. After gaining their confidence, the letter showed how the Communist was to worm his way into power and after winning over trades union members to their side to denounce the trades union leader as a running dog of the Imperialist and bourgeois. But there is also another letter of instructions which says that members of the Communist party are entitled to tell any falsehood, to betray any friend in the interests of their cause ; and I therefore maintain that even if Mr. Roy had written that letter, if he though it would be advantageous to his cause, he would not have had the slightest hesitation in calling it a forgery. As Trotzky wrote " Ilyitch Ulianov,"—I may say that that is the real name of Lenin—Lenin being only a pseudonym—" Ilyitch loved all the strategems of war ; the throwing of sand in the enemy's eyes and getting the better of him by ruse ". Lies or betrayals and little pastimes of that description merely come under the heading of ruses of war.

Sir, we are dealing with a dangerous national enemy. This particular Bill only deals with those who come from outside India—who attempt to enter this country. It merely tells them to go or sends them away. I do not think even if I were an ardent supporter of the Communists, even if I were as intimate a friend of Mr. Spratt, as is Mr. Ranga Iyer, I would really consider that I had a legitimate grievance if I were told to leave this country. Let us assume that I wanted to go to Russia to advance arguments in favour of a capitalistic form of Government. Let us assume that I tried to collect those who were not quite satisfied with the present mode of Government there and encouraged them in their opposition, pointing out how much superior the standard of living in America under capitalistic regime is to the standard in Russia at the present day. I think that if I only found myself in receipt of a polite request from the Soviet Government to exercise my talents elsewhere I could consider myself extremely fortunate. I therefore ask this House not to throw out the principle of this Bill, nor delay it by asking for circulation but to let it go to the Select Committee. Let us approve the principle which says that we are not going to allow Communists to come to this country. I agree that the Bill has a number of faults. I agree that some of the provisions of the Bill are much too wide and that these must be put right in Select Committee, but I do appeal to this House not to throw out the Bill or pass a dilatory motion unless there are Members in this House who really are in favour of eventual Red rule in India. I cannot see how anybody, however suspicious he may be of Government intentions, can argue against this Bill going to Select Committee. If it comes back in a form which is disapproved of we can always throw it out and I am glad to say that my friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has told me that he has no objection to this Bill going to Select Committee.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I said I would agree to the Bill being referred to a Select Committee if certain vital matters will be agreed to in this House.

Sir Victor Sassoon : The principle of the Bill is to prevent Communist agents coming to this country. I am sure that my friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is not in favour of Red Communist agents coming to this country. As far as the details of the Bill are concerned regarding the prevention of other British subjects from coming into this country, that can be dealt with by restrictive clauses which can be put in in the Select Committee or when the Bill comes up for third reading.

Sir, I support the motion to refer the Bill to the Select Committee.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I rise to oppose the motion made by the Honourable the Home Member that this Bill be taken into consideration. Before I proceed to give my reasons for my opinion or for my position, I want to dispose of a part of the speech made by my friend Sir Victor Sassoon. He talked of the immigration laws of the United States of America and South Africa and perhaps of Australia too. I wish there had been laws of that kind in India. I know something of the immigration laws of the United States. They have absolutely nothing to do with the principle of this Bill. They are entirely based on different considerations and on different principles and they were enacted long before Bolshevism came into existence at all. Therefore I endorse Mr. Ranga Iyer's statement that a law of this kind would be thrown out by the Senate or the Congress of the United States in fact by any civilised Legislature (Honourable Members : "No, no." Wait a minute please. What is the principle of this Bill—not to stop the coming into India of the Bolshevik agents as my friend wants us to believe, but the principle of the Bill is to authorise the Executive Government of this country to pass executive orders for the expulsion of certain people from this country. That is the principle of this Bill.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Is that not possible in America ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : That is not possible in America. On any complaint made to the immigration authorities, to the Department of Labour and Immigration in the United States, they at once issue a notice to the person or persons concerned to come and show cause. Not only do they allow the persons concerned to show cause, but they also allow them to be defended by lawyers. I know of a case from personal knowledge. Mr. Hardyal, one of the most distinguished Indians who visited America—of course you may not agree with his views—was once in the United States. He was served with a notice of this kind and he was allowed to appear before the immigration authorities and show cause why he should not be deported. He was defended by lawyers. Then, furthermore, there is a provision in the law of the United States of America that the orders of the Labour Department and immigration authorities can be questioned in a court of law, at least in the Supreme Court of Judicature in that country. They have not given the executive the power to send anybody away without any notice, without any cause shown and without any defence being put in, such as this Bill seeks to give to the executive here. If they wanted to expel all Communist agents that come into this country, the law should have been framed differently. I will come to that later on. Having disposed of that part of the speech of Sir Victor Sassoon, I will point out that there are no laws of this kind in any civilised country. Nobody has shown yet that such a law exists in any country. It perhaps exists in Fascist Italy. If that is the model which the British Government is going to adopt, then, I am afraid, I cannot congratulate them.

Now, I shall come to the actual measure before me. I oppose it because I do not consider it to be an honest measure. When I say that, I do not mean the slightest possible reflection upon the honesty of any individual member of the Government, but I do charge the Government of India as a whole with dishonesty of purpose in sanctioning the introduction of the Bill in the way they have done. No justification whatever has been made out for the introduction of this measure. I heard very carefully the speech of the Honourable the Home Member. What was the material that he placed before this House as justification for his asking this House to legislate on such a matter in such haste. He quoted a pamphlet that was the subject of litigation in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh in 1924 in a prosecution against certain Bolshevik propagandists. He also quoted from the letter of M. N. Roy. He quoted from another document that was circulated in India. I agree with my friend Sir Victor Sassoon when he said that probably this letter was not written by M. N. Roy. The matter which is included in this letter has already been before the British public and also for that reason before the Indian public. It was included in a Blue Book or White Book, I do not remember which, that was issued at the time when the Russian trade agents were expelled from England on the ground of having violated the terms of the Treaty which that Government had entered into with the Government of Great Britain. All these instructions which you find in the letter of M. N. Roy published by the Associated Press of India are to be found in those publications. There is nothing new in the letter. I therefore deliberately charge the Government with having chosen their time to publish this letter with the object of creating an atmosphere for this legislation. It was stated by the Honourable the Home Member that the letter came into this country or at least was written in December last and my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer asked why the Associated Press of India and the Statesman were not prosecuted for disseminating seditious matter, as that letter does contain seditious matter. I can give him the reason for that. The reason for that is that the letter was probably made over to the Associated Press of India by the Government for the purpose of publication. It probably remained in the Government pigeon-holes for some time. The Government have not given us any indication as to how they came into possession of this letter. This Government, clever as it is in intercepting letters in the Post Office, probably intercepted it in the Post Office and kept it in its pigeon-holes for eight months to be used at the opportune time for legislation of this kind. How can they then prosecute the Associated Press of India or the Statesman for a thing which they themselves asked them to do ? I submit, Sir, that was an act of dishonesty on the part of Government to have kept that letter for so long, not to have published it before, but only just a few days before this Bill was introduced in this House.

Now, Sir, what I want to submit to this House is that those publications are not covered by this Bill. This Bill will not touch them. This House is asked to enact a measure which will authorise the Government by executive order to expel Communists ; so that part of the case put by the Home Member, viz., relating to those documents, was perfectly irrelevant, and has absolutely nothing to do with the principle of this Bill. Then, Sir, we come to the actual agents, the Communists that have come to this country. So far as we know and as we were informed in that book called "India" written by the Director of the Publicity Bureau, there were two persons suspected to have been sent by the Russian Government or by Communists for the purpose of propaganda in this country. One of them has been in one of the jails of His Majesty and has been taking his repose ever since he came into this country. If he has been carrying on any propaganda from the jail, of which I do not know, then I submit, the responsibility lies on the Government, and not on "Comrade" Allison or anybody else. The other gentleman whose name has been taken is Mr. Spratt. My friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, wants to give him a certificate and to make us believe that he is an angel. My friends on that side, the capitalists, want us to believe that he is the very embodiment of a devil. I express no opinion, Sir, on either side. I do not know that gentleman ; but I think it is absolutely unreasonable, very absurd, to believe that a man of that kind, whatever may be his capacity, could be instrumental in bringing about all these strikes and all these "disturbances" upon which my friend, the Honourable the Home Member, and my friend, Sir Victor Sassoon, rely so much. Sir, this is the only material which has been placed before this House in justification of this sweeping measure, giving power to the executive to summarily expel any person suspected of being a foreign Communist without any trial in any court of law. I submit this is absolutely insufficient material for us to accept as the basis for this legislation.

My friend, Sir Victor Sassoon, made a great deal of the maxim that prevention is better than cure. But does he not know that principle of jurisprudence that no penal law should be enacted unless there is actual necessity for it ?

Sir Victor Sassoon : But there is actual necessity for it.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I submit, no material has been placed before this House to justify the enactment of such a measure. There are laws enough in this country under which anybody committing the acts which have been detailed in clause 2 can be punished or deported. There is Regulation III of 1818—and it was said on the floor of this House that that Regulation applies to everybody in India. Anybody who comes into India makes himself liable to the criminal laws of this country, be he a Communist or otherwise. If he comes here and commits any of these acts which are detailed in clause 2, I submit the Indian Penal Code is wide enough to punish him : and therefore there is no reason why the Indian tax-payer should be burdened with the cost of his expulsion from this country. I could have understood one thing, which the Government could have easily done and in which perhaps we might have supported them. That would have been this, that, if a person was convicted by a court of law of any such offence, he should be ordered to go out of this country instead of being fed at the cost of the Indian tax-payer in India. If the Government wanted authority of that kind, they could have proposed a measure for making a provision of that kind either in the Indian Penal Code or in the Criminal Procedure Code or even in Regulation III of 1818, and it would have been a very simple thing to have accepted it ; but Government have not done anything of that kind. They have proceeded to state in elaborate detail all kinds of beliefs and acts in clause 2 and to ask for executive authority for expelling men suspected of entertaining such beliefs or doing such acts. Sir, I will break no bones by stating to this House that this is not a measure really intended against foreign Communists only. It is only the thin end of the wedge. It is really directed against Indians themselves, Nationalists as well as Labourists. The foreign Communist will go away, will be turned out at the cost of the Indian tax-payer and will be taken to the British Isles or anywhere else, being comfortably berthed in a P. & O. steamer, but if this House accepts the principle of this Bill and accepts clause 2, that acceptance caused at any time be utilised for the purpose of prosecuting Nationalists and others who want Indian economic advance and political freedom. That is really the motive at the back of this legislation, which, I would ask my Honourable friends to consider, is not a measure intended against foreign Communists only. It is only the thin end of the wedge what the Government are aiming at is to seek the approval of this House to prosecute and punish all those whom by hook or by crook they can bring within the purview of that clause or who may be charged with acts mentioned in that clause. Well, Sir, look at that clause, how wide and sweeping it is. It is all very well for Sir Victor Sassoon to say that this can be changed in Select Committee. We want to know if it is not the case that that clause gives a fair indication of the mind of the Government as to what they want to do. Of course my friends may change the clause in the Select Committee, but we are at present discussing the form of the Bill as it is. Sir, let us look at clause 2. My friend, the Honourable the Home Member, made a distinction between Communist doctrines and Communist action. You will see in clause 2 that it is not Communist action that is proposed to be punished or dealt with. It is the advocacy directly or indirectly of the doctrine stated in that clause. The words are :

" whoever directly or indirectly advocates the overthrow by force or violence the government established by law in British India'."

That is an offence under the Indian Penal Code, and the Government is perfectly entitled to prosecute anybody, Indian or foreigner, for that offence in a court of justice and to take the verdict of that court, whether it be imprisonment or even death, but what is to prevent the Government from saying under cover of the phrase " directly or indirectly advocating the overthrow of the Government " that Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar and Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, who advocate complete independence, come under the category, although they do not really mean the overthow of the British Government by force or violence. They may say, " We want a peaceful revolution ", but the Government will say that they are not to be believed, because the only way for them to get complete political independence is by force or violence. That may be considered fair argument to use in regard to them. So the Government want the approval of this House to the proposition that all those who directly or indirectly advocate the overthrow of the British Government by force or violence are guilty of Communism ; so that such a person, by being called a Communist although he may not be a Communist at all and may be only a political reformer or a socialist, may be brought under this clause. Then, Sir, let us go further. Under this clause to advocate " the abolition of all forms of law or organized government " is evidence of Communism. I do not know whether the Government of this country or the gentleman who drafted this Bill know that the Communists are not opposed to all forms of law or organized government, and that they have an organized government of their own, and that they only want all countries to adopt that form of government. Whether it is good or whether it is bad, it is an organized form of government, and it is such an organized form of government that even the mighty British Empire wants to come to terms with that Government. They once recognized the necessity or the desirability of coming to terms with that Government, by entering into a treaty of peace and trade with them. They have of course since dissolved that treaty by virtue of certain alleged breaches of that agreement or treaty which I need not state. Every civilized Government in the world to-day is anxious to enter a treaty or pact of trade with that organized Government of the Soviety Unions of Russia. Honourable Members may have recently read in the papers that the Soviet Government has recently signed the Kellogg Anti-War Pact. The civilized Governments of the world have not treated the Communists as if they were " mad dogs " and outcastes. There are other Governments which are in no way better than the Communist Government of Russia.

An Honourable Member : Question ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : Of course you will question, because you are interested in questioning it. But as a fact they are in no way better They are all desiring to push on their trade with Russia, to sell their manufactured articles, to get Soviet money, to enter into trade relation with that " damned " Russian Government which my friend thinks is s abominable. I may at once say that I am neither a Communist nor one having sympathy with the Communist doctrine. But at the same time I am not an Imperialist as well, and if the question arose of choosing between an Imperialist and a Communist Government, I do not know which I should choose, for both are equally bad and vicious and both are equally destructive of the rights of others. Capitalism is only another name for Imperialism. It is capitalistic Imperialism upon which my friends fatten here in India by exploiting the masses of this country. To me it seems absolutely blasphemous for them to talk of the poor cultivators, the poor labourers, the poor peasants of this country. Are they not sucking the blood of these peasants ? Have not their own authorities told them so in their documents ? Dr. Harold Mann has said that what the cultivator, the labourer and the peasant suffer from in India is an empty belly. Who is responsible for the empty belly ? Those very same people who carry away millions of money out of the country which they have earned from those same peasants and with the help of Indian labour. And they do so with the help of this Government which has been compelled by those very capitalists to introduce this Bill. As my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer said, they are the people interested in keeping these Communists out and with investing this Government with executive powers to treat these people summarily. I am quite prepared to admit that Communism and Imperialism stand at two opposite poles. I have absolutely no doubt that the success of Communism in this world will mean the destruction of all empires. I am, therefore, satisfied that this effort on the part of this Government and on the part of my capitalist friends is perfectly natural. They want to suppress Communism. But why should they say that they are doing it in the interests of this country ? Why import into this discussion matters which are not included in the Bill itself ?

My friend the Honourable the Home Member and also Sir Hari Singh Gour waxed eloquent upon the protection of religion. My friend, whom, by the by, I congratulate on having got a seat amongst the gods, said he was not in love with bureaucracy. But evidently the bureaucracy has fallen in love with him—let us hope that it will last—and that explains his present attitude. The other day he was taunting some Members of this House with dishonesty in opposing his Bill for dissolution of Hindu marriages for fear of the voters and electors. I think my friend has made himself safe for all time to come for a permanent seat in this House and therefore he is no longer afraid of any voters or electors. That is why he is so anxious to uphold the principle of this Bill. I congratulate him. But, Sir, coming to the point, he talked of religion. Sir Hari Singh Gour talking of religion ! That was quite a surprise to me, because only a few months ago I read a document signed by that gentleman in which he framed the constitution of a League for modernizing India which asked all Indians to adopt all western methods and do away with religion altogether. I know he will deny it, because he is accustomed to doing that.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Can my friend produce that document ?

Lala Lajpat Rai : Yes, I will, just as I produced a telegram which he sent to me in favour of the boycott of the Simon Commission and the sending of which he denied when I quoted it from memory. He has got into that habit and we on this side of the House have ceased to take him seriously, both when he opposes or supports us. Therefore it is a surprise to me to hear Sir Hari Singh Gour pleading for this Bill in the name of religion. I do not know what his religion is. There is a religion known as Mammon worship ; there is a religion of God worship, which of course pious Hindus and Mussalmans follow. I do not believe that he follows any God worship. He follows Mammon worship. And then again, the British Government talking of the protection of religion in this country ! Why they have destroyed the very foundations of religion in this country by their very existence and by allowing forces to work in this country which are anti-religious. Religion has different meanings with different persons. Even Communists believe and allege that Bolshevism is a religion. If that is the meaning to be attached to religion, then perhaps my friend is perfectly religious and I am prepared to apologize for saying he has no religion. Religion has different forms—what form was meant when an appeal was made to the Hindus and Mussalmans of this House to rouse their passion on behalf of religion because the Communists attacked their religion. Well, Sir, if the Communists attack any religion, they attack the conventional Christian religion. They do not attack religion altogether, and as I have said, they do not attack every organized form of government.

Then, Sir, my Honourable friend the Home Member and my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour talked of Hindu culture and the structure of society. But, Sir, if there is any Hindu in this House who is putting the axe at the structure of Hindu society it is Sir Hari Singh Gour. I welcome his efforts to reform the Hindu religion and Hindu customs, but he should not talk of the structure of Hindu society. The structure of Hindu society which at present exists he wants to do away with. He wants all Hindus to adopt the European hat. He wants all Hindus to eat with fork and knife and to adopt European manners. And then he talks of the structure of Hindu society. It is very strange to me. I cannot understand it. But of course an advocate can use any argument that comes to him at the time of arguing a case.

Then, Sir, my Honourable friend the Home Member talked of restoration and reconstruction after the war. What is he going to restore in India ? Is he going to restore to us our pre-war poverty which has increased ten-fold since ? What is he going to reconstruct in India by means of this Bill ? Is he going to reconstruct Hindu society or Hindu religion ? I submit, the claim is absolutely preposterous and those claims do not find any mention in the Bill. I would have understood the honesty of the Government if they had simply said that this Bill is designed to kill Communism. In that case they should have defined what Communism means. They have not adopted that course for very good reasons, because if they had adopted that course they would have been forced to confine themselves to those particular things which are included in the term " Communism ". This clause 2 is much more sweeping and much wider than what is meant by the expression " Communism ". They would not have been able to condemn those who oppose organized government because the Communists are not anarchists. My friend Sir Hari Singh Gour also talked of that. He has evidently never read a book written by Bertrand Russell about the three forms of freedom, Syndicalism, Anarchism and Communism. It is Anarchism which attacks all forms of organized Government, not Communism. It would be more profitable if my friends would first make themselves masters of that subject before making general statements on the floor of this House to the amazement of those of us who know something of the subject. This is not an honest measure. If it really aimed at expelling Bolsheviks and Communists only, it should have said so in the Bill itself. The Bolsheviks are not Anarchists. It has become the fashion for responsible people to make all kinds of wild statements against the Soviet Government of Russia. But Governments themselves do not want to take that line of attitude. Otherwise it will be impossible for them to enter into any agreement with the Soviet Government. Honourable Members here can talk in any way they like. The Communists can call Imperialists mad just as my friend Sir Victor Sassoon has compared the Communists with mad dogs, they can charge the Imperialists with injecting poison into the system of the body politic. But no responsible Government, either the British or any other, would talk of that Government in that way, because they still hope to enter into trade contracts and trade agreements and trade treaties with them and make money out of them. Sir, this money business reminds me of the remark made by my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour of the money that was received from Moscow by my friend Mr. Joshi. Well, Sir, he forgets that Great Britain gets money from Moscow, wants to get money from Moscow, and the only trouble is that Moscow will not give them enough money. There are men in the House of Commons sitting in the seats of the mighty that have received money from Moscow and they have not been turned out either from the House of Commons or from their country. Some of them will probably be adorning the Cabinet in the next Labour Government. I think my friend would be only too happy to get money from Moscow if he could. If a Bolshevik agent in this country were placed before a court of law for trial, my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour would be the first man to ask for Rs. 2,000 a day for defending him and getting him acquitted. What has this absurd talk about money from Moscow to do with this Bill ? I may also remind him that his statement about strikes and " disturbances " is also entirely wide of the mark. It is his deplorable ignorance of the history of the world and of the history of the development of trade unions and trade unionism, of the Labour movement in the world, that is responsible for his saying that this particular phase which has been prominent in this year in this country marks the activities of the Communists or the Bolsheviks or is evidence of their activities in this country. In all times in the world, whenever there is any reform movement, whenever there is a preparation for framing a constitution, in pre-constitution days there have been such disturbances. What was the state of England in the days when the Reform Bill was on the anvil ? What were the conditions in other countries in the days when their constitutions were being changed or when trade unionism was being developed ? The history of trade unionism if cursorily studied even (that history has been written by Mr. Sydney Webb, who was a Member of the Labour Government) would have shown him that what is happening in India is nothing, absolutely nothing, as compared with what had happened in Great Britain or in other countries in Europe ; and that it is no indication that it is due to foreign influence or the influence of foreign Communists or foreign agents. The conclusion is entirely wrong. It is due, Sir, to the empty belly,—hunger. My friend may not feel that it is due to hunger ; the Government Benches may not feel that it is due to hunger ; but we, who know those people, who work amongst them, live amongst them, we know that it is that abominable thing, hunger, which is at the bottom of this unrest and which creates these strikes. I have never made it a secret and have said so in this House and from the platform and in the Press, that indiscriminate strikes, strikes not well grounded, should not be undertaken. I am not in favour of strikes ; I am not in favour of strikes being started on small pretexts. My friend Mr. Joshi who knows much about these strikes can testify that I have spoken in Bombay, which is the home of organised labour, that they should not indulge in these strikes too often and too lightly. Hunger however makes that advice unacceptable. It is hunger which compels them to resort to these strikes. The textile strikes which my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon referred to are at the bottom of this Bill ; it is to prevent these strikes, to isolate India altogether both in the political field and in the economic field, from the rest of the world, to make it entirely helpless that accounts for the introduction of this Bill. That is what this Bill is intended for. Is it to frighten away people who want to investigate into labour conditions in this country, who want to investigate into political conditions in this country, from visiting this country ; it is to keep them away, so that they may keep away lest this law should be used against them and they may be turned out with ignominy.

Sir, this Bill, therefore, is not an honest measure ; it is a dishonest measure on the part of the Government ; it is an indirect attempt to get the verdict of this House to principles to which they would not agree if they were plainly and honestly put before them. Look at the wording of this Bill " conducive to bring about that result ", " is a member of any society or organisation " and so on. Look at the whole wording of the Bill. That will show that it is an attempt to get the verdict of this House, that all that is contained in clause 2 practically amounts to Communism or Bolshevism. The causes which my Honourable friend the Home Member stated was the basis of this Bill are not stated in clause 2. Very few of them are stated there. This clause goes much further. It practically wants the approval of this House to all that is contained therein whether Communistic or not, so that if we once approve the principle of this Bill, of this clause, as it stands, and if the Government wants to prosecute and punish our own countrymen who want political independence or economic independence, or who advocate political independence or economic independence, they may say to this House, " You have accepted the principle of this Bill, you have accepted the principle embodied in clause 2. How can you object to prosecution and punishment of your people on th esame basis and on the same grounds? " Once the principles of this Bill are accepted, none of us here is safe, because in the opinion of the Benches opposite every one of us is a Bolshevik. Anybody who is not in favour of the present British Government of India, anybody who is not in favour of the present system of Government is a Bolshevik. I see Anglo-Indian papers ; I read them very often ; they call us Communists, Bolsheviks. In private talk too, people say " He is a Bolshevik ". Practically what the Government wants is moral sanction for anything they might do hereafter in order to involve the Members of this House and those who are not inside this House but who advocates a better system of Government for their country in trouble. It is in order to prosecute and punish them that we are asked to pass this measure. I do not care if anybody is punished and prosecuted after fair trial, after a trial before a court of justice. But, Sir, I am very suspicious, extremely suspicious of the intentions of an executive Government when they want to be invested with judicial powers. It is a most dangerous thing. I would beg of the Members of this House not to invest the executive Government with Judicial power in the way this Bill proposes to do. It gives power to the Government to judicially determine whether any person is guilty of acts stated in clause 2, and after judicial determination, in camera and in Executive Council they can expel anybody. This is a most dangerous power which any Legislature could give to an executive Government ; I also beg of the Members of this House not to think that they can improve this Bill in the Select Committee. The evil lies in the root of the Bill. The Bill practically is for the summary expulsion of people from this country and the Bill has to be radically changed. It will be impossible to change it in the Select Committee. Moreover, I submit, Sir, that this Bill is not necessary. They have got all the powers they need and even more. Why should they multiply their powers from time to time ? There is enough law already in their hands by which they can effect the purposes mentioned in this Bill. Sir, I want to appeal to the Members of this House to remember that this Government, perhaps any executive Government, but particularly this Government as it is constituted to-day, is not fit to be invested with these powers. Don't I know how these powers have been exercised from time to time in the interests of " law and order "? Don't I know that the Government have confined people without trial simply for administrative convenience ? Was not that stated in the Bengal Legislative Council by a responsible Member of the Bengal Government ? And don't I know, by personal experience, my own personal experience, that the exercise of such judicial powers by the executive Government is absolutely arbitrary, unwarranted, unjust and unfair ? In the end they always say " Oh, we made a mistake ". They made the mistake, but the poor man had to suffer all the time ; his children had to suffer. They can make mistakes of this kind without qualm of conscience. I therefore beg to submit before this House, Sir, that first of all on general principle no executive Government is fit to be entrusted with this kind of power, but more particularly this Government is in no case fit for such a power. I do not want, Sir, to say anything unpleasant. This Government which has sanctioned, which has advocated, recommended, the constitution of a Commission composed entirely of Britishers, is not fit to be entrusted with any executive power of the kind specified in the Bill. I want to say from the floor of this House that this Government, although it contains three Indian gentlemen for whom I have some admiration, does not inspire any confidence in the country ; therefore it is the last Government which ought to be invested with powers of this kind. Their whole outlook is Imperialistic, narrow, depressive and suppressive. Their outlook is not at all wide, judicial, or patriotic. Sir, all this talk about the Communist danger and the Bolshevist danger is entirely out of the question. Is there any chance of the people of this country listening to those men who talk in Russian or English ? Can they understand them ? The danger may be this, that the men educated among the Indian communities may become Communists. Go for these Indian Communists, punish them for their Communism and their Communistic views if you will say frankly that your real object is to get at the Indian Communists. Why do you proceed in this understanding—telling us that you want to proceed against foreigners only ? You are practically bolstering up the law against Indians. It is a pretence, a disguise, to say that this Bill is not intended against us, that it is intended against Britishers, against foreigners. Why should we be saddled with the cost of sending to his home a Britisher or a foreigner ? I happened to be once in Japan when the Japanese Government wanted to turn out two Indian revolutionaries. They did not give them passports or passages. They simply said, " Leave this country within such and such a date." Let the Government get a conviction before a court of law and then take power by amending the Indian Penal Code so as to turn the men out of the country. It is no use giving them passages or protecting their property. If a court of law convicts the man of any of these offences, it is no business of ours to give him a comfortable cabin and provide him with a passage to his own home.

Sir, I object to the whole principle of this Bill. It is an absolutely vicious Bill, it is a Bill that has not been drawn up with any care for public opinion, with any care for fairness or for decency. I therefore wish to warn Members of this House not to be carried away by all this sentimental talk of danger. We are in no danger from Bolshevism or Communism. The greatest danger we are in, is from capitalists and exploiters. Don't we all know that money comes from Lancashire, from British trade unions, to help the strikes so that Indian mills may not operate ? It is not Moscow money alone that helps to foster strikes. Why blame the Bolshevists only ? They may be one of the forces that contribute towards strikes in this country, but there are others also. I therefore wish to submit that nobody should be carried away by this sophistry. He will be giving a dangerous weapon in the hands of Government to strangle all of us, to strangle our political aspirations if he accepts the principle of this Bill. This Bill is going to be applied to you now and hereafter by judicial and executive orders. Do not, therefore, be carried away by the idea that this Bill is intended for foreigners only. We wish all foreigners to leave this country and leave us free. We will always welcome them as friends, but not when they come here as exploiters. We are prepared to give them any amount of money they want if they will leave us free to fight out our own battles. You talk of protecting Indian labourers. We don't want any of your protection. All we want is freedom to develop ourselves on our own lines, even to fight among ourselves if necessary. Give us that freedom and go away. We don't care for your protection. You have not come here to give us protection. You have come to make money, money, money. You have come to fill your pockets with our hard-earned money. All hard-earned money goes into the pockets of foreign capitalists and foreign exploiters. We understand all these tactics, we understand all these disguises and devices. You might carry the Bill by a majority, but I beg of the Indian Members of this House not to support the principle of this Bill and not even to accept the motion for Select Committee, because it is impossible to convert this Bill into any useful measure in the Select Committee, unless the Bill is entirely changed.

I therefore, Sir, oppose the motion.

Sir Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary): Sir, the last time I confronted my Honourable friend, Lala Lajpat Rai, in debate I charged him with confronting me with a conspiracy of silence. How fortunate was I then, did I but know it! To-day he has confronted me with a barrage of words. At first as I listened to him, I found in my heart feelings of dismay. But as he advanced his forces against me, I took courage, for I found that the barrage of words was but a smoke screen (An Honourable Member : "You have taught us that.")—a smoke screen behind which he could conceal his barrenness of argument. Some of the assertions he made filled me, not with dismay, but with a certain sense of indignation—those words of his addressed to my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, on the score of his personal religion; those words addressed to you, Sir, that charge he made against the British Government and against Englishmen, on the score of tampering with the religion of this country. Heaven knows, our record in this country may be open to criticism. But on that score, Sir, I have never heard criticism before. (Loud Cheers from the Non-Opposition Benches.)

1 P.M.

He treated that well-reasoned speech of Sir Victor Sassoon with contempt; brushed aside Sir Victor Sassoon's well-authenticated statements; brushed aside the reference to the Acts in Australia and South Africa. And as for the law in the United States, he presented you with a travesty. By introducing the words "defended by lawyers" he sought to make the House believe that in the United States the deportation order goes before the courts!

Lala Lajpat Rai: I still maintain that this is so.

Sir Denys Bray: As a matter of fact he himself provided me with a reminder of the actual fact:—"defended by lawyers" before that very judicial body, the immigration authorities!

And finally—for this seemed to be the burden of his argument, Sir—the great argument against the Bill is money, money, the vast sums of money that will be expended from the resources of the Indian tax-payer on providing a few third class passages out of India! (Laughter.)

But it was dust he threw into the eyes of the House when he spoke about this Bill being directed not against the foreigners at all but against Indians. It cannot be said too often that this Bill does not touch the Indian British subject or, the subject of an Indian State. And as for the foreigner, it touches him not unless he comes into the country and tries to inculcate doctrines which in their ultimate aim seek to undermine India's ancient social system. (Hear, hear.) Let not my Honourable friend deceive himself. Or if he deceives himself, let him not deceive the House. Whatever soft words agents of the Third International may find it wise to whisper into the Indian ears for the moment, the Third International has preached its creed from the housetops too often for us to forget it. It is their boast that Communism has no need to conceal either doctrine or design. It is their boast that in destruction lies the only path to their goal. The violent crash of the whole existing social structure is their open war-cry. Apply that war-cry to India, Sir, and think what it means. Is India to sit, hands folded, while Communists from outside besmirch what Islam reveres and seek to bring down the whole structure of Islam? Is India to sit, hands folded, while those great contributions which Hinduism—— But here my eye lights on my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer and I feel abashed. For in that after-dinner speech of his the other day, while there was much with which I disagreed, and much which as usual I thoroughly enjoyed, there was one passage which gave me a thrill and a glow. And that was that passage of fine patriotism, of grand racial pride in which he spoke of the indestructibility of Hinduism, and how Hinduism had remained firm, untouched, while invasion after invasion passed over India. As I listened, I felt that it ill became an Englishman like myself, belonging to a race whose civilisation, however fine, does not boast of such immemorial ancestry, it ill became an Englishman like myself to bring Hinduism lightly to my lips. And yet—is Hinduism to look on, hands folded, while India is subjected to an invasion of poisonous ideas infinitely more perilous than any invasion of force? (Hear, hear and Applause.) Or am I wrong? Is there something after all in Communism that can stir Islam or Hinduism to a new and a fuller life? India has problems of her own: Hindu and Muslim, landlord and tenant, capital and labour, town and country, problems, plenty and to spare, difficult enough of solution without intrusion from outside, without the foreign intrusion of a poison more virulent than any poison the world has yet known in history. For myself, I look upon these industrial and agrarian disputes of ours, save when I am in the trough of depression I look upon our communal struggles, as painful indeed and ugly, all too often dangerous, yet seemingly inevitable at the present stage and symptomatic of evolution and change. They are to me the growing pains of a young nation. The adolescence of a new nationhood is upon India. India, modern India, young India is awakening to a new life, and growing pains must need be hers, growing pains, painful of course, yet in their final outcome—who dare doubt it?—benignant. But what of this intrusion of foreign matter into the body politic? It bespeaks not the growing pains of health and growth and life, it bespeaks the devouring pains of the cancerous growth of dissolution. To me, Sir, this is no idle metaphor. How indeed could it be? If I am right in thinking—most Honourable Members in this House will not need to think, they will know—if I am right in thinking that Islam and Communism, Hinduism and Communism, are as poles asunder, then this intrusion in our body politic is cancer indeed. A wise man at the first warning signs of cancer hies him to the surgeon that the knife may remove the cancer before it is too late.

Lala Lajpat Rai: Why is not religion mentioned in this Bill?

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz (West Central Punjab: Muhammadan): Hatred between classes is mentioned.

Lala Lajpat Rai: That is religion perhaps.

Sir Denys Bray: The unwise man waits, as my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai would have us wait, too long. What! Should the State, with millions of people in its keeping, wait too long? I have heard the suggestion (I am not quite sure whether it came from my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer) that the State should indeed shrink lest it offend some foreign Government. What Government, I wonder? What nation? I can think of one only, a nation which, as Sir Victor Sassoon reminded us, make short work of people who think differently from themselves and give utterance to their thoughts. My Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer, I now remember, said that this Bill was designed to thwart—have I got it wrong?—some federation of Asiatic nations. What nations is he thinking of? Is it Japan? Again I can think of one semi-Asiatic nation only that revels in this sort of doctrine. Is he thinking of China ? My friend Sir Victor Sassoon again provided the answer. And I myself am minded of the patriotic words of Mr. C. C. Woo when they made a clean sweep of Soviets, citizens, agents and all, from Hankow and evoked an angry protest from Mr. Chicherin. " The primeval instinct of self-preservation ", Mr. Woo is reported to have said, " demands that the nation should be thoroughly purged of all foreign cells of hostile activity. And whosoever in the wide world this our action of national self-preservation may please or haply displease, China cares neither tittle nor jot ". Wise words, Sir, and brave. Let India say the same !

[Sir Denys Bray.]

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. Arthur Moore (Bengal : European) : Sir, we live in a world of paradox. But I do not think that even in the most freakish moments of imagination we have ever seen so pleasing a paradox as the other day when my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer was found urging the Honourable the Home Member to make use of Regulation III, while the Home Member was protesting that he wished to proceed by way of the ordinary law. Regulation III, as we all know, is a drastic regulation. Now we are trying to deal with three possible classes of people : inhabitants of the country, British subjects from the home country or the Dominions, and aliens or foreigners. I understand the Government has under the existing Act very full powers for dealing with aliens. It can of course deal by the ordinary law or if necessary at times by emergency regulations with inhabitants of this country ; but it does find itself in a difficulty as regards dealing with British subjects who come here from England or from the Dominions. I understand they might possibly be dealt with also under Regulation III, and that is what my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer wished to do. I am sorry to find Mr. Ranga Iyer so vindictive about these young men. He wishes to see them rotting in jail. I should have thought that the proposal of Government merely to deport them to the place whence they came would be very much more humane than Mr. Ranga Iyer's proposal to deal with them under Regulation III.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of correction. I did not say that they should be dealt with under Regulation III, but under the ordinary law of the land.

Mr. Arthur Moore : I accept the correction, but I was under the impression that Mr. Ranga Iyer expressly mentioned to the Home Member in his speech Regulation III as being useful. Mr. Ranga Iyer went further and said, as Sir Victor Sassoon pointed out this morning, that in no other country would legislation of this kind be tolerated. And Lala Lajpat Rai this morning challenged Sir Victor Sassoon's version of the United States law. Now, Sir, I do not claim to be an expert on this immigration law of the United States. But as far as I understand it, Sir Victor Sassoon was right and my Honourable friend over there is wrong.

If he will permit me I will just repeat the relevant section. It runs as follows :

" No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organised government or who is a member of or affiliated with any organisation entertaining and teaching such principles..... or opposition to organised government or who advocates or teaches the duty or the necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally of the Government of the United States, or of any other organised government shall be permitted to enter, etc....."

Then it says :

" This section shall be enforced by the Secretary of Commerce and Labour under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe."

Nothing there about judicial trial—simply rules and regulations. Then we come to deportation.

" In case the Secretary of Commerce and Labour shall be satisfied that an alien has been found in the United States in violation of this Act or that an alien is subject to deportation under the provisions of this Act or of any law of the United States, he shall cause such alien within the period of three years after landing or entry therein to be taken into custody and returned to the country whence he came."

Now, Sir, I contend that this is fairly comprehensive. It is quite true that in the present Bill there is no provision for a limit of either three or five years or for any other period ; but that is not a matter of principle. That is a matter of detail which can be dealt with in the Select Committee. I submit that the procedure is in all essentials the same.....

Lala Lajpat Rai : Not at all.

Mr. Arthur Moore : I have yet to discover the difference.

Lala Lajpat Rai : The difference is this : the man is called upon to show cause and then the Secretary of Commerce and Labour passes orders, and then it is open to him to contest that order in the States Court.

Mr. Arthur Moore : There is nothing here about showing cause ; it is entirely left in the hands of the Secretary of Commerce and Labour. He has got to be satisfied, and I take it that in the case with which we are dealing the Government of the day will also have to be satisfied. Now, Sir, the Opposition seems to suggest that the Government is setting a whale to catch a sprat. I should like to point out that behind any particular sprat for whom the whale may be set there is a world-wide conspiracy at work. I refer to the Bolsheviks. I have been in Russia since the war under Soviet rule, and moreover in Teheran and Kabul I have seen many of their agents, and have had the benefit of conversations with the Russian Ministers in Kabul and in Teheran. I am also familiar with the reports of the Third Internationale and with the proceedings of the Oriental Congress at Baku in 1920. Like Sir Victor Sassoon I am not an alarmist by nature. When people tell me that Russia is a great military danger, when they tell me that we are liable to a sudden attack upon the frontier I am not always very much impressed. I do not believe that Russia, whatever may come,—and in the end war may come—wants war. What does Soviet Russia want ? I do not think any man who makes a study of the situation can have any doubt as to what she wants. She wants civil war. She wants world wide civil war. Her propaganda stretches right through the world, from Moscow to the Thames and the Clyde, to the United States, the South America, to Mexico, and to all the countries of Europe. We know how actively her agents are at work. How are we to deal with this menace ? We have been told that India is not good soil for this propaganda. I agree, and I do not think that India is seriously going to go in for a campaign of violence. But this I do know, that there are some forces at work in India which do not want industrial peace. I would call your attention to the steel industry. That is, if I may say so, the cherished darling of this House. The House has lavished great sums upon it. They have determined and rightly determined to have a great steel industry in this country. Now, we know that the firm which constitutes the steel industry are good employers. A certain gentleman in a rash moment said hard things about them, but since then he has made a handsome apology. I do not think any Member of this House will suggest—I am quite sure Mr. Joshi will agree with me—that they are not good employers. I do not know, nor does any Member of this House know, what this fight in the steel industry is about. The grievances are still to seek. All we know is that the steel industry on which the House has lavished so much pains and attention is closed down. We know that only a short time ago it achieved a very great triumph. It obtained a contract for steel to be used in the building of a great bridge near Calcutta, the Bally Bridge. That was a tremendous triumph for this industry in India. No such contract had been obtained for Indian steel before, as far as I know. To-day that industry is closed down, temporarily we all hope and believe. But the fact is that it is closed down and is unable to fulfil its orders. It is being prevented from carrying out that order of which we all heard with pride. My friend Mr. Gavin-Jones can tell us a great deal as to what is happening in Cawnpore and in the United Provinces. Now I draw a clear distinction between this kind of violent movement among the workers, which takes no real interest in securing benefits for the workmen, and legitimate trade unionism. Trade unionism is now recognised in England and the other countries of Europe as a legitimate weapon to protect the interests of the workmen and to raise their standard of living, and that has always included the right to strike. But we are now dealing with people whose real object is not to give support in these legitimate battles and secure victories for the men, but to foster a spirit of violence. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt said the other day that he had been up and down India and that he had never met a Communist. Well, Sir, the Communists are not quite as simple as all that. They do not waste time in trying to instil their ideas into the bland and childlike mind of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. To them my Honourable friend is one of the abominable and abominated bourgeosie, and in due time a knife or a bullet will be good enough for him. The Communists are working amongst the hungry, as my friend Lala Lajpat Rai pointed out ; and that is dangerous ground to be worked by foreigners in this country who are advocating violence. We must remember that we are dealing with a world problem which is menacing every stable government the world over. This is a living age, the problem is ours and it is we who have to find solutions. It cannot be dealt with by the Barons of Runneymeade or the sections of Magna Charta. My Honourable friend Pandit Motilal Nehru has raised two very interesting points of order this week, and he has thereby attained his object which was to secure a full debate on the Bill. I congratulate him on that. We have now, thanks to him, got a full debate on this very important subject. Having attained that admirable object, I appeal to him not to use the weight of numbers to kill the Bill at this early stage.

We are not asked to ruin any man's character. Those against whom it is proposed to proceed under this Bill will be those who openly profess and teach violence. If these men are expelled they will not consider it a disgrace but a testimonial. They are not being sent to gaol. They are merely asked to go. Is not that a simple and efficacious way of dealing with the matter ? Supposing we ignore the reality and we deal with this subject entirely by points of order, discussions on rules, and so on, what shall we have achieved at the end of all ? We can prove that this is a subordinate Parliament, as if that needed proving. Is it not far better to prove that this is not going to be a subordinate Parliament, if we can help it ? Is it not for us to show that we are competent to deal with these problems ? I can conceive circumstances in which not merely the present government but future governments will be very glad to have such a simple Statute on the book, enabling them to deport people back to the place whence they came. What are we asked to do ? We are sending no one to prison. We are not, as I say, impugning anybody's character, but are giving them in their own eyes a testimonial as faithful servants of their Moscow headquarters ?

An Honourable Member : Without hearing them ?

Mr. Arthur Moore : Have we not heard them ? Is it likely that people will be deported who are not professing the tenets of that particular gospel, the gospel of civil war in every country ? It is not merely in this country that such steps are sought to be taken ; they are being taken throughout the world. Society has to organize itself in self-defence. We find people who hold the extraordinary creed, that you can remodel society by violence, who fail to see that human society is the total of all our mental attitudes, and that by professing violence you can never procure peace. These people believe that by violent overthrow and destruction, they can somehow bring in the Kingdom of Heaven upon earth. Surely if you can deal with such people without violence, by sending them away to the place whence they came, is not that much better ? I trust Members of this House will at least agree that it is a fair course to send the Bill to a Select Committee. I cannot believe that Honourable Members who talk of Regulation III realize the full implication of what they suggest. I would earnestly appeal to them to take the sensible course of sending the Bill to the Select Committee, where it can have full consideration and then it can come back to this House.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Mr. President, I beg to oppose this Bill and all its provisions wholly and without any reservation, mental, moral or verbal. I think, Sir, that this Bill has been brought before us in a particular fashion so as to enlist in its favour all possible prejudices and to throw around the subject as much darkness as it was possible for the other side to do. It was a touching solicitude which was shown in the literary speech of my Honourable friend, Sir Denys Bray, and in the speech of the Honourable the Home Member for the Hindu religion, for Hindu culture, for the Mussalman religion and for Mussalman culture !! And it was suggested that if this Bill were not passed, the foundations of Hinduism and Islam, of my humble self, of which we are so justly proud, will be destroyed. Landlords' sympathy, big landlords' sympathy was sought to be enlisted by dangling before them the idea that they will all be expropriated if this

Bill is not passed, in that artful, in that restrained way of which my friends on the opposite side are such past masters. Then it was suggested that capitalism and private property in the country will be a thing of the past and will cease to exist unless this Bill is passed. And incidentally, the recent strikes and troubles in Bombay and elsewhere were made as much use of as possible. But I cannot congratulate the Honourable the Home Member on the presentation of his case. He must himself have felt that he had no case at all to put forward before this House. I think, Sir, it is really trifling with us, men who have been trained to weigh evidence, who know something of law, who know something of human nature, who know something of what is going on in this country, to tell us that these scraps of proved or unproved things which were flourished before us furnish conclusive or even ordinary proof that there is a Red menace in India which is destructive not only of the British Government here but subversive of all Law and authority, of civilization itself, and which really threatens to throw overboard Hinduism and Muhammadanism into the two seas on either side of India. I think the Honourable the Home Member must have strained his sense of humour very considerably (Laughter) : and he would be the first person I am sure who would laugh at us if any Member of the House took him seriously. His arguments on that head could not have been presented to a second-class magistrate with any chance of a conviction on the evidence (Laughter),—and he knew that perfectly well. Of course, dealing with a popular Assembly, dealing with various interests and prejudices, he thinks he can dress up a case like this—and in window-dressing I admit I am no match for any of my friends on the opposite side—and he thinks he can persuade many Members from different points of view to support this. And above all, Sir, this was the great bait that was thrown at us—Indian British subjects are excluded, and the subjects of Indian States are excluded. What is the idea ? The Indian people are so selfish, so sectarian, they have no culture, they have a narrow outlook, and the other side only are the trustees of the whole civilization, but the Indian people are so selfish that they only look to themselves ! They will pass any Bill against foreigners and Europeans that is put before them by the Government. I submit, Sir, it is really doing a gross injustice to us to imagine that we are here not to do justice to every nation in the world, that we are not to do justice to every country on the face of the earth. Sir, we are and we shall be national, Communism or no Communism, bureaucracy or no bureaucracy. We shall be national ; but it is quite obvious that nationality of the Indian type, for I make no distinction whatever between Islam and Hinduism in that respect, is one which is so scrupulously and sensitively just to the interests of others that you will have to ransack all the four corners of the earth to find a nationality which is as just to others as ours. Therefore, Sir, I submit that it is not dealing with us fairly to present these documents. I do not go into this question whether M. N. Roy's letter was authentic or not. In all probability it was intercepted, and in all probability, they have no proof about it, and that is the reason why only one or two extracts were read out and I do not suppose the Home Member really asks us to lay any emphasis upon the conspiracy case. What he really relies on is I think the academic side of the Communist doctrine. That I think is his real basis, the real evidence upon which he wants this Bill to be passed. But it will not do for the House to be told that there is Communism in the country. We must know also who are the Communists in this country and who are the British Communists.

No names were given to us till my friend, the Honourable Mr. Ranga Iyer, let the cat out of the bag and told us that it was in response to a resolution of some European Chamber of Commerce in Calcutta, and there was no denial from that most interested quarter, that it was a resolution of that Chamber that wanted Mr. Spratt to be dealt with and that it was in consequence of this that this Bill was brought forward. Sir, I have heard no denial on that head till now. But anyhow we must know who are the professed Communists against whom this legislation is directed. And who are the other Communists ? The Indian Communists are said to be quite safe. The Bill does not propose to deal with them. We must know who the others are and what are the credentials of these persons, whose names have not been disclosed, to be regarded as members of the Communist Party. And what are the proofs by which Government proposes to show to us that these men have been really doing Communist propaganda ? Simply because there are strikes in Bombay or in South India, are we to presume that either Mr. Spratt or somebody else, some unknown British Communist was sent as a trained Communist leader—if I remember rightly the phrase in that speech of Sir Victor Sassoon which naturally did not surprise me—to India for the purpose of stirring up trouble ? What is the evidence that he was a trained Communist leader and what is the evidence that he stirred up all this trouble ? If the Government wanted to show that, they could have brought some proceedings against him under the ordinary processes of law. So far as Mr. Spratt was concerned, I understand that he was once acquitted and I do not know whether any proceeding under the ordinary law would share a better fate. It is obvious then that the evidence upon which we are asked to proceed with this Bill is really frivolous and of no value whatever from any point of view.

Then the question arises whether this Bill is really a necessary Bill, is properly conceived and whether the principle for which it stands is sound and free from danger to the community at large. I submit, Sir, I oppose it on very many grounds. In the first place I consider that this Bill is a highly repressive and despotic measure and as such ought to be opposed by everybody in this House independently of any other consideration. In the second place I consider this Bill proceeds upon racial discrimination—I would say double racial distinction in favour of themselves as I shall show presently. In the third place it is wholly unnecessary ; and in the fourth place it is misconceived. I think these objections can be easily made good. I shall first deal with the argument that it is wholly unnecessary. Now, clauses (a) and (b) of section 2 of this Bill deal with the direct and indirect advocacy of the overthrow

"by force or violence of the government established by law in British India, or the abolition of all forms of law or organized government, whether in British India or elsewhere, or the assassination of public officials, or the promotion of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, or the destruction of property or unlawful interference with the ownership of property ; or (b) seeks to foment or utilise industrial or agrarian disputes or other disputes of a like nature with the direct object of subverting the authority of law or organised government in British India or with any object the attainment of which, etc."

Now, most of these acts for which sanction of legislative authority to deal with them as offences is asked are all covered by the existing law as offences, and no attempt was made to show that a person could not be proceeded with under the existing law. Sections 124A, 153A, I. P. C., the mischief and murder and abetment sections of the code and other cognate enactments apply to almost all the acts aimed at by this Bill. The assassination of public officials would be I suppose murder and there is very little difficulty about it, and in fact the guilty person would get an aggravated punishment under that charge. I submit therefore that no necessity has been made out for this, except by invoking the method which it proposes to adopt, the substitution of a Governor's certificate instead of an ordinary trial in a court of law, for offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code or other enactments.

Now, so far as the immigration laws, to which reference was made, are concerned, I am really unable to follow that subject, for this Bill does not purport to provide for any difficulties connected with immigration, and when Sir Victor Sassoon referred to the immigration laws as supporting this Bill I do not know what he meant. I submit that immigration laws have nothing to do with it. If you want anything like that you have it in abundance. You will find from the wording of this Bill that it strikes not only at the European British subjects but it strikes at all Europeans and Americans, even though they are not British subjects. And it strikes at all non-Indian Asiatic subjects, whether they are British subjects or not. For instance, Malayan or Chinese British subjects, Arab or Somali British subjects or African British subjects, will come within the purview of this Bill, and all Asiatics and Africans who are not British subjects will come within the purview of this Bill. It is quite obvious that the object is not really to deal with any question of immigration, for that is amply provided for by Act III of 1864. In the case of foreigners section 3 of that Act provides :

"The Governor General of India in Council may, by writing, order any foreigner to remove himself from British India, or to remove himself therefrom by a particular route to be specified in the order ; and any Local Government may, by writing, make the like order with reference to any foreigner within the jurisdiction of such Government."

And section 5 of that Act proceeds to say :

"Whenever the Governor General of India in Council shall consider it necessary to take further precautions in respect of foreigners residing or travelling in British India or any part thereof, it shall be lawful for the Governor General of India in Council, by a notification published in the Gazette of India, to order that the provisions of this and the subsequent sections of this Act shall be in force in British India, or in such part thereof as shall be specified in such notification, for such period as shall be therein declared ; and thereupon, and for such period, the whole of this Act, including the subsequent sections, shall have full force and effect in British India or such part thereof as shall have been so specified. The Governor General of India in Council may, from time to time, by a notification published as aforesaid, cancel or alter any former notification which may still be in force, or may extend the period declared therein :

Provided that none of the provisions of this or the subsequent sections of this Act shall extend to any foreign minister duly accredited by his Government ; to any consul or vice-consul ; to any person under the age of fourteen years ; or to any person in the service of Her Majesty."

And section 6 says :

"Every foreigner on arriving in any part of British India in which all the provisions of this Act are for the time being in force under an order issued as provided in the last preceding section, from any port or place not within British India, or from any port or place within British India where all the provisions of this Act are not in force, shall, if he arrive at a presidency-town, forthwith report himself to the Commissioner of Police of such town, or, if he arrive at any other place, then he shall forthwith report himself to the Magistrate of the district, or to such other officer as shall be appointed to receive such reports, by the Governor General of India in Council or by the Local Government of such place."

And then the movements of foreigners are fully controlled by licenses, by all sorts of provisions. It is therefore idle to suggest, by merely bringing in "other foreigners", that this Bill has anything to do with the control of foreigners. That is amply provided for. The real object is—in order to save their own racial pride they have put in other people—to remove from India European British subjects of the Communist or Socialist or Labour variety who are not personae gratae with the Government or with the capitalist Chambers of Commerce. Otherwise I cannot understand why a reference is made to other foreigners for whom a very sufficient and elaborate provision is made in Act III of 1864.

Then, coming to European British subjects, I submit, Sir, that they are covered by the existing Regulations, which, notwithstanding all our efforts, still remain as a blot upon the Statute-book. I do not say much about the blot ; the Statute-book contains so many blots that a blot more or less does not matter, and that Regulation, I contend, is quite sufficient and was originally intended undoubtedly for the purpose of dealing with European British subjects or other foreigners, who, for reasons of State, are obnoxious to the Government. And in order that there may be no difficulty whatever in that connection these Regulations have been extended to the original jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts of Calcutta, Madras and Bombay by the Government of India Act III of 1858. It says that the provisions of these Regulations relating to the arrest, etc., of State prisoners shall be in force within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Courts of Judicature at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. Therefore, Sir, it is quite obvious that European British subjects can be dealt with in the way in which some of my friends—one of my friends is certainly here—and some of my friends who are not here were dealt with, they could be dealt with if there was no attempt at racial discrimination. I submit, therefore, that this law is wholly unnecessary. In the first place, the ordinary criminal law of the land is quite sufficient and the strong arm of the law ought to be able to help the Government in legitimately safeguarding such peace and order as they have vouchsafed to the inhabitants of this country, a question upon which opinion may be reserved. The Penal Code is there, the Criminal Law Amendment Act is there, that Act of 1908 deals with unlawful associations, and therefore part of clause 3 of this Bill is not necessary. All that they have got to notify is that it is an unlawful association. If they declare some association is unlawful, why then, any person who is a member of that association will come with it ; it is not therefore necessary to make any extra provision in that behalf. Now, so far as European British subjects are concerned, if they want a summary procedure, they have got the Regulations and the Act of 1858. If they want control so far as foreigners are concerned, not only have they the ordinary law and these Regulations, but they have got in addition the Foreigners Act of 1864, by which their entry into the country, travel and movement can be fully controlled by the Government and they can be deported and asked to remove themselves very politely. I was told that a polite request for removal was all that was needed. For that purpose I do not think this is necessary. The Governor General in Council should send a polite request and the gentleman would certainly go, especially when that polite request is backed up by what my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer referred to as a free passage. Therefore, Sir, this Bill is, I submit, wholly superfluous.

[Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar.]

I have dealt with this subject at some length, because Honourable Members on any side of the House who may not be in agreement with some of our views, who may not be in agreement with my views, should not be stampeded into supporting this motion, merely on the ground that there is necessity for this motion. I say to anyone in this House who is against Communism, who is against any British Communists coming into this country, whether he agrees or not with the views which my friends on this side of the House or some of them may happen to entertain, that the existing law is wholly adequate and this Bill is unnecessary. In the second place, there is the question of racial discrimination. When an Indian is concerned, you imprison him under the State Prisoners' Regulation and in the case of a European British subject alone, you want to deal with him so lightly and send him away. That is certainly racial discrimination. No doubt the insinuating end of the wedge was shown. It was stated that Indians are excluded. But in truth, Indians are not excluded. They are not named in this Act, for they are fully covered by the existing law, by the Regulations and by the ordinary law and the punishments are severe. The present powers are quite sufficient to deal with Indians, but these powers could not be used against European British subjects, because questions would be asked in Parliament and various parties would kick up a hell of a row (Honourable Members : "Unparliamentary ; withdraw, withdraw.")—if it is unparliamentary, I withdraw at once—and therefore they should be allowed gently to go out of the country with a free passage. It is with that view and that view only, of making racial discrimination in their favour and letting their own countrymen go free, this is brought. Notwithstanding the assertion of Sir Victor Sassoon that he regards British Communists as foreigners, Government do not regard them as foreigners. They want even in the case of their British Communist friends to make all possible concessions and they want to send them away as courteously as possible ; and therefore I say that this Bill proceeds upon a racial discrimination.

Dealing with the third point, the Bill is wholly dangerous in principle. It is a repressive measure. That word has been heard in this House and elsewhere many times, but if ever that word can be applied to any measure, it should be applied to this. For, what do you see ? The questions which will arise in connection with this Bill, if this measure becomes law, will be very intricate, very delicate and difficult, namely, whether a man directly or indirectly advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the Government, or the abolition of all forms of Government, whether he promotes enmity between different classes of subjects, or whether he foments industrial disputes with the direct object of subverting—these are questions certainly of a difficult nature oftentimes which will require not only clear evidence, but which will require anxious judicial consideration. How is the Governor General in Council, who is not a judicial authority, to decide these questions, without hearing anybody, without giving notice to the party concerned ? We know what this means. I admit the Governor General in Council is there in the Statute-book. We know it does not really mean that but having regard to the administration, it necessarily means some link in the administrative chain, which is strong enough to make itself felt. It may be a policeman at the bottom of the ladder ; it may be a Collector or a Magistrate, or Commissioner or it may be a journalist who has the ear of the Government House or it may be a European capitalist who is strong enough to make himself felt and who canvasses official votes for his point of view. Therefore the Governor General in Council does not mean really the Governor General in Council. It comes to him for the first time, flagged files of papers no doubt come to him and various other things. Somewhere or other along the chain there will be some man who knows his mind, who is a streng man and who wants a particular person whom he considers is obnoxious should be removed and he has simply to insist upon it and I know in course of time he will have his way. There is no doubt about it. I see the Honourable the Home Member with larger experience of administration than I have differs from me and smiles. I am perfectly certain if he would only consider in how many cases he brings to bear his independent judgment and in how many cases he merely endorses and puts his signature on the proposals sent up he would agree with me. Therefore, I submit that the Governor General in Council means nothing whatever. The biggest phrase is put in, as if the Governor General in Council actually deals with it. Secrecy and the black cap are the order of the day. That is what is done and nothing else. I therefore submit that this is really asking us for a very large order. I submit also that not only is there no trial by a court, is there no hearing, is there no notice, but the various things which have to be elicited are really matters which cannot be elicited by officials. It must necessarily be a public open judicial inquiry. The fierce light of publicity is the one safeguard against any despotism, against inadvertent discharge of duty, against negligence. With the best will in the world I cannot discharge a duty properly unless I hear the other side of the case. I may consider myself a very just man—and I do consider myself to be a very just man (Laughter)—but I do submit I cannot discharge that duty faithfully unless I hear the other side of the case. And I cannot hear the other side unless the other side is represented in cases in which representation is necessary, and not only is that necessary but it should be open hearing and open investigation of the matter. Publicity is at the root of it, and I have been told by my elders and political ancestors, who believed in British justice, that publicity was a great inheritance from the West. But I find that this Bill goes against that ancestral tradition.

Then you will see what an extraordinary provision section 7 of the Bill is, to which I would refer you.

"No removal order shall be called in question in any Court or by or before any other authority whatsoever, and nothing in section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, shall apply to any person who has been committed to custody under section 6"

—"any other authority" presumably is intended for the Assembly—

"or any other person in respect of whom a removal order has been made; and no suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding whatsoever shall lie against any person in respect of anything in good faith done or intended to be done under this Act."

If the Governor General in Council at least had pending before him the risk of a suit or other proceeding, then there would be some slight safeguard, but when the Government has been given this wholesale immunity, what guarantee is there that the Governor General in Council can do anything but read the papers and sign any recommendation placed before him ? I submit, therefore, what most Judges of the Indian Courts, High Courts, and the Privy Council, have found very difficult to construe and apply, the Governor General in Council in no time will find it incredibly easy for him to deal with. I submit that no further argument is necessary against this Bill, and I appeal to every one of my friends, whether he agrees with my arguments or not, steadily to set his face against this most mischievous and obnoxious measure, which has been brought at a time when all the parties had met at Lucknow and had made a generous gesture to the British Government and people.

Then, Sir, I now deal with the last part of my subject, namely, that this legislation is wholly misconceived. It is not suggested that Communism is illegal. They have not made Communism illegal. They are allowing Indian Communists to propagate that doctrine. On the basis that non-violent advocacy of Communism is not illegal, we do not concede that Indians are not affected by this particular legislation. They will be proceeded against as a next step when the provisions of this Bill become law. If that were not so, what is the reason why, if a British Communist comes and does things, should he be restrained? We do not want British leaders here either for ordinary normal politics or abnormal politics. We want to be national and to lead and to be led by ourselves. But at the same time we are not a people who are ignorant of the laws of hospitality. We are not a people who are against learning from others. Therefore, Sir, if we oppose this Bill we oppose it on the ground that we do not want the British Communists to help us, but that any British subject or any foreigner who is entitled to come to India must be dealt with in the ordinary way, and if he has a theory to propose he must be allowed to propose it. Very much has been made of Communism. We cannot draw our information from the early history of the Russian revolution or from the early days of the Internationals. We must take the facts as they are at this moment and not deal with this question as if we were dealing with extreme doctrinaire views propounded in the earlier days. We know perfectly well that amongst the Communists there are several schools and the school that is dominant is the National School of Russia, and that school holds the view that the religious faith of citizens should be tolerated, that private protests and capitalism should be recognised to a certain extent, and it also recognises the fact that other countries should have their own national government. If there is one government in the world that has changed its mind and now fully recognised religious freedom, that Government is Russia. (Ironical cheers from Treasury Benches). There are more than a thousand churches which are filled with worshippers in Moscow, and I found that they also allow not only religious instruction by parents, but that in the case of Muslims and Christians they have allowed religious instruction to be taught in schools conducted by Maulvis or Christian clergy as the case may be. I was anxious to enquire into this Muhammadan question, and I found that they were allowing Muslims full religious freedom and instruction. I had a talk with Mr. Lunackarsky, the Minister of Education, and he himself told me in the presence of a number of people what I have stated above and verified it from some Musalmans of the Soviet province who were in Moscow. I think, therefore, that it is idle to contend that Communists of all schools are intolerant of religion. The Soviets are recognising more and more private property and a certain amount of capitalism. My belief is the world is moving from the extreme and logical capitalism of the West through forms of State capitalism and severely controlled capitalism, to a position intermediate between extreme capitalism and doctrinaire communism, which will be certainly more to the right than Soviet economics stand now, but which is certainly quite different from the abolition of private property and of any degree of capitalism. I am dealing not with the Communism in theory but with Communism in action as it is to-day in Russia, and after all the power of the Third International is more or less derived from Soviet Russia. Therefore, I submit,—as I told some of my friends in Russia, God is not a capitalist proposition, and I have no sympathy with any Communist view on that point to the contrary. We have nothing to fear from any attempt to spread any doctrine. Some of the greatest authorities in Russia told me most definitely that they allow religious toleration.

Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar: I talked with the Muhammadans there and they told me that there was the greatest tolerance in respect of religion in Soviet Russia, at least as great a tolerance as in any country in the world. I must take things as I have seen them. It may be that others have read some sort of books and got their ideas only from those books about Russia. I submit that Russia has been tragically misunderstood. No doubt their old debts have been disowned by them. No doubt there were revolution and its horrors but there is not the slightest doubt that ignorance and want of facilities for travel are mainly responsible for all this tragic misunderstanding. I am glad that Mr. Moore recognised that Russia itself does not want war. Nor does it want civil war.

Mr. Arthur Moore: It does want civil war.

Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar: The Honourable Member used the expression civil war and I say it does not want civil war either. No doubt it wants economic changes, but it does not want civil war, or wars of any and every kind. I submit further that I also found that nationalities are greatly encouraged by the Russian Soviet Government. (Hear, hear.) Every state is given full autonomy, every province is given full autonomy. States like Georgia are at liberty to separate themselves from the Soviet Union and they can declare themselves to be independent this day. That is the real position to-day in Russia as regards the various States that constitute the Russian Soviet Union.

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal: European): How long have you been in Russia?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar: I was long enough in Russia, at any rate much longer than the Honourable Member, to know more about it than he himself. I know cross examination and I am used to it and I am not going to yield to his interruptions. (Applause and laughter.) Mr. President, I am not going to convince those who are blind and cannot see or those who are wilfully blind and will not see anything good there. (Hear, hear and applause.) It is this wilful blindness coupled with tragic misunderstanding as I call it that is responsible for wars and rumours of wars in the world. I submit, Sir, that Russia is more for nationalities than any other country in the world. This I learnt not only from Russians themselves, not only from Ministers and Leaders of the Soviet Government, but also from some of the Muhammadans citizens of the territories controlled by the Soviet Union who were in Moscow.

There was another cry that culture will be destroyed. As to this I must inform the House that the Soviet Government has been anxious to invent alphabets and insists upon each province having its own languages. This House may not be unaware that the Indian National Congress has been for a long time talking about linguistic provinces, but the Government would not listen to the Congress demands to separate the provinces on a linguistic basis and yet the Soviet Government which is much criticised has established linguistic and cultural provinces. It does insist upon cultural development suited to the different provinces. No doubt in the time of the Czars autocracy and despotism existed in Russia. All that has disappeared to-day. If you want to see Communism in action as it exists at the present day, you must go to Russia and see for yourself. The Russians have got rid of all the old despotism and autocracy. If we want to understand Russia in the proper light, we must not read the present facts of the world situation in the light of earlier revolutionary history nor in the light of doctrinaire and academic propaganda which was preached at one time or which may be aired by some even now. We must look at the facts as they are to-day. Supposing you disagree with these ideals and views and you want to get rid of them, how can you do it ? Ideas like these will spread and cannot be suppressed. I doubt very much whether extreme forms of Communism will ever prevail in India. Communism does not mean revolution in religion as some seem to think. There is no fear from Communism for any part of the world. If you think any doctrine is unsound and if you want to get rid of it, the best thing is to allow that doctrine to spend its force. I can quite understand your apprehension if any violence is used or resort to violence is advocated. So far as violence is concerned, that will not be countenanced either by the Government or the people at large. To put down violence ample safeguards exist even under the present law. But that is not what is attempted or aimed at in the present Bill. The attempt in this Bill is to kidnap British or other Communists or socialists and remove them from this country.

The only other argument to which I need reply now is the argument that there will be a great deal of violence in this country unless we check his menace. But what is the evidence that we have of the proposition that these Communists have preached violence in India ? Have you got any evidence ? We have got none to the effect that they actually preach violence in India. I have not seen anything of the kind. Nothing convincing has been quoted till now for the purpose of showing that they preach violence. What you want is not one scrap of paper here or another there. What you want is a strong body of convincing evidence which will enable us to appreciate any case that may be put forward. I certainly stand for freedom of thought (Hear, hear) for freedom of expression of opinion, for freedom of propaganda, for freedom of association. This Bill strikes at the very root of the fundamental rights to freedom of thought, to freedom of expression of opinion, to freedom of propaganda, and to freedom of association. On that very ground I strongly oppose this Bill. Whether we agree with this part of the Communist doctrine or that part of the Communist doctrine, it does not matter. It is not a matter with which we need concern ourselves. I am perfectly certain that a doctrine which is unsound will by its own weight perish. The sounder doctrine will persist in the course of evolution and even in Russia the earlier doctrines which were unsound have died of their own accord and to-day the sounder ones are prevalent. There have been great changes in the matter in Russia and they may change still further. In Russia it has been perfectly well demonstrated that even with all the aid of force at its command, the Russian Government was not able to maintain purely theoretic Communism in its most extravagant form. They have made that experiment in Russia and failed to uphold that kind of doctrine. There is no danger to a body politic by allowing any theorist to propound his views. The only constructive suggestion that I would make——for we are often told that we do not make any constructive suggestions and that we are only making destructive criticisms—— the only constructive suggestion that I would make to the Government is to encourage all sound socialism. That of course would be a corrective to doctrinaire Communism if Communism were to be of the most violent type. What is wanted in India is State capitalism and fully controlled capitalism and the welfare of labour and peasants. My own opinion is that the Soviet economics is not yet stable because it is more to the left than it should be. But I certainly disagree with the capitalist school of thought which wants uncontrolled private capitalism as it stands at present in America or in England. Those are my own particular views and they differ from Communist doctrine, but whether those views are acceptable to my Honourable friends on the other side or not. I do submit that it is necessary that we should live at peace with all the world. We should not have any misunderstanding.

Then my last argument is that this Bill aims and its intention is——it is the intention of the Bill as drafted that matters, the intention of the drafts-man does not matter——to promote unfriendly relations between this country and foreign countries including Russia, between the people of India and the people of other countries. Why should the people of India who have no quarrel with the people of the other countries be asked to be a party to this Bill by which the foreigners may be deported, by which British subjects may be deported, by which Chinamen, South Africans, Germans, Frenchmen and Italians may be deported ? Why should we have anything to do with these things ? I submit that we should not take any responsibility in this matter. If we give our vote in favour of this Bill, and if this Bill is passed, we would be simply promoting unfriendly relations between this country and others, while curiously enough to prevent unfriendly relations some succinct provision is sought to be made by another measure which will be before this House later on. Therefore I submit that this is not a proper measure to be placed on the Statute-book and I strongly request the Members of this House not to think that their lives will be in danger or that their liberty will be in danger, or that their religion will be in danger, or that their zamindaris will be forfeited or that other things will go to ruin if this Bill is not passed. What a wonderful belief it must be which holds that by this Bill the British Government will give us more than the British Government has given us for the last one hundred and fifty years. The British Government has not given us this happiness yet ; but it is believed that the moment this Bill is passed we shall get it. I really cannot understand this kind of belief. It is childish, it is preposterous.

Then, Sir, I only want to say one or two words about one or two of the provisions of the Bill. I do not want to deal with the Bill in detail but there is one clause I have not dealt with which relates to the destruction of property. Any person who directly or indirectly advocates " the destruction of property " will come under this Bill, whatever its purpose. Now, the destruction of property is perfectly lawful and legitimate for 50 different purposes. Property may lawfully be destroyed for the purpose of sanitation, cleanliness and convenience, for the purpose of preventing the spread of epidemics and cattle diseases and the spread of agricultural pests, for town planning and improvements in city and village. You will want destruction of property for numerous other purposes. Therefore, Sir, I really was astonished that the Honourable the Home Member should want us to pass this Bill. It shows what danger there is in rushing through a Bill by saying it is very urgent. You have been told, Sir, and the Members of this House have been told that this is a very urgent measure. I ask what is the urgency? There is absolutely no urgency whatever. I do not know whether the Secretary of State has consented to this measure Presumably he has. I do not know whether the Secretary of State was able to obtain the support of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and his Party. But what the urgency of this measure is I am unable to say. We were told British trade-unionism has purged itself of Communism. This Bill is not wanted because Communism is already purged from British trade unionism You really do not want it in every case, because you have your passport regulations to deal with cases of this kind. I know of at least one case which came to my personal knowledge while I was in England. The man was or was supposed to be a Communist; he handed his old passport to go to Germany and the passport, which was a British Empire passport, was cancelled. That is, he will not be allowed to go to other parts of the British Dominions. Therefore, there is ample safeguard. If they want it, the Government at home can easily prevent British Communists from coming out here. They are already doing it. That is the complaint made in the Press as well as in Parliament in England. Therefore, Sir, if really a measure of this description is wanted it should be taken in England and not here. But, as I say, I am all for freedom of conscience and, as my friend Lala Lajpat Rai said, we may not all of us agree with Communism but to try to suppress it will give it the force and freedom of a new religion. The more you seek to suppress it the more formidable it will be, for it is by forbidding things that you increase their attraction. It is by shutting out Russia, it is by trying to isolate Russia from the rest of the world, that you have made it more important and the Communists more important in the eyes of the world. I say, let the winds of Heaven blow on all theories, whether Communist or other. The intrinsic soundness of any theory will be the best test and the survival of the fittest is the only way by which you can judge. I am not now talking philosophy. I am talking practical politics and as capable administrators I am sure my Honourable friends on the other side are really convinced that what I say is true, though they may for their own reasons have to differ from me.

To conclude, I say that this Bill is wholly mischievous and pernicious It strikes at the liberty of the subject and we cannot seek to deprive any man, be he foreigner or British subject, of the liberty which we ourselves prize and should have. We want Swaraj in our country and we want to cultivate good relations with the rest of the world. We want that the men who come here should enjoy what we enjoy or wish to enjoy in other countries. They may not have the right to vote and other rights of citizenship but they should have all the ordinary rights which are conceded in all civilised societies to residents temporarily or permanently resident in a country though they may not be natural born or naturalized citizens of the State. That is the ideal that we want to work up to and therefore it is impossible for Swaraj India ever to agree to such a proposition as this. I would once more appeal to all sides of the House without agreeing with any part of my views as to the doctrines of Communism because I know they may have their own views and they are at liberty to have them—I would appeal to them to vote against it on the ground that it is an unnecessary measure. On the ground that it is a racial measure, even those who are anti-Communists or are frightened of Communism ought to vote against this Bill. To others I would say, let us not be afraid of this bogey of Communism. For the other reasons to which my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer referred in his able and comprehensive speech—to which an unfortunate reference was made to-day as an " after-dinner speech ", a description which I resent as much as the speaker resented Lala Lajpat Rai's remarks against Sir Hari Singh Gour's speech—I submit that this is a Bill which ought not to be on the Statute-book. I would appeal again and again, I would appeal a thousand times, to this House not to be frightened by the word " Communism " or by the word " Red ". I am very very sorry that I never bargained for a speech of the description of Sir Hari Singh Gour's. When he approached me to serve on the Select Committee I said I would wholly oppose the Bill but that if the motion to refer it to a Select Committee was adopted then I should not have any objection to be on it. But I never bargained for the sort of speech he made. It looked to me as if he were supplementing things which had been left out by the Honourable the Home Member. This is not right; and I certainly know more about this topic than Sir Hari Singh Gour can know. Notwithstanding Colonel Crawford's very pertinent interruption I certainly know more about the matter and Soviet Russia than he knows about India. I therefore, Sir, request that this Bill may be opposed by all the parties in this House. But while I am against this Bill, I am not against the motion for the circulation of the Bill if it is necessary to find out what people think about it. I think myself it is unnecessary, but if it is considered necessary then we can try and find out whether there is really any evidence of the existence of this peril, whether Government is going to be overthrown, whether ordered society is going to be overthrown, whether Hindu and Muhammadan society is going to be overthrown. These are all things I have myself not seen yet. I am still a Hindu. My friends are still Mussalmans. I have not seen that they have been destroyed; and therefore, Sir, I would urge for all these reasons that this Bill is not at all a Bill which can deserve support from any quarter of this House, whatever may be one's opinion about Communism.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province: Nominated Non-Official): Sir, after hearing the very eloquent speech of the Honourable Member, who has just sat down, I think the House would like to hear the views of a man, who can only lay claim to a commonsense understanding. Sir, I have a certain amount of personal knowledge and a little experience of this Bolshevism or Communism. I will not go into the details of the sources from which I have got my knowledge or the experience that I have gained and should like to be as brief as possible. To my mind the question resolves itself into three issues. The first is, whether Bolshevism or Communism is an evil dangerous to society, religion and settled government; the second is, whether this evil exists in the country to any large or small extent, and the third is, whether it is necessary or desirable to legislate in order to put a stop to that evil, if evil it be, or whether the existing laws of the country are adequate enough to meet the situation. These are the only questions which to a layman like myself occur in the solution of this case.

Well, Sir, as regards the first issue, I believe most of the Members are acquainted with the literature issued on this subject, whether by Soviet Russia from Moscow, or by their opponents in Europe or America. Honourable Members would, I believe, have come across a good many books written on this subject in favour of and against this new gigantic propaganda of

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum]

Bolshevism, and I need not therefore go into the details of that. But fortunately or unfortunately, living as I do on the extreme border of India, I have come across people who have given me first-hand information of what is happening under the Bolshevist rule in Central Asia. As a matter of fact, a very wealthy merchant or rather the Treasurer of the late Emir of Bokhara, is a neighbour of mine and we have been living together at Abbottabad for the last three or four months. It is not only from him and the numerous messengers and friends that he is receiving from day to day from Central Asia, especially Bokhara, that my knowledge of the state of affairs in those parts is derived but I can also claim several other sources of knowledge on that subject.

Sir, the evils that are now prevalent in those regions under the Soviet Government bearing the name of Bolshevism or Communism are numerous. This is what this friend of mine, who owned large properties not only in Bohkara, but in Samarkand, Tashkent and several other parts of Russian Turkestan, tells me. He tells me, Sir, that it was only by a small letter that he received one evening, which he could not believe to be genuine at that time, that he was told to vacate his houses and leave them for the use of the Soviet Government. He perhaps hesitated to comply with those summary orders, and the result was that he and all his relations were deported without any trial or inquiry. He has told me that on many occasions orders were communicated to people not by any regular tribunals but only through people wandering about in the country whom you could never believe to be people connected with the Government of the country in any way. If a man is unfortunately a little methodical or expects such letters to be coming to him in a more formal way, he at once suffers for it in a terrible way. As an instance of Bolshevik highhandedness, Soviet troops coming to a village will either go to what we call "Hujrahs" or guest houses in villages ; and if there is no guest house in a village they will seek shelter under the roof of mosques. They have no great respect for places of worship and, if they were to come to India, they would perhaps use temples and places of that sort. No excuse needs to be given by them for using these places of worship ! As regards property, well, I am not prepared to believe all that I have heard from these sources about their destructive policy ; but surely they want to distribute wealth more proportionately than might possibly suit some of our friends who are of capitalistic ideas. But if we approve of these ideas in Communist Russia on the plea of necessity and proper distribution of wealth then why should we have any objection to the activities of robbers and looters in the country, if they are committing these things simply for the sake of filling their bellies ? If that is the idea, we should do away with all penal laws against theft, robbery and all acts of these sorts. But to an ordinary man like myself, it looks as if Bolshevism was only a recognised form of robbery going on in those countries. I will not touch the more delicate question of Government, but I thought there was no disagreement on the point that Bolshevism or Communism as it prevails at the present day, at least in Asiatic Russia under the Soviet Government, is the most abominable form of Government or organisation. Things may be a little different in European Russia, where our friends on the opposite Benches occasionally go and see things by themselves. But on the Asiatic side of Russia everything is very much disorganised and no civilised nation—and I think we Indians claim to be civilised—can approve of the system prevailing in those countries. Well, if I cannot express my feeling on this subject or communicate my knowledge of it in a more convincing way, it is due to my lack of command of the English language but personally I am perfectly certain that Bolshevism or Communism, as it prevails in these days in Central Asia, is the most destructive kind of organisation that has ever been set up.

4 P.M.

Mr. President (addressing the Government Benches) : Order, order, Honourable Members should not turn this Chamber into their office.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Communism, as it prevails in Central Asia, is the most abominable thing and must be guarded against as quickly and effectively as we can. Now, Sir, we take precautions against plague, cholera and other diseases, so no one will deny that it is more essential to set up a barrier against this contagious disease of Bolshevism or Communism. That is the first point.

The second question is, to what extent it exists inside and on the borders of India. I will not go to the seaside border but will confine my remarks to the land frontiers of India. I have some knowledge of them from a quarter of a century of my official life spent there. Even as early as 1919, when the third Afghan War broke out, I happened to capture some literature which showed that even then Bolshevik propaganda was carried on in India. I am disclosing no secrets when I say this and I wonder why the Home Member did not refer to this when making out his case. As a matter of fact, part of the trouble of 1919 was due to some such element existing in the country. I know this from my personal knowledge. As regards my own part of the frontier or tribal territory, there is a place called Chamarkand. That is an outpost of the Bolshevist propaganda. There is no secret about it. Everybody who knows anything about the frontier, knows that there is a strong outpost of Bolsheviks at Chamarkand. As a matter of fact I came in possession of a copy of a pamphlet which was practically a constitution for the provisional government of India ! It was written in Persian. It described how the Bolshevists would enrich themselves of the fabulous wealth which, according to them, existed in India. Some of my friends on the other side of the House may say that the country has been denuded of its wealth, but there are still stories of this fabulous wealth of India in circulation in Russia. The pamphlet explained how the money was to be divided and how the programme was to be carried out. Now, that outpost is not far away from the settled border of India. There are various other centres too. I am rather sorry to say that at one time we had a Bolshevik agency at a place called Chinglai about 6 miles from a village I own in the independent territory, and only some 15 to 20 miles from the place where I live. It began its work in right earnest and but for the pressure brought to bear upon it indirectly by the Local Administration, it would have flourished. As a matter of fact it did not flourish and the agent had to retire fast from that place. As students of geography may know, Chamarkand has got a direct line of communication through the Kunar and Bashgal Valleys, right up to Badakshan and Central Asia. There is a direct communication between that outpost and the central organisation of the Bolsheviks at Tashkend and some other places thereabout. These are the visible signs of the movement coming in the direction of India. Any Member of the House can verify the facts for himself. I do not know much about Mr. Spratt or Mr. So-and-So coming to India from the seaside.

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.]

What I am afraid of is about these open valleys leading straight to Central Asia, which are not well guarded except for the vigilance of the Afghan Government in some places. Hundreds and thousands of caravans are coming to India through these routes, and what is there to prevent the propagandists from sending out their emissaries with these caravans ? I will quote you another case. In 1920, during the non-co-operation days, a number of young men went to Russia and were at once taken in the propaganda college at Tashkend Some of those got tired of life there and came back and settled quietly in their country. They are the greatest antagonists of the Bolshevists now. I know of a man who was there for a couple of years but he was never informed as to where he would be sent or how his services were to be used, when he was trained. They simply told him that they were preparing him for work in India ! This man was eventually distrusted. It is rather difficult to convince the Bolsheviks whether a man is coming there as a real seeker after the truth of Bolshevism, or whether he is the spy of the British Government. So people going there even in good faith are occasionally made to suffer ! This unlucky man, who went there as a great believer in Bolshevism or Socialism, with a broadmindedness like that exhibited by some of my friends opposite, was suspected and suffered a lot and returned very much disgusted. He is an eye-witness to the horrors of Bolshevism. Well, to my mind, Sir, there is no doubt that the evil exists, not only in a small form but in great strength and to a very considerable extent : and that it is an evil which, as I have said before, we must be prepared to protect ourselves against.

As regards the desirability or undesirability of the proposed legislation, well, I think that if we are convinced of the evil nature of this movement and if we are also convinced of the existence of it to some extent, then what is the harm of legislating against it ? The only point which struck me was the one raised by my personal friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, in his speech, that the present law was adequate to deal with these cases. Sir, I am not a lawyer, and I have not studied the various regulations and laws on the subject, but even if they do exist, I do not see the harm of going into the matter and making sure whether there is anything now in the Bill which will be more useful than the existing laws of the country on the subject. To my mind, and I am open to correction—and I am not a lawyer, —the present laws deal with the persons concerned in a penal way, that is, some penalty is fixed for the violation of these laws or regulations. Perhaps the Government of India are not prepared to enforce penalties in these cases but simply want to get rid of these undesirables, and that may possibly be the object of this proposed legislation. But one thing struck me very much, when I was listening to the very eloquent speech of my friend Lala Lajpat Rai who is not in his seat now. He was against all laws of expulsions and internments and thinks of the sort. But these laws do exist in the country, Sir, and they exist in a very violent form and I can refer him, for instance, to section 36 of the Frontier Crimes Regulation, and to another Regulation according to which a resident of the country and a British subject can be expelled from his home within 48 hours and expelled beyond his own country. These laws do exist. If so, why should they grudge them as against the foreigner ? My friend has often said that circumstances and conditions prevailing in some places may justify the existence of these laws but, will he tell me, please, whether the conditions prevailing in the country do not justify the enactment of this law ?

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Can the Honourable Member substantiate his remark by referring to any speech of Lala Lajpat Rai that he has ever justified the retention of the Regulations in the North-West Frontier Province on the ground that the conditions in that province justify the same ?

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I will refer the Honourable Member to one of the speeches made by Lala Lajpat Rai—I think, on the occasion of the debate about the detenus of Bengal—when he supported the repeal of the Regulation, that there may be justification for this and there may be justification for that in the North-West Frontier Province, but there is no justification for that law in Bengal. That was the debate I was referring to. Sir, the circumstances are there, as I have said before. I mean that the circumstances are not less pressing in this case than they were in the other case. It is becoming a fashion to say that certain things are justified here but not justified there. Only this morning when a friend of mine said something about the unsafety of life and property on the border, my blood boiled. I said to myself, " Look at the peace and tranquillity prevailing there !" and still these people will put in all sorts of questions about the North-West Frontier Province. I am aware, Sir, that this is more or less a personal matter, but still it pains me that people who are so lukewarm about safeguarding the interests, the lives and the property of their own fellow-subjects should ever be so anxious about the interests and liberties of foreigners ! Well, Sir, as regards the foreigner, the law can only apply to two classes of people, either people from Central Asia, coming by these routes through the land borders, or people coming to India by sea from foreign countries such as Europe, America and various other places. I have no sympathy with those coming to India from the seaside (Laughter) ; because the more they are turned back, the greater the trouble will be which they will create for themselves and the Government. If the Government were to go against any international law, they will only be creating difficulties for themselves, and if they were to turn out any Labourites or other Britishers they will be coming to loggerheads with their own people !! Then Government were not able to keep the order of externment in the case of Mr. Horniman in force for long and they had to cancel that order and that gentleman has come back to India. Similarly, Mr. Spratt's case has created a stir in this country, and if Government were to send back to their homes men of that type, it will, I am sure, serve the purpose for which my friends opposite are fighting now. Let Government turn them back, let Government break an international law and let Government open the door for agitation in this way ; it will only serve the purpose of my friends over there Why should my friends object to legislation under the Government of India Act for this purpose ? It will give them wider powers, if the Act is interpreted in that way. That is one point. But as regards people coming to India from the borderland, these people are already liable to expulsion. I know that many undesirable people are sent back by the authorities on the frontier ; I do not know under what law, but they are sent back in practice, and I am not sorry to see them sent back because they are really a danger, if for nothing else, at least for smuggling charas which is becoming very cheap, and for possible propaganda, etc. So coming back to the point, I do not see why there should be any hesitation about legislating on this point. After all the Select Committee, to which the Bill is going to be referred, will see that this is not a superfluous law ; they will see how much of it is not already there in the existing laws of the country ; if they find anything extra as useful, they will recommend it for incorporation in the new Bill ; otherwise it will be only the Preamble to the Bill perhaps that will be left and nothing more. Well, some of my friends suggested the circulation of the Bill with a view to elicit public opinion on the same. I do not know what public opinion is wanted to be elicited on this subject. The public do not want to be disturbed by any Bolshevik movement. If it is explained to them by some expert lawyers that this Communism is going to bring them a share of the wealth of the capitalists, then they will of course vote against this Bill. It is the interpretation which is put upon the law which will encourage them to give their opinion one way or the other. It is really a question for expert lawyers, like my friend the late Advocate General of Madras, to explain to the people whether their liberties and privileges, liberty of conscience and of faith, will or will not be affected by this law. I think it was he or Lala Lajpat Rai, who said that the Bill is very badly worded and is of very wide application in its present form, but that defect can be remedied in the Select Committee and even the present laws are open to misuse or abuse by those who administer them. In short, Sir, all that I will say is that there is no harm in referring the Bill to a Select Committee for consideration.

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.]

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I am no admirer of Communism, nor am I one of those who think that India can benefit by the import of Communism from Russia. I, however, confess that, in spite of the various speeches that we have heard since this morning, I am not yet convinced of either the necessity or the justification for a Bill of the nature that is before the House, much less of the pressing urgency and the pressing hurry to see the Bill through immediately. Sir, the principle of the Bill, as I understand it, is to give the executive Government powers to get rid of non-Indian Communists from India without trial. I want the words " without trial " to be noted because I attach very great importance to those words.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do you require trial ?

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : If you do not want trial I wish you luck of it. Sir, I understand that the Honourable the Home Member has, by experience, found it necessary to deal with importations of this nature, from across the borders or from over the seas, without trial. I understand that he considers it to be in the interests of India that part of the information which may be available to the Government of India regarding some of these persons who come across to India should not be divulged. I personally am prepared to accept his statement, but what I feel is that in a case like that the Government of India have the power to deal with such undesirable persons and it is not necessary to ask this Legislature to give them any more powers. I know my Honourable friend from Calcutta, Mr. Arthur Moore, stated that the Government of India do not like to use Regulation III of 1818. May I ask if the danger is as serious as portrayed by the Honourable the Home Member in his opening speech, why do the Government of India hesitate to use Regulation III of 1818 in the case of Britishers and foreigners when they used it deliberately, only a few years back, in the case of Indians in Bengal ? If it be the intention of the Government of India to relieve themselves of the power given by Regulation III of 1818 on the ground that it is out of date and more or less primitive in nature, I personally am quite prepared to consider this Bill in the Select Committee. But, as long as the Government want to retain that Regulation, I feel that they want more powers from us of a nature most sweeping and, if I may say so, and as I hope to be able to prove later, of a most dangerous character bearing in mind the constitution of the Government of India at present. The question therefore, Sir, is, has the policy of Government that we are being asked to approve been put before us in full ? Does the Bill before the House indicate all that the Government of India ask or will ask us to do ? We are told, and my Honourable friends here have emphasised it, that this legislation is not to apply to Indians. My Honourable friends on this side have put certain questions, and I expected at least that when the Honourable the Foreign Secretary got up to speak—and he is the only Member from the official Benches who has spoken after the Honourable the Home Member—I thought that he at least would have given us some indication of what the intentions of the Government of India are regarding Indians who may take to this work of spreading Communism in this country as agents of Communists abroad. There can be, Sir, only three alternatives as regards the Government of India's policy in this connection. Either the Government of India have made up their minds to let Indians have this as a source of employment, considering that unemployment at present is so bad ; or they propose to deal with these Indians—I need not name them, many of my friends know them, especially the Home Member—under Regulation III of 1818 ; or, thirdly and lastly, they intend subsequently at Delhi or elsewhere to bring up legislation after this House has endorsed the principles which the Government of India want them to endorse by this Bill. I ask every Honourable Member who has spoken till now, including my Honourable friend Sir Abdul Qaiyum, to seriously consider whether he is prepared to commit this House to a policy which, when the Government of India want automatically to extend to Indians, few of them may like to give their assent to. Will they then be able to say that what they thought was good enough for the foreigner and the Britisher is too severe for the Indian ? And as Indians cannot be deported in any other country, Regulation III of 1818 which permits imprisonment without trial, would, the Executive will contend, be the only remedy.

Sir, I belong to that class and my constituency is one which is most interested in keeping Communism and Bolshevism out of India. I am one of those who, if I may criticise the Government of India regarding their policy in the last few months, feel that the Government of India have been unnecessarily halting, and, if I may say so, even weak-kneed. If Bolshevism and Communism be a live danger to India—and I propose to take the Honourable the Home Member at his word for that purpose, as I have not the proof nor the evidence before me which the Government have—if it has been as bad as the Honourable the Home Member makes it out to be, may I ask him whether the Government of India have till now taken any steps in this connection ? Is it, Sir, that they are afraid to apply Regulation III of 1818 to anybody but Indians ? Or is it that they want this House to be stampeded into doing something which Government may later on contend should be equally good for Indians? It is for this purpose, though Indian trade and industry want all the protection which Government can give them from Bolshevists and Communists, I as their representative, bearing in mind my full responsibility, say that we cannot consider a Bill of the nature which the Government have placed before us.

Sir, at the risk of a little repetition—and I will try to avoid it—I wish just to submit to the House my reading of clause 2 (a) and the danger that I see in it. It applies to any person who seeks to foment or utilise industrial or agrarian disputes or other disputes of a like nature with the direct object of subverting the authority of law or organised government in British India. I venture to ask every Honourable Member here to consider whether if they had passed this, shall I say, at the last Delhi Session, this would not or could not have been used against Mr. Vallabhai Patel in Bardoli. (Honourable Members: "No.") It could and in all probability would have been used. I have not the least doubt about it. If the Legislature had endorsed the principle underlying the Bill in reference to a foreigner or a Britisher, the executive would have said "We had your deliberate opinion about this. Here was an Indian to whom the law did not apply, but the exigencies demanded it and we have dealt with him in the only way open to us and that is under Regulation III of 1818".

Sir, we have been told that there is legislation of this sort and even of a more severe nature in some foreign countries. I may say at once, Sir, that I propose to accept the bona fides of every Honourable Member who has spoken on this subject in this House either in support of or against this Bill, and I am trying to weigh for myself which way the best interests of the country require one to vote. We are told that every country has got powers of this nature. I will accept that. The Honourable the Foreign Secretary says it is not as my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai said of the United States of America. I will accept the Honourable the Foreign Secretary's version. There is this difference, however, Sir. The countries which have been named are countries which have Governments responsible to them and Governments whom the respective Legislatures can remove if they felt that the sweeping powers thus vested on trust are misused. These arbitrary powers in such countries are quoted to us as precedents, Sir. We, however, have an irresponsible, irremoveable Government. We have a Government which either by themselves or on orders from across the waters have flouted the deliberate opinion of this House on even minor issues. To ask this House therefore to vest their irremoveable executive with powers of a nature which admits of no questioning once you give the power is, Sir, to say the least, asking us too much. Even that I will be prepared to consider if Government had not those powers. But they have the powers. We are told Government do not like to use them. Let them give them up. We will then consider vesting them with new powers. Every country ought to have powers of the nature that the Governments are to-day seeking; and this Government have them. What is it that is really worrying them and why do they come to us with an an incomplete plan telling us as if we are children, "This does not affect Indians; therefore you can pass this"? Surely, Sir, the popular side in the Assembly should have been credited by the Executive Government with a little more commonsense.

Sir, I am very nervous about the risk of wider application of this Bill beyond Communists, and this having been referred to by various speakers before me I do not propose to dwell on it. But I cannot understand the reason why the Government of India propose by this Bill to leave, shall I say, the profession of preaching Communism open to Indians. I wish to warn this House that these are reasons for caution rather than for rash and summary consideration of the Bill. As the Government of India have powers which they can exercise, I really wonder why the Government are opposed to circulation of this Bill. It is possible that the Provincial Governments may have a great deal of useful information to give. It is not as if the Government have no powers at all and are not able therefore to deal with the danger in the meantime. All that I understand the position to be is that Government say, "We have powers; we do not like to use Regulation III; we therefore want these fresh powers from you". My only reply to the Honourable the Home Member, anxious as I am for Bolsheviks and Communists to be kept out of India, is, you must take us into your fullest confidence and until you disclose to us your full policy we cannot possibly consider such a Bill.

We have been told, Sir, of the dangers of Communism entering India. May I ask whether Government have considered why and how Bolshevism happens to flourish in any country in the world? I suggest it to the Treasury Benches that it is the Government in India who prepare the soil for Communism in India (Hear, hear) and even fertilise it with their anti-Indian policies in various ways. One need only mention the extremely short-sighted and orthodox policy regarding military training for Indians and the currency and financial policy in India (Hear, hear), a policy which has ruined the cultivator, in whose name several colleagues of mine have pleaded for support to this Bill to-day; increasing unemployment amongst Indians, to which the Government continue to turn a deaf ear; increasing the poverty of the masses, increasing depression of trade, commerce, and industry, decreasing the purchasing power of the cultivator, which are all very sure causes for the discontent of the subject classes in India.

Communist tendencies are more foreign to India than to any other nation in the world. If the Government of India would lay down as their goal a contented India, then Communism dare not even peep in. Should the Government continue to treat India as the milch cow of England, the danger referred to by the Honourable the Home Member would continue to increase, despite any number of Bills of the nature before the House being passed by this Legislature. (Applause).

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Sir, this Bill is admittedly aimed at Communists and the spread of Communist doctrines in this country. It must equally be admitted that the Communists are not the only persons and Communist doctrines are not the only doctrines which are aimed at by this Bill. Sir, it is also true that the present industrial unrest has prompted the Government of India to introduce this Bill. Well, Sir, I am not a Communist, but to the extent to which Communism aims at substituting the Socialistic and the co-operative basis for the economic and the social structure of our society in the place of the capitalistic and competitive basis, Sir, I have strong sympathy with Communism. I also take part, though a very humble one, in certain activities connected with the industrial unrest.

It is true that even the Communists in India or perhaps outside may not like to class themselves with me, and I may also perhaps not like to class myself with them. I think it would have been much better if there had been someone in this House who called himself a Communist, in order that he should have been able to defend himself and his doctrine. I go still further. Some Communists advocate violence. But there may be some Communists who may not advocate violence. I therefore think that there ought to have been someone in this House who would accept the description given in clause 2 of this Bill as applicable to himself. Sir, I do not believe in the advocacy of force or violence. But I feel, Sir, that there are people who may not like to take an oath of non-violence because they know that they have sometimes to deal with people who do not believe in non-violence, but believe only in violence. Sir, clause 2 (a) of this Bill penalizes the advocacy of certain doctrines which do not necessarily involve the use of force or violence. For instance, the promotion of enmity or hatred between classes is included as one of the items in clause 2 (a). Certainly the promotion of hatred between classes does not require the use of force or violence, and moreover it is a phrase which can be applied to anyone who protests against the exploitation by capitalists of the working classes. Those people who take part in the labour movement do not care to promote hatred between classes. We do not hate any class, but we certainly hate the system by which society is divided into classes whose interests are in conflict with each other. Clause 2 (b) of this Bill deals with certain acts which need not necessarily involve the use of force or violence. Clause 2 (c) of this Bill penalizes membership of an association. I therefore think that, although I am not a Communist, it is not difficult for me to decide that the Bill must be opposed with all the force which the Members of this Assembly can command. It is a Bill which aims at holding certain doctrines and also against the expression of those doctrines. It also penalizes membership of an association. Well, Sir, I feel that if the Government of India wishes that industrial unrest in this country should not be exploited by Communists, they cannot do so by this Bill. It is easy to pass this Bill, but certainly you will not be able to get rid of the industrial unrest only because you pass this Bill and will be able to deport one or two English people out of this country. The industrial unrest is certainly not due to the presence of Communists in this country. It may be possible that those Communists who live in this country may exploit the industrial unrest. I would like to know what the Government of India have done to see that there will not be industrial unrest in this country. It is useless to try to apply remedies which will not remove the root cause. If you do not want the working classes in this country to imbibe Communist doctrines, the working classes in this country must be sure that their goal will be achieved not by holding Communist doctrines or by following Communist methods, but their aim can be achieved in this country by following the method of speedy evolution and by the method of negotiation and argument. Is the conduct of the Government of India and of the employers in this country such that the workers in this country can be sure that their goal, their ambition, can be achieved in this country by the method of negotiation, by the method of argument, and by holding doctrines which are not Communistic ? Well, Sir, in this matter I have got some experience, and with that experience I am not able to say that the Government and the employers have by their conduct shown that the method of argument and of negotiation will give to the workers what they want. I may give you some experience of my own. Three years ago Sir Clement Hindley, the Chief Commissioner of Railways, and the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway refused to meet me as the President of a conference held by the Great Indian Peninsula workers, on the ground that I was an outsider. Sir, the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, as my friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar has stated, was waiting for an Englishman named Mr. Bradley to appear with whom he would very willingly talk and negotiate. Was the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway thinking of the Englishman's monopoly, not only in the superior services in this country but in the service of trade unionism in this country ? I hold in my hand a letter which I received only two days ago in Simla. The letter is from the District Magistrate of Sholapur, which reads :

> " I have the honour to say that I regret that I cannot discuss the Sholapur Mill strike with the President of the Bombay Textile Union. As President you have no title to be heard in Sholapur affairs."

Sholapur is a town in India, and is in the Bombay Presidency, and I want to know why I have no title as President of the Bombay Textile Union to be heard by the District Magistrate of Sholapur. I feel, Sir, the District Magistrate of Sholapur is an Englishman and that is why he refused to discuss the question with me. Perhaps if it had been some Englishman, he would have been willing to discuss it with him. The District Magistrate would have been willing to negotiate with a man of his own colour and belonging to his own race. I ask the Government of India whether their attitude towards the Bardoli affair was such as to promote faith in the method of argument or in the method which the Times of India described as Bolshevik. What is the attitude of the Government of India towards labour problems ? Do they really show that by argument and by discussion, workers will able to secure improvement in their conditions ? I feel, Sir, that that is not my experience. In India, there is at present unemployment among the working classes. I am sure that the Honourable and gallant Baronet from Bombay will not deny that there is unemployment in this country. But the Government of India instead of passing measures to protect the working classes which are unemployed deny the very existence of unemployment in this country. I want to know, Sir, what the Government have done for the working classes. If a Communist tells the working classes that there is a method by which their distress could be remedied, by which the unemployment problem could be solved, why should he be prevented from doing so ? The Government of India are aware that the working classes in this country suffer during sickness. What are the Government of India doing ? The Government of India have now issued a circular on this subject which may take five years to fructify. Have not the working classes in this country, in big industries at least, suffered on account of unprovided old age ? What have the Government of India done in this respect ? What have the Government done to show to the working classes that by the method of discussion and by the method of argument the working classes will be provided for during their old age? I therefore feel that the conduct of the Government of India towards labour is not such as to produce in them a faith that the method of argument and the method of negotiation will succeed in this country. Moreover, if the working classes are to have faith in the method of argument and in the method of negotiations and not in the method of force, and violence or of direct action, then they must feel that their conditions will be improved and that the goal of their ambition will be achieved by the former and not by the latter. The working classes in this country are not willing to remain mere wage-slaves any longer, all through their lives and for all generations. They think that if the capitalist is necessary for an industry, the labourer and the wage-earner is as much necessary for it. They therefore want to be an equal factor in the industrial system and they want to have an equal share in the management and control of the industry. Is the conduct of the Government and of the employers such that the working class man can feel as we feel in politics that at least one day in his life he can have industrial self-government? Is the conduct of the Government and of the employers such that the working class man can feel that during his lifetime and before many generations are over he can become a free man and an equal partner with the capitalist in the management of the industry? Sir, the working class man has no hope to-day. The working classes like ourselves have also an ambition that they should be equal with any other men in this country. The working class man has a right to the possession of all the civic rights which others possess. Is the conduct of the Government in this country such that he may have faith that within his lifetime he can secure all the civic rights? If the working classes in this country cannot have this hope, then certainly by deporting one or two Englishmen, you are not going to stop the spread of Communist ideas in this country.

Mr. K. Ahmed: What about Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas and Mr. G. D. Birla?

Mr. N. M. Joshi: I make no difference between the European and Indian capitalists as officers of Government make a difference between English trade unionists and Indian trade unionists. (Hear, hear). It is said that through the influence of these Bolshevists, several strikes have taken place in this country. I feel, Sir, that that is an entire misconception. The Honourable Member Mr. Moore said that the strike at Jamshedpur was due to the influence of a Communist. I happen to know the people who are taking part in that strike. I know Mr. Homi not for one year but for several years. I can say that he is not a Communist. What about Lilloogh and the South Indian Railway strike? Sir, in both these strikes, there was an economic issue involved. Even the Government of India in reply to questions in this House stated very clearly that both these strikes were due to industrial issues. They have stated in this House very clearly that the Lilloogh dispute was due to the dismissal of some workmen at Lilloogh. The Government themselves will admit that the dispute on the South Indian Railway was due to the policy of retrenchment which the railway authorities followed there. I therefore feel, Sir, that it is wrong to assume that these Communists are at the bottom of all the strikes and disputes in India. If the Government think that by deporting a few Englishmen they are going to stop the spread of strikes in this country, as my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour would have us believe, then they are very much mistaken.

There is only one more word which I want to say in conclusion. My Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon said that this Bill intended among its other objects to save me from being killed by the Bolshevists or by the Communists.

Sir Victor Sassoon: Eliminated.

Mr. N. M. Joshi: Well, I will not conceal the fact that although I sometimes co-operate with people who are known as Communists, there are also occasions when I have my differences with them. We have sometimes friendly rivalry and competition, and sometimes the rivalry and the competition also become unfriendly. But, Sir, let me say that although we may have our differences, although there may be competition between these people who call themselves Communists and those people who like myself are not Communists, yet we do not wish that those people who may be called our rivals should be deported in order that our work may be easy and smooth. Moreover, I do not feel myself that by deporting those people who may be our rivals in the trade union movement our work will be made easier. I know what happens in politics and will happen in the labour movement. We who take part in the labour movement know that the deportation of Communists will not make our work easy. I have faith that the policy and the method which I am following in the labour movement is the right one, and my faith is that, if I continue and if others continue to carry on this movement on those lines and with that policy in view, we have no fear from the Communists even though they are left free by the Government. We wish that these Communists should have the same freedom which we have to preach their doctrines to the masses of this country because we have no fear that the Communist doctrines will succeed even in free competition with those doctrines which I hold and the policy which I follow. I therefore oppose this Bill.

5 P.M.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters (Member for Industries and Labour): Sir, if I intervene in this debate it is on account of some of the arguments which have been put forward by my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi and in some of the earlier speeches the general tone of which was to insinuate that the Bill which we are discussing to-day, and coupled with it possibly some clauses of another Bill for which I am responsible, are evidence that Government's policy towards labour is a policy which is hostile, antagonistic to labour, a policy dictated by capitalists. Now, Sir, I think it most important if we are to consider the Bill before us without prejudice that these misconceptions should be cleared away. I do not propose to discuss the clauses of the Trade Disputes Bill which are considered as having a repressive effect on labour and labour's aspirations because there will be a later opportunity to do so. I would only like to assure the House that there has been the greatest misrepresentation about those clauses, that they do not do what many of their supporters and many of their opponents have thought they do, that they are borrowed from the English law, a country in which the right of labour to combine in order to obtain fair terms of employment from their employers is as much recognised as the Magna Charta of which we heard the other day; and if we are copying that legislation we are in no way antagonistic to the claims of labour to indulge in legitimate combination or in legitimate strikes. We are not even aiming at sympathetic strikes. What we are aiming at is something much more insiduous and much more dangerous—the general strike. This Bill also is an attempt to save labour from being led away by anti-social and dangerous agitators into courses which must in the long run be to the disadvantage of labour itself and that is my main point. Both this Bill and the clauses of the other Bill are intended to safeguard both the public and labour, because if the general strike, if the sort of activity into which the agitators with whom this Bill deals would lead labour, if that fails, who will suffer by it? Labour. Who will lose employment as a result of it? Labour. Labour is the loser in all cases, and therefore I confidently assert—and it is no paradox—that it is in the interests of labour that we are bringing forward these proposals which are accused of being of a reactionary character. In India the danger is greater than in countries where trade unionism has had generations of experience and where men have learnt by experience the consequences of precipitate action. Out here labour has to some extent to be protected against itself. We really do desire to save the incipient labour union movement from being led away in spite of themselves by the activities of people whose aims are certainly not in the interests of labour.

Now, Sir, there is much which was said by Mr. Joshi with which I agree. I do not for a moment suppose or suggest that this Bill or the clauses of the Trade Disputes Bill are going to cure industrial unrest. I am not so foolish as that. If our policy consisted only of preventive measures it would be a policy which this House would justly criticise. The House has a right to demand a constructive policy. I agree too that the most fertile soil for the growth of Communism is economic discontent. I entirely agree that it is our duty both to prevent the dangers which we think we see coming and also put forward at the same time a positive policy for the improvement of the economic conditions of labour, and I would ask the House to believe that Government are fully alive to that aspect of the question. Those who have been in this House for the last five or six years will probably, if they think it over, realise what a great volume of labour legislation has been dealt with by this House, in which this House has played its part. There has been a complete revision of the Factories Act, the Mines Act, the Trades Union Bill, the Workmen's Compensation Bill and so on, and there are a large number of measures, some of them initiated at Geneva, which are under our active consideration. If we cannot move as fast as Mr. Joshi and his friends may like we may be open to criticism. We are open to suggestions for any means of improving our methods and speeding up our programme. But my point is this. Even if Mr. Joshi and his friends think we are too slow, it does not mean that there is no necessity for preventive action. If he thinks our positive programme is inadequate or delayed, still it is quite an independent question whether the powers which we are asking the House to give Government to-day are powers they should have or should not have. In my opinion you cannot obtain the atmosphere and the soil suitable for a positive and constructive policy until you remove these dangerous anti-social activities.

I do not propose, in order to prove my case that there is danger, to quote speeches which may have been delivered, which many people know were delivered in different parts of India during the recent strikes. I would only refer the House to one document, a document which was published in every newspaper in India about the 31st of August last—a manifesto from the headquarters of the Workers' and Peasants' Organisation in India. It is no secret document. It is a document which probably everyone has seen and that document, mentioning both this Bill and the Trade Disputes Bill, went on to advocate in the most open terms that labour in India should indulge in a general strike. Now, Sir, that is exactly my point. Labour in India is being misled, being misled into a policy which can only end in the defeat of labour and the injury of its interests; and we are entitled to protect labour from an organisation whose very name smacks of the spiritual home of which Sir Victor Sassoon spoke this morning.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: Is that being done by Indian agents or by British or foreign Communists?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters: I have not got the names of the executive of that organisation before me but I should be surprised if the Honourable Member did not find that some of the gentlemen on that executive come from outside India. However, I cannot prove that point here. Apart from that, my answer to his question is a remark which he himself made. He really gave the answer to his own question in the course of his speech when he asked why we were only dealing with British and foreign Communists and not with Indian Communists. He went on in the very next sentence to say, I have got it written down here, that Communism is entirely foreign to the spirit of this country. Well, if that is so, who is bringing it in, I should like to know? It is foreign to the spirit of the country, and the people who are leading away the more unsophisticated labourers and workers in India are these foreign Communists. And why? Because insignificant as these men are in their own country, when they come out here they are treated as the real genuine article and get double the attention paid to them in their own country.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas: The Honourable Member evidently thinks that it cannot be done by post and by reading literature; that no Indian can take it up by reading literature and preaching it afterwards to the labourers.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters: It does not interfere with my point at all. My first point is that the danger exists and my second point is that the danger is urgent; and the reason why it is urgent is because the Indian trades union movement and Indian industrial development is at a comparatively early stage and therefore, when we see this poison creeping in, it is our duty to act now and not later. What would you think of a doctor who, seeing his patient was suffering from blood poisoning, waits until the symptoms developed into those of a fatal disease? That is what this House or rather some Members of this House are asking us to do. What we wish to do is to act now because we see the danger and because we believe that this Bill will at any rate assist in preventing this danger spreading. I believe confidently that Mr. Joshi himself in his sober moments will realise that this Bill will help him and the cause which he has at heart far more than anything else can possibly do. When in Bombay, Mr. Joshi is struggling against Communist activities and we hope he will struggle successfully and we wish to give him all the help we can. But whatever happened in Sholapur—and I do not know anything of the incidents that happened there—he enjoys the entire confidence of Government here and we trust him. That is all I have to say to the House except to appeal to the House to treat this not as a party matter. It is a matter in which a House of experienced and intelligent men can form their own opinion as to whether the danger really exists or whether it does not ; and although it is too much to suppose that the labourers and working men can realise that what we propose is for their good, this House is able to take a wider view.

Mr. President : To-morrow being a non-official day, this debate must go over to Friday. This House now stands adjourned till to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 13th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 13th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. President : Mr. Jayakar.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Question No. 518†.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Will the Honourable Member put the question at a later stage ; I do not see my Honourable colleague.

Mr. President : The Honourable the Home Member will understand that this House and particularly the Chair are much inconvenienced if Honourable Members for Government are not present in the House to answer questions.

HAJ COMMITTEE.

519. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the suggestions of the local Haj Committees in all the provinces specially in Bombay are not followed by their Presidents, and specially in Bombay by the Commissioner of Police who is the President of the Committee there ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government are not aware that this is so. If the Honourable Member knows any specific cases and would communicate them to me, Government will gladly enquire into them.

‡520*—21*.

DISAFFECTION AMONG THE LICENSE HOLDERS ON RAILWAY STATIONS IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

522 Maulvi Mohammad Yakub : Is it a fact that there have recently been frequent changes of the holders of vending licences on the railway stations in the Moradabad Division of the East Indian Railway, and if so are Government aware that there is disaffection among the licence-holders in consequence thereof ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government are not acquainted with the position but will obtain the information for the Honourable Member from the Agent of the East Indian Railway.

NATURALISATION OF INDIANS IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

518. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many cases have occurred during the last 5 years where Indians have been denied rights of naturalization in America ?

‡For question No. 518, see after question No. 522.

†For answers to these questions, see at the end of the starred question list for the day.

(b) Have Government taken any steps, or if not, do they propose to take any steps, to enforce the rights of Indians in this connection ?

Sir Denys Bray : I apologise to you, Sir, and the Honourable Member.

(a) As far as Government are aware, about 30, fortunately a small proportion only of the total number.

(b) This unhappy business has engaged the close and continuous attention of the Government of India and His Majesty's Government and His Majesty's representatives in the United States from the outset. Its great difficulty arises from the fact that the ruling that an Indian is not, and has never been, eligible for American citizenship is the ruling of the Supreme Court. This renders it unfortunately impossible to do anything in the case of those who have already been denaturalised. As regards the much larger number who are still naturalised however, the position seems now accepted that a process in the Courts is required in each separate case before a certificate of naturalisation can be withdrawn or cancelled—a procedure which in the natural course and in the absence of any outside stimulus seems likely to check further cancellations.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What is the total number of Indians in America ?

Sir Denys Bray : I am afraid I could not give a reply.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : You have just said 30 out of a fairly large number. You must be in a position to tell us the total number.

Sir Denys Bray : Some hundreds.

†523*.

INTRODUCTION OF A BILL FOR THE INSTITUTION OF AN ALL-INDIA ACCOUNTANCY BOARD.

524. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the draft Bill for instituting an All-India Accountancy Board is now ready, and when Government expect to be able to introduce the same in the Legislative Assembly ?

(b) Are Government aware that the promises made in this behalf by the Honourable Member in charge from time to time have created expectations in the public mind, the fulfilment of which cannot be long delayed ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : A copy of a scheme which has been prepared and on which Local Governments have been asked to furnish their views after consultation with bodies or persons interested in the subject has been placed in the Library. The Government of India hope that the opinions of Local Governments will be received in time for them to be able to introduce legislation at the next Delhi Session.

ABSENCE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA FROM THE PEACE PACT CEREMONY IN PARIS.

525 Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the report published in the Indian Daily Mail, Bombay, on or about the 28th August 1928, sent by its London Correspondent with regard to the resentment felt in Indian quarters in London at the absence of the Indian High Commissioner as a signatory from the Peace Pact ceremony in Paris ?

†For question No. 523, see after question No. 550.

Sir Denys Bray : Yes, Sir. I would add this. In accordance with the procedure approved by the Imperial Conference the Treaty was signed separately on behalf of India as on behalf of each Dominion. India's constitutional position was thus safeguarded.

But there is also the further and more imaginative point emphasised in the Press, unfortunately after the event. When it was originally assumed that it would be most convenient for His Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to affix India's signature, it was not known that the Dominions intended to send their High Commissioners. When it became known, it was unfortunately too late to alter the arrangements.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I ask if the Government of India will convey to the Secretary of State that in future on such occasions India ought to be represented by the High Commissioner ?

Sir Denys Bray : Question and answer will of course be put before the Secretary of State.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Was the Government of India consulted by the Secretary of State regarding the question of the selection of India's representative ?

Sir Denys Bray : I am not prepared to answer that. I have gone rather beyond my usual sphere in answering the question already. But I am prepared to say that I am myself very sorry that my own imagination went temporarily asleep.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How many nations have signed this treaty ? Is it a fact that 39 of them have signed already ?

Sir Denys Bray : My impression is that a great many more than 39 have signed.

Mr. K. Ahmed : How many ?

Sir Denys Bray : I could not say.

GRANT OF PASSAGE AND ALLOWANCE TO MEMBERS OF INDIAN SERVICES DEPUTED OVERSEAS.

526. Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the rules governing the grant of passage and allowance to members of Indian Services deputed overseas ? Is any distinction observed in the matter between European and non-European members of the same rank and status and sent on identical work ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The relevant rule in the case of passages is that " a Local Government may sanction for any officer deputed out of India free return passages from India to the country in which the officer is deputed ". The Honourable Member will see that no distinction is made between European and non-European officers.

2. By the word " allowance " the Honourable Member presumably means total emoluments, including pay and allowances. Under Fundamental Rule 51, which regulates the pay of Government servants deputed out of India, an officer of non-Asiatic domicile is limited to two-thirds of the pay which he would draw were he on duty in India, while an officer of Indian domicile may have the two-thirds limit relaxed in his favour Such relaxations are frequent, and full pay has recently been allowed in the majority of cases where the deputation is for a comparatively short period.

3. No distinction of any kind is made between European and non-European officers in the travelling and compensatory allowances drawn in the country of deputation.

STEAMER FARES CHARGED TO HAJ PILGRIMS.

527. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that tickets are sold to the Hajis in Bombay during the Haj season at no fixed rate ? If it is correct, do Government propose to stop this practice ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative and to the second part in the negative.

FACILITIES FOR HAJIS ON BOARD PILGRIM SHIPS AND AT KAMARAN AND JEDDAH.

528. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact :

(1) that there is no latrine on all the decks of Haj pilgrims ships ?

(2) whether this arrangement does not inconvenience the Hajis during the monsoon season ?

(3) whether there is any arrangement for distributing fuel and water during the course of the journey from Bombay to Jeddah and back ?

(4) whether all the pilgrim ships carry qualified surgeons, assistants and nurses and whether the hospital on board the ship is at its bottom ?

(5) whether the doctor in charge looks after the convenience and health of the passengers on the first, second and third decks ?

(6) what facilities are given to the Hajis to carry their luggage from the steamers to the island of Kamaran where the Hajis are detained for 24 hours for medical examination and whether any sleeping and resting accommodation is available on that island during this transit ?

(7) whether there is any British hospital at Jeddah and what is its personnel ?

(8) whether there is any restaurant or stall on these steamers wherefrom food, fruit, and other provisions could be purchased by the Hajis during the course of their voyage ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Part (1). Latrines are in a convenient and accessible place on the upper deck. In the interests of sanitation they are not allowed either on between-decks or in the hold.

Part (2). Government are not aware that any inconvenience is caused by this arrangement.

Part (3). Yes. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to rules 32 and 33 of the rules contained in Appendix E. of the General Instructions for Pilgrims to the Hedjaz, a copy of which will be found in the Library.

Part (4). As regards the employment of medical officers and attendants to assist them the Honourable Member is referred to section 201 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act and rules 70 and 80 of the rules in the Appendix quoted in my reply to part (3) of the question. Hospital accommodation may be provided wherever it may be convenient.

Part (5). The medical officer is jointly responsible with the Master of the ship for the care of pilgrims on the voyage.

Part (6). Pilgrims who are required to land for disinfection at Kamaran take ashore their soiled linen and any portion of their personal effects or baggage which the sanitary authority may require them to. Government have no information as to the facilities that are afforded for carrying such luggage but enquiries will be made. As regards accommodation, pilgrims are ordinarily accommodated in mat huts but a limited amount of more substantial accommodation is available.

Part (7). A dispensary is maintained at Jeddah by the Government of India, its personnel being 1 assistant surgeon, 1 dispenser, 1 dispensary boy and 1 servant.

Part (8). A price list in Persian, Urdu and Gujrati of the articles of food offered for sale is put up for the information of pilgrims at the place where stores are sold.

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS.

529. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state by what law the public holidays in India are governed, and on what basis the holidays have been distributed to suit the various needs of the different communities of the Indian people ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Public holidays are declared by Local Governments under section 25 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, and are fixed at their discretion to suit the requirements of the Province from all points of view.

LOCATION OF THE OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POST OFFICES, CHITTAGONG DIVISION.

530. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state where the office of the Superintendent of Post Offices, Chittagong Division, is located ? Has the attention of Government been drawn to the fact that it requires expansion ? Have Government made any estimate for the same ? Was any other site near about the vicinity of the Chittagong Club once chosen for the office of the Superintendent and his quarters ? If so, why was that abandoned ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : Government has no information on the subject. A copy of the Honourable Member's question has been sent to the Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam.

RECRUITMENT OF STAFF FOR THE FENI-BELONIA AND CHITTAGONG-NAZIR HAT EXTENSIONS OF THE ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY.

531. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state how many new recruits have been engaged by the Assam Bengal Railway in connection with their Feni-Belonia extension and Chittagong-Nazir Hat extension and how many of them are Moslems ? Was any advertisement sent to the Press or anywhere else before the recruitment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Three new recruits have been engaged for the Feni-Belonia and Chittagong-Nazir Hat extensions and all of them are Hindus. All other staff engaged have had experience on the Assam Bengal Railway. With regard to the latter portion of the question the reply is in the negative.

QUALIFICATIONS AND SALARIES OF CHIEF MEDICAL OFFICERS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

532. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state what are the qualifications of the Chief Medical Officers on the State-managed Railways and what are their salaries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sending the Honourable Member a statement giving the information desired.

CHARGES AGAINST HEM CHANDRA DAS GUPTA, ESTABLISHMENT CLERK IN THE OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT TRAFFIC SUPERINTENDENT, ASSAM BENGAL RAILWAY, CHITTAGONG.

533. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the establishment clerk Hem Chandra Das Gupta of the office of the District Traffic Superintendent, Assam-Bengal Railway, Chittagong, was involved in many charges, and that two Assistant Traffic Superintendents enquired about those charges, which were substantially proved ? What punishment have the authorities of the Railway inflicted on him ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no knowledge of the facts. I must point out to the Honourable Member that the clerk in question is a servant of the Company and not of Government.

PREVENTIVE OFFICERS AT CHITTAGONG.

534. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state how many Preventive Officers there are now at Chittagong ? How many of them are Muslims, Indian Christians and Hindus ? Do Government propose to direct the customs authorities at Chittagong to recruit at least 45 per cent. of recruits from the people of the Muslim faith ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There are in all 20 officers in the Preventive establishment at Chittagong ; namely, one non-domiciled European, 14 Anglo-Indians or domiciled Europeans, 2 Hindus and 3 Muslims. The appointing authority has been instructed, when future recruitments are made, to give effect to the declared policy of Government that no single community should be given undue preponderance ; but Government are not prepared to prescribe any definite percentage for the recruitment of men from particular communities.

TOTAL SERVICE RENDERED IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT BY BABU A. N. RAY, DEPUTY POSTMASTER GENERAL, BENGAL AND ASSAM.

535. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the total service rendered in the Department by Babu A. N. Ray, Deputy Postmaster General attached to the Postmaster General's Office, Bengal, and the service rendered by him as clerk in the Postmaster General's Office, Bengal and Assam, Personal Assistant to the Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam, and Deputy Postmaster General attached to the office of the Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam ?

(b) Did he serve anywhere outside Bengal during his long service ? If so, for what period ?

(c) Is it a fact that he has been all along in the Postmaster General's Office, Bengal ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information asked for by the Honourable Member is as follows :

(a) Total service	about 30 years.
As clerk in the Postmaster-General's Office, Bengal and Assam	about 5 years.
As personal Assistant to the Postmaster-General, Bengal and Assam ..	about 16 years.
As Deputy Postmaster-General, Bengal and Assam	about 1 year.

(b) No.

(c) No. He was in the Director-General's office for nearly 5 years and in charge of a division for 1 year.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN SPECIFIED OFFICES.

536. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Superintendents, clerks, and other non-gazetted officers (Hindus, Moslems and other communities) in the office of the (a) Accountant General, Bengal, (b) Controller of Currency, including Paper Currency, (c) Pay and Accounts Office, Miscellaneous Central Departments, (d) Pay and Account Office Survey Calcutta, (e) Controller of Military Accounts, Presidency and Assam District, and (f) Examiner of Government Accounts ?

(2) If the number of Moslems is very meagre in these departments, will the Government be pleased to state what policy they desire to follow to redress this injustice to the Moslems ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

PAPERS SET FOR THE EXAMINATION FOR RECRUITMENT OF CLERICAL STAFF FOR THE OFFICE OF THE ACCOUNTANT GENERAL, BENGAL.

537. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state who is the authority responsible for setting examination papers for recruiting the clerical staff in the office of the Accountant General, Bengal, and who are the examiners of those papers ? Do they follow any system by which the names of the examinees could not be known or disclosed ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Enquiry is being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

AMALGAMATION OF GRADES I AND II CLERKS IN THE FOUR OFFICES IN CALCUTTA UNDER THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

538. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have received the report as stated by the Honourable Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour in his answer to my starred question No. 73 (b) and (c), dated 1st February, 1928 from the Controller of Printing and Stationery who was investigating into the nature of work and responsibilities of the clerks of the two grades I and II in the four offices in Calcutta under his control ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, do Government propose to amalgamate the two grades at an early date and give effect to it since its re-organisation in January, 1925 ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) Does not arise.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE FOUR OFFICES IN CALCUTTA UNDER THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

539. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of Superintendents, head assistants (senior and junior) and assistants in the four offices at Calcutta under the Controller of Printing and Stationery and the number of Musalmans in each grade?

(b) Is it a fact that there is not a single Moslem Superintendent and head assistant in the above offices ? If so, do Government propose to fill up future vacancies in these grades by direct recruitment or by special promotion of Moslems from the Department to make up the percentage ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information desired by the Honourable Member is being obtained and will be communicated to him in due course. As regards the promotion of Moslems to the grade of Superintendent or head assistant, the attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra on the 13th September 1927 to part (b) of Mr. Abdul Haye's starred question No. 975 in the Legislative Assembly.

APPOINTMENT OF HINDUS TO POSTS VACATED BY MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN SPECIFIED OFFICES.

540. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that Hindus were provided in the posts vacated by the following Moslem clerks of the offices mentioned against their names :

1. Maulvi Nazir Hosain Khondkar, B.A., clerk grade I, C. P. Branch, resigned in December, 1925 ;
2. Md. Shafi, clerk grade II, Calcutta Press, died in 1925 ;
3. Maulvi Abdul Rashid, B.A., clerk grade II, Central Forms-Store, transferred to the office of the A. G. Bengal in November 1926 ;

4. Maulvi Mohiuddin Ahmed, B.A., clerk grade I, Central Stationery Office, resigned in 1926 ;
5. Maulvi M. Rausan Ali, B.A., clerk grade I, Central Stationery Office, resigned in 1928 ;
6. Maulvi Farhad Husain, B.A., clerk, Controller of Purchase, resigned in July, 1928 ?

(b) Do the Government propose to increase the number of Moslems in the offices where the percentage of Moslems is already too small ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The accepted policy of Government in the matter of the appointment of members of minority communities in public offices is being observed in the offices in question. As this policy does not involve the filling of every post vacated by a Muslim by a member of the same community, Government do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by collecting the information asked for in part (a) of the question.

MEMORIAL SUBMITTED BY THE CLERKS OF THE FOUR OFFICES IN CALCUTTA UNDER THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

541. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the memorial that was under the consideration of the Head of the Department as stated by the Honourable Member in charge of the Industries and Labour in his reply to my starred question No. 72 (e), dated 1st February, 1928, has been submitted to the Government ?

(b) If the answer be in affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken to remove the grievances of the memorialists ?

(c) If the answer be in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state how long the Head of the Department will take to submit the memorial to Government ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) I am unable to say : but he has been asked to expedite its submission.

NUMBER OF POSTS SANCTIONED OR VACANT IN THE FOUR OFFICES IN CALCUTTA UNDER THE CONTROLLER OF PRINTING AND STATIONERY.

542. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of posts sanctioned or fallen vacant in the various grades in 1928 up to this time in the four offices in Calcutta under the Controller of Printing and Stationery and state the number of posts filled up by Moslems?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The information desired by the Honourable Member is being obtained and will be communicated to him in due course.

NUMBER OF MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE GOVERNMENT TEST HOUSE, ALIPORE ETC.

543. *Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 70 (b), dated 1st February 1928, will the Government be pleased to state the number of Musalmans in the Government Test House, Alipore, out of 57 superior posts and 33 inferior servants ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the temporary clerks on fixed pay or on time-scale of pay are entitled to the privilege of casual and privilege leave and whether their past services are counted if they are subsequently confirmed in those posts ?

(c) If the answer be in the affirmative, why were the ten clerks who were appointed in the posts (of which 8 were on a fixed salary of Rs. 25 and 2 on Rs. 30—80) sanctioned by the Department of Industries and Labour for the Calcutta Press, with effect from 1st October 1921 from the apprentices who were already in the Calcutta Press, deprived of all the privileges mentioned in (b) above ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) The number of Muslim staff employed at the Government Test House, Alipore, on the 1st September 1928, was as follows :—

Superior Staff	1
Inferior Servants	3

(b) Casual leave is not a recognised form of leave and is granted at the discretion of the head of an office. Government servants holding temporary posts are eligible for recognised leave when there is no extra expense to Government. If a temporary Government servant is, without interruption of duty, appointed substantively to a permanent post, his leave account is credited with the amount of leave which he would have earned by his previous duty if he had performed it while holding a permanent post substantively, and is debited with the amount of recognised leave actually taken while holding the temporary post.

(c) The information is being obtained and will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS AS CLERKS IN THE BRANCHES OF THE STATIONERY AND PRINTING DEPARTMENT IN CALCUTTA.

544. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 72 (a), dated 1st February 1928, will the Honourable Member be pleased to state whether the preliminary examinations are conducted after notification in the local newspapers or after consulting the Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan education, Bengal, to secure a sufficient number of qualified Muhammadan candidates ?

(b) If not, what is adopted in its stead ?

(c) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state the number of Muhammadan candidates who came out successful in the preliminary examinations held in 1926 and 1927 and how many of them have been provided up till now ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : (a) and (b). Applications are called for by public advertisement from candidates of all communities for appointment to the clerical posts in the Branches of the Stationery and Printing Department at Calcutta.

(c) Four in 1926 and 29 in 1927. Information regarding the number of successful Muslim candidates in 1926 and 1927, who have so far been provided with appointments, is being obtained and will be supplied to the Honourable Member separately.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE BRANCHES OF THE STATIONERY AND PRINTING DEPARTMENT IN CALCUTTA.

545. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 414 (a), dated 25th August 1927, when the Honourable Member said that out of 113 vacancies only 27 were offered to Muslims of whom 6 did not accept, will the Government be pleased to state whether these posts were again offered to other Muslims ; if not, why ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : It is not obligatory to offer posts refused by members of any community to members of the same community ; but I shall ascertain if any of the six posts was offered to a Muslim and shall see that the Honourable Member is informed.

TELEGRAPHIC CONNECTION BETWEEN NOAKHALI AND HATIYA AND THE SANDWIP ISLANDS.

546. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (a) Is it a fact that there is no telegraphic connection between Noakhali and Hatiya and the Sandwip Islands ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Megna River which runs between the above places is difficult to cross in consequence of its swift course ?

(c) If the answers to (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, are Government aware that the inhabitants of the above Islands are put to inconvenience in regard to their communication with other parts of the country ?

(d) Are Government prepared to take necessary steps to establish telegraphic connection between the places in question.

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

(d) The matter is under consideration.

NUMBER OF MUSLIM AND HINDU POSTAL CLERKS AND SUB-POSTMASTERS EMPLOYED UNDER THE POSTMASTERS, PESHAWAR AND ABBOTTABAD.

547. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) Is it a fact that the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, issued to his subordinate offices a general letter No. A.M.-516|12-27, dated the 22nd November 1927, on the subject of representation of minority communities and that these orders referred to fresh recruitment ?

(2) Will the Government be pleased to state the exact number of Muslim and Hindu postal clerks and sub-postmasters in the jurisdiction of the Postmasters, Peshawar and Abbottabad, on the 1st December 1927 ?

(3) Will the Government be pleased to state which of the two communities referred to in question 2 above was the minority community ?

(4) Will the Government be pleased to state the name of the postal clerks and probationers recruited there between the 1st December 1927 and the 31st July 1928 ?

(5) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the minority community was given its share according to the Director General's orders in the recruitment referred to in question (4) above and whether the third vacancy was given to a member of the minority community ?

(6) Will the Government be pleased to state what arrangements they propose to make to give a due proportion of communal representation in the Postal Department to Muslims forming 95 per cent. of the population in the North West Frontier Province ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : The facts are not quite as stated by the Honourable Member. The Director-General's letter referred to by him deals with the steps necessary for the prevention of the preponderance of any one class or community in the Department in his charge. The instructions are confined to cases of fresh recruitment.

Information on the other parts of the question is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

Mr. M. S. Aney : May I ask if Government is in any way committed to the principle of reservation of posts for majority communities on a population basis ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat his question ? I did not hear it.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is Government in any way committed to the principle of reservation of posts even for majority communities on a population basis as clause 6 of the question seems to suggest ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : That is a matter of opinion.

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : No, Sir.

RESTRICTION OF THE RECRUITMENT OF CLERKS IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT TO THE REVENUE DIVISION TO WHICH THE CANDIDATES PERMANENTLY BELONG.

548. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) With reference to the Director General's reply to question No. 38 of the last Delhi Session, will the Government be pleased to state whether recruitment of clerks in the Postal Department is restricted to the Revenue Division to which the candidates permanently belong ?

(2) Is it a fact that Amir Chand, a candidate in the Ludhiana Division, referred in the reply to question No. 38, was removed because he did not belong to the Revenue Division in which employed ?

(3) Is it a fact that Sohan Lal, a candidate, now reserve clerk, Peshawar, son of Mool Chand, retired draftsman of the Archæological Department, and a permanent resident of Roorkee (Saharanpur), was taken in by the Postmaster, Peshawar, in the Peshawar head office ?

(4) Will the Government be pleased to state what the permanent residence of Mr. Mool Chand, father of Sohan Lall, is ?

(5) If Sohan Lal does not belong to the North West Frontier Revenue Division, do Government propose to take action similar to that taken in the case of Amir Chand referred to in question 2 above and direct the Postmaster, Peshawar, not to violate orders in this behalf ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (1) Yes, that is the policy ordinarily followed.

Information regarding the other parts of the question is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

MEMBERSHIP OF POLITICAL ASSOCIATIONS BY GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

549. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) Will the Government be pleased to state if the Revenue Commissioner, North-West Frontier Province, received a communication, dated the 29th May 1928, from Samundar Khan, Secretary of a Muslim Association, Peshawar Cantonment ?

(2) Is it a fact that the said communication contained proceedings of a meeting of the said Association, dated the 27th May 1928 ?

(3) Is it a fact that no Government servant can hold office of a political association according to the Government Servants' Conduct Rules ?

(4) Will the Government be pleased to ascertain and intimate whether Kanshi Ram, a clerk of the Peshawar Post Office, is the Secretary of the local Arya Samaj and whether Jewan Lall, another clerk, is associated with the local Hindu Sabha, and if so, do they propose to take suitable action in the matter ?

Sir Denys Bray : (1), (2) and (3). Yes, Sir.

(4) I understand that Kanshi Ram is not the Secretary of the local Arya Samaj. Jewan Lall is associated, but not closely, with the local Hindu Sabha, which is a non-political body. Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST NAND LAL KHERA, A CLERK OF THE POST OFFICE, PESHAWAR.

550. Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim : (1) Is it a fact that Nand Lal Khera, a clerk of the Peshawar Post Office, was involved in a case of loss of an insured letter on account of his being alleged to have written a letter containing information about the offender ?

(2) Is it a fact that the said Nand Lall took leave on the plea of sickness and conducted the case against him in a court at Mianwali ?

(3) Is it a fact that the said Nand Lall was convicted by the lower court and then the information reached the Postmaster, Peshawar, who placed him under suspension ?

(4) Is it a fact that the said official was acquitted by the appellate court and the Postmaster reinstated him in his post ?

(5) Will the Government be pleased to state if the particulars of the case, the suspension of the official and his reinstatement, were reported by the Postmaster, Peshawar, to the Postmaster General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle ; and if not, why not ?

(6) Was the Postmaster, Peshawar, competent to reinstate the official ?

The Honourable Mr. A. C. McWatters : Government have no information.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Will you kindly permit me, Sir, to put my question ? I was unavoidably absent at the time my question was called.

(Mr. President signified assent.)

RETENTION BY OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE OF THEIR HONORARY RANK AFTER RETIREMENT, ETC.

523. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to give an assurance that the provisions contained in the Indian Territorial Bill as passed during the last Delhi Session will be given effect to in time for the next training camps for the Indian Territorial Force, to be held in January and February 1929 ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state if they will permit officers of the Indian Territorial Force at present holding Honorary King's Commissions to retain their honorary rank, if they decide to resign from the Force, consequent on the application of the new rules ?

(c) Are Government prepared to equalise, as far as possible, the status of officers in the Territorial Forces with that of the officers in the Army in India Reserve of Officers, by granting to the former privileges similar to those enjoyed by the latter in regard to retaining fees, travelling allowances, equipment, etc. ?

(d) In view of the fact that under the provisions of the new Bill a retaining fee is to be paid to the non-commissioned officers and sepoys of the Indian Territorial Forces, do Government propose to consider the desirability of the payment of a bonus to those non-commissioned officers and sepoys who have completed six years or more of service in the Indian Territorial Forces under the old system ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) Officers holding Honorary King's Commissions will be permitted to retain their honorary rank if they continue to serve. Retention of rank after retirement is not ordinarily permitted unless an officer has had 15 years' service.

(c) No, Sir. The officers of the Territorial Force and of the Auxiliary Force (India) on the one hand serve under conditions entirely different from those of officers of the Army in India Reserve of Officers on the other. The conditions of service of officers of the Indian Territorial Force and the Auxiliary Force (India) have, however, been assimilated as far as possible.

(d) The Honourable Member is misinformed. The new Bill makes no provision for a retaining fee, and the remaining part of the question does not therefore arise.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT OWING TO THE ABSENCE OF THE QUESTIONER, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

REFUSAL OF THE AGENT TO GRANT CARD PASSES TO THE OFFICE-BEARERS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY UNION AT MORADABAD.

520. *Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (1) Is it a fact that the Agent, East Indian Railway, has refused :

(a) to grant card passes to the office-bearers of the East Indian Railway Union, Moradabad ;

(b) to grant special casual leave and passes to members of the Union attending its meetings ; and

(c) to publish the fact of his recognition of the Union in the East Indian Railway Weekly Gazette and to supply the Union with a copy of the Gazette ?

(2) Do Government propose to take the necessary steps to remedy this defect ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (1) (a) Card or other passes are not granted to the office-bearers of this or other Unions on the East Indian Railway who are not railway employees.

(b) Members of Unions who are railway employees are allowed any leave or passes they may be entitled to by the terms of their railway service, but no special leave or passes are allowed.

(c) I understand that no statement of relations of the Agent with this Union has been published in the East Indian Railway Weekly Gazette, which is purely a railway publication containing working instructions. For the same reason a copy of this Gazette is not supplied either to the Union or to any outside body.

(2) No. The action of the Agent with regard to leave and passes is in accordance with the policy of Government.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF THE QUARTERS OF THE INDIAN STAFF OF THE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND SECTION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

521. *Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Are Government aware of

(1) the deplorable condition of the quarters of the Indian staff of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section ;

(2) the consequent loss of property to the staff ;

(3) the want of repairs to these quarters ; and

(4) the repeated representations made by these employees ?

(b) Do Government propose to take early steps to remedy this condition ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No report to this effect has been received by the Railway Board, but they are sending a copy of the Honourable Member's question to the Agent, East Indian Railway, in order that he may consider whether any action is necessary.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST RAILWAY OFFICIALS IN CONNECTION WITH THE ACCIDENT BETWEEN HAYAGHAT AND KISHUNPUR ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

347. Khan Bahadur Sarfaraz Hussain Khan : (a) In view of the serious allegations made against certain railway officers in connection with the railway accident between Hayaghat and Kishunpur on the Bengal and North-Western Railway (vide question No. 101 and Government reply in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council on the 9th March 1928), will Government please state if the allegations made in clauses (c), (d), (e), (f) and (g) are true ?

(b) If true, wholly or partially, will Government please state if they have taken or propose to take action against the offending railway officers ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The answer is in the negative but the evacuation of the wounded might have been done more efficiently.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to part (d) of question No. 168 asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh in this Assembly on the 4th September 1928. Government do not propose to take any other action.

ABOLITION OF THE EXPORT DUTY ON RAW HIDES.

348. Mr. Muhammad Rafique : Will the Government be pleased to supply information on the following points :

(a) If replies in connection with the proposed abolition of the duty on the export of raw hides, to which reference was made by the Honourable Member (Commerce) in his speech at the last Session while speaking on the export duty, have been received from the Governments of Bengal and the Punjab ?

(b) Have Government appointed an ad-hoc Committee to consider this question ? If so, who are the members ?

(c) If the Committee is not appointed, when do the Government propose to appoint the Committee ?

(d) Do Government propose to give effect to the recommendations of the Committee in the next year's Budget ?

(e) Will the Government lay on the table copies of the letters received from the Provincial Governments in this connection ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) and (e). Copies of the replies received will be placed in the Library.

(b), (c) and (d). The position of Government will be explained when the Honourable Member moves his Resolution on the subject on the 18th instant.

GRIEVANCES OF THE CLERKS AND PODDARS OF THE CALCUTTA CURRENCY OFFICE.

349. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the grievances of the Calcutta currency clerks and poddars published in the Hitabadi of the 29th June 1928 and 3rd August 1928, the Forward of the 24th May 1928, 21st July 1928 and 27th July 1928, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika of the 17th July 1928 and 1st August 1928 ?

(b) Have Government made any enquiry into the various grievances referred to therein ?

(c) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the result of such enquiry ?

(d) If not, do Government propose to enquire into the grievances of the poddars and clerks of the Calcutta Currency Office and arrange for such redress as Government deems fit and proper ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) and (d). The grievances relate to the following matters :

(i) recovery of leave allowances paid some years ago ;

(ii) reduction of establishment ; and

(iii) an incident in the Coin Section of the Currency Office.

As regards (i), Government have decided to waive recovery from the individuals to whom excess payments were made. With regard to (ii), the position is that, as work had fallen off in certain directions, the sanctioned staff had to be redistributed. The position regarding (iii) is explained in the letter from the Controller of the Currency to the Labour Intelligence Officer, Bengal, dated the 15th August 1928, a copy of which I will give to the Honourable Member. Things have quietened down and work is proceeding smoothly as usual.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Leader of the House) : Sir, with your permission, I should like to make a statement of the probable course of business during the next week. Much depends on the progress made to-morrow with the debate on the Public Safety Bill. On yesterday's list, seven Bills were placed below the Public Safety Bill and these Bills have already been placed on to-morrow's list. Any business on to-morrow's list which is not completed on that day will be taken up on Monday, and if not completed will be taken on Wednesday of next week. In addition to these Bills it is hoped to make progress with the Trade Disputes Bill, on which a motion will be made for the appointment of a Select Committee, with the Dangerous Drugs Bill, on which a motion will be made for circulation, and on the Workmen's Compensation (Amendment) Bill, on which a motion will also be made for circulation. It is also expected to introduce a Bill to amend the Patents and Designs Act. The Insurance Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, will be ready for the consideration motion, which will probably be moved on Wednesday, the 19th.

In addition, supplementary estimates will be put down for Wednesday, the 19th, and notice has also been given for the election of a fresh panel from whom members will be nominated to serve on the Standing Committee to advise on the subjects dealt with in the Department of Commerce. A motion for that purpose will be put down for Wednesday, the 19th. There is a further motion to appoint a Committee to review the separation of railway finance.

THE RESERVATION OF THE COASTAL TRAFFIC OF INDIA BILL.

Mr. President : The House will now proceed to the legislative business. The first business is the motion that Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji's Bill to reserve the coastal traffic of India to Indian vessels be referred to a Select Committee. I am grateful to the European Group in this House for giving me notice that they propose, at the last stage when the Bill is about to be passed and when the final motion is made, to raise a point of order that this Bill is ultra vires of this Legislature.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill to reserve the Coastal Traffic of India to Indian vessels be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Pandit Motilal Nehru, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee, U. Tok Kyi, Lala Lajpat Rai, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. M. S. Aney, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum, Sir James Simpson, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 10th February, 1929, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be six.

Sir, in moving this motion, I speak, and I hope not without justification, with the fullest confidence that this motion will be passed by this House. What is this motion ? It is the logical and inevitable step which follows from the motion which this House passed last Session at Delhi when it allowed the Bill to go forward for the purpose of eliciting public opinion thereon. It is no doubt true that the Government could say at this stage that though they received opinions, yet they did not want to examine them at all. I hope the Government will not adopt that course.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What are the reasons for that attitude of Government ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : You will presently know the reasons when the Honourable the Commerce Member speaks on the subject. The other course open to us is to go forward with the motion that I have placed before the House and to take the Bill on to the Select Committee, where all these opinions that we have received—over 100 in number—would be sifted, examined and analysed in order that the Bill may be perfected. This, Sir, is a motion which I do not see how it would become any one in this House to oppose, especially after fact that in the Delhi Session we invited the opinions of public associations and organisations and of the different Local Governments on the matter. How is it possible for Government now to say that this motion should not be made ? The Honourable Sir George Rainy said in the Delhi Session that the Government hoped that the Local Governments would examine this Bill from the point of view of their coastal trade. Having invited the Local Governments to put before the Central Government and before the public their views on the reservation of coastal traffic, how is it possible, I ask, for Government to oppose this motion for the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee ?

Sir, so far as the question of coastal reservation is concerned, it has been one which has been before the House and the country at large for a very long number of years, particularly since the formation of the new Legislatures. It was in the very first Assembly, Sir, that Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer, who as we are all aware was a tower of strength to the non-official Benches during the period that he was a Member in this House and whose great interest in this matter of an Indian Mercantile Marine—I take this opportunity to acknowledge with thanks—moved a Resolution that a Committee should be appointed by the Government of India to consider the various means by which the Indian mercantile marine could be developed. Among the terms of reference was this question of coastal reservation. This Committee, Sir, I should like to draw the attention of the House, was not one selected by us, but it was a Committee nominated by Government themselves. It was a Committee on which I certainly admit that the Government tried to make as fair nominations as they possibly could. But, Sir, it appears that they are now sorry that the nomination of members on that Committee was, unlike the other Committees, a fair one, because, Sir, the treatment they have meted out to this Committee and its report is—I would not use a stronger word—scandalous. The personnel of this Committee was one of the best that the Government could secure. It was presided over by Captain (now Sir) Edward Headlam, Director of the Royal Indian Marine, and an expert on the subject of mercantile marine. Sir John Byles was specially called for from London in his capacity as a naval architect and special nautical adviser to the India Office. The British vested interests in the world of shipping were very skilfully represented on that Committee by Sir Arthur Froom. So far as Indian interests were concerned, I gladly acknowledge that the very best men from our public and commercial life were taken. We had Mr. (now Sir) Lalubhai Samaldas, Mr. Jadu Nath Roy to represent commercial interests, and last but not the least Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar, to represent the Central Legislature. So splendid being the composition of this Committee and as I will presently show so fair being their report, did it become the Government of India to take months and months before they examined the decisions and challenged the recommendations of this Committee ? So far as I remember, Sir, not even an ordinary " thank you " was vouchsafed to this Committee. Why is it so ? What was the crime, what was the offence committed by this Committee ? The crime was that they recommended the reservation of the coastal traffic of India for Indian vessels, in order that the Indian mercantile marine might be developed. That much, Sir, with regard to the composition of the Committee and the mean treatment which has been meted out to the report of the Committee by the Government of India. Sir, as I said before, the personnel of the Committee was one which inspired confidence and, so far as British interests are concerned, they were very well represented by Sir Arthur Froom.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must not repeat himself.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : No, Sir, except where I think it leads to emphasis. The personnel of this Committee was very satisfactory. The work of this Committee also was very satisfactory. This Committee examined a large number of witnesses and in all the Indian ports they toured they had the benefit of a strong body of expert advice of Captain Sir Edward Headlam, Sir John Byles and the commercial opinion of Indians and Europeans as represented by the other members. This being so, I feel, Sir, that the attempts that have been made in this House particularly to belittle the achievement of this Committee deserve and call for very strong protest. It has been said in this House by no less a Member than the late Commerce Member of the Government of India that this Committee did not examine the economic effects of their recommendations as regards reservation of the coastal traffic for Indian vessels. Just think of it, Sir. A Committee with three business men and even Sir John Byles is a bit of a business man, as I happen to know him, these three business men, it is said, did not know their business. The scores of Indian associations that put their views before this Committee did not know their business. The Indian commercial Chambers did not know their business. They did not know what they wanted when they came and told the Committee that they wanted coastal reservation for their benefit. The shippers of India did not know what they wanted when they told the Committee that reservation was the only method by which any genuine attempt to develop the mercantile marine could be made. The representatives of Indian States and the representatives of consumers, all these have asked for coastal reservation. How does it behove the Government of India to say that the country has not been brought in touch with the economic questions involved in the problem of coastal reservation ? It seems to me, Sir, that this economic question or rather the argument that the economic question was not properly examined by the Committee is merely brought in by the Government to justify the inexcusable delay they made in giving expression to their own opinion on the coastal reservation principle as recommended by the Committee. The Committee reported in 1924 and the country was not made aware of the opinions of the Government of India on those recommendations until 1926. I do not believe that two years and more are required to study the recommendations of the Committee. The House is aware that, when it suits the Government, they expedite the enactment of legislation based on recommendations of Committees. As regards the recommendations of a number of Committees, the Government have expedited their legislation. But here of course the Committee had recommended a principle which is essentially in the interests of Indian shipping ; and because the Government of India stand there in their strong array to buttress British interests they sit tight on this report as long as they can. Then they came out with their arguments whose fallacies I will presently show.

Sir, the present motion affords an opportunity for all parties in this House to express a definite opinion on this subject. It has been said in the course of the many opinions that have been received on the Bill that there are associations and people who are in favour of the object of the Bill, but they do not seem to agree with the methods recommended by the Bill. But, Sir, these gentlemen have stopped short at that. If they had been really serious, if they had the interests of India at heart they would have said, " Do not follow the coastal reservation method : follow some other method which we suggest ". They could have elaborated their points. What have they done so far ? They have only said that this thing will not do and they have nothing better to suggest. That is what I find from the recorded opinions of those who have very equivocally supported the objects of the Bill for developing the Indian mercantile marine but opposed the methods recommended by the Bill. After all, Sir, the Bill seeks, and I think rightly, to try and develop Indian shipping in a manner by which the economic interests of the whole country will be served. (An Honourable Member : " Question ? ") The question always emanates from people who are here to conserve foreign interests, who are here to conserve, or as our learned leader, Lala Lajpat Rai, pointed out yesterday, to exploit and to get the best out of the economic life-blood of this country, to fatten and grow rich at our cost, and when we make a most modest demand, to come out here and stand here like sticks in the mud which would not allow any progress to be made. Sir, this motion is an acid test, particularly with regard to those who pretend to have some solicitude for our economic welfare and yet are intent upon conserving their own interests. After this motion is moved, it will not do with any honesty to say that you approve of the desire often expressed to develop Indian shipping but you regret you cannot approve of this measure. Why, Sir ? Because the whole country, the whole of Indian India is supporting the principle underlying the Bill and it is this principle underlying the Bill which is being opposed tooth and nail by the foreign exploiters of this country and by the Government behind whom they are entrenched. This motion provides an opportunity for those gentlemen who want to vindicate their faith and their honesty in this matter to do so by supporting the motion, because as I said before, what does this motion seek ? Merely to sift, to analyse and examine and thereby to improve where necessary the Bill before us. It will not do for any one to oppose this motion and say that he very much appreciates and is looking forward to the day when India will have a mercantile marine worthy of her greatness in the past. No, Sir. We do not any longer want any platitudes and praises regarding our past. We have had plenty of it before. Sir, that reminds me of a learned man who once said that when Englishmen or rather Britishers in Dominions and in Colonies hark back to the ancient days of glory of the Dominion and of the colony, all that they intend is that the nationals of that Colony or Dominion should continue to look back to the past while the admiring gentlemen are very busy filling their pockets in the present. We do not want any such tactics being continued to be adopted in this country. Let us have it frankly stated here that they are opposed to the whole idea of the development of an Indian mercantile marine. Let them say that Britain serves India so well, that British ships serve India so well, that they do not think it in the economic interests of India to attempt to develop an Indian mercantile marine. If they say so, then we know where they stand and where we stand. But if they propose to say nice things about us and also express very fine hopes with regard to our future, I think it is up to them, in order to show their honesty of purpose, that they should allow this motion to go through and take, whatever steps they propose to, at the consideration stage of the Bill. Sir, it is because we on this side of the House have nothing to fear from the very thorough examination to which the Bill will be subjected in the Select Committee that I have made this motion. Am I to understand that the critics of the Bill feel that they are so weak, that their cause is weak that they are afraid of the analysis of facts and arguments that will take place in the Select Committee ? Is it because in your heart of hearts you know that you have no case that you are afraid to come forward and to support this motion ? If it is not I fail to see any proper ground, particularly after this House has invited the opinions of the whole of the Indian public and the opinions of the European public, after having got the opinions from so many Governments, so many associations and so many individuals on this Bill, for the House to say that we do not want to look at these opinions, because, Sir, as we all know, those opinions can only be seriously considered in the calm atmosphere of the Select Committee. But, Sir, this is an issue on which the opponents of the Bill might prefer to show their strength, to show the great strength that they are given by the Government of India, at some of the later stages of the Bill. For example, I find that in the organ of British capitalistic interests entrenched in this country, the Capital of Calcutta, the writer who is well known under the name of " Ditcher " says.....

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Who is " Ditcher " ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I do not know but I am surprised hat Sir Victor Sassoon does not know who the writer in the Capital is. who writes under the name of " Ditcher ".

Sir Victor Sassoon : Who is he ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I do not know who he is, but ' Ditcher " is his nom de plume.

Sir, this is what " Ditcher " writes in the Capital :

" Mr. Haji returns to the charge this week, as confident as ever, that his essay n legislation is equitable, businesslike and advantageous in the economic interests of this country. The brutal truth is that on such an issue argument is subordinate to power. The Legislative Assembly may pass Mr. Haji's Bill, but it is highly improbable that it will reach the Statute-book unless and until India attains Dominion status."

This outspoken and flagrant confession gives us a thorough idea of the mentality of the gentlemen opposite who oppose even the very modest motion that I have made upon the very modest measure to develop the participation of Indian owned ships in the coastal trade. But it is no doubt possible for the Honourable the Commerce Member to show himself a " Ditcher " in Simla. It is possible for him to repeat—I hope he will not—that argument is subordinate to power, but if he does so, if he, in the interests of the British commercial community in this country, tries to oppose this motion on the ground that sacred rights of property are threatened, that he owes a duty to the people that have put so much capital in this country, I ask him, does he not owe an equal duty, and even a greater one, to the people of this country ? Is he here to safeguard their interests or to develop ours ? Sir, I do not know what attitude the Honourable the Commerce Member is going to adopt in regard to this motion, but, Sir, if he becomes a rank partisan, and if he also makes out that argument is subordinate to power, I should like him to remember that when power is misused, and misused unendingly, as it has been for the last several years, with regard to shipping, even the proverbial worm will turn, and the country will doubtless rise against such an attitude of the Government of India.

Some of the principal issues in connection with the Bill, I will take your leave now to examine, before I put the motion standing in my name. So far as the general question of the development of an Indian mercantile marine is concerned, we have the opinion of Sir Charles Innes that :

" we recognise that it is perfectly legitimate, perfectly natural, that the people of India should desire to have a mercantile marine of their own."

This being so, I do not see how it is possible for any one to shut the door against an examination of one of the measures by which this perfectly legitimate, this perfectly natural, desire may be met in due course. Before I proceed any further, Sir, I would draw the attention of the House to one of the points which at one time was made as regards the competence of this House to embark upon a legislative measure of this character. It was stated that it was not possible for the Legislative Assmbly to pass a Bill of this character because it contravenes the relative clauses of the British Merchant Shipping Act. But, Sir, that argument will no longer hold water, and I must say that, so far as the Government Benches are concerned, they have very rightly and properly not attached any weight to it, because they know, though it is not so well known outside, that when my friend Mr. Neogy about three years ago sought to introduce this very Bill in the last Assembly.....

Mr. President : The point of order will be raised at the proper time by the European group in this House and it is not necessary for the Honourable Member to go into that question at all at this stage.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Sir, the reason why I allude to this point is this, that in my opinion it is not open to any Member of this House or to any people outside the House to challenge the competence of this House.

Mr. President : Order, order. I have already informed the Honourable Member and the House that I will give the fullest opportunity to them to discuss this point when it will be formally raised, and I would again ask the Honourable Member not to refer to it at this stage.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Very well, Sir. If the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown as available to us is to be challenged I will give my reply on the appropriate occasion.

I will leave that point now, Sir, and I will proceed to the point that this Bill is confiscatory in character, that this Bill seeks the expropriation of existing interests and the spoliation—I suppose they would say—of their property. Sir, this question of confiscation and expropriation in this connection has a very interesting history. This question of coastal reservation, as I said before, has been before the House and the country for the last six years in a certain definite form and no one raised this question of confiscation or expropriation either here or in the country or in the evidence before the Mercantile Marine Committee itself. The Mercantile Marine Committee itself did not raise this issue. The Honourable Sir Arthur Froom who, as I said before, was on this Committee on behalf of British interests did not raise this issue. Sir, this false issue was raised in this House, I am sorry to say, by the late Commerce Member of the Government of India when he took advantage of the absence from this House of a large majority of the elected Members on a constitutional issue and launched against the recommendations of the Mercantile Marine Committee an attack which was as baseless as it was unworthy of a Member of Government. Sir, with regard to that speech you will doubtless re-call the circumstances. The motion moved by Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer was that the recommendations of the Mercantile Marine Committee be accepted. You, Sir, moved that the motion of Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer was full of controversial points. At that time, Sir Charles Innes was anxious to go ahead with the scheme of nautical training, and it was understood by all parties in this House that nautical training was the issue before the House. It was the only issue that was put at the end of the discussion before the House ; but taking advantage of the fact that there were not enough gentlemen on the elected Benches of this House at that time, the late Commerce Member launched a very undignified attack upon the recommendations of this very competent Committee. And, Sir, the only ground on which he could sustain such an artificial structure of opposition was to talk big about this principle of property and expropriation.

Sir, so far as this question of expropriation is concerned, I should like to draw the attention of this House to the definition of that word. " Expropriation " has been defined as the " act of dispossessing the owner either wholly or to a limited extent of his property or proprietary rights ". What, Sir, is now " property " ? Property, according to the

[Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji.]

New Oxford Dictionary—and I am sure there is no more competent authority with regard to the English language ; I hope the Commerce Member will also accept that definition of property which I am going to give now—" property ", Sir, is defined as " the condition of being owned by or belonging to some person or persons, hence the owning of a thing, the holding of something as one's own ; the right, specially the exculsive right, to the possession, use or disposal of anything, usually of a tangible material ; ownership ; proprietorship ". (An Honourable Member of the European Group : " What about good will ? "). Sir, I have laid all my cards on the table. I have given you the full definitions of these words. I do not, like some of my Honourable friends, indulge in a half truth here and a half truth there. Good will in connection with British shipping in India is nothing but the crippling of Indian interests. Good will ! Sir, when during the last few decades of their monopoly of the coastal trade of this country they did not entertain a single Indian even as an apprentice upon their steamers. Good will ! indeed, Sir, when these British companies agreed only under pressure to take a few apprentices as occasion arose. Good will ! with regard to a shipping company whose representative said before the East Indian section of the London Chamber of Commerce that so far as the appointment of Indians on ships is concerned, so far as the employment of " Dufferin " cadets, for whom this country has spent so many lakhs of rupees is concerned, they must look to Indian companies for such employment. Good will ! to people who have bled India white and who have not disguised their dislike of Indians because of their colour.....

Sir Victor Sassoon : Will the Honourable Member now define the business term " good will " ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I am not of that confederacy to which my Honourable friend belongs. Even in this matter there is such a thing as morality. Anyway I have had my say in connection with this point of good will. I can give example after example to show that racial discrimination of a most poisonous kind was exercised against the employment of Indians and the development of Indian shipping in the coastal trade of India. But, Sir, to go back to our definition, if you are going to make out that this Bill will lead to expropriation you have to prove three things. You have to prove first of all that the Bill proposes to dispossess ; secondly, Sir, that it is dispossession of property ; and thirdly, Sir, that it is property which was rightly obtained. I am prepared to agree that for practical purposes this Bill will take away by degrees from the present interests their participation in the coastal trade of India. But the withdrawal of that participation which the Bill proposes is not confiscation. We do not propose that their ships should be confiscated to the State though I should very much like to do so in view of their history. Sir, most of you are, I dare say, aware of the ancient system in criminal law whereby the instrument of murder was forfeited to the State. Sir, these British ships are the instruments by which Indian ships have been strangled, and it would be in the fitness of things if the Government of India would see their way even to confiscate their ships. But, Sir, what I propose is a much milder thing. What I propose is that the participation of these ships should be gradually diminished until we have 100 per cent. Indianisation of the ships plying along the Indian coast.

I have yet to know that participation in a trade becomes the inherent right of the person participating in the trade. As I said before, participation in a trade is not a tangible material thing. It is intangible. It is under the control of the policy protective or otherwise, which the particular country might choose to adopt and it is not proper for gentlemen on the opposite side of this House to raise this issue of expropriation in this connection, because, Sir.....

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : No prescription.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I am glad my Honourable friend Mr. Aney has mentioned prescription. Sir, the foreigners, whether Britishers or others, can have with regard to the coastal trade no property or prescriptive right because, both according to international law and Imperial legislation on the subject, the coastal trade of India is a domestic preserve of this country and it is within the competence of this Legislature to pass any measures to regulate the coastal trade in any way it chooses, and even the Government of England cannot debar this House from doing so. Probably the gentlemen on the opposite side of the House are enamoured of themselves as owners of property in connection with ships on the coastal trade. I am reminded, Sir, of another kind of owners. Their position in this connection is that of usurpers, usurpers who taking advantage of the political conditions prevailing in this country prevented Indians from getting any foothold in this shipping business, usurpers who have done a lot of harm to this country, people careful only of their own interests, people who have given a wholly false bias, if I may say so, to the economies of the coastal trade of this country. We find, Sir, that the coastal trade of India to-day is concentrated in about 7 major ports. These foreign shipping companies, times without number, have adopted various means by which the proper economic methods of transport adopted to the requirements of the coastal trade have not been allowed to operate. It is, I hope the House will easily understand, to the benefit of large shipping companies to employ, in the trade, large-sized vessels which call at a few ports, because, under those conditions they make the highest profits. The reason why I oppose any further continuance of the present system in the coastal trade is, among others, that, as I said before, under the monopolistic auspices prevailing to-day smaller ships have been prevented from coming into existence. As soon as a small company comes into existence, a rate war is immediately put into operation by the foreign monopolists, and the small Indian shipowner is forced to lose a large sum of money and the small shipowner retires and then the big company continues to make its enormous profits as of old.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why don't you buy large ships ? " Jalabala ", " Jaladuta ", etc., will not do.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I will examine all those subjects, my friend, in the Select Committee, and I hope that for that purpose you will vote with me.

An Honourable Member : You have not taken him in the Select Committee.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Sir, before I finish this subject there is just one point I would like to touch upon and it is this ; if the word " expropriation " is going to be used in this connection, we have to remember the expropriation of Indians from this trade, if there is any property right about it, and not the expropriation of the British interests, because, as I said before, the coasting trade is a domestic preserve. No one outside has any right to come in our way if we suggest the method of coastal reservation or any other method by which the participation of Indian vessels in that trade can be encouraged.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why don't you include this clause in the Public Safety Bill ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I will now come to a point upon which a good deal has been said, and mention of which, if I remember aright, has been made in the minority report of Sir Arthur Froom in the Report of the Mercantile Marine Committee. It is said, Sir, that British capital showed pioneer courage, sacrifice and enterprise when it set out to supply the tonnage necessary for the coastal trade. The claim, Sir, I maintain is fictitious. It is not true, as some Provincial Governments —I believe the Government of Bengal for example,—have attempted to make out that the Britishers have been our teachers in connection with this business of Indian shipping. I do not want to hark back to our hoary past. I will leave it to gentlemen opposite. I come to as recent a date as the first few years of the last century when, Sir, as I shall presently show, India was in a position to give points to Great Britain even with regard to shipping and shipbuilding.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why do you buy your ships from England ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I am talking of 1811, Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed. In 1811, a French traveller, F. Baltzar Soloyns wrote :

"In ancient times the Indians excelled in the art of constructing vessels, and the present Hindus can in this still offer models to Europe—so much so that the English attentive to everything which relates to naval architecture have borrowed from the Hindus many improvements which they have adopted with success to their own shipping."

Mr. K Ahmed : How is it that you don't get any Hindu seamen or lascars now ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : This is not ancient history. This has reference to a period in our recent history before the British commercial interests allied with the political rulers of this country tried their best—I am sorry to say successfully—to put an end to this industry as well as to many other ancient industries as is familiar to all of you. Then, Sir :

"In 1802 the Admiralty ordered men-of-war for the King's Navy to be constructed at this spot (the Bombay Dockyard). They intended to have sent out an European builder, but the merits of Jamshetjee being made known to their lordships, they ordered him to continue as master-builder."

Sir, we were good master-builders, our ships used to navigate not only the coast of India but used to carry Indian produce to the distant corners of the world. We had men who could be officers and men who could be lascars. Under the British auspices during the last 70 years we have reached a stage when we can become only lascars and nothing better.

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Can you give us the percentage of Indian brigs ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Perhaps my Honourable friend, Colonel Crawford, can tell us.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : I asked for statistics of brigs.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Let my Honourable friend put the question to the Honourable Member for Commerce. I may make it clear that this Bill is intended to bring about the development of steam vessels in the coastal trade of India. (An Honourable Member : "Oh !") That is the rule.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Where would you build these ships ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Had it not been for this complete uprooting of Indian shipbuilding talent, an example of which I have given you just now, we would have built those ships in the Bombay or Calcutta dockyards. Sir, does it redound to our Government's glory that our ships have to be built outside India ? Whose is the humiliation ? I do not see what is the point of my Honourable friend's remark over there, where shall we build the ships ? Even in England they build ships wherever they choose to do so, and if the Government were prepared and if the Honourable Member from Bombay were prepared to put crores of money I would like to have a shipbuilding yard, say, in Calcutta.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Why should I ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I thought you were an Indian.

Sir Victor Sassoon : I am not.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : As Lalaji says, it is good to have such an admission from my Honourable friend that he is not an Indian. No doubt, I have made it clear that I suggest a further participation of Indian steam vessels in the coastal trade of this country. But I will leave that point now, I will leave the things that were done in India even as late as 100 years ago. But before I have done with the argument that the British are pioneers, that they are our teachers, I would like to say that out of the total annual earnings exceeding Rs. 10 crores from the coastal trade, the British shipowners get a large share. Out of the Rs. 50 crores or thereabouts of ships' earnings from the overseas trade of India, the British companies—who have a lion's share of the trade—have their proper share, so that if these British gentlemen have carried on business for the last 50, 60 or 70 years it is not to oblige us. They have made more money than they would have been allowed to make anywhere else. Sir, the British companies are trying to stick to this coastal trade with vehemence because they know that, under the present protective conditions throughout the world, India is the only place where they can have an untrammelled monopoly. I do not want to go into details, but I will say this that though in theory our coastal trade is free to all nations, to-day the permanent British vested interests have succeeded in keeping the other foreigners out, even the prosperous European countries that can afford to lose money to cut into the coastal trade of India. With regard to Indians, they know quite well that we cannot put up very big capital, and no sooner are attempts made to start with small ships than the rate war is begun and Indian enterprise is got out of the way. Sir, the present monopoly prevents any ships but its own from plying in the coastal trade of India and thereby it inflicts a very great economic injury upon this country. (Mr. K. Ahmed : "The Scindia Company wants to monopolise all the Rs. 10 crores"). One more point, Sir. It has been said, and that has a slight reference to expropriation,—it has been said in the speech of Sir Charles Innes that under present trade conditions 40 per cent.

[Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji.]

of the coastal tonnage in the slack season has got to go out to other places in order to maintain their tonnage employed. I do not admit that either the facts or figures are correct, but taking the figures of Sir Charles Innes at their face value, if the British tonnage goes outside of India for six months in the year, why cannot they remain outside throughout the year ? If you can employ your ships outside for six months in the year, how is it proper for you to say that by this Bill the property in your ships will be confiscated ? You are welcome to trade anywhere else. But as I said before, it is not possible to go elsewhere and that is why they are trying their utmost to keep the coastal trade to themselves as long as they can. I need not dilate much further on the pretence made of serving the interests of India. As I said before, I do not think that the interests of India have been served, and it is no good for these gentlemen to come and say that they are here for the benefit of this country. Let them come forward and say,—and then we will consider the problem on its merits—that this is our stake and this is what we want. And I was hoping that this very modest measure would appeal to them because even after the coastal trade is reserved they have got for themselves practically the whole of the overseas trade for years to come, the earnings of which amount to Rs. 50 crores a year. What are your objections to giving India Rs. 10 crores and taking Rs. 50 crores for yourselves at least for sometime to come ? The fact of the matter is that this consideration for India is a pose, and it has been staged so often that it no longer deceives us. Therefore I hope that in the discussion of this Bill speakers against the motion will come to the fundamental point of their opposition. And that fundamental point is their self-interest. Let them acknowledge it publicly as they have not done so far. Give up the pretence of serving the needs of India, of looking forward to the prosperity of India and of serving the interests of the tax-payers and the consumers of India. If they honestly tell us that in consideration of their having been here for many years their petition should be properly considered by this House, I am sure the House will not turn a deaf ear to them. But we do not want to hear of this solicitude for us which we know is not genuine, which is hypocritical.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Will the Honourable Member tell us something about solicitude for the consumers having regard to the probable future course of freights should this Bill become law ?

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I am glad the Honourable Leader of the European Group has raised this question of rates. I wanted to have it threshed out in the Select Committee but as it has been mentioned I will give a reply to it here and now. As I said before the coastal trade of this country is controlled by a monopoly. Have we ever known of a monopoly which has not kept rates at the highest possible level ? The gentlemen opposite are business men. They at least have no patriotism in business. Surely they have seen to it that while the monopoly lasts the rates are kept at a high level, and the rates have been really high. A large number of Indian witnesses before the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee stated that the present monopoly taxes them too much and they hoped that under the auspices of coastal reservation many Indian companies will be started which will give the suitable kind of tonnage that is required for the trade of India. For example, on the western coast of India, the requirements of trade demand smaller ships, say of a tonnage of 2,000 or 3,000 tons. That is what the merchants on the Malabar coast require. Until recently the whole of that trade was served or abused by the monopolistic concerns bringing once a month or twice huge ships of, say, 7,000 or 8,000 tons, calling at one or two ports and forcing the merchants to bear all the expenses of having to transport the cargo from one small port to the larger port. That much with regard to the rates. The history with regard to these rates has been bad. Indian witnesses, and if I mistake not one or two European witnesses—I am not sure of this—complained that the rates were very high. I do not want to give figures now. The rates charged here have been very high compared with the rates charged elsewhere. That is a matter of detail which can be threshed out in the Select Committee. (An Honourable Member : " Are you going to fix maximum rates ? ") That again I shall leave to the Select Committee. I am prepared to examine the subject with you and lay before you the facts and figures that I have got. I shall, Sir, with your permission refer to this matter of rates once again. I should like to draw attention to the fact that at this very moment about 8 or 10 small sized Indian-owned ships have begun to participate in the trade of the western coast of India, by providing suitable tonnage, by providing adequate services. What has the British monopoly done ? For the last 8 weeks or so they have started a rate war which, unless stopped in time, will, I know, root out these two or three companies owning about 8 small vessels in the course of the next six months or less. That is my reply with regard to the fixation of rates. That is why we want that we should have by the method of license which I propose such a control over the coastal ships, that a rate war will be unimaginable in future. We want that this British monopoly should be ended, but we do not want that an Indian monopoly should take its place. Should the time arise when an Indian monopoly, equally selfish as the present one, comes into being, this House will know how to deal with that monopoly.

I will now come, Sir, to the opinions that have been expressed in connection with this Bill. The opinions to which I propose to draw the attention of this House are opinions from bodies which have a real stake in the country, not the sort of stake that encourages the stake holders to keep on talking of property when they are really exploiting us. The opinions are those of people with a real stake in the country, because they are people born of the land, people that cannot fritter away their monies elsewhere, people that cannot think of any other country but this one, not like the pseudo-patriots we have got over there (referring to the European Benches). When they talk of patriotism, they really mean the land of their birth and not the land where they are merely birds of passage. I should in theory not very much like to pay any attention to the vested interests but as a practical man, if they would put their whole case and tell us the pace which will be comfortable to them, we shall consider it. I have myself suggested that the coastal reservation be completed in five years. Sir, in other countries coastal reservation has been completely effected within 6 months of the passing of the necessary legislation, but I do want to pay due consideration to the interests that exist, and if those interests think that by opposing this modest measure they can secure their ends, I can assure them that they are very much mistaken. With regard to this Bill, the only interests that matter are the interests of the people that have a real stake in this country, and I have got here a list of about 20 Indian Associations which have expressed their strong support of this Bill. Amongst them are the Indian Merchants' Chamber, the Native Share and Stock Brokers' Association, the Marwari Chamber of Commerce, and the Passengers' Traffic Relief Association of Bombay, the Ahmedabad Millowners Association, the Maharashtra Chamber of Commerce, the Southern Indian Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Chamber of Commerce of Tuticorin, the Madura Ramnad Chamber of Commerce, the Mysore Chamber of Commerce—I would particularly draw the attention of this House to this Chamber because it represents the Mercantile interests within an Indian State—the Bihar and Orissa Chamber of Commerce of Patna, the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, the Indian Chamber of Commerce of Calcutta, the Indian Merchants' Association of Chittagong, the Burmese Chamber of Commerce, the Burma Indian Chamber of Commerce, the United Provinces Chamber of Cawnpore, the Buyers' and Shippers' Chamber of Karachi, and Sir, last but not the least, the Millowners' Association of Bombay.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Hear, hear.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Sir, the Millowners' Association of Bombay, of which my Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon, is the direct representative in this House, in their letter dated the 16th of August say :

"My Committee are generally in sympathy with the object underlying the Bill...."

Sir Victor Sassoon : Hear, hear.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I am coming to the main thing :

"....which is to provide for the employment of Indian tonnage in the coastal traffic of India.. ."

Sir Victor Sassoon : Hear hear.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji :

"They are unanimously of the opinion that as laid down in the Preamble to the Bill it is expedient to provide for the rapid development of an Indian mercantile marine."

Sir, we have their approval to the Preamble and the object of the Bill to which my Honourable friend said, "Hear, hear". But, Sir, they go further. They give their approval to the principle underlying the Bill. The opinion reads, Sir :

"I am directed further to add that while my Committee accept the principle underlying Mr. Haji's Bill, they do not propose to examine its provisions in detail."

Sir, if the Association of which my Honourable friend is a direct representative in this House approves of the principle underlying the Bill,—and that is exactly my motion,—I want him to approve of the principle of this Bill. (Applause).

Sir Victor Sassoon : "The principle underlying the Bill".

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : He will not be faithful to his constituency if he votes against the motion that I am going to put before this House. (Applause).

Sir Victor Sassoon : "The principle underlying the Bill".

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Sir, I do not know what underlying and underhanding mean. (Laughter). Sir, I feel that he would not be playing fair with the members of his Committee if Sir Victor Sassoon, after this definite committal of his Association with regard to the principle of the Bill, opposes the motion that is before the House. Then his Association says, Sir, that they want the details examined very carefully by Government and the Indian Legislature in so far as the trade of this country is concerned. The Select Committee is just the place where to examine those details. Sir, this House will judge Sir Victor by his vote on this motion. (Applause). Sir, that much with regard to the Indian Associations that have expressed their views on this subject. I have particularly not mentioned the European Associations because we know that all of them are opposed to this Bill; and I shall not blame any one of the gentlemen opposite, except Sir Victor, if they vote against this motion, because the Chambers which the different Honourable gentlemen opposite represent definitely say that they are opposed to the whole thing tooth and nail. Therefore, even in the Opposition Lobby, I would welcome them, but the voting of Sir Victor in that Lobby would be a betrayal of his constituency. (Hear, hear).

Sir, now that I have come to the opinions of the opponents of the Bill, I am glad that it is bringing me towards the end of my remarks; I am glad that so far as the opponents of this Bill are concerned, most of the statements are of a similar character, Sir, the Indian Chambers examined the subject from different points of view, the Passengers Association, for example, state how the present-day humiliation sustained by Indians travelling as passengers on these foreign-owned ships would be obviated under national ownership and management, and, Sir, the conditions under which the deck passengers travel are well-known. They are so bad that time after time Government have appointed Committees to examine the conditions under which these people have to travel. That is why the Passengers' Association is looking forward to the day when the foreigners' participation in the coastal traffic of India will have gone from this country and made room for ships which will treat Indian passengers as decent human beings, which will provide the necessary facilities, facilities which, as everybody knows now, are quite inadequately provided to-day. As against these different Indian Associations speaking from different points of view, the Burmese Chamber of Commerce, looking at the subject from the point of view of Burma, the Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, looking at it from the point of view of the jute and the coal trade, the Bombay and Karachi Chambers also looking at the subject from their wholly individual points of view, what do the European Chambers do? Whether the opposition comes from Calcutta, Madras or Bombay it is based upon the arguments which are to be found in that notorious and ex parte speech of Sir Charles Innes to which I have already referred in the course of my remarks.

Mr. President : Order, order. I must appeal to the Honourable Member's sense of proportion and ask him to consider whether he should continue any longer.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I thank you, Sir, for your suggestion; if you will permit me, I will not take more than about five or seven minutes if I may. All these opinions of the European Associations are of one pattern; that pattern is provided by Sir Charles Innes' speech; and that speech has been so thoroughly exposed in the different statements that are now before the House, that as I am pressed for time I do not go into details regarding them except perhaps to refer to one or two points of particular importance. The poison of that speech, Sir, has not stopped with the European Associations ; it has travelled even to the Government Houses in Calcutta and Rangoon ; I shall not mention the other Government Houses for the time. But the two Governments are opposing this motion on practically the same grounds as those given by Sir Charles Innes in this House, and therefore to save time I will not refer to them, but I will come to a subject which is more pertinent from our Indian point of view. In this connection, Sir, I must say that I really do not much care what the different Governments think about this subject, because I find that so far as the opinions of the Ministers in the different Administrations are concerned, whenever they are individually mentioned, as in the case of the Punjab, I find from the volume of the opinions that all the Ministers in the Punjab who have expressed their opinions individually are in favour of the Bill. I dare say that if other Ministers elsewhere were free or were invited to pronounce their opinions in an individual capacity they would probably have favoured the Bill. But, Sir, I come to what is to me a more important section of the Indian community, the Press in this country. The whole of the Indian Press representing all schools of thought and different interests have supported this measure, each time looking at the subject from their own political, commercial or other point of view. If I may, Sir, I will briefly enumerate the support that this Bill has received at the hands of the Indian Press. The Young India of Mahatma Gandhi, the People of Lala Lajpat Rai, the Amrita Bazar Patrika, the Basumati, the Calcutta Commercial Gazette, the Forward, the Indian Finance of Calcutta, the Bombay Chronicle, the Indian Daily Mail, the Indian National Herald, the Gujerati, the Swarajya of Madras, the Muslim Outlook and the Tribune of Lahore, the Leader of Allahabad, the Sind Observer of Karachi and the Indian Daily Telegraph of Lucknow have all supported the Bill. That much, Sir, for the Indian Press. With regard to the European Press I have already referred to the last stage of die-hardism to which " Ditcher " of Capital was reduced when he said that argument is subordinate to power. As regards other English papers which to my knowledge have referred to the subject, I have to make mention of the Statesman of Calcutta, and Sir, I make that mention with the greater pleasure because I find that, though the Statesman thinks that the Bill is a wrong Bill, or, to quote its own words :

" the Bill was a bad Bill because it was barking up the wrong tree in preferring Indian capital to non-Indian capital."

That is a matter of opinion. But that paper proceeded to say that the Bill before the House was not discriminatory either racially or politically. That being so, I do not see how any gentleman opposite can honestly make the point that the Bill shows racial discrimination. To revert to Sir Charles Innes, in his speech on naval defence, he used the argument that because India had no Navy therefore India need have no mercantile navy. To that charge even we have a reply : that it was through the obstinacy of Government the Indian Navy Bill has not passed the Legislature. But we have their statement that the necessary readjustments in the Royal Indian Marine have been made, and for all practical purposes there is such a thing as an Indian Navy now. Very well, Sir, there being some sort of an Indian Navy, the demand for an Indian mercantile marine becomes the greater and more insistent. Sir Charles Innes referred.....

Mr. President : I very much regret that the Honourable Member must bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : I will wind up by saying that I have got an adequate reply in facts and figures to all the statements of Sir Charles Innes including the statement that the reservation principle when adopted in Chili, Algeria and Australia proved a failure. I will not go into details. But I may say with regard to Chili that immediately after the coastal trade was reserved there was such a superabundance of tonnage that rates went down ; and that is my reply to the gentleman opposite who said, what will happen to rates in case the coastal trade is reserved.

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji: Sir, may I have one word more ? I regret I have no time to refer to the arguments of the Honourable Sir George Rainy.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member does not seem anxious to put his motion.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Very well, Sir, before I conclude....

Mr. President : Order, order. The motion before the House is :

" That the Bill to reserve the Coastal Traffic of India to Indian vessels be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Pandit Motilal Nehru, Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta, Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty, Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra, Maulvi Mohammad Shafee, U. TokKyi, Lala Lajpat Rai, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. M. S. Aney, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum, Sir James Simpson and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before the 10th February 1929 and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be six."

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I beg to move, Sir, that the name of Mr. Tarit Bhusan Roy be added to the Select Committee.

The motion was adopted.

Sir James Simpson (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Mr. President, representing the interests that I do I feel sure the House will not expect me to welcome this Bill as a bride and hug it in my arms. I would like however to congratulate the Honourable mover not only on the sincere and honest speech he has just delivered but on the most magnificent piece of propaganda he has conducted in the country. He deserves praise and credit from the interests he is serving for that very excellent piece of work. He called his measure modest, very modest, and he has tricked it out and dressed it up ; but it does not attract me. I want to put it far from me. I am strongly opposed to it. But, Sir, that does not mean that the constituency I have the honour to represent here is opposed to India's interests. Far from it. We hold that India's interests must be the supreme category of policy, and we oppose this Bill because we believe, and we are convinced, that it is neither in the interests of India nor any of her peoples. In this propaganda, this skilful propaganda that the Honourable mover has conducted in the country, he has raised the slogan—India's rights versus British interests. As if, Sir, these two things were opposite and antagonistic. Sir, I maintain that India's rights and British interests are interdependent, are indivisible, one and the same. I wonder if the House realizes, Sir, to what height among the great trading nations of the world India has been raised by British and Indian co-operation. Sir, there are only four nations in the world that exceed India in annual volume of trade. Great Britain, the United States of America, Germany, France, India ; that is a godly place in the Sun and we all want India to maintain that place or surpass it. We want her glory to increase. But, Sir, legislation such as this endangers that co-operation, imperils and brings into jeopardy the whole delicate structure of commerce. If you are going to endanger the co-operation of over 100 years by racial and discriminatory legislation such as this against shipping to-day, and against anything else you like to-morrow—India's glory cannot increase. It will diminish until you will only be able to write one word over India's agriculture, commerce and industry,—Ichabod—" the glory is departed ". Sir, on a recent occasion my constituency issued a memorandum and I challenge the House to say that the whole tenour and spirit of that memorandum is not one of service for India and that India's interests have not been made the supreme category of policy. May I read an extract from a newspaper :

" In the memorandum already quoted ' the Associated Chambers of Commerce profess to be greatly concerned at the tendency shown by Indian politicians to introduce legislation discriminating against British commercial interests established in British India.' After reiterating the important part British capital has played in increasing the wealth of India, the Associated Chambers add ' the European firms in India, so far from desiring to hamper indigenous enterprise, welcome it as likely to increase the wealth of the country to the advantage of Indians and British alike. They do, however, claim on grounds of justice, and expediency, that the Indian Legislatures shall not be in a position to imperil the existence or development of any commercial or industrial interests established in India by legislation or taxation indicating discrimination of a racial or communal character'. The Chambers confine themselves to asking for ' national treatment ' only, for industries and commerce established in India, whether registered there or not."

Sir, with this Bill before us, that part of that memorandum was drafted. May I read another extract from a newspaper of the same date ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What paper ?

Sir James Simpson : Capital of the 16th August.

In the introduction to the All-parties' Report I find the comment :

" As regards European commerce, we cannot see why men who have put great sums of money into India should at all be nervous. It is inconceivable that there can be any discriminating legislation against any community doing business lawfully in India." (Applause).

Sir, that is all we ask for, all we want. Indian politicians who have put their signatures to that report—and I claim that the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition has done so—and those members who have not signed it but who have given their adherence to that report and whose word is as good as their bond must vote against this Bill. (Applause.) If they will do so, they will remove all feeling of nervousness " from men who have put great sums of money into India ".

But if they do not vote for this Bill, how can European Commerce be other than nervous ? It is the principle of discriminatory legislation that we fear. The parties behind this Bill have to-day cast their greedy eyes on shipping. To-morrow others may cast jealous eyes on tea, coffee, oil, anything else you like. (An Honourable Member : " Why not " ?) Where are you to stop (An Honourable Member : " Don't stop ".)

Now, Sir, if this principle is once admitted it would be idle to pretend that the Honourable Mover of this Bill has not succeeded in fixing a great gulf between British and Indian opinion. That to me, Sir, is a lamentable state of affairs, and bodes no good for the future of India if such legislation be persisted in. I oppose this Bill on two main standpoints. Let me deal with the first very briefly. This Bill seeks to take away from the British a right they have always thought they possessed. I wave aside all juridical definitions and I claim to be a British Indian National of long residence, a citizen entitled to and in possession of the franchise, a subject of the King-Emperor of India, and that it is not competent for any of my fellow-subjects to discriminate against me. Surely after more than a century of residence and of pioneer work and labour and service in India, the British have attained the right of adoption. As the Commerce Member knows and some of us on these Benches know, having had it drummed into us in our youth, adoption is an act whereby we are received into the number and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of the soil. I claim that right and all these privileges, and again I quote from the All-Parties' Report :

" It is inconceivable that there can be any discriminating legislation against any community doing business lawfully in India."

We ask no favour, no special privileges, only for equal rights. No more, but, Sir, we will accept no less.

To come to my second standpoint. We believe this Bill to be a bad Bill, an inherently bad Bill in itself, impracticable and unworkable. At the last debate in Delhi in March last my distinguished predecessor, Sir Walter Willson, used these words :

" What I feel is the principal danger to-day is not what I am so often hearing in this House, namely, the exploitation of trade by vested interests as they are commonly called, but a different kind of exploitation of political feeling, of racial feeling and of patriotic feelings in the country, in order to transfer out of hands which have built up the existing trade from what it was years ago to what it is to-day, to transfer that trade into the hands of another single solitary firm at the expense of the shippers of the country. In the past Indian industries in Bombay and Bengal have been able to build themselves up in ordinary straight forward competition with the established interests of the British. The jute mills of Calcutta are owned by 70 per cent. of Indian shareholders to-day :

The cotton mills of Bombay have passed almost entirely into Indian hands, either by purchase or by fair competition and I deprecate as strongly as I can the attempt which is being made to expropriate existing interests by means of playing upon popular feeling and using the machinery of this Assembly for the purpose."

I stand by that statement of my distinguished predecessor, and I have behind me a united British public opinion as it has never been united before. The Honourable Mover may say the same perhaps of Indian public opinion, but not quite. In the two long papers of opinions that have been supplied to Honourable Members of this House there are some doubting and hesitating Indian opinions from the great ports of Bombay and Calcutta. The Honourable Mover has been very successful in fooling some people some of the time. I dare say he will even be able to fool some of the people all the time ; but, Sir, these papers show that he will not be able to fool all the people all the time—I mean the Indian people. There are some Indian opinions which hold that the period of five years in which the Bill would eliminate British shipping should be extended to ten years or even more, and moreover that instead of ousting all British shipping it will be better perhaps to be content with 50 per cent. than to take all the shipping. Perhaps they think that half a loaf is better than no bread. One Indian opinion goes the length of saying that " elimination is clearly impossible not even in fifty, let alone five years."

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Is that a Government official ?

Sir James Simpson : There is one notable Indian opinion not appearing in these papers nor even in that fine propaganda that my Honourable friend has issued. It seems that practically every Member of this House has got copies of that propaganda save me—me to whom it would have done most good—and I should like my Honourable friend to send me these copies having put his signature upon them, and I assure him I will preserve them as an interesting memento of a memorable debate. The notable Indian opinion I refer to is the opinion of one who might be called the grandfather of maritime aspirations in India—I refer to Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer. In the account of an interview appearing in a Madras paper about a month ago, Sir Sivaswamy is reported to have said :

" The most important aspect of the question from the point of view of India is how the reservation of coastal trade proposed by Mr. Haji's Bill will react on the shipping facilities available for the commerce of India. Whether Indian capital would readily come forward to step into the breach and make up for the withdrawal of ships belonging to the British and other foreign countries is a matter upon which, not being a financier, I am not able to express an opinion. I do not know whether it will be possible for Indian capital to provide all the necessary shipping within the time table of five years provided in the Bill. I have very serious doubts upon those points. Probably the difficulties arising from the lack of an adequate supply of Indian controlled ships may be met by extending the period of Mr. Haji's time table. I do not know whether Mr. Haji has dealt categorically with the various difficulties pointed out by Sir Charles Innes. I have been out of touch with the subject during the last two years and I have no recollection whether he has dealt with them or not. In any event it will not do to make light of the arguments of Sir Charles Innes and they must all be squarely faced and answered."

Sir, in my opinion, the arguments of Sir Charles Innes have not been squarely faced and answered, though, to put it mildly, a good deal of ink has been slung at him. If I were to confine myself to one opinion in these papers as epitomising the opposition to the Bill, I would stand by that of the Government of Burma. Let Honourable Members ponder over this extract :

" The Government of Burma make no doubt that it must increase for consumers either in India generally or over great parts of India the prices of such important commodities as salt, rice, kerosene oil. ..... Burma kerosene oil is burnt in the poorest households of India, and already India no longer grows enough rice for her own consumption. She imports more rice from Burma than she exports to other countries, and as her population increases, she will become more and more dependent on Burma for an essential foodstuff."

Sir, yesterday the lion of the Punjab thundered about the hunger that the millions of India were feeling. This Bill will not fill their bellies.

The only other extract in these papers in opposition to the Bill that I will trouble the House with is from Bombay and it ought to appeal to Honourable Members from Bengal who are jealous of the interests of their great coal trade.

" There is also the very large Calcutta coal traffic to be considered. This is mostly handled by steamers of the tramp class and its volume is such that any attempt to impose control of the nature suggested could not but involve sea transport difficulties which would constitute a most serious interference with the affairs of the very important Bengal coal trade. They refer principally to the shortage of tonnage that certainly would ensue after the initiation of freight rates which the elimination of tramp competition would doubtless bring about."

Sir, it is a weariness to the flesh to read the conflicting opinions contained in these two papers, one side holding that the Bill inevitably means higher costs of transport, fewer shipping facilities and that the food of the populace will become dearer, and the other side holding that there will be more ships and that freights will come down, forgetting in so saying or rather ignoring the fact that thereby the ships would never pay and that the last state of that industry would be worse than the first.

Sir, I have conceived it to be my duty to get away from these conflicting opinions and to supply to the House, from as authoritative a source as can be found, independent views on the fundamental principles underlying this Bill, and I think I have found what might help the House in the proceedings of a meeting held in Paris, a few years ago of the Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, at the time they were deliberating upon an historical survey of acts of flag discrimination. Let me read three short Resolutions :

" 1. Cheap and efficient transport depends upon the vessels of all flags which carry the goods and raw materials of commerce and their cargoes and passengers being treated by every country in all that concerns the use of the ports of that country and in all respects on a footing of equality with the vessels, cargo and passengers of that country.

2. The cost of every act which denies equality of treatment as between vessels of different flags being ultimately borne by the trading interests, the International Chamber of Commerce is deeply concerned in securing an international agreement which would ensure a real equality as between such vessels."

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : It applies to overseas trade only.

Sir James Simpson :

" 3. Any agreement which, while it seems to secure acceptance of this principle, admits of acts of a discriminatory character would be positively harmful and should not receive the signatures of the maritime countries. For the same reason, qualifications and reservations should be avoided."

Sir, to my way of thinking, the House cannot attach too much importance to the views of the International Chamber of Commerce particularly as these apply to countries which have to consider the protection of their own sea frontage and the maintenance of a mercantile marine as a second line of defence to their navy. No such considerations are applicable in the case of India. For very many years to come, India will not be in a position to dispense with the protection afforded by the British Navy. There is no use of the House blinking that fact. When an Indian naval force manned by Indians, and supported entirely by the Indian Exchequer is sufficient to cope with the entire protection of its own shores, without assistance from the British Navy, the claim for coastal reservation might have a certain amount of justification. But that day is far distant, and this Bill has no justification.

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty (Salem and Coimbatore cum North Arcot : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I am sorry to interrupt my Honourable friend. Can the Honourable Member give the example of any country in which a mercantile marine was developed after a navy was established ?

Sir James Simpson : This Bill, in my opinion, is just protection run mad. Indian politicians should not seek to launch the country upon an expensive Indian naval programme, while there is so much to do for the amelioration of her millions of people, in agriculture, banking, education, industry and many other ways.

Now, Sir, the first question to ask the promoters of this Bill is, have you counted the cost ? Can you deliver the goods, that is to say the ships within five years ? I make out that if the British companies are prevented from trading on the Indian coast about 100 Indian owned ships would be required to replace them. This would cost 12 crores of rupees. I do not say this cannot be done but I do say, judging from past experience, that it will not be done. In this connection let me refer to the reports of the Fiscal Commission and the External Capital Committee. The Commission stated :

" Capital in India is shy specially in regard to new industrial enterprise, nor is the Indian investor satisfied with the low rates of interest at which in normal times money can be borrowed in Europe."

Yet this Bill proposes to expel British capital. Let Honourable Members examine the recently issued report of the Indian Tariff Board regarding the grant of protection to the match industry. That is the highest possible Indian opinion and it is against any restrictive or discriminating measures upon " foreign " capital. Why ? Because it is not in the national interests. If these 12 crores of capital are not forthcoming—and I do not believe they will be—Indian shipping will be no further forward and all that will have been achieved will have been the creation of a general feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction on the part of the present shipowners catering for the trade. It would appear, however, that one member of the alleged monopolistic combine will not be averse to that state of affairs. I refer to the company of which the Honourable Mover of this Bill is a paid servant—the Scindia Steam Navigation Company—which I take it is the single solitary company referred to by my Honourable friend.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I say that that Company is a bad company.

Sir James Simpson : Perhaps the Bill would have smelled sweeter and the House would have preferred it to have been sponsored by less interested parties. I trust that the House fully realises that the Scindia Company are parties to the present coastal conference and quote rates, etc., in conjunction with the British companies. I hold in my hand a copy of their last balance sheet. They are not now doing too badly ; but it is common knowledge that they have written down half of their capital. Having become members of this so-called monopolistic combine, having become birds of a feather, surely it is a poor return that they should seek to kick out all the others and to control the trade entirely by themselves. Sir, it is an ill bird that files its ain nest. I am informed that half the ships they do sail on the coast, are British or foreign owned. I take it that the owners of these chartered ships make no effort to encourage Indian youths in their laudable desire to find careers at sea. It would be interesting to know, Sir, how many Indian deck officers this Company has on its steamers and how many they are training.

I would like to refer to another point in this controversy. We have constantly heard of the monetary drain amounting to crores per annum. The lion of the Punjab referred to it yesterday and the Honourable the Mover has repeated it to-day. I am no economist, Sir, but I know that payment for services rendered is no drain. I know that India is one of the poorest countries in the world. Many of her millions of inhabitants never see a silver coin during the course of a year ; but I also know that India imports crores of gold per annum ; last year 18 crores ; and that India is known as the sink of the precious metal. Perhaps the House will bear with me, Sir, while I attempt a rough analysis of expenditure of a coastal shipping company to see what difference it makes to the destination of the various payments made by the shipping company if the company is Indian instead of British or foreign ?

Shall we say that the following 7 heads cover the main expenditure of a shipping company ?

(1) Capital cost of ships.

(2) Capital cost of offices.

(3) Port dues, pilots, etc.

(4) Stores, maintenance, repairs, etc.

(5) Salaries of officers and crews.

(6) Salaries of office staff.

(7) Profits to shareholders.

As there is no shipbuilding industry in India, it is clear that the destination of payments on account of the capital cost of ships will be a foreign one, whether the company is Indian or foreign. Did we not see photographs in the papers of you, Sir, our revered President, launching in Glasgow last year a ship of the most beautiful name, Jalabala, daughter of the sea, for the Scindia Steam Navigation Company ? Is there a shipbuilding yard in India that could build a ship like that during the period of five years contemplated in the Bill ? The answer is in the negative. I fancy the Indian opinion already mentioned would say " not even in 50, let alone five years."

This is not a Bill to encourage Indian shipbuilding. Similarly, the destination of payments on account of item (2), the capital cost of offices, etc., will be the same in both cases.

It is clear, therefore, that the destination of the capital outlay of a coastal shipping company will be the same, whether the company is Indian or foreign. Payments on account of item (3), namely, port dues, etc., will obviously be made in India in either case. Similarly, as regards item (4), the destination of payments for stores, repairs, maintenance, etc., will be the same in either case. As regards items (5) and (6), namely, the payment of the personnel, the vast majority of the office staff and crews employed by foreign companies are Indian, and although an Indian company would probably employ no European staff in its offices, it would, I think, be compelled to employ European officers and engineers on its ships. In so far as an Indian company employed Indians instead of Europeans, the so-called drain would be lessened only by the amount which the European officers of a foreign company make remittances outside India, for they are paid in India and most of their expenses are incurred in India, and the surplus available for remittance to their own country is comparatively small. Finally, there is the item profits to shareholders. Assuming that all the shareholders of a foreign company are foreigners and that all the shareholders of an Indian company are Indians, there is a definite drain of the amount of profits paid to shareholders. But this represents only interest on capital invested, and as I have already tried to show it is doubtful if sufficient capital would be forthcoming in India to replace the capital now invested in the foreign coastal shipping companies.

When the facts are analysed in this manner, it is clear that it is absurd to talk of crores of loss to India on account of the coastal shipping being mainly in the hands of foreign companies. The net result of the substitution of Indian companies would be that the destination of the profits and the surplus earnings of a few officers would be India instead of a foreign country. In any case, such payments are merely made for services rendered, either in the form of supply of capital or in the form of direct personal service, and it is doubtful if these services could be rendered to India from an Indian source. Where therefore is the drain ? Sir, there is no drain.

May I crave the indulgence of the House for a few minutes longer, Sir, to examine a few extracts from the statement on this Bill sent by the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay ? I reckon that this is perhaps the most important contribution to the subject from the Indian point of view. I shall just read a few quotations and then I shall give you what I think the reply should be. The first quotation from that statement is :

"The fight to obtain for Indians equality of status as citizens in Dominions has nothing in common with the attempt to develop an Indian Mercantile Marine by means of the reservation of the coastal trade of India. Moreover, economic discrimination against non-nationals, particularly in a manner recognised by law, is a totally different proposition from the anti-Indian legislation intended to turn Indian colonials into helots of the Empire."

My reply is that I am not a non-national, and in any case I fail to see any difference between anti-Indian legislation in British colonies and anti-British legislation in India. The Chamber goes on :

"The first misstatement to which Sir Charles Innes seeks to give currency is that coastal reservation means expropriation. That this is a wrong statement is clear when we remember that the coastal reservation merely precludes non-national ships from trading on the coast, but it does not mean their confiscation."

Of course, the Bill does not mean expropriation of the ships ; but it certainly means, what is equally important, expropriation of the good will, and the earning power of the large British interests in the coastal trade who have through good years and bad years and by immense pioneer work built up this very coastal trade and have at all times met the peculiar requirements of that trade, and under all difficulties, kept up regular services in a most efficient manner. Yes, we could sail away with our ships in five years, but if you are legislating like this in other things we could not sail away with our tea gardens, or our coal mines, or our oil fields, or the railways or any other immoveable property we have bought and paid for. The principle of the Bill is confiscation of the deepest dye. Worse than anything any socialist Government in any part of the world would ever dream of.

About two months ago, the Labour Party in Great Britain published their programme. Dealing with the land, communications, transport and other "fundamental necessities" the labour programme says :

"With careful preparation, with the use of the best technical knowledge and managerial skill, and with due compensation to the persons affected : the Labour Party will vest their ownership in the nation and their administration in authorities acting on the nation's behalf."

Does this Bill offer due compensation to the persons affected ? Does it vest their ownership in the nation ? No, Sir. The spoliation would be for the benefit of the "single solitary firm", of which the Honourable Mover is the paid servant.

Mr. President : Order, order. I propose to adjourn now if the Honourable Member is not inconvenienced by that adjournment.

Sir James Simpson : If you can give me five minutes more. I shall pass over some of the extracts referred to in that statement and I shall only read this. Would you prefer me to continue after Lunch ?

Mr. President : The House stands adjourned till 2-45 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : I beg to move that the instructions given to the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus to present its Report within three days be withdrawn and that the Select Committee be instructed to present its Report by the 13th September, 1928.

The motion was adopted.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus.

THE RESERVATION OF THE COASTAL TRAFFIC OF INDIA BILL—contd.

Sir James Simpson : I thank you for your kindness and I thank the House for its indulgence. My only excuse for detaining the House is that this is a very serious matter. This Bill is the test case on which the whole fabric of British industries in India depends. I will for a very few moments continue the thread of my discourse. The Indian Merchants' Chamber of Bombay says that this Bill is intended to provide careers for Indian youths who have so far been kept out by British shipping companies on racial grounds. Sir, 90 per cent. of the personnel of steamers at present plying on the Indian coast are Indians. It is true that they do not occupy the executive positions but as soon as they possess the necessary qualifications the British coastal companies have promised Government to employ them. There is no intention to depart from this promise. That is not the British way. We play the game. The last quotation I shall make from this document is this :

"If normal rates of freight are to prevail in the coastal trade of India no time should be lost in abolishing the present foreign shipping monopoly in the Indian coastal waters."

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask the Honourable gentleman if he is interested in foreign shipping ?

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not willing to give way, it seems.

Sir James Simpson : Normal rates do prevail at present on the Indian coast. The various Indian shippers and other Associations have a very great deal to say on the regulation of rates. The inference from these remarks by the Bombay Merchants' Chamber is a slight on the ability of the various Indian shippers' and importers' associations to look after their own interests. Why ? Sir, in my own business at Coconada the other day I pointed out that a certain commodity could hardly bear the freight rate charged. The companies at once made a decent reduction. Sir, I have inquired diligently at every port on the Coromandel Coast and the Malabar Coast, and at the great ports of Bombay, Colombo, Calcutta, Karachi and Rangoon ; I have inquired of Indian merchants as well as British merchants, and all I can say is that this type of legislation is viewed with horror and dismay.

Sir, just one word more. Dispassionately analysed to the British way of thinking, the Bill boils itself down to the cupidity of Indian capitalists, shipowners or otherwise, desiring by the help of the Legislature, regardless of the general interests of the country, unfairly to capture a trade, which has never been closed to them in the past, but has been and is now as free and open to them as it is to British owners. The Bill does not encourage Indian shipbuilding, nor Indian officers nor Indian engineers but only provides ways and means for Indian capitalists to attempt to earn dividends, at the expense of the general community, by " importing " non-Indian vessels, buying them or chartering them, and working them by " foreign " officers and engineers, exactly as at present. It will only be the owners who will be changed ! !

In short, the country is to provide such Indian capitalists as the Bill is designed to benefit, with the support of the British Army and Navy, while they confiscate British shipping ! ! !

Sir, how much better it would be for India, if Indian politicians gave up their jealous attempts to supplant British effort and occupied themselves in straining every nerve to supplement it. Do not waste time in trying to dispossess the men in possession. Break new ground. You have the advantage in your superior knowledge of your own country and countrymen. Indian, as against British-managed, concerns already enjoy the large advantage of cheaper management, while, in a degree peculiarly exclusive to Indians, there lies open to them the immense potentiality of financial resources in India's enormous idle and unproductive wealth. With such advantages, Indian concerns have nothing to fear from British concerns ; rather, is it the reverse which is the truth. Legislation is no substitute, Sir, for enterprise, or endurance, or any other attributes you like, nor can it be properly employed as a remedy for the lack of any such attributes in any one section of the body politic to the detriment of any other possessing them.

Sir, no man should reap where he has not sown or gather where he has not strawed.

On behalf not only of the British in India but in the real and true interests of all the other peoples in India I strongly and strenuously oppose this Bill.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I utilized the luncheon interval in looking up certain books of reference so as to know something about the last speaker. The first was the Indian Year Book, and I turned to the section, " Who's Who " in India. I found that there is one Simpson there, only one, " Simpson, C.I.E., King's Police Medal ", and all that. I could not identify the gentleman, I suppose I must call him the Honourable gentleman in this House, with that description. So the next book that I looked up was Thacker's Indian Directory, and I found there were as many as 45 Simpsons enumerated there, and one of them is the head of a firm....

Mr. President : Order, order. What has that got to deal with the Bill ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I find that in this House these personal factors are brought in to lend support to one's argument. That is my excuse, Sir, and I have the precedent of the gentleman who has just sat down in my support. I find that one Sir James Simpson is the head of a firm called Gordon, Woodroffe & Co., who are the agents for as many as four or five shipping companies. Therefore, Sir, I thought to myself that if anybody ought not to have referred to my Honourable friend Mr. Haji as the paid servant of the Scindhia Steam Navigation Company, it was this particular gentleman.

Sir James Simpson : I am not the agent of any coastal company, and this Bill deals with the coastal trade.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, my Honourable friend is seeking to draw a distinction between coasting trade and overseas trade.

Sir James Simpson : Surely.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Well, this gentleman represents what could be better described as the conspiring European Chambers in India, and I dare say all the British shipping interests, including the Inchcape gang, are represented on that body. It is an open secret that that particular body has the practice of paying their representatives in the Central Legislature. Therefore, can we not take it that the maintenance of the Inchcape interest unaffected in India means bread and butter to the representative of this particular body ? Sir, it is an accident that Mr. Haji is fathering this Bill to-day. This particular Bill was given notice of by me three years back, as Mr. Haji has already said. I balloted for it not once, but twice, and it was only on the representations of the then Member in charge, Sir Charles Innes, that I agreed to postpone it. The Government did not know where they stood. They wanted to consult the legal officers of the Crown in England as to whether this measure was intra vires of this Legislature, and it was in order to oblige Government that I did not push through this measure at that time. Mr. Haji is in this House now, and I thought that he knew a good deal more about this question than I did. That is the only reason why I permitted my Honourable friend to take up this measure instead of introducing it myself in this House. Sir, we are here in our representative capacity ; whether we are personally paid servants of this man or that man, wherever we may make our living, has nothing to do with the consideration of the question which is before the House. I have been in this House during the last eight years, and I have never before listened to a disgraceful speech like the one that has been delivered, in its reference to Mr. Haji. Sir, the Honourable gentleman has finished with a feeling perroration. He says " We play the game ". I say, yes, the British game. And what is that game ? Let the spiritual fathers of the Honourable gentleman say what that game is with reference to this particular question. I have here an extract from a report of the Directors of the East India Company written on the 27th January 1801, in which they opposed the employment of Indian-built ships in the trade between England and India : and this is one of the many arguments used—I will not tire the House with the whole extract. This is what they said :

" No British heart would wish that any of the brave men who have merited so much of their country should be without bread whilst natives of the East brought the ships belonging to our own subjects into our own ports ; and considered therefore in a physical, moral and commercial and political view the apparent consequences of admitting these Indian sailors largely into our navigation form a strong additional objection to the concession of the proposed privilege to any ships manned by them."

That is the " game ". That is the British game, and that is the game which this Honourable gentleman is playing to-day.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I thank my Honourable friend, Sir James Simpson, for the honour he has done me of quoting a passage from the Report of the All Parties' Committee over which I had the honour to preside. After quoting that passage, my Honourable friend extended to me a very cordial invitation to go with him into the lobby.

3 P.M.

Sir James Simpson : Yes, I hope you will.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Sir, I will make a very sporting offer to him. If he and his constituency would accept now and here the Dominion status which we claim, I shall be the first to accept his invitation. (Applause). I made this offer, which I call a sporting offer, in the lunch interval to my Honourable friend. His reply was " I am willing to go into the report with you ; I have not yet read it ". My answer to my Honourable friend's invitation is that I am willing to go with him into the Bill in Select Committee. Then, my Honourable friend was very eloquent in dealing with the glories of India and as to what had contributed to those glories, viz., co-operation with the British. Well, if he had said " glories of Anglo-India ", I could have understood it. In fact I have myself witnessed—and I use the word " Anglo-India " in the general sense and not in the restricted sense in which it is used now—I have witnessed that glory myself when going up to Gauhati by river. Along the banks of the Hooghly for some miles, I saw noble palaces, rising to the skies, belonging to the jute kings of Bengal. That was one glory that I saw. A few miles further what did I see ? The misery of India. Men, half-fed, half-clad, with bodies shrivelled up, living under flimsy roofs of palm leaves giving no protection against wind or rain. Those two things I saw side by side. Now, what does the report say ? The report deals with people who have sunk their money, vast sums of money, and are doing business lawfully in India. I stress the word " lawfully ". Has my Honourable friend in the course of his speech given any answer to the long indictment of my Honourable friend Mr. Haji as to how it was that they came to be in possession of the best part of this particular trade ? My Honourable friend has answered it by calling certain monopolies " British rights ". What are these British rights ? Monopolies in the coastal trade, tea, jute, oil, coal, and so on. The tragedy of it is, Sir, that these rights have been acquired in India, the right of the coastal trade and the right of growing tea and coffee and the right in oil. (An Honourable Member : " And indigo "), it is a dead trade now—that all these rights should be entirely in non-Indian hands. Equal rights; yes, by all means equal rights, but equal rights are accompanied by and are derived from equal opportunities. (Lala Lajpat Rai : " Equal powers "), equal opportunities lead to equal power. Give us the opportunity and if we lag behind, you can say it is our misfortune. Have we had the opportunity ? Will you allow us the opportunity ? What about the extract just read by my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy ? What about the hundred different tales about Indian commerce, Indian trade being brutally suppressed by the English people in the past. I need hardly go into that ; it is a matter of history and we all know it.

Then, it is quite evident that what the report deals with is the time when Dominion status shall be established in India, and not the present time. To talk of discriminatory legislation as something reprehensible in this present rule and in the present circumstances seems to me, Sir, to be more a joke than a serious argument. Are there not already on the Statute-book discriminatory laws ? Did any of my friends support us when we all rose as one party either for the repeal of those laws or the non-passing of fresh discriminatory laws ? What about the discriminatory Ordinances and Regulations which from time to time we tried to get rid of ? Did you ever support us in that ? Are they not discriminating laws ? What right have you to ask now under the present system and the present regime that no discriminating laws should be passed ?

My Honourable friend was pleased to say, " I am against discriminating legislation, both anti-Indian and anti-British ". Well, I am very sorry that my Honourable friend was not in the House when we attacked such legislation. He might have had the courage to vote with us, but I see other Honourable gentlemen on those Benches who were in the House and never stood by us on one single occasion.

Then you talk of vested rights. Have we no right to ask how these rights became vested in you ? Are you not accountable to us, the people of the land ? But it is a land of discriminations. What we want to do is to get rid of this discrimination which is to be found in everything. Where is there no discrimination ? Take the political, social, and economic spheres ; everywhere there is discrimination, and that to the advantage of the people whom that group represents.

But the best answer to the whole speech of the Honourable Sir James Simpson was given by my Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon in the course of an interruption during Mr. Haji's speech. He said, " I am not an Indian ". That is an answer to every argument that has been put. If you are not an Indian what right have you to say that you must have the same privileges as Indians ? I am talking now of an Indian Government.

Sir Victor Sassoon : On a point of explanation, Sir. The reason why I had to point out to Mr. Haji that I was not an Indian was because he suggested that I should subscribe capital to these companies, and it was to emphasize the fact that he was not encouraging foreign capital for these companies that I said I was not an Indian.

An Honourable Member : " It comes to the same thing ".

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Now, Sir, what is claimed is national treatment ? Has anybody ever heard of national treatment except among nationals of the same country ? What is national treatment ? Is it a thing which goes floating about on the seas which one has to cross between India and England ? You have to be a citizen if you claim the rights of citizenship. That is the only basis upon which you can claim equality and non-discrimination, because in the case of others who are not citizens there can be and there should be and in fact there is in every country discrimination as regards national treatment. Well, let Dominion status be given, let Dominion rule be established, accept and comply with the terms upon which Indian citizenship can be acquired and then if discrimination is made, you will have the right to complain. But what does this claim come to, this British right as it is called in the present circumstances ? That is not a mere right of carrying on the coastal trade of India or to take part in the coastal trade of India. In every other country when you hear of preference being given to a particular country or a particular Dominion to use its own ships in the coastal trade, there is always a pre-existing home shipping. The question arises when some other nation or Dominion wants to take part in it, as to how it should be regulated. But what has happened here ? Here whatever indigenous beginnings were made—and that has not been challenged—whatever beginnings were made were crushed by superior strength, superior backing and superior organising of Britishers. That being so, what does this claim come to ? It is not merely a claim to remain in peaceful enjoyment of the coastal carrying trade, but the claim when closely examined comes to this that it is we Britishers, and we alone, who must form the mercantile marine of India. You may talk of discrimination in various things, but has anybody ever heard that discrimination is not permissible, is not advisable, is not necessary in matters of defence of a country ? Is not this particular question a question primarily of the defence of the country ? What will be the position if we have a mercantile shipping ? Is it not going to be our mercantile marine, our second line of defence, and if it ever falls to us to defend our country is it you or is it we who are to lay down the regulations for it ? The present combines may form the mercantile marine of India, but the tragedy of it will be that it will be a mercantile marine of India with no Indian on it. Then, again, Sir, take Dominion status and imagine Dominion rule fully established. It is with this rule alone that the report from which my Honourable friend has quoted deals ; what does it mean ? It means that particular rule in the whole of India. It means that that rule is to be established for the citizens of India, for the population of India and for the greatest good to the greatest number. That being so, is it just, is it reasonable for one community to say that we shall continue to enjoy the monopoly which we have somehow or other acquired. I heard a beautiful expression to-day—it may be a legal expression, but I do not profess to be a mine of legal knowledge and to know everything—the expression was " expropriation of good will ". I can imagine your parting with your property along with the good will or rather trade along with the good will, but I cannot conceive the case of only parting with good will and keeping the trade to yourself. It may be, and I think it will be, more accurate to describe it as a restraint on trade. Talking of restraint on trade, as every lawyer knows, it may be of two kinds. It is either by contract between private individuals or it is by legislation in the interests of the country. Now, in the former case, restraint is permitted to a limited extent in certain instances. In the latter case, when a restraint has to be imposed on trade for the political, economic or social advancement of the country, there is absolutely no limitation. If private interests are likely to suffer they will have to suffer. The present is a case I submit which raises a question directly affecting the advancement of the country, and is therefore of national importance. If it becomes necessary at any time—I do not say that it is necessary now—to pass discriminatory legislation, it would be perfectly open to the Indian Legislature to do so even before it has got Dominion status. But I do not admit that this is discriminatory legislation at all. What is there discriminatory in it ? It is not discrimination between individuals or races. It simply lays down that the controlling interests in the trade shall belong to nationals. It is entirely open to anybody to comply with whatever laws there may be in force and become a citizen. Discrimination in legislation, as I said, implies discrimination between races and individuals. It does not certainly mean regulation of the trade of a country whether coastal or otherwise ; it does not mean that the Legislature is incompetent to remove monopolies ; it does not mean that the Legislature is not to put a stop to exploitation ; it does not mean that the Legislature is to perpetuate rate wars. As to discrimination in other ways, for instance, by giving bounties, raising tariff walls and such like, no one will ever object or will ever deny that every country has the right to make it. Imagine for one moment that we had our own way : would you have found Indian-owned shipping in the miserable condition in which we find it to-day ? Could we not have helped it by various means and would it not have been able to stand any competition, however strong ? It is something like what my Honourable and gallant friend, Colonel Crawford said some time ago, that when there is war then Indian politicians would be citing law reports and pages of old history. He asked us " Who is there to fight ? How will you fight ? " How can we fight ? you have made us helpless ; we cannot do it : we cannot compete with you now. Why ? Because you have consolidated your position to such an extent that it is not possible for us with our meagre resources without legislative help to hold our own against you.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why not ask for bounties ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Who is there to give us bounties ? Will you ? It is like offering battle to your helpless victim whom you have deprived of all arms and all strength and then you roll up your sleeves and say " Stand up and I will fight you." We simply want to be put on our feet and no more. It is not that you have any right of pre-emption upon India. You know how you got it and how you have kept it so far ; and now that we are asserting our rights in various directions, is it for you to say : " Oh, this is discrimination." Discrimination is there from the very beginning ; and we are now trying to get out of discrimination by, what you may, if you are so pleased, call in a loose sense, counter-discrimination. Why should the people of the country not resort to it ?

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

Sir, I submit that the whole of the argument of my friend was an argument for sending up the Bill to the Select Committee. He said nothing against the principle of the Bill. I do not mean to say that the measure as drafted is perfect. There is room for improvement, and I think the best we can do is to put our heads together and see if we can reconcile it with our various view points without in any way affecting the principle of the Bill. That there should be an Indian mercantile marine in its true sense, I think, every reasonable person will admit.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the motion which is before this House. Sir, when Sir James Simpson got up to oppose this Bill, I expected to hear some very convincing arguments against it, but I was very much disappointed to hear him resorting to appeals to Pandit Motilal Nehru in the name of the All-Parties Conference Report and also opposing the Bill in the name of the consumer without telling us as to how the consumer was going to suffer. Sir, so far as the question of racial discrimination is concerned, I think I need not say much. Panditji has already replied to his remarks, but I might add that the European section of this House by their supporting yesterday a Bill of a discriminatory character have cut the ground from under their feet.

Sir, it has been admitted by the European section of this House that in the best interests of India the Britishers could be deported from this country. If, Sir, we accept this principle that the Britishers in the best interests of India could be deported from this country, I do not see any reason why the British ships might not be deported from India in her best interests.

Sir, so far as the interests of the consumers are concerned, I wish my friend had said something convincing. It is no use saying that under a monopoly, and by the reservation of the coastal trade to Indians, the rates of freight would go up and that the consumer would suffer. Sir, let us be frank. The European section in this House is not for protecting the interest of the Indian consumer.

Sir James Simpson : Yes.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Well, I wish to tell this frankly to them. Let them stand on the ground of self-interest rather than talk of the interests of the consumer. I think, Sir, this is sheer hypocrisy. It is most insincere to say that they are opposing this Bill on the ground of the consumer's interest. Let us examine the history of the last 50 years of the present shipping concerns owned and controlled by the Britishers, and let us see how the consumer's interests have been served and protected by them.

I would, Sir, take only one instance of a company plying for coastal trade, that is, the British India Steam Navigation Company. Now, Sir, the ordinary capital of this Company is 9 lakhs and 57 thousand pounds, and from 1901 to 1925 the total profits which it made amounted to 51 lakhs and 71 thousand pounds, or approximately 22 per cent. per annum. Twenty-two per cent. per annum is the profit which these protectors of the consumer's interests have made during the last 25 years. And still they have the audacity to say that they are opposing this Bill on the ground of the poor consumer's interests ! Now, Sir, let us also examine the rate of freight which they charge for the coastal cargo they carry. I have calculated that on an average they charge about Rs. 20 per ton for the coastal traffic. If my figure is not correct I would ask my friends who know about these things to correct me. And, Sir, as compared with these figures the freight from India to the United Kingdom is about Rs. 16 per ton—a distance probably three times the longest distance of a coastal trip. That is how they serve the country ! It comes to this, that they charge for the coastal traffic nearly four times the rate they charge for the United Kingdom. That means that the importers of food grains and other raw materials in the United Kingdom pay a freight rate about 25 per cent. of that paid by the Indian consumer. Now, Sir, in spite of all these big profits, the present European concerns interested in the shipping trade on the coast could not stand any Indian shipping company to come into the field. It was estimated during the enquiry by Mr. Rangachariar that companies with a capital amounting to about 10 crores of rupees were ruined on account of the " rate-war " and the " deferred rebate system." The European shipowners have so far been successful in keeping Indian companies out of the field by resorting to all kinds of means, fair or foul, with the result that the coastal trade at present is practically monopolised by two English companies. Now, Sir, we can reasonably expect that if proper protection was given against these unfair means, against the deferred rebate and rate war systems, by which the present shipping interests have successfully attempted to kill the Indian industry, I have not the slightest doubt that sufficient capital would be found in India to take up the trade which at present is being carried on by these concerns. Sir James Simpson very pertinently enquired how India would be able to get 12 crores of rupees which would be required to completely displace the foreign concerns. Sir, if the Government of India could get from this country every year through borrowing from 20 to 40 crores of rupees, there is no reason to think that it would be difficult to find the small sum, if I may say so, of Rs. 12 crores provided proper protection was given to the Indian industry.

Sir James Simpson : Private enterprise is required.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : No doubt about that. Do you mean to say that the money which Government gets at present from Indians is not from private investors ? A good part of it is from the Indian investors. (An Honourable Member : " The greater part of it.") Yes, the greater part of it.

Now, Sir, the suggestion has been made that during the slack season the Indian ships would find it difficult to get cargo on the Indian coast and that therefore their overhead charges would have to fall entirely on the busy season, and for that purpose the rate of freight will have to be automatically enhanced. The figures that I have been supplied with show that during 1924 and 1925 the sailings from Rangoon, Calcutta, Bombay and Karachi were very nearly equally divided between the two half-years. As a matter of fact, no such thing existed as a slack season, there is no reason to believe that there is such a thing as a slack season, that the Indian ships would not take to the foreign trade just as is being done at present by the present English-owned concerns.

Now, Sir, much has been said about confiscation and expropriation. I must say and it is very well-known in this House that this word was introduced first of all by Sir Charles Innes. Sir Arthur Froom, who was introduced first of all by Sir Charles Innes, Sir Arthur Froom, who was a member of the Mercantile Marine Committee, never suggested that reservation of the coastal traffic to the Indian ships would amount to an act of expropriation. I do not want to go into detail, but if the meaning as provided to us by Mr. Haji is correct that " expropriation " means dispossession of property or of proprietary rights, I should like to know from my friends who is being dispossessed of his property ! If they think that this organised killing of the Indian trade means to them a proprietary right, then I must say that this proprietary right should be taken away from them as immediately as possible. It has also been suggested, Sir, during the debate and also in the opinions sent to this House by the various European Chambers that if such a Bill were passed, it would only benefit Bombay at the cost of other provinces. I think, Sir, this is a very dirty game which has been introduced into this controversy by trying to set up one province against another. But I would tell my European friends that fortunately the provinces have not fallen into the trap laid for them. I should like here to refer to a few witnesses who appeared before the Mercantile Marine Committee and to the opinions they expressed about this measure. I should like to cite the evidence of one or two witnesses from Bengal to show that the people of other provinces do not feel that this measure is calculated to benefit Bombay at the cost of the other provinces. Sir, before the Mercantile Marine Committee, Maulvi Muhammad Nur-ul-Haq Choudhari of the Central National Muhammadan Association, when questioned whether he wanted the coastal shipping to be reserved entirely for Indians, said, " Yes, I do." He was asked, " You do not want any English people on the coastal trade at all ", and he said, " I do not." Babu Jogendra Nath Roy of the East Bengal River Steam Service, Limited, when examined, said that within four or five years by gradual replacement of European ships by ships built by the Indian Mercantile Marine he wished that the coastal traffic should be reserved for Indians. Kumar Pramatha Nath Roy of the British India Association in reply to the question :

" Among the various recommendations which you make.... for developing the Indian Mercantile Marine for coastal purposes, to what do you attach the greatest importance ? " said :

" To navigation bounties and the reservation of the coastal trade."

Then, Sir, I would like to refer to the evidence of our Honourable friend, Mr. Kabeeruddin Ahmed of the Indian Seamen's Union. (Laughter.)

" Q. There is no use of training boys if there is no prospect in the mercantile marine. So your Union considers that the best way to find that prospect is to reserve the coastal trade for Indian-owned ships ?

A. That will be good in the beginning.

Q. Has your Union studied any practical means of arriving at the reservation ?

A. It seems to me that if you reserve the coastal trade for Indian shipping, they will get the necessary facility."

The question before us is this, is it or is it not a legitimate aspiration of India to have her own mercantile marine ? If it is acknowledged by the European Members of this House that it is a legitimate aspiration, I think it is no use their opposing this Bill. They ought to suggest some better alternative in case they do not like the one before the House. In the absence of any better alternative than the present Bill, what one feels is that the sympathy expressed by the Europeans is not genuine, but that it is all lip sympathy and nothing more. It is a well-known fact that almost all the countries in the world have in one way or another protected their mercantile marine. I should like to know from the Government of India what they have done so far. The English ships have been plying along the Indian coasts for the last 50 years. And what is the result ? Let us have statistics from them to show how many Indians have been trained so far in the ships. Let us have something from them as evidence of the efforts they made to get a real Indian mercantile marine created to ply along the Indian coasts. Sir, it could be seen from the history of the past years that the Government of India have been keeping silent, that they have been making no attempts to do anything to protect the Indian industries with the result that nearly Rs. 10 crores have been lost by private enterprise. It is high time that something was done, and if the Government of India are really serious, it is their duty, as well as the duty of the European Members, to suggest some better proposal if they do not like the present one.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Mr. President, there has been one very remarkable feature in this debate—I do not know whether it has struck other Honourable Members besides myself—and that is the singular reluctance on the part of all speakers, including the Mover, to refer to the Bill which we are supposed to be discussing. I do not recollect any previous case in which the mover of a motion referring a Bill to a Select Committee has spoken for over an hour, without any attempt to explain what the principal provisions of his Bill were and the reasons which he considered justified those provisions. I suppose the Honourable Mover believed that the Bill having been before the Assembly in one form or another for a very long time, for as Mr. Neogy pointed out it was originally brought forward by him in a previous Assembly, Honourable Members by this time were so familiar with its provisions that it was unnecessary to say anything about them. Still movers of Bills are usually expected to have some pity on the weaker brethren whose study of the voluminous papers placed before us is not so thorough and energetic as that of the majority, and I think it is an advantage that, when we are discussing a Bill, we should not altogether ignore the precise provisions which find a place in it. I am not altogether surprised that the Honourable Mover was a little reluctant to say very much about the provisions of the Bill, because, if it is referred to a Select Committee, I should expect to see it emerge in a somewhat different form from the form in which it entered the Committee.

I do not want to occupy the time of the House with points which are really Select Committee points, but there are two or three to which I think I ought to draw the attention of the House as being of some substance. The first of them is this. Clause 3 of the Bill says :

" No common carrier by water shall engage in the coasting trade of India unless licensed to do so."

That, perhaps, I might call the operative provision of the whole Bill. I wonder whether the Honourable Mover of the Bill ever considered what the precise effects of these words would be, because, if the Bill should emerge from the Select Committee with that clause in its present form, it would not surprise me if the opposition to the Bill on the part of a certain group of Members in this House was suddenly to lapse. Is the Honourable Member quite sure that any of the ships employed by the monopoly which he attacked are in fact common carriers? That is rather an important point because it would put this House in a somewhat ludicrous position, if after the legislation had been passed, it should totally fail to carry out its professed purposes.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty: Common carrier by water is defined in the definition clause as a common carrier by water engaged in certain traffic.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: But the definition clause says that "a common carrier" means a common carrier of a particular sort and you will have to get the lawyers to interpret the meaning of the phrase "common carrier". I admit that it is a Select Committee point, but it is a point that deserves careful attention from the Select Committee.

The second point to which I wish to allude is one to which I drew the attention of the House on the motion for the circulation of the Bill. In clause 1, it is said that the Bill extends to the whole of the coastal traffic of British India and of the continent of India. Now the effect of that clause would be to apply the condition that no ship should engage in the coastal trade unless it were licensed to the foreign settlements in India, and it would also cover the Indian States. Whether it would cover Ceylon is a matter on which I am not quite sure. There was a sharp controversy between Sir Walter Willson and the Mover on the last occasion in which each accused the other of not knowing his geography. I am not wise enough in the law to say how the courts would interpret this phrase, "the continent of India"; but I do think as regards Ceylon at any rate the point ought to be cleared up. As regards the foreign settlements in India, Goa and Pondicherry, I do not contend for a moment that it is not within the power of the Indian Legislature to pass a law restricting the trade between those two points and British Indian ports to Indian ships. I do not say for a moment that it would be ultra vires, but what I do say is that if it were passed, it would involve a contravention of some of our international obligations, and in particular of the maritime convention to which I referred in my previous speech. Under that convention, the ships of all the signatories are entitled to ply between Goa and Bombay let us say, or between Pondicherry and Madras; and if we were to pass the law in the form in which it has been introduced, then we should have to denounce that particular convention and I think also our commercial treaties with Portugal and France. That seems to me an important point. As regards the Indian States, the position is not quite the same. If British India by agreement with the Indian States were to impose a restriction by which the trade between a port or ports in the Indian States and ports in British India were to be restricted to Indian vessels, that could be done as far as I can see without breach of any international obligation; but what I would submit to the House is this, that it cannot be done simply over the head of the Indian States. This is not a matter in which this Legislature can fairly assume the final authority, but ought only to proceed in agreement with the authorities responsible for the administration of the States. Now, Mr. President, I think most Members of the House, particularly those who come from Bombay, are alive to the fact that in certain States their interests as regards shipping and commerce are not necessarily regarded by them as identical with the interests of British India. I do not want to go deeply into this matter, but I think I am referring to a fact which is very well-known; and the effect of this difference of opinion as to the identity of interests apparently has been to transfer a certain amount of trade from Bombay to ports in Kathiawar. What I want the House to consider is this. If the consent of the Indian States were not obtained, and with the two foreign settlements on the coast of India, one on the east and one on the west, and with the great port of Colombo in Ceylon half-way on the voyage from Calcutta or Rangoon to Bombay, with the coast dotted with all these ports which are not British Indian ports, and over which therefore the Government of India and the Legislature of British India have not got full control, I would ask the House very seriously to consider whether any measure for the reservation of the coastal trade, limited to trade between British Indian ports, could in fact be effective. It seems to me that there are loopholes all along the line, and that it would not be difficult for any great shipping corporation, especially one so sagaciously administered as for example the British India Company has always been, to evade the restriction, and if that happened, the inevitable effect would be the transfer of a great deal of trade from British Indian ports to these other ports. Take, for example, the coal trade from Calcutta that goes round to the west coast of India. If this Bill were passed in the form that only trade between British Indian ports was reserved to Indian vessels, I should expect to find that, so far as coal was imported on the west coast of India, it would go round from Calcutta and be imported at Bedi Bunder or at Marmagao and reach the interior of India in that way. And it is quite obvious that our land customs line could not prevent that in any way, because, ex hypothesi, the coal we are speaking of is British Indian coal and could not therefore be subject to any duty of customs. I am not going to elaborate this point further to-day. I have some sympathy with my Honourable friend when he preferred to reserve the cream of his arguments for the more select audience of the Select Committee. That attitude might argue a certain lack of respect to the House in general, and an implication that we are not considered worthy to hear what Mr. Haji has to tell us as regards the economic arguments used by Sir Charles Innes. But I am quite sure the Honourable Member did not intend any such disrespect, and, as I say, I agree with him to this extent that it is very difficult when the argument one is trying to place before the House is largely a matter of detail, it is very difficult in a set speech without being intolerably long to make one's meaning clear. Therefore I shall pass on to another feature of the Bill, which is connected, however, with what I have just been saying. I do not know whether the House realizes that, as this Bill is drafted, it will make it illegal for any subject of an Indian State to take part in the trade between a port in his State and a port in British India. It seems a rather summary way of treating the subjects of the Indian States, and if the Honourable Mover were to tell me that that was not what was intended, I should without hesitation accept that assurance. But what this particular flaw in the Bill, taken along with the others, suggests to my mind is this, that as there has been a very long delay between the time when the Bill was first brought forward by Mr. Neogy and the time when it has come up for discussion in this House, it is perhaps unfortunate that those who have successively been responsible for its fortunes, have not devoted a little time to removing the more obvious flaws. I think that on the whole the House was fairly entitled to expect that much from them.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Sir, the Government of India have considered very carefully the argument which I have tried to outline as regards the probable ineffectiveness of the Bill, if the reservation of the coastal trade is confined to ports in British India. Their conclusion quite definitely is that it would be ineffective, that there are too many loopholes and that therefore the Bill, if passed, would not accomplish its object. Now it is obvious, if the Government of India are correct in their view, that that is a very serious difficulty, because I am quite sure that the supporters of the measure, whatever else they want, want it to be effective. I believe also that a great many of them, if they were satisfied that the measure was likely to be ineffective, would hesitate a good deal about passing it. At this point perhaps I might throw back a little as a preface to what I am going to say. In the speech that I made at the time of the circulation of the Bill I said this :

"I am anxious to make it clear that while Government do not oppose the motion for circulation, they do regard the objections raised by Sir Charles Innes on that occasion as very serious and very important, and unless a further examination of the subject should show that they were not well-founded, these objections would, I think, be regarded by them as very nearly conclusive against the scheme."

Frankly, I was disappointed when Mr. Haji told us to-day, Sir, that he was going to reserve his reply to the arguments of Sir Charles Innes for the Select Committee, because, Mr. President, I shall not be a member of the Select Committee if it is appointed, and therefore I shall have no opportunity of hearing the reply to these arguments.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : On a point of order, Sir, is it open to the Honourable Member in charge to say that he would not be a member of the Select Committee ? If my recollection serves me right, the rules are perfectly definite on the point, that whether or not the Honourable Member is named specifically in the motion, he is automatically a member of the Select Committee.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I say on a point of personal explanation, Sir.....

Mr. President : One by one ; let this point be disposed of. Mr. Neogy has raised the point that the Honourable Member is not entitled to say that he would not be a member of the Select Committee, and he refers me to a Standing Order which says that a member in charge of the Bill on behalf of the Government becomes ex-officio member of the Select Committee on that particular Bill. Is that the point the Honourable Member raised ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member, by virtue of his being the Government Member in charge of that particular Bill, becomes ex-officio member of that Select Committee. It is absolutely clear.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Before the point of order is finally disposed of, Sir, I had always understood that the "member in charge" in that Standing Order meant the member in charge of a Government Bill. I did not know that it covered a member in charge of the Opposition to a private Bill.

Mr. President : I am open to correction.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I invite attention to Standing Order No. 40.

"The member of the Government to whose department the Bill relates, the member who introduced the Bill and the Law Member of the Governor General's Executive Council, if he is a member of the Assembly, shall be members of every Select Committee, and it shall not be necessary to include their names in any motion for appointment of such a Committee."

Mr. President : Is it Standing Order 40 ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : 40, Sir.

Mr. President : Has the Honourable Member got anything to say on the point of order ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am quite prepared to accept it.

Mr. President : I congratulate the Honourable Member.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : On a point of personal explanation, ...

Mr. President : The Honourable Member will have the right of reply. Then he can make any explanation he likes.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I owe an apology to the Honourable Member for unjustly attributing to him the base motive that he wished to withhold from me the admirable arguments with which he has no doubt furnished himself as regards this question. But, Sir, the Honourable Mover has not supplied this House with the arguments—in reply to the economic objections raised by Sir Charles Innes—I think he ought to have done so for these objections were essentially objections for the second reading and not Select Committee objections, and however much they may impress members of the Select Committee, I think that the House is entitled to hear them. But instead of replying to Sir Charles Innes' arguments, he complained bitterly of the improper conduct of Sir Charles Innes in taking advantage of an opportunity not intended for the purpose to give at full length the whole of the difficulties and objections he felt to the reservation of the coastal trade. Now, Mr. President, whom did it injure ? In March 1926, Sir Charles Innes stated the objections at length so that they should be fully before the country, and that all the supporters of the scheme shou'd have the most ample opportunity of replying to them and showing that they were unfounded.

Is that unfair ? I admit that when Mr. Haji first said that the conduct of Sir Charles Innes was unworthy of a member of Government, I thought he was on the point of commending him. Very fresh in our minds is what we constantly hear from the Benches opposite as to the character of Government, and when I heard that Sir Charles Innes was unworthy, it seemed to me that he had found favour in the sight of the Honourable Member. But it was not so. Not even on that occasion has one member of the Government found favour in the sight of one member of this Government on ordinary occasions, I really cannot see that Sir Charles Innes deserved any censure whatever for the line he took on that occasion, and the position is this.

Mr. B. Das : But Sir Charles Innes did not bring up the Resolution for discussion in the Legislative Assembly. Let me quote the amend ment moved by Sir Charles Innes to the Resolution of Sir Sivaswamy Iyer on the 19th March, 1926—and that was carried :

" That the debate on all subjects covered by the Resolution, except the proposed training ship, be adjourned till the next Session, and that, as regards the training ship, the Assembly recommends, etc., etc."

Sir Charles Innes did not fulfil this promise.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, Sir Charles Innes on that occasion acted subject to your approval, and I have no doubt that if his conduct was unworthy, that approval would not have been given.

What remains is this, that it is 2½ years since Sir Charles Innes stated these objections, and so far as this House is concerned, they remain unanswered to this day. The Honourable Mover, except on the point of expropriation, made no attempt to deal with the economic argument, and I think I am entitled to claim that that being so, and in view of the fact that last March I indicated clearly the very serious view that Government were inclined to take of these arguments, the Honourable Mover cannot expect that Government should lightly dismiss their arguments and express their concurrence with him.

Now, Mr. President, there is one aspect of the case to which I must devote two or three sentences, and that is the question of Burma. I most sincerely hope that some Member who comes from Burma will deal more fully with that aspect of the matter. As nearly as I can make out, more than half the coastal trade in India is trade between India and Burma. Apprehensions were expressed by Sir Charles Innes—and he gave very good reasons for them, though I know quite well that the Members opposite do not accept these reasons—he gave his reasons for believing that the reservation of the coastal trade would mean a more expensive service and higher freights. Now if that should happen I think you would get an irresistible demand from Burma that they should be left out of the scheme of reservation of the coastal trade. It is very unlikely that for many years to come the Burmese people themselves will take much, if any, part in the coastal trade, and if they think that the effect of reservation is to raise freights against them, we shall be faced by a strong and effective demand that reservation be withdrawn. The House knows perfectly well that in various matters in recent years it has been strongly felt in Burma that their economic interests are not the same as the economic interests of India. That was felt in the case of the steel duties, of the export duties on rice, and of the export duties on hides and skins. In these matters we have to consider the interests of India as a whole, and it is not competent for us to impose different rates of duty at different ports. It was considered that the interests of India as a whole demanded these duties and therefore we had no alternative but to apply them in Burma. But that is not so, Sir, as regards the reservation of coastal trade. There is no international obligation on our part that would oblige us, if we reserved any part of that trade, to reserve the whole of it, and it would be perfectly competent to exclude trade between India and Burma in the Bill without any breach of international obligations. I believe that, if that were done, the decision would be acceptable to Burma. I thought it right to mention this, Sir, but I hope that some Member from that province will deal with the matter more fully.

I come now, Sir, to the very interesting speech which we heard from the Honourable Pandit, the Leader of the Opposition. The statements he made were of absolutely first class importance, and I have no doubt that they will receive very earnest consideration from the Members of the European Group to whom most of them were chiefly addressed. What, in effect, he said was this : Accept Dominion status as the principle of India's future government and then I will talk to you of removal of discrimination. In his view the two things hang together, that India should get Dominion status and that in that case there should be no discriminatory legislation. He called that a sporting offer. I know that the Honourable Member is a sportsman and any offer coming from him is likely to be a sporting one. But I am not quite sure that the phrase " sporting offer " is entirely congruous in the language used in the famous quotation from the report, especially with the words " it is inconceivable ". What the Honourable Pandit has offered to-day on behalf of India is to refrain in certain circumstances from pursuing the course which he recognised to be inconceivable. Well that is not quite such a sporting offer as some I have heard. I think the Honourable Member, if he tries, can do better than that, because to refrain from the inconceivable is a task not beyond the capacity of any Member in this House. He went on to offer some very important explanations .....

Pandit Motilal Nehru : On a point of personal explanation, Sir, I used the words " sporting offer " in connection with my intention that it was not discriminating legislation ; but even so, if they admit the Dominion status, I offered to accept the invitation.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I must apologise to the Honourable Pandit. I had not quite appreciated his attitude. The reason why I failed to do so I think was that the phrase about the " sporting offer " came first and his explanation, which I clearly followed, that he did not regard this Bill as discriminatory legislation, came later on.

Mr. President : It did come.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I fully recognise that, Sir. I had no intention and I am sure the Honourable Pandit will acquit me of any intention of misrepresenting him. I fully admit that on his view that the Bill is not discriminatory legislation, it was something of a sporting offer. He was prepared to go beyond the report and to discuss the question as to whether this legislation should go through or not. So much for that. The Honourable Pandit anticipated what I was about to say as regards the fact that he did not regard this legislation as discriminatory. I am quite sure that this particular statement is of the greatest possible interest to the European Group. I am a little afraid, however, that the value that they may have been inclined to attach to the statement in the report submitted to the Lucknow Conference will not be quite so high this afternoon as it was this morning. The Honourable Pandit has justified his claim that this Bill is not discriminatory partly on the ground that if what you want is national treatment then you must become a national. He said if the Members of the European Group were to make themselves British Indian citizens under the new constitution, then of course they would be in exactly the same position as other British Indian nationals, but that if they preferred to remain outside, then they must not expect national treatment in the full sense. Well, Sir, that may have been the Honourable

[Sir George Rainy.]

Pandit's meaning, but I do not think the words in his famous utterance are such as to convey it. "It is inconceivable" he said "that there can be any discriminating legislation against any community doing business lawfully in India.....

Pandit Motilal Nehru: In the Commonwealth of India when established.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: "Any community doing business lawfully in India?" I fully accept the Honourable Member's statement as to what he meant, but I cannot admit that he said it on that occasion, and I think we are indebted to my Honourable friend Mr. Haji for bringing forward this Bill because it has given us an opportunity of eliciting what the real meaning of the Honourable Pandit is.

I would turn now—and what I have been saying about the statement of the Honourable Pandit leads up to it—to what I regard as by far the most important aspect of this Bill. It is this: In British Colonies and Dominions in many parts of the world, but especially in Africa, it is the duty of the Government of India to maintain an unceasing struggle in the interests of the Indians who have settled there; and our most powerful weapon has hitherto been the claim that the Indians who go to these territories are entitled to equal treatment as compared with other British subjects, and that there shall be no discrimination on racial grounds. The Honourable Mover and his supporters would disarm us and leave us helpless in the presence of the Governors of these territories.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta: Question?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: It is all very well for Honourable Members to say that this Bill is not discriminatory, but it is not their opinion that will count, nor is it the opinion of the Government of India that will count; it is the opinion of the Government of the Union of South Africa that will count. (Lala Lajpat Rai: "Which happens at present to be the case.") and the Government of the Colony of Kenya and the Government of the mandated territory of Tanganyika; and when our agents interview the authorities in these territories and ask for equal treatment and no discrimination, they will be met with the reply "Oh, why do you object to it? You do it yourselves." I will put it to the Honourable Member; I will make it very clear what I mean. If this Bill had been limited to this, that the coastal trade of India was to be reserved to nationals in the ordinary sense, and that is to companies registered in the country, which is the usual test of the domicile of a company, then I think he could have argued that there was no racial discrimination. But if 75 per cent. of the capital is to be reserved for British Indian nationals, if 75 per cent. of the managing agency is to be reserved for nationals, and if another 75 per cent. which for the moment has escaped my memory is also to be reserved, I say it is racial discrimination and nothing else. Assuredly I should feel myself perfectly helpless if I attempted the task of convincing General Hertog that this was not so. I do trust that the House will consider this subject very carefully, because it is of absolutely first class importance. I know perfectly well how deeply Honourable Members on both sides feel as regards the treatment of Indians in the British Dominions and Colonies. I am perfectly certain that the very last thing that they desire is to do anything which would restrict and hamper the power of the Government of India, as the agent of India, to protect these people and to secure for them the best treatment possible. But I am very much afraid that if this Bill passes and becomes law, the effect upon the treatment of Indians in many of these territories could only be described as deplorable. I would therefore ask the House to think twice and three times before it agrees to this particular proposal.

I think, Sir, that I have very little to add to what I have said, and I should like to leave the matter there. The Government of India are unable to accept the motion for a Select Committee. I must leave it to the House to decide with a full sense of responsibility what they will do, but the Government of India must oppose the motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

One word more, Sir. The Honourable mover said that any one who opposed this Bill must be regarded as definitely opposed to the development of an Indian mercantile marine. Well, Sir, I repudiate that. Honourable Members may believe me or not, but I cannot refrain from saying it, I repudiate that charge. I am sincerely interested, and the Government of India are sincerely interested in securing the development of an Indian mercantile marine.....

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): Is there any proof?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy: Honourable Members have said that we are very slow. It is not the first time that I have heard that particular accusation brought against the Government of India, and when that accusation is brought very frequently I am afraid there is sometimes something in it. But if we could once get this entirely impossible proposition, as I regard it, namely, the reservation of the coastal trade, out of the way, then we may be able to get down to business. I quite recognise that there are other aspects of the case which ought to be considered. If I am correct, as I believe I am, in thinking that there are other schemes which are likely to be brought to the notice of the Government of India at an early date, I can assure Honourable Members that these will receive careful consideration. But I want to make it perfectly plain that in opposing the reference of this Bill to a Select Committee, the Government of India believe that they are acting in the true interests of the country, and they also believe that it is impossible in any useful way to develop an Indian mercantile marine by the reservation of the coastal trade.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 14th September, 1928.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, 14th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

---

(1) ALLEGATIONS IN CERTAIN NEWSPAPERS OF PARTIALITY AND BIAS AGAINST MR. PRESIDENT.

(2) ALLEGED PROPAGANDA BY THE HOME DEPARTMENT AGAINST MR. PRESIDENT.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I beg permission to draw your attention and the attention of the House to a series of gross violations of the privileges of this House which have taken place during the last few days. Statements and comments have appeared in the Press which constitute very serious charges against you, Sir, as President of this House and thereby against the honour of the whole House. The first of these charges was made in the Times of India in its issue of the 8th of September, and that is, as far as I can see, the beginning of this campaign of vilification. It is stated at page 9 of the issue of the 8th September :

" The Home Member this afternoon made his promised statement in reply to that by the President yesterday in regard to the institution of a separate Assembly Secretariat. A good deal of publicity has been done in preparation for this discussion in order, apparently, to prejudice the Government position. Your correspondent makes no suggestion that this publicity was inspired by anybody."

—I wish the House particularly to notice these last words—

" When the subject began to fill the air sometime ago he asked in a proper official quarter whether any information could be vouchsafed about it and was given, as a courtesy to the Assembly President, a polite but decided answer in the negative."

Now, Sir, it is a very common device adopted by journalists of a particular class to make a definite suggestion and say that no suggestion is meant. I submit that this denial of any suggestion—" your correspondent makes no suggestion that this publicity was inspired by anybody "—will strike any reader as a suggestion that publicity was done in favour of your scheme by yourself. Read the whole passage and examine it in the context in which it appears.

Then, Sir, we find another statement in the same issue and on the same page. It runs thus :

" The President then, without mentioning the Government's plea of urgency or referring to what the Law Member had said, ruled that as copies of the Bill had not been made available for three days the matter should stand over."

Here, Sir, is a clear charge of partiality against the Chair and it consists of an utter falsehood, namely, that you did not refer to what the Law Member had said on the motion in question. The House will remember that the motion was a point of order taken by me that it was ultra vires of this House to take up the consideration of the Bill called the Public Safety Bill. Then, there is a suggestion that you purposely did not refer to the answer by the Honourable the Home Member to your question about the urgency of the measure. Now, the House will remember that, after I had made my motion and after some speeches were made by the Honourable the Home Member and others, the Chair was pleased to ask the Law Member who was present to help the House with his advice. The Honourable the Law Member relied upon the previous publication of this Bill in the Gazette and said that Order 38 upon which I relied did not apply. Immediately after that or in the course of the debate—I cannot say as to the exact point of time—the Chair was also pleased to ask the Home Member whether there was any urgency in the matter. As far as I can remember—and here I speak subject to correction—the answer was that the Government considered it to be a matter of great urgency. No special facts constituting the urgency were brought to the notice of the House, but what was stated was that in the opinion of the Government it was a matter of the greatest urgency. I shall draw the attention of the House now to your ruling, so that the House can see whether there is any foundation for the statements made which I have just read out. Your ruling is not a long one, Sir, and with your permission I shall read it :

"It is a very difficult question as the Law Member has already pointed out. I think all difficulties will be solved if I were to postpone a decision on this question. That will mean that the consideration stage would go to the next day and no difficulty would arise. But I do not propose to take that course. I take the responsibility of giving my own ruling, as I understand it. There is absolutely no doubt that this motion cannot be made unless copies of the Bill had been made available to the Honourable Members three days before to-day. The question is whether in this case copies of the Bill have been made available to Honourable Members three days before to-day. I am clearly of opinion that publication of the Bill in the Government Gazette cannot dispense with the obligation which is laid by the Standing Orders on the office to make copies available to Honourable Members."

I put it to the House whether this is not disposing completely of the argument of the Honourable the Law Member. The ruling continues :

"That expression has a special meaning attached to it by the Standing Orders, and in the absence of any direction by my predecessor as to the manner in which the Bill is to be deposited at the places in which it is to be deposited, I am afraid I must hold that copies of the Bill have not been made available to Honourable Members three days before to-day. I therefore rule that this motion cannot be made to-day, unless the Standing Orders are suspended. As no request has been made in this behalf, it is unnecessary for the Chair to consider that point."

Now, Sir, it is very true that you did not refer to the answer of the Honourable the Home Member to your question about urgency. As will be apparent to the House that question and that answer, if they were relevant at all, were relevant to the question of suspension of the Standing Orders. You disposed of that, Sir, by saying that there was no request before you and therefore you could not go into the question. I therefore submit that it is a malicious suggestion to say that you purposely omitted any reference to the answer of the Honourable the Home Member. That is number one.

Then we find it reported in the Indian Daily Mail of the 10th September, published in Bombay, which publishes a Free Press telegram stating the message the Simla correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph sent to that paper. It says :

"The Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends a lengthy report in the course of which he says :

What follows is a quotation—

"Pandit Motilal Nehru's scheme to outwit Government (by postponing the anti-communist Bill) succeeded, thanks to the responsive President of the Assembly...."

—The meaning there, the insinuation there, is quite clear—

"....President Patel"

—It goes on, (again a quotation)— quite conveniently refrained from giving Mr. Crerar an opportunity to make an application for the suspension of Standing Orders...."

—This is a direct and definite charge—

"The decision given by Mr. Patel is regarded as illogical, to say the least, and it is strongly suggested...."

—I would call your attention to these words—

"....and it is strongly suggested that it was due to pressure brought to bear on behalf of Party interests."

(Cries of "Shame" from Congress Party Benches.) There cannot be a more scandalous libel on the President than this.

Mr. President : What paper is it ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : This is a quotation from the message sent by the Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph of London, and I am reading from the Indian Daily Mail of the 10th September, 1928. Then it goes on :

"It is abundantly clear that the Department"—

—With reference to the Assembly Secretariat—

"cannot be separated from the Government and placed under the control of a body which from political motives misinterpret rules and regulations warping them to suit Party purposes."

This, I submit, Sir, is most malicious :

"He also says"

—This is the indirect report of the Free Press ; it is not in inverted commas—

"He also says that it is considered that the misuse of powers entrusted to alleged responsible men which is manifested to-day is a warning of the grave responsibilities involved in increasing the facilities for the Assembly in the matter of management and control."

Now, Sir, I do not know, who this Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph is, but if he is what he describes himself to be, he should be in the Press Gallery and subordinate to your jurisdiction.

Mr. K. Ahmad (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : You have also got the Reporter of the "Forward". Let him contradict it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Then we come to some very serious disclosures made in the Pioneer received yesterday. Here we have the correspondent of the Pioneer directly attributing certain conduct and certain statements to the members of the Government, to the Government as a whole and to some individual members of the Government, not named of course. It is stated here :

"No one would mind the intensity of the combat if it were being fought cleanly, but your correspondent is reluctantly forced to call to your attention certain features and tactics which must be denounced. There can be no doubt that a definite move in the Government game is the discrediting of the authority of the Chair.

Ever since the Commander-in-Chief episode at Delhi earlier in the year, Mr. Patel has been on the Government black list."

(Laughter.)

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

It is no matter for laughter ; it is a very serious matter.

" Long suspect, he is now openly accused in the Government lobbies by officials of being partial. ' It is a put up job ', was the comment of one official Member on Pandit Motilal Nehru's point of order on the Public Safety Bill. ' Patel is dead against us'."

The words " It is a put up job ", a remark attributed to one official Member on my point of order and the words " Patel is dead against us ' are in inverted commas.

Then it goes on :

" Nor does the antagonism to the Chair end there. The Simla correspondent of a Government spoon-fed newspaper definitely accused the President of the Assembly...."

Mr. President : What newspaper ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru :

" The Simla correspondent of a Government spoon-fed newspaper definitely accused the President of the Assembly the other day of doing publicity work...."

—This is the Times of India—

" for his scheme of attaching the Legislative staff to the Chair and wilfully misreported the decision of Mr. Patel on the question of the proper publication of the Anti-Bolshevist Bill."

This remark, I can say, is perfectly correct. There certainly was a misrepresentation of your decision. The comment goes on :

" More serious and more derogatory to the dignity of the Chair are the telegrams which are being sent to a London newspaper by a Press correspondent in close touch with the Government....."

This is important—Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph is " in close touch with the Government ".

" .... In these, Mr. Patel is being definitely accused of partiality and bias. Now, if there were any foundation for suspicion as to Mr. Patel's conduct in the Chair, the proper place to raise the matter would be on the floor of the House. This the Government dare not do, because they have no case. Their present underhand action is caused by their chagrin at not being able to have things all their own way and is an attempt to cover up the Parliamentary inefficiency of their Front Bench. It is difficult to believe....."

—Now comes the very important passage—

" It is difficult to believe that the responsible Government spokesmen are actively concerned in this nauseating propaganda....."

(Cries of " Shame.")

—Now come the important words :

" but your correspondent has definite evidence which goes far to incriminate the Home Department."

That is all that I need read, Sir. Here are definite charges, made by the special correspondent, as he calls himself, of the Pioneer, both against the Government as a whole and some official Members who are not named here. It is suggested, Sir, that you put me up to raise that point of order, that it was a put up matter between you and me and that it was prearranged that my point of order would be allowed. That is the suggestion made. Now, I want to explain to the House my part in the raising of this point of order. It struck me late on Saturday night. I consulted nobody, and I felt that it was a point which needed looking into for which I had no books at all. The next day was a Sunday and the Library would not be available to me. Well, it struck me that I might with propriety ask the President to help me in this matter and I phoned to Mr. Patel if he could kindly oblige me by getting me some books that I wanted on a Sunday : he replied he could. The next day I sent through my typist a list of the books I wanted, and a couple of hours later I found those books in my room. A chaprasi of Mr. Patel brought them. I do not know where they came from, but of course, they were Government books, and came from some Government Library. Then I studied the point. I made my notes. But I was undecided up to the very last moment whether I should take the point or not. On Monday morning, when I attended at question time, I went over to my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai. I consulted him whether it was a point that I could properly take. The aspect which I put before him was this, that my point was based on the inherent rights of Englishmen and the liberties of Englishmen and whether it would look proper for me, an Indian, to champion the cause of Englishmen in this House. Lala Lajpat Rai gave me the advice that it was a point which should be taken and that it did not matter whether it was the championing of the liberties of Englishmen or of any other class of people. It was then and not until then that I made up my mind to take that point. I believe my Honourable friend, Mr. Birla, was also present at this conversation between me and Lala Lajpat Rai. So that you will see that it is a most pernicious thing to say that this was a pre-arranged thing, when the Mover, namely, myself, was not certain up to the very last moment if he should take the point of order or not. Then I can say, and I say this most emphatically before this House, that I never had and do not have up to this moment the faintest inkling as to what your ruling is going to be upon that point of order. This charge then against you and me, and I will say, against the whole House, is a most scandalous libel and the grossest violation of the privileges of this House and must be dealt with severely. Now, Sir, I do not know what you will do, but I submit that if an enquiry is necessary you will be pleased to hold that enquiry about these allegations against Government as pointed out by the Pioneer. As regards the telegram to the Daily Telegraph which was cabled out here and also the remark of the Times of India, I submit that you have ample jurisdiction to deal with them on the spot, but, of course, I will take your ruling whatever it is. I do not wish to take up any more time of the House. My business was simply to draw the attention of the House to these gross abuses of privilege and I leave the matter entirely in the hands of the House and of the Chair.

Mr. President : Before the subject matter raised by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition is further discussed, I should like to clear the atmosphere by making a few observations. There are, as I understand, four points involved in the statement made by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition and the report of the Special Correspondent of the Pioneer. My attention was first drawn yesterday by the Leader of the Opposition to that report. I asked him to give me a copy of the Pioneer which he did in the afternoon and I carefully read it.

As I have said, four points arise. One is the conduct of the Correspondent of the Times of India ; the second is the conduct of the Simla Correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph ; the third is that Government and particularly the Home Department are engaged in what this paper describes as a " nauseating propaganda " to discredit the Chair ; and the fourth is that some individual officers of Government at any rate are busily engaged in such propaganda. These are the four points involved. I should like further to explain what I know with reference to the request made by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition for books in connection with the point of order which he had raised the other day. On Saturday night, when I was about to retire, I was 'phoned up by the Leader of the Opposition and asked whether I could help him to get some books which he wanted next day, namely, Sunday. I at once replied : " Would you kindly send me a list of the books to-morrow and I would try ". Next morning I got the list from him and put it on my table without even looking into it. I then 'phoned up Mr. Dhurandhar, the new Secretary of the Assembly, and asked him whether he would be good enough to find out the Librarian and send him on to me. He said he would do it. After an hour the Librarian appeared and I asked my chaprassi to hand over the list which was lying on my table to the Librarian and told the Librarian to get the books which were required. I was then about to go out for a walk. I left word with my chaprassi that if the books came they should be immediately sent over to Pandit Motilal Nehru in Room No. 158, Cecil Hotel. When I came back, my chaprassi gave me the news that the books had been brought and were duly handed over to the Honourable Pandit. It was brought to my notice next evening that one official Member was openly saying that he could not possibly believe, that he did not believe, and that he refused to believe, that I was taken by surprise by the point of order raised by Pandit Motilal Nehru, and the reason he gave was that I had sent for books from the Library and I could not possibly be unaware of the point of order that was raised by Pandit Motilal Nehru. After this was brought to my notice, I asked the new Secretary of the Assembly as soon as I met him next morning as usual in my office : " What is the meaning of all this ? I 'phoned you up. I asked you to send me the Librarian, and how is it that Government were put in possession of that information ". He immediately told me that he was in a certain room in a particular office yesterday, i.e., Monday, and there the Librarian was sent for by one Honourable Member and asked whether I had sent for certain books from the Library on Sunday. He further said that he himself was asked whether I had sent for certain books. I wondered whether I was really the President of the Assembly or was I a suspect and criminal that my movements were being watched in this way ? (Some Honourable Members on the Congress Benches : " Shame ".) Order, order. I do not wish to mention the name of the Honourable Member nor do I wish to go further into this matter. (An Honourable Member : " The House demands it ".) I now ask the House to confine their discussion to the four points which have been raised by the report of the Pioneer and by Pandit Motilal Nehru. There is one matter which I should like to know before we proceed further. I would ask the Secretary to tell the House who the Simla correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph is, whether he enjoys the privilege of a seat in the Press Gallery and when was the ticket issued, and by whom.

Secretary of the Assembly : I find from the correspondence that has been received in the office (Honourable Members : " Louder please. We cannot hear you ".) that the Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph and the Morning Post is one Mr. Rice.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. President, in spite of the somewhat elaborate speech which was made by the Honourable Pandit, I confess that I have some difficulty in appreciating what the precise proposition is which he has laid before the House. I understand, however, broadly that he wishes to raise in a general way the question of a series of comments, which he largely quoted, dealing with the rulings and the actions of the Chair. He quoted those statements at some length and I presume that he expects me to make some reply as regards them. Now, so far as matters relating to the Press are concerned, two points appear to arise. The Honourable Member made a reference to admission to the Press Gallery. As regards the particular point of admission to or exclusion from the Press Gallery and the grounds on which action in that connection ought to be taken, that is a matter entirely within your discretion and I have no observations to make with regard to it. As regards the general question of comment and criticism in the Press, that may very well be a matter for the consideration of the House, but it is not one for which I, either personally or on behalf of the Government, can assume a responsibility to reply, to criticise, to approve, to disapprove, to associate myself or dissociate myself. In spite of what has been frequently urged in this House, the Press of this country is a free press and any comment contained in that Press, so long as it is within the limits of the law, is not a matter with which Government or any individual member of Government can concern himself. Apart from that, the Honourable Member referred to conversations which I understand are reported to have taken place in the Lobby or somewhere in the precincts of this House. Now, on that point, my answer is short and straight. I am prepared to accept responsibility to this House for anything I may say upon the floor of this House. Any other member of Government or any other Government official is prepared to answer for anything which he says on the floor of this House. But neither I nor any other official Member can be prepared to answer for conversations reported to have taken place or gossip alleged to have transpired in the Lobbies or in the precincts of this House.

Mr. President : Is it the view of the Honourable Member that official Members are entitled to impute partiality to the Chair in the Lobbies ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On the question whether they are entitled to do so, I am strongly of opinion that they are not. My contention is that if conversations of that character take place in the Lobby, that is not a matter for which I can reasonably, properly or even decently be expected to accept responsibility.

Now, Sir, I pass on to the particular point referred to by the Honourable Pandit, that is to say, the allegation contained in a newspaper that Government was concerned in this alleged propaganda. A communication has already issued to the Press on that point and I repeat here on the floor of the House that the suggestion—it is more than a suggestion, it was an assertion—that Government or any official Members here present had any participation in the alleged propaganda is false ab initio and in toto. As regards the wider matter of controversy, since I understand that my opinion is required I shall merely say this. It is impossible, Mr. President, for any one in a high public position—a position so high, so responsible and so important as your own—to secure that in the exercise of his powers no complaint should ever be made against his decision or that no one should ever be aggrieved. That is, no doubt, particularly true of the President of a Legislature to whom it necessarily falls to deal frequently with matters of very acute controversy. The Government of India cannot profess to be unaware that such complaints have found expression. But for their own part they have never allowed anything of that nature to influence their respect for the Chair and their desire to join in upholding its dignity and authority. I myself, Mr. President, am extremely sensible of the necessity, in the interests both of this House and of the public, of relations of mutual confidence and collaboration between the Chair and the Leader of the House and it is my desire and intention to do all that in me lies to maintain and confirm them.

Mr. President : May I know one thing from the Honourable the Leader of the House ? Is the Leader of the House, on behalf of the Government, prepared to take action against official Members or Members who, if the report is true, are carrying on this propaganda described now.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am prepared to consider that matter when definite and reliable material is placed before me.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : I think the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru has done a public service by bringing certain Press matters to the notice of the House this morning. When the debate took place on the adjournment motion moved by my friend Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, I thought we had seen the last of press controversy and press attacks on the President, but that was not to be. In a subsequent issue, dated the 8th, the Times of India almost repeated its previous performance. It has been reproduced in extenso by Pandit Motilal Nehru and I need not repeat it. All I can say is that insinuations and aspersions of that character are unworthy of any respectable journalist.

Now, Sir, I come to another point ; that is the cable which is reported to have been sent to England by the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, a paper owned by Lord Burnham.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : He has sold it, has he not ?

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir Hari Singh, your information unfortunately is in most cases wrong. I read the following from the Orient Press Service. The Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.....

Honourable Members : We cannot hear you.

Mr. K. C. Roy : The Simla correspondent of the Daily Telegraph cabled the following message regarding the Honourable Mr. Patel's ruling on the introduction of the Public Safety Bill :

"It is difficult to find a more conclusive evidence of India's unfitness for self-rule than in the example given in the Assembly to-day."

Then it continues—I do not mind the correspondent's opinion so far as our fitness for self-rule is concerned, but this, Sir, is the most cardinal point :

"The decision given by the Honourable Mr. Patel is regarded as illogical to say the least, and it is strongly suggested that it was taken by the President on behalf of party interests."

I consider, Sir,—and I repeat the view of the press men in the Press Gallery—that this is a malicious libel on the President. For some time past the conduct of a few press men has been a matter of no little concern to me. I have been very anxious about their conduct and I have been making anxious inquiries. My inquiry was first addressed to the most senior member of the Press Gallery who has served the Central Legislature for forty years, and this is what he wrote to me :

"In reply to your query I am extremely sorry that Mr. Rice who has recently joined the Press Gallery should have sent a telegram to a home paper reflecting on the fairness of a ruling by the President, Mr. Patel.

After attending legislative meetings for nearly 40 years I can only say that I regret the bad taste of a brother journalist, and I put his action down to his youthful inexperience of Assembly etiquette. Mr. Patel has always been most courteous and considerate to those in the Press Gallery, and the incident, to say the least of it, is most regrettable. I think this letter fairly reflects the general opinion of the Press Gallery."

I consulted several Indians who are also senior in the profession, and they have endorsed the view taken by Mr. Buck who for 40 years has served this Legislature. In the circumstances, Sir, if you take any notice of the delinquents, they will fully deserve it and you will have nothing but the heartiest support from the Press in India, both European and Indian. I have often heard allegations made regarding Indian press men, and the present Under Secretary of State, Lord Winterton, speaking in the House of Commons described Indian press men as gutter snipes of the Press. I should like to tell Lord Winterton where to look for them !

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member remember the names of the members of the Press Committee appointed by the President ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : I do not remember, Sir, but I know that the Press Committee is a very able Committee presided over by the Honourable Mr. Haig.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member himself a member of that Committee ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : I am, Sir.

Mr. President : Was the Honourable Member a party to giving a ticket to Mr. Rice ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Certainly not, Sir. I was not asked, and if I had been asked, I would not have given it to a stray journalist like Mr. Rice, a free-lance journalist like Mr. Rice.

Mr. President : Was not the Press Committee asked, Mr. Dhurandhar ?

Mr. L. Graham (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, admission to the Press Gallery, as you are aware, is settled in accordance with the regulations which were framed by your predecessor, Sir Frederick Whyte ; and after the regulations were first framed by him, the suggestion was made that as Sir Frederick Whyte was not aware of the qualifications of the various journals which apply for admission, an Advisory Committee should be set up to assist the President. We were not obliged to accept their opinion of course, and, Sir, that Committee has functioned now for some four years. The position is that all the correspondents of papers who have at any time had a seat obtain their seats in the ordinary way. Mr. Roy, I think, has a regular seat, as also the representatives of the Associated Press and the representatives of various papers—the Pioneer, the Times of India, etc. Thus all correspondents who have once been admitted on the recommendation of the Committee, as also with the direct approval of the President, if they apply again, are not put through the initial processes, are not required to come up for tickets. That, Sir, as far as I remember, was the practice established by Sir Frederick Whyte. Now, Sir, with regard to the gentleman who is now described as the correspondent of the Morning Post and the Daily Telegraph, he has previously occupied a seat in the Press Gallery in accordance with the ordinary provision, Sir, as the representative of the Pioneer. I think he first came up here in that capacity in 1925, Sir: and subsequently when his application was received on this occasion, although he did not apply as the representative of the Pioneer but as the representative of two English daily newspapers, it was not considered necessary.

[Mr. L. Graham.]

Mr. President : By whom ?

Mr. L. Graham : By me, Sir, acting as your deputy, to refer the question either to the Committee or to you, Sir. The practice, Sir, was started in the time of Sir Frederick Whyte of accepting the recommendations of the Committee. You, Sir, have seldom been troubled, as Sir Frederick Whyte also was seldom troubled. I have a distinct recollection in one or two cases taking your orders ; I cannot say which exactly ; but I trust, Sir, that your memory will confirm mine.

Mr. President : This was not one.

Mr. L. Graham : As I think the occasion did not arise. In accordance with the practice that the President is not to be troubled with these matters, which has been in force for a long time between the President and the Secretary in the Legislative Department. Any new application is regularly sent, as I think Mr. Roy will agree, to the Committee : and no doubt, Sir, he will let me say that we have very much valued—and I think you, Sir, will agree with me in this—the recommendations of that Committee, because they have made our path clear, as the position often is difficult, and it is an unpleasant task to refuse an application to the representative of a paper on the ground—as is frequently stated—that the paper is not of sufficient importance to receive a place in the Press Gallery I think, Sir, I have now made my position clear. As regards this particular correspondent, he has previously obtained a seat in the Press Gallery in a regular manner, and it has not been our practice to require fresh applications on the occasion of the following session.

Mr. President : I have made this inquiry, because there is a definite allegation in the report of the Pioneer that the Press correspondent referred to is in close touch with the Government. Now I would like to know from the Leader of the House if this correspondent is in any way connected with Government or enjoys any subsidy from them.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have not the slightest reason, Sir, to suppose that he is in any closer touch with the Government, than the correspondents of other newspapers of wide circulation.

Mr. Arthur Moore (Bengal : European) : Sir, Mr. Roy mentioned Lord Burnham. That I think is a very important matter because he is a Member of the Simon Commission and it ought to be made clear to this House that before Lord Burnham came out to India he sold out the whole of his interest in the Daily Telegraph ; so that he cannot be in any way connected with this very serious criticism upon yourself, Sir. And I am sure that we are right in assuming that it would cause him the very greatest dissatisfaction.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I would like to associate myself on behalf of myself and the Party I have the honour to represent, with the remarks made by the Leader of the Opposition. I endorse the statement of facts made by him as regards the consultation he had with me on the point of order, and I beg to submit that it is high time that this campaign of vilification should be seriously taken notice of. It has been going on for some time and we have reason to believe that it has not been going on without some support on the part of the officials. I am glad to have the assurance of the Leader of the House that the Government as such, and he, as a Government Member, has no sympathy and has nothing to do with this campaign of vilification. But I was very seriously disappointed at his not making any remarks about the process of spying on the movements of the President to which the President referred with regard to his getting certain books from the Library. I submit that the conduct of that official who conducted that espionage was simply disgraceful, and this House will be perfectly justified in asking the Government to find out who that official is and to punish him for that disgraceful conduct. It cannot be tolerated for a moment that the President of the Legislative Assembly should be followed and shadowed like that by a subordinate official of the Government, and it would have been consistent with the dignity of the Government and also consistent with the dignity of this House if the Honourable the Home Member had said something about the conduct of that official. Of course everybody has a right to express his opinion on the merits of a question ; so has a newspaper, and so has every Member in private talk. But when he begins to impute motives ; when he says that the question is a " put up " one ; when he insults the President of this House, and through the President this House—then I think it becomes the duty of this House to interfere. The Leader of the Opposition has done a great service to this House in bringing this matter to its notice. We think it is high time that serious notice of these things should be taken, not only by you in the exercise of the powers conferred upon you for upholding the privileges of this House, but also by the Government for the sake of their own good name. This thing has been going on for some time Malicious attacks have been made upon the Chair by one paper in India at least and by the Daily Telegraph and also I think some other paper in England. The last time when a motion for adjournment was proposed to censure the conduct of the Times of

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

India the President ruled that that motion was not in order. But the fact remains that the Times of India has been engaged in the campaign of vilification for some time ; and we know of course—though it may not be perfectly official—that that paper and some other papers in India are in the confidence, if not of the Government, of high officials of the Government. And therefore I think it is the duty of the Government to dissociate themselves entirely from this campaign of vilification, and not only dissociate themselves simply by words and assurances but by taking action against those officials who have been associating with these papers and supplying information or encouraging them. This has taken place several times in the House of Commons and the question of privilege has been raised there and notice taken of such things. This is evident from Erskine Mayo's Parliamentary Procedure, page 89 :

"Reflections on the character of the Speaker and accusations of partiality in the discharge of his duty have been treated severely by the House. On the 11th February, 1774, the Speaker informed the House of a letter in the Public Advertiser newspaper addressed to him reflecting on his character and on his conduct as Speaker. The House ordered the printer to attend, and resolved that the letter was 'a false, malicious and scandalous libel highly reflecting on the character of the Speaker of this House to the dishonour of this House and in violation of the privileges thereof'. The printer was declared to be guilty of a breach of privilege and committed to the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms."

Exactly what this House should do in this matter or exactly what the Government should do I am not in a position to state at present. But I can only endorse the remarks made by the Leader of the Opposition that the matter is so serious that it should not be allowed to go unnoticed, and it is high time, as I have said, that some serious notice of these things be taken. The Government can find out the name of that official who was spying on the movements of the President, because the President knows it, and also make an inquiry as to that official who made that remark in the Lobby to which reference was made. Therefore, I submit the mention of this matter by the Leader of the Opposition is perfectly opportune, and I must repeat that I was very much disappointed at the tone of the speech made by the Honourable the Home Member. It was more a technical speech, rather than the speech of a representative of Government who had good will and wanted to extend that good will towards the President. He ought to have warmly and strongly condemned the conduct of that official who was spying on the movements of the President and also of the official who made those remarks in the Lobby. Possibly all that he can do is to censure them, but he has not done it, or rather he has done it in a very half-hearted way. The very tone of his reply shows that there is something behind it, that there is something in the mind of the Government officials which of course they are not at full liberty to disclose, which is at the bottom of all this agitation and vilification against the President. I want to say on behalf of this side of the House that we have the fullest confidence in our President and in his impartiality, and I think he is an honour to the country and to this Legislature in the manner he has discharged his duties ever since he has been entrusted with them. If the Government have any doubt in the matter I challenge them to bring a vote of censure on the Chair. That is the proper procedure. It is cowardly for officials to go behind his back and go on making charges and imputations of this kind and not to put them before the House. This House is the proper tribunal before which any charge of partiality against the Chair ought to be brought and we shall be at full liberty either to negative or to pass that vote of censure. In any case this kind of thing ought to be stopped. Either the Government should have the courage to put forward that motion and take the verdict of the House, or they should stop all officials from vilifying the Chair. This has been going on so much and behind the purdah, so to speak, that it is high time the whole thing was put before the House. I also take the opportunity to inform the Honourable the Home Member and the Government that they are not improving their position in the country by these practices. They want us to co-operate, but is this the way to ask us to co-operate ? They are just making their position worse by this kind of policy of pin-pricks, by attacking the honesty of the President of this House and this Assembly itself. In attacking his impartiality and his lack of common sense in deciding points of order, what is meant to show is our incompetence for the purposes of the grant of further powers to us.

I deny that charge with all the emphasis and all the indignation
12 NOON. that I can command and I trust that all Members on this side are with me in this repudiation and in challenging the Government that if they have got no confidence in the Chair they ought to bring a motion of censure. I therefore associate myself fully with the remarks made by Pandit Motilal Nehru.

Mr. L. Graham : I understand, Sir, that I am charged and I am extremely sorry that the charge has been made. I am further extremely sorry that you did not give me a chance of giving a personal explanation before launching the charge in this House. Now, Sir, as to the facts.....

Mr. President : I did not mention the Honourable Member at all. I thought of speaking to the Honourable Member concerned in my room and therefore I kept him nameless.

Mr. L. Graham : It is obvious that it refers to me ; it is perfectly plain to the whole House and I think I am entitled to ask your leave to give a personal explanation. The position, as far as I am concerned, is very simple. I was informed, as you say, by the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly on Monday morning that you, Sir, had asked him to send to you the Librarian.

Mr. President : Without enquiry ?

Mr. L. Graham : Without enquiry, Sir.

Mr. President : It is news to me.

Mr. L. Graham : I hope the Chair will accept what I say. The Secretary, for whom I also offer an explanation, was under the impression that certain of these books were sent from the departmental Library ; he said that the President sent for certain books on constitutional law—he did not know what books. He thought it possible that some of them had been taken from the departmental Library. Sir, as Deputy Secretary of the Legislative Department, he felt it right and proper to speak to me. Your predecessor, Sir, was frequently in the habit of taking books from the Legislative Department Library, and, as a matter of courtesy, shall I say, he invariably used to ask the Secretary of the Legislative Department personally whether he could spare those books. I make no suggestion, Sir, that I should have been asked on this occasion, but I think the Deputy Secretary in the Legislative Department felt justified in informing me that he had sent for the Librarian for the purpose of sending the books. My object, Sir, thereafter in sending for the Librarian was to know whether the books had been taken from my departmental Library, for which I am responsible, or from the Assembly Library, for which I am not responsible. The books, I was told, were books on constitutional law, and that, Sir, did happen to be a matter of great interest to me personally, because, we, on this side, have to try to anticipate the points of order which are likely to be raised. I had an impression that the point of order was likely to be raised that morning and consequently I was, I admit, curious to know, Sir, what books had been taken out, because I was to try and conjecture what point of order was likely to be taken. I trust, Sir, that you do not think that conduct was in any way reprehensible. That, Sir, is my answer in respect of the alleged spying on the President. (Applause.)

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, allow me to associate myself, and associate myself wholeheartedly, with the protest which has been entered against the mischievous and scandalous attacks which have been made by certain mischievous papers against the integrity and independence of the Chair. No doubt, Sir, these aspersions and allegations are not only made as an attempt to lower the prestige of the Chair only but the prestige of the whole House, and certainly, Sir, it is high time that the strongest measures that are in your power may be taken against the mischievous persons who have taken up the propaganda of discrediting the prestige and honour of this House. At the same time, Sir, I consider that the aspersions and allegations which have been made by the correspondent of the Pioneer against the Government members, are as serious and as scandalous as those which have been made against the President of this House, and no doubt, Sir, they are as much lowering the prestige and the honour of this House to make wanton attacks on the honesty of the Government members as on the impartiality of the President, and I hope, Sir, that if the allegations and aspersions, scandalous and mischievous as they are, on the Government Members, are found to be false, the same measures will be taken against the correspondent of the Pioneer as are necessary to be taken against the correspondents of the other papers to whom these aspersions are ascribed. (Applause.) I have no doubt, Sir, that we have full confidence in your integrity and we hope that this malicious propaganda which is being made by these mischievous papers will not in any way, either in India or in England, lower the prestige of this House ; on the other hand it will show that this is a set-up propaganda in order to show to the world, especially at this time when the constitution of this country is in the melting pot, that we are not fit to rule our own affairs. This is, I believe, the chief aim and object of this propaganda, which is being carried on by these mischievous correspondents of English papers. But I think that by making this propaganda they cannot succeed in their attempt. For the last four years, since you have been President in this House, you have conducted the proceedings of the House with as much dignity, with as much honour and with as much independence as any of the greatest Presidents of the House of Commons. (Applause.) With these words, Sir, I associate myself with the protest that has been lodged, and I hope, Sir, that you will take the strongest measures in your power and will see that these mischievous correspondents will not be found in the Gallery of the House any longer.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I am sorry to say that while the speech of the Honourable the Leader of the House was emphatic it was also unsatisfactory. It showed an attitude of aloofness and painful detachment on this very important matter. He told us that Government neither confirmed nor repudiated, neither associated with nor dissociated from, neither approved nor disapproved the attacks against the Chair. Is this the attitude of Government when scandalous and malicious telegrams have been published in the Press reflecting on the impartiality of the Chair ? And if that is so, is it right and proper ? I say, Sir, it was the clear duty of the Government emphatically to repudiate and wholly to dissociate themselves from this malicious and mean propaganda, and I am sorry that they have not done so. Sir, the main object for which I have ventured to take the time of the House is this, that so far as the question relating to the issue of books by the Leader of the opposition is concerned, I have some personal knowledge of the unworthy suspicions and regrettable insinuations that have been made on Monday last, after the Leader of the Opposition had raised the point about the ultra vires character of this legislation under the Government of India Act and after the House had risen for the day, I happened to meet two European Members, one a Member of the Government and one a non-official elected Member, and I was told by them that the President's statement that this point of order had taken him by surprise was, to say the least, wholly inaccurate, that they refused to believe that the President was taken by surprise. As a matter of fact, they said, he had sent for the books to consult the various authorities and in their opinion it was therefore entirely untrue to say that he was taken by surprise. (An Honourable Member : "Names, please.") No, Sir, I do not want to add to the bitterness of the situation. I expressed my surprise to the non-official Member that he should say so of the President for whom, I understood, he had the highest respect. I told the official Member that he was biassed against the Chair if he could read in such an innocent fact of the issue of books from the Library a knowledge on the part of the Chair that the point of order was going to be raised.

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : Sir, I shall not take up the time of the House for more than a few minutes. I wish to advert to the speech of the Honourable Pandit, who told us that he decided at the very last moment to take up the point of order. I do not doubt that for a single moment, but he went on to say that if the Government had considered the motion they wished to make as being urgent, they should have asked the Chair to suspend the Standing Order. You will remember, Sir, that the point of urgency was touched upon by Lala Lajpat Rai, and that I followed him and proceeded to discuss the point of urgency when you ruled that that point was not before the House. Members were, therefore, given no opportunity of discussing the point of urgency before the decision of the Chair was given. I did not fail to say that the Standing Order should have been suspended to enable the technical point to be got over.

Lala Lajpat Rai : It was a Government Bill, and it was for the Government Member to raise that question of urgency and to ask the President to suspend the Standing Order, not for you or for me.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : I am perfectly well aware that the Government Member could have raised this point, but at the same time any Member had the right also to raise the point of urgency. The Chair, however, ruled that it was not before the House ; therefore any question of suspending the Standing Order on the ground of urgency could not be raised by this House.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member knows that the report in the Times of India does not mention the Honourable Member's name. It refers to the Leader of the House by name.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : Lord Balfour once said that he never read newspapers, and I seldom do. I merely skim them and do not profess to be in touch with all the comments which have been read out to-day, but I do not think it fair to say that Government had a proper opportunity of raising the point of urgency before your decision was given.

As to your relations with the Press, Sir, I agree with the Honourable the Home Member that it is not a matter upon which he would have any right to criticise, unless those comments overstepped the bounds of fair comment. When they do, this House has every right to raise the matter. I am not prepared to take up that issue whether any particular comments made on your recent ruling have overstepped the bounds of fair comment or not. We have a free press in this country, and personally I am all against restricting comment. There must be some limit obviously to the criticisms of the Chair, and there is no doubt that on occasions the rulings of any Chairman of any Legislature are apt to be criticised. I have not the least doubt that the Speaker of the House of Commons has been criticised in the Lobby many times, and we all know that certain Assembly rulings have on occasions been criticised in the Lobby by Members of all sides of the House. I do not think that such Lobby gossip can enter into discussions in this House. We can hardly be expected, when perhaps a somewhat doubtful decision is given by you, Sir, to go into the Lobby with our lips sealed, and abstain from comment thereon. I think it quite wrong to bring any Lobby gossip up in the course of this discussion.

As regards the explanation about the books, it is obvious that an impression had been created that the books had gone to you, Sir, and obviously someone was wrong in that impression. Somebody jumped to the wrong conclusion ; they could not reconcile the despatch of the books to you with the statement that you had made. Who was responsible for that comment I do not know. It is unfortunate that this happened. I wish to say that no Party in this House has upheld the dignity of the Chair more consistently than the Party on whose behalf I speak, and they will always endeavour to do so.

Mr. President : I would like to ask the Leader of the European Group whether, in the opinion of his Party, Members of this Assembly are allowed, or should be allowed, without notice by this House, to make any imputation of partiality against the Chair, and whether, because there is a free press in this country, the Press should be allowed to indulge in accusations of partiality against the Chair.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : I do not think that the Press should engage in anything but ordinary fair comment. But it is sometimes very difficult to draw the line. As regards the Members, they have every right in private conversation to say anything they like. (Cheers.) Of course it is obviously wrong to bring the dignity of the Chair into contempt, and to criticise publicly his rulings as being partial.

Mr. President : I have not been able to follow the Honourable Member. Is it the view of the Honourable Member and his Party that because there is a free press in this country, the Press should be allowed to indulge in accusations of partiality against the President of this Assembly ? And is it also the view of the European Group that Members of this House, official or non-official, are allowed to indulge in such criticisms in the Lobby against the Chair ?

Mr. H. G. Cocke : As regards the Press, I do not agree that the Press ought to impute partiality to the Chair. But there may be comment which is allowable without definitely imputing partiality to the Chair.

So far as Lobby gossip goes, I am afraid it is not possible to control the lips of Honourable Members.

Mr. President : Is it open to the Honourable Member to go into the Lobby and say that the President was influenced by Party interests in giving a particular ruling ?

Mr. H. G. Cocke : I did not say that. I said comment.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, my colleagues of the Independent Party desire that I should convey to you their resentment at the malicious criticism which has been under reference in the House.

The Honourable the Home Member suggested that everybody who works in public should have broad backs for criticism of this nature. We in this House are accustomed to carry broad backs, but we are jealous as far as the President of this Assembly is concerned. It is only proper, Sir, that those who enjoy your hospitality in the Press Gallery should realise their responsibility and not indulge in anything that verges on malice or ill will. In the ordinary course, a casual remark would not have been taken notice of by either my Honourable friend, the Pandit, or Lala Lajpat Rai.

But, Sir, there has been a continuous effort at this campaign of vilification of the Chair, an effort to provoke this House, at least this part of the House, to assert that they will not allow and will not stand any further vilification of the President of this House. (Hear, hear.) The debate this morning, if it proves anything at all, proves one thing and that is, that this House, now that an opportunity is available, strongly disapproves of the continued attacks on the President. If I may go further, I will say, although there is no motion before the House, that we should like you to take such steps regarding the members of the Press Gallery, as you think necessary to vindicate the honour of, and discipline within, this House. Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Cocke referred to the freedom of the Press in this country. We, Indians, want a free Press more than any other section in this country, but we want that free Press to behave with decency and in a manner which will not lower the dignity of the Legislative Assembly and its embodiment, the President, wantonly and in a manner which is almost disgusting. If one had a right to stand up for a free Press, one had also a duty to see that the impartiality of the President is not questioned in such a partial and prejudiced manner and spirit.

There should be no difference of opinion as regards the impartiality of the Chair. As the President of the Legislative Assembly, he is elected by the whole House, the Indian as well as the European group. We should all stand by the Chair, and protect it from such vilification as is under discussion now. The correct and manly method would be, for any disgruntled section of the House, to bring in a vote of no-confidence in the President and the majority of the House know exactly how that motion would be received.

One word more and I have finished. Mr. Cocke referred to the Honourable Member Mr. Graham's explanation regarding the books. I have heard his explanation and all that I will say is that it strikes me that if he wanted any further information on that score, instead of finding it out from the Librarian, or the Secretary, his proper course was to see you, Sir, in your room and find out from you what his curiosity demanded. To that extent, I feel that the separation of the Legislative Assembly Secretariat from the general Secretariat is more than justified and that demand has now been proved to be not premature.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I do not know how to enter into this debate. All that I can say is that the dignity of the Chair and the honour and respect of the President must be maintained. (Hear, hear.) I do not believe that there is a single Member in this House who thinks otherwise. As far as I have learnt from the speeches of all the Members who have spoken on the subject from this side or that side of the House, I think they are all unanimous on the point that the President commands their confidence and respect and that the dignity of the Chair is the one wish they have in their mind to maintain. I also associate myself with the desire of the whole House to uphold the dignity of the Chair and the honour and respect of the President.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, this controversy, to my mind, has arisen only out of misunderstanding which had been caused through some misunderstanding which had crept into the minds of the people who were not really aware of the true facts as has been revealed by the Honourable Mr. Graham. The indictment of the Government Member coming from Lala Lajpat Rai was, I suppose, based on some misunderstanding. If he had waited to listen to the explanation given by the Member of the Government, whose name you did not mention and who could not therefore get up earlier, if only my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai had listened to the explanation, he would not have said what he uttered in his speech. For this House to take any action against or to speak in such loud terms against any Member of the House who happens to be only a member of the Government is not dignified, unless the House and all the Members of the House are in possession of facts which can be available to them. I suppose after hearing the explanation of Mr. Graham everybody in the House is of opinion that the drastic action which Lala Lajpat Rai wanted the Government to take against the Government official is absolutely unnecessary and that his suggestion is only based on a misunderstanding.

The second point to which I want to refer on behalf of the Members with whom I am closely associated is that we have got confidence in you, as the President of the House. If anybody is aggrieved and if anybody has any objection against your continuing as President, the best course for him is to bring a motion of no-confidence in you. The fact that nobody has brought in any motion of no-confidence shows that we have full confidence in you and we will continue to repose confidence in you until and unless we take a different action in this respect.

Then, Sir, about the comments in the Press I do not want to say much about that. But I think it will be setting a very bad example if the House were to indulge in petty criticisms about the comments which might be made in different parts of the country or in different parts of the world. We can only confine ourselves to the actions and criticisms which come from the Press in India, if they are maliciously and deliberately meant to mislead the public. I heard carefully the argument of the Honourable Pandit, the Leader of the Opposition, and I wanted to see in his statement at least one condemnation of one paper, which I am sorry, Sir, I failed to find. I did not find any condemnation in his statement about that paper.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member justifying the report that appeared in the London Daily Telegraph and was cabled to this country that the President was acting in the interests of certain parties ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : If the Chair will allow me, I will finish in my own way. In yesterday's issue of the Pioneer I find side by side with the comment on which the present discussion is based another comment in which the Pioneer says that the Government officials inspired certain Muslims to issue their statement and that 28 Members have signed this statement repudiating the Nehru Report. That comment has not been condemned by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. It is absolutely malicious and untrue that any Muslim Member has been inspired by the Government.....

Mr. President : That is not the question before the House. The question is whether the Press is entitled to indulge in accusations of partiality against the Chair.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : The comments referred not only to the Chair but also to all the Members of the House. There is reference to gossip that goes on in the Lobby and I find that the report itself appeared in the Pioneer that the Government officials inspired the Muslim Members in the Lobby to issue their statement against the Nehru Report.

Mr. President : Order, order. I cannot allow this occasion to be utilised for other purposes. Does the Honourable Member wish to continue ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I was only saying, Sir, that if the dignity of the Chair is in possession of the House, then the dignity of the Members of this House is in the possession of the Chair.

Mr. President : Order, order. If the Honourable Member wishes to raise that question, he can do it to-morrow. This is not the occasion for it.

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Sir, it appears to me that if we desired to maintain the dignity of the Chair and this House the straighter we talk the better. So far as the Press is concerned, you, Sir, have the right to discipline those members who abuse the privileges of the Press Gallery and I presume you will take such action as you consider necessary to maintain the privilege of the House.

Mr. President : But I want your advice ; I want the advice of the House.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : I consider, Sir, that as regards the Press we cannot possibly in this House take up every matter that is the subject of criticism. In so far as this House is concerned, if we have any criticisms to make it is on the floor of the House that those criticisms should be made and I am not concerned with every petty correspondent who chooses to air his opinions in various newspapers.

Mr. President : That does not settle the question. I want to know definitely your view, whether you justify or defend the attacks made on the President.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : As regards your two rulings which have come up in front of this House on points of order raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I have accepted your ruling every time, Sir, and I believe those rulings were correct.

I want next to take the question of the repetition of gossip in the Lobbies on the floor of the House. Members opposite have attacked Government Members and non-official Europeans for having made comments on the rulings made by the Chair. I myself have heard similar comments made by Members of the Opposition Party. I want to be perfectly clear on this point. Everybody makes comments and will continue to make comments on the rulings of the Chair. So far as those rulings are not challenged on the floor of the House, those rulings are accepted.

My third point concerns the last point of order raised by the Honourable Pandit. The Honourable Pandit endeavours for his own purposes and quite legitimately to play a dilatory game with regard to this particular Bill and it is to me perfectly right that the other side should endeavour to find out all that the Honourable Pandit is doing. That is perfectly legitimate in the game of politics. But I do think the Honourable Pandit should have had the courtesy to tell the Government and the Chair of the point of order that he proposed to raise. If that had been done, much of the mischief would not have arisen.

Now there is one other point to which I wish to refer. I am glad to see that Honourable Members opposite are concerned over the question of the dignity of the Chair and the conduct of the Press Gallery, and I would be glad to see them equally concerned when a member of the Government is attacked ; but when this happened last year I did not hear any expression of opinion from the Benches opposite. By all means let us maintain the dignity of this House and the Chair at all times and be equally considerate on all occasions regarding it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : My Honourable and gallant friend Colonel Crawford has accused me of want of courtesy. If he had only known what the courtesy of debate and argument is, he would have accused the other side of ignorance when they complained of want of notice. I, Sir, belong to a profession in which I have to be always prepared for all kinds of objections sprung upon me, and to meet them, if I know my brief at all. Those who father a Bill in this House are expected to know whether it is intra vires or ultra vires of the House. They must be ready to meet all sorts of legal and technical objections which do not involve an investigation of the facts. That is the courtesy of debate and that is the law and the practice everywhere.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the Honourable the Leader of my Party has answered one of the points which the Honourable and gallant Member of the European non-official group (Colonel Crawford) raised in this House. Sir, he referred to the practice of his profession ; and if, I may add one more point, I may allude to the practice of my Party ; we are here not to make things easy for the Government. We belong to a Party which is not here to help a foreign Government, and therefore, Sir, I do not think it would be proper judging from our own principles, and professions and the ethics of our Party—I do not believe it would be playing the game, to give previous notice to the Government. Both legally and morally the Leader of my Party was acting not only according to the ethics of the great profession to which he has the honour to belong, but also according to the etiquette of the Party whose cause he has the privilege to espouse on this side of the House.

Another observation which fell from the Honourable and gallant gentleman on the other side was that the House should devote as much sympathy, give as much attention, when an Honourable gentleman on the Government Benches is attacked from the Press Gallery.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : My point was the action of a member of the Press Gallery was deserving of just as much criticism in the previous case as in the present.

Lala Lajpat Rai : We did criticise it.

Mr. K. C. Roy : The gallant Colonel is possibly not aware that the man was taken by two Members of this House to Sir Basil Blackett and there was a case pending against him in the courts ; so the matter could not properly have been discussed in this House.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I believe a certain amount of confusion is betrayed by these observations. It ought to be understood definitely that the position of Government as well as the position of the Opposition is the same ; but the position of the Chair is very different. The Chair is above politics. The Chair is above Parties. And when the Chair is attacked from a party point of view—I believe the Times of India belongs to a party which is adequately represented in this House—when the Chair is assailed from a partisan standpoint and when the Chair is maliciously misrepresented, I believe, Sir, it is the duty of the Government to take proper action. We know, Sir, that certain Bills are presented to this House and I believe the Foreign Secretary has also one Bill to amend certain laws in regard to the Press. And the Government have a similar duty to perform, in view of certain observations which have been made against the Chair who cannot protect himself and whom the House cannot protect if the Government, which is unfortunately not responsible to this House, does not take adequate steps. Because it is a free Press it does not follow it is a Press which has a charter as wide as the wind to blow on whom it likes. The Times of India is a party paper ; I almost said a Government paper, a semi-Government paper. Since the Pioneer has ceased to be a Government paper and has entered the ranks of honest independent journalism, say as the Daily Mail in England ; since the Pioneer has given up its pro-Government policy, the only newspaper in the country which is a Government paper is the Times of India. Sir, I do not want you to excuse that paper as belonging to the free Press. Freedom does not mean licence to attack the Chair. Such a thing would not have been tolerated in the House of Commons which has the right of summoning the offender before it.

I am aware that the attack on the Chair is, however, part of the present situation. Sir, an anti-Indian campaign has been started in England. The Daily Telegraph belongs to the group which is a centre of antagonism to Indian aspirations. It is a powerful Tory paper. Notwithstanding the fact that one of the proprietors of the Daily Telegraph is on the Royal Commission, the Daily Telegraph has been following its old policy of discrediting Indian aspirations. It is, I suspect, part of an Anglo-Indian programme, it is part of a conspiracy to discredit the Chair so that in future it may be said that no non-official President should be in the Chair, so that there may be a going back to the pre-Montagu period of an official President. Sir, it is all part of a sinister propaganda.

I do not know how the Chair can protect itself by expelling a member from the Press Gallery, even though he is entitled to expel that member. What is needed is a more comprehensive step than that. The matter is one in which the Government, if it is impartial, will have to take very strong action. It is a matter in which the Publicity Officer should have issued a timely contradiction.

I have not been reading the paper in question lately, but I thought that it was the duty of a certain gentleman who happens to belong to this House and to the Government, I mean the Publicity Officer, in a matter of that kind, to have issued a timely contradiction, because if he had done so this question would not have been raised on the floor of this House. The Government, so far as the Chair is concerned, I am afraid, have not been performing their duty properly. I hope, that in future at least the Government will give an undertaking that when the Chair is unscrupulously attacked, as it has been attacked in this particular case, by the comments in the Times of India, the Publicity Officer will issue a timely contradiction. I am afraid I must arraign the Government Publicity Officer of not having done his duty by the Chair on this particular occasion. I must also arraign the Government of a very grave omission to perform their duty to the Chair, to the Speaker of India's Parliament. And I am afraid, Sir, that this discussion is a direct outcome of the Government's omission to perform what was obviously their duty in this matter.

One word more, Sir, and I have done. This House is known, at least in semi-official circles, as " the Monkey House ". (Laughter), and the treatment that has been given to the Chair is as that of a President of a Monkey House. Sir, I have seen another Monkey House, a House of White Monkies in Westminster. (Laughter.) Sir, that House is more ferocious than this House.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not entitled to speak in such derogatory terms either of this House or of the House of Commons.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I do not for a moment endorse the particular description which I just mentioned, and I do not for a moment suggest that Honourable Members either would endorse that description, but I say that in semi-official circles such language is used. Sir, if I have offended the dignity of this or another House by quoting that expression, I withdraw that expression. But what I want to point out is this, that there is in Westminster a House of more ferocious animals, two-legged animals, and even in that country where there is also a more ferocious Press, I am not aware, though I am a fairly accurate student of English journalism, of the Speaker of the House of Commons having been attacked in the Press in the manner in which the Chair of this House has been attacked in regard to the particular matter under discussion, and I expect, Sir, the Government to give such protection to the Chair as the House of Commons would have given if the occasion had arisen. The occasion does not arise there, because it is a British House of Commons and the newspapers are British newspapers. In this particular case, it is a non-Indian newspaper which has attacked the Chair. It is a racial question, pure and simple, and I want that when such a racial propaganda is started.....

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Never, never.

(Cries of " Withdraw, withdraw " from the European Group.)

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I say that when there is a simultaneous publication in India and in England trying to discredit the first non-official Chairman, it is part of a deliberate, mischievous, racial campaign. (Cries of " No, no " and " never " from the European Group.)

You may say " Never " and " No, no ", but I am entitled to draw this conclusion. I am absolutely within my rights to draw this conclusion, when there is a simultaneous publication in India and in England in the Press, when there is a suspicious coincidence of this kind, I am perfectly entitled to conclude that it is part of a plot to discredit the first non-official President, that it is part of a conspiracy to go back to those days of autocracy when the Chair was occupied by an alien. (Cheers.) You may exclaim " Never, never ", but I am entitled to draw my own conclusion, and it is that conclusion that compels me to make this comment. And, Sir, as the Foreign Secretary is ready with a Bill when he sees that the Indian Press has got to be further strangled, it is not too much for the Home Member also to prepare a Bill to give adequate protection to the Chair.

Mr. President : I should like to know if there is any Member in this House who desires to defend the reports of the correspondents of the Times of India and the London Daily Telegraph.

(There was no answer.)

I take it that the general desire on the part of the House is to condemn these two correspondents.

I do not propose to give my decision on the spot on the questions raised. After I got this copy of the Pioneer from the Home Department yesterday, I went through it and found that the Pioneer had made very serious allegations against the Government. I also found in the report the following statement :

" Your correspondent has definite evidence which goes far to incriminate the Home Department."

[Mr. President.]

Well, I am sure the House would like me to make inquiry into the matter. (Several Honourable Members : " Certainly ".) Yesterday, after I got this copy, I wrote to the Editor of the Pioneer immediately, as follows :

" Dear Mr. Wilson,

My attention has been drawn to the report published in to-day's Pioneer from a special correspondent, Simla, September 11th. I shall be grateful if you will kindly let me know on what materials the following statements in that report are based:

1. 'Long suspect, he is now openly accused in the Government Lobbies by officials of being partial. 'It's a put up job', was the comment of one official member on Pandit Motilal Nehru's point of order on the Public Safety Bill. 'Patel is dead against us'.'

2. ' That the press correspondent of a London newspaper is in close touch with the Government'.

3. ' Your correspondent has definite evidence which goes far to incriminate the Home Department.'

Will you also let me have the name of the official referred to in statement No. 1 above."

Now, this is the reply that I received from the Editor of the Pioneer :

" Dear Mr. Patel,

I am in receipt of your letter of September 13th with reference to the message published in the Pioneer from a Special Political Correspondent, and dated Simla, September 11th. I very much regret that in accordance with long established journalistic practice it is impossible for me to answer your questions, or to supply you with the information you desire. I am sure you will realise that journalism, and especially political journalism, would become impossible if the sources of information were to be divulged, even in a case of such seriousness as the present one. I can assure you, however, that despite the ridiculous published denial of the Government of India on the subject, there exists a full and ample basis for the statements made in the issue of the Pioneer you mention, and that the message was carefully written with a proper sense of responsibility. The actuating motives were to protest against a reprehensible use of parliamentary journalism, to draw attention to the prejudiced attitude of Members of the House who are also Government officials, and to conserve the dignity which you, Sir, should enjoy, as President of the Assembly.

I am sure that if proper and searching enquiries are instituted, it will be found an easy matter to substantiate the Pioneer's statements. I regret that I am unable to depart from responsible journalistic custom."

I appreciate the difficulty of the Editor of the Pioneer, but I think he would supply me with full information confidentially on points on which he says he has got definite evidence, and I propose to ask him to do so. What use I should make of the information I cannot say at present. I think under the circumstances I should not give my decision to-day. Will you therefore allow me to defer the decision to some day next week on all these points ?

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

THE PUBLIC SAFETY (REMOVAL FROM INDIA) BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion and amendments moved on the 10th September 1928 :

Motion moved by the Honourable Mr. Crerar :

That the Bill to provide for the removal from British India in certain cases of persons not being Indian British subjects or subjects of States in India, be taken into consideration :

Amendment moved by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt :

That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

Further amendment moved by Sir Hari Singh Gour :

That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtoola, Sir Victor Sassoon, Nawab Sir Zulfikar Ali Khan, Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, the Honourable the Home Member and the Mover with instructions to report within three days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be four.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy (Burdwan and Presidency Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am grateful to you for giving me an opportunity of speaking to-day, as I am anxious not to record a silent vote on a question like the one before the House. I also feel that I should not allow to pass unnoticed some of the remarks of the previous speaker on the Benches opposite. I regret, Sir, that I was not in the House when Mr. Joshi and Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas spoke and I am sorry to have missed their speeches. But I was in the House when Mr. McWatters spoke and I agree with him when he said that visitors from abroad, foreign propagandists, acquire an exaggerated importance in the eyes of unsophisticated Labour in India and that they are more potent for mischief than any Indian agitator, however clever. Sir, it is the same thing all the world over, that Tom, Dick and Harry coming to India receive more attention than they are ever likely to receive in their own country, just as Indian visitors abroad are lionised, feasted and fed and treated to champagne dinners by the unsophisticated people of England or Russia who look upon them as budding Lenins and Trotskys of the future Soviet of India. My Honourable friend Sriman Srinivasa Iyengar, I think, will not hesitate to bear testimony to the truth of the saying that prophets are more honoured in other countries than their own. He has just returned from his tour round the world in eighty days or rather his Grand Tour in Europe, full of enthusiasm for foreign ideas, hypnotised by the Red regime in Russia, just as young Easterns on their first visit to Western lands are hypnotised by the white culture and civilisation of the West. Sir, speeches, however barren of arguments, exercise powerful influence on emotional minds, and I confess that despite its froth and foam, the torrential eloquence of Lala Lajpat Rair nearly swept me off my feet. I am therefore grateful to my Honourable friend, Mr. Iyengar, for bringing me back to my bearings. He afforded the House an object lesson of the dangers of impact with foreign ideals and foreign culture, and how the subtle and insidious propaganda of Communists can produce baneful effects even on a mature and balanced mind like that of the ex-Advocate General of Madras.

He talked of freedom of thought and of freedom of expression. I hope his ardour has cooled a bit by the debate this morning as regards the freedom of expression which degenerates into license. He also attempted to make fun at the expense of the Honourable the Home Member for introducing in the Bill the words " destruction of property ". Well, I think he is still labouring under the influence of his late visit to Russia and he fails to make any distinction between destruction of property for sanitation or any lawful purpose and wanton destruction of property as advocated by the Communists. Sir, my Honourable friend declined to tell the House how long he was in Russia. He was in a fix. But we all know that the whole period of his peregrination in Europe did not occupy more time than the globe-trotting of Miss Mayo in India. Yet he waxed eloquent on the advantages of Communism in action in Russia and the achievements of the Soviet Government there. He told us about the concession granted to Mussalmans by the Soviet Government of having the use of their mosques. What a grand testimony to the tolerance of that land of freedom !! He never told us the names of his Russian chaperons or Moslem guides. For aught we know, the Kazprinskys, and Bulbul Amirs whom he met at Moscow might have been Communist propagandists in disguise or un-Muslim, unrepresentative Muslims of the type on whose support he relies for that document of " friendly gesture " which he flaunts in the face of the world and of Lord Birkenhead as proof of Hindu-Moslem unity and Indian nationhood. He shuts his eyes to the fact that 28 Members of the Central Legislature have emphatically repudiated that precious document spontaneously, and not at the instigation or inspiration of Government, the baseless insinuations of the Pioneer notwithstanding. He also referred to the Home Member as a past master in the art of window dressing. I wonder if my friend was aware of the fact that his Russian friends are grand masters in the art of stage management. He has told the House that he is none the worse for his visit to Russia and that he is as much a Hindu as he was before his visit there. I doubt if he is the best judge of that situation. Patients often do not discern the symptoms which are visible to doctors. We have not heard of the voice of orthodox Brahmanism yet. We do not know what penalties he will have to pay or what prayaschitta he will have to perform for having crossed the " black seas " before he is rehabilitated as a good Hindu, unless my friend Lala Lajpat Rai comes to his rescue and performs the shuddhi. Lala Lajpat Rai who railed at Sir Hari Singh Gour for his heterodoxy.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I have never performed any shuddhi in all my life.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Sir, there is not much to choose, in the eyes of the Sanatanists, between Lala Lajpat Rai and Sir Hari Singh Gour. It was a question of the kettle calling the pot black. Well, I sympathised with Lala Lajpat Rai when he told us that he found it difficult to choose between Imperialism and Communism. Safely entrenched as he is in the stronghold and citadel of communalism, it is difficult for him to do so even as it is at times difficult for him to choose between Capital and Labour. Lala Lajpat Rai theatrically jingled and shook in the face of Sir Hari Singh Gour the money bag. He has spent many years of his life in the land of the Almighty Dollar. He preached an eloquent sermon on the powers of money. He need not have done that. We all acknowledge the power of money. We all bow to Mammon and we all see Mr. Birla sitting behind him. (Laughter.) I agree with Lalaji at least so far as his opinion of Sir Hari Singh is concerned. Like Lalaji I also suspect Sir Hari Singh Gour of being a disguised Communist or a dangerous social revolutionary, for his Bills on marriage and divorce are nothing short of revolutionary laughts on the family life of Hindus, Muslims and Parsis alike. I ught that Sir Hari Singh Gour would welcome the advent of Soviet ıs and Bolshevik propaganda in India. I am surprised to find that he is porting the Bill. (Laughter.) But consistency is a virtue unknown polities. It springs strange surprises and makes strange allies.

Now, I come to my redoubtable friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, my Honour- e friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, for whose oratorical powers and rhetorical hts I have genuine admiration. His speech the other day, sensible, er and sedate, on the Resolution asking for increase in Judges' salaries l his frenzied oration the other day wherein he declaimed against the posed legislation as by lunatics for lunatics have left me wondering ether there is such a thing as a lucid interval for orators and iticians. He said that the Honourable the Home Member's speech was oid of common sense and that the speech of his Leader was " com- t of common sense ". Well, common sense is not a common commodity. s rare and elusive and eludes the grasp of even clever men like my Honour- e friend. Had it not deserted him when declaimed the other day he uld not have treated the House to the " uncommon sense " he did, affect- superior knowledge and arrogating wisdom and knowledge to himself. spoke of the speech of his Leader as being full of common sense. I not quite sure whether it was full of sense, common or otherwise, but m certain that it was full of maudlin tears. His heart was breaking r the attack on the cherished rights and liberties of the Britishers. Sir, vas reminded of the old Bengali proverb that he who loves a child more . ın its mother is a witch. But by no stretch of imagination or violence language can the venerable Pandit be described as a witch. He is a at wizard. He is a past master and an adept in the jugglery of words l phrases. Sir, I rubbed my eyes and sat in my seat when with bell, ok and candle he stood over there and deftly dangled before the House well-known maxim regarding the reciprocity of allegiance and pro- tion and conveniently affected to forget the other and more appropriate axim salus populi suprema lex—the safety of the people is the ghest law. I wondered when that great wizard, that great master of ignuage rose in his seat to weave his web of witchery of words and talked the cherished rights of Britishers whether he was not referring to ıssians whose hospitality he had lately enjoyed, whose salt he had re- ntly tasted even as when he told us not long ago that the country stood the Independence Resolution at Madras, he meant Dominion Status. perhaps it is the other way about. When he tells us of Dominion atus he means Independence. Now, my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga er, Father India, referred to the House of Commons as the " Barren oman " but I.....

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Non-uhammadan Rural) : I quoted Mahatma Gandhi who called it a barren oman, but I referred to it as the " Whore of Parliaments ".

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : I do not know whether " Whore of Parlia- nts " is a Parliamentary expression or not. It is for the Chair to decide point. But I congratulate my friend on his good taste. My Honour- le friend, however, quoted with approval the description of Mahatma ndhi of the British Parliament as a barren woman.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Yes.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Even my friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, will not deny that but for that barren woman the prolific Mahatma Gandhi would never have conceived that abortive child of his called the " Ind Swaraj ".

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Nonsense.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Even my friend will admit that, but for that barren woman, this Assembly would not have come into being and become a spot " where girt with friend or foe a man can talk what he will "—sense or nonsense if he will. Sir, it has been said by a gentleman from the Benches opposite in a speech, whether full or devoid of sense I leave it for Mr. Ranga Iyer to decide, that India need not be afraid of revolutionary movements. " There has been no revolution here for 3,000 years." I entirely agree with that. It is quite true. The benevolent despots of 3,000 years ago would never come before an Assembly—representative or unrepresentative—and beg for power to deport undesirable aliens. They knew how to deal with them, and to give them the short shrift and extirpate Communism in thought and theory, root and branch, as they did with Buddhism in India and Mazdakism in Persia. They would never resort to the method adopted by the Honourable the Home Member. They knew of a swifter, shorter and cheaper method. They would have caught hold of them and cast them in grass sacks into the lakes of Kashmir or into the Indian Ocean to drown like puppies and pariah dogs. No wonder there had been no revolution in India.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I must congratulate the learned speaker who has preceded me on his maiden effort in sarcasm. I waited patiently from beginning to end to find a word said about this Bill, but I was disappointed. It was, as has been suggested by a friend behind me, a barren speech. But it was not barren in words. It was very prolific in satire and I congratulate my friend, on his maiden effort as I understand it. I hope he will improve in course of time. But I must now talk as a man of affairs and on the Bill which is before the House. I must say at the very outset that I rise to oppose the Bill—whether it is common sense or not in the opinion of my friend Dr. Suhrawardy, and I also oppose the motion for reference to the Select Committee.

Now, Sir, that this is legislation of a repressive character does not admit of any doubt. Three things have to be made out before any attempt at passing such legislation can succeed. The first is the urgency of the measure. The second is the justification for discarding the ordinary processes of law and trying to have extraordinary powers. Thirdly, even if extraordinary powers are necessary and required, it has to be made out that the weapons already in the armoury of Government of the same class are not sufficient for the purpose. We know, Sir, that on our Statute-book there are repressive measures of various kinds, and, as I shall show later in the course of my speech, and as has in fact already been shown, if the only intention of the Government is to deal with Communism, to deal with these undesirable Britishers or aliens who may be found in this country, there is ample provision for it in the law either by a trial according to law or by resort to these lawless laws which have been allowed to remain on the Statute-book. The very learned speech of the Honourable the Home Member, which I listened to with the greatest attention, I submit has failed to make out any of these three points. It was, Sir, an elaborate piece of literary performance ; it may well have been taken as a prize essay on Communism or on the duties of Governments, but we did not hear any justification for this measure which he wishes this House to pass. He says, " I know more than I say, but I cannot divulge it ". Well, Sir, I do not think that any Member of this House is gifted with the power of reading the thoughts of the Honourable the Home Member. What he has in his mind, we are not gifted enough to deal with before he takes us into his confidence ; but, so far, he has not taken us into his confidence as to what it is actually that has happened and is happening which has made this measure necessary. Of course he has described in glowing colours the dangers of Communism, the dangers of a Red revolution, and a great deal has been said on the floor of this House about the terrors of Communism. I could see my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, visibly affected while the Home Member was drawing a very graphic picture of those horrors. Well, I shall deal with them later, but for the present I want to confine myself to the business part and leave the sentimental part alone. We have got to examine the business part of the Bill from these three standpoints : is there any urgency for it, is there any necessity even if urgency is made out, to depart from the ordinary procedure of the law of the land, and to resort to extraordinary means, and even assuming, without admitting that it is a case where the ordinary procedure of the law will not be enough, are there not extraordinary provisions of the law already in force of which the Government can avail themselves ? My Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, showed by a comparison of the Regulations and Acts which are already in force, that no new law is needed. Now there is no doubt that things have happened in India which bear a very suspicious resemblance to the doings of Communists in other parts of the world. There is no doubt also that there are some people, but they are a very negligible proportion here who might be said to belong to the Communist Party, but no attempt has been made either on the floor of this House or in any court of law to connect the atrocities referred to with the Communists in India or elsewhere. In fact the labour unrest and cases of sabotage and other things which have happened may equally well have arisen from natural and economic causes. But because they are there and because this Red terror is also somewhere hovering about, it is argued that the one must be connected with the other. I submit that is a very false argument and will not be acceptable to this House. Why I think, Sir, it would be equally reasonable to say that all these labour troubles in the south of India and the wreck and ruin which has followed in their wake is due to my friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar and myself who have recently been to Russia. It is true and the fact is admitted. We have been there, my friend more recently than I. And we come back and say things ; what is more reasonable than to believe that it is we who are the cause of the trouble. Is there any greater evidence against any Communist than that ? The fact is that this great Government is in a state of panic and its mind is unhinged just by two persons. I do not know them at all personally. They may be very insignificant people ; they may be very important people ; but the names of Bradlaw and Spratt are as red rag to a bull to the Government. But why can not you deal with these two miserable creatures with all the armoury you possess ? I really cannot understand that.

Then, Sir, great reliance is placed upon a letter which is alleged to have been written—at least it is typed—at any rate the author is said to be M. N. Roy. Now I was very anxious to see the original of this letter and I thank the Honourable the Home Member for the courtesy of showing it to me. I have also been provided by the courtesy of the Honourable the

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

Home Member with a printed copy of that letter. I have taken the trouble to compare the printed copy with the typed copy, as corrected, which is in the possession of the Home Department. Now, Sir, I find that the corrections are mostly typist's errors ; a word here and a word there, either added or substituted for a word already there. The rest is all in type. The letter is not signed by anybody ; the name does not appear even in type. The forwarding letter is wholly in type ending with the words " Best Wishes, J." The sender calls himself " J ". That is also in type. Then we come to the cover. The address is in manuscript and that address is supposed to have been examined, together with the corrections in the body of the letter, by experts in handwriting and they have pronounced the handwriting to be that of M. N. Roy. Now, all that they could possibly have done, and all that they probably did do, was that they compared the handwriting with other handwritings which were laid before them ; and all that they could say, and all that they probably did say, was that these writings were by one and the same person, whether it is M. N. Roy, or M. N. Banerjee or Bradley, we cannot say. Now, as every beginner in the practice of law knows, there are two things essential for a reliable comparison of handwriting, either it must be compared with an admitted handwriting or it must be compared with a handwriting which is proved to be the writing of the man. Now, I am sure M. N. Roy is not in communication with the Government and he has not admitted that those writings that they possess are his. How then were those writings which they possess proved to be his ? By what evidence ? I asked a question and I was told " internal evidence." I am not aware of any kind of internal evidence which would identify the writer of a document with the text of it, simply because it expresses certain views. Now, we all know what Communists' views are and I do not think great ingenuity is required to put them down on paper for anyone, and if those views are proved to be those of M. N. Roy, who has published many books, then the natural conclusion is that this letter is M. N. Roy's. Sir, I refuse to look at that evidence, in spite of the enquiry that I have made.....

3 P.M.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has already looked at it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : .....as a piece of evidence. I have seen it, Sir, and I have satisfied myself that that letter is not worth considering as a piece of evidence. Now, a great part of the speech of the Honourable the Home Member was occupied by the reading of extracts, long extracts, from that letter. I do not wish to go into those extracts ; they are not opinions which I can support nor is it for me to say that they are wrong or right, because they are not my opinions and I am not on my trial. But whether that letter has caused anything to happen in India which could necessitate a measure like this is the question, and if it has really caused it, whose doing is it ? I have here more substantial evidence of a higher class than is adduced to identify this letter with M. N. Roy. The letter was in the hands of the officers of the Government. The Press could not get hold of it except through the Government ; and if that letter is responsible for any unrest anywhere, I submit that the initial responsibility lies with the Government. But we all know what it is and speakers who have preceded me have said what that means. We know the psychological moment at which that letter was published, the moment when the reforms and the constitution of India are in the melting pot, the moment when this Bill was decided upon. Publication shortly before that would form a useful first step to the legislation which is now before the House ; otherwise why should it have been kept back so long ? I find there is a mistake as to time. The letter is dated the 30th December and the forwarding letter is dated the 5th February and the postal stamp is dated.....

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : 12th of May, I think.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : It is the 16th May. If it is a letter which should have been published for some other reason, it could have been published long before ; but what earthly reason could there be for the publication of a letter of this character by the Government ? Was it to instruct the people of India in the principles of Communism, or was it a step leading to something else ? I cannot understand it. I submit, therefore, that the fact of publication of this letter at the particular time it was published, lends this legislation a very suspicious appearance.

Apart from that letter, the rest of the speech of the Honourable the Home Member was, as I have said only a description of the terrors of Communism. It might be enough to terrify old women and children, but I am sorry to say that it had no effect on hard-headed men of affairs like us. But I heard nothing more astounding in my life than the assertion made by that great lawyer and my great friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour. He said it may be that the letter is not proved, it may be that M. N. Roy never sent that letter, and it may be that we cannot trace the authorship to anybody, but the mere fact that that letter exists in India is enough reason for taking some step to provide against Communism. That argument answers itself, and I do not think I need take the time of the House to deal with it.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Has M. N. Roy denied the signature and his writing ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : There is no signature. Perhaps that was left to you. (Laughter.) I thought the Honourable Member was following me. That letter, unfortunately, was not signed.

Then there was another argument adduced by the Honourable the Home Member, and the case tried by the Allahabad High Court was referred to. That case cannot be referred to as a precedent for anything. Did you or did you not succeed in securing a conviction in that case ? What was the difficulty experienced in the course of that trial as to the conviction of those men ? Were there any witnesses shot ? Is it pretended that exactly the same state of things prevails as was supposed to prevail at the time when the Bengal Ordinance was passed ? We have heard no facts about that ; in fact we know of no cases except this Allahabad trial which ended successfully in convictions. But there may be others. If so, by all means try them. But if there are no reasons for passing this measure to be found in the speech of the Honourable the Home Member, it will live in the classical phrase " Communism in action." Communism in action is certainly more dangerous than Communism in theory, but has he illustrated that by any examples ? Of course if he falls back upon his confidential knowledge and his inability to divulge it in this House, I have no arguments to advance.

Now, Sir, I will not take the time of the House to go into legislation which is already disfiguring our Statute-book, and which fully provides for a case like this. I am thankful to my Honourable friend the Law Member for pointing out in the course of his argument on the point of order that Europeans were not excluded from the operation of Regulation III of 1818. Well, if they are not excluded, does not that Regulation provide for the cases for which this new law is being enacted ? Is it not even more comprehensive than the present Bill ? Here you have specified certain offences and if the Governor General declares that a man answers to the description given in clause 2, then he may be treated in the way which the subsequent provisions of the Bill provide. But under Regulation III of 1818 nothing need be done. You have simply to take hold of the man and do as you please with him. Then if it covers the case of Britishers—and of course there is no doubt that it covers all the poor Indians—then the aliens also come in under it. But we have a separate Act dealing with foreigners and that is Act III of 1864. In fact some clauses of the present Bill seem to bear very strong family likeness to the sections of Act III of 1864, and exactly the same powers are now being asked for. My Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar has also called the attention of the House to the Criminal Law Amendment Act which can be used in cases of unlawful assemblies. But why have recourse to this extraordinary measure ? What clause 2, sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c) provide for are distinct and definite offences against the law of the land. All these have been jumbled up into this clause, but taking them one by one, we find they have been amply provided for in the Indian Penal Code and other criminal enactments. Where is the trouble in trying the man for those offences and how can anybody have any confidence in a mere declaration by a Governor General ?—I mean no offence to His Excellency. But it is not humanly possible for any man, whether he is a Governor General or even an official higher than that, to declare a person guilty of those offences some of which are very difficult to prove. We do not know upon what basis he will declare a person to come under this Bill. The persons will not be tried in courts.

My honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon opined that the reason why this Bill is opposed is, firstly, ignorance of the laws of other countries on the same point and, secondly, the firm conviction of the people of India that Communism will never have a hold in this country. Now, Sir, so far as the first charge is concerned, I am afraid there is not only no ignorance on this side of the House of the laws of other countries on the subject, but that they are only too well understood and known. Leaving aside the points about which other speakers have spoken, I wish to call the attention of the House to the law as it stands in England and as it stood in England. Now, as I said in my remarks in the course of my speech on the point of order, you must make a clear distinction between pre-war days, the war days and the post-war days. In times of war everything is suspended and any law can be passed ; but you will see in England, where the danger from Communism has been, and I assert is now, much greater than it is or it can ever be in India, how these people have been treated in England. Well, Sir, I will just examine a few Acts here. The pre-war legislation is the Aliens Act of 1905. In order to save the trouble of looking up many books I have had the necessary provisions summarised. Now there, how do you deal with undesirable aliens ? The Secretary of State may, if he thinks fit, make an order—in this Act referred to as an expulsion order—requiring an alien to leave the United Kingdom within a time fixed and thereafter to remain out of the United Kingdom—that summarises the whole of this Bill—(a) if it is certified to him by any court (including a court of summary jurisdiction) that the alien has been convicted by that court of any felony or misdemeanour and so on and so forth. Then after that we come to the War measure which is 4 and 5 George V, Chapter 26 That was in 1914. Now I ask the House carefully to consider the course of legislation in England even in times of danger, imminent danger and actual war. There His Majesty by Order in Council may prohibit certain things, prohibit aliens from landing, embarking or remaining in the country and so on. Then section 2 provides punishment for contravention. It is punishable on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, etc., etc. Exactly as in this Bill also, disobedience of the orders may be punishable after trial by a magistrate of the first class. Now, as I have submitted, that was perfectly justifiable in times of war. As soon as the war was over we have the next Act which is the 1919 Act. It is called 9 and 10 George V, Chapter 92. It is a continuance and extension of emergency powers. Section 1 (1) says :

"The powers which under sub-section (1) of section one of the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 (which Act, as amended by this Act, is hereinafter in this Act referred to as the principal Act), are exercisable with respect to aliens at any time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen, shall, for a period of one year after the passing of this Act, be exercisable, not only in those circumstances, but at any time ; and accordingly that sub-section shall, for such period as aforesaid, have effect as though the words 'at any time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen' were omitted

(2) Any order made under the principal Act during the currency of this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament forthwith, and, if an address is presented to His Majesty by either House of Parliament within the next subsequent twenty-one days on which that House has sat after any such order is laid before it praying that the order may be annulled, His Majesty in Council may annul the order, and it shall thenceforth be void, but without prejudice to the validity of anything previously done thereunder :

Provided that this provision shall not apply in the case of an order the operation of which is limited to a time when a state of war exists between His Majesty and any foreign power, or when it appears that an occasion of imminent national danger or great emergency has arisen."

Then section 3 says :

"(1) If any alien attempts or does any act calculated or likely to cause sedition or disaffection amongst any of His Majesty's Forces or the Forces of His Majesty's allies, or amongst the civilian population, he shall be liable on conviction on indictment to penal servitude for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months

(2) If any alien promotes or attempts to promote industrial unrest in any industry in which he has not been bonâ fide engaged for at least two years immediately preceding in the United Kingdom, he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months."

So that for the grave offence of inciting to rebellion in the army, the law, immediately after the war was over, lays it upon the executive to prosecute the man on indictment, and if he is found guilty, then he may be imprisoned, or when it comes to attempting to promote industrial unrest, then he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment.

Now, it was said by my Honourable friend Mr. Moore that, here we have not provided for any imprisonment ; let us send the man Home at our expense. If you examine the provisions of the Bill, you will find that, if the man does not care to obey the order, you do provide for his imprisonment, and, what is more, you deprive him of something which, I submit, whatever may be said about my point of order, no Englishman can be deprived of, and that is his right to habeas corpus. You say that section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall not apply to a person who has been committed to custody under clause 6 of the Bill. There is one right which travels with every Englishman all over the world, and it is the right of habeas corpus, wherever English courts exist. Of course, where there are no British courts, they will not take notice of that right. So it is much more than a mere infliction of a sentence of imprisonment. Now, that was only for one year, but these Acts were extended from time to time, and we find the last Continuance of Acts in Schedule, 17 and 18 George V, 1927, which repeals the whole Act of 1919, save section 1. So that you will see that in England, quite apart from the fact whether there is peace or war, there is much better treatment accorded even to aliens than you propose to accord to your own kith and kin, the Britishers, under the Bill. Sir, I submit that the proposed law is more likely to threaten society and civilization than the Communist activities have ever done.

Then there is a good deal said of the very generous exclusion of Indians from the operation of this Bill. But is that of any value ? Have you not got enough powers to deal with them ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Enough and to spare.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Yes, enough and to spare. Then, Sir, there is one point which has not been referred to by the speakers who have preceded me, and it is this. You have excluded British Indians, you have excluded States Indians ; but what about Indians in Chandernagore, in Pondicherry and in Goa ? They are not British subjects, and yet they have family ties, they have business ties with British India, and those ties cannot disappear by an imaginery line of separation from British territory. So far as my personal experience of their relations and family ties goes, it is simply impossible to say which of the members of that family will be considered French subjects and which will be considered British subjects. It has been said, Sir, " Let us take this Bill to Select Committee and see what we can make of it there." But can we make anything of it, except by an amendment which would go to the length of making this Bill nugatory ? The amendment I am referring to is an amendment providing for trial according to law and for that you do not want a special Act. Therefore I am opposed to a reference to Select Committee.

Now, Sir, a great deal has been said about the Soviet and the doings of the Soviet and the terrors it has spread throughout the world ; and my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, has in his concern for religion and society relied on two little books : one is called " The Assault of Heaven " by one A. Valentino. I do not know who this gentleman is. I borrowed the book from the Library and I read parts of it ; I do not find who this gentleman is and what is his authority to speak on the subjects at all ; but from what is written in that book, it seems that he is a religious enthusiast and he is always citing the Bible —not actually in parallel columns- as against the opinions expressed by a Soviet advisory council. So far as that goes I do not think it matters at all. There is no restriction now on anybody. One can safely be an athiest, a polytheist, a Muhammadan, Jew or Hindu and everybody is at liberty to have his own opinions : there is not a word implying compulsion in the whole of that book. People go to a sort of board constituted to advise people on various things—agriculture, industry and so on—and they ask the board, " Under such and such conditions, what should be done ? " If they do not go to the board, or if they do not take that advice, there is nothing to prevent them from following their own inclinations. I may mention here an instance which came to my own personal knowledge, when I was in Moscow. Just at the entrance of the Kremlin which was the palace of the Czars, there is a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. I saw crowds of people going into this chapel. I saw also posted on the opposite wall in big letters in three languages the writing " Religion is poison for the people." You were at liberty, in spite of that warning, to go into the chapel and there were hundreds of people who went into the chapel and worshipped and came out without molestation. The other book that was cited by my friend is by Arthur Shadwell. This gentleman seems to have written this book in his library after reading such literature as was available to him ; he seems to have had no first-hand information. The one thing that is apparent from that book is that he is a great believer in the Zinovieff letter which is now almost unanimously admitted to be mythical—indeed it has been proved to be a forgery. I will say one word there about the authenticity of this anti-Russian and anti-Soviet propaganda. A writer in the New York Nation describes how news is manufactured. The House is aware that a great part of the news from Russia comes through Riga and it is always the Riga correspondent of this or that paper that is supposed to send the news. Now this is what this writer in the New York Nation says as to how he became Riga correspondent of various newspapers :

" The first time I served as a Riga correspondent was in London. An editor made a correspondent of me by giving me an editorial leader clipped from one of the morning papers. He instructed me to recast part of it in the form of a dispatch and date it from Riga. The editorial was one reviewing in some detail the pernicious activities of the Third International. I must have rewritten it rather well, for later I was entrusted with other tasks of the same dficate nature. I became the paper's regular Riga correspondent—' from our own correspondent ', as they like to say in Fleet Street.

A year later I was in Paris and attached to a newspaper there. And in Paris I found myself again a Riga correspondent. The work was twofold now. There were French journals and English journals to rewrite. All of them, including the one in London which formerly employed me, seemed to boast of Riga correspondents. In all their dispatches there were revelations—Bolshevist atrocities, Cheka executions, Soviet economic difficulties, dissatisfaction of the people with the Government. As in London, this material was turned over to me ; and out of the mass another composite Riga correspondent was born."

This is how propaganda is done against Russia and Sovietism. Now, Sir, I have here something which is more reliable, and which I hope the House will agree is far more reliable than all the Riga correspondents rolled into one. I have not got the actual document here. I have it at my house. I did not bring it here. But I find extracts, which will serve my purpose published in the Daily Express of Madras, dated the 24th January, 1928. I owe it to the courtesy of the Honourable Mr. Coatman that I am able to read these extracts. These are extracts from the report of the British labour delegation to Russia. It is signed by 92 British—thoroughly British, full-fledged British—representatives of workers' organisations in England and Scotland, after personal investigation. They went and toured through Russia and they made this report as a result of their tour. I am giving you their description of what they found there as against the woeful tales of destruction and ruin that have been told in this House :

"The Bolsheviks are now replacing capitalism with another system of society—socialism. The damage done to the buildings, towns and bridges by the Imperialists and counter-revolutionaries was immense. Now these places are being erected anew. So far as the towns in Soviet Russia are abnormal, it is in the exceptional beauty and grandeur of a large proportion of the buildings, and in the wide streets and squares which are to be found in every district. These are inhabited from pre-revolutionary days, and the important point to us is that the revolution has preserved them, repaired them and in some instances which have come to our notice has actually improved their architectural and historical value by the restoration of features mutilated or obscured during recent Tsarist periods."

My Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon, has mentioned the "declassed intelligentsia", because we do not come under the category of workers and peasants and therefore the intelligentsia of this country, if there were Communist rule, would be declassed. Let us see if art, science, literature, etc., have disappeared from Soviet Russia after the Revolution. What these 92 gentlemen found was this :

"The paintings by French, German and other artists from the fifteenth century onwards are arranged in a series of rooms so that the visitor can see the historical development and make comparisons. The existence of this gallery, and the obvious care that has been bestowed on it, was all the more interesting to us in view of the lies we had read in the capitalist press about the destruction of every thing of artistic value which the Bolsheviks were alleged to have carried out."

I may be permitted to interpose here an interesting experience of mine after I returned from Russia to London. A gentleman who is very much in the public eye actually put me the question, "Does the Kremlin still exist ?". Kremlin being the vast pile of buildings where the Czars lived, some of them of exceptional beauty. I told him as was the fact that not only did the Kremlin exist but that it had been considerably improved upon and it looked as if it was completed yesterday. And he was surprised. That gentleman is one of those who are going to decide our fate. Pertaining to the people of Russia, the report says :

"The first and most universal impression of the people is their extraordinary friendliness and interest in the foreign visitors. Everywhere we went we experienced not only kindness but enthusiastic welcome."

As to industries :

"The progress of industry on the new lines with the object of improving the conditions of the classes—the workers and the peasants—is being carried on by the Soviet Government. The working class enjoys the full privilege of their toil and have the fullest confidence in the governing body, the Soviets."

I see Captain Hira Singh is not here. This ought to interest him because he was afraid that the tillers of the land would be nowhere.

"The majority of the village Soviets (Councils) consists of peasants, while in the towns, the workers are in the majority. Every official from the Prime Minister downwards gives his report of work done in the ordinary workers' meeting. These reports are discussed, criticised, and suggestions are given by the workers. They have also the power of recall if any official has not given full satisfaction in his work."

Then, there is a comparative table showing the advance made after the Revolution—advance made in the economic condition. I need not go into these details. As for education we have it here :

"The students of the Russian high schools have far superior knowledge than the graduates of Cambridge and Oxford. Their methods, their classes and discipline is much better."

and so on. Then we come to this :

"In India, after a hundred and fifty years' rule of British 'civilisation' only six per cent. of the population are educated, while ten years of Bolshevik rule has practically abolished illiteracy."

(Hear, hear from the Congress Party Benches).

That is the fiend that is going to swallow us and our institutions and everything else.

"Only those who are too old still remain illiterate. It is due to their old age rather than any hindrance by the State."

As to prisons :

"The whole idea of prison life is explained, said the Governor, by a perusal of the slogan painted across of the wall of the prison."

It reads :

"In Soviet Russia there are no prisons but training centres where those who have not had opportunities can learn to become useful citizens."

I will not trouble you with the rest of this. Anyhow it is not such a barbarous and unnatural State as is made out to be—where every man devours every other man and is a cannibal. I have seen many of these things with my own eyes. Now, Sir, even Communism must be fought with clean weapons. My friend Sir Victor Sassoon was pleased to say that only those who desire Red rule in India would oppose this Bill He knows that so far as this side of the House is concerned, so far as the great majority of Indians are concerned, what is desired is Brown rule and not Red rule.

Now, Sir, I shall not take up the time of the House any longer. I shall simply content myself by saying that this is a most vicious piece of legislation and is calculated to bring about results just the opposite of what is contemplated. Before concluding, I must not conceal from the House that there is a very strong suspicion in the minds of educated Indians and that is this. There has been a movement on foot for years past for organising a sort of cultural co-ordination between India and various other countries of the world, especially in the North of Europe. If you pass a law like this, and people come on peaceful missions but do not please the Government and the C. I. D., they will be packed off to their homes. If one man from any country is treated like this, the movement will die out in no time. Who will ever come here ? In the countries I visited there was some anxiety to avail themselves of an opportunity to come to India at the time of the Indian National Congress. Whatever may be said about the Indian National Congress, there is no doubt that the Indian National Congress is known to be the largest national institution of India throughout the whole world and naturally people in other countries have a desire to witness the proceedings of this institution which is indigenous in its origin and which does not owe its existence to any help from the British. I was thinking to myself that if at the next Congress I invited some of my friends whom I met during my last visit and if this Bill passed into law, what would happen. Government will say : "Oh, we are not going to get hold of people who come for peaceful purposes. This Bill is intended only for Communists." How am I to know what you will do ? The evidence that satisfies you is not likely to satisfy me, as was shown in the case of M. N. Roy's letter. Then again there is a great desire among Indians to promote mutual intercourse, cultural and social, between themselves and other Asiatic countries. All these things will receive a rude check if a measure of this kind is passed into law Sir, I submit that if this measure is passed into law, it will be the biggest blot upon the Statute-book.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Finance Member) : Sir, (Applause). I have listened with a great deal of attention and interest to the orations of my Honourable friends opposite including the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition but I regret to have to observe that I have not discovered yet any cogent reasons for rejecting or for doubting....

An Honourable Member : You can never do so.

Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra :.... the principle underlying the Bill before the House. It is of course possible that my inability to discover any cogent reasons may be due to a deficiency of intellect on my part.....

Honourable Members : No, no.

Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : But that is the position as it stands, and, Sir, we are at present concerned with the principle of the Bill. The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition made certain remarks which are relevant to the principle of the Bill, and I propose to deal with them later on. He also mentioned what I may call certain technical details of law which I submit may more appropriately be dealt with when the clauses of the Bill are under consideration or, alternatively, when the Bill is being examined in Select Committee.

Sir, the speeches of the Honourable Members who have already spoken have contained much illuminating information about the doctrines of Communism. I confess, Sir, that I have never met face to face one of these active Communists.

An Honourable Member : Nobody has.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : But this may be due partly to the fact that probably the creatures of that ilk do not walk about the streets with a label on them. I have not even had the honour, or dishonour, of meeting these two or three Englishmen who have been referred to in the course of this debate. My only knowledge of Communist doctrines is derived from current literature, and from recent happenings in China and Japan to which reference has been made not only by my Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon but by so well-informed a person as the Honourable Sir Denys Bray. (Hear, hear.) Judging from the facts before me, I have no doubt in my mind that the essence of these doctrines is the subversion of the authority of law or organized government as it now exists in most countries of the world. The object of these doctrines is the violent destruction of the existing organization of the community in all its various aspects.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : For what purpose ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The primary object is destruction. I have no desire to dilate on the picture which has already been depicted to this House by the Honourable the Home Member, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Sir Victor Sassoon and Sir Denys Bray.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Do you deny the facts that I have stated from the report of the British Labour Party ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am coming to that, Sir, presently, if my Honourable friend will be a little patient. We know that the Nationalist Government of China and the Government of Japan are trying their best to eradicate the evil in their countries. My Honourable friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, who in the course of his recent peregrination managed to have a peep into the country which is reputed to be the factory of this evil, has in a way admitted the correctness of this picture. He admitted that the process of violent.....

(Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar rose to interrupt the speaker but the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra refused to give way.)

Mr. President : Order, order. No Honourable Member is entitled, except for raising a point of order, to interrupt a speaker unless the speaker is himself willing to give way. Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : He admitted that the process of violent destruction of the authority of existing law and of organized government previously existing, with all its concomitant effects on the community as a whole, has taken place at an earlier stage of the Communist movement in that country, and he stated that now that that process had been completed, a process of reconstruction of the various national institutions had commenced which had apparently found favour in his eyes. The statement which fell from my Honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition was more or less to the same effect. I have no personal knowledge on the subject, but I am quite prepared to accept what fell from both these Honourable gentlemen about the present position in Russia. But we all know how that position was reached.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : Revolution of course.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is the correct word. Sir, I am wholly in favour of the reconstruction of many of our existing institutions, but I feel very strongly that such reconstruction should take place by a process of orderly and gradual evolution ; and as a citizen of this unhappy country I have the strongest abhorrence to any violent destruction of any of our existing institutions, even though the object may be to replace them by institutions of a better type. I am glad to find that my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt voiced the same opinion when he said : " No Indian wished revolution or subversion of the present society ". He said however that he understood the doctrine of the Communists could not be anything else except that every person must be adequately fed. Now, Sir, if the doctrine was to help the agricultural and industrial workers of this country to improve their standard of living through orderly methods and without recourse to violence, I should have the fullest sympathy with that doctrine. But let me tell my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt in all seriousness that that is not the whole of the doctrine. The experience of other countries shows that it is the essence of the Communist doctrine that if in the town of Burdwan, from which my Honourable friend comes, there are a thousand people who cannot for some reason or other get a full day's meal, or cannot clothe themselves adequately, they should march in a body to the house of my Honourable friend, lay violent hands on his person and property, perhaps kill him in the process, and commandeer his property to satisfy their requirements. That, Sir,.....

Pandit Motilal Nehru : That is a libel on Communism even.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Why should they not go to the house of the

[Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.]

Maharaja of Burdwan rather than to that of my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt ?

Mr. President : Order, order. I think, the Honourable Member is entitled to greater consideration, and Honourable Members should not interrupt him so often.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I mentioned my friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, because it was he who said the words which I have quoted ; but the same thing may happen to me, to my friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, and in a larger measure to my friend the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition or to the Maharaja of Burdwan. That, Sir, brings in the element of revolution, or subversion of the present society, on which my friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt looks with as much abhorrence as I do.

My friend Mr. Ranga Iyer, whose after-dinner speech I found it difficult to follow, apparently wanted to establish that all Communists do not hold violent doctrines and that there are among them some, with whom he has been associated, who do not preach revolution or the subversion of existing institutions, with all its concomitant effects. Now, Sir, if there are Communists of this category—and I believe by friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar was also referring to men of that category—they have nothing to fear from the Bill before the House. But, Sir, if it is an accepted principle that in the interests of the individual members of the community the State must take action against dangerous lunatics suffering from a limited type of mental deficiency, I for one can see no objection to the principle underlying State action, in the interests of the community as a whole, against dangerous lunatics suffering from a wider type of mental dificiency. Such action, Sir, has been taken in most of the civilised countries of the world (Pandit Motilal Nehru : "Where ?"). My friend Sir Victor Sassoon referred to the case of America, Australia and South Africa. In England too, the principle of the action is admitted ; the procedure followed may be different ; I am now talking of the principle only. I am not discussing, Sir, at the present moment the procedure, because this is not the appropriate moment for discussing the procedure. (Pandit Motilal Nehru : "It is not a question of procedure.") My friend the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, while admitting the evils of what he called "Communism in action" argued that if a Bill like this were passed, it would stand in the way of eminent men from other countries in Europe and in Asia from coming to India to teach us, (Pandit Motilal Nehru : "Or to be taught by us.") or to be taught by us. I accept the correction. Now, Sir, the Bill before the House will certainly not have that effect exactly as similar laws in America, Australia and South Africa have never had such effect.

I have found it difficult to understand the attitude of my esteemed friend Mr. Joshi in this matter. (Mr. N. M. Joshi : "Why"?) I had always understood that he and self-less workers like himself in the realm of uplift of labour, like Mr. Andrews, were apprehensive of the exploitation of labour, and labour unions, in India by Communists. (Mr. N. M. Joshi : "Where did I say that, Sir ?") If I may be quite precise, that statement was made to me some six months ago. (Mr. N. M. Joshi : "By whom ?") It is quite possible that my Honourale friend's views may have changed in six months' time. I believe also that I am correct in stating that it was similar apprehensions which led Mahatma Gandhi, that arch-preacher of non-violence in India, to stand in the way of the Ahmedabad labour unions, which he controls to a large extent, from actively joining the Indian Trade Union Congress.

4 P.M.

It has been argued, Sir, that the industrial unrest which has come into prominence in a very marked degree in India in the last six or seven months, has nothing to do with Communist activities but is the natural result of economic causes. Now, Sir, we admit that the unrest and the strikes originated from economic causes. That was fully admitted by my Honourable colleague, the Home Member, in the course of his speech. But, Sir, these strikes did not originate from the pangs of hunger. It is the prolongation of them which has added to the pangs of hunger of certain people. My Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, was perfectly correct when he said that they originated in trade disputes, a perfectly correct statement, but how have these strikes been prolonged for all this length of time, and how is it that they have led to these acts of sabotage and loss of life on railways, with which we have now become painfully familiar ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The Honourable Member is perhaps referring to an incident which is yet sub judice.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not. If I had mentioned Lillooah, the Honourable Member would have been perfectly in order.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member say what specific cases he has in mind ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am referring to general cases of sabotage.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : And to loss of life on railways ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is a fact.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : These are recent incidents and are yet sub judice. That is exactly my point.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not referring to any particular cases. Any body reading the facts can come to the obvious conclusion.

I shall refer to another instance. I read in the papers this morning that Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose, a name which is respected by me perhaps as much as it is respected by my friends on the opposite side (Ironical cheers from the Opposition Benches), had managed to bring about a reconciliation at Jamshedpur, but that Mr. Homi is trying his best to make that effort of his nugatory. There again is the writing on the wall, and I can draw my own inference from it. If my friend Mr. Joshi is unwilling to accept that inference, he is welcome to form his own conclusion. My difficulty with my friend Mr. Joshi is that for some reason or other he has become very pessimistic.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : You are the cause !

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The other day in this House he said that for the last 10 years employers in this country and the Government have done nothing for the uplift of labour. I should like to ask Mr. Joshi how does the position in this respect stand in the case of the textile mill industry in India. Has not the rise of wages there been more than the rise in the cost of living, starting as the datum line with the year 1914, and does not that prove that the rise in wages allowed during this period has enabled the workman to improve his standard of living ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member by asking Mr. Joshi a question has invited interruption and should therefore give way.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : What I wanted to say was that I did not admit the statement made by the Honourable Member that the standard of life of the Bombay textile workers has gone up.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is of course open to Mr. Joshi to adhere to his dictum. I refer to published statistics and Mr. Joshi has not produced anything to contradict those statistics. So far as the Government is concerned, the Honourable Mr. McWatters mentioned the other day the various items of action which Government have taken in the matter of the uplift of the conditions of labour. I wish to remind Mr. Joshi of one particular incident in which I was personally concerned and he was also personally concerned. This House also was largely concerned in that matter. As a result of the representations made to me by this House, and by Mr. Joshi personally and by associations of workers, in the last three or four years, I have taken steps to largely improve the lot of the workers in the postal service. That, Sir, is an instance of the good faith of Government in the matter. (Hear, hear). No, Sir, the trouble with my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi is perhaps the same as with my Honourable colleague the Home Member. He is reluctant to place all his cards on the table because of possible evil consequences that might result from such action hereafter. (Hear, hear.)

One of the arguments which have been used in connection with this Bill is that the measure is unnecessary, and my Honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition also referred to it. As I understand the argument, it comes to this. If it could be shown that a goodly number of foreign Communists have been spreading subversive doctrines in the country by organising the masses for revolt or by doing any of the things mentioned in the Bill, that would have made out a primâ facie case for this measure. I ask my Honourable friend opposite in all seriousness, are these the words of wisdom ? If my Honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition was told that there was an electric wire in his house which was in a faulty state and which was likely to set the house on fire, would he actually wait until the house was on fire before taking preventive action ? We know, Sir, from experience in other countries, including Asiatic countries like China and Japan, how Communism has spread its cancerous growth in the various countries of the world. That being so, I submit that it is incumbent on this House, on this august Assembly of the citizens of India, to take such preventive action as is considered necessary and wise to stop the extension of this evil in India. Whether at the present moment there are two foreign Communists, or one such Communist or any such Communist, spreading propaganda in the country is immaterial for the purpose. Nor do I attach any great weight to the specific letter of Mr. M. N. Roy. I am not, Sir, a legal Pandit.....

An Honourable Member : You are a financial Pandit !

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : ..... and I cannot unravel the intricacies of that particular letter from the point of view of the law of evidence ! But looking at the subject from the point of view of commonsense.....

An Honourable Member : Which is so rare !

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : ..... I submit that there can be doubt that it makes it incumbent on all of us to adopt the course of prudence. My Honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition also said that this legislation was superfluous because we have got Regulation III of 1818 and we can take action against all these people under that Regulation. Now, Sir, if that is so, that certainly establishes an admission of the principle of this Bill.

An Honourable Member : How does it ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : But there are difficulties, as I understand it, in the way of applying Regulation III of 1818.

An Honourable Member : What are they ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Those difficulties appeal peculiarly to my financial mind. Now if we apply Regulation III of 1818, we have to intern these people in the jails of India, and in the present state of unemployment in various countries of Europe, I am not sure that that course of action would not attract more of these people to find their way to India so that they can be maintained free of cost in our jails. Now, Sir, in the interests of the tax-payers of this country, I should prefer that foreigners who commit any of the acts mentioned in this Bill should be straightaway put on board a boat and a third class ticket bought for them, as was mentioned by my Honourable colleague Sir Denys Bray the other day, and these people sent back to their homes to be prophets in their own country.

Pandit Thakur Dass Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : May I know what the third class fare to England is ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no present recollection of the figure. I think it is ten pounds.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Sonthal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : Is that the single fare or for the return journey ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Then my friend Mr. Ranga Iyer referred with a certain amount of approbation the other day to what the Pioneer had said on this particular subject. Well, Sir, I am a regular reader of the Pioneer. (Hear, hear from the Congress Party Benches.) It is possible, however, that on account of the official and personal worries during the past five weeks, I missed that particular article or failed to appreciate it. I found however in yesterday's Pioneer another article on the subject. This is what that paper writes :

> "Everybody knows the particular cases which have actuated the Government, everybody knows the legal difficulties they are in, and everybody, except the wildest extremist, is ready to meet them and to help in solving the problem."

This is in the Pioneer of the 13th September, and if the Pioneer in an earlier issue had expressed a different view on the subject, I have not the slightest doubt that the able exposition of the case by my colleague the Honourable the Home Member the other day has persuaded the Pioneer to alter its views. The article proceeds to say :

"There can be little doubt that the sympathy of most people will be with Sir Hari Singh Gour."

We know that our Honourable and learned friend, while advocating the acceptance of the principle of the Bill, wants it to be referred to a Select Committee where legal technicalities can be examined by legal luminaries like himself or like my Honourable friend the late Advocate General of Madras.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : What is the heading of this article ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Whatever the heading of the article may be, it matters little. Appearances are often illusory ; but I have given you the substance of the article.

Now, Sir, before resuming my seat, I beseech my friends opposite to look at the matter more dispassionately and not to attempt to block the measure which undoubtedly has its uses for India, under present day conditions not only in India but all over the world.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I am one of those who are indebted to your wise and cautious ruling that this Bill should not be rushed through this House. But for that ruling, Sir, men like me who came to this House rather late would never have had the chance of listening to the excellent debate which has taken place on this measure, nor of taking part in it. I confess, Sir, I do not envy the position of the Honourable the Home Member, that the very first measure which he brings before this House as the Leader of the House is this objectionable Bill, and my sympathy goes out to him in his present misfortune.

I came to this House, Sir, with a very free and open mind, and I wrote to my Leader from Bombay that I would listen to the debate and then make up my mind. I, of course, came with a certain amount of distrust of the executive born of my past experience of the executive, but also with the view that if after listening to the speech of the Honourable the Home Member, the necessity for this drastic measure was made out, I would not block the Bill so far as my humble vote was concerned. I have listened to the Home Member's speech very carefully and if he will pardon my saying so, while I did so I had the same kind of feeling as when I am in the presence of my family priest. He tells me of a lot of things in Heaven, that there is a virtuous God, that there are cross-currents of vice and virtue, merit, and demerit. I have to listen to all these things on trust, I cannot question him as to the means of his knowledge. He always lands me on terra incognita, the borderland between faith and reason. I had the same feeling when I had listened to the speech of the Home Member, and I confess I am not concerned that the necessity for this measure is made out. I am surprised, Sir, that a lot of false issues have been raised before this House. It is said that the Indian religions are in danger. Such a plea proceeding from a Government which has allowed Christian missionaries for well nigh 150 years to convert Hindu and Muhammadan children by the hundred in famine times is absurd. We are told that the Indian social system is in danger. For a Government which has allowed by Statute Indian Christian converts to keep and maintain their rights in the Hindu joint family notwithstanding their conversion, and which still allows a convert husband to disown his wife but not the wife to disown the husband, for that Government to come and say that the Indian religions are in danger, that Indian society is in jeopardy, is very specious logic and I, a hard headed lawyer, cannot attach any importance to such professions. I want to know the real necessity behind this measure—not the false issues which are put before this House—but the real reason behind it. I shall be absolutely frank with the opposite Benches. It is no use drawing red herrings across our path. I shall be frank by telling them that my main reason for opposing the Bill is that I distrust the executive. I have no confidence in this executive government as it is constituted. When my little boy asks me for a Mannlicher rifle I am entitled to inquire how he has used the air gun which I gave him some years ago. I am entitled to examine the conduct of the executive and ask them "How have you used on past occasions similar powers which you claimed in a panic ?" I cannot forget the Rowlatt Act in considering this matter. What sensation the Government created in this country ! My Honourable friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, will tell us of the long struggle which he maintained at that time. The Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri is fortunately still alive to tell us what unnecessary ferment the Government of India created in this country. And yet the odious Act, after it was passed, remained absolutely a dead letter. We were told then that India was in danger. This time it is the Communist—that time it was secret insurrections, and underground conspiracies. The Rowlatt Act was passed. How has it been used ? It remained a dead letter. I ask the Government now to consider whether it was worth their while to embitter public sentiment to the verge of madness, and secure powers which have since remained unused. The Act remained a dead letter.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : It was repealed.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I am speaking of the time while it was a live law in the country. Take all the other Acts which the Government have passed in a panic. When too late, Government say, "Oh, we have made mistakes". My Honourable friend to my right Lala Lajpat-rai was deported under a similar measure and after he had undergone terrible sufferings and privations for several years the Government came out and admitted in a halting manner : "We think we made a mistake". Having all that experience, I, a very hard-headed man, want to examine what case has been made out this time. I will accept for the sake of argument all that the Government Benches have said about the Agents of the Soviet Government, although my Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar gives me an entirely different picture. My redoubtable and gallant friend, Colonel Crawford, asked him, "How many days did you stay in Russia ?" Sir, when I heard that question I was reminded of a certain teacher of mine who at the time of the promotion to a higher class used to ask us, "How many years have you been in this class ?", not "How much have you studied ?", not "How much have you observed ?", nor "How much have you learnt ?"

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

but "How many years have you spent in this class?" If it was a long period, he used to give promotion to the higher class. Colonel Crawford forgets that what an observant man like my Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar could gather in ten days, with all the opportunities of observation and inquiry which must have been open to him as a leading man of India, would be equal to ten years spent by a cold and unobservant official sent there by the British Government. It is not the time that counts, it is the measure of observation exercised. Mr. Iyengar tells me exactly the contrary story. I likewise read the other day in a paper called the Bombay Chronicle a description given by Mr. Chattopadhyaya of the methods of the Soviet Government, which does not tally with any of the odious pictures which have been painted of the Soviet Government on the other side. I am told, Sir, that England herself is very respectfully cautious in dealing with the Soviet Government and—I am speaking subject to correction—that there are many esteemed Members of the British Parliament who have secured valuable concessions in the territories of the Soviet Government. If the Soviet Government are such hideous creatures as painted to us, surely there is something unaccountable in the respectful treatment they receive in Europe. But, Sir, for the sake of argument I will assume that the Soviet Government and their agencies are all that they are represented to be by the other side. But, Sir, I refuse to believe, that so long as India is contented, India is peaceful, India has enough food to fill its belly, three or four European Agents of that Government would be able to convert this peaceful and contented land into a conflagration of revolution. I shake my head in doubt and say there must be something wrong somewhere. Sir, the measure before us is most extraordinary: extraordinary in more senses than one, extraordinary, e.g., in the powers which it claims on behalf of the executive. My Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, claiming to speak partially on behalf of the Government, talks of referring the Bill to a Select Committee.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: I never intended to speak on behalf of anybody except myself.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar: My Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour, speaking in favour of a view which is very much identified with that of the Government, tells us, "Let us refer the Bill to the Select Committee." He says, "We will take it to the Select Committee. We will give the High Court powers of appeal. We will have a regular trial." I would ask the Honourable the Home Member whether he approves of a reference to a Select Committee for such purposes. If I can understand the principle of this Bill, Sir, it lies in the summary and swift manner in which these culprits are to be dealt with. If there is going to be a protracted trial, trial, e.g., by some kind of jury system, with an appeal to the High Court, which must involve some delay, why, then there is no reason for this Bill at all, because the ordinary law of the land is quite competent for that purpose. I have examined this Bill. The very essence of the Bill is in the swiftness and secrecy with which the removal of the undesirable alien takes place. I am therefore surprised that Sir Hari Singh Gour should think of referring this Bill to a Select Committee for the purpose of actually killing the soul of this Bill. I am therefore against the reference to the Select Committee. The only question before us is whether the necessity for such a drastic Bill has been made out, whether any urgency has been shown. Two or three instances have been shown, I quite agree. Two or three Englishmen's names have been mentioned. But if we examine the Bill we will find that the ordinary law of the land is quite competent to deal with these solitary cases. I do not wish unnecessarily to detain the House at this late hour. Take clause 2 (a):

> "directly or indirectly advocates the overthrow by force, etc."

That is already provided for by the Indian Penal Code. Likewise clause 2 (c) is provided for by the Indian Penal Code. The only thing that one might say is not perhaps provided for by the present Penal Code is 2 (b), and it constitutes, if I may say so, a new offence—

> "Whoever seeks to foment or utilise industrial or agrarian disputes or other disputes of a like nature with the direct object of subverting the authority of law or organised government in British India, etc."

shall be punished. With great respect to the draftsman of this Bill, I say, Sir, that there is a most dangerous width of language in the clause, dangerous especially at the time of strikes, for instance.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): It falls within section 124-A.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar: I have not examined this question carefully. Possibly my Honourable friend from Karachi is right. Possibly it does come within the existing law. (An Honourable Member: "It does.") But supposing it does so fall, for the sake of argument, it does not affect my main argument. The question is, is any case of urgency made out? The Bill has been in many places carelessly and hastily drafted. Clause 4 (4) says:

> "In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or any such officer as aforesaid may require the master of any ship" to take us as a passenger the victim of this measure. I should like to ask the Government of India "Under what power?" I should like to ask the Honourable the Home Member "Under what existing law can you compel the master of a ship to take a Spanish gentleman, e.g., who comes out to this country, and whom Government want to deport?" I am only pointing out one instance out of several which I can multiply—but do not wish to do at this late hour—that this Bill has been most indifferently and carelessly drafted, cannot be denied. I am therefore asking for more caution, more time, and that no panicky or hasty legislation should be rushed through this House at the point of the bayonet. Government have enough power in their hands to go on with in the meanwhile. We are told that they are very unwilling to exercise the power under the present law. We are told that the Regulation of 1827 is very crude, that it is like an instrument which makes noise when Government cut with it, and that Government want to avoid this noise. Therefore the Government want an instrument so fashioned that it is very sharp and at the same time will not make any noise when it cuts. I am only paraphrasing their argument. The Regulation of 1827 creates too much sensation they say. It causes too much stir in the country, too much newspaper comment. It is therefore in their opinion a crude weapon. Therefore we are asked to give them a fine instrument so that when it cuts it will not make any noise at all. When Government come

Mr. President : Ordinarily I should have granted the request of Honourable Members, but the debate on this motion has already taken three days and it is not proper to allow it to be further delayed by any postponement. So far as I am concerned, I think that I can continue to sit for six days in the week in the Chair for five hours every day ; and I hope Honourable Members, in the peculiar circumstances of this particular Bill, will allow me to sit to-morrow. I have decided for myself that I should sit to-morrow and finish this debate, and for that purpose to accept the closure at the end of the day and take the division. In the circumstances, I trust Honourable Members will not object to my sitting to-morrow.

The House stands adjourned till Eleven to-morrow morning.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 15th September, 1928.

SECRETARIAT LIBRARY MADRAS G. 11 OCT 1928

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Saturday, 15th September, 1928.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

THE PUBLIC SAFETY (REMOVAL FROM INDIA) BILL.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion and amendments moved on the 10th September 1928 :

Motion moved by Mr. Crerar :

" That the Bill to provide for the removal from British India in certain cases of persons not being Indian British subjects or subjects of States in India, be taken into consideration."

Amendment moved by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt :

" That the Bill be circulated for purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

Further amendment moved by Sir Hari Singh Gour :

" That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla, Sir Victor Sassoon, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar, the Honourable the Home Member and the Mover, with instructions to report within three days, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be four."

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, I am not a Communist. I hold no brief for the Doctrine of the Communist. I have no sympathy for Communistic propaganda. I do not believe that the Communists will succeed in making the world a better place to live in. So far I am more or less in agreement with some of the views expressed by the Honourable the Home Member. But, Sir, these are my own personal views. I do not claim that my judgment is infallible and I do not think the Honourable the Home Member would claim for a moment that his judgment is infallible. Let us assume that the views which we hold at the present moment are not sound ; is it then right for us to deny to other persons who hold different views the right of freedom of speech, freedom of expression and freedom and liberty of association ? I do not believe in enacting repressive laws unless the very strongest possible case is made out by the Government for restricting liberty which is the birthright of every subject, British subject or any other subject residing in British India.

Sir, I doubt very much if the Honourable the Home Member has a clear or definite idea in his mind as to what the present day Communism is. If we examine the broad principles of Communism I do not think any objection could be taken to them. After all we have got the essence of the principles of Communism in the present British Constitution. What do we find in England at the present moment ? Death duties to the extent of 40 per cent. are levied. The State takes away forcibly 40 per cent. of a man's estate when he dies.

Mr. T. Gavin Jones (United Provinces : European) : That is not Communism.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : That is Communism ; the State imposes these heavy Death Duties so that one man who in the opinion of the State has too much should be relieved of his extra burden and that it should be utilized for the benefit of the poorer section of society.

Mr. T. Gavin Jones : That is Socialism.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : By whatever name my Honourable friend may call it the principle is there, that the State should provide for the more unfortunate persons of society by taking away from the more fortunate persons something which in the opinion of the State they are overburdened with. Then, Sir, what do we find in the principle of the Super-Tax ? It is nothing else than an attempt on the part of the State to take away from a man a considerable portion of his excessive income so that the surplus may be utilized in bettering the lot of more unfortunate persons. Sir, so far as the broad principles of Communism are concerned nobody in this House could object to them. The real issue is as to the methods to be adopted for preaching or promoting the spread of these doctrines.

Now, Sir, let us examine the Government measure assuming that it provides for a regular trial by the Courts. So long as violence is neither practised nor preached, I do not think there is the slightest necessity for interfering with any persons whatever views they may hold or may attempt to preach. But the present Bill goes a great deal further. The present Bill, to which the Honourable the Home Member has invited us to commit ourselves, does away with the right of trial and seeks to give the Executive Government the power to remove from British India certain persons who entertain certain views or do certain acts. We have been told by the Government of India with a magnificent gesture that British Indian subjects and subjects of Indian States have been left out of the operation of this Bill. Well, I for one would have preferred to be kept within the operation of the Bill. Suppose British Indian subjects were also kept within the operation of the Bill, what would the Government of India do ? Would the Government of India remove British Indian subjects from India and send them to Australia, Canada or South Africa ? That cannot be done. Necessarily, therefore, British Indian subjects must be left out of the provisions of a Bill like this since it seeks to remove from India certain persons.

The most serious point which strikes me, Sir, is this. If legislation of such a pernicious and sweeping character is sought to be introduced against European British subjects and foreigners, what will be the necessary corollary of such a Bill in the very near future so far as British Indian subjects are concerned ? Sir, I think I am entitled to ask the Honourable the Home Member to tell the House in definite language and in an unequivocal manner as to what the Government of India proposes to do with regard to Indian Communists ? To my mind there are two possible courses. Either the Government of India will make use of that most pernicious piece of legislation, Regulation III of 1818, against Indian Communists, or they must in the very near future introduce legislation of an equally sweeping and pernicious character depriving Indian Communists of the rights which they enjoy at present. If the intention of the Government is to check Communism in British India it is inconceivable that they should leave out the Indian Communist. It must necessarily follow that in a very short time the Government of India will come before this House with a Bill operating against British Indian Communists, unless, as I have said they have made a mental reservation that they will continue to make use of Regulation III of 1818 against British Indian Communists. Whichever of the two courses the Government of India proposes to adopt, we, Sir, must record our strong protest against either course. It is no use the Government telling the House at the present moment that British Indian Communists are not affected by the present Bill. They are affected and must be affected ; and we cannot possibly shut our eyes to the fact that in the very near future, as a natural result of our committing ourselves to the principle of this Bill, the Government of India will come before this House and ask for summary powers of a similar nature against Indian Communists. I do hope, Sir, that the Honourable the Home Member will tell us definitely what he proposes to do with regard to Indian Communists. I take it, Sir, that the Home Member is not suggesting that whatever Indian Communists may do they will be let off. If we accept the principle of this Bill, if we punish non-Indian Communists, whether they are British or foreign, it must necessarily follow that Indian Communists must also be dealt with ; and the House is entitled to know what the Government of India proposes to do with regard to Indian Communists.

Now, Sir, is there any real necessity whatever for this legislation ? I do not wish to travel over the same grounds again. It has been clearly pointed out by able speakers from the Opposition Benches that we have on the Statute-book at present ample safeguards, if the Government of India really want any safeguards, to meet the present alleged situation. So far as foreigners are concerned , I do not see the slightest necessity for any fresh legislation, as we have at present on the Statute-book, Act III of 1864, the title of which is " An Act to give the Government certain powers with respect to foreigners ". The powers given under this Act are not only as sweeping and wide as the powers sought by the Government of India by the present Bill, but in a sense they are wider, because the Government of India need not specify any reason for dealing with foreigners under the Foreigners' Act. The first four sections of this Act, which are always in force , give the Government of India more than sufficient powers to deal with foreign Communists who enter or reside in British India. It gives them ample powers to remove any foreigners whether they are Communists or not. Now, it is very strange, Sir, that though so many Members from the Government Benches have taken part in this debate nobody has told us definitely as to whether this Foreigners' Act does or does not give the Government of India sufficient powers to deal with foreigners, whether they are Communists or not. We would like at the earliest possible moment in the course of this debate to hear from the Government of India whether the claim made by the Opposition Benches that the Foreigners' Act gives the Government ample power to deal with foreign Communists, is a well-founded claim or not. If it is not well founded, the Government of India should tell the House in what way the Foreigners' Act fails to give the necessary powers to the Government of India to deal with foreign Communists. Then, Sir, by section 5 of the Foreigners' Act further powers are given to the Government of India against foreigners which can be brought into operation by the issue of a Notification. There is only one proviso which exempts from the operation of the subsequent sections of this Act—

"any foreign minister duly accredited by his Government, any consul or vice-consul, or any person under the age of fourteen years, or any person in the service of Her Majesty."

I do not know, Sir, whether the Government of India is feeling nervous that British India will be filled with Communists under the age of fourteen years. I take it, Sir, that the Government of India have no real apprehension from Communists or Bolsheviks under the age of fourteen years. Sir, it seems to me that the inclusion in the present Bill of foreigners and every reference therein to foreigners is entirely superfluous. There is not the slightest necessity for asking for this fresh legislation so far as foreigners are concerned ; and why should we be called upon to put on the Statute-book superfluous and unnecessary legislation ? Unless the Government of India can clearly show how they are handicapped in the use of the powers which they have already got under the Foreigners' Act, it is impossible for this House, Sir, to contemplate giving them unnecessary and superfluous powers to deal with foreign Communists.

Then, Sir, we come to the real and the most important part of the Bill, the British Communists. With regard to British Communists, I do not think the Government of India will contend that they have not got sufficient powers to deal with them under Regulation III of 1818. Regulation III of 1818 applies to everybody ; it applies to British Indian subjects, as well as European British subjects and to all foreigners ; everybody who is in British India can be dealt with by the Government of India under Regulation III of 1818. Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra yesterday took upon himself a very serious responsibility. He told the House that in his opinion it was inadvisable to use Regulation III against European British Communists on financial grounds. He told the House—I do not know whether he wanted to be taken seriously—that by enacting the present proposed law the Government could get rid of a British Communist by expending £10, but that if British Communists were to be dealt with under Regulation III of 1818 they would have to be kept in prison and fed for a considerable period at the cost of the tax-payer. I do not know, Sir, if Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra took upon himself the responsibility of advising the Government of India to introduce the present legislation against British Communists, on the ground that although Regulation III of 1818 is sufficient to deal with European British Communists, it is not advisable to make use of it for financial reasons. I do not think, Sir, that Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra really meant what he said. There must be some other reason for the Government's reluctance to make use of Regulation III against British Communists ; and we have got to find out that reason. The Opposition Benches in this House are not in the confidence of the Government of India ; and all that we can do, Sir, is to indulge in inference or conjecture. If Regulation III of 1818, were to be used against British Communists, it will cause an uproar in the country. I challenge the Honourable the Home Member to deny the assertion that I am making, that if Regulation III of 1818 is used against British Communists, it will cause an uproar in England. What does the Government of India want to do to overcome this difficulty ? The Government of India wants to force on this House the odium of passing this pernicious Bill against British Communists. Why should we be subjected to such odium ? Why should we be a consenting party to any legislation to keep out British Communists, when the Government of India has already got sufficient powers under Regulation III to restrain them and to confine them in India, whether they are Communists or not ? I do not think for a moment that any British Communist who is placed under restraint or is confined under Regulation III would prefer to remain in confinement in India if the Government of India gave him the option of leaving British India.

I have made it clear, Sir, that at the present moment the Government of India have got ample powers to deal with British as well as foreign Communists, and that there is no necessity whatever for any fresh legislation.

There are three courses open to the Government of India with regard to dealing with British Communists. They can use Regulation III against British Communists or they can ask the British Parliament to pass the necessary Act to prevent British Communists from entering or from remaining in India, or they can ask this House to be a party to this pernicious and unjust legislation against British Communists. If the British Government or the Government of India is really convinced of the serious danger to India from British Communists, legislation of this kind should be introduced in the House of Commons against British Communists. The British Parliament has got full powers to deal with every British subject. Let the British Parliament decide whether it is right or wrong to exclude from India British Communists. Let the House of Commons determine whether it is just or proper to restrict the rights and liberties of British Communists. Why should we be forced to undertake this legislation ? Let us picture for a moment the Home Secretary standing up in the House of Commons and trying to introduce a Bill of this nature. I am afraid, Sir, the General Election will be hastened immediately. The present party in power would crumple up. A British Cabinet Minister would never dream of introducing in the House of Commons legislation of this kind in times of peace against British Communists. What the Government of India wants to be able to say is : "We have committed ourselves to giving certain rights and powers to the people of India. They have representatives in the Assembly who have passed this Bill. It is our duty to respect the sentiments of the Assembly." The Government of India is forcing us to embark on legislation of this kind with a view to tell the people of England that the Legislative Assembly has been a party to this legislation.

In dealing with this Bill we cannot afford to lose sight of one political party in England, the British Independent Labour Party. Some of its members frequently visit India and indulge in speeches and contributions to the Press during their short stay in India. They express a certain kind of sympathy for Indian aspirations, and when they go back they carry on in England a certain kind of propaganda in favour of Indian aspirations. It is an open secret that these members of the Independent Labour Party and their activities are not acceptable to the Government of India What would happen if we arm the Government of India with such powers ? As human beings they might be tempted to use these powers against members of this particular Party. I do not wish to impute any motives to any member or to any section of the House. I do not doubt that the Government of India believes that there is some need for this legislation, but we as legislators have got to provide safeguards. We have got to save the Government of India from themselves.

[Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi.]

Now, Sir, the present constitution confers the right of legislation on the Indian Legislature, and not on the Government of India. It is the Indian Legislature which has got to consider every question on its merits and decide accordingly. What are we asked to do in the present case ? We are asked to delegate our powers of legislation to the Governor General in Council. It was not intended that the Governor General in Council shall make any law, because the constitution provides that we shall make every law. Why should we delegate our powers to the Governor General in Council ? That is what we are asked to do. The Home Member has found himself unable to place any facts or materials before the House. The Home Member asks the House to accept his word for it. So far as I am concerned, I am prepared to accept his word. I accept his word when he says that he is in possession of certain materials. I accept his word when he says that he is convinced from those materials that there is a menace or danger to India. But I cannot accept his word, if he tries to assert it, that he cannot be wrong or mistaken in that inference or that opinion. It is for us to test those materials. We cannot blindly accept the opinion of a Member sitting on the Government Benches, however much we may trust him personally. Why should I surrender my judgment to any Member sitting on the Government Benches ? That is the crux of the question. We are being asked by the Government of India to surrender our judgment to the Government Benches, to the Governor General in Council, and in a way to abrogate the oath we have taken in this House to faithfully discharge our duties.

The strangest part of this debate has been that two Members of the Opposition, who would be very seriously affected by the so-called menace to India from Communism, have definitely told the Government of India that there is no such menace, and that they do not want this legislation. One is the able Member representing the Bombay Indian Merchants' Chamber in this House, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. He is a capitalist and represents in this House capitalist interest. He is in close touch with the textile industry in Bombay. When a man like him comes before the House and tells us that there is no menace to India from Communism, how can the Government of India expect us to believe them in preference to Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas ?

Then, Sir, the second Member, I am referring to is Mr. Joshi, who represents Labour in this House. Sir Victor Sassoon warned Mr. Joshi that if the Communists obtained a hold on Indian Labour, Mr. Joshi's present power will disappear. But Mr. Joshi has told us that Communists have obtained no footing in India and that the influence which he is at present able to exercise over Indian labour has not been affected by Communism. Now surely, Sir, Mr. Joshi's opinion is valuable as he is in direct touch with Indian Labour. The Home Member is not in touch with Indian Labour, nor are the other Members sitting on the Government Benches. Have we then got to rely on second hand reports ? How can the Government ask this House to accept its opinion based on materials which have not been disclosed to the House in preference to Mr. Joshi's opinion based on personal knowledge of facts ?

Sir, I do not go to the length to which my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar went yesterday. If the Government of India were to convince me by placing the necessary materials before the House that there is a real menace or danger to India from Communism, I would be prepared to arm the Government with powers necessary to deal with the situation, and I would be prepared to trust the Government of India to exercise such powers fairly and honestly.

I am not disposed to mistrust the Government of India. I am prepared to accept their word that they would exercise these extraordinary powers in a spirit of fairness and justice. But before I can do that, I must be convinced that there is a real menace to India and that such menace can only be overcome by legislation of this kind.

The whole difficulty of the situation in this House, Sir, is the excessive amount of distrust prevailing on both sides of the House. The Honourable the Home Member absolutely refuses to trust any Member sitting on the Opposition Benches. My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar returned the compliment by saying that he cannot place any trust in the Government of India as it is at present constituted. Well, Sir, the position is that the Government of India refuse to trust Mr. Jayakar or the other Members of the Opposition ; and the Leaders of the Opposition refuse to place any reliance on the words of the Government of India. I deplore the fact that the Government of India is not prepared to take any Member of this House into its confidence and divulge to him the materials on the strength of which the Government asks for these powers.

Now, Sir, I do not know what sort of menace this can be which has thrown the Government of India into such a state of panic. So far as the province which I have the honour to represent in this House is concerned, I may assure the Honourable the Home Member that it is absolutely news to me, as well as to my Honourable friend U. Tok Kyi, who along with me represents Burma in this Assembly, that there is any such danger or menace from Communism, so far as the province of Burma is concerned. Both of us ought to know something about it, if there was any foundation for such alleged menace.

Sir, in the speech delivered by Sir Denys Bray, one thing struck me as queer. He said that he was filled with indignation at certain statements made by Lala Lajpat Rai. I do not propose to go into the pros and cons of the statement made by Lala Lajpat Rai which filled the Honourable Sir Denys Bray with indignation. When dealing with this particular legislation, we cannot possibly banish from our minds the living instance of a brother Member here—Lala Lajpat Rai—who years ago was dealt with under Regulation III of 1818 and who was deprived of his liberty and kept in one of the prisons of Burma. Is Sir Denys Bray surprised that the heart of that man is filled with bitterness ? Does Sir Denys Bray expect that man to show good will towards Government after spending six or seven months of the best part of his life in that wretched condition in a far-off prison in Burma ? I want to ask what Sir Denys Bray would feel if the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru were to lock him up for a couple of hours in one of the cloak rooms of this House ? I cannot imagine the Honourable Pandit doing anything so undignified ; but let the House imagine Pandit Motilal Nehru locking up Sir Denys Bray for a couple of hours in the cloak room. I am afraid, Sir, that on the expiry of those two hours, Sir Denys Bray would not only feel indignant, but he would be filled with the murderous hatred characteristic of the red Russian Bolshevist.

[Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi.]

In legislation of this type, the Government should proceed with caution. Even if the Government of India acts with the best of intentions—I do not want to doubt their intention—if the Government should act harshly or unjustly even in a single instance, imagine the bitterness and the rancour with which the heart of that particular man would be filled.

Well, Sir, if the Government of India adheres to the position that they are unable to take even two Leaders of the Opposition into their confidence and place all or at least some of the materials before them, then the Government must blame themselves if this House refuses to surrender its judgment to the Government of India.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Sir Victor Sassoon talked a great deal about China and the destructive effect of Communism in China. Although I have not had the privilege of meeting Chinese Generals as Sir Victor Sassoon had, I have also been to China ; and, apart from that I have had numerous opportunities of coming in close contact with the Chinese race for more than fourteen years in Burma. I have had opportunities of knowing a large number of the Chinese people residing in Burma, some of whom have got relations and connections in China and some of whom frequently go to China. I think I am entitled to tell the House that what I have learnt about Communism in China is not borne out by the statement made by Sir Victor Sassoon before this House.

Now, Sir, with your permission I wish to deal with another point. It is not only a point for opposing the Bill in its present form, but it is also a point of order and jurisdiction which I shall raise at the proper stage. The Bill as it is framed seeks to affect persons who do certain things outside British India. Now, with your permission, Sir, I shall read certain parts of this Bill and apply them to section 65 of the Government of India Act. Clause 2 of the Bill reads as follows :

" In this Act the expression 'person to whom this Act applies' means any person (not being an Indian British subject or the subject of a State in India) who—

(a) directly or indirectly advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the Government established by law in British India, or the abolition of all forms of law or organised government, whether in British India or elsewhere, or the assassination of public officials, or the promotion of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects, or the destruction of property or unlawful interference with the ownership of property; "

Now, Sir, take the case of an Englishman who has never been to India and who is not concerned with India, but who takes an active part in the Communistic propaganda in England, a thing which the Laws and the Constitution of his own country allow him to do. But in doing that he makes himself liable to be dealt with under this Bill. Suppose that Englishman has been confining his Communistic activities to the people of England for five years and that thereafter he comes to India as a tourist and does not take any part in Communistic propaganda in India ; even then, according to the provisions of this Bill, as it is framed at present, he comes under the definition of a person liable to be dealt with under this Bill. He is liable to be removed from British India by the Government of India. It is my submission, Sir, that this House has no power to pass such a Bill. We have no power to legislate in respect of persons out of British India. What we are called upon to do now is to legislate even in respect of persons who reside in England and whose activities are confined only to England.

Mr. President : Where does the Honourable Member find the word " reside "?

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : Section 65, clause (1) says that the Indian Legislature has power to make laws for all persons and for all things within British India.

Mr. President : If a Britisher happens to be in British India, is not this Legislature entitled to make laws in respect of him ?

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : I submit, Sir, that we can make laws only in respect of something that he does in British India and not in respect of something that he does and which he is entitled to do in England. If an Englishman who permanently resides in England and has been carrying on Communistic propaganda in England comes to British India, but does not take any part in the Communistic propaganda in India, then according to the Bill as it is framed at present, he can still be removed from British India for the acts which he did in England though he does absolutely nothing in British India.

Mr. President : Because he is in British India.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : But I submit, Sir, that he commits no offence in India by merely visiting India either in respect of this Bill or otherwise.

Mr. President : That is very far-fetched, Mr. Munshi.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : I submit not, Sir. But, as I have already said I am not raising a point of order at the present moment ; I am only drawing the attention of the Government of India to the fact that section 65 of the Government of India Act does not permit this House to legislate in the manner that they are asking us to do, and it is one of the grounds for opposing certain provisions of the Bill. As I have said, I shall raise it as a point of order when the question of passing the Bill comes up before the House.

Now, Sir, whether under section 65 of the Government of India Act this Legislature has or has not the power to pass this Bill, I ask the Government of India : is it fair, is it just, that an Englishman who does no wrong in India and who leaves Indians alone, should be liable to be removed from British India simply because he indulges in certain activities in his own country which are not debarred by the laws of his own country ? If an Englishman does something which is perfectly lawful in his own country and if he visits India as a harmless tourist, why should he liable to deportation ? Are we to be a party to legislation of this kind against Englishmen who after all are our fellow-subjects ? I object, I strongly object, to be made the odious source or instrument for such permissions legislation against Englishmen.

I do not propose to take up the time of the House any longer ; but I do trust that the Honourable the Home Member or any other Member from the Government Benches will categorically and unequivocally answer the following questions :

(1) Does the Government of India think or does it not think that the Foreigners' Act gives them ample powers to deal with foreign Communists ?

[Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi.]

(2) If the Government has got sufficient powers under the Foreigners' Act to deal with Foreign Communists, what is the necessity for any further legislation ?

(3) Cannot the Government of India deal with British Communists under Regulation III of 1818 ?

(4) If it can, what are the reasons for its reluctance to use that Regulation against British Communists ?

(5) Is it not open to the British Parliament to deal with British Communists by legislation undertaken in the British Parliament ?

(6) If that is so, why does the Government of India think it better that such legislation should be undertaken by this House and not by the British Parliament ?

(7) And what is most important is, how and in what manner does the Government of India propose to deal with Indian Communists ?

I wonder, Sir, if after this debate in the House the Honourable the Home Member will consider it necessary and advisable to take at least two Leaders of the Opposition into his confidence and disclose to them some of the facts and materials on which the demand for this legislation is based ? This Bill is full of a number of pernicious principles, and it is impossible for us to agree to any of the pernicious principles underlying the Bill till we are convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that there is a real and grave menace which would justify legislation of this kind. I therefore, Sir, consider it my duty to refuse to accept the principle of the Bill ; and I feel that the best interests of the country will be served by its circulation.

Mr. S. M. Bharucha (Bombay : Nominated Official) : Sir, I rise to support the Bill moved by the Honourable the Home Member. I support it both on theoretical and on practical grounds. The theory is, Sir, that every right-minded Indian is first and foremost for preservation of law and order. India has suffered in the past enough from anarchy and disorder ; and if the preservation of law and order requires a little repression here and a little repression there among its own nationals, even then India is for that little repression rather than for anarchy and disorder in the name of liberty. Sir, if that is the case in connection with its own nationals, would it be a very great thing if Government were to ask for power to deport undesirable aliens and non-Indians who in the name of freedom and liberty come here and sow the seeds of anarchy and disorder ?

That is the theory, Sir. As for practical grounds, let us look at the peculiar circumstances in which India is situated. There are, Sir, in this huge continent two big systems of religion prevailing, two systems of religion which are sometimes in many respects antagonistic to each other. As long as there is peace in the country Hindus and Muhammadans live together in peace and amity in lakhs of our villages and in thousands of our towns and cities. In villages they are very very poor as everybody knows and there is a tendency to migrate every year and every season to towns and cities in search of a living. There, Sir, too they live in peace and harmony until their passions are aroused. I yield to none in my admiration for the solid virtues of our Indian peasant and our Indian labourer. I have come into contact with him for the last 30 years in almost every district of the Bombay Presidency and Sind. His patience, his simplicity, his honesty and his contentment are above all praise ; but, Sir, unfortunately he is very much handicapped on account of his illiteracy, credulity, superstition, and, where a question of religion is involved, fanaticism. Sir, there is no nobler task for the Government of India or for the intelligentsia of the country than to ameliorate the condition of these peasants and these labourers ; but the operation of the measures by which alone their condition could be gradually improved and by which, in towns and cities they could earn double the wages they are earning at present, and in villages they might be able to grow two blades of corn where at present there is only one,—I say the operation of these measures must be slow because the measures are primary education, technical schools, co-operative societies, agricultural banks, cottage industries, trades unions. To some of my friends the pace of progress appears to be very slow ; others would like to accelerate it not by enforcing these measures alone but by initiating a war against capital in towns and cities and a war against landlordism in villages. They are taking a leaf out of the book of Communism, a foreign growth altogether, and they do not mind seeking and invoking the help of foreign Communists. Now, Sir, Communism is a noxious plant, absolutely alien to our soil. But unfortunately, if imported in large quantities and after it takes a deep root, it will find a most congenial evironment—an environment consisting of, as I have said before, illiteracy and credulity. This noxious plant, if allowed to overrun the country, will be very difficult to eradicate later on ; it will be extremely difficult to save our ancient culture and our fabric of industrial concerns, if it is allowed to be firmly planted. I may take another analogy. This wretched Communism is a very small streamlet in the beginning. Unless it is diverted and dammed at the source, it will gather force and strength as it descends the hills and meets with other torrents and cross-currents—it might gather such volume and become such a terrible flood that it might burst the flood gates of law and order. Then it will be very difficult to stop this flood from engulfing and sweeping away what is nearest and dearest to the hearts of every patriot in India. Unfortunately, Sir, there are a few people in this country who fondly imagine that if in that same flood the present system of government is swept away, they would not mind taking that risk. It is a mistaken belief. Government have very wisely taken their stand on the hill tops of patience, preservation of law and order and promise of self-government by stages. It is the people of India who will really suffer if this flood comes down. It is our big landlords, our merchants, our millowners, our ancient chivalry, our noble houses who will suffer ; just as it happened in Russia, it is these innocent men who will suffer. It will be the duty of the Government then to save the wreckage and rebuild what they can.

At present, in our fair city of Bombay nearly a lakh and a half of people are out of employment. There is an unprecedented mill strike going on there. People are losing wages at the rate of at least a lakh of rupees a day ; at that rate probably they have lost already about a crore and a half. It is not difficult to imagine what the plight of these poor lakh and a half of people must be at present. It is not difficult to imagine that they must be having hardly a decent meal a day. The Government of Bombay held two conferences to bring the millowners and the mill hands together. Unfortunately both the conferences broke down.....

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : May I ask my Honourable friend who used to meet the millowners ?

Mr. S. M. Bharucha : Ninety per cent. of these mill hands are willing to go back to work if allowed to do so. But it is the small percentage, a very small percentage I may add, who have perhaps imbibed the doctrine of Communism that buoys them up with false hopes ; and in the meetings of the mill hands in their chawls in Bombay and in my district night and day, there is persuasion not to go to work and sometimes intimidation. Mills are picketed and there are even assaults. It is not difficult to imagine, Sir, what the strain on the police force of Bombay must have been for the last five months ; and recently some leaders of the mill strikes declared that they will not be responsible for the safety of the mill property if this strike went on much longer. I ask who will suffer ? If this unfortunate, half-hungry crowd of mill hands broke out in disorder, will not innocent tradesmen, merchants, house-owners and even poor ladies suffer in the first few hours ? Because, Sir, it is only in the first few hours that the real damage is done ? A mob when out of order, when it gets out of hand, is like a mad infuriated bull ; it sees nothing but red ; it destroys everything that comes in its headlong career and tears friends and foes alike, till it is killed. Sir, this lurid picture is not at all from my imagination. In my thirty years of service I have had to deal with riots and I know what I am talking about. The Government of India come to this House.....

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : But how will the situation improve if this Bill is passed immediately ? Will you kindly let me know ?

Mr. S. M. Bharucha : Kindly listen to me. The Government of India come to this House with a very modest demand. (Honourable Members : " A very modest demand ! !) " Well gentlemen have patience to listen ? The Government of India comes to this House with a modest demand that this poison of Communism should not be allowed to be imbibed and implanted in this land where it is absolutely unknown up till now. It is not a question of deporting an undesirable Englishman here or a Red Russian there. It is purely a question of seeing that this poisonous doctrine is not taught to our illiterate dumb millions, this doctrine which makes a lazy man turn covetus eyes on his industrious and well-to-do neighbour's property. That is the way in which, if this Bill is passed, the whole danger will be nipped in the bud ; and if the hands of Government are strengthened by this legislation, it will be open both to Government and to the intelligentsia of this country, as I have said before, to ameliorate the condition of our poor ryots by constructive legislation.

Sir, let us not play with fire, as has been said before. My friend the Honourable Mr. Ranga Iyer, the other day—I am sorry he is not in his seat to-day—put a very pertinent question. " Where is the fire ? Show the fire ". I say there is no smoke without fire. But if I were to point out to him the smokeless chimneys of the Bombay mills, he will say " Oh, well there is no smoke even ". I say " Yes ; there is no smoke. Communism is a smokeless powder and it takes time before it explodes ; but when it explodes there is no remedy." So, once more I say, Sir, let us not play with fire.

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : Sir, every Honourable Member in this House who has any sense of responsibility or any sense of the realities of the situation, or has the interests of India at heart, must of necessity support the principle of this Bill. It was a matter of surprise to me to hear that this Bill was going to be made a controversial subject.

12 NOON.

The situation is a piquant one. On Monday we heard the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition vigorously upholding the control of the British Parliament over the Indian Legislature, while, on the other hand, we heard the Honourable the Law Member equally vigorously supporting the rights of the Indian Legislature, and during the last three days of the debate we have heard Honourable Members opposite vigorously supporting the liberty of any and every European subject coming to this country.

Sir, there is an atmosphere of unreality surrounding all this. Of course, we are duly grateful to Honourable Members opposite for looking after our interests, but we will be a great deal more grateful if they will lend us their assistance when we really want it. Sir, I do not believe that Honourable Members opposite in their heart of hearts really oppose the principle of this Bill. What they do oppose is the Government and all its ways.

Now, Sir, this is a Bill which it is urgently necessary to pass, and I hope they will forgive me if I say that in this instance they are acting in a very unpatriotic manner (Hear, hear from the Congress Party Benches), and I congratulate the Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour on his well-reasoned and patriotic speech, and I hope that Honourable Members in this House will support his amendment.

Sir, time was when legislation of this character was unnecessary, but since the Russian Revolution, an organization has been created called the " Third International " with ramifications all over the world and with its headquarters in Moscow from whence it is financed, and it is supported by the Russian Government. This organization is carrying on warfare, an insidious warfare, not only against all Governments in the world, but against all existing institutions, economic, social and religious, and it is the duty of every self-respecting citizen who values these institutions to oppose this warfare with every power in his possession.

The Honourable Member, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, told us of his visit to Russia, and he endeavoured to point out to us how wonderful Russia is. Now, Sir, I have no doubt that Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar is quite sincere, but he did not tell us how long he was in Russia. Considering the fact that his tour in Europe lasted for only three or four months, he could not have been in Russia for more than one or two weeks. Also the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition told us a great deal about the Labour Party tour which was conducted through Russia. It leaves me cold to hear the reports of all these individuals and parties who are personally conducted by the Government of Russia through Russia. Not very long ago Honourable Members opposite were indignant and asserted that a certain lady, Miss Mayo, was personally conducted by the Government of India on her tour through India. Now, Sir, these Honourable Members who objected to that are hardly the right people to bring forward evidence of this kind in this instance.

[Mr. T. Gavin-Jones.]

Now, Sir, Russia is in a deplorable economic state, and sooner than accept the evidence of people who have been conducted round the country in a short time, I prefer to rely on the cold facts of economic statistics. In a Statistical report published in Canada a copy of which I have here, they say that before the war Russia was their strongest competitor in the markets of the world in wheat, and now Canada is the biggest wheat exporting country in the world. Not only that but Russia has now placed large orders in Canada for wheat. I have also seen reports in all the economic papers which shew that the cost of production of manufactured goods in Russia is very high indeed in spite of the very low standard of living of the workers. Now, Sir, with these economic facts before us in spite of the reports and evidence of personally conducted tours it is evident that the economic condition of Russia must be in a deplorable state.

Honourable Members profess to scoff at the Government for their fear of Red propaganda ; and say that they are in a panic over the Red peril. Now, Sir, we Industrialists who are in close touch with labour and are up against the realities of the situation, not only share the Government's fears, but think that the Government are not firm and prompt enough, and I am glad to say that I have the support of my friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas on this matter.

Now, Sir, regarding my friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas's speech, he is a friend of mine, and I have agreed with him on many things and fought severe battles on his side, and I am sorry to have to criticise him. I have also heard many of his well reasoned and eloquent speeches in this House, but I cannot congratulate him on the effort he made on Wednesday last. What, Sir, is the substance of his speech ? He admits that there is Red propaganda, he admits that it is serious, and he even goes so far as to say that the Government is weak-kneed over the matter. Then he goes on to say : " Why don't you use Regulation III ", and the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition was equally insistent that Regulation III should be used ; in fact many Honourable Members opposite have said the same thing. Now, Sir, Regulation III is a Regulation which none of us like, Europeans or Indians. (An Honourable Member : " Then repeal it ".) (Another Honourable Member : " Why don't you repeal it ?") Now, Sir, I have heard most fluent speeches made by my friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition and by others as well against Regulation III. Surely it is illogical that they should ask Government to extend the use of that Regulation.....

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Do you mean they should add to it ?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : You are asking them to extend the use of it (An Honourable Member : " No ".)

Then, Sir, he goes on to drive a bargain with Government and to say " If you do away with Regulation III, I am prepared to support the Bill." Now, Sir, if this means anything at all, it means that he approves of the principle of this Bill. Otherwise if Regulation III were removed he could not possibly support the Bill, but he says he will support the Bill if Regulation III is removed. That is an illogical position which I do not see how he can maintain.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, made his usual eloquent speech which I am always delighted to hear, but he really made, so far as I could gather, only two important points. One is that the evidence Government have given that there is Red propaganda in India is not sufficient, and the other is that he does not trust the Government. Now, Sir, very many Honourable Members have repeated that complaint that they do not trust the Government. Sir Hari Singh Gour says that the powers are too wide and wants to amend this Bill in Select Committee so as to restrict the powers of Government. That I can understand, but when the Honourable Member says, " I do not trust Government to do anything at all ", then I submit that his position is quite illogical, for this reason. Every Government has to have an executive, you cannot carry on government without it, and you must trust the executive to some extent. You can hem them in with rules and regulations, but you have got to trust them. Now, Sir, the position that the Honourable Member has taken up is this. " I distrust Government entirely." This argument can be brought forward against any legislation that the Government may bring forward and makes government by the Legislature impossible. (Mr. D. V. Belvi : " Any repressive legislation.") What it really amounts to is non-co-operation. If Honourable Members are so distrustful of Government, then it is their duty to remain outside this House and allow those members to legislate who can co-operate and trust Government to carry on. As regards the evidence of Red propaganda that the Honourable Member has asked for, I will try to deal with that later on. My Honourable friend asks for the Bill to be circulated. That is a delaying motion and is an attempt to kill the Bill. I sincerely trust that the House will not follow his advice. It is a policy of wait and see. Sir, that reminds me of a little incident that occurred on the floor of this House in Delhi last year when a brick fell from the roof on to the floor in front of the Commander-in-Chief. The whole House was very excited at the time and said that something must be done immediately to prevent a recurrence of such an accident. I did not then hear any Honourable Member say, " Let us wait and see if another brick will fall." (Laughter.) (Mr. M. R. Jayakar : " We saw the brick fall "). Now, Sir, as regards the challenge to produce evidence of Red propaganda and of the necessity of taking strong measures, the Government are in a difficult position. I am not in the confidence of Government, I am merely a back-bencher. But all Governments have to protect their executive and they have certain information about conspiracies, revolutions and troubles which they cannot divulge. Their position is a very difficult one and we have to accept what evidence they can give. But I should have thought that Honourable Members would have been quite satisfied with the evidence that is given in the Press. As regards the railway strikes, whatever my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi may say that the basis of the strikes are economic, he cannot deny the fact that these strikes are aggravated, prolonged and embittered by Red revolutionary propaganda. I would like to point out that there is one new thing that has come into these strikes in India which was not there before, and that is the policy of sabotage. That it has occurred on the Railways I think is most regrettable, and we all know it is due to Red propaganda. Then, Sir, I have here a telegram, dated the 8th September,

[Mr. T. Gavin-Jones.]

1928, in the Indian News Agency telegrams from Kharagpur, which shows that Red propaganda is active even when the men have returned to work :

"Kharagpur, 8th. The situation is quiet, although normal working not yet been resumed. Mahomedan employees of Bengal Nagpur Railway workshop been arrested on charge of being in possession of live bombs."

So much for the Railways. At Jamshedpur, we all know that the workers there are exceedingly well treated. We know that that industry could not possibly pay their men so well if it had not such a large measure of protection. They are well housed, they are well fed. I have recently heard—I cannot vouch for the truth of it, but I have heard from a reliable source—that 7,000 men have recently returned to work and their real object is to collect sufficient money from their wages to help the other men who remain out on strike and to disorganise the industry. Now, Sir, the steel industry is a very highly organised industry, and it is quite easy for one department to upset the whole organisation. I hear from a creditable source that the Tin-plate Works are likely to be closed down for want of steel plates. That is because men have gone Bolshy and are bent on giving as much trouble as they possibly can. Then I hear from Calcutta that on the banks of the Hooghly there are three mills, one of them a cotton mill and the other two jute mills, all fairly close together, which have had to be closed down due to the activities of Mr. Spratt. Then, Sir, I will bring Honourable Members nearer home, to Cawnpore. In Cawnpore we have an organisation called the "Mazdur Sabha". It purports to be a trades union organisation and it is registered as such. Its membership is not very large. At one time that organisation received some support from the employers. I come from Cawnpore, I employ labour myself and I know what I am talking about. We endeavour to allow this organisation to grow as a trades union. (Mr. B. Das : "How kind of you.") We did not oppose this organisation in any way at all (Mr. K. Ahmed : "Why do you not pay higher wages to them ?") We are only too glad to have sound trades union organisations develop so that we may have some authoritative body to deal with when our men go out on strike. But this organisation has gone Red. It is avowedly a Bolshevik organisation with all the Bolshevist ideals.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why don't you pay them higher wages and take the bull by the horns ?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : I want Government to take the bull by the horns. It holds meetings in the open air under the Red flag and that flag has the Moscow badge (hammer and sickle) on it. Its officers wear brassards with the Moscow badge on their arm and they preach and talk the doctrines and tenets of the Bolshevists. They have succeeded in bringing out the Elgin Mills on strike, and when they did strike, it was very difficult for the management to find out why they had really struck. All sorts of excuses were brought out, but there was no real definite statement of a valid reason for going out on strike, and that organisation gave the greatest trouble possible, they prevented the men from returning and very nearly succeeded in causing violence. The Elgin Mills men have gone back after much difficulty, and I am told on good authority that they have not yet settled down to work properly. We heard some months ago that certain agitators had come to Cawnpore and were endeavouring to create disturbance among the mills by bringing the workmen out one mill after another and thereby upsetting the employers. Only the other day, last month, they attempted to bring out the Woollen Mills' workmen, but their membership in that mill is very small, they were not able to have sufficient influence, and very fortunately the men refused to listen to the blandishments of this organisation. But they did their worst spreading leaflets broadcast among these ignorant men. I will read an extract to show the sort of stuff they spread broadcast to the employees. After appealing to the men to join the "Mazdur Sabha", they say :

"The foundation of the labour agitation has taken deep root, and even the Almighty can do no harm to it now. We know that in the world the capitalists are still predominating, but they should bear in mind that better days for the coolies are not very far off now. The Sun of the liberty of the labourers has already dawned upon the Russian territory and its rays are spreading over countries of the world. The Sun can be eclipsed only for a short time, but cannot be effaced for ever."

It is stuff of this kind which is being circulated.....

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Perhaps the Honourable Member will be good enough to state how many of the office-bearers of this "Mazdur Sabha" are Britishers or foreigners and how many are Indians ? That is the point. The rest is all very interesting, but is hardly to the point.

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : I cannot tell what British organisation there is. We have no British organisers in Cawnpore.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Or non-Indian workers in the "Mazdur Sabha" ?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : But it is a very clever organisation, and these European organisations send to India trained men, and they carry on their propaganda in a very insidious manner, and we know in Cawnpore, where we are in touch with labour, perfectly well, that by some means or another, from whatever source it may come, our trade union there has been turned into a Red organisation.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : All Indians. Don't be beating about the bush.

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : Then they go on to say :

"Even the Government has recognised the existence of the Mazdur Sabha."

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Do you object to that :?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : It is humorous if it were not so serious that an organisation which has turned Red revolutionary should claim that an organisation which has the recognition of Government, and I think that when any organisation becomes openly a Red revolutionary, it is the business of the Government to take some steps in the matter.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Take steps against Indians ?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : We do not want Europeans to come into this country who are trained in Russia to make our difficulties ten times worse.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Who wants them ? Nobody wants them.

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : We have got to turn them out.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : There already are powers. Why do not the Government exercise them ?

Mr. T. Gavin-Jones : We have been told a lot about the innocence of Russia, but I prefer to believe the evidence which my friend Sir Victor Sassoon has given us. He is a business man and he goes to China to see the Government of China on business terms, and he has to be told exactly what the situation is, and I prefer that evidence to the evidence of any tour which is made in Russia. Sir, surely a man is a fool if he sees a flame being put to his house to destroy it and does not put it out immediately. There is an old English proverb, " There is no use shutting the stable door after the horse is gone ". I appeal to all Honourable Members to take no risks but to support this Bill.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Gavin-Jones has been seeing red, and if he had directed his attention towards his left, perhaps he would have said that the Government of India have gone red judging from the array of red chaprasis who support the Government Benches. Sir, my Honourable friend's delusion is really amusing. It is very difficult to take it seriously. I do not know how my Honourable friend's troubles will come to an end as soon as this Bill is passed. There may be a few foreign emissaries of Russia—whether British or not, I do not know—who may come within the purview of this legislation. But how many are they ? Are they really responsible for the unrest that prevails throughout the length and breadth of the country ?

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : I believe the Honourable Member comes from Bengal. He is aware of the activities of Mr. Spratt in Bengal ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I do not know.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : He ought to know.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I generally proceed on recognised authorities, and I hold in my hand a publication, which will be readily recognised by my Honourable friend Mr. Coatman as his handiwork, and it is known as " India in 1926-27 ". What do we find here ?

Mr. H. G. Cocke (Bombay : European) : What about 1928-29 ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I have yet to know what specific evidence Government have got subsequent to the publication of this book which can justify this measure. Sir, if Honourable Members will turn to pages 288 and 290 of this book, they will find that Mr. Coatman deals with the whole subject very lightly. In the first place, he begins by saying that during this year, Communism has been both more active and more vocal than in the preceding year and then he goes into details. He points out that Communism has failed, or almost failed so far as India is concerned. I want some definite facts from my gallant friend Colonel Crawford subsequent to this period on which we can support this Bill. Sir, Mr. Coatman says :

" Considerable quantities of printed propaganda have been poured into India, its general nature being such as can well be imagined."

I suppose this Bill is not going to put a stop to the current of printed literature coming into this country. Then, Sir, he proceeds to deal with indigenous Communism :

" Indigenous Communism, as represented by the so-called Communist Party of India, seems to have made little appreciable headway."

Next, Sir, he refers to Mr. Allison's movements and says :

" So far as is known, Allison's visit had little, if any, influence on the outbreak or duration of the strike, but the results of his sojourn in Calcutta seem to have been very similar to what was observable in Bombay. In the latter place the leaders of the Workers' and Peasants' Party have made efforts to secure a position of influence in the Bombay Provincial Congress Committee, although so far they have met with but little success."

An Honourable Member : " So far ".

Mr. K. C. Neogy :

" At the end of January Allison was arrested and prosecuted for entering India on a forged passport under the name of Donald Campbell, receiving a sentence of eighteen months' rigorous imprisonment. A second visitor to Bombay appeared in the person of Philip Spratt, whose public speeches and writings have attracted a certain amount of attention, and who appears to have devoted himself to the same objects as engaged the attention of Allison."

But then he says :

" The frankly revolutionary organisation, the parent of which is M. N. Roy, has continued its activities on familiar lines but without striking results."

Now what striking results have since followed ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Universal strikes.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am coming to that.

Colonel J. D. Crawford : Loss of Indian lives.

An Honourable Member : Is it due to them ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : You might as well refer to the Kashmir floods. I think that these extracts have gone home. Then, again, Mr. Coatman concludes with these words :

" If one is to be guided by M. N. Roy's latest pamphlet, 'The Future of Indian Politics', he has given up in despair the idea of converting to Communism the upper strata of politically-minded Indians as represented by the Indian National Congress, whom he has roundly denounced as completely 'bourgeois' in their outlook and as interested equally with the British bureaucracy in exploiting the toiling and suffering Indian proletariat. For Indian Labour movements Roy has professed an equally lively contempt, inasmuch as they have been manned so far by self-seeking representatives of the propertied classes."

I hope that this description does not apply to Mr. Joshi.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : No, Sir, I have no property.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Now, Sir, in so far as Mr. Joshi admits that he is to a certain extent responsible for the strikes in Bombay, and in so far as this Bill is not going to deport Mr. Joshi out of India, how is this going to put an end to the textile strike to which my Honourable friend, Mr. Barucha, made such eloquent reference ? I have something more from a very authoritative source about the ultility of the foreign Communist. I never had any confidence in the Britisher as regards his administrative capacity, but I find that he is worthless even as a Communist. Sir, this is what I find stated by no less an authoritative organisation than the Congress of the Communist International in Moscow, and it only reached me last night. May we take it that this is the latest considered opinion on the part of that authoritative body in regard to confidence in the Britisher as a Communist ? It says :

" It was necessary to give up the idea of the European playing a direct part in any Indian revolution or of useful work by any Anglo-Indian Communist Party because Indians mistrusted the whites even if communists. The Communist International must therefore handle the new independent Indian Communist party through natives."

(Hear, hear.)

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indians) : Read on further.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : You may if you like, but this is enough for my purpose. (Laughter.) But, as I said, I did not know that the Britisher was so worthless even as a Communist. (Laughter.) And what has this Bill got to do with indigenous Communism ? Can my Honourable and gallant friend tell me that ? Now, Sir, as has been stated by several of my Honourable friends already, we must be prepared for something more lively to come hereafter. The European Communists are to be given a free passage home under this Bill, and when they are out of harm's way, the field will be ready for drastic action against the Indian Communists. I challenge the Honourable the Home Member to deny this. If, as is stated, the Indian Communists are themselves competent to carry on this propaganda and create this mischief, what are you going to do about them ? Some of my Honourable friends have stated, " Look at these strikes, the country-wide unrest ". But these have been going on for some time now. What action do Government propose to take now so far as this indigenous Communism is concerned ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : What action do you advise the Government to take ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Well, my Honourable friend has taken his seat on that side of the House, and it is for him to give any advice he chooses to Government, not for me, Sir.

An Honourable Member : Why not ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I have not got the responsibility of carrying on the government of this country ; it is for Government to bring forward proposals, and it is for this House to examine them as to whether they are going to sanction them or not. I suppose that is the recognized practice of Governments and Legislatures all over the world.

Now, Sir, I at one time hesitated as to whether I should at all take any part in this debate, because we Bengalis have already become a little too much identified with this whole affair, beginning from Mr. M. N. Roy down to my Honourable friend, Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra. (Laughter.) But, Sir, certain observations made by the temporary Finance Member yesterday has prompted me to say a few words. I was interested to hear him express in very emphatic terms the high respect in which he holds Subhas Chandra Bose. I thought within myself that this expression of respect was a little too belated because I thought my Honourable friend has been a member of that Government which kept him confined without trial for so many years.

An Honourable Member : And still he did not resign.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Now, that statement of the Honourable Member's supplies me with a point so far as this Bill is concerned. My Honourable friend has the reputation of being an honest and sincere man, at least that is the reputation which he enjoyed before he came into the Government Cabinet. I do not know whether he has lost those virtues by his association with those wily gentlemen who are his colleagues in the Executive Council, but I will give him the benefit of the doubt. (Laughter.) Now Sir, what does his confession mean ? This confession of the profound respect in which the Honourable Member holds Subhas Chandra Bose means, if it means anything, that he is repentant at what the Government did with reference to Subhas Chandra Bose.....

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Finance Member) : Not necessarily.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I do not know what else he means. Sir, this is an instance which to my mind shows that the Government sometimes act in a hurry and repent at leisure, and that is one of the reasons why I am not prepared to arm this Government with further powers of repression. My Honourable friend referred to railway disasters, and I interrupted him because I thought he was referring to certain instances which were the subject-matter of a judicial inquiry at the present moment. I do not know, but there may be instances, to which my Honourable friend was referring, which are not at the present moment sub judice. I will assume that in regard to certain cases of railway disaster it has been definitely proved that the Communists have had a hand in them. Now, Sir, my Honourable friend comes from the same province as I do, and I would remind him of another railway case, the attempted wrecking of a railway train which came to light some years ago in my province, called the Naraingarh train-wrecking case. In that instance several men actually confessed that they had taken part in it, and they were convicted and sentenced to imprisonment. Some time later it came to light that quite a different set of people were responsible for it. The men convicted were then let out. The confessions had been admittedly engineered by the police in order to secure a conviction in that case.

(There was an inaudible interruption by Dr. A. Suhrawardy.)

Well, my Honourable friend Dr. Suhrawardy perhaps knows as much as I do in regard to these matters, and I will ask the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra to get his information in these matters from his new-found supporter from Midnapur. Now, Sir, supposing that the Communists are responsible for these acts, I should say, acts of murder. I have absolutely no sympathy with anybody who has anything to do with such acts of violence. But, Sir, does my Honourable friend realize what his argument amounts to ? If the foreign Communists are really responsible for these acts of violence leading to loss of human life, is he going to send them out of the country, providing them with free passages, and not put them on trial, leaving the Indians to face the music ? Is that the position which the Honourable Member wants to take up ? Sir, I am not a believer in Imperial preference, and I do not know whether my Honourable friend wants to pursue a policy of Imperial preference for the benefit of criminals. If they have anything to do with these acts of violence bring them to the open courts and let them take their trial along with the poor Indians, the poor victims of their propaganda, and take the consequences of their actions. The Honourable Member knows perfectly well that his position in the Cabinet would not be worth a day's purchase if he were to insist on such a procedure. My Honourable friend light-heartedly referred to the financial difficulties in the way of applying Regulation III of 1818 to the European. I challenge him to take up the question of applying this Regulation against Britishers in the Cabinet, and he will find his position very precarious. Sir, my Honourable friend happens to be the first Indian to officiate as the Finance Member, and I expect him to take a more serious view of this matter. Human liberty is not to be weighed in the balance against rupees, annas and pies. What did you do in regard to the application of Regulation III to your own countrymen ? Did you contemplate this aspect of the case, the financial aspect, as you light-heartedly put it ? May I remind my Honourable friend of another instance in which his presence in the Cabinet has not prevented the financial interests of India being overlooked. The Honourable the Home Member was referring to the after-war conditions and the necessity for after-war reconstruction. This reminds me of one of the after-war conditions in England—the large proportion of unmarried women. And what did this Government do ? The Government, in the shape of the Lee concessions, has been paying a subsidy on the marriage of British officers, put it in whatever language you like : free passages for the wives of officers, remittance concessions and all that sort of thing. The children of British officers are also entitled to certain financial benefits. The Government of India are practically subsidising the marriage institution of England to a certain extent at the cost of the Indian tax-payer. Where were my Honourable friend's financial scruples at that time ?

I will come to the Honourable the Foreign Secretary for a little while. When my Honourable friend Sir Denys Bray gets up to speak in this House, I promise myself a rich repast, a feast of words, but nothing but words. My Honourable friend would not be the Foreign Secretary, if he were to deviate into anything more substantial than mere words. Sir, I was not therefore surprised when we had the treat of that vacuous verbiage to which we were entertained the other day. My Honourable friend at one time reminded me of another equally famous knight in fiction, who used to tilt against wind-mills. My Honourable friend assumed things which nobody had said, answered arguments which nobody had advanced ; he thought that my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer had made an insinuation that the Britishers had made an attempt to tamper with our religions, and the social order in this country, and he proceeded to answer that charge with great force.

Sir Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary) : I am sure, Sir, I never referred to my Honourable friend Mr. Ranga Iyer in that connection. The words that filled me with indignation fell, I thought, from the lips of my friend Mr. Lajpat Rai.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That leaves my argument absolutely unaffected. I did not understand my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai making any such statement. Supposing he had done so, would he have been altogether wrong ? My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar has already touched on this question, but I am going to take it up once more, this time supported by authority. (An Honourable Member : "What is the authority ?") I will mention the authorities. Sir, first of all I shall read out what a Judge of the Agra High Court, Mr. William Edwards wrote on the question of the Christianisation of India :

"Our best safeguard is in the evangelisation of the country ; for, although Christianity does not denationalise, its spread would be gradual and Christian settlements scattered about the country would be as towers of strength for many years to come for they must be loyal as long as the mass of the people remain either idolators or Muhammadans."

Now, Sir, another authority describes the process of conversion, forced conversion, which was then taking place in India. This is from a pamphlet written by Mr. Malcolm Lewin, who served in India as the second Judge of the Supreme Court in Madras and Provincial Member of Government :

"The missionary colonels and padre lieutenants.....

(An Honourable Member : "Date".)

Dates do not at all matter. The whole question is whether the British Government can claim religious neutrality throughout its career in India, as has been stated by the Honourable the Foreign Secretary.

"The missionary colonels and padre lieutenants as these curious militaries were called, were not inactive. Emboldened by the toleration of the sepoys, they grew more violent than ever. They were louder in their denunciations of Hindooism and Islamism."

Then later on it says :

"By and by the proselytizing Colonels, tempted the sepoys to Christianity with bribes, and offered promotions and other rewards to converts. They unblushingly used their influence as officers in this unholy affair. The sepoys protested, and their European officers promised to make every sepoy that forsook his religion a Havildar, every Havildar a Subedar Major,"

and so on.

Let me now turn to an educational authority in the Punjab, Mr. Arnold, Director of Public Instruction :

"We cannot and ought not to look on life with Asiatic eyes. Our tendency is, and must be, to Europeanize. Toleration, sympathy, tact may help to make this process less obnoxious, become less palpable to the natives. But the proces goes on and will go on. And with the people which has to yield it, it never can and never will be popular."

But, Sir, I am coming to a greater authority, and that is no less a person than Macaulay, who is hailed as the author of the policy of education which was introduced in this country. It is not a published minute. These officials never commit themselves like that in public documents. I do not know what things my Honourable friend, the Foreign Secretary, writes to his people at home, but this is what Macaulay wrote to his father in 1836. (Cries of "Oh, oh" from the European Group.) We are not quarrelling about dates. The policy still continues :

"The effect of this education on Hindus is prodigious. No Hindu who has received an English education ever remains sincerely attached to his religion. Some continue to profess it as a matter of policy, but many profess themselves pure Deists and some embrace Christianity. It is my firm belief that if our plans of education are followed up, there will not be a single idolator among the respectable classes in Bengal thirty years hence."

Sir, Hinduism has survived in Bengal, in spite of these benevolent intentions.

Some of these extracts have a striking resemblance to the extracts which were read out by my Honourable friend, the Home Member, as being the aims and object of the Communists. Therefore, Sir, if we have survived Government's benevolent intentions in the past, we are going to survive the onslaughts of Communism also in the future.

Sir, I think I have taken too much time of the House. (Honourable Members of the European Group : "No, no ; go on, go on.") But there is just one point with reference to what was said by Sir Victor Sassoon, on which I should like to touch. My Honourable friend seems to think that there is an analogy in the English Act with reference to aliens. Reference was made to the British Act under which aliens can be deported. I have tried to study the history of this legislation and what do I find ? For the first time this Alien Restriction Act was passed in 1914 when England was in the throes of war, and this legislation was resorted to as the result of an examination of the subject by the Committee of Imperial Defence. The Minister who was in charge of the Bill in the House of Lords laid certain definite facts before the House. One of them was that there had been an investigation into espionage, and twenty spies had as a matter of fact been arrested within twenty-four hours. That was the justification for that measure at that time. Has any such definite information been placed before us by the Home Member ? That Act was passed with the concurrence of all the Parties. It was due to expire in 1919, when a short Amending Bill was brought forward seeking to extend its life by one year, and in justification of this temporary extension the Minister in charge said :

" Being in a state of war it is a matter of necessity for His Majesty's Government to maintain temporarily the powers which were essential during the war."

And subsequent to that period this legislation has been kept up with the help of annual enactments giving it a lease of life only for a year. It was only in May 1927, that an attempt was made on behalf of Government in the House of Lords to make permanent the provisions of this Act. As far as I can trace its history, this amending Bill has not yet been placed on the Statute-book. The Bill has no doubt been passed in the House of Lords. But, Sir, we find arrayed against this measure in the House of Lords men like Lord Reading, Lord Haldane ; and why ? Not that the interests of any British subject were affected by it, but still as a matter of principle, they could not see their way to become parties to any such measure although it affected only aliens. I suppose, Sir, my Honourable friends who sit opposite have some amount of regard for Lord Reading, and I hope that the regard which they had for that noble gentleman while he was here, has not diminished to any extent by the mere fact that he is no longer here.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Out of sight, out of mind.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : This is what Lord Haldane said in opposing this amending measure :

" What I do object is to the introduction into our constitution of a permanent principle which is foreign to it and which has never till now been tolerated except in cases of war or in very dubious circumstances while carrying on war policy temporarily."

And all this solicitude was expressed, not that the interests of any British subject were involved, but that even undesirable aliens might not be treated in this fashion. Sir, what was the assurance that Lord Desborough, who was in charge of the Bill gave to the House. This is what he said :

" The check exercisable by Parliament lies in the fact that the Government and the Home Secretary in particular is answerable to Parliament for all the steps which he may take in pursuance of the powers conferred by the Bill. The Bill contains no new provisions, these powers are in existence now and the Bill proposes to continue them and Parliament can criticise, either as a general policy or particular acts."

Is that the position here ? Is the Honourable the Home Member responsible to this House ?

Sir Victor Sassoon (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Yes.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : My Honourable friend says, " Yes ", but we know to our cost, especially we who come from Bengal know it too well, how in spite of certain definite assurances given by no less a person than Lord Reading, Regulation III was abused.

One word more and I have done. Sir, I find that even the draftsman of this Bill, an honest and an honourable man as I know him to be, has unconsciously given us the benefit of his frank opinion as to what this Bill is really going to be. I would draw the attention of the Honourable Members to the " Short title and extent " which is in clause 1—" This Act may be called the Public Safety (Removal from India) Act ". I agree, this Bill is designed to bring about the removal of public safety from India. It is for this reason that I oppose this Bill.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, much has been said about this Bill in this House. I agree with my Honourable friend Captain Hira Singh in his view that this is a very short Bill, but to me it appears that the importance of the Bill varies inversely to its size. It is not the length or the shortness of a Bill that should determine the principle of it. We should see what the essence of the Bill is and whether the Bill is warranted under the circumstances spoken to by the Honourable the Home Member. The Honourable the Home Member laid down the other day three important principles and he opined in the case of the Bill which had been introduced in this House by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour to make certain amendments in the Indian Divorce Act that the Bill should satisfy three canons. The first was whether it was proved that the present law was insufficient for the purpose, the second was whether there was any demand for new legislation and the third was whether there was sufficient evidence to warrant the introduction of fresh legislation. All these three principles have been very carefully thrashed out in this House by the various speakers in the course of the debate on the present Bill and I do not think I should traverse the same ground over again. It has been abundantly proved by various speakers in this House that none of these tests can possibly be applied to this Bill. It has been shown that the present law is quite good, it is quite enough and it has not been pointed out to us by the Honourable the Home Member that there was ever any offender of the nature of a Communist who was put upon his trial, but the trial failed owing to certain technical difficulties. All the cases to which reference was made by the Honourable the Home Member have proved successful. There was the Cawnpore case ; there was the Allahabad case, and there were other cases also. In none of them did the law fail to mete out condign punishment to the offenders. So it is evident that there is no need whatever for fresh legislation. Now we know that under the Criminal Procedure Code, section 108, anyone may be called upon by a competent magistrate to furnish security for good behaviour either for keeping the peace in the country or for not doing a wrongful act. Then there is section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code under which a Magistrate has simply to say " Whereas it has been made to appear to me ", not " Whereas it appears to me " but " Whereas it has been made to appear to me that your presence in my jurisdiction is likely to give rise to commotion or you are likely to do something which may disturb the public peace ", therefore I issue an injunction to you not to do a particular thing. Then we have sections 124A of the Indian Penal Code and 153A of the Indian Penal Code. I submit that all these laws are enough and more than enough for these purposes and that there is no need at all to enact any new law. It was once said by the late Motilal Babu of the Amrita Bazaar Patrika that section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code and section 124A of the Indian Penal Code were the kings of all laws and he said, "Give me these two laws and I will see that there is absolutely nothing wrong done in the whole country." It is said that Archimedes once said, "Give me a proper fulcrum and I shall move the whole world." So when there are these laws in force in the country, where is the need of proceeding to legislate a Bill of this kind? There is no need whatever for it. As for the demand of the country, I should like to know who has demanded that such a piece of legislation should be taken up. It is to find out whether the people want legislation of this kind that a motion has been put forward in this House that the Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion. So far as we know, so far as the House knows, there is no body of Indian opinion in this country demanding such fresh legislation. As for the evidence, the Honourable the Home Member has already told us that he has got very good evidence in his possession but that it must all remain in his pocket. So if the evidence is to remain hidden in his archives, if the evidence is to remain in his pocket, he has no right to ask us to give our consent to this legislation. If he cannot trust us who are the elected representatives of the people with the evidence in his possession, why should he come to us for our votes for the legislation he wants to put on the Statute-book? This disposes of the three points laid down by the Honourable the Home Member the other day.

1 P.M.

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Now I come to another part of this debate. I must take note of what was said in this House by three Honourable Members, my Honourable friends, Sir Victor Sassoon, Mr. Gavin Jones and Dr. Suhrawardy. It was cast in our teeth that we were taking more interest in the preservation of the constitutional rights of the British people than they themselves did. The allegation was that we Indians had no business to poke our nose into the constitutional rights of Britishers, as there were Britishers here able enough to take care of themselves. This reminds me of an historical instance or two which I have learnt from British history. The same argument was put forward on the eve of the American War. It was contended by a large section of the English public that they had a right to tax the Americans for purposes of revenue, and when it was pointed out to them that by pressing such a legislation in the House of Commons they were invading the rights of the British people in America, who were not represented in the House, they said, "No, it does not matter; we are prepared to forge the rights guaranteed to us by the constitution, but we are determined to impose upon America our own laws". In this connection I would invite the attention of the House to what was said on that occasion by no less an authority than Edmund Burke in the House of Commons. I would remind my Honourable friends who are Britishers here to take particular note of what one of their own illustrious countrymen said:

> "In order to prove that the Americans have no right to their liberties, we are every day endeavouring to subvert the maxims which preserve the whole spirit of our own. To prove that the Americans ought not to be free, we are obliged to depreciate the value of freedom itself, and we never seem to gain a paltry advantage over them in debate without attacking some of those principles or deriding some of those feelings for which our ancestors had shed their blood."

One of the cardinal principles of the British constitutional law is that no man can be taxed when he is not represented. No taxation without representation. Another cardinal principle of British law is that no man can be condemned unheard. Here the Britishers present in this House who represent the Britishers outside this House in India say "It does not matter if a Britisher is condemned unheard. A Britisher who comes into this country to interfere with our exploitation of India has no business to be here and we shall deport him without trial." Now, in this connection I may invite the attention of the House to another illustration from the history of England. Hampden was asked to pay the paltry sum of 20*s.* as ship money. 20*s.* was not a large amount and Hampden would not have been a poorer man had he paid the money; but he refused to pay it. Why? Because the tax had not been levied on the public by the British Parliament, but by the Royal will, and he objected on principle to pay this small amount. Referring to this important historical instance, Burke says in his immortal speech on American taxation.....

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division: Muhammadan Rural): That is out of date.

Mr. D. V. Belvi: It is not out of date; it can never be out of date. You are out of date; you are not in touch with English history. He says:

> "Would 20*s.* have ruined Mr. Hampden's fortune? No. But the payment of that 20*s.* on the principle on which it was demanded would have made him a slave."

Britishers should remember these instances. It now suits their purpose to say that they are prepared to deport without a trial even Britishers from India, if Britishers choose to come here to interfere with their exploitation. It is most dangerous. Now, we are told by my Honourable friend, Mr. Suhrawardy, that there is an adage in Bengali which says that a woman who loves a child more than the child's mother is a witch. So, we are all witches on this side of the House, because we care more for the constitutional rights of the British people than the representatives of the British people in this House. But there is another aspect from which this question may be viewed. We are the subjects of the British Crown. We were told the other day by my Honourable friend, Sir James Simpson, that the Britishers in this country must be viewed as adopted sons of India; if they are the adopted sons of India, then India is surely a foster-daughter of England; if they are entitled to share in the fortunes of India, we Indians are entitled to a share in the constitutional rights of the British people under charters from time to time. We hope that we shall be able to achieve all the political rights which have been guaranteed to the British people under the British constitution. That inheritance is a common inheritance to Britishers and to British Indians; and if the Britishers in this country claim a share in India as a part of their patrimony, we claim a share in the political inheritance of the British people. We have as good a right to defend the constitutional rights of the British people as the Britishers in this House.

That disposes of the argument that was advanced by my three Honourable friends to whom I have already referred. I shall now proceed to another aspect of the case which has not hitherto been touched upon. It was touched upon by one speaker, my Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, though rather lightly. Let us examine the present political condition of India. Is India in a political condition in which we may safely arm the Executive Government with such powers as are now demanded? What is the position? At present we have got a sort of representative institutions in this country, but we have not yet got a Government or a Cabinet which is responsible to the Legislature. There are representative insti tutions, but these representative institutions are coupled with an irres ponsible executive. Is it safe under these circumstances to arm even th Governor General of India with the powers with which it is suggeste he should be invested ? What is the position of His Excellency th Governor General at present ? Is he a constitutional Governor General Can we say that what he does is done with the consent of the public Now, in this connection I would invite the attention of the House to a exactly parallel case from Canada. The House knows perhaps that Canad was much in the same position in which India now stands. Before th grant of full Dominion status to it, the position was the same there as i is now in British India. There were representative institutions, but th Cabinet or the Government there was not responsible to the people. Now I should like to read to the House a short extract from Lord Durham' famous report. This is what he says :

" A body of holders of office thus constituted "— that is, constituted in an irresponsible manner :

" without reference to the people or their representatives must, in fact, from th very nature of colonial Government, acquire the entire direction of affairs of the prov ince. A Governor, arriving in a Colony in which he almost invariably has had n previous acquaintance with the state of parties, or the character of individuals, i compelled to throw himself almost entirely upon those whom he finds placed in th position of his official advisers. His first acts must necessarily be performed, an his first appointments made, at their suggestion. And as these first acts and appoint ments give a character to his policy, he is generally brought thereby into immediat collision with the other parties in the country, and thrown into more complete de pendence upon the official party and its friends. Thus the Governor of Lower Canad has almost always been brought into collision with the Assembly, which his adviser regard as their enemy."

It can hardly be doubted that all this applies to India. Then he goe on to say :

" In the course of the contest in which he was thus involved, the provocation which he received from the Assembly and the light in which their conduct was re presented by those who alone had any access to him, naturally imbued him wit many of their antipathies; his position compelled him to seek the support of som party against the Assembly ; and his feelings and his necessities thus combined t induce him to bestow his patronage and to shape his measures to promote the interest of the party on which he was obliged to lean. Thus every successive year consolidate and enlarged the strength of the ruling party. Fortified by family connection, an the common interest felt by all who held, and all who desired, subordinate office that party was thus erected into a solid and permanent power, controlled by no respon sibility, subject to no serious change, exercising over the whole Government of th Province an authority utterly independent of the people and its representatives, an possessing the only means of influencing either the Government at home or the colonia representative of the Crown."

The House will see whether every word of this passage does not literall apply to the present political condition of British India. Who are th associates of His Excellency the Governor General of India under th present conditions ? These six gentlemen, the Members of the Cabinet These are the gentlemen who are the advisers of His Excellency, and al his information is derived from these gentlemen, and His Excellency unless he is a masterful man like Lord Curzon, will have to yield to th pressing solicitations of his Cabinet. The Cabinet is irremoveable ; it i not responsible to this House. Is it safe for us under the present circum stances to say that the drastic powers with which His Excellency th

Governor General is now sought to be invested will be always exercised by him properly ? The Governor General will not be in an independent position : he will have to yield to the Members of his Cabinet who may say, ' We shall resign if Your Excellency does not accede to our request ; if you do not accede to our request, then we shall throw up our appoint- ments ". Naturally therefore he will have to yield to the requests of the Cabinet.

Now, view this case from another standpoint. You know that even little insects such as butterflies or little reptiles that reside on certain trees or flowers take their colour from the trees or the flowers on which they reside. That is the position of the Governor General of India at present. He must take his cue from the Members of his Executive Council. So, I submit, it is not safe to invest the Governor General of India with these powers at present.

Then, Sir, I shall turn to another point. Much was said by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour and the Honourable the Foreign Secretary against the Bolsheviks.

Such a lurid picture was presented to the House by the Honourable the Home Member and by the Honourable the Foreign Secretary that I was really frightened out of my wits and I rubbed my eyes and said to myself : " Can all this be true of Soviet Russia ? If all this be true, surely the Russian people as they now exist must be a body of monsters, and if they were to invade India, or if they were allowed to come to the Indian shores, our position will surely be unsafe." On my way to Simla I thought that this question might crop up and I wanted to study what the real position in Russia was in these days. So I managed to purchase from a book-seller in Bombay a book on Russia, published in the present year 1928, and I shall now read to the House certain passages from that book. I may state that this book is written by an Englishman, Mr. W. J. Brown, an Englishman of position, a Secretary of a Trade Union in England, a gentleman who went to Russia purposely to study the conditions in Russia, and he has written his book as the outcome of his observations. I have no doubt that the observations of a gentleman like him will find acceptance with the House. Let us examine the present conditions of Russia from various points. Let us see how labourers are treated there ; let us see how women are treated in Russia ; let us see how religious institutions are treated in Russia ; let us see how prisons are worked in Russia and let us see what the condition of the Russian Army is.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member going to say all that ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I am not going to read the whole book, Sir. I am going to read short passages bearing on each one of these subjects, because, an attempt was made here to frighten my Muhammadan brethren out of their wits. They were told that Islam will not be safe. We were told that Hinduism will not be safe (An Honourable Member : " That is not so very easy ") and it is necessary.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member can give the substance of those passages, of course.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I am not going to read the whole book, I assure you, Sir. I believe that much has been said by the other side about Soviet

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Russia and it is absolutely necessary to say something on this side of the House in reply. Now, I shall read a passage :

"The Bolsheviks, by newspaper, by poster, by study circles and so on, do their best to destroy religion. But while this is their policy they permit, and indeed enforce, the fullest liberty to the adherents of all faiths—Christian, Mohammedan, and Jew alike—to practise their faith. The churches are open. Anywhere in Russia you may go to church when you please and the priests can preach what they please, so long as they do not incite the people against the Government."

Then, Sir, I come to another passage :

"The Bolsheviks believe themselves equipped with the knowledge of the laws which govern the evolution of society into happiness. And they devote themselves to the task with all the enthusiasm, and all that strange mixture of humility and high pride, which characterised the early Church.

In this devotion self goes by the board. Half their tremendous fixity of purpose comes from this subordination of self in something bigger. They live under a series of self-denying ordinances which recall Cromwell and the early Christian communities. In the Young Communist Movement neither drinking nor smoking is allowed. No member of the Communist Party proper may receive a higher salary than 225 roubles (£22 10s.) a month. Lenin got this and no more. Stalin, Rykov—all the Commissars—are paid at this figure. So are the Trade Union officials."

That shows the kind of people they are. They are not such huge monsters as they have been painted here.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : They do not drink ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : They do not drink, they do not smoke.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : That is the difficulty.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : A very hard lot.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : It is rather singular that representatives of the British people in this country should come forward to say something to the prejudice of Russia in this connection. This author has instituted a comparison between the British people and the Russians in connection with religion, and I shall read a short passage about it. He says :

"What is the practical faith of the British people ? Under which banner do they serve ? Remember the test is not what men call themselves, not whether they are members of a church or not ; but what governing conception of life is expressed in their conduct.

Could we say that the mass of people in England were devoted to the service of God, regardless of self-interest, family interest, race interest ? It is only necessary to put the question to answer it. Those who genuinely do put the service of God before everything else are regarded as cranks and lunatics, and although not in danger of immediate crucifixion, stand a very good chance of finding themselves in prison."

Then the author proceeds to say :

"Primarily, it is the service of self. If we are poor, the aim is to become better off; if we are rich, to become more rich ; if we are workmen, to become petty bourgeois; if we are bourgeois, to rise into Society By and large we worship the Golden Calf. True, we throw incense on other altars—convention demands it. We pay lip service to various creeds, for this is to be respectable. We make a profession of praying to God on Sundays. But our society is organised on the principle that we prey on our neighbours all the week.

Occasionally we do an unselfish thing—sometimes a noble thing. In a war we can be moved even to die for the country of our birth. But we do not live for it. In the main, self is the dominant motive and self-sacrifice the exception. We are practical atheists, and the publicans and harlots go into the Kingdom of Heaven before us."

This is a comparison instituted by an Englishman between the sort of religion which prevails in the British Isles and the sort of religion that prevails in Russia, and it is enough for our purposes. It has been said that these Russians are a very bad set of people. Let us see what they do in regard to education. In this connection I shall show.....

Mr. President : Again quotations ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Yes, Sir. It is no use talking without quoting chapter and verse because Members on the opposite Benches will not accept anything which comes from this side of the House unless it is supported by authority.

"Before the Revolution education in Russia was at a discount. The nobility and the commercial classes were educated, but the workers, and especially the peasants, were educationally in a profoundly backward state."

Then this gentleman goes on to say :

"There is a big difference between the educational system of Russia and that of Western countries. In England, for example, educational work is mainly a matter for the schools. In Russia there are many other agencies, apart from the schools—elementary, secondary technical schools and universities—through which education is transmitted.

Every factory or institution has to set aside a sum equal to between 1 per cent., and 2 per cent. of the wages bill for social work, and much of this is devoted to education. Every factory has its Red Corner—i.e., a Reading Room with study circles—and its illiteracy classes. Every prison has classes and study circles galore. In every regiment and every ship there are classes in illiteracy and politics (which are compulsory) and voluntary classes of all kinds. Every Workers' Club has anything from one to 20 different kinds of classes And the Trade Unions spend a large part of their income on educational work. Finally, there are the Communist Party schools and classes everywhere."

So, Russia is not so bad educationally. And, Sir, do you know the amount of money that is spent by Russians annually on education ?

Mr. President : Have you got quotations for that too ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Yes, surely, Sir.

Mr. President : Order, order. There is some reasonable limit beyond which I cannot allow the Honourable Member to make quotations.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, if you are in a hurry to rise, you may do so.

Mr. President : I have already told the Honourable Member that there is some reasonable limit beyond which he cannot be allowed to go on quoting passages after passages.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I appreciate what you say, Sir. I will only.....

Mr. President : Order, order. I will not allow the Honourable Member to quote any further passages.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : It seems to me, Sir, that the spirit of autocracy is abroad in this Assembly.

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member withdraw those words ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I submit, Sir, that this is not a remark made with reference to you.

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member withdraw those words ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I will, Sir.

Mr. President : Does he ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I will, but may I proceed or not proceed with my speech ; I have yet to say something.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member might go on.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Russia, Sir, is now condemned because there was a revolution there recently and that revolution unfortunately resulted not only in regicide but in a wholesale disturbance of the public peace and destruction of property. All this is perfectly true, but I submit that India is not on the verge of a revolution, nor is she sitting on the top of a volcano. India is a country which has outlived a number of institutions for many years. Our history rolls back to several centuries before the birth of Jesus Christ. We have been in existence as a civilised country at any rate according to known history for more than five thousand years, and India has never known a revolution in the long course of thousands of years. Our institutions have outlived all attacks made by numbers of various foreigners and their institutions. Sir, India has got a peculiar vitality in herself, and she can not only swallow but digest and assimilate all kinds of opinion and yet remain firm in her indigenous institutions. Now what was the condition of Russia when the revolution occurred ? My opinion is that a revolution is not a thing which is manufactured to order ; there must be historical circumstances warranting a revolution, even in India. I guarantee that even if a thousand Russian Communists were to give lectures every day throughout the year, in different parts of India, they will not be able to bring about a revolution, among us, because the conditions which are necessary for the occurrence of a revolution do not fortunately obtain in India. Now I shall read one passage to show.....

Mr. President : I have already ruled that I will not allow the Honourable Member to quote any more passages.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I shall give at least a reference to it because I consider that the quotation is very valuable. Members of this House may refer to a passage given on pages 191-192 of a very valuable book, called " The Conventional Lies of our Civilization " written by a German by name Max Nordau. It has been translated into English and this passage gives us a vivid description of the condition of the working people, the condition of the masses of Western Europe about the time this revolution occurred.

Then, Sir, there is one more point, and I shall say a few words and have done with it. Ours is a subordinate Legislature just as is our Government, and is it right—I am not speaking of abstract rights ; from the point of view of abstract principles we may have a right under the law to enact this legislation,—but is it morally right for us members of a subordinate Legislature, Members of a Legislature that has not been given full powers to legislate against people who enjoy now many more political rights than we do ? It has been said by my Honourable young friend, Mr. Munshi, who made his masterly maiden speech to-day that it is only the British Parliament which should legislate in a matter like this. I submit that the view taken by Mr. Munshi is perfectly correct. It is only the British Parliament that can legislate in a matter like this. The powers of the British Parliament are in no way fettered. A writer on the

APPENDIX*.

Mr. Narayan Prasad Singh (Durbhanga cum Saran : Non-Muhammadan) : Honourable President, so far as I understand, the title of the Bill is a misnomer—it may be due to the intoxication of power on the part of those who introduced it or it may have been intentionally done for misleading the public. To speak the truth, if it were called the Bureaucracy Safety Bill instead of the Public Safety Bill the name would have been more suitable and more significant. What good it will bring to the people of India, I fail to understand. One thing it will undoubtedly do—it will arm the bureaucracy with a dangerous weapon which will render it impossible for Indians even to dream of liberty in the near and distant future. Even a fool knows that your Safety Bill was forged not to give safety to the people of India but to strengthen every link of that chain of slavery which you have been putting round our necks during the last two centuries or so. It is a truism that when a patient has tried the most skilful physician in vain, he will grow all but desperate and in that state will not hesitate in consulting the most foolish quack fully knowing that even if the worst comes there can be only relief but no aggravation. Our condition at present is just as desperate if not worse. The malady of slavery has been upon us for long—too long perhaps and all sorts of patents, pills and mixtures have been tried—constitutional, unconstitutional, co-operation, non-co-operation—all have been administered by well-known doctors, but alas ! without success. Now in our utter helplessnes we are ready to take the most extreme remedy, provided it can afford us some relief. Communism which has done so much good to Russia—as I have been told—may soothe our pain—this hope at least emboldens me to welcome it. You can no longer befool us into cutting our throats so that the road before you may lie clear. For close upon two hundred years we have knocked at your gate with folded hands entreating you and worshipping you in a tone sometimes tender and warm, sometimes harsh and angry. At length, we are disillusioned. It is useless for you to try to cage us up now—Indians have grown earnest—they are perhaps in deadly earnest to fly in the sky of Liberty. You may kill them with your machine guns —if that please you, but you can not decoy them again into the net of the Safety Bill. It is possible to deceive some people for some time, but not all the people all the time.

From the Government side I regret that from Sir Hari Singh Gour even appeals have been made to our sense of sanity and sobriety in the name of our Hindu religion and Hindu culture as if these latter and even the throne of God would be pulled down to earth if the cursed Bolshevist is once allowed to cross the threshold of India.

Honoured Sir, is Communism likely to break the head of Hindu religion and Hindu society ? Is it likely to remove the Slavery which is both internal and external, physical and moral ? If there be so great a force, so great a potency in it, I for one would accord it a cordial reception. Does not the Hindu Religion belong to the time of the Vedas which taught that worship is a matter of the soul (atma) ? Does it not belong to the time of Manu who taught that slavery of whatever kind is miserable ? Are we not twenty two crores of Hindus belying ourselves sadly and offering the grossest insult to the memory of the Vedic Rishis who taught soul (atma) worship and soul (atma) force and to the memory of Manu who tried to impress upon men the miseries of slavery ? They have no right to call it Hindu religion and Hindu civilisation. The principles underlying the Bill were born of a spirit of slavery to England. I do not understand, I confess, what clash there may be between Communism and Hinduism as preached by the Vedas and Upanishads. Then, as to our Muslim friends. Are not the seven crores of Muhammadans insulting the religion of Hazrat Rasul whose greatest achievement was in the delivery of the Arab from irreligion and ignorance ? And last, but not the least, does it not sound a little bit curious that the very followers of Christ who spend lakhs in obliterating from the face of India all other religious sects, should pose as the greatest friends of both Hindus and Muhammadans, anxious to preserve these ancient religions of the East ? I am almost driven to believe that anything is good that would put an end to this slave civilisation and this slave Government. Since the sweet nectar of the Mahatma could not remove the disease, we may be ultimately forced to have recourse to the bitter recipe of Lenin. Just now I was not a little aggrieved, nay, disappointed, to hear from Sreeman Srinivasa Iyengar that Leninism has not as yet killed religion which separates brother from brother, man from man and community from community. My only complaint against Lenin is that he has not as yet killed religion so that men may live in peace.

Sir, I confess, I am as much hostile to any Government from beyond the seven seas as to a god who is believed to be controlling this His Visible creation from beyond the seven skies. What unfortunate country is there in the world except India in which the political domination comes from the other hemisphere and the spiritual control is exerted from the other world—both unseen and unknown ? I would rather have a Government which is not only my own but which is also suited to the spirit of the orient, so that for the service of humanity I too, one day, may aspire to form a part of it, handle it and regulate it. Even in religion as in politics, I would not accept a god who is not my own and whom I can not feel as a part of my soul (atma). I am the enemy of both—a god thrust upon me from the outside and a constitution hung round my neck by force, which I would fain shake off.

Honoured President, I do not know what Communism is, I have had as yet no opportunity of cultivating acquaintance with its literature—my thoughts are based upon the pure world-old doctrines of the Hindus This cry comes not from a heart enriched, or should I say, impoverished by contact with western people or their culture, but from a heart which believes that the individual soul (atma) is no part of, but the same as the all permeating Brahma which neither man nor spirit nor God has the right to restrain, which knows no fear and which may be throttled not even by your Creator, if Creator there be, separate from and alien to it.

L169LA—1,081—11-10-28—GIPS

British constitution says that the only limitation on the powers of the British House of Commons is that it cannot turn a man into a woman and a woman into a man. But the British Parliament has passed no law against Communists hitherto. Is India alone threatened with an invasion by the Communists ? Is the rest of the British Empire absolutely safe from their influence ? And what provision has been made in England, and what provision has been made in this connection by Ireland, by Canada, by Australia ? We have not been enlightened on that point. All that we are told is that India must be safeguarded. It seems to me that the position of the Government of India at present is something like the position of an old and jealous husband who doubts the fidelity of his wife and wants to keep his wife under lock and key, but the wife makes merry with her lovers all the same. That is the position of the Government of India. They want to shut out the possibility of new light reaching us. But I ask, will they be able to stop this torrent of Communistic doctrines reaching us if we pass this legislation ? How can they prevent India from coming to know the doctrines of Communism ? It is these capitalists—some of whom are sitting opposite to me—who have raised this hue and cry. They say that the recent strikes in India are detrimental to our peace and prosperity. So this is a preliminary to putting down labour in this country. I think this is only the complement of another Bill which is shortly to be put before this House, a Bill to put down strikes and such other things. I submit, Sir, we cannot allow this legislation to pass with our consent. It is open to the Government of India to issue an Ordinance over the head of this Assembly if they please, but they cannot proclaim to the world that they have passed legislation with the consent of the Indian people. We will not allow the Government to say so to the world. They should not ask us to vote for this measure when the measure is bad in every way. On these grounds, Sir, I oppose this Bill in toto. I do not believe in the efficacy of circulating this Bill for eliciting public opinion. To circulate it would be a bad thing altogether. I am afraid if this Bill is sent out for eliciting public opinion all the Provincial Governments and all European bodies in the country will opine in favour of it, and next time the Government of India will come to us armed with the opinion of these people and they will say " Look here, here is a large body of opinions in favour of this Bill and therefore the Legislature should accept it. " I believe it would be a strategic error to send this Bill for eliciting public opinion. The Bill should be thrown out at its inception. I have no sympathy with any part of the Bill whatever. My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar, who is a very shrewed lawyer, pointed out the defects in the Bill here and there. My opinion is that the whole of the Bill is bad. It must go in its entirety. Sir, on these grounds I oppose this Bill with all the earnestness I can command.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

[Mr. Narayan Prasad Singh (Darbhanga cum Saran : Non-Muhammadan) made a speech in the Vernacular, a translation of which will appear later as an Appendix to these Debates.]

L120LA

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : I hope the Honourable the Home Member is making a note of these points for reply ! (Laughter.)

(The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar nodded assent.)

Mr. Srish Chandra Dutta (Surma Valley cum Shillong : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the following names be added to the Select Committee proposed by Sir Hari Singh Gour :

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee, Kumar Ganganand Sinha, Mr. N. C. Chunder and Mr. Rajivaranjan Prasad Sinha."

Mr. K. Ahmed : How can these three amendments be jumbled together ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, I rise to oppose the motion made by the Honourable the Home Member as well as the motion for Select Committee made by my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour.

Mr. President : But a Member of your Party moves an amendment to add certain names to the Select Committee.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : So far as his motion for the adding of names to the Select Committee is concerned, I will make up my mind when the time comes for voting. Well, Sir, as has been rightly pointed out by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy, there is a peculiar appropriateness about the title of the Bill. It is called the Public Safety (Removal from India) Bill. There is very little public safety in this country and whatever little might remain is intended to be removed from this country under the provisions of this Bill. A most panicky picture has been drawn of the condition of things that will prevail if Communism was allowed to make any advance in this country. The Honourable the Home Member and other Honourable Members have like the fat boy in Dickens made our flesh creep with stories of atrocities that will result if this Bill were not passed. Sir, really speaking this is not legislation at all. It is the latest bureaucratic effrontery to crush liberty of thought and speech in this country. My leader the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru has shown that this Bill is the result of panic, that there is no warrant for this measure, that it is altogether superfluous even if there was a necessity, that it is sweeping in its provisions and dangerous in its consequences. All this has been so abundantly proved by him and other Honourable Members who have spoken before me that I need not repeat the arguments they have advanced in support of that proposition. But, Sir, the reason why I most strongly oppose this Bill is that this Government cannot be trusted with any extraordinary or extra-legal powers. The use they have made of the powers they have obtained from us or inspite of us, in the past has been so wicked and so heartless that every Honourable Member must consider not twice but thrice, before he thinks of voting for this Bill. Remember, Sir, that this extra-legal legislation, these Regulations and Ordinances, have been used in a most barbarous manner. Youths of this country as honourable, as learned and as able as any Members on the Treasury Benches have been detained or deported without trial for months and years until some of them have gone mad, insane, or have died or become decrepit for life. You have broken many a home as the result of the application of the Bengal Ordinance. You have darkened and desolated many firesides in Bengal as the result of Regulation III of 1818 and the Ordinance of 1924 ; and it is preposterous that you should now come forward and ask this Assembly to invest you with further powers. We cannot trust you with the liberty of a pariah dog, much less of a human being ; and therefore it is idle for Government to ask us to invest them with any powers of the kind they contemplated in this Bill.

Sir, we know that the letter of Mr. Roy on which so much reliance is placed has been challenged. It has been repeated from various places that this letter is a forgery and I should not wonder if this letter was a forgery, because there is nothing which the Government would not do when they want to serve a particular end. One of their own countrymen has said that India was conquered by breaking all the ten commandments and it cannot be retained by practising the principles of the Sermon on the Mount. The bureaucracy will do anything and everything in order to entrench themselves behind the powers they now seek to obtain. Mr. Churchill, when he was a Liberal Member, said of the Tory Party, Sir, that they would tell any lie, that they would eat any dirt, if only their power is thereby retained ; and the Government in this country is a subordinate branch of that Tory Government. Therefore if you remember what Mr. Churchill as a Liberal thought you cannot trust this Government with any power of the kind that is contemplated. Then, Sir, there is historical evidence that whenever it suits them this Government will forge evidence. British Rule in India began with the forgeries of Clive and it continues by the perjuries of Birkenhead and Winterton. During the intervening period they have practised other forgeries of which I will only mention three. Leaving aside the question of Clive's forgeries, Honourable Members will recall that in the days of the War we heard about a great German corpse factory. It was alleged against the Germans that they were utilising the dead bodies of their enemies for the purpose of extracting fat or some other ingredient with a view to help them in having their war material. This corpse factory story was circulated as propaganda all over the world ; and public opinion in the world was so shocked at the supposed atrocity of Germany in using dead bodies for getting war material that there was a great wave of feeling against Germany. Well, Sir, at the end of the war some years later, the author of this story was visiting America and the journalists of America invited him to a dinner and this gentleman drank more than was good for him and in that state of drunkenness inadvertently gave out that all this story of the corpse factory was his own invention and that there never was such a thing as a corpse factory in Germany ; the American newspapers took down all that he said and next day it was broad-casted all over the world that this corpse factory story was a concocted and perjured statement and that such a thing never existed. Therefore, Sir, we must be very careful before accepting any statement from the creatures of the British Government which is responsible for this corpse factory story.

Reference has already been made to the Zinovieff letter and that is the second instance of forgery. But I will give you one more instance of what false statements have been made by the British Government when it suits the purpose. Honourable Members will remember the incident of the Arcos raid in London last year ; there was the Russian Trade Delegation housed in a particular building in London, and the Home Secretary said that there was a stolen document in that Russian Trade Delegation house—a document that was stolen and obtained by dishonest means and therefore this Arcos building should be raided ; and this building was raided. People were prevented from going out ; they were searched and walls were pulled down and every attempt was made to find out that supposed document ; but as a matter of fact the document never existed there, and the Russian Trade Delegation was practically deported from England. It was really the enmity towards Russia which made them invent this story which led to the Arcos raid. I would not therefore be surprised if this story about Mr. Roy's letter is a forgery. I have got fresh evidence that the letter is a forgery. There is a telegram from Moscow dated August the 28th ; it has now been received by mail and circulated to-day by the Free Press of India. It is Mr. Roy's statement and reads as follows :

"Some days ago, the Times correspondent from Delhi cabled what purported to be extracts from a letter written by me to the Central Committee of the Communist Party and Workers' and Peasants' Party in India. According to the report, this letter alleged to be written by me was dated sometime in December last year, but was made public by police only a few days ago. In a subsequent message to the Times, dated 26th August, it is stated that in this fictitious letter, I mentioned Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru as the 'liaison agent between Moscow and India'. I hereby declare that I did not address any such letter to anybody in India. The statement about my referring to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru as 'liaison agent' is a downright lie. I challenge the Government of India to produce the original of this mysterious letter with my signature. Obviously this latest 'letter of Roy' has been invented as a pretext for the proposed legislation against Communists. The cable to the Times, dated August 24th, gives the purport of the Public Safety (Removal from India) Bill and says the recent publication of M. N. Roy's letter to the Communists in India has directed public attention to this veil. If this letter proves the necessity for new repressive legislation, why has Government been sitting tight on it all this time since December ? The scheme of things is very obvious. The Imperialist Government wants to suppress the young labour movement in India. Some plausible pretext must be there. The 'letter of Roy' is forged with back date because one supposed to be written just in time to help the Government out of difficulty would be too ugly."

Mr. Roy concludes with a hope that the elected Nationalist Members of the Assembly will throw out this repressive measure.

Now, Sir, here is a definite denial and challenge by Mr. Roy himself who says that the statements made about his having written this letter are utterly false.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is that also signed by Mr. Roy ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : This is a telegram, and signatures are not received over the wires. But, Sir, I will assume that, if not Mr. Roy, somebody else wrote this letter. I do not mind even accepting the story that Mr. Roy wrote the letter which has now been circulated. I really do not understand what there is in the letter about which so much capital has been made. Let us take the bull by the horns. What does the letter say ? I will only refer to two or three paragraphs. The first is,—this is what is stated in paragraph 3 on page 1 :

"Our relation is that of comrades agreeing on principles and programme of a revolutionary struggle for freedom."

Now, Sir, Mahatma Gandhi has times without number declared that every patriot Indian, every Nationalist in this country, must be the sworn enemy of the Government as at present constituted. What is the difference between Mahatma Gandhi's statements so many times repeated and the statements I have quoted above ? Mahatma Gandhi has advised us—and we accept it—that every Indian who has the welfare of his country at heart must desire and must attempt to overthrow this Government by peaceful means. (An Honourable Member : "Ah ! peaceful ?") Yes, certainly, peaceful. The only difference is in the methods, but that we want to overthrow the present system of Government if we can is a cardinal point of policy with every Indian, and therefore, Mr. Roy, if he wrote this letter, teaches us nothing that we did not know already. Then, Sir, Mr. Roy also advises the Indian Communists to do what ?—I am assuming for the moment that this is Mr. Roy's letter—He says :

"In India the Communist must place the question of national independence as the pre-condition for the realisation of the minimum demands of the working class."

So even if there is to be a proletariat rule, the writer of the letter admits that before there can be the rule of the proletariat, there must be the independence of India secured, so that, so far as even the Communists are concerned, they are quite prepared to work with us in the task of achieving India's independence ; we welcome that letter to that extent, because it urges what we have been working for. Then the last thing to which I would draw the attention of the House is contained on page 5 of the letter and that at once rivets our attention as to what the programme of this party is going to be :

"The main points in the programme of the W. P. P. are: overthrow of Imperialist domination, direct or indirect establishment of a democratic State with full political rights for the workers and peasants ; nationalisation of land (abolition of landlordism, native states and other feudal remains) land tax not exceeding 15 per cent. of the net income; exemption from taxation for poor peasants cultivating 'uneconomic' holdings; annulment of agricultural indebtedness; control over usury (interest not to exceed 5 per cent.); cheap agricultural credit; nationalisation of the means of transportation and basic industries (mining, iron and steel), 8-hour day and 44-hour week ; minimum wage, guaranteeing a fixed standard of living ; specific improvement of labour and housing conditions; free primary education; insurance against unemployment, sickness, old age, the State and the employers contributing 75 per cent. to the fund; workers' committees in the factories, and peasants' committees in the villages, to enforce the programme: freedom of press, speech and assembly; right to strike and carry arms; freedom of religion and worship, equal political and economic rights for women."

Now, I ask every Member of this House whether practically the whole programme as laid down in this book is a programme which has not been the programme of the Indian National Congress for many years. What is the difference except a point here or a point there ? 98 per cent. of the programme as laid down here has been accepted by the Congress and by other progressive parties in this country long long ago. This letter is not going to teach them anything. Cheap agricultural credit, 15 per cent. being the taxation on land, exemption of uneconomic holdings from taxation, free primary education, unemployment benefit, freedom of religion, equal political and economic rights for women—these are referred to in the letter. What is there in this which should frighten any honest man and thereby create any necessity for legislation of this kind ? I submit, Sir, the letter teaches very little new to the people of this country. Most of this programme has been before the country except the question of violence, and on that question Mahatma Gandhi and the Indian National Congress have long since made up their minds that all these reforms are to be achieved by non-violence.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Does everybody agree to that ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : The Congress has refused to change its creed. My Honourable friend Sir Victor Sassoon, even if he does not read all the proceedings of the Indian National Congress, might know its creed, and that creed is the achievement of Swaraj by non-violence and legitimate means, and I say that the Congress has refused to change that creed, and Government should have had no fear as to the ultimate consequences of this letter as the programme of the letter and the programme of the Congress are identical except about non-violence.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Do the Bombay Communists agree with that creed of non-violence ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am not concerned with the Communist's creed. The writer of this letter advises the Communists to join the Indian National Congress and to make the independence of India a pre-condition of every other item in the programme, so that, for some year, until the creed of the Congress is changed, even the Communists are bound to remain non-violent.

Sir Victor Sassoon : Are they ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Yes. This letter about which so much hullabaloo has been made, this letter which to me is an obsolete letter—what is there in it most of which we have not for years past been advocating ? It only shows that the Government are a Rip Van Winkle who do not know what is going on in the country. The country has been demanding most of these reforms for years and years and there is little in this letter which can add to the programme of the country as represented by the programme of the Indian National Congress.

There are only one or two points more which I wish to take. The provision of clause 2 of the Bill really gives a blank cheque to Government to do what they like with the liberty of any individual who comes to India. It is absolutely a blank cheque, because, what is contemplated is that the Governor General in Council may, by order in writing, declare a man to be the person to whom this Act applies. The moment the Governor General in Council declares that, he becomes such a person. Whether he is or is not is another matter. The dangerous and very sweeping provisions of this clause will thus be patent to Honourable Members.

Clause 2 (c) provides :

"Is a member of, or is associated with, any society or organisation, whether in British India or elsewhere, which advocates or encourages any such doctrine or activity as is described in clause (a) or clause (b), or which is affiliated to, or connected with, any such society or organisation."

Now, that is even more dangerous than clause (a) or (b). A foreigner need not be a Communist himself ; he need not have advocated any activity mentioned in clause (a) or (b). But if he is connected with any organisation which organisation is in its turn connected with a Communist body if he is not connected with a Communist body itself but with a body which is connected with a Communist body, that person will come within the clutches of this law. Sir, there may be occasions when a most innocent man may be connected with a body in India which may be connected with a Communist body somewhere in the world, and the connection may be of various kinds. For instance, if a non-Indian living in India is a reporter or a correspondent of a Communist journal—mind you, he may not be a Communist himself, he simply supplies labour and other information from this country to that Communist journal, which may be, say, in Paris,—the mere fact that he supplies labour news from this country to the French journal will be sufficient to bring him within the purview of this law and will make him liable to be deported. An innocent correspondent of a Communist journal in this country is liable to be deported simply because in the language of this clause he is connected with that body. Now,

Sir, I must say that this is even more sweeping than anything that Government have done so far. Not only such a correspondent, but even a clerk in his office will come within the purview of this clause because he is the servant of a person who is connected with a Communist organisation abroad. I think absurdity could not go further. If Government want that the liberties of individuals should be handed over to them in this sweeping manner simply because one individual is connected with another which is connected with a Communist body outside India, I do not think that any individual is safe under this Bill.

Mr. President : These are matters for the Select Committee.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Yes. I am only pointing out that this is a dangerous clause and we must not allow any such power to Government. There are similar dangerous clauses, but this one has struck me as so sweeping that it is sufficient to stamp this Bill as altogether unacceptable. I agree with the Government that a Bill is necessary for the safety of the public in this country. I could have supported them if they had brought a Bill for the safety of the public. The safety of the public in India has always been in very great danger—from the Government ; not from any outside authority or from any Communist, and if anybody deserves to be deported it is the members of the Government. The public safety of this country suffers most from members of the Government, from members of the Civil Service and from other public servants. (An Honourable Member : "And non-official Europeans.") I am leaving the non-official Europeans alone for the time being. I say that the public safety is in danger from civil servants who kick and kill and yet get scot-free, who insult Indians and yet there is no remedy—just as a rickshawalla was kicked and killed in Simla two or three years ago. It is these people who danger the public safety in this country. I really think that what the Bill should have done is that anybody who being a public servant is convicted, I do not want to deport him without a trial—but once a public servant in this country—he must be a non-Indian according to the Bill which I accept—is convicted in a court of law for assault, hurt, grievous hurt, or insult to the people of this country, the moment that crime is brought home to him and he is convicted he ought to be deported under a measure of this kind.

If the Government bring a measure of that kind I will certainly support it most heartily because it is really this kind of people who are bringing public safety into danger in this country.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : I believe the Honourable Member has got an amendment to that effect.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : If the Bill comes on, I will bring that amendment up and show how these people deserve to be deported. I have only one word more to add and that is that the danger to the European community has not been realised by them. I say your fight for liberty, your traditions of liberty are worth nothing if you deny an equal measure of liberty to every other human being and I find to-day that the European Group who are exploiting this country are blind to the claims of liberty of other people, simply because they fear that these might come in their way. I ask Honourable Members to remember that under this Bill not merely a Spratt or a Bradley will be deported but a man like Mr. Horniman may be deported, Mr. Stokes may be deported, Mrs. Anie Besant may be deported, Mr. C. F. Andrews may be deported. Therefore we should deny even a second reading to this Bill and throw it out unceremoniously India does not want to be blackened before the nations of other countries. What would the Egyptians think of us, what would the Chinese think of us, what would the Afghans, Americans, and the French think of us when they hear that the Indian Legislature with an elected majority allowed itself to be stampeded into action whereby foreigners could be deported without trial in times of peace ? India is not anxious to earn so bad a name and so black record. We want to be friends with other countries of the world. If this Bill pass, let the world know that it will pass over the heads of the people of this country, over the heads of the elected Members of this country and in the meantime let the world know and let India know that the elected Members of this Assembly as a whole will stand like a wall against it. Sir, I oppose this motion

[Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta.]

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, this is the eighth time I stand up. I should be allowed to speak before Sir George Rainy's concluding speech is delivered.

Mr. President : Sir George Rainy.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I think this House has reason to congratulate itself on the very high level which the debate has attained. Personally I have listened with the greatest attention to almost all the speeches, and I have been very greatly impressed both by the ability displayed and by the admirable tone which on the whole was maintained. Yesterday, Mr. President, as I was listening to the Honourable Pandit, the Leader of the Opposition, a feeling passed through my mind and I was not sure whether it was justified or not. It seemed to me that not only in his speech but in the speeches of other Members who rose from the Benches opposite there was an unexpected absence—may I say—of acrimony and invective. It seemed, indeed, that Members were putting forward objections to the Government proposals, of which they were most conscientiously convinced—yet only half-heartedly as if they almost wished that they could accept these proposals. I may say that these suspicions which passed through my mind have received the most ample confirmation from the speech of Mr. Jamnadas Mehta to which we have just listened. The picture that presented itself to me was this, Sir, that in some secret conclave of the Opposition Leaders one or other of them might have expressed his regret that this most powerful weapon in the hands of a Swaraj Government could not be accepted from the hands of the present Government. How admirable it would be if the power then existed to deport the European ! My Honourable friend has made it clear that we on the official Benches will not be in danger from this particular measure, but from another which he forecasted, the Public Servants Removal from India Bill. But my Honourable friends of the European Group, as I fear, would then be in the gravest peril. I can imagine my Honourable friend, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, with a glistening eye gazing on the bright vision of the steamer, no doubt reserved for the coastal trade, steaming out from Bombay with the entire European group on board. (Laughter.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : And I will bring garlands with me.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : That bright vision, Sir, had to fade. My Honourable friends opposite evidently felt that they could not consistently with their principles accept this Bill, and that even the hope of the use to which they might ultimately be able to put it would not justify them in accepting it. No doubt the political sagacity of the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition recalled to him the old proverb, " I fear the Greeks when they come bearing gifts ", and he dropped a tear and let the vision pass.

The objections, Sir, that have been raised to this Bill have been of various kinds. I will not weary the House by attempting to go through them in detail, and what I have to say will, as far as I can, be devoted to what seemed to be the most important of them. My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, to whom it is always a pleasure to listen, in that most lucid speech to which we listened yesterday gave two of the arguments which I think weigh with Members on the other side. One of them was, " We cannot trust this Government with special powers because they misuse such powers." The other was, " This Government should not ask for such powers because they never use them when they get them ". (Laughter.) Now, Mr. President, either of these arguments.....

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : On a point of personal explanation, Sir. What I said was, " Government either abuse them or do not use them at all ".

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : But then in that case which is the apprehension that is moving the mind of my Honourable friend ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : In the one case these powers are not necessary and are asked for in a state of panic, and in the other case they are mischievously used.
