The motion was negatived.

Clause 28 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 29 and 30 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 31 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, the amendment which I wish to move runs thus :

“ That after sub-clause (2) (e) of clause 31 of the Bill the following be added :

‘ (f) In the case of a lease of immovable property other than buildings, the lease shall not be for a longer period of time than five years ’.”

Sir, in clause 31 it is proposed to add to the present Transfer of Property Act a new section as section 65-A. The proposed new section runs thus :

“ (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2), a mortgagor, while lawfully in possession of the mortgaged property, shall have power to make leases thereof which shall be binding on the mortgagee.

2. (a) Every such lease shall be such as would be made in the ordinary course of management of the property concerned, and in accordance with any local law, custom or usage.

(b) Every such lease shall reserve the best rent that can reasonably be obtained, and no premium shall be paid or promised and no rent shall be payable in advance.

(c) No such lease shall contain a covenant for renewal.

(d) Every such lease shall take effect from a date not later than six months from the date on which it is made.

(e) In the case of a lease of buildings, whether leased with or without the land on which they stand, the duration of the lease shall in no case exceed three years, and the lease shall contain a covenant for payment of the rent and a condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid within a time therein specified."

I need not read the rest of the proposed new section. This is a new provision of law. To make myself intelligible, I will take an instance. Suppose A mortgages his property to B, and A, the mortgagor, wishes to lease the property. He may do so, provided the interests of the mortgagee are not in any way prejudicially affected. The proposed new section says that, in the case of house property, the lease may not be for more than three years, but in the case of agricultural land or other land, there is no period of time here laid down. Suppose that a mortgagor wishes to defraud his mortgagee by passing a permanent lease of the mortgaged property to another man, what will be the effect? The mortgagee will bring a suit to recover his money and he will get a decree. He will try to execute the decree in order to realise his money. The man who purchases the property, that is, the equity of redemption in the execution of the decree, will be only entitled to get the rent stipulated in the permanent lease. For aught I know, the mortgagor may receive from the permanent lessee an amount of money privately. This will be something like defrauding the mortgagee. The mortgagee may not be able to get the full amount of his money because what will be put to sale at the court auction will be the equity of redemption, and the man who takes the equity of redemption will have no right to get the actual physical possession of the property. He will step into the shoes of the original mortgagor, and as such he will be entitled only to get the rent which was stipulated in the permanent lease. Why should there be a special provision concerning house property, and why should there not be a period of time fixed in the case of landed property? There is no reason why a lease concerning a house should not be for more than three years, but in the case of landed property the law should not lay down any limit of time whatever. It seems to me that it is very likely that if the mortgagor is allowed to enter into a lease with anybody, we can imagine cases in which it will be possible for the mortgagee to be defrauded. It is open to the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage first and then to enter into any agreement of lease with any one he pleases. But so long as the mortgagee is not satisfied, so long as the mortgage is subsisting, the mortgagor should not be permitted to lease the property for an indefinite length of time. There may not necessarily be a permanent lease; there may be a lease for a very long period of time. The mortgagor may grant a lease for 50 years, and the man who purchases the equity of redemption in the court sale will have to wait until the long period of time stipulated in the lease runs out. This will surely be a very hard case on the mortgagee who wants to realise his money. The thing is so very obvious that I do not see why a limit of time was not laid down in this new section in the case of landed property, and why it should have been laid down in the case of house property. I fail to understand the distinction which is sought to be made in this new clause by the Honourable the Law Member. I hope I shall get a satisfactory explanation in opposition to my amendment. I am sure my amendment will be opposed because it seems to be the settled policy of the Government to carry this Bill as it stands. They think that, whatever has been done by them must be accepted by the House, and as they have a majority on their side, they hope that every amendment will very easily be thrown out. Nevertheless, I shall have the satisfaction of hearing what they have to say in opposition to my amendment.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : They have already accepted two or three amendments.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I oppose this amendment. I entirely agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi that the mortgagor should not be allowed to give long leases or permanent leases. That is the danger which is frightening him and he wants to know why no provision has been made in respect of immovable property other than buildings. Those who have had any practice in places like Calcutta or Bombay know that very often mines are mortgaged. Would you confine a mining lease to five years? When a mine is mortgaged, if the mortgagor's hands are tied to grant a lease not exceeding five years, no lease will be taken at all. The mortgagor will suffer and the mortgagee's security will deteriorate. Take agricultural leases. I can speak of Bengal. No person will take a five years' agricultural lease in Bengal. Therefore, if the mortgagor has got a right to let out the mortgaged property.....

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Bengal is not the whole of India. In my own part of the country 5-year leases are numerous.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I know Bengal is not the whole of India. I am only telling you my experience of Bengal. It is to meet all manner of cases that we have to make a general provision. There is enough safeguard in sub-clause (2). Sub-clause (2) says :

"Every such lease shall be such as would be made in the ordinary course of management of the property concerned, and in accordance with any local law, custom or usage."

If you put a limit upon the power of leasing to 5 years, that would be denying to the mortgagor the right which by this clause is being given to him, because, as I say, in cases of mines, in cases of agricultural lands, he would not be able to exercise the right at all. As against the extravagant exercise of the right which is being given to him, sub-clause (2) has been enacted; he cannot grant a lease which is outside the ordinary course of management. In the ordinary course of management, if it be found that not less than 30 years' lease would be taken by anybody, he should be entitled to grant a lease for 30 years, as in the case of mining leases, or agricultural leases. If the usual practice in any particular part of the country be that no agriculturist will take a lease for less than 12 years or 15 years, the mortgagor should be entitled to grant such a lease. In order to protect both the mortgagor and the mortgagee, it has been provided that the mortgagor is to conform to local custom and usage and may grant a lease in the ordinary course of management. He should not be tied down any further. Therefore the safeguard is there and the liberty is there. We have considered the case in the interest of the mortgagor as well as of the mortgagee. It is in the interest of both that the mortgagor should have a free hand conformable to local custom and usage. Therefore I submit that to limit it to five years would be defeating the whole object of this section.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I do not want nor am I determined that this Bill should pass through this House as it stands if any sound grounds are made out in support of any amendment. May I add a few words to what the Honourable the Law Member has said. Under sub-clause (3) it is entirely in the hands of the mortgagor to regulate the granting of the leases. I will read that sub-clause. It reads :

“ The provisions of sub-section (1) apply only if and as far as a contrary intention is not expressed in the mortgage deed ; and the provisions of sub-section (2) may be varied or extended by the mortgage-deed and, as so varied and extended, shall, as far as may be, operate in like manner and with all like incidents, effects and consequences, as if such variations or extensions were contained in that sub-section.”

Therefore it is open to the mortgagor when he is mortgaging his property to stipulate expressly in the mortgage-deed as to the authority of the mortgagee to grant leases. If he does not do that, still the interests of the mortgagor are protected to the extent the Honourable the Law Member has stated. What more do you want ?

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That after sub-clause (2) (c) of clause 31 of the Bill the following be added :

‘ (f) In the case of a lease of immovable property other than buildings, the lease shall not be for a longer period of time than five years ’.”

The motion was negatived.

Clause 31 was added to the Bill.

Clause 32 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 33 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, I move :

“ That in clause 33 of the Bill for all the words occurring after the words ‘ the same kind of decree under section 67 ’, the following be substituted :

‘ may sue to obtain such decree on any one or more of his mortgages, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, notwithstanding the fact that the principal money of all his mortgages has become due ’.”

Section 67-A is a new section which is proposed to be added to the Transfer of Property Act. It says :

“ A mortgagee who holds two or more mortgages executed by the same mortgagor in respect of each of which he has a right to obtain the same kind of decree under section 67, and who sues to obtain such decree on any one of the mortgages, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be bound to sue on all the mortgages in respect of which the mortgage-money has become due ”.

I shall ask Honourable Members of this House to read another clause of the present Bill, namely, clause 25. There they will find this :

“ A mortgagor who has executed two or more mortgages in favour of the same mortgagee shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, when the principal money of any two or more of the mortgages has become due, be entitled to redeem any one such mortgage separately, or any two or more of such mortgages together.”

This clause 25 says that if a man passes in favour of another man more mortgages than one, it should be open to him to redeem any one or more of the mortgages according to his convenience. That is a very salutary principle of law. That is undoubtedly in the interests of the mortgagor. There should be no consolidation of mortgages. The amendment which I propose asks that a similar concession should be held out to the mortgagee. If a man takes more mortgages than one of the same property, and from the same man, and if he finds that all his mortgages have become payable, then it should be open to him to bring a suit on one of the mortgages or on two ; and he should not be compelled to bring a suit for all the monies which are due to him on the several mortgages into which he has entered. Why should a mortgagee be compelled to bring a suit on all his mortgages ? Sometimes a mortgagee may find that it is not likely that he will realise the whole of the money that is due to him if he brings a suit on all the mortgage bonds. Suppose I take a mortgage of a property which I believe is worth only Rs. 30,000 in the market. My mortgage charges on the property may amount to Rs. 50,000. Why should I be compelled to bring a suit on all my mortgages, the amount of which aggregates to Rs. 50,000. It should be open to me to bring a suit and obtain a decree against the mortgagor on the mortgage transactions which I choose. Now, if the mortgagee is not to be permitted to bring a suit on some of the mortgages only, it means that he will have to pay court fees on the total amount of the monies that become payable to him under the several mortgages he holds. The court fees may amount to a very large sum of money, and after getting a decree, he may not be able to realise the whole of his money. I have read the notes to the several clauses which the Honourable the Law Member has been very kind to provide to Members of this House in the case of this Bill. I find that the only reason given is that, if the mortgagee is allowed to bring a suit on some of the mortgages only, the proper value for the property may not be fetched by the sales and the mortgagor will be put to a loss. It is not unreasonable that the mortgagee should ask that he should be given a decree on some of his mortgages only. There is no hardship on the mortgagor. There is no reason why, in the case of a mortgagor, he should be permitted to redeem some of the mortgages only and the mortgagee not allowed the same privilege. I have not been able to see what difference there is between these two cases. In the one case, provision is made for the convenience of the mortgagor ; in the other case no provision is made in the interests of the mortgagee. It seems to me that this is an invidious distinction which is sought to be made by this new provision. This is not to be found in the existing Transfer of Property Act, but this new provision is now sought to be incorporated into it. I submit that the amendment which I have moved may be accepted by the House.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I oppose this amendment. I think my Honourable friend is under a misapprehension as to the purpose of these two sections. Section 61 gives the mortgagor the right to redeem different mortgages separately. That is entirely in the interest of the mortgagor, as my Honourable friend has himself said. Section 67-A (new section, clause 33) is also in the interest of the mortgagor, and there is no difference of treatment between the mortgagor and the mortgagee in this instance. Probably my Honourable friend is aware that the Privy Council recently observed that the Transfer of Property Act as it stood led to a multiplicity of mortgage suits in this particular respect. What we are providing for is this. If the money has fallen due on all the mortgages, then the mortgagee will not be able to hold up some of the mortgages and sue on one or more, that is to say, bring as many suits as there are mortgages. What after all is the mortgagee's right ? The mortgagee lent money to the mortgagor on security. All he is interested in is to get his money back with interest. If all the mortgages have fallen due, then what reason is there that he should hold up some of the mortgages, bring a suit on one of the mortgages and go on harassing the mortgagor with regard to the other mortgages. Why should he not be compelled to bring his suit on all the mortgages and thus avoid a multiplicity of suits and thereby save harassment? All he is interested in is to get his money back. He can do so by bringing one suit or different suits; but why should he be allowed to bring several suits when he can bring one suit? When he gets his money, he has no further interest in the property. That is from the point of view of the mortgagor. We propose to give relief to the mortgagor that he should not be needlessly harassed. At the same time no prejudice is caused to the mortgagee. All his mortgages have fallen due. He gets his money in one suit.

Then, Sir, look at it from another point of view. Supposing he brings his suit on one mortgage and the property is brought to sale. The property will be sold subject to the other mortgages. The result will be that the property will not fetch a proper price. If the property is sold free from all the mortgages, then it is reasonable to suppose that it would fetch a proper price; but if it is sold subject to mortgages which are due and which can be enforced at any moment, then that property is not likely to fetch anything like its proper value. Therefore, Sir, it is in the interest of both the mortgagor and the mortgagee, that where it is possible to bring one suit, the mortgagor should bring one suit. Thus it is both on the ground of relief to the mortgagor as well as on the ground of its being beneficial to both the mortgagor and the mortgagee that this provision has been made. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 33 of the Bill for all the words occurring after the words ‘ the same kind of decree under section 67 ’, the following be substituted :

‘ may sue to obtain such decree on any one or more of his mortgages, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, notwithstanding the fact that the principal money of all his mortgages has become due ’.”

The motion was negatived.

Clause 33 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 34 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, the amendment which I propose is intended to make the intention of the framers of the Act clearer. I will read only a part of clause 34 :

“ The mortgagee has a right to sue for the mortgage-money in the following cases and no others, namely :

(a) where the mortgagor binds himself to repay the same ; ”

I wish to move :

“ That in clause 34 (a) of the Bill after the word ‘ himself ’ the word ‘ personally ’ be inserted.”

The object of the framers of the Bill seems to be that, where a mortgagor binds himself to pay the mortgage money, that is, takes a personal responsibility of making good the mortgage-money, then his heirs, his legal representatives or his assigns should not be bound to fulfil that condition personally. Now the framers of the Bill want to make it clear by the word ‘ himself ’. But it seems to me that that is not sufficient. If we add the word ‘ personally ’, the point will be clearer still. No other man will incur a personal liability for paying the mortgage money than the mortgagor himself. Who should be personally liable to pay the money to the mortgagee? Only the mortgagor and nobody else—not his heirs, not his legal representatives, not his transferees. It may perhaps be said that the word ‘ himself ’ makes it clear, but I do not think it is as clear as it should be. ‘ Himself ’ is certainly the object of the transitive verb ‘ binds ’ and anyone not knowing the object of the framers may say that the thing is not quite clear. This is a mere verbal amendment and I do not think there is any difficulty in accepting it if the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill has a mind to accept it.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I oppose this amendment. I would have accepted it gladly if necessary. It is not necessary and the acceptance of it would lead to a drafting monstrosity. ‘ Himself ’ means himself and nobody else; therefore, ‘ personally ’ is not needed. The Select Committee considered this clause very carefully and they added a proviso which makes the position perfectly clear :

“ Provided that, in the case referred to in clause (a), a transferee from the mortgagor or from his legal representative shall not be liable to be sued for the mortgage-money.”

Now there these people are not liable to be used. People who are left over are the legal representatives of the mortgagor. But it is well known that legal representatives are only liable to the extent of the property in their hands. That being so, where is the ambiguity? My Honourable friend's object was to make clear something which was ambiguous. What is ambiguous about the word ‘ himself ’? ‘ Himself ’ excludes everybody else.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 34 (a) of the Bill after the word ‘ himself ’ the word ‘ personally ’ be inserted.”

The motion was negatived.

Clause 34 was added to the Bill.

Clause 35 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 36 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, I move :

This is a very important clause. Honourable Members will kindly cast a glance at this clause, which is a very long one. I will give the substance of this clause. The object of this clause seems to be to empower a mortgagee to sell privately mortgaged property. I think that is the main object of this clause. Now, by referring to the notes on the clauses which have been given by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, I find that reference is made to an old Act of the year 1886. The present section 69 of the Transfer of Property Act should be looked into, which runs as follows :

“ A power conferred by the mortgage-deed on the mortgagee, or on any person on his behalf, to sell or concur in selling, in default of payment of the mortgage-money, the mortgaged property, or any part thereof without the intervention of the Court, is valid in the following cases and in no others, namely :

- (a) where the mortgage is an English mortgage, and neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist, or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified in this behalf by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette ;
- (b) where the mortgagee is the Secretary of State for India in Council ;
- (c) where the mortgaged property or any part thereof is situate within the towns of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi or Rangoon.

But no such power shall be exercised unless and until—

- (2) some interest under the mortgage amounting at least to five hundred rupees is in arrear and unpaid for three months after becoming due.

When a sale has been made in professed exercise of such a power, the title of the purchaser shall not be impeachable on the ground that no case had arisen to authorise the sale, or that due notice was not given, or that the power was otherwise improperly or irregularly exercised ; but any person damaged by an unauthorised or improper or irregular exercise of the power shall have his remedy in damages against the person exercising the power.

The money which is received by the mortgagee, arising from the sale, after discharge of prior incumbrances, if any, to which the sale is not made subject, or after payment into Court under section fifty-seven of a sum to meet any prior incumbrance, shall, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, be held by him in trust to be applied by him, first, in payment of all costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him as incident to the sale or any attempted sale ; and, secondly, in discharge of the mortgage-money and costs and other money, if any, due under the mortgage ; and the residue of the money so received shall be paid to the person entitled to the mortgaged property or authorised to give receipts for the proceeds of the sale thereof.

Nothing in the former part of this section applies to powers conferred before this Act comes into force.

The powers and provisions contained in sections six to nineteen (both inclusive) of the Trustees' and Mortgagees' Powers Act, 1866, shall be deemed to apply to English mortgages, wherever in British India the mortgaged property may be situate, when neither the mortgagor nor the mortgagee is a Hindu, Muhammadan or Buddhist, or a member of any other race, sect, tribe or class from time to time specified in this behalf by the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, in the local official Gazette."

It is evident from this section that this power of sale is confined under the existing law to English mortgages and not to other kinds of mortgages. It seems to me that it is attempted by the Bill to extend this power to other mortgages. Here provision has been made in the existing Act that this power shall not be extended to mortgages to which the parties are either Buddhists, Hindus or Muhammadans. It seems to me that this safeguard is sought to be taken away by the enactment of this new provision. Sir, it seems to me that it will be very dangerous to the people of this country if a mortgagee is allowed to sell the mortgaged property privately without going to the court. My amendment is this, that in no case should a mortgagee have power to bring the mortgaged property to sale privately.

Mr. N. C. Chunder : But if clause 36 is omitted, how will that affect clause 35.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to withdraw his amendment ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : In these circumstances, I think, I should withdraw my amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That leave be given to the Honourable Member to withdraw his amendment."

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Clause 36 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 37 to 55 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 56 stand part of the Bill."

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

"That for clause 56 of the Bill the following clause be substituted :

'56. In section 107 of the said Act, after the words 'by delivery of possession' where they first occur, the following paragraph shall be inserted, namely :

'Where a lease of immovable property is made by a registered instrument, such instrument or, where there are more instruments than one, each such instrument shall be executed by both the lessor and the lessee'."

Sir, this amendment is no more than a transposition of words.

The clause as it stood before the proposed amendment ran thus :

"A lease of immovable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by registered instrument."

And then come, Sir, the words which it is now proposed to transpose. Those words are :

"and such instrument or, where there are more instruments than one, each instrument shall be executed by both the lessor and the lessee."

Then there is a second paragraph which runs thus :

"All other leases of immovable property may be made either by a registered instrument or by oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession."

It is after this paragraph that these words ought to have occurred. It is merely a question of transposition.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That for clause 56 of the Bill the following clause be substituted :

'56. In section 107 of the said Act, after the words 'by delivery of possession' where they first occur, the following paragraph shall be inserted, namely :

'Where a lease of immovable property is made by a registered instrument, such instrument or, where there are more instruments than one, each such instrument shall be executed by both the lessor and the lessee'."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 56 as amended was added to the Bill.

Clauses 57 and 58 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 59.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 59 (b) of the Bill for the words 'a reasonable time' the words 'within three months' be substituted'."

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Sir, we have been told by the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill more than once that his object is to leave nothing uncertain. Here is a provision which he wishes to enact but which is vague. "A reasonable time" may be interpreted by courts in different ways. One court may say, it is six months, another might say it is two months and so on. Instead of having this vague expression, it is much better to have a definite period of time, such as is suggested in my amendment, so that it may be known to litigants what they have to prove and what they have to expect.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I oppose this amendment. I am for "a reasonable time". Originally the proposal was for a fixed period; then it was pointed out in the Select Committee that a fixed period might be insufficient to remedy the breach. For instance, the covenant is for repairs or to add a storey to an existing house. On breach of that covenant, forfeiture is incurred. In such a case, in order to give relief against the forfeiture a locus poenitentiae should be given to the lessee. That is the underlying principle of the Bill. If you are going to give a locus poenitentiae to the lessee, he must have a reasonable time to carry out what he covenanted to do. Three months, or two months or six months may not be enough for that purpose. After considerable discussion on this matter, we came to the conclusion that the provision in the English law which gives "a reasonable time", should be embodied in this Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 59 (b) of the Bill for the words 'a reasonable time' the words 'within three months' be substituted".

The motion was negatived.

Clause 59 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 60.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 60 of the Bill after the words 'such other party is liable to him or any person claiming through', the words 'or under' be inserted".

Sir, the words of the clause in the Bill are :

"If any party to an exchange or any person claiming through or under such party is by reason of any defect in the title of the other party deprived of the thing or any part of the thing received by him in exchange, then unless a contrary intention appears from the terms of the exchange, such other party is liable to him or any person claiming through....."

Now the words that I propose to insert after this are,

"or under",

so that the clause would read,

"..... or any person claiming through or under him for loss caused....."

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I accept the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 60 of the Bill after the words 'such other party is liable to him or any person claiming through' the words 'or under' be inserted."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move the next amendment which runs as follows :

"That in clause 60 of the Bill after the words 'if still in the possession of such other party' the words 'or his legal representative or a transferee from him without consideration' be added".

In the Bill as originally drafted there was this omission. The whole object of the present amendment is to supply that omission.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I accept the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 60 of the Bill after the words 'if still in the possession of such other party' the words 'or his legal representative or a transferee from him without consideration' be added".

The motion was adopted.

Clause 60, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clauses 61 to 64 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Sir Brojendra Mitter.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, if you will permit me, I shall make the next motion, that is, that the Bill be passed on Monday next.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) SUPPLEMENTARY BILL.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to supplement the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Sir, the Select Committee did not make any substantial alteration to the Bill which was referred to them, and I need not therefore say anything further.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clauses 3 to 13 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 14 stand part of the Bill."

Mr. D. F. Mulla (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That to clause 14 of the Bill the following new sub-clause be added :

'(4) In Schedule III to the same Act, after the figures and comma '116,' the figures and comma '117,' be inserted'."

Schedule III which is referred to in the amendment is Schedule III of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. There was an omission in that Schedule and the omission is proposed to be supplied by the amendment.

LSCPB(LA)

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That to clause 14 of the Bill the following new sub-clause be added :

‘ (4) In Schedule III to the same Act, after the figures and comma ‘ 116,’ the figures and comma ‘ 117,’ be inserted ’.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 14, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 15 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That clause 15 of the Bill be re-numbered as sub-clause (1) of that clause and in the sub-clause so re-numbered, the words ‘ Save as provided in sub-section (2) ’ be inserted at the commencement and that to the same clause the following sub-clause be added, namely :

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 9 of this Act, in the Presidency of Bombay and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, specify in this behalf, a suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure or sale on a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds may be instituted within two years from the date of the commencement of this Act, or within sixty years from the date when the money secured by the mortgage became due, whichever period expires first ; and no such suit instituted within the said period of sixty years and pending at the date of the commencement of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal, shall be dismissed on the ground that the twelve years’ rule of limitation is applicable ’.”

This amendment relates to a mortgage by deposit of title deeds. As to mortgages of this kind there has been a conflict of opinion between the various High Courts of India. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that a mortgage by deposit of title deeds stands on the same footing as an English mortgage. On the other hand it has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras that a mortgage by deposit of title deeds is no more than a charge. If it stands on the same footing as an English mortgage the period of limitation is 60 years, as provided by Article 147 of the Limitation Act. On the other hand, if it is merely a charge, the period of limitation is 12 years as provided by Article 132 of the Limitation Act. What is proposed to be done is to put a mortgage by deposit of title deeds on the same footing as a charge, following in this respect the view taken by the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras. So Article 132 is proposed to be amended by adding in it a clause to the effect that a suit on a mortgage by deposit of title deeds will be governed by this Article and the period of limitation will be 12 years only. But in Bombay it has been held that it stands on the same footing as an English mortgage with the result that it was decided about three months ago by the High Court of Bombay that a suit by such a mortgagee may be brought at any time within sixty years from the date when the mortgage money becomes due. With a view to give a chance to such a mortgagee in Bombay, it has become necessary to make the proposed amendment, and the effect of the proposed amendment is to give a period of two years from the date of the passing of the Bill to the holder of such a mortgage, and if the period of 60 years expires before the period of two years, then the suit will have to be brought within that period. In fact, what is proposed to be done now is what was done several years ago when the new section 31 of the Indian Limitation Act was enacted.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I accept the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 15 of the Bill be re-numbered as sub-clause (1) of that clause and in the sub-clause so re-numbered, the words ‘ Save as provided in sub-section (2) ’ be inserted at the commencement and that to the same clause the following sub-clause be added, namely :

‘ (2) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 9 of this Act, in the Presidency of Bombay and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, specify in this behalf, a suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure or sale on a mortgage by deposit of title-deeds may be instituted within two years from the date of the commencement of this Act, or within sixty years from the date when the money secured by the mortgage became due, whichever period expires first ; and no such suit instituted within the said period of sixty years and pending at the date of the commencement of this Act, either in a Court of first instance or of appeal, shall be dismissed on the ground that the twelve years’ rule of limitation is applicable ’.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 15 as amended was added to the Bill.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I pray that the next motion which stands in my name may stand over.

THE INLAND STEAM VESSELS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : Sir, I beg to move that Mr. T. A. Chalmers, Mr. J. Y. Philip and Mr. S. C. Mitra be appointed to the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Inland Steam Vessels Act, 1927. This has been necessitated by the resignation of one and absence of two members of the Committee as originally constituted.

The motion was adopted.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda on the 29th January, 1929 :

“ That the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration ”.

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners’ Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I do not know whether it will be regarded as a piece of effrontery on the part of one who does not belong to any of the communities which will be affected by this Bill, if I speak on the motion before the House. But I am not going to concede that the question we have to decide is one which is either the property or the special concern of any one class or community. I think it must be regarded by everybody here as widely affecting the interests of Indians of every class and persuasion. It is therefore a matter of very considerable regret that it should have evoked such vehement opposition in a section of the people and that attempts should be made on the floor of this House to block the motion ; because with great deference to my Honourable friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, I cannot but think that those who are pressing for the transfer of this Bill to the Delhi Session have no other idea, with honourable exceptions of course, than to wreck the measure.

Now, Sir, no one denies that religion is sacred, no one refuses a certain measure of sanctity even to religious practices. I do not know how far the Bill before the House affects either the religion or the religious practices of any one community or class, for the simple reason that I am not familiar with the precepts of any religion other than my own. But I think it may be advanced as an indisputable proposition that many so-called religious practices are nothing else but exereescences on religion, and have as much to do with true religion as the rules of a ladies' debating society have got to do with the constitution of a State. I, therefore, think that those who drag religion into this business must assure themselves and this House that they are standing on unassailable ground. What I want to ask them is : Is it doing any honour to the great law-givers of any community to suggest by implication—as my Honourable friends do—that when they laid down certain practices and customs they intended them to be so wooden and inelastic as to be incapable of harmonising with the conditions of present-day life, and that these great law-givers, if they had been alive today, would have continued to sanction customs and practices, which were good enough, perhaps two thousand years ago, but which are hopelessly archaic and out of keeping with the spirit of modern times ?

I have even less patience with another argument which was advanced in the course of this debate, and that was that we should hold our hands until such time as the mass of the people were educated to a sense of what was good for them. I have heard nothing more amazing than that. Every bureaucrat, whether sun-dried or not, since creation began, has employed this very same argument for the purpose of withholding power and privilege from the people, and if this philosophy or argument were to hold good, then, I submit, Sir, that we would still be in the stage of sending up petitions to a benign government for the redress of our grievances. In the social field, things would be even worse. India would still be in the middle ages ; and practices like those of suttee and infanticide would still be prevailing amongst us. Therefore, I want to ask, with great respect, those of my friends here who have advocated or supported the blocking of this measure, how they can reconcile this particular argument with their political principles.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, flourished in our face the other day a mass of letters and telegrams from various known and unknown constituents of his. Sir, permit me to tell my friend that I was not unduly impressed by the performance ; and I doubt very much whether he himself was. My Honourable friend, Mr. Price, said the other day that Mr. Neogy was a man of great sincerity and earnestness ; and I think every Member of the House must agree with that ; but I cannot get rid of the suspicion that, when Mr. Neogy was on his legs and advocating so vehemently the cause of orthodoxy, he was talking with his tongue in his cheek. (An Honourable Member "Why"?) I do not think that conservatism or orthodoxy can be allowed to sweep back either the tide of political progress or social reform. I want to ask my friend Mr. Neogy and others of his way of thinking, what have the orthodox got to show for their orthodoxy ? What was their attitude in 1891 when the age of consent was first raised ? Did they not offer vehement opposition ? Are they prepared to stand up in their places today and defend that attitude ? I was very glad to note the other day my friend, Mr. Kelkar, courageously avowing that he was one of those who opposed that measure, but that he was no longer prepared to defend that position. Therefore, I want to say to the orthodox people and those who are voicing their opinions in this House :

"You may indulge in your orthodoxy as much as you like ; but when it comes to a question of your orthodoxy being placed above national interests, I say 'Hands off'."

Here is a practice which has been condemned on all hands and which has been admitted as sapping the growth and vitality of the Indian people ; and for anybody to get up here and say that, because a certain section of the people is opposed to it, therefore this legislature must keep away from it, seems to me perfectly amazing.

One or two of my friends contended that this legislature has no business to deal with matters of social reform in the teeth of opposition from a certain section of the people. What are we here for ? Are we here merely to hurl abuses at our friends on the Treasury Benches ? I do not deny that it is first-class sport and perfectly legitimate ! But I think we are here for something else too. We are here to serve national interests, and I say most emphatically that national interests demand that this Bill should be passed into law immediately.

Mr. D. C. Stewart-Smith (Bengal : European) : Sir, it is with some diffidence that I venture to address you on a subject of such far-reaching importance as this, and moreover on a matter which does not appear at first sight to be of any particular interest to the constituents whom I have the honour to represent. My excuse for intervening in this debate is that the Bill has created a far more definite interest among English people in Calcutta than is probably realised, and of that interest I have received convincing proofs. I do not wish it to be thought for one moment that such interest is confined merely to philanthropic and missionary circles where approval of such measures as this may be taken for granted. This Bill has evoked a very definite interest among the ordinary rank and file of English people in my constituency, who view with cordial approval this bold step which has been taken on behalf of Indian children by the Honourable Member for Ajmer-Merwara and his friends. It has been said in some quarters that we non-official Europeans should not take any part in a discussion of this nature, that it is a matter solely for Indian sentiment, and the less we have to do with their social customs the better. Now, at first sight this may appear to be a very plausible argument. But I venture to suggest that it will bear closer scrutiny. We are summoned here not only to voice our opinions on matters which touch our own interests. As I understand it, we are called here to give our assistance to such measures as we think will be beneficial to the people of this country. An attitude of aloofness at this moment might be interpreted as an attitude of indifference, an attitude which I may assure you that none of us here share. When we are confronted with a measure such as this, which has been carefully thought out and widely advertised, which has been put forward by responsible Indians inspired solely with the idea of curing a social evil, we should be failing in our duty to our constituents if we did not render to such reformers all the assistance which lies in our power.

Sir, it has been argued that this is a religious matter and therefore cannot properly be discussed here. I am quite incompetent to discuss the religious aspect of this matter, but I find it difficult to believe that there can be found anywhere the divine sanction to an interference with a girl below the age of fourteen. Put shortly, this Bill asks us to protect girls throughout India up to the age of 14. Is there any one who can deny, even in the name of religion, that such a reform as this would have a widespread effect on the health of the women of India and upon the sturdiness of the generations to come? It is not a religious matter that we are discussing; it is a national one, and one which contains a measure of far-sighted patriotism which every lover of this land will warmly welcome.

Sir, I am well aware that this Bill, if passed, may to some extent remain a dead-letter owing to the difficulty of detecting breaches of the law. Now, those who fear this result and use it as an argument against the Bill are too faint-hearted and are too easily discouraged. Many laws are difficult to enforce. As I understand it, what the Rai Sahib and his friends require is a law behind them, which they can use if need be; what they want is a weapon which they can use with effect and even severity against those who would contract child marriages with their evil consequences of early pregnancy or lifelong widowhood. At present such reformers are quite powerless. Let us, therefore, give them a weapon even though they may find that weapon difficult to use, because as popular education spreads in this country the need for this weapon will become more recognised.

And, finally, Sir, it has been argued that we cannot cure social evils by legislation. I for my part would say that it is only by legislation that you can cure such evils, and I will give two conclusive examples, one in England and one in India. The removal of child labour from the mines and factories in England was due to legislation initiated by Lord Shaftsbury in the teeth of opposition of factory owners and wage earners alike. In India the custom of suttee was put an end to by legislation about a century ago. No, Sir, public education, admirable though it is, was not considered the remedy for child labour in factories or for the burning of widows. It is only by placing a law upon the Statute-book, a law fortified with adequate penalties, that you can bring home to a nation the evils from which it suffers.

Sir, I have detained the House long enough. I want the Mover of this Bill and his friends to know that many English people in my corner of this land, and I believe throughout India, wish him well in his great reform and desire to accord him not only their applause but also all the assistance that lies in their power.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury (Bengal : Landholders) : Sir, I do not think it would be proper for me, representing as I do an important community like the Hindu community, to which I belong, to give a silent vote on this important matter. Sir, I have heard many speeches in favour of this Bill, but I cannot understand whether the motion as it stands today is for the consideration of the Bill or for the postponement of the measure. Sir, I stand for postponement, because I feel strongly that this is a measure which should not be rushed through so hastily. Bearing in mind the fact that I am a student of politics still, I feel that this sort of legislation, which interferes with our social affairs, should not be rushed through, but I should like to tell those friends of mine who have just spoken on child mortality and the evil consequences of child marriages, that there are different schools of thought on the subject. Now, Sir, I can cite some evidence to prove the falsity of the idea that infantile mortality is due to child marriage. A reference to the Census Report of 1911, of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa will show that in districts, where the percentage of child marriage is the highest, infantile mortality is least although the general mortality is very high. Take for instance the two districts where the percentage of child marriages is highest, namely Darbhanga and Bhagalpur. The number of married girls between the ages of 5 and 10 is for the district of Darbhanga as high as 565 per 1,000 and for the district of Bhagalpur 435 per 1,000. In both these districts infantile mortality is as low as about 13 per cent., although the rate of general mortality is about 35 per cent. In the districts of Balasore, Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling where the number of married girls between the ages of 5 and 10 is only 56 per 1,000, 52 per 1,000 and 17 per 1,000, respectively, and although the rate of general mortality is not higher than about 35 per cent., the rate of infant mortality is in the case of Darjeeling as high as 22 per cent.; and in Balasore and Jalpaiguri the rate goes up as high as 27 per cent. In Burma, where there is no child marriage, the rate of infant mortality is higher than that in Bihar and Orissa where child marriage prevails to a much greater extent than in any other part of India. I quote this from the Census Report for 1921. In lower Burma the rate of infantile mortality is about 24 per cent. In Chile it is about 32 per cent., in Hungary 30 per cent., in Russia 25 per cent. The general average for India is 20 per cent.

Now, Sir, with your permission I should like to quote the opinion of one whom every well wisher of the country holds with great esteem and regard, I mean Dr. Besant. This is what Dr. Besant says :

"Early marriage is best, both physically and morally; it guards purity, softens the affections, trains the heart and preserves physical health; it teaches thought for others, gentleness and self-control; it makes man gentle and woman brave from the contact of their differing natures. The children that spring from such marriage,—while not following each other too rapidly,—are more vigorous and healthy than those born of middle-aged parents, and in the ordinary course of nature the parents of such children live long enough to see them make their start in life, to aid, strengthen and counsel them at the beginning of their career."

Now, Sir, I should like to give the medical opinion on this important matter given by Mr. Lyon on puberty and motherhood. This is from Gallabins' Midwifery, page 45 :

"The first menstruation is the usual sign that a girl has become capable of conception and child bearing."

Now, Sir, there are also other authorities who hold that child marriage does not constitute a grave crime. With the permission of the House, I can quote some statements to prove that many Europeans themselves think that child marriage for India is good. Mr. Ellen Key, in Chapter VIII, page 311, says :

"It is evident to every thoughtful person that a real sexual morality is almost impossible without early marriage; for simply to refer the young to abstinence as the true solution of the problem is, as we have already maintained, a crime against the young and against the race, a crime which makes the primitive force of nature, the fire of life, into a destructive element."

(An Honourable Member : "Is he advocating child marriage?"). Certainly. (At this stage there were several interruptions). I am a student and I have no objection to girls being married at any time of their life, but I object to this sort of legislation. It should have been the duty of the Government to remain neutral on this subject and to allow the representatives of the people here to decide the matter. But that thing is far off and the Government has already made a statement that they will support the Bill. I do not know what will be the effect of this legislation.

I should also state that my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar, in his eloquent speech, made a statement that he is a student of Vedanta wherein it is said that when lions roar the jackals run away. But that doctrine does not apply here, because in Vedanta there is no marriage and things of that sort.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I was only translating an ancient sanskrit text.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : I know a similar text from the Gita which says :

"Jabanartha udopane sarbata sanplutodake

which means :—as when there is flood all round there is no necessity of well ; so whole customs laid in whole Vedah are futile to that Brahman who has the real perception of conception. If the Honourable Member had studied Vedanta he would not have made that eloquent speech. The Smrithis are concerned with child marriage and not the Vedanta. He has nothing to do with a student of Vedanta here ; but it is only the Smrithis which discuss marriages and that Smrithis should not be neglected.

I want to say this that this Bill may be kept pending for three months so that we can try and come to a settlement with those who oppose it. Formerly I was really against the principle of the Bill, but now I agree with it, but at the same time I should like to see a settlement about those matters which raise controversial issues. My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar said, "You could wait for three years more". He said if he could get a chance, he had no objection to waiting for three years. If so, why not wait for three months?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : What will happen after three months?

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : In those three months I will consult with those who object to the provisions of the Bill and try to convince them of the effect of this legislation. This custom of marriage has been prevailing for thousands and thousands of years in this country.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : For two years the Bill has been before the public.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : You can wait for 200 years. I can wait for ten years, but that is not possible and I am asking only for three months' time.

Mr. G. D. Birla (Benares and Gorakhpur Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Will you support us then?

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : I can wait for three months. I may support it after three months, provided my constituency agrees.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : If you can convince your constituency!

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : I will try to convince my constituency whether we can have this sort of legislation or not. If this Bill is carried over to the Delhi Session, most of the Members and also the Mussalmans will come to terms and we can settle the matter ourselves as to what can be done with the Bill. So, I support the motion for postponement and oppose consideration.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I would be failing in my duty if I did not oppose this Bill, and I will give you my reasons. It is two years now exactly to this day that my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda introduced his pet Bill, which he then called the Hindu Child Marriage Bill, and what he then said was that it must apply to the Hindus only. And the reason that he gave, to quote his own words, was that he wanted 'to put a stop to child widowhood'. With your permission, Sir, I will only read a few lines from his opening speech in moving that Bill. He said :

"The primary object of this Bill is to put a stop to child widowhood. No country in the world except this unhappy land presents the sorry spectacle of having in its population child widows who according to the customs of the country cannot remarry. Enforced widowhood is a feature peculiar to the Hindu society."

There is no Mussalman widow..

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : Question.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I say Mussalman widows can be remarried. (An Honourable Member : "That is another matter"). There is no enforced widowhood. The law enjoins that the widow should be married at once.

An Honourable Member : Not enjoins. It permits.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Not at once

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Now, my point was that the Mussalman community should not be included in this Bill at all. (An Honourable Member : "Why?"). It was originally intended for the Hindu widows. Why do you drag the Mussalmans in in this Bill? (An Honourable Member : "Poor Mussalmans!").

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Because you are as cruel to girls as the Hindus.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Probably in your province.

(There were several interruptions).

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Sir, it will be thus seen that the intention of the Mover was nothing beyond stopping the child widowhood which exists in the Hindu Society.

Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : Question.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : At that time the Government were not sure whether this measure would be acceptable to the Hindus, inasmuch as such legal restrictions on the marriageable age would encroach upon their personal law. Sir, the Honourable the Home Member moved that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion. He said :

"Legislation, however, well-intentioned, if it is hasty, is not likely in the end to promote the purpose for which it was intended. Legislation which is passed without due consideration may have consequences very remote from those which were intended".

But my friend would not agree to the circulation of this Bill, and in his zeal for the passage of the Bill did not want to send it for circulation. I warned the House at that time that to refer the Bill directly to the Select Committee would be lamentable inasmuch as it affected the Hindu community as a whole and it would not be fair not to elicit public opinion on a momentous measure of this kind. I was emphatically of opinion that in a measure of this kind public opinion should not be ignored, but no heed was paid to those who demanded circulation ; and the Mover succeeded in getting the Bill referred to the Select Committee. Then, Sir, the Government by its executive order circulated the Bill for eliciting public opinion, and the opinions Government received left no room for doubt that the Bill, as it then stood, was not wanted by the public.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Question.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Just wait a minute. I am coming to that. I have got the materials before me. The Select Committee threw out the original Bill and evolved another Bill which was circulated for collecting public opinion, and the second Select Committee made their report on the 13th September, 1928. Now, Sir, out of the 18 members of the second Select Committee only three were Muslims, and let us examine what they said in their minute of dissent. My Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub said :

"I sign the Report subject to the observation that an over-whelming majority of the Mussalmans, including eminent and distinguished ulennas, is strongly against the application of this Bill to the Muslim community on the ground that it intereferes with religion."

My Honourable friend Muhammad Rafique said :

"The principle of the Bill affects the personal law of the Mussalmans, and therefore it should not be applicable to the Mussalmans at all. I am therefore of opinion that the Mussalmans should be exempted from the operation of the Bill."

As regards Mr. Yusuf Imam, he is only a Mussulman by name. (Cries of "Withdraw" from all parts of the House.)

Mr. President : I think the Honourable Member must withdraw that observation.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I withdraw that, Sir. As I have already said, the original Bill was thrown out by the Select Committee and a new Bill was evolved which, to my utter amazement, brought all the nationalities within its clutches and penalised marriages of girls under a certain age. Their Report came as a tremendous shock to the Mussulmans, for the simple reason that it not only affected their personal law, but that the question of widowhood did not arise in their case, as Islam enjoins widow marriage. To bring the Mussulmans within the purview of the Bill was absolutely unwarrantable. This Bill was ultimately taken into consideration in the Delhi Session early this year, but on the 25th June, 1928, Government appointed a committee to report on the Age of Consent, and the Government were, therefore, not willing to proceed with this Bill till the Report of the Age of Consent Committee was available. That Report was out on the 26th August last. Barely a week had elapsed and the Bill was taken into consideration in this House. Unfortunately illness prevented me from being present in this House on the 4th and 5th September and deprived me of the opportunity of listening to the interesting debate which took place in this House in connection with this Bill. Sir, as I said, I oppose this pernicious Bill. I oppose it because I do not believe that social reform can be effected by legislation. I oppose it because it infringes the Muslim personal law and encroaches upon the Muslim religion ; I oppose it because it is the mandate of my constituency ; I oppose it because the opinion of the dumb millions is wholly against it ; I oppose it because the Muslims as a whole do not want it. And.....

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Question.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am a Muslim first and an Indian afterwards. (Cries of "Shame".) I oppose it because the original Bill did not touch the Muslims and Muslims should not have been included ; I oppose it because it would be a menace to the peace of the society ; I oppose it because it will inevitably result in endless prosecutions, police zulum and untold hardships on the people ; I oppose it finally because the orthodox, the non-orthodox, the reformers and the non-reformers, in fact none want it.

Now, Sir, no less than 29 Members of this House represented to the Home Member on the 13th September, 1928, that they were opposed to this Bill. With your permission, Sir, I will read that document :

"To

The Honourable The Home Member,

Government of India,

Simla.

SIR,

We the undersigned members of the Legislative Assembly are strongly opposed to Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda's Hindu Child Marriage Bill as it strikes at the root of the most cherished and sacred institutions of Hindus and Muslims and penalises what is lawful under the personal laws of Hindus and Muslims.

We therefore request you to help us in opposing this measure which affects our law and religion and against which orthodox public opinion has expressed itself or, at least, to maintain the oft-proclaimed neutrality in matters of religion by abstaining from voting on the Bill.

We have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient Servants,"

Well, Sir, the signatories were Srijut Dharendra Kanta Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. Isma'il Khan, Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi, Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla, Nawabzada Ashrafuddin Ahmed,

[Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi.]

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, Haji Abdoola Haroon, Haji Choudhury Mohammad Ismail Khan, Mr. W. M. P. Ghulam Kadir Khan Dakhan, Mr. Illahibakhsh Bhuto, Mr. Aney, Lieutenant Muhammad Nawaz Khan, Dr. Suhrawardy, Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim, Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhushan Roy, Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan, Mr. M. K. Acharya, Mr. Muhammad Rafique, Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Sahab Bahadur, Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi, Khan Bahadur Syed Rajan Baksh Shah, Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman, Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi, Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, Mr. Belvi, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi and Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz (Laughter.) What has since happened to my Honourable friend Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz?

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz (West Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Anyhow it was not the same Bill.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member may now conclude his speech.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I was asking my friend what has happened since that. He has now made a somersault on the floor of this House. Sir, I was not here to listen to his cock and bull story about the conditions prevailing in Bengal. It must have been amusing to listen to him, to listen to a man who knew as much about Bengal as the man in the moon. ("Hear, hear".) I should like to throw out a challenge to my friend.....

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : Become a member of the Committee

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : You resign your seat and seek re-election in the Punjab on this Marriage Bill.

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : I will, if all the Muslim Members of the Assembly who support or oppose the Bill will resign and seek re-election.

Mr. President : Order, order. I hope the Honourable Member will now conclude his observations.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Well, Sir, as regards the Age of Consent Committee, I will, with your permission, read what the Madras Mail, in a sub-leader, has said about it. It is an Anglo-Indian paper, not an orthodox Hindu paper but a pure and simple Anglo-Indian paper:

"An orthodox correspondent asks whether it is necessary for the Age of Consent Committee to continue its inquiries in view of the speeches made by its President and other prominent members favouring drastic changes in the existing law. These speeches, in the view of our correspondent indicate that the majority of the Committee has already made up its mind about its ultimate recommendations and is seeking, not so much to find the facts, as to build up a case in support of its views," and so on and so forth. I have not much time to go on and quote the whole.

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : It is from a correspondent.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I will now only quote, Sir, from the Report of the Age of Consent Committee what Maulvi Muhammad Yakub has said. I shall quote only one or two passages; I will not be long:

"Interference with tenets of religion or furthering limitations where not one is placed by religion cannot be allowed to pass under the cover of the progressive nature of Islam. For those who consider religion a mockery it is very difficult to understand a religious man's attitude towards religious beliefs and sentiments. The life of a Mussalman from cradle to grave is a series of religious performances and therefore any foreign element which interrupts or puts limitations on these performances cannot be tolerated from the Muslim point of view."

Sir, here is a Fatwa signed by 74 ulemas throughout India. This Fatwa is signed by 74 ulemas. They have condemned this measure. They say it infringes the Muhammadan personal law, and they appeal to the Mussalman Members of this House to enter an emphatic protest against the Bill. I was very glad, Sir, to read in the papers that my friend, Mr. K. C. Neogy, had entered an emphatic protest on behalf of the Hindus of Bengal. My friend, Mr. Kelkar, will bear him out, for he knows how, at a meeting presided over by him only the other day at Dacca, an overwhelming majority opposed this measure. Mr. Neogy and I, Sir, come from the same Division in Bengal. He represents the non-Mussalman constituency and I the Mussalman constituency. The mandates of our constituency are vehemently to oppose this measure, and we are in our duty bound to carry them out, and we shall do so to the best of our ability. My Honourable and esteemed friend, Mr. K. C. Roy, gave his whole-hearted support to the Bill and is reported to have said that he welcomed the Bill, that he thought Mr. Neogy had evidently been misled by the orthodox tyranny of Bengal, but that the Bengal Government faithfully and correctly represented the entire Province, and so on. Well, Sir, I accept that and I shall show that the Bengal Government has opposed this Bill.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member should have taken the hint I gave him.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I ask for only two minutes more, Sir. The Bengal Government says :

"In reply, I am to say, that some selected Bar Libraries and recognised Associations and certain selected officers were consulted and copies of the replies received are enclosed for the information of the Government of India. It will be seen that most of the Associations are opposed to the proposed legislation as affecting religious rights and usages."

An Honourable Member : What is it?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : The Bengal Government's Report.

An Honourable Member : Your brother is in that Government?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : My brother was not then in the Bengal Government.

"But apart from the considerations as to the object or the practical effect of the proposed legislation, the way in which that object is sought to be gained is open to grave criticism. The Governor in Council considers that there are very strong objections to the proposal to invalidate any marriage which has taken place."

The Government of Bengal further say :

"In reply, I am to say that three District Judges, 18 recognized Associations, 7 Bar Associations and the incorporated Law Society of Calcutta were consulted in the matter and copies of the replies received from the Indian Christian Association, the Buddhist Association of Chittagong, the Hillmen's Association of Darjeeling, the Marwari Association, the Jain Svetambari Terapanthi Sabha, the European Association, Calcutta, and the Bar Association of the 24 Parganas, Tipperah, Dacca, Midnapore, are forwarded for the information of the Government of India. From the replies received, it appears that the preponderating majority of opinion is against any legislation on the subject, and only a minority of ardent social reformers are in favour of it. The Governor in Council is of opinion that the Bill may be dropped."

Now, I come to the European Group. Last September Sir James Simpson and Colonel Crawford gave me to understand that the European Group was going to support me to throw out this Bill.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indians) : You were lobbying yourself.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : That is not lobbying.

Mr. President : Order, order : The Honourable Member must take the hint.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I will finish in one minute, Sir. I appeal to the Treasury Benches. I appeal to Sir James Creer personally. Sir, this is a matter which affects the Mussalmans and the Hindus. Therefore, do not be in a hurry ; do not side with one party or the other ; abstain from voting on this Bill. Let us divide in this House without official Members. Do not give a mandate to the nominated Members. Let them vote as they like.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : You do not want any guidance.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : No, I do not want any guidance.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Then why did you quote the opinion of the Government of Bengal ?

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Shah Nawaz.

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : On a point of personal explanation, Sir. It is true that nearly a year ago I was persuaded by my friend the Honourable Mr. Ghuznavi to sign the 'precious' document which he still holds in his possession on the assumption that the evils of early marriage and early consummation and early maternity did not exist amongst the Mussalmans of Bengal. The Age of Consent Committee, of which I was the member, has, however, unanimously found that the evil of early marriage and early consummation very largely prevails amongst the Mussalmans of Bengal, who form 42 per cent. of the total Muslim population in India. The Committee has further found that the evil also prevails amongst Muslims of other provinces though in a lesser degree. The Committee has further recommended that the only effective remedy to remove the evil is to penalize marriages of girls below fourteen years of age. In the face of these undeniable facts and findings

I would have been guilty of dishonesty if I had paid attention to the document signed by some Muslim Members of the Assembly on the basis of assumptions which are found entirely untrue. There is nothing in Islamic laws which would stand in the way of the present legislation. Whether in the next election I am elected to the Assembly or not, I care not. I feel I have done my duty without fear and doubt.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Sir, I did not intend to take part in this debate at this stage and wanted to express my view on the amendments which stand in the name of some of my friends, to the effect that Musalmans should be excluded from the operation of the contemplated Act. But I do so now, because, by the speeches of certain Musalman Members, an impression has been created that Musalmans in a body or a big majority of them are against this Bill. Sir, I am convinced that this is not the fact. (Hear, hear.) And my conviction is not based on arrogance, the arrogance of those persons who come forward and say that they are the only representatives of Musalmans and denounce those who happen to oppose them. This conviction of mine is based on ascertained facts. The whole country was given an opportunity, and this Bill has been before the country for the last two years. Several opportunities were allowed and, after all, a Committee was appointed which made a tour round the whole country. The tour was notified in all the papers, English as well as vernacular, and persons came and expressed their views before the Committee. The majority of the Musalman witnesses who appeared before the Committee were in favour of the Bill, and that is the only ascertained opinion before this House. The only plea which has been put forward by Honourable Members on the other side is that many Muhammadans did not come forward to express their opinion.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : That is what the Committee says.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I will come to the Committee later on. The only conclusion which can reasonably be drawn from this attitude of Musalmans is that they are indifferent to the Bill.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : They have no confidence in the Committee.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Honourable Members are at perfect liberty to hold one view or the other. But I feel really exercised when I hear from the mouth of learned friends that this measure is against our religion. I believe and say here on the floor of this House that this Bill is in exact accord with the true principles of the Islamic law of Mash-rûq. (Applause.) Some friends have come forward and asserted that this Bill is against our religion, but if they had taken the trouble of reading even the note of dissent of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, they would have come to the same conclusion to which I have come, and I came to that conclusion long before it. I will not enter into the details of the Muhammadan law because this is not the suitable occasion for it and I will wait for the Honourable Members who propose the exclusion of Musalmans from the operation of the Bill when they move their amendments. But at this stage I may say that, so far as the holy book of the Musalmans is concerned, it never contemplated child marriage. The holy book says :

"Fankahoo Ma Tah hakum Minannesui."

"Marry from among women, those whom you like best."

[Mr. T. A. K. Shervani.]

That is the only verse which directly bears upon the question and there are two most significant words, upon which I lay particular emphasis and to which I wish to draw the attention of the House. I invite the attention of the House to the word "fankahoo". It is not said "unkahoo Ahanukum wa Bautukum", etc. It says "fankaho", that is to say, it leaves the marriage of a person entirely to the person who wants to marry. In other words it contemplates marriage of a person by the person himself. Now you say, "No", and say that a person can marry any other person which apparently is not contemplated in the verse quoted above. The second word which is the most important word in this verse is the word "nissa" and I challenge my Honourable friends over there to find any Arabic quotation in which the word "nissa" is used for Sileyah (a child). The word nissa is always used in Arabic for a full grown up woman. This is what the Holy Koran says, still my Honourable friends come forward and say it is against Islam. I do not stop here; this debate will continue, and I ask my Honourable friends who oppose this Bill to find any hadis which recommends child marriage.

Hadises are of two kinds, Hadis bilqual and Hadis bilfeal, and it is the recognised principle of Islam that the acts of Prophets are not always binding on his followers. So, I ask my Honourable friends here to find out a single hadis bilqual which recommends child marriage. I now turn to fiqa. In fiqa there is no doubt that Muslim (*faqih*s) have allowed the marriage of a minor. But how did it come about? For this we will have to go to the history. We find throughout the Islamic law that there were certain customs prevalent amongst pre-Islamic Arabs. And from amongst those customs, the customs which were against equity and justice and which were repugnant to the principles of Islam were prohibited. Those customs which were not such were not interfered with. We find among the pre-Islamic Arabs the custom of marrying children, whether they were minors or majors only with the permission of their parents or guardians; the rule of familea patestos was fully in vogue. That was the pre-Islamic custom in Arabia. When Islam came, it abolished the marriage of a major by a father or grandfather or any other relation. But, so far as marriages of minors were concerned, Islam did not interfere. So, as a matter of fact, this marriage of minors is not based on Islamic principle. It is a remnant of the pre-Islamic Arab custom. My Honourable friends come forward and say that it offends against Islamic religion. I wish to submit that Moulvi Mohammad Yakub has really taken great pains and has given us, if we care to read his notes, the entire relevant texts on the question. I congratulate him for his labours and for the great pains which he has taken. But I do not agree with the conclusions he has arrived at. My reasons are obvious. My Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, in his note of dissent, simply says that it is the consensus of opinion among the Muhammadans. Practically all the Muhammadan witnesses who appeared before him did agree that fiqa could be changed. But some say that fiqa could be changed only by a Muhammadan King. I do not endorse that view, because, if I endorse that view, I will be in awful difficulties. I cannot afford to go out of the protection of the Legislature of this country, so long as I am residing in this country. There are only two alternatives open for meeting:

either to leave the Islamic law entirely to the mercy of a judge or a bench of judges, or bring it within the purview of this Legislature. The advantage in this Legislature is that we are so many representatives of Mussalmans here, and we can very well discuss the matter among ourselves as well as with members of other communities, and also with the members of the Government. But if you take Islamic law out of the purview of this Legislature, the only result will be that as we live in this country, our cases must go to the courts, and instead of the Legislature enacting certain measures for the Mussalmans, the Islamic law will be absolutely in the hands of one or two judges, as has been the case hitherto. For example, there was not a single branch of Muslim law so well developed as the law of Waqf at the time when the British took up the administration of justice into their hands. But in fifty years time the whole law of waqf has been changed beyond reorganisation by the Indian courts, and Mussalmans were compelled to come to the Legislature for rescue. Take the law of pre-emption. That law was recognised by the Government of this country. But with what result? There were more conflicts in the rulings on pre-emption than on any branch of law, and the result was that the entire law of pre-emption had been mutilated by the time the Legislature came to its rescue. That is about my own province.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Will it remain in the hands of a few judges or in the hands of a few irresponsible Mullahs?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : While I say all this, I do not concede to the Legislature the power or authority to interfere in my religion without my consent. But at the same time I will never advise Muhammadans to take their personal law entirely out of the hands of the Legislature of the country. Certain personal remarks were made by an Honourable Member on Dr. Hyder while he was speaking. I do not hold any brief for my Honourable friend Dr. Hyder, but, I may remind my Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi for his benefit that Dr. Hyder represents a constituency which had been the centre of Muslim thought and opinion for the last fifty years. I further remind my Honourable friend Maulvi Sahib that Dr. Hyder represents a more enlightened constituency than my Honourable friend Muhammad Shafee does. (Laughter.)

An Honourable Member : In politics?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : In politics, in religion, in wealth, in culture I further remind my Honourable friend that Dr. Hyder represents a constituency which consists of many more Muhammadans than the constituency from which my Honourable friend Maulvi Sahib hails. It is very easy in this House to come forward and say, "I am the person who represents Mussalmans and nobody else", but such assertions must be the outcome of arrogance and not taste.

Now, at this late stage, I do not want to take much of the time of this Honourable House. I waited and waited in vain to get some light thrown on the question by a person like my Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi, who is called a Maulvi, and who has at least for 16 or 17 years given out to his clients and courts, in which he practised, that he knows Muhammadan law, how this innocent measure is against the tenets of Islam.

LSCP(BLA)

[Mr. T. A. K. Shervani.]

It is really curious that, when the question of fees comes up my lawyer friends come forward and say that they know Muhammadan law, they are the experts; but when there comes the question of Sarda's Bill, they say they do not know Muhammadan law and cannot express any opinion unless they consult the ulemas. The question before the House is a pure question of Muhammadan law, and I am entitled to give a better opinion on this question than those whose primary business in life is not law. It is my every day business, while an Alim might come across a case or two in the course of a year or two. My friend Mr. Ghuznavi comes armed with 74 opinions, but should we accept the opinions as the last word until we are assured that Islam enjoins child marriage. I again assert that, so far as Islam is concerned, it has never recommended child marriage. We do respect certain individual Alims for their learning and erudition, but we should not accept a verdict without authority from the books of Shorah. So far as individual opinions of Alims are concerned, I have tried to ascertain and I assure the Honourable Members of this House that, up till now, the only objection to this Bill is that this country is not Dar-ul-Islam but Dar-ul-Herab, and this Legislature cannot effect a change in Islamic law. I challenge any one who asserts that proposition to prove that according to the tenets of Islam India is not Dar-ul-Islam but Dar-ul-Herab. I maintain and I say here on the floor of this House that India is Dar-ul-Islam and not Dar-ul-Herab.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Including Kadian ?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : There are unguided persons in Islamic countries also, it does not become Dar-ul-Herab thereby.

I further maintain that the change of law is not confined to a Muslim king; there was a time when there was no king at all, and still rules of Piqah were changed. They have been changed from the earliest times, and I can give many examples of the rules of Piqah having been changed. They were changed even in the time of the Khalifs. To quote one example, the punishment for fornication in Islam was stoning to death and Hazrat Ali, the fourth Kaliph abolished it. The rules of law have always been changed and they are being changed here in India every day. It is for us to choose once for all whether the change should depend on the whims and fancies of a judge or two or on the Legislature with our free consent. Every sane man will choose the latter course. With these words, Sir, I support the original motion. In a private meeting of Mussalmans I said that I was indifferent whether the Bill was postponed or not, but when we have reached to this stage of the debate, I oppose the amendment also proposed by my friend Mr. Acharya.

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : Sir, I thank you for giving me this opportunity of saying a few words. I trust I will not offend against the clock. The fact is that my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda asked me to speak on this measure and as it coincided with my own wishes also, I am on my feet. The Rai Sahib of course knows exactly how my vote is likely to go. But I want to say this, that we in these benches,—at any rate in the back benches,—have from time to time wished to be in a position to express our opinions regarding this measure. At one time or another, and for various reasons, we were not in that position. In fact the Rai Sahib and others did to some extent,—benevolently, I admit,—but they did taunt us with a doubt whether we were opposed to the measure or in favour of it, or were only indifferent. After the speech which the Honourable the Home Member made the other day,—a speech which I may say the whole House felt was nobly done,—after that speech, there can be no doubt as to our opinion and the position that we take up. We are not opposed to the Bill; we are not indifferent to it. We strongly, unhesitatingly, unconditionally believe that the Bill has very great advantages; that there is urgent necessity for it, and above all, I may say we believe in the righteousness of the Bill. When Mr. Acharya moved his dilatory motion the other day I thought that once more we were to be in for the usual futile discussion; but since then the House has unmistakably shown that they have no intention to be put off by any dilatory motions. They have shown that they are determined now to face the issue before them; and the issue is very clear. It is not a light issue; it is a great issue; it is the very gravest issue that can face a people,—the welfare of its own rising generations, the welfare of the young mothers that are the custodians of their race, the young mothers whose privilege and function it is to hand on the torch to the future. That is the issue before this House, and the House is obviously now determined to deal with the issue once for all. Mr. Acharya undoubtedly spoke with the very greatest eloquence, and I should be one of the very last to under-estimate in any way the sincerity, the fervour and the belief that underlies his speech, and the same, of course, I can say of my Honourable friend Pandit Malaviya over there. We should be very ungrateful, I feel, if we did not recognise, and give public expression to that recognition too, the very great help that Pandit Malaviya gives to all reform movements although he stands firmly for orthodoxy. The open mind that he displays towards advance and reform is an encouragement and help to all of us who believe thoroughly in this particular reform.

I admit that Mr. Acharya, with his eloquent ways, is liable to carry along opinion on his side. At the same time it is to be remembered that we cannot today deal quite with this question as if there were nothing else but ancient texts, and I think myself that Mr. Neogy, his neighbour, felt that. Mr. Neogy comes to us, persuasive, intensely modern, a man of the world speaking to men of the world, not relying at all on the ancient shibboleths, Shastras and Smritis and all the other unpronounceable words that we have heard so much about. He relies entirely on the very post-Vedic Excellencies in Council, and he quotes the Governor of Bengal, the Governor of Madras, the Governor of the Punjab, and the Governor of Bihar and Orissa. I confess, Sir, as he mentioned them, that I was myself very much impressed, and I went at once to see the opinions of these authorities on whom he relies; and when I got the papers, I must say that I was somewhat surprised on seeing the first page of the first opinion of paper No. I. Now, Sir, I have sat here many a day and how often have I not been told from those benches that the elected representatives of the people are the repositories of all the wisdom of the people, that they alone have any right to speak for the people, that they are the interpreters of the convictions of the people (An Honourable Member : "Sole interpreters"), and Mr. Neogy is one of the prime exponents of that particular view; and yet Mr. Neogy overlooked, forgot, possibly ignored, the very first opinion that appeared in the papers that my friends were good enough to lend me. I have the opinion here, and I do not think any one has so far quoted it. I need not delve particularly deep in order to find the opinion of those people on whom our friends opposite lay such wonderful stress—and Mr. Neogy in particular. It reads thus :

“ The Secretary to the Government of Madras—(Madras of course being the protagonist of this particular anti-movement)—“ to the Secretary to the Government of India, dated the 18th April 1928, on the Child Marriage Bill : Sir, I am directed to state that the following Resolution was carried at the meeting of the Madras Legislative Council held on March 28 ”—(not His Excellency in Council, but the Madras Legislative Council)—:

“ “ This Council recommends to the Government that they may be pleased to communicate to the Government of India that in the opinion of this Council legislation raising the marriageable age of boys and girls to at least 21 and 16 years, respectively, is necessary ”. ” (Hear, hear.)

And, Sir, this pernickety Secretary goes on to add :

“ I am to add that the motion was carried without amendment or division, the Government Members remaining neutral when the Resolution was put to the House.”

And there, Sir, is the first opinion. Mr. Neogy lightly skipped it and went on to the Governor of the Punjab.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I point out to the Honourable Member that what I was quoting was the opinion of the Government of Madras, and he will find in that very opinion that they refer to their previous opinion to which they say they stick ?

Mr. M. Keane : Mr. Neogy, having forgotten his old friends, the representatives of the people, now wishes to rely on the Government. (Laughter.) His next Government is the Government of the Punjab, on whose opinion he laid very great stress. I think he did that possibly because, at that time, Sir Malcolm Hailey, whose reputation as an administrator none can ignore, was Governor of the Punjab. During my life—and I am getting old—there are two things that I have always kept before me : two simple points. When I hear a quotation made, unless it is quoted indeed very fully, I go and find the original authority ; that is one thing. The other is the very ordinary one “ Always hear the other side ”. Well, I got out the opinion of the Governor of the Punjab—and not only his opinion but also that of his Government, of his Ministers and Members as well. The opinion is thus very briefly put. After giving a number of the opinions collected, paragraph 2 says :

“ I am to say, that though there are great practical difficulties about the Bill—(he admits that frankly, as we all do)—yet, in the view of the Governor in Council it is a great improvement on the previous measure, and it has his approval both in the matter of the general principle and of the limits of age suggested. The Ministers of His Excellency ”—(elected by the people)—“ The Ministers of His Excellency’s Government are also in general agreement on the principles of the Bill.”

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Proceed further.

Mr. M. Keane : I shall pause here for a moment to point out that the Government of the Punjab recognised the practical difficulties.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That is exactly the point I was referring to on that occasion.

Mr. M. Keane : We shall have to deal with the administration of this measure, but I am prepared to say that, though it will not be an easy Bill for us to administer, and though there will be difficulties, I will engage that we will administer it. I know that we shall have to walk warily.

I know that we shall have to walk delicately ; but I will engage that, where it is necessary to go slow, we will not be hasty, and where it is necessary to go fast and where faltering would be a sin, we will press it home. (Hear, hear.) There will be difficulty, of course, but we will do our best.

I will not further deal with that particular point—the opinions of the Governments. Mr. Neogy has not attempted to suggest that the United Provinces, Bombay and Central Provinces Governments were against the Bill (Mr. K. C. Neogy : “ I did not refer to these Provinces at all ”.), and he was inclined to leave a wrong impression—not intentionally—that the Punjab Government was against the Bill.

I do not wish to say too much on the attitude of some Mussalman Members. It has come to me as a surprise and a very great disappointment.....

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Because they do not support the Government ?

Mr. M. Keane : The opinions given now by some Mussalman Members are not, I admit, at all what I had understood were the opinions that they held, and what I believe were originally their opinions. My friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, a short while ago quoted with very great relish and very great approval the opinion of my friend, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub ; and he taunted my friend behind with having changed his views. Mr. Shah Nawaz gave an absolutely convincing answer to that. He said :

“ I waited for the evidence ; I was convinced by the evidence ; the evils were proved to me and I was not ashamed to be honest and change my opinion.”

Mr. Ghuznavi called that a somersault. Was there no somersault then in the opinion of our friend, the Maulvi, whom Mr. Ghuznavi quoted so fully, so carefully, and so approvingly ? Maulvi Muhammad Yakub not only agreed in Select Committee to Mussalmans being included in the Bill, but he also agreed to the age being raised from 12 to 14. And, Sir, not only that, but his agreement was so full that amid a forest of minutes of dissent, he was one of the few who had no minute of dissent. Afterwards he comes and says, “ The Ulemas say otherwise. I therefore changed my opinion ”. No evidence : only the word “ Ulema ”.....

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I have never said that I changed my opinion.

Mr. M. Keane : I am quoting from the Report of the Second Committee, and from that I understand that Maulvi Muhammad Yakub is opposed to the Bill. It may be, Sir, that he agrees with the Bill, but yet opposes it ; I cannot say. (Laughter.)

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Let the Honourable Member read my note carefully and then he will find out my opinion.

An Honourable Member : What is your opinion ?

Mr. M. Keane : I will leave that point, it is no place, I admit, for me or for my friends on this side to enter into a controversial discussion of Muslim law. All I would say in a general way is that I have always been led to suppose, and I believe it is true, that the first modern Law Giver to give woman her proper place legally and otherwise was their own Holy Prophet. I can hardly believe, whatever be the details of theology, that a measure like this would not have his approval, and when I see that a country like Egypt, which has always been considered, by us at any rate, as a very orthodox Muslim country, has a similar marriage law, and that Turkey also, a great Muslim country, has a marriage law fixing the age higher than 14, I cannot believe that there is any Muslim dogma against the fixing of a minimum marriage age. Dogma is something that must be universally applicable to a faith. I myself belong to a branch of the Christian Church where dogma rules very largely, but no Catholic could be ignorant of the dogmas of his faith, yet my friend Mr. Yakub, I am surprised to find, supported in Committee something which only now apparently he discovers was or is contrary to the dogmas of his faith. That is a thing which surprises me. My friend over there, Mr. Shervani, seemed to me to give a very full answer from the Muslim point of view; it is not for us to judge the matter. I will only add this, that I was surprised when I heard my friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, in his powerful speech, say—at least he left me with that impression,—that so long as this Bill was confined to the Hindus he was prepared to support it. That is to say, he was prepared to support the Bill, knowing that it would be to the moral and physiological advantage, I take it, of the Hindu community, and it was only when the Bill was applied to Mussalmans, that he was prepared to oppose it, even though the same moral and physiological advantages were applicable to them. Surely, it is also worth applying to no less than 70 millions of Muslim people. (An Honourable Member: “What about widowhood among Mussalmans?”) I am not speaking of widowhood, I am speaking about all the results of early marriage. I will leave that particular point of Muslim faith. I consider that my friends Mr. Shervani, Dr. Hyder and others have fully dealt with the question.

There is only one other point that I would care to make, and it is this. There is a tendency, it seems to me, amongst some Members,—Mr. Belvi voiced it the other day,—he voiced the feeling—that it was not for Indians over there or here to listen to the talk of people like Miss Katherine Mayo and other outside people. We here in India should say what is good for ourselves; we should not bother about the opinions of Miss Mayo and others,—that is what I understood him to say. Now, Sir, I think myself that that attitude of mind in the modern day is entirely a wrong attitude. If India is to take her place in the stream of the world's life, it has got to come into line with the world. Time and distance have been annihilated. People cannot now, as they did in olden days, hide behind their mountains or live within their seas. There is no isolation now. The age of isolation is gone. The whole world is a whispering gallery, and if you do anything that offends against the moral sense of the world it must fall.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah: Sir, the first and foremost question that I put to myself as a Member of this Legislature is whether child marriage is an evil in this country or not; is it a crying evil or not? Is it human that thousands and millions of girls should be married at a very tender age which must sap their womanhood? Sir, I do not think, whatever may be the controversy on this point, on the plea of humanity, that there is a single Member in this House who can contemplate with equanimity and would not deplore and condemn the grave evil and the inhuman practices which are daily taking place in this country. Is it or is it not a fact? Sir, I entirely agree with my friend Mr. Shah Nawaz. I was myself unaware of the extent and the degree of evil that existed among the Mussalmans.

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was taken by Mr. Deputy President.)

When the debate was going on on previous occasions, my friend Pandit Malaviya corrected me because I happened to say that so far as the Mussalmans were concerned, the evil did not exist to such an extent. And when he corrected me I was taken aback, but I had not the facts and figures, which we have since obtained. Therefore, although in my Presidency the evil does not exist to the extent that we now know it did exist, yet there are other parts of India where this evil does exist. Now, Sir, if that is a fact, and I take it that it is an established fact, then the next question that we have to consider is this. Are we going to tackle this horrible evil? I ask my friend Mr. Ghuznavi to answer this. Are we precluded from dealing with this evil? Sir, I do not pretend to be an Ulema, and I am not one. Nor do I pretend to be an authority on theology. But I do know one thing, that during the last 30 years of my fairly active practice in Bombay, I always understood that marriage law had nothing to do with religion as such; that marriage was a contract according to Muhammadan law, pure and simple. Now, if I am right that marriage is a contract, pure and simple, will Honourable Members point out to me a text of which I am not aware? I repeat that marriage is a contract according to Muhammadan law. Can that be challenged? If anybody contradicts me on that, he has yet to learn the Muhammadan law. But the question is this, whether there is any text which makes it obligatory on Mussalmans that they should get their daughters married before the age of 14. (Some Honourable Members: “No, no.”) There is no text. On the contrary, as far as I have been able to understand,—and here Maulvi Muhammad Yakub supports the proposition which I am going to place before the House in his very excellent note—on the contrary, the Muhammadan law defines the age of puberty as 14. (Some Honourable Members: “Fifteen.”) I am not taking the text, I am taking now the Muhammadan law as it is written by the Anglo-Indian text-writers. (An Honourable Member: “Fifteen.”) I beg to differ. The age of puberty is 14. However, if it is 15 it supports me more. Very well, I will accept that if you like because it supports me more. Now what does Maulvi Muhammad Yakub say?

“Islam thus generally seems to favour marriages after the age of discretion, but it sometimes happens that special circumstances and the well-being of a girl herself make it imperative that her marriage should be performed at an early age. Islam, therefore, did not fix any age for marriage and marriages of minor boys and girls were kept permissible.”

Therefore, I am not convinced that this Bill in any way militates against the rule of civil laws applicable to marriages amongst Mussalmans, I agree with my Honourable friend over there—I congratulate him upon his maiden speech. I cannot believe that there can be a divine sanction for such evil practices as are prevailing, and that we should not, for a single minute, give our sanction to the continuance of these evil practices any longer. How can there be such a divine sanction to this cruel, horrible, disgraceful, inhuman practice that is prevailing in India?

Sir, I am convinced in my mind that there is nothing in the Koran, there is nothing in Islam which prevents us from destroying this evil. If we can do it today do not wait till tomorrow. I fully recognise the orthodox opinion. I fully appreciate the orthodox sentiments, the orthodox feelings both of the Mussalmans and of the Hindus. Sir, whether certain practices have any sanction divine or religious or not, usages and customs grow up, and when any social reform is suggested which goes to destroy the usages and the practices to which the people are used and upon which they have looked as semi-religious usages and practices, it is always known all over the world that those people who have got deep sentiments, deep convictions, strong opinions, always resent, and they believe that it is destroying the very root of their social life or religion. Always the social reformer is face to face with this orthodox opinion having behind it this conviction, this sentiment, this feeling which is perfectly understandable and to some extent legitimate. But are we to be dragged down by this section for whom we have respect, whose feeling we appreciate, whose sentiments we regard,—are we to be dragged down and are we to be prevented in the march of progress, in the name of humanity, I ask you? And Sir, as far as my own constituency is concerned, that is, Bombay, I have no mandate from them. This measure has been before this House for a long time, this measure certainly has been discussed in the Press and on the platform; but my constituency has not given me any mandate whatsoever of any kind, and therefore, perhaps I am very happy and perhaps I am in a better position than my Honourable friends who probably are afraid that they may have to face their constituencies in the future, and that they may have some trouble, or some of them may have got some mandates. But, Sir, I make bold to say that if my constituency is so backward as to disapprove of a measure like this then I say, the clearest duty on my part would be to say to my constituency, “You had better ask somebody else to represent you”. Because, after all, you must remember that public opinion is not so fully developed in this country, and if we are going to allow ourselves to be influenced by the public opinion that can be created in the name of religion when we know that religion has nothing whatever to do with the matter,—I think we must have the courage to say, “No, we are not going to be frightened by that”.

Sir, I do not wish to go further into the details of this Bill because I hope that this House will reject this motion which is really a dilatory motion. I tried to understand what good will come out of this if the House now agrees either to the postponement of this measure or delays in passing this measure. I have not yet been able to understand what is the object of it. I asked my Honourable friend Dharendra Kanta Lahiri Chaudhury,—for whom I have great respect, and although he opposes this Bill I admire his speech because he took up a very courageous, strong and admirable stand—I asked him why he wanted time and his reply was the first opportunity that I had of getting some definite reason for the postponement—and he said that he wanted to go back to his constituency and consult them and therefore he wanted three months. Surely, I appeal to my Honourable friend over there, has not his constituency had enough time, has not this question been agitated in this House for the last two years, and what will you gain by postponement unless you want to strengthen your opposition, unless you want to frighten the Government more?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Is that a crime?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : No, perfectly legitimate. I do not want the Government to slip away again. It is after a great deal of trouble that I have the pleasure of seeing the Government in this frame of mind, which was echoed by my Honourable friend Mr. Keane there. The Government is not always ready to take risks in matters of this kind. I hope the policy has changed, I welcome it, and I say that, by taking up this attitude towards this measure, the Government, although foreign, has proved that it is national in its spirit so far as this matter is concerned. In the past the Government policy was, “We have enough trouble. We have got the agitators who are making our lives miserable already. Why should we undertake a measure which will make our loyal subjects who always support us, who look upon us as ma-baps—the orthodox who are quite content and satisfied—why should we undertake this extra trouble, this extra burden upon our heads to improve your people?” That was their attitude, but I am glad that that policy has been exploded, and I hope for ever, and I hope that Government will in future side with us in the matter at any rate concerning social reforms we are working so that we may help India to take her place among the great nations of the world. We are looking forward to a great India and a great nation. This is after all a small move. It is not going to be the end of all our troubles or evils that exist, nor is it going to be our salvation. It is only the beginning. If you take your courage in your hands and if Government do their duty to help us in the onward march of progress to secure the welfare of the people of India, I say, then, India will not have to ask for self-government. It will come to us.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : I had no intention of taking part in this debate and I was keeping myself silent all the time when this debate was going on. Now, Sir, certain circumstances have forced me to say a few words, so that my action, while voting, may not be misjudged. I am one of those who supported Dr. Gour's Civil Marriage Bill from the very beginning. I was always for any progressive law which came before this House. I do not like on this question to be guided by my personal inclination. As far as my personal views are concerned, I am totally in favour of fixing the age for the girls who are to be married and I think 14 years is a reasonable age. Whatever my views may be on the question of the restriction of the age of marriage for boys, I do not say a word about that at this stage, because I shall have a chance of explaining it at a later stage. I am sorry that Mr. Jinnah has gone out now. I got up to speak only after hearing Mr. Shervani and Mr. Jinnah. We the Mussalman Members received telegrams and letters from the Jamiat-ul-Ulma and from different Ulema associations. They are of opinion that this Bill is against the principles of Islam. When we got these telegrams we collected in your room, Sir, in the room of the Deputy President and we invited every Mussalman to attend. No one was left out. Some Members held the view that this Bill was not against the tenets of Islam. Others held the view that this Bill infringed on the religious rights of Islam, and it was decided that the Mussalman Members could not express their view unless they heard fully the ulemas who were of opinion that the Bill was against the tenets of Islam. When these opinions were expressed we came to the unanimous conclusion that the consideration of this Bill should be postponed in order to see whether we would be convinced by the ulemas or whether we would convince them, and we should voice the opinion arrived at after discussion with the ulemas, in the Legislative Assembly when the Bill comes up for consideration. Now, Sir, the first Mussalman Member who spoke on this Bill, Mr. Abdul Haye, made it clear that the Mussalmans had unanimously decided to get the Bill postponed, and I am sorry that, after Mr. Abdul Haye had spoken, two Members, who were a party to that agreement, backed out. One of them is Mian Shah Nawaz. On the 5th of this month, he got up and said that the consideration of this Bill should be taken up at once. Mr. Shervani and Dr. Hyder did the same.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the Chair.)

[Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan.]

I do not want to discuss the question whether this Bill is against the principles of Islam or not. I am simply giving expression to the opinion that I shall be voting simply in accordance with the decision we have arrived at.

I do not mind, Sir, whether certain Members back out, but as a conscientious Member and a conscientious Mussalman, I must stick to the word which I have given; and even if all of them back out, I shall stick to my place and shall vote for the postponement of this Bill. I wanted to make my position clear so that it may not be misunderstood when I vote for further postponement.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I rise to support the motion before the House and to oppose the amendment of the Honourable Member from Madras, Mr. Acharya. Sir, as one who condemned the Government's attitude during the last Delhi Session, when the Honourable the Home Member advocated the postponement of further consideration of the Bill, I hasten today to congratulate the Home Member on the attitude which he has taken up on behalf of Government. I also hasten to offer a word of congratulation to the Honourable Member from Calcutta, who promises well to be an acquisition to the European Benches. Mr. Stewart-Smith's speech, Sir, has impressed me more than many of the speeches that we have heard on this debate in the past, and I do hope—(Mr. M. K. Acharya was going to interrupt)—everything at the right time, don't interrupt me please—and I do hope that the sentiments which he put forward today will always be the guiding sentiments of my friends on the European Benches in all matters which concern the welfare of India. (Applause.) I must now, Sir, refer to a little disclosure which my Honourable friend from Calcutta, Mr. Ghuznavi, seemed to have made, perhaps innocently. Mr. Ghuznavi said, to my great surprise, that my friend, Sir James Simpson, had indicated to him last Delhi Session that Members of the European group would join him in getting this Bill postponed. I hope, Sir, that that information given by Mr. Ghuznavi to this House is incorrect. I am sure that, in the interest of my friends on the European Benches, if there was any understanding of that nature, none will dislike it more than my friend, Sir Darcy Lindsay, the Leader of the European Group. (Sir Darcy Lindsay : "Hear, hear".)

When this Bill was ushered in, Sir, about two years back, I happened to have had the misfortune, as it then appeared, to advocate that the Bill be circulated for opinion. I was then reminded by that great Nationalist whose absence we all deplore, the late lamented Lala Lajpat Rai, that any delay in carrying forward this very necessary measure was—and he deliberately used the word—"a crime". If, Sir, according to the late lamented Lala Lajpat Rai my motion that the Bill as it was originally introduced be circulated for opinion was a crime, I submit that it is a greater crime today for my friends on these Benches to advocate that there should be avoidable delay in the further progress of this Bill.

Sir, I represent here in this House a constituency which is mainly interested in commerce and industry. My constituency has given me no mandate in connection with this Bill and whatever I say hereafter I propose to say in my personal capacity as a Hindu and as one who is interested in the further progress alike of Hindus and of all nationals living in India.

I am very much inclined, Sir, seriously to notice—I say it with all deference—the very eloquent appeal which my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, made to this House, and to follow up the few perorations with which his speech was punctuated. In fact I would make that the main theme of my remarks hereafter but for one word of my friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, which makes me feel that I should not notice him in my speech at all. Mr. Ghuznavi said—and it pained me at any rate to hear it—that he was a Mussalman first and an Indian afterwards. If that is confirmed, I propose to leave the Honourable Member to his opinions, and not to notice his views before this House any further. This House should have nothing to do with persons who say that they have a narrower outlook than what should be the outlook of an Indian as inhabiting this great land. We can at times understand a European, Sir, saying that, but I cannot understand a person born here, bred here, a person who must die here, saying that he is something higher than an Indian. I do hope, Sir, that my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, will think it right to revise his outlook hereafter.

I wish now, Sir, to say a word regarding the attitude that my Honourable friend, Mr. Shah Nawaz, has taken on this question. I have greatly admired the spirit, Sir, with which he has, as has been alleged, turned round. A strong man, Sir, will turn round and admit his mistake when facts and figures are put before him, and all honour to Mr. Shah Nawaz for having said (Applause) on the floor of this House that what he learnt on the Age of Consent Committee has made him change his previous opinion. We do not want persons in this House, Sir, who take up the attitude : "I said this at first (probably in ignorance); I stick to it because I refuse to be convinced". I do hope that the House will agree with me that the Honourable Member from the Punjab, Mr. Shah Nawaz, deserves extreme consideration for his close study of the subject and for the courage of conviction with which he is facing today his own fellow Members on the Central Muslim Benches.

Now, Sir, I propose to say a few words to my friend from Madras, Mr. Acharya (Hear, hear.) He, Sir, appears to me to have put forward the opinion of the orthodox Hindus in this House very ably, and with all the emphasis that he can. I admire him for his very able advocacy of the orthodox Hindu opinion. Before I proceed further, I wish however to express my regret that my friend should have been carried away in his enthusiasm for advocacy of orthodox opinion. He has deliberately chosen to criticise both the personnel and the very able Report of the Age of Consent Committee.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am sure I do not regret it.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : You may consider it a great punya (merit) and not regret it. Act according to your lights. I won't quarrel with you. But I, Sir, admire greatly the self-sacrifice and the devotion which the various Members of that Committee gave to that very difficult task (Applause.) Sir Moropant Joshi has worked hard and in earnestness to put before his countrymen a document which will carry weight and conviction (Hear, hear.), and I wish particularly to refer to those two good ladies who rendered such splendid work on that Committee. I particularly wish to name Mrs. Brijlal Nehru for whose anxiety to get at the orthodox opinion I can vouch and give an assurance to this House. Mrs. Brijlal Nehru accompanied me to one of the strongholds of orthodox opinion in Bombay especially to get at the opinions and sentiments of those who held views as strong as Mr. Acharya's. Let us have differences of opinion regarding this question, but, Sir, let us not be carried away so much as to overlook the services of these ladies ; and this is the first time that an Indian lady has taken upon herself to travel over the length and breadth of India to find out what is the plight of her sex in this matter. I wish to pay my tribute to all that she has done in this connection and I do hope that Government will always find for future Committees ladies of the capacity, sincerity and the will to work of Mrs. Brijlal Nehru. I am afraid I am not able to speak equally eloquently about the other lady on the Committee. It is due to my misfortune not to have known her, but I also couple her name with what I have said about Mrs. Brijlal Nehru.

Now, Sir, my friend Mr. Acharya and those for whom he spoke here take their stand on this. They do not say that it is good for young girls to be married under the age of 14. They do not say that it is to their benefit physically that they should be married early. All that I have heard them plead is that their religion and Shastras enjoin early marriage. I am a Hindu although I may not be as religious a Hindu as others are. But I do know this, that I have great faith in my Shastras because they enjoin nothing which I cannot reconcile with my common sense. I am not learned in the Shrutis or the Saṁhitās. I believe in and I have read a little of the Gita. I have the greatest veneration for it. But if Mr. Acharya tells me that the Hindu Shastras enjoin child marriage, though common sense tells me that it is bad for our daughters and grand-daughters, that it is playing havoc with their constitutions and is ruining the future hope of India, then I say that there is either something wrong with the scriptures that you are quoting to me, or you are misinterpreting the Shastras. Sir, Napoleon Bonaparte said : "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the land". Do you want your womanhood to get weaker and weaker from year to year and from generation to generation ? What is the good of asking me to abide by your Shastras when from year to year and generation to generation we find our womanhood going down and down steadily ? It needed no Miss Mayo to tell us that child marriage is bad for India. We knew it. All that I and many like me were waiting for was the day when the Government would take courage in both their hands and say, even though a hundred years after Lord William Bentinck said to himself about the stoppage of the Sati, that this practice is wrong and we will help you to stop it. It is now for this Assembly, consisting of the representatives of the people to say to the Government : "Bravo ! come and help us to carry this legislation through". Sir, if we were dealing with anything less sacred, less important, and less cherished than the future womanhood of India, I would have the patience even to reason with my friend and try to understand the Shastras. But knowing as I do from my personal knowledge how much we suffer owing to girls of 5, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years being married, who are not girls of families which are illiterate, but whose parents are cultured and are educated, under this one misguided, if I may say so, religious belief, I say, Hindu as I am, that I refuse to believe that the Shastras could be saying what you say they do. My common sense tells me that I must stand out for this measure. My only regret is that it was not introduced two years earlier than today.

Sir, this Honourable Member hails from Madras. Only four weeks ago I was travelling from Madras to Bombay and there is a station on the railway line called Tungbhadra which my friend cannot forget. At that station, when my train stopped, a Hindu lady came up and gave me this pamphlet containing a picture with the words, "Marriage or marriage". There is a small poem attached to it which summarising it says : "A Hindu father is giving his daughter, 12 years old, to a Sub-Judge 54 years old, and the Hindu father thinks that he is reserving some space for himself in heaven". (Cries of "Shame".) The poem ends by saying that it is only Santa the young girl of 12 who saw the vision in which she was clasping the hand of a skeleton. I present this to Mr. Acharya. This was not given to me by a non-Hindu. This was not given to me by a Christian Missionary. Sir, this was given to me by a Hindu lady, Shrimati Sumati Bai, B.A., L.T. Are we going to tolerate a day longer than we can help instances like these ? No religion can say that you should satisfy gods, for the purpose of reserving a place in heaven, by such practices. I can understand a religion saying that man should fast at certain intervals. We eat too much and it does us good to fast. I can understand a religion saying that you should observe the Ramzan, but I cannot conceive of a religion saying that you should marry your girls at the age of 11 or 12 especially so when there is enforced widowhood in a community.

Sir, we are told that the Hindu marriage is not a contract but it is a sacrament. I believe in it and I respect it. The day the Hindu looks upon marriage as a contract I will regret. But let us respect that sacrament, in every aspect and let those who give Kanya Dan, those who make Dan of their daughters whom they have brought up with loving care for 10 or 11 years, take every possible precaution that the risk of widowhood is avoided as far as possible. I will illustrate this by a few words. I was told by an esteemed friend who came on the orthodox deputation that there was a misunderstanding about the position of the Brahmin community of Madras. The Madras Brahmin says that, although he gets his daughter married at the age of 10 or 12, you are mistaken if you think that the marriage is consummated at that age. I ventured to ask that respected friend that if marriage did not mean consummation, how do we interfere with your custom if we say that you should not get your girls married until they are 14 years of age which you yourself, orthodox leaders, admit is about the correct minimum age when consummation should take place.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : We are agreeable to that.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Then support this Bill. I ask, Sir, why in these days of cholera, plague and a hundred and one other diseases, when a man's life, an Indian's life especially, is at a pretty low ebb, I ask why expose the dearest of your dearest in this world to the risk of widowhood for a day longer than you can help. Why not get the girls married at 14 which is about the time when you want them to enter the grahasthashram. We are told that the Shastras say that marriage must be pre-puberty. I say you must re-read the Shastras or if you cannot do that, you must find a way out of this. My point is that the Shastras cannot possibly say, expose your children to any risk more than you can help. To those amongst whom widow marriage is prohibited, I say that they should be grateful to this House if it enacts against the idea of marriage till after the age of 14.

One word more, Sir, and I have finished. It is exactly about a hundred years since the great Lord William Bentinck forced—there was no question then of taking the views of the people of India then—forced upon Indians the abolition of Sati. I am sure that if the opinion of Indians were then sought by that great Englishman, gentlemen like my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya in those days must have come forward and said that religion was in danger and that Government should not interfere with religion. (Honourable Members : "They did.") All the greater honour to Lord William Bentinck then. None today in this House ventures to say that Lord William Bentinck interfered with Hindu religion by abolishing Sati in 1829. Similarly if only we non-officials think less of our constituencies and do what our conscience dictates is right and what we think we owe to the womanhood of this land, then within a few months—and it will not take years—the House will be remembered with gratitude by India for the day when they took their courage in both their hands and fixed this very modest age as the minimum age at which girls may be married and not below that age.

Finally, I should like to ask my Honourable friend one question. Can he quote to me any other civilised country in the world, any other civilised, self-respecting set of people who think of marrying their daughters when they come out of their nursery and should be at school? Is it not too late in the day today when we men read Shakespeare, Bacon and what not, to think that you are committing a great act of punya (merit) by giving your daughters in marriage at 11 and 12? I say, Sir, that every side of the House and every set of people, Hindus, Muhammadans, Parsis, Jews and Christians, all will welcome this measure and ought to be anxious to see this put on the Statute-book.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : I rise whole-heartedly to support the Bill moved by my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda. As a medical man, with 35 years experience behind me, I consider that I have a better title to speak on this much needed reform than a school master like Mr. Acharya, however learned he may be in the Vedas and the Shastras.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I never quoted them here.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Sir, had women been present on the floor of this House to plead their own cause, I tremble to think what would have been the fate of Mr. Acharya (Laughter), or what reception Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi would have received at their hands for his ungallant reflections on their fashions. But, Sir, in the absence of those who are the real sufferers and are the party most vitally affected by the projected reform, the task of remedying the great evil of child marriage lies primarily with such of us Members as have felt and known the dangers and difficulties of the prevailing system; and I venture to say that I yield to none in my solicitude for the welfare, the development and social reform of India and in my knowledge of the question before the House.

Before I proceed to deal with the medical aspect of this question, I have one matter to which I must make reference. It refers to my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy. Mr. Neogy with an altogether admirable ingenuity has succeeded in stifling the voice of his conscience under the weight of a monumental edifice of a thousand pre-paid post cards. Ready to snatch at any straw in his desperate opposition to this Bill, he referred to a resolution that was passed at the all-India Medical Congress last December. He quoted the Editor of the Medical Review of Reviews.

The Editor of this paper is an orthodox Hindu and he has circulated a letter on which my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya has apparently pinned his faith. This Editor stated that that resolution was passed at the fag end of the day and in a thin House. I was present at that discussion, and as Executive Member of the all-India Medical Congress, I desire on the floor of this House to repudiate that statement. (Hear, hear.) Let me inform Mr. Neogy and this House that this resolution was discussed most fully by all the medical men and women who attended the Congress. True, there was an invitation to the delegates to attend Sir Jagadish Bose at his experiments, but that did not in any way interfere with the deliberation of the Congress which took place after that function, and was very fully attended. Mr. Neogy's ignorance of facts is proof, if proof were needed, of the apathy which exists in his province towards this much needed reform. The resolution was passed by a large gathering of medical men and women, and after a very prolonged discussion of the subject, and the criticism in the Medical Review of Reviews is a wholly distorted one. Not only that. Might I tell Mr. Neogy that Dr. Deshmukh, one of the most eminent medical men in Bombay, and who was the President of the all-India Medical Congress, has recently issued a notice to the Press supporting the Sarda Bill. Furthermore, does my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy realise that the entire medical profession, with few exceptions, men and women, official and non-official, numbering many thousands, who are daily witnesses to the miseries attendant on child birth, unanimously support this Bill?

Now, Sir, I wish to direct my attention to the Mover of this dilatory motion—Mr. Acharya. Mr. Acharya is an orthodox Hindu whose views are entitled to the greatest respect. He stated that this reform was necessary. But he went further and said that he was not satisfied with the facts and figures and that he wanted further facts, that he desired to postpone this measure so as to appeal to the country and to get further facts and figures. For him the evidence given before this House by my Honourable friend Dr. Hyder was not sufficient.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sham.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : For him the weighty evidence placed before the House by the Age of Consent Committee is inadequate—unconvincing. What does he as a school master know about the evidence? Has he read the Report? For me as a medical man, these statistics are the most convincing proofs of the necessity of this social reform. But it appears that my Honourable friend Mr. Archarya has read very carefully the circular issued by Dr. Sen Gupta on which he is pinning his faith and so he wants further facts and figures. I have gone carefully through Dr. Sen Gupta's report, and as a medical man, I can only describe the inferences and issues he has drawn on the back cover page as entirely unjustified and contrary to the evidence that was given before the Age of Consent Committee, and as a medical man I repudiate the bonâ fides of that circular. That circular has been issued to satisfy orthodoxy not a much needed social reform and peril.

Sir, Mr. Acharya wants further figures. If he is a true seeker of the truth and if his mind is open to conviction, I would invite him to pay a visit to the women's hospitals at Delhi,—one city will be quite enough for my purpose. He will there see rows of beds occupied by his own country women. He will see children between the ages of 11 and 13 who have either undergone Caesarian operation for child birth or are awaiting such operation.—young girls, stunted and ill-developed, who, instead of playing with toys and dolls, have been burdened with indecent haste, with the pains and dangers of motherhood. Does Mr. Acharya realise what a Caesarian operation means to a girl mother? Does he know that if any patient faces death, she does? And what about the issue of a child mother of 11 or 13? Sir, I go further and say that the total number of Caesarian operations done in Delhi is, I believe, more than the total number of such operations done in the whole of the hospitals in the United Kingdom put together. If that is not enough evidence for the opponents of this social reform, then I should allow Mr. Acharya and his friends to stew in the juice of their own stubborn prejudice. Mr. Acharya puts me in mind of a politician with 20th century ideas, demanding highly formed 20th century political institutions, but as far as social reform is concerned he lives in the 12th century. Has this House realised that, if Mr. Acharya's motion is carried, it will only be sending a message to Miss Mayo that she was right in all she said in her book? And there is no doubt she is supported by the Report of the Age of Consent Committee. As further evidence to convince the opponents of the Bill let me quote what Mrs. Brij Lal Nehru, a member of the Committee, says:

“ My heart aches at the thought of the sufferings of the girl wife. Our whole Report is a plea on behalf of these victims of blind custom and usage ”.

That is the view of one of the most intelligent Indian women today. If that does not appeal to the House, nothing will.

Then, Sir, one has only to refer to the statistics in the Age of Consent Committee's Report to find pages upon pages of monumental evidence, showing the opponents of this Bill the dangers and the death rate of both mother and child attendant upon child marriage, unparalleled in any other civilised country. And yet we have witnessed the sorry spectacle of two sons from Bengal, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt and Mr. Neogy, coming to this House to oppose this Bill. Fortunately for this House, we have only one Mr. Amar Nath Dutt and wisdom will not die with him. As for Mr. Neogy, I am surprised that, student of history that he is, he should have come here in the face of the Age of Consent Committee's Report to oppose this Bill. Has Mr. Neogy read the Age of Consent Committee's Report? If he had he would have noticed that Bengal, his Province, is the worst offender in child marriages. That its birth-rate is the lowest in India and that over 52 per cent. of its infantile mortality happens within one month of birth. A most damaging damnable evidence against Bengal.

It is all very well, Sir, for the opponents of this Bill to fall back on their religious precepts, but there is a world of difference between theory and practice, and whereas religious precepts are a question of faith—these figures are based on actual happenings, cold facts, of your women and your children dying by slavishly following what their religion demands—“ child marriages ”,—facts that even the most extreme opponents of this Bill cannot lightly brush aside.

In support of his dilatory motion Mr. Acharya quoted two speeches of the Honourable the Home Member, and he said that in his 1927 speech the Home Member asked for postponement to elicit further evidence, etc., that was on the Child Marriage Bill. The other speech referred to the postponement of another reform measure,—the Divorce Bill. But he forgot to mention that whereas one Bill referred to the making of marriages the other dealt with the breaking of marriages, two totally different considerations and quite different and inapplicable to Mr. Acharya's dilatory motion.

Might I in passing suggest to those who oppose this measure that India, with its centuries-old civilisation and culture, its religion and philosophy, worthy of our highest respect, has unfortunately hitherto shown a lamentable lack of material powers which have characterised the Western peoples; and if India is to take a place of honour amongst the other nations, she must pass this Bill, for the time has come for her to rejuvenate herself in the stream of living experience and to make a bid for a place of honour among the nations of the world. This Bill is but one of the many symptoms which we see around us of a growing national consciousness. And I think it is not a mere accident that two of the greatest living men in the country, Mahatma Gandhi and Pandit Motilal Nehru, have given their whole-hearted support to this measure. Nor is it a small victory for the new spirit that is abroad in the land that the Government should have departed from their usual attitude of neutrality in such delicate matters and declared themselves openly in favour of the Bill, as the Home Member did the other day in one of the most eloquent speeches we have heard in this House. I congratulate the Home Member on his excellent speech which came from deep conviction.

It was therefore, Sir, with great regret that I listened to the latter part of the speech of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. While he went out of his way to accord support to the principle of the Bill, he supported its postponement. The curious part of his speech was the mental agility he displayed, and which smaller people find it very difficult to follow, when he connected the plea of postponement with a wholesale condemnation of British rule in this country. We who have frequently had the pleasure of hearing the Honourable Pandit in many of his “ rolling periods ” have never ceased to wonder at the dexterity with which he is always able to drag in the plea of foreign domination (like King Charles' head) whenever the backwardness of India is in question. But never have we received a more instructive object lesson in the futility of that plea than in this connection. I yield to none in admiration of the great work the Pandit has done for his country but I beg of him to remember that he, as an enlightened man living in the 20th century and demanding the most advanced political institutions, would be guilty of inconsistency and a betrayal of the trust which the people repose in him if he accomplished the postponement of this measure even for three months. The Pandit's attitude puts me in mind of a politician suffering from a socio-political squint who has one eye fixed on the political aspect of the question and the other on the orthodox aspect, and between the two I fear he has lost his focus of central vision and so in his desire to satisfy orthodoxy is prepared to delay the passing of this Bill. For what are the facts? It is not the illiterate masses who are today resisting the passage of this Bill but the educated Members of this House representing various parts of the country, who forgetful of their high mission as custodians of the people are sacrificing their enlightened principles at the altar of obscurantism.

Reference has been made by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas to the outcry that followed legislation when Suttee was abolished a century ago. This raised a great outcry, but of the two evils Suttee or child marriage, the latter is the greater. Because in Suttee, the ignorant brave wife, in being burnt on the funeral pyre of her dead husband, meets with a sudden death whereas with child marriage, the child mother endures a life-long lingering misery of injured parts, ruined health and a slow painful death, outside the fact that child marriage is sapping the life of the nation.

Sir, we have heard enough of foreign domination from the opposite Benches ; but if there is one thing that cannot be placed at the door of foreign domination, it is the practice and the ill effects of child marriage, and it is absurd for any politician to attempt to lay this at the door of Government. To quote the words of Mr. Snowden, " It is ridiculous and grotesque ". I appeal to the opponents of this Bill to realise their sense of duty both to their women and country ; and as I do so my eyes naturally fall on Dr. Moonje whom I look upon as one of the few constructive politicians of this House. (Hear, hear). The work he is doing is one of great practical value and importance to India. It is not aerial politics of which we see so much in this House, but sound solid work that he is doing for the nation. Now, Dr. Moonje's aim and object—and he is straining every nerve to attain it—is to improve the physique of the youth of this country so that they will develop into healthy strong men capable of defending their own country and forming their own army. Dr. Moonje, I am sure, will not disagree with me when I refer to the large number of Indian youths who are rejected for the Army and for Sandhurst due to physical defects ; and I believe I am right in saying that Dr. Moonje's one idea is to remedy this state of physical deterioration by introducing a system of physical training which he demands must be taught in all Indian schools and colleges.

Mr. B. Das : What about physical starvation ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : That exists only in Bihar and Orissa from where my friend comes. Now, if India desires an army of well developed men and desires to defend herself effectively, her sons must be the issues of mothers who are well developed. How can you expect a child mother to produce a vigorous child such as the Indian Army will demand for her defence and to maintain her position among the rest of the nations of the world ? If India is desirous of taking her place amongst the other nations of the world, and if this House is convinced that the practice of child marriage is at the root of this physical deterioration of our rising generations there should be no hesitation in condemning it and passing this Bill. The mischief must be dealt with at its source and the first step must be to put an end to this " grave and corroding evil ", in the words of Sir James Crerar.

Before I sit down, Sir, I think I can best conclude by using the words that appeared on one of the placards displayed by Indian ladies we saw in front of the Assembly Chamber on the first day we discussed this measure. It is in those words I would ask the House, especially those who oppose this Bill, to remember that this Bill is moved, " in the interests of humanity and India's womanhood " and that it is " custom and not religion which is to blame for pre-puberty marriage " and its evil effects.

One word more and I have finished. Here is a measure of social reform for which enlightened India is crying out, but which orthodox India is trying to stop. Is India to lag behind the rest of the civilised world on the road of progress ? Can India reasonably demand Dominion status and yet cling to what orthodoxy demands in relation to child marriages ? In this House going to accept this dilatory motion ? If it does it will stand condemned in the eyes of the rest of the world. But if this Bill is passed—and I hope it will be—then the name of Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda will go down to posterity as one of India's greatest social reformers (Hear, hear), and the future generations of Indians, both men and women, will see and appreciate the fruits of the tree which Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda has planted in the garden of India's social reform, and his name will be praised and blest by one and all. (Applause.)

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muham-madan Urban) : Sir, at this fag end of the day I rise just to say a few words, as I do not wish to record a silent vote on an important question like this. My views are very well known and I do not think I am at all called upon to explain them to this House. But I wish to make a confession ; and that is this : that along with other Honourable Members of this House I have received numerous opinions and numerous representations, both for and against the Bill, and I confess that they both received the same treatment from me. Both have found a place of safety where they remain unread ; and why ? It seems to me, and it has seemed to me all these two years that this controversy has been raging, that it is the silliest possible question which any two men or two women can sit down to discuss seriously. When I see what I can by the use of my eyes, do I need to be told what the doctors think of it, what the Shastras say about it, or what the Smritis or Srutis lay down in regard to it ? I have seen the havoc that this custom plays every day of my life for the last 68 years. Do I need any further proof of the mischief that is being wrought by this wicked diabolical custom ? I confess, Sir, again that I have no patience to hear any arguments either for or against the Bill. I say that those who argue in favour of the Bill are wasting their time which they could occupy with something better, as a thing like this needs no argument. As for those who argue against the Bill, I credit them with having conscientious scruples as they call them and a genuine belief that there are religious injunctions in favour of the custom. To them, so far as I am concerned, my answer is this. I am not what is known as an orthodox Hindu, but I claim to be as good a Hindu as any other Hindu. I do not believe that there can be any injunction in the Shastras to countenance a fiendish custom like this, and I further say that, if there is such a sanction, the Shastras have no use for me, and I have no use for them. In that frame of mind, Honourable Members will now realise that it was unnecessary for me to pay any attention whatever either to the representations in favour or against this Bill. It may be said that I am prejudiced. Well, yes. If a life-time of observations means prejudice, I certainly am prejudiced. I have heard earnest appeals thrilling speeches in this House today—unfortunately I was not present during the previous debate on this measure—but while listening to these speeches today the wonder has grown upon me as to where was the necessity for these able men to make all these very learned speeches and all these very earnest appeals. It seems to me as if all the learned men in the world had put their heads together to prove that two and two make four. The practice is so obviously inhuman that anybody who calls himself a man would naturally be staggered at what he sees with his own eyes.

L8CPB(LA)

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

Now, Sir, I belong to a very small community of Kashmiri Brahmins.

They are very small in number ; they are about 5,000 all over India, barring Kashmir. During the last twenty years in that community, without the aid of any legislation, there has been a regular fight against this custom, until we have now reached the stage where marriages of girls are more frequent at the age of 20 than at the age of 15. I have always been of opinion that a reform of this character must be left to public opinion. Knowing what we in our small community have accomplished without legislation, on one occasion, I refused to move a similar social measure on that ground. I agree in the principle that social reform comes with better effect and quicker and with less opposition if it comes from within than if it is imposed from without. But when a measure like this is brought before this House, what is one to do. I mean no disrespect to my friend Mr. Sarada when I say that my first feeling was one of amusement at his Bill. I thought it was an attempt to gain cheap notoriety, and said to myself, "Here is a social reformer who wants legislation on a most obvious thing ; he comes to the Assembly to have a law against a custom which every school boy condemns." But when I see the reception which this measure has received from what is known as the orthodox community, I feel that my friend Mr. Sarada was quite right in bringing this measure before this House. But whether he was right or wrong, once the measure is before us, what is our plain duty ? That is the one question which Honourable Members have got to answer. What is our plain duty to ourselves, to our children and to our country ? I do not think, Sir, that that question admits of any answer except this, that this Bill must be passed with as little delay as possible. I need not remind the House that today the eyes of the whole world are upon this House. We are going through a test, which, if we successfully pass, will justify our claim to rank amongst the civilised nations of the world.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But you have got 14 as the minimum.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : And if we reject this minimum, I would ask my friend, the Deputy President, what would the world say ? These people have not got the courage to fix the marriageable age of girls even at 14. I ask that if this measure is not passed by this House, what will the world think of us ? If I were left to myself, I would fix the minimum age at 18 for girls and 24 for boys, but now that we have 14, I take it as the first step, and I say that if we do not accept that, we shall go into deeper depths of degradation than we can possibly imagine in the eyes of the other nations of the world.

Several Honourable Members : The question may now be put.

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The original motion was :

"That the Bill to regulate the marriages of children amongst Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

"That the consideration of the Bill be postponed in view of the late publication of the Report of the Age of Consent Committee, and in view of the desirability of assessing, with the help of adequate evidence, the real value of that portion of the Report which deals with the marriage laws and customs obtaining among Indian communities."

The question is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is that clause 2 stand part of the Bill.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, May I move the amendments that stand in my name ?

Mr. President : Which amendments ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : My amendments on clause 2.

Mr. President : I think Mr. Sesha Ayyangar has got an amendment to clause 2.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I have got amendment also, Sir. If it is the desire of the House that we should go into a detailed discussion of the clauses today—I should thank you for giving me this opportunity—may I proceed, Sir ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to move his amendment.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I was just about to say that, in sending up the two amendments printed as No. 15 and No. 24 standing in my name, my intention was....

Mr. President : Which amendment does the Honourable Member move ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am moving the first, namely No. 15 and referring to the other, namely No. 24, because the two go together. And my idea was that, although I should move them separately for the purposes of debate and for the purposes of being voted upon, yet I should explain them together, in order if possible to offer in my own humble way some constructive suggestions to make the proposed legislation more efficient. I am anxious, Sir, at this stage to say nothing which will generate heat or which will give vent to any controversial remarks. In fact, I am as serious as anybody else in this House or elsewhere that we should do everything in our power to remove evils which are well-defined and well ascertained by methods that are safe and sound ; and therefore, Sir, I feel that I should express my great regret that some remarks which I made at an earlier stage of this debate, some of them at least, have been misunderstood and an intention was ascribed to me, repeatedly ascribed to me, I was told that I wanted to wreck the Bill. Such is not my intention. (An Honourable Member rose to make an interruption.) I am sorry I gave my hysterical friend over there cause....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member come to the amendment ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : The amendment, Sir, is this. I propose :

"That for sub-clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill the following be substituted :

" 'child' means a person who, if a male, is under twenty years of age, and if a female, is under fifteen years of age '."

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

I formally move it, Sir. I may explain, and I think it is my duty to explain, how I have come to this conclusion. I desire to crave the indulgence of the House to put my case clearly, because on this and on the other amendment to the next sub-clause depends my whole case, so if I can take the House with me and if I can succeed in getting these two amendments accepted, I venture to believe that all of us will feel glad that we have carried a piece of legislation through, for which we may well be entitled to the thanks of posterity. As I said, I would beg of my friends not to side-trick me by interrupting me in the course of my trying to make myself clear. I am at a great disadvantage. I am not a gifted eloquent speaker; I am not a persona grata in the House; and so, in the discharge of my duty, I must crave the indulgence of the House.

You may ask me how I have come to twenty and fifteen years. Well, Sir, I think that, in a matter like this, we should try to be guided by what we consider to be fairly reliable authorities. I am sure I can say with confidence that I have not in this House either dared or cared to quote what all the Smrithis say, or "Simitries" as my Honourable friend over there called them. In fact, I have held that this is not the place where we can discuss them; and in the case of Mussalmans also I do not think this is the place where the Islamic law should be discussed. Therefore, for myself, if I have tried to make any suggestions as I am now trying to make—I am trying to take my stand not on the Srutis or the Smrithis, not on the Dharmasastras or other olden books, but I am trying to take my stand upon something which would appeal better to this House, upon scientific investigations, not simply upon the report of this House or of that meeting, not upon the resolutions of conferences, nor upon telegraphic messages sent to us, not even upon the hasty resolutions of this Provincial Legislature or that Legislature. Sir, this is a matter most vitally affecting the future generations of this country, so I am taking medical opinion on the subject; and I can assure my Honourable friend, Colonel Gidney, that I have been trying to get as many statistics as possible from medical people. I have been trying, ever since I supported the Rai Sahib's Bill two years ago, to read more and more, to study carefully the opinions of psychologists, of those who have written on sex psychology, on sex biology, on the relationships between the sexes, not from the standpoint of the Koran, not from the standpoint of the Hindu Shastras, but of the investigations, scientific investigations that have been carried out....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member was given the fullest latitude when he moved his amendment on the main motion. He must now speak to the present amendment only.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : How can I explain myself unless I....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not relevant. He is not speaking to his amendment.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am trying to show how fifteen and twenty years are respectively....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must be strictly relevant to the amendment which he has moved.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am endeavouring, to the best of my ability, to show how, so far as I am able to make out, fifteen for and twenty for the boy will be....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has not said a word in favour of his amendment. The Honourable Member must strictly himself to the amendment which he has moved.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am just trying to place before you, House why I am for putting at 15 and why I am for putting at ages for marriage consummation and unless you have a little patience I am putting my arguments....

Mr. President : I have enough patience. The Honourable Member knows that I allowed him one hour and a half and more when he moved his main amendment, and I am not going to allow Honourable Member to speak at length on these amendments. They must confine themselves strictly to the amendments.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, these are my points. I am sorry they should be hard on me, but I submit to your ruling. I will try to say that psychology, physiology, biology, eugenics, all these sciences, all the scientific conclusions of those who have investigated these lines, are leading me to the conclusion that the proper marriage for a girl, the proper minimum age for consummation is 15, and the proper minimum age is 20 for the boy. I do not make statements of my own; and I am anxious to place before the authorities on which I rely, namely, the psychological, physiological and other scientific authorities. As I said, I have been reading a number of the latest scientific books; and I thought that in such an important matter like this, it is my duty to place before the House the opinions and authorities....

Mr. President : The only point that is relevant is why the age should not be fourteen but that it should be fifteen. Anything that the Honourable Member says in favour of that will be relevant.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : That is exactly what I am trying to say to you, namely, that not only in my own opinion....

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member thinks that I will waste the public time to be wasted, he is very much mistaken. I had allowed the Honourable Member one hour and a half in moving his amendment, and I must restrict him to his amendment now. (Honourable Members : "Hear, hear.")

Mr. M. K. Acharya : If you want me to sit down I am ready to sit down....

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member has nothing to say, he may resume his seat.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : No; I do not want to inflict myself on the House and yet as a humble Member of this House I am entitled to protest. If you want me to sit down, I am ready to sit down; I am at your disposal. I am trying to adjust, at a moment's notice, all my thoughts and materials that I have gathered, and that I want to place before the scientific authorities in support of my contention. Probably, if I am taken again next day, I may rearrange my materials and put what will be the consequences. After recognising this principle which causes a hardship on the constitution of the girl, it must be admitted that a protection is necessary and that protection must be given by making the action penal.

Another point which can be argued on behalf of making this a penal law is this that, when the age of consent outside marital relations is 14 years, under the Indian Penal Code, the husband should not be allowed to have sexual intercourse with his wife who is below the age of 14. This protection was sought to be given by other kind of interference or in some other way, as was originally suggested by the Honourable Mover of this Bill, but it was deemed to be undesirable. But the same effect is being created by punishing the parents in other ways, and the age is indirectly raised to the same age as it would be for extra-marital relations.

Now, Sir, in the case of a girl, there are certain ways which the medical jurisprudence provides for finding out whether the girl has been raped or not. If the sexual intercourse has been had with a girl of less than 14 years of age, it can easily be found out. If, however, the rape has been committed by the husband, he cannot be punished but only the parents of the girl are liable to be punished. These were the two principles which led to this conclusion that this action should be penalised. But in the case of the boy I find that you have got no law whatsoever which can prohibit him, if he is less than 18 years of age, from having sexual intercourse with any woman above 14 years of age. When you cannot stop him from doing that unlawfully, why should you have a penalising section put in this Bill to punish the parents for allowing him to do the same thing lawfully which you cannot stop him from doing unlawfully? In the case of a girl, you stop her if she is less than 14 years of age from having sexual intercourse with any man, and the man is to be punished for rape. But in the case of a boy of less than 18 years of age, if he goes to a certain public woman, you cannot stop him. This action will be much more injurious than allowing him to do the same thing lawfully which he is not stopped from doing unlawfully. It may be a desirable thing that no boy should get married before he attains the age of 18; it may be a very laudable object. There are many other laudable things, as for instance, stopping drinking in excess. That is supposed to be a bad thing; but we cannot stop it. If people choose to drink we cannot stop them. It may be morally as bad as visiting women unlawfully. But you are not punishing this. The same may be said about prostitution, which is supposed to be very bad because it has got very bad moral effects, but you are not stopping it by legislation. You are not penalising it. My objection to penalising the marriage of a boy below 18 years of age is only on this ground that he can do the same thing unlawfully and you cannot stop him from doing unlawfully the same action if he so desires. It may be very desirable that he should be advised, for his own sake, not to do that, but you punish the guardians if they stop him from doing something which they consider to be wrong. No jurist in his senses can make an action an offence which he cannot stop in other ways because the man is forced by nature to do it. The same objection has risen from my friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi, and the same line has been adopted by certain Ulemas about this Bill, namely, that this Bill takes away the liberty of action of a boy who is capable of understanding certain things. You take away his liberty and you encourage him to do a sinful act. Nothing can be against the religion which does not encourage a man to do a sinful act, and it is considered to be a sinful act if a man has a sexual intercourse with a woman who is not his wife. Now, if a boy cannot control himself, then you encourage him to do unlawful things, which means that you encourage a sin, and anything which encourages a sin is really irreligious. That has been the objection raised by the Mussalmans and the Muslim Ulemas, that encouragement of an action which might lead to the committing of a sin should not be passed by this Legislature. I should like to quote on behalf of this plea, the words of Ameer Ali and of the Ulemas and the Imams from the Abbaside time right up to now. They are all unanimous on this point that the age of puberty is reached after the completion of the age of 15 years both in the case of a boy and a girl. When a boy attains the age of puberty after the completion of the fifteenth year, no father or the Sovereign can stop him from contracting a valid marriage, because his natural desire cannot be stopped and no legislation can come in his way if he feels it a necessity to have recourse to sexual intercourse, and by stopping him lawfully in that action, it encourages him indirectly to do it unlawfully. Ameer Ali has described it in the following terms:

"Among the Hanafis and the Shias, the children are emancipated from the right of Jabar on attaining puberty. An abuse of the paternal authority among the followers of these two sects is impossible where the children are adult and discreet. Should a father persist in refusing his consent to the marriage of his adult daughter, she can validly enter herself into a contract of marriage even against his will and without his consent. Nor can the father indefinitely abuse his authority by systematically refusing his consent to the marriage of his child. Such cases are necessarily rare, Islamic law being opposed to monasticism or celibacy."

Now, Sir, this commentary refers not only to the case of boys, but even to the case of girls. A girl can contract a marriage against the will of her father, if her father refuses to allow her to get married after she attains puberty, because in Islam there is freedom of action given once a man has attained the age of discretion, that is, has attained puberty. As soon as he has got an inclination for an action and the consequences of which he can understand, then putting any stop to that or penalising him from doing that act, will be against the principles of the laws of all civilised nations. It is not at all civilisation. My Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah might say that it would be very desirable that the girl should be protected before she attains the age of 14. But may I ask him, is it civilisation to put a restraint on the freedom of action of a boy at the age when he has attained puberty? You are talking about freedom in all things, and at the same time you want to impose restriction on the freedom of action of a boy who, in the natural course, wants to enjoy his own rights. Will that be consistent with the progressive ideas of a nation? It will not be consistent with any law of any progressive nation in the world. Islamic law, when it progressed to its zenith, gave entire freedom of action. Islam did not want to put a stop to any natural desire of a boy. It did not want to stop the promptings or inclinations which nature has provided a boy with. That is my second objection to this. Although I know that there will be very few cases, very rare cases, when a boy below 18 will get married, yet even in those cases to penalise the boy will be inconceivable to any jurist. I will give you one example by which you can

before you in the space of ten or fifteen minutes. (A Voice : " And all your authorities ? ")

I am sorry I made the mistake of reading very many books by scientific authorities. If you want to restrict me in this way, I am at your mercy. In justice to my cause I want to convince my colleagues, as it is my duty to try to convince them....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member speak to the amendment ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Firstly, the question as to when a girl becomes fit to be married or when a boy becomes fit to be a husband is in my humble opinion a matter for scientific investigation. Now a number of scientific investigators have made this clear, that there are two natural ages before we come to what we call the legal age of marriage. There is the psychological age of desire and also the biological age of fitness. When we want to deal with this question of the age of marriage, we have to take into account the fact that marriage is an aspect of life which is partly psychological, partly physiological, partly biological and partly ethical.

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member say why he thinks the age should be 15 and not 14 ? I have not heard him say one word on this subject.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am coming to that, Sir. When we consider the psychological age and the biological age, we come to this conclusion, namely that 15 is the better age so far as marriage in the sense of consummation is concerned.

Mr. President : I now inform the Assembly that Mr. Acharya is persisting in irrelevance.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I do not hear you, Sir.

Mr. President : I have drawn the attention of the Assembly to the fact that the Honourable Member is irrelevant and persists in irrelevancy.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am sorry to hear that remark. If the Chair does not want to hear me I shall sit down.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member withdraw his remarks ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Yes, I withdraw them. I am entirely in your hands. I shall proceed or sit down just as you command me.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : I am not quite sure if the Honourable Member has clearly understood the purport of your observation, when you called the attention of the House to his persistence in irrelevance. Perhaps the Honourable Member will understand the matter more fully if he realises that the Honourable the President has got the power, under rule 16, to call upon a Member to resume his seat if he fails to act up to the observations of the Chair. I think the House and the Chair have been very patient to the Honourable Member, and I trust that, after the admonition which you have just given him, he will act upon it.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am sorry if I said anything which was inconsistent with the decorum of the House. I am the last man to say anything of that kind. I greatly deplore it. I was trying to make out that this point of minimum age of marriage is to be determined by what happens to be fairly well recognised and accepted rules of the science of physiology. Now, when a girl and a boy are brought together into the marital union, it means that it will affect their whole course of life, not only physically, but physiologically and biologically. Therefore we have to realise what the proper period for the girls and the boys will be when they will be physically and mentally well developed in order to produce results in life, which will be to the best advantage of them both individually and also of the community at large. That is a question which a Legislature will have to determine if it is to fix upon any minimum age. It is not a question of how many say the age should be 11 or 12 or 13 or 14. I was trying to find out what explanation the Select Committee gave for fixing the age at 14, but I am sorry I did not get much information on that point. Therefore the House is not in a position to know how the Select Committee arrived at the conclusion that 14 is the proper age.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member explain why the age should be 15 ? He has not said one word on that so far.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I wish to point out that the Select Committee has not given any reason why they consider 14 as a very good age.

Mr. President : Therefore it should be 15 ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Because I think 15 is a better age. In the absence of any definite reasons on behalf of 14, I prefer 15. I consider the weight of medical evidence and physiological evidence and biological evidence is in favour of 15. I would prefer 15 to 14. That is exactly my argument. My humble research leads me to that conclusion, because it is admitted on all hands that in India a girl attains her puberty some time between 12 and 13 or between 13 and 14. The Age of Consent Committee, in an Appendix to their Report, deal with this question of the age of puberty in India. They admit that there is a consensus of opinion that puberty in India is between 13 and 14. Then naturally you will want some time to elapse before the girl becomes quite fit to take up the responsible duties of a wife. If 14 is the age of puberty or the age of the first appearance of menstruation, then naturally one year at least will have to elapse before the girl is declared to be fit, before her parents could send her over to her husband in order that she may be the wife of the husband and the chief member of his household. There is also a lot of evidence to show that immediately after puberty a girl is not fit to have consummation celebrated, and it is best that consummation is postponed for some time. That also is what obtains in a large part of the Madras Presidency with which I am conversant. A girl generally after puberty is kept in her father's home for at least one year. She is sometimes kept for two years, but never for less than six months. If the girl attains puberty by 13 or 14, then she will require another year before she can enter upon her duties in her new home and in course of time become the mother of children. Therefore, Sir, a certain period, 14, is too low. The parents are anxious to give a girl away to one whom they consider to be a very desirable match, and naturally they will be tempted to get the girl married as soon as she is 14 so as not to transgress the law. On the other hand if fifteen, which I consider the right age, is adopted as the minimum age for consummation, then parents will have a longer time, and I for one should have thought that there was not going to be any great opposition from those conversant with scientific, physiological and biological reasons (Laughter).....

Mr. President : Order, order. I have ruled more than once that speeches on these amendments must not be long. I had given sufficient indulgence to the Honourable Member when he moved his main amendment, and I would now ask him to conclude his observations.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I move the amendment that stands in my name, with this humble protest that I have not been given a fair chance.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member withdraw those remarks ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : If you want it, I will withdraw.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must be respectful to the Chair. What does he mean by saying, "If you want it, I will withdraw" ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : If I am not allowed.....

(Cries of "Order, order.")

Mr. President : Order, order. Will the Honourable Member unconditionally withdraw the words he has used, without any comment ? Is the Honourable Member prepared to withdraw them ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Yes, Sir, I withdraw those words. (Applause.)

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment moved by the Honourable Mr. Acharya. It is difficult to take him seriously, Sir, when he moves this amendment. (Applause.) All the time he has been insisting, on pre-puberty marriages, and fifteen years is certainly a post-puberty age, not a pre-puberty age. Moreover, when in amendment No. 28 he proposes that "the solemnisation of marriage, as distinct from consummation, of any girl below fourteen years of age, shall not be deemed to be child marriage as defined above", I do not think this amendment is consistent with that and I cannot take him seriously. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Am I in order, Sir, to move amendment No. 18 standing in my name ?

Mr. President : No. This amendment must be disposed of.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, I entirely associate myself with the remarks which have fallen from the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill. I do not think that this amendment should be accepted as I consider that for us to follow the provisions in the Bill would be the wiser course.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That for sub-clause (a) of clause 2 of the Bill the following be substituted :
" 'child' means a person who, if a male, is under twenty years of age, and if a female, is under fifteen years of age."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, I move the amendments which stand in my name on Nos. 16 and 17 jointly.

Mr. President : One by one, please.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, it will have no meaning, I think, if I do not include them jointly. If the first is not carried, then I will not move the second.....

Mr. President : I would advise the Honourable Member to move his first amendment. If that is carried, he might move his second amendment ; otherwise he might drop it.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, I move :

"That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill the words 'a person who, if a male, is under eighteen years of age, and if' be omitted."

The object, Sir, of my moving this amendment is that a child would mean a female under fourteen years of age. This will be the effect of my amendment if it is carried. My object, Sir, is solely to be guided by the principles of criminal law. I have listened to many speeches and I have not heard a single Member here in this House advocating the necessity for fixing any particular age for the marriage of boys. All the speakers have referred in their speeches to their great desire to protect girls below the age of fourteen. All Members here are united on that point, but no case has been made out by any Member for the necessity for protection in so far as boys are concerned ; and neither has it been pointed out that there is any evil at present existing in this country which requires a penal law to be enacted in order to protect boys from getting married below the age of eighteen. Is there any justification, Sir, for punishing the parent of a boy if he marries him when he is below the age of eighteen ? It may be a very desirable thing and a good case may be made out that no boy should get married before he attains the age of eighteen, but no justification can be shown that the boy's parents should be punished if the boy is married when he is below the age of eighteen. In fact, amongst educated classes, a boy never gets married until he leaves the school or until after he finishes his studies. But this question whether one thing is desirable or not is totally different from the question whether it should be made penal if in an exceptional case a boy gets married below the age of eighteen. In England, Sir, the age limit for the boy is fourteen years. (An Honourable Member : "That has been revised".) (Another Honourable Member : "It is sixteen years".) Now, Sir, here the point is that at present it may be desirable to punish the parents of girls on two principles. The first principle is, as has been pointed out by all speakers in this House, that it causes cruelty and hardship to the girl if she is allowed to live with her husband before she is fourteen as a wife, and it is said to be very undesirable that she should become a mother before attaining the age of fourteen because that would tell on her constitution, and because any children born would be weak. It is said that protection is required in the case of the girl who has got no will-power, and therefore it is sought to penalise the action of the parents because they should not exercise their power and influence on a child of less than fourteen years to make her go and live with a young man as his wife, and in this way inflict injury on her person. Therefore, it is deemed to be desirable to punish this act of the parents or the guardians who give away their daughters, who cannot speak in their own case whether they like to live as wives of a particular individual or not. In India the custom is that the girl has got no voice in the matter of her marriage and when she is below 14 years she does not understand whether she is going to live as a wife and judge whether it will cause hardship upon these boys or not. Supposing there is a Muslim boy or a Hindu boy who has attained 17 years of age, and who is very wealthy and who has attained puberty. Supposing he is so minded as to get himself married to a girl of 16 years of age. Supposing this boy, who desires to get himself married has no father but only his mother as his guardian, who is a pardanishin woman. Can she refuse to give permission to the boy to get himself married? If the boy persists in getting himself married, the mother at the worst may not say anything either for or against the marriage and may keep quiet. Supposing a kazi or a Brahmin priest officiates at the ceremony of marriage. Can you punish the kazi or the priest for having officiated at the marriage ceremony, simply because the boy persisted in getting himself married? You are not punishing the boy by this Bill, you are only punishing the parents of the boy or the people who joined in performing that ceremony.

Now, Sir, I will give you another example. Take the instance of that same boy of 17 years of age. He starts squandering his money and he gets into bad society and he starts visiting public women where there is the danger of his, not only squandering money, but also contracting some disease so that his health will be undermined. The mother, finding out that the boy is ruining himself and that he requires some protection and that he cannot be stopped in his actions of committing these unlawful things except by getting him married, so that he can be weaned away from bad society by the influence of his wife, wants to get the boy married to save him both monetarily and constitutionally. If this mother, finding out that this is the only solution left, advises that this boy should be married to stop him from ruination, then do you think of punishing the mother simply because she is trying to save her son, his constitution and property? You cannot punish a parda lady because she has no opportunity of coming out among the public and controlling her son. You should not inflict a punishment in these rare cases which might come before the courts.

Now, I will cite another instance.

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to proceed in that way. I cannot allow him to go on citing instances. The Honourable Member knows that I have already ruled that the speeches on amendments should be brief. The Honourable Member has really taken half an hour. The Honourable Member must conclude his speech now.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I will try to finish soon. This is not an amendment which I have moved at random ; this is an important amendment.

Mr. President : That is why I allowed the Honourable Member great latitude till now.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : There is a conflict of opinion on this point. I have to deal at length and bring round a lot of people to appreciate my view-point. If this amendment is accepted, it will remove a great portion of the objections against this Bill. That is why it is necessary for me to make those Honourable Members understand who have not given their full thought to this question. I, as is my nature, have not gone about to canvass votes for my amendment. I have not tried to get at Honourable Members in private, and so this is my only opportunity to convince them about the reasonableness of my amendment. As I was submitting, Sir, in these rare cases, there will be real hardship caused to the poor mothers. It is desirable not to make this an offence and penalise it. If there is any other method by which we can stop the marriage of a boy below 18 years of age, it would be acceptable to me. But I cannot for a moment think of making it penal and punishing the parents of the boy for doing a thing which he cannot be stopped from doing by the Legislature or by the Government by enacting this Bill. I am therefore opposed to the inclusion of boys in this Bill.

When my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah was speaking I had an exchange of words with him. He said that the age of puberty for a girl was 14 years. I was asserting that the consensus of opinion of all Muhammadan doctors of law has been unanimous that it was on the completion of the age of 15. It is after that, that a girl might become independent according to Islamic law. As soon as they attain the age of puberty, that is after the completion of the 15th year, nobody is responsible for their actions except themselves, and nobody, no State, no father or mother could interfere in their actions. On account of these two great objections, and as I find that the time of the House is very limited, I will not dilate more on this. I hope I have made it clear that there are many other instances which I could quote, and by which I could illustrate my objections to the boys being included in this case. But as I have no time, I will not give those illustrations and will confine myself to what I have said.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Sir, I oppose this amendment. The object of the mover of this amendment is to define a child as a female under 14 years of age. Sir, this is a Child Marriage Bill, and both males and females under a certain age are children. The Bill provides for the marriage of both male and female children, and consequently it is necessary that the Bill should define a male child as well as a female child whose marriages below a certain age would be penal.

The Honourable Mover said that he had heard many speeches and they were on the question of protection of females but that he had not heard anybody say anything about fixing the age of the boy who is to be married, and that no reasons had been given why 18 should be fixed or that any age at all should be fixed so far as marriages of boys are concerned. Sir, if he had read the Statement of Objects and Reasons which I attached to my Bill he would have found that I had stated therein that :

“ The second object of the Bill by laying down the minimum marriageable age of boys and girls is to prevent, so far as may be, their physical and moral deterioration by removing the principal obstacle to their physical and mental development ”.

There is thus a reason why it is necessary to fix the minimum age for the marriage of a boy also, and that reason is :

“ so far as possible, to prevent his physical and moral deterioration by removing the principal obstacle to his physical and mental development ”.

The Mover said, Sir, that amongst the Mussalmans, the boy is at liberty to marry after reaching 15 years of age. I have only to say that fixing a minimum marriageable age does not contravene any provision of Muslim law. Muslim law does not enjoin anywhere that a boy, as soon as he reaches the age of 15, should be married.

Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : Sir, may I request you to adjourn the House to allow Muhammadan Members to say their prayers ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : And there is a rule that the Assembly will sit from 11 to 5.

Mr. President : Sir James Crerar.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, I have something to say on this amendment, and I regret very much to find myself in, I hope temporary, disagreement, with my learned friend Mr. Yamin Khan. It is true that, though he himself recognises that the case of the female child under the system of child marriage is the most serious and demands remedy, I do not think, as the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill, observed, that the Honourable Member was correct in saying that no one had ever made any demand for the similar fixation of age in the case of a boy. Indeed those who have read some of the voluminous literature on the subject, cannot fail to observe that very much emphasis has been laid on the fact,—and I have no doubt coming from those who are familiar with the facts, with a great deal of cogency,—that the marriage of boys when they ought to be devoting all their energies to education or learning a trade for their life work, constitutes a severe handicap. And though the grounds of physical deterioration may not be quite so acute or so direct as in the case of the girl, they are in the total result a very great injury to the national life. I do not dispute the instances which my Honourable friend quoted of hardship, though I think perhaps what he referred to as grave hardship might perhaps be more properly called some temporary and individual inconvenience. Taking the question, however, in the sum of its national significance, I have little hesitation myself in holding that those who press for limitation of the age on the boy partner to a marriage are acting on sound lines.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill the words ‘ a person who, if a male, is under eighteen years of age, and if ’ be omitted.”

On Mr. President declaring that the “ Noes ” had it, a division was called for by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.

Mr. President : I think the division is frivolously called for and I must disallow it.

The motion was negatived.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 12th September, 1929.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 12th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CONDITIONS OF EDUCATION IN AJMER-MERWARA.

428. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that a Committee—Primary Education Committee—appointed by the Government of India visited Ajmer to inquire into the conditions of education in Ajmer-Marwara ?

(b) Is it also a fact that nearly all the Muslim witnesses gave evidence that the Education Department of Ajmer-Merwara is predominated by Hindu spirit ?

(c) Is it a fact that, although the court language in Ajmer-Merwara is Urdu yet systematic efforts have been and are being made by the Education Department to train teachers in the Normal School in Hindi as their first language ?

(d) Will Government please say if they issued instructions to the Education Department to teach Hindi as first language in preference to Urdu ? If so, when ; if not, why is importance attached to Hindi and why is Urdu neglected ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) The Committee has not yet reported to Government.

(c) and (d). Inquiries are being made and the information asked for will be furnished to the Honourable Member later.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Is it not a fact that both Hindi and Urdu are court languages in Ajmer-Merwara, and that complaints and petitions written in Hindi and filed in the Courts are accepted just as those written in Urdu ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I should not like to give an authoritative reply to my Honourable friend's question ; but I believe the facts are as he states.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Is it not a fact that the Normal School has been in existence in Ajmer for the last fifty years, and that Hindi has always been the first language taught in it ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I cannot tell the Honourable Member how long the Normal School has been in existence, but it has been in existence for a considerable time, and I believe it is a fact that Hindi is the first language taught in it.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Is it not a fact that in the primary schools in Ajmer-Merwara, Hindi has been the first language taught in the district ever since the British Government established the public school system of education in Ajmer-Merwara ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should give notice of such questions.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : What is meant by the words "Hindu spirit" in part (b) of the question to which an answer has been given by the Honourable Member ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I think that that question might be more fitly put to the Honourable Member who asked the original question. My reply has been that the Committee has not yet reported to Government.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : The question put is that the Department is "predominated by Hindu spirit". The Honourable Member must have understood its meaning before replying to it. I should therefore like to know what is meant by it and what the Honourable Member understood by it. That is why I am asking this question : does it mean that educationally competent men are not to be taken on the Committee if they happen to be Hindus and not Muslims ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The original question was "Is it also a fact that nearly all the Muslim witnesses gave evidence that the Education Department of Ajmer-Merwara is predominated by Hindu spirit ?" I am obviously not in a position to reply to that until I have seen the evidence of the Muslim witnesses : that has not yet been received by Government.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Honourable Member take the trouble to read the evidence and draw his conclusions from that ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I shall study the evidence very carefully in due course.

ANTI-ISLAMIC LITERATURE IN THE LIBRARY OF THE NORMAL SCHOOL, AJMER.

429. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that during the examination of Mirza Abdul Qadir Beg, M.A., LL.B., Pleader, Ajmer, by the Primary Education Committee, it transpired that the library of the Normal School which is an institution maintained by Government from public revenues, is full of anti-Islamic literature ?

(b) Is it a fact that the following books were found in the said library :—

- (1) "Allah Miyan ke Hathkande",
- (2) "Quran ka pol",
- (3) "Rasool ki pothi" ?

(c) Is it a fact that such anti-Islamic literature in the library of a Government institution was purchased from public revenues ?

(d) Will Government please state who purchased such books and which officer sanctioned the purchase of such books and who passed the purchase bill for payment ?

(e) Will Government please state whether they propose to take action against the educational officers who purchased such books ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The library certainly had some literature of a propagandist character.

(b) Of the books mentioned, the only one produced was entitled "Allah Miyan ke Hathkande". Nothing is known about the other two books mentioned, but inquiries are being made.

(c) and (d). Inquiries are being made.

(e) This will be considered when the inquiries have been completed.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is that first book proscribed, may I know ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I cannot say.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Is it also a fact that "Mother India", containing an attack on the Hindu religion and customs, was placed in the library during the time of the late Muslim Headmaster, who is now under suspension ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I do not know, but I shall be glad to make inquiries in connection with the other inquiries that are being made.

PROMOTION OF MUNSHI GAYA PRASAD, DEPUTY INSPECTOR OF SCHOOLS, AJMER-MERWARA.

430. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that Munshi Gaya Prasad, the Deputy Inspector of Schools, Ajmer-Merwara, has recently been promoted to the grade of Rs. 150—200 ?

(b) Is it a fact that this grade now held by this official did not exist, but a lower grade was raised for him specially and he was appointed to it ?

(c) Is it a fact that this official is merely a vernacular middle-trained man and does not know English at all ?

(d) Will Government please state how many non-gazetted posts of Rs. 200 or over are there in the Education Department of Ajmer-Merwara to which trained graduates in the Ajmer-Merwara cadre can aspire ?

(e) Will Government please state what is the number of trained graduates holding posts in the Education Department of Ajmer-Merwara with salaries below Rs. 150—200 ?

(f) Is it a fact that this Munshi Gaya Prasad, Deputy Inspector of Schools, is the same official about whom an interpellation was made in the Assembly in 1926 when he was a Sub-Deputy Inspector ?

(g) Is it also a fact that the Government's answer was that there was no proposal to give him a higher grade ?

(h) Will Government please state the grounds on which there was no proposal in 1926 to raise Munshi Gaya Prasad's grade and the grounds which necessitated the raising of his grade in 1928 ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No ; the new grade is Rs. 100—10—200.

(b) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative and to the second in the negative. For administrative reasons the pay of the post was revised.

(c) and (f). Yes.

L9CPB(LA)

(e) Nine.

(g) The question asked in 1926 was whether it was proposed to promote him to a higher post carrying a monthly pay of Rs. 600, and the answer was in the negative.

(h) Please see replies to (b) and (g).

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Is it a fact that the Primary Education Committee, when it went to Ajmer-Merwara and inspected the schools throughout the district, found Mr. Gaya Prasad a most competent officer ?

(No answer was given.)

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST MUNSHI GAYA PRASAD WHEN IN CHARGE OF THE CENTRAL GIRLS' SCHOOL, AJMER.

431. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that about ten years ago, when Mr. Miller was Inspector of Schools in Ajmer-Merwara, the charge of the Central Girls School, Ajmer, was taken away from the said Munshi Gaya Prasad ?

(b) Is it a fact that this charge of the Girls' School was taken away by the special order of Colonel Patterson, the then Director of Public Instruction and Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara ?

(c) Is it a fact that the order of Colonel Patterson for taking away this charge was the result of his personal visit to the Girls' School with Mr. Miller for inquiry into certain allegations made against the conduct of this official in his dealings with the Girls' School ? If so, will Government please state what was the nature of those allegations ?

(d) Is it a fact that the said Munshi Gaya Prasad, Deputy Inspector of Schools, is under the direct control of Mr. P. B. Joshi, Assistant Superintendent of Education, and his promotion from his original grade to the grade of Rs. 150—200 was supported by Mr. Joshi ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) There is no record of any such inquiry.

(d) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, recommendations of officers regarding the personnel serving under them are confidential.

COMPLAINTS BY LADY TEACHERS OF THE CENTRAL GIRLS' SCHOOL, AJMER, AGAINST MR. P. B. JOSHI, ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION, AND MUNSHI GAYA PRASAD.

432. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Assistant Superintendent of Education not long after his appointment to his present post visited the Girls' School in the company of Munshi Gaya Prasad, which was followed by a protest on the part of certain lady teachers to the Superintendent of Education ? If so, what was the nature of the complaints against the officers named above ?

(b) Is it a fact that during 1928 there was a strike in one section of the Girls' School, Ajmer ?

(c) Is it a fact that in a section of the local Hindi Press certain allegations were made against the conduct of Mr. P. B. Joshi, Assistant Superintendent of Education, in connection with that strike ?

(d) Is it a fact that in reply to the allegations of the Hindi Press, the Assistant Superintendent of Education, Mr. Joshi, also made a statement to the Press in the course of which he said that the public has nothing to do with his private life ?

(e) Will Government please state whether they took any notice of the Press statement of Mr. Joshi. If not, will Government please state why no action was taken ; and if any action was taken, what was the action taken ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

INSTRUCTIONS ISSUED BY THE PRESIDENCY POSTMASTER, CALCUTTA, REGARDING INSURED PARCELS.

433. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Presidency Postmaster, Calcutta, has issued a Memorandum No. A.J.-161 under date 14th August, 1929, containing instructions that insured parcels, inside the insured parcel bags closed by the local town sub-offices, will not be required to be checked at the time of opening of the parcel bags or for sorting, etc. ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the Presidency Postmaster has any authority to issue such orders and whether they are against the Manual Rules ?

(c) Will Government please state who will be responsible for fraud or losses occurring in such transactions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Inquiries are being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

PAY OF THE SUB-POSTMASTER, HATKHOLA POST OFFICE.

434. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many clerks or sorting postmen there are in the Poona City Post Office and the Hatkhola Post Office in Calcutta ?

(b) Is it a fact that the pay of the Sub-Postmaster of the Poona City Post Office has been raised to the grade of Rs. 250—350, while that of the Sub-Postmaster, Hatkhola Post Office, is still in the grade of Rs. 160—250 ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the affirmative, will Government please state the reason for this difference, and whether Government contemplate raising the pay of the Sub-Postmaster, Hatkhola Post Office ?

(d) Is it a fact that the pay of the Deputy Sub-Postmaster of the Hatkhola Post Office is still in the time-scale of pay, while that of the Sub-Postmaster, Intally Post Office in the same town, where there is a less number of clerks, is on the selection grade ? If so, will Government be pleased to state on what principle selection grade posts are fixed in post offices ?

(e) Is it a fact that this anomaly was brought to the notice of the authorities long ago by the local Postal Union? If so, what action has been taken by the Department? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra :

|                                  | Clerks. | Sorting postmen. |
|----------------------------------|---------|------------------|
| (a) Poona City Post Office . . . | 33      | 9                |
| Hatkholah Post Office . . .      | 20      | 3                |

(b) The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) The reason for the difference in the pay of the Sub-Postmasters, Poona City and Hatkhola is the disparity in the responsibilities of the two posts, as indicated by the figures given in my reply to part (a) above. As regards the latter part of the question, the Honourable Member is referred to the Director General's demi-official letter No. 325-Est. B.128, dated the 25th January, 1929, to Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhushan Roy, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

(d) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given in this House to Mr. Amar Nath Dutt's unstarred question No. 290 of 6th March, 1929.

(e) Yes, the matter is still under consideration of the Director General.

INCREASE OF THE NUMBER OF TOWN INSPECTORS OF POST OFFICES IN CALCUTTA.

435. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many Town Inspectors of Post Offices there are in Bombay and in Calcutta?

(b) Is it a fact that the number of Town Inspectors in Bombay is much larger than that in Calcutta? If so, what is the reason for this difference?

(c) Do Government contemplate increasing the number of Town Inspectors in Calcutta? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 11 in Bombay and 9 in Calcutta.

(b) As the Honourable Member will see from my reply to part (a) of his question, the number of Town Inspectors in Bombay is only slightly in excess of the number in Calcutta, the difference being accounted for by the fact that the work is heavier in Bombay than in Calcutta.

(c) No, because the number of Town Inspectors in Calcutta is at present adequate for the duties which they have to perform.

UNSUITABLE BUILDINGS OF THE BOWBAZAR AND COLOOTOLAH POST OFFICES.

436. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state if they have received any complaints that the condition of buildings in which the Bowbazar and Colootolah Post Offices are located is very bad, and that the public and the postal employees are much inconvenienced thereby? If so, will Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take in the matter?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Representations have been received regarding the Bowbazar Post Office, where the accommodation for the public and staff is somewhat restricted, but the building is otherwise well-suited to the requirements of the Post Office, being very centrally and conveniently situated for all purposes. Negotiations had been entered into with the landlord to extend the building, but the Director General has just learnt from the Postmaster General that the landlord has since withdrawn his offer. Fresh efforts will be made to secure a suitable building.

As regards the location of the Colootolah Post Office building, no complaints have been received.

REPORT OF MR. G. V. BEWOOR, A POSTMASTER GENERAL, ON THE TIME-TEST OF THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

437. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that they appointed Mr. G. V. Bewoor, I.C.S., a Postmaster General, to examine the time-test of the Postal Department? If so, will Government be pleased to publish, for the information of the House, his full report and recommendations?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have examined the report and accepted the same? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, Government have not yet decided whether the report shall be published or not.

(b) The report is still under the consideration of the Director General and his views have not yet reached Government.

NUMBER OF CLERKS IN THE REGISTRATION PACKET SORTING DEPARTMENT OF THE CALCUTTA GENERAL POST OFFICE.

438. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many clerks are there, in the Registration Packet Sorting Department of the Calcutta G. P. O.?

(b) Is it a fact that this important Department has been placed in charge of a time-scale clerk?

(c) Is it not a fact that the Postal Enquiry Committee recommended that a Department or office with five clerks or more should be placed in charge of a selection grade Supervisor? If so, why is this Department still left in charge of a time-scale official?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b) and (c). The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

INTRODUCTION OF A CONTRACT SYSTEM FOR TREASURY WORK IN CERTAIN POST OFFICES IN BENGAL AND ASSAM.

439. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that Government contemplate having treasury work done by the contract system in certain post offices of Calcutta and of Bengal and Assam?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state how they will provide for the officials who are at present performing these duties?

(c) Will Government please state further when the contract system will come into vogue?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on 12th March, 1929, to part (c) of his question No. 1918.

(c) Tenders have been called for, but at present it is not possible to state the precise date from which the new arrangements will come into force.

APPOINTMENT BY THE PRESIDENCY POSTMASTER, CALCUTTA, OF WOMEN CLERKS ON HIGHER PAY THAN MALE CLERKS IN THE CALCUTTA GENERAL POST OFFICE.

440. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the present Presidency Postmaster, Calcutta, has appointed many women clerks in the Calcutta G. P. O. since his assumption of office? If so, will Government be pleased to state how many women clerks there were before his taking over charge of the Calcutta G. P. O. and how many have been appointed during his régime?

(b) Is it a fact that the scale of pay of the women clerks is much higher than that of male clerks? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reason for the employment of so many women clerks on higher pay instead of male clerks?

(c) Is it a fact that there are many Hindu and Muslim candidates who are waiting for confirmation and are being superseded by these women clerks?

(d) Is it also a fact that these women clerks are directly made permanent and that, before confirmation, they are not required to appear in the examination for post office clerks? If so, will Government be pleased to state why this special preference is given to the women clerks when the male clerks are subjected to this examination?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

INCREASE OF SELECTION GRADE CLERICAL APPOINTMENTS IN THE GENERAL POST OFFICE, CALCUTTA.

441. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state (i) the number of clerks in the Bombay and Calcutta G. P. Os., (ii) the number of appointments in the grades of Rs. 350—650, Rs. 250—350, and Rs. 160—250 in these two offices?

(b) Is it a fact that the number of selection grade appointments is much higher in Bombay than in Calcutta?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the affirmative, will Government please state the reason for this difference?

(d) Do Government propose to increase the number of selection grade appointments in the Calcutta G. P. O.? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra :

(a) (i). Bombay General Post Office and Town Sub-Offices 1,123
Calcutta General Post Office and Town Sub-Offices .. 1,426

(ii) Appointments in the grade of

|                  | Rs. 350—650. | Rs. 250—350. | Rs. 160—250. |
|------------------|--------------|--------------|--------------|
| Bombay .. .. .   | 7            | 14           | 90           |
| Calcutta .. .. . | 8            | 14           | 91           |

(b) No.

(c) and (d). Do not arise.

INCREASE OF SELECTION GRADE APPOINTMENTS IN THE DEAD LETTER OFFICE, CALCUTTA.

442. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the percentage of selection grade appointments in the Dead Letter Offices in Bombay and Madras is much higher than that in Calcutta?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government please state the reason for such low percentage of selection grade appointments in the Calcutta Dead Letter Office and whether they contemplate increasing the number of selection grade appointments in that office?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given in this House to Mr. Amar Nath Dutt's unstarred question No. 286 on the 6th March, 1929.

REPLIES FROM RAILWAY ADMINISTRATIONS re RACIAL DISTINCTIONS IN SUBORDINATE RAILWAY ESTABLISHMENTS.

443. *Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) With reference to the statement made by Mr. Parsons in the debate on racial distinctions in the subordinate railway establishments in February last, have further replies been received from the Agents of any Railways? If so, will Government be pleased to lay them on the table?

(b) Are there any Railway Administrations from which no replies have been received as yet?

(c) What action have Government decided to take in view of the replies already received?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Copies of replies received from railways have been placed in the Library of the House.

(b) No.

(c) The replies received from Railway Administrations are being carefully examined with a view to eliminating any instances of racial distinction that still remain. The policy of Government in this matter has been explained by the Honourable Sir George Rainy in the course of the budget debates in February last.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that the replies of the various Railway Administrations have been in the hands of Government for more than six months ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not quite sure of that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Honourable Member admit that they have been in the hands of Government for many months ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : They have been in the hands of Government for some time.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : When do Government then propose to issue orders ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think that the case will probably be ripe for orders at a very early date.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS IN RAILWAY SCHOOLS.

444. *Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are Government aware that the Honourable the Railway Member made the following statement with regard to railway schools in concluding the general discussion on the last Railway Budget :

"It is our intention that, without waiting for the transfer of the schools, the pay of the existing teachers in the railway schools should be raised to the level prevailing in the province in which the school is situated. As regards the higher English schools maintained by the East Indian Railway, we have already issued specific orders to that effect ; we have still got to issue orders about the remainder."

(b) Have specific orders been issued to railways other than the East Indian Railway ? If so, will Government please lay on the table a copy of the instructions issued to them ?

(c) Have the scales of salary of teachers in the East Indian Railway High Schools been raised in the manner directed by the Railway Board ? If not, why has there been so much delay in carrying out the orders of the Railway Board ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given yesterday to starred question No. 369 by Kumar Ganganand Sinha.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are we to understand that the orders of the Railway Board with regard to the raising of the salaries of the teachers in the East Indian Railway High Schools have not yet been given effect to ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The instructions of the Railway Board were that the orders should be given effect to from the 1st April 1929.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Why has the salary not been raised to the scale proposed by the Railway Board ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not aware that the orders have not been given effect to. The final orders of the Railway Board were issued only in August last.

TRANSFER TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS OF SCHOOLS MAINTAINED BY THE EAST INDIAN AND OTHER RAILWAYS AND STATUS OF THE SAME.

445. *Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 390 on the 4th February, 1929, will Government please state whether the Local Governments concerned have agreed to take over the schools maintained by the East Indian and other Railways ? If so, what are the terms of transfer ?

(b) Will the schools maintained by the East Indian Railway for Indian children be regarded as Government or aided schools ?

(c) What is the status of schools maintained by the East Indian Railway for European and Anglo-Indian children ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The general question is still under correspondence with the Local Governments. The terms of transfer for particular schools have not yet been discussed.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member presumably refers to the present status of schools maintained by the East Indian Railway.

The number of Indian schools is 13 of which two are Primary, six Middle and five High. All of these receive grants from the Railway, and all but three from the Local Government. The number of European schools is 22, of which 21 are Primary and one High School. All these receive grants from railway funds and all except two receive grants-in-aid from the Local Government.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether these schools are regarded as Government schools or not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Not yet.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the Honourable Member aware that it was stated some time ago by his predecessor in this House that the East Indian Railway teachers were Government servants ? How does he say then that these schools are not Government schools ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : That schools are the property of the East Indian Railway, and the East Indian Railway belongs to the Government, and I do not think that there can be any doubt that they are Government schools in that sense.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CENTRAL ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR RAILWAYS.

446. *Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Did the Honourable the Railway Member state on the 21st February, 1929, that he would discuss with the Central Advisory Council whether its proceedings should be kept confidential ?

(b) Has the Council met since then ? If so, what is its decision on this point ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The answer to part (a) of the question is in the affirmative, and to the first part of (b) in the negative. The subject is on the agenda of the next meeting of the Central Advisory Council.

ALLEGED DESECRATION OF CERTAIN MOSQUES BY AN ARCHÆOLOGICAL OFFICER.

447. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (1) Are Government aware that there is great unrest among the Muslims of Delhi on account of the desecration of certain mosques by an Archæological Officer ?

(2) Is it a fact that the Director General of Archæology has taken no action to pacify the feelings of Mussalmans in spite of many representations on the subject having been made to him direct and through the authorities at Delhi ?

(3) Is it a fact that the Archæological Department has appointed Hindu chowkidars to look after protected mosques in Delhi while no Muslim chowkidar has ever been appointed to look after a Hindu shrine ?

(4) If the answer to part (3) is in affirmative, will Government please state who is responsible for this, whether the Director General of Archæology or his circle officer ?

(5) Do Government propose to make a thorough inquiry into the matter immediately, independent of the Director General of Archæology and his staff, and remove all grievances ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (1) Representations have been received by the Director General of Archæology in India and the Chief Commissioner, Delhi Province, from certain Muhammadan bodies and individuals.

(2) No. The Director General has made careful inquiries into the charges brought against the Archæological Officer referred to in the representations, and finds them to be unsubstantiated, and the whole agitation to be due to the fact that the officer was compelled, in the course of his official duties, to object to encroachments upon and disfigurements to certain monuments protected under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act.

(3) and (4). All appointments of chaukidars to protect monuments in Delhi are made by either the Public Works Department or the Horticulture Department of the Delhi Province.

(5) Government have instructed the Director General to make further personal inquiries into the case on the spot in Delhi at the beginning of this cold weather. The Director General will consider any representations which may then be put forward and will examine to what extent it is possible to secure that only Muhammadans are appointed as chaukidars to Muhammadan, and only Hindus as chaukidars to Hindu, monuments respectively.

MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR OF OLD MONUMENTS NEAR DELHI.

448. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Have Government seen the open letter addressed to the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, published in the local newspaper, the Al Aman of Delhi, dated 13th August, 1929, regarding the wretched state of certain old monuments in the neighbourhood of Delhi ; and will Government please state what steps, if any, the Director General of Archæology has hitherto taken or proposes to take for the maintenance and repairs of these relics of the past ?

(b) Will Government please state how many monuments the Director General of Archæology visited during his stay at Delhi during the last cold season and what steps he took for the repair of these monuments ; and if not, why not ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes. Only six of the ten monuments mentioned in the letter are protected under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act ; all these are properly looked after.

(b) The Director General of Archæology in India is not immediately responsible for the maintenance of any of these monuments, but he personally visited 84 out of 130 protected monuments in Delhi Province during his stay at Delhi last cold weather.

ACADEMIC AND ARCHITECTURAL QUALIFICATIONS OF THE SUPERINTENDENT, BRITISH MONUMENTS, AGRA, AND THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL SUPERINTENDENT, WESTERN CIRCLE.

449. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (1) Will Government please state the academic and architectural (especially Muhammadan architecture) qualifications of the present Superintendent, British Monuments, Agra, and the Archæological Superintendent, Western Circle, Poona ?

(2) Will Government please state if it is consistent with their policy to have two architects or two scholars in any one circle of the Archæological Department ? If not, why were two architects employed in the Agra and Western Circles and two scholars in the Central Circle of the Archæological Department ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (1) The present Superintendent, Northern Circle, Agra, is a Matriculate of the Allahabad University. The present Superintendent, Western Circle, Poona, passed the final Theoretical Examination of the Sibpur Civil Engineering College. Both were Government of India architectural scholars for three years, part of which period they devoted to the study of Muhammadan architecture under a qualified architect.

(2) Postings are decided upon in accordance with the special needs of the several circles, which may, from time to time, require to have two officers attached to them. Of the three cases referred to, the postings of two architects in the Western Circle and of two officers with scholastic qualifications in the Central Circle were purely temporary arrangements ; the former was required in connection with the training of a junior officer, and the other resulted from the taking of disciplinary action against an officer of the Department. It is not a fact that two architects have been or are employed in the Agra Circle.

PLACING OF MUHAMMADAN MONUMENTS UNDER HINDU OFFICERS.

450. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government please state how often they have placed the charge of Muhammadan monuments under a Hindu Officer and of Hindu monuments under a Muhammadan Officer since the inception of the Department ?

(b) Have Government ever considered the desirability of dividing the work between Hindu and Muhammadan Officers where such officers exist in any one circle so that they may look after their monuments independent of each other ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Such postings have often been made and necessarily so, since each circle contains monuments of all kinds, pre-historic, Hindu, Muhammadan, Buddhist, British, etc.

(a) On careful consideration the suggested arrangement is neither desirable nor practicable.

SUPERSESSION OF SENIOR INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE POLICE FORCE IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

451. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Are Government aware that great discontent is prevailing among the Indian Officers of the Police Force in the North West Frontier Province owing to a large number of junior officers superseding senior men ?

(2) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing :

- (a) the names of the junior Police officers who have superseded senior men in that Province ;
- (b) the dates of commencement of their service ;
- (c) the special reasons necessitating the supersessions ;
- (d) the names of the senior Indian Police Officers who have been superseded ;
- (e) the dates of commencement of their service ; and
- (f) the special reasons justifying their deprivation from promotion ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (1) No.

(2) Government do not consider that it would be in the public interest to lay a statement on the table containing the information asked for. Nor are they prepared to state the reasons necessitating the selection and supersession in particular cases, as promotions are made after considering the personal records of officers, which are confidential.

CONSTRUCTION OF A MOTOR ROAD BETWEEN THY AND NATHIA GALI, AND GRANT OF FACILITIES FOR THE ERECTION OF BUNGALOWS AND SHOPS AT NATHIA GALI.

452. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the special reasons which have so far prevented Government from constructing a motor road between Thy and Nathia Gali, and
- (b) the special reasons which have so far necessitated the deprivation of the public of the North West Frontier Province from building bungalows, houses, shops, etc., for residential, trade, and other purposes in the Nathia Gali hills similar to those in other hill stations in India ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Lack of funds and the greater need for other roads of greater importance.

(b) The scarcity of possible building sites most of which are already taken up.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

453. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that no proportion of communal representation in Government service has yet been fixed by the Local Administration in the North West Frontier Province, notwithstanding the fact :

- (i) that in November, 1925, the gentry of Peshawar and Kohat Districts had submitted memorials to the Local Government on the subject, and
- (ii) that the Honourable the Chief Commissioner had, in reply to a provincial address, declared in November, 1925, that he contemplated to fix a proportion ?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons which necessitated a departure to be made in that province from the established policy of Government generally adopted by all Local Governments in India ?

Sir Denys Bray : With your permission, Sir, I will answer this and the next question together. Both have been referred to the Local Administration and the information asked for will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

UNEMPLOYMENT OF EDUCATED MOSLEMS IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

†454. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact :

- (a) that the principal residents of the District of Hazara in a public meeting held on the 16th August, 1929, in the Juma Mosque at Abbottabad, unanimously signed an application addressed to the Honourable the Chief Commissioner, dealing with the question of unemployment and its remedy and brought to his notice the accumulation of thousands of Matriculates and others in the district who cannot secure Government service owing to the preponderance of non-Muslims and non-residents of the province in Government offices in the district, and requested him to fix a proportion of communal representation in Government service in the province, and as suggested by the Industrial Officer, whose services had been borrowed from the Punjab to submit a report regarding the present industries in the province, to open industrial schools in the country ; and
- (b) that similar applications were also submitted by the residents of other districts to the Local Government on the subject ?

(2) If answers to part (1) are in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the legitimate demands of the people of the Province have been considered and acceded to ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 453.

EXCESSIVE PREVALENCE OF TUBERCULOSIS IN ABBOTTABAD.

455. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact :

- (a) that the Cantonment of Abbottabad has been infested with tuberculosis for some years ;
- (b) that a large number of tuberculosis patients come to Abbottabad from different parts of the Punjab and North West Frontier Province every year in the summer, and rent houses and mix with the people in the town without any precautionary measures being taken by the civil and medical authorities there to have the houses occupied by them thoroughly disinfected, or to enforce some sort of restrictions compelling the patients to live in a particular area specially provided for them as a sanatorium with a view to check the spread of the disease in the town ?

(2) Do Government intend to have a house to house search made in the towns of Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, as was done in Peshawar, and declare the extent to which the disease exists therein at present ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The necessary information has been called for and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST THE HONORARY MAGISTRATES IN THE PESHAWAR TAHSIL OF THE PESHAWAR DISTRICT.

457. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Is it a fact that there are four Honorary Magistrates, with powers under section 30 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, in the Peshawar Tahsil of the Peshawar District ; and one with First class powers ? Is it also a fact that two of them are father and son, and two others uncle and nephew ?

(2) What are their qualifications, and does any one of them speak English ?

(3) Is it a fact that previous to their becoming Magistrates one of them was a Sub-Inspector of Police, another a Jamadar in a Militia Corps, a third a Subedar in the Frontier Constabulary ?

(4) Is it a fact that all these Magistrates try the cases which occur in the areas in which they and their relations reside and have their vested interests ?

(5) Is it also a fact that one Magistrate has, since his appointment, purchased a lot of landed property within the area under his jurisdiction ?

(6) Have Government received complaints from people residing in those areas against the abuse of their powers by the Magistrates ? If so, what action has been taken ?

(7) Does this system prevail any where else in India ? When was it introduced in the North West Frontier Province, and when in each district ?

†This question was withdrawn by the questioner.

(8) Is it a fact that all these Magistrates hold their courts in their villages, which are at inconvenient distances from Peshawar, and that under-trial prisoners are marched from and to the headquarters every day handcuffed and heavily fettered ?

(9) Is it a fact that proposals have been made to make these Magistrates hold their courts in Peshawar Cantonment ? If so, why has no action been taken so far ?

Sir Denys Bray : With your permission Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 457 to 460 together. I have called for the information and will impart it to the Honourable Member later.

REFUSAL OF A FIRST CLASS HONORARY MAGISTRATE IN THE PESHAWAR DISTRICT TO TRY CASES IN A LOCALITY OTHER THAN HIS OWN.

†458.*Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that one Honorary Magistrate, First Class (Arbab Sher Ali Khan) was till recently in charge of cases occurring within the area in which he lived ?

(b) Is it also a fact that arrangements were made by the Deputy Commissioner, Peshawar, that he should try cases of a different locality from his own and that the said Magistrate has declined to work ? If so, why ?

(c) Does this system prevail any where else in India to the extent to which it has been recently extended in Peshawar ?

GRANT OF HONORARY MAGISTERIAL POWERS IN PESHAWAR CITY TO A CAPTAIN IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

†459.*Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that a Captain of the Indian Army in active service has recently been given honorary magisterial powers in the Peshawar city as a member of the local Bench ?

(b) What place is supposed to be his headquarters with respect to his military duties, and where does he ordinarily reside ?

(c) How does he perform his magisterial work ; and does it not interfere with his military duties ?

(d) Is there any other example of this type in the rest of India ? If not, what special reasons were there to burden this officer with double duties ?

(e) What are his qualifications for his magisterial work ?

TOTAL NUMBER OF HONORARY MAGISTRATES IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE IN CERTAIN YEARS.

†460. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government please state the total number of Honorary Magistrates in the North West Frontier Province and their powers in each case, in 1901, 1919 and 1929 ?

(b) If there is any increase, are there any special reasons for it ? If so, what ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 457.

PERIOD FOR WHICH THE FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER OF RAILWAYS IS APPOINTED.

461. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (1) Will Government be pleased to state what is the period for which the following officers of the Finance Department are appointed :

- (a) The Secretary, Finance Department,
- (b) Financial Adviser, Military Finance, and
- (c) The Financial Commissioner of Railways ?

(2) If the period in the case of the Financial Commissioner of Railways is not the same as for the others, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for the difference ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (1) (a) and (b). Three years in each case.

(c) No period has been fixed.

(2) The omission appears to have been accidental, and the question of fixing a period of tenure is now under consideration.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster (Finance Member) : I beg to move that this Assembly do proceed to elect a Member to the Standing Finance Committee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of his seat on the Assembly by Colonel J. D. Crawford.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : I may inform the Members that for the purpose of election of a Member to the Standing Finance Committee, the Assembly office will be open to receive nominations up to 12 noon on Saturday, the 14th September, 1929, and that the election, if necessary, will be held in this Chamber on Monday, the 16th September, 1929.

The election will be conducted in accordance with the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Leader of the House) : With your permission, Sir, I should like to make a statement as regards the probable course of Government business in the week beginning September, the 16th. Honourable Members will of course understand that any statement which I can make at the present moment must be liable to be qualified in consequence of the course of the debate on the motion which I am about to move in connection with the Bill to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure. The first item of business on Monday, the 16th, will be the holding of the election to fill the vacancy on the Standing Finance Committee. Thereafter, the Honourable the Law Member will move for the passing of his two Bills in connection with the amendment of the law relating to Transfer of Property, with which the House has been concerned this week. On the motion that each of these Bills be passed, formal drafting amendments consequential on amendments already accepted will be moved. Thereafter, a Railway Supplementary Demand will be placed before the House. Such Government time as is not required on Monday, the 16th and Wednesday, the 18th for the transaction of Government business will be made available for the continuance of the proceedings on the Child Marriage Bill of Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda.

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose (Insertion of new section 540-B) be taken into consideration.

I should like at the outset to express the deep sense of regret with which Government find themselves compelled to bring this Bill before the House. I cannot affect to deny that the Bill is one which may naturally provoke a considerable amount of controversy, and I hope the House will believe me when I say that Government would have been glad if they had been able to refrain from moving in this matter, which, as I say, will be naturally one of some controversy, as it is very far from their desire to do anything which might in any way disturb the harmony which has so fortunately prevailed, in spite of natural differences of opinion on some specific matters which have come before the House, during the course of this Session. It is only a very strong compulsive sense of duty which has brought Government to this decision. They felt that one of their gravest responsibilities was involved and that, whatever the result might be it was impossible for them to decline that responsibility. They were desirous, at the same time, to take the earliest possible opportunity to ask, as I submit they are entitled to ask, the House also to take its own share in that duty and in that responsibility. Some time ago, the probable necessity of seeking some such remedy as is proposed in this Bill became apparent. The situation which set up that possibility was examined from day to day and from week to week with the greatest care and the greatest anxiety both by the Government of the Punjab and by the Government of India. At one time, there were some grounds for hope that the particular contingencies which were apprehended might cease to exist. Unfortunately these hopes, in spite of the most consistent efforts on the part of the Local Government immediately concerned in this direction, have, in the end, been disappointed, and we have taken the earliest opportunity, since that became clear, to lay this measure before the House. The circumstances I have referred to have brought to light the fact that there is a lacuna in the criminal law ; that contingencies may arise, and indeed have arisen, for which that law does not provide, and that the lacuna to which I have referred is not merely a theoretical one but one which has received a definite and practical illustration. Now, Sir, in what I have to say, I shall not even approach the fringes of any thing which can be regarded as a matter which is sub judice. The measure which I have laid before the House has no reference whatsoever to, and has no possible bearing whatever upon, the merits of any trial now pending or any that may hereafter arise. It is a general proposition. It relates to a point of criminal procedure which has no possible relation to the guilt or innocence of any accused person.

[Sir James Crerar.]

Now, Sir, I must concisely inform the House what are the circumstances to which I have already referred. I will quote, in the first instance, a passage from an order passed by the High Court of Lahore on an application which was made to them to which I shall have subsequent occasion to refer. They say :

"The Magistrate is conducting an inquiry into various serious charges under section 302 read with sections 109 and 120-B of the Indian Penal Code and also under sections 121, 121-A, 122 and 123 of the Indian Penal Code against sixteen persons."

Those charges, I need not remind the House, are charges of murder, of conspiracy to murder, of waging war against the King, of conspiracy to do so, and other very grave charges. The trial therefore was one of very great importance. Now what happened was this. Before the actual commencement of the magisterial inquiry, two of the accused entered upon a hunger-strike. Subsequently thirteen others of the accused, at various times, also entered upon a hunger-strike. Moreover, though the defence in this case was at one time entrusted to eight counsel, the briefs of those counsel were withdrawn and at one time no less than thirteen of the sixteen accused were on hunger-strike and incapable of appearing before the court. In these circumstances, an application was made to the High Court, Lahore, to authorise the inquiring Court to appoint counsel for the accused in order that section 540-A of the Criminal Procedure Code might apply. The High Court in their order, in which they carefully examined the law, found that it was not in their power to authorise the Court to appoint or themselves to appoint any counsel without the consent of the accused. That, then, may be taken as an authoritative statement of the law as it stands. In consequence of this, the trial, which is as I say a very important trial and in which 400 witnesses have already been cited and a large number more have yet to be cited, has been unable to proceed and is now unable to proceed. Well, Sir, I anticipate that one of the first questions that will be asked of me is that, before Government proceeded to seek a remedy by an amendment of the law, "was there no other possible solution which might have been attempted?" I can only suppose that question to mean, ought not Government in these circumstances to comply with the demands of the accused, who decline to be represented by counsel, and who have rendered themselves incapable of appearing before the Court? Now, I wish to say, in the first instance, that it is my sincere and genuine belief that the local authorities have been throughout actuated by a very genuine desire to terminate a state of affairs which, whatever the grounds and whatever their consequences may be, is a state of affairs which no one can fail to deplore. The local authorities, both the jail authorities and the Punjab Government, have done all in their power to approach the matter from that point of view. But they have not been successful, and the question now arises—a question on which I must be perfectly frank with the House—"What were the demands made by the accused persons in this case, and what were the reasons why the Punjab Government, with whose conclusions the Government of India entirely concurred, were unable to comply with them?" Well, Sir, the original demand made in justification of the course taken by the accused was that "political prisoners" should receive certain preferential treatment; and we were left in no manner of doubt as to what was meant by "political prisoner". By a "political prisoner" was clearly meant, not only any person charged with, but also any person who had been convicted of, any criminal offence, whatever its character, if he claimed that his motive was of a political character. It is impossible to have any misconception on that point, because two particular cases were quoted as instances of political offenders. The first was the well-known Lahore Conspiracy case of 1915 and 1917 and the other was the Kakori Conspiracy case.

Now I must ask the House to bear with me for a few minutes while I remind them of some of the salient characteristics of those two cases. In the first, that is to say the Lahore Conspiracy case of 1915-1917, besides a number of attempts at dacoities, there were five dacoities committed by the conspirators in 1915. In the first of these, the dacoits assaulted a number of villagers and brutally murdered one of them. In another, bombs were thrown, one of the villagers was killed, and a number of them were seriously injured. In the remaining dacoities, all the dacoits were armed with pistols and other dangerous weapons. Besides these, a number of murders were committed in pursuance of a conspiracy. A sub-inspector was shot dead and a head constable was seriously wounded and other murders were committed at Anarkali Bazaar, Lahore, and there were other murders at Jagatpur, Padri and Walla Bridge. In the Kakori Conspiracy case, four dacoities were committed in pursuance of this conspiracy (Bamrauli, Bichpuri, Dwarkapur and Kakori). Firearms were used in all. At Bamrauli one villager was shot dead and several others received bullet wounds. The dacoits decamped with loot worth about five thousand rupees. At Bichpuri the dacoits brutally tortured a boy in order to make him reveal the place where valuables were concealed. One villager was shot dead and another wounded. The dacoits not only killed one villager but wounded four others. The fourth outrage was the train dacoity, which resulted in the murder of one passenger and the looting of about Rs. 4,500. I recall these deplorable instances, not because I wish to lay a catalogue of horrors before the House, but in order that the House may clearly understand what the demand was and why we found ourselves unable to comply with it. Offences of that character, whatever their motive may be alleged to have been, are offences which cannot possibly be regarded as specially venial offences. It is impossible to make any concession in the case of offences of that character. Nevertheless, the Punjab Government and the Government of India thought it reasonable to make concessions where it was possible, and also to reassure public opinion in the matter. I would remind the House of the communiqué which was issued by the Government of India and the letter which was subsequently addressed to Local Governments by which a re-examination has been instituted of the conditions applicable to under-trial and special class prisoners. The Punjab Government, as the House is already aware, in view of the probable length and the strain of the trial, sanctioned special diet for the prisoners if required on medical grounds. In the case of one accused, whose physical condition was very bad, the Punjab Government made it known that, if an application for bail was made on his behalf, they would not be prepared to oppose it. Advantage was not taken of that announcement. On the contrary, I understand that the primary cause alleged for the very regrettable resumption of the hunger-strike has been that a particular prisoner has not been unconditionally discharged; that is to say, that the prosecution case against him has not been withdrawn. I do not think that any Honourable Members in this House, having regard to the facts which I have explained, will be prepared to say that the Government of the Punjab were unreasonable on that point or that they could take any other course.

I do not wish to detain the House at any undue length, and I must content myself, at any rate for the present, with that summary statement of the facts. But the result has been a complete dead-lock, a paralysis of justice. There is the further probability or, at any rate, the very likely possibility of other cases in future being affected in the same manner. I would also like to lay before the House this consideration, that in a case of this kind where a large number of accused are concerned, a certain number of them may not adopt this particular expedient, which has so far resulted in holding up the course of the trial. These co-accused may be persons who may perhaps have a reasonable hope of acquittal or who, at any rate, may have reason to hope, if they are convicted, that the punishment inflicted upon them may not be very severe. But surely it is an injustice to them that their opportunity of having a judicial pronouncement on their guilt or innocence should be indefinitely delayed?

Now, Sir, I turn to the remedy that this Bill, in the state of affairs which I have described, proposes. It is this, that if any accused person, by his own voluntary act, is incapable of appearing before the Court and declines to be represented by counsel, the Court has a discretion, in the special circumstances, to dispense with his presence. I would, however, particularly invite the attention of the House to the proviso at the end of the Bill, the effect of which is practically, to all intents and purposes, to eliminate retrospective effect from the Bill. That is to say, if this Bill is enacted, the Magistrate will be unable to pass an order unless the accused person has repeated the act or course of conduct, after the commencement of the Act, which has rendered him incapable from appearing before the Court. Now, a point which I should particularly like to emphasise, because I feel there has been some misapprehension with regard to it, is this, that, by this Bill, Government do not seek in any way whatever to enlarge the executive powers. The power which this Bill will confer will lie entirely within the discretion of the Court, and over that discretion the Executive Government have no control whatever. However, I understand that a feeling is entertained in some parts of the House that it would be an improvement of the Bill if it were provided that a reference, instead of being made to the Court of the Magistrate, should be made to the High Court. If that feeling is generally held, I myself will be prepared to accept some provision of that character, but I would like once more to emphasise my point, that this Bill in no way extends or enlarges the executive powers of the Executive Government.

I imagine, Sir, that it may be contended that this Bill traverses some general principles of criminal jurisprudence. Sir, I submit to the House that the first and most fundamental rule of criminal jurisprudence is that the law shall prevail, that in every civilised country, every man is entitled to the protection of the law, and that every man who is accused of an offence shall be called upon effectively to answer it. I submit that there is nothing in this Bill which is anything but an affirmation of that principle. It is, I submit, the duty of every man to obey the law, and it ought to be his duty, as it is his interest, to support it. The rule of law is essential to every civilised country and the rule of law must be effective. I maintain that the provisions of this Bill are not only in conformity with that principle, but merely re-affirm and support it. It is subject to that principle that other salutary rules of criminal law exist. It is a salutary principle that every man shall be deemed innocent until he is proved guilty and that principle obviously implies and pre-supposes effectual means by which his guilt or innocence may be established. It is also a provision of the law, that the accused person must have a fair hearing in a fair trial, and for that reason he must be represented either in person or by counsel. The intention of the present law, I submit, is to give those remedies to the accused. If he voluntarily deprives himself of them, then surely the case bears a different aspect. It is that aspect of the case that I ask the House to deal seriously with. It must be remembered that in any criminal proceedings, there are always two parties, the accused person and some other aggrieved person, the complainant, or the Crown, representing the people. Both parties are equally entitled to justice. It is to meet that end that this Bill is desired. I shall doubtless be told that this legislation is unprecedented. I submit also that the circumstances in which the necessity arises are unprecedented. It will probably be argued that this legislation is proposed on the basis of only a single case, but I should like to point out that here a definite lacuna in the law has been proved to exist; there is a definite defect in our criminal procedure. If conduct directed to exploit that defect is allowed to succeed, there is little doubt, and there have already been definite indications, that the example will be followed in many cases in future to the gravest detriment of the public interest, amounting to nothing less in serious cases of this kind than the paralysis and impotence of the law.

Now, Sir, I have submitted this matter to the House as one of urgency. I myself could not contemplate, without the gravest apprehensions, the consequences of any long delay in enacting this measure. As I have already informed this House, the probable necessity of undertaking this legislation was present to our minds several weeks ago. We held our hands as long as we had any hopes that it could by any conceivable turn of events be dispensed with, and we have now placed it before the House. We have done so in compliance, as I say, with a very keen sense of our own duty in the matter, though we should have been very glad to be relieved of this necessity. It is not only the Executive Government of the country which is responsible for the due administration of justice. The responsibility of the Legislature is not less great.

I ask this House to deal with this matter in an entirely unprejudiced manner, and to recognise that the Government are confronted with a situation for which some solution must be found. We have anxiously explored every possible solution, and we have come to the conclusion that no solution other than that propounded at present is possible. On that basis, I venture to appeal to the House to treat this matter dispassionately, without prejudice, with a fair recognition of the facts. The matter, I say, is one which we are bound to regard as urgent, and it is for that reason that I move this motion for consideration of the Bill. But if a feeling prevails in the House that a more proper course would be to refer this Bill to a Select Committee reporting at an early date, as I understand there is an amendment to that effect on the agenda, if that is the wish, then I can assure the House that Government will be prepared to accept it.

Let me once again renew my appeal to the House to deal with this matter without prejudice, impartially and with a fair and just recognition of the facts which have compelled Government to lay it before the House. If it will do that, I have every hope that this measure will be approved by the House and duly enacted. (Applause.)

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose (Insertion of new section 540-B), be taken into consideration ”.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That the Bill be circulated for eliciting public and legal opinions thereon ”.

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member himself admitted at the outset that this was a controversial Bill. Of course, he has given his own version of the controversy and his own side, and he should therefore be prepared to hear our version, our side of the controversy over this Bill. The amendment that I have moved is, to put it frankly, a dilatory motion in the sense that I do want time and more time for this Bill. I want time for this Bill for two reasons. In the first place, this Bill starts, for the first time, a very great question of principles of jurisprudence. Therefore we cannot proceed with the Bill in this offhand fashion. I am of opinion that a large mass of legal and judicial opinion will have to be collected and laid before this House before we could proceed with this Bill. That is my first reason. My second reason, and perhaps an equally important reason, is that I want to get this Bill off from its associations with the Lahore case and the present strike. Of course, as the Honourable the Home Member has said, this Bill has no bearing whatever upon the merits of the Lahore case. I quite admit that. Throughout my speech, if I make a single reference by a single word to the merits of that case, whenever I shall be speaking of the Lahore case, I may be supposed to have more in my mind the particular strike of the accused in the Lahore case than anything else.

Sir, the reason why I want time for this Bill is this. Under other conditions, in other circumstances and in other times, I think in one aspect of the view, there is something to be said in favour of the Bill. I am giving my opinion only as a layman, and it is after all a tentative opinion for the moment. But in one view of it, I think the Bill is not a bad one. It is for this reason. If for the moment one can forget the Lahore case and the strike, then I think this Bill gives some measure of the much-needed relief to certain imaginable or conceivable co-accused in cases where the trial is unnecessarily prolonged not for their own fault, but for the fault of the other co-accused.

We all know that adventure makes strange bed-fellows, but so also does misfortune ; and we know that in a number of cases, owing to the excessive zeal of the police, a number of accused, innocent people, are harvested together, put upon a joint trial, and then what happens ? In many cases it is found that the accused have no common defence ; each one wants to defend himself in his own way and quite rightly and legitimately. And in the end we find that sometimes some of the accused are let off. Here is a case in which there is no common purpose, no common binding between the different accused, and yet, owing to the action of Government and the police, these unfortunate people are brought in, and if in such a case some one of the accused does voluntary acts to disable himself from attendance from the court, it naturally prejudicially reacts upon the interests of the other accused. And I will mention instances of cases like this. I will mention gang dacoity cases, cases of riots, cases of unlawful assemblies and so on. These are typical cases of prosecutions in which a number of people are indiscriminately put up together. And therefore in my view, if this Bill were passed and put on the Statute-book, it might give indeed a measure of relief in certain conditions to co-accused. And I venture to say that if this Bill, from the pure judicial point of view and conception, had been brought before this House a few months earlier, or if it is again brought up a few months later, it will certainly stand a better chance than it has to-day. But after all, I give my opinion as a mere layman, and my lawyer friends say that my view is not right. The Bill, whenever it is brought, will necessarily offend against a first class principle of jurisprudence, namely, the accused must be present in court and must hear his trial. We should really like to know what are the provisions on this point in other countries in cases of a similar nature. We should like to have the opinions of the Bar Councils, of pleaders and barristers and the legal profession generally, and also of the courts. I know that the Bill has arisen out of one particular decision of the Lahore High Court, but my view is that, even if this Bill were to be put tomorrow before the Lahore High Court, I am not quite sure that the Judges would say that the principle of this Bill is quite right. I do not think they have specifically suggested this thing which is contained in this Bill, though of course they gave their decision on other matters in this particular affair.

Now, Sir, my second point is this. I do not want Government to take advantage of this Bill for this particular case. A number of months passed after the accused in this case were arrested. Government did not proceed to try them for a number of months. That means that they do not care so much for time. They may as well wait for a few months more,—why not ? After all, the struggle of these hunger strikers is such a struggle that it is bound to end one way or the other very soon ; it cannot be prolonged indefinitely. But it may be said here that Government are in a hole and they find themselves in difficulty. To that my simple answer is that the Sphinx must solve its own riddle ; who else can read it ? Let the prosecution stew in its own juice. I have absolutely no sympathy for the prosecution in this matter. If the prosecution has taken a few months already, let it take a few months more and nothing will be lost thereby. But I am sure that Government cannot come to this House and seek a remedy from the legislature in this matter. But then I am not quite thoughtless in this matter, for I can suggest to Government some concrete proposals for getting out of this difficulty. As I have said they can stay their hands for some time,—that is one solution. By some efforts eleven of the accused have already been successfully weaned out of the hunger strike. Who knows that by efforts and in time, if some concessions are made to the accused, they may not give up their hunger strike and take their trial? That is a possibility, but that can be achieved and realised only if Government stay their hands and postpone the prosecution for some time.

My second suggestion is, split up the case, and that is a thing which is not unheard of. There are about 17 accused in this case and it is not necessary that all of them should be put up for trial together. When there are absconders in a particular case, Government do split up the trial, and that may be done in this case too. It may be said that these hunger strikers have brought on the strike voluntarily, but my suggestion to Government is to treat them as absconders and proceed with the case against those who are in a position to be brought to court. And there is enough material to go on with the case. To a useful question put yesterday by my friend Mr. Ganganand Sinha, a statement was laid on the table of the House by the Honourable the Home Member. I have scanned that statement and what do I find? Out of the 17 accused, 11 are not hungerstriking at the present time. Two have already been sentenced to transportation,—Bhagat Singh and another. What more do you want to get out of them, unless you want to humiliate them by putting a stigma on their heads and sending them to the scaffold? Then, one man is already on the point of death, and even the medical men have given up his case as hopeless. So how many remain? Only three; and as I have already said, if efforts are made, surely there is a chance of these three people also being persuaded to follow the example of the other eleven accused and take their trial after giving up the strike. As I have said, the struggle of these hunger strikers cannot go on endlessly; it must come to an end sooner or later. It is a struggle between two forces. There is the force of the will power of these people who are on hunger strike, and on the other hand there is the force of the medical people in the jail who are trying their best to forcibly feed these people. And I was surprised to find from the statement that, though some of the accused have gone on hunger strike for 80 days and more, they have lost in some cases only 14 lbs. and in some cases only 20 lbs. in weight. That is inexplicable to me; but my point is this: that one of the two forces must win in the end. Supposing the force of hunger strike succeeds, those people will die and get out of this world and Government will be rid of them. Supposing on the other hand that the force of forcible feeding succeeds in the end, it will end in these people being produced before the court. Therefore, this struggle, I contend, is not a struggle that will go on endlessly; and therefore there is no necessity in my opinion for Government to bring in a Bill of this kind at this moment as if all hopes were lost.

Now, Sir, supposing these cases are split up, there may be two cases: there will of course be delay and there will be expense; but time is not of the essence of the matter with Government, nor is cost; and I have suggested that, by withdrawing even at this moment the prosecution against certain of the people, they can get a solid block of people to proceed against in one case. Why cannot they do it? Take off the case from those who are recalcitrant, who are not reasonable, and the others might be persuaded to give up their hunger strike. Now, Sir, withdrawing cases, even at an advanced stage, is not a thing unknown to Government. Have they not created a first class scandal in Sind by withdrawing a case after the Magistrate had committed the accused to the Sessions? They have withdrawn the case within the Sessions court at the last moment. (Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: "Shame"). That is what has appeared in the press: they have withdrawn the case—the fact is there—and let me remind the House that the charge in that particular case was abduction and murder.

Mr. Abdul Haye (East Punjab: Muhammadan): That was done in deference to this House, I believe?

Mr. N. C. Kelkar: Have I said one word of blame of the Government? I simply want them to follow that example in this particular case. If it was right in that case, let it be followed in this particular case, and let the case be withdrawn against a few of the accused, so that you will get a solid block of people against whom you can go on and finish the case. I have merely stated one argument for not allowing the Government to have this Bill.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): I object to the Honourable Member's statement. How much does the Honourable Member know about that case?

Mr. N. C. Kelkar: It is not necessary. Nobody has corrected me in so far that the case has been withdrawn. It has appeared in the papers.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City: Muhammadan Urban): It has not been withdrawn; only the Government have decided to apply to withdraw.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I state the facts? An application for withdrawal was made, and the application was considered by the Government, and they ordered withdrawal; but the Public Prosecutor, Karachi, was against withdrawal. He however applied to the court for a withdrawal. The court said that it was in the power of the court to allow withdrawal or not, and therefore on the 2nd September, when an application was made, the court kept it for orders till the 9th September, and it is not known whether the court has allowed the withdrawal or not.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar: My friend appeared in the case and of course he knows better about it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: I was not the pleader during the withdrawal application.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar: However that may be, my point is this: I have simply suggested the withdrawal of the case which is not impossible or a thing not to be contemplated. I do contend that the case should be withdrawn against a few who are recalcitrant, and the case may be proceeded with against those who have ceased to hunger-strike; the case against them can go on.

I have given two reasons. I come now to the third and, in my opinion, the greatest reason for not allowing Government this Bill; and my reason is that I cannot allow the strikers to be made victims of this Bill. I cannot allow these present strikers, at any rate, to be made victims of this Bill which has arisen out of their own strike. It is due to them that they should not be made the first victims of this Bill, whoever else may be at any other time. The Bill may pass after the end of this case and prove useful, as I have said, in other conditions. But it is unfair to pass this Bill while this strike is going on. And why do I say that is due to them? I shall give my reasons as to why they should not be made the first victims of this particular Bill. This House will remember that the hunger strikers have raised a first class political issue in the matter of the jail treatment of prisoners and racial discrimination. Now, how have they done it? Let the House again remember this. How have they raised this first class issue? Not like ingenious lawyers sitting in their arm chairs, in their consulting rooms comfortably; not like dilettante or amateur theorists in criminology sitting in their comfortable libraries....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Nor like journalists in their editorial sanctum!

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : No; in none of these ways has this first class issue been raised; but they have raised the issue under the hardest of jail conditions. This must be remembered to their credit, and therefore I say that they ought not to be made victims of a Bill of this type.

Now, Sir, coming to the hunger strike itself, I quite admit that the merits of a hunger-strike may be debatable; there may be two sides to it. However, is a hunger strike suicidal? Certainly it cannot be called suicidal, because we know that Mahatma Gandhi himself went on hunger strike for twenty days and would not take any food during the period. Mahatma Gandhi is not a sinful man to go and commit suicide. So it must have another aspect, and therefore I contend that it cannot be called suicidal. (An Honourable Member : "That was penance".) Call it strike, call it penance; you may describe what Mahatma Gandhi did as penance and you may describe the act of these people as a hunger strike; but after all hunger is common to both cases; therefore you must not apply the description of "suicidal" to this strike.

My next point is that, even supposing it is suicidal, you must remember that it is not for avoiding the trial. If the strike was intended to avoid the trial, I could understand that; but in this case, the strike is not intended to avoid the trial, but as a protest—a positive, practical, active protest—against certain racial discriminations and bad treatment in jail. They are fighting a political battle of this Assembly, and why do I say that their object is not to escape this trial? Because apparently from the accounts, some of these fellows seem to be very bold. It is not as if they shirk the consequences of the trial; some of them are prepared for, who knows what may come, transportation for life, or even to go to the scaffold. So in the case of such bold people, we cannot presume that they resort to the hunger strike simply to avoid the consequences of this trial. They do it with some definite objective. It is not mere sentiment that is at the back of this strike; it is no mere morbid sentimentality, but there is some clear object and purpose and also acute intelligence behind the strike. After all, you and I know that a hunger strike is no joke, and therefore we need not scoff at it, much less should we censure or condemn it. Take the strikers at least as seriously as they take themselves. The fact is that they are prepared to give their lives; but mind you, only they are concerned to sell their lives as dearly as possible. They want to get as much out of this Government by their hunger strike as it is possible for them to get even under these hard conditions. What is the price they demand? They do not want acquittal from the case, or escape from the case. What they demand is recognition of the self-respect of political prisoners engaged in a national struggle. That is the price they demand for their strike; and in these circumstances, how is it possible that they should fail to win sympathy from the public and from the Members of this Assembly? Every sort of suffering in this world is bound to win sympathy. Take the case of Terence MacSwiney. Ultimately he died, but did he not win the approval, or at least the sympathy—not the approval but the sympathy—of the whole world? And did he not, along with that sympathy, also push forward his own cause of Irish freedom? The world knows that. In this connection I read in yesterday's Times of India a leader about it. It runs as follows: "When MacSwiney died, Archbishop Mannix and the other Roman Catholic clergy joined the long procession from Southwark to Euston Station, the clergy authorised the solemn Requiem in Cork Cathedral."

If it were a case of suicide, sinful suicide, then, these people would not have expressed any sympathy for the man. They were aware that he did not undergo a hunger strike for any selfish purpose, but had at the back of his mind a great national purpose, and therefore such great respect was shown to him. As I have said already, in the end some people will be found guilty and some people will be found innocent, but it is also possible, and you must take that fact into consideration, that, whatever happened at Lahore,—I am not referring to the facts, part of it may relate in the long distance to what happened to Lala Lajpat Rai....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : All right, Sir. My point is that, if Government are expecting any sympathy from us for the Bill, I will say this, and I will refer to a thing which happened in this House at any rate. When a first class full dress debate was raised in this House over the attack on Lalaji, there was not one single man from the Government Benches who expressed any one word of censure about the conduct of the police who beat Lalaji. (An Honourable Member : "Shame".) And why should they expect now a word of censure from us, or a word of condemnation or criticism of the hunger strikers in the Lahore case? Government say: "You are sensible people, you are reasonable people, you know that the law must go on and so on." We tell them at once that they will not get one word of sympathy from us, but certainly words of sympathy will be addressed from this House to the hunger strikers who, as I have said, have raised a first class political issue.

Having said this about hunger strikes, I will say, in a general kind of philosophical way, that it is not for me or for this House to characterise these hunger strikes in one way or the other. We need not deny them the meed, I will not say necessarily of praise, but at least of sympathy, which is due to these brave people, these brave young boys, some of them very fine boys in every sense. Who can fail to sympathise with them in these troubles of theirs? Now, what is the difference between these people and those who sit in this House? It may be that they have not our patience and our perception of the realities and the possibilities of the political situation in this country. But, on the other hand, can they not say, "You people in the Assembly have not got our courage and our idealism," ?—It is perfectly open to them to say that. Each of us takes his own consequences. They go to jail for their opinions, they also go to the scaffold, and what do we do ? We reap the ignominy of going to the Councils and placidly preaching constitutional agitation for ages in and ages out. Supposing, before the forum of the world, some of these people were present and also some of us in the Assembly were also present there,—you know generally in foreign countries people put to us the question, "You are three hundred millions of people in India. Why don't you win political freedom for yourselves ?" Let each one of us give our answers. We say : "We are preaching, agitating and teaching people constitutional agitation". And what would one of these people say ? They would say, "We have given our lives; we are prepared to give our lives."

Mr. President : Order, order. This is hardly relevant.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : All right. I will leave that. But looking at the theoretical aspect of the question, I will say this, that in this particular instance, at any rate, they are trying to solve a first class political issue. As for the Lahore hunger strikers, I do not think we have so far got any first-hand statement of what they want. But fortunately I find in the Bombay Chronicle a full statement from another hunger striker, not in the Lahore case but in the Mianwali Jail. And as it contains and gives everything in detail, I hope the House will bear with me if I read a few lines from that statement which is responsibly made before a magistrate. In the first place, he says that he is a follower of Gandhi and a non-violent non-co-operator, and in the end he says that he has not gone on this hunger strike in order to avoid labour. He says he is prepared to do any amount of labour as far as he can. Why did he go on hunger strike then ? He gives his reasons :

"It is a fact that I am on hunger strike since August 4 and the reason for this is that I am not given the food which should be given to me as of right. The political prisoners in this country have a long-standing grievance against the Government that their status as political prisoners is not recognised officially. It is but meet that they should be designated as political prisoners in the official correspondence.

Their second grievance is that a European prisoner, be he a thug, dacoit, or a cheat, is given butter, cake and tea. Fresh vegetables are sent for from the bazars if such are not available in the jail garden. But the case with the Indian political prisoners is quite different. Even if they are special class prisoners, they are not given these facilities. They get wheat and gram, and most ordinary vegetables. They are also supplied oil. . . . . The European wards are airy, well-ventilated and well-furnished and they have separate kitchen and baths attached to them. Compare them with the barracks for Indian political prisoners, which are neither well-ventilated, nor they have got doors to protect the inmates from cold and wind, etc.

The condition of cells for Indian ordinary prisoners is still worse. They are generally damp, dark and dingy and are made to clean urinals and latrines during the night time. The prisoners are compelled to keep drinking water and their religious books in the same cell wherein are placed urinals, etc. These are the cells in which the ordinary political prisoners have to pass their nights even in the months of June, July and August."

Then he gives certain details into which I need not go,—that Indian political prisoners are given rethas, while soap is supplied to the Europeans.

He goes on to say :

"It is a pity that while the European prisoners are placed in the Central Jail, Lahore, the special class political prisoners are put in Mianwali, the Kalapani of the Punjab.

These grievances have been brought to the notice of the Government many a time before. . . . ."

This is the most important—

"These grievances have been brought to the notice of the Government many a time before, but no heed whatsoever so far has been paid to them, and so we have felt compelled to resort to this extreme step of hunger strike till these grievances are redressed in a manner acceptable to the political intelligentsia of the country."

This, in brief, is the statement that was made before a magistrate by a hunger striker, who is on his trial for hunger strike. I do not know what are the facts in that particular case ; he may be corroborated or he may not be corroborated. That is a matter for inquiry. But I say independent testimony to these complaints comes from other quarters also, and in that respect I will mention the Report of the United Provinces Jail Committee. There we know that the European Chairman and the Indian members have differed on a number of points. That means that, though the Cardew Jail Committee of 1922-23 did make certain recommendations and did not make certain recommendations and assumed that that was the last word on the subject, I do contend that these present facts show that the issue is a live one even now.

This point has been brought out saliently in the reports and dissenting minutes in the United Provinces Jail Committee's Report by people like Pandit Jagat Narain and others. If the issue was a fanciful one, Government would not have entered upon this inquiry, and the very fact that they have entered upon this inquiry shows that a grievance did exist. They have now asked the different Provincial Governments for a Report. My point is—why did not they do this earlier ? Did they not know from the press and other sources that the political prisoners were already suffering from that complaint ? Why did they wait till the hunger strikers forced that step on them ? They should have done it earlier. From that I conclude that Government find themselves in a difficulty which is of their own creation, and then they have come to the Legislature with a Bill like this. Even this inquiry is a partial success for the hunger strikers. That is my next point. They have raised a first class political issue and to whom is this credit due ? Not to us that are sitting in the Legislatures comfortably. We have not succeeded in raising that issue so far, and compelling Government to make this inquiry. Remember that it is the hunger strikers, under their hard jail conditions, that have driven Government to make this inquiry. This partial success is due to the hunger strikers themselves. Now, hunger strike is of course a new method. It is a new method of agitation, and in the present political situation it is not to be discarded simply because it is a new method. In this connection I was amused to find the other day an interesting story written by Mr. G. K. Chesterton. It relates to a Club of Queer Trades. I was amused to find out what that Club could be. I found out this. There was a Club. One of the conditions of the membership was that the candidate who aspired to be a member of that Club ought to follow an honest living in the first instance. The second condition, and the more important, was that he must have found out for himself a new and original method of earning his livelihood, a method which was not followed by others. That is the point of the story. Taking, this as a parallel, the politicians in India,—the Indian fraternity of politicians—are a club of queer trades. Of course it is not a trade. It is sound practical business, unselfish practical business. Now, in this club of queer trades which was

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

started 75 years ago, we find that, from time to time, political agitators and workers in this country have been finding their own new original methods of agitation, all having at the back of their minds a common object, namely, the winning of political freedom for India. Who started the game? First the loyalists started it with flattery. Then came the moderates on the scene. They invented the method of argument and statistics. They hoped that Government would be persuaded by them. Then came on the scene the neo-extremists, who invented the method of blunt speaking and abuse. Then came the extremists, who invented the method of going to jail within certain limited conditions. Lastly we have now the revolutionaries and people of that type, who have invented the method of giving their lives by going on hunger strikes. In that way each member of this political fraternity has been inventing for himself a new and original method of political agitation. The whole thing is a club of queer trades. The object is common. What is the use of saying that the hunger strikers are doing something sinful, suicidal, morbidly sentimental and so on? Have any of these critics got the courage these brave boys have got to live under their hard jail conditions and to create such first class political issues with partial success at least? In short my point is that it would be absolutely unfair and scandalous for the Assembly to vote for this Bill at all. Government have themselves created this muddle. We in this Assembly must have the courage to give these hunger strikers at least negative assistance.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name :

"That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Honourable Sir James Crerar, the Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter, Mr. D. F. Mulla, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Mr. D. C. Stewart-Smith, Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz, Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla and the Mover, with instructions to report by Monday, the 16th September 1929, and that the number of Members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be four."

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Why did you omit Mr. Kabiruddin Ahmed?

Mr. K. C. Roy : He did not offer himself, nor you. I request, Mr. President, that you will permit me to add the name of my Honourable and gallant friend, Colonel Gidney. He is a medical man of great reputation, having practical experience of hunger feeding.

I was greatly relieved to hear Mr. Kelkar. He did not oppose the principle of the Bill.

Mr. B. Das : He did not touch it.

Mr. K. C. Roy : He thought that there are merits in the Bill and he went on to divide the issues involved into three sections. If he will sit on the Select Committee, the issues could be clearly thrashed out. Now, Sir, I frankly confess that I am not satisfied with the composition of my Select Committee. I invited some of the prominent Members. They say that their objection is to the principle of the Bill. What is the principle of the Bill? The principle of the Bill, as far as I can make out, is this, that the Government seeks power to hold an inquiry or trial when the accused's absence arises from his own voluntary action.

This is the only principle to which most of my Honourable friends on the other side have objection. But, Sir, the point which is uppermost in my mind is that this point which arises out of the whole hunger strike is not an imaginary thing; it has actually taken place. It has shown a grave defect in our criminal law, which it is the bounden duty of this House to remedy ("Hear, hear" from the Official Benches) and if we fail in our fundamental and primary duty, I feel that we as a Legislature have no right to exist here. (Hear, hear.) My friend, Mr. Kelkar, has asked me one very pertinent question: what has been the practice in another country? And he has himself referred to the hunger strike of Mr. MacSwiney. Sir, I have tried to look up the facts, and what do I find? I find that most of the Irishmen who went on hunger strike, did so after conviction. The case that has arisen in Lahore, the merits of which I shall not go into, is without parallel in the history of the world. Will this House deny Government the right to place their case before the House as well as before the Select Committee? Sir, if we deny that right, we shall deny ourselves the elementary right of a Legislature. ("Hear, hear", from the Official Benches.) Then, Sir, I am a great believer in Select Committees. I have served on Select Committees with the Honourable Mr. Jinnah who is not here.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : They are like Beecham's pills?

Mr. K. C. Roy : You know, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, what Select Committees can do and undo.

Mr. B. Das : What about the Public Safety Bill?

Mr. K. C. Roy : You took it to Select Committee and the Committee improved the Bill.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda's Bill in its present form is the outcome of a Select Committee.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Why not? Not one but two Select Committees. (Laughter.) Sir, I am a great believer in Select Committees,—and in most countries measures of legislation and important administrative problems are solved in Committees, and not on the floor of the open House.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar, will not deny it? (Laughter.)

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I should like to know what it is before I deny or accept.

Mr. K. C. Roy : You will have your chance. Sir, I believe that, for a Bill of this sort, the best forum for discussion is the Select Committee where Government can lay all the papers. I can recall the Select Committee which, only last cold weather, dealt with the Trade Union Bill. (Mr. K. C. Neogy : And the Public Safety Bill.) They orientated the whole measure, and my friends will not also forget the Contempt of Courts Bill, the Prophets Protection Bill and Leaflets Bill. All these Bills were remodelled not on the floor of the House, but in Select Committees. Sir, Mr. Kelkar wants to elicit political and legal opinion. I ask him one question. Is there anybody more authentic, more representative than this House to give the political and legal opinion that

c

[Mr. K. C. Roy.]

Mr. Kelkar wishes? If Mr. Kelkar had complained that he had not got the views of the Provincial Governments and the High Courts, he might be on stronger ground. If he had complained that he had not the opinions of other Judges, he might be on still stronger ground. But when he wishes to elicit political and legal opinion, he cannot find a more authentic body of men than the Members of this House. (Applause.) They are the final and ultimate judges of all legislation; and speaking for myself, I should sooner rely for political opinion upon the Front Opposition Benches than upon any other body outside the House.

Now, Sir, there is very little for me to say. I do not wish to go into the question of the hunger strike. Hunger strike as a political instrument is an innovation; and it has been foisted on India. I want the House to realise that fact, and it may extend. So I think it is our duty to look into the defects of the existing criminal law and do our best in Select Committee to model the Bill according to the wishes of the representatives of the people of the country and bring it back before the Legislature. (Hear, hear.) Sir, my position is this, that hunger strike as a political weapon is right enough, but there may be many who have been on hunger strike, who are not probably guilty of a crime, who may be called co-accused and the sooner we can find a remedy for their trial, the better for all concerned. Sir, I have considered this Bill with care, and I have come to the inevitable conclusion that Government have been compelled to bring this Bill before the House under circumstances which have been fully explained by the Honourable the Leader of the House, and every sentence that he has said I know from my experience to be perfectly correct and true.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Then why do you want a Select Committee?

Mr. K. C. Roy : The Select Committee has not only to look into the statement of facts of the cases, but has to examine every detail of the Bill, as Mr. Jamnadas Mehta knows so well. Let us, Sir, brush aside prejudice. It does not matter whether it is a Government measure or a private measure. Let us brush aside all consideration of the case which is now before the public. Let us brush aside the fact whether this Bill will have retrospective or prospective effect. All these considerations can be fully discussed by the Select Committee; and if some of the Front Benches will agree to serve, I am quite sure that we shall be able to produce a Bill worthy of acceptance by the Front Benches of this House. Sir, I move my amendment. (Applause from Official Benches.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has added two names, Colonel Gidney and Mr. K. Ahmed?

Mr. K. C. Roy : No, Sir. Colonel Gidney is the only one.

Mr. B. Das : Does that mean that you are disowning Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed?

Mr. Abdul Haye : Sir, I rise to support the amendment of my Honourable friend, Mr. Kelkar. (Loud applause.) Sir, it is after great deliberation that we on this side of the House have decided to support this amendment. We realise that at this stage we cannot permit the Government to place permanently on the Statute-book of this country a measure of this nature. Sir, our national poet, has said :

*Qarib hai yār roz-i-mahshar chhipegā kushon kā khūn kiunkar,
Jo chup rahe, i zabān-i-khanjar luhā pukāreā āstīn kā.*

An Honourable Member : What does it mean?

Mr. Abdul Haye : I will render it in English. It comes to this. The poet says that the day of judgment is quite near, and it will not be possible for you to hide your guilt. If the sword with which you have committed the murder will not give evidence, your sleeve stained with blood will expose you. Sir, this couplet was quoted by the Honourable Mr. Justice Mahmood when, sitting on the Bench of the Allahabad High Court, he ruled that, under whatever disabilities an accused person may be, no judgment against him could be passed in his absence. (Hear, hear.) But, Sir, we also realise that at this juncture the Government have got some justification in bringing forward this measure, and we are therefore prepared to examine the question, and we want time for that. The Honourable the Home Member, by virtue of this Bill, seeks to provide for those cases where an accused person has, by his own voluntary act, rendered himself incapable of remaining before the court.

My friend, the Honourable Mr. Kelkar, has suggested a course of action for the consideration of the Government and he says that it is open to the prosecution to split the case into two, i.e., to proceed with the trial of those who are fit to make their defence and are fit to remain in the court, and postpone the case of others who are not in a fit state of health. I understand, the position of the Government is that they do not want to split the case into two. They want to expedite the case by trying it as one case and by proceeding with it forthwith, no matter whether a person is able to remain in the court or not. I will point out, for the information of the Government, that if their object is not to split the case into two.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : It cannot be done for practical reasons.

Mr. Abdul Haye : If you say that the case cannot be split into two, you are exhibiting hopeless ignorance of the law. Even if this measure is carried today before 4 o'clock, even if this Bill becomes the law of the land, does the Honourable the Home Member realise that, under the law as it stands, it is obligatory upon the court to split the case into two in such cases? I believe, Sir, that the Government have rushed to this Assembly with this Bill while their mind was in a state of confusion. They have entirely ignored that cases of this nature are already provided for. They have not cared to read the present section 540-A. I will read that section before this Honourable House, and I will show that, in the presence of that section, no legislation of this nature can be undertaken. It would be ultra vires. My second point is that it is obligatory upon the courts, under such circumstances, to split the case into two, or to adjourn the entire case—there is no third alternative. The section runs thus :

“(1) At any stage of an inquiry or trial under this Code, where two or more accused are before the Court, if the Judge or Magistrate is satisfied, for reasons to be recorded, that any one or more of such accused is or are incapable of remaining before the Court (all the conceivable cases are covered by this section), he may, if such accused is represented by a pleader, dispense with his attendance and proceed with such inquiry or trial in his absence, and may, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings direct the personal attendance of such accused.”

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : If he is represented.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Kindly have patience and listen to what clause (2) says :

“(2) If the accused in any such case is not represented by a pleader, or if the Judge or Magistrate considers his personal attendance necessary, he may, if he thinks fit, and for reasons to be recorded by him, either adjourn such inquiry or trial, or order that the case of such accused be taken up for trial separately.”

So the law as it now stands is that, in a case of this nature, where a man is incapable of remaining before the court, whether by visitation of God or by his own voluntary act, the court has got only two options, namely, either to adjourn the case when the court is of the opinion, that, within a short time the accused will be in a fit state of health to stand his trial, or to order that such an accused be tried separately. Now, if this provision is already on the Statute-book and if you also carry your measure through this Legislature today, your magistrates and judges will be handicapped and they will not be able, in view of section 440-A, to try the case as one case. Under section 540-A, there are only two courses open to them, either to split the case into two or to postpone it.

Now, Sir, we have serious objections against the proposed legislation, and if this Bill is not circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon, it will be our painful duty to oppose it, and oppose it tooth and nail. You say that you recognise that every accused person has got a right to be heard. You further say that you are not taking away that right from him, but that it is he who is voluntarily denying to himself that right. I realise that position, but the law should not be inconsistent. I would cite the analogy of an absconder, a man who, after committing a serious offence, chooses to run away and is not available for he cannot be arrested. Does he not deliberately and voluntarily try to avoid the process of law? Is an absconder in any way better than hunger striker? I maintain, Sir, that a hunger striker may be an honest man, may be a patriot, but surely a man who has absconded is a coward and a dishonest fellow. You have not so far brought forward any measure, you have not asked this Legislative Assembly to make a law that this dishonest and coward absconder should be proceeded against in his absence. (Hear, hear.) If against an absconder you cannot have ex parte proceedings, if you cannot pass judgment in his absence, how can you pass judgment against a man who is not in a fit state of health to stand his trial, no matter how deliberately he may have courted that condition?

The law about an absconder is contained in section 512. It authorises the court to record evidence in his absence with a view only to preserve that evidence and no further. When he is apprehended he has got to be brought before the court and the witnesses have to be summoned and examined in his presence, and he is to be afforded an opportunity of cross-examination. Section 512 only enables the court to record and preserve the evidence, and that evidence can only be available in case a certain witness is dead or is otherwise not available. I am perfectly willing to help you if you want to preserve the evidence against the hunger striker to be used in case the witness is not available, but certainly you cannot pass judgment in his absence. It may be said that, in the case of an absconder, why should you pass a sentence when the man is not available to undergo imprisonment or punishment. That is not good logic. Your point today is that the process of law should not be hindered, that cases should be expedited and not allowed to hang fire. Now, Sir, I have known cases where men have remained absconders for twelve years and more. During this whole course, the courts never proceeded to pass order of conviction against them. If an absconder is not available to undergo imprisonment or undergo punishment, I ask in all sincerity, is a man lying on a death-bed, one who is not capable of remaining in court, is he in a fit state of health to go to jail and undergo imprisonment? I implore the Government to accede to this request, which is made by Honourable Members on this side of the House, to stay their hands and to allow us to give more consideration to this question. If you are not willing to grant this, I have already made it plain that it will be our duty to oppose it. There is one further reason, Sir, which I would like to add as to why we want this measure to be postponed at this stage. We all know that in these days, in another place, and in another country, the Assembly of the League of Nations is in session. Our delegates, the Honourable Sir Muhammad Habibullah and his coadjutors, are taking a keen and very interesting part in the deliberations of that Assembly.

Honourable Members : Whose delegates?

Mr. Abdul Haye : No matter whose delegates they are. If in this Session this measure is carried through, if this Bill is placed on the Statute-book as an Act, and the news is conveyed to the Assembly of the League of Nations over the cables, I am afraid, the Assembly of the League of Nations may ask Sir Muhammad Habibullah and other delegates of the Government of India to withdraw from the Assembly sittings. I want to save them this humiliation, and I hope the House will agree to this.

Sir Darcy Lindsay (Bengal : European) : I desire on behalf of the Group I represent to say that we support the amendment, moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Roy, to refer the Bill for the consideration of a Select Committee. I entirely agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Roy in what he said about the good work that can come out of a reference to Select Committee. I cannot see any particular point in delaying this measure at this stage, as is recommended by my Honourable friends Mr. Kelkar and Mr. Abdul Haye. It appears that a position has arisen which requires immediate attention. The interests of the country as a whole demand this measure, and it is on those considerations that we desire to support the Bill. In supporting the Bill, we take into consideration the point that the Honourable the Home Member put before the House as to the grave injustice done to the accused who may be proved innocent. These men are to be kept lingering in confinement so long as it suits a hunger striker to delay the trial. I also take into consideration the hardship to the witnesses in the trial. In this particular matter to which reference has been made, namely, the Lahore case, we are told that a very large number of witnesses are cited. I regard it as a hardship to those men to be kept in suspense as to when they will be called upon, week after week and possibly month after month. I go even further and plead for the hunger strikers themselves and all those who wish to resort to this measure to enforce certain views of their own. I understand from my Honourable friend Colonel Gidney that the measures that have to be taken against hunger strikers, that is forcible feeding, tend to the creation of great discomfort, almost amounting to torture. It is to save these men against this, Sir, that I think a measure of this nature is very necessary.

As regards the law, I am no lawyer, but I do think that I am blessed with a certain amount of common sense. It appears to me that, if there is a defect in the law, there is no reason why it should not be remedied. We have frequently before us amendments of the law, and I take it that this is an amendment of that nature. My Honourable friends Mr. Kelkar and

[Sir Darcy Lindsay.]

Mr. Abdul Haye in a sense gave their approval to the principles of the Bill.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : No, no.

Sir Darcy Lindsay : They say there are quite good points in it, but they do not wish it to be brought forward at the present moment because it implied that it is connected with a case now pending. It was only yesterday, Sir, that my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah gave great praise to the Honourable the Home Member for the reasonableness of his attitude in connection with the Child Marriage Bill.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Only with that particular measure. I do not withdraw what I said.

Sir Darcy Lindsay : He said that it was a national measure in the interests of India, and he hoped that the Honourable the Home Member would carry on with that good policy. Now, I ask my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah if this is not a measure which carries forward that good policy.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I do not think my Honourable friend is quoting me correctly. I said this : if the Government will carry on that policy towards social reforms in this country, it will not only be welcome, but it will help India to go forward.

Sir Darcy Lindsay : I appeal to my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah to look at it from the correct perspective and consider whether it is not advisable to give and take in these matters, and when the Honourable the Home Member comes forward with a perfectly reasonable proposal for the better Government of India, I ask my Honourable friend to give his support to it.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I had no intention to inflict a speech on the House on this measure, but the utterance of Sir Darcy Lindsay compelled me to rise to my feet and to say what I have to say, not only of his speech but also of the measure which is before us. Sir Darcy Lindsay complained that he was possessed of common sense. (Laughter.) I have always considered that Sir Darcy Lindsay is possessed of very superior sense. But the only unfortunate part of it all is this, that in supporting lost causes, he misapplies that superior sense that he possesses, and this is one of the lost causes to which he has lent his support today. I say so for this reason. Sir Darcy Lindsay says that his common sense compels him to say that if there is a defect in the law, then we must remedy it. I want to ask Sir Darcy Lindsay, if there is a defect in the Government, what will he do ?

An Honourable Member : Remedy it.

Diwan Chaman Lall : There is obviously a defect in the Government. The Honourable the Home Member, in a speech in which he attempted to reason fairly well, suggested that there was a lacuna in the law. I suggest there is a lacuna in the Government, and my reason for suggesting that is a very simple one. Why are the Government in this very difficult position today, that they have to bring before this House a measure which is condemned by every decent lawyer in this country ? Why ? Simply because they have not come up to the expectations that the public entertain of them. It was a very simple matter. I hold in my hand a statement that was made,—I understand it was never actually handed over to the Honourable the Home Member,—a statement made at the time when this hunger strike was resorted to by two of the leading members who are engaged in this strike, Mr. Bhagat Singh and Mr. Dutt. And what do they say ? With your permission Sir, I intend to read that statement, and after having read it, I want to ask every Honourable Member present whether the majority of those demands, the totality of those demands, are such as could not be conceded by Government or by any civilised government. The letter is as follows :

“ Sir,

We, Bhagat Singh and B. K. Dutt were sentenced to life transportation in the Assembly bomb case, Delhi, on the 19th May, 1929. As long as we were under-trial prisoners in the Delhi Jail we were accorded very good treatment and were given very good diet ; but since our transfer from that jail to Mianwali and Lahore Central Jails respectively we are being treated as ordinary criminals. On the very first day we wrote an application to the higher authorities asking for better diet and a few other facilities and refused to take jail diet. Our demands were as follows :

(1) We as political prisoners should be given better diet and the standard of our dietary should at least be the same as that of European prisoners.”

(Interruption by Colonel Gidney.)

If Colonel Gidney will only possess his soul in patience I will deal with him in a minute. (Laughter.)

“ It is not the sameness of diet that we demand but sameness in the standard of diet. (2) We shall not be forced to do any hard or undignified labour at all. (3) All books, other than those proscribed along with writing materials should be allowed to us without any restriction. (4) At least one standard daily paper should be supplied to every political prisoner. (5) Political prisoners should have a special ward of their own in every jail provided with all necessities as those of the Europeans, and all the political prisoners in one jail must be kept together in that ward. (6) Toilet necessities should be supplied to us, and (7) better clothing.

We have explained above the demands that we made. They are most reasonable demands. The jail authorities told us one day that the higher authorities would comply with our demands. Apart from that they handle us very roughly while feeding us artificially, and Bhagat Singh was lying quite senseless on the 10th June, 1929, for about 15 minutes after forcible feeding, which we request to be stopped without further delay.

In addition we may be permitted to refer to the recommendations of the United Provinces Jail Committee by Pandit Jagat Narain and Khan Bahadur Hafiz Hidayat Hussain. They have recommended the political prisoners to be treated as better class prisoners.”

Then they add a postscript which has been quoted by the Honourable the Home Member :

“ By ‘ political prisoners ’ we mean those people who are convicted of offences against the State ; for instance, people who were convicted in the Lahore Conspiracy Case, 1915-17, the Kakori Conspiracy Case and the sedition cases in Bengal ”.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : What is the date of that letter ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : It was published in the Tribune of the 14th July, 1929. Nearly two months have elapsed since this letter was published. Now, I want to ask the Honourable the Home Member, will he kindly tell me what exactly there is in this document to which any reasonable man can take any exception ? Will he also further inform this House, whether, at the time when these demands were made, if the Government of India or the Government of Punjab had taken their courage in their hands and said that they would meet the situation by granting these legitimate and just demands, would the trouble have got to the stage that it has got to at the present moment? As I said, it is not a defect in the law; it is due to a defect in the system of Government under which we are living in the Punjab, that this situation has arisen. Far be it from me to say anything against the Punjab Government. Their souls are really past praying for, also their intelligence. If faced with a situation like this, they could turn round and say:

"You complain about differential treatment being meted out to you and to Europeans, we will concede this point; we will examine the broader issue later on, but as far as this particular issue is concerned we are quite prepared to concede the point that you are making and we will proceed with the case thereafter."

Can any Honourable Member on the Government Benches turn round and tell me that, if that had been done at that time, the trouble would not have been put an end to? And let me be perfectly clear about the position. It was not the original demand of any of these prisoners, and it has not been at any time the demand of any of these prisoners, that they should resort to some sort of device in order to get out of this trial. Nobody has yet imputed that particular motive to any of these people. All that they are hunger-striking for at the present moment is this, that they want better treatment from Government; they want to abolish this differential treatment that exists, treatment of one sort meted out to an Indian under-trial prisoner and treatment of another sort meted out to a European under-trial prisoner. Even if they are convicted prisoners it makes no difference. Would the system of Government have come to a stand-still if these seven demands that were made in this document had been conceded by the Punjab Government? It is too late in the day to discuss the purely technical legal issue. The issue is one which is purely and entirely human. Why did not the Punjab Government and the Home Department of the Government of India look upon from that point of view at that period?

I come now to the second point. What is the actual trouble at the present moment? An allegation has been made that five members of the Jail Committee appointed by the Punjab Government went down to interview these hunger strikers, and an allegation has been made in the press that a definite undertaking was given to these hunger strikers that Jatin Das would be released.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar: That statement has been subsequently modified in the press.

Diwan Chaman Lall: What statement is the Honourable the Home Member referring to?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar: It was said that an undertaking was given in regard to unconditional release. I am not aware as to what actually transpired, but I subsequently saw it stated in the press that no such suggestion was made by the Jail Inquiry Committee.

Diwan Chaman Lall: The Honourable Member did not hear what I said. In my statement I never mentioned the words "unconditional release". I said that a statement appeared in the press that five members of this Committee went down to interview the hunger strikers and they gave them an undertaking that they would recommend the immediate release of Jatin Das. I am sure the Honourable the Home Member, knowing the facts as he does, is not going to contradict me on this score; it has not been contradicted so far and that statement remains. I have seen other statements too in which it has been stated that a promise was made of unconditional release, but I am not basing my case upon that. I am basing my case upon a statement which has not been contradicted so far in the press, either by Government or by any member of the Jail Committee.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar: Sir, may I remind the Honourable Member that the Punjab Government made it known that, if an application for bail in the case of this particular prisoner were made, they would not oppose it?

Diwan Chaman Lall: Sir, the Honourable the Home Member is anticipating me; I am coming to that. If that statement was made, what was the action taken? What does the recommendation to Government of immediate release mean? Does it mean release on bail? It cannot obviously mean release on bail. If the Honourable Member postulates the independence of the judiciary, if he postulates that he has no right and that he cannot interfere with the judgment of the judiciary, then it cannot mean an undertaking to release the man on bail, because the release of a man on bail is a matter which is entirely within the competence of the trying magistrate. (Applause.) It is not within the competence of Government, and how then can they interpret the statement of the Jail Committee members about the immediate release of Jatin Das to mean that there should be a release on bail? The immediate release of Jatin Das recommended by the Jail Committee can mean only one thing, and that is his unconditional release from jail and from the case in which he is an accused.

Now, Sir, I should like the Honourable the Home Member to direct his attention to this. He as well as Government can get out of this difficulty by conceding these legitimate demands. Personally I consider they are very legitimate and humane, these demands of the hunger strikers. But he has a greater duty to perform, a duty which, under different circumstances, was once performed a couple of years ago by one of his colleagues, Sir George Rainy, in which he thought that a promise had been given in a particular matter which involved the payment of something like Rs. 16 lakhs to strikers, and because he considered that a promise had been implied, he stuck to his promise and the payment was made. I say that this recommendation of the members of the Jail Committee should be considered to be an implied promise, a promise which the Government must implement if they want to do the honourable thing by the members of the Jail Committee as well as by the public. And I ask them to do the right thing in this matter and implement the promise implied. It is not for me to go into the technicalities of the law and to point out how this particular clause that is sought to be inserted in the Criminal Procedure Code—540B—should not be and is not worthy of being placed on the Statute-book. As my friend, Mr. Abdul Haque pointed out quite clearly, the law is there already; you are empowered under 540A already. If you find that any particular under-trial prisoner is not capable of being placed before the court or brought to the bar, then you can try him separately. You have the right to do so; and if you have the right, I ask, what do you mean by bringing in this legislation which goes against all the declared canons of jurisprudence? For what is it that the Government ask us to do? They ask us to provide this: that they themselves shall be the prosecutors; that they themselves shall appoint the defence counsel and thereby be the defence themselves; and that they shall take evidence against the accused in open court, but without giving the accused any right whatsoever (An Honourable Member: "Shame".) of testing the validity or the correctness or truth of the evidence that is produced against him. That is exactly the situation which would arise, and I ask the Honourable Member not to press this point. I ask Honourable Members to remember, that if Government do press this point, they realising that the situation is not the creation of Bhagat Singh and Dutt, or of the hunger strikers in Lahore, but is entirely the creation of the Government of the Punjab—I do not know how far the Government of India are responsible in regard to this matter—they should do the right thing and not be allowed to do the wrong thing by placing this particular section on the Statute-book. What does it mean? If a man who voluntarily, by a voluntary act of his, or a course of conduct that he pursues, puts himself in this position, that he cannot be brought before the Court, then the Government can proceed to try him in spite of the fact that he is not present to defend himself. I want to ask the Honourable Member one question. Here we are dealing with a case in which the men refuse to take food. Suppose a man overeats himself by a voluntary course of conduct and thereby is unable to be present before the court, is this section going to apply to him?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar: He could be represented by counsel.

Diwan Chaman Lall: Supposing one of the under-trial prisoners exposes himself, takes his shirt off and exposes himself to the bitter north wind that blows in the Punjab and sometimes at Lahore, and catches double pneumonia, is that a voluntary course of conduct?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar: No.

Diwan Chaman Lall: The Honourable Member says "No". Can he point out to me where the "no" would come in, if this section is passed by this House? Where would it come in? Is it or is it not a voluntary course of conduct? I am merely pointing out one or two ridiculous aspects of this particular section.

I do appeal to the House, realising not only the technical importance of rejecting this measure, but realising the human aspect of the whole problem which has been so desperately, so foolishly, so absurdly and idiotically mismanaged by the Punjab Government—I ask every Member here, whose vote is not tied, to reject this particular provision that the Government of India is seeking to place upon the Statute-book.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim (Chittagong Division: Muhammadan Rural): I am grateful to you, Sir, for giving me this opportunity to take part in this debate. (An Honourable Member: "Louder please".) It may be in the minds of certain Honourable Members here that perhaps the back-benchers have not got any interest whatsoever in any measures, whether good, bad or indifferent. Perhaps there may be some truth in their contention, but nevertheless, I think it will be very necessary on our part to make our position clear,—the position of certain Members of the Central Muslim Party, who practically on important occasions keep the balance of decision in this House. So, Sir, being actuated by that idea, I am on my feet.

I have listened with very great interest to what Mr. Kelkar in support of his motion had to say, and also to what Mr. Abdul Haye said with regard to the Bill itself. It appears to me that it would have been a very good idea if, after clauses 1 and 2 of the Bill, it was stated "Notwithstanding anything contained in section 540A of the existing Criminal Procedure Code" to clarify the ambiguity and a great many points which have been made by my friend Mr. Abdul Haye would have fallen flat and would have taken away much of the cogency with which he couched his remarks. Going a little further, I also think that sub-section (3) of section 540B of the present Bill seems to be redundant because there is also section 537 of the existing Criminal Procedure Code and I think the way it is worded is sufficient to meet the point raised by sub-section (3) of this Bill. I said to my Honourable friend Mr. Roy that when balanced minds meet together they will be able to bring out some improvement in the sections of this Bill. That is my submission so far as this Bill is concerned.

Another reason which actuates me to say a few words in this connection is this. Mr. Kelkar has pleaded that the example which these hunger strikers are setting up will help him to liberate the country or will make his country as free as Ireland. Personally, I do not think that that is the right course for any honourable and peaceful man to follow, because my creed, my religion, is peace and as such I do not think that I could support that part of Mr. Kelkar's contention. There is also another reason why I am willing to refer this Bill to a Select Committee. Here, in the very body of the Bill, under section 540B there is a clause which runs as follows:

".....in consequence of a single act or series of acts done or course of conduct pursued by him after his arrest, has voluntarily rendered himself incapable of remaining before the Court....."

This is a very ambiguous sort of clause and it requires explanation. The Select Committee will be able to make it more explicit and clear. There may be some force in the statements made by Diwan Chaman Lall with regard to the treatment accorded to people who happen to be in jail. But my experience is of course otherwise—I have been a visitor of a jail in my part of Bengal. If there is something wrong which requires remedy, it is the duty of the non-official visitors, who go over there from year to year on behalf of the public, to suggest the ways in which the thing complained of requires improvement. To make a certain action of a particular jail officer or officers in any particular place a grievance or for that matter a political weapon, it seems to me that we cannot be a party to that sort of agitation. I understand that both the Governments of the Punjab and the United Provinces have appointed, as the result of the agitation of our friends here and also in the press, two Committees to inquire into the grievances of the people who happen to be His Majesty's guests. But without being disrespectful to those people who call for status, those gentlemen who say that they are fighting for the freedom of their country, I should say this that they should have realised in their minds, before they brought themselves into the clutches of the law, what sort of treatment and comforts they would have while they happen to be inside the jail. If that is their own voluntary choice, I do not think that really honourable men, as they claim themselves to be, should make any grievance whatsoever of what is being done there. I have never heard that by hunger strikes any political concession has been gained by any body in any part of the world. People will surely misjudge them and will say that they are shirking their ordeal and making cowards of themselves. If any body says, "Release them unconditionally like Colins and others", they will be hampering the ordered progress of this country towards responsible self-government, which we all covet. With these few words I support the amendment of Mr. K. C. Roy.

Mr. R. S. Sarma (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Mr. President, it is a very difficult effort for a new Member to make his first speech in this Honourable House and the climax of that discomfiture is reached when one has to address this House on such a contentious measure, a House which is perhaps still under the spell of the impassioned eloquence of my Honourable friends Diwan Chaman Lall and Mr. Abdul Haye. I hope that this House will give me some indulgence to place before them my view with regard to this Bill. I desire to support the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy for referring this Bill to a Select Committee and to oppose strongly the amendment of Mr. Kelkar. My support of this amendment for referring this Bill to a Select Committee implies my unequivocal support to the principle underlying this Bill. In lending my support to this Bill, I do not pretend to speak as a person that can claim either to be a lawyer or a jurist or a great leader or as my friend Mr. Chaman Lall is, a leader, a politician and a lawyer rolled into one. But as long as law is not divorced from common sense, I venture to submit to this House that no reasonable man can have any doubt as to the necessity of the proposed enactment. Diwan Chaman Lall, in his impassioned speech, diverted our attention from the real issue before this House, and side-tracked us by irrelevant considerations. He imported a lot of emotion into his speech on this Bill, which is a very very dry one indeed.

In spite of the legal technicalities that the Honourable Mr. Abdul Haye introduced in his speech, to me a layman, the thing appears to be very simple and it is this. So long as the Government has not abdicated or otherwise been replaced, by means and methods either violent or non-violent, it must carry on the administration of justice. Nobody can doubt that any Government would be failing in its elementary duty and in its fundamental obligations to society, if it allowed the machinery of the administration of law to break down or to be paralysed and wrecked by the very simple device of an accused in a case choosing to render it impossible for law to function. I shall illustrate my point. If a gang of about 20 criminals conspire, and commit dacoity and are arrested, all that they have got to do to evade trial is for every one of the gang to try in turn to have a hand in the game of postponing the trial by making himself unfit to appear in a court of law and the Court will be compelled to abandon the trial unless the robbers condescend to desist from obstructing the course of justice and are pleased to decide that they have no objection to be tried by a court of law.

It is the easiest of all performances in the world to cloud the issue by referring to platitudes, such as liberty of the subject, or the fundamental right of every accused to be present at the trial. If Honourable Members who indulge in such platitudes are the unfortunate victims of a heinous crime, and the perpetrators of that crime are arrested, and these people take it into their heads to have recourse to these devices, and by a pre-concerted plan render the administration of justice impossible by making themselves unfit to attend the trial, then I think Mr. Chaman Lall and others who are of his way of thinking will have a better appreciation of the other side of the picture.

There is another point which the Honourable the Home Member made with regard to this Bill, namely, the question of delay. We in Bengal, who have had experience of political trials, know what inordinate delays in trials mean. Everybody knows that these inordinate delays are subversive of fair trial. So long as the accused go on practising the congenial game of absenting themselves, what happens to the witnesses? The longer the delay, the greater the opportunities to seduce witnesses, the larger the scope for intimidation. There is also the danger of the failure of justice, by witnesses finding it impossible to be able to give a long and connected narrative of events, in view of the lapse of time.

With regard to this Bill, I cannot understand what objection any reasonable man can have. How can it be said that the position of the accused is rendered in any way difficult by the provisions of the Bill? The accused is allowed a full opportunity to attend, and if he does not choose to avail himself of his opportunity by his own voluntary Act, I do not think, Sir, that anybody can have the face to say that the provisions of the Bill will operate harshly upon the accused. Mr. K. C. Roy pointed out this morning that these devices such as hunger strikes are getting more and more popular, and everybody knows that the success achieved by these Indian MacSwineys will tend to increase their number. A new situation has really arisen, and this new device has got to be met. If a gang of accused claim the power to paralyse the administration of law by their own voluntary acts, I think every law-abiding citizen has the right to expect this Government to introduce legislation to fight this new menace.

The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, in the course of his eloquent address in winding up the debate on the Sarda Bill yesterday, made these striking observations. I am quoting him from memory. He said that "The eyes of the whole world are upon this House, that the House is on its trial and to the extent they helped in the passing of that legislation, to that extent they would rise in the estimation of the peoples of this world." Those words are still ringing in our ears and they are true today as they were yesterday, as true of the present Bill as they were of the Sarda Bill. No legislature, with a reputation for sane and sober statesmanship and alive to its responsibilities for the administration of law and order, can throw out a measure so simple, yet so necessary.

In conclusion I want to refer to one point to which Mr. Chaman Lall made reference in the course of his speech. He said that no decent man, who is not tied to the Official Benches, will fail to go to the same lobby as Mr. Kelkar. This canard about non-official nominated Members being tied to the Official Benches is absolute rubbish. I may point out to Mr. Chaman Lall that the non-official nominated Members are unfettered, and that they vote according to the best of their judgment, and if he says that we are tied to the Official Benches, let me remind him that our ties are like silken threads compared to the chain of triple steel in which the unruly Swarajist followers are held by their party leader.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, all great men have hobbies ; and my Honourable friend Sir James Crerar being a great man has his own hobbies. His principal hobby at the moment seems to be to appear before this House as the central figure in a series of legislative stunts of a sensational and unconstitutional nature. (Laughter.) During the last twelve months Sir James Crerar has, on several occasions, stood up before this House with a solemn face and has urged on this House the grave and emergent necessity for enacting the Public Safety Bill. Only the other day my Honourable friend the Home Member had to admit that the Public Safety Bill has been a dead letter. Now, Sir, I ask the Government of India if they have enhanced their reputation for political or administrative sanity by insisting on placing on the Statute-book the Public Safety Bill by means of an Ordinance in the teeth of public opposition, and then being forced to admit that this odious legislation has been proved to be unnecessary ? (Applause from the Non-Official Benches.)

Sir, every human being is liable to err ; even the august personages who constitute the Government of India are liable to err, although they may not be prepared to admit it. We thought, however, Sir, that the Government of India would benefit from past experience and that they would seriously consider every aspect of the case before they came again before this House with legislation of a similar nature ; but in that we have been disappointed.

Sir, once again the Government of India approach this House with a Bill unparalleled in the history of Criminal Jurisprudence. I assert, and I think my Honourable friend the Law Member will admit, that it is the basic principle of the Criminal Jurisprudence of every civilized country that no accused can be tried and convicted ex parte in his absence unless he is represented by his counsel. The only argument which I have been able to discover from the brief and unconvincing Statement of Objects and Reasons is that unless this Bill is placed on the Statute-book, there will be delay and defeat of justice in a number of cases. My Honourable friend, Mr. Abdul Haye, has read out to the House section 540A of the Criminal Procedure Code. That section, Sir, makes ample provision for the trial of several co-accused when one or more of them are incapacitated from attending court whether by their own voluntary acts or by any other circumstance. Now what is the necessity of trying to draw this fine distinction between incapacity to attend court brought about by an accused person's own voluntary acts and incapacity brought about by circumstances beyond his control ? The fact remains that the Criminal Procedure Code makes ample provision for a trial under these circumstances. Sir, I am not convinced that the Government of India themselves believe in the necessity of the measure they have brought before the House on the grounds which they have advanced.

Now, Sir, having arrived at that premises, I must prove the matter further, and in doing so I am forced to the irresistible conclusion that the main object which has actuated the Government of India in bringing this Bill before the House is not because they are afraid of the delay or defect of justice, but because they are seriously alarmed at the consequences, the far-reaching consequences to the country of these hunger strikes. ("Hear, hear", from the Non-official Benches.)

Sir, the Government of India are fully alive to the fact that it is not every hunger-strike which can appeal to the country ; in order that a hunger-strike may appeal to the country, certain factors must be complied with. The man must have a good cause and he must believe in his cause, the man must have a brave and self-sacrificing spirit, and the man must feel that he has public opinion behind him in the fight he is putting up. Now, Sir, the real fear of the Government of India is that if hunger-strikes are resorted to in these series of political prosecutions, they are calculated to stimulate public opinion, to focus public opinion on the grievances of India, to arouse every section of the people of India to a fuller and more vivid realisation of the humiliating and degraded condition in which Indians are living at the present moment. (Applause.)

Sir, turning now to my Honourable friend Mr. Sarma, I congratulate him on two things : his maiden speech and his extremely well-fed appearance. (Laughter.)

Sir Denys Bray : Order, order.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Sarma has tried to argue that if ordinary criminals resort to hunger strikes, the administration of justice will be brought to a standstill. I wonder, Sir, if my friend Mr. Sarma has ever observed a fast for 48 hours ?

Mr. R. S. Sarma : I have often done that.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi : Well, then, appearances are deceptive. (Laughter.) Now, the whole point which Mr. Sarma has tried to make out is that hunger-strikes will be frequently resorted to by ordinary criminals. But I repeat, Sir, that no man will resort to hunger strike unless he has a good cause and believes in his cause, unless he has a noble spirit, and unless he feels that he has got public opinion and sentiment behind him in the cause that he is fighting for. (Hear, hear.) There is absolutely no analogy between the case of the ordinary criminal and these brave, unfortunate men who starve themselves to death for a good cause and who commend public support and sympathy. Sir, I do not think the Government of India would for one moment adopt the novel and puerile arguments advanced by Mr. Sarma. The Government of India have made it clear that the object of this Bill is to deal with the situation created by the hunger strikers in the Lahore alleged conspiracy case, who have got the country behind them in the fight which they are putting up against the treatment meted out to them in jail based on the utterly indefensible principle of racial discrimination. (Applause.)

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Sir, I rise to oppose the motion for consideration made by the Honourable the Home Member, and also the amendment for a Select Committee moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. K. C. Roy ; and I do so not only on behalf of myself but on behalf of the whole of the Congress Party which is determined to oppose this Bill, lock, stock and barrel. I am equally opposed on principle to the circulation of this Bill, because I do not think it needs any circulation at all. It is, on the face of it, so outrageous a measure that no section of the public could possibly be in its favour, and therefore any circulation of the Bill would be a mere waste of time. But if there are people in this House and outside who have any doubt on the matter, then we are willing that the amendment for circulation is passed. But, Sir, the Congress Benches are definitely convinced that public opinion is bound to resist this attempt at the curtailment of the elementary rights of the accused in a criminal case. Sir, I congratulate the Government on the latest recruit they have got in the person of Mr. Sarma. (Hear, hear.) I congratulate Mr. Sarma also on his maiden speech and on his eloquence, which I think however might well have been used in a better cause than supporting a Government dead to all sense of human feeling. Sir, my friend Mr. K. C. Roy, in moving for a Select Committee, said that Government were compelled to resort to this measure, and that circumstances were unparalleled and there was no other way but to have a legislation of this kind. Mr. Abdul Haye and other friends have conclusively established that, if Government really wanted to proceed with the trial, then there is abundant provision in the Criminal Procedure Code as it stands today and that there is nothing to prevent them from going on with the trial against those accused persons who are still capable of being brought before the Court. But it appears that the Government are not satisfied with that; they want to proceed with this trial against all the accused at one and the same time. And it is for this purpose that they are prepared to trample under foot the rights of the accused in criminal cases. My Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy said that this is an unparalleled case. I submit, Sir, that it is both unparalleled and unparalleled. If my friend has not forgotten the suffragettes' agitation in England only 20 years ago, he will find that the suffragettes were being arrested and sent to jail where they went on hunger-strike. Dozens of suffragettes were on hunger-strike in England about 20 years ago, not once or twice but several times, and the judiciary never for a moment suggested that because these women were on hunger strike....

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : They were on hunger-strike after conviction.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Not always; however I am coming to cases of hunger strike before conviction. The judiciary never for once suggested that special measures should be taken for the purpose of preventing this hunger strike. And, whenever a suffragette was on hunger strike, she was released, but if necessary after she got better, she was again arrested. The Honourable the Home Member thinks that there is no parallel of hunger strike before conviction. I will make him a present of the celebrated Saccho-Vanzetti case in America which lasted for seven years. In India the hunger strikes are not yet three months old. In the celebrated Saccho-Vanzetti case the Government of America and the judiciary combined to send two innocent workers to the electric chair and murdered them. Saccho and Vanzetti both went on hunger strike, not only after conviction but during the retrial motion and not for a day or two but for 33 days. I will ask the Honourable the Home Member to refer to a book called "Boston" written by Upton Sinclair and, although it is supposed to be a novel, there is no doubt, as anybody who reads the book will find, that so far as references to Saccho and Vanzetti are concerned, everything stated in the book has actually happened, and whatever is written in "Boston" about Saccho and Vanzetti personally is correct. On page 489, under Chapter "Laws delays" it is stated that Saccho rebelled in the jail. Because he did not get the kind of work which suited his dignity, as he thought it, Saccho declared what he called a "hungry-strike". Being an Italian, he did not know the English term. He said: "I am on hungry-strike". And for 33 days he did not touch food. What happened then? There was no corresponding the Honourable Sir James Crerar to bring a legislative measure to see that because the accused was hunger-striking, his presence must be dispensed with, and the Court should proceed with the inquiry or the trial in his absence. Although there was a Judge, who was, according to this book, hard-hearted, and trampled under-foot all the traditions of a judicial office, when Saccho hunger-struck for 33 days, the Sheriff, in charge of the jail, refused under the circumstances to take the responsibility of bringing Saccho from the jail to the court. They did not pass any measure, which at once released the Executive from the obligation to present the evidence against the accused in his presence and to give him the fullest right of cross-examination. There were more occasions than one of hunger-strike on the part of these two prisoners. Yet never have we heard that there was any demand in America, that the presence of these people should be dispensed with and that the trial should proceed in their absence; does the Honourable Member and those who support this Bill realise that the possibilities are, if you proceed with a trial against an accused in his absence, that it may result, indeed, it is almost always bound to result in a conviction, in the absence of anybody to contradict the evidence and to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses? As the opposite side evidence is given on each, and there is nothing to contradict it, the court will be ordinarily bound to accept it. There is no lawyer to defend the accused and there is no evidence that can be produced. In such conditions the only inevitable conclusion of the trial would be the conviction of the accused, and if that conviction is for murder or for State offences, the chances are that one or more persons would be deprived of their lives, and yet it would be done under the forms of judicial procedure and in the name of justice. Is the House prepared to countenance this? Government are here to demand a power which may lead to the conviction and the judicial murder of human beings who have had no occasion to stand their trial. Why does Government want such a power? Cannot Government go on with the trial against those who are not hunger-striking? Has not Government already realised that these hunger-strikers are standing out for a principle? They have made their terms already clear. They want that they should be given decent treatment befitting civilised people while they are under trial.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : That is not the whole demand.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : That is the main demand, and they protest against the discriminations that are made in the treatment of the European under-arrests and Indian under-arrests. I remember having read the Bombay Jail Code and the several cases which happened in 1921. I have also read of horrors of the Vizapur jail and the discrimination that was made between the Indian prisoners and the European prisoners. It will be remembered that European prisoners were given chairs, tables, tea, milk, towel and soap and many other articles of a like nature at public expense. One would have thought that these were not convicts, prisoners or criminals, but State guests having a rest-cure in a sanatorium. Now, what is the demand that the Indian hunger-strikers are making? They say: "Give us reasonable and civilised terms while we are under trial and make no discrimination". If the Europeans can be given a certain standard of life irrespective of whether they have used violence or not, irrespective of whether they are criminals or not, I cannot understand why the same treatment could not be given to the Indians under trial. Why should they be compelled to go on hunger-strike to the extent of 40, 50, 60, 70 and even 80 days, in a matter where no question of principle is involved? Here are cases of hunger-strike unparalleled in the history of the world. Even the hunger-strike of Mr. MacSwiney lasted only for 63 days; but these young men are dying for a cause, and for a principle and it is to our infinite shame that we find our own countrymen sitting behind the Government Benches and asking for a reference of this Bill to the Select Committee, talking through their hats and comparing these young men with brigands and robbers. What is it that these young boys demand? Why, Sir, this Bill could be rolled up in a minute and the hunger-strike would be over in another minute if the Government would simply accede to the reasonable requests which they want as civilised human beings. In the last Session, Bhagat Singh and Dutt were in the House at Delhi. After the last Session they were convicted in the famous Assembly bomb case. The House has already passed a Resolution condemning their violent action. But it should not be forgotten, that, even though they were guilty of criminal offence, for which the House rightly condemned them, even though nobody who has any regard for the non-cooperation movement of Mahatma Gandhi will ever stand up for violence, the entire responsibility for whatever happens in this country, whether violent or non-violent, rests and must rest on those Benches opposite and on them alone. What does this Bill amount to? Under the forms of law, Government want the power to take human lives. That is nothing more and nothing less than the object of the Bill. Bhagat Singh may be a criminal; Dutt may not be a criminal. We do not know whether the rest of the hunger-strikers are criminals or not; but these young men will ever remain enshrined in the memory of this country after every one in this House is wiped out owing to the splendid self-sacrifice that they are offering today on a matter of principle. There is nothing more that a man can give for any cause. They are giving away the most precious possession of man, namely, their lives. They are surrendering their lives at the altar of what they consider to be their duty. If Government were wise in their time, if Government will only understand the springs of human action in the right spirit, they would immediately grant the demand of the hunger-strikers. There is nothing unreasonable, nothing wrong in their demand. It is only obstinacy, cussedness and the prestige of this Government which prevent them from acceding to the reasonable demands of these persons and ending this most unfortunate controversy. I agree with Mr. Sarma in saying that the whole world is looking at us, the whole world is watching whether the Indians are a nation of cowards and sycophants or whether, even in their present degraded condition, they have the courage to say, "No" when occasion demands. I hope the House will prove by its vote that, degraded as we are, we cannot stand the outrage that is being contemplated against these heroic young men, and I hope the House will stand united and will say, "No", in no uncertain terms to the motion of the Government. Sir, I oppose.

Mr. H. W. Emerson (Home Secretary): Sir, several Honourable Members, during the course of the debate, have referred to the fact that this Bill is unnecessary because the existing law provides the machinery by which these accused can be brought to trial. I am not concerned with the legal aspects of the case, nor am I competent to discuss them. But there are certain facts concerned with that statement that it is necessary to explain to the House. Section 540 A (2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that, when one of the accused is not present himself and is not represented by counsel, the Court may split the trial up and proceed against those accused who are present, or may adjourn the case. Honourable Members have asked me why is this course not pursued in the present case. Now, at one time or another, fifteen of the sixteen accused produced before the Court have been on hunger strike. The largest number that has been on hunger strike at one time is 13. At the various hearings of the case, sometimes six have been absent, sometimes five, sometimes four and so on. But those accused who have been absent on various days have varied from hearing to hearing and it has never been possible to predict that on a certain date those accused would be present who were present on the previous hearing. Moreover, a hunger strike involves artificial feeding, and the hunger strikers have it in their power by resistance to that artificial feeding to make themselves incapable of attending a hearing. Thus, where you have a large number of accused, it is possible for them so to ring the changes as to make it impracticable to proceed against any of them. The difficulties in the present case are particularly great because of the large number of accused and because of the large number of witnesses. The prosecution has already filed a list of 450 witnesses, whom they intend to call, and I understand that it is probable that 200 more will be added to that number. Now it is true that, under the existing law, we can go on and have ten separate trials or even sixteen separate trials, but from the practical point of view, it is not possible to produce 650 witnesses in sixteen different trials.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Are all the witnesses to be produced in each case?

Mr. H. W. Emerson: I believe the case against all the accused is practically the same. It may be said that this was the state of affairs before the suspension of the hunger-strike; but that now, there are only eight on hunger-strike and eight are taking food. My Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye suggested that the case should proceed against the latter block of accused. The answer again is that there is no guarantee whatsoever that today or tomorrow or the next day one or more of those eight will not join the hunger-strikers. In fact, they have given a statement to the Punjab Government that, in certain circumstances, such a course would be pursued. I hope, therefore, that Honourable Members will be satisfied that, from a practical point of view, the remedy provided by section 540 of the Criminal Procedure Code is in fact no remedy at all.

Several Honourable Members on the other side of the House have put forward the argument that this Bill is unnecessary, because a remedy is to be found in another direction. My Honourable friend Mr. Chaman Lal read out the petition of Bhagat Singh and Dutt, published in the Tribune of July 14; he and other speakers maintained that there was nothing unreasonable in their demands; the Punjab Government by a stroke of the pen could have accepted them, and in refusing to make that stroke they are guilty of the situation that now exists and are responsible for any consequences that may result.

The Honourable Mr. Jamnadas Mehta said the same thing, only I think, in his case, he attributed the present situation to the cussedness of the Government of India. (A Voice : "Is there any doubt?")

However, Sir, I wish to satisfy this House that these demands, simple though they may appear, involve vital principles. There are three issues raised. First of all there is the question as to whether the demands of Bhagat Singh and Dutt are reasonable as applied to themselves; secondly, there is the general treatment of political prisoners; and thirdly, there is the racial question of the differentiation between European and Indian prisoners.

The issues raised cover a wide field, but it is only fair to Government that the case should be fully put, and if I have to deal in some detail with these matters, I am sure the House will have forbearance with me, having regard to the deep interest in these questions which they have evinced. If we take the demands of Bhagat Singh and Dutt, we can I think separate them according to their character and according to the persons to whom they are to apply. In regard to their character, the claims are briefly, that they should receive the same treatment as European prisoners. They should be allowed newspapers, furniture, books and so on. If these demands were claimed for special class prisoners I myself would be inclined to say that they are perhaps a little extravagant in some directions, and that they require some modification; but I would not say that they were totally unreasonable. It is when we come to the second aspect, namely, the class of prisoners to whom those privileges are to be applied, that Government must definitely join issue with those who argue that their acceptance would be only a reasonable gesture.

Mr. Chaman Lall this morning read out the petition of these prisoners and it is only necessary for me to repeat the footnote for the benefit of the Honourable Members of this House :

"By 'political prisoners' we mean all those people who are convicted for offences against the State; for instance, the people who were convicted in the Lahore Conspiracy cases, 1915—17, the Kakori Conspiracy case and sedition cases in general."

Diwan Chaman Lall : Does the Honourable Member deny that they are political prisoners?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : I will deal with you faithfully later.

The Honourable the Home Member gave a brief description of the Ghadr Conspiracy Case of 1915—17 and the Kakori Conspiracy Case of 1925. It was a feature of those cases that the victims were usually peaceful, harmless villagers. Whatever may have been the sins of omission and commission on the part of Government, those villagers had no concern with them. Another feature of the cases was the brutality of the offences committed, and in this connection I will read a very short extract from the appellate judgment in the Kakori Case of the Chief Court of Oudh :

"On the 9th March, 1925, a similar armed dacoity was committed in Bichpuri. The victims on this occasion were Toti, a well-to-do cultivator with a holding of some 36 acres, his brother Bihari and their wives and children. A gang of over 15 men raided their house between 9 and 10 p.m. Some of the members of the gang were in possession of fire-arms. The dacoits used considerable violence on the inmates and employed torture. One of them seized Toti's young son, placed the edge of a knife at his throat and threatened to cut his throat if Toti did not disclose where his money and valuables were concealed. The boy was not, however, seriously injured. Toti was nearly throttled, the point of a knife was placed against each of his eyes and he was threatened with blindness if he did not give up his property. He was not blinded, but he received a cut under one eye. Finally a cloth soaked in oil was inserted between his eyes. The cloth was then set alight."

These, Sir, are some of the offences committed by these persons for whom it is claimed that special privileges should be granted. In this very case a reduction of sentence was pleaded before the Chief Court of Oudh on the ground that these robberies were committed, not for the personal gain of the robbers, but solely in order to obtain funds for the furtherance of a cause which they had at heart. This is what the learned Judges said :

"It appears to us that the distinction in gravity between the act of a man who shoots because he desires to kill another and a man who shoots to kill because he desires that another man should not interfere with his committing a robbery, is too fine to form the basis for a difference in sentence; and we can find nothing to make the robbery of inoffensive people, such robbery being accompanied by murder, appreciably excused by the fact that the perpetrators desired funds for the purpose of conducting revolutionary propaganda."

This House looks with suspicion at the Executive; but we have here the opinion of the highest judicial tribunal to which the accused could appeal.

The demands of Messrs. Bhagat Singh and Dutt, including as they do a reference to the Kakori and Ghadr conspiracy cases, leave no manner of doubt as to what they involve. But briefly, they amount to this : that no matter how lowly may be the origin of a political prisoner, no matter how humble may be his social status, no matter what atrocities he may commit or what loss of life and property he may inflict on innocent persons, nonetheless, if he is able to prove that his motive was political, he is to be given privileges denied to the ordinary criminal whose crimes are not sanctified with the halo of political motive.....

An Honourable Member : What happens to Europeans?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : I intend to deal later with Europeans. I will first of all deal with political prisoners. Now, Sir, do my Honourable friends suggest that the Punjab Government were to come to a decision of the kind stated above, and without a moment's hesitation, and merely to get themselves out of a temporary difficulty, they were to surrender vital principles? It is the duty of Government to examine and redress grievances where those grievances are reasonable, but it is equally their duty to refuse to surrender vital principles.....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Of racial discrimination for under-trial prisoners.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : ....when they are extorted by the methods of blackmail. I have said that it is the duty of Government to examine grievances where they are reasonable; and in this connection I should like to say a few words about the general question of political prisoners. Government are conscious of the fact that this matter is a subject of deep and genuine concern to Members of this House, and to a large section of the public. They know that there is a belief abroad that the Government of India and Local Governments treat their political prisoners in a manner which is much less liberal than similar prisoners are treated in other countries. I would like to remove the misconception that exists in this matter, and at the same time to attempt to explain the policy of Government. We do not recognise in our jail rules the class of political prisoners; we recognise the class of special class prisoners, which is wider than that of political. We say that, provided a man has not committed certain offences, which, for the sake of brevity, I will call excluded offences, and provided that his status, education and manner of living are such as to justify certain privileges, then we do not care whether he has committed that offence with a political motive or a religious motive or a personal motive; we give him those privileges.

An Honourable Member : A wrong statement.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : There are two criteria : firstly, the nature of the offence, and secondly the character, status, and education of the prisoner. The excluded offences are, broadly speaking, those which involve violence or abetment of violence or which involve offences against property, or seducing of soldiers or police from their allegiance, and offences committed on hire in pursuit of political causes, that is to say, a political offender who is paid to commit an offence. That is broadly speaking....

Diwan Chaman Lall : Do you know of any cases like that? May I ask the Honourable Member if he is prepared to substantiate that statement that there are politicians who are paid to commit crimes?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : The statement I made was that such offences were included in these offences that are excluded from special consideration. I made no statement that such offences were committed.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is the Honourable Member prepared to withdraw that statement?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : Those, Sir, are the excluded offences. A prisoner who is classed as a special class prisoner enjoys certain concessions denied to the ordinary prisoner. He is allowed to wear his own clothing; he has accommodation separate from other prisoners; he is allowed to supplement his diet by purchase from outside; he is given no labour unsuited to his previous position in life, and he is allowed to associate with persons of his own class. Now, the common statement made is that those privileges which we give are first of all illiberal in their character, and secondly, that they are applied only to a small section of the class of prisoners who get similar benefits in other countries. We have been at pains to ascertain what is the practice in other countries; and we chose England, France and America as being the countries in which political prisoners were likely to be treated more liberally than anywhere else. In England a Bill was moved in 1908 and again in 1912 to provide facilities for political prisoners. The Bill made no progress, and the attempt has not been renewed since 1912. Neither the law in England nor the rules of jail administration take any account of political motive.

The Prison Act of 1898 provides that prisoners shall be divided into three classes. In the first division are included persons whose character, antecedents and the nature of their offences warrant such inclusion. But it is very rarely that prisoners are included in that division, and many of those who are included are persons who have not sent their sons or daughters to school as the Compulsory Education Act requires. About 1912 these statutory rules were liberalised by a measure, which is often referred to in the Indian Press as the Churchill Rule. It was introduced by Mr. Winston Churchill when he was Home Secretary, and the occasion on which he introduced it was the situation created by the activities of the suffragettes. The suffragettes were occasionally guilty of technical felony; they sometimes broke a window; occasionally caused a fire, and so on; and in order to mitigate the rigours of imprisonment of persons of that class, Mr. Churchill introduced the rule. It laid down that the privileges should not be given in any case which involved dishonesty, cruelty, indecency, or serious violence, and they should be given only to persons of good character. Here, again, a certain number of suffragettes benefited, but there was, and still is, a great prejudice against allowing to prisoners the benefits of the rule. Where privileges are given, as for instance, to first class misdemeanants, they are on the lines of those given in India. In one or two respects they are more liberal, for instance, an interview is allowed once a fortnight instead of once a month, a letter is allowed to be written once a fortnight instead of once a month. In other ways, they are less liberal. For instance, the English first class prisoner has to pay for any menial services rendered to him by another prisoner; under our rules those services are free. In one very important respect our rules are far more humane than those of England. In England a first class misdemeanant is confined in practically solitary confinement. He is allowed to associate with persons of the same class for one hour a day, but it is rare that there are any persons of his class in the same prison. It practically amounts to this, that he is confined in solitary confinement. Our rules definitely give the right of association not for an hour a day, but continuous association with other first class prisoners. I think, therefore, that Government can justly claim that our rules, as they stand at present, are more liberal than the English rules.

Now, with regard to France, there are no statutory rules and the practice varies in accordance with the Government in power. But no prisoner convicted of any crime involving violence is eligible for any of the privileges, and the privileges are confined to what would be called in India political prisoners guilty of the less serious offences. Again, the privileges are very similar to those granted in India; they are certainly not more generous. In America....

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member going to deal with every country?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : Only America, Sir. In America there are no rules at all; they do not recognise political motive.

On behalf, therefore, of our existing rules, I put forward three claims. Intolerant as they are stated to be, firstly, their liberality has no parallel in the previous history of this country, whether under Hindu, Muhammadan or Sikh rule; secondly, they have no parallel in the present history of neighbouring countries; and thirdly, we have been unable to ascertain any Western country in which the rules are more generous than here. But that is not all. Government recognise that there is uneasiness about these rules; and they do not claim that they are perfect. If there are any defects in them, we desire that those defects should be put right, and with that end in view we have addressed Local Governments and have asked them to re-examine the rules relating not only to special class prisoners but also to under-trial prisoners. Our letter dated the 17th August is not confidential, and I should be glad to give a copy to any Member who so desires. I think that any Member who reads the terms of that letter will admit that it is framed on as generous lines as it is possible to frame it, with the vital reservation that we do not accept the claim that a man should be given these privileges, whatever his offence may be, merely because he had a political, religious or other motive.

Now, there are many points raised in that letter, and I am not going to weary the House by explaining them, but I will just take one or two of the more important points in which I believe that Honourable Members are specially interested. First of all, there is the question which is agitating the minds of a large number of people, that there is a big difference between the scale laid down for the ordinary prisoner, the ordinary cultivator or labourer, and that fixed for the European. Now, so far as under-trial and special class prisoners are concerned, we have suggested to Local Governments that it is a point for consideration whether one or more scales ought not to be introduced at Government's expense, varying according to the mode of life of the prisoner concerned. Then, another important point in which Members I think are interested is the question as to whether our excluded offences are not too wide in scope. We have invited Local Governments to examine that question and to see for instance, whether it is necessary to include all offences against property. I have no doubt they will also consider whether it is necessary to include those offences committed by hired persons in pursuance of a political movement—offences which several Honourable Members say do not exist and never have existed. We have asked Local Governments to pay particular regard to public opinion, and in our communiqué, dated the 10th August we invited leaders of public opinion to assist Local Governments with their advice. I have no doubt that as a result of the re-examination of the rules, our final rules will be far more liberal than any that are to be found in any other country in the world.

Now, Sir, I come to the most difficult and unpleasant part of my subject—the question of the differentiation between Europeans and Indians. For some reasons I regret that this matter has been introduced into this debate, because racial prejudices are apt to warp the judgment and to cloud the issues. For other reasons I am glad that the opportunity has been given of trying to examine the essentials of the problem. We have, I think, to maintain a proper sense of proportion in this matter. We have to realise what the dimensions of the problem are. Yesterday I ascertained from the Punjab Government what was the proportion of European prisoners to the total number of prisoners confined in the jails of the province. I was told that there were 13 European prisoners out of a total of 21,000. As one Honourable Member has said, the question of number does not affect the principle. That is quite true, but as practical and reasonable men (and we are all practical and reasonable men), when we come to search for a solution, we have to pay some regard to the number. My next point is that I would like to endorse some of the observations of Sir Louis Stuart in the Report of the Jail Inquiry Committee. Sir Louis

Stuart is the Chief Judge of the Chief Court of Oudh and he was the Chairman of the Committee. I feel certain that every European in the House will wholeheartedly endorse what Sir Louis Stuart said. This is what he stated :

“ I have always held the view that an offence committed by a European is in no way palliated by the fact that he is a European. I consider that the offence is aggravated by that fact.”

And then he went on to say that the differentiation in treatment was purely on questions of health. He takes the reasonable line that an important principle of jail administration should be to give to every person, to whatever race he may belong, facilities sufficient to keep him in a reasonable standard of health ; but that, in the interests of the taxpayer, no further facilities should be given. Now, what is this differentiation between the European and Indian prisoner ?

I think it will assist the House to grasp what is rather a confusing subject, if I make it clear that the differentiation occurs in the basic jail rules ; that is to say, there are different basic scales of diet laid down for the ordinary prisoner and for the European prisoner. When we come to the additional privileges granted to under-trial prisoners, to the additional privileges granted to special class prisoners, there is no distinction whatsoever. The rules are exactly the same. It is in the basic treatment that the differentiation exists.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : They do not want any additional privileges, because the ordinary scale of diet of European prisoners include all these and other special privileges.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : I cannot agree with the Honourable Member there.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member speaks from experience. (Laughter.)

Mr. H. W. Emerson : In that case, Sir, I gladly accept the Honourable Member's statement. It is not, I believe, argued that the rules for the treatment of European prisoners provide facilities which are excessive having regard to the maintenance of their health.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : How do you define the word “ European ” in this connection ?

Mr. H. W. Emerson : The Honourable Member has asked me a question to which in any case I was going to give an answer. The rules relating to Europeans in the jail manuals of most of the provinces apply to any one, whether European or Indian, who has adopted the European mode of life. That, Sir, is the answer to the Honourable Member's question. I have seen no evidence to show that the facilities granted to Europeans are excessive in regard to a reasonable standard of health. In fact, so far as the scale of diet is concerned, it is less liberal than that given in English prisons to ordinary prisoners. Now Honourable Members wish that, whatever differentiation there is should be swept aside (Some Honourable Members : “ Yes, yes ”), and the fact that the Punjab Government has not swept it aside is one of the reasons why their action has been condemned. Now there are two ways in which you can sweep away these differences. You can either level up or you can level down. If you level down and fix the standard of the ordinary Indian prisoner for the European, well, that unquestionably means death to the European. (Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : "So far so good".) (Another Honourable Member : "What is the harm"?) And I cannot believe that Honourable Members wish to urge Local Governments to a course of action which would involve the very inhumanity which they are condemning in another connection. (Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : "Confine it to Indians themselves.") The other remedy is to level up ; and that is the demand in Bhagat Singh's statement. Now, for the case of the Punjab, I have made a calculation in order to find out how much it would cost to level up. To level up would involve additional expenditure of just about 40 lakhs a year. (Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : "But not 53 crores.") Perhaps I have acquired the habit of looking through the provincial end of the telescope ; but Honourable Members have to remember that, under the Government of India Act and the Devolution Rules, the administration of jails, subject to legislation by the Central Legislature, is a provincial subject and that supply is voted by the Provincial Legislative Council. Provincial Legislative Councils are jealous of any encroachment on their authority, and I am quite certain that the Punjab Legislative Council would protest, and protest most strongly, if the Government of India made to them the suggestion—(An Honourable Member : "Try once")—that, in order to have the gratification of seeing 21,000 prisoners having the same food as 13 Europeans, additional taxation to the extent of 40 lakhs a year should be imposed upon them ! (An Honourable Member : "Then level it down.") Therefore, I do not think that this alternative solution is possible. Does it therefore follow that there is no solution ? I do not think so. I think attention has been so devoted to the racial side of this question that it has diverted thought from the essentials of the problem ; that is to say, the real difficulty is that the jail rules do not at present provide sufficient scales varying with the different standards of life of different Indian prisoners. So far as special class and under-trial prisoners are concerned, we have invited the attention of Local Governments to this matter, and I would suggest that if Honourable Members wish to achieve the object they have at heart, they and their friends should represent their views as strongly as they can to the Local Governments who are now carrying out a re-examination of the rules.

4 P.M.

[Mr. H. W. Emerson.]

There is just one other matter to which I should like to refer before I sit down. It has been said that, whatever the Punjab Government may have done in the first instance, at all events they showed lack of statesmanship and of humanity, when they refused to release Jatindra Das unconditionally. Diwan Chaman Lal tried to make the point that the Punjab Government ought to have honoured the undertaking given by members of the Jail Committee ; but according to Diwan Chaman Lal's own statement, the only undertaking that members of that Committee gave was that they would recommend his immediate release to the Punjab Government. Whether it was their intention to recommend his unconditional release or his release on bail does not appear to me to be a matter of primary importance. Whatever may have been their intentions, both the Punjab Government and the Government of India appreciate the efforts they made, the great trouble they took to end the hunger-strike, and I can assure Honourable Members that, when the news reached Simla that the strike was ended, members both of the Punjab Government and the Government of India were as pleased as any Member of this House. I would also remind Honourable Members that, from the beginning of the strike, the Punjab Government, from the head of the Province downwards, have been doing their utmost to find a solution ; and if when, in consequence of the efforts of the Members of the Jail Sub-Committee that solution appeared to have been found, they were unable to accept it, then you may be perfectly certain that the decision was not reached without the most careful and anxious thought. What was the position ? The Punjab Government had two courses before them. One was to withdraw the case against Das ; the other was the course they took, to make it publicly known that they would not oppose an application for bail. (An Honourable Member : "Very generous !") The reason why they could not withdraw the case will I think be obvious to Members of this House. Even if it be assumed that a particular accused is perfectly innocent or rather I should say that the case against him is ultimately not proved—for an accused is of course assumed to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty.....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Then you ought to withdraw.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : I gladly withdraw my first remark—so long as there is a case against him there could be no other decision because if Government in the circumstances in question were to withdraw a case against one accused in a conspiracy where there is a large number of accused concerned, then I think it is clear that both in that case and in similar cases they would give a direct incentive to accused persons to follow exactly the same course as had been followed in the case in question.

I would just like to say one more word. I have said that the Punjab Government have for weeks been doing their utmost to find a solution, and they have had the assistance of various non-officials, to whose efforts they owe a debt of gratitude. If they have failed, it is largely because the outside influences against them were too strong. I do not mean to suggest that there has been any deliberate movement on the part of anyone to encourage these people in their hunger-strike, but the exaltation of them into heroes and martyrs in the Press and on the platform can have only one effect, and if Honourable Members desire that the hunger-strike should not continue, I think the best way to attain that end is.....

Several Honourable Members : To pass this Bill !

Mr. H. W. Emerson : ....not to glorify them. I can understand your feelings of admiration and of sympathy.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Chair has no feelings.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : I can understand the feelings of Honourable Members, which are of sympathy and admiration for the sufferings which the accused are undergoing, and I appreciate the anxiety that something should be done, if possible, to bring this strike to an end before any of the unfortunate youths who are now suffering should die. So far as Government are concerned, and I refer particularly to the Punjab

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[12TH SEPT. 1929.]

[Mr. H. W. Emerson.]

Government, I am quite certain that they will pursue every measure that is possible within reason and without the violation of fundamental principles in order to attain that end. (Loud Applause from Official Benches.)

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadian) : How will this Bill achieve that object ?

(Mr. M. A. Jinnah rose to speak.)

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member is going to take long, I would advise him to speak on the next day.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I do not know how long you propose to sit.

Mr. President : I propose to sit till half-past four and I leave it entirely to the Honourable Member to choose whether he should speak today or the next day.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I am, Sir, entirely in your hands. If you think that you must adjourn the House by half past four, I should certainly not be able to bring my remarks to a close during the time that will be at my disposal. But if you wish that I should continue now and if I cannot finish, as I am sure I shall not be able to, then I shall continue my speech the next day ; or I will sit down now, Sir.

Mr. President : I am in the Honourable Member's hands.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Then I should rather continue, Sir. (Applause.)

Sir, one is placed somewhat in a difficult position when one has got to deal with a speaker like the last one. It was his maiden speech, and it is the tradition of this House, that when a Member makes his maiden speech, he is in a privileged position and is not to be attacked. Whatever reasons or grounds, therefore, he may have given me for criticising him, I will not wish to depart from that tradition which, I think, ought to be maintained in this House. But I would say this that in his concluding portion he remarked that the Honourable Members may have admiration and sympathy for the accused in the Lahore case. I think I am speaking on behalf of a very large body of people when I say that, if there is sympathy and admiration for the accused, it is only to this extent, that they are the victim of the system of Government. (Hear, hear.) It is not that we approve or applaud their actions if they are guilty, which still remains to be proved. If they are guilty of the offences of which they are charged, then I am sure it is not that we admire them or approve of their actions, but, on the contrary, I am sure a large body of thinking people feel that these young men, whatever be the provocations, are misguided in resorting to actions for which they now stand charged.

Now, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member asked the House that we must approach this question without prejudice, and impartially. Sir, I am sure the Honourable the Home Member himself tried his best to follow the same principle, but has he been able to apply the same principle when he brought this Bill before the House ? Do the facts justify that ? The last speaker, whom I am not going to attack, almost gave away the case in his concluding remarks when he said that the only way to break the hunger-strike is to pass this Bill.

Well, I am not concerned at present so much with regard to the account that is given by the Honourable Member with regard to the treatment in jails of various classes of prisoners, but one thing is clear and it is this. From the statement that was issued by Bhagat Singh and Dutt what is an admitted fact now even from the speech of the Honourable Member who spoke last is that they were not given the treatment—not on racial grounds—but according to the standard and the scale which is laid down for Europeans in the matter of diet and bare necessities of life. It is not a mere question that they want to be treated as Europeans. As a matter of fact, according to the admission and the definition given by the Honourable Member who spoke last on behalf of the Treasury Benches, so far as I know, Bhagat Singh and Dutt wear topees, and their figures appeared in shorts. Therefore they ought to have been treated as Europeans. The Honourable Member in reply to a question said that whether the man is a European or an Indian—and he accepted the definition of my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy that if one wears a topee, then one is a European for the purpose of jail rules—then why should you not treat Bhagat Singh and Dutt who wear topees and European clothes as such for the purpose of treatment in jails. Why do not the Punjab Government give them the treatment that they are entitled to at once and be done with ? They wear topees and they are entitled to that treatment.

What do they say in their statement which was read out ? This is what they say :

“ We, Bhagat Singh and Dutt, were sentenced to life transportation in the Assembly bomb case, Delhi, on 19th May, 1929. As long as we were under-trial prisoners in Delhi jail we were accorded very good treatment and we were given good diet. But since our transfer from the Delhi jail to Mianwali jail and Lahore Central jail,” which is represented by the Honourable Member who spoke last—the Punjab seems to be a terrible place.....

Mian Muhammad Shah Nawaz (West Central Punjab : Muhammadian) : Don't go there.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I won't. To continue what they say :

“ we are being treated as ordinary criminals ”.

So, in Delhi they received very good treatment and in the Punjab they are treated as ordinary criminals. Surely, Sir, if the Government of the Punjab was not wanting in statesmanship, if the Government of the Punjab had any brains, they would have found a solution to this question very easily and long ago. But, Sir, it is a question—the more I examine it and the more I analyse it, I find—it is a question of declaration of war. As far as the Punjab Government is concerned, the Government do not merely wish to bring these men to trial and get them convicted by a judicial tribunal, but Government goes to war against these men. They seem to me in this frame of mind : “ We will pursue every possible course, every possible method, but we will see that you are sent either to the gallows or transported for life, and in the meantime we will not treat you as decent men.” Sir, the whole spirit behind this is that and nothing else. I do not for a moment wish to say that the Government are not bound ; in fact, it is their bounden duty, to prosecute those people that commit offences. I do not wish to say that the Government should not do everything in their power to see that their convictions are secured. But may I ask, with whom are you at war ? What are the resources of these few young men who according to you have committed certain offences ? You want to prosecute them, and after due trial, you want to secure their convictions.

[Mr. M. A. Jinnah.]

But before they are convicted, surely this is not a matter on which there should be this struggle, that you should not at once yield to their demands for bare necessities of life. After all, so far as the Lahore case prisoners are concerned, surely they are political prisoners and under trial. You ask me what is a political prisoner. It is very difficult to define a political prisoner. It is very difficult to lay down any particular definition. But if you use your common sense, if you use your intelligence, surely you can come to the conclusion with regard to the particular case and say, here are these men who are political prisoners, and we do not wish to give them proper treatment. We want to give them treatment as under-trial prisoners. If you had said that, the question would have been solved long ago. Do you wish to prosecute them or persecute?

Sir, I do not wish to base my opposition to this Bill on this issue of bad treatment, because this is only one aspect of the issues, or rather one aspect of the Bill before us. This Bill has got to be looked at, as far as I can see, from three points of view. The first from the point of view of criminal jurisprudence, second, political point of view or the policy of the Bill and third, treatment to the accused when they are under trial. I think it will be admitted, I think even the Honourable the Home Member conceded that by the Bill which he has brought before the House, he is introducing a principle in the criminal jurisprudence of a very unprecedented character. I do not think, Sir, there is any system of jurisprudence in any civilised country where you will find such a principle in existence as is involved in this Bill. Some of the Honourable Members who are not lawyers might not have appreciated fully the implications of this Bill. This Bill not only dispenses with the presence of the accused at the trial, but I will give you a picture as to what will happen under this Bill. Under this Bill the Government will apply to the Magistrate before whom the inquiry is going on and say :

“Here is a law which we have secured from the Legislature. Now the accused have voluntarily made themselves incapable of attending the courts and therefore you have to dispense with their presence”.

The inquiry will then proceed ex parte before the Magistrate. Evidence will be led oral and documentary, which will go without being tested by cross-examination. The documentary evidence will go without being even seen by the accused, against whom it is produced, and how will you identify the accused in their absence? Then we know, and particularly those who are lawyers would know, that when the Magistrate has concluded the recording of the evidence for the prosecution, under section 209 of the Criminal Procedure Code, he must ask the accused whether he has any explanation to offer with regard to the evidence which is recorded by him against the accused. It is after that statement is made, that the Magistrate has got the power either to commit or discharge the accused. That statement of the accused under section 209 is absolutely obligatory. It is not the choice of the Magistrate. The Privy Council has laid down that an omission in that regard would vitiate the whole trial. Under this Bill the accused will not be there to give any explanation to the Magistrate with regard to the evidence that has been already recorded ex parte.

Then, Sir, we come to important sections. Under section 287, that statement again will have to be made before the Sessions Court. There also the accused will not be present. The evidence before the Sessions Court will be recorded ex parte and if it is a jury, the jury will be asked to return their verdict. If it is a case of assessors, they will be asked to express their opinion, and the Judge will pass his judgment or sentence as the case may be. I ask the Honourable the Home Member and I ask the Honourable the Law Member of the Government of India whether that will be a trial or a farce?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : Not a farce.

The accused can always go before the Court if he chooses to. (Laughter.)

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But what about the evidence that has already been recorded in his absence?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I am very glad that the Honourable the Law Member has given me a reply. Then you want by this Bill really to break the hunger-strikers. (Laughter and Applause.) You want this House to give you a Statute laying down a principle generally in the criminal jurisprudence for this particular case, so that you may use it for breaking the hunger-strike in the Lahore case. Remember, you have no other case that you can cite. One swallow does not make a summer. It is the Lahore case. Well, you know perfectly well that these men are determined to die. It is not a joke. I ask the Honourable the Law Member to realise that it is not every body who can go on starving himself to death. Try it for a little while and you will see. Sir, have you heard anywhere in the world, except the American case, which my Honourable friend Mr. Jammadas Mehta pointed out, an accused person going on hunger-strike? The man who goes on hunger-strike has a soul. He is moved by that soul and he believes in the justice of his cause; he is not an ordinary criminal who is guilty of cold-blooded, sordid, wicked crime.

Mind you, Sir, I do not approve of the action of Bhagat Singh, and I say this on the floor of this House. I regret that rightly or wrongly youth to day in India is stirred up, and you cannot, when you have three hundred and odd millions of people, you cannot prevent such crimes being committed, however much you may deplore them and however much you may say that they are misguided. It is the system, this damnable system of Government, which is resented by the people. You may be a cold-blooded logician : I am a patient cool-headed man and can calmly go on making speeches here, persuading and influencing the Treasury Bench. But remember, there are thousands of young men outside. This is not the only country where these actions are resorted to. It has happened in other countries, not youths, but grey-bearded men have committed serious offences moved by patriotic impulses. What happened to Mr. Cosgrave, the Prime Minister of Ireland? He was under sentence of death a fortnight before he got an invitation from His Majesty's Government to go and settle terms? Was he a youth? Was he a young man? What about Collins? So what is the good of your putting forward this argument? You have got a situation which you have got to meet, not by introducing and enacting measures which go to the root of the fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence, and lightly saying, “Oh! but it is common sense!” Law is common sense: it is not the common sense of one individual.

Mr. President : I hope the Honourable Member is not inconvenienced when I ask him to resume his speech at the next meeting.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, cannot we go on for another 15 minutes?

Mr. President : What is the idea of going on for another 15 minutes ? I can understand the House asking me to sit till 6 o'clock, but there is no idea in sitting for another 15 minutes only.

I think this Bill is very controversial and is bound to take long, and the last day of the Session is the 26th. Unless I am prepared to sit, and the House is also prepared to sit, on Fridays and Saturdays, it will be impossible to close the Session on the 26th. I know several Honourable Members want that the Session should close on the 26th. I have therefore decided at least to sit on Saturdays. The House stands adjourned till Saturday morning.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Saturday, the 14th September, 1929.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Saturday, 14th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

ACTION AND POLICY OF GOVERNMENT re THE ACCUSED UNDER TRIAL IN THE LAHORE CONSPIRACY CASE.

Mr. President : There are no questions today and I therefore call upon Pandit Motilal Nehru to ask the leave of the House for the adjournment motion of which he has given notice.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I beg to ask for leave of this Honourable House to make the motion of which I have given notice to you. It is to move the adjournment of the House to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely :

“ The situation arising out of the action and policy of the Government regarding the treatment of the accused under trial in the Lahore Conspiracy Case which has already resulted in the death of Jatindra Nath Das and is endangering the lives of other hunger-strikers in the said case.”

I beg to ask, Sir, that leave be granted.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : The Government have no objection, Sir.

Mr. President : The matter proposed to be discussed is in order, and I intimate that leave is granted and that the motion will be taken up at 4 p.m., or, if the Honourable the Leader of the House has no objection, at any earlier hour at which the business of the day may terminate.

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL— contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir James Crerar on the 12th September, 1929 :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose (insertion of new section 540-B), be taken into consideration.”

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, when the House last adjourned I was dealing with this Bill from the point of view of criminal jurisprudence, and I brought to the notice of the House what would be the position if this Bill was passed, so far as the trial and proceedings of this particular case or any other case under it was concerned. It is quite clear as I said, that the trial will be a travesty of justice. Let us consider the point further. The trial would proceed in the absence of the accused. I ask the Home Member, is there a Judge or jury who would feel that they were administering law or justice in that case? The moment this Bill is passed, the prosecution can go before the Court and say: "Here is a voluntary act of the accused person; he has or they have incapacitated himself or themselves and we ask you now to proceed ex parte". Remember, Sir, that in a particular case that procedure may be adopted from the very start. Even the plea of the accused may not be recorded, guilty or not guilty. Then the Judge will be asked to proceed to empanel a jury and the jury will be empanelled: you will have a Judge on the Bench and the jury by his side. What will they do? They hear the ex parte evidence, oral and documentary. I ask the Home Member, I ask this House, what would you consider of that Judge, what would you think of that Judge or jury, sitting there solemnly, seriously proceeding with a charge of murder, going through this farce as His Majesty's Court—what conclusion do you think any jury can come to under those circumstances? That prisoner stands already condemned. What is the good of this farce? I say that no Judge who has got an iota of a judicial mind or a sense of justice can ever be a party to a trial of that character and pass sentence of death without a shudder and a pang of conscience. This is the farce which you propose to enact under this procedure. I say this, that if ever there was a conscientious Judge and he was strong enough, if he had a judicial mind, and if he had any independence, let me tell you, that, in spite of this provision of yours, he would say, "True, the law has to be administered; I am obliged to make the order that the trial shall proceed ex parte; but I realise and I feel that it will be a travesty of justice and I cannot be a party to it, and I shall therefore adjourn this case until further orders". Have you considered that? I suppose you have not. It seems to me, Sir, that the great and fundamental doctrine of British jurisprudence, which is incorporated and codified in the Penal Code and the Criminal Procedure Code, has very wisely not made such an absurd provision in the criminal law of this country and I am not satisfied that there is a lacuna in our system of criminal law.

The Home Member said that it is a well-known doctrine and a fundamental doctrine of criminal jurisprudence that the man is taken to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty. May I remind him of another doctrine which goes to the very root of the criminal jurisprudence, or for the matter of that of even civil law, that no man is to be condemned until he is given a hearing. Sir, I think there cannot be the slightest doubt that we are now engaged in considering a cardinal principle, a principle of very vital and paramount character, to be introduced into the criminal jurisprudence of this country. It must be admitted that this is a most revolutionary, unheard of, unprecedented change that is proposed in our criminal jurisprudence. I know the Home Member will tell me, "Yes, the doctrine is that no man shall be condemned unless he is heard and until he is given a hearing; but here it is the voluntary act of the accused, and if he chooses not to go there and insist upon his being heard, it is his fault". Sir, this is not a new question; it has been considered in England and there is a long history about it and behind it and you will find that in old days there was the strictest formality observed as to the recording of the plea of the prisoner. And if the prisoner was mute of malice, that is to say, if he refused deliberately to open his mouth when he was arraigned in a court of law and when the question was put to him as to whether he pleaded guilty or not,—he had to make his plea and there are cases where he refused to speak, and the old law was,—even England has advanced—in that case he was condemned and executed or must be committed to imprisonment....

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : Torture.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I am glad that you are up to date. I know that. I am only dealing with this one point that he used to be executed or committed to prison. Further, when it was thought that that was rather a serious thing that, because a man was mute of malice he should be condemned to death or imprisonment, then comes the point of my learned friend over there, who I understand is a member of the Bar, that they resorted to torture. Torture for what? That he should make his plea, not that an ex parte trial should proceed—that is what you want to do here by this Bill, that ex parte trial should proceed. The old law was then altered, because the result of the torture was that some of them died and the form of torture was the most cruel form of torture, and I will read to you a passage from Stephen's "History of Criminal Law":

"If he was accused of felony, he was condemned, after much exhortation, to the peine forte et dure, that is, to be stretched, naked on his back, and to have 'iron laid upon him as much as he could bear and more', and so to continue, fed upon bad bread and stagnant water on alternate days, till he either pleaded or died."

But they did not proceed ex parte. Then the old form of trial was trial by ordeal. That was done away with because the plea that a prisoner had to put forward was in a particular form. When he was asked he had to say that he wanted to be tried "By God and by my country". That was the trial by ordeal. That was done away with and in 1827 by a Statute and it was enacted that in such cases a plea of not guilty should be entered. Now, Sir, before that Statute was passed there is one case which I will bring to the notice of this House and which will illustrate how much importance was attached to the form and the procedure even in olden days. Of course, my Honourable friend Sir Darcy Lindsay will say that matters of this kind can be decided by the common sense of a single individual such as himself. Sir, I must remind him, for he is a man of peace, and especially when we get old we love peace, and common sense is sometimes regulated by that state of mind—I will remind him, and I think the House will agree with me, that law is nothing but the essence of common sense, that law is the concentrated essence of experience, of knowledge, of practice of centuries and generations, and even Sir James Stephen will point out to you that, when these rules, when these forms have been laid down as the essence of common sense and experience of generations they are not lightly to be departed from.

What do we find in this House now? Have we not got forms and are we not slavishly following them? Some of them would appear to the strangers in the gallery or any outsider to be most absurd and against common sense at first sight. If any one passes across between you and the speaker he will be guilty of a gross breach of the forms of this House and you would call him to order at once. Why is that? Without meaning? Without reason? Without experience? What common sense is there? Why should the man not pass across? It is therefore no use treating these matters lightly and saying that we have got to decide everything by the common sense of an individual. The instance that I was going to refer to is this. In one case :

“ Mr. Pike produces some evidence to show that in the early part of Edward I's reign, people who refused to put themselves on their trial were executed. . . . ”

Better, people who refuse to put themselves to trial,—execute them, rather than go through the farce of an ex parte trial ; much better :

“ . . . but this practice was opposed to the Statute which provided that ‘ notorious felons ’ and which openly be of evil name and will not put themselves in inquests of felonies that men shall charge them with before the justices at the king's suit, shall have strong and hard imprisonment, as they which refuse to stand to the common law of the land. ”

Then he cites a case which I think will interest the House. He says this :

“ ‘ But this is not to be understood of such prisoners as be taken of light suspicion. ’ According to Barrington this meant that the prisoner who refused to plead was to be starved till he died, but not tortured—(so they improved later on)—and he quotes in proof of it a pardon granted in the reign of Edward III to a woman who ‘ pro eo quod se tenuit mutam ’ was put in ‘ areta prisona ’ and there lived without eating or drinking for forty days, which was regarded as a miracle. ”

Well, Sir, I know that there is a passage which is likely to be quoted in this House in Stephen's “ Digest of Criminal Procedure ”. It is a curious thing that the Government of India who have hardly given this House even seven days notice and call upon this House to endorse a vital, cardinal principle of a novel or unheard of character, do not possess in their Library even an edition of the Law of Criminal Procedure by Stephen of later date than 1883. And they seriously ask this House, “ The Government case is that they find that a deadlock is created. The law is paralysed, and in fact, even the Government of India might tumble down altogether, and we therefore call upon the Legislature to come to our rescue—we admit it is unprecedented, we admit it is unheard of, we admit it is unknown to any system of jurisprudence ; but you as a responsible body—would you not endorse this Bill straightaway within these few days notice ? ” You do not possess in your Library an edition of a textbook which is the standard book except of the year 1883 ! And it is a tall order to ask the House to pass the Bill now and here. I will read the passage now which is likely to be quoted, and I want the House not to be misled by it. But before I do so, I will request the Law Member to consider what I am going to submit. That is a branch of the law which comes under the category of contempt of court, and we know that the King's Bench in England and the Supreme Courts in India, who have inherited the jurisdiction under the Charter, have got unfettered powers to deal with cases of contempt. That is the one branch of the law which is neither codified nor restricted by any law. It is entirely left to the Supreme Court or the High Courts in India to deal with cases of contempt as they think proper. That is a branch which comes under that doctrine of law of contempt of court and even there while the Courts have asserted that they have the power to refuse to hear the party who is guilty of contempt of court, the footnote says that it has never been done in a criminal case. I will read to you what it says :

“ The prisoner has a right to be present at the trial so long as he conducts himself properly, but the Court may, in its discretion, permit his absence in cases of misdemeanour, and may proceed with the trial in his absence in cases in which he has pleaded to an indictment or information in the High Court (Queen's Bench Division).

If a prisoner so misconducts himself as to make it impossible to try him with decency, the Court, it seems, may order him to be removed and proceed in his absence.”

The footnote says this :

“ I have never known or heard of this being done, but Lord Cranworth (then Rolfe, B.) threatened to have Rush removed from Court, at his trial for murder at Norwich in 1849, if he persisted in a singularly indecent and outrageous course of cross-examination, I have heard from eye-witnesses an account of a trial before Shree, J. (then acting as Commissioner) at Dorchester, where the prisoner (a convict at Portland, tried for the murder of a warder) behaved with such desperate violence that it was necessary to fasten him down with chains and straps. He was not, however, removed from the Court, and it is obvious that in capital cases, or indeed, in any trial involving severe punishment, almost any measures, short of removing the prisoner, should be resorted to. ”

The raison d'être of this principle is very different and requires no more words to understand it. Now, Sir, I shall not weary the House with any further legal quotations. I am driven to think, the object of Government in bringing in this Bill is political, but if their real object is to supply a lacuna, not for the purpose of this particular case, but in the general interest of the country and the administration of justice, if that is their object, let them remove this case from their mind, for Heaven's sake. Come to us dispassionately and without prejudice. Let them tell us that they find a lacuna and that it is necessary to make some provision. If that is their object, then their honest and straightforward course is to come before the House and place all the facts before us. Now, I do not admit for a moment that there is a lacuna and I do not admit that such a principle should be introduced in the criminal jurisprudence of our country especially and admittedly when it does not exist anywhere else. I am prepared to assume that you honestly and sincerely believe that it is necessary in the interests of the people and the administration of justice that some such measure of the kind should be introduced. Then your honest course is to go slowly. Pause and consider. Let those outside this House who are competent to speak express their opinion. What are you going to lose ? What is the harm that will be done ? Remove from your mind this Lahore conspiracy case. But if you say that this course will cause you inconvenience and that you want this instrument now and at once, then I say that I am not satisfied with your plea and I can't support it, nor am I satisfied with the version that you have placed before the House about your difficulties. I am not going to give you this power standing on the floor of this House today now and here. Sir, can you imagine a more horrible form of torture than hunger-strike ? If rightly or wrongly these men are inflicting this punishment upon themselves and thereby you are inconvenienced, is that any reason why you should ask us to abandon one of the cardinal principles of criminal jurisprudence ? If these young men pursue this course, and I am sorry to hear that one of them has died, what will happen ? Is this a matter which can continue indefinitely ? Certainly not. As I say, I am not satisfied with the version that you have placed before this House. I understand that some of the prisoners are not on strike. If you are solicitous and anxious that the trial should proceed and should not be delayed, then split up the trial. Proceed against them and bring home the guilt to them if you can. I am told that it means expense. I am told that 400 witnesses are going to be produced and 200 more may be added. Now I appeal to the common sense of the House and not only of Sir Darcy Lindsay. Can you imagine that 600 witnesses are necessary to prove the case against each one of the accused? And, Sir, I ask, is it not an amazing fact that, in order to prove this case, 600 persons should have been cited as witnesses? Well, Sir, it may seem a joke and it may seem that I am making fun of the statement made to this effect, but the first impression that one gets is that, when a case cannot be proved without the testimony of 600 witnesses, that case is a very bad case. (Hear, hear.) Therefore I say that it is open to Government to split up the case. You think of expense? But are we here to abandon this cardinal principle because it is going to cost some money to Government? Is that the reason? Is that a plea which can be accepted by any responsible Legislature? Well, Sir, I was told that some of them hunger-strike for a short time and then they get better for a little while and again they start, and so it goes on. Sir, I cannot understand the anxiety of the Government to proceed with this trial when these men are inflicting the greatest possible punishment upon themselves by prolonged fasting? Is it your fault? Does it mean that you are not treating them properly and therefore you are compelling them to resort to these extreme methods? Well, then, I appeal to you with all the emphasis I can command, do not be vindictive. Show that you are fair, generous, that you are willing to treat these men decently. At any rate before they are released or sentenced, give them proper treatment. What treatment do they want? What is it that bothers them? Do they want spring mattresses? Do they want dressing tables? Do they want a set of toilet requisites? No, Sir, they ask for nothing but bare necessities and a little better treatment. I ask you in all decency, why you cannot concede this small thing? Well, Sir, if this Bill is passed, perhaps I might ask the Honourable Member when he goes to Court how would he base his application? Will he base his application on the point that the period of a hunger-strike which has already taken place for a short period is not to be counted? Or is it to be counted? Supposing I tried to put myself in the position of a Judge when the application is made that the presence of the accused in this case should be dispensed with, because by their own voluntary act they have rendered themselves incapable. Now from what period shall I take the disability? From the period after this Statute is passed? Shall I disregard the disability which has already taken place before the passing of the Act? Supposing something else happens to these men on hunger-strike and they do not get well for two or three months. Will the trial not be delayed? Do you think, you can avoid considerable delay even if the Bill is passed, but further can you give a guarantee, that all the prisoners will be well enough in the course of these two or three months from now to stand their trial, even if they abandon hunger-strike? When you say that this Bill will not have retrospective effect, how is it going to work? Then will you give them notice that in view of the fact that this measure is passed, if you do not cease your hunger-strike from today and if you are not better within two or three months as you ought to be, then we shall apply to the Court that your presence will be dispensed with and we shall proceed ex parte? Does it not come to this, that you want to carry this Bill, you want to have this Bill placed on the Statute-book and then you want to give notice to the prisoners that, unless they cease their hunger-strike within a certain period, you are going to proceed ex parte? Under that threat you think these prisoners will cease their hunger-strike? Can you give the House that assurance and if they do not cease their hunger-striking, what will you do? You will proceed ex parte? Just imagine the absurdity of the whole position.

Sir, now I have finished from the point of view of the jurisprudence. I do not wish to go into details so far as their treatment is concerned. I have in the course of my speech already indicated their grievances and how they can be met. But there is a political aspect of this Bill and the policy underlying this measure. I think the Honourable the Home Member must admit that this is not a measure which is only brought here for the purpose of putting the law in order. Sir, it reminds me of a story, an old Persian story. A man got stomach-ache because he had eaten some very rotten bread. So he went to the doctor and told him that he had stomach-ache. The doctor said, yes, and he promptly started treating his eyes. Then he said, "What have my eyes got to do with my complaint?" Then the doctor said, "Well, if you had eyes, you would never have got stomach-ache because you would not have eaten rotten bread". Similarly I would say to the Honourable the Home Member, "Have you got eyes? Well, if you had, you would never have got this stomach-ache". Now will you open your eyes? (Laughter.) Will you have a little more imagination? Have you got any statesmanship left? Have you got any political wisdom? This is not the way you are going to solve the root cause of the trouble. You may temporarily, provisionally get over this particular trial. But now let us see what is the real cause of the trouble. I ask this House to consider this. Is there today in any part of the globe a civilized government that is engaged day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, in prosecuting their people? You have read the daily papers for the last six or eight months. You will find prosecutions in Bengal, prosecutions in Madras, prosecutions in the Punjab, prosecutions all over the country. In fact I am afraid you will soon have to open a new Department and to have an additional Member to manage these prosecutions if you go on at this rate and in this way. Do you think that any man wants to go to jail? Is it an easy thing? Do you think any man wants to exceed the bounds of law for the purpose of making a speech which your law characterises as a seditious speech, knowing full well the consequences, that he may have to go to jail for six months or a year? Do you think that this springs out of a mere joke or fun or amusement? Do you not realise yourself, if you open your eyes, that there is resentment, universal resentment against your policy, against your programme?

Then, Sir, what has happened so far as this House is concerned? What have you done since 1924 with regard to the protests that we have made session after session? Have you accepted the proposal or suggestion of any reasonable section of this House? I do not wish to go into the details, Sir, but what has been the attitude of the Government towards this House and the country outside over the constitutional reforms since 1924, leave alone the past prior history? The reply is: "We have appointed the Simon Commission and we must await for its Report". Well, the Simon Commission was not accepted by this House—but that does not matter. This is the answer in regard to the constitutional reforms. What has been your answer with regard to the Indianisation of the Army? You appointed a Committee to go into that very important question; I attach more importance to it than to any other question. What have you done with the unanimous Report of the Sken Committee which was endorsed by this House, without a division, the responsible House as you call it today and to which you appeal today in the name of "responsibility"? This House endorsed that Report without a division. What have you done with it? The attitude of Government had been an amazing one. The Army Secretary stood there on the floor of this House last session and said: "We cannot get even 20 suitable candidates". Sir, the apparent untruth of that statement is enough to condemn the Government. You cannot get 20 young men out of 300 odd millions of people who are suitable candidates for the King's Commission. Then, there are many other matters. What has been your attitude always? Don't you think that, instead of trying to proceed with an iron hand and pursuing a policy of repression against your own subjects, it would be better if you realised the root causes of the resentment and of the struggle that people are carrying on? Don't you think that it is high time that you made your position more clear? I understand that there is something in the atmosphere—I hope it is true—that some satisfactory announcement is going to be made in Parliament very soon, when it meets next which I trust will satisfy this House and the people. Do you want to prepare an atmosphere for it, or you do not? Do you want reconciliation between the Government and the people or you do not? Don't you think that these difficulties and troubles of yours are of a temporary character? They are an obstruction in the trial of this particular case which can be managed by other methods, but that is a very small matter when you compare it with the bigger issues which are awaiting the decision of the Government, this House and the country.

Sir, the Honourable Member asked, what are the Government to do? I think I understood the Honourable Member aright when he said that the Government have no other course. What are the Government to do? They are, therefore, compelled to bring this Bill. Now, let me tell you that your course is to open your eyes, have more imagination, do not be guilty of bankruptcy of statesmanship, do not merely sit there as if the wheels of the Secretariat must not be clogged at any cost, but try and understand the root cause and deal with the situation as politicians, as statesmen and not as bureaucrats, who can see no other way but to come forward before this House and ask for more statutory powers the moment any difficulty arises. You have got several courses open to you. The first and the foremost course open to you is this. Give these men decent treatment, and I think you will get over your difficulty. At least I hope so. If you do not, you will, at any rate, be exonerated in the eyes of the public and at the Bar of public opinion. Behave as a human and decent Government, and that is enough for you. I am not going to urge upon the Government to withdraw prosecution cases against men if they have evidence enough to bring home to them their guilt. So try that netter treatment first. Secondly, if you do not succeed, split up the trials. Try those with whose trial you can proceed, and leave the rest. After you have made it clear to them that you stand for a decent treatment being given to them and they still wish to torture themselves and follow that course, then you cannot help it; and I venture to say that it will not last very long or indefinitely. And the last words I wish to address the Government are, try and concentrate your mind on the root cause and the more you concentrate on the root cause the less difficulties and inconveniences there will be for you to face, and thank Heaven that the money of the taxpayer will not be wasted in prosecuting men nay citizens who are fighting and struggling for the freedom of their country.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member): Sir, I express my gratitude to my Honourable and learned friend Mr. Jinnah for bringing this debate from the foggy atmosphere of politics into the pure atmosphere of law, because, after all, the Bill before the House deals with a technical branch of the criminal law. I am glad that my learned friend has raised important legal issues based upon fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence. I will join issue with him in some of the matters and opinions which he has expressed. I shall confine myself, Sir, purely to the legal aspect of this Bill, leaving the political aspect to be dealt with by other speakers. There has been a great deal of misapprehension, as I gathered from the debate which took place on the last occasion, with regard to the aim and scope of the Bill. There has been a great deal of misapprehension also with regard to the fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence upon which its provisions are based. I shall endeavour, Sir, as briefly as I can, to remove those misapprehensions and I beg of this House to consider the legal aspect, as distinguished from the political aspect of the Bill dispassionately and bring to bear upon it their calm judgment. Sir, this is a Bill which seeks to amend a particular provision of the Criminal Procedure Code, relating not merely to trials but to inquiries also. Recent events have disclosed certain defects in the existing procedure. My learned friend Mr. Jinnah disputes that proposition. I shall show that the defect does exist. The aim of the Bill is to remedy that defect, and the scope of the Bill is limited to the particular defect which recent events have disclosed. Neither the aim, nor the scope goes any further. The House will pardon me if I draw its attention to certain broader principles of jurisprudence before I come to this particular Bill. I shall do that very briefly. In law, as all lawyer Members of this House are aware, there are two broad divisions, substantive law and adjective law. Substantive law defines rights and duties, adjective law prescribes the machinery for enforcing those rights and duties. This is of course elementary. My learned friend Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar is laughing, but every one here is not an acute lawyer like him. I will not take more time than is absolutely necessary to elucidate what I am going to say later. The broad division of law is into substantive and adjective law. Substantive law defines rights and duties, and adjective law or procedure provides the machinery. Substantive law is not being dealt with by this Bill at all. In criminal law, substantive law is that which defines offences and prescribes punishments. This Bill has got nothing whatsoever to do with substantive law. Its scope is limited to the machinery. My submission is that there is a defect in the machinery and this Bill has been designed to supply that defect.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural): Perhaps you want to break that machinery.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter: I could not hear what the Honourable Member says. Now, Sir, the House will realise that procedure exists merely for the sake of substantive law. It has no independent existence. If under substantive law a certain act or course of conduct amounts to an offence, then it is the duty of the State to bring the offender to look through the machinery or the procedure which the Criminal Procedure Code provides. I am talking generally. There are particular procedures in particular cases ; I am not dealing with them. Now, in the matter of this general procedure, a fundamental principle has been referred to by several speakers and by my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah in particular. And that fundamental principle, in the words of Mr. Jinnah, is that, "No man is to be condemned until he is given a hearing". That is how he enunciated the principle. Sir, I do not accept the principle in those terms. In my submission, the true principle is this, that no man is to be condemned until he has been given every opportunity of being heard. That is the principle. A man must be given an opportunity, not that he must be heard. Many prisoners are not heard. Any one familiar with criminal trials knows that in every session, there are dozens of accused who go undefended and are convicted unheard.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : That is not the point. We are dealing with dispensing with the presence of the accused.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : The accused is there.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I am not talking of the presence of the accused. I am talking of being heard or unheard.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : They are being heard.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I shall explain what I mean. The true principle is this, that you must give the accused every opportunity of being heard and of defending himself. If he avails himself of the opportunities, well and good. If he does not avail himself of the opportunities, he has no right to complain.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Have Star Chamber methods then !

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I have been in charge of Calcutta sessions trials for many years. I know from my own experience that at every session, more than half the prisoners never defended themselves, never took the slightest interest in the proceedings and the cases were heard ex parte.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Ex parte !

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Ex parte means that the prosecution evidence goes untested by cross-examination. That is ex parte.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : It does not mean that. Ex parte means that the party is absent.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : What the Honourable the Law Member says is not the legal meaning.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : What I am saying is this, that there are every day cases in the courts where the accused is not heard.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But the accused is present.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : He is given an opportunity to be heard, he is given an opportunity to defend himself, but he does not avail himself of that opportunity.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : That is not ex parte.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : It may not be according to you. (Laughter and Applause.) Let us not quarrel over words. I am dealing with the principle, the principle which my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah laid down, that is that "No man is to be condemned until he is given a hearing".

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : I made that statement, and then I gave the answer, that in this particular case, it would be urged that the accused had incapacitated themselves by their own voluntary act.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, what I submit is this. The true principle is that every accused must be given every opportunity of being heard. He must be given every opportunity of defending himself. That is to say when the prosecution witnesses are examined, the accused should be given every opportunity to have the evidence tested by cross-examination, either by himself or by counsel of his own choice. If he does not avail himself of that opportunity, is the prosecution to be abandoned ? The whole question is this. Does this Bill outrage or violate the fundamental principle that the accused should not be denied the opportunity of being heard ?

Mr. President : What about the man who absconds ?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Wait, I am coming to the absconder presently. The question of absconders was raised by one of the speakers, and I shall have my say in the matter. Sir, under sub-clause (4) of clause 2 of the Bill, it is provided that :

"No order under sub-section (1) dispensing with the attendance of an accused shall affect his right to attend or to be represented by a pleader at any subsequent stage of the proceedings."

Therefore this Bill provides that the accused, notwithstanding the order dispensing with his attendance, can always, if he so chooses, come before the Court and defend himself and take part in the proceedings.

There is nothing to prevent him from doing that. It is not like a civil case where, when once an order is made that 12 Noon. a case should go undefended, the defendant can never come and defend.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Is that a correct statement of law ?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Yes. This Bill has made provision for the accused coming before the Court at any stage he chooses ; not that he is shut out from defending himself ; not that he is denied the opportunity of availing himself of any procedure in the court, any rule of evidence that he may choose to adopt in his own defence. He is not denied anything. All that this Bill does is this, that if an accused deliberately refuses to avail himself of the opportunities which the Criminal Procedure Code gives him, then he has to thank himself if the trial goes on in his absence. That is all that this Bill says.

[Sir Brojendra Mitter.]

Sir, I will now deal with the case of the absconder. Under the Criminal Procedure Code, an absconder cannot be tried, under the Criminal Procedure Code an absconder cannot be convicted, under the Criminal Procedure Code, no judgment can be passed upon an absconder. All that the Criminal Procedure Code provides in the case of an absconder is this, that certain rules of evidence have been framed under which evidence may be taken in his absence; and that is, to use legal language, for perpetuation of testimony. It is for that purpose and that purpose only that, in the case of an absconder, you may record evidence in his absence. Beyond that you cannot take any other step against an absconder.

Mr. President : Why not? He is given an opportunity to defend himself but he does not avail himself of it.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Because there is another cardinal principle of criminal law, and it is this, that there cannot be a trial of an absent person. (Cries of "Hear, hear" and Laughter.) There absence means this: the man has not been under arrest, the man has not been in custody. A man who is not in custody cannot be tried. That is one of the fundamental principles of criminal jurisprudence, and it is by virtue of that principle that you cannot try an absconder. There are several principles underlying criminal law, and the principle which applies to an absconder is this, that a man who has not been arrested cannot be brought to trial, and it is by virtue of that principle that an absconder cannot be convicted or cannot be sentenced. Courts never act in vain. It is quite different from the position when a man is under arrest on the allegation that he has committed an offence; he is then before the Court; he is in the custody of the Court, although he may not be physically present.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Where do you get all this?

Mr. President : Order, order.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : The case of a person who has been arrested and brought before the Court is entirely different. Once he has been brought before the Court, then the principle enunciated by my learned friend Mr. Jinnah, subject to the modification which I have suggested, applies.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City: Non-Muhammadan Urban): What if the prisoner absconds from jail custody after he is brought to Court once and kept in jail pending completion of trial.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh: He must be on bail?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Even when a person is on bail he is under the control of the Court. A man must be either in physical custody or under control. Once a man is in the custody or under the control of the Court, it is then and then only that the Court can try him and the Court can convict him or acquit him or deal with him, but not a man who is not under the custody or control of the Court. In the case of a man who escapes from jail custody, as my Honourable and learned friend Mr. Jayakar puts to me, he ceases to be under the control of the Court and therefore the Court cannot deal with him.

Mr. Abdul Haye (East Punjab: Muhammadan): Then you put a premium on dishonesty and cowardice!

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I do nothing of the sort.

Sir, section 512 of the Criminal Procedure Code was referred to in connection with the case of an absconder. Now, section 512 comes in Chapter 41 which deals with special rules of evidence and does not deal with trial at all. Section 512 says this:

"If it is proved that an accused person has absconded and there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of"

—not the Court "trying" but the Court "competent to try" him. That makes it quite clear—

"may in his absence examine the witnesses, if any, produced on behalf of the prosecution and record their depositions."

That is to say, the competent Court and not the trial Court. That is the distinction between the absconder and the man who is under arrest.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Please read further on.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : It is not necessary for the purpose of my argument, but if there is anything against my contention, as is insinuated in the interruption, I shall read it and deal with it:

"Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged" —that supports my contention. That shows that he cannot be brought to trial until he is under arrest—

"if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence, or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense and inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable."

That shows the circumstances in which the evidence may be used against him, although that evidence may not have been tested by cross-examination. That is a special provision, a rule of evidence in the case of absconders. As I said, that section is based upon the principle of perpetuation of testimony, because otherwise that testimony may be lost.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Preservation of testimony.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Very well, preservation of testimony. Sir, in the language of the law it is called perpetuation of testimony and I was using the legal phrase, but I shall willingly adopt the popular phrase, as suggested by my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah, preservation of testimony.

Now, Sir, having said so much, I proved, with your leave, to show that there is a lacuna in the procedure. Sub-clause (1) of section 540-A deals with the presence of the accused either in person or vicariously by pleader. This is sub-clause (1) of section 540-A:

"At any stage of the inquiry or trial under this Code, where two or more accused are before the Court, if the Judge or Magistrate is satisfied, for reasons to be recorded, that any one or more of such accused is or are incapable of remaining before the Court, he may, if such accused is represented by pleader, dispense with his attendance and proceed with such inquiry or trial in his absence, and may, at any subsequent stage of the proceedings, direct the personal attendance of such accused."

I know, Sir,.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I know that you know.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Then what is the use of interrupting me ? You will only prolong the agony.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : But I want you to say it.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I know all that, and as I have stated it will only be prolonging the agony if Members constantly interrupt me. I am not going to sit down by reason of these pointless interruptions.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : No, no; I know that.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Now, sub-clause (1) deals with a person who is either present himself or vicariously. Sub-clause (2) deals with a person who has no pleader :

“ If the accused in any case is not represented by pleader, or if the Judge or Magistrate considers his personal attendance necessary, he may, if he thinks fit, and for reasons to be recorded by him, either adjourn such inquiry or trial, or order that the case of such accused be taken up or tried separately.”

That deals with the case where an accused is absent and is not represented by pleader. This section deals with a case of unavoidable absence ; it does not deal with a case of avoidable absence, and that is where the lacuna comes in. Mark the difference between “ is incapable ” and “ has voluntarily rendered himself incapable ”. A person who, by his voluntary act, is absent, is absent for an avoidable cause ; but 540-A deals with the case of a person who is absent for an unavoidable cause ; he may not be represented by pleader owing to poverty or any other cause. That is my reading of the law. You may accept or may not accept it. I know that political prejudice may prevent Honourable Members opposite from accepting it. If they will keep their prejudices aside, their legal sense will be entirely with me. I know that. What I am submitting is this ; that the lacuna consists in a provision for avoidable absence ; 540-A has provided for unavoidable absence, but avoidable absence has not been provided for. This lacuna is sought to be filled by the present Bill.

It is said that trial of an accused in his absence is unprecedented. I admit it ; I admit that it is unprecedented and unusual ; but my submission to you, if you will consider my submission in your calmer moments, is this : that that is not an inflexible rule of law, but if I may so express it, a rule of prudence ; and that is why Sir James Stephen, in his book on Criminal Procedure, says as follows. May I have the book, please ?

An Honourable Member : It has been returned.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : It is my book ; it has not been returned to me ; very well, I have got an extract in my notes.....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I inform the Honourable Member that for the moment the book has been taken away by the reporter.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I have got an extract here.....

Mr. President : Order, order ; one of the two Honourable Members must resume his seat.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I plead want of practice. In article 302 of his well-known book on Criminal Procedure, Sir James Stephen lays down this proposition ; that the prisoner has the right to be present so long as he conducts himself properly, but the Court may, in its discretion, permit his absence in cases of misdemeanour, and may proceed with the trial in his absence in cases in which he has pleaded to an indictment on any occasion in the High Court. My learned friend, Mr. Jinnah, said that this refers to a contempt of Court. That does not affect my argument that, whether it is contempt of Court, or falls under some other division of the criminal law, nevertheless it is a criminal offence ; and in a criminal offence, it may be permissible, in certain circumstances, to go on with the trial in the absence of the accused. That is all I say. I do not put it any higher than that.....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Sir Brojendra Mitter still standing) : Are you providing for that now ?

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member prepared to give way ? If the Honourable Member is prepared to be interrupted, he must resume his seat.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I am very sorry that I have been guilty on more than one occasion of this irregularity, but as I pleaded, it is entirely due to want of practice ; probably the next Session will find me behaving much better. (Laughter.)

Mr. President : Ignorance of the law is no excuse. (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I bow to that, Sir ; but ignorance of procedure may be condoned. Sir James Stephen goes on to say :

“ If a prisoner so misconducts himself as to make it impossible to try him with decency, the Court, it seems, may order him to be removed and proceed in his absence.”

All that I am submitting is this : the normal procedure is that you must proceed in his presence, but there may be circumstances—I am not dealing with the circumstances now—there may be circumstances now—there may be circumstances—which is within the bounds of possibility—when the Court may proceed with the case in his absence.....

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural) : After his plea is recorded.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I do not put my case any higher than that, and therefore my submission is this : that the necessity for the presence of an accused at a trial is not an inflexible rule of law. It has been found generally to be a good rule of prudence, which ought, in normal circumstances, to be complied with ; but in abnormal circumstances it is permissible, according to the principles of English criminal jurisprudence, to proceed with the trial in the absence of an accused.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Only in the case of contempt.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : If you extend it to the offence known as contempt, is there anything in principle why it should not be extended to other offences ?

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : It has not been done so far, as it is founded on a different principle.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I know it has not been done, for the simple reason that the circumstances with which we have to deal never arose in any other country.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : They did ; my point is they did arise before ; I quoted those cases from Stephen's History of Criminal Law and Procedure.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : You are talking of the Middle Ages. (Laughter.) I have pointed out, that there is a lacuna in the criminal procedure as it exists, the lacuna being that it does not provide for the case of avoidable absence, when a person refuses to be present. In this connection, I may draw the attention of the House to a section in the Criminal Procedure Code which deals with pleas. I refer to section 272. If the accused refuses to, or does not plead, or if he claims to be tried, the Court shall proceed to choose jurors or assessors as hereinafter directed and try the case. I am referring to it only for the purpose of drawing the attention of the House to the case of refusal of the accused to plead.

That has been provided for. If the accused refuses to plead, then he is to be deemed to have pleaded not guilty and the trial will proceed. Here, we are providing, if he refuses to be present.....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : He ought to be acquitted according to that rule.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I do not see that. What we are providing for is this. The Criminal Procedure Code has already provided for the case where the accused refuses to plead, and here we are providing for the case where the prisoner refuses to go to Court, to be present in Court, or refuses to be represented by pleader. That is the case we are providing for. Now, Sir, it may be said that it is not fair that the accused should go unrepresented. That is a point on which I want to make one observation. That is a matter for the Select Committee. If it be the sense of the House that provision should be made for the representation of the accused in every case when he is absent, I am prepared to meet my Honourable friends and accept the suggestion and make proper provision for representation. Sir, you can take a horse to the water, but you cannot make him drink. You can offer to pay for a pleader of his own choice, but if he refuses to engage any pleader, what are we to do ? Is the trial to be defeated by reason of such recalcitrant attitude ? Is the administration of the law to come to a standstill because a determined person refuses either to be present or to engage a pleader when the Crown may be prepared to pay for that pleader ? I say, in such a case, the law requires amendment. There is that lacuna which impedes the course of justice. There is that lacuna which is likely to bring about a deadlock in the trial. Administration of justice is one of the most important parts of the foundation upon which every ordered society is established. When there is such a lacuna, it is the duty of the Government when such lacuna is discovered as has been disclosed by recent events—it is the duty of the Government to come to the Legislature and confidently ask the Legislature to assist them in filling that lacuna. Banish all political prejudice from this Bill, consider it calmly and dispassionately as a measure seeking to fill a gap in the law, and then I am sure, if you exercise your judgment on those considerations, freed from political passions or political prejudices,—I am sure you will unanimously pass this measure. (Applause.)

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, previous speakers on this side of the House have characterised this Bill as an unparalleled and unprecedented measure. To my mind it is nothing short of an outrage on any Legislature to be asked to consider a Bill of this kind. I have just had the benefit of listening to a solemn lecture which I have long ceased to be accustomed to during the last forty-five years ever since I left the class room. That came from the Honourable the Law Member.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, it was my misfortune, not my fault.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : But I do not know which is to be more regretted, the misfortune of the Law Member or his fault, because in the present case both the elements are present. It is his misfortune to select a place and an occasion to say things which are not at all suitable to that place or occasion, and it is his fault that he does not know what the law is. Well, I will take up the challenge of the Honourable the Law Member and show that there is absolutely no foundation for the distinction which he makes between avoidable and unavoidable absence nor for the interpolation of words into a Statute which the framers did not use on any principle of the criminal jurisprudence of India or England or any other part of the world.

Sir, I shall deal with the Honourable the Law Member as I come to the points which he has raised. Let me first deal with the avowed object of the Bill. For that purpose I shall ask the House just to refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons which is a very short and sweet document. It is said :

“ The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, contains no provision by which an inquiry or a trial can continue in the absence of an accused if he is not represented by counsel.”

I ask the Honourable and learned Law Member, is there any system of jurisprudence in the world, which does contain a provision by which an inquiry or a trial can be continued in the absence of the accused person ? I submit that there is no precedent for it in any known system of criminal jurisprudence. And this is what is said to be a lacuna ! These principles are centuries old. People have been tried for hundreds of years but it was given after all these centuries to the present Government and to the present Law Member to discover that there was this lacuna in the Criminal Procedure Code of this country. Then, what is the evil that is sought to be removed ? The Statement of Objects and Reasons proceeds :

“ It is, therefore, possible for an accused person to bring the administration of justice to a standstill by a voluntary act by which he renders himself incapable of attending Court.”

The same has been the experience elsewhere and as I shall presently show it certainly was the experience, if not in England, at least in the neighbouring island of Ireland, and yet it never occurred to anybody either in England or elsewhere to suggest the removal of this lacuna in the law of the country. The chief object of the Bill is this :

“ The provisions of this Bill are intended to prevent the delay and defeat of justice.”

Well, if it were said that the object is to delay and defeat justice, it would be more appropriate. And what is the remedy ?

“ Empowering Judges and Magistrates to proceed in the absence of an accused, even if he is not represented by counsel.”

That is to say, by doing a thing which is not warranted by any system of law or jurisprudence. Those are the reasons and those are the objects. I submit that not one of them is such as should have been placed before any legislature.

Much has been said about the cardinal principles and the fundamental rules of criminal jurisprudence and criminal law. I now take up the argument of my Honourable friend, the Law Member that there is an omission which he supplies by reading the word “ unavoidable ” in section 540-A, and after making that interpolation, he says, here is the law which provides only for “ unavoidable ” absence. In the first place, I ask this House to make no such assumption of the existence of a lacuna as the Law Member wants us to make, and secondly I ask the House to read the section as it stands.

It is opposed to every canon of construction either of civil or criminal law to read into the law words which are not there. You cannot restrict the ordinary meaning of the words and take them to mean something not warranted by their grammatical construction or dictionary meaning.

Now, let us examine these fundamental and cardinal principles. The first is admitted by the Law Member. It is that you cannot begin a trial in the absence of an accused. He must either be present himself or must be brought before the Court before the trial can commence. I need not cite any authority for that proposition because I take it that it is admitted by the Honourable the Law Member, but there is a whole series of sections in the Code of Criminal Procedure dealing with this point. There are four forms of procedure. The first relates to inquiries into cases triable by Sessions Judges and High Courts. The second to summons cases, the third to warrant cases, and the fourth to trial before the Sessions Court or the High Court. Separate Chapters of the Criminal Procedure Code deal with these various kinds of trial or inquiry, and the opening section of each Chapter lays down that the Court shall begin the proceedings when the accused appears or is brought before the Court. That is principle No. 1. The second principle, which has been conceded by my friend, is that the accused must be given an opportunity to be heard. We are not concerned with that in this case. But there is a third principle. What is to happen if the accused ceases to attend the Court while the proceedings are going on ? The Legislature has not ignored that contingency. That very contingency is provided for in section 540-A, clauses (1) and (2). Now, if clause (2) of that section is read without the commentary of my learned friend and without the interpolation of words which he finds it convenient to read into that section, then it covers exactly the present case. Here is a case where there has been an incapability to remain before the Court, the cause being immaterial. You have got two courses open. Either a separate trial of those incapable of attending may be ordered and the trial of those who are capable of attending continued, or the whole trial may be postponed. These are the only two courses. Now, it is sought to introduce a third course, viz., that the Court may do away with the presence of the accused as well as of that of his counsel or pleader—a contingency which is neither contemplated by the law of India nor by the law of any other country. The essential condition of a trial is that you must confront the accused with his accuser before you can sentence him or even before you can proceed against him. That is why every accused has got to be present, if the proceeding is to be a trial. Every witness who comes into the box and every little piece of evidence that is tendered against him must be adduced in his presence. The commencement of the trial needs the presence of the accused. The continuation of the trial equally needs the presence of the accused. If there is incapability to remain in attendance, from whatever cause arising and there is no pleader to represent the accused, there can be no trial at all unless we read section 540-A, as the Law Member has done, with additions and subtractions of his own. I trust nobody in this House will lend himself to such a course.

Another fine argument is advanced in the case of absconders. It is said that the accused must be under the custody or the control of the Court. Now, there is no provision of law under which any evidence can be adduced against an absconder or the case can be proceeded with without him, until he appears sooner or later. All that can be done is to have recourse to proceedings in the nature of perpetuation of evidence. I congratulate the Law Member for the use of the correct legal term “ perpetuation of testimony ”. Now, Sir, the whole point of the analogy of the absconder put forward by my Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye has been missed by the Law Member. The point of his argument is this. Here is a man who, by his own voluntary act, in order to save his skin, does something which is in itself an offence and defies both the executive officers and the Court. He effects his escape and remains in hiding and never comes before the Court. The machinery of the law is held up. Nothing can be done until this man appears again. If there is any apprehension of some of the witnesses dying before the accused appears, then their statements are taken down and those statements are, in the words of Mr. Jinnah, preserved, not perpetuated. All that can happen is that those statements can be used against the accused when the accused appears if the witnesses have died meanwhile. Nothing can be done on those statements. No order can be made on those statements. It is only when the accused appears that these statements can be used against him, but if the witnesses are all available everything else that has gone before counts for nothing and cannot be referred to.

It is only then that the trial begins. Well, what my Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye says is, here are men who have not rendered themselves incapable to attend to save their skin but who are sacrificing themselves for a very noble object. You cannot deal with them, and the law says you shall not deal with them. Why do you invent this internal machine in order to deal with them ? That is the point, because, without inventing this machine you cannot touch them. That is a patent fact. Now, Sir, let us examine the argument and see what it comes to. The Government say that, so far as the existing provisions concerning trials are concerned, we cannot carry on this trial and therefore we want additional powers. If they were honest enough, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Jinnah has pointed out, they would say, "Well, we want some sort of power, some sort of procedure which will take the place of a trial because we cannot try these men". It is impossible for you to come and say, "Let us try a man without complying with the fundamental, with the very essential condition, namely, the presence of the accused. Now my Honourable friend, the Law Member, said that, if the remedy is to appoint, to take power to appoint, a pleader for a man who has not appointed a pleader, then he is willing to meet us half way; and he said that he would give the Courts the power to inflict a pleader upon an unwilling client who, most probably, has no confidence in this pleader and to whom he does not wish to entrust his case. That, Sir, is the favour that the Law Member is willing to grant. I have here, Sir, a pronouncement by one of the distinguished Judges of England in the case of Reg. v. Yscuado which was referred to in this very case by the Lahore High Court. In this case the prisoner was indicted for wilful murder. When he was called upon to plead, no word or sign could be elicited from him, and the jury were sworn to try whether he stood mute of malice or by the visitation of God. The jury found that it stood out of malice. Then it was suggested by the prosecution that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, counsel should be assigned to the prisoner and one of the counsels present at once volunteered to defend him. The prisoner was asked whether he wished to have the services of counsel to defend him, but no reply was given.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, I think the Honourable the Pandit has misunderstood me. What I said was that the Crown would be prepared to pay for a pleader of his own choice, that is, the choice of the accused, not against his wish. I never suggested that. That was a misapprehension.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : That is tainted money.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am very glad, Sir, that my Honourable friend admits that Government have no right to force a pleader upon a client who does not wish to have him.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I fully accept that.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I quite appreciate the force of the great offer, the liberal offer that he has made. Nobody however has gone to him begging money to pay for pleaders. He knows that these people are being defended by a Defence Committee which has ample funds at its disposal.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I was not thinking of this case or that case. I was thinking generally of the provisions of the law.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : It is this case which has brought the Government before this House and if anything does not apply to this case, we can reserve it for future consideration. (Laughter.) Now, Sir, my whole point is this, that I cannot conceive of a trial either being commenced or being continued without the presence of the accused or the presence of his lawyer where his personal attendance can be dispensed with. Now there is one instance to the contrary which has been given and that is from Stephen's "Criminal Procedure". Mr. Jinnah has pointed out that that was in the exercise of the Common Law jurisdiction which the Presidency High Courts had inherited from the Supreme Courts and that that Common Law jurisdiction had its origin in an ancient and obsolete rule no longer followed. Now the present Bill, if passed into law, is not going to apply only to those courts which have inherited their jurisdiction from the Supreme Courts.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Sir, may I point out to the Honourable Member that it is not only that, but that this Bill is not going to bring the party before the Court and the question of contempt of Court does not arise here.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : That is exactly what I am saying. I say, even so, that procedure which has been mentioned by Stephen in his book will not apply to any part of India except in cases of contempt when tried by the High Courts which have inherited jurisdiction from the Supreme Court.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Sir, all I submitted was that the principle was not unknown, not unheard of.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : We are now, Sir, passing a law of general application and we must exclude from consideration all special cases and special applications of special rules. Now if that is so, then my challenge stands. I want to ask, can there be any trial under any system of law, or can a trial be continued without the accused being present except when the presence of the accused who is represented by a pleader is dispensed with under the provisions of section 540-A? Well, I submit, Sir, it is a misnomer to call a proceeding, a trial at which the accused is not present either personally or by pleader. Whether it is by his own voluntary act that he has incapacitated himself from appearing, or whether it is by a visitation of God is immaterial. The law makes no distinction whatever because in no case can there be a trial without the presence of the accused. When you say there can be a trial without the accused, you go again all notions of criminal law. Under the pretence of removing a lacuna in the law, you sap the very foundation of criminal justice. You may ask us for any special executive powers that you may need, but do not slander the principles of criminal jurisprudence. There is no justification for asking any Legislature to so amend the law that it ceases to answer to the description of any law whatever. Sir, if that well-known expression of my colleague, the late Mr. C. R. Das, was ever applicable to any law, namely, a lawless law, it certainly is applicable to the measure which is now before this House.

I will leave the legal aspect of the case at that and will now deal briefly with the facts and circumstances which have induced the Government to come before this House to ask for special legislation. Previous speakers have used strong language and indulged in severe condemnation of the Government for their action or inaction in this matter. That I submit is fully deserved by the Government, but there is another aspect of the case which appeals to me more, and it is that the present action of the Government excites more pity and commiseration than anger. The Government comes before the House and says: "We have blundered; we have not done our duty; we have blundered in our treatment of these accused people. The matter has gone so far and we are in such a mess now that we come to this House to help to extricate us from that mess by some sort of a special procedure which, whether known to the law or unknown to the law, will save us". That is the position. The only answer to this position can be : You have done these things in spite of repeated warnings of this House. I will not go into the long history of these warnings because my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah has already referred to them. By your persistent conduct you have brought all these things upon yourselves, and you have to take the consequences ; we cannot help you. That is the plain answer. But have the Government done their duty ? They say, they have. By the courtesy of the Honourable Mr. Emerson I am provided with certain papers, which show the exact nature of the demand of the accused. Much has been said on the floor of this House as to the reasonableness of those demands. In opening the debate, the Honourable the Home Member relied upon the extravagance of the demands, which, he said, were made not only for themselves by the present accused people, but also for the convicts in the Kakori case and the Ghadr case, and in order to impress the House both the Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable Mr. Emerson read a long list of the most violent and diabolical crimes that could be imagined which these men were found guilty of. And it was said that the demand made by the Kakori prisoners and the Ghadr prisoners was for preferential treatment, and that it was a demand which was far too extravagant to be looked at. That is not my reading of it. It is true that the letter or the application which was read by the Honourable Mr. Chaman Lal does mention the Kakori case and the Ghadr case, but, I take it, as only illustrating the general principle. When we look at the demand, we have to see what these prisoners want for themselves. Can it be pretended that if all that these prisoners wanted for themselves had been conceded and this special treatment had been withheld from the Kakori and the Ghadr prisoners, still these Lahore prisoners would not have broken their hunger-strike ? There can be no suggestion of that kind. But, in point of fact, the real demand of these people was a very reasonable and a very simple one. Now, the first is a letter or application of the 17th June, 1929, by Bhagat Singh in which he puts his demand like this :

" My demands are—special diet, including milk, ghee, rice and curd. No forcible labour. Toilette soap, oil, shaving, etc. Literature, history, economics, political science, poetry, drama or fiction."

He wants something to read, something to live upon, some decent food and something to keep himself clean ; some soap and water and towel. That is the first demand.

Then Dutt, his co-accused, in another letter without date says this :

" My demands are the following : Better food, including loaf and milk in the morning ; rice, dal and vegetables and curd and sugar in the noon ; and bread, meat and chatni at night. No labour ; all kinds of literature and papers ; toilette, including soap, oil, comb and bath. Better accommodation ; and civil dress. I used to get all these things in the Delhi jail before and after my conviction from the jail expenses."

Honourable Members will remember that the Honourable the Home Member said when some other Member was speaking, that all these concessions were made when these men were under-trial prisoners, but here is the statement of this man Dutt who says :

" I used to get all these things in the Delhi jail before and after my conviction from the jail expenses."

I will not read all the other papers I hold in my hand, but will go to the very last which must have been received about the 7th or the 8th of September. It is dated the 6th September. This is directed to the Chairman, Punjab Jail Inquiry Committee and Members of the Hunger-Strike Sub-Committee. It is most important to know what is the version of these accused persons in regard to what the Jail Inquiry Committee or rather the Jail Sub-Committee, which visited them, actually promised them when they induced them to break the strike as the Jail Inquiry Committee say, or suspend it, as the strikers put it. It is not a very long document and I shall read it. I see it is not signed by anybody, but I find that it was sent through the Jail Superintendent. So there can be no mistake that one or more of these people must have vouched for this document.

" Dear Sirs,—We beg to bring the following to your kind notice :

- (1) That we did not abandon hunger-strike, but merely suspended it pending the decision of the Government. We think we made this point clear to you, and further repeatedly requested you to make it clear to the public and the Government alike. We are surprised to note that this point has not been even mentioned in the Press statement given by the members of the Hunger-Strike Sub-Committee as published in the Civil and Military Gazette, dated the 4th September, 1929. However, we hope you will do so at the earliest opportunity.

- (2) We suspended the hunger-strike, but only on the assurance "

—this is important. This is what they claim was the assurance given to them—

" that you and the remaining members of the Inquiry Committee will make unanimous recommendations practically meeting all our demands to our satisfaction. One of us pointed out to you that Government in most of the cases in the past did not accept such recommendations of the Inquiry Committees as it did not serve their purpose, and as an instance cited the glaring instance of the Skeen Committee. He feared that the recommendations of your Committee as well might be treated in the same manner."

" In reply you said that you had consulted the Local Government before coming down to us, and that you were therefore in a position to assure us that Government would not do so in this case.

It was on this clear and most important assurance that we agreed after full nine hours discussion to suspend the hunger-strike.

Besides you gave us further assurance that in compliance with our strong desire comrade Jatindra Nath Das would be released immediately and unconditionally, in view of his critical state of health. Secondly that our demands as under-trials, the most important of which was to keep all of us together (including Comrades Bhagat Singh and Dutt) in a general association barrack, would be accepted by the Government within a day or two."

These are the three points upon which, according to these men, a definite assurance was given to them and thereupon they suspended the hunger-strike. The letter proceeds :

" But our fears came true when, despite the strong and unanimous recommendations of all the members of the sub-committee, the Government did neither agree to release Comrade Das nor to keep Comrades Bhagat Singh and Dutt with us. Thus we have been furnished with immediate proofs of the fact that the Government does not care for your recommendations, and we hope you will excuse us when we say that we believe that all the Government wanted was to exploit your individual positions as public men in getting hunger-strike broken. We may further mention that before we suspended our hunger-strike we carefully considered how far we could rely on the promise of the Inquiry Committee. On that, Comrades Bhagat Singh and Dutt suggested that the present occasion would serve as a test case. Now that we find that the Government has not paid any heed to even two of the most ordinary recommendations of yours."

[Pandit Motilal Nehru.]

—that shows the spirit in which the Government is working. It is not that they have given a long list of impossible demands. Every one of their conditions is quite reasonable. What they say here is that the Government have not heeded even two of the most ordinary recommendations of the Sub-Committee. They continue—

“we have been forced to resume hunger-strike immediately.”

Now comes the most important part of it, as to what they intend to do :

“The condition of Comrade Das is now absolutely hopeless, and if the Government thinks that after his death we will shirk our duty it is a fatal mistake.”

Unfortunately, as we all know Jatin Das is no more :

“Let us all state that we are all prepared to share his fate. For the sake of convenience, however, and keeping the idea of continued fight in view, we are dividing ourselves into two groups, the first of which is resuming hunger-strike at once. It is resolved that, as soon as a member of the first group meets his death, one member from the second group will come forward, to fill the gap. We have arrived at this decision in full realisation of its gravity. There is no other proper and honourable course left to us now but to follow in the footsteps of our Comrade Das. We regard our cause as just and honourable, which any fair Government would have conceded without forcing the necessity of such a serious step. We repeat that we are going into this fight with a firm conviction that nothing can be more glorious and honourable than to fight till death for a just and noble cause. In conclusion we feel that we fail in our duty if we do not express our heart-felt thanks for the sincere interest and great trouble that you have taken to uphold our cause before the Government.”

These are the demands that were made by these men, and this is the character of the men whom you do not want to treat properly. What is the answer that the Government give? The Government say, “Well, these men want to have the privileges of political prisoners. We recognise no such category as political prisoners. All that we know is first division, second division, and so on”. How are those classes determined? Those classifications are made according to the mode of life, the position in life, education and things of a like nature. But the species known as the political prisoners is a thing which the Government cannot conceive. Examples are given of the jail rules prevailing in England, in France and in America, and it is said that even in those advanced countries there is no such thing as “political prisoners”. There are prisoners of the first division, the second division, and so on. Now, Sir, there is an initial fallacy underlying all that argument. Is there anything analogous between India on the one hand, and England, France and America on the other? Are the people of England, France and America struggling for their liberty against an alien occupation? It is in India that we are thus struggling. The political situation in India is one which cannot be found in France, America or England, unless you take the Reds or the anarchists in those countries who are called criminals. Even against the anarchists and the Reds in those countries, have they asked for a law such as the one you are asking this House to sanction? There is no doubt that the Reds have been compelled to leave the country and otherwise been summarily dealt with. But when it came to a trial, there is not a single case which anybody can cite in which a man was tried in his absence as is sought to be done under the provisions of the Bill. I agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Jinnah, who said that it would be more in accord with common sense if the Government had asked for executive authority to deal with these people in a certain way, and then the House might consider whether the Government deserved to have that authority or not.

When you come to the classification based upon social status, the position in life and the manner of living, what does it come to? You are prepared to give preferential treatment to a miserable wretch who, for his own benefit, through sheer dishonesty, commits a disgraceful offence, such as theft, robbery, embezzlement, and so on. So long as he is a bank director, or manager who has been living in a princely style, you think he deserves to have special treatment in the jail. But when it comes to the case of selfless patriots, they have, according to you, no station in life, and are men in low positions in life. According to us they really occupy a station in life, life far above that of an ordinary human being. And when it comes to the question of these noble souls, who suffer not for the pleasures of their flesh, but who sacrifice their flesh for the well being of others when it comes to the case of such people, you deny them a fair treatment. You think that when a robber or a thief who lived well and who, in order to live well got the means of doing so by doubtful means and is detected and sent to jail, then he deserves to be treated better than these selfless patriots, who have nothing to gain for themselves, who have no axe to grind, and who simply offer themselves as a sacrifice to better the conditions of their fellow prisoners. They do not ask you not to try them. They do not want you to release them or to withdraw the case against them, except in the case of the late Jatin Das whose condition of health undoubtedly demanded that he should have been released. They only demanded necessary conveniences. The Government decided that these offences, for which they were being tried, were offences of such a serious nature that there could be no question of the withdrawal of the case. They decided that these men must be left to their fate, but a conviction and sentence must be secured before they die. I should like to know what you want to do with them. What would it matter if these hunger-strikers died a day or two before their conviction or a day or two after their conviction? Will it be enough for the Government to have the satisfaction of securing a conviction against these people? Is that the reason why this House has been approached for this law? Conviction or no conviction, these men have declared that they are not going to stop their hunger-strike. If they do they would do so of their own accord, but the threat of conviction will not force them to stop the strike. Two of them are convicted in another case, it is true, but they are under trial in this case. I submit that when a person is an under-trial prisoner there is no occasion to go into the offence with which he is charged, because it is admitted both by the Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable Mr. Emerson that the presumption is that he is not guilty. It is on that presumption that you deal with him. If that is so, where is the necessity of your citing a long list of the offences which were proved to have been committed in the Kakori case?

Mr. H. W. Emerson (Home Secretary) : Sir, may I just, with your permission, correct a misapprehension? Under-trial prisoners are never classed as special class prisoners, but only convicted persons. All under-trials are assumed to be innocent whatever the nature of the offence charged against them, and whatever may be their status and education, and so on. There is no distinction made between under-trials on the ground that the offences with which they are charged happen to be of a certain character.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am very grateful to the Home Secretary. I never misunderstood him on that point. What I said was exactly what he said just now, that there is no distinction made, and yet they are not allowed even the comforts of an ordinary European convict who, according to Government, have better ways of living and whose health is more delicate than that of these people, and for various other considerations. But so far as this hunger-strike is concerned, the question arises what is to be the attitude of Government? As I said, France and England and America are not at all analogous cases. Let us take an analogous case, the case of Ireland. In Ireland the first case of hunger-strike was that of Thomas Ashe. That was in 1916, and after five days of fasting, he was reduced to the very last stage of weakness. Forceful feeding was resorted to and on the sixth or the seventh day he actually died in the hands of the prison doctor. There were others also who were on hunger-strike and why? Exactly upon the same grounds and for the same cause as these people at Lahore are now on hunger-strike. I will beg your forbearance to read a few passages from this book that I have in my hand. It is a recent book in two volumes, "The Life of Michael Collins". This is what happened in Ireland, I am reading at page 164 of Volume I :

"In August Thomas Ashe, Austin Stack, and Fionan Lynch were arrested and tried by court-martial on the charge of making speeches calculated to cause disaffection."

Mind you, Sir, this is a court-martial, with far more drastic powers than ordinary criminal courts :

"A number of Volunteer officers were also arrested on the charge of illegal drilling. It had now become the practice of Volunteers or Sinn Feiners, when charged before an English court, whether military or civil, to refuse to plead or to recognise the right of their captors to try them. In this case Thomas Ashe was sentenced to a year's imprisonment, Lynch to eighteen months and Stack to two years."

The three leaders were imprisoned in Mountjoy Prison with about 40 others. And now the fight which had been started in Lewes was renewed. The prison authorities endeavoured to subject the men to the same treatment as criminals. They resisted and asserted their right to be treated as prisoners of war, or, at least, as political prisoners. The English authorities, with stubborn obtuseness, persisted in the attempt to classify these men with thieves and murderers; and, all other means of protest having failed, the prisoners went on hunger strike on September 20th. Austin Stack was their elected leader.

The prison authorities, confronted with this revolt, resorted to the cruel device of forcible feeding. The hunger-strike, and the circumstances that had given rise to it, stirred public feeling in Ireland profoundly. Even those, who had no sympathy with Sinn Fein, sympathised with the men's demand to be treated as political prisoners. A huge meeting of protest in Dublin was followed by similar meetings all over the country, and there were daily demonstrations outside Mountjoy Prison.

On the 25th of September, after five days of hunger-strike, Thomas Ashe was removed to the Mater Hospital in a sinking condition, and he died a few hours later. The death of this brave and gifted young man thrilled the Irish people with grief and indignation."

What happened was this :

"The death of Ashe resulted in the victory of the hunger strikers. Two days later the English authorities in Ireland conceded the claims of the prisoners and a new series of rules for the treatment of 'political prisoners' was introduced. The men then desisted from their hunger-strike."

So the class of political prisoners did exist in Ireland. Next I will read two or three sentences from the verdict of the jury at the inquest on the body of Ashe:-

"We censure the Castle authorities for not acting more promptly, especially when the grave condition of the deceased and other prisoners was brought under their notice on the previous Saturday by the Lord Mayor and Sir. J. Irwin."

That the hunger-strike was adopted against the inhuman punishment inflicted, and as a protest against the men being treated as criminals and demanding to be treated as political prisoners in the first division.

We condemn forcible or mechanical feeding as an inhuman and dangerous operation, which should be discontinued.

We tender our sympathy to the relatives in this sad and tragic occurrence."

Then what followed is this :

"Stack, Lynch and the other prisoners were removed to Dundalk about this time. Here fresh complaints led to another hunger-strike, as a result of which all the prisoners were released on November 17th."

This was war time. The great war was then going on. I have reason to believe that one of the reasons now assigned for this kind of treatment is that this was done under pressure of war. But we know for a fact that this Irish trouble continued till the year 1921, long after the close of the war. The conflicts between the Sinn Feiners, or the Irish Republican Army on the one hand, and the Royal Irish Constabulary, the Blacks and Tano and the regular English force on the other hand, the various acts of violence and arson committed by both sides in the name of reprisals continued until sometime in May or June 1921 when there was no pressure of war conditions. But although these men were guilty of the gravest crimes according to the English laws in force in Ireland they were, according to themselves, only doing what any people would have done situated as they were. They were taken, more often than not, before the military courts. But never was a trial of these men,—even by a court-martial,—conducted without the presence of these men.

I shall not go further into this point. My submission is this : There is no justification for the Government not to have conceded the demands of these men at once. As it now turns out, there was nothing extravagant in those demands so long as these men were only under-trial prisoners, in those demands so long as these men were only under-trial prisoners, pre-though it was first said that their demands were extravagant and preposterous, I think I have established to the satisfaction of the House that they were nothing of the kind. They merely wanted the same treatment as was extended to European prisoners; these not being granted they went on hunger-strike. Now it is said by Government, "We cannot apply the general rules to under-trial prisoners; we are not concerned with convicts here. The Bill deals with under-trial prisoners only." Every body knows the distinction between under-trial prisoners and convicted persons. But while dealing with under-trials, all that the Home Member and Mr. Emerson did was to cite rules relating to convicts and not to under-trial prisoners. I have yet to see the rules obtaining in England, France and the United States, which apply to under-trials, and which are more rigorous than those adopted here by the Indian Government. My point is simply this, that there is no precedent, no warrant in law for a measure like this to be brought before the Assembly, and that what the Government want is not an improvement of the law to provide for an omission; but to ride rough-shod over the very first principles of criminal jurisprudence, and that is a thing which I do hope this House will not tolerate.

Now, Sir, when we come to the difficulty in which the Government find themselves, I submit that they do not deserve any sympathy whatever at the hands of this House. They have brought it all on themselves by stubbornly and arrogantly refusing the most reasonable demands of a set of people whom they knew were not serving any purpose of their own, but simply wanted in the interest of their fellow-prisoners and incidentally for themselves, to be allowed only such privileges as you allow to every European convict, whatever may be the offence he has committed. You say that you apply the same rules to persons who are not Europeans if they come up to the same standard. Sir, I have no respect for the man or for his mode of living or for his colour or for his station in life if he has been convicted of theft or embezzlement or some such disgraceful crime. On the other hand, I have every respect for the man who—it may be he is misguided, it may be he has acted as I would not have acted—has acted under the best of impulses and in the fullest belief that he was acting for, and in the cause of, his country. I should certainly take off my hat to him, and I should not even look at the other man, however high his position in life may have been. Therefore, there has been no reason shown to justify this Bill. The remedy is only this : forsake your fetish worship of prestige ; look at things as they are ; try to meet the legitimate demands of these men. Sir, the sort of crime alleged against these men may be very deplorable, but is not the last of the kind ; there may be other cases of such crime. You will only be multiplying those cases by the treatment which you are according to the accused in this case. You are certainly not preventing such crime by the treatment you are giving to these people.

For all these reasons, I submit that there is no occasion for this House to pass this law, and I may mention that I am not only opposing the motion of the Home Member, but also the other two motions, namely, the motion for circulation and the motion for reference to Select Committee ; but if it is the desire of the other Members of the House, then out of consideration for their opinion we shall vote with those who ask for the circulation of this Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. E. L. Price : Sir, I rise to support the amendment of Mr. K. C. Roy and to oppose the dilatory motions. Mr. Kelkar seemed to me entirely to miss the factor of time in the administration of justice. I suggest to Mr. Kelkar that from the earliest times the matter of delay in justice has been admittedly the denial of justice. This was recognised so far back as 1215 A. D. and in the Magna Charta the Barons rightly extorted from the King that to no man would he deny, to no man would he delay, justice. Now, Diwan Chaman Lall, unlike Mr. Kelkar, had no constructive proposals to make. He devoted himself to a great strafe of, I understand, the Punjab Government, delivered however to the Government of India. I learnt the other day from a slight alteration that took place in this part of the House that the baiting of the Treasury Benches was a "legitimate sport". All I can say is that Diwan Chaman Lall had undoubtedly a good run, and I am sure he enjoyed his lunch the better. But I suggest, however, that he always talks to the Government Benches as Hamlet talked to that unfortunate woman his mother. And if he must continue in the strain of high tragedy, it would be rather pleasant for Members of this House if he could vary the play. I should like to hear him very much in the role, say, of Romeo. Or he might temporarily abandon high tragedy and try comedy, and I recommend in that respect the little play "The two Gentlemen of Peshawar". Sir, Mr. Jamnadas Mehta also had his little bit of "legitimate sport", and, like Diwan Chaman Lall, he had no constructive proposals to make. But I did catch this from him, and I should like to thank Mr. Jamnadas Mehta for making the physical effort necessary to make himself heard in this part of the House—a courtesy that we do not often enjoy from those Benches. Sir, he made this admission, that the responsibility is on the Government. Quite so, Sir. But does he suppose that, in coming up here, he takes no part in that responsibility also ? I suggest essentially he does, and that, where he finds it necessary radically to turn down Government proposals in any emergency, there is a moral obligation on him not merely to turn them down but to propose alternatives.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Concede the demands. That is the alternative.

Mr. E. L. Price : Mr. Jinnah did not err that way, because he did suggest an alternative to Government, and, as I understood it, his alternative was that Government in order to meet the wishes of those prisoners under trial who wish to go on hunger strike, and to meet the quite legitimate case of those prisoners who do not want to hunger-strike, should re-arrange the charges, and proceed now only against those who were not hunger-striking. But the objection to that course seems to me to be this, that in any case where the Government have joint charges against a number of accused, it would finally leave to the prisoners under trial the right to dictate to the prosecution the procedure and joinder of charges. Mr. Jinnah unfortunately has not come. I put it to Mr. Jayakar that it would not be a fair course for any prosecution—let me take even a civil case. It is not fair to the plaintiff that the defendant should be allowed to say how the plaintiff's case should be put forward. I say distinctly it is not fair to the prosecution that those prosecuted should be allowed to dictate the procedure and joinder of charges, and if my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar likes to answer that I should be glad to hear him.

Sir, Mr. Jinnah delved into English law, its old barbarities, and it seemed rather research ad hoc, an expression which I believe is highly unpopular in this House. But I think he missed the point of that barbaric procedure. The whole thing was that the "Majesty of the Law" refused to put up with anything like contumaciousness on the part of the prisoner. The law said he must plead. If he refused to plead, then peine forte et dure,—I believe it was only formally abolished by statute in the beginning of the nineteenth century,—he was tortured, if necessary, to death, or till he did plead. But at a later era, of course, it became possible for the judge to say that when he did not plead at all or was mute, he was pleading "not guilty", and that is the law now. Sir, the point of this was the insistence of the law that it would not be trifled with. If there was a thing that had to be done by the prisoner, he must do it or suffer, and in many cases the suffering was terrible. Members of this House seem to be tremendously impressed by the physical courage of hunger strike. I cannot say that of myself. I happen to be an Englishman, and some countrywomen of mine adopted this trick, for trick it is, to avoid the consequences of their misdeeds some sixteen years ago. As a matter of fact, this hunger-striking did not affect their trials as far as I can remember any more than it did MacSwiney's. It affected their imprisonment. The British are a practical people and they were prepared to meet a little contingency like that. They recognised that forcible feeding was a loathsome and nasty procedure in the case of men, and that in the case of women it was simply unthinkable. So what did they do? The lady who committed some silly anti-social act, something like obstructing the traffic, or making false fire alarms, breaking windows, and things like that,—she was promptly sentenced by the magistrate, but she refused to pay the fine and went to gaol. The hysteria that had driven her to the police court, in gaol turned into sulks, and she sat there and would not eat her breakfast. When this went on for some time and her health looked like being impaired, they promptly let her out, and the poor girl ran back to her mother. Mother comforted her and fed her well, and after a few days she became as healthy and robust as ever. Then the heavy hand of the police came on her again and led her back to gaol to do a few more days. I believe there were some suffragettes that took about six months to do a month's imprisonment. But at all events, whatever happened, the hand of the law was not stayed. The trial was held, the sentence carried out. And I consider, if we look back to the essentials of things, that you will find that in England law insists on taking its course. I have noticed that there is a tendency to rag in this House everything that is English; but there is one English thing that they are prepared to die in the last ditch for and that is the principles of English law. (An Honourable Member: "English law is borrowed from Roman law.") It does not matter where it comes from. These principles as they understand them are held so dear by my friends here, that they are prepared to die in the last ditch to maintain them. I found it difficult to get the relevant books in the Library, possibly Mr. Jinnah had been there before me, but I found the Norwich murder case to which he referred, in another book, Archbold's 28th Edition. In that case, I take it, the Judge said to a prisoner who was making himself rather disgusting, "My man, if you do not behave yourself you will be taken to the cells and this trial will proceed without you." But things did not go to that extremity. I cannot find a case in which they did. Mark you, the judge in England is not so much bound by code law, is not so much driven to seek verbal formulae as in India. He is working on the system of old common law which is a matter not of verbiage but of principles. The Judge in that case was taking the line, "Whatever you may do my man, I am commissioned by His Majesty for gaol delivery and nothing shall deter me from carrying out my duties". The fact that things were not pushed to extremities is no argument at all against the judge's stand but for it. He was carrying His Majesty's Commission for gaol delivery and I believe that no English judge would tolerate the obstruction of justice by means of a trick done by a prisoner. He would not allow it. Fiat justitia ruat cælum. Now, Sir, we have come to a practical position in India where we find a revival of the old feminine trick in a new form. (Honourable Members: "Try it and die".) These interruptions are extremely irrelevant. It is not a question of my dying, or of my wilfully making myself unfit for any of the obligations of life. I have never done so. I have always tried to keep myself fit for my obligations. But, Sir, we have come to a practical position in which justice is flouted. It is impossible to carry on the trials owing to the feminine, sulky trick adopted by prisoners under trial. In these circumstances Government come to the House in the exercise of a statutory right, nay, I think it is an obligation. They ask Members of this House to consider their proposals. The law must follow circumstances, must be made able to meet all contingencies.

I believe Government are quite open to accept alternative suggestions, if sensible alternative suggestions are put forward. Here is a possible one. It happened the other day a woman tried to flout the law in France by standing "mute of malice", but they solved the difficulty by appointing counsel against her will; at all events without her consent, to represent her at the trial. Now, Sir, there was an Honourable Member who laid great stress on the absconding of a man. I quite agree with the principle—No prisoner, no trial. In the same way in a coroner's inquest, no corpse, no quest. But having once viewed the body, the coroner and his jury are not compelled to abide with the malodorous corpse all the time. So long as it is established that there is a corpse, the inquiry goes on. But if an actual prisoner in custody, by a trick, evades coming into court, I certainly consider that he should not be allowed to benefit by his performance, still less to put the other co-accused to disability, who may very well have a chance of winning their freedom. Sir, the necessity of carrying on with justice in civil cases is clear enough. Now, suppose these legal gentlemen were appearing in a case, and the defendant, by some new trick, tried to evade service, or by any other new and unforeseen procedure to prevent the plaintiff getting justice, every one of them would at once say, "The law is defective and must be amended". They would say, as has been repeatedly said, that the latent defects of the law should be remedied as soon as they become patent. And that is exactly the position now. Sir, I am not defending Government. I have no use for a Government that does not defend itself. Government can defend itself. I am simply speaking here as one of the public, a Member of this body, a citizen, and I demand that the law shall be enabled to take its course. I refuse to have anything to do with palliating a trick which has got the object of defeating the administration of justice.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar: Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar. I should have liked to go further and entirely oppose this Bill. But like my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, I am quite agreeable to the middle course suggested by the amendment of Mr. Kelkar. If it is supported by the bulk of the non-official Members in this House, I shall certainly do likewise. Sir, I do not propose to follow the Honourable Member who spoke last. I do not propose to reply to his disquisitions on law, because, among other things, they are old-fashioned. I would rather follow a more up-to-date exponent of the law, the Honourable the Law Member. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt: Is he very young?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar: I understand, Sir, that the Honourable Member who spoke last was called to the Bar some years ago. But judging by what he has stated before this House, he has apparently not been pursuing his legal studies during the intervening years, Sir, a little learning is a dangerous thing. He used words like "latent", "patent" and "researches ad hoc". Sir, when he used those words I felt as if the shadow of his former knowledge had remained with him but the substance had gone. Sir, I wish to leave the Honourable Member who spoke last severely alone so far as his legal disquisition is concerned, I only wish to say that, when he has finished his career as a businessman in this country, it will be time for him then to think of legal disquisitions. It is dangerous to confuse avocations. But there is another aspect of the Honourable Member's speech which is more general and on which I wish to reply to him. Sir, speaking of the hunger strikers, the Honourable Member used an offensive expression. I am very sorry he permitted himself to use it three or four times. Possibly he did not realise what he was saying. He said that these hunger strikers, for whose incarceration this Bill has been devised by Government, were practising "feminine tricks". As I proceed with my argument, I propose to show to my Honourable friends that the purpose of this Bill is nothing more nor less than the incarceration of the persons who have been practising hunger strike.

My Honourable friend, the Law Member, seems to have persuaded himself that this Bill is based on sound legal principles. Sir, I do not agree with my Honourable friend. One of the anomalies which I noticed when I first came to this House, Sir, was the distinction between the Home Department and the Legislative Department. I marvelled at that distinction. I asked myself what is the function of the Legislative Department and of the Home Department. I felt that there ought to be one Department which looks after legal questions. I was told of a distinction in their functions—and that distinction came very clearly to my mind today when my Honourable friend, the Law Member spoke. I was told that the Home Department looked after the political aspects of legal questions and my Honourable friend, the Law Member's Department looked after their dry legal aspect. On this basis the distinction was justified. The effect of that distinction was brought home to me today when my Honourable friend, the Law Member spoke. When I heard him, I felt as if the real political aspects of this Bill had completely escaped him. He wanted to persuade this House that this was a purely legal measure, designed for no purpose except to supply and fill in certain lacunae which exist in the law. I am surprised that my Honourable friend should have so easily been deceived. Well, it is a most extraordinary way of filling in lacunae to destroy the very structure and foundation of the system which is sought to be made more complete. Lacunae, Sir, are gaps and omissions and these have always to be filled in in such a way as not to destroy the substratum, the very structure and edifice, which is being rendered more complete. If my engineer, Sir—to illustrate by analogy—said to me, "I want to supply certain lacunae in your bathroom", a window for instance or an electrical geyser, or tiles or things of that kind which are wanting in my bathroom, and if, in the name of supplying these omissions, he started destroying the bathroom itself, I would promptly ask the engineer to go away. Sir, in the name of lacunae—and it is a very specious phrase which I want my Honourable friends to guard against—the Government today are destroying the first principles of criminal jurisprudence. Before I proceed with this argument further, I just want to refer to a question which I left half-touched with reference to what my Honourable friend, Mr. Price, spoke. Whether we agree or whether we do not agree, I hope Honourable Members will realise this, that to speak of the people who are practising hunger strike as if they were practising a trick, and withal a "feminine trick", is to misuse words. Sir the Honourable Member who used these insulting words does not realise that India may be politically subject, but she has not lost her self-respect yet. (Hear, hear.) I was surprised and struck by the temerity of my Honourable friend in referring in the way he did to the young man who died yesterday. He died slowly, inch by inch; one hand gone paralysed for want of sustenance, another hand gone atrophied for want of nourishment, one foot gone, another foot gone, and the last of nature's precious gifts, eye-sight, gone; the fire of those orbs slowly quenched, inch by inch, not by the sudden and merciful death of the guillotine, but with the slowness with which nature builds or destroys. Oh, the anguish of this slow torture! And yet, my Honourable friend, opposite, well-fed as he is, says of this young student in the presence of so many of his countrymen that he practised a feminine trick. (Loud cries of "Shame, shame, shame.") Sir, I and many of my friends here may not share the political views of those who are practising the hunger strike. But that is not the question here. The question is what was the reason for which the hunger strike was taken up. That is a question, and from the way in which these boys took up the question and boldly agitated it at the sacrifice of life, no sensible Indian can withhold his sympathies. I am deeply grieved, Sir, that a Member of the European Benches, a Group for which I have always had the utmost cordiality and friendliness during the three years I have been in this House, and whose desire and endeavour ought to be, as is ours on this side of the House, not to insult the feelings and sympathies of their associates,—I say, that for a new Member of that Group, who has not been in this House for more than two weeks to get up and use such expressions even before the body of the young student is burnt is an insult to the feelings of the Indian Members in this part of the House.

Mr. E. L. Price : Sir, on a point of personal explanation, if I make a description of the act of one or two or three individuals in a country of over 300 millions, can I be said to insult the whole country?

Some Honourable Members : You do, you do.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I will not pursue this unpleasant matter. All I will say is that my Honourable friend, Sir Darcy Lindsay the Leader of that group, after this debate is over will mention silently into the ears of Mr. Price that he sinned against the good manners and decorum of this House. (Hear, hear.) I will leave the matter there.

My Honourable friend, the Law Member, was unfortunately led into two or three errors. He said that this is merely a procedural change. He went into a very long disquisition, and I do not wish to follow him into his distinction between adjective law and substantive law. Sir, as I listened, I was reminded of the days when I was learning law in the Government Law School in Bombay. The Honourable the Law Member talked about his experience of the Calcutta Sessions Court. I know he was a great figure at the Bar in Calcutta. His experience of the Sessions Court must also be very wide. But may I ask him one simple question? Will he and the Honourable the Home Member be more frank about this Bill? I wish the Government Benches had said in so many words: "This is, speaking frankly, a lawless law, but the circumstances of the country today demand it". I can understand that argument if it is so frankly put. "Yes, it is rather an extraordinary piece of legislation, but so are also the political circumstances of the country. Extraordinary circumstances demand extraordinary measures". If such a plea were made out on behalf of the Government

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

Benches, I could have understood it. I will not accept it, but I will certainly give the Government the credit of being absolutely frank with this House. The plea then would be, "Today the circumstances of this country have become extraordinary; there is a defiance of the law everywhere and Government think that this spirit must be checked. The latest manifestation of that spirit is the hunger strike and Government want to get at it by any means they can. If this House does not give them the power, they will seek it elsewhere". If such a frank statement of the position were to be made, we would at least give credit to the Government that they were frank. But the Honourable the Law Member gets up and tries to cloak this measure with legal soundness. He ignores the wide terms of the Bill:

"If any accused...has voluntarily rendered himself incapable of remaining before the Court, the Judge or Magistrate may, whether such accused is represented by a pleader or not, dispense with his attendance and proceed with the inquiry or trial in his absence."

Does the Law Member justify this provision on any rational principles of law? He really takes my breath away. I do not wish to tell the Government in detail where this Bill has gone wrong and can be improved. I do not think that is my business, but may I ask the Honourable the Law Member to turn to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, where he will find that the reason and principle of this Bill are stated as follows:

"It is, therefore, possible for an accused person to bring the administration of justice to a standstill by a voluntary act by which he renders himself incapable of attending Court. The provisions of this Bill are intended to prevent the delay and defeat of justice by empowering Judges or Magistrates to proceed in the absence of an accused."

If the Bill is brought to frustrate such intention, is it not a very curious omission that there is not a single word in this section speaking of the intention to defeat and obstruct justice? If I were to comment on the details of the flaws of this Bill, I would take an hour to point out mistakes in the phraseology of the section, but without proceeding to do all this, may I ask my friend opposite how is it that the most material thing, namely, the intention of obstructing the trial and defeating the ends of justice has not been mentioned in the section? The onus is on the prosecution to make out that intention, but not a word has been said about it. The only words are: "has voluntarily rendered himself incapable of remaining before the Court". There are no words, e.g., to the effect that the Judge is to be satisfied, for reasons to be recorded in writing, that such voluntary incapacity has been caused with the intention to obstruct and delay the trial. Well, I can imagine many cases where a man may voluntarily make himself incapable without having any such intention in his mind. Supposing a man overeats himself and thereby voluntarily renders himself incapable of being present owing to indigestion. Another man may go out and expose himself and get pneumonia, and by his voluntary act render himself incapable of attending the trial. Is this section to be applied to such a man because the words are loose and wider than they need be? I do not wish to go into the legal side of this matter, but may I ask the Honourable the Law Member, who has a great reputation at the Bar and even here, whether he does not agree that the whole phraseology of the Bill is hopelessly defective?

Again my Honourable friend spoke as if he was speaking without the Criminal Procedure Code being before him, and he referred to a certain section (section 512), and he laid down what I thought to be an astounding proposition, if I may say so, while he was speaking. I put to him the analogy of the case of an accused person who is arrested, brought to trial before the Court, but before the trial is completed, somehow or other manages to abscond. What happens in such a case? Does not section 512 apply? If so, why cannot the same principle be made applicable to hunger strikers? My Honourable friend replied that section 512 was not intended to cover the case of such an absconder at all, but only that of an absconder never brought to trial. Well, I must say with great respect that I was surprised at his explanation. Is there any other section in the Criminal Procedure Code which covers the case of a person who is arrested, brought to trial and then absconds from jail custody before the trial is completed? There is no other section to cover such a case and all cases of absconders, at whatever stage, must fall within section 512. I shall therefore take the liberty of differing from the Honourable the Law Member. But what is more important in this connexion is sub-section (2) of that section. I wish it had not escaped the attention of my Honourable friend the Law Member. I wish to invite the attention of the Government Benches to the provisions of that section. Indeed, it ought to serve as a warning which the Government should remember in these days. That sub-section refers to the case of an accused who is unknown, which is politically a far less serious case than that of the hunger strike. Of course, if we accept my Honourable friend Mr. Price's estimate of the hunger striker, then I have nothing to say. But I take the view, that from the point of view of the citizens' rights, the case of a hunger striker is far more serious than the case of the unknown offender. And yet how does the law deal with the unknown offender? I will just read that section without making my remarks too technical:

"If it is proved that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons 'unknown'—"

Honourable Members will mark the precaution that follows—

"the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the First Class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence." The words are "the High Court". No subordinate Judge or Magistrate is given the power not only of not convicting the man, but even of recording evidence against him in his absence. This is the safeguard which is provided in the Criminal Procedure Code even in the case of an unknown accused who cannot be found. The framers of the Criminal Procedure Code laid it down that, even for the limited purpose of proceeding to record evidence against the unknown accused in his absence, the prosecution has to go to the High Court and take its direction before it can proceed one step further. Yet, in the present Bill, which practically permits the whole trial to go in the absence of the accused, the High Court is not at all spoken of. It is only a judge or a magistrate who is empowered. It may be a Second Class Magistrate, or even a Third Class Magistrate. The subordinate judicial official often under the thumb of the executive is given the power of convicting the accused in his absence, without the intervention of the High Court. I am, therefore, surprised, Sir, that the Honourable the Law Member should have found it possible to satisfy his legal conscience. My Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, pointed out a circumstance which I just wish to touch. Honourable Members are aware that a typical summary trial in modern jurisprudence is a court martial trial. And yet even in this form of trial, a drastic provision like the present Bill does not exist. This will appear from the King's Regulations, Army and Army Reserve, 1928, paragraph 647 of which says :

"An accused person for trial will be examined by a medical officer on the morning of each day the Court is ordered to sit, and the Commanding Officer is responsible for ensuring that no accused person is brought before the Court Martial if in the opinion of the medical officer he is unfit to undergo his trial."

I have looked into this compilation carefully, and summary as the trial is, I do not find any provision here, Sir, that if any soldier accused, by his voluntary act, renders himself incapable of attending the court, the court can proceed in his absence and convict him. Therefore I submit, Sir, that there is not much of legal soundness in this Bill. Speaking frankly, in my opinion, it is purely a political measure.

My Honourable friend, the Home Member, will excuse me if I uncloak the true intent of this Bill. The whole attempt is, under the cover of legal process, to get at the hunger strikers and to put a stop to such strikes. The Government are afraid that if this spirit of strikes were to spread, it would become very difficult to conduct trials. I can understand that apprehension, but the difficulty of justifying this measure on that ground is that its drastic provisions are based upon one instance only, namely, that of Lahore, and that too arising from causes not beyond the remedial power of Government. It cannot be said that the hunger strikers' object is to obstruct the trial. That may be the effect of their behaviour, but the intention is very different. Government should therefore have waited until other clearer cases arose and the necessity became more apparent. It is here pertinent to ask, when Government ask us to help them to punish the hunger striker by drastic means, what is the grievance of the hunger striker. Honourable Members are all aware—and I do not wish to go into details—that their main grievances are such that every Indian Member on this side of the House will sympathise with them, whatever shade of political opinion he may belong to. An attempt was made in this House to show that these young men, some of whom are very bright spirits, are fighting for a selfish purpose. May I here say—though some of us may not agree with their political views—that if India today were a self-governing country these intrepid and brave men would have been the material out of which were created captains of ships and commanders of armies. (Hear, hear.) I am therefore sorry that even some responsible persons made an attempt to prove that these young men were seeking some personal benefit for themselves. The Honourable Member (Mr. Emerson) who has recently come from the Punjab, and who made a speech on this question, is—fortunately for him—immune from harsh criticism on the ground that he spoke for the first time in this House. I shall therefore deal with him gently and say that if the manners and tone which he introduced into this House are indicative of the temper and methods of the Punjab Government, I am indeed very sorry for that Government. (Hear, hear.) With these words, I shall leave him. I shall respect the sentiment that an Honourable Member who makes his maiden speech should be immune from drastic criticism. But I cannot help saying this, that it is a futile attempt on the part of the Government to try to make out that these young men were wanting something for their own selfish comfort, that these men who are voluntarily laying down their lives were asking for some little conveniences here and there. It is an absolute travesty of the true facts to say so. How does this grievance arise? I want my Honourable friends to realise that. These young men are fighting for a principle. They say, and I want my Honourable friends to note this, that as long as Government maintain in their jails racial discrimination of a most extraordinary character, their strike will go on.

Referring to this racial discrimination, may I say that I remember, when I was a young boy just out of school, I came across the Jail Manual which applies to the Bombay Presidency, and young as I was then—who knows similar things have possibly happened to other boys—the iron went into my soul when I read of these racial distinctions in the Jail Manual. These young men have been provoked by this racial discrimination, they are not asking for comforts from selfish motives. They ask these on account of the principle involved in the question. I am just reading from the statement of B. K. Dutt. He says :

"I must mention that when a European breaks the ordinary law in order to fulfill his selfish motive, he gets all kinds of privileges in the jail, he will get a well ventilated room with electric fittings, the best food, such as milk, butter, toast, meat, etc., good clothing, while we are deprived of such things."

This is the point. I wish the Government had the imagination and intelligence to understand it in the right spirit. It is a mistake to suppose that these young men are asking for any selfish comforts. They say that they are making this matter a test question. I can assure my Honourable friends opposite that no Indian, whatever his political views may be, will ever withhold his sympathy in their fight on that question, whether he is a Congressman, or a Nationalist or an Independent. It is the question of all questions. I wish the Government would realise the significance of this question. They cannot lightly dismiss it, as the Honourable Member from the Punjab did with the remark, : "Oh, it is a racial question". I could not understand the relevancy of his remark that the Europeans in this House would agree with his sentiments. Of course they would. But the Government are not governing Europeans alone in this Country.

(Mr. H. W. Emerson rose to intervene.)

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I refuse to give way to my Honourable friend. He did not show yesterday the courtesy of giving way to many Members on the Front Bench on this side.

Mr. B. Das : He does not know what courtesy means.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Although my Honourable friend, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar, got up several times to ask questions. Mr. Emerson refused to give way and I wish to imitate his manners. The point is this. As long as this racial distinction exists, it will create great embitterment. What is this distinction, Sir? I do not want to go into details on this point, because it may become the subject of the next adjournment motion. May I here refer to the Report of the United Provinces Jail Inquiry Committee? This is a Committee, which as Honourable Members are aware was not made of revolutionaries. There were three members, one an Indian, one a Muhammadan and the Chairman a European. I am quoting from the latest Report, showing that in 1929, this vestige of a barbaric code of jail rules, which possibly started a century ago, still prevails. I can understand the Government having these rules a century ago when they were consolidating their rule in this country by race superiority. But these rules exist even now in the year of grace, 1929. I ask whether there is any Indian Member here who is so degraded that he will not show the utmost resentment when he listens to what I am sorry to read to him. Why do Government still persist in this barbaric racial discrimination? I can assure the Honourable the Home Member that, if there is any question in this country on which Indians of all classes feel the greatest resentment, it is the question of race stigma. The sooner Government do away with this distinction, the better for them. Sir, I may go further and say that, if Government had come to this House with clean hands, if the Honourable Member had got up and said: "Yes we have totally done away with race distinction between Europeans and Indians in jail discipline," this measure would have had some support. This racial distinction is not based on any rational principle, such as standard of living. It is pure race arrogance. Government want us to help them, but as Government have not come with clean hands, they cannot have our support. Government stand thoroughly discredited. They have pursued vile methods of racial discrimination. Government cannot therefore get the help of this House. My Honourable friends will excuse me if I read something which may stir up feelings. I have no desire to do so, but I cannot avoid it. The Jail Committee, I mentioned above, say in their Report:

"No self-respecting Indian can agree to any differential or special treatment being meted out to any one in Indian jails on the ground of his race, creed or colour, and if he finds that such treatment is sanctioned by the Government, then it is his duty to raise his voice in protest, even if his cry may be a cry in the wilderness and nothing may come out of it."

This was not the view of any political agitator, but of a sedate Committee of two members, one of whom was a Muhammadan and the other a Hindu. The Honourable Member from the Punjab said yesterday that a European is defined as a man who has adopted European manners. May I tell him,—possibly he does not know,—that in many places in this country the word "European" is interpreted so as to give the benefit of these humane jail rules to Chinese silk hawkers who wear a topee, and to white complexioned loafers? Is that the definition of a European? It has now come to this practically, and I will say so frankly for the benefit of the Honourable Member from the Punjab,—the sole test is in practice the presence or absence of a certain quantity of pigment in the skin of the individual. Let him accept this definition of the term European and I shall thank him for his frankness. May I further point out to him what this Committee says, that these humane provisions are common to European and Eurasian prisoners. My Honourable friend Colonel Gidney will forgive my referring to the Eurasian community. May I know what is the principle under which Europeans and Eurasians are classed together in the same category? What is it except the absence of pigment in the skin, in other words, the white complexion? That is the plain truth. It is a pure apotheosis of the white complexion.

Now what are the privileges? Sir, let us look at the prison menu of the European and Indian prisoners. This is the menu of the Sunday and week day diet of European prisoners:

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL.

|           | Chota Hazri.                                | Breakfast.                                              | Dinner.                                                   |
|-----------|---------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------|
| Sunday .. | One cup tea, three slices bread and butter. | One plate dal and rice, a slice of bread with jagree.   | Three meat cutlets, vegetables, one loaf, one cup of tea. |
| Monday .. | One cup tea, three slices bread and butter. | One plate dal and rice, three slices bread with jagree. | One plate mutton curry, one loaf, one cup of tea.         |

And so it goes on inclusive of Irish stew on some week days. Now coming to Indians you will find that their diet is chapatis, 14 chataks, dal, one chatak, vegetables, three chataks, oil, chilli and salt. Then an improved diet is given; it is not very much of an improvement.

The Honourable Member from Punjab asked, "Do you want the Europeans to die in this country, even if they are murderers?" I should like to ask him, "Do you want the Indians to die, if they are murderers?" If an Indian commits an "excluded crime",—I am quoting his expression,—and is not accustomed to live on jail chapatis, do the jail authorities want him to die on the rough food supplied to him? I am taking my Honourable friend's own argument. He says, "Do you want that a European murderer should die?" I ask him, "Do you want an Indian murderer to die?"

Well, now we will look at the clothing of a European prisoner.

In summer—2 coats, 2 pants, 2 garha shirts, 1 mattress, 1 pillow, 1 pith helmet, 1 blanket, 2 pairs white socks and so on. Then there are nearly 20 articles for the winter of a better character.

Now the Indian's clothing is, one kurta, one langot (Laughter), one jangiah, one cap, one tikoni, one towel and one blanket.

In winter, two blankets and one blanket coat, whatever that may mean.

Furniture for Indians,—one moonj matting, two earthen pots for answering the calls of nature in a corner of the same cell. (Cries of "Shame, shame!")

Look at the cells for Europeans and their furniture:

"Europeans are kept in separate cells. These cells have verandahs on both sides":

which even my hotel here has not got. (Laughter.)

"the sanitary arrangements are not in the cell proper where the prisoner sleeps and works. It has a cot, one water stand, two small tables, one jug of water and one aloe fibre matting, besides the articles of bedding mentioned in list E and one lamp or lantern for reading. On our visits to jails we saw these things with our own eyes inside cells occupied by Europeans.

The Indian prisoners generally sleep in Association Barracks.

They are allowed only two blankets and one moonj matting and sleep on raised platforms arranged in straight lines. When placed in cells two earthen pots are placed close to them on the ground for the purpose of answering the calls of nature. The cell contains nothing else but one matting and even that cannot be used during the day time.

Comment on this state of affairs is needless. All that I can say is that, if this Government has any sense left, even now, let them remove this discrimination. The Honourable Member from the Punjab said, "Oh, but we have issued a circular to the Provincial Governments." I was wondering whether I should read from that circular which I obtained through the courtesy of the Honourable Member from the Punjab, but as he has himself said that there is nothing confidential in that circular, I take the liberty of referring to a few sentences before I close. That is a circular which no doubt has gone from the Government of India to the Provincial Governments. Before I read that circular, I just want to make one brief comment. From one end of that circular to the other there is not one suggestion that the Government of India think that these racial distinctions as such should go. The circular talks of many things, of standards, of tests, of classifications, but there is not one word in this circular, which suggests that the Government of India look with abhorrence upon the racial discrimination which I have referred to. In brief what the circular says is this :

"Subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature, prisoners and prisons are a reserved provincial subject. The last revision took place in 1922. In the classification of convicts as special class prisoners, the criteria adopted are"— of which the Honourable Member from Punjab made a great deal, "the character of his offence, social status, education and the character of the prisoner."

But the Honourable Member will agree that reasonable as these criteria, standards and classification may appear to be, they are not applied to Europeans. Every European automatically, whatever his crime,—it may be murder, it may be theft, it may be the most heinous of all crimes involving the greatest moral turpitude—whatever his social status, education and character, gets these privileges. The iron goes into our soul when we find that automatically, every European, irrespective of his social status, irrespective of his crime, irrespective of anything else, by reason of his mere complexion, is entitled to be treated as a superior person. I would therefore suggest to Government that they should remove all these distinctions and adopt one simple common test, applicable to all, Indians and Europeans alike, which takes note of all the circumstances, the nature of the offence, the education, social position and habits of the offender, etc. If one such principle is made applicable to all the subjects of His Majesty in this country, a considerable amount of irritation would be avoided. If Government want to exclude certain graver offences or the motives of offences, let Europeans also be subjected to the same rules. If it is thought desirable that offences which involve violence or moral turpitude should prevent offenders from getting light treatment, regardless of their social position, habits or manner of living, let this rule be made applicable to Europeans too. Let not a European murderer get things which an Indian murderer does not get. Have some such reasonable rules and classification. I am quite agreeable that there should be a strict classification based on the nature of the crime, on the social standing, previous habits and surroundings of the offender. But whatever tests Government adopt, let them apply them to all offenders ; do not make any distinction of colour. Whatever value complexion may have in the matrimonial market, it is not a rational principle to be adopted in jail rules. The hot rays of the merciful sun are responsible for the colour of the skin. Nothing in culture, nothing in civilisation is responsible for it. Let the Government accept my suggestions and this irritation will disappear. Even yesterday when we heard some members on the Government Benches, no clear assurance was given by them that these distinctions as such will go. All that the Government spokesmen said was that they had made a reference to the Provincial Governments, a reference in which no condemnation or disapprobation is expressed of this obnoxious principle. The attention of Provincial Governments should have been pointedly drawn to the irritation this distinction has caused, and they should have been asked to find ways and means of removing it.

Before I conclude I wish to say this. Let Government show more wisdom. They may of course give effect to the law of the land. I am one of those who have always held the view that the law must prevail. But let the law be just and humane. Let the Government on the one hand punish those who are proved to be guilty, but let them on the other hand examine what is really at the bottom of this widespread defiance of the law. If they merely go on punishing those who are guilty, it is only a partial remedy. Let them examine the causes which really make so many young men defiant. I find, Sir, that Government have been guilty of so much unwisdom of late and that when I turn to my morning newspapers, morning after morning I read of some prosecution or other. The other day I read of a prosecution in my Honourable friend the Law Member's province, Bengal, and an ugly rumour outside says that the Advocate General of Bengal was not consulted when these prosecutions were started. Is this a fact ? Whereas Government are coming down with a heavy hand upon those who break the law, they are not applying their mind at all to the solution of the prime mischief. I say to the Government in all earnestness : supplement the efforts that Lord Irwin is said to be making in England. I hear that he is making his best efforts in England in order that the political situation in this country may be eased. Supplement his efforts ; try and create in this country, before it is too late, an atmosphere of peace and goodwill which will bring success to his efforts. If Government cannot do that, at least let them not create a contrary atmosphere ; if they cannot help, let them not hinder. Let Government remember that the Labour Leader in England is expected to make before long a statement relating to India. Let Government here not add to the difficulties which may prevent the acceptance of that statement in India. The Government must help and co-operate in the proper spirit to create good will and harmony during the next two or three months, so that when the statement is made, this country may be in a fit atmosphere to accept or reject it on its merits. If Government are strong, let them not be vindictive. I submit, Sir, that if Government are actuated by the spirit I have suggested, let them withdraw this Bill or at least accept Mr. Kelkar's motion for consultation.

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : Sir, Mr. Jayakar is always frank. Ever since I have heard him speak in this House, the one principal notable characteristic of his speech is frankness. I am glad that he came out into the open today, because honestly after hearing my Honourable friend, Mr. Jinnah, and my Honourable friend, Pandit Motilal Nehru, and others speaking with reference to the Bill on the direct legal issue which is before the House, as distinct from the

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[14TH SEPT. 1929.]

[Mr. M. Keane.]

political aspect of it, I think genuinely I never heard a weaker case made out by the Opposition. (Laughter from the non-official Benches.) Alone the Law Member seemed to me to stand up against that bowling and he played it all round the wicket and carried his bat easily. It is enough to make one a cynic to hear all this discussion regarding the legal merits of this Bill. Frankly and openly it is political issues that are involved here; every one in this House knows it. There is not one who does not know that legally there is not a single thing to be said against this Bill. (Laughter.) There is a political issue and there is a sentiment abroad that makes it difficult to deal with this measure; and I sympathise very genuinely with Honourable Independent Members in this House who have to deal with this measure in face of this sentiment. It is not easy to follow reason alone. It is a bold spirit who can always afford to follow reason alone. I know and every one knows that in every country, in every age, men who have been prepared to lay down their lives for a cause have always been able to command the overflowing sympathy of their fellow countrymen. The man in the street is not able to assess the reasons and the causes and circumstances that surround each case; he cannot see what is inside the case; what he does know or thinks he knows is that men are prepared to lay down their lives for love of their country—and greater love than that no man can show.—That is the difficulty in dealing with this measure. There is a sentiment abroad which it is difficult for Honourable Independent Members to ignore. Every one a short time ago spoke of Bhagat Singh and Dutt; and every one is aware that our streets were full of processions and shoutings in commemoration of Bhagat Singh day. The young men who engaged in those processions were not thinking of the rights and wrongs of the case; their attitude was entirely different; they had only one thought, and that was that Bhagat Singh and Dutt had struck a blow, some blow; and they were not critical in their appreciation. That attitude of mind is what I would call the school boy's attitude of mind, the attitude of mind of the school boy or the fanatic or possibly of the knave which likes to fish in troubled waters; but that is not the attitude that this House should adopt towards this measure. It is not the attitude of legislators or thinkers; their attitude must be a very different one. They are faced with a problem of government. If the school boy attitude regulates their vote, all I can say is that they are not voting on the issue, that their vote is a fraud and a sham.

And what is the issue? This Government, every Government, is charged with the administration of the country and the protection of the law-abiding; they are required to help the law-abiding and to punish the law-breaker. To the State there is only one question, the crime. To the State, murder is murder, no matter with what motive it is committed; that is the issue before this House. Where crimes are committed, where murders are committed, is the offender to escape? I cannot deal in detail with all that was said by those who have spoken already, I must take little by little parts of their arguments. Consider the way in which this case has arisen. A murder or political assassination was committed. One murder. The police constable who tried to seize the murderers was also murdered. A conspiracy was detected, bombs and revolvers were discovered. They are the facts before the State and they are the facts that the State has to deal with. Eventually certain young men are arrested and they are put on their trial. That was the position reached. A prima facie case is put up against them; they are put on trial, and are to be tried as quickly as possible. That is the essence of the duty of the court. All that the court has to do, as the Honourable the Law Member pointed out this morning, is to give an accused every opportunity of meeting the prima facie case that is put up against him. I need not point out that the courts cannot force the accused to prove his innocence. They give him every opportunity, as the Honourable the Law Member said, and he must take those opportunities. If he fails to take them, the law must find a means of proceeding with trial. Surely that is the elemental matter in the whole thing. The law must find an opportunity of proceeding with the trial, and it is to find that opportunity that this Bill is brought forward, a sensible, reasonable Bill, to fill a definite lacuna in the law. If political issues were not involved in it, there could be no objection.

Various alternatives have been suggested to the Bill. Mr. Kelkar said, "Oh, well, release two or three of them." Men may be accused of murder, assassination, conspiracy, collection of arms, and still Mr. Kelkar will say, "Because they have refused to go before the Court—I do not care under what circumstances they have refused to appear.—release them." No system of Government will stand by such a process, and all I can say is this that you yourselves who may be the followers of this Government, cannot afford to have a precedent like that. No system of law can stand on that principle. Then, Mr. Jinnah, Mr. Kelkar and many others have suggested the expedient of splitting up the case. My Honourable friend Pandit Motilal Nehru read out to the House this morning the action that the prisoners themselves proposed to take to prevent that splitting up. I think Honourable Members will remember that in their own letter to the Punjab Jail Inquiry Committee they have pointed how they will reduce this very splitting up process to an absurdity. They simply say:

"Let us all state that we are all prepared to share his fate. For the sake of convenience, however, and keeping the idea of continued fight in view, we are dividing ourselves in two groups, the first of which is resuming hunger-strike at once."

It is resolved that, as soon as a member of the first group meets his death, one member from the second group will come forward, to fill the gap."

Therefore this process will continue indefinitely. (An Honourable Member: "How long will it last?") I understand that one of the hunger strikers has been hunger-striking for 83 days. There are 16 of them. Can you multiply for yourselves?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar: When he dies what happens? The prosecution drops.

Mr. M. Keane: Pandit Motilal Nehru made a very great point in regard to that letter from the prisoners. He accused the Government or they did of a definite breach of faith, and the letter was read out by my Honourable friend the Pandit. Now, I have in my hand a copy of the reply which is being published or has been published in the papers from the Chairman of the Punjab Jail Inquiry Committee, Lala Duni Chand. He takes one by one the points made by the hunger strikers, with whom he, at any rate, cannot be accused of being out of sympathy. His reply is this. Let us see whether there was the breach of faith, which was so much stressed by the speakers on the other side. What he says is this :

"Dear friends, Hitherto beyond doing my duty as a member of the Jail Inquiry Committee I did not think it proper on my part to give publicity to my views with regard to what has happened after the cessation of hunger-strike at our instance, even though the varied and conflicting comments of the Press tempted me to do so, but now that I have received a letter presumably censored and passed by the Superintendent, Borstal Institute, from the under-trial prisoners of the Lahore conspiracy case, I have thought it necessary to reply to you and at the same time to publish it. I feel that, in doing so, I am not infringing any rule of propriety that I should observe as a Member of the Jail Inquiry Committee. I would reply to the questions raised by you seriatim.

2. It is quite true that it was after full discussion with you as to the concessions that the Government was prepared to grant and even after disclosing to you precisely what the Jail Inquiry Committee had secured for you tentatively that you had agreed to give up hunger-strike. It was at the end of our deliberations with you that you had brought in the question of the release of Mr. Jatindra Nath Das. So far as the concessions other than those of the release of Mr. Das and the association of Messrs. Bhagat Singh and Dutt with other under-trial prisoners of Lahore conspiracy case are concerned, you do not say that they have been withheld or even whittled down."

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the Chair.)

That is to say, the Jail Inquiry Committee said that, barring those two concessions, that is, the release of Das and the association of Messrs. Bhagat Singh and Dutt,—the prisoners do not say that the other concessions had been denied to them or whittled down. In regard to these two concessions about which they stated that there had been a breach of faith, Lala Duni Chand says :

"So far as the unconditional release of Mr. Das and the association of Messrs. Bhagat Singh and Dutt with others are concerned, we had not arrived at any understanding with the Government before we left Simla, though we knew the mind of Government as to all other concessions."

I need not read the whole letter ; it is a very long one, but that much answers the charge of breach of faith which has been so freely made against the Government. The Government of the Punjab were prepared to accept the recommendations of the Jail Inquiry Committee on certain matters, if recommendations of such a nature were made, but Lala Duni Chand definitely says that there was no authority whatever from the Government of the Punjab to make any statement that Das would be unconditionally released.

In regard to the other concessions about food, clothing and so on (I do not know what they were), they had the authority of the Punjab Government behind them, and so far as the Government of the Punjab are concerned, there was no breach of faith.

Mr. B. Das : Why did they not send this to the Press ?

Mr. M. Keane : It has been sent to the Press. This is the letter of Lala Duni Chand. I expect it will appear in today's or tomorrow's papers.

Now, Sir, another point was made in regard to absconders. It was urged as a strong point. Mr. Abdul Haye was the first to raise it. It seems to me that the question of the absconder is exactly a point in favour of this Bill, and I will tell you why. It is contended to be a universal principle of jurisprudence that no use can be made of any evidence recorded if the prisoner is not present, and yet in the case of absconders it is definitely provided that, in certain circumstances, evidence recorded in their absence can be made use of. If the witnesses die or if they are too far away or cannot be discovered, their evidence may be made use of. The principle is there already. Whether it is perpetuation of evidence, or as Mr. Jinnah prefers, preservation, you can use the evidence though the accused were not present. It looks to me that the case of the absconders is a double edged sword, with the sharper edge against the Opposition.

Mr. Jinnah said that no Court will trust evidence recorded in the absence of the accused and come to any conclusion. He said that such a trial would be a farce. Surely Mr. Jinnah cannot have forgotten that in dozens and dozens of cases in our own times, the accused have refused to plead or give an answer and yet the case was carried on. (An Honourable Member : "Is that absence of the accused ?") The point is whether the accused had the opportunity of answering the case. The men it is true were there, but they refused to answer. They were blind and dumb, and yet the trial in those cases was not a farce.

I confess I did not understand Mr. Jayakar's point that the clause as it stood did not mention the intention. To have intentions inserted in clauses of procedure is surely rather unusual. The absence of an expression of intention in the clause seems to me to be a point of no significance at all.

Mr. Jaykar's speech was almost entirely devoted to the question of racial discrimination. I gathered that Mr. Jaykar was practically prepared to support the Bill : he frankly admitted that there was a lacuna.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I never said that. I said that if Government frankly stated that it was lawless law but that if it was justified by the political circumstances of the case it would be a frank statement.

Mr. M. Keane : Mr. Jayakar did not say so in so many words, but the impression left on me was that the Bill in itself was not one to fuss about. He did however lay great stress on the question of racial discrimination. He said that the Government of India letter to Local Governments did not explicitly deal with that question. I cannot deal with that subject now, as I have only two or three minutes left. The Government of India letter says that, in regard to under-trial prisoners, the Government of India consider that the rules adopted should, wherever possible, be at least as liberal for prisoners of similar social standing as those which may be ultimately adopted for special class convicts. As far as I can make out, the rules do require revision and in the course of that revision this question will no doubt have to be considered. Whether the question has been put to Local Governments in so many words I do not know. Possibly Mr. Jayakar is correct there. But I take it that there must be some adjustment in regard to the scales of diet which it will be necessary to introduce and the persons to whom they will apply. Whether the word "European" is to be used or not I do not know. I think myself that this question will have to await the consideration of the reports of the Local Governments which are now coming to the Government of India. It is quite obvious that Honourable Members feel strongly on it, and Mr. Jayakar had the pulse of the House with him when he dealt with that question. It is a question which Government must very carefully consider. I cannot pledge the Government in any way, but it is obvious that Mr. Jayakar made out a case which deserves full consideration. The hour for the adjournment motion has come and I think I have dealt with most of the more important points mentioned in the course of the debate.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

THE ACTION AND POLICY OF GOVERNMENT re THE ACCUSED UNDER TRIAL IN THE LAHORE CONSPIRACY CASE.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-4 P.M. (which the House has granted me leave. I have already read the motion to the House—to draw attention.....
(Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to move the motion for

Mr. President : The motion is that the House do now adjourn.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I am sorry. The motion is that the House do now adjourn for the reasons stated by me early in the morning. For the benefit of Members who were not present this morning, I will repeat that the motion arises out of the action and policy of the Government regarding the treatment of the accused under-trial in the Lahore Conspiracy Case, which has already resulted in the death of Jatindra Nath Das and is endangering the life of the other hunger-strikers in the said case.

Sir, the speeches that have been made in the course of the day have covered much of the ground of this motion. I do not wish to inflict another long speech upon the House. So far as I am concerned, I have dealt at length with the policy of Government and have given the reasons why this House should censure Government by passing this motion. Sir, it is not a charge of breach of faith against the Government of India or against the Government of the Punjab or any other Government. The charge is that the Government have shown an utter lack of the human element which should always guide them in a case like this. The charge is that the Government have stood still while human life was ebbing away, that they were not taking the steps which it was their very clear duty to take. Sir, I gave the history of this hunger-strike earlier in the morning. The hunger-strike began in the middle of June, and Jatindra Das died on the 61st.—(An Honourable Member : "63rd"),—on the 63rd day of the strike. For days and days the news came that his life was ebbing away, that at any moment he might breathe his last, the news came that there were other hunger-strikers who were in a very precarious condition, and what was the Government doing all this time ? It is said, Sir, that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning. Our benign Government has gone one better than Nero. It is fiddling on the death-beds of these youngmen, misguided they may be, but patriots they are all the same ! They are watching their precious lives pass away by inches ! What have they done ? It is said they have appointed a committee, they have issued a communiqué explaining the position, and they have followed it up with a circular which my Honourable friend, Mr. Keane, was about to read when he was stopped. I do not want to inflict those documents upon the House. When there was time for action, when there was time for Government to realise that these devoted, high-souled men, however long they may have been hunger-striking, would not surrender their principles, what did Government do to save their lives ? I have already read, Sir, from the "Life of Michael Collins" as to how the English Government in Ireland was prepared to save life at any expense, even at the cost of letting convicts go without serving out their sentences. It is not a question, Sir, of sections or of procedure or of substantive or adjective law. It is, Sir, a question of humanity, of the elementary duty of a Government to save life, to save the lives not only of those who seek its protection, but also of those who want to destroy their own lives. But, Sir, Government did nothing. It is now admitted in this House that the demands, in so far as they related to personal comforts, were not very unreasonable ; but various reasons were given as to why those demands were not conceded. Up to this hour, Sir, we do not know that Government have come to any conclusion as to which of those demands are to be granted and which of them are not to be granted. We are not told what the findings of the Jails Committee are. They have not been published. We are not told what order Government have passed or are going to pass ; and in this dilly-dallying and shilly-shallying one valuable life has already been lost. Others are on the verge of extinction, and yet Government are still considering the question as to what should be done in the circumstances. I submit that, if this is not a case for censure upon Government, there can be no other. Sir, I do not wish to take any more time of the House as I have the right of reply and I shall avail myself of that right if necessary. Sir, I move.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : Mr. President, I have often observed that the Mover of a motion for the adjournment of the House has a considerable advantage over those who have to reply, because he has the initiative in the matter. It is very frequently by no means easy for Government, on whom it is proposed by this procedure of the House to pass a vote of censure, to know what case they will be called upon to meet ; and I confess that, even with the advantage of the brief explanation of the grounds on which the Honourable and learned Pandit proposed to move this motion, it was still very largely a matter of speculation to me what precisely would be the case I should be called upon to meet. I should like, however, in the first instance, to say this, that the occurrence which has been the immediate occasion of this motion is a matter which Government do sincerely deplore. Whatever may be the circumstances which resulted in this young man finding himself where he did, whatever the grounds on which he took the rash resolution which unfortunately has terminated his life, all those circumstances cannot fail, having regard to the human aspect of the case which the Honourable Pandit accuses Government of neglecting—an accusation which I cannot for a moment admit,—having regard to all those things, I say no one can fail to deplore what has occurred. I think, Sir, though I have frequently had the misfortune to be engaged in controversy with Honourable Members opposite, they have always done me the justice, which I am happy to acknowledge, or at any rate I flatter myself that it is true, that, however much we may differ in opinion, they have been prepared to do me the justice of attributing to me honesty and candour in anything I have had to say. I ask the House, Sir, to accept that assurance on my own behalf and on behalf of Government today.

The circumstances to which I have referred, which immediately led up to the position which ultimately has eventuated as it has eventuated, are matters on which I cannot now speak—whatever the facts, whatever the merits may be, they have been removed from any earthly tribunal, and I cannot refer to them, though they might indeed have a very direct bearing on the case to which I have to reply. I will deal only with the specific charge that the Honourable and learned Pandit has seen fit to bring against Government in this case. He said that they have shown a disregard of the human aspect of the case, and that, though for weeks the possibility was not unexpected, they took no action. The Honourable and learned Pandit did not specifically say what action he wanted Government to take. I understand he proposes to refer to it in his reply. It would have been of greater advantage to me if he had stated that while making his motion. I cannot admit, Sir, that the Government of India or the Local Government failed to take a humane aspect of the question. I know personally that the Government of the Punjab and many of its officers watched the progress of the case with the deepest concern. I know that non-official visitors to the jail, who were allowed the freest access to the accused under-trial, have paid the highest tributes to the sympathy and the consideration with which the medical and other officers of the jail carried out their extremely difficult duties. (Applause from Official Benches.)

Sir, my time is limited. As I said, I have not had the opportunity of hearing from the Honourable and learned Pandit what action Government ought to have taken.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : It has been clearly indicated all through the debate today from morning to this hour that the plain duty of Government was to accede to the demand of these two accused persons.

Several Honourable Members : To remove the racial distinctions.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I shall reply on that point. I take it that the particular demands with which the Honourable Pandit says Government ought to have complied were certain adjustments in what I may call jail comforts. Secondly, the unconditional release of this particular prisoner in question, and, thirdly, I take it, the demand which was made for the association of the convicted with the under-trial prisoners. On the first point, I have already informed the House how matters stand. It has been fully explained in the communiqué of the Punjab Government. So far as jail comforts are concerned, I do not think that, on a close examination of the case, the Honourable and learned Pandit will find good grounds for any allegation of lack of human interest, for any allegations of failure to take action on the part of the Local Government, which is primarily concerned, or of the Government of India, which is indirectly concerned. The other two points remain. Government ought to have complied with the demand that an under-trial prisoner charged, as I must in this context re-affirm, with very grave offences should be discharged from the case, that is to say that the prosecution should be withdrawn. I maintain, Sir, that the Punjab Government went as far as was possible, having regard to their responsibilities in making it known that they would not oppose an application for bail. The withdrawal of the prosecution against a prisoner against whom very grave charges are pending is a demand which, I think, even the Honourable and learned gentleman from Bombay emphatically said was one with which the Government could not properly be called upon to comply.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : It does not arise now.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : It does distinctly arise from what the Honourable and learned Pandit has just said. I shall deal with one more point. The last point was this that the under-trial prisoners should no longer be segregated from the convicted prisoners, who are also under-trial prisoners. Sir, it is a very well-established principle of jail administration, and as a general principle I think it will be regarded by the House as humane, proper and salutary, that unconvicted prisoners shall in no case be associated during their confinement in jail with convicted prisoners. On that principle the Punjab Government found themselves unable to comply with that demand, and I venture to say that the principle being a sound one, a sane one and a salutary one, the Punjab Government would have departed from their duties if they had complied with it.

Sir, I do not wish to overstep the period allotted to me, and I have only one or two sentences more to say in conclusion. It has been implied, though it has not been specifically asserted, in the Honourable Pandit's indictment that Government were blind to or unappreciative of or unable to comprehend the assertion of a principle, a principle, which, as I think, he himself was not prepared to contend, had been acted upon in a manner of which he could approve, but nevertheless a question of principle. I am not concerned to deny that there was a question of principle involved. But I must tell the Honourable and learned Pandit and this House that Government also was standing for a principle. That principle is that it is their duty to vindicate the authority of the law, to secure that every man and society itself shall have the protection and the remedy from the law to which they are entitled, and, further, that there is an obligation resting upon every man who may be accused of infringing the law, of answering for it effectively. That, Sir, was the principle on which, in the whole history of this case, Government have been standing and I say that it is a principle which any conceivable Government of this country, whether Swarajist or whatever the future may confer upon this country as a national government, will be at least as closely concerned as the present Government to assert and vindicate.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am sorry that I have to join with Mr. L10CPB(LA)

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Honourable friend Pandit Motilal Nehru in expressing censure of the action of Government and the policy which they have pursued in relation to the hunger-strikers at Lahore, which has resulted in the death of one young man which we most deeply lament, and which threatens the death of several others. The Honourable the Home Member has failed to understand the reasons which justify this censure. That is a matter of greater grief to me. There are cases when a man does not fully realise beforehand the evil which may result from his action or inaction, but when a distressingly sad event like the death of the high-souled young man in question has taken place, we should have expected the Honourable the Home Member and those who are responsible with him for the action and policy which they have pursued in this connection, to feel remorse for what has taken place owing to their failure to do the right thing. I submit, Sir, that they have been guilty of betraying a want of human sympathy with those under-trial prisoners at Lahore. In the first instance, I wish them to remember what the character of these under-trial prisoners was. They are not ordinary criminals. They are persons who—however much one may condemn any act of violence of which they might be proved to be guilty—they are persons who are not prompted by any sordid selfish motive. They are, every one of them, persons who are inspired by a high sense of patriotism and a burning desire for the freedom of their country. (Hear, hear.) I submit that Government should have taken note of this fact and that they should have come to the conclusion early that the character and motive of the men who are accused of a crime should count in judging what treatment should be extended to them. (Hear, hear.) They will of course receive the punishment that they may have earned for any act of violence. But even in dealing out punishment to them, the Courts and the Government have yet to remember that they are not ordinary criminals who are prompted by sordid personal motives. This is the first mistake that the Government made. They failed to give due consideration to the fact that these men who have been brought together for trial at Lahore are men of high ideals, and possessed of a high sense of national self-respect. They are not persons who wanted to run away from the trial. Not one word has been said throughout the discussion to the effect that any of these men wanted to run away from or avoid or delay the trial. They had specific grievances in relation to their treatment as under-trial prisoners and they stated them in letters addressed to the officers of Government. The first of these letters that I have before me is the one which was addressed by Bhagat Singh. It was written on 17th June. What did he say in it? The letter was addressed to the Inspector General of Prisons, Punjab. He said :

"I have been sentenced to life transportation in connection with the Assembly bomb case, Delhi, and I am obviously a political prisoner. I got special diet in Delhi jail, but since my arrival here, I am being treated as an ordinary criminal. Therefore, I have gone on hunger-strike since the morning of June 15, 1929. My weight has decreased by 6 lbs. less than my weight at Delhi jail in these two or three days. I wish to bring to your kind attention," note the word "kind",

"that I must get special treatment as a political prisoner, my demands being special diet (including milk and ghee, rice and curd, etc.), no forcible labour, toilet (soap, oil, shaving, etc.), literature of all kinds (History, Economics, political, science, poetry, drama or fiction, newspapers). I hope you will very kindly consider what I have said and decide favourably."

The second letter was from B. K. Dutt. He wrote :

"I want to let you know and the higher authorities that I demand the following things on the ground of being a 'political prisoner'. After the bomb incident in the Assembly, Lord Irwin in his last speech said that, 'these bombs were not directed towards any individual but towards the institution'. Again Mr. Middleton in his judgment mentioned that, 'These persons (Dutt and Bhagat Singh) used to enter the Court with the cries of 'Long live Revolution', 'Long live proletariat', etc., which shows clearly what sort of political idea they cherish. In order to put a check in propagating these ideas I transport them for life.'

Again I must mention that when a European breaks an ordinary law in order to fulfil his selfish motive, he gets all kinds of privileges in the jail. He will get well ventilated room with electric fittings, best food (such as milk, butter, toast, meat, etc.), and good clothing, while we politicals are deprived of such things. The comments of Lord Irwin and Mr. Middleton are sufficient to prove that we are politicals, and on this ground I demand that we (Bhagat Singh and Dutt) should be treated as politicals. I must get better food as it is necessary to keep a man's health."

He does not want it for the love or pleasure of it.

"At the same time I must get all kind of literature and newspaper in order to discuss the different politics. People call us rash, misguided and impatient youths. So we must be given a fair chance of studying the various books in order to see that whether we are really impatient, misguided youths or not, whether our line of work is wrong or right. My demands are as follows :

- (i) better food, including loaf and milk in morning, rice, dal with ghee and vegetable and curd and sugar in the noon, and bread, meat and chatni at night,
- (ii) no labour,
- (iii) all kinds of literature and newspapers,
- (iv) toilet, including soap, oil, comb and barber, etc.,
- (v) better accommodation,
- (vi) civil dress.

I used to get all these things in Delhi jail before and after my conviction from the jail expenses. But here I am deprived of all those things, that is why I have begun hunger-strike since 14th June 1929. My comrade Bhagat Singh in Mianwali jail is also on hunger-strike for these very reasons, and I will not give up my hunger-strike till the Government accedes to our (I and Bhagat Singh) demands.

Expect an early reply and will gladly discuss over this matter with any Government officer who ever comes to me."

I ask the House to note the attitude of these two young men as disclosed in these letters. They show how anxious they were to have the matter considered in a humane way by those who were in power. What response did the Government make? What did Government do in response to these appeals? I want to know if Government made any response to these requests that these two young men had made. I find a third letter was addressed on 8th August, 1929, by Gopal Singh, B.A., "Kaumi", special class prisoner, Mianwali jail, to His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab. He said :

"I beg to bring the following facts to your notice."

It is a long letter and I will not read the whole of it. He said in it :

"The position and the treatment of the political prisoners has been the subject of discussion since a very long time. Times and again protests in various forms and ways have been made to demonstrate their resentment against the cruel, humiliating treatment to which the political prisoners are subjected, and the racial prejudice which keeps the machine of the law and the force of the Government pitched against them. The political prisoners after all are not actuated by selfish motives of personal gain, avarice, rivalry, jealousy or enmity. They are the people who, affected by the special conditions of their country and inspired by the divine motive of love, devote their lives to sacrifice, service and suffering. They are what Jesus Christ said: 'The salt of the earth,' and if the powers-that-be have their reasons to differ from their ideas or actions it is enough to put them in detention. But it does not behove the powerful party to ill-treat, disrespect, humiliate or insult them. The Government ought to treat them honourably and respectfully as is the case in all civilised countries inhabiting the surface of the globe. An example of how the political prisoners are treated by the civilised Governments is furnished by France....."

After reciting the facts of the case which I omit, the letter proceeded:

"That is the latitude given and the treatment shown to political prisoners in those countries. But here in India we find that, contrary to this, the political prisoners are paid special attention in jails, victimised, maltreated and insulted.

In the great years of the non-co-operation movement as a result of the pressure from the public a 'special class' was created....."

Then he gives a description of the special class prisoners, and continues:

"Now, every political prisoner, be he special or ordinary is given the following diet which is given to the ordinary criminal:

(1) wheat flour during the summer for six months, (2) mixed wheat and gram flour during the six months of winter, (3) bad, rough and inferior vegetables from jail fields in the morning, (4) dal of mash or mong, or grams or moth or masur in the evening, (5) one-fourth chhatak of oil in all for both the meals, (6) parched grams two chhataks for the breakfast."

"Accommodation: There is no special arrangement. They are kept in the ordinary barracks and unventilated, small and narrow cells. At night they have to use those very cells as latrines and urinals. They have no fans, no special kitchen arrangements they are given. No beds are provided for them. Their beddings consist of ordinary and rough blankets and they have to sleep on earthen berths called khadis. No shoes are supplied to them. Their clothings consist of ordinary shirts whose sleeves do not cover the arms till the wrists but stop short at the elbows, pyjamas which do not cover full legs. They are given only one chhadar which is taken back during the winter and that too is not long enough to cover the body while sleeping. The warm shirts which are supplied to them during the winter are ugly ones which deform him and make him look like a bear. The Sikhs whether political or ordinary prisoners are not supplied pyjamas even in the winter."

"As compared to this an ordinary European prisoner surely of a lower type and actuated by mean selfish motives and convicted of theft, fraud, pick-pocketing, rape, adultery, desertion and (or) murder is given the following diet: bread, butter and tea for the breakfast in the morning. Half a seer meat to be cooked daily. Rice for dinner. Bread, meat and vegetables in the evening. Besides superior and costly vegetables like peas, dhingri, cabbages, turnips, and potatoes are specially bought for them from the bazaar."

"Besides this food arrangement special European wards well comparable to bungalows are specially built for them. In Lahore where generally all European prisoners are kept, the buildings are furnished with electric lights and fans. A separate kitchen, a separate store room, a separate dining room furnished with benches and tables is provided to them, and an arrangement for games like tennis is made. Every European prisoner is provided with an iron bed and a decent bedding and every room for them is furnished with a long table. They get canvas shoes, good shirts, trousers and hats are provided for them, and in winter they are given decent warm pantaloons and coats. They get soap, brushes, trays, table lamps and other necessities of life. This is the vast difference in the treatment accorded to an ordinary European prisoner and a political prisoner. This surely is galling and disgusting."

Then he goes on to say:

"The Government instead of taking a hint of the nation's feeling from it has launched on a policy of repression and has started cases against the dying hunger-strikers as if hunger-strike was not itself a sufficient suffering. As examples of this in the Borstal Institute, Lala Ram Krishan has been sentenced to two months' rigorous imprisonment for this so-called offence, and here our comrade Master Kabul Singh 'Gobindpuri' who is on strike since the last 19 days, has been proceeded against under this very section, and his case is still going on. This is pouring oil over troubled waters (Sic) and (adding) insult to injury. We could not long remain silent spectators of this and the attitude of the Government has forced me to join the grim struggle and throw my life in danger. I therefore had no course left to me but to go on hunger-strike. Accordingly I am on hunger-strike from Sunday, i.e., the morning of the 4th of August, 1929."

Now, Sir, I ask the Honourable Member and the whole House to consider how very reasonable the attitude of these young men was. I am not here to vouch for the truth or the accuracy of everything which the writers of these letters have said, but I take it that the statements made by them of the differences in treatment are fairly, if not quite, correct. And, I again ask every Honourable Member of this House to consider how very reasonable the attitude of these young men was. Is there any word in it to show any contumacy? Is there any word in it to show that they wanted to delay their trial or to defeat justice? Is there anything to suggest that they were playing a "dirty trick",—which one of the previous speakers degraded himself by ascribing to them today? There is nothing of the kind. They are honourable young men, prompted by a desire to free their country, as every honest and honourable man ought to desire to free his country. They are therefore prompted by the very best of motives. They are men of education, possessed of very high ideas, and therefore when they are required to stand their trial, they do stand their trial. They do not want to run away from it. They are willing to take the consequences of the action upon which they have embarked. But they do want fair treatment as under-trials and as political prisoners. That is the main ground of their contention. It is that principle for which they have suffered. It is that for which one of them has sacrificed his life.

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member and his Secretary laid much stress upon the fact that Bhagat Singh and Dutt asked that Jatindra Nath Das should be unconditionally released. But at what period did they ask that Jatin Das should be unconditionally released? It was certainly not at the very commencement of their hunger strike. Dutt commenced his hunger strike on the 14th June; he addressed a letter within a day or two to the Government. Bhagat Singh commenced his hunger strike on the 15th June; he addressed a letter to the Government on the 17th June. Another prisoner addressed a similar letter later on when he joined the hunger strike. I ask the Government, what action did they take upon these letters? Was it not the duty of the Punjab Government and the Government of India to consider the requests made in them and either to explain to the writers why the differences they complained of were upheld, if there was any justification for them, or to accede to their demands? If the Government had acceded to their requests, the fatal deplorable time would not have come when Jatin Das was brought near unto death. It was during that long period which preceded it that Government failed to do their duty, that the Government of the Punjab ignominiously failed to respond to the appeals of these young men, which they did their utmost to enforce by undergoing the intense suffering of a long continued hunger strike. But the Government remained callous. After the under-trials had undergone much suffering, the Punjab Jail Inquiry Committee happened to come to certain conclusions regarding the treatment of political prisoners. They thought they should intervene to end the hunger strike. It was not the Government of the Punjab which showed any anxiety to end the hunger strike. The Punjab Jail Inquiry Committee went to interview the under-trial prisoners at Lahore; they told them that their demands would be conceded; they told them that they had seen the Governor and that their demands had been agreed to by him, and they were thereby induced to abandon or suspend the hunger strike. It was at this stage, Sir, that knowing that Jatin Das was dying Bhagat Singh and Dutt asked that Jatin should be unconditionally released. It was not at any earlier stage that they made that demand. It was at the last stage when the Government by their callousness and failure to do their duty as human beings had allowed Jatin Das to reach that hopeless condition, when Jatin Das had been brought to the door of death, it was then that these young men—Bhagat Singh and Dutt—urged that Jatin Das should be unconditionally released. Was it wrong of them to do so? They showed themselves more humane in making that request than Government showed themselves in refusing it.

Mr. President : Order, order.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, may I have a minute or two more?

Mr. President : I am afraid I cannot allow the Honourable Member to proceed further.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to offer my tribute of tears to the memory of the great departed. We have today met in this House not like on other occasions. We have assembled here today under the shadow of a great national calamity. I wish the Government had the heart to feel instead of being callous to all our sufferings and keeping us in bondage. But it is idle to expect any sympathy from the Government in our struggle for freedom and emancipation from bondage, though this struggle for freedom on the part of the MacSwiney of India ought to have appealed at least to generous-minded men and lovers of freedom. I do not yield to anybody in my appreciation of the candour and honesty of that gentleman named Sir James Crerar, but I have no faith in the candour and honesty of Sir James Crerar as Executive Councillor, for he is the limb of a vicious system which wants to keep one-sixth of the human race in subjection.

Sir, I charge Government with murder of Jatindranath Das, who laid down his life to vindicate the elementary right of political prisoners in India. Government knows of what material these young men are composed of and you will pardon me, Sir, if I remind you of a story of the first Indian Governor, who said that it was Barin's bomb that had given him his special saloon and made him Governor of a province. It is not all the political agitation, all the vociferation which we make here that they are afraid of. They know what we are worth and they prize us at our proper value. But they know that these men who risk their lives, who would die from day to day and inch by inch, these men who have imbibed in their own lives the immortal teaching of the Geeta :

These men who have imbibed in their heart of hearts this teaching, they are the real dangers of such inhuman institutions as foreign rule in Aryavarta, the sacred land of the five rivers where the Rishis of old preached the highest philosophy and practised in life the highest religion and culture, which is still the admiration of the world.

Sir, I characterise the Government of India and the Government of the Punjab as so many murderers, or how could they remain so callous and indifferent when the Angel of Death was flapping its wings within the hearing of these light-hearted revellers? There is no court of justice to sit in judgment over them in this world and I do not know whether they believe in their religion, whether they believe in the teaching of Christianity that a day of judgment will come one day. If they do not believe, as I take it, they do not believe, and it is not a Christian Government that we have in this country, still they will have to appear before the bar of history and humanity as murderers, and the day will come when they will have their dues.

Sir, I charge them as murderers. Why? Because this was an avoidable calamity: they could have avoided it, but they would not. I am reminded of a saying that those whom the Gods want to destroy, first deprive them of their senses. This is one instance of that, and I shall live in that hope, that after depriving the Government of their senses they will precipitate their end and that end is coming.

Sir, the sufferings of these hunger-strikers have been viewed with such callous indifference by Government that they ought to be ashamed; at least they ought not to have used language which at this moment would have hurt the feelings of Indians. If they had real statesmanship in them, they would have acted otherwise. All these doings of the Government of India and of the Punjab Government, their callous indifference to the sufferings of these young men, show that they want to carry on the administration without the least consideration of the feelings of those whom they happen to rule in this country, and that they will not have any voice raised against their actions and misdeeds; but that every one of us should submit to whatever they might do and that we must applaud and at times give our sanction to such legislation as they may be pleased to bring forward. I warn them that they should not expect this. They ought to have taken their lessons from the year 1905, the year of the partition of Bengal. But, Sir, it is useless for us to point out the path they should follow in such cases, because I know that they will not follow the righteous path, for robbers and freebooters do not do so, neither do murderers. I only remind them in the words of one of their poets which I read when I was a boy of eight or ten, with slight variation :

“England shall perish, write that word in the blood she has spilt, Perish hopeless and abhorred.”

Deep in ruin as in guilt.”

And I beg to conclude with the prophetic words of our own poet, Rabindranath :

“Bhojha tor bhari hole
Dubbe tarikhan.”

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

"The vessel will sink when the load of sin is great."

Let me tell you to your face that you are destined to be drowned for your sins of omission and commission and "tor dhwaja dhulaê lutbê". "Thy flag will be laid in the dust."

Sir Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary) : Sir, I decline to follow the last speaker. His outrageous language I shall treat with the contempt that it deserves. After his fire and fury it is indeed time that the still small voice of reason, of reasoning, of reasonableness should be heard. Ordinarily I should shrink from such a debate ; partly because under the shadow of a tragedy one's spirit is subdued to the silence of thought, partly also because, as Foreign Secretary, I have long held myself aloof from controversy in this House that I might assist in the insensible growth of a tradition that shall keep foreign affairs out of the dust and distortions of party politics. But today I feel that there is a duty upon me. For amongst other failings I am cursed with a defect which will for ever handicap me in party politics. There is upon me the curse of inability to see one side of the question only and to remain blind to the other. There is in me an impulse to see both sides and to try to draw both to a practical unity. And whatever the perplexities of this most unhappy business, one thing surely stands out, stark and clear, and that is that there are and have been two sides and that both clamour for recognition. (Hear, hear.)

I, Sir, have no more knowledge of it beyond what you and I have read in the papers, or you and I have heard during the debates. But across the history of hunger-striking it is writ large that this self-torture can only be self-imposed by those who—whatever God's judgment on their cause may be—themselves believe in the fiery justice of it. There is left in me not a shade of a shadow of a doubt that this unfortunate young man has gone to his death for a cause in which he burningly believed. And we are told that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church.

But look at the other side. The blood of the martyrs is surely a very slippery foundation on which to build your Halls of Justice. Look at Government's position,—faced with the discovery of a newly-invented lacuna in the law, with a theoretical possibility of the paralysis of the whole legal system, confronted with demands for immediate and far-reaching jail reforms—revolutionary some of them in character, some of them possibly beyond Government's direct control—on pain and penalty of the ultimate self-destruction of under-trial prisoners in their jails. Now, Sir, let me confess it. It was not until I heard that these demands went far beyond under-trial prisoners, and were to extend to men convicted of most brutal and abominable crimes under the cloak of politics, that I myself realised how impossible it was for Government to announce a summary acceptance of them, and how essential it was that Government should at once institute a searching inquiry with Local Governments into the whole of this most difficult and complex question. And I was reminded, as one of the speakers spoke, of one obvious difficulty—the very defining of what is a political offence. An offence, so it would seem from what he said, is political so long as it is not actuated by purely selfish motives. Are we to treat with such leniency those ghastly murders which have in times past been so frequent on the Frontier ? Are we to treat the Ghazi, actuated as he is by a motive at least as high as patriotism, actuated as he is by a mistaken belief in the dictates of his very religion—are we thus to treat him ?

Given, Sir, these two aspects of the case, is this motion not strangely mistimed, utterly belated ? We knew these facts, you, Sir, and I, and the whole House, the very day we met. If it is a practical aim we have in view, ought not this motion to have been brought at the very first hour of our very first meeting, when we knew that this unhappy life was hovering on the brink, and knew also that Government were seeking every possible road out of the tragedy ? Of course, if the aim of this motion is not practical but sentimental, the matter is very different. But let me not be mistaken. I myself regard sentiment as one of the greatest forces in the world, one of the most potent forces for good,—unregulated, a very potent source of danger in public life. Now, there is perhaps scant danger in allowing sentiment full play in a small homogeneous community or small homogeneous State, for its homogeneity is itself a potent counteracting force. But India,—India, this microcosm of nations and races and cultures and religions, so various and so varying in sentiment,—can India dare give sentiment full play on its march to its future ? I cannot conceive it.

I am again free to admit that, to banish sentiment at the dictates of practical wisdom, would be equally dangerous. And drawing as I am to the close of the span of my allotted time, this would be the way I should attempt to bring the two aspects to a practical unity ; this would be for me the conclusion and the consolation of the whole matter. From out this tragedy must spring a stirring of the conscience, of people and Government alike, that shall lead on to a searching scrutiny into the whole philosophy of our jail régime. (Applause.)

Several Honourable Members : Let the question be now put.

Mr. G. L. Winterbotham (Associated Chambers of Commerce : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I should like to say that I fully realise the feelings of Honourable Members in this House on the matter which is now under consideration, and it will be my endeavour, in the very few words which I propose to say, to avoid any possible word which can in any way embitter those feelings (An Honourable Member : "Already embittered")—feelings which are already embittered—I fully realise it,—and to abstain from any utterance which can be described in any way as provocative.

Honourable Members will probably realise that much the easiest course for myself, a non-official European, in this matter would be to sit silent and at the end of the discussion to record what the Honourable Mr. Jayakar so aptly described the other day as a silent vote. But I feel, and those other Members of the European Group for whom I am speaking also, feel that, as an independent group in this House, our attitude might be open to misinterpretation unless we explained very briefly how we stood. As we see it, Sir, we find it impossible to believe that any Government, not entirely bereft of its senses, could possibly provoke a controversy of this magnitude without having first explored every possible avenue by which it could have been avoided. That would apply even if we were not in a particularly important stage in the history of this great country. And can it be honestly held by any Member of this House that the present Government would be likely to present to the opposing political parties a plank of this magnitude and of this importance if they had been able to find any way out of their difficulty without sacrificing principles which they felt must at all costs be upheld ? That, Sir, was the first thing which occurred to us in our consideration of this question. And we have come to the conclusion, from all that we have heard from the Government Members and from all that we have been able to discover by our own inquiries—and here I should like to emphasise that whatever Honourable Members may think of this small Group, we are independent, we are not tied to Government and we do, to the best of our abilities. . . . (An Honourable Member : “ Question ”.) (Another Honourable Member : “ Vote with us ”.) Sir, I have already made it plain that it is impossible for this Group to vote with them, and let me tell my Honourable friends that we have come to the conclusion that in this matter Government have not incurred the blame of this Honourable House. It seems to us, as I was saying, from all that we have heard and from our independent inquiries, which in spite of interruption of Honourable Members, are still independent. (An Honourable Member : “ Protesting too much ”)—we are not tied to the Government. . . . (An Honourable Member : “ Government are tied to you ”). . . . our conclusion is that Government have throughout been actuated by, what I have always understood was, another basic principle of the law, which I do not think has been referred to—I am not a lawyer—namely, the greatest good of the greatest number. I believe that it would be wrong for responsible people in this House to take up the attitude that Government have been deaf to the call of humanity and have instituted this legislation purely against individuals (An Honourable Member : “ Which legislation ? There is no legislation before the House now ”.) I was talking of the legislation which was before the House early in the afternoon. It is not before the House now. In these circumstances I should like to make it perfectly plain that we do not consider Government blameworthy, and we feel it our duty to accord our support to this Government just in the same way as, under similar circumstances, we should feel it our duty to accord our support to any other Government, if we happened to be represented in any Assembly under a new constitution, composed of Honourable Members who sit on the opposite side of the House today.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : I rise to speak on this motion after careful consideration and I support the motion before the House. I fully agree with the Honourable the Foreign Secretary that the subject before the House is one of a very grave character, and I feel that nothing should be said or done by this House on this occasion which can possibly put a premium on crime from whatever motive it may be committed. It is one tragedy that the House deplores by this motion ; but there is one more tragedy behind this tragedy, which to a certain extent clouds the issue, the main principle for which the late Mr. Jatindra Nath Das gave his life. It is to my mind a great pity that it was Bhagat Singh, the person who was responsible and guilty of throwing a bomb in the House at Delhi, who took up this cause and ran to the point that he did. I feel that nothing should be done here by responsible non-official representative Members which can possibly make it felt by young men outside that they have only to do something in a similar direction in order to be styled martyrs. Although I do not lag behind my other Honourable friends here in appreciating the sacrifice Mr. Jatindra Nath Das has made and the strong will-power he must have had when he went through the pangs of starvation to death, I do feel that it is up to this House, and especially to the non-official side of the House, that nothing which is said or done today will give the younger generation, with perhaps lesser equipment than Das, a stimulus to make experiments in this direction. If therefore, Sir, I rise to support the motion before the House, it is for another reason. It is for the purpose of telling the Treasury Benches candidly and frankly that, while I am against putting a premium on crime, from whatever motive it may be committed, we will not stand any vindictiveness which they may show in their policy towards prisoners who are styled political prisoners. I stand out, for that Sir, and I stand out firmly. No more humiliation should be piled on these unfortunate, misguided young men than that piled on them by the Criminal Procedure Code and the sentences of the Courts. I feel that it is up to every self-respecting Indian, whatever his political creed, frankly to say to Government on this occasion, that while we are anxious to avoid the contagion spreading, we are more anxious still that Government should not give any more cause to these misguided men by their repressive policy, for which, it may be, the subordinates and the Provincial Governments are directly responsible, but for which the fullest responsibility must eventually be taken by the Treasury Benches opposite.

Sir, I have in my hand a copy of a letter which Bhagat Singh wrote in June last to the Inspector General of Prisons. His requests have been mentioned before the House several times—special diet, no forcible labour, toilette, literature of several kinds, history, political economy, etc. These are the four things which he asked for. I understand that the Government of India, after protracted consideration, did eventually grant these requests. (Honourable Members : “ No, no ”.) I speak subject to correction. If they did grant any of these requests, it is up to Government to tell us today whether they granted these requests to the fullest extent, or if partially, to what extent. Further what I would like to know is what prevented them from granting these requests at an earlier stage to avoid a tragedy which not only we deplore but the Treasury Benches also, as the Home Member has told us today, deplore equally and sincerely. That, to my mind, is an issue on which I would like information. I would also like Government to realise that however much they may dislike these crimes done with political motives, if the atmosphere which the policy of the Government has created during the last few months—even a year—continues, nothing can put a stop to these efforts of our young men, except a substantial change in that policy. Until then, it is up to law-abiding citizens of India, to see that our young men are not misled by anything that we may say here. It is still more incumbent on the Treasury Benches to secure that they shall not provoke these men to any action of this nature. None, Sir, regrets the unenviable position of the Government today more than a person like me, belonging to the Indian mercantile community. But what we feel is that the Government have not been either responsible to us or responsive to any suggestions, requests, or appeals which we have made in the past ; and it does touch the bottom of the hearts of Indians when they find that a young man of 25 was so stirred, misguided or not, as in every sense of the word, to have sacrificed his life for what he thought was due to him. We need not necessarily endorse the aspect of his case which could not be investigated. In fact, as far as this prisoner was concerned, he was under-trial. I suppose he will not now, after death, be considered in legal parlance to have been guilty. The Government Benches and my friends on the Benches on my left should not be surprised if Indians in this House one after the other get up to say that Government should take adequate steps to ensure that nothing further of a provocative nature is done in this direction until the political situation settles down. I repeat, therefore, Sir, that the lesson of this motion is, at least, as far as I am concerned, that, while Government have all the powers they need for the purpose of dealing adequately with these misguided youths—(An Honourable Member: “What? Not misguided?”) I mean misguided in the eyes of Government. Let them not go out of their way a single inch more to pile any extra humiliation on or put any further handicap on these unfortunate men.

I am told that it is very difficult for Government to decide who are actuated by political motives and who are not. I am aware that at times some of these men are so carried away that they do take to methods which are extreme. But at the same time, for practical purposes, it can not be difficult for the Executive to understand who are the men who are actuated by the moral turpitude of the ordinary criminal and who by a high purpose such as impulsive patriotism. And I repeat that if this lesson is taken by the Treasury Benches here, this motion before the House will not be in vain.

Several Honourable Members: The question may now be put.

Mr. H. W. Emerson (Home Secretary): Sir, after speaking the day before yesterday at inordinate length on the subjects raised in this debate, I hoped that I had finished with the subject; and I deplore as much as any Member of this House the circumstances which have disappointed this hope. I find it a little difficult to reconcile some of the arguments advanced on the other side of the House. At one time I find that it is the personal position of the hunger strikers, their personal demands that are put forward, and Government are asked, “Why did you not satisfy those demands?” At another time I find that it is the political issues and racial discrimination that are put forward,—the treatment of political prisoners and the racial discrimination shown against them. To my mind the issues are inseparable. From the moment that Bhagat Singh wrote the letter from the Mianwali Jail dated June 14th, the question was not one of personal demands; it raised the general issues. For myself I have never had any doubt that the young man whose death we deplore was ready to sacrifice and did sacrifice his life for a cause which he believed to be just. His determination to die, his steadfast refusal to take food or help from his friends rendered it particularly difficult for them to deal with his case. But, Sir, as the Honourable the Home Member has indicated, during his life he was the first to recognise that the jail officials and the medical attendants—and in particular I would mention Dr. Chopra—had done everything that was humanly possible in order to save him. Whatever may be the responsibilities which you think Government did not discharge, it is only fair to the medical and jail officials to recognise, as I am sure will be recognised, that no part of the blame attaches to them. Now, Sir, it has been asked, why was there this delay in taking action? As I have said, it was clear from the first that the demands of the persons concerned could not be isolated from the general demand. (An Honourable Member: “Why not?”) (Mr. M. A. Jinnah: “From a general demand for what?”) For the better treatment of political prisoners and the removal of racial discrimination. Now, Sir, issues of that nature are very properly brought before Government by the force of public opinion. They are discussed in the Provincial Councils and on the floor of this House. Unfortunately there are very few of our institutions which are perfect; there are few in regard to which an under-trial prisoner would not be able to point out that something was wrong—something wrong with our land revenue system, something wrong with something wrong with our land revenue system, something wrong with the constitutional form of Government—something wrong in our jail administration. (An Honourable Member: “There is certainly something wrong in the Punjab.”) And if, Sir, the principle on which Government are to act is that, whenever an under-trial prisoner puts forward demands on the ground that some institution is defective, that the defects should be put right, Government should take immediate action without any inquiry, then, Sir, I do not think it would be possible for any system of Government to continue. I have said that we do recognise that Jatindra Das died for a principle. It seems to me that the present situation has arisen out of a clash of principles. It is assumed that the Punjab Government and the Government of India have pursued a course out of perversity and blindness to the consequences and in disregard of all feelings of humanity. It would have been an easy course for them to take the path of least resistance, to have accepted the demands as soon as they were made, and thus to have avoided the odium and the bitterness of feeling which the course taken was bound to produce. If with their eyes open—and I can assure the House that for the last two months the situation produced by the hunger-strikers at Lahore has been the cause of the gravest anxiety to the Punjab Government and to the Government of India,—and knowing what the consequences might be, they pursued a certain course of action, I think Honourable Members of the House can believe that they did it because they believed in a principle.

Several Honourable Members: What principle? Is it the principle of prestige and racial discrimination?

Mr. H. W. Emerson: The principle was that Government, as trustees of their successors....

Several Honourable Members: Whose trustees?

Diwan Chaman Lall: That would do for the Punjab Government; it will not do for the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. H. W. Emerson: The principle was that Government, as trustees of their successors and of society, could not yield to a demand of this kind, involving as it did very great issues, without a thorough examination of the question by the Local Governments who were primarily concerned. Sir, I have been in close touch with the Punjab Government for the past few months and I know the deep concern of the head of the province in this matter. I know he has taken every course short of the sacrifice of what is regarded....

Mr. President: Order, order: the Honourable Member should not bring in the name of the head of the province.

Mr. H. W. Emerson: Every effort has been made by the Punjab Government and the help of non-officials has been elicited in order to find a solution. That solution, I hope, will be found. I must have made myself singularly obscure day before yesterday if the interpretation put upon some of my observations is the one that was conveyed to the House by my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar. I realise most keenly that there are problems to be solved, that public opinion is resentful of the treatment of certain classes of prisoners and that it is offended by the differentiation between Europeans and Indians. I believe those questions are questions which demand solution, and I believe that as a result of the examination by Local Governments, we shall be on a very long way towards a satisfactory solution. I would ask Honourable Members, as I asked on Thursday, if the event which we deplore is to have a practical result—and surely that is the best memorial you can give to the deceased,—to press their views and to ask their friends to press their views on Local Governments.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : And allow many more young men to die in the interval.

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. H. W. Emerson : Sir, the Punjab Government have already appointed their Committee and that Committee has come to its tentative conclusions. Some members of it went down to Lahore. The concessions which they tentatively proposed were given from the day the hunger-strike was stopped, about the 7th September, to the under-trial prisoners. And in the letter that my friend Mr. Keane read, Lala Dunichand, who is a member of the Committee, says, in effect to the hunger-strikers, that they went on hunger-strike to get certain demands of prisoners recognised; that the committee had come to provisional conclusions, that the Punjab Government and the jail officials had given effect in anticipation to those recommendations so far as those prisoners were concerned and that the prisoners had expressed themselves as satisfied. The Honourable and learned Pandit asked, I think, when was a solution going to be found? In reply, I would say that the effect of the inquiry carried out by the Punjab Government has been recognised by a member of the Sub-Committee, a member who I do not think is ordinarily prejudiced in favour of Government, to be satisfactory. I myself see no reason why in regard to other provinces the results should not be equally good and why we should not, within a few months or sooner, if possible, arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. There will be no delay on our part in finding a solution of these questions which are so much disturbing the public mind.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not think that an Honourable Member who speaks for the second time in this House is entitled to the consideration and courtesy that he is entitled to when he speaks for the first time. Sir, when Mr. Emerson was speaking the other day and today, I seemed to have been transported back to 1919, when from my seat in the Visitors Gallery of the old Imperial Legislative Council at Simla I listened to the debate on the Punjab atrocities. At that time, doughty Punjab officials, worthy predecessors of the Honourable gentleman who has just sat down, tried to defend an indefensible case. No doubt, the O'Dwyers and Dyers have left the shores of India, but, if at any time it is necessary for the Government to put into practice the policy which was initiated by them in those days, I have no doubt that Government will not want for officers of the proper stamp to carry that out. Sir, Mr. Emerson said that the hunger-strikers did not put forward a demand for the redress of their personal grievances. All honour to them that they did not, that they had the courage to stick out for the redress of general grievances. I think they deserve our tribute of respect for the fight which they have put up in the interests of a great principle for which they are fighting. I may tell Mr. Emerson this, that in putting forward that general demand, they have the fullest support of the non-official Indian section of this House. The Honourable Member said that, "Here was a clash of principles". Certainly a clash of principles, when the Honourable Member is not prepared to yield on the question of racial discrimination. Certainly this clash of principles will continue so long as officials of the stamp of Mr. Emerson continue to be in India. The Honourable Member said that this matter of hunger-strike had been the greatest concern, not merely of the Punjab Government, but also of the Government of India. May I know from the Honourable Member as to why it is that the situation in the Punjab alone had been attracting so much attention of the Home Department of late? In reply to a question which was put by my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha the other day relating to under-trial prisoners who have gone on hunger-strike in the different parts of India, the Honourable the Home Member said that particulars only of the Punjab cases were available, and as for the rest of India, the Government had no information and were awaiting replies from the Local Governments. There must be something peculiar to the Punjab cases that they had attracted this much of attention at the hands of the Government of India. When I say this, I am reminded of certain statements that appeared in the Press to the effect that these under-trial prisoners used often to be told that they had better remember that this was the Punjab. Is it because this was happening in the Punjab that the Government of India had been taking so keen an interest in the matter?

As an unworthy representative of the province which has been honoured by the birth of Jatindra Nath Das, I wish to pay my tribute of respect and homage to the memory of that illustrious son of Bengal. Sir, no word of regret that may be expressed on the floor of this House will restore Jatin Das to life. Sir, I know another illustrious son of Bengal is at this very moment on the point of death in similar circumstances. I refer to Satindra Nath Sen, a name which is a household word in Eastern Bengal, an illustrious patriot, a selfless worker in the cause of the country, who is not unknown to many of us here. Sir, he has been on hunger-strike for about 114 days now, with a very short interval. How is it that the Government of India do not possess any information about that matter? Sir, it is not for any heinous offence that he is being tried. He has been rotting in jail for the last four months awaiting trial of a proceeding under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Repeated applications for release on bail made were turned down. Impossible conditions have been laid down by those in authority, for sureties. The latest telegram that I hold in my hand says this :

"The Magistrate considers all unfit to control, prayer for reduction of surety from twenty thousand rejected."

When sureties are brought forward, the first objection taken is that they have not sufficient financial standing. When solvent people come forward this lack of financial standing cannot hold good; it is then said, "You cannot control the movements of this man". And what is the present condition of this man? One of the latest telegrams about his condition appeared in the Press a few days ago. According to that report, the condition of Satindra Nath Sen is worsening from day to day, and he is determined to die if his grievances are not redressed. The latest one which appeared in yesterday's paper says that he remained unconscious for some time and it was with difficulty that consciousness was restored. What are the grievances of Satindra Nath Sen? The Honourable the Home Member does not know; perhaps he does not care to know. But from the papers that I have in my possession it seems that he also is fighting for a very noble cause and he is prepared to lay down his life for it.

Mr. President : Is he in the Lahore jail?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : He is not. But this case illustrates the callous policy that has been actuating the Government in dealing with political prisoners generally, and that is my only excuse for referring to this particular case.

Several Honourable Members : The question may now be put.

Mr. President : Pandit Motilal Nehru.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I do not wish to say anything.

Mr. President : The question is :

“That the Assembly do now adjourn.”

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 16th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock,
Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ABOLITION OF SERVANTS' COMPARTMENTS ON RAILWAYS.

462. *Mr. D. C. Stewart-Smith : Will Government please state whether the Railway Board have taken any decision on the question of the abolition of servants' compartments in their coaching stock ?

Mr. P. B. Rau : The question is being considered at present.

PARTICULARS OF AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITIONS, ETC., HELD BY GOVERNMENT DURING THE LAST TEN YEARS.

463. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will Government be pleased to state, (i) the number of industrial and agricultural exhibitions, fairs, shows, and demonstrations held by Government during the last 10 years, (ii) the expenditure incurred on each of them, and (iii) the number of persons that visited each of them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : With your permission, Sir, I shall take questions Nos. 463 and 464 together.

The Government of India have no information ; and as in Governors' provinces " industries " and " agriculture " are transferred subjects, the Government of India do not consider that they would be justified in asking Local Governments to collect it. If in these circumstances the Honourable Member desires the information in respect of Local Administrations, it will be obtained and furnished to him.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will the Honourable Member obtain the information ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I shall obtain the information in respect of Local Administrations, if that is the desire of the Honourable Member.

AMOUNT OF GOVERNMENT GRANTS TO EXHIBITIONS AND PARTICIPATION OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS THEREIN.

†464. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will Government be pleased to state the amount spent in giving subsidies, grants, or contributions to industrial or agricultural exhibitions, fairs, shows or demonstrations held through non-official agencies during the last three years ?

(b) Have Government prohibited their officers from participating or co-operating with any of these ? If so, for what reasons ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 463.

PROHIBITION OF GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS FROM PARTICIPATION IN EXHIBITIONS ORGANISED BY THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

465. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Is it a fact that the Government of India have issued an order to all Local Governments prohibiting their Departments and officers from participating in exhibitions organised by the Congress ?

(b) Do Government propose to start industrial and agricultural exhibitions at places where annual Congress meetings are held for the agricultural and industrial uplift of the country ? If so, at what cost ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me on the 2nd September to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's starred question No. 7 on the subject.

(b) This is a matter entirely within the discretion of Provincial Governments. The second part of the question does not therefore arise.

CASES TRIED UNDER THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT ACT AND PUNISHMENTS AWARDED.

466. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will Government be pleased to state the number of cases tried under the Criminal Law Amendment Act passed by this Assembly on the 19th September 1927, stating punishments awarded in each case ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I lay on the table a statement giving the information asked for so far as it is available.

Statement of Prosecutions instituted since the passing of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1927, and the punishment awarded in each case.

NOTE.—The results of three other cases which have been tried or are under trial are not yet known.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will Government state if they have received any representations from the Arya Samaj, Delhi, or any other institution regarding the book called "A Critical Study of the Life and Teachings of Swami Dayanand" by Mr. Durrani ?

Mr. President : How does that question arise ?

AMOUNT OF CONTRIBUTION TO THE RAILWAY POLICE ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY MADE BY THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR AND ORISSA.

468. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the Government of Bihar and Orissa have to pay about Rs. 4,00,687 per year for "Railway Police" ?

(b) Is it a fact that, prior to 1919, the cost of the "Railway Police" used to be divided between the Railways and the Local Government in the proportion of 7/10th, and 3/10th, the Railway paying 7/10th, but this rule did not apply to the Bengal and North Western Railway ? If so, why ?

(c) Is it a fact that, after an inquiry in 1918, the Government of India made a new arrangement, under which from 1921-22, the Bengal and North Western Railway paid the Government of Bihar and Orissa only Rs. 14,000 per year, as contribution to the Railway Police ; whereas the said Railway Company used to pay Rs. 19,000 per year formerly ? And have Government received "strong representations" from the Government of Bihar and Orissa with respect to a more equitable adjustment in this matter ?

†This question was withdrawn by the questioner.

(d) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following statement made on behalf of the Government of Bihar and Orissa in the Local Legislative Council on the 22nd March 1929 :

" There is a long-standing rule in the Civil Accounts Code that services rendered to commercial departments, and to Government commercial undertakings shall be charged for..... it does seem fair to this Government that the Government of India or the Company (i.e., the Bengal and North Western Railway Company), which gets the profits should not evade payment for services rendered, which enable them to earn them ; and it does seem hard that this Province should receive no portion of the profits, and should be made to pay for a part of the agency instrumental in procuring them ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to say if they propose to bring about a more equitable settlement of contribution in this matter ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) The facts are as stated, except that the system of payment by Railway Companies of seven-tenths of the cost of the entire Railway Police applied to the Bengal and North Western Railway also.

(c) It is a fact that, from 1921-22 onwards, the Bihar and Orissa Government have received only Rs. 14,000 as contribution towards Railway Police, whereas prior to 1921, they received Rs. 19,000. The reason is that, prior to 1919, Government maintained and paid for all police on a railway system and recovered from the Companies seven-tenths of the total charges. The amount of Rs. 19,000, referred to by the Honourable Member, was the seven-tenths share of the total charges on police payable by the Bengal and North Western Railway. With effect from 1919 a new system was introduced, under which the railways had to meet all charges in connection with the " Watch and Ward " staff, while Government took over entire financial responsibility for Crime and Order Police, but it was considered reasonable that the Companies should pay to Government, during the currency of their contracts, fixed annual sums equivalent to the difference between what they were paying before and the total cost of watch and ward, the actual sum to be determined in consultation with the Companies when this sum payable by the Company came to be determined, the Bengal and North Western Railway objected to payment of their share of the cost based on the revision of pay which was sanctioned after 1906. Eventually the contribution of the Railway came to be fixed at Rs. 30,000 and this was distributed to the Local Governments on the basis of the mileage traversed by the Railway in their provinces. The proportionate share payable to the Bihar and Orissa Government on this basis was Rs. 13,978. Representations have been received from the Bihar and Orissa Government on the subject.

(d) Yes.

(e) The matter is under consideration. But the question is an intricate one and it will take some time before a settlement can be reached.

NATURE OF FACILITIES TO BE ACCORDED BY GOVERNMENT TO A PARTY OF ENGLISH SCHOOL BOYS TOURING INDIA.

469. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that, under the auspices of the Public Schools Empire Tours Committee, London, a party of English school boys will come out on tour in India ? If so, how many of them are coming out, and when ? Do Government propose to provide any facilities to them ? If so, what ?

Sir Frank Noyce : Yes. The party, which is expected to number from 35 to 40, is expected to arrive at Bombay on the 29th November, 1929. The question whether the party should be given any special railway facilities is under consideration.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do Government propose to provide any facilities at all—apart from railway facilities ?

Sir Frank Noyce : So far as I know, the only question at present under consideration is whether the party should be given any special railway facilities.

RECRUITMENT THROUGH THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION OF THE STAFF OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY DEPARTMENT.

470. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that all the Departments of the Government of India resort to the Public Service Commission for filling up vacancies in their Departments ? Is it a fact that the Legislative Assembly Department does not get its staff through the Public Service Commission ? If so, why should the Department be an exception to the general rule followed in all other Departments ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The normal procedure is as indicated by the Honourable Member. Under rule 5 of the Legislative Assembly Department (Conditions of Service) Rules, 1929, which were published in Part I of the Gazette of India, dated the 31st August, 1929, the ministerial staff of the Legislative Assembly Department may be recruited either from among persons already in Government service or from among persons, who are recognised as qualified by the Public Service Commission.

FACILITIES FOR THE BOOKING OF RAILWAY PARCELS IN MULTAN CITY.

471. *Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Are Government aware that in Multan City (Punjab) a branch booking office has been opened in Kup by the Railway Department, but parcels are not booked in this office either on tickets or otherwise ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of starting booking of parcels at this office also ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) I am bringing this question to the notice of the Agent of the North Western Railway, as this is a matter within his competence.

†472—478.*

CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY BETWEEN HAZARIBAGH AND STATION ROAD HAZARIBAGH TOWN.

479. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Will Government be pleased to state the stage at which the proposal for constructing a railway line between the Hazaribagh Road Station and the town of Hazaribagh stands at present? Has the line been surveyed and finally sanctioned?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Survey report has not yet been received from the Agent, East Indian Railway.

USE OF DEONAGRI SCRIPT FOR NAMES OF RAILWAY STATIONS IN THE CHHOTA NAGPUR DIVISION.

480. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the Chhota Nagpur Division is a Hindi speaking area and has Deonagri for its script?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why the names of railway stations on the East Indian and Bengal Nagpur Railways passing through the Chhota Nagpur Division are written in English, Urdu and Bengali characters only and not in Deonagri?

(c) Do Government propose to remove this difficulty as soon as possible?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am referring the matter to the Agents of the East Indian and Bengal Nagpur Railways for their consideration and shall communicate later with the Honourable Member.

PROVISION OF A RAILWAY STATION AT BIJAULIA.

481. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the junction of the Chandit-Barkakhana Railway line and the Hazaribagh-Ranchi Road near Rangirh is a most suitable place for having a railway station for the convenience of the people there?

(b) Is it the intention of Government to make a village called Bijaulia near aforesaid junction, a railway station? If so, what are the reasons for the delay?

(c) Are Government aware that trains stop at Bijaulia to allow passengers to leave or catch the trains there even now, but there is no place nor any means to protect the passengers from the rain and the sun?

(d) Do Government propose to have a regular railway station there at an early date and to remove all the aforesaid troubles?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The matter is being referred to the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, and a further communication will be made to the Honourable Member in due course.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERTS IMPORTED BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

482. *Pandit Nilakantha Das : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the comments under the heading "Foreign expert not wanted" in the Hindustan Times of Delhi, dated 2nd September, 1929 (page 10)?

(b) Will Government please make a statement on the subject as to how many experts, on which branches of agriculture or otherwise are being imported, on what pay and covenant, and when?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) The Imperial Council of Agricultural Research has under consideration the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Agriculture regarding the use of the cinematograph in the propaganda work of the Agricultural Departments, but the Council, as at present advised, has no intention of getting a Cinematograph Expert from abroad for this purpose. The only expert whom it is at present proposed to import is Expert Adviser to the Council in Animal Husbandry and Veterinary matters. He is being recruited on a five years' engagement on a salary of Rs. 2,500—125—2,750, plus overseas pay of £13-6-8, and the usual Provident Fund terms for specialist appointments.

DISPOSAL OF TIME-EXPIRED MINING CONCESSIONS AND PROSPECTING LICENCES.

483. *Mr. G. L. Winterbotham : Will Government be pleased to state when they will announce their decision upon the question of the disposal of time-expired mining concessions and prospecting licences by auction or tender regarding which views of Local Governments and Administrations were sought in Government of India (Department of Industries and Labour) letter No. M-110, dated the 15th of December, 1926?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Further consideration of the proposal to amend the Mining Rules in order to give power to Local Governments to dispose of time-expired concessions by auction or tender has been postponed pending the revision of the existing constitution of India as a result of the recommendations of the Statutory Commission on Reforms.

CASES REFERRED TO THE RAILWAY RATES ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

484. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many cases were referred to the Railway Rates Advisory Committee since the Committee was established, and on how many cases the Committee has submitted its report to the Government of India?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state on how many cases, reported on by the Railway Rates Advisory Committee, Government have passed orders and how many await decision of the Government of India?

(c) Will Government be pleased to place on the table a list of cases on which the Railway Rates Advisory Committee has reported and which await the decisions of the Government of India, giving the date of the report of the Rates Advisory Committee in each case?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the total net cost incurred by the Railway Rates Advisory Committee since its inception?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) 28 cases have been referred to the Railway Rates Advisory Committee, six of which were subsequently withdrawn. The Committee has submitted its report on 13 cases.

(b) Government have passed orders on six of the cases reported on by the Railway Rates Advisory Committee. Seven cases await the decision of the Government.

(c) I lay on the table a list of cases with the information asked for by the Honourable Member.

(d) The approximate net cost of the Railway Rates Advisory Committee, since its inception in May, 1926, up to the 31st March, 1929, has been Rs. 4,46,000.

Cases on which the Railway Rates Advisory Committee have submitted their reports and which await Government decisions.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : May I know how long it has been taken for Government to decide on the questions submitted to the Railway Rates Committee in the past ?

Mr. President : That question is too general and, too vague. If the Honourable Member wishes to ask a question regarding a particular case, he might do so.

Mr. M. S. Aney : What is the average duration of the time taken by the Railway Board in considering any application for referring a particular case to the Railway Rates Tribunal or Committee ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think I must have notice of that, because my mathematical ability is not capable of making a rapid calculation of the average time taken.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : May I quote the case of the Coimbatore firm in the matter of rates for cotton from Coimbatore to various stations ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think that case is still pending before the Advisory Committee.

CONSTRUCTION OF A BRIDGE OVER THE CHENAB NEAR CHINIOT.

485. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the date when the construction of a bridge over the Chenab river near Chiniot, District Jhung, was undertaken and commenced ?

(b) What was the estimated cost of construction of this bridge and what was the stipulated period of completion of the work ?

(c) Who was the officer supervising the work ?

(d) Were any tenders invited for the construction of this bridge ?

(e) What was the lowest tender, and if tenders for different kinds of works were invited, what were the lowest tenders in each case ?

(f) Is it a fact that the foundation work of constructing and plugging the wells was entrusted to a private contractor who did not submit any tender ? If so, what was the amount of his tender ?

(g) If the answer to part (f) is in the negative, what is the name of the contractor who was entrusted with the construction work of the bridge, and what was the amount of his tender ?

(h) Did this contractor finish his work within the stipulated time ?

(i) Were the contractors asked to deposit any earnest money as penalty in case the work was not completed within the specified time ? If so, what was the amount ? If not, why was no earnest money taken ?

(j) Is it a fact that the contractor who was given the construction of the foundation wells could not complete his work in time ?

(k) Is it a fact that the work was taken over from him by Government ?

(l) Is it a fact that no penalty was realised from him nor was his deposit, if any, forfeited for the breach of the contract ?

(m) Is it a fact that his materials lying on the spot were purchased from him by Government ?

(n) Is it a fact that this contractor did not pay hundreds of coolies their daily wages ?

(o) Who was the officer who managed all this transaction of giving the work and of cancelling the remaining work ?

(p) Is it a fact that Government have sustained substantial loss on account of his failure ? Is it a fact that, but for his work, the bridge would have been near completion ?

(q) How long is it since Government took the work in their own hands ?

(r) Is it a fact that the work of construction has been suspended for some time past ? If so, why ?

(s) Is it a fact that this delay on the part of Government is causing great inconvenience to the people of the districts ?

(t) When is the work supposed to be completed ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) February, 1928.

(b) Rs. 19½ lakhs, including the steel work. The stipulated period for completion of the contract work, i.e., excluding the steel work, was 22 months.

(c) Since the commencement of the work it has been supervised by three different officers.

(d) Yes.

(c) Rs. 6,40,000 for all work excluding the steel work. As the steel work is to consist of second-hand girders taken out of the main line, this work was not to form part of the contract.

(f) No.

(g) Mr. Bhagwan Das Mehra. The amount of his tender was Rs. 7,00,000.

(h) The work was taken away from the contractor before the end of the stipulated time.

(i) Yes, Rs. 10,000.

(j) It was considered most improbable that he would be able to complete his work in time.

(k) Yes.

(l) As it was necessary to ensure the safety of the works before the commencement of the flood season, the contract was prematurely terminated as already stated before a technical breach of contract on the part of the contractor actually occurred. No penalty was, therefore, deducted.

(m) Yes.

(n) Government have no information.

(o) The Chief Engineer, Construction, North Western Railway.

(p) No substantial loss has been incurred but certain indirect losses are bound to accrue, the amount of which cannot at the moment be ascertained. The bridge would have probably been nearer completion if the contractor's work had been carried on more expeditiously.

(q) Seven months.

(r) Only so far as it is necessary to suspend such work during the flood season.

(s) Government have no information.

(t) June, 1931.

CAUSE OF CAPSIZING OF A BOAT IN THE CHENAB RIVER NEAR THE CHINIOT BRIDGE.

486 *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : (a) Is it a fact that recently a country boat carrying 150 men and women capsized near the bridge over the Chenab river near Chiniot ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the overturning of the boat was due to big heavy ropes suspended from over the bridge ?

(c) Who was responsible for suspending the ropes ? Was any man stationed to signal to the boatmen of the danger ahead ?

(d) Have the Railway Board made any inquiry into the matter ?

(e) Has any compensation been paid to the relatives of the dead ?

(f) What was the actual number of lives lost, and what was the amount of money carried by these men ?

(g) What precautionary measures have been taken by Government for the non-recurrence of such a tragedy ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) A ferry boat licensed by the District Board capsized while crossing the river. Government have no information as to the number of people it was carrying at the time.

(b) to (g). I understand an inquiry into the accident is being conducted by the local authorities and I am unable to reply to these parts of the question at present.

PROVISION OF A RAISED PLATFORM AT CHINIOT RAILWAY STATION AND OTHER FACILITIES.

487. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : (a) When do Government contemplate the construction of a raised platform at the Chiniot Railway Station ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is no light on the station in the early hours of the morning when the first train leaves for Chak-Jhumra ?

(c) Is it a fact that the lavatory tanks in the train are never filled with water ?

(d) Is it a fact that the intermediate and the third class compartments are never cleaned ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer this and the next question together. Inquiries are being made from the Agent, North Western Railway and the information will be communicated to the Honourable Member on receipt.

PROVISION OF A WAITING SHED AND SUITABLE DRINKING WATER AT CHAK-JHUMRA RAILWAY STATION.

488. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : (a) Is it a fact that there is no place where the intermediate and third class passengers can take shelter during the summer days at Chak-Jhumra ?

(b) Do Government contemplate the construction of a shed on the platform of Chak-Jhumra Station ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is no arrangement for drinking water at Chak-Jhumra Station and the earthen gharas used for drinking water are not cleaned for months ?

INCONVENIENCE CAUSED BY ABOLITION OF THE POST OF TALLYMAN AT RAM-KRISTOPORE GOLA SIDING.

489. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the post of the tallyman at Ramkristopore Gola siding has been abolished ?

(b) Is it a fact that the abolition of this post has caused great inconvenience to the rice merchants of Ramkristopore ?

(c) Is it a fact that after the post was abolished there have been numerous cases of shortage and pilfering of rice bags ?

(d) When was the appointment of the tallyman first made and when did it cease ? What are the reasons which led to the abolition ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 487.

(e) Is it a fact that a representation was made by the local rice merchants to Government for renewal of the appointment? If so, what action has been taken in the matter?

(f) Is it a fact that the mill-owners in the neighbourhood enjoy the service of tallymen? If so, what are the reasons for such differential treatment?

(g) Do Government propose to consider the desirability of appointing a tallyman at the Rankristopore Gola siding?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by Mr. Parsons to a similar question asked by Rai Bahadur Tarit Bhusan Roy on the 11th February, 1929, and to the information sent to him in Railway Department letter No. 1465-T. of the 12th February, 1929, a copy of which is in the Library.

PROMOTION OF SUBORDINATES OF THE RAILWAY ACCOUNTS SERVICE.

490. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that according to the Memorandum of the Financial Commissioner of Railways, the promotion of the subordinates of the Railway Accounts Service will be made by him on the recommendation of the Controller of Railway Accounts by selection?

(b) Why are Government not following a policy under which all such promotions are made by a non-interested body such as the Public Service Commission in order to stop all jobbery?

(c) Are Government prepared to direct the Public Service Commission to examine the cases of all Accountants and Assistant Account Officers on State Railways for promotion to the gazetted rank and to the Superior Railway Accounts Service immediately?

Mr. P. R. Rau : It has always been intended that promotions of subordinates to the Railway Accounts Service will be made by the Financial Commissioner of Railways after consultation with the Public Service Commission. The promotions recently gazetted were so made.

PROVISION OF A HOSTEL FOR INDIAN APPRENTICES IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

491. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) With reference to their reply to my starred question No. 824, in the Legislative Assembly on the 26th February, 1929, will Government please state how the proposal for the provision of a hostel for the Indian "A Grade" apprentices in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur now stands?

(b) Pending the provision of such a hostel, do Government propose to consider the advisability of reserving for the Indian "A Grade" apprentices now employed at the workshops there a portion of the existing hostel for Anglo-Indian and European apprentices at Kharagpur? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 491 to 496 and No. 537 together.

I am obtaining information from the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, and will communicate with the Honourable Member on receipt.

INDIAN APPRENTICES CONFIRMED IN THE RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

†492. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : With reference to their reply to my starred question No. 822 in the Legislative Assembly on the 26th February, 1929, Will Government please furnish the following information :

- (1) the number of Indian "A Grade" apprentices confirmed in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur, since Government answered my question ;
- (2) their names ;
- (3) the workshops in which they have been and are attached to ; and
- (4) the dates of their starting and confirmation in the Kharagpur Workshops ?

INCREMENTS OF INDIAN APPRENTICES CONFIRMED AT THE RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

†493. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : With reference to their answer to my starred question No. 821, in the Legislative Assembly on the 26th February, 1929, will Government please state whether the entire probationary period of service of the "A Grade" Indian apprentices on confirmation in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur is allowed to count towards their usual annual increments in view of the fact that they "have displayed keenness" in learning their work? If not, why not?

PROVISIONS OF THEORETICAL TRAINING FOR CERTAIN INDIAN RAILWAY APPRENTICES AT KHARAGPUR.

†494. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that there is no arrangement for theoretical training for the Indian "A Grade" apprentices attached to the Loco. Department of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur? If not, why not?

RATES OF PAY OF EUROPEAN, ANGLO-INDIAN AND INDIAN APPRENTICES AT KHARAGPUR WORKSHOPS.

†495. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government please state whether it is a fact that the Anglo-Indian and European Apprentices, who are recruited with Indians on the result of the same qualifying examination and test, for training in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur, are given higher rates of subsistence allowance? If so, what is the reason for this discrimination?

TRAINING AND APPOINTMENT OF EUROPEAN, ANGLO-INDIAN AND INDIAN APPRENTICES AT RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

†496. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is there any distinction in the manner of training given to the Indian "Grade A" apprentices and that of the Anglo-Indian and European apprentices in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur? If so, what is the distinction observed?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the negative, will Government please state whether Anglo-Indian and European apprentices are given better appointments with higher rates of pay, and if so, why?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 491.

GRIEVANCES OF INDIANS IN TANGANYIKA.

497. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware of the resolutions passed at the Tanganyika Indian Conference held at Dar-es-Salaam on the 2nd/3rd April, 1929, and published in the Tanganyika Opinion of the 5th April, 1929, at page 12 ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Tanganyika Indian community are opposed to the inclusion of Tanganyika in "any scheme of Federation or Closer Union" in East Africa ?

(c) Are Government aware that Indians are not recruited to higher posts in the Government services in Tanganyika, their recruitment being restricted only to the clerical cadre ?

(d) Do Government intend to take up this matter of the appointment of Indians to higher services with the Colonial Office to make the necessary arrangements in the future ? If not, why not ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) So far as Government are aware the facts are as stated.

(d) Yes.

INDIAN TRADE WITH TANGANYIKA.

498. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Have Government seen the leading article in the Tanganyika Opinion under the heading "Tanganyikan Trade" at page 7 in its issue dated the 19th April, 1929 ?

(b) Have Government noted that the Indian trade in exports to Tanganyika is considerably reduced in the year 1928 as compared with the previous year ?

(c) Have Government noticed two other leading articles in the Tanganyika Opinion, one under the heading "Indo-Colonial Trade" in its issue of the 15th August, 1929, at page 2, and the other article under the heading "Indian Settlement" in its issue of the 19th April, 1929, at page 11 ?

(d) Will Government please state the reasons that have led to such a long delay in the matter of the appointment of Trade Commissioners in the Colonies ?

(e) Do Government propose to give effect to the recommendations of the Meek Trade Mission ? If so, when ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) The Government note the figures quoted in this article, indicating that imports from India into Tanganyika decreased in value in the calendar year 1928 by a little more than 5 per cent., as compared with the previous year. I may, however, mention that the Indian sea-borne trade accounts, which are for fiscal years, show a steady increase in exports from India to Tanganyika since 1926-27. These figures are as follows :

|         |    |    |    |    | Rs.          |
|---------|----|----|----|----|--------------|
| 1926-27 | .. | .. | .. | .. | 43.42 lakhs. |
| 1927-28 | .. | .. | .. | .. | 50.01 lakhs. |
| 1928-29 | .. | .. | .. | .. | 53.94 lakhs. |

(c) Yes.

(d) The Scheme for the appointment of Indian Trade Commissioners abroad was placed before the Standing Advisory Committee for the Commerce Department two days ago. Now that the opinion of the Committee has been received, the Government will lose no time in coming to a final decision.

(e) The Trade Mission made several recommendations, some for the consideration of the Government and others for consideration by the Cotton Textile Industry. I lay on the table a copy of a letter which the Government of India recently addressed to the Bombay Millowners' Association, which explains the attitude of the Government towards the principal recommendations of the Mission.

LETTER No. 1509-C. (69), DATED SIMLA, THE 19TH AUGUST, 1929, FROM MR. H. A. F. LINDSAY, C.I.E., C.B.E., I.C.S., JOINT SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, TO THE SECRETARY, THE MILLOWNERS' ASSOCIATION, BOMBAY.

"I am directed to refer to your letter No. 1068/50, dated the 31st May, 1929, in which you submitted for the consideration of the Government of India the views of your Association on the Report of the Indian Trade Mission, and in reply to state as follows.

2. With regard to the first recommendation of the Mission for the appointment of Indian Trade Commissioners at Mombasa, Durban and Alexandria, I am to explain that this proposal is being considered along with those submitted by the High Commissioner for India in London for the appointment of similar officers in Europe and the United States of America. The whole scheme is an important one involving considerable expenditure and is being carefully examined in all its aspects. This examination will necessarily take some time, but the Association may rest assured that no undue delay will take place in coming to a decision and issuing the necessary orders on the subject.

3. The second recommendation deals with improvements to be made in the finish, packing, sampling, making up, etc., of goods for export. In this connection it is stated by the Mission that Indian exporters fall short of the standards set by their competitors, and that Indian exporters would find it to their great advantage to meet the requirements of the various markets in these respects. The Government of India note that the recommendations of the Mission on these points are receiving the detailed consideration of your Association as regards both the home and export markets, and they will be glad to know in due course the conclusions arrived at. They also note that the third recommendation of the Mission, namely, that a combined selling organisation should be established by millowners as a means of accelerating India's export trade, is receiving the earnest attention of your Association, that a system of co-operative buying of Iraq cotton has already been agreed upon by a number of Mills spinning finer count yarns and that some progress has been made in the blanket and grey goods trade with East Africa and in the yarn trade with Egypt and the Levant. The Government of India are glad to learn of the progress already made, and will be interested to hear in due course what further progress is possible on the same or similar lines.

4. The fourth recommendation deals with the question of the establishment of a combined bleaching, dyeing and printing plant in Bombay with Government assistance. This is a matter which concerns the Department of Industries and Labour, and the relevant extract from your letter has been forwarded to that Department for consideration.

5. A further communication will be addressed to you in regard to paragraph 5 (2) of your letter concerning import duties on Indian cotton piece-goods in East Africa, Iraq and Egypt. I am however to invite a reference to this Department letter No. 539-T., dated the 11th May 1929, in which the result of the representations already made to the Portuguese Government in respect of the duties levied in Portuguese East Africa was communicated to your Association.

6. The views of the Association on the extent of the possible markets for Indian piece-goods have been noted."

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE EAST AFRICAN INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS AT MOMBASSA.

499. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Resolutions passed at the Mombassa Session of the East African Indian National Congress held in April, 1929, and published in the Tanganyika Opinion dated the 26th April, 1929, at page 8-B, and of the 3rd May, 1929, at pages 4 and 9 ? Has any action been taken on any of those resolutions ? If so, what action ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second and third parts, the attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply to the short notice question asked by Pandit Hriday Nath Kunzru on the 10th instant. The Resolutions passed, which relate to the Hilton Young Commission's Report, have been under very careful consideration, and the Honourable Member may rest assured that the views and wishes of India will be duly brought to the notice of the authorities.

MEMORANDUM OF THE TANGANYIKA INDIAN ASSOCIATION AT DAR-ES-SALAAM.

500. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Memorandum of the Tanganyika Indian Association at Dar-es-Salaam presented to Sir Samuel Wilson and published in the Tanganyika Opinion in its issue of the 10th May, 1929, at pages 8, 9, 10 and 11 ? Have Government taken any action on the lines indicated in it ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The matter is under consideration.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION ON BOARD THE STEAMSHIP "KHANDALLA."

501. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the correspondence published in the Tanganyika Opinion, dated the 5th July, 1929, at page 12, under the heading "Awful Mismanagement on 'Khandalla'...." and another correspondence in its issue of the 6th August, 1929, at page 2, under the heading "Colour Bar on 'Khandalla'..." ?

(b) Are Government aware that S.S. 'Khandalla' is a B. I. Steamer plying between Bombay and Durban ?

(c) Are the dining arrangements on board the S.S. 'Khandalla' inspected by a Medical Officer of the British India Steam Navigation Company ?

(d) Can Government throw any light on the principle followed by the British India Steam Navigation Company in regulating the dining tariff ?

(e) Are Government aware of the racial discrimination which exists on board the steamers ; and do Government propose to take steps to remedy it ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Government have seen the articles referred to.

(b) Yes.

(c) to (e). Inquiries are being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION AGAINST INDIANS BY THE GOVERNMENT OF CONGO-BELGE.

502. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Have Government seen the letter in the correspondence column under the heading "Race Discrimination in Congo-Belge" and a leading article under the heading "The Toll of Colour" both published in the Tanganyika Opinion, dated the 5th August, 1929, at page 2 ?

(b) Have Government received any representations from the Indian Association, Dar-es-Salaam, and if so, what steps have Government taken or propose to take in this matter of racial discrimination by the Government of Congo-Belge against Indians ?

(c) Have Government addressed any reply to the Indian Association, Dar-es-Salaam, on the subject ; and, if so, to what effect ?

Sir Denys Bray : I have not been able to obtain a copy of the paper, but from the answers we have just heard, I have ascertained whether I can obtain it. Government have no information on the subject beyond that contained in a recent representation from the Indian Association, Dar-es-Salaam, on receipt of which His Majesty's Government were at once addressed.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why did you not ask me for a copy ?

REPRESENTATION OF INDIANS IN THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL AT TANGANYIKA.

503. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a leading article published in the Tanganyika Opinion dated the 7th August at page 2 under the heading "Council Nominations" ?

(b) Is it a fact that out of the 10 unofficial members under the Tanganyika Order in Council only 3 Indian members have been nominated to the Legislative Council, while 7 are European members ? Do Government propose to take steps to redress this injustice to Indians ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) As regards the first part of the question, Government have no information beyond what has appeared in the newspapers. With regard to the second part, Government are considering the whole position in connection with the Hilton Young Commission's Report, with a view to bring this matter also to the notice of the authorities.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

504. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that as a result of the 1926 Examination, 18 candidates were declared qualified for the First Division of the Imperial Secretariat and attached offices out of which only 2 were Muslims ?

L11CPB(LA)

(b) Is it a fact that one of these, Mr. Abdur Rahim, has since been appointed to the Indian Audit and Accounts Service ?

(c) If answer to part (b) is in the affirmative, will Government please state the total number of Muslim candidates hitherto qualified for the First Division, excluding Mr. Abdur Rahim ?

(d) Will Government state how this number will be adequate to meet the communal requirements of the several Departments of the Government of India and the attached offices ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Nineteen candidates have been declared qualified, of whom three are Muslims.

(b) Yes.

(c) The total number of Muslim candidates hitherto qualified is 57.

(d) As I recently stated in answer to another question, the percentage of Muslims in the Secretariat has increased greatly during recent years, and I anticipate a further improvement during the next few years as the result of the orders issued by the Government of India.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE SECRETARIAT AND ATTACHED OFFICES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

505. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the Public Service Commission have been asking the Departments of the Government of India and their attached offices to make their own arrangements owing to the paucity of Muslim candidates qualified for the First Division ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Departments and their attached offices are unable to redress their communal inequalities as there is a paucity of Muslim candidates qualified for the First Division ?

(c) If answers to parts (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, are Government prepared to take any steps, in accordance with the promise contained in the Home Department Notification No. F. 160/27-Public, dated the 22nd March, 1927, so as to enable the Departments of the Government of India and their attached offices to meet their communal requirements ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) If the question refers to permanent appointments, the answer is in the negative.

(b) The Public Service Commission have not yet exhausted their list of qualified Muslim candidates who are available for nomination to permanent vacancies.

(c) Does not arise.

RESOLUTION OF A BAR CONFERENCE AT LAHORE re APPLICABILITY OF SECTION 30 OF THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE TO THE PUNJAB.

506. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that a Bar Conference was held at Lahore in March last ?

(b) Were copies of the resolutions, passed at the said Conference, forwarded to Government ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Bar Conference has, by means of a resolution, urged that section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code should not in future apply to the Punjab and for this purpose the Criminal Procedure Code should be amended ?

(d) Is it a fact that section 30 of the Criminal Procedure Code was made applicable to the Punjab when it was a non-regulated province ?

(e) Do Government propose to bring forward an official Bill early for making the necessary amendment in the Code of Criminal Procedure ?

(f) If the answer to part (e) is in the negative, will Government please state reasons ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) Copies of some of the Resolutions passed have been forwarded to Government.

(c) Government have not received a copy of this Resolution.

(d) An answer in the affirmative is substantially correct, though to attain complete historical accuracy, some further elaboration not appropriate in an answer to a question would be necessary.

(e) No.

(f) The matter is one for the Local Government to consider in the first instance. The power conferred upon certain Local Governments by section 30 is discretionary.

GRANT OF A PASSPORT TO MOHAMED NASIR OF NOWSHERA.

507. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) When, by whom and under what circumstances was a passport granted to Mohamed Nasir of Nowshera, who is reported to have made an attempt on ex-King Amanullah Khan's life in Italy ?

(b) Is Mohamed Nasir a British Indian subject ? If not, what is his nationality ?

Sir Denys Bray : I have ascertained from His Majesty's Consul at Venice that the Italian authorities recently arrested two British Indians, one of whom was Muhammad Nasir, holder of a passport issued in Peshawar in 1925, and the other B. Chandra Bose, holder of a passport issued in Rangoon in 1924, on the ground that their conduct was suspicious, and ordered their deportation to India. I have no information of the nature of the suspicion entertained by the Italian authorities against them, but am pursuing the inquiries further. There is nothing in my information to suggest that there has been any attempt on the life of ex-King Amanullah in Italy.

NOTICES AND ADVERTISEMENTS PUBLISHED IN NEWSPAPERS BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

508. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Do Government publish notices and advertisements in newspapers ? If so, with what object ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government please state the number of notices and advertisements published during last

L11CPB(LA)

3 years, the number and names of papers in which they were published, and the cost and object of such publications ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes—mainly to call for tenders, or to invite applications for posts, or to publish as communiqués information on subjects of general interest to the public.

(b) Government are not prepared to collect this information.

SUPPLY OF GOVERNMENT REPORTS, ETC., TO NEWSPAPERS.

509. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of newspapers that are supplied with copies of Government Reports, Gazettes, and communiqués free of cost (specially the newspapers in Bihar and Orissa, if any) ?

(b) What is the object of these supplies ?

(c) What is the criterion which makes a newspaper eligible for this concession ?

(d) Is it the intention of Government to subsidise newspapers by giving them notices, etc., for publication, or by supplying them with free copies of some Government publications ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) The publications of the Government of India are supplied, free of cost, to newspapers on the basis of a standing distribution list drawn up by the Director of Public Information, with such modifications as may be considered necessary to meet the special needs of each Department. The number of newspapers at present borne on the standing distribution list is 26, one of which is published in Bihar and Orissa.

Copies of Press communiqués issued by the Government of India are supplied only to those newspapers who have representatives at the headquarters of the Government of India and have been admitted to the Press Room of the Government of India. It is not the practice to supply newspapers with copies of Press communiqués by post.

(b) For the convenience of newspapers and in order to keep the public in touch with the activities of the Government.

(c) In regard to the supply of Government reports, etc., the criterion is the circulation of the newspaper ; in regard to communiqués, the practice is explained in the reply to part (a) of the question.

(d) No, Sir.

PUBLICATION OF CONFIDENTIAL DOCUMENTS BY NEWSPAPERS.

510. Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the Bihar and Orissa Government's letter No. 1029-G, published in the Searchlight of Patna of the 26th June last ?

(b) Are Government sure that the same procedure has been adopted by other Local Governments when newspapers have published " Confidential Documents " ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the negative, are Government prepared to issue a circular letter prohibiting such procedure as they did by Mr. Haig's circular No. D-4181, with a view to make the action of all Local Governments uniform ? If not, will Government state the special reasons for issuing Mr. Haig's circular ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The matter is within the discretion of Local Governments, with which the Government of India do not propose to interfere.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire, Sir, if the Honourable the Home Member considers that the steps taken by the Bihar and Orissa Government are quite proper in this matter ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I think, Sir, that is a question of opinion.

Mr. B. Das : May I ask the opinion of the Government of India whether they approve of the steps taken by the Bihar and Orissa Government ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I think, Sir, the Honourable Member is not entitled to ask me for an opinion.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Is it a fact that the document referred to in the letter of the Bihar and Orissa Government was the Report of the Local Government submitted to the Simon Commission ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I must have notice of that question. I have no information.

Mr. B. Das : Have the Government of India taken similar action in any case to that taken by the Bihar and Orissa Government for publishing confidential documents ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I should not like to give a definite answer to that question without an opportunity of ascertaining the facts.

APPOINTMENT OF MR. K. M. HASSAN, AS DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF LABOUR (RAILWAYS).

511. *Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that Government are contemplating the appointment of a Deputy Director of Labour (Railways) ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government are contemplating the appointment to this office of Mr. K. M. Hassan, Statistical Officer of the East Indian Railway ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. K. M. Hassan, Statistical Officer of the East Indian Railway, was at one time serving as Assistant Traffic Superintendent on the North Western Railway ?

(d) Is it a fact that this officer was made to resign on pain of removal from service ?

(e) Will Government please state the grounds of his resignation and all facts relating thereto ?

(f) Is it a fact that this officer appealed against this decision to the highest authorities and that these appeals were rejected ?

(g) Is it a fact that this officer was re-appointed on the personal recommendation of Sir Michael O'Dwyer (in consequence of a personal interview) and for "meritorious" services during the martial law regime at Amritsar?

(h) Will Government state the nature of these "meritorious" services?

(i) Is it a fact that this gentleman appeared as a witness in certain martial law cases against the accused?

(j) Will Government please state what special qualifications are possessed by this gentleman in regard to Labour matters?

(k) Are Government aware that the rumour of the appointment of Mr. Hassan as Deputy Director of Labour is causing indignant protest among the rank and file of the workers on State Railways?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Honourable Member is presumably referring to the post of Deputy Director of Establishment which it is proposed to create. It will not fall within the duties of the incumbent of the post to deal with labour questions.

(b) Government have appointed Mr. Hassan to this post.

(c) Yes.

(d) Yes, in April 1918.

(e) It was held that he was guilty of gross insubordination for having brought serious charges against a senior officer which were unfounded.

(f) Yes.

(g) Mr. Hassan was not reappointed on the personal recommendation of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, but in consideration of commendable conduct during the disturbances at Amritsar in April, 1919.

(h) Mr. Hassan made heroic efforts to save the life of Mr. Stewart of the National Bank. He also did his best to persuade the rioters from destroying property in the railway city booking and parcels office. His action saved a considerable amount of Government property. He prevented the destruction of the Octroi Office and Octroi Superintendent's house, and gave shelter to the Octroi Superintendent and his family in his own house.

(i) Yes; the Commission, in the course of their judgment, remarked that they considered "his conduct had been very creditable throughout".

(j) As already stated, he will not be concerned with labour questions. Having worked in District Office and the Headquarters Office of the Traffic Department and as Assistant Agent of a Railway, Mr. Hassan possesses greater experience of establishment questions than most officers of the requisite seniority for the post of Deputy Director, Establishment.

(k) No.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : Will the Honourable Member state whether Mr. Hassan is acting as a Government spy, and whether he is giving information to the police against his colleagues?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have no information on that point, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is the Honourable Member, Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury, entitled to put such a question without any authentic information received by him? Is he entitled to put such a defamatory question contrary to the Rule and Standing Order of this Assembly? Honourable Members must realise their responsibility when putting questions, and from my experience of the Assembly during the last nine years this sort of question has not been allowed.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : The Honourable the President has allowed the question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : That may be on account of oversight. I am bringing to the notice of the Honourable the President.....

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : Is the Honourable Member entitled to say that it was by oversight that the President ruled this question in order?

Mr. K. Ahmed : A question of this description is not allowed in the House of Commons and, in this Assembly also we have got precedents when it was not allowed.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that the case which resulted in Mr. Hassan's resignation was the result of a private squabble between him and the District Traffic Superintendent over purely social matters? Is it also a fact that the District Traffic Superintendent was also degraded to an Assistant Traffic Superintendent and transferred to the Eastern Bengal Railway?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have not gone into the merits of the previous case. When Mr. Hassan was reappointed to Government service in 1918, quite clearly the understanding must have been that the past was wiped out. Therefore I have not attempted to go into the merits of the case on account of which Mr. Hassan was originally discharged.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it also a fact that the Octroi Superintendent, whose life and property Mr. Hassan saved during the martial law days, was a Hindu gentleman?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am quite prepared to take that from the Honourable Member.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Does such humanitarian act disqualify a person who is otherwise qualified for promotion in Government service?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No. Once Mr. Hassan was reappointed to the Railway Service, he became eligible for any appointment for which his experience and qualifications fitted him.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique : Is it a fact that Mr. Hassan was specially selected for the post of Assistant Agent in 1924 and, later on, as Statistical Officer for both the East Indian Railway and the late Oudh and Rohilkund Railway?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I know he was specially selected as a Statistical Officer in the East Indian Railway. I have no information about the earlier appointment mentioned by the Honourable Member.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique : Is it a fact that Mr. Hassan's evidence during the martial law days was confined to a murder case only committed near his house and nothing else?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I cannot answer that question without notice.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique : May I ask whether the service sheets of the officers of the Railway Department are open to inspection by the Members of this House ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I should imagine not. If the Honourable Member will draw my attention to any facts suggesting that it is so, I shall certainly look into the matter.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique : Are not the questions sufficient to draw your attention to this fact ?

Mr. President : Maulvi Muhammad Yakub. (Next question.)

Diwan Chaman Lall : I wanted to put some supplementary questions on this question, Sir.

POLICY OF GOVERNMENT re APPOINTMENT OF MUSSALMANS IN DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

512. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government be pleased to state fully, definitely and unequivocally their policy and attitude about the appointment of the Mussalmans in the various Departments of the Government of India, including the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state clearly and precisely what really they meant by placing the Muslim nationals in India in the category of minority communities ? Is it the intention of the Government of India that seven crores of Mussalmans should be treated in the same manner and receive the same, or even smaller, share in the Central services as other small minorities in the country ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if the intention and the policy underlying the Home Department Memorandum No. F. 176/25, dated the 5th February, 1926, will be carried out if in the name of minorities all the concessions and employments would go to small minorities in this country to the exclusion of the Muslim nation ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if the Memorandum mentioned in part (c) has succeeded in securing for the Mussalmans an adequate share in the Central services, and especially in the different branches of the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(e) If the answer to part (d) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state how many permanent appointments, excluding the peons, were made in all the Departments under the Government of India since the publication of that memorandum, pointing out particularly the appointments in the various branches of the Department of Industries and Labour, and how many of them were given to the Mussalmans, Sikhs and other minorities ?

(f) If the answer to part (d) is in the negative, do Government propose to make a thorough inquiry about the attitude of the different heads of different Departments of the Government of India towards the Mussalmans, and provide sufficient methods and means which would ensure the Mussalmans their adequate and proper share in the Central services and the different grades and classes thereof ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) and (b). It would not be possible to answer the Honourable Member's questions fully within the compass of reply to questions, and I must, therefore, refer him to the full statements of policy made by Sir Malcolm Hailey on this subject in the Legislative Assembly on the 10th March, 1923, and by the late Sir Alexander Muddiman in another place on the 2nd March, 1925.

(c) The reply is in the negative.

(d) As I stated in reply to question No. 282 on the 10th instant, the percentage of Muslims in the Secretariat has nearly doubled between 1911 and 1927 and there is no reason to think that the Memorandum has failed to promote its object.

(e) A statement showing the number of permanent appointments made to the clerical staff of the Secretariat from February 1926, to the end of 1928, to communities is laid on the table.

(f) I have already informed the Honourable Member that I shall be glad to receive any suggestions he may have to offer.

*Appointments made in one office of persons already holding permanent appointment in another office should be included.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : The statements made by Sir Malcolm Hailey and the late Sir Alexander Muddiman referred generally to the representation of minorities, while my question refers specifically to the policy of the Government relating to the share of Mussalmans in the Government services. Therefore the statements to which my Honourable friend refers do not apply to this question. I want an answer to my question.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I think the statements of policy to which I have referred apply to all minorities.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Am I to understand that the Government propose to put the seven crores of Mussalmans on the same footing and in the same category as other small communities in this country ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I am sure the Honourable Member will realise that I could not possibly reply to his answer by a full affirmative or negative.

REVERSION FROM THE PATNA HIGH COURT TO DISTRICT WORK OF A MEMBER OF THE BIHAR AND ORISSA JUDICIAL SERVICE.

513. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that a member of the Bihar and Orissa Judicial Service was appointed to a Judgeship of the Patna High Court, at the beginning of this year ?

(b) Is it a fact that it has been decided to revert him to district work now ? If so, why ?

(c) Do Government propose to appoint another member of the Bihar and Orissa Judicial Service to this post ? If not, why this change of policy ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) An officer of the Bihar and Orissa Judicial Service was appointed to act as an Additional Judge of the Patna High Court from the 1st December, 1928, till the commencement of the High Court's vacation of 1929. He was not appointed to a permanent judgeship.

(b) The period for which he was appointed has expired and he has therefore reverted. On appointment he was informed that, if future vacancies occurred, he would have no claim to supersede judges who were senior to him. At the time he was appointed several judges senior to him were on leave.

(c) Government are not yet aware whether the appointment will be continued. For the answer to the second portion of this question, the Honourable Member is referred to the last portion of my answer to (b).

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that a member of the Indian Civil Service who was appointed on the Patna High Court Bench at the same time has not been reverted to district work ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I am unable to say whether the Honourable Member's information is correct or not.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : It is correct. I can give you the name of the Judge. His name is Mr. James.

Are Government aware that at present there is not a member of the Provincial Judicial Service on the Bench of the Patna High Court ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I believe that that is the case.

PAY OF MINISTERIAL ESTABLISHMENT OF CIRCLE OFFICERS OF THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

514. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the memorial submitted by the ministerial establishment attached to the Circle offices of the Archæological Department for the revision of their scales of pay was not at all considered by Government ? If so, what are the reasons ?

(b) Is it a fact that, before 1927, Provincial Archæological Offices were under the administrative control of the respective Local Governments, under whom the Superintendents were supposed to serve ?

(c) Had not then the ministerial officers an opportunity to move the Government of India through the Local Governments for granting time-scales of pay similar to what had already been granted by the Local Governments and also a chance of receiving the support of the forwarding authorities ?

(d) Since the Director General of Archæology in India has been made the controlling and administrative authority of the Provincial Offices, has not this opportunity been lost ?

(e) Is it not the result that they are neither treated as entitled to the Provincial scales of pay nor on the same basis as the Central Offices ?

(f) Do Government propose to make necessary arrangements for further inquiries into the matter ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Government received no memorials except from the ministerial establishment of the Superintendent, Archæological Survey, Eastern Circle. As those memorials received full consideration, the latter part of this portion of the question does not arise.

(b) No.

(c) Yes, but there was, of course, no certainty that petitions so forwarded would receive the support of Local Governments.

(d) The procedure is the same as before, except that petitions now reach the Government of India through the Director General instead of through the Local Governments.

(e) In fixing rates of pay, regard is had to rates of pay prevailing locally for analogous work, as well as to rates of pay granted for such work in other Central Departments.

(f) No.

CONTRIBUTION FROM INDIA TO THE APPEAL ISSUED ON BEHALF OF SIR RONALD ROSS.

515. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is it a fact that the Standing Finance Committee has approved of the Government's proposal to pay £2,000 as India's contribution in response to the appeal recently issued in England by eminent medical men to set Sir Ronald Ross free from financial difficulties ?

Sir Frank Noyce : Yes.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : With reference to my question, will the Honourable Member kindly inform this House whether it is a fact that during the Great War many Generals received gratuities ranging from £20,000—£50,000 for meritorious services rendered during the War which meant the taking of thousands of lives ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The Honourable Member is evidently in full possession of the answer to his question.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member inform this House whether the Government of India is prepared to increase their donation from £2,000 to Rs. 200,000 for an officer who has been the means of saving millions of lives in India ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The amount was fixed after very careful consideration of all the facts of the case.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Is this amount to be submitted to the Assembly for a supplementary grant, or is it to be used by reappropriation ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I should like to have notice of that question. I can only say off-hand that the proposal has been approved by the Standing Finance Committee, but I cannot say whether the amount is being met by reappropriation or not.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member be prepared to recommend to Government an increased donation from £2,000 to rupees two lakhs ?

Sir Frank Noyce : It is not for the Secretary of a Department to make recommendations of that kind to Government.

SERVICE RENDERED TO INDIA BY SIR RONALD ROSS.

516. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that Sir Ronald Ross has rendered invaluable and distinguished service to India in regard to his research work on malaria ?

(b) Is it a fact that his research work has been the means of saving the lives of millions of malarial stricken people in India and elsewhere ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) There is no doubt that his discovery of the method of transmission of malaria infection has proved of immense benefit not only to India but to humanity.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Arising out of that answer, will the Honourable Member state whether the Government of India, in accepting the great service rendered by Sir Ronald Ross, will show their appreciation by making a donation of two lakhs ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I have already answered that question.

AMOUNT OF MILITARY PENSION PAID TO MAJOR ROSS.

517. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is Major Ross in receipt of a military pension ? If so, what is the amount ?

Sir Frank Noyce : Yes. The pension is at a basic rate of £430 per annum. This rate is subject to alteration on account of a rise or fall in the cost of living as compared with the year 1919 and at present Sir Ronald Ross is drawing about £410 a year.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member state whether he is prepared to recommend an increased pension to Sir Ronald Ross ?

TRANSHIPMENT ARRANGEMENTS FOR THROUGH BOOKED RAILWAY PASSENGERS.

518. *Mr. E. L. Price : Will Government be pleased to state whether any effort is made to enable air-mail letters to catch rail connections at junctions where transhipment is necessary ? If so, why are not similar efforts made on behalf of through-booked passengers ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Air mails are usually conveyed along with inland mails by the regular mail trains. These trains can be detained for a limited time at junction stations when necessary to ensure connections being made. In four exceptional cases where the ordinary mail service is not used for air mails, the Railway Administrations concerned have agreed to detain certain trains for longer periods to connect with passenger trains carrying air mails. Passengers who have booked through on both mail and passenger trains have the benefit of any detentions which take place. Government do not contemplate any indiscriminate extension of these detentions in favour of through booked passengers travelling by ordinary or slow trains, as this would disorganise all railway time tables and would cause inconvenience to the travelling public in general.

Mr. E. L. Price : I want to ask a supplementary question on that, Sir. The answer was not quite clear to me. Am I to understand that the railways do not care whether through-booked passengers get their connections or not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : No, Sir. The Honourable Member was good enough to draw the attention of the Railway Department to a case in which apparently serious inconvenience was caused to through booked passengers. I shall do my best to see what the causes were and to ascertain whether it may be possible to issue instructions which will prevent such inconvenience in future. But I am pretty sure that the remedy does not lie in an indiscriminate detention of the connecting trains. If we are to find a remedy it must be in some other way.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that the air mail never arrives in India at the correct time and so it is difficult for the Railway Department to connect railway trains to the air mail ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I do not think the Honourable Member's impression is correct. At the same time before I can give the Honourable Member a categorical answer I should require notice of that question. For the present I have given him an answer with reference to my recollection of the facts of the case.

Mr. B. Das : Is the Honourable Member aware that recently one air mail went down and there was consequently no connection with the railway ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is a different matter altogether—the air mail going down and being destroyed and its arriving at Karachi late.

TIME TAKEN FOR MAILS TO REACH SIMLA FROM CERTAIN STATIONS.

519. *Mr. E. L. Price : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the time it takes mails at present to reach Simla from Delhi, Lahore, Ambala and Kalka ?

(b) Is no improvement possible ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The time occupied in the transit of mails to Simla varies from 13 to 14½ hours in the case of Delhi, from 12 to 15 hours in the case of Lahore and from 7 to 9 hours in the case of Ambala, according to the particular mail trains by which the posts are carried to Kalka. The transit from Kalka of mails originating there is, approximately, six hours.

(b) An acceleration could be secured only at a cost wholly disproportionate to the volume and importance of the mails involved.

Mr. E. L. Price : Would it not be possible to get the morning mail in the morning before breakfast ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am afraid not, without incurring an amount of expenditure wholly disproportionate to the volume and importance of the mails involved.

Mr. E. L. Price : Am I to understand that the Simla mails are of no importance ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I never made any such suggestion, Sir. I said that the expenditure would be disproportionate to the volume and importance of the mails involved.

Mr. E. L. Price : Ah ! (Laughter.)

LENGTH AND FREQUENCY OF TRAINS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

520. *Mr. E. L. Price : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether passenger trains on the North Western Railway are made up so large that they require two locomotives to pull them and often far exceed the length of existing platforms ? If so, why ?

(b) Has the question been considered whether coaching traffic would be as economically and more conveniently catered for by more frequent trains, of length not exceeding that of platforms ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am inquiring into the matter and will let the Honourable Member have the information in due course.

Mr. E. L. Price : Does that apply to both (a) and (b).

Mr. P. R. Rau : Yes.

Mr. E. L. Price : My question has not been answered.

Mr. P. R. Rau : It obviously depends on circumstances. There are limits beyond which either course would be uneconomical.

Mr. E. L. Price : I am afraid I cannot hear that.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member repeat his answer ?

Mr. E. L. Price : I do not think the answer was worth catching anyway. (Laughter.)

Mr. B. Das : Is that a proper expression for the Honourable Member to say that the answer was not worth catching ?

APPOINTMENT OF LOCAL MUSLIMS TO OFFICES OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

521. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks serving at present in all the Offices of Royal Air Force in the North West Frontier Province and the number of Muslims among them ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take to reconcile the disproportion, and whether non-Muslim and non-resident clerks are imported for service in those offices in preference to local qualified Muslims ? If so, why ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) I supplied the Honourable Member with information on this subject last May, but owing to a mistake the figures for Quetta also were included. The correct figures are 34, of whom 11 are Muslims.

(b) Government do not consider that the proportion of Muslims is unreasonable. The units of the Royal Air Force are liable to move from station to station and there is therefore no question of importing outsiders or of fixing the establishment on the basis of the population of any particular station.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : May I know what is considered to be the minority community in the North-West Frontier Province. Is it the Mussalman or non-Mussalman ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I must have notice of that question.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I simply want to know which is the minority community in the North-West Frontier Province, the Muslim or non-Muslim ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I do not think that is a proper question to put to the Army Secretary.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS IN MILITARY GRASS AND DAIRY FARMS.

522. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks serving in the Military Grass, and Dairy Farms, and of Assistant Supervisors, and Overseers in India, and the number of Muslims among them ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what steps they propose to take to prevent the preponderance of members of one community in the Department, and for increasing the number of Muslims according to their due share of communal representation on their population basis in India ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) and (b). I lay on the table a statement giving the information asked for by the Honourable Member.

|                                                              | Number ofIndians. | Number ofMuslims. |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| (i) (a) Clerks .. .. .                                       | 208                   | 43                    |
| (b) Supervisors, Assistant Supervisors and Overseers .. .. . | 154                   | 45                    |

(ii) I would refer the Honourable Member to part 2 (a) of the statement laid on the table on the 30th January, 1929, in reply to his question No. 289. The orders referred to are still being observed.

COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN APPOINTMENTS IN THE PROVINCES AND THE CENTRAL DEPARTMENTS.

523. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have authorized Local Governments in India to fix the proportion of communal representation in their respective Provinces, and prohibited some of the Departments under the Government of India to abstain from reserving a fixed proportion for a particular class, and if so, why ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The Government of India have not adopted the practice of fixing the proportion of communal representation in the Services or in the offices under their control. The policy of the Government of India, as has been explained on many occasions before, is to prevent the preponderance of any one class or community. No instructions have been issued to Local Governments in the sense suggested by the Honourable Member.

REPRESENTATION OF THE MUSLIM COMMUNITY OF PESHAWAR ON THE PESHAWAR CANTONMENT BOARD.

524. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) With reference to the reply given by Government to my question No. 253, asked on the 25th February, 1929, will Government be pleased to state whether the Muslim nominated member of the Peshawar Cantonment Board is a permanent resident of Bannu or of Peshawar Cantonment ? If he is a resident of the former, will Government be pleased to state how such a member can be considered to represent the Muslim community of the Peshawar Cantonment ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the protests submitted by the Muslim community against him, and when his term of his office expires, to see that a suitable Muslim of the Cantonment is appointed ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) and (b). Government have no information regarding the permanent place of residence of the member in question, nor have they received any protests against his nomination from the Muslim community of Peshawar Cantonment. As, however, the member was nominated by the Local Administration with the concurrence of the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, the Command, I will forward a copy of this question and answer to the Local Administration for such action as they may consider necessary.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS OF THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE AS TRAFFIC INSPECTORS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

525. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of Traffic Inspectors sanctioned by the North Western Railway Administration for the Punjab and the North West Frontier Province last year, and the number of Muslims of the North West Frontier Province appointed ?

(b) What were the considerations on which the appointments had been given to the non-Muslims, and Muslims in both the Provinces ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : There are 36 posts of Traffic Inspectors on the North Western Railway. These are not allotted by provinces. Promotions to these posts are regulated by fitness for the duties of Traffic Inspector and not by considerations of community or domicile.

APPROPRIATION OF A BUNGALOW IN PESHAWAR CANTONMENT.

526. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) With reference to the appropriation of Bungalow No. 2, Roos Keppel Lane, Peshawar Cantonment, will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact :

(a) that the date of the service of notice of appropriation was as far back as the 9th November, 1926, and

(b) that the payment of arrears of rent was considerably delayed by Government ?

If so, why ?

(2) Do Government intend to issue instructions to the authorities concerned to pay the rents more promptly in such cases ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : 1. (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) I have no information whether there was any delay on the part of the local authorities. I am making inquiries and will inform the Honourable Member of the result.

2. Government cannot undertake to issue instructions until they know whether there is any need to do so.

PROPORTION OF MUHAMMADANS RECRUITED BY THE RAILWAY ADMINISTRATIONS IN SIND AND IN THE PUNJAB.

527. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Is it a fact that the Bombay Government fixed a proportion in Government service for the Muslims ?

(2) If the answer to part (1) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the Railway Administration of the North Western Railway in Sind admits Muslim candidates in the same proportion for training in the various branches of the service ? If not, why not ?

(3) Is it a fact that the Railway Administration in the Punjab are also not admitting Muslims for training in the various branches of the service in accordance with the proportion fixed by the Provincial Government for Muslims in Government Services ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Railway Administrations are expected to follow the policy laid down by the Government of India in this matter, and not the practice of the Local Governments in the provinces through which the railways may pass. The Agent, North Western Railway, has been instructed in regard to the policy of the Government of India to prevent a preponderance of any one community in railway services, and Government have no reason to believe that this policy is not being followed on the Railway. This policy does not require recruitment from provinces or particular communities in any fixed proportions.

PROPORTION OF MUSLIMS EMPLOYED BY THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

528. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) With reference to the reply given by Government to starred question No. 608 on the 19th February, 1929, will Government be pleased :

(a) to place on the table a copy of the standing orders issued by the former Post Master General, Punjab and North West Frontier Province giving his reasons for the recruitment of 80 per cent. Muslims in the Department and stopping further recruitment of 'non-Muslims in the North West Frontier Province till the percentage of the former reached a reasonable limit, and

(b) to state the ground on which the standing orders under reference have been cancelled ?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state why the claims of the 95 per cent. population in that province are being overlooked in the Postal Department, and what steps do Government propose to take to prevent the preponderance of non-Muslims in this Department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (1) (a) The orders referred to are no longer in force, and Government do not consider that any public interest would be served by laying a copy of them on the table.

(b) The orders were cancelled as they were not in conformity with the general policy of Government as regards recruitment.

(2) Government do not admit that the claims of Muslims in the North-West Frontier Province are being overlooked in the Postal Department. They have already issued such orders as they considered necessary to prevent the preponderance of any one class or community in Government service and are not at present prepared to take any further steps in the matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do Government propose to prohibit the admission of non-Muslims into public schools and colleges so that the supply of qualified non-Muslim candidates for services under Government may be cut off at the very root ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I shall require notice of that question. The answer will have to be given not by me but by my friend representing the Education Department.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : May I know how the principles laid down in the circular referred to, regarding the special representation of the minority communities in the services are enforced and how those principles are carried out in the provinces where the Muslims happen to be in the majority ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : In the case of the Central services the Muslim community is taken as constituting one of the minority communities throughout India.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Then does it mean that the Mussalmans in the North-West Frontier Province will be entitled to only one-third in Government services in their own Province ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am afraid my Honourable friend is under some misapprehension. The reservation of one-third for minority communities is intended to guard against the preponderance of any class or community in Government services. There is no bar to the Mussalmans in the North-West Frontier Province or in any other province securing a larger share of the appointments if they succeed in getting through the ordinary channel of recruitment of subordinates in the Postal Department.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : But if they are only one-third in the whole of India, then do I understand rightly that in respect of the services which are dealt with by the Central Government they will always be treated as a minority community, whether they are in the North-West Frontier Province, Baluchistan, or the Punjab and Bengal ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : For the purposes of preventing the preponderance of any class or community in Government services, they are treated under the existing orders as a minority community in the Central services in all parts of India.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Then do I understand that the principles of the Nehru Report are being followed in the matter of services from to-day ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I do not know, Sir. In fact the orders of the Government of India were issued long before the Nehru Report saw the light of day.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : May I know, Sir, if I am not right in understanding that the orders of the Government of India in this respect were simply to reserve for the minority communities one-third of the appointments which are directly dealt with by the Government of India at the centre and not in the outlying provinces where these services were to be dealt with like ordinary subjects in those provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Postal Department, Sir, is a Central service, and the orders of the Government of India refer to Central services. There is no question of non-transferred subjects in the matter.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is it not a fact that by the appointment of a separate Postmaster General, the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province are constituted into a separate circle or Province for the purposes of these services ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I think the Honourable the Home Member has already said that that fact constitutes no difference according to the orders of Government now in force, and I think he has also said that if any Member of the House has any representations to make to him in regard to the modification of those orders, he will be pleased to consider such suggestions carefully. That being so, I submit that these supplementary questions do not arise.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Do I understand that the clerical establishment and the peons and dak runners will have to be imported into the North-West Frontier Province in order to keep up the principle of one-third for the minority communities ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, perhaps I may be allowed to answer that question as it is one of general application. The question of the interpretation to be placed on the term "minority community" in its application to a province like the North-West Frontier Province is by no means an easy one and is at present under consideration.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE MILITARY ENGINEERING SERVICE OF KOHAT.

529. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that in the Military Engineering Service of Kohat, non-Muslims preponderate ?

(b) What steps do Government propose to take to prevent this preponderance ?

(c) Is it a fact that Government have issued orders that in the case of this service, the proportion fixed for the Muslims is not to be adhered to ? If so, what justification is there for this deviation from the ordinary rule ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) In February last, 41 Muslims and 49 non-Muslims were serving in the Military Engineering Services in the Kohat District from the rank of Sub-Divisional Officer downwards.

(b) In view of the figures I have just given, I do not think any action is called for.

(c) Government have certainly not issued any such orders. The second part of the question does not arise.

CONSTITUTION OF KANARESE-SPEAKING DISTRICTS INTO A SEPARATE PROVINCE.

530. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they are aware of the fact that the Legislative Councils of Madras and Coorg have recently passed Resolutions recommending the constitution into one separate Province and administrative unit of the Kanarese-speaking districts of the British Karnataka ?

(b) Have the Governments of Madras and Coorg forwarded copies of the Resolutions to the Government of India together with their remarks thereon ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table copies of the Resolutions and the remarks of the Provincial Governments, if any ?

(d) Is it a fact that in the last Sessions of the Bombay Legislative Council all the elected Members from the four Kanarese-speaking districts in the Bombay Presidency unanimously voted in favour of the unification of the British Karnataka under one administration ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state if they are prepared to institute an inquiry into the question either by appointing a small committee or otherwise at an early date ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) ~~Does not arise.~~ I shall be glad to place the proceedings in the Library when received.

(d) I have no official information.

(e) Government do not consider that such an inquiry would be advantageous.

LACK OF USUAL AMENITIES ON THE RAIPUR-DHAMTARI-RAJIM BRANCH OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

531. *Pandit Dwarka Prasad Misra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there are no arrangements for lighting the compartments in the Raipur-Dhamtari-Rajim Branches of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reason ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there are no latrines in the Raipur-Dhamtari-Rajim Branches of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reason ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that even in summer there are no arrangements for drinking-water on the stations of the Raipur-Dhamtari-Rajim Branches of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(f) If the answer to part (e) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reason ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there are no proper platforms on the Bhatgaon and Manakehowree Stations of the Raipur-Dhamtari-Rajim Branches of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(h) If the answer be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reason ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to state whether the trains on the Raipur-Dhamtari-Rajim Branches of the Bengal Nagpur Railway are run in time ? If not, why not ?

(j) Were the trains on this line run in time in the months of March and April 1929 ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer this and the next question together.

Inquiry has been made from the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway and the information will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

LACK OF DRINKING WATER FOR RAILWAY EMPLOYÉES AT RAIPUR STATION.

†532. *Pandit Dwarka Prasad Misra : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that there are no proper arrangements for the supply of drinking-water to the Railway employees at the Raipur Station on the Bengal Nagpur Railway ? If not, why not ?

ABOLITION OF SERVANTS' COMPARTMENTS ON RAILWAYS.

533. *Mr. T. A. Chalmers : Will Government please state whether the Railway Board have taken any decision on the question of abolition of servants' compartments in coaching stock ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The question is being considered at present.

TRAINING OF INDIANS ON BRITISH RAILWAYS.

534. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (1) Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the total number of Indian students for whom the High Commissioner for India obtained permission for practical training in the Traffic and other branches of British Railways during the period 1923 to 1926 ; and
- (b) their names with the period of training each underwent and with what railway or railways ?
- (2) How many of them are appointed on the Indian Railways in the (a) Superior Service, the (b) Local Service, and the (c) Subordinate Service ?
- (3) Is it a fact that no English Railway takes an Indian unless he is sent by the High Commissioner who determines the period of training ?
- (4) Is it a fact that some of the students distinguished themselves in their training as well as in the Transport Department of the London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London ?
- (5) What is the number of such candidates with their names ?
- (6) Do Government recognise such qualifications ?
- (7) Is it a fact that the High Commissioner did not allow many such students to undergo training for a period more than a year, though they wanted it for a further period, on the plea that there was a long waiting list of Indians who wanted to have training ?
- (8) Is it a fact that the British Railways take a very limited number of Indians and demand a heavy premium ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (1), (2) and (7). I am endeavouring to collect whatever information is readily available and shall communicate with the Honourable Member later ; but I am afraid it will be almost impossible to get information about subordinate services. Meanwhile my Honourable friend can obtain a certain amount of information on the subject from the various Reports of the Indian Students Department

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 531.

(now called Reports on the work of the Educational Department) issued by the High Commissioner for India, copies of which are in the Library.

(3) Government are not aware that this is the case. One the other hand, the High Commissioner has stated that he does not desire to be the sole channel for admitting Indian students to educational facilities in England.

(4) and (5). The Honourable Member is referred to the Reports I have mentioned already for the names of Indian students who have obtained distinctions in England.

(6) The qualifications recognised by Government are contained in the regulations for the recruitment in India for the Transportation (Traffic) and Commercial Departments of the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways, copies of which are in the Library.

(8) Government have no direct information on the subject, but obviously no railway can take an unlimited number of students, and I understand the taking of a premium in such cases is the ordinary practice in the United Kingdom and other countries. The Honourable Member will find in the Reports I have referred to that, in some cases the High Commissioner did succeed in obtaining training for some students without the payment of a premium.

EMPLOYMENT ON INDIAN RAILWAYS OF INDIANS TRAINED IN ENGLAND.

535. *Kumar Ganganand Sinha : (1) Did the Government of India consult the High Commissioner when the rules for the future recruitment to the Superior Railway Traffic and Commercial services were framed in 1926 ?

(2) When two years' practical training on a British Railway was made compulsory in order to appear at the competitive examination during 1926 and 1927, did Government inquire of the High Commissioner whether such candidates were forthcoming ?

(3) Is it a fact that on this score many such Indians were barred from even taking a chance at the examination ?

(4) Is it a fact that though some of such Indians were nominated by the Local Governments as qualified, they were not allowed by the Public Service Commissioners to compete on technical grounds ?

(5) Is it a fact that there are numerous officers on Indian Railways in the Superior or Local service with such training for a year or less who were appointed direct ? Will Government be pleased to state broadly the circumstances in which they were so appointed and whether such appointments are usually made now ?

(6) Is it a fact that officers are granted study leave out of India to have such training on British Railways or a course at the London School of Economics ?

(7) Are Government aware that many such qualified Indians coming back to India after training in England do not find any employment ? If so, how are Government going to solve the problem ?

(8) Has the High Commissioner been asked not to allow any more Indians to undergo such training, when the policy here has been changed ?

(9) Are Government prepared to direct the Public Service Commissioners to examine carefully at once each of the cases of those Indians who are unemployed or had to accept subordinate service on their return, and make provision for them suitably so that they may be taken in those superior services of the Department for which they have qualified themselves?

(10) Are Government prepared to ask the Company-managed railways to give preference to such deserving Indian candidates in their railways?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (1) No.

(2) The Honourable Member is mistaken in thinking that such training was compulsory in the case of candidates appearing for the competitive examination in 1926 and 1927. The ordinary rule was that all candidates should hold a degree of an Indian or British University which involved a study of mathematics and natural science subjects, or have passed the Associate Membership examination of certain engineering institutions. But as a special case, for the examinations held in 1926 and 1927, candidates who had obtained railway traffic training in the United Kingdom for not less than two years were declared eligible for admission to the competitive examination, although they did not possess any of the ordinary qualifications required under rule. This was done at the suggestion of the High Commissioner to meet the case of students who were then undergoing traffic training in England.

(3) I am not quite clear what the Honourable Member means exactly by this question. It is a fact that candidates who neither possessed the ordinary qualifications nor, in the alternative, obtained two years training were debarred from appearing at the examination.

(4) Government understand that there was one candidate nominated by a Local Government, but rejected by the Commission as not eligible under the rules since he had less than two years training and did not possess the educational qualifications necessary.

(5) As I have already explained, persons who had the necessary academic qualifications described in my reply to part (2) of this question, were eligible for selection even if they had no training. Government are not aware of any persons appointed to the superior or Local Service purely by reason of their having received training for the short period of a year or less, and apart from other qualifications, but are making inquiries on the point.

(6) The circumstances in conditions under which study leave is granted to Government servants will be found in Appendix No. 9 of the Compilation of the Fundamental Rules and Supplementary Rules issued by the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, a copy of which is in the Library.

(7) and (10). I presume that by the expression "such qualified Indians" the Honourable Member means persons who have had some kind of training in England. Government are aware that there is a number who are unemployed, but regret they are unable to offer employment to these men in preference to men with better educational qualifications or to ask Company-managed railways to do so. In this connection I would refer the Honourable Member to the memorandum on the subject placed by Mr. Parsons before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways in July 1928, which will be found on page 49 of Volume V, No. 2 of the proceedings of that Committee.

(8) Government do not consider it necessary or desirable to put any obstacle in the way of persons who desire to obtain such a course of training.

(9) A course of practical training cannot be, and has not, so far as I am aware, ever been, recognised as being of itself an adequate qualification for appointment to the Superior Revenue Establishment of State Railways.

REWARD GRANTED TO MR. RAHMAN, A RAILWAY GUARD, FOR SAVING THE LIFE OF A WOMAN ATTACKED BY A PANTHER.

536. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (1) Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article in the Civil and Military Gazette, dated the 15th January, 1928, regarding the incident of a railway guard saving the life of a woman attacked by a panther near Patiala?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state whether any award was granted to Mr. S. A. Rahman the hero of the tragedy?

(3) Is it a fact that he was awarded only Rs. 50 by the North Western Railway as an appreciation and Rs. 125 from His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala?

(4) Is it also a fact that His Highness had promised to consider the question of awarding a rifle to the hero?

(5) Will Government be pleased to state the grade in which Mr. Rahman is working at present?

(6) Are Government prepared to consider the question of granting some material benefit to Mr. Rahman to encourage their railway employees?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (1) Government have not seen the newspaper in question but are aware of the incident from other sources.

(2) Yes.

(3) and (4). The reply is in the affirmative so far as the Railway is concerned. As regards the award by His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala, Government regret that they have no official information on the subject.

(5) Mr. S. A. Rahman is a grade II guard.

(6) It is not proposed to grant any further material benefit to Mr. Rahman for his act.

● RULES FOR RECRUITMENT OF EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN APPRENTICES IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

†537. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state whether there is any system of recruiting Anglo-Indian and European apprentices in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur? If so, in what respects does it differ from the system of recruiting Indians?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 491.

(b) Will Government please place on the table a copy of the rules for the recruitment of Anglo-Indian and European apprentices in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur?

RECRUITMENT OF INDIAN TRAFFIC APPRENTICES ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

538 * Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the system of recruiting Indian Traffic Apprentices was first introduced on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway?

(b) How many of these were recruited?

(c) What were their qualifications?

(d) How many of them have completed their training, and what appointments are those who have completed their training, holding, and what is their pay?

(e) What is the maximum scale of pay up to which they can rise in the ordinary course?

(f) Is it a fact that these recruits are being, or already have been, trained in all branches of railway work? If so, do Government propose, in the interest of economy, to select some of them for training in England in preference to the recruits who are annually recruited by the Railway Board for the various Superior Services?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to this and to the following question together. I am making inquiries from the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and will communicate with the Honourable Member on receipt of the reply.

RECRUITMENT OF INDIAN TRAFFIC APPRENTICES ON THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

†539. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is there any system of recruiting Anglo-Indian and European Traffic Apprentices in vogue on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway? If so, in what respects does it differ from the system of recruiting Indians?

(b) If there is no difference, is it a fact that the appointments of Station Superintendents, Loco. Foremen, and other appointments of similar status have been filled by Anglo-Indians and Europeans? If so, how? How many such appointments have been filled by Anglo-Indians and Europeans since the inception of the system of recruiting Indian Traffic Apprentices?

FUNCTIONS AND COST OF THE CASH AND PAY SECTION OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

540. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state what was the arrangement for the disbursement of pay to the Railway Clearing Accounts Office staff in the year 1928?

(b) Is the same arrangement still continuing?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 538.

(c) If reply to part (b) is in the negative, what is the present arrangement?

(d) What were the circumstances which compelled the officials to change the previous arrangement?

(e) Was the previous arrangement found unsatisfactory in any way? If so, in what respects?

(f) What was the monthly cost which Government used to incur for the disbursement of the pay to the staff of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office prior to the creation of the Cash and Pay section?

(g) What is the monthly cost of the present arrangement?

(h) Are Government aware that by the discontinuance of the former arrangement a separate Cash and Pay section had to be created?

(i) Are Government also aware that under the new system one Cash and Pay Officer on Rs. 500 a month, one pay clerk on Rs. 100 a month and one chaukidar have been appointed and in addition to this, extra expenditure for the maintenance of this section is being incurred?

(j) Will Government please state whether the financial effects of the case were considered by the competent financial authority when it was decided to abolish the previous system and to introduce the present one, and was that officer fully satisfied that the scheme which he was sanctioning was economical?

(k) Will Government please state what are the functions of the newly created Cash and Pay section in the office of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The arrangement in force in 1928 was that the Chief Cashier and Treasurer of the North Western Railway arranged for the disbursement of pay of the Railway Clearing Accounts office staff.

(b) No.

(c) and (k). At present arrangements have been made in the office itself for disbursement of pay. There is a Pay and Accounts Officer with a small staff who, in addition to disbursing pay to the staff of the Clearing Accounts Office, the Statutory Audit Office and the Chief Publicity Officer, is responsible for the check and maintenance of all the cash accounts relating to the establishment and contingent charges of these offices and for the work of the general section of the Clearing Accounts Office.

(d) and (e). The previous arrangements were purely temporary and not altogether satisfactory. The Railway Clearing Accounts Office had nothing to do with the administration of the North Western Railway, and it was obviously undesirable for them to depend on the services of the Treasurer of that Administration.

(f) The Chief Cashier and Treasurer was paid Rs. 150 per month merely for the disbursement of pay, and I understand he had claimed that this was insufficient.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I request the Honourable Member to speak up because we cannot hear a single word in this part of the House.

Several Honourable Members : Speak up, please.

Mr. P. R. Rau : (g), (h) and (i). The present arrangement has involved the creation of the post of Cash and Pay Officer on Rs. 300—25—500 a month, a pay clerk on Rs. 100 per month and a peon.

(j) Yes. I should add that the proposals were approved by the Standing Finance Committee for Railways when they considered the general question of the separation of Accounts from Audit in September last.

DISTRIBUTION OF PAY OF THE STAFF OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

541. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Are Government aware that an office order has been issued by the Director, Railway Clearing Accounts Office, that sub-heads in charge of each sub-section should receive the total amount of pay for the staff working under them in the presence of their Superintendents for distribution ?

(b) Are Government aware that there is a general discontentment among the sub-heads who protested against this office order on the ground that it enjoined upon them to perform the duties of the pay clerks ? If so, do Government propose to consider the question of reverting to the previous system ? If not, what steps do Government propose to take in order to redress the grievances of the staff which is called upon to do the work for which some one else is being paid ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The facts are as stated by the Honourable Member I understand. The arrangement is similar to one in force in the Office of the Chief Accounts Officer, East Indian Railway for some years.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative and the second part, therefore, does not arise.

OFFICE HOURS OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

542. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) What are the working hours in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office ? Do they include recess period, and if so, what is the duration of the recess period ?

(b) Is it a fact that the working hours which include recess period of the clerical staff in all Government offices as well as those under the Railway Administration are as a rule six hours daily ? If so, why has an increase in the working hours of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office been made ?

(c) Is it also a fact that the staff of this office is invariably called upon to work up to 6 and 7 p.m. daily ? If so, do Government propose to consider the advisability of bringing down the working hours in that office to those of the other Government offices, and also see that not only an office order is issued to this effect but the grievances of the clerical staff are really redressed ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (c). I will refer the Honourable Member to the answer to his starred questions Nos. 668 and 669 on 19th February last.

(b) The working hours are not fixed. They vary from office to office according to local conditions.

CONFIRMATION OF THE TEMPORARY CLERICAL STAFF OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

543. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state whether the confirmation of the temporary clerical staff employed in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office is being delayed although the Secretary of State sanctioned its permanency in April, 1929 ? If so, why ?

(b) Do Government propose to ask the authorities concerned to expedite the matter ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Orders were issued recently confirming the temporary staff referred to.

RACIAL CLASSIFICATION OF CLERKS' QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

544. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the single clerks' barracks on the Cart Road at Simla are called "Indian clerks' barracks" and those at Summer Hill are called "European clerks' barracks" ?

(b) Is it a fact that the single men's barracks at New Delhi are classified as "Orthodox" and "Unorthodox" chummeries ? If so, why in the case of the Simla quarters has a racial colouring in classification been given ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is no bar for an Indian to get an unorthodox chummary room at New Delhi, but that at Simla the Summer Hill quarters are exclusively reserved for Europeans and Anglo-Indians ? If so, why ? Do Government propose to remove the racial discrimination in the classification of quarters at Simla as well ?

(d) Is it a fact that the present Indian clerks' barracks on the Cart Road are not properly looked after by Government and that they are in a miserable state of repair ? Is it also a fact that there is no satisfactory arrangement for kitchen, etc., therein ?

(e) Is it a fact that the roof of the railway goods shed facing the Indian clerks' barracks is utilised by the railway authorities for storing coal, potato, etc., causing thereby considerable inconvenience to the tenants of the Indian clerks' barracks ? If so, do Government propose to take necessary steps to remove this inconvenience ?

(f) Is it a fact that the tenants of the clerks' barracks are not allowed to keep their guests or even near relatives for more than fifteen days in their rooms ? If so, why ? Do Government propose to take necessary steps to remove this hardship ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Yes. I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by me on 5th September, 1929 to part (c) of his starred question No. 222.

(d) No. During the past few years large sums have been spent on special repairs and improvements to these buildings and they are now in as good a state of repair as can be reasonably expected.

There is not a separate kitchen for each room, but several kitchens separated from the main building are provided. Each of these is shared by two or more clerks. This arrangement has been in force since the buildings have been used for their present purpose, and has worked well.

(e) Yes ; but Government are not aware of any inconvenience caused to the tenants of the barracks by the storage of the articles referred to.

(f) Yes ; because the rooms in question are not considered big enough to be occupied permanently by more than one adult. This restriction has been made to avoid overcrowding, and is in the interests of the clerks themselves.

DUTY ON IMPORTED OIL AND TINPLATES.

545. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that the virtual owners of the Tinplate Company, Golmuri, Jamshedpur, are the Burma Oil Company ?

(b) Is it a fact that the imposition of the protective duty levied on imported tinplates was strongly opposed by the Welsh Plate and Sheet Manufacturers' Association ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Burma Oil Company is a foreign company ?

(d) Is it a fact that a duty of one anna only per gallon is levied on the products of the Burma Oil Company, while a duty of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  annas is levied on other imported oils ? If so, why should there be this disparity ?

(e) Do Government propose to abolish the duty on imported tinplates ; and lower the duty on imported oil to the level of one anna per gallon ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraph 222 of Volume I of the Tariff Board's Report regarding the continuance of the protection to the Steel Industry (Statutory Inquiry, 1926) a copy of which was supplied to him in January, 1927.

(b) Yes.

(c) The Company is registered in Great Britain.

(d) An excise duty of one anna a gallon is levied on kerosine produced in India and a customs duty of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  annas a gallon on imported kerosine, but the Company produces many other articles besides kerosine. This difference in the rates of duty has existed since 1922. The great majority of articles subject to customs duty pay no excise duty if produced in India, and there is nothing abnormal in the difference between the rates of excise and customs duty on kerosine.

(e) It would be contrary to the public interest for Government to make any statement as to its intentions regarding the imposition or removal of duties in reply to questions in this House. The Honourable Member may have an opportunity of raising the question of the duty on tinplate on the 24th of this month.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the difference in the duty imposed on imported oil and the oil produced by the Burma Oil Company has been in existence since 1922, and if that is the only justification for the disparity ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I said that the difference between the rate of customs duty and the rate of excise duty had continued since 1922.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether because it has been continued since 1922, therefore that is sufficient justification for the disparity to continue still further ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I did not use the statement I made as an argument in any way.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Then, why is there this disparity ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : It seemed to me that the information might fairly be placed at the disposal of the House.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether, in view of the fact that recent events have brought the name of the Burma Oil Company to the public notice a great deal and in an adverse light, he will be prepared now to reconsider the position in regard to the disparity in the duty imposed ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think the Honourable Member has not heard my answer to the last clause of the question, when I said that it would be contrary to the public interest for Government to make any statement as to its intentions regarding the imposition or removal of duties in reply to questions in this House.

Mr. President : Order, order : I understand Mr. Chatterjee was not present in the House when his questions were called. He now represents that his rail motor was 20 minutes late for no fault of his. I will, therefore, allow him to put his questions now.

PROHIBITION OF OPIUM SMOKING IN THE PROVINCES.

472. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many Provincial Governments have appointed special committees to inquire into the causes of excessive consumption of opium in areas under their jurisdiction and for the purpose of suggesting remedial measures ?

(b) How many of these committees have made their reports ?

(c) Is it intended to make these reports available to the public and, if so, when ?

(d) Have any of the Provincial Governments forwarded the reports of their committees to the Government of India and, if so, what action are Government taking to put an end to the excessive consumption of opium in the various "black spots" of the country ?

(e) Have the Government of India arrived at any clearly defined policy in regard to the internal consumption of opium in India, with a view to bringing it into line with the policy of all civilised Governments, namely, the prohibition of the sale of opium except on the production of a medical certificate ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (a) Six Local Governments. The Governments of Bengal, Bombay, Madras, Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces appointed special committees of inquiry, but the United Provinces Government arranged to conduct inquiries through their existing Excise-Licensing Boards.

(b) All excepting the Bombay Committee.

(c) It is for the Local Governments concerned to decide whether the Reports should be published or not. The Bengal Government have already published the Report of their Committee, and I understand that the Government of Bihar and Orissa intend to do likewise.

(d) Yes, copies of all the Reports have been received by the Government of India. Excise being a Provincial Transferred Subject, action on the Reports will be taken by the Local Governments. The Government of India however propose to convene a conference for the purpose of collating and comparing the results obtained, before the Local Governments pass orders on the Reports.

(e) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the Government's Resolution No. 4, dated the 17th June, 1926, published in Part I of the Gazette of India of the 19th June, 1926, which contains a complete statement of their internal policy in regard to opium. A copy will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : May I ask the Honourable Member as to when it is intended to convene that Conference and whether any information is available as to the composition of its delegates ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : Since the Honourable Member put his question, I have been devoting my attention to this matter. The delay in calling the Conference is due to the delay in the receipt of the Report from the Bombay Government. In view of the fact that the proposal to collect reports was made some time ago, I think that it is high time that the Conference was called, and I propose to take steps to expedite the calling of it so far as I can. I am not in a position, however, at the moment to state any definite date or to give the Honourable Member any information as to who will attend the Conference, but I should be pleased to furnish him with information as soon as I am in a position to do so.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that some of the Provincial Governments depend entirely for their existence on the revenue derived from the sale of opium, especially the province of Bihar and Orissa ? And in view of the fact that Government are going to call a conference, will Government consider the alternative proposition whether they can supplement the income of the Provincial Governments so that they can reduce the consumption of opium in those territories ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I think the Honourable Member's statement to the effect that Provincial Governments depend for their existence on revenue from opium is perhaps an exaggeration.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Quite so.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : The question of the relations between the Central Government and the Provincial Governments in the matter of finances and of supplementing the revenues of the Provincial Governments, which now suffer from lack of revenues, is of course, a question which will have to receive very serious consideration in the near future. I am afraid, I cannot give the Honourable Member any more definite statement at the moment on that matter.

PAY OF POSTMEN IN DELHI.

473. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Have Government received representations from the Delhi Provincial Postmen and Lower Grade Staff Union requesting that, owing to the high cost of living in the capital city, they should be given the same rate of pay as that sanctioned for postmen in Bombay and Rangoon ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what action they propose to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Government understand that the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, has received a copy of the proceedings of a meeting held by the Union in question containing, among others, the request mentioned by the Honourable Member. But as the Union has neither applied for, nor been accorded, official recognition, no action is being taken on its representation.

INCREASE OF HOUSE-RENT ALLOWANCE FOR POSTMEN IN DELHI.

474. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that postmen in Delhi are paid an allowance of Rs. 5 per mensem and the lower grade staff an allowance of Rs. 2 per mensem for house-rent ?

(b) Are Government aware, that, owing to the difficulties of housing accommodation in Delhi, it is impossible to get any houses at these rates, especially in the winter months, when landlords demand very much higher rates ?

(c) In view of the representations made on this subject by the Delhi Provincial Union of Postmen, do Government propose to increase the house-rent allowance ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, except boy messengers who do not get any house-rent allowance.

(b) The allowance paid by Government is not intended to cover in full the actual expenditure incurred.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply just given to his starred question No. 473.

HARDSHIPS re CASUAL LEAVE OF POSTMEN ATTACHED TO THE DELHI POST OFFICE.

475. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that the staff of reserve postmen attached to the Delhi Post Office has been recently withdrawn or reduced ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state, what arrangements are made for the grant of casual leave to postmen ?

(c) Have Government received representations from the Delhi Provincial Union of Postmen and Lower Grade Staff pointing out the hardships suffered by them in the matter of obtaining casual leave ? If so, will Government be pleased to state, what action they propose to take on these representations ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Government understand that the staff of reserve postmen attached to the Delhi Post Office has recently been withdrawn and that there has, in consequence, been difficulty in granting casual leave to postmen. This withdrawal seems to have been due to a misunderstanding of the orders of Government revising the pay of reserve and probationary postmen ; but further inquiries are being made in the matter, the result of which will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply just given to his starred question No. 473.

GRANT TO POSTMEN IN DELHI OF AN EXTRA DUTY ALLOWANCE FOR DELIVERY OF FOREIGN MAILS.

476. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) Is it a fact that postmen in Bombay and Calcutta are given an extra duty allowance for the delivery of foreign mails ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state why a similar allowance is not given to postmen in Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. The allowance is paid as overtime pay.

(b) Government understand that the grant of similar allowances at other places, including Delhi, is under the consideration of the Director General.

GRANT OF GRAIN COMPENSATION ALLOWANCE TO POSTMEN.

477. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Is it a fact that grain compensation allowance, granted to other civil employees, is not given to postmen ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why postmen are refused this concession ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is presumed that the Honourable Member is referring to the case of postmen in Delhi. The condition governing the grant of grain compensation allowances to employees of the Postal Department is that they must be in at least as difficult a position, economically, as the employees of the Local Government for whom such grain compensation allowance has been sanctioned. It is understood the Director General has held that the postmen at Delhi do not satisfy this condition and they are not accordingly eligible for the concession.

EJECTION OF INDIAN CLERKS LIVING IN GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN KAITHU,

478. *The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : (a) With reference to starred question No. 1214, put by Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha on the 22nd March, 1929, and the reply given to my supplementary question by the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra stating that, so far as he was aware there was no reservation of quarters for Anglo-Indian and European staff in Simla, will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that some Indian clerks residing in Government Quarters at Kaithu, Simla, have been ordered to vacate their quarters as these quarters are meant for Europeans ?

(b) Is it a fact that in some cases these Indian clerks have occupied these quarters for several years past ?

(c) Is it a fact that some of them have begged to be allowed to retain these quarters till the end of the present Simla season, but have been refused this concession ?

(d) If the answer to parts (b) and (c) are in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what are the reasons for this ejection of Indian clerks who have been living in the Kaithu quarters ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government are only aware of one case of the nature indicated, that is a case in which an Indian clerk who has occupied quarters in Kaithu for the past few years applied to be re-allotted his quarters next year. The application was not accepted by the Superintending Engineer, as it had come to his notice in the meantime, that this clerk, although making a statement each year to the effect that he was a European, was actually an Indian. The quarters in question are meant for Europeans, vide reply given by me on 5th September, 1929, to part (c) of question No. 222 and to part (a) of question No. 223.

(b) No case other than that of the clerk mentioned above is known.

(c) Government are not aware of any such case. The clerk referred to above, has been permitted to retain his quarters until the end of this season. He was not asked to vacate them, hence no question of his having to beg to be allowed to remain in them till the end of the present season ever arose.

(d) Does not arise.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : May I ask if the Honourable Member now withdraws the answer which he gave to my last supplementary question ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The answer which I gave to his supplementary question referred mainly to quarters at Delhi, as I think I brought out clearly in those answers to supplementary questions. My recollection is that, at the end of my answers to the supplementary questions then asked by the Honourable Member, I requested him to put down his questions relating to Simla separately.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CADRE IN OFFICES OF POSTMASTERS GENERAL AND IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

168 Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Is it a fact that before the Report of the Postal Inquiry Committee was out, offices of some Postmasters General were split up into separate cadres A and B on account of the secretariat nature of their work, along with the Director General's Office, where the scale of pay was from Rs. 50--100, which has since been revised to Rs. 80--250 and Rs. 100--300 ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) is in the affirmative, in what offices were these cadres formed ?

LIICPB(LA)

(c) Why has the status of these offices been levelled down as a result of the inquiry referred to above? Is it a fact that the circle offices were altogether outside the scope of inquiry of the Committee?

(d) When do Government propose to right the wrong done to these offices?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The facts as stated by the Honourable Member are not quite correct. It is a fact that, prior to the publication of the Report of the Postal Committee of 1920, two separate cadres A and B were introduced in the offices of some of the Postmasters General, but it is not correct to say that these cadres were created along with similar cadres in the Director General's Office. The Office of the Director General had these cadres since long before. The scale of pay in the Director General's Office was not raised from Rs. 50—100 to Rs. 80—250 and again to Rs. 100—300. From the 1st March, 1921, the grades of Rs. 50—100, Rs. 100—150 and Rs. 150—200 were amalgamated into one grade on Rs. 80—250. From the 1st August, 1927, this grade has been raised to Rs. 100—300.

(b) Before the issue of the Report of the Postal Committee, A and B cadres had been formed in the Offices of the Postmasters General of Bombay, Bengal and Assam, Bihar and Orissa, Burma, Central Circle and Madras.

(c) There has been no change in the status of these offices nor is it a fact that circle offices were outside the scope of the inquiry of the Committee.

(d) Does not arise.

RECRUITMENT OF SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES.

169. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of candidates allowed to appear at the examination for the appointments of Superintendents of Post Offices, each year during the last five years?

(b) How many of them were selected from the Director General's Office, the Circle Offices and the Post Office proper, each year during the last five years?

(c) How many of them were direct recruits each year during the same period?

(d) Is it a fact that departmental men have not for some years been allowed to appear at the examination, as there are many passed candidates?

(e) If the reply to part (d) is in the affirmative, will Government please state the necessity for continuing direct recruitment of Superintendents?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 26 in 1924, 24 in 1925, 14 in 1926 and 9 in 1927. No examination was held in 1928.

| (b)                              | 1924 | 1925 | 1926 | 1927 |
|----------------------------------|------|------|------|------|
| Director General's Office ..     | 1    | 6    | 2    | 1    |
| Circle Offices ..                | 3    | 1    | 2    | 1    |
| Other branches of Post Office .. | 17   | 10   | 3    | 2    |

(c) 5 in 1924, 7 each in 1925 and 1926 and 5 in 1927.

(d) No.

(e) Does not arise. In any case Government cannot discontinue the present arrangement about direct recruitment of probationary Superintendents as they consider that to maintain the efficiency of the Department it is necessary to take in a certain number of direct recruits.

TRANSFER OF POSTAL OFFICIALS IN THE BOMBAY CIRCLE.

170. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Is it a fact that the Postal Stock Depot, the Postal Press and Departmental Buildings in the Bombay Circle have been in charge of a Manager and an Assistant Postmaster General belonging to the same community for the last several years? If so, do Government propose to consider the advisability of transferring them?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes, but Government have no grounds for thinking that the fact that the officers belonged to the same community has been prejudicial to the interests or efficiency of service, and see no reason to consider their transfer on such grounds. The Assistant Postmaster General in question has, however, recently been transferred in the ordinary course.

EXTENSION OF SERVICE OF POSTAL OFFICIALS BEYOND 55 YEARS OF AGE.

171. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Has the attention of Government been drawn to an article headed "A question of principle" against the grant of extension to men over 55 years of age at page 3 of the General Letter, dated the 25th July, 1929, of the Bombay Presidency Postal and R. M. S. Association? If so, what action do Government propose to take in the matter?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government have seen the article in question. In their opinion there is no adequate reason for altering a service rule of long standing and general application which was introduced after due consideration of all relevant factors.

GRANT OF HOUSE RENT TO SUBORDINATE POSTAL OFFICIALS IN BOMBAY.

172. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) With reference to their reply to my question No. 544 of 15th February, 1929, will Government please state whether they have by now come to know of the expiry of the Rent Act in Bombay from January, 1929, and whether they have received any representations from the postal clerical class in Bombay asking for the grant of house-rent?

(b) If the reply to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government please state whether the question of the grant of house-rent to their subordinates in Bombay has been considered by them and if so, with what result?

(c) Will Government please state the principle on which the grant of house-rent to officers of the Posts and Telegraphs Department is regulated and that on which the same is denied to their subordinate clerks who have also to pay exorbitant rents in Bombay?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. With regard to the latter part, Government understand that the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, has received from the All-India (including Burma) Postal and Railway Mail Service Union a representation on behalf of the postal clerks in Bombay asking for the grant of house-rent allowance.

(b) A representation for granting house-rent to the clerical staff of the Customs, Income-tax and Salt Departments in Bombay was considered and rejected by the Central Board of Revenue. The proposal submitted by the All-India (including Burma) Postal and Railway Mail Service Union was also rejected by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs. The question in respect of the other establishments in Bombay was not raised.

(c) Gazetted officers of the Posts and Telegraphs Department are on all-India scales of pay, and in places where house-rents are exceptionally high are given house-rent allowances to assist them to meet such special local conditions. The clerical staff, on the other hand, draw local rates of pay and these rates have been fixed after full consideration of the cost of living, including the cost of house-rent, in the places to which they relate.

TRANSFER OF POSTAL OFFICIALS IN BOMBAY.

173. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Posts and Telegraphs Departmental orders, as also those issued from time to time by the Director General, require that in the interest of service Assistant Post Masters General, Superintendents of Post Offices, Assistant Postmasters, Head Clerks of the Postmaster General's offices and General Post Offices should be transferred from place to place after every three years?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the article in the Bombay Presidency Post and R. M. S. Union's General Letter dated 25th July, 1929, re transfers of Assistant Postmasters General? If so, will Government be pleased to state why, as stated therein, the decisions of the Conference were set aside and the Departmental orders were observed more in their breach than in their observance?

(c) Are the orders referred to above carried out in the case of Head Clerks and clerks in the Postmaster General's office and the General Post Office in Bombay and in the case of Superintendents of the Bombay Circle?

(d) If the reply to part (c) is in the affirmative, from what date, and if it is in the negative, what forbids their transfers?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The orders relating to the periodical transfer of certain classes of officials do not apply to Assistant Postmasters or Head Clerks in General Post Offices, nor is the tenure of office the same for all classes to whom the orders apply. The tenure of office in the case of Assistant Postmasters General and Investigating Inspectors is 5 years, and 3 years in the case of the other officials to whom the orders apply.

(b) Yes. The orders were duly given effect to, except in the case of two of the Assistant Postmasters General of the Bombay Circle for the reason stated in my reply to part (b) of the Honourable Maulvi Muhammad Yakub's starred question No. 1369, dated the 2nd April, 1929. These two officers have, however, since been transferred.

(c) and (d). The orders referred to do not apply to the clerks in a Circle office or the Head Clerks and clerks other than the appointment clerk in a General Post Office. So far as the Superintendents of the Bombay Circle are concerned, the orders have been carried out on different dates after the completion of the period prescribed for their tenure of charge of a Division. The Head Clerks in the Postmaster General's Office, Bombay, to whom the orders also apply have not yet been transferred on administrative grounds. The appointment clerk of the Bombay General Post Office is not yet due to be transferred.

TRANSFER OF POSTAL OFFICIALS.

174. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Is it a fact that transfers of Postal officials were restricted on account of financial stringency during the last few years? If so, will Government please state whether this was observed in the case of the Postal Superintendents of the Bombay Circle, viz., Messrs. Jussawala, Lalkaka and Khan?

(b) How long was each of these officers in charge of one division only during the last ten years and what amount of travelling allowance was drawn by each of them on each transfer? If their transfers were frequent, will Government be pleased to state why they were so made in the face of Director General's orders restricting the same on account of financial stringency?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not therefore arise.

(b) Government understand that the transfers of these officers in the past ten years have not been frequent, and have in all cases been ordered by the responsible authorities in the interests of the public service. They do not possess all the detailed information asked for by the Honourable Member, and in view of what is stated in the preceding sentence they do not propose to collect the information.

METHOD OF FILLING POSTS IN THE PRINTING AND STATIONERY DEPARTMENT, CALCUTTA.

175. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that a large number of posts which fell vacant or were created in the Printing and Stationery Department in Calcutta during 1928 and 1929 were filled up by promotions, (i) in some cases on grounds of seniority in preference to merit and educational qualification, (ii) in some cases on grounds of educational qualification in preference to merit and seniority, and (iii) in some cases on merit (having no previous appreciation recorded to that effect) in preference to seniority and educational qualification?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in cases of filling up permanent and officiating vacancies in that department the seniority in the Gradation List is not followed? If not, why not?

(c) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the circumstances under which (i) uniformity of principle was not adopted in all cases, and (ii) there was no change in the nature of duty imposed on the clerks in majority of cases after promotion ?

(d) Do Government propose to inquire into the matter and see that justice is done in all cases by observing uniformity of principles in filling up vacancies (permanent and officiating) by promotions in that department ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to his question No. 153 on the 2nd September, 1929.

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE CENTRAL STATIONERY OFFICE.

176. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to refer to unstarred questions Nos. 204 to 210 ; starred questions Nos. 353 to 356 ; unstarred question No. 329 ; and unstarred questions Nos. 560, 562 (c), 563, 564, 567 and 568 in the Legislative Assembly Debates, Vol. III (1928) and say whether any inquiry has since been made and whether replies to those questions were furnished to Mr. S. C. Mitra ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to place the connected papers on the table ?

(c) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state when it is expected that the inquiries will be finished and replies to the questions mentioned in part (a) above furnished ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The replies to the questions referred to by the Honourable Member were duly furnished to him, and copies were placed in the Library of the Legislature.

(c) Does not arise.

SYSTEM OF RECRUITMENT TO TELEGRAPH ENGINEERING BRANCHES.

177. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Was sanction accorded by the Government of India (Department of Industries and Labour) in their letter No. 103, P. T., dated 18th April 1927, to the introduction of the new system of recruitment and training for appointment to the Telegraph Engineering Branches ?

(b) In this connection did Government approve of the holding of an examination for the Engineering Supervisors already in the Department ? Are Government aware that the examination was not held by a Board but by a single examiner in September 1927 ? Were any rules framed to prevent candidates from enlisting support from persons of influence ?

(c) Are Government aware that on the ground that this would be the last examination held for the Engineering Supervisors for training for subsequent appointments to the grade of Deputy Assistant Engineers, the Indian Telegraph Association requested the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs to have the papers revalued ?

(d) Were the papers re-valued by the Director General ?

(e) If the reply to part (d) is in the negative, what were the reasons for not complying with the request from such a representative Association ?

(f) How many Indians and Anglo-Indians passed out in the final Deputy Assistant Engineers examination of 1928 ? Is it a fact that there was a preponderance of one community over the other in the results of the examination ? If so, what is the reason ?

(g) Is it a fact that six temporary Anglo-Indians who had not passed any departmental examinations prior to their appearing for the competitive examination in 1927 were admitted to the training for appointment as Deputy Assistant Engineers, while Indians are debarred from appearing in the examinations on the ground that they are temporary ?

(h) Do Government propose to admit five Indians to complete the nineteen vacancies set apart for the Engineering Supervisors recruited according to the old system ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) If, as is presumed, the Honourable Member is referring to letter No. 107-P.T.E. (not No. 103), dated 18th April, 1927, introducing revised rules for the recruitment and training of Engineering Supervisors, the reply is in the affirmative.

(b) Replies to the first and the second parts of the question are in the affirmative. The reply to the third part is in the negative. No such rules were considered necessary.

(c) Yes.

(d) No.

(e) The Director General was unable to accede to the proposal in the absence of any cogent reasons.

(f) 14 Anglo-Indians were successful in the final examination in 1928. The only Indian* who passed the preliminary examination held in September, 1927, failed to qualify in the examination held at the end of a six months' training course in the Office of the Electrical Engineer-in-Chief, and was therefore not permitted to appear in the final examination. The answer to the second part is in the affirmative. The only reason which Government can think of is the obvious one that the Anglo-Indians were more proficient than the Indians in the subjects in which they were examined.

(g) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, both Indians and Anglo-Indians holding temporary posts were equally eligible to appear in the examination subject to their fulfilling certain general conditions.

(h) No. All future recruitment will be carried out according to the new system referred to in my reply to part (a) of this question.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Mr. President : I have to inform the Assembly that up to 12 noon on Saturday, the 14th September, 1929, the time fixed for receiving nominations only one nomination, namely, that of Mr. E. F. Sykes has been received for election to the Standing Finance Committee. As only one candidate is required for the Committee, I announce that Mr. E. F. Sykes has been declared to be duly elected to the Standing Finance Committee.

* Mr. Malik.

PETITIONS RELATING TO THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I have to report that two petitions as per statement laid on the table have been received relating to the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 1st February, 1927, by Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (PROVIDENT FUNDS RELIEF) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Indian Income-tax (Provident Funds Relief) Act.

THE CODE OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (AMENDMENT) BILL-- contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir James Crerar on the 12th September, 1929 :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose (Insertion of new section 540-B) be taken into consideration ”.

Sir James Crerar.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : Sir,....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable Member, Sir James Crerar, replying to the debate, because there are certain Honourable Members of this House who are anxious to speak on this motion before he replies ?

Mr. President : I have called upon the Honourable Sir James Crerar to make a statement.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I should like to know under what particular rule or Standing Order is it permissible for the Honourable Member to make a statement at a stage when a particular motion is under the consideration of the House ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I am speaking on the amendment for circulation of the Bill. In that connection I should like to make a statement regarding the position of the Government.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Even if the Honourable Member is not allowed to do so under the Standing Orders and Rules ?

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : He can speak on the amendment and then speak again on his original motion. There is an amendment before the House now.

Mr. President : Under what rule ?

Mr. M. Keane : On every amendment, every Member is allowed to speak.

Mr. President : Under what rule ?

Mr. M. Keane : Under the ordinary rules and Standing Orders.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : The Honourable the Home Member is entitled to speak on the motion that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public and legal opinion.

Mr. President : Under what rule ? The Honourable the Home Member has made a motion that the Bill be taken into consideration. He has got a right of reply. But he cannot speak more than twice. In any case, he is not entitled to make a statement as he wishes to do under any rule or Standing Orders.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Since then an amendment has been moved, and surely the Honourable the Home Member can speak on that amendment ?

Mr. President : I should like to know under what rule or Standing Order.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I understood the Honourable the Home Member was not speaking on any particular motion or amendment that is on the agenda, but that the Honourable Member was seeking to make a statement, which is quite different.

Mr. President : I have been told that if I allow the Honourable Leader of the House to make a statement at this stage it would facilitate public business, curtail the debate and save public time. I have always exercised the power vested in me in such cases, and I propose to exercise that power in this case, and will exercise that power so long as I am in this Chair.

Mr. M. Keane : Sir, if I may be permitted to answer your question, I should like to point out that the power of the Chair is contained in Standing Order 32 which says that, after the Member who moves the motion has spoken (in this case Mr. Kelkar), other Members may speak on that motion in such order as the President may call upon them.

Mr. President : That does not give the Honourable Member who has moved the original motion the right to speak at this stage. He can only speak on his motion when he moves it and then ultimately speak by way of reply that is how we have always interpreted our Standing Orders of reply that is how we have always interpreted our Standing Orders. I understand. But when the Chair is convinced that, by adopting this course, he would help the House in facilitating public business, saving the public time and in curtailing the debate, the Chair has got the power to call upon any Member to speak at any time.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : May I know if it is allowed under the inherent powers of the Chair ?

Mr. President : Under the unwritten law of this House. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : On a point of order, Sir, the House is in possession of a certain motion....

Mr. President : Order, order. I have already given my ruling.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Mr. President, I am grateful to you for giving me this opportunity of explaining to the House the conclusions to which Government, after very careful and anxious consideration of the views and arguments which have been advanced in the course of the debate, have arrived. I desire, in the first place, to acknowledge the moderation and the temperance of the language which has been used by the principal speakers in the course of this debate and their obvious unwillingness to use a recent unfortunate occurrence in order to cloud the real issues before the House by any considerations of passion or prejudice. I desire also to acknowledge, in the amplest terms, the sympathy and support of those who have appreciated the responsibilities of Government and the considerations which moved them to bring this measure before this House, and who have been willing to give all the assistance which is in their power. A grave and weighty appeal has been made to Government and, in what I have to say, I hope I shall be able to make it clear that it is the earnest desire of Government to respond to that appeal to the utmost extent in their power. To arguments urged with temperance and moderation we cannot, and indeed we have no disposition, to close our minds or our ears, or to fail to appreciate the sincerity and depth of feeling which have inspired them.

I think, Sir, that, reviewing the whole course of the debate up to this point, and eliminating some incidental points of controversy which have arisen, I may say that there have been two main streams of argument advanced which may be grouped under the head of two main contentions. The first of these contentions is that, though there may be some justification for the Bill, nevertheless it touches on some very fundamental issues. Some Honourable Members have expressed the doubt whether a sufficient concrete proof of its necessity and urgency has yet been adduced, and the view has been expressed in many quarters that this measure ought not to be placed permanently upon the Statute-book without a fuller measure of deliberation and consultation with public opinion. The second contention, or the second class of contentions, I would endeavour to summarise and comprehend as follows : that while the House would not extend its sympathy and approval to acts which are directed only to impede or defeat or delay the ends of justice, many Honourable Members take a different view of and place a different interpretation upon what has occurred. They regard it as a protest against what has been represented as harshness, inequality and injustice in the treatment of under-trial and of convicted prisoners. They contend that, if the grievances alleged were removed, it is at least possible that the necessity for this legislation might also be removed ; and I think that some Honourable Members went further and were prepared to say that, if this did not prove to be the case, after prompt and serious efforts were made to deal with the problem from that point of view, if they were convinced of that, they would then be prepared materially to modify their attitude towards this Bill.

Now, Sir, I propose to deal briefly in the first place with the second of these contentions, and I would remind the House once more that the administration of jails is a provincial subject, subject no doubt to the superintendence, direction and control of the Governor General in Council. Nevertheless, the direct and primary responsibility for the administration of this subject lies quite definitely upon the Local Governments, and it is they who have to bear the whole financial burden of that administration. Therefore, whatever steps we take in this matter, I submit to the House that we must be scrupulously careful not to invade to any undue extent a sphere of administration which has been definitely made over to the Local Governments. I do not think any Member of the House would be prepared to endorse the proposition that it would be wise to prejudice or in any way restrict the measure of decentralised administration which has already been conferred upon the provinces and provincial Governments for the management of their own affairs. Well, Sir, I will advert very briefly to the fact that we have addressed the Local Governments in this matter in terms of which the House is aware, and several provinces have already appointed Committees in pursuance of the letter we addressed to them. It is our intention to summon a conference of provincial representatives as soon as that can possibly be arranged, but the Honourable Member from Bombay, Mr. Jayakar, in his powerful and incisive speech raised very definitely a particular issue. He alluded to what he described as racial discriminations in the Jail Rules, and I could not but appreciate the fact that that particular aspect of the question was one which made a very deep impression upon the House. I should like to say at this stage that the real basis which underlies the rules to which the Honourable Member referred was really something different in intention from racial discrimination. The principle is really one of equalisation of penalty, having regard to the fact that the previous standard of living of a person in prison will either mitigate or render more severe the character of his punishment accordingly as his standard of living is greatly above or below the normal average standard in the jail. The principle therefore is not one really of racial discrimination ; it is one of equalisation of penalty ; and as I have already pointed out to the House, these rules are applicable in most provinces to Indians who come within that category. However, I do not want....

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : On a point of order, Sir, I think you permitted the Honourable the Home Member to make a statement ; but he is really taking advantage of that opportunity to reply to the whole debate. I submit that it is not right for him to do so, mainly because he is now summing up the debate in a manner which I do not accept to be correct.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Well, Sir, I have no intention of pursuing further any matter of argument ; I shall restrict myself to stating, as briefly as I can, the conclusions at which the Government have arrived, and the attitude which they now take on the general question before the House. We know that there is a strong feeling in the House that, whatever action is to be taken should be taken with promptitude, and I have every desire to do the utmost I can to comply with it. I would therefore say that it is our intention, having regard to the questions which have been raised with regard to alleged racial discrimination and which, as Mr. Jayakar observed, were not specifically and in so many terms contained in our letter to the Local Governments,—we will now put them specifically to the Local Governments and the views which have been expressed in this House on that point will be communicated to them. I trust that it will be possible to call a conference of Local Governments at an early date, but I appreciate that the House would like something done at an earlier date than that, and I am therefore prepared to go further.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : On a point of information, Sir, may I know from the Honourable the Home Member whether, in communicating to the Provincial Governments the views of this House, the Government of India will also communicate what their views on the matter are ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : That, I think, would be anticipating considerations which must come up later ; and perhaps if the Honourable Member will wait till I proceed further on this point, I can explain the matter more fully. I would remind the House that, in addressing Local Governments, we particularly requested them to ascertain non-official opinion in the matter ; and we hoped that leaders of non-official opinion would give the Local Governments the benefit of their views. We propose to take the same course ourselves and I should be glad to invite—and I hope the invitation will be accepted—leaders of various parties in this House to confer with me and communicate to me any concrete suggestions they have to make in this matter ; and these I will undertake to communicate with the least possible delay to Local Governments. At a later stage, when the views of the Local Governments have been received—and they will be expedited as much as possible—I propose, if my invitation is accepted, to seek further consultation on the lines I have suggested.

Now, Sir, I propose to resume the question of legislation very briefly. I have only this to say—I will not enter into matters of argument—nor do I propose to reply to the arguments which have been used on the legal aspect of the question,—I must only say this : that Government, after having listened very carefully to the debate, feel bound to maintain their opinion that there is a deficiency in the law and that that deficiency ought to be remedied. (Mr. E. L. Price : “Hear, hear.”) We still retain the view that the provisions of the Bill do not conflict with any principles of justice and fair-play (Hear, hear). The accused will always have the option of exercising their rights. Nevertheless I do not deny, and I have never denied, that there was an important principle involved. The view has been expressed that a very grave measure of emergency ought to be established before this Bill should be permanently enacted. There is some room to hope, Sir, that the degree of urgency which was at first apprehended is not so grave as it then was. Nevertheless I cannot conceal my own view that it is not by any means eliminated. In deference, however, to the views which have been so forcibly expressed in this House regarding the necessity for more deliberation and more consultation, Government are prepared to agree, if that is the wish of the House, to the circulation of the Bill, so that the matter may, if necessary, be considered next Session. But I do not wish to leave the House under any misapprehension or to give cause hereafter for a charge that I have not been completely candid with them. I must make an express reservation. Government remain unaltered in their determination to oppose indefinite impediments to the course of justice (Mr. E. L. Price : “Hear, hear.”) It is their duty to maintain peace and security, to protect the public in all its lawful avocations and also to protect its own officers in the discharge of their duties. If, therefore, any contingency should arise in the interval before this House meets again which cannot brook delay, I must make it perfectly clear that there can be no limitation or qualification on the discretion of the authority in whom the necessary powers are vested ; and we must ourselves retain the liberty, if our advice is sought, to advise whatever action may be necessary to meet any situation that may arise. We sincerely trust that no such contingency and no such necessity will arise, and that all who are in a position to do so will use their influence, wherever and in whatever manner they can, to this end ; and in that connection I should like to refer to the wise words of counsel which fell on that point from Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas during the course of the debate on Saturday.

These, Sir, are the immediate reasons which have weighed with Government in agreeing to the circulation of this Bill.

But there are other reasons to which also due weight has to be attached. I should like to refer in particular to the words of studied moderation used by the Honourable and learned gentleman from Bombay, Mr. Jinnah, when he referred to the general political situation and the great tasks that confront us in the immediate future. That was a consideration, Sir, which you also laid before the House at the commencement of this Session. I hope the House will believe me when I say that we were not unmindful of those considerations when we decided to lay the Bill before the judgment of the House. Nor are we unmindful of them now. Those considerations are of the gravest and most weighty character. We realise that, if anything can be done to remove all feelings of mistrust and suspicion, if anything can be done to substitute for them the spirit of reason, moderation and common effort, it is incumbent upon us, as it is also incumbent upon this House and upon responsible political opinion throughout the country, to do their utmost to promote it.

In coming to a conclusion, therefore, that we would agree to the circulation of this Bill, I beg the House to remember that that grave and weighty consideration was present to our minds.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I move, Sir, that the question be now put.

Mr. President : I think that it is the general sense of the House that the question be now put.

The original motion was :

“That the Bill further to amend the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose (Insertion of new section 540-B) be taken into consideration”.

Since which an amendment has been moved :

“That the Bill be circulated for eliciting public and legal opinions thereon.”

The question is that that amendment be made.

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : No.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member desire a division ?

Mr. E. L. Price : No, Sir.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : I must congratulate the House on the result.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

(POINT OF ORDER re ADMISSIBILITY OF AMENDMENTS.)

Mr. President : With regard to the next motion which stands in the name of the Honourable the Law Member, I should like to say a few words about the difficulty I feel as regards the procedure to be followed and also as regards the admissibility of a large number of amendments which he has put down on paper.

As regards the procedure, the Honourable Member wants to move that the Bill as amended be passed. He also at the same time wants to move a large number of amendments to his own motion. I do not know whether it would not be a more correct procedure that he should ask some other Member of Government, or more properly, Mr. Mulla, who has studied the subject, to move those amendments instead of himself moving them. That is so far as the procedure is concerned.

With regard to the admissibility of those amendments, the Honourable Member knows the procedure of this House. At the Third Reading he can only move formal or consequential amendments to the amendments already passed. I am not sure on reading those amendments, that all of them are really formal or consequential amendments on the amendments which have already been carried. I would, therefore, like him to consider that aspect of the matter, and if there is no hurry, he might put down his motions tomorrow or the day after. I leave it entirely to him. He shall have to satisfy the Chair on every amendment that it is really a formal or consequential amendment which could not have been made at the consideration stage.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : I accept your suggestion that the matter may stand over till tomorrow.

Mr. President : Tomorrow is a non-official day.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Then the day after tomorrow. Meanwhile, I can satisfy you, Sir, that every one of these amendments is either formal or consequential or both formal and consequential. There is no amendment of substance which has been laid down, and all these formal and consequential amendments arise out of the amendments which the House has passed.

Mr. President : If they arise out of the amendments already passed, the Chair will take no objection, but I feel some difficulty. I would ask the Honourable Member to examine those amendments once again and satisfy himself.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I shall do that, and I hope to satisfy you that all the amendments are either formal or consequential. Anyhow, I accept your suggestion, and I shall move these motions day after tomorrow.

Mr. President : That applies to the second Bill also ?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Yes, Sir.

( 886 )

DEMAND FOR SUPPLEMENTARY GRANT IN RESPECT OF RAILWAYS.

Mr. P. R. Rau (Financial Commissioner, Railways) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That a sum not exceeding Rs. 28,70,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending 31st March 1930, in respect of Companies' and Indian States' share of surplus profits and net earnings.”

This, Sir, is in a sense a formal motion, and it is not necessary for me to make a speech. The amounts payable to Railway Companies and Indian States are regulated under the terms of the existing contracts and are determined according to the working results of the previous year. The detailed reasons for the necessity of the extra amount asked for are given in the paper already circulated to the House, and they were considered sufficient by the Standing Finance Committee for Railways when they considered this demand.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That a supplementary sum not exceeding Rs. 28,70,000 be granted to the Governor General in Council to defray the charges which will come in course of payment during the year ending 31st March, 1930, in respect of Companies' and Indian States' share of surplus profits and net earnings.”

The motion was adopted.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL—(contd.)

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus, as reported by the Select Committee, clause by clause.

The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the amendment that stands in my name, No. 22 :

“ In clause 2 (a) for the word ‘ fourteen ’ the word ‘ eleven ’ be substituted ”.

Sir, in this connection.....

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is a little late.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : All I want to know is whether the amendment of Mr. Yamin Khan which we were discussing the other day was passed or rejected by the House.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : In moving this amendment, I am particularly aware that we have discussed at length the principle underlying this amendment. Therefore, with your kind permission, I shall try to be as brief as possible in presenting my case on this occasion.

In the first place, I want to premise, by bringing to the notice of this Honourable House, that there is a distinction between Kanyadan and

( 887 )

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

Garbadan. Kanyadan is making the gift of a girl to a bridegroom in marriage; Garbadan is the consummation ceremony which usually takes place some time after the girl attains age, perhaps long after the Kanyadan ceremony. If that distinction is borne in mind, I consider that the House will take kindly to the amendment that I have moved. Sir, in moving this amendment I want to bring to the recollection of this Honourable House the idea of the Honourable Mover when he introduced this Bill in the first instance. He actually said that 11 would be the proper age to fix for a girl to be married because that he thought, and rightly thought, would really conciliate the orthodox view of this country. Next, I would refer the House to the Minute of our revered leader, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, attached to the Report of the Select Committee. He said this:

“I urged that the age should be fixed at 11 so that a law to restrain child marriages might be passed with the unanimous support of all sections of the community.”

Later on, he said:

“If even 12 is fixed as the age marriages below which shall be punishable, it is possible that a section of orthodox opinion will be reconciled to it. But in view of the fact that marriage is a religious sacrament among Hindus, and in view of the belief which has prevailed on the question of the age of marriage among them for a very long time, to make a marriage above the age of 12 and below the age of 14 punishable by law will be a violent interference with the Hindu religion which I consider it my duty strongly to oppose.”

In dealing with the question of fixing the marriage age at 11, we are concerned not so much about the actual age of the girl but about the principle whether post-puberty marriage is to be compelled by law, or pre-puberty marriage as sanctioned by the Shastras should continue to be allowed. If for a moment the Government or this Assembly would say that they can prescribe the age after which only girls ought to mature and if they can enforce it, I should have no objection to conform to any age which may be prescribed by this Legislature. But that would obviously be a foolish venture, because no Government, no legislature is competent and powerful enough to say definitely that no girl in this country shall become of age before 14. If that is found to be an impossible task to attempt against nature, which would depend upon the climatic conditions of the several portions of this vast country,—if that is found to be an impossible task, I submit to the House it must be equally futile to fix the age of a girl at which alone she ought to be married. The Report of the Select Committee on clause 2 says:

“We considered a suggestion that the minimum age to determine whether a female is a child for the purposes of sub-clause (a) should be reduced to 11 and another suggestion that it should be reduced to 12 years. The Committee, however, were emphatically of opinion that any such reduction would nullify the whole object of the Bill.”

I am really unable to understand the reasoning of the Select Committee when they made that statement. If it is conceded that they want to shut out, or to put down, or to penalise all pre-puberty marriages, I certainly can appreciate the significance of this statement. But without going to that length, without saying so definitely, simply to say that the reduction of the age to 11 or 12 would be to nullify the object of the Bill is a thing which really passes my comprehension.

Sir, I said at the outset that I am urging this amendment of mine upon the House only for this particular reason, that we who believe in Shastric injunctions—I am presenting the orthodox view to the House in a most humble manner—if we believe and if you concede that we are equally honest in speaking out our convictions to the House—if we believe that our Shastric injunction restrain post-puberty marriages for Dwijas and make it absolutely necessary to indulge in pre-puberty marriages, then the question for consideration will simply be this, what is the age, what is the safe limit of age within which marriages may properly be forbidden by this Legislature if it is inclined to. With a view to solving this difficulty I have been at some pains to analyse the Report of the Age of Consent Committee which I am told is a very precious document. I shall not dispute the truth or the accuracy of that statement, because it is possible that there are a few passages here and there in that Report in which unanimity of opinion there may not be; but all the same it contains very many statistics and figures upon which we can base our case or draw our own conclusions. And from the very close and careful analysis that I have been able to make from this standpoint, I find these things. There are 14 areas on which they have concentrated their attention, and so far as the age of puberty is concerned, in the Punjab they find the age to be from 12 to 16; in the North-West Frontier from 13 to 15; in Delhi from 12 to 13; in Ajmer-Merwara 13 or 14; Bombay from 12 to 15; in Deccan and Karnatak from 12 to 15; Gujrat 12 to 14; Sind 13 to 15; Madras 12 to 14; Assam 12 to 14; Bengal 11 to 13; Bihar and Orissa 12 to 14; the United Provinces 12 to 15; the Central Provinces and Berar 12 to 13. So that the House will readily find that the lowest age at which puberty takes place in girls is 11 in Bengal and the highest is in the Punjab where it extends to 15 or even 16. We are trying to legislate for the whole of India. We are not excluding any province from the category of the areas to which this Act may apply. If we are bent upon legislating for the whole of this vast country, if we place all these provinces on the same footing, and if for a moment you concede to me my honest conviction that it must be pre-puberty marriage—that we feel for so much—if you concede these two positions, it at once follows that if 11 is the lowest limit at which puberty occurs in Bengal, and if we legislate for the whole of India, I submit that 11 must be the minimum age at which marriage must take place if I take it the House really feels for our honest convictions. I quite feel the weight of feeling ranged on the opposite side. I quite realise and appreciate that a large section of this House really wants to fix the age of marriage of girls regard being had to the very many data that have been collected by the Age of Consent Committee. I quite appreciate the feeling with which some of my Honourable friends spoke on the last occasion when they dwelt on the atrocities which have been noted down in the Age of Consent Committee's Report. I quite appreciate that view point; but my present task will be to see these two view points reconciled, and reconciled in a way that will offer the least resistance to the conscience of the orthodox community, who are keen on having the marriages of their girls celebrated before the girls reach puberty.

If from an analysis of the Report, I am able to show conclusively to the House that the age at which puberty begins, at least in Bengal, is 11 and that it varies from 11 to 16 for the whole of India, then I submit that would be a paramount consideration in the fixing of the age at 11. (An Honourable Member: “What is the average?”) It varies from 11 to 16. The stand I am taking is simply this. If at least in one province for which you are making this law, the age of puberty is 11 and if you want to reconcile that actual fact with the attitude of the orthodox section in this country who want to have their marriages performed according to the Shastric injunctions before the girl attains puberty, it readily follows that 11 is the age which we must really fix. Then, Sir, I find that, in five at least out of the 14 provincial areas into which the Age of Consent Committee carried their investigations and deliberations, namely, the Punjab, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, wherefrom the Honourable the Mover hails, Bengal and the Central Provinces and Berar,—and I am very much pained to note it,—pre-puberty congress has occurred. Sir, this is a thing entirely foreign to the minds of people coming from my part of the country. We cannot even imagine of a single case of the kind occurring in Madras, as has been recorded by the Age of Consent Committee in the case of these five areas to which I have referred. If there are brutal husbands I am sorry for them. (An Honourable Member: “It is a question of degree only.”) The age of Consent Committee has not recorded a single instance from Madras. It is not a question of degree at all. My position is this. If unfortunately these things have come into prominence in some areas, I think, we, who may call ourselves saints in this matter, ought not to be classified with these brutal husbands that exist in some parts of the country and placed on the same category with them, simply because we happen to be under one Government and one uniform law is to govern us all. Is it our sin that we, saints in this matter, should be placed in the same category as these brutes that exist in some parts of upper India? If there are a few stray cases here and there where husbands have misbehaved and maltreated their wives, I humbly submit to the House there is absolutely no reason whatsoever to classify us along with them and legislate for us all together in the way that this Bill seeks to do.

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

In this connection I would also bring to the notice of the House what is recorded in pages 336 and 337 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report. There, the House will find a statement showing the age of menstruation of girls among the different communities in India. It says :

“ Among natives of warm climates menstruation occurs earlier than among natives of temperate climates.”

In the next paragraph you find :

“ In the class of pure native Hindus and Mohammedans but chiefly the former the greatest percentage of dates for first menstruation occurs between the 12th and 14th years, amounting to 65.7 of the whole class.”

I would invite the attention of the House again to page 337. The House will note that only two per cent. of the entire number of girls that first menstruate reach their age of puberty below 11. So that, if you fix the minimum age at 11, that covers, from the orthodox point of view, about 98 per cent. of the girls in this country who conform to the orthodox custom. Only two per cent. of the girls reach their age below 11. That would be a very small fraction and negligible in considering this broad aspect of the case. If you omit this insignificant fraction of two per cent., you will find that 98 per cent. of the girls reach their age from 11 upwards. That would be another consideration why 11 must be the minimum age.

Then, Sir, there is also an appendix appended to this Report, which is appendix XI. Here also we are given statistics about a Vaidic family. I may tell the House that a Vaidic family is a family which conforms to our ancient Hindu ideals and which lives an orthodox life. From an examination of this analysis given in Appendix XI, we find that, in the case of the Vaidic family which observes the Shastric injunctions, there is absolutely no evil of the kind that has been put down as the strongest ground for the enacting of this law. That is an incontrovertible position which emerges out of this analysis. That conclusively shows that in the Vaidic family which conforms to orthodox customs and to pre-puberty marriages, absolutely none of the evils complained of by the Age of Consent Committee exists.

When I made my general speech on the Bill, I brought to the attention of the House certain scientific things ascertained about this matter. I would not repeat all of them, but I would bring to the notice of the House that Western sociologists are also in favour of the age of 11 and early marriage. I will briefly refer to two or three authorities on this subject. Frederick Pincott says :

“ Everything tending to the peace and well being of society has been long since reduced by the Hindus to well ordered rules deduced from the unchanging facts of nature. Any introduction among them of our crude ideas can only result in mischief and tend to bring the Hindus to the same chaotic scramble of antagonistic interest which is the characteristic of our own disgraceful social muddle.”

He also says that all parties are united in the opinion that the Hindu married life is an exceptionally happy state, and this is the clearest proof of the excellence of the system, and the severest condemnation of those who are seeking to unsettle it.

The Rev. J. Tyssul Davis is also of the same opinion. He says that the Hindu ideal of marriage is “ a highly evolved one ”, and Mr. Otto Rothfield in his “ Women of India ” says the same thing :

“ In general it may be said that the Hindu rules of marriage are, in the ordinary sense of happiness, as conducive to the happiness of the spouses as the fast-transforming systems of modern Europe ; and their happiness is less self-centred and more altruistic.”

I submit, Sir, I am also supported by the view of Western sociologists, and I might also, in this connection, bring to the notice of the House the very Hindu law of marriage which is in force in this country. I have got an analysis made for me by a commentator and he describes the periods of marriage as four periods ; for the Brahmana he says the age does not extend to beyond eleven, for the Kshatriya not beyond the first menstruation period, for the Vaishya not beyond the first menstruation period, and for the Shudra there is no mention. For the first three castes the utmost limit to which marriage can be postponed is definitely eleven in the case of the Brahmana and in the case of the others till the occurrence of the first menstruation. So eleven is the safe limit to which we can carry our legislation. I submit that all these texts clearly lay down eleven as the proper age of marriage. Sir, I may also bring to the notice of this House a very able statement made by Rai Kalicharan Sen Bahadur from Gauhati. He is also in favour of eleven, and he gives excellent reasons, but I shall not repeat them. I will only read his statement regarding eleven, and even when he is inclined to fix eleven as the marriage age, he is for asking Government to make a promise for he says :

" If any age above eleven years be fixed for marriage, I hope the reformers will extract a promise from the Government that it shall establish poor houses, maternity homes and orphanages as occasion will arise."

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, on a point of order, is it permissible that the Leader of the House, whose vote would seem to determine this question, should be absent when such cogent arguments are being put forward for the amendment ?

An Honourable Member : He has made up his mind already.

Mr. President : The Leader of the Opposition is also under the same disability, is he not ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : He is free in this matter.

Mr. President : Mr. Sesha Ayyangar.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I would suggest that the Central Legislature should fix the age at eleven and give the local Legislatures power to increase it, so that each province may be able to adopt the age that is most suitable for it because a measure which may be all right in one province may act too oppressively in another. Then, Sir, he also says :

" We do not base our opinion on religious grounds. We are aware that some people who follow the Shastraic injunctions will be hit by the proposed legislation but we believe that if eleven is fixed as the minimum age, it will not be too oppressive."

Sir, in this connection I might warn the House against making an experiment in this matter. I need not particularly lay stress on the fact that religion is a sphere which one must hesitate to encroach upon and we must be very cautious in treading upon the sacred religious ground, and if at all we want to make an experiment by fixing the age for the marriage of girls, then that experiment should be made very cautiously. In this connection I would beg leave to read a statement made by a very great authority in my part of the country on these matters, and this is what he says :

" Whatever we may do in a spirit of light-hearted experimentation—I know that these are days of science and that hence the only rational and regnant method is that of observation and experiment, of rather experiment and observation, i.e., suicidal experiment and callous and amused observation by others—, we must not apply light-heartedly the method of experimentation in the realm of sacred things or in the realm of such social institutions as bear not only on the immediate present but have effects on the past generations and repercussions on the generations to be, and as relate not only to the welfare, supposed or real, of the persons whom we see about us, but relate also to the welfare of those very persons in their future existence."

Sir, these are pregnant words, and I ask the House calmly to consider whether, in making this new experimentation, we should not go rather slowly, and whether the modest amendment that I have moved, to fix the age at eleven, is based on any irrational basis and whether it is at all opposed to medical testimony. I would also ask the House to consider if the age I have proposed is not the correct age, having regard to the opinions I have quoted of Western sociologists. Sir, I might also say—in fact it has been said by so many eminent critics—that to restrict the age of marriage for girls to 12, 13 or 14 is quite arbitrary and has nothing like a Shastraic or medical basis. So I submit that on all these grounds my amendment should be accepted by the House.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, on a point of order, may I move the amendment which stands in my name on the paper, now ?

Mr. President : Mr. Sesha Ayyangar rose to move his amendment, and I did not see the Honourable Member get up to move his....

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Supposing, Sir, the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, is negatived, shall I be entitled to move my amendment ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must protect his own interest. He should have risen in his place when I put the question that clause 2 stand part of the Bill. The only Member who stood up was Mr. Sesha Ayyangar and therefore I called him.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : With due deference to you, Sir, I did get up.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I did see Kumar Ganganand Sinha get up, Sir. I think, Sir, the first amendment to be taken up was that relating to eleven, and that if that is lost, we should go on to the amendment fixing twelve as the age, and if that is lost, to the amendment fixing the age at thirteen.....

Mr. President : I accept the Honourable Member's word and, if there is a general desire on the part of Honourable Members to move their amendments, I will also allow Kumar Ganganand Sinha, Mr. Belvi and Mr. Mukhtar Singh to move their amendments.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Sir, I rise to move :

" That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill, for the word ' fourteen ' the word ' twelve ' be substituted."

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : May I ask whether you want the amendments in favour of the age of eleven to be discussed and voted by the House before any amendment with regard to any other age is taken up ?

Mr. President : I propose to take the amendments favouring 12, 13, 14 and 16 all together, and after allowing a general debate on them, I will put one by one to the vote.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What about my amendment, Sir ?

Mr. President : Your amendment is ridiculous. (Laughter.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : But on that ground it cannot be rejected ?

Mr. President : The Chair has got the power to disallow it.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : An amendment can be rejected on the ground that it is frivolous, but before that, you will, Sir, hear me ?

Mr. President : I have already decided the point; it is not necessary to hear the Honourable Member.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Sir, I crave your indulgence and the indulgence of the House in dealing with my amendment at some length, because I feel that on this amendment largely hangs the fate of the Bill. There is a considerable body of opinion which would accept the principle of the Bill but would not be prepared to beyond a certain age ; the maximum of the minimum marriageable age is, I submit, according to a large number of people 12.

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : Shame !

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Learn manners.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : I am as anxious, Sir, as any Member of this House for the smooth working of this legislation. If this Bill, when passed into law, is not successfully worked, I shall be very sorry. I would therefore ask the House to realise that the soundest policy, the statesman-like policy, that it should follow in this connection, is the policy of least resistance. Let it satisfy itself how when the Bill is carried and becomes a law, it will carry along with it the support of a large number of people who will be affected by this law, and vote for the Bill in that form.

Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Sesha Ayyangar has referred to the orthodox view in this matter. I would venture to say that, even if the minimum marriageable age is brought to 12, the orthodox opinion will be reconciled to it. He has quoted the opinion of my esteemed and Honourable colleague, the leader of the Nationalist Party. In the course of the debate on the 15th September, 1927, he made that point clear. He said :

“Mamu, the greatest of our law-givers, laid it down that a man of 30 years ought to marry a girl of 12 years, and I want that the marriageable age should be raised to 12 years, not as the latest age of the marriage of a girl but as a great advance, an enormous advance, upon the position that exists today.”

That is the spirit with which we should look at the question. It is no use putting an age which will not be acceptable to a large number of people on various grounds, such as the ground of religion, the ground of the existing custom, handed down from generation to generation for thousands of years, and so on, because the legislation may in that case be either extremely coercive or a dead-letter. But if you put an age which will be acceptable to them, you ensure the success of the Bill which you are going to pass into law. What is the position ? We are launching upon a scheme for social reform. We are making it a penal offence to do certain things which the society had been practising from time immemorial without let or hindrance : and in doing so, our chief object is to see that the practice is given up more by the realisation of the evil consequences than by the fear of punishment. I consider the piece of legislation primarily as a measure of immense educational value which will give active help to the movement for the stoppage of the pernicious system of child marriage. I confess, I would have never given support to the Bill if I had not considered it to be a measure which would stop a system more widespread and injurious to the national interests than the occasional highhandedness of the local authorities. Such being the case, I think the lesser the number of the people who will oppose the measure, the greater will be the measure of success which will attend this legislation. I feel that the age as it now stands will not be acceptable to what is called the orthodox opinion, and especially to the people who belong to the higher classes. They will oppose it for the reason of age alone, even if they may agree to the principle of the Bill. I do not argue whether they will be right or wrong. But their feeling is there. The House must realise that the people who belong to the higher castes are the leaders of society. The general multitude will go with them ; and if they take a certain standpoint, they will be followed by the multitude that surrounds them. That being the case, I think we must proceed by slow and gradual steps and we must fix the age at a figure to which they can be reconciled at the present moment. After the public opinion is ripe, and I hope it will be after a certain number of years, you may raise the age of the marriage and as the public opinion grows go on increasing it. But, not now. Look at the history of the Age of Consent Bill. Formerly there was no law on this point. You had it raised to 10. Then you had it raised from 10 to 12. There was a good deal of opposition to it, still the public opinion was behind it. And now the Age of Consent Committee has recommended 15 years. I am sure that if the age of consent is raised to 15 years, there will not be much opposition even from the orthodox section of the community. As a matter of fact, from the talks I have had with and from the opinions I have seen of most of the members of the orthodox community, about the age of consent being raised to 15, I venture to think that they will have no objection.

Mr. President : But Mr. Sesha Ayyangar is in favour of 11.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : That is not the age of consummation. I was referring to the Age of Consent Committee's Report. If we pass the law, in spite of the opposition that we see today to the marriage age, I think the authorities that will be called upon to administer the law will be faced with very great difficulties as it will stiffen the back of the opposition. If we have the law at 12, I think those who will otherwise oppose the Bill will gladly work it as they will be actuated by the motives of the prevention of child marriage alone. I consider, Sir, that, even if we pass the law at 12, it will be a great advance on what the conditions are today. We have seen that although marriages largely take place now between the ages of 13 and 15, girls of even 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 are married. You will, by passing this law, stop that practice, and it may be hoped that, if you pass the law with 12 as the minimum marriageable age now, in the census of 1941 you will find that not one marriage has taken place of girls below the age of 12. It may be that, if in the meanwhile the public opinion grows, you may again raise the age of marriage according to its demands. The result then will be further satisfactory. In actual practice, you will see that, when the law stands at 12, the marriages before the age of 14 will not take place. There are very many difficulties in the way of the marriage being celebrated earlier than 14, even though the law stands at 12. When the law is at 12, the parents of the girl will not think of marriage generally till the girl has completed 12 years. After that, they will think of marriage. Naturally, there will be so many difficulties in getting a bridegroom, not to speak of other difficulties, that for all practical purposes, they will not be able to marry their girls before they attain 14 years of age. Dr. Ducourie Ghose, who is one of the Registrars of Marriages among the Brahmos and is the author of the “Nubile Age of Females in India”, draws our attention to the fact that though the Act of 1872 prescribes 14 years as the limit, yet marriages seldom take place under sixteen years. If we draw an analogy from the state of things existing in the Brahmo society, I think if the law penalises all marriages under 12, then we can safely say that generally the marriages will take place after 14 years.

Then, Sir, if marriages are celebrated at a very late age, it is apprehended that that will change the very aspect of Hindu society. The people in this country, a very large number of them, do not favour the change in society according to the Western lines. They take pride in their society as it exists today. Of course they are alive to certain drawbacks in the society. They want to improve, but they do not want any rash change. They do not want that it should be changed after the Western societies. The latest publications about the state of society in America—I particularly mean “Unhappy India” by the late lamented Lala Lajpat Rai and “Uncle Sham” by Kanhayalal Gauba—have filled the minds of Indians with prejudice against the Western mode of living and Western societies. They would far better be called backward and remain in the society in which they are, than try to imitate the West and help their society to become like the one depicted in those books. That, Sir, is one of the genuine apprehensions in the minds of the orthodox community in this country, and it stands in the way of their advocating any higher age of marriage than 12. It may be that there are parts in this country, there are communities in this country in which late marriages are celebrated, but that does not, I submit, dispose of the objection of the rest of the people, which comprise perhaps more than fifty per cent. of the population, who are not governed by those same social rules. They feel that the marriageable age at this moment should not be fixed at more than 12 years of age. That is the reason why the Hindu Maha Sabha has not gone beyond 12 years, the Sanatan Dharam Sabha has not gone beyond 12 years; our revered Leader, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in spite of his strong views for the prevention of child marriages, has not gone beyond 12 years.

Sir, the Age of Consent Committee is of opinion that frequent revision of marriageable age is not desirable. I confess I have not been able to follow that part of their argument. When it was possible to revise the age of consent at least two or three times, I do not see what can prevent us from revising the minimum age of marriage from time to time in accordance with the demand of public opinion. I took some pains to see what the opinions of the different parts of this country were with regard to the age clause in this Bill. I find that there is considerable volume of opinion who favour the minimum age to be fixed at 12 years. For example, the Chief Commissioner of Coorg thinks that it is expedient to fix the age for girls at 12 as a first step. The Chief Commissioner, Ajmer and Merwara, thinks that the age for girls should be fixed at 12 years, at the outset. Then the Governor in Council of Bengal is of the same opinion. The Jain Svetambari Tirpanthi Sabha suggests that the age should be 12. The Vice-Chancellor of the Allahabad University, Mr. Gopinath Kaviraj, and Justice Nanavati think that the age should be 12. The Government Pleader of Gauhati would support the Bill if the age limit for girls were reduced to 12 years. The conservatives and the orthodox people in Madras suggest that the age for girls should be fixed at 12. The Advocate General, Madras, is of the same opinion. Justice Mepherston of the Patna High Court considers 14 and 12, respectively, as the proper ages for boys and girls. The Local Government of Bombay are in favour of 14 years, but a majority of those consulted hold the view that the age limit for girls should be 12 years. The Bhagini Samaj suggests 16 and 21 as age limits of girls and boys, respectively.

Mr. President : That does not support your position. You can read only those passages which support you.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : Later in the paragraph, I find opinion favouring 12. Now, Sir, these are the opinions received in support of the age of 12 from the different parts of the country, and you might have noticed that from every part of the country there is a section of opinion that favours the age of 12, and the section is, I submit, a very influential one.

Sir, one of the chief objections to marriage at any age below the age of 14, which has been fixed by the Age of Consent Committee, is that the early marriage will lead to early consummation, and it is evident that all those evils of early marriage which we decry can be brought about only by early consummation. So far as early consummation is concerned, I have stated, Sir, that even orthodox opinion does not object to the age of consummation, that is, the age of consent, being raised to 15 as recommended by the Age of Consent Committee. But marriage is looked at from a somewhat different standpoint from that of consummation. It is looked upon as a sacrament and as such it would be a violation of the sacrament if the marriage is not performed at an early age. If the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee are accepted, early consummation will not take place even if marriages are celebrated at the age of 12. With this belief I am moving the amendment which I have read.

Then, Sir, if you look at the age fixed in the different Native States, you will see, as is given in page 344 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, that of six Native States as many as three have fixed the minimum age at 12, one at 8 and the other two at 15. So, you will see that the public opinion in a majority of them is for 12 years.

Then, Sir, I am particularly anxious about my own province. If you take various communities among whom early marriage is practised in my province, less than one-fifth of the population are affected if the marriageable age is fixed at 12. Any higher age will touch a larger proportion and in that case it may be difficult to check the volume of discontent. My Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar said that when the marriages take place at ages varying between 5 and 12, you will be coercing some people if you fix the marriageable age at 12. Well, to that I would only say that if you fix the marriageable age at 14 you will be coercing the bulk of the people who marry. Here at page 337 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, you will find that the bulk of girls attain puberty between 12 and 14 years of age and they are married generally at or before that age.

Mr. President : Then why not support Mr. Sessa Ayyangar ?

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : My point is, Sir, that the maximum limit to which orthodox opinion can go is 12 years. Eleven years may be a very safe age, but the maximum to which they can go is 12 years. And if you see the observations of the Age of Consent Committee, you will find that, even in Madras, people would not object to 12 years, if that is made law. So for the prevention of this evil, I would go to the maximum limit to which orthodox opinion can go. Sir, we must realise that we cannot leave everything to law. Much has to be done by educative propaganda, and as I have stated, it is because I look upon this Bill as helpful to that propaganda that I welcome it most. I consider that the absence of any acute hostility to the law will be a most useful method of carrying on this educative propaganda; hostility to the measure will retard it. We have an ignorant and credulous mass. The change should not be so sweeping as to goad them to take up arms against it in despair. Sir, lately we have seen the effects of sweeping changes in social matters in our neighbouring country of Afghanistan. I think such a thing will not be allowed to take place here. We want the law to be effective, and we can succeed only by following the line of least resistance. For these reasons, Sir, I move the amendment.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock. Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the amendment which stands in my name runs thus :

"That in clause 2 (a), for the word 'fourteen' the word 'thirteen' be substituted."

I must state very frankly that my personal opinion is that the age should not be below fourteen. I have already told the House more than once that in my own family I have observed that limit of age and God willing I mean to observe it hereafter. But at the same time I remember the fact that the piece of legislation which we wish to enact is a piece of legislation which is likely to affect a very large number of orthodox people, people who conscientiously believe that their religion requires them to get their daughters married before they attain their puberty. It is only with that object present to my mind that I have placed this amendment before this House, something which is a golden mean between the ages of twelve and fourteen. If the House likes to accept this golden mean for the present and satisfy at least some people, it will be politic and wise.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : But will the orthodox people accept thirteen ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do not know. It is true that in this House we have been told by two learned gentlemen, one the leader of my party, Pandit Motilal Nehru, and the other my learned friend, Mr. Jayakar, that they profess something like contempt for our religious books. One gentleman has said that he has consigned to the waste paper basket the recommendations in favour of this Bill and also the protests against the Bill. The other has told us that, what is stated in the Shastras is not to be found in the Vedanta, and that all those old authorities are absolute rubbish. I am not talking to people who hold those views. But I believe that I must respect the opinion of a very large number of people in this country who may be right or who may be wrong but who conscientiously believe that their religion tells them to do something. We are bound to respect their scruples.

Now, for the benefit of my European friends and others who have not read the original Shastras in Sanskrit, I wish to read just a few lines from a book which is written by a gentleman who knows India intimately—I am going to read from a book written by Sir Herbert Risley—"The People of India". This quotation, which I am going to read, might perhaps throw some light on the religious opinions of the Indian people so far as the marriage of Hindu girls is concerned. I know nothing about the Koranic law, about the marriage obtaining among the Muhammadans ; I know nothing about it. This is what the author says :

"In no department of life is the contrast sharper between the East and the West, the stationary and the progressive societies, the races of India and the nations of Europe. The first point which strikes an observer is the almost universal prevalence of the married state. In Europe sentiment and prudence hold divided sway, and the tendency on the whole is rather towards a decline in the number of marriages. In India neither of these motives comes prominently into play. Religion, on the other hand, which in the West makes in the main for celibacy, throws its weight in India almost wholly into the other scale. A Hindu man must marry and beget children to perform his funeral rites, lest his spirit wander uneasily in the waste places of the earth. If a high-class Hindu maiden is unmarried at puberty, her condition brings social obloquy on her family, and on a strict reading of certain texts entails retrospective damnation on three generations of ancestors."

That, Sir, is what is stated by Sir Herbert Risley in his book. This may perhaps weigh with some Members of this House. I know the House is not in a mood to listen.....

An Honourable Member : He is no authority on a Shastric matter.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do not profess to be an authority on Shastras ; I have already said that in my own family I observe fourteen as the age and I say that society is prepared to tolerate and put up with a gentleman like me ; but society is not prepared to take a law from you forcibly ; that is my point. Now that the House has made up its mind to pass this social legislation against the consent of the people, I believe.....

An Honourable Member : Not against their consent.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do assert it and I assert it thrice. I submit that those who believe that this legislation is in consonance with the opinion of the masses of the people are without doubt living in a fool's paradise and they will find it out very soon. But that apart, I have already referred to this age limit that I propose as a golden mean. I merely want to enable this House, if they are so minded, to accept my amendment, and in placing it before the House I hope the House will take it for what it is worth.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill, for the word 'fourteen' the word 'sixteen' be substituted."

At the very outset I beg to state that I am a believer in the Shastras and the Vedas and I belong to the school of thought which believes that the minimum age for girls to marry is sixteen and for boys twenty-five. When I rise to move my amendment, I believe conscientiously that I am doing something which it is my duty to perform and there are other reasons for doing this. The latest pronouncement that has been placed before us is the Age of Consent Committee's Report, and therein it has been laid down that the minimum age at which the girls should be married should be fourteen. But I would like to point out that, if you read page 178, you will find that the age of 14 for marriage of girls is not the result of their considered opinion, but is the result of a compromise. I shall read their words and that will convince the House that, according to the Members of this Committee, the age for marriage should be not less than sixteen for girls. They say, Sir, on page 178 as follows :

the same at 14 or 16, both being post-puberty ages. We, however, fully realise the difficulties and the intensity of feeling of the latter class and think that the least age we can recommend as a definite step towards the ideal of 16 cannot be less than full 14 years. We expect that some time will be taken in arranging matches after 14 and some further period may elapse before actual consummation takes place. Like all compromises the age limit of 14 may not satisfy either of the parties. We feel however that once 14, the age of puberty, is passed, the Rubicon will be crossed and the limit of 16 automatically reached, so as to render legislation for further advance unnecessary."

This clearly shows, Sir, that when I am moving my amendment, I am voicing the opinion of the Members of the Age of Consent Committee. Again, Sir, at page 172 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, it is said :

"The educated women have almost unanimously declared for advance in the age of consent to and for a law of marriage at 16 at least".

Now, this is also a point in my favour, which clearly proves that 16 is the minimum age which the educated ladies consider to be a proper age at which girls should be married.

There is another point, Sir, looking at the whole question from a practical point of view. I would like to refer the House to the Census Reports, which clearly bring out that, even today more than 50 per cent. of marriages take place after the age of 15. That shows that if we are to legislate on the marriage law, we ought not to put the age at anything less than 16 years.

Sir, it has been stated by some Honourable Members that there is an orthodox opinion which will be against child marriage. I would refer to page 27 of the Report in which they say that the custom of early marriage is more prevalent among the lower castes than among the higher ones. That clearly shows that those people who indulge in child marriages are not the higher castes, but they belong to lower castes, and those people have no regard for religious sanction.

My friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha said, "Let us legislate and fix the minimum age of 12, and then public opinion would come round and a time might come when the orthodox opinion also would be with us". I submit, Sir, that, during the last thirty years, there has been practically no improvement in this matter.

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was taken by Mr. Deputy President.)

I may in this connection refer Honourable Members to page 28 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report :

"In spite of all the agitation for early marriage, the reform societies do not appear to have had much practical effect so far even within their own circles, much less upon the masses."

This clearly shows, Sir, that the idea of slow progress should not appeal to the House, and we should fix the marriageable age at not less than 16.

I would submit, Sir, that, according to the 3 P.M. Shastras, there are two ideas amongst the people ; one is that there should be pre-puberty marriages, and the second is that there should be post-puberty marriages. If you are going to enact a law which will clearly go against pre-puberty marriage, I do not understand why we should not fix the age at 16 instead of 14, when the medical authorities and the Shastras also propound that the marriageable minimum age of girls should be 16. When you know full well that, in enacting this law, you go against the orthodox people who believe in pre-puberty marriages, why should you fix 14 and not 16 ? (An Honourable Member : "Why not a higher age" ?) It has been asked why should not the age be higher. Personally I would not be sorry for it, because according to our Shastras 16 is the minimum age and 24 is the maximum age for girls.

Some Honourable Members quoted the authority of medical opinion to the effect that there is no harm if consummation takes place below 14. I would submit that according to our own Ayurved the greatest authorities are Sushruta and Bagbhatta, and both of them hold that the minimum age should be 16. .... It says :

Samatwa Gataviryo tan Janiyat Kushalo Bhishak.

Not only this, but it also further on lays down that, if there happens to be pregnancy before the age of 16, miscarriage will take place and if a child is born it will not live long, and even if it lives, it remains very weak. That is the medical authority on the point. That must satisfy some of our Hindu brethren that 16 is the minimum age when marriage should take place. I am told that there is a difference between marriage and Garbhadhana Sanskars. I admit these are two definite Sanskars. One is known as the Garbhadhana Sanskar and the other is known as marriage "Bibaha". Garbhadhana is also known as Chaturthi Karam "Chaturthi Karma".

Mr. M. S. Aney : No, that is the sole difficulty.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Therefore I maintain that, after the fourth day of marriage, the Garbhadhana should take place, and therefore you cannot, according to our own Shastras, differentiate between marriage and consummation of marriage. Then again, according to our Shastras, Garbhadhana is a ceremony not only to be performed once but always, and therefore you cannot say that the Garbhadhana ceremony or Sanskar is a different thing from marriage. Therefore we cannot fix the age of consent at a higher age while we can keep the marriageable age at 12 or even lower.

There is another point which I consider to be very very important. According to Hindu Law or the Shastras, once a marriage is always a marriage. If it is so is it then not necessary that, when a marriage takes place, the boy and the girl should know their duties, and they should be able to understand the consequences that are to follow ? If you marry a minor girl and if the Shastras declare, according to certain gentlemen, that marriage should take place before 12 when the boy or girl may not know what marriage really means, I would submit that we would be practically forcing one section of people. This means that girls ought to have no voice in their marriage and yet they should be bound for all times to come.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Do the boys have a voice ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Certainly they have.

Mr. B. Das : That is news to me.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : I may be allowed to state that, according to the mantras that are recited at the time of marriage, the boys and girls should

902

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[16TH SEPT. 1929.]

[Mr. Mukhtar Singh.]

be of sufficient age to understand the meaning of marriage. There is a mantra which runs as follows :

Om, Omo, Aham Asmi Sa Twam Sa Twamsyamo Aham....etc.

It clearly means, "I understand what is meant by marriage and knowingly I enter into the contract". That means that marriage is to take place at a time when the boys and girls understand what is the meaning of marriage. I would be very much obliged if any Honourable Member who speaks against this amendment will say whether these words can mean any thing else. That means clearly, just as you have the words in the ordinary deeds "Ba-raza-o-raghat-i-khud", that the marriageable age according to the Hindu Shastras, according to the highest authority of the Vedas, ought to be at a time when boys and girls can understand what they are doing. Unfortunately, to-day these mantras are not recited by the husband and the wife. That is our misfortune. In accordance with the Shastrie injunction they ought to be recited by both the husband and the wife. There are other injunctions in the Smritis also that a girl ought to wait at least for three years after the first menstruation takes place. That will bring the age to 16.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : At least for three years ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : At least for three years, that is how we render the translation of that Sloka.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : It is strange.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : It is a well known principle of Hindu Shastras that only Brahmacharins and Brahmacharinis can enter into the second stage of Grihastha. May I inquire what will be the age for a Brahmacharini if it is not 16. ....

Mr. M. S. Aney : What is the age for a Brahmacharin ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : 25 years.

Mr. M. S. Aney : When does the asram of Brahmacharin begin ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : The asram of Brahmacharin begins from 6 to 11.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is he a Brahmacharin then ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : At the time of marriage one should be a Snatak (one who has finished his educational career), and according to Manu himself he ought to have read at least one Veda. No Hindu has a right to marry unless he had read at least one Veda. May I inquire whether all these injunctions are meant only for the boy and not for the girl, and if so, may I inquire, are the girls not allowed to educate themselves to read the Vedas and to read the Smritis ? If they are, may I ask, if they are married at the age of 11, whether there is a chance for reading. ....

Mr. M. S. Aney : Why not educate them after the marriage ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : I see. I consider that the southern part of India is the only place where we can say that the Hindu culture has remained up to date what it ought to have been. (An Honourable Member : "Question ?") Even among the southern country I do not find that there are schools where girls can, after their marriage, educate themselves.

Mr. M. S. Aney : There are.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : May be, but at least, so far as I know, girls are never allowed to go to schools after they are married. If we consider that education is necessary for boys as well as for girls, I cannot understand how anybody can stand up and say that the girl should be married at the age of 11 or 12 or even at 14. I have tried to show that on account of these reasons the marriageable age of girls to be 16 and not 14 or 12. There are other reasons also which I consider to be very important. Suppose we decide today that the marriageable age ought to be 12 and that the age of consummation should be 15. May I inquire if the orthodox Hindus will not be much more injured if the husbands are punished on account of the rape with their wives ? To me it seems inconceivable that there can be a rape by the husband. According to my reading, according to my light, according to the very Samskar, the Vivaha-Samskar, marriage takes place only for this purpose and there are mantras which are recited at the time of the marriage showing that one of the ideals of marriage is procreation. ....

Pandit Nilakantha Das : According to which commentary does it show that ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : It is not a question of commentary. If my Honourable friend knows Sanskrit, and I understand he does, he cannot translate the mantras in any other form. I read that mantra for him :

*Indra-agni Ghyawa Prithivi Matarishtha, Menria-varuna Bhago Ashurnoma,
Brahspatir Maruto Brahma Soma, Imam Narim Pujaya vardhyantu.*

The words Imam narim pujaya vardhyantu cannot mean anything else. What is marriage for ? Marriage is known to be the repayment of a debt known as Pitri rin. That very clearly shows that marriage takes place for the sake of procreation.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Immediately to repay it ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : I challenge my Honourable friend or any other Member to show me any Smriti or any other Shashtra which say that if consummation takes place after marriage but before the age of 15 or 16, it is penal. If it is not so in the Shastras, I believe that marriage is meant only for this purpose—at least that is one of the main ideals of marriage. You do not find in the Shastras that when a Garbhadhan takes place after marriage but before the age of 16 or 15 it is penal or that it is a sin. If it is not a sin, I cannot understand what is meant by saying that consummation must take place afterwards and that marriage should take place before.

Then, there is another point. It is impossible to conceive that the marriage of a girl should take place at the age of 11, while consummation should take place at the age of 16. Let us take it, for the sake of argument, that that is possible. What will be the difference at the time of consummation between the ages of the boy and the girl ? Hardly a difference of three or four years. (An Honourable Member : "Why ?") It cannot be the difference of nine years at any rate.

L11CPB(LA)

[Mr. Mukhtar Singh.]

You cannot marry a girl of 11 to a boy of 20. (An Honourable Member : "Why not?") (Another Honourable Member : "It is done in Madras?") If it is done in Madras, I say it is impossible for the simple reason that a boy who marries a girl of 11 at the age of 20 will not wait to consummate the marriage for four or five years even if he be under the guardianship of an ideal person like Mr. Acharya. It is an impossibility unless there be exceptional causes which may force him to do so.

There is one other point which is an important one, and it is an economic one. In towns and villages the Hindu marriage costs very much. Speaking of my own province, Sir, I can say that many families have been ruined on account of the cost incurred at the time of marriage.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : How will this Bill remove it?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : I shall tell you how. If there are a girl of 16 and a boy of 25 and they are going to be married, then they will not allow their parents to contract debts and to ruin themselves, as they understand the value of money at that age. By the time the consummation takes place, the interest on the amount spent would be very very high. I may refer my friend to a book by Mr. Darling on the peasantry of the Punjab, and you will be convinced that what I have stated is absolutely correct. Now, Sir, I have tried to show that there are people who conscientiously believe that 16 is the proper age, and if conscience is to be taken into consideration, they have a right to be heard. When you bring a law on the Statute-book, that will be a clear indication to the people outside that this House considers that 14 is the marriageable age and this will prevent the reformer from achieving success in his efforts in raising the age of marriage to 16. My Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha quoted the late lamented Lala Lajpat Rai. For his edification I will quote what he said.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : About Western society?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : I will quote him as an authority on Eastern society. He said : "If I have my way I would raise the marriageable age of girls to at least 16". That is the opinion of Lala Lajpat Rai. The greatest man in our country, Mahatma Gandhi, has wired that the minimum age should be 18. So, Sir, when I move my amendment, I have the greatest people on my side and I hope this House will pass my amendment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhamadan) : Sir, I rise to support the age given in the Sarda Bill. We have just heard a speech from my friend Mr. Mukhtar Singh that 16 should be the marriageable age, and if a person marries his daughter below this age, then that man should be sent to jail. That is the amendment which my friend has moved. I will explain why the Age of Consent Committee fixed the age of 14 unanimously. The Preamble to the Sarda Bill reads thus :

"Whereas it is expedient to restrain the solemnisation of child marriages."

While agreeing in the main with the arguments advanced by my friend, I may submit that wisdom and caution both demand that such an age for a penal law should be fixed as would be acceptable to the majority, an age which would be regarded as workable by the majority of the people. Personally I have no objection to fixing 16. As the Committee have pointed out in their Report, they have arrived at 14 as the compromise age. As has been pointed out by my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha, if the age is fixed at 12, then one or two years will be spent in finding the bridegroom and arranging the marriage. Similarly, if the age is fixed at 14, as the Age of Consent Committee point out, then one or two years will be taken in solemnising the marriage. Thus, the age of the girl will be about 16 at the time when she goes to the home of her husband. It is true that the proper age for the marriage is not 14. I realise that, and from the evidence before the Age of Consent Committee, the Committee could not have come to the conclusion that 14 was the proper age. As remarked on page 178, 14 was regarded as a compromise age. My own objection to my friend's amendment is that his age would be too abrupt. We know that people are marrying their girls at the ages of from 1 to 10 and that more than 42 per cent. of the girls in this country are married when they are below 15. A perusal of the statistics given in the Age of Consent Committee's Report (page 96) would show that, under the age of five also, there were 2,18,463 girls married, and the number of girls married below the age of ten were 20,16,687, whereas the number of girls married between ten and fifteen was 63,30,207. If the number of widows is added, then, as Honourable Members will find from the Report, about 42.2 per cent. of the girls are married below the age of fifteen. For such people, Sir, as have been marrying their girls below the age of five and ten this change to fourteen will also be rather abrupt, whereas for those who have been concealing the puberty of their girls, for those who have passed Resolutions that the marriageable age should be increased, but who in practice do not observe those Resolutions, this age will be regarded as a sort of help, and it is in this hope that the Age of Consent Committee decided to stick to the age of fourteen instead of sixteen. As regards those who advocate the age of twelve, I have to submit this that I can understand the mentality of those who think that, in social matters, Government should not interfere—not that I am in sympathy with that, for I understand that in other matters Government have already interfered. Even now, the law of consummation at thirteen is an act of interference with the Hindu law and the Muhammadan law as propounded by orthodox people; but leaving that question aside, I want to know from those who advocate a marriage law at all whether they are not playing with the religious notions of those who believe religiously that they should marry their daughters below the age of ten. As a Member of the Age of Consent Committee, I had occasion to roam over the whole country and I came across a class of people numbering not thousands but lakhs who thought religiously that if they did not marry their daughters at the particular time when they got the opportunity they would be committing a sin. There are people in the Bombay Presidency who believe that their daughters should be married irrespective of their age. If the age of the daughter is even less than one year and no husband can be found for her, they think it is their duty to marry her to a garland of flowers. But let me be quite clear. They think that they are religiously bound to do so, otherwise they will be incurring sin. Exactly in the same way is the case with those orthodox people who believe that they would be committing a sin if they do not marry their daughters before puberty. As between the two, I do not see any difference, Sir. (Mr. M. K. Acharya :

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

“ Very sorry ”.) I am sorry for those to whom it was pointed out when they appeared as witnesses before the Age of Consent Committee and they had to admit—I am referring specifically to Mr. Acharya, and he had to admit that if this proposition is pursued, logically, he will have to come to the conclusion that no one set of persons has a right to force that opinion upon another set of persons (Mr. M. K. Acharya : “ Quite right ”.) Therefore, when Mr. Acharya supported this Bill at the time it went to the Select Committee, I think he was perfectly wrong. (Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : “ Hear, hear ”.) Mr. Acharya said that he (Mr. M. K. Acharya was going to interrupt) represented the opinion of his wife. . . . . (Mr. Deputy President : “ Do not listen to him ; go on ”.) He made a statement in this House when the Bill was referred to the Select Committee to the effect that he had consulted the ladies of his family and his wife particularly—whom even at this age he was pleased to call “ the good, old lady ” (Mr. M. K. Acharya : “ I say that now also ”.) (Laughter.)—expressed to him that opinion and I beg to ask him, what has happened to that opinion ? Sir, the Leader of my Party made an impassioned speech in this very House and made out conclusively a case for marriage legislation for the whole of India, and it was at his instance that all other communities were included in this Bill. That aspect being settled the question now is this, below what age marriage should not be permitted ? As regards that, we have heard the speech of Mr. Mukhtar Singh, who belongs to one class of thought among the Hindus, and we have heard the speeches from Mr. Sessa Ayyangar and other gentlemen, who represent the other school of thought and support the age of eleven or twelve. I want to know how is this tangle to be solved ? (Mr. M. S. Aney : “ In the way the Committee has found ! ”) It can only be solved in the way the Committee has solved it. (Mr. M. S. Aney : “ I did not use those words ”.) I thank him for that. According to the Shruti, it is absolutely clear that youthful maidens were married in Vedic times and I challenge everybody in this House (though I am not a great Pandit) to quote anything from the Shrutis, from the Vedas, to show that child marriages were countenanced in the Vedic times. And the Vedas are regarded as the revealed books of the Hindus. I unhesitatingly declare that he will be a bold man who will accept this challenge of mine. As regards the Koran also, I make bold to say the same. As regards the Smritis and the other books, of my fellow-brethren, the Muhammadans, I would submit that they have got a family resemblance. At Lucknow a Muhammadan gentleman, who was a practising lawyer, quoted before us from one book saying that those parents are fortunate whose daughters menstruate at the house of their husbands. Similar quotations were placed before us when we went to Madras and other places, so that there is a family resemblance in the Smritis and some books of the Muhammadans. But I will just quote before this House the opinions of two very respectable and orthodox people to show how orthodox but not extremely orthodox gentlemen look at these Smritis and other books. I will quote the opinion of the Secretary of the All-India Sanatan Dharma Sabha, Mr. Ramakant Malaviya the son of our revered Leader, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. He appeared before us and he said that in his opinion the age of fifteen was the proper age for marriage. It will be idle to say that he did not consider the point of view of the orthodox people. He considered the question of consummation also, and in respect to both matters his clear opinion was that, whatever the Shastras said, fifteen should be regarded as the proper age. Now, he is not an impatient idealist, he is not a man who can be said to be irresponsible. Similarly I will quote the opinion of Mr. Tufail Ahmed, a pleader. He also said the same, that the Muhammadan law does not countenance the marriages of minors, and in his opinion, even if anything was to be found in Muhammadan books except the Koran which led to the belief that a parent was undoubtedly authorised to marry a minor girl, and the present law would curtail his liberty, in his opinion the marriage age should be fixed at not less than fifteen. Therefore, my submission is that, considered from the point of view of the Shastras alone, the revealed books of the Hindus and of the Mussalmans do not countenance early marriages at twelve.

Now, Sir, it really pains me to find that among my Honourable friends who are arrayed against this age of fourteen I find people whom I respect very much. Now, Sir, I do not suppose any body would think that it would delight anybody's heart that, on an occasion of festivities in a Hindu or Muhammadan house, the parents or the husband should be sent to jail. Nobody can take delight in a contingency like this and those of my friends who think that their religious susceptibilities are not being respected in this House will certainly give us the credit that we respect their sentiments very much.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : You will send them to jail.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : My friend asks, why should there be a penal clause ? I would respectfully submit to him to remember section 87 of the Indian Penal Code, whereby the principle of the law is laid down that no man shall be allowed to hurt another. And a boy and a girl, before the age of 18, cannot submit themselves to any sort of injury without their consent. I want to ask my friend if he wants to revert back to the Patria potestas of the Roman law. Does he want to revert back to those times, when the law declared that the woman shall always be under tutelage ? While she is a young girl, she will be under the tutelage of her father, then under the tutelage of her husband, and then subsequently under the tutelage of her sons. I submit to him that the times have changed and he cannot stem the tide of time. Sir, I am rather amused that gentleman after gentleman has got up in this House and said that his personal opinion was that the age should not be less than 14 and that it should be 16, and yet as their constituents did not want it to be 16 they would subordinate their views to the views of their constituents. May I respectfully ask these gentlemen whether they took the opinion of their constituents in any constitutional manner.

Now, Sir, Mr. Belvi said that he would not be representing his constituency aright if he gave his vote in favour of 14. May I respectfully ask him if he took a referendum, if he went to all the voters and then came to the conclusion that more than half the voters wanted less than 14.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : No legislation on social matters is required.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I understand that he has given an amendment for 13, and I believe that he will vote for it at least. Did he take a referendum from all the electors to the effect that they do not want such social legislation? My friend is too optimistic. I will read from page 96 of the Report, where statistics are given. Hundreds of years of social reform have not been able to effect any appreciable change in the sentiments of the people. On page 96 you will find that, in spite of great activities on behalf of the social reformers, the custom of early marriage has not seen its last in this country. (Mr. M. K. Acharya made an interruption.) Now, Sir, I know that gentlemen can make interruptions in this way, but let them make intelligent interruptions. I know of certain gentlemen who are Members of this House, who said that they did not believe in social reform. They do not believe in legislation; they do not want any law from the foreign Government. That was the only stand taken by them. I have no quarrel with them, but I do not agree with them. As regards others, may I remind my friend Pandit Nilakantha Das that his opinion before us was that the least age for marriage should be 16.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : It is so still, so far as I am personally concerned.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Then he was asked, if the age was raised to 16, would there be any sort of agitation. His reply was that the reformers were too strong. Six or seven per cent. of the people might make an agitation, but he said "We can stand it because we are the leaders of the people". If it is true that six or seven per cent. of the members of the constituency of my friend are in favour of child marriage and 93 per cent. are not, may I ask him if he is justified in going towards the side of those who are voting for 12? Sir, I do not want to take much time of the House, although I can go on still further quoting examples of those gentlemen who appeared before us and were.....

Pandit Nilakantha Das : May I make a personal explanation, Sir? I have not opened my mouth on this Bill. My friend has perhaps referred to my evidence before the Age of Consent Committee which has not yet been published. But what he says has exactly happened. I cannot say I am personally against measures to stop child marriage. So far as my constituency is concerned, this measure practically does not affect it. It is a very small minority there which is affected by it. But as legislators in this House, and not as radical reformers, which is not our business here, in a penal measure like this we should see that if a majority or even a substantial minority in the country will have to be adversely affected by the measure, we cannot but be very careful. This is, however, what I gave out to my friend in private conversation.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am glad of the explanation which is given by my friend because it supports my case all the more. My friend, according to himself, is a representative of a constituency in which this Bill will not penalise people. According to himself, a greater number of the residents in his constituency will not be affected by this Bill. Now, Sir, may I humbly ask him under what canon does he want to vote with those who advocate the age of 12 years. His constituency wants that he may vote for more than 12; for 16, with what face can he vote with those who advocate 12? I leave him there.

Then, another question was raised, and my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha made a great point of it, that the people in general do not want more than 12. May I remind him that the consensus of opinion of all the ladies that appeared before the Age of Consent Committee was that they wanted 16 to be the minimum age. (An Honourable Member : "What about orthodox ladies?") Then, as regards the fact whether the ladies who appeared before us were orthodox or not, I will only refer to the argument of my friend Mr. Sesha Ayyangar who was pleased to say in the opening part of his speech that the orthodox ladies live in pardah and therefore their opinion cannot be known. If their opinion cannot be known according to him, I want to know how Kumar Ganganand Sinha and Mr. Sesha Ayyangar came to know of their opinions. Then, Sir, it is also not true that the Age of Consent Committee did not make any effort to find the opinions of orthodox ladies. We went to villages to find out the opinion of the ladies there. We visited a certain village in Madras where we asked the ladies to sit on one side and the men to sit on the other side. We asked the opinions of the ladies and the men were also hearing the evidence. All these ladies said that they wanted a marriage law according to which the age should at least be fixed at 14. The men said, "The ladies know nothing; and we know better. If you penalise us, then we may be put to some trouble". We had Madrassi gentlemen with us as interpreters and there was no difficulty in finding out their view points. In every province we made it a point to visit the villages, and I can assure the House that the village people are in favour of a Bill like this. It is wrong to say that the majority of the orthodox opinion does not want this Bill. (Voices : "Question?") It is very easy to say "Question", but the Report of the Age of Consent Committee is before you. You got four Members of this Assembly on to this Committee and they have submitted a unanimous Report. You abused the Government the other day and said that the Sken Committee's Report had been shelved. But this is a Report which has been submitted to you by four men who belong to this House and six others, and all of them have submitted a unanimous Report. I cannot understand why this Report should be given a go-bye and thrown into the waste paper basket, only for the reason that it does not, according to some, represent extreme orthodox opinion.

Mr. Deputy President : Have the Government taken any notice of this Report?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I know what the Government are doing. On this occasion, I am forced to congratulate the Government on their attitude towards this Bill. But I must say that it is due to force of circumstances that the Government have been compelled to accept this Report and this Bill. This Government was alive to the evil effects of child marriage all these years. When they stopped Suttee, why did they not stop child marriage? My charge against the Government is that it moves when it is too late in the day. When the Government was forced by public opinion in India and abroad, they have taken up this attitude. All the same, I congratulate the Government on the attitude they have taken up on this Bill. Even if the Government have not sent in any amendments to this Bill which the Committee recommended, I submit that I have sent in amendments, and I hope the House will accept them and pass them. At this stage, I may join hands with my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha in asking the Government to see that this Bill is worked properly. If we pass this Bill, then it would be a pious wish of this House that child marriage should go away. If we are serious about this Bill, the Government should consider the recommendations that have been made by the Committee to give effect to the provisions of this Bill. The Government should remember that they are penalising the marriages of people who are illiterate and who belong to the depressed classes and who are in all stages of development. It is the clear duty of the Government to first see that the provisions of the Bill are known to each and every person in the country. It is the duty of Government to make propaganda about the evil effects of child marriage. The Government have so far not done this and the Government have been guilty of a great wrong to this country by their supineness and indifference towards the evils which they could always see all round unless they waywardly shut their eyes all along.

Now, Sir, in this connection may I submit one word? When I am asking this Government to do its duty, it behoves me and all those who belong to my school of thought to do our little bit in spreading the knowledge about the evil effects of child marriage and in co-operating with the Government in this matter. There are certain sections of the people who think that, though the Government are doing the right thing, yet they do not want to support the Government in this matter. May I humbly lay at the feet of my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt the evidence which he gave before the Age of Consent Committee in this connection?

Several Honourable Members : Read it.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : He said as regards age that it must be 16 for girls and 24 for boys.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : But not by legislation of this Government.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Let us consider this dispassionately. Well, my Honourable friend will excuse me if I do not give any weight to his words, because he does not stick in public to what he says in the evidence before the Committee. Did he not say that every Bengali home is suffering from the evil effects of early consummation?

Mr. B. Das : The evidence has not been published.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Am I to understand it is confidential, because it has not been published?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : You should not misquote me.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Before I decided to refer to the evidence of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, I had asked some Members who had previously served on other Committees as to whether I was entitled to state before the House the opinions of witnesses who appeared before the Committee, and they assured me that I could refer to the evidence. It is only then that I made bold to express the views given by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. It is unfortunate that people do not stick to their opinions once given. (Hear, hear.) One of us asked my Honourable friend, Mr. Dutt, as to what he had done in the matter of social reform all these years because he was against legislation by a foreign Government. And the reply which he gave us was that he had done precious nothing.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am not a professional social reformer.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Then again one of us asked him while he was in the witness-box if he hoped that he could attain Swaraj when a large number of girls died at an early age. When this question was put he said that it was not the duty of those who claimed Swaraj to be a party to the social swaraj of giving the daughters of India their rights at least in the matter of marriage and that it was not on physical progress that he relied but political battles have to be fought by words and arguments and not by strength of arm and that he did not believe in the proverb "A healthy mind in a healthy body". (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : It is a deliberate falsehood.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am extremely sorry that my Honourable friend is rather nervous today.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : No, Sir, I am bold enough to stand up and meet my Honourable friend and point out where he is making false statements.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am responsible for each and every word of what I say.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : As it is no offence to tell lies here, it is very easy to speak like that, which is nothing but the responsibility of an irresponsible youth.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : This is the state of things which I deprecate most strongly, that is that gentlemen who are convinced in one way about the marriageable age of girls should vote in another way when it comes to a question of voting in the House. May I also remind the House that, when the Bill came before the House in 1925, the attitude which Mr. Amar Nath Dutt then took up was quite different and his present attitude is not in consonance with his past. If you just study the proceedings of the House in 1925, it would appear that he was in favour of the age of 14 or perhaps even 16 in the matter of consummation of girls. (Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : "What has consummation to do with this Bill?") Now my Honourable friend Mr. Lahiri is entirely mistaken if he thinks that this marriage law has nothing to do with consummation. This is the main ground upon which we built our case. I submit, Sir, that if you want to stop early consummation, if you want to stop the evils of pre-puberty consummation and consummation soon after puberty, you must soon pass this law. No law of the age of consent could be successfully worked unless it has got this backing of marriage law. If the law of age of consent at 13 was worked successfully in all its rigour, I think not one deputation, but hundreds of thousands of deputations will have to come not only from Madras but from all parts of the country and they will display a state of things which will be most disgusting.

I will respectfully submit to the House to visualise the position of every husband who had a wife below 13. As soon as she goes to her husband's place and meets her husband, in every case the husband would be prosecuted. I cannot consider this contingency with equanimity or the present state of things as satisfactory. This law fixing the minimum age of marriage is a sort of restriction upon human liberty but to a much smaller degree than the law of the age of consent. I submitted a note to the Age of Consent Committee's Report to the effect that I think every person should look forward to the day when the law of marriage would be rigorously enforced and the law of the age of consent will not be rigorously enforced. I wish we had no occasion to have recourse to that. And I think every Honourable Member of this House will agree with me when I say that you may not have a law of consent but you must have a law of marriage.

Sir, I have submitted in brief the reasons which led us to come to the conclusion that 14 was the least age of marriage to which we could agree. I will therefore submit that the age of 14 should be accepted.

Sardar Bahadur, Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar (Punjab Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, much has been said about child marriage on the floor of this House, and there is very little left which may now be urged. I get up to support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Mukhtar Singh. Sir, I will ask this House, does it think that at 14 years of age these little girls are fully developed and will produce a strong and healthy nation? On the one hand we want to produce a healthy, strong and well-built nation, and on the other hand we do not want to drop our ancient customs. Dr. Moonje and other friends like to give military training to the future generation. I wonder what will be the good of that military training for children of 12-year-old mothers. We want children who will carry 60 pounds on their shoulders, and walk 30 miles a day. Will the girls who are married at 12 or 14 years of age produce such children? The question of selecting cadets for Sandhurst comes up every day, and these cadets are to be bachelors before they are selected for Sandhurst. Their age for selection is fixed at 18 years. I think a high percentage of 18-year-old children in certain parts of India are fathers of half a dozen children. Now, Sir, if we want to build a good nation and want the boys to undergo military training and want to see them take their place in the same ranks with the other nations, I am sure the Members of this House would like to raise the age to a little more than 14. Of course 14 years is a little better than 12 or 13; but why not increase the age to the limit of 16? This age we ought to have raised a generation ago. It has been already too late because we cannot get the proper material to take the place of the officers, particularly the commissioned ranks of the Army. I am sure Dr. Moonje and other admirers of the boys who should take the place of the officers in the various services in the Army will go forward and raise the age still higher than 14.

Then there is the saying that, "When a child has fallen you should make a hole in her ears while she is crying." As 4 P.M. we are going through this Bill, why not raise the age now? We require of our boys a good body and a good build. If we look round this House we find that several races who marry at a mature age are better built than those whose children are married at an early age. A strong built boy is not only a pride to his parents, but a pride to his family and to his nation. If we leave the age only at 14, I am sure that after 10 or 20 years we will repent that we did not fix it higher than 14, because there will not be very much improvement among the children.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : Why not make it 18?

Sardar Bahadur, Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : Those who would like to have still better children will marry at 18. At any rate if the age is fixed at 16 there will be better children.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique (Calcutta and Suburbs : Muhammadan Urban) : Do you get better children at a higher age?

Sardar Bahadur, Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : Undoubtedly. Look at the other nations. It is just like a photograph. When you have got a well-developed person, you get a good photograph. But if you take a child's photograph, you produce another child; you cannot produce a well-grown up and fully developed man out of that young photo. If we look at the figures here we find men of 55 with broad chests and good physique, whereas if you look at the other end you find very weak and narrow-chested persons.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Why not suggest eighteen now?

Sardar Bahadur, Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : I shall leave 18, 19 and 20 alone for the present. I think there are many Members here who will marry their daughter at 18 or 20, or even more than that. The higher the age you fix, the better the children you produce. The lower the age you fix the more puny the children you get. If you cannot get rid of this uxorious custom it is nobody's fault.

Then comes the question of attack and defence. You cannot expect defence from a little child, who is afraid of a little rocket bursting miles away; what you should do is to produce men who will stand rockets and shells bursting on their heads and yet have strength and nerve and a strong moral. You cannot produce good nerve and a good body from a child girl of fourteen years. I admire the brains of my friends from the South and East no doubt, but it would make me doubly proud if I saw those heads on well-built bodies. It would then be a great improvement. Now, the heads are too big and the bodies too small. It is all right for office work and for literary work, but no good for out-door work and for fighting other nations and defending our own country in the field.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Good for the civil service.

Sardar Bahadur, Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : In my country I can tell you that we have to deal with Pathans. My Muhammadan friends like Mr. Yamin Khan may quote passages from the Koran and other books—I do not know anything about that; but I think the Kabuli Mussalmans are more orthodox than Hindustani Mussalmans and they do not marry their daughters until they are 20. I have personally seen it myself that their girls are not married till they are 20; and if my friends, Mr. Rafique and Mr. Yamin Khan will come to the North West Frontier, they will see the body and physique the Pathans possess, with whom their Punjabi friends have to fight. You will then see the difference and you will then judge the value of a good body. You cannot value it unless you go to those places.

I do not know and I cannot quote anything from the Shastras, but this much I can say, that we are very late already in raising this age limit; and we will still be very late if we do not raise the age now to 16 or 17. It does not matter to many of us here, but it does matter to those who always come forward and ask "Why cannot we get this and that?", where it is a question of good physique and a well-built body. When other nations are breeding their animals and cattle and their transport animals, we must at least pay our full attention in this matter and we must produce at least as good boys, if not better, as those produced by other races. I think that, for the honour and pride of our future generations, we should support this motion and raise the age from 14 to 16.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : Sir, I rise to oppose all the amendments for the lowering of the marriage age and to support the age as given in the original Bill of my Honourable friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda. Sir, it seems to me, after listening to the long debates on the subject, that there are two main reasons urged by the opposition against fixing the age at 14, and in support of lowering it to 11 or 12. The first argument that has been brought forward by Member after Member is that the lower age is more in accordance with the injunctions of holy books. So far as I can understand Mr. Sesha Ayyangar, he has laid great stress on the score that it will be more acceptable to religious-minded and orthodox people that the age should be lowered to 11. I am in a great dilemma over this subject. In the first place it has been maintained again and again that the mere fact of this House taking up legislation on this subject was against the religious views of orthodox people. Some people would exempt communities from the operation of this law, because they think that it is interference with their religion. Other people want the marriage age to be brought down to 11, because they say any age higher than that would be against the tenets of their religion. There is another gentleman who wants to lower the age for the sacrament of marriage to as low as 10, because he says any attempt to raise the age above 10 goes against his religion. The very fact, Sir, that this House has accepted the principle of the Bill and sent it to Select Committee is to my mind proof, that the House was prepared to say : "We paid great attention to the views of people who think that it is against their religion that such and such age should be fixed, but the fact that we sent it up to Select Committee shows that we accept the principle that this House has the right to legislate on the question of marriage in a practical, common-sense and above all in a humanitarian way, and that whereas we must go slow and pay due attention to the views of people who have got religious objections (which I rather think are prejudices due to custom and sometimes to superstition) that we should respect them as far as we can go. We must therefore accept the position that this House has the right to legislate on marriage which is not only a religious sacrament but also a social institution and contract, in as humanitarian, practical and sensible a way as befitting the customs and requirements of the modern age." Having said that, Sir, I think it is now too late in the day to try and plead that the dictates of religion prevent us from going forward, and because some people think religion demands it. As a matter of fact there is great divergence of opinion on the subject—some people think that religion lays down the marriage age and other people say it does not—I cannot go into the religious controversy—because I am not competent to do so. But I do say that there is great divergence of opinion among theologians. Anyway this House has, by its action in sending the Bill to Select Committee, and by the subsequent debate, shown that we cannot agree to drop this Bill or alter its provisions merely because certain people think that their religion requires it. I say that it is too late for such a course and we must proceed with this Bill in a practical common-sense way, paying such attention as we reasonably can to the views of the other side. I submit that the fact that we are putting the age at 14 and not 16 is a great concession to those who hold the orthodox point of view, and I believe that if we go any lower than that, we are ruining the Bill.

Then the second main reason in support of a lower age urged in the course of the debate is, from my point of view, an unfortunate one. It has been said that, in order to preserve society and to preserve the purity of our girlhood and womanhood, girls should be married before puberty. In support of that view, we had quotations from certain writers from the west, books, which I consider unfortunate, to prove that in countries where the marriageable age is high there is great lack of chastity and so forth. Sir, I do not claim to speak on the subject of the morals of other countries. But I would only say that I have had my share of travel. I have travelled throughout the length and breadth of the United States of America, and a great deal about the state of society in this country has been said in the House. I have visited a good many places on the Continent of Europe. While I cannot deny that there are lapses from the moral code in those countries, I must also say that there is much virtue and a high moral standard exists. The standards of purity in England and America are as high as those in any other country. If we look for evil, we can find it anywhere. Have we got no evil behind the purdah in this country ? When we marry our little children who cannot understand what marriage is, is it not in itself a lowering of moral standards ? After all, if we are going to buy morality and purity at the cost of imprisoning little children, just as we put birds into a cage and keep them secure, then what choice or liberty of action is left to them ? What is the use of purchasing purity at that price ? I therefore submit, that at least on these two grounds we cannot agree to the lowering of the marriage age.

Then, again, Sir, if you put down the age at 11 or even at 12, I should be forced to vote against the Bill entirely, and that for this reason. 14 is the age which is considered in the majority of cases in this country to be definitely a post-puberty age. But 11, 12 and even 13 are doubtful ages. It is most difficult to tell the difference between the ages of 11, 12 or 13. It will be quite easy for a man to marry his girl at 11 and say that she was 12 or 13. But 14 is a stage which you can distinguish more easily. It is quite possible to determine if a girl is 14 but if the marriage age is fixed below 14, it will be somewhat difficult to find out if she is 11, 12 or 13.

Another reason why I want this Bill to stand as it is, is that the girls of our country may become educated and fit wives.....

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Is that higher age prevalent anywhere ?

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : I do not know anything about Madras.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Anywhere in India ?

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : I shall leave Mr. Acharya alone for the present. One of the reasons why I feel that 14 should be fixed as the minimum is to enable our girls to proceed with their education. I have been recently travelling on a certain Committee which has been gathering evidence on the question of education of girls, and I find that, even in advanced provinces like Ajmer-Merwara or Delhi, where the marriageable age is not so low as in Madras, witnesses after witnesses have urged that it is impossible to bring compulsory education into force if the marriageable age of girls is to remain at 10 or 11, as it will be a great handicap in the way of the education of these girls. Even in these parts, it is unfortunately true that the system of early marriage is one of the greatest obstacles to the education of girls. This therefore is a very strong reason why the minimum marriageable age should be fixed at 14.

Then again, Sir, I believe that, if the House were to pass this Bill as it stands and not tinker with it, we should be killing two birds with one stone. Before long, we shall probably have an Age of Consent Bill brought up in this House. We have had a Committee sitting on this measure, and it seems to me, Sir, that there is going to be another great controversy on that Bill. I think we can save the controversy if we now fix the marriage age at 14. So far as the law regarding the age of consent goes at any rate, so far as the cases occurring within the relationship of marriages are concerned, the law must remain a dead-letter, and if it is not a dead-letter, it is bound to be a very unpleasant and disagreeable measure. I said so, in my evidence before the Age of Consent Committee, and I believe that the solution of the problems was not to be found in a law for the age of consent but for the raising of the minimum age of marriage. If we agree to the age of 14 as the minimum marriage age for girls we shall then have solved to a great extent this very difficult problem of early marriages. This is another reason why I think that we should not tinker with the present measure, because we shall again arouse the same controversies, we shall have a deputation from the South and deputations from many other places. Therefore if we fix the age at 14, we shall be solving, to some extent, two great difficulties at the same time.

Finally, Sir, I sincerely wish I could support the amendment of my friend, Mr. Mukhtar Singh. I wish, Sir, I could say that the minimum marriage age should be 16. So far as my constituency is concerned, they would welcome 16. In fact 16 is the minimum age at which marriages are contracted for girls in my community. But I do believe that it will not be politic at this time to press the higher age, for the very simple reason that we do not want to stiffen opposition to the other provisions of the Bill. I feel we should proceed slowly.....

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Then why not leave the fixing of the exact age of marriage to the vote of the elected Members ?

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : My reason for that is that the Government Members have also great responsibility, and so far as I am concerned I represent a community.....

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : That is about the principle which is accepted by the Government and may be carried out by them, but the fixing of the exact age may be left to the vote of the elected Members.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : I am sorry I cannot agree with my friend. I do not see that the elected Members alone have any special knowledge of this subject. I believe every Member of this House has got an equal responsibility over a social question which vitally affects the welfare of the country which he either administers or lives in. Therefore, for these reasons, I support the age which has been put down in the Bill.

Dr. B. S. Moonje (Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, it is not very pleasant to have to speak on a subject on which friends differ so much as to appear to run at each others throats, a subject on which Leaders whom we respect have ranged against each other. At the same time, I feel that one has to do his duty, and I, as President of the Hindu Mahasabha, have got to do my duty in this matter. The Hindu Mahasabha finds India clearly divided into two parts—the Northern India above the river Narbada and Southern India, south of the river Narbada. Broadly speaking, Northern India above the river Narbada is in favour of raising the minimum age even to 20, though in some cases they want 18 and 16. (An Honourable Member : “What about Bengal?”) The Southern India, in which I include also Bengal, is in favour of not raising the minimum age of marriage above 12 years of age. (An Honourable Member : “Do you include Bombay?”) Under the circumstances, I, as President, am not bound by the opinions on either side. Under the circumstances I should trust to my own conscience and I shall vote according to it. My conscience is also of two kinds. (Laughter.) One conscience is the medical conscience, as developed by my study of the allopathic and ayurvedic systems of medicine, and it says that no girl ought to be a mother of a child until she is 18, and that no man ought to aspire to be a father until he has attained the age of 25. But there is also some such law as idealism to be tempered with practicalism. Vyavahar-anulomo Dharma. That is what Chanakya has said, that is the dharma,—that is, that idealism is to be tempered with practicalism. And what is practicalism in respect of the idealism of this Bill, looking at it purely from the Hindu point of view? One has to admit it in shame, but the fact is there that the Hindu of today is weak, docile, meek and submissive to aggression and force. (An Honourable Member : “Question?”) (Another Honourable Member : “Servile.”) My Honourable friend says servile, but fortunately the agitation of the last forty years of the Congress has removed that trait of servileness. That is the practical fact before the 22 crores of Hindus today. We have seen the fact, the most humiliating fact two months ago in Bombay, of 12 lakhs of Hindus being cowed down by 4,000 Pathans. We are seeing the actual abduction of girls taking place daily in East Bengal. That is the fact that stares one in the face and we have to take notice of that. Therefore, I feel that I should not allow my medical conscience to prevail, weighing profits and losses in the balance and taking all facts into consideration. Fortunately or unfortunately, we have to live as neighbours with peoples of another community whose standards of sexual morality and manner of observing them particularly in respect of the womenfolk of the Hindu community are different from ours. That fact has to be taken into account and that is one of the facts which has made me temper my idealism with practicalism.

As regards the Dharma Shastras I am not a Pandit, but I have carefully studied the Dharma Shastras. I am not proficient in Sanskrit literature, but I know Sanskrit and can write and read it and I may assure my Honourable friends, whether they belong to the orthodox class or whether they belong to the reformed class,—I assure by Honourable friends that, throughout the history of the ten thousand years or more of Hindu culture in India, every sort of experiment in sociology and systems of marriage has been tried. No orthodox man who has studied his Dharma Shashtra and the Dharamshastrie History of the Hindu culture as seen in the Puranas can come and say that there was no time in India when there was not even the system of marriage based on civil contract, and that there was no time in India when marriages used to take place above 16. In those days these kinds of marriages were regarded as absolutely according to the Dharma Shastras. Those who have studied the Puranas, those who have studied particularly the Mahabharata will see the reason why eventually opinion has veered round to the fact that marriages, if we stick to our conceptions of sexual morality, and our conceptions of the sexual circumstances under which marriages ought to take place, should be performed about the time of puberty. Well, the best thing that our Dharma Shastras have said is that the marriage of a girl should take place about the time of puberty, and if the father and the mother do not perform the marriage of the girl at the time she should wait for three years after she has attained puberty and then the girl is free to find a husband for herself without caring for the parents. That is the general position of the Dharma Shastras at the present moment, and no orthodox man can say, that if we pass this Bill here even as it is, it is going to offend the Shastras. But the custom is there and to those who are born and bred up in that custom as I am, the pang of the wrench is naturally excruciating....

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Is it going to offend the Srutis ?

Dr. B. S. Moonje : This is not the time nor the place where Dharma Shastras ought to be debated upon. I know of circumstances, and my Honourable friend knows of them too well, when we, modern people, drafting the sections of the Indian Penal Code in modern language, find, that when a section is taken before the Judge, two lawyers of equal eminence stand against each other giving their own interpretations of the section, as we have seen friends here fighting and running at each other's throats. So, the question here is not one of the interpretation of the Dharma Shashtra or the Smriti or the Veda. The question is entirely and purely one of what is practical and what will be to the practical good of the society as it is today. At least that is the point of view from which I look at it.

My Honourable friends are enthusiastic over this Bill, and want to have the Bill passed as it is—I would not be very sorry if the Bill is passed, provided they understand their responsibility. Their responsibility is, as I say, this. After this Bill is passed, if the number of abductions of Hindu girls increases, they ought to be the first to go and give adequate protection to them where they take place. It won't do to approach the Government praying for protection, and particularly, for the Hindu, it won't do praying for protection at the hands of the Government. We, mostly Hindus, have been agitating for Swaraj and Independence. What right have you then to go to the Government and approach them praying for protection where you cannot protect your own girls ? What right have you to say that the Government ought to do its duty if it is not bent on doing its duty ? As our duty is to agitate for Swaraj and Independence, so the Government's duty is, so long as it is the Government of the land, to give adequate protection even to the man who works for Independence and to the man who works for Swaraj—to both of them equally. But what right have you to ask the Government to do its duty ; what right have you to claim protection from the Government, when you do not do your duty ? Therefore, I am laying this responsibility upon the shoulders of those who are so enthusiastic—I tell them, “Look here, if by passing this Bill by your enthusiasm, abductions increase, yours ought to be the first responsibility of giving adequate protection to those poor helpless girls.”

Some persons with quite good intentions have taken me to task and feel rather surprised that I should have risen to support the amendment of my friend, Kumar Ganganad Sinha for fixing the minimum age of marriage of girls at 12. They have been finding me rather inconveniently enthusiastic over army matters and yet they find that these two things cannot be reconciled....

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Impossible.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : My Honourable friend Colonel Gidney says that it is impossible to reconcile them. The pity of it is that the more elderly he grows the more his enthusiasm gets the better of his reason, for my friend ought to know that the class of men who are known as Europeans and Englishmen in whom he aspires to be immersed so that he may lose his worthy identity but who still spurn him aside, have the minimum age of marriage of their girls according to their law, fixed at 12.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : I do not aspire to that class at all. The speaker evidently envies the European his lot. You had better make sure of your law.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : So far as I know, that was the law of Englishmen hardly six months ago—I doubt if it is not the law even now. Up to six months ago, the minimum age of marriage of English girls was 12.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Now, it is 16.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : My lawyer friend assures me that it is now 16. Now, up to a short time ago the minimum age of marriage was 12 for the great English race which has acquired an Empire over which the sun never sets. (An Honourable Member : “There are no marriages at that age.”) If with the minimum age of marriage at 12 they were able to defeat the great German race, why can't you do the same ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : What is the percentage of marriage at that age ?

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Does my friend Pandit Bhargava mean to say that, if an Englishman could attain that stage of development under the law of the minimum age of 12, he is incapable of that ? He is not confident of his own self. The Hindu Mahasabha is confident and will carry on an agitation. Do not lose your confidence. The Hindu Mahasabha will enable you to attain that development. From the point of view of pure merit, I do not say that the Bill should not be passed, but take care that your enthusiasm does not get the better of your reason and practicality. Now, my appeal both to my Hindu friends and my Muhammadan friends is this—are you going to give up your own civilization and take to the standards of marriage as they exist in Europe, or are you prepared to stick to your own standards of morality applauded on all hands and sanctified by the heavy traditions of valour and gentlemanliness of ages past.

L11CPB(LA)

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member, if he will permit me, whether there is any town in Great Britain, as there is a town in India, Dharbhanga, where, out of 1,000 girls of between 5 and 10, 565 are married ?

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I appeal to calm reason. You have to make up your mind one way or the other, whether you will stick to your own morality, or adopt the standards of morality as they exist in European countries. I am not going to deal with it in detail as everybody is aware of it—and my Honourable friend Diwan Chaman Lall very much more than all of us combined. The ideal of our Dharma Shastras would have been the ideal of the whole world if we had been self-reliant and independent. Our philosophy of the Vedas and the Upanishads has appealed to the best brains of Europe, and I am sure that our sociology also will appeal to the best brains of Europe.

I have an appeal to make to the Government and the Honourable the Home Member. I quite understand Government not being prepared to lay themselves open to the charge of being called reactionary by their opposition in the case of a law which makes for social progress. I am obliged to the Home Member for the support he has given to the Bill. Once in a life-time Government have come to the support of a non-official Bill which makes for the real progress of the nation. Having thus vindicated their position before the bar of public opinion of the world, would it be too much to ask them to remain neutral as to the question whether 18 or 16 or 14 or 12 or 10 should be the minimum age, and to leave the subject to the common sense and patriotism of the people who are sitting here and whom it concerns most vitally ? There will be occasions when the bona fides of the Government will be tested. I am glad that this time they stand vindicated before the public opinion of the world. It is time for them now to say, "Now, Gentlemen, this is your domestic question ; we are not going to impose upon you our standards of morality and culture that prevail in Europe. It is for you, Hindus and Mussalmans to think it out patriotically, from the point of view of idealism versus practicalism and the greatest good of your future generations and vote as you deem best". I trust my appeal will not go in vain. I support the amendment of my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha.

Several Honourable Members : Let the question be now put.

Mr. Deputy President : I think there are still several Honourable Members to speak. The House will now adjourn till 11 o'clock, tomorrow morning.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 17th September, 1929.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 17th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN :

Mr. John Reginald Trevor Booth, M.L.A. (Government of India : Nominated Official).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LABOUR SITUATION IN GOLMURI.

546. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the labour situation in Golmuri is extremely bad ? And have Government received any representations from the Indian Chamber of Commerce, or other bodies and individuals, regarding the present labour situation in Golmuri ? What steps have Government taken, or do they propose to take to bring about a settlement of the trouble there ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government are aware that there have been labour troubles in the Tinplate Company's works at Golmuri. They have received representations from certain bodies, including the Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, who have been informed that under section 3 of the Trade Disputes Act, 1929, the question whether a Board of Conciliation or a Court of Inquiry should or should not be constituted in connection with the strike rests entirely within the discretion of the Local Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Sir, are Government aware that the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council carried an adjournment motion the other day by way of censure upon the Local Government for their attitude in this strike ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have seen a report to that effect in the papers, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the Local Government is taking sides with the Company in this matter ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that the Local Government sent a Commissioner to inquire as to the feasibility of setting up a Court of Inquiry or a Board of Conciliation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member why if the facts are correct, the Government of India did not make a representation to the Local Government asking them to set up a Board of Conciliation or a Court of Inquiry in regard to this matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have already stated that the matter is one in regard to which the discretion rests solely with the Local Government under the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Is it a fact that the Bihar and Orissa Council has passed a vote of censure on the Government ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code is used against the strikers but not against the Pathans who are employed by the Company ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Has the Honourable Member the latest information in regard to the strike situation at Golmuri ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have seen the account given by the Member of the Bihar Council in charge of this particular subject in the provincial Legislative Council in connection with the motion for adjournment. I dare say that in due course we shall receive some official information from the Local Government.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Do I take it that the Honourable Member does not intend to use his good offices with the Local Government in order to bring about a settlement of the situation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am pretty sure that the whole question will be raised in this House in connection with the Resolution which is coming on on the 24th, and I prefer not to express any opinion on the question now.

Mr. B. Das : Do I take it that the Government of India cannot interfere in the trade dispute at Golmuri, because the Local Government takes cover under the Trade Disputes Act and do not want to appoint a Conciliation Board ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is the position, Sir. The power under the Act rests with the Local Government. The Government of India have undoubtedly certain powers of superintendence, etc., but so far they have thought it undesirable to exercise those powers.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire if the Honourable Member considered whether he was giving too much power to the Local Government when he passed this Trade Disputes Act ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Well, Sir, that Act was passed by this House, not by me.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether he has any information as to why the Local Government refused to act in this matter when they were asked to do so by a large number of representative bodies throughout India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The spokesman of the Local Government has fully explained their position in the matter in the course of the debate on the motion for adjournment in the provincial Legislative Council the other day.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have Government called for a report from the Local Government on this matter ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the Honourable Member asked the Local Government for a report ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : We have been in constant communication with the Local Government in regard to the matter.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : What is the latest report which the Local Government have sent to the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That, Sir, is embodied in the statement made by the Honourable Mr. Whitty in the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council in connection with that particular debate.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do the Government of India propose themselves to take any further action or to suggest any further action to the Local Government ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That is a matter which is still engaging the consideration of the Government of India.

HEALTH OF BOYS IN MUNICIPAL BOARD PRIMARY SCHOOLS IN DELHI.

547. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that, after the introduction of compulsory primary education in Delhi, the health of boys in Municipal Board primary schools has gone down, so much so that a very large number have consumptive tendencies and a similarly large number have defective eyes ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the causes of this trouble, and what steps, if any, have been taken to check the growth of the disease ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Compulsory primary education has, since 1926, been gradually introduced and is now in force in six of the nine areas of the Delhi Municipality. Systematic medical inspection of school children was started in 1928. Medical examination in that year showed that 7.4 per cent. of the children examined were suffering from enlarged glands generally of tuberculous origin ; that 35.8 per cent. suffered from trachoma, and 11.4 per cent. from a slight, and 20.3 per cent. from a serious, degree of defective vision. There are no figures for the period prior to 1928 with which comparison could be made and it is impossible to say whether the health of school children has been improving or deteriorating.

(b) In view of the answer to (a), this question hardly arises, but it may be stated that special hours have been set apart in the Civil Hospital for the treatment of Municipal school children, and efforts are being made to ensure that children who require treatment shall receive it. The present school buildings are often unsuitable and overcrowded, but Government are informed that the Committee are doing what they can to improve the accommodation.

GRANT OF AN ALLOWANCE TO OFFICERS OF THE PUNJAB GOVERNMENT SERVING IN DELHI.

548. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if at the time of the creation of the Delhi province there was an understanding that the Punjab Government would lend officers for ten years ? Does the same understanding still continue ?

(b) Do these officers get any special allowance for serving in Delhi ? If not, are Government prepared to consider the question of allowing them a special allowance ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(b) No allowances are given for service in Delhi as such, but special allowances have been sanctioned for specific reasons and in particular cases. The Government of India do not consider that there is sufficient reason for revising the existing arrangements.

NUMBER OF RESIDENTS OF DELHI APPOINTED TO THE PROVINCIAL CIVIL SERVICE OF THE DELHI PROVINCE.

549. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of residents of Delhi who have been taken in the judicial and executive line of the Provincial Civil Service from the time of the creation of the Delhi Province up to date ?

(b) Have Government found this number to be adequate for the province ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) and (b). Local Governments of Governor's provinces control recruitment to their respective provincial services. The Government of India have no information of the total number of inhabitants of the Delhi Province who have been admitted to the provincial services of the different provinces, but since the creation of the Delhi Province, 24 inhabitants of that Province have been admitted to the Punjab Civil Service, 10 on the executive and 14 on the judicial side.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A CIRCUIT COURT AT DELHI.

550. *Lala Rang Behari Lal : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if there is any truth in the information that a Circuit High Court will be established in Delhi from 1930 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the establishment of a Circuit High Court in Delhi has the approval of the Honourable the Chief Justice and other Judges of the Lahore High Court ?

(c) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to consider the advisability of establishing a Circuit High Court in Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I have nothing to add to the answer given to Mr. Abdul Haye's question No. 421 on the subject on the 11th September.

EMPLOYMENT OF OFFICERS OF THE ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS ON DUTIES OF REGULAR ARMY OFFICERS.

551. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if any officers of the Army in India Reserve of Officers, other than Government servants, have ever been called to service other than that referred to in para. 26-A of Regulations for the Army in India Reserve of Officers ? If so, under what other regulations has the employment been ordered or made ?

(b) If no other regulations exist, are Government prepared to modify the restriction in Appendix F so as to enable such officers, if they so desire, being employed freely, like other Regular Army Officers, on any special or ordinary duties under the Army Department of the Government of India or at Command Headquarters, if they possess the necessary qualifications and experience for the performance of such duties in order to relieve the Indian Army Officers for their more important and purely military duties ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes. Owing to a shortage of regular officers, a few officers of the Reserve have been employed temporarily with the Indian Signal Corps, and also certain others have been called up for service with irregular corps under the Foreign and Political Department. These officers were obtained by calling for volunteers, and it was not necessary to make use of any particular regulations.

(b) I am not sure that I understand the Honourable Member's question. If the suggestion is that certain regular officers attached to Army Headquarters and Command Headquarters are not now engaged on important and purely military duties, I can assure him that this is not the case. When occasions arise on which the services of officers of the Reserve can be usefully employed on part time military duties, the provisions of Appendix 'F' of the Regulations have been found adequate for the purpose, and Government do not see any grounds for modifying them. If, however, the suggestion is that officers of the Reserve could be employed permanently on duties now performed by regular officers, the answer is that this would practically amount to opening a new field of recruitment for the regular Army and there would be no justification for retaining the officers themselves in the Reserve.

PERIOD OF TRAINING FIXED FOR ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

552. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Are Government aware that the period of training fixed for the Army in India Reserve of Officers, as per para. 20 of their Regulations, is considered short and inadequate, particularly in the case of officers belonging to the categories other than 2, 3 and 6, and do Government propose to increase their training period to at least 30 days, particularly in the case of categories other than 2, 3 and 6, if these officers so desire ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Government recognise that the periods of training fixed for some categories of Army in India Reserve officers might with advantage be extended. They do not, however, propose at present to introduce any change in this respect, firstly, owing to the considerable extra cost involved, and, secondly, because many officers of the Reserve cannot spare more time from their civil employment than they do at present for military training.

EXTENSION OF RAILWAY CONCESSIONS TO THE ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

553. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is it a fact that all captains and subalterns serving with the Army in India, including those of staff services and Departments, and regular Officers of the Royal Air Force, not above the rank of Flight-Lieutenant, and Indian officers and sub-assistant surgeons with the honorary rank of Captain or Lieutenant, when travelling by rail at their own expense, are, on production of leave concession voucher Form D, allowed to travel 1st class on payment of 2nd class fares ? If so, do Government propose to extend this concession to the Army in India Reserve of Officers ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The same concession is admissible to an officer of the Army in India Reserve while he is actually serving with the Army, but not at other times. Government see no reason to alter the present rule.

BRIBERY IN VILLAGE POST OFFICES.

554. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Will Government please state if it is a fact that the Honourable Additional Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur, (C. P.) in his judgment on the 26th November, 1928, in criminal appeal No. 2133 of 1928, upholding the conviction, has cast aspersions to the effect that postal stamp marks on post-cards, which were exhibits in defence, could be easily secured by anybody by bribing menials at village post offices; and whether the towns of Chhindwara, a district headquarters, and of Chandur, a tahsil headquarters, are mere villages as the Honourable Additional Judicial Commissioner remarks ?

(b) Have Government made any inquiries in the matter and, if so, will Government be pleased to lay the results of the inquiries on the table ?

(c) If bribery is so rampant in such village post offices, what steps have Government taken or do they propose to take to root out the hated system of bribery ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b) and (c). Inquiries are being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

FIELD MANŒUVRES OF THE INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE AND UNIVERSITY TRAINING CORPS.

555. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : (1) Will Government please state if field manœuvres of Territorial Forces and Officers Training Corps in England are ever held ?

(2) If so, how many manœuvres were held during the last five years ?

(3) Are such manœuvres held of the Indian Territorial Forces and the University Training Corps ? If so, how many such manœuvres were held during the last five years and, if not, why not ?

(4) Is it a fact that the regular Army participates in such manœuvres in England ? If so, does the Indian Army similarly participate in the manœuvres of the Indian Territorial Forces ?

(5) Do Government propose to hold an All-India manœuvre of the Indian Territorial Forces ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (1) to (4). Organised manœuvres are not held specially for the Territorial Army and Officers Training Corps in England. Units of the Territorial Army and Officers Training Corps go into camp for about a fortnight every year, during which field operations are sometimes carried out in conjunction with regular troops, if there are any stationed in the neighbourhood. Similarly, the training of Indian Territorial Force units is performed in an annual camp and when regular troops are available they are used to assist the Territorial units in carrying out elementary field operations.

(5) I am afraid that the distances in India, the expense entailed in carrying out field operations on a large scale and the stage of development so far reached by the Indian Territorial Force make it quite impossible to contemplate holding Territorial manœuvres in this country on the scale suggested by the Honourable Member.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Has the Honourable Member seen in the papers that the Territorial Forces in England are taking part in general manœuvres ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir ; I have seen that. It is not strictly correct to call them Territorial manœuvres. They were manœuvres in which the Territorials and the Regular Army both took part.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Will the Honourable Member say if a similar arrangement could be made in India ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : As I have explained, when the Territorial units of this country go into camp, the Regular units in the neighbourhood do take part in the operations which are performed by the Indian Territorial Force.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : What I want to know is that, if there are regular manœuvres of the Regular Army, will the Territorial Forces be allowed to take part in them ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Government will consider that point.

NOMINATION OF CADETS FROM UNIVERSITY TRAINING CORPS IN INDIA.

556. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : Are Government aware that in addition to the cadets admitted half-yearly on the results of the competitive examination, a certain number are also admitted on the nomination of Headmasters of approved schools maintaining contingents of the Officers Training Corps ? If so, do Government propose to introduce a similar system of nominations from the University Training Corps of India, as one of the means of adding to half-yearly recruitments through competitive examinations as at present prevailing for the filling up of yearly vacancies which remain mostly unfilled ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : In the first part of his question I assume that the Honourable Member is referring to the practice in England. If this is the case, the answer is in the affirmative ; except that the nomination of the Headmaster does not absolve the boy from passing the examination. Government do not propose to introduce a similar system in India chiefly for the reason that the majority of the Principals and Headmasters of educational institutions in this country can have had little or no opportunity of coming in contact with Army life and of knowing its requirements, and it is not desired to reduce the vacancies available by open competition in favour of any particular institutions.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Does the Honourable Member mean to say that the students who have been recommended by the Headmasters are also required to pass the competitive examination ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir ; they have to pass the competitive examination as well. The privilege given to Headmasters at home was of distinct value at a time when the number of boys who qualified for Sandhurst was greater than the number of vacancies at the college. That is to say, when a large number of boys qualified themselves for admission to the college and there were not sufficient vacancies to take them. In that case, the nomination by the Headmaster was useful. That position no longer obtains at home and any boy who qualifies for Sandhurst is now practically certain of getting a vacancy.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Are Government aware that there are certain Headmasters and Principals of Colleges in this country who have got experience of military life and have been officers in His Majesty's Army ? In their case, are Government prepared to attach special value to their recommendations for the nomination of cadets ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I am aware of that fact, but I have given the answer already in the answer to the main question. I have said that it is not desirable to reduce the number of vacancies available by open competition in favour of any particular institutions.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : In view of the fact that the vacancies which are available for open competition are not, as a rule, filled in, is it not possible to fill them by means of such recommendations ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir. As I have already explained nomination does not absolve the boy from passing the competitive examination either in England or anywhere else. If the Headmaster were to nominate a boy, he would still have to go up for the competitive examination.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : What I meant to say was whether Government are prepared to attach special value to the recommendations made by such Headmasters and Principals who have had a good record of military life themselves ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : There is no provision in an open competitive examination for attaching special importance to recommendations from anybody.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : There is some provision so far as the viva voce examination goes, where special marks are allotted for the candidate's general capabilities. In view of that, should not special consideration be shown to candidates who are recommended by competent Headmasters and Principals ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The school record is certainly taken into consideration, but I do not think it is possible for Government to discriminate between the recommendations of one Headmaster and another.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Will the Honourable Member say if the information is correct that boys recommended by the Headmasters are not required to pass through Sandhurst and are taken directly into the Commission ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir. The boys who are nominated at home are required to compete in the open examination and pass through Sandhurst exactly like any other boys.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have Government tried to establish officers' Training Corps at schools or colleges in India by instituting.....

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I do not think that question arises out of the answer I have already given.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The Honourable Member said that Headmasters of schools here were not in a position to nominate boys. I want to know whether Government themselves have provided them with opportunities to nominate boys ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I was merely stating an existing fact, which is that the Principals and Headmasters of Educational institutions in this country do not, as a rule, possess the knowledge of Army requirements which the Headmasters of schools and colleges at home do possess.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether members of the Officers' Training Corps are taken as officers in the Supplementary Reserve in England without being asked to pass any examination ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I must ask for notice of that question.

INTRODUCTION IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF A BILL FOR PHYSICAL TRAINING, ETC., OF STUDENTS.

557. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) Are Government aware that in 1925, Dr. B. S. Moonje, when he was a member of the Central Provinces Legislative Council had given notice of a Bill to provide for physical training, military drill and rifle practice for the Central Provinces school students and that the Governor General had held that the Bill fell within the scope of section 80-A (3) (e) of the Government of India Act, that is, that the Bill sought to regulate a Central Subject and that he had therefore refused to grant the necessary sanction ?

(b) Are Government aware that Dr. Moonje, after he became a member of this Assembly, had given notice of a similar Bill to provide for physical training, military drill and rifle practice for Indian boys attending educational institutions, and that previous sanction was refused to the Bill here also on the ground that, in so far as the training proposed by the Bill was to be carried out by the Provincial educational authorities, the measure was one which should be introduced in a Provincial Council ?

(c) Are Government aware that thereafter a similar Bill with suitable modifications was again sought to be introduced in the Central Provinces Legislative Council by Mr. V. V. Kaliker, B.A., LL.B., M.L.C., who had given notice of the Bill on 30th October 1928, and that he was informed in November 1928 that previous sanction is required for the Bill and that "action is being taken in respect of the requisite sanctions?"

(d) Are Government aware that, though nearly 11 months have passed the matter has not yet been definitely settled as to whether the necessary previous sanction will or will not be granted?

(e) In view of the reply given to Dr. Moonje that "in so far as the training proposed by the Bill was to be carried out by the provincial educational authorities, the measure was one which should be introduced in a Provincial Council", will Government please state if they propose to grant the necessary sanction to the Bill of Mr. V. V. Kaliker, M.L.C., of which he has given notice in the Central Provinces Legislative Council?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : (a) Government are aware of the Bill submitted by Dr. Moonje when a Member of the Central Provinces Legislative Council. Sanction was refused by the Governor General to that Bill not, as suggested in the question, because the Bill regulated a Central Subject, but because it regulated a Central Subject in a manner not acceptable to the Government of India.

(b) The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) The Honourable Member is presumably referring to a communication addressed to Mr. Kaliker by the Local Government. On this point the Government of India have no information.

(d) and (e). The Government of India first became aware of Mr. Kaliker's Bill on receiving a letter dated the 5th January, 1929, from the Government of the Central Provinces. The matter has been under the consideration of the Departments of the Government of India concerned, and in view of the importance of the principles raised in the Bill it has been decided to address all Local Governments before making any recommendation to the Governor General.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Eleven months have already passed. How much more time will the Government of India take to decide whether the previous sanction is or is not necessary, and if it is necessary, whether it should or should not be given?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : The Government of India, as I have already said, have decided to address Local Governments before making any recommendation to the Governor General. It follows that, until the Government of India receive replies from the Local Governments, no action could be taken.

Sardar Kartar Singh : Is the legal point to be considered or is it something else?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : It is not the legal point, but it is the matter of policy that has to be considered.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Is the objection based on the ground that it is a Central Subject or that it is a Central Subject regulated in a particular manner? I shall give the Honourable Member the reply which I received from the Central Provinces Government :

"I am to say that your Bill requires the previous sanction of the Governor General under section 80-A (3) (c) and (e) of the Government of India Act".

That was the reply I received. I should like to know how these clauses apply to this Bill?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Section 80-A (3) (e) of the Government of India Act says, "regulating any Central Subject". The answer I gave was that sanction was refused because it regulated a Central Subject in a manner not acceptable to the Government of India.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : My point is which is the Central Subject that is regulated and how it is regulated.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : The Central Subject is "control of arms and ammunition". If the Honourable Member would look at the Devolution Rules, Schedule I, part I, item 32, he will find that "control of arms and ammunition" is a Central Subject.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Does the Honourable Member know that it is already provided that the subject of granting licenses to Rifle Associations should be entrusted to Local Governments by Rule 32 of the Arms Act? (Hear, hear.)

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I am not aware of that. If the Honourable Member wants any further information on the subject, I should be obliged if he will give notice.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I should like the Honourable Member to consider it from that point of view.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Yes.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But the notice of a question would require ten days' time?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Then wait till the Delhi Session.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that a Resolution dealing with the physical training of students and their instruction in the use of rifles was passed in the last Session of the Legislative Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : Yes.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that that Resolution was passed with the consent of Government?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : I am aware of that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : When did the correspondence with the Local Governments begin?

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : That I am not in a position to say off-hand, because I have not got the dates in my head.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Perhaps the Army Secretary will give the dates.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : That Resolution was accepted by the Government of India in the Department of Education, Health and Lands. (Laughter.)

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : As we have got a representative of the Department of Education, Health and Lands in this Assembly, will he throw some light on the point ?

Sir Frank Noyce : In giving a reply to this question, I am forestalling the answer which is shortly to be given to a similar question on the subject. The Local Governments have recently been addressed in regard to that part of the Resolution which relates to the introduction of compulsory games and physical training. They have yet to be addressed with regard to that part of the Resolution which relates to the encouragement of the use of miniature rifle ranges.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Why have the Local Governments not been addressed on a subject on which the Legislative Assembly laid so much stress ?

Sir Frank Noyce : That really is a question for the Home Department (Laughter) which, I understand, proposes to address them shortly

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : This House has the significant good fortune of having the Honourable the Home Member also in its midst and I am sure he will be able to give us final reasons for not dealing with the subject till now.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The matter is one which requires very careful consideration and the Government of India has not yet finally arrived at a conclusion as to the terms in which the Local Governments should be addressed.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why not pass it on to the Foreign Secretary ? (Laughter.)

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the Honourable the Home Member aware that that Resolution was passed with the consent of the Government of India during the last Session ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Yes, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Was not then the object of the Resolution accepted by the Government of India ? If so, what is it that is engaging the consideration of the Government now ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I should not like to give the Honourable Member a reply on the spur of the moment, because the matter is one of great complexity. If the Honourable Member gives me notice, I shall be glad to consider the terms of my reply.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But the Resolution was passed with the consent of the Government.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether the principle of the matter is being considered, or whether the Home Department is engaged in evolving a suitable scheme for reference to the Local Governments ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : We are considering the terms in which the Local Governments could be addressed in a manner which will cover the whole question adequately.

APPOINTMENT OF SIKHS TO THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

558. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that there are 25 officers in the senior grade of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office and that there is not a single Sikh ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is no Sikh gazetted officer in this office ?

(c) Is it a fact that there is no Sikh accountant even ?

(d) To show that steps are being taken to safeguard the Sikh interests in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office since the issue of the Home Department Memorandum No. F. 176/25-Estts., dated the 15th March 1926, will Government be pleased to state the number of Sikhs taken in this office as against Hindus and Muhammadans ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) There are 7 Gazetted Officers in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office.

The answer to part (b) is in the affirmative and to part (c) in the negative.

(d) Government regret that, for reasons already stated in the House, they are unable to give figures of the communal composition of individual offices, but I may assure the Honourable Member that the rules for recruitment of staff in the Railway Accounts Department make provision to prevent the preponderance of any one community in that Department. These rules were promulgated in consultation with the Standing Finance Committee.

APPOINTMENT OF SIKHS AS ENGINEER SUPERVISORS IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

559. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that an examination for Engineering Supervisorship in the Telegraph Department was held recently at different centres ?

(b) If so, (1) how many Sikhs applied for the examination, (2) how many of them were permitted to compete, and (3) how many of them were selected for appointment ?

(c) In view of the fact that there is not a single Sikh in the Service, do Government propose to take a sufficient number of Sikhs ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) (1) Fourteen, of whom only eleven appeared before the Selection Board.

(2) Five, of whom only one actually appeared at the examination.

(3) The results of the examination have not yet been declared.

(c) The rules framed for the examination reserve 30 per cent. of the vacancies to be filled by Government by nomination, with reference to the results of the examination. In filling these vacancies the interests of the Sikhs and of other minority communities will be given due consideration by Government.

PERCENTAGE OF SIKHS IN THE RAILWAY BOARD.

560. *Sardar Kartar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to place on the table a statement showing the percentage of Sikhs, Muhammadans, Hindus and Anglo-Indians in the Railway Board office on the 1st April, 1929, as against the previous year ? If there is a decrease in the percentage of Sikhs what are the reasons therefor ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am laying the required statement on the table. The decrease in the percentage of Sikhs is due to the discharge of one man for misconduct.

Statement showing the percentage of Sikhs, Muhammadans, Hindus and Anglo-Indians in the Railway Board on the 1st April, 1928, and 1st April, 1929.

| Community.            | 1st April 1928. | 1st April 1929. | Remarks. |
|-----------------------|-----------------|-----------------|----------|
| Sikhs .. .. .         | 3.25            | 2.5             |          |
| Muhammadans .. .. .   | 15.44           | 15.00           |          |
| Hindus .. .. .        | 65.04           | 66.66           |          |
| Anglo-Indians .. .. . | 9.75            | 9.16            |          |

RULES FOR RECRUITMENT TO THE RAILWAY AUDIT AND ACCOUNTS SERVICE.

561. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Have any rules for recruitment in the Railway Audit and Accounts Service been framed ? If so, will Government please place a copy of them on the table ? If not, how is recruitment to this service being made ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of holding competitive examinations for this service and for other subordinate accounts services ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Recruitment to the Railway Accounts Service is to be partly by direct appointment by competitive examination in India conducted by the Public Service Commission and partly by promotion from the subordinate grades. In the latter case the selection for promotion will be made in consultation with the Public Service Commission. The rules for the examination were issued in a Finance Department Resolution of the 25th July, 1929, published in the Gazette of India of the 27th July, 1929.

(b) Recruitment to subordinate establishments will be made as stated in the rules issued with the Railway Board's circular No. 5565-F. of the 31st July, 1929, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. All first appointments to the subordinate establishments, except the transfer of qualified men from other Government Departments or Railways will be made by competitive examination. Thereafter promotions to higher ranks will be subject to passing the departmental examination and will be by selection, depending on merit and seniority.

PROPORTION OF SIKHS IN THE IMPERIAL POLICE SERVICE IN THE PUNJAB.

562. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) What is the proportion of Sikhs as against Hindus, Muhammadans and Europeans in the Imperial Police Service in the Punjab ?

(b) If the percentage of Sikhs is far less than their share, do Government still propose to give the next vacancy to a Muhammadan ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) The proportions are as follows :

|                     |              |
|---------------------|--------------|
| Europeans .. .. .   | 75 per cent. |
| Muhammadans .. .. . | 13 per cent. |
| Hindus .. .. .      | 3 per cent.  |
| Sikhs .. .. .       | 4 per cent.  |

(b) It will be observed that Sikhs constitute 20 per cent. of the Indian members of the service. The Government of India have not laid down any definite percentage for the representation of minority communities, and there is no proposal before them to give the next vacancy to a member of any particular community.

APPOINTMENT OF SIKHS AS SUPERINTENDENTS AND ASSISTANT SECRETARIES IN CERTAIN DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

563. *Sardar Kartar Singh : Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the Sikh community has no representation in the Superintendent's and Assistant's grades in the Commerce Department, Industries and Labour Department, Army Department, Home Department, Legislative Department, and Legislative Assembly Department ? If so, do Government propose to take steps to check the preponderance of other communities and appoint Sikhs in the future vacancies to give them their adequate share in these grades ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The reply to the first part of the Honourable Member's question is in the affirmative. As to the second part, vacancies in the grade of Superintendent are ordinarily filled by departmental promotion. As explained recently in this House, the measures adopted by Government to redress communal inequalities refer to fresh recruitment and not to departmental promotions, which must continue to be regulated by considerations of seniority and merit. As regards the Assistants' grade, the new scheme of recruitment sanctioned last December provides for the recruitment of external candidates direct to the First Division for half of the vacancies which occur, and this will provide an avenue for the employment of members of minority communities, including Sikhs, in accordance with the principles already laid down by Government.

ABSENCE OF SIKHS IN CERTAIN GOVERNMENT OFFICES.

564. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that there is no Sikh in the Office of the Controller of Railway Accounts ?

(b) Is it also a fact that there is no Sikh in the Office of the Controller of Railway Audits ?

(c) If the replies to parts (a) and (b) are in the affirmative, how do Government justify the absence of Sikh representation on the staff of these offices ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No. There are two Sikhs on the staff.

(b) I presume the Honourable Member is referring to the office of the Director of Railway Audit which was known as the office of the Accountant General, Railways, before the separation of accounts from audit. There were, I understand, three Sikhs in that office, of whom two were among the staff transferred to the office of the Controller of Railway Accounts in April last with the accounts work transferred under the new system. The third was selected to join the Training School of Accounts in Calcutta. At present there is no Sikh in the office of the Director of Railway Audit.

(c) As I explained in answer to a question put by my Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub the other day, it is impossible for each individual office, particularly when the clerical staff employed is small, to be recruited on communal lines.

RECRUITMENT OF SIKHS IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

565. *Sardar Kartar Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, issued to his subordinate offices a general letter No. A.M.-516/12-27, dated the 22nd November, 1927, on the subject of representation of minority communities and that these orders referred to fresh recruitments ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the exact number of officiating, temporary and permanent vacancies which occurred in the office of the Director General as well as in the Amritsar, Lahore and Jullundur Divisions since the issue of the above letter, and how many of the posts were given to Sikhs ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

NUMBER OF SIKHS APPOINTED TO CERTAIN POSTS IN THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

566. *Sardar Kartar Singh : Will Government be pleased to state how many vacancies amongst clerks, T. T. Inspectors and Audit Inspectors have been filled up by the Chief Auditor, North Western Railway, since 1st April, 1928, and how many of them have gone to Sikhs as against other communities ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member as soon as it is received.

MILITARY SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES IN INDIA.

567. *Dr. B. S. Moonje : (a) How many military schools and colleges, if any, are there in India ?

(b) Where are they situated ?

(c) What is the curriculum of literary and military education in them ?

(d) Are the final examinations of these schools and colleges recognised by any of the Universities, and, if so, what are the standards to which they are equivalent ? If not recognised, and if a boy passing the final examination chooses not to enter into the Army, how are his educational qualifications computed for civil avocations ?

(e) What average monthly or yearly charges has a student in these schools and colleges to pay for his education ?

(f) Which of them are open to the general public and which of them only to the sons and wards of men already serving in the Army ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Three.

(b) The Prince of Wales' Royal Indian Military College is situated at Dehra Dun and the two King George's Royal Indian Military Schools at Jhelum and Jullundur.

(c) The curriculum of the Dehra Dun College is based on the syllabus of the Entrance Examinations for the Army, Air Force and Indian Marine. The syllabus of the Jhelum and Jullundur Schools is arranged so as to give a boy a general education up to the ordinary 8th Standard.

So far as literary education is concerned, no purely military subjects are included in the curriculum of any of these institutions. In fact the education can only be called military to this extent, that the boys have a military career in view, and the general policy and discipline of the College and Schools are directed towards the development of soldier-like qualities.

(d) The Dehra Dun diploma examination, which all cadets take before going up for the Army Entrance examination, is the same examination as that for the Chiefs' Colleges diploma. It has been recognised by almost all the Universities in India as equivalent to their Matriculation or corresponding examination. The Final examination of the King George's Military Schools is equivalent to and carries with it the advantages of the " Vernacular Final " examination.

The second part of the question does not arise.

(e) The fees for an ordinary boy at Dehra Dun are Rs. 1,500 per annum. Soldiers' sons are eligible for admission at reduced fees, according to their financial circumstances, at the discretion of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

The normal fees at Jhelum and Jullundur are Rs. 7-8-0 a month. Fatherless boys and boys whose fathers are in receipt of a 50 per cent. or higher disability pension are educated free, provided that their total pension is less than Rs. 30 a month.

(f) The Dehra Dun College is open to the general public. The King George's Schools are only open to the children of men who have served in the Army.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Is the Honourable Member aware that on an average a student has to spend about Rs. 300 per month for his education in the Dehra Dun College ?

L12CPB(LA)

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : As I have said, the fees at the College amount to Rs. 1,500 a year. There are of course other incidental expenses, which parents have to defray on behalf of their boys, such as clothes, holiday expenses, and so on, but our information is that the total cost to a parent should not in any case exceed Rs. 2,000 a year.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Does this fee of Rs. 1,500 a year also include his boarding and lodging charges ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes, Sir.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : If there is nothing military about these schools and colleges, why are they called military schools and colleges ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Because they are military schools and colleges and they cannot be called anything else. If the Honourable Member will have patience, I think I might be able to explain at greater length later on when.....

Mr. President : Order, order. I am sorry to have to say that, for some time past, the Honourable Member from Madras, Mr. M. K. Acharya, is not observing the decorum of this House. He goes in and out of the Chamber unceremoniously and I hope it is not deliberate.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : No, Sir. I have been bowing when going out and coming in.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : If there is nothing specially military about these schools, why is their expenditure borne on the military budget and why should not they be treated as ordinary schools ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : They are military schools, as I said.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : In what way ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : As I have explained in the answer to part (c) of the question, these schools are intended to train boys for the Army. They are paid for by the Army, they are run by the Army, and the boys in the schools go into the Army. Therefore they must be called military schools.

Sardar Kartar Singh : Are all the successful boys admitted into Sandhurst ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The boys who wish to go to Sandhurst have to pass an examination for admission to that College.

Sardar Kartar Singh : Are those who pass the examination sent to Sandhurst ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Those who pass for Sandhurst are sent to Sandhurst, those who pass for Cranwell are sent to Cranwell, those who pass for Woolwich are sent to Woolwich and those who pass for the Royal Indian Marine, are sent to training institutions for that purpose.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : In that way all the schools and colleges in India can be called military colleges, because any student from any school or college can appear at the competitive examination for Sandhurst. In that way cannot all schools and colleges in India be called military schools and colleges ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir, unless they are particularly designed to train boys for that particular examination, and unless they are paid for from Army funds.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : In what particular way are they trained for the Army when the curriculum does not contain any subject pertaining to the Army ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : They are trained, as I have explained, by the policy and general system of discipline of the school, which is directed towards the development of soldier-like qualities in the same way in which public schools at home train boys for that purpose.

GAZETTED POSTS IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

568. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the names and numbers of gazetted posts which occurred in the Delhi P. W. D. in year 1929 ; and the names, educational and technical qualifications, present age, present and past pay of the persons appointed or promoted to the gazetted posts in the Delhi P. W. D. in 1929 ?

(b) How many of the above mentioned gazetted posts have been given to Muslims ?

(c) Are the persons appointed to gazetted posts in the Delhi P. W. D. taken into provincial services ?

(d) Are the persons appointed in the Delhi P. W. D. in 1929 to gazetted posts the residents of the Delhi Province ?

(e) What are the names and qualifications of the candidates belonging to the Delhi P. W. D. only who also applied for the gazetted posts which occurred in the Delhi P. W. D. in 1929, with the positions they were holding in the P. W. D., Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) A statement giving the particulars asked for is being supplied to the Honourable Member separately.

(b) None.

(c) No Provincial Service has yet been created for the Delhi Public Works Department.

(d) Mr. Tandan is the only resident of the Delhi Province.

(e) A statement giving the information asked for is being supplied to the Honourable Member separately.

CREATION OF TWO POSTS OF ARCHITECTURAL ASSISTANTS IN THE DELHI PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

569. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that two posts of Architectural Assistants have been created in the Delhi P. W. D. in 1929, and two draftsmen promoted to these posts ? If so, will Government please state if they ever appointed Architectural Assistants during the construction of the New Capital at Delhi ?

(b) What is the amount of P. W. D. budget this year for the construction of the New Capital buildings ?

(c) How much additional expenditure per month do Government incur by the creation of these two posts of Architectural Assistants in the Delhi P. W. D. ?

(d) What are the duties of the Architectural Assistants just created in the Delhi P. W. D. and what is the use of these posts ? Do they know estimating and designing of buildings ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table the estimates and designs they prepared this year ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. No such posts have been created in the past.

(b) The gross figure is Rs. 1,23,56,000 against which recoveries amounting to Rs. 51,90,000 are anticipated.

(c) Rs. 1,074 per mensem.

(d) Their duties are to assist the Architect both in the Drawing Office and on the works, and one of the objectives is that they may be fitted to become Assistant Architects in due course.

They are not estimators, but are acquainted with the work of designing buildings. They have been only recently appointed and have not as yet prepared complete original designs. In any case Government cannot place on the table of the House estimates and designs except where any public advantage is likely to be gained thereby.

APPOINTMENT OF MESSRS. KASARWALA AND YAJNIK AS ARCHITECTURAL ASSISTANTS IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

570. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. K. P. Kasarwala and Mr. S. C. Yajnik, draftsmen in the P. W. D., Delhi, have been promoted to the post of Architectural Assistants in the year 1929 on Rs. 530 and Rs. 550 per mensem ? If so, will Government be pleased to state what was their pay when they were promoted to the post of Architectural Assistants ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the length of service and pay of each draftsman in the P. W. D., Delhi, senior to Messrs. Kasarwala and Yajnik ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. Their pay prior to their appointment as Architectural Assistants was Rs. 270 per mensem each.

(b) A statement giving the information required is being supplied to the Honourable Member separately.

ARCHITECTS AND DRAFTSMEN APPOINTED TO THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

571. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the post of Mr. Russell, Chief Architect, Delhi, is being brought under reduction to save money in the Drawing Branch ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state how many Architects have been appointed in the P. W. D., Delhi, in 1929 ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Kasarwala and Mr. Yajnik moved the Chief Architect, Delhi, to call Bombay men in their vacancies on high pay ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the names, age and pay of the draftsmen appointed in the vacancies of Mr. Kasarwala and Mr. Yajnik in P. W. D., Delhi, in 1929 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) One.

(c) No.

(d) Mr. Shroff, age 49 years, pay Rs. 300 ; Mr. Suther, age 31 years, pay Rs. 280.

RATES OF PAY OF ARCHITECTURAL DRAFTSMEN IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

572. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Will Government please state the number and the minimum and maximum rates of pay of Architectural draftsmen (excluding estimators) in the P. W. D., Delhi ? Do they all prepare tracings ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The number of Architectural Draftsmen is 12, and the minimum and maximum rates of their pay are Rs. 75 and 300 per mensem, respectively.

(b) They are all expected to prepare tracings, if called upon to do so, but this work is usually given to junior men.

ALLEGED HARASSMENT OF A CHRISTIAN DRAFTSMAN BY MR. KASARWALA IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

573. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Kasarwala harassed one Mr. Joseph, a Christian draftsman (Record Keeper) of the Chief Architect's Branch, P. W. D., Delhi, got his promotion stopped and made him to go on long leave ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Kasarwala is annoying a Christian draftsman, Mr. Dhairyam Mudaliar, Officiating Superintendent in the Architect's Branch, P. W. D., Delhi, and is trying to get the draftsman reduced or reverted to the Madras Presidency ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). No.

CIRCULARS ISSUED BY THE CHIEF ENGINEER, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

574. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi, issued a circular that no P. W. D. employee could seek an interview for explaining grievances without getting definite permission of his superiors ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi, issued a circular in July-August 1929 that no P. W. D. employee could individually represent his case for promotion and special pay ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi, issued a circular in August, 1929, that a medical certificate should be produced for more than two days sick leave ?

(d) Is it a fact that in the P. W. D., Delhi, lower officers are oppressing their subordinates and do not allow them to go to higher authorities to represent or to seek interviews for their grievances ?

942

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[17TH SEPT. 1929.

(e) Is it a fact that the Delhi Chief Engineer's circulars have been a great nuisance and harassment among the P. W. D. staff ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state the rules under which such orders are issued by the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) No, the circular merely said that such representations were to be deprecated.

(c) Yes.

(d) and (e). Government have no information, nor do they propose to take any action which may interfere with the disciplinary control of the Chief Engineer over his staff.

(f) There are no rules. The Chief Engineer issues his orders in his capacity as head of the Department.

SERVICE AND QUALIFICATIONS OF THE CHIEF SUPERINTENDENT, CENTRAL OFFICE, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

575. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that the Chief Superintendent, Central Office, P. W. D., Delhi, has been called from the Indian Stores Department, Government of India ? If so, will Government be pleased to state (a) if he has served elsewhere in the P. W. D., (b) if he is a passed Accountant, and (c) the length of his service in the P. W. D., Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes.

(a) He has not served elsewhere in the Public Works Department.

(b) No.

(c) 14 months.

NUMBER OF MUSLIMS APPOINTED AS TEMPORARY ENGINEERS IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, IN DELHI.

576. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : With reference to the reply to question No. 101, dated 12th March, 1929 in the Council of State, will Government be pleased to state how many posts of temporary Engineers occurred in the P. W. D., Delhi, and how many Muslim Engineers were appointed as temporary Engineers ? If none, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Seven temporary engineers are at present employed in the Delhi Public Works Department. None of them is a Muslim. Of these, six men have been employed in the Delhi Public Works Department for periods varying from 16 to 5 years, and only one man has been engaged since the issue of the Home Department orders of 1927 granting certain concessions to minority communities in connection with future recruitment into Services under the Central Government.

NAMES AND PAST PAY OF CERTAIN SUBORDINATES IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

577. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Will Government be pleased to state the names and the present and past pay of the work-charged subordinates whose services were brought into the regular establishment in 1929 on the recommendation of the Executive Engineer, 6th Division, P. W. D., Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Mr. Mohd. Usman ; present pay on the regular establishment Rs. 157 plus a conveyance allowance of Rs. 15 ; past pay on the work-charged staff Rs. 171 inclusive of a conveyance allowance of Rs. 15.

CONTRACT FOR WOOD-PANELLING OF GOVERNMENT HOUSE, DELHI.

578. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the Executive Engineer, 6th Division, P. W. D., Delhi, gave the work of wood-panelling in the Government House without any tender to S. Sundar Singh, Contractor ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Executive Engineer, 6th Division, P. W. D., Delhi, was asked to call for tenders for the wood-panelling in the Government House by the higher authority of the P. W. D., Delhi ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the rate paid to S. Sunder Singh, Contractor, and the rate offered in the lowest standard ? What is the difference between these two rates and how much money in excess has been paid to S. Sundar Singh, Contractor ? Who is responsible for this loss of Government money ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

CONTRACT FOR THE EXTENSION OF THE MIDDLE SCHOOL, NEW DELHI.

579. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that the Executive Engineer, 6th Division, P. W. D., Delhi, has given the work of extension of the Middle School, New Delhi (now to be changed to Civil Hospital, New Delhi), to S. Sundar Singh, Contractor ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No. The work was given to the lowest tenderer who was not S. Sundar Singh. S. Sundar Singh obtained the contract for the staff quarters attached to the hospital as being the lowest tenderer for these quarters.

NUMBER OF CONTRACTS GRANTED TO S. SUNDAR SINGH.

580. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Will Government be pleased to state how many contracts are in the hands of S. Sundar Singh, contractor in the wood workshop, P. W. D., Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : 13.

COLLAPSE OF CERTAIN QUARTERS UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN NEW DELHI.

581. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that a complete chajja of menial quarters in Body Guard Lines fell down during construction in July-August 1929, and one waterman died and the legs of two labourers were broken and many men were injured ? If so, will Government state the names of the Engineers in charge of the construction and what action has been taken against them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A portion of a newly erected chajja of the menials' quarters fell owing to an exceptionally severe storm which occurred while the masonry was "green", and two men and one woman were injured in consequence. The injuries to one man proved fatal.

The names of the Engineers in charge are :

Sub-Divisional Officer—Mr. M. S. Mathur.

Executive Engineer—Mr. T. S. Malik.

No action was taken against them. There is no reason to believe that they were in any way to blame.

RESOLUTION REGARDING PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT ON THE SCORE OF WAR SERVICE.

582. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the Resolution issued for preferential treatment to be accorded for civil employees on the score of War services ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : There are two resolutions, one of the 8th August, 1919 and the other of the 15th September, 1921—copies of both the resolutions have been placed in the Library of the House.

QUESTIONS ABOUT THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT ASKED IN THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

583. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that S. Shujaat Ali, Upper Subordinate, P. W. D., Delhi, was asked by the Chief Engineer, Delhi, in September, 1928, to explain about the P. W. D. questions asked in the Legislative Assembly in February and September, 1928 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : S. Shujaat Ali was asked in September, 1928, to explain, with reference to a question asked by the Honourable Mr. Mahmood Suhrawardy in the Council of State on the 17th of that month, the disclosure or leakage of the information on which the question was apparently based.

STOPPAGE OF PROMOTION OF SAYAD SHUJAAT ALI, UPPER SUBORDINATE, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

584. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that Sayad Shujaat Ali was told in S. E.'s No. 0459-E., dated 3rd May, 1929, that he was considered unfit for the post of Sub-Divisional Officer in the Delhi P. W. D. ?

(b) Is it a fact that Sayad Shujaat Ali, Upper Subordinate, was informed in C. E.'s Notification No. 0366, dated 13th May 1929 that his promotion was stopped for a year and there would be a further effect of this stoppage of promotion in the Delhi P. W. D. ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Yes.

SUPERSESSION OF SAYAD SHUJAAT ALI.

585. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that B. Gurdatt Singh and B. Din Diyal, Upper Subordinates junior to Sayad Shujaat Ali, have been promoted to the post of Sub-Divisional Officers in 1929 in the Delhi P. W. D. ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : At the time of their appointment to the charge of Sub-Divisions, both Babus Gurdatt Singh and Din Diyal were senior to S. Shujaat Ali in the matter of pay, but junior to him as regards length of service.

STOPPAGE OF PROMOTION OF SAYAD SHUJAAT ALI.

586. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the copies of proposals made to stop the promotion of Sayad Shujaat Ali, Upper Subordinate, P. W. D., Delhi, along with the copies of the notice given to Sayad Shujaat Ali to explain about the Council questions and the proposal making him unfit for the post of S. D. O. ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No proposals of the nature referred to have been received by Government. Government are not prepared to comply with the request contained in the latter part of the question.

PROMOTION OF UPPER SUBORDINATES IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

587. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that B. Diwan Chand, Upper Subordinate, P. W. D., Delhi, is senior to B. Din Diyal, S. D. O. ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for not appointing B. Diwan Chand as S. D. O. ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes. Appointments to the post of Sub-Divisional Officer are made by the Chief Engineer by selection and of the two officers mentioned, B. Din Dayal was considered by him to be the more suitable.

TECHNICAL STAFF OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

588. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that clerks of the Establishment Section, Central Office, P. W. D., Delhi, submitted a proposal in writing re the pay, rank, etc., for the technical staff to be appointed in the Delhi P. W. D. ?

(b) Is it a fact that the proposal of the establishment clerk for the technical staff is accepted by the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi, without any alteration and objection ? If so, will Government please state if he has authority to do so ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Government have no information, nor do they propose to call for any information in regard to a matter relating to the internal procedure of the office of the Chief Engineer.

LACK OF TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE BY THE P. A. TO THE CHIEF ENGINEER, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

589. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that the P. A. to the Chief Engineer, P. W. D., Delhi, is not a technical man ? If so, will Government be pleased to state how he understands the work of technical staff ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Personal Assistant to the Chief Engineer is not a technical man and does not, therefore, deal with the work of technical staff.

MEMOIRS PUBLISHED BY ARCHÆOLOGICAL OFFICERS.

590. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing the number of memoirs published by each and every one of the Archæological Officers ?

(b) Is it a fact that when several of the gazetted officers of the Archæological Department did not publish any memoir, some of the non-gazetted members of the Epigraphical Branch of the Archæological Department were asked to contribute articles for publication as memoirs ?

(c) Is it also a fact that memoirs submitted for publication by some of the Archæological Officers have not yet seen the light of the day, and if so, why were they not published ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

APPOINTMENT OF A MUHAMMADAN IN THE AGRA CIRCLE OF THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

591. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government please state the number and religion of the men dismissed by the Superintendent, Archæological Survey, Muhammadan and British Monuments, Agra Circle, since the date of his taking over charge of the Circle ?

(b) Are Government aware that there is not a single Muhammadan Head Clerk in any of the Archæological Offices ?

(c) Is the post of the Head Clerk in the Agra Circle lying vacant, and if so, do Government propose to consider the desirability of offering it to a Muhammadan ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a), (b) and (c). Inquiries have been made and the information asked for will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

DEPUTY DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHÆOLOGY FOR EXPLORATION.

592. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government lay on the table a statement of the work done by the Deputy Director General for Exploration during his tenure of three years, and state how many new sites he explored during this period ?

(b) Will Government please state when the term of the present Deputy Director General of Archæology for Exploration expires, and whether the three years' period fixed for the Deputy Director General of Archæology will also apply to the Deputy Director General of Archæology for Exploration ? If not, why not ?

(c) Do Government intend that all Archæological Officers should be given chances to work as Deputy Director General of Archæology for Exploration ? If not, why not ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

(b) The term of office of the present Deputy Director General of Archæology for the Exploration expires on the 10th November, 1929. The three years' period of tenure fixed for the post of Deputy Director General of Archæology applies also to the post of Deputy Director General of Archæology for Exploration.

(c) Yes, the claims of all officers are considered when appointments are made to this post. The latter part of the question does not therefore arise.

ACADEMIC QUALIFICATIONS OF THE DEPUTY DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHÆOLOGY.

593. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government please state the academic qualifications of the present Deputy Director General of Archæology, and why he was selected to fill the post in preference to other senior officers in the Department ?

(b) Will Government please also state how they regulate promotions to the posts of Deputy Directors General of Archæology and Superintendents of the Circles ?

(c) Are promotions in the Archæological Department regulated by seniority or by merit ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The present Deputy Director General of Archæology is an Associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects. He was selected for the post, because he was considered better qualified for it than any other officer who was available for appointment.

(b) and (c). Appointments to the posts of Director General and Deputy Director General of Archæology are made by merit. The tenure of the appointment of Deputy Director General of Archæology is ordinarily three years. Promotions to Superintendentships of Circles are normally regulated by seniority, but regard is paid in the case of these posts also to considerations of merit.

PURCHASE BY THE AJMER-MERWARA EDUCATION DEPARTMENT OF A CINEMA MACHINE FROM J. NATH AND SON.

594. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that a cinema machine with its accessories was purchased for Rs. 5,000 by the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department in the financial year 1927-28 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said machine was purchased from J. Nath and Son, Ajmer ? If so, which Government officer ordered J. Nath and Son to supply the machine ?

(c) Did the Government officer concerned give the order to J. Nath and Son for the machine orally or in writing ? If in writing, will Government please place on the table a copy of the said order ?

(d) Will Government please inquire and state whether J. Nath and Son purchased the said machine from a Lahore firm ? If so, will Government please state why, in the interest of economy, the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department did not purchase it direct from the Lahore firm ?

(e) Are J. Nath and Son dealers in cinema machines ?

(f) What was the name of the person who, on behalf of J. Nath and Son, signed the acknowledgments of receipt of money paid by Government for the cinema machine?

(g) Did Government consult some mechanical and cinema experts, other than those connected with the selling firms to satisfy themselves that the machine was purchased economically?

Sir Frank Noyce : With your permission, Sir, I shall deal with questions 594—597 together. The information asked for in these questions is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

CINEMA PURCHASED FOR SCHOOLS IN AJMER-MERWARA.

†595. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Will Government please put on the table a list of the schools in Ajmer-Merwara where the cinema machine referred to in the previous question was used, giving against each school the dates on which the cinema demonstrations took place in it?

(b) Do Government find that the use made of the cinema justifies the expenditure which its purchase entailed?

(c) Is it a fact that money for the purchase of the cinema was provided by reappropriation from the sums allotted for the five-year programme? If so, will Government please state why the money was not utilised for the purposes for which it was demanded by Government and voted by the Assembly in that year's budget estimates of the five-year programme?

PURCHASE OF BOOKS FROM J. NATH AND SON BY THE AJMER-MERWARA EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

†596. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department purchased books for the libraries of the vernacular secondary schools from J. Nath and Son, Ajmer? If so, which Government officer gave orders to J. Nath and Son for the supply of the books and what was the total amount of money spent by Government on the purchase?

(b) Is it a fact that the said books purchased from J. Nath and Son could be purchased direct from publishing firms in India? If so, will Government please inquire and state whether the books could be purchased by the Government at a less cost directly from the publishing firms than the cost incurred by the purchase through J. Nath and Son?

(c) Will Government please state whether estimates for the said supply of books were called for from various book-sellers in Ajmer before orders for the supply were given to J. Nath and Son? If so, from which book-sellers?

(d) Are J. Nath and Son dealers in books?

(e) What was the name of the person who, on behalf of J. Nath and Son, signed the acknowledgments of receipt of money paid by Government for the said supply of books?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 594.

PURCHASE OF FURNITURE FROM THE PROCLAMATION MANUFACTURING COMPANY BY THE EDUCATION DEPARTMENT, AJMER.

†597. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that furniture for the vernacular schools was purchased by the Ajmer-Merwara Education Department from the Proclamation Furniture Manufacturing Company, Ajmer? If so, which Government officer gave orders to the said company and what was the total expenditure incurred in the purchase?

(b) Were tenders called for from various firms in Ajmer before giving orders for the supply to the Proclamation Furniture Manufacturing Company? If so, from which firms?

(c) Will Government please state why orders were given for the supply to the Proclamation Furniture Manufacturing Company in preference to other firms?

(d) What was the name of the person who, on behalf of the Proclamation Furniture Manufacturing Company, signed the acknowledgments of receipt of money paid by Government for the supply referred to in part (a)?

RIGHTS OF OWNERS OF BUNGALOWS IN CANTONMENTS.

598. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) With reference to the reply given by Government to my unstarred question No. 254, on the 25th February, 1929, will Government be pleased to state whether the assurance given by Lord Reading to the Deputationists in 1922 was in the following terms:

“The next question referred to by you concerns the non-interference in the rights of the owners of bungalows in Cantonments to live in their bungalows themselves. About this, I assure you that in the amended House Accommodation Act which is at present under the consideration of my Government no interference has been allowed to be made in the rights of the owners of bungalows which they enjoy at present under Section 11 (c), and that according to the new law, too, the owners of bungalows will continue, as heretofore, to enjoy their rights of living in their bungalows themselves.”

If so, will Government be pleased to state the real object of the proposed amendment of the House Accommodation Act requiring owners of bungalows to give six months' notice to the Officer Commanding the Station of their intention to live in their bungalows themselves, when the owners will not be allowed to live in them if they are required for the residence of military officers?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state if, under the circumstances mentioned in part (1) above, the proposed amendment by the Secretary, Army Department, is not actually a marked departure from Lord Reading's assurance?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (1) The Honourable Member has not quoted Lord Reading's reply quite correctly. As he was informed in answer to his unstarred question No. 254 of the 25th of February, 1929, what Lord Reading actually said was :

“ That owners of houses in cantonments, who were at that time protected under section 11 (c) of the House Accommodation Act, would not be deprived of that protection.”

As a member of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the House Accommodation Act, which is at present before this House, my Honourable friend is no doubt aware that the amendment originally proposed in the terms he has quoted has been dropped in favour of a simpler amendment, which is designed to make it clear that all existing occupants of their own houses will be protected, but only bona fide residence, as distinct from temporary occupation, will confer exemption in future.

(2) Neither the amendment originally proposed nor the amendment now proposed constitutes a departure from the terms of Lord Reading's assurance.

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF BUILDING LAND IN CANTONMENTS.

599. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : Will Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of the rules in force in the Bengal Army Presidency, showing their application to the Punjab also, on the subject of the specific condition on which Cantonment lands had been granted to grantees by Government for the purpose of building bungalows for the use of military officers, etc. ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : A copy of the rules has already been placed in the Library. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to pages 5-6 of these rules.

QUALIFICATIONS OF MR. INAYETULLAH KHAN.

600. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : With reference to the reply given by Government to my starred question No. 658, on the 19th February, 1929, will Government be pleased to verify and state why the following qualifications possessed by Mr. Inayetullah Khan had been omitted in the statement placed on the table ?

- (a) He was the first Indian who in the course of five years earned four honours, rewards, and scholarships ;
- (b) He worked as Assistant Secretary to the Government of India, Education Department, for two years ;
- (c) Before his appointment as Assistant Secretary he filled the appointments of Principal, and Vice-Principal, of the Islamia College for four years ;
- (d) He was recommended by the Chief Commissioner of the North West Frontier Province in 1919 for the post of Assistant Secretary, Education Department, and
- (e) while Principal of the Training College, he also worked as Inspector of High Schools, and Registrar of Departmental Examinations in the North West Frontier Province.

Sir Frank Noyce : With your permission, Sir, I shall deal with questions Nos. 600—602 together. The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

NON-APPOINTMENT OF MR. INAYET-ULLAH KHAN AS DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

†601. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that Mr. Inayetullah Khan's experience of educational problems in the North West Frontier Province extends over about 16 years ?

(b) When the officiating appointment of Director of Public Instruction of that Province had fallen vacant in 1922, was it given by Government to an Officer who had only about six years service in the Indian Educational Service in preference to Mr. Inayetullah Khan who was at the time in the Province ?

(c) As a result of incapacity was that Officer either compelled to resign the service or did he resign voluntarily ?

(d) Since Mr. Inayetullah Khan took charge of the Government High School at Peshawar, did the number of students double, while in the history of the School relating to the last fifteen years in which generally European Head Masters held charge of the same, the number of students did not exceed 170 ?

(e) Were the results of examinations in Mr. Inayetullah Khan's time very satisfactory as compared with those in that of European Head Masters ?

(f) Did he introduce the system of imparting theology in his school, and, did the Education Department subsequently sanction its introduction in all schools in the Province ?

(g) Had the Government of India, after Mr. Inayetullah Khan had refused to sign the usual agreement with the Secretary of State, declared that the Local Government would, doubtless, consider his claims to the appointment of Director of Public Instruction in the North West Frontier Province when it fell vacant and advised Mr. Inayetullah Khan to sign the agreement ?

NON-APPOINTMENT OF MR. INAYETULLAH KHAN AS DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

†602. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Have the Government of India made recommendations to the Government of the North West Frontier Province regarding the claims of Mr. Inayetullah Khan to the appointment of Director of Public Instruction in the Province ?

(b) Had his claims to the appointment of Director of Public Instruction in the North West Frontier Province been overlooked when Mr. Carna had succeeded Mr. Jones in 1921, when Mr. Towle succeeded Mr. Carna in 1922, when Mr. Geach had succeeded Mr. Towle for seven months, when Mr. Tydeman succeeded Mr. Towle who proceeded on leave in 1925, and when Mr. Orgill succeeded Mr. Towle in a leave vacancy in 1928 ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state why Mr. Inayetullah Khan was deprived of well-earned promotion ?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 600.

LEGALITY UNDER THE CANTONMENTS (HOUSE-ACCOMMODATION) ACT OF A NOTICE SERVED ON THE OWNER OF A BUNGALOW.

603. *Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : With reference to part (b) of the reply given by Government to question No. 252 on the 25th February, 1929, will Government be pleased to state whether the notice dated the 9th November, 1926, served on the owner of Bungalow No. 2, Roos Keppel Lane, was in conformity with the provisions of Articles 7 and 12 of the Cantonments (House-Accommodation) Act? Have Government consulted the Military Advocate General as to legality of this notice?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The answer is in the affirmative. Government have not consulted the Judge Advocate General because there was no doubt about the legality of the notice.

ENACTMENT OF A JUVENILE SMOKING ACT.

604. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (1) Have the Government of India under consideration any legislation for prohibiting the selling of bidis, cigarettes or other smoking mixture to children below 14 years of age?

(2) Are Government aware that a Juvenile Smoking Act has been passed by the Central Provinces Legislative Council and that the Bombay Corporation has also recommended the enactment of similar legislation for Bombay?

Sir Frank Noyce : (1) The answer is in the negative. The matter is primarily one for the consideration of Local Governments.

(2) The Government of India have no information as to whether the Central Provinces Juvenile Smoking Bill has yet become law or as to any recommendation on the subject by the Bombay Corporation. I may, however, state for the Honourable Member's information that Juvenile Smoking Acts have been passed in Assam, Bengal and the Punjab.

RULES TO PREVENT THE ADULTERATION OF GHEE.

605. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Does the Ajmer Municipalities Regulation provide for rules to be made to prevent adulteration of food-stuffs sold within municipal limits in Ajmer, Beawar and Kekri? If so, have any rules been made to prevent adulteration of pure ghee with the so-called banaspati or vegetable ghee? If not, do Government propose to do so now?

Sir Frank Noyce : The reply to the first two parts of the question is in the negative. As regards the third part, the Honourable Member's attention is invited to section 141 of the Ajmer-Merwara Municipalities Regulation, 1925, in which a penalty has already been prescribed for selling any article of food or drink which is not wholly of the nature, substance or quality of the article demanded by the purchaser.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Has the Honourable Member seen in the newspapers a copy of the Resolution forwarded by the Calcutta Corporation to the Government of India recommending that the sale of vegetable and adulterated ghee in the markets should be restricted as being injurious to health and as having no nutrition in it?

Sir Frank Noyce : No, Sir. I have not seen it.

ALLOWANCES OF FIRST CLASS POSTMASTERS FOR INSPECTING POST OFFICES.

606. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Is it a fact that prior to the 1st February, 1928, First Class Postmasters used to be given the actual expenses incurred by them in inspecting the Post Offices under their control?

(b) Is it a fact that from the 1st February, 1928, the allowance admissible to First Class Postmasters for inspecting the Post Offices under them was fixed at Rs. 4 a mile, but the Government of India orders actually reached the First-Class Postmasters about the middle of March, 1928?

(c) Was any representation made by some of the Postmasters that they were actually out of pocket as retrospective effect was given to the revised orders? If so, do Government propose to pay the Postmasters the actual expenditure incurred by them?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) It is a fact that Government orders introducing the revised rates with effect from 1st February, 1928, were issued on 15th February, 1928, and were received by the Postmasters concerned through the Heads of Circles generally about the middle of March, 1928. As regards the rates of allowance fixed by these orders, the Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me in this House to Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim's starred question No. 86 on the 3rd September, 1929.

(c) Government understand that such a representation was made to the Postmaster General, United Provinces, by six Postmasters of the United Provinces Circle, but no individual representation has reached either the Director General or Government. Such representations, if and when received by Government through the proper channel, will be given due consideration, but it cannot now be stated what final orders will be passed on them.

POST OFFICE GUARANTEE FUND.

607. *Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what the amount of Post Office Guarantee Fund was when the separate existence of the Fund was abolished?

(b) Is it not a fact that the Fund was built up solely by the contributions of Post Office employees?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the amount of interest that would have accrued under the rules on the money from the date of the abolition of the Fund up to the end of March, 1929?

(d) Will Government please state what amount of compassionate gratuity was paid during the said period showing separately, to (1) purely Postal and Railway Mail Service employees, and (2) employees of the Telegraph Branch?

(e) What was the total amount of compassionate gratuity paid to the employees of other Departments of the Government of India during the same period?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The amount at credit of the Fund was Rs. 10,75,654 when it was closed on 1st April, 1926.

(b) Yes.
L12CPB(LA)

(c) Roughly Rupees 1½ lakhs.

|                                   |       |    | Rs.    |

(e) Rs. 64,927.

RENTING OF SHOPS ON THE GOMTI BRIDGE, JAUNPORE.

608. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that the shops on the Gomti Bridge, Jaunpore, which used to be let out for the last so many years are now not to be let out under the recent orders of the Archaeological Officer at Agra ? If so, will Government please state the reason for issuing these orders ?

(b) Is it a fact that the tenants were prepared to pay higher rents on condition that they should not be turned out ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Collector, Jaunpore, suggested to the Archaeological Officer to let these shops out through District Officers ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes, because if they are leased, it is impossible to keep this bridge, which is a protected monument, in a state befitting its archaeological, architectural and historical importance.

(b) and (c). Yes, but in view of what is stated above, their offers could not be availed of.

USE OF AIRCRAFT IN PALESTINE.

609. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Did Government send in any protest to His Majesty's Government against the use of aircraft in Palestine from which the Arabs were recently fired upon ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Muslims of India are greatly agitated over this treatment accorded to their co-religionists in Palestine ?

Sir Denys Bray : As stated in my answer to Maulvi Muhammad Yaqub's question on the 4th September and also in the Foreign Office communiqué of the 10th September, His Majesty's Government are being kept fully apprised of the deep concern felt by the Indian Muslims over events in Palestine. As regards the use of Aircraft, the Government of India have so far no information beyond the fact that the Royal Air Force assisted in the speedy restoration of order. The Honourable Member may be sure that this and other forces were employed solely for the prevention of disorder and further bloodshed.

Mr. B. Das : Is the Honourable Member aware that non-Muslim Indians also have equal sympathy with the Muslim Indians over the problem of Palestine ?

Sir Denys Bray : I am well aware, Sir, that there is very general sympathy, not of course confined to the Hindus. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that a sum of Rs. 500 was subscribed by a Hindu gentleman of the name of Mr. Bajaj, I think, from Peshawar and that the money was transmitted to alleviate their suffering ?

Sir Denys Bray : Not, I am sorry to say, through myself.

EVIDENCE OF THE AGE OF CONSENT COMMITTEE.

610. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Do Government propose to publish the evidence recorded by the Age of Consent Committee ? If so, when will it be made available to the Members of the Indian Legislature ?

(b) If the publication of the evidence is not intended, will Government please state their reasons ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes, Volumes I and II have been published, and Volumes III, IV and VI are expected very shortly. The other volumes will be published as soon as possible. Copies of the volumes which have been printed have been placed in the Library of the Legislative Assembly, and the rest will be placed there in due course. Copies will be supplied to any Honourable Members who may ask for them.

(b) Does not arise.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Are Government prepared to supply these volumes of evidence free of cost to Members of the Assembly as recommended by the Finance Committee ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The matter was considered, I understand, at a recent meeting of the Standing Finance Committee, and it was decided, with the concurrence of the Honourable the Finance Member, that any Member of the Legislature who asked for a copy of the evidence volumes should be supplied with them.

An Honourable Member : Free ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I think that was the intention.

APPOINTMENT OF A JUNIOR DRAFTSMAN AS A COMPUTER IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, DELHI.

611. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that with effect from 1st April 1929, the post of a Computer (equal in status to an Assistant Engineer, Provincial) was created on the recommendation of the Chief Architect, P. W. D., Delhi, to assist him in designing the structures proposed by him ?

(b) Is it a fact that a junior draftsman has been appointed as Computer while an Engineer and some senior draftsmen were available for appointment ?

(c) Will Government please state why a mere draftsman has been appointed in preference to an engineer ?

(d) Is it a fact that the newly appointed Computer is not at present assisting the Chief Architect in his designs but is only doing his previous duty of estimating ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The facts are not as stated by the Honourable Member. The post of Computer was not created on the recommendation of the Chief Architect to assist him in his designs, but on the recommendation of the Chief Engineer to assist the Assistant Quantity Surveyor, who is in charge of the General, as distinguished from the Architectural, Drawing Branch of the Chief Engineer's Office, and who is mainly concerned with estimating.

(b) No, a senior draftsman was appointed. It is not clear to which Engineer the Honourable Member is referring.

(c) The man appointed was considered by the Chief Engineer to be the most suitable for the post.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply to part (a) of this question. The man is not employed only on his past work of estimating.

REPLACEMENT BY HINDUS OF MUHAMMADAN CHOWKIDARS OF MONUMENTS IN DELHI.

612. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that most of the protected monuments in Delhi are of Muslim origin ?

(b) Is it a fact that the present Superintendent of Archaeology is a non-Muslim ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Superintendent of Archaeology removed most of the Muhammadan chowkidars of these monuments and replaced them by Hindus ?

(d) Is it a fact that this caused considerable resentment and dissatisfaction amongst the Muslims, who made representations to the Chief Commissioner of Delhi and the Director General of Archaeology ?

(e) Will Government please state what action they have taken in the matter ? If no action has been taken, will Government please state their reasons ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c), (d) and (e). The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to parts (3), (4) and (5) of question No. 447 on the 12th September, 1929.

NUMBER OF BIHAREES AND ORIYAS APPOINTED AS SUPERINTENDENTS OF POST OFFICES IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

613. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Biharees and Oriyas appointed as Superintendents of Post Offices since the creation of Bihar and Orissa as a separate province ?

(b) Will Government please state the number of Superintendents of Post Offices ? How many of them are Biharees ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 3 Biharees and 1 Oriya.

(b) 179, of whom 4 are Biharees.

SALE OF CALVES BY MILITARY DAIRY FARMS.

614. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that Government have agreed to sell calves of some military dairy farms after rearing them for 2 months from their birth ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state (i) the name of the Association to which they have agreed to sell the calves, (ii) the names of the dairies of which the calves have been agreed to be sold, and (iii) the terms and conditions of such sale ?

(c) Are Government prepared to sell calves of the remaining dairy farms under them, if any, on the same conditions ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes, as an experiment at one dairy only.

(b) (i) The Shri Mahajan Association, Ltd., Bombay.

(ii) The Government Military Dairy Farm, Kirkee.

(iii) I lay a statement on the table showing the terms and conditions of sale.

(c) Not at present, Sir. Government propose to wait and see the results of the present experiment before proceeding further.

The conditions of the sale of calves are :

- (a) The Shri Mahajan Association, Ltd., should deposit with the Assistant Controller of Dairy Farm, Southern Circle, Jubbulpore, Government paper to the face value of Rs. 1,000 by way of security and in token of their good faith.
- (b) The Association should take over all live calves reserved for them, irrespective of their condition, on or before the 60th day after birth and to pay at the rate of Rs. 30 per calf.
- (c) The Director of Farms will have the right to reimburse Government by deduction from the security deposit of the Association up to Rs. 30 per calf for each calf specially reserved for the Association and for any reason left alive on his hands after the 60th day from the date of its birth.
- (d) The Association will be informed by the Manager, Military Dairy, Kirkee, on the 1st and 15th of every month what numbers of calves have been reserved for the Association since the last report.
- (e) If a calf reported to the Association as having been reserved for them dies before the expiry of 60 days, the Association will pay for the keep of the calf at the rate of annas eight per day from the date of birth to the date of death.

The Association has agreed to take over the male and female calves of cows only for the present.

THE HAJ INQUIRY COMMITTEE.

615. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the Report of the Haj Inquiry Committee is expected to be published ?

(b) Will Government please state (i) the total estimated cost of the Committee, (ii) the amount spent up to the end of the last month, and (iii) the amount spent on allowances of the President and each member separately, and on the witnesses ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The Report of the Committee is expected to be ready for submission to the Government of India by the end of November next and will be published as soon as possible after its receipt.

(b) (i) Rs. 2,03,150.

(ii) Rs. 1,01,522-10-9.

These figures include the Chairman's salary for the period 27th March to 30th June, 1929, and halting allowance up to the 31st August, 1929, and remuneration and halting allowance of members as well as the travelling allowance drawn by them whenever they did not avail themselves of the reserved railway accommodation to which they were entitled. The salary of the Chairman for July, 1929, amounting to Rs. 3,300, was drawn by him during the current month. The figures relating to the cost of reserved railway accommodation up to the 31st August, 1929, are not known at present.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is there any other seat vacant on the Committee, Sir ?

An Honourable Member : Do you want it ?

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Sir, in view of the large expenditure incurred on these committees and commissions, will the Government consider the desirability of reducing the allowances of Members on future committees and commissions ?

Sir Frank Noyce : That is a question for the Honourable the Finance Member.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Will the Honourable the Finance Member give me an answer to this question ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I am afraid I must ask the Honourable Member to repeat his question. I was thinking of something else.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : In view of the large expenditure incurred on these committees and commissions, will the Government consider the desirability of reducing the allowances of Members who are either working now, or who will in future be appointed to such committees or commissions ?

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Reduced to what level ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : If the Government have any evidence before them of an opinion in this Assembly on that subject, they will certainly give due weight to an expression of that opinion. Speaking for myself as Finance Member, I should of course welcome anything which would tend to reduce the cost of these committees and commissions of inquiry. I think I may say that it is becoming quite a serious matter in the cost of carrying out the work of Government. Again, speaking for myself, I should take it as evidence of a very commendable public spirit if there were to be an expression of a general desire on the part of non-official Members of this House for reducing the rates paid to members of committees and for restricting the travelling and other expenses to a minimum. I do not think I can say any more on the subject now, but if the Honourable Member has any suggestions to make on the matter, I should be very pleased to discuss them with him.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Is the Honourable the Finance Member aware that any further reduction of the allowances given to Members of committees and commissions will result in the exclusion of the poorer Members of the Assembly from serving on such committees and commissions in future ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I am aware, Sir, that the question is not at all a simple one, and the consideration which has just been given voice to by my Honourable friend, Mr. Roy, will have to be weighed very fully in deciding upon any policy in this matter. It would of course lead to very undesirable results if, in trying to cut down expenditure, we were to confine the ability to serve on these committees to Members in possession of large private means. I am sure every one will recognise that. But I still think that there is room for economy in this matter without leading to the undesirable result suggested by my Honourable friend.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Is it open to Members appointed to committees and commissions to forego their allowance or to take a smaller allowance if they so desire ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : It is of course possible for any Member of a committee to take action of that kind, but I am sure my Honourable friend will recognise that that may lead to very invidious results. Although I know that it often happens that Members who are in possession of large private means feel some compunction in accepting fees, I also know that, in certain particular cases, they have felt themselves constrained not to make an offer to forego them because they have felt that they would be placing other members of the committee in an unfair position.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : In view of the fact that the Assembly Members are paid at the rate of Rs. 20 per day as allowance, and if in spite of this lower allowance, we are in a position to get the best brains of India, may we not expect, if we reduce the allowance of the Members of these committees and commissions, to get as good men for them?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I think the fact which has just been mentioned by my friend is extremely relevant in a consideration of this question.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : May I inquire what steps Government propose to take to ascertain the view of the Assembly on this point?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I think that if it is a question of giving expression to un-official opinion in this Assembly, the steps that can be taken are steps which are well known and which are open to my friend opposite. It is quite possible for him to give notice of a Resolution on the subject, and I should think that that will be the most proper means for raising a discussion on this whole question.

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Will the Government be prepared to give time in case some non-official Member cares to move a Resolution of that nature? Will Government be pleased to give a day for the discussion of this question?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : Does my Honourable friend ask for a day for the discussion of this question during this current Session?

Mr. Ghanshyam Das Birla : Yes, Sir.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Will Government be pleased to consider the desirability of not paying any allowances to Members of this House when appointed to committees except their actual travelling expenses?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I think, Sir, that it would be going rather too far to say that that would be our attitude in the matter. I think we all must recognise that there are certain Members of this House whom it is very desirable to have as Members of committees and commissions who could not afford to serve on such committees and commissions unless they received some remuneration beyond the recovery of their actual out of pocket expenses.

Mr. E. L. Price : I want to ask the Honourable the Finance Member whether it is a fact that these allowances are paid right up to the moment that the Report is signed? That seems to be unnecessary.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware.....

Mr. President : Order, Order.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I am not quite sure that I understand the purport of the question put by my friend Mr. Price. As far as I know, the daily allowances are only paid for the actual days on which service is given. I think it is highly probable that, in the last two or three days before a Report is actually signed and submitted, such service will be given, because a committee will certainly be occupied in considering its Report and signing it during the last two or three days. I think that supplies the answer.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware, I want to ask only one question, Sir.....

Mr. President : Order, order. This is now degenerating into a debate and I must intervene. Only one question put by Mr. Birla has not been answered, I think, and that is, whether Government are prepared to give time during this Session to consider and discuss this question.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, there is still a pretty heavy programme of work before the House, and I doubt myself whether an extension of the Session in order to consider this particular matter which, though a very important question, is not one of immediate urgency, is a suggestion which the House would generally desire should be complied with. If the question is whether time should be allowed in the ensuing Session for this matter, I cannot, of course, give a definite engagement, but I can say this that it will receive very careful consideration having regard to the business at the time before the House.

INTRODUCTION OF COMPULSORY PHYSICAL TRAINING IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

616. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government please state what steps they have taken for introducing compulsory physical training in schools and colleges of the provinces directly administered by them?

(b) How many, and which of the provincial Governments have accepted the principles of Dr. Moonje's Resolution passed by this Assembly on the 15th February, 1929?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Local Administrations have been addressed.

(b) Local Governments have been addressed in regard to the introduction of compulsory physical training, games and drill, but have not yet had sufficient time in which to report the action, if any, taken by them in this direction. They have not yet been addressed in regard to the provision of miniature rifle ranges and the encouragement of their use, but it is proposed to do so shortly.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN OFFICES IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

178. Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks serving at present in the offices of the District Headquarters, and in those subordinate to them including those of Executive Officers in the North West Frontier Province and the number of Muslims among them?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state how they propose to reconcile the disproportion, and whether the claims of the qualified local Muslims are given due consideration when filling up vacancies?

(3) Will Government be pleased to refer to Army Department Establishment Officer's Circular Memorandum No. 33346/1 (A.D.), dated the 19th November, 1926, addressed to all Heads of Military Departments on the subject of measures to be adopted for securing appointments of minor communities in the Government of India Secretariat Offices, and in those subordinate to them, and to state whether the Government had considered the treatment to be meted out to a majority community in a Province like the North West Frontier Province?

(4) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to give more posts in the military offices to the non-Muslim minority community in the Province or to limit the future filling up of vacancies to Muslims of the country?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (1) The Honourable Member is referred to the figures I gave him in my letter of 8th May, last and in the reply given on the 16th September to part (a) of his starred question No. 521.

(2) Yes, but most of the military clerical appointments in the North West Frontier Province are held by men who are liable to be transferred to any part of India, and recruitment cannot therefore be made entirely on a local basis.

(3) and (4). I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given in this House on the 11th March, last by the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra to starred question No. 984.

NUMBER OF NON-MUSLIM HIGH SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS IN THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

179. Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Are Government aware that the grievances of the Muslims of the North West Frontier Province have been recently published in several issues of vernacular newspapers on the subject of inconsiderate treatment meted out for a long time to the Muslims by the Education Department of the Province in the way of appointments of a large number of non-Muslim teachers, and the apportionment of a smaller number of High schools for Muslims in the Province?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the number of non-Muslim teachers who are working in the rural, and urban schools separately ;
- (b) the consideration or special policy determined by the Local Government necessitating the appointment of non-Muslim teachers as a special case in preference to Muslims to deal with an entirely Muslim community in the country ; and
- (c) the number of Hindu and Muslim High schools existing in the Province ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (1) Yes, but it is not correct that a large number of non-Muslim teachers have been appointed or that Government High Schools, which are not sectarian, have been apportioned on a communal basis.

(2) (a). The information asked for is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member later.

(b) No such policy exists.

(c) There are six Hindu and five Muslim aided High Schools.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN THE TELEPHONE DEPARTMENT, NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

180. Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the total number of Operators now working in the Telephone Department of the Frontier Province ;
- (b) the number of Muslims and non-Muslims of the North West Frontier Province among them ; and
- (c) the number of Muslims and non-Muslims of other Provinces ?

(2) Do Government intend to consider the long-standing grievances of the local Muslims of the country as regards their claims to their proper representation in the Department consistent with their majority of population in the Province, and take such action in the matter as may pacify them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (1) (a). (69).

(b) 34 Muslims and 14 non-Muslims.

(c) 10 Muslims and 11 non-Muslims.

(2) The figures given in reply to part (1) of the question do not indicate that the Muslims have any grievance on the score of inadequate representation in the Telephone Branch of the Department in the North West Frontier Province and Government do not propose to take any action in the matter.

EMPLOYMENT OF MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN OFFICES OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

181. Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan : (1) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks serving at present in the Offices of the (a) Agent, North Western Railway, Lahore, (b) Audit Officer, North Western Railway, Lahore, and (c) Divisional Superintendent, North Western Railway, Rawalpindi, and the number of Muslims in each of the above Offices ?

(2) Will Government be pleased to state how they propose to adjust the serious disproportion of posts held by Muslims in the above-mentioned Offices ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (1) Government regret that, for reasons already explained, they are not prepared to furnish figures of communal representation in individual offices.

(2) The Agent, North Western Railway, is aware of the policy of Government to prevent the preponderance of any particular community in railway service, and Government have no reason to believe that this policy is not being followed on the North Western Railway.

GRIEVANCES OF OWNERS OF LAND IN THE BED OF THE BISLA LAKE, AJMER.

182. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Is it a fact that great hardship is caused to owners of land in the bed of the Bisla lake at Ajmer by allowing water to collect in the lake for some months and then letting it flow out when the time for cultivating the land is passed ?

(b) Have any representations been made to Government in the matter? If so, do Government propose, in view of the representations made by cultivators, not to let water collect at all in the lake or, to restore the lake and keep it full like the Anasagar lake all the year round?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government are not aware of any great hardship caused to owners of land in the bed of the Bisla Lake in Ajmer by allowing four feet of water to collect in the lake to assist water levels of surrounding wells between June and the middle of October every year.

(b) No serious representation has been received by Government since the order to store water was given in 1921, but very recently two petitions were received by the Commissioner, Ajmer, one asking for water to be let out and the other for a longer period of storage. Both were replied to the effect that water would be retained till the middle of October as usual. Government do not propose to disturb the existing order of things.

RESOLUTION RE THE ESTABLISHMENT OF PANCHAYATS IN VILLAGES—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the following Resolution moved by Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyanger on the 3rd September, 1929 :

“ This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he do appoint a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to examine the rural conditions obtaining in the various Provinces, and to recommend ways and means for establishing in each village, or group of villages with a population of not less than 1,000 inhabitants, an efficient Panchayat which will mainly be elected on the audit franchise system, and possess sufficient legal powers and financial resources for administering all village concerns, such as agriculture, minor irrigation and forests, cottage industries, village sanitation, education, co-operation, trade and banking, and for deciding civil and criminal suits up to a certain limit, subject only to the general control and technical advice and appellate jurisdiction of district and provincial officers and courts of law.”

There are, as Honourable Members will notice, two amendments tabled, one by Mr. Mukhtar Singh and the other by Mr. M. K. Acharya. As regards the amendment of Mr. Acharya, I understand that he has already spoken to the original motion and I feel some difficulty in admitting his amendment at this stage. If he will kindly explain how he is in order, I will consider.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I thought, Sir, that the amendment differed from the original Resolution in curtailing the scope of the inquiry suggested in the Resolution and in trying to meet some of the points raised by the Government Member in replying to the debate that day. That is how I think it improves and amends the original Resolution.

Mr. President : My difficulty is this. The Honourable Member was responsible for this Resolution at the last Session. He gave notice of this Resolution this Session and he supported it whole-heartedly at the last meeting. I believe he was responsible for the wording of the Resolution, and now, after having spoken to the original motion, he gives notice of an amendment. That is the difficulty in which I am placed, and therefore

I should like the Honourable Member to explain how I can rule that amendment in order. I do not consider this to be a legitimate use of the procedure of this House.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I leave it to you, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore, cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I also draw your attention to the Standing Order at page 117 where you find :

“ If notice of such amendment has not been given two clear days before the day on which the Resolution is moved, any Member may object to the moving of the amendment.”

Now, Sir, this amendment has been given notice of after the Resolution was moved at the last meeting, and it is quite open to any Member of this House to object to the moving of this amendment....

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member taking objection to the moving of this amendment?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President : I desire to inform Honourable Members that the recognised Parliamentary practice is that, when a Member speaks to the original motion without moving any amendment and resumes his seat, he is not entitled at any further stage to rise to move an amendment, and that practice I am bound to follow. I think it is a salient rule of Parliamentary practice, and apart from the objection taken by Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar, I think on this ground and on this ground alone I cannot allow the Honourable Member to move his amendment. Mr. Mukhtar Singh.

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :

“ This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council (a) to immediately rehabilitate in villages within the territories under its direct control the panchayats on an elective system based on a sufficiently broad franchise and equip them with legal powers and funds sufficient for the administration of village concerns, viz., village sanitation, disease of livestock, minor irrigation, forests, cottage industries, primary education, co-operation, petty civil and criminal cases, registration of births, deaths and marriages and the like, and (b) to formulate in consultation with Local Governments and lay down a uniform policy for Provincial Government to build up such autonomous panchayats on an elective basis based upon a sufficiently wide franchise in all the provinces of India (specially where such institutions do not exist), directing the Local Governments to appropriate sufficient funds from the provincial revenues for such panchayats to function properly and if Local Governments are unable to cope with the demands for funds, to apportion sufficient funds for the purpose from the Imperial revenues.”

The Resolution, as originally drafted, makes it necessary for the Government to institute a Committee of Inquiry. That is the first thing that I have eliminated in this amendment. The second thing which differentiates this amended Resolution from the original Resolution is that it has been divided into two parts. When the original Resolution was moved, objection was taken by some of the Members that it was a transferred subject and therefore it would not be within the province of this Government and to give effect to this Resolution. In order to meet that objection, I have divided this Resolution into two parts. The first part deals with the areas administered directly by the Imperial Government and the second part lays down the general policy for the Local Governments after consultation with them.

Sir, when the present Government assumed the governance of this country, we know very well that there were panchayats in existence practically in every village. Each village was administered by the elders of the village or the community of that village. In spite of invasions from outside and times of distress, this institution could not be wiped off, but during the regime of the present Government, it has practically disappeared. I may be excused for quoting from a paper written and signed by Mr. A. H. A. Simcox, dated the 24th April, 1922. This is what he says :

"The Indian village system has lived and prospered through many fierce attacks. It is still living in spite of the insidious erosion of modern life. There is probably not a man in the Government of India who would not willingly preserve and strengthen it, and yet it is in greater danger from the British Government than it was from Mohammed of Ghazni or Aurangzeb. Unwillingly and unwittingly, we have dealt it many shrewd blows, and are doing so yet. The more damage we do to it, the worse for us and for India, for it is the strongest foundation of Indian social life."

This will clearly show that the necessity for the village panchayats is recognised not only by the political agitator as the Government calls him, but also by Englishmen themselves. The necessity for the village panchayats was recognised by the Decentralisation Commission also. There is a point which pains me very much when I find that the present Government tried to disorganise the organisations that existed in this country, and I consider that this is the greatest charge against the Government, that they did not allow the old institutions to prosper. As far as the panchayats are concerned, I may be allowed to say that the village accountant who is known as the patwari, the village headman who is known as the lumbardar and the village watchman who is known as the chaukidar were the necessary persons in a village. These three exist even today with this difference, that the accountant, the village headman and the watchman in olden days were paid by the village people, and today they are paid by the Government. This makes a very great difference. Formerly the patwari, the headman and the watchman knew that they were the servants of the village and today they understand, and quite rightly that they are the servants of Government. I may be asked what does it matter? From my point of view, it matters very much. If you go to a village, you will find that the village patwari is responsible for more than 75 per cent. of the litigation in the village. It may be all right so far as the Patwari Manual goes but we know as a matter of fact that many of the revenue and civil cases are due to a wrong entry in the papers. Similarly, the village watchman does not consider himself to be the servant of the village. He thinks that he is the servant of the police and the Criminal Intelligence Department. The same is the position of the village headman. That is why the panchayats of today are mostly the panchayats of the community or the panchayats of religious people. They do not and cannot have the same force of public opinion that they used to have. The village panchayat was an institution which appealed to the heart of the people and the panchayats that the Government have appointed in certain villages do not appeal to the heart of the people. That makes the whole difference. I would submit that Government should realise this difference and institute these village panchayats accordingly. I may be told that it was for the Provincial Governments to take steps in this matter. I would point out that the Decentralisation Commission was a Royal Commission and they laid down certain principles which were necessary for the Government to follow. In order to give effect to these recommendations, the Government ought to have enacted an Imperial Act and thus ought to have initiated a uniform policy for all the Local Governments. But the Government did not do so and this is why it has been found necessary to move this Resolution in this Assembly. The first principle laid down by the Commission was that the panchayats should be formed on an elective basis and that the elections should be held, not in accordance with any complicated rules, but in an informal meeting of the inhabitants of the village. This recommendation has not been followed and today we find there are different rules in different provinces. If you take the United Provinces Panchayat Act, you do not find the elective principle there. It is the Collector who appoints the panchayat, and it is the Collector who fills the vacancy. The very idea of election is taken away. The result of it is that those people who have a voice in the village are not elected as panches as they are generally the people who do not care to see the officials and the whole thing becomes a failure. The second principle laid down by the Commission was that these panchayats should not be asked to levy taxes but this recommendation too has not been followed. Take for instance the case of Madras and the Punjab and you will find that in both these provinces the Government has given powers for taxation. This has been done for obvious reasons. The Government do not want to spend a pie from their treasury, but still they want these panchayats to prosper. Unless they have sufficient money, how can the village people find the money for village improvements, for education, for sanitation and other things? The Government want to say: "Here we have given you local self-government. You govern your own village and tax the people". So that from the very beginning the panchayat becomes unpopular. This was the point guarded against by the Decentralisation Commission's Report. That has not been given effect to. There are also other points which clearly show that the points which were raised before the Decentralisation Commission have not been given effect to. Therefore from my point of view it is quite necessary for the Government of India to lay down their policy by an uniform legislation.

The amended Resolution has been split up into two parts. The first part asks the Government to introduce the system in the area administered by themselves directly. As far as I know, Sir, there are no panchayats in the North-West Frontier Province, in Ajmer-Merwara and in Delhi. That clearly shows how far the Government have trust in these institutions. The Central Government ought to have, at least by their own conduct, created model institutions in the area administered directly by themselves. This they have not done, and that is why the first part of my Resolution demands that the Government should show to the Local Governments that panchayats should be instituted in every village, and that a uniform policy is followed in the entire area under their control.

The second thing that I demand is that the Government should consult all the Local Governments and then lay down a clear policy stating in what way these panchayats should work. I have tried, Sir, to go through all the different pieces of legislation in the different provinces, and I find that practically in every province there is difference in the legislation. Take, for instance, Bombay. There, no judicial or criminal powers are given to the panchayats, and the same is the case in Madras ; though it was clearly laid down by the Decentralisation Commission in their Report that the Government should give these powers to these panchayats. That Sir, is necessary. If no power is given, how will they be able to administer peace and prosperity for the people ? I may be told perhaps that, in olden days, there was no act of legislation to regulate the working of these panchayats successfully. I submit, Sir, this will not be a proper reply to the question. We know that in olden days village communities had public opinion, and by the force of public opinion, they could very well administer what they wanted to administer. What is the position today ? The times have changed. Even the Government of India do not care for public opinion. How then can public opinion be regarded in a village unless and until powers are granted by the Legislature ? It has been said that the village people are not taking the initiative themselves and that they have to be practically asked by the officials in what way they should do their work. I consider, Sir, that if that has happened, it is all due to the method of administration that we have adopted. If we have not allowed the old institution to grow, we cannot say that the people have no initiative. We have not educated them, we have not given them the Western ideals of administration, and we have taken from them the ideals that they had before them in the olden times. Sir, the people were more educated then than they are today. Last Session I quoted certain figures to show that, in old India, people were more educated than they are today ; and if education has not gone higher up than 8 per cent. or even less than that, it is the duty of Government to see that education should spread. The greatest income of Government is from land revenue, and, Sir, only a very small amount out of that is spent on education in villages. The Government will not be correct in saying that, if the people want certain improvements, they ought to pay for them. When the people have already paid much more than a poor man should pay, then I submit it is for the Government to see that ordinary things that a State is bound to provide are provided. Education is the first thing to be provided for these villages ; and as far as I know, excepting the Punjab, these village panchayats have nothing to do with education. In the Punjab too there is no special amount of money placed at their disposal. I know that cess, levied along with land revenue, is assessed for running the district or the local boards. But in the first place that amount is very very small considering the work they have to do, and in the second place the amount spent on education, even out of the district boards' funds is very very small. The Government give very small grants for the dissemination of education. As for instance year before last the United Provinces Government granted, if I remember aright, the sum of three lakhs for the whole of the province for compulsory education. When you introduce compulsory education and give a very small amount of money, it is impossible for the people to create facilities for compulsory education. I submit that compulsory education can not be successfully introduced unless you create an atmosphere in which the village people may be able to understand the value of education.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : May I ask the Honourable Member if it is not a fact that about Rs. 80,000 have been given by the Local Government to the Meerut District Board alone for education ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Not for compulsory education. I was speaking about compulsory education. The District Board of Meerut was the first to apply for compulsory education and yet they have been allowed to introduce compulsory education only in six villages.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : May I ask my Honourable friend if there is any distinction drawn in the matter of grants given by Government as between primary education and compulsory primary education ? Can it not also be used for compulsory primary education ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : The grant given for compulsory education is a distinct grant from the grant for primary education.....

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : You mean it is earmarked as such ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Yes, it is so. The grant allotted for primary education is hardly enough to meet the expenditure involved in running the ordinary schools which are already in existence....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member should know that we are discussing a Resolution and not a Bill.

Mr. Ghazanfar Ali Khan (Central Provinces : Nominated Official) : Sir, I had no intention of intervening in this debate, but I am convinced that I would be failing in my duty as Official Member for the Central Provinces if I omitted to enter a very strong protest against the violent attack made on the officials of that province by the Honourable Mr. Aney in his speech on the 3rd September. He not only roundly accused the local officials of apathy in this important matter, but he went further and asserted that they deliberately hindered the establishment of panchayats from sordid and selfish motives. Mr. Aney said that they considered the panchayats as a nuisance and a potential rival to their own authority. I am paraphrasing his words. I have not got his exact words but that is the gist of what he said. (Voices : "Louder please".) Sir, I have no hesitation in characterising these sweeping charges against a large body of officials as grossly exaggerated, if not entirely devoid of foundation. I may inform the House that similar charges were made against the officials in the course of a debate in the Central Provinces Legislative Council on a Resolution moved in March, 1925 by Mr. Y. M. Kale, also from Berar, recommending that instructions should be issued to all Deputy Commissioners that they should take active steps to encourage the establishment of village panchayats. It was urged that the attitude of Deputy Commissioners and other local officers towards this movement was one of suspicion, obstruction and hostility. A curious feature of the debate was that all the speakers, without exception, were representatives of the Berar Division, of which my Honourable friend Mr. Aney is a representative in this House. Now, I happened to be in charge of that Division during the greater part of the year 1925, and before I took over the charge, I spent about four months at Amraoti, the headquarters of the Division, partly as the Deputy Commissioner of that district. I therefore submit that I am in a position to speak on this matter from intimate local knowledge. But before doing so, I will read out to the House the comment on Mr. Kale's Resolution by the Conference of Commissioners held at Pachmarhi in June 1925. This is what the Commissioners said :

"It was there pointed out that a former Minister for Local Self-Government had held that village panchayats could only be established satisfactorily by non-official agency and that the proposal now to place responsibility for initiative in this connection upon the district officer was a definite reversal of the previously accepted policy ; that in certain districts Deputy Commissioners, who had been in full sympathy with proposals for establishing village panchayats, had had to complain of lack of support from local bodies ; and that, in two instances, district councils had definitely declined to give their support to the movement. Finally, it was urged that the main obstruction to progress was the apathy of the people for whom an administrative panchayat constituted an entirely novel experiment ; and that, in the form in which the Village Panchayat Act was finally passed, administrative functions, to which villagers are unaccustomed, were given special prominence, with the result that the new panchayats found little or no support in traditional respect for the indigenous institution which was designed for the settlement of disputes."

And the Local Government in their Resolution on this Report say :

"The most important is the proposal made for the appointment of a provincial panchayat officer. This recommendation involves to some extent a departure from the policy hitherto pursued of leaving the initiative in regard to the working of the Act to non-officials and discouraging the establishment of panchayats by official enterprise."

That was the avowed policy of the Government which was adopted in deference to the opinion of the then Minister.

I now turn to my personal experience of Berar. I may mention that all the Deputy Commissioners in that Division were imbued with a very keen desire to support the movement as far as lay in their power, vis-a-vis the policy laid down by a former Minister. But their efforts in this direction were largely frustrated by two main causes beyond their control, namely, the apathy of the people and the almost ineradicable factions which divided the larger villages into hostile camps. The then Deputy Commissioner of Amraoti, the late Mr. Armitage, who was an officer of great energy and initiative, addressed himself to the question of accelerating the progress of the movement as soon as he took over charge. That was in 1925 when I was Commissioner, Berar. But after a few months' practical experience of the local difficulties due to the causes mentioned above, he was obliged to relax his activities.

Sir, my experience is not confined to Berar. During the five years, 1924-28, I held charge of three out of the five Divisions in the province, and I regret to say that the same causes militated against the development of the institution in the other two Divisions also. In Chattisgarh all the Deputy Commissioners happened to be Indian gentlemen of proved ability, zeal and energy. Although I wrote to them as soon as I took over charge and urged on them the desirability of furthering the growth of the movement, they were unable to achieve any appreciable measure of success owing to these difficulties.

Another cause which contributed to this unfortunate result was the fear entertained by the villagers that village panchayats involved additional taxation. As pointed out by the Commissioners' Conference, special prominence was given to administrative functions which necessitated expenditure on sanitation and other needs of the village, and the villagers were naturally averse to taxing themselves for these objects of which they were not fully appreciative. Thanks to the recommendations of the Village Panchayat Committee, this drawback has now been removed to a large extent. I may mention that the Provincial Government make initial grants to the newly formed panchayats to enable them to provide the necessary equipment in the shape of books, furniture, etc.

A whole-time provincial officer has been appointed in accordance with the unanimous recommendation of the Committee. This does not by any means indicate any apathy on the part of the Provincial Government or of the local officers in the past. The object of the appointment is briefly stated on page 7 of the Report. It says :

"But the appointment of a whole-time provincial officer will be a visible sign of Government's approval of the establishment of panchayats if the village people will but consent to have them. Moreover such an officer will be of practical assistance in the districts. To give the experiment a fair trial, it is clearly desirable, in the earliest stage, that some one should make a special study of the difficulties which beset its introduction ; that this expert should go from district to district, giving to one the benefit of experience gained in another, co-ordinating the system of work, stimulating local effort, advising district officers and local bodies, and where local workers lack experience, himself persuading villagers to submit to panchayats and guiding the panchayats after they are formed. His functions will, of course, be advisory and not executive."

He will be under the control of the Deputy Commissioners, whose powers have not been in any way impaired. The incumbent of the post is a Provincial Service officer who had previous experience of the movement in a Feudatory State, in Central India. Although the majority of the members of the Committee were non-officials, I can find nothing in their Report impugning the good faith of the Provincial Government or the local officials in this matter. Surely this is significant. Had there been any truth in the assertion of my friend Mr. Aney that the Provincial Government and the local officers deliberately hindered this movement, the non-official members would undoubtedly have mentioned the fact.

Sir, before I sit down, I wish to make one observation on the Resolution before the House. I entirely endorse the opinion of the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce that an all-India committee cannot possibly grapple with a problem of this magnitude, having regard to the immense diversity of conditions prevailing in the different provinces. Obviously, the proper course is that adopted by the Central Provinces Government, namely, the appointment of a Provincial Committee in those provinces where the movement is not progressing satisfactorily.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the amended Resolution. The original Resolution has already been read by you, soon after it was moved. I will now read the amended Resolution.

Mr. President : It has already been read.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Then, I submit that I support the amended Resolution and my reasons are these. The first difference that I find between the original and the amended one is with regard to the appointment of a Committee for the purpose of investigation into this question. I am against the Committee from this point of view, that committees are always tardy and take a very long time to come to a conclusion. They are besides expensive. It was only today at question time that it was urged that the committees are always very expensive and their cost should be curtailed. I would therefore submit that this question might be gone into by the Central Government itself, and that would be easy enough since there are certain Acts in each Province regulating the panchayat system which can be gone through, and certain suggestions of Committees which were appointed in different provinces could be investigated into by the Government of India. What I do therefore submit is that the Central Government should take up this question in their own hands and make a uniform policy to revive these panchayats and to keep them on a solid and substantial basis. We were not formerly without panchayats. It is well known that those panchayats were all self-supporting and self-sufficient. The system was elective. It is well known that these panchayats and the heads of the pauchayats called Mukhis used to be selected by the people of the village, and the whole village administration and authority were in their hands. The villagers had their pastures, for cattle and certain lands to cultivate. They maintained their own Mahrars and watchmen and at the time of harvest, these panchayats were paid contributions in order to defray these expenses. The panchayats were getting on well, but those days are gone, they have now got deteriorated. I submit it is not the fault of the people, but that of the Government—due to their undue interference in the affairs of the old panchayats. The fact is that the district and taluqa officers arrogated to themselves the powers of the panchayats and brought them to ruin. The object of this Resolution is to ask the Government to revive the panchayats on the old system and to constitute them in such a manner that they may be carried on without official interference. The panchayat system is the basic principle of self-government. It is, I say, the backbone of all reforms, and if these panchayats are not revived, I do not know what these reforms that are coming will do to us. (Hear, hear.) I would therefore urge that it is very important that the Central Government should pay all attention to their consolidation. The old panchayats used to do criminal as well as civil work, and they also discharged social and other functions. The remnant that however remains is that the panchayats have now some control in social matters only. There again, I submit they are exposed to dangers and get jeopardised many times when they exercise those powers. The unwritten law of these panchayats is that they could excommunicate a man who is a member of their panchayat and who has in any way misbehaved or done any social wrong. But what is the danger? Those who are in touch with courts know how the powers of the panchayats, even in social matters, are set at naught. As soon as a panchayat passes a resolution excommunicating a certain member, they are dragged into courts for defamation and have no protection. We know how many panchayats are dragged into court and made to dance attendance from day to day, with the result that they are forced to come down and compromise with the complainant or wait the weary length of the criminal proceedings which eventually end either in conviction or acquittal. I therefore submit that, even in social powers, there is great interference, and it is high time that these panchayats were placed on a better basis, not only socially but also politically. My own view is that in social and other matters, their powers should be supreme without interference from any outside body.

Now, Sir, public opinion on this question has matured long since, and I know it was in 1908-09, when the Government was awakened and they appointed the Decentralisation Commission which went into this question of panchayats and decided that the system should be revived on such basis that it could be made workable. When this Commission sent in its Report in 1909, what did the Government do? They did nothing, as I find from the information collected. They did nothing up to 1920 and it was only in that year that the slow process came to an end and the Provincial Governments were asked to pass enactments in regard to the creation and constitution of the panchayats. The Bombay Presidency passed an Act, No. 9 of 1920, though I should say to the great misfortune of Sind, the Government of Bombay treated Sind so callously and negligently as not to enforce it in Sind. They introduced it only in the northern, southern and the central divisions of the Presidency. They did not apply it to Sind. Up to this time nothing has been done in Sind towards this reform. I am very sorry for it, and I hope early steps will be taken to form panchayats in Sind. The Bombay Act was passed in 1920, and a similar one was passed in the Central Provinces, and I believe in other Provinces as well, but I am open to correction on this point. Though the Bombay Presidency passed an Act which was more advanced and much wider than in other places, yet all the same it had its own defects. By section 7 of Act IX of 1920, it was provided:

“that subject to the foregoing provisions and such rules as may be made by the Governor in Council, elections shall be made in each village by adult male residents living therein.”

That means that the elective system with a wide franchise was introduced there, but again the wholesomeness of it was whittled down by the provisions of section 3 whereby they provided the procedure as to how election was to be initiated. Section 3 says:

“On application in writing being made either by the district local board after previous notice to the Collector or by the Collector after previous notice to the district local board, the Commissioner may by notification declare any area to be a village for the purpose of this Act.”

Thus, Sir, the power has not been given to the public to ask for the area being declared a village for the purposes of this Act.

Then, Sir, subsequent to this Act, a Committee was appointed, because this Act was absolutely unworkable. That Committee was appointed by Resolution No. 5428, dated the 24th June, 1925, to examine the question of the future of village panchayats, and what did that Committee recommend with regard to this section? In paragraph 2 of their Report they said:

“The villagers themselves should be given a voice in the question of instituting a panchayat and therefore a provision should be introduced on the lines of section 5 of the Central Provinces Village Panchayat Act, 1920, so that the Collector or the Commissioner could move on the application of 20 adult residents of a village.”

Now, Sir, this Committee also gave their opinion as to how these panchayats had been carried on in those places where this Act had been applied, and I say they had not been carried on properly. This is what is contained in paragraph 3 of that Report:

“At our first meeting after a short general discussion of the terms of reference, we recorded our opinion that, apart from a few exceptional cases, the village panchayats are not flourishing but on the contrary they are likely to disappear unless special measures are taken to revive them, and that such measures should take the form of sub-conventions, the bestowal of more responsibilities, and the grant of judicial and criminal powers in suitable cases.”

Now, Sir, I am open to correction by my Honourable friends from Bombay, but my information is that these recommendations have not up till now been put into force.

I say, Sir, these panchayats, as they are constituted at present, will never be workable, because difficulties and impediments have been placed in their way, which have been recognised even by the Decentralisation Committee and other Committees. The first hindrance is with respect to the imposition of a leviable tax. The Decentralisation Committee said at page 244, paragraph 718:

“We consider essential to the popularity and efficiency of the panchayat system that it should not be associated with any new form of local taxation, for the evidence shows that the imposition of taxation of this character has made such bodies as the existing unions and sanitary committees unpopular.”

[17TH SEPT. 1929.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

It may be asked, Sir, how are these panchayats to be carried on then. I say, Sir, the panchayat question relates to the villages, and from the villages the revenue comes to the Imperial Government by way of assessment of land tax, and it is therefore the duty of the Government to see first of all that these poor men who till that land and give that revenue to the Government are looked after first from the Imperial revenues.

In the Report of the Decentralisation Committee they say—paragraph 719 :

“The panchayats’ revenue should be derived from the following sources :

(1) the assignment to it of a portion of land cess levied for local board purposes in the village. We have had evidence that many villages do not now receive any material advantage in return for the share of this cess which they now pay”.

Again, Sir, it is said in paragraph 720 :

“ Finally, it is most desirable that the work of the panchayats should be free from the interference of the Local Governments' subordinates ”

We know, Sir, how much they torment the village people and the heads of the panchayat. Men of this class have their own reasons for opposing any real local control.

This proves, Sir, that taxation is an impediment, and that should be removed. Then there is the control of the officers to which I have already referred. I will further submit that these panchayats should also be given sufficient funds for the purpose of carrying out drainage. The drainage question, Sir, is one which has been attracting the attention of the public at the present moment. Those who know of the heavy rains and the floods that have been devastating Sind, Punjab, Assam, the Central Provinces and other places know fully well that it is the drainage system that is responsible for these villages being drowned. There is absolutely no drainage system in villages and towns, and it is the first duty of the Central Government to see that the drainage system in the provinces is attended to. What is the state of things at present? When there is heavy rain, the ponds and depressions in the towns and villages get filled up, and if to them are added the floods, what happens? The water rises and all the villages and towns get submerged. It is only then—too late—that the Government think of doing something. They begin to spend thousands and lakhs of rupees for the purpose of making and protecting bunds, but these bunds give way and a calamitous condition follows.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is exceeding his time limit.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Sir, I was just going to finish and I will require less than a minute now. I will just conclude by observing that, for these questions it is very necessary that the Central Government should take the formation and revision of panchayats into their own hands. In that case there will be uniformity of the system. Otherwise, one Government may be tardy, another lax and nothing will be done and we will remain where we are. This reform is a very necessary reform and we will therefore support the motion whole-heartedly.

Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the amended Resolution as it stands demands two things : first, that in the territories directly administered by the Government of India, the panchayat system should be rehabilitated. So far as that is concerned, I tried to find out if there were any panchayats in Ajmer-Merwara and Delhi, and I could not find that any such system of panchayats was working in these provinces. As regards the latter portion of the amended Resolution, it would appear that though the subject is a provincial one, yet the amended Resolution seeks to recommend that a uniform and central policy be formulated in consultation with the Local Governments, and that sufficient funds be provided with a view to work these panchayats. It cannot be gainsaid that the entire fault lies at the door of the Government. The Government killed these indigenous institutions and true Nemesis lies in the fact that they should try to rehabilitate them. In fact the Report of the Decentralisation Committee has clearly pointed out that such institutions did exist and that it is the clear duty of the Government to rehabilitate them. In paragraph 696 of the Report they pointed out :

“The Indian villages formerly possessed a large degree of local autonomy, since the native dynasties and their local representatives did not, as a rule, concern themselves with the individual cultivators, but regarded the village as a whole, or some large landholder, as responsible for the payment of the Government revenues, and the maintenance of local order. This autonomy has now disappeared owing to the establishment of local, civil and criminal courts, the present revenue and police organisation, the increase of communications, the growth of individualism, etc., etc.

Nevertheless the village remains the first unit of administration; the principal village functionaries—the headman, the accountant, and the village watchman—are largely utilized and paid by Government, and there is still a certain amount of common village feeling and interests."

Now, today it might be regarded as simple pedantry on my part to refer to the old history of these village panchayats.

1 P.M. Suffice it to say that the old indigenous system of panchayats worked very well and was rightly regarded as the basic foundation for a complete system of self-government. I submit that the village organisation is the unit and foundation for any complete system of self-government, and unless and until the foundations are stable and strong, it is idle to think that we shall have the superstructure of self-government in its full measure. In this connection I would read from the book "Ancient Law" by Sir Henry Maine. Speaking of Indian village communities he says :

"It is an organised society, and besides providing for the management of the common fund it seldom fails to provide, by a complete staff of functionaries, for internal government, for police, for the administration of justice, and for the appointment of taxes and public duties."

Having cleared the ground, I would like to see how the Government of India have been discharging their duties in this connection during the last ten years. After the Report of the Decentralisation Commission was out and their recommendations were fully considered, the Government of India issued a Resolution in 1915, and then again in 1918. After that, during the course of the last ten years, I understand no inquiry has been made by the Government of India to find out how those Resolutions were given effect to in the various provinces. Going through the latest legislative Acts of the different provinces, we find that, though an attempt was made in the last ten years to give some sort of shape to the underlying idea of the recommendations of the Decentralisation Committee, yet the attempts have unfortunately failed to achieve the result which those recommendations contemplated. Taking the Bombay Act, I find that even the Preamble of that Act shows that the Government did not want to evolve an autonomous village in the Bombay Presidency. All that the Preamble says is this :

" In order to afford an opportunity of providing the requirements of water-supply, sanitation and other works of public utility with the object of encouraging the people to take an interest in local self-government,"

Now, Sir, under this Act, as has been pointed out by several speakers before, no criminal or civil powers were given to the village people ; and then again no powers were given to these village panchayats to impose any sort of cess or local taxation. Here, Sir, with due deference, I beg to differ from the recommendation of the Decentralisation Committee when they say that no powers of local taxation should be given. So far as the elective system is concerned, I have to congratulate the Bombay Government on their providing that every male resident of the village will be given the right to vote ; but, Sir, barring this good provision, all that I find in the Bombay Act is the very negation of local self-government. Under the Bombay Act, the powers of control are vested in the district boards, and the village panchayat is a sort of a department of the district local board instead of being an autonomous unit of administration. The Bombay Act only provides that the village panchayat is a subordinate department of the district local board, and all the powers of control are vested in the local board. The Madras Village Panchayats Act proceeds on a similar basis, and I have no hesitation in saying that these two Acts do not contain any elements for development on right lines. Coming, however, to the United Provinces Act, I find that that Act deals more with legal powers and less with administrative powers ; and the village fund, as provided by the United Provinces Act, is one which it will be difficult to collect and utilise. The supervision imposed by the United Provinces Act is much too great, and cannot leave proper scope for ordinary village panchayats to develop. Coming to the Act of my own province, I would submit that the Act as such is certainly an improvement on all the other Acts, and it provides ample scope for development ; but whereas it supplies ample scope for development, what do we find in practice ? Mian Abdul Aziz, the Deputy Commissioner of the district from which I come, made a speech in this connection in this House the other day and I congratulate him on that speech. But you will find Sir, that if the facts as detailed forth by the Honourable Member are true, they disclose a state of things at which any government worth its name should hide its face in shame. He said—and I shall quote his exact words :

" If I were a cynic, I could say that those human dwelling places were really not fit for cattle and it was hardly fair to human beings to be compelled to live there."

If that depicts the real state of things, I cannot find a greater denunciation than this. When on the last occasion he made a speech in the last Session at Delhi, he was pleased to observe that, in the Hissar district, there were people who non-co-operated with vegetables, meaning thereby that the mentality of those people was such that they would not, though it was to their benefit, grow vegetables instead of grain on account of their pride of birth and so forth. Now, you find that the habits of these people and the mentality of these people, if what Mian Abdul Aziz has said is absolutely true, show that the Government have not done their duty. He has put a question to this House as to how these village panchayats are to be worked and he has supplied the reply himself. When he said that the higher strata of society was not for the development of these village panchayats, I think he was certainly wrong ; but when he spoke of going to the village people in a spirit of service and asking them to do the right thing and stimulating their imagination, I think he was laying his finger on the right point. The complaint which he made, and very rightly made, was that the funds at the disposal of these village panchayats were not sufficient. This was the complaint made by Mr. Kelkar also, and I also think that the real complaint is that these village panchayats do not get sufficient funds, and they cannot work properly. I quite agree with the Report of the Decentralisation Committee when they say that, even now, the village people are such that they can evolve the ancient form of self-government which they had in times of yore in their midst. The Decentralisation Committee said at page 238 :

" Some witnesses hold that the disintegration of the village communities which has taken place under our administration has gone so far that it is not possible to reconstitute them as reliable entities in any scheme of local self-government. There is, however, a large and strong body of opinion in favour of enlisting the help of the people in local administration in villages, by the establishment of administrative village councils which should bear the time-honoured title of panchayat. . . . . We are of opinion also that the foundation of any stable edifice which shall associate the people with the administration must be the village, as being an area of much greater antiquity than administrative creations such as taluils, etc., etc."

Sir, I submit that, even now, in the villages, on account of the ancient culture of India and on account of the religious-mindedness of the people, we find that the people respond nobly to all sincere efforts at progress and that they are amenable to all good influences, and are thus capable of evolving the best system of government known to mankind, but it is the apathy of Government which is really responsible for the non-establishment of these panchayats. My Honourable friend, Mr. Aney brought this out very forcibly in his speech on this Resolution the other day, and today we have heard from the last but one speaker that the Government have rightly done their duty in this matter. In this connection, may I ask my friend Mian Abdul Aziz, who said the other day something about the Hissar district, consisting of 1,008 villages, as to how many new panchayats have come into existence during his term of three years in that district. Twenty years after the issue of the Report of the Decentralisation Commission, only 38 panchayats have been brought into existence in the district of Hissar, and out of them 18 during the term of three years' regime of my friend Mian Abdul Aziz. I should really congratulate him on the work that he has done. Does not this demonstrably prove, Sir, that the Government have not done their duty by the people in regard to the establishment of these panchayats ? On the other hand, this Government have reduced and ground down the people to such a state of misery that they have lost all power of understanding what is good and what is bad for them. They do not understand what is to their benefit. Then again, the Government take away such a large amount of money from them that very little is left for those people even to make both ends meet. I therefore submit that the essential requirement is that the Local Governments should give sufficient funds to these bodies, and if the Provincial Governments are unable to cope with the demand, then it is up to the Imperial Government, which takes so much in taxes from the people, to return the money back to those people so that they may prosper and evolve these self-governing institutions which make for peace and prosperity.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I do not know whether I shall be allowed to speak for long. . . .

Mr. President : Only 15 minutes are allowed.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : There is, it appears, a danger of want of a quorum in the House. But I must say that this is a subject which is prima facie very alluring, because it speaks of panchayats, a name which is so famous in the ancient history of the world, and especially of India, and in our studies of ancient law, we heard much about these panchayats, I mean, village communities. The village panchayats were thriving under a system in India which I am afraid is daily being destroyed. I am sure many of us are under the impression that we have come here to have some constitution under which we shall run our own Government. I do not know if many of us realise whether the constitution in which we are being trained, rather spoon-fed, is one which is being evolved from within the country itself. In India all institutions were evolved from villages, and our real life was in the village. Now, the system is quite topsy-turvy. In everything that we think of, we imagine placing ourselves under conditions obtaining in countries across the ocean, where the system of culture is something quite different from our own system, a system which is Indian and is the best suited for India. We now try to impose things on our people, and that from above. We are imitating things every day from the West, and I do not know whether, in the existing state of affairs, in our fatherland, which is a vast agricultural country, and where the real life is still to be found in the villages alone, such imitation can ever be assimilated.....

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : You have got your central offices at the headquarters in the provinces.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : There should be central offices, but there are central offices and central offices. Central offices may be the apex of a synthesis of village units or it may be that, analytically, things may be forced down into villages from cities and central places. There are two ways of getting the very self same thing in appearance. That does not matter. That which comes I am afraid cannot be avoided. We are destined to imitate without assimilating, and we will have to submit to our lot. But coming to village panchayats I was not much enamoured of the Resolution as it was expounded by the Mover the other day, but after hearing the speech in support of the amendment of my friend Mr. Mukhtar Singh, I feel that I should make the best of a bad case. I have not studied the panchayat system as it exists in the different provinces of India. I do not know if it exists in the North West Frontier Province, and if it exists there, I do not know in what form it exists. Perhaps it does not exist there. But I know something of the panchayat system which is called the Chaukidari Panchayat as it exists in the province which I should formally call mine in this House. I expected to hear something from the representative of this province, Rai Bahadur Shyam Narayan Singh, but unfortunately he does not care to enlighten us in matters of importance when there is need for such enlightenment. However, I know the chaukidari village panchayat system in Bihar has existed for a very long time. It is a sham something, planned, promulgated and artificially kept up by those who apparently never care to understand Indian life or culture. Now, as the political life in India is growing this village panchayat system has come to be an organised system of espionage. It is nothing less than that. That system of espionage is being run at the cost of the chaukidari taxpayer. The villager pays the taxes and that too with much reluctance. He knows only that the system is one of paying fresh taxes. He pays them in order to be relieved of the difficulty and harassment of his household articles being attached and sold away as often happens in case of non-payment. He pays the tax, and that is all he knows about the village panchayat system. (Mr. K. Ahmed made an interruption.) I am a little bit hard of hearing so far as my Honourable friend is concerned. The villager knows that much alone. It is also a fact that the appointment of the panchayat whosoever's duty it might be under the law, is made not by the District Magistrate but by a raw Deputy Magistrate or a Sub-Deputy Collector, as he is called in our province. I speak of the practice.

Mr. K. Ahmed : That is not correct.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : He goes and makes a report that the villagers have elected such and such people as panchayats, whereas the villagers do not know anything about it at all ; as a matter of fact, they do not know that they have got any right at all to select the panchayats. The chaukidars who are employed are appointed practically by the local police, with the sanction of the raw Deputy Collector or Sub-Deputy Collector, and the villagers who pay for these chaukidars have not got a word to say about what they do. Once it actually happened that some crops were stolen from a villager's fields. He approached the police and complained that the chaukidar did not keep watch. He was told that the chaukidar was not the guard of the things in the fields, but that he was to keep a guard over the mohalla. When there is a theft in the mohalla itself I do not know how much the chaukidar is paid, and through the chaukidar the Thana police too, so that there may not be any further trouble in the village due to police inquiry and all that sort of thing.

Thus I submit that you are practically breaking the ancient village life. When this is the state of things, it can well be imagined why litigation increases. Why there are parties and factions in villages, and police rule reaches every door. Our new village panchayat should therefore be based on the beautiful system of the village community, the remains of which can still be traced. Even now if you go into our villages and look into the remains of the old village community system, what do you find ? There are commune lands in the villages including pasture lands, and those lands which are still there, unprotected by any law ; any man,—the zemindar or any big man—can encroach upon those lands. The pastures are gone and the beautiful village irrigation system is now out of repairs completely. No village panchayats look after it. It is not their duty. You know, like the present Sind, Assam and many other places, Orissa perhaps yields to very few provinces in India in the matter of her floods. But do you know how these floods actually submerge villages there in Orissa ? It is because the ancient system of irrigation planned and protected under the time-honoured system of village communes has now been abandoned. Any Member who is interested may come with me and I shall show him the very village from which I come and he will see how things were all right and how those embankments and canals, which are there even now, the remnants of the past, have been neglected and spoiled. Under the present village chaukidari system they are all practically abandoned. Nobody looks into the sanitation, or education of the villages. It is only, as I have said, a system of police espionage, and we realise that there are so many chaukidars, an army of them, in the district, only when a Governor or any such big official comes, for then these village chaukidars have to guard the railway line for days and nights, and I don't know what provision there is for guarding even the mohallas or the villagers' houses when such an official comes, and for days villages are without a chaukidar. (An Honourable Member : "But they guard your house also, don't they?") I did not hear you. That is the use of the chaukidari panchayat made by the Local Governments. I know that we must evolve this aspect of our national life through these our national institutions. The Central Government should take an interest in evolving that system of village panchayat and not the system which would carry the police espionage to the doors of the villagers only to destroy life and organisation in the village. It should not be done by putting things from above. The institution must grow from within and must be synthesised in our coming national constitution.

I am very glad that there has not been want of a quorum and I submit that the Central Government, if it is going to give place to a national government, should take an interest in that beautiful system of village communities in a land where the population is purely agricultural and where industrial cities will not very easily grow and change the entire atmosphere of our culture and constitution. I therefore support this motion, with a recommendation that the Central Government should take an interest in village communities.

An Honourable Member : Let the question be now put.

Sir Frank Noyce (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : I may say at the outset that I am glad that the Honourable Mover of this amendment has divided it into two parts, as I am in a position to give him more satisfaction in regard to the first part of his amended Resolution than in regard to the second. I must, however, point out to him that it is hardly possible for the Governor General in Council to rehabilitate immediately a thing which does not exist. Honourable Members opposite are, so far as I have been able to discover in the short time at my disposal, since I learnt of this amended Resolution, perfectly correct in stating that there are no panchayats in the North West Frontier Province or Delhi. The reason, I understand, is that the Punjab Village Panchayats Act, which was passed in 1922, has not yet been extended to those provinces. Again, so far as I know, there are no village panchayats in Baluchistan or Coorg. Whether Baluchistan is a favourable ground for experiments in this direction I am not in a position to say, though I imagine no Member of this House will suggest that the other directly administered province which has not been mentioned, I mean, the Andamans, would afford a suitable field for experiment. (Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : "What about Sind?") It is news to me that Sind has been taken over by the Central Government. I am dealing with directly administered territories, and Sind is not a directly administered territory. (An Honourable Member : "What about Ajmer-Merwara?") I have not yet come to Ajmer-Merwara. The Honourable Member is quite right in reminding me of it. In the Ajmer-Merwara Rural Boards Regulation, there is no provision for the constitution of panchayats. In regard to this part of the Resolution I can assure the House that the Government of India will be very glad to consult Local Administrations on the possibility of introducing into the directly administered areas, legislation for the constitution of village panchayats more or less on the lines of those which are in force in the major provinces. I must, however, add that, judging from the second part of the amended Resolution, financial considerations will be involved. My Honourable friend Mr. Khan has told us that the Central Provinces Government make grants to enable village panchayats to start their work. How far we should be able to do that in the directly administered territories remains to be seen. A Primary Education Committee is just now sitting to deal with the educational problems of Ajmer-Merwara, Delhi and the North West Frontier Province and if its recommendations are to be carried into effect, considerable expenditure will probably be involved. Again my Honourable friend, Mr. Sarda, is crying out for improvements in sanitation in Ajmer-Merwara and, as the Royal Commission on Agriculture has pointed out, a very great deal can be done for agriculture and co-operation in the directly administered provinces. How much, after all these demands have been met, would be left for village panchayats, remains to be seen, but I can assure the House that the matter will be carefully considered.

Now, Sir, as regards the second part of the amendment, I really have very little to add to what I said at the outset. The resolution has been changed in form but not in substance and the new form in which it has been put is no more acceptable to the Government of India than that in which it was originally placed before this House. Instead of an all-India Committee, the Government of India are now asked to formulate, in consultation with Local Governments, and lay down a uniform policy for Provincial Governments. I am sorry to see that, in spite of the arguments which have been adduced on this side of the House, Honourable Members opposite are still in favour of laying all Provinces on a Procrustean bed. When I was listening to the speeches from the Benches opposite, I wondered whether I was sitting in this Assembly in the year 1929 or in the year 1919. Great stress has been laid on the recommendations of the Decentralisation Commission, but some of my friends opposite seem to have forgotten what has happened since then, and especially the important constitutional changes which have taken place. It is hardly for me, one of the most junior Members of this House, to instruct the House on the constitutional position. Under the terms of this Resolution the Government of India are asked to direct Local Governments to appropriate sufficient funds from Provincial revenues. What power, I ask, have the Government to direct Local Governments to set aside any part of their revenues for objects over which the Government of India themselves have no power whatsoever of supervision, direction or control. Again, Sir, the Government of India are asked, if Local Governments are unable to cope with the demand for funds, to apportion funds for the purpose from Imperial revenues. It is, I understand, an accepted principle that the Government of India are not in a position to spend Imperial revenues on purely provincial subjects. It is for this reason that I am compelled to oppose the amended Resolution, except to the extent which I have just indicated. I can assure the Honourable Mover of the amendment and also the Mover of the Resolution, who is not in his place today, that I personally have great sympathy with the objects they have at heart and, if I may strike a personal note, I may say that, when I was in charge of a division in Madras, I did my very best to help the panchayats in that division which were struggling into existence, some of which, I am glad to say, are now in a very flourishing condition. Before I sit down, there is an analogy which I should like to draw from the co-operative movement. That movement was started with great hopes and great enthusiasm. It has conferred, and I am convinced will continue to confer, great benefits on the rural population of India. At the outset, the provinces vied with each other in the progress they could show in the number of their societies but what is the position today? In no less than four provinces, committees of inquiry have had to be appointed recently to inquire into the defects which have revealed themselves in the course of time. I have no doubt that those defects can be put right but in two provinces at least, it is going to be uphill work.

The point I wish to make, Sir, is that. If the Government of India were to formulate what Honourable Members call a uniform policy, they would be giving what may be described as an artificial stimulus to the formation of village panchayats and there is a grave risk that in the course of ten, fifteen or twenty years time, the provinces may find themselves compelled to constitute committees of inquiry into the defects which have revealed themselves in the panchayat movement. I submit for the consideration of this House that, not only from the point of view of the constitutional position but from the point of view of the soundness, stability and strength of the panchayat movement, it is desirable that the provinces should develop in this matter on their own lines. The Panchayat Acts were passed, most of them, nine or ten years ago. The provinces have been developing on their own lines during that period. What hope is there now of inducing them to adopt a uniform policy laid down by the Government of India without any consideration of the diversities of local conditions? If the amended Resolution were accepted, the Government of India could not formulate a satisfactory policy without a detailed inquiry into the local conditions. From that point of view, the original Resolution appeals to me more than the amended one. If the provinces want help, want outside experience as regards the steps they should take to foster the growth of the panchayat movement, it will be easy for them to get it. The provinces I have mentioned which established committees of inquiry into the progress of co-operation, went outside for help and advice. The Co-operative Committees in Madras and Burma,—Honourable Members who come from the Punjab will be glad to know,—sought advice from the Punjab and obtained it. I may express the hope that, if Local Governments want similar help in regard to panchayats, they will turn to my own province which has as flourishing a co-operative panchayat movement as any other. For these reasons, Sir, I regret that I must oppose the amended Resolution.

Mr. President : The original question was that the following Resolution be adopted :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he do appoint a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to examine the rural conditions obtaining in the various Provinces, and to recommend ways and means for establishing in each village, or group of villages with a population of not less than 1,000 inhabitants, an efficient panchayat which will mainly be elected on the Adult Franchise system, and possess sufficient legal powers and financial resources for administering all village concerns, such as agriculture, minor irrigation and forests, cottage industries, village sanitation, education, co-operation, trade and banking, and for deciding civil and criminal suits up to a certain limit, subject only to the general control and technical advice and appellate jurisdiction of District and Provincial officers and Courts of Law."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council (a) to immediately rehabilitate in villages within the territories under its direct control the panchayats on an elective system based on a sufficiently broad franchise and equip them with legal powers and funds sufficient for the administration of village concerns, viz., village sanitation, disease of livestock, minor irrigation, forests, cottage industries, primary education, co-operation, petty civil and criminal cases, registration of births, deaths and marriages and the like, and (b) to formulate in consultation with local Governments and lay down a uniform policy for provincial Governments to build up such autonomous panchayats on an elective basis based upon a sufficiently wide franchise in all the provinces of India (specially where such institutions do not exist), directing the local Governments to appropriate sufficient funds from the Provincial Revenues for such panchayats to function properly and if local Governments are unable to cope with the demands for funds to apportion sufficient funds for the purpose from the Imperial Revenues."

The question I have now to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Ten Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Ten Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : I will now put the original Resolution standing in the name of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadian Urban) : May I be permitted, Sir, to withdraw it. My friend Mr. Rangaswami Ayyangar, when he left for Madras, had authorized me to be in charge of the Resolution with your permission. With the assurance that Sir Frank Noyce has given that he would send copies of the debate to the Provincial Governments for their consideration, I am perfectly satisfied ; and if permission is given to me to withdraw the Resolution, I will withdraw it.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member can have permission to move a Resolution according to the Standing Orders.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : I am entirely in your hands, Sir.

Mr. President : The question I have to put is that the following Resolution be adopted :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he do appoint a mixed committee of officials and non-officials to examine the rural conditions obtaining in the various Provinces, and to recommend ways and means for establishing in each village, or group of villages with a population of not less than 1,000 inhabitants, an efficient panchayat which will mainly be elected on the adult franchise system, and possess sufficient legal powers and financial resources for administering all village concerns, such as agriculture, minor irrigation and forests, cottage industries, village sanitation, education, co-operation, trade and banking, and for deciding civil and criminal suits up to a certain limit, subject only to the general control and technical advice and appellate jurisdiction of district and provincial officers and courts of law."

Mr. President : I understand the Honourable Member (Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim) in whose name the next Resolution* stands does not desire to move it. I, therefore, call upon Mr. Jayakar to move his Resolution.

RESOLUTION RE MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) :
Sir, the Resolution that stands in my name runs as follows :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Military Schools that have been started in India for the sons and wards of Indian soldiers and officers of the Army be thrown open to all Indian boys, irrespective of caste, creed or family connections, and that they be allowed admission into such schools subject to their passing the prescribed examination for ascertaining their fitness to be trained for recruitment as non-commissioned officers and for the Viceroy's Commission."

Sir, at this time of the day, I do not propose to take a long time over this Resolution. The Resolution is perfectly clear. It recommends to the Governor General in Council that the military schools which at present exist in the country for the training and the recruitment of non-commissioned officers and for the Viceroy's Commission, and which have so far been restricted only to certain classes of individuals should be thrown open to all the boys in India. Sir, this Resolution is only another attempt to get for the middle classes of India opportunities of military training. It is a counterpart of other Resolutions which have been moved in this House and under some of which the Indian Sandhurst Committee sat with reference to the training of Commissioned officers. It is a counterpart of that motion. This Resolution is concerned with inferior military officers. Whatever the historical reason for restricting these schools to certain classes might have been at one time, into which I do not propose to go and raise any controversies, it is necessary that they should be thrown open now to all. The Resolution suggests that in the widening and enlargement of a liberal policy which the Government of India should adopt, these schools should be thrown open to all the middle class boys who may wish to qualify themselves.

*"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he be pleased to abolish the export duty imposed on raw hide in India."

Viewed as such, I do not think that even the worst opponent of Indian ambitions for military life can say that it is an extravagant claim. The claim, as the Resolution puts it, is a very modest one, and I do not propose to raise any controversy on this question. The basis of that claim is that there exists in this country abundant material for military training. I do not agree with the Government Benches when they say that they do not find cadets for the superior military services in the country. The non-official opinion in India is that there is abundant material and energy in the country which has to be harnessed in order that the defence of the country, when the time comes, may be made more easy. During the short time at my disposal, I shall refrain from doing one thing, namely, going into excursions of my own. I propose to restrict myself to more or less the authoritative opinions which have been expressed by those who made the unanimous report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee. There I am on perfectly safe ground. That Committee, as the House is well aware, went into all the important considerations, although its inquiry related to another purpose, namely, the commissioned ranks of the Army. It has gone into the whole question of military training for Indian boys, and brought up an amount of material which I propose to use for supporting this Resolution. One of the witnesses who was examined before that Committee put forward an aspect of this question which is very material from my point of view. That witness is no less a person than Sir Prabhaskar Pattani, an administrator of a very high order, who at one time was an Executive Councillor of the Bombay Government and who has adorned many administrative offices in Indian States. The Skeen Committee, at page 12 of their Report, state what Sir Prabhaskar Pattani said as regards this aspect of the question, viz., the necessity of developing all the available talent in the country with a view that India should play its proper part as a Member of the Empire. It is stated at page 12 of the Report :

"Sir Prabhaskar Pattani in his evidence has stated the other and wider aspect of the matter :

"My point of view is not from the point of view of Indianisation against Europeanisation. I am only treating it as an Imperial question. It is in the interest of the Empire itself that every component part, every limb of the Empire should be equally strong so that no weak limb or organ, no weak part of the body should be so weak as to hamper the whole of the body in the event of a great danger."

I submit these are very weighty words proceeding from a person who has qualified himself by experience and training to take a dispassionate and large view, not necessarily a political view, but a very comprehensive and national view of the question.

There is another reason which the Skeen Committee referred to in another part of their Report, at page 39, and that is also a very important consideration, to which I invite the attention of the Government of India. The Committee refer to the necessity of harnessing all the Indian talent in this connection in anticipation of a contingency which may arise in case another war breaks out. The Committee recommends that the Government of India should immediately start on a clear policy and take advantage of the material which exists in this country with a view that they may not be found wanting and unprepared when that contingency occurs.

This is what the Skeen Committee say :

"We think military opinion will agree that it would be an immediate necessity if war on a considerable scale were to break out. If that is so, then it is obvious that it would be better to have military colleges already in being and fully organised than to be dependant upon improvisation after the emergency has arisen."

L12CPB(LA)

[17TH SEPT. 1929.]

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

Then going into further details on this question the Report says :

"On these grounds alone we think that it would be in the judgment of many a sound policy to lay the foundations of an Indian military college as soon as possible, and so commence without delay not merely the building of the college structure but the buildings also of the tradition and sentiments which in India as in England would be indispensable to the achievement of success. The process is one which takes time and the start should not be postponed."

This is the opinion of the Skeen Committee, and it is entitled to very great weight.

The next question, which arises and which has often been debated in this House whenever any military question crops up and disappointing answers are given by the Government, is whether the experiments which have been made in this connection so far have been successful. That is certainly a legitimate test to apply, whether the experiments for giving facilities for military training which have so far been made have proved successful, so as to encourage the hope that, if those facilities were increased, better results would follow. On that point again, I have the opinion of the Sandhurst Committee entirely in favour of my view. Referring to this question and the success which the Dehra Dun Military College, has achieved, this is what the Sandhurst Committee said :

"The success achieved at that institution in developing the qualities specially required in an aspirant to a Commission is amply shown by the records of the Dehra Dun, when asked whether from his point of view any difference was apparent in the outturn of that particular type of institution in India, 'Dehra Dun an easy first, the rest nowhere'."

Therefore I am on entirely safe ground when I say that there is reason to hope that, if the Government of India would courageously march forward and not be restrained by idle fears, the experiment is bound to prove more and more successful.

Speaking of this Dehra Dun institution, Sir, it is the experience of everybody who has anything to do with military education of the young that that institution is too costly for the ordinary middle class Indian on whose behalf my plea is raised. I am asking for cheapening military education. That is one of the objects I have in view. It is the decided opinion of experts that the middle class population of India cannot afford to keep their sons in the Dehra Dun College, though it is situated in India, because the expenses of education in that college are prohibitive. To take the figures which are available in the Skeen Committee's Report it is said that for a soldier who enjoys certain concessions in fees for his children at Dehra Dun the total expense is Rs. 5,000 for educating his son ; for a non-soldier civilian, it is double that amount, i.e., Rs. 10,000. That is only for educating the boy in India. Then when he proceeds to Sandhurst, without doing which his education is not complete, the expense is Rs. 7,000 for a soldier who gets a concession, and Rs. 11,000 for a civilian who does not get any concession. Therefore, for a civilian, the total expense of educating his son so as to get a Commission will be Rs. 21,000, minimum, and for a soldier it will be Rs. 12,000, minimum. I ask my Honourable friends to realise how many people in India can afford to put their children at Sandhurst or at Dehra Dun. Therefore my plea is that a cheaper method ought to be found by throwing open all the schools, where education can be more cheaply given.

Another reason which is very weighty in my opinion and to which I wish to invite the attention of the Government of India is that the facilities and opportunities of training young Indians in England by their very nature are limited. Honourable Members are aware that it is the apprehension of the universities and colleges in England, even on matters not connected with military questions, and in places like Oxford and Cambridge, that by an inundation of Indian students in a particular college, the characteristics and the atmosphere of that college would be destroyed. Every college can therefore only take a certain minimum amount of foreign material. If it proceeds beyond that minimum, there is a danger of the atmosphere of that college losing its traditional characteristics. This may be a wrong or right view,—I am not concerned with that. But the rule exists under which only a few Indian students can find accommodation in English colleges and schools. So great an authority as the Skeen Committee, sympathetic as it was to Indian wishes and aspirations, had to take serious note of this view. This is what that Committee stated at page 39 of their Report :

"In every educational institution there comes a time when the authorities responsible for its efficiency must decide to set a limit to the further acceptance of foreign students for fear lest the character of the institution may be changed. This point of view was clearly expressed in 1921 by Sir Theodore Morrison, K.C.S.I., Principal of the Armstrong College,"

He stated :

"I beg the Committee to realise that no university can absorb more than a limited, and rather small number of foreign students. A university is a corporate body with traditions and a certain characteristic tone. It has a personality which is distinctive, of which it is proud and which it desires to retain. This personality would be destroyed or distorted by the influx of a large number of strangers and no university would tolerate this transformation."

This is the prevailing view in England. Honourable Members who are concerned with sending their sons to England are aware of the great difficulty they find in getting admission into a good school or college, the plea always being that no school or college in England can afford to take beyond a certain minimum number of Indian students. I am not at the present moment concerned to characterise this claim as just or otherwise ; but it does exist, and it is a powerful plea urged on behalf of British universities and colleges and it has found a place even in the sympathetic Report of the Indian Sandhurst Committee. Now, the percentage which the British universities and colleges will accept is 5 per cent. of Indian students in a college, 30 cadets at Sandhurst, 12 at Woolwich. The House can well imagine therefore what a small percentage of Indian military students can be absorbed in English schools and colleges. A vast amount of material has therefore to be trained in this country. Consequently, I submit that if the Government of India do really intend to prepare India for taking up her own defence, as they must some time do,—it lies in the hands of the Government of India to delay or accelerate that day—wisdom requires that the beginning should be made at once. It should not be delayed, otherwise we may come to a catastrophe when India may find herself absolutely unprepared for an emergency. This demand has gone up from the non-official Benches from time to time ; it has no doubt so far fallen on unwilling and deaf ears. It has been urged by the Indian National Congress for forty years. For forty years the cry has gone up that there is plenty of fighting material in this country ; we have here so many tribes, so many races who have spent their whole life-time in fighting. Government are not here dealing with uncivilized or uncultured races amongst whom the tradition for fighting cannot be said to exist. Government are dealing with a country which has got a great military past. And yet we find that the Government of India are still unwilling to face the issue. One has only to refer to the answers that Mr. Tottenham gives every day to non-official questions. Still the Government of India are fighting shy of the problem. They ignore the great problem before them—and I say that that is the problem of problems—how to intertwine the ambitions of the middle classes with the military defence of the country. It is no use Government saying “Oh, we give facilities to a few loyal and soldierly families.” That is only a part of the question; the more important part is now that large middle class, from which the educated community comes, can be trained for military careers. That is the great problem before the Government of India; and the sooner they apply their mind to it the better for the Government and for the defence of the country.

In a somewhat pessimistic tone, the Skeen Committee note the several attempts which have been made by non-official Indian opinion to obtain recognition of this view. I say in a somewhat pessimistic tone, because the Skeen Committee, after noticing all that had been done for so many years by Indian Nationalists, express their opinion in the following terms, (page 6) :

“For more than forty years the exponents of the political and national aspirations of the Indian people had demanded insistently on the platform of the Indian National Congress and elsewhere that the Indians should be given an opportunity of service in the Indian Army equal to those enjoyed by their British fellow-subjects. But this demand has so far met with no substantial response from Government.”

That, Sir, is the decided opinion of the Skeen Committee, which cannot be described as a body of political agitators.

To note, for the benefit of my Honourable friends, only three instances of these demands which are the most recent, I may remind the Honourable Members that the predecessor of this House in 1921 passed a very important Resolution on the 28th March. Honourable Members are aware that that House was very different in constitution, personnel and temper from this House. That House was far more friendly to Government than this House can be under present conditions. Even that House passed a Resolution in 1921—the date seems almost ante-diluvian and that Resolution has not at all been carried out by the Government of India. That was a Resolution moved from the same point of view from which my Resolution is being moved today, namely, to harness and utilize the traditional military talent of the middle classes in this country. I will only read the material part of that Resolution for the information of this House. Resolution No. 7, passed on the 28th March, 1921 :

“This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the King Emperor's Indian subjects should be freely admitted to all arms of His Majesty's military, naval and air forces in India and the ancillary services and the auxiliary forces,—and that every encouragement should be given to Indians, including the educated middle classes, subject to the prescribed standards of fitness, to enter the Commissioned ranks of the Army.”

I do not want to go into other details. Honourable Members who are curious will find the terms of that Resolution fully set out at page 7 of the Skeen Committee's Report. Government have so far taken no notice of the requirements of that Resolution, although the matter is nearly eight years old. Somewhat impatient, the same House passed, on the 4th July, 1923, another Resolution asking the Government to give effect to its previous Resolution. When that was not done, ultimately on the 19th February, 1925, a Resolution was passed by the successor of that House by which the Indian Sandhurst Committee was appointed. On that Committee sat many important men, who cannot be described as anti-government. They made a unanimous Report and that Report has been before the Government for a long time and the Government have taken practically no action on that. Therefore, Sir, the time has now come when, once more, the attention of the Government should be drawn to this question, at least so far as the non-commissioned ranks and the Viceroy's Commission are concerned. I am therefore asking them to throw open all military schools which have so far been restricted only to certain classes. I have purposely avoided expressing any adverse or condemnatory opinion upon the policy of Government in restricting admission to these schools so far. After all, I am very glad that at least one section of Indians, of loyal and military antecedents, should have received the benefit of these schools. I have no quarrel with the policy which Government have followed so far. I am concerned with the future, and I want to carry the Government with me, if I can, if at all the Government is capable of being carried with us on military questions. I have therefore put my plea in a very moderate way in order that it should find acceptance at the hands of Government. I am not however sure whether I shall succeed. Sir, I move.

Mr. President : There are two amendments on the paper, one by Dr. Moonje and the other by Mr. Misra. I am not quite sure whether those amendments are not outside the scope of the original Resolution and therefore I should like to hear the Honourable Members if they have got to say anything. At the same time I should like to express an opinion that Members had better confine themselves to the one issue raised by Mr. Jayakar.

Dr. B. S. Moonje (Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, the object of the Resolution is to have military schools for the training of the Indian boys. ....

Mr. President : To throw open the present schools to boys of all classes and communities.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : There are two schools at present in India already established, and therefore my first view was to throw open these schools to the public. Afterwards I learned, in reply to certain questions asked this morning, that Government do not intend to throw open those schools to the public, and therefore, desiring not to leave any loophole to the Government to escape their responsibility, I thought at the last moment of giving notice of this amendment, so that that amendment might be added at the end of the original Resolution. Through a little oversight, it was put down as an amendment that was to be substituted for the original Resolution; but the intention was that, if the Government were to make it an excuse,—in order that there might be no loophole—this amendment might be added at the end of the Resolution. I should like to know the position of the Government in this matter before deciding whether I should insist upon the amendment or not.

Mr. President : There is no question of his insisting on his amendment : the question is whether the Honourable Member's amendment is in order.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : As I have said, the object of the original Resolution was to have military schools for the training of Indian boys, and I believe if this amendment is added at the end of the Resolution it will be perfectly in order.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham (Army Secretary) : Sir, our view in this matter is that we ought to go strictly by the rules and Standing Orders of the House. The rules lay down that a Resolution shall raise substantially one definite issue, and the Standing Orders also lay down that an amendment to be in order must come within the scope of the original Resolution. Now, the scope of the Resolution as proposed by the Honourable the Mover is simply whether certain military schools which are now reserved for particular classes should be thrown open to the general public. That, Sir, is the issue before the House, and it seems to me that the amendment which my Honourable friend wishes to move raises an entirely different issue which relates to the question of starting more schools either of the same character as the existing schools or possibly of a somewhat different character. I must say that it seems hardly fair either to Government or to other Honourable Members who have succeeded in drawing later Resolutions in the ballot that the scope of this very restricted Resolution should be enlarged in this way.

Mr. President : How is it unfair to Government ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : In this way, Sir. We do not know what form of schools my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje has in mind, and it is difficult therefore to prepare our replies.

Mr. President : When was this amendment on paper ?

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Three days ago.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I received notice of this amendment late on Saturday night, but I do want to make it clear that Government have no desire to stifle discussion on this important matter or to shirk the issue in any way. I am quite prepared, when my time comes, to give a statement of the views of Government on this important matter and to indicate to what extent Government will be able to meet the wishes of Honourable Members opposite. But I would suggest, Sir, that it would be better if the amendment on the paper were not moved and if Honourable Members so wish, they might bring out the points they have to make in their speeches without moving a formal amendment which seems to be in contravention of the rules and Standing Orders.

Pandit Hirdaynath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, perhaps the difficulty which confronts you in this connection is this. The Resolution moved by my friend Mr. Jayakar asks that boys in general should be allowed to be trained in the military schools at Jhelum and Jullundur in order that their fitness may be ascertained for recruitment as non-commissioned officers and Viceroy's Commissioned officers. Dr. Moonje's amendment, on the other hand, asks for the establishment of a military school where Indian boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years could be given military training. At first sight, Sir, it seems as if the two purposes are entirely different, but it must be remembered that the military schools at Jhelum and Jullundur receive boys at tender ages....

Mr. President : Not between 12 and 18 ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Much earlier than 12. I further think that all the boys who are trained there cannot be absorbed in the Army either as non-commissioned officers or as Viceroy's Commissioned officers. Therefore, it is clear that the principal object of the Resolution moved by Mr. Jayakar is that opportunities should be given to Indian boys in general and not merely to the sons of Indian officers for receiving military training.....

Mr. President : That is not the object. The object is quite clear. One definite issue has been raised that the existing schools should be thrown open to all classes of people.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : The only point that remains to be considered, in my opinion, is whether it would be proper to move an amendment to Mr. Jayakar's Resolution asking that if the present schools cannot be thrown open to boys in general, other schools should be started for the purpose.

Mr. President : That is a different proposition. You may move another Resolution for that purpose, but you cannot have it in this Resolution.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : We are all of course subject to the ruling given by you, but it seems to me that the object of both the Resolutions being general training, it ought to be permissible for us to say at this stage that if Government find some difficulty in throwing open the schools at Jhelum and Jullundur to boys in general, they should start other schools which will have the same purpose in view.

Mr. President (to Mr. Tottenham) : Perhaps the Honourable Member has no objection if Honourable Members in their speeches refer to that matter ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Not at all.

Mr. President : That settles the question. Dr. Moonje can speak on the original Resolution and can refer to these matters without moving his amendment.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : Sir, My object in moving such a Resolution and also in giving notices of Bills for compulsory military training and rifle practice has been described in greater detail in one of my speeches in this House. In short, the world situation as regards the defence of a country has so changed, that if India wants to remain unaffected by foreign aggression, she has to be prepared for her defence. That is one point. The second point is that the Government must understand now that the changes in the world situation have been great that if they think that in the event of another emergency occurring just as it occurred 10 or 12 years ago, the British people alone, without the trained co-operation of the Indian intelligentsia, will be able to cope with the defence as they have been able to do in the past, they are entirely mistaken. That is my second point. It is, therefore, why I thought it wise often and often to bring this subject forward on the floor of this House. My idea is that every attempt must be made to make India self-sufficient and self-contained, so that.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is raising a wider issue. The question is whether the existing schools should be thrown open to all classes.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : I am just coming to the point raised by Mr. Tottenham as to what forms of schools we want. The forms of schools that we want for the training of our boys could not be better described than what have been established in certain countries of the world. I take Japan as my model. The social conditions in Japan were almost identical with the social conditions of India, and I take their school as a model because knowing their own social disabilities, they have taken very intensive measures to convert the whole nation into a military nation. I may say, here in brief, what those methods were by which Japan turned out to be a first class military power. The military education in Japan is organised as follows :

"Military preparatory schools located at Tokyo, Heroshima and Mumamoto are the lowest ladder in the scale of education for candidates aspiring to become officers....."

Mr. President : I think the Honourable Member is going far beyond the necessities of the case. The question of the defence of India as a whole is not raised by this Resolution. It is a very simple issue, viz., whether the existing schools should be thrown open to all classes of boys, and I think the Honourable Member is not justified in traversing beyond that.

Dr. B. S. Moonje : We have found it difficult to fill up the very few vacancies for the King's Commissions in the Army that are thrown open yearly for Indians, and the complaint generally is that the boys that appear at the competitive examinations are not the right sort of boys. We might differ in that, but at least the contention on the part of the Government is that the boys that appear for these competitive examinations are not of the right sort. We do not want to provide an excuse to the Government to say, after these schools are thrown open, that the boys who appear at these examinations are not suitable. There are no schools available at present in India for the training of all classes of Indians and the only schools that are before my eyes are those at Jhelum and Jullundur. Therefore, unless Government are prepared to take a broader view and to say, that, if these schools cannot be thrown open to the public, they are prepared to start one model school at least for the whole of India, so that the provinces may follow their example—I think that our exercise of the right that has been given to us of competing for the King's Commissions in the Army will fail to achieve its end and there will always be a standing grievance or complaint on both sides—the Government complaining that boys of the right sort are not available and the people complaining that even though the boys are fit for Commissions, the selecting officers do not think that they are the right sort of people that ought to go up for these competitive examinations. It is for these reasons that I had given notice of the amendment that in case the Government feel difficulty in throwing open the military schools at Jhelum and Jullundur to the public the Government should start a model military school at an early date for Indian boys, irrespective of their caste creed or previous family connections with the army, to serve as a model to follow to the Provincial Governments. In short, I may say, that we want Government military schools for the training of our boys, whatever they may be. I hope that the Government will feel inclined to help us and co-operate with us in organising national defence and in establishing a system of military education in India with its own traditions and its own curriculum of education. With these few words I support the Resolution.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : It is a pity that the Resolution, as it is moved, is circumscribed in its scope and that the broader question cannot be discussed. I shall confine myself only to that narrow aspect of the case which is under discussion now. In the first place, I should like to know what is the reason for the Government to initiate military training only for certain classes of boys and not keep the two existing institutions open to all boys who can avail themselves of that training. That is my first question to the Honourable the Army Secretary. The idea in making a limited start of that character seems to be that Government will not be able to find, in other classes, boys competent enough to take advantage of the military training. Unless there is that idea underlying the Government's policy, there is no meaning in the fact that in the two schools which they have started admission should be strictly restricted to boys of particular officers only. It is not true that because certain persons have had the advantage of working as officers in the Army for some time therefore their progeny would be fit for taking up a military career. That sort of proposition does not appeal to me, and it ought not to appeal to anybody who has studied the military traditions of the Indian people as a whole. There are other people in this country who have had a brilliant record of a military career in their past history and if proper avenues for military training are given to these classes, there will be no dearth of candidates who will be fit for recruitment as commissioned officers or officers getting the Viceroy's Commission. If we really want to have our Army officered by Indians, it is necessary that Indians of all classes should be admitted into these schools, and unless the Government have got any serious objection to the admission of other classes of boys, there is no reason why they should not accept this Resolution. The burden of proof is really on the Government to show what is the proper reason for their confining the scope of admission to boys coming from particular classes only. It is the taxpayer that is spending the money on these schools, and that money should be utilised as far as possible without prejudice to any class of the Indian population as such. Military training is a necessity not only for the sons of those who have served or are at present serving in the Army, but it is a necessity, in my opinion, for every future citizen of this country. Of course, Government cannot make provision for every body today and the Resolution also does not throw that burden upon Government. It makes a very modest demand, and I believe that, if the existing two institutions could be broadened by Government so as to allow for the admission of a large number of boys of other classes out of whom they can have a reasonable number of recruits which they want every year, Government will find, in the near future, that they will have to start similar institutions in other parts of India to satisfy the growing requirements of military training in this country. The charge that the people of this country are not generally fit for a military career holds good today because of the restricted opportunities which the Government have created in the country in the matter of military training and military careers, and the Resolution is intended not only to secure admission of boys of other classes to these two institutions but also to prove, within a short time, that this country has really got abundant materials which can be worked up into military officers of the proper type. With these words I support the Resolution.

Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar (Punjab : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, in my humble opinion the Honourable

[Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar.]

Mr. Jayakar moves this Resolution from the wrong end. These two schools at Jhelum and Jullundur were opened as a war memorial in order that the sons of those Indian officers and non-commissioned officers who were actually killed on active service might be given education. In other words they may be called charitable military schools. Now, I may be asked what sort of war services were rendered by the fathers of these boys in the schools at Jhelum and Jullundur. The parents of these boys were actually killed on active service. To throw open these schools to other boys seems to me rather a difficult question. If the Honourable Member had asked that more schools of this type should be started under the supervision of experts, that would have been more suitable. I was a member of the Skeen Committee. We found that no preparatory schools existed in India for feeding the recruitment to the King's Commission. Dehra Dun is the only one and it is not the sort of thing my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar wants.

Mr. President : Mr. Jayakar ?

Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : In the first place many Honourable Members in this House do not know how the Indian Army is constituted and how it is recruited. The present scheme for providing an opening for the boys in these schools is very unsatisfactory. I doubt myself if these boys will be received later on in the Indian Army. It is 15 years ago now when their fathers or near relations were killed on active service. Since then a long time has passed, and there has been a great change in the Indian Army. Probably when these boys join, they will not find any British or Indian officer who knew their fathers. To put in outside men into the Indian regiments as non-commissioned officers would create a lot of discontent and resentment. To talk about giving them the Viceroy's Commission is a long way yet. If you put into a Rajput Regiment a non-commissioned officer who does not belong to the same class, I wonder how it will be received by the rank and file. I do not think the outside boys will be received with great enthusiasm. The rank and file will not like it, because the soldiers already in service expect their promotion. However, that is a matter for the authorities to decide. To put in any other class of boys as non-commissioned officers or Viceroy's Commissioned officers in the Rajput, Gurkha, Pathan or Sikh regiments is absolutely out of the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : Why ?

Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : I will tell you. I think, then, it will be better if the constitution of the Army is changed. If you try to persuade the Army Council in India and in England to change the constitution of the Army, then will be the time to bring such a Resolution as that moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar.

Diwan Chaman Lall : There will be no necessity then.

Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : I do not know who can change the constitution of the Army. I do not think the Government of India can change it. Suppose the Indian Army is organised for A, B, C and D, and you want to shove in X, Y and Z, how are you going to do that ? It is meant for A, B, C and D.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Very good reasoning !

Sardar Bahadur Honorary Captain Hira Singh, Brar : The reasoning is here. You want to keep the discipline of the Army. When you are in the Army, you know what the difficulties are in the caste battalions. You have to win the confidence of the soldiers. These two schools are worked on a class platoon system—so many Mussulman platoons send their boys to Jhelum, so many Dogra platoons to Jullundur and so on. These schools are not meant to take outsiders. The admission to these schools of outsiders would not do any good. How are you going to fit them in ? There is no room there. Everything is cut and dried—so many Indian officers, so many Mussulman officers, so many Rajputs and so on. If the Government can increase the number of non-commissioned officers and Viceroy's Commissioned officers, then surely you can put them in the other classes. But if that cannot be done, then this Resolution cannot be given effect to. As for the new preparatory schools, I believe my Honourable friend, the Army Secretary, will be prepared to supply the staff for these preparatory schools, but that is a provincial concern. That is what is my experience. (Mr. K. C. Roy : "What do these schools teach ?") They teach a little drill, the A. B. C., of reading and writing, mathematics, a little geography, a little about their country, a little about their forefathers' traditions—things which may be useful to them in the Army. I do not find myself, Sir, in a position to support this Resolution, and with these words I oppose the motion.

Pandit Dwaka Prasad Misra (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, in view of the fact that you have ruled Dr. Moonje's amendment to this Resolution out of order, I feel that my amendment is much more objectionable, and therefore, I shall content myself with making a few observations on the Resolution moved by my Honourable friend from Bombay. To me, Sir, the essential point in that Resolution seems to be the emphatic protest that it has entered against the new system of caste which has come into existence during the British regime. As for the speech of my Honourable friend, Captain Hira Singh who has just resumed his seat, I only take that to be a speech made by a Member of the Military caste for the preservation of his own caste in this country. (Hear, hear.) I do not think the House should attach any more importance to it. Sir, this division of Indian society into military and non-military classes has produced two evils in this country. The first and more obvious evil is that it has been sapping the manhood of India all these years, and the speeches of my Honourable friends, Mr. Jayakar and Dr. Moonje have drawn pointed attention to it. My purpose, in rising to speak in support of this Resolution, is to focus the attention of this House on another aspect of the evil, less obvious but even more injurious to the future of the country. If we exclude about 60,000 British soldiers from the Indian Army, we find that this Army is composed of about 1,60,000 Indian soldiers. If we scrutinise these figures on "provincial basis" we find that about three-fifths of these soldiers are recruited from the province of the Punjab. To some Honourable Members, on the first sight, this may appear a small thing, but I would like the House to realise that if we are really to have democratic self-government in this country it would be impossible without democratic self-defence. If our friends on the Treasury Benches are really sincere to the promise made by England in the year 1917, by which we find them swearing piously in season and out of season, I say, Sir, it is for them to democratise the national defence of this country. It may be said that other provinces of India are not martial enough to furnish their quota to the Indian Army, I emphatically deny this charge.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is talking on the general question of the defence of India ; he is not talking on this Resolution.

Pandit Dwarka Prasad Misra : I think, Sir, I am confining myself most strictly to the Resolution of my Honourable friend, and I am only pointing out another aspect of the evil to which our attention has been drawn by the Mover.

Sir, my Honourable friends from the Punjab may feel that my suggestions will affect adversely the interests of the people of the Punjab, but I would like to say to my Honourable friends coming from the Punjab, that even in the real interests of the Punjab, this evil must be remedied. The population of the Punjab, Sir, is only about one-fourteenth of the population of India, and the Punjab lies today, as it always lay, on the direct route of the possible invaders. I, therefore, repeat that the interests of the Punjab as well as of the whole country demand that this provincial disproportion in the Army should be remedied. Now, Sir, the only way to remedy this evil is to abolish this new caste system of military and non-military people which has been introduced by our present rulers. The day that we abolish this division of Indian society into military and non-military classes, that very day the Indian Army will begin to be democratised, and we will find men coming from all the provinces to play their part in national defence. Sir, it is by now quite obvious that the majority of Honourable Members in this House welcome the first step in the social reform taken by Government. May I hope that the Government will prove their sincerity by taking another step in the matter of this social evil by throwing open the doors of Jhelum and Jullundur Military Schools to the general public and abolish this new caste system which denies a military career to the vast majority of the Indian population ? With these few words, Sir, I support the Resolution of my Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, which seeks to remedy the evil to the extent its scope permits it to do.

Lieut.-Colonel L. L. Porter (Madras : European) : Sir (Applause). I should like to say a few words with reference to the formation of these schools. There is no doubt that the two schools that now exist, the one at Jhelum and the other at Jullundur, are entirely for the use of the sons and relations of men who served as soldiers during the Great War, and I do not see how these schools could be opened to anybody else. All the same, Sir, I think the idea of starting schools on somewhat the same lines as these schools is a very sound one (Applause.) There is no doubt that, if you want to create a class of men of the same physique and the same stamp that have served in the Indian Army, it will not do to put the boys into school and educate them only in books ; I think that if a school of this type were started, very great stress during the education of the boys will have to be laid upon the physical part of the training. As far as I understand, in these two schools, the one at Jhelum and the one at Jullundur, the boys are taken in from the ages of ten to sixteen and they are given practically a sound literary education which qualifies them to earn their promotion if they eventually go into the Army, or such education as, if they do not go into the Army, is going to be of use to them, and also that a certain number of the staff in these schools is of a military character. With regard to the training of other races in India for military service, I do not see, Sir, why this should not be done, or why any distinction should be made.

There are no doubt certain difficulties that must arise when you start a school and where you have men perhaps of different castes in the same school whom it may be very difficult to closely associate together. It might, therefore, possibly be necessary to start schools down in other parts of India, which would not exactly be caste schools, but where there would be some division of a local kind between men of different castes. If the schools were to be started and the boys in these schools were well and physically trained, then I think the next step towards starting military education and training in the country would be perhaps to start cadet corps. If a cadet corps was started for boys, say of over 16 years of age, then these cadet corps could be attached to Territorial Battalions. (Hear, hear.) If this was done, the cadets from the school would be attached to a Territorial Battalion, which probably is very largely formed out of men from their own district or their own part of the country ; so that a great many difficulties which would arise if boys were to be sent to a great distance for training from one province to another would be overcome.

With regard to the physical training, which I think is the chief part of all military education, that is to say, to turn out hefty fellows to undertake military service, it might, of course, be made compulsory on very much the same lines as it was in my own old days when I was at school in England. The compulsion there was probably of a different sort from what we find now. If we did not roll up say to football, we got the stick. It worked well and I do not think it was objectionable. I do think that to these schools would have to be attached some sort of men with military training who would be able to keep discipline going in the schools. I also think that some care would have to be taken in choosing athletic instructors, who would teach these boys not only the physical training but the games which form so very large a part of physical training. That is all I have to say on this Resolution.

Sardar Kartar Singh (East Punjab : Sikh) : Sir, I am sorry that I have to oppose this Resolution. This Resolution is very unhappily worded, and I do not think that it conveys and will carry out the object of my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar. The reason for restricting these schools to the sons of the Indian soldiers and military officers was that they had shed their blood in the Great War. These schools were opened at a time when the Government wanted to reward these ex-soldiers, and it is not dignified on the part of the Members of this House to grudge the favour shown to the sons of Indian soldiers and military officers. There are at present only two schools—one at Jhelum and the other at Jullundur. They are hardly sufficient to meet the needs of the sons of the Indian soldiers and Indian military officers. If these schools were to be thrown open to all the people of India, then it would mean that we would deprive the sons of Indian soldiers from getting admission into them. I do not think that that is the object of my Honourable friend in moving this Resolution. He does not want that the sons of Indian soldiers should be deprived of the present privilege and should not be admitted into these schools. What he wants is that some more schools should be opened. He should have framed his Resolution in such a form, therefore, that the Government would have been induced to open more schools in different parts of the country, so that the sons of all Indians might get a chance of getting military training. The language which my friend has adopted for wording his Resolution is not good. It will not be effective; it will not give a chance to all the Indians to send their sons to these schools because the accommodation there is limited, and only a very few boys will get the chance of joining them. And the result of the admission of these boys would be that the sons of the Indian soldiers and ex-military officers who have shed their blood, who have lost their arms and legs, in the Great War would be deprived of their rewards. These schools were opened as a reward for the services done by the military people. Supposing the Government, instead of opening these schools, had given a larger amount of pensions to these military soldiers and officers, so that they might educate their sons, would my friend then have said: "Do not give them this extra pension"? This is a part of the reward for service which they rendered during the war, and we should not grudge it.

My friend Mr. Misra said that there was a class war. I do not agree with him there. It is simply a means of rewarding the services done by the fathers and relations of these students. Sir, the time has come when the Government should open more schools and should give a chance to Indians for military training in order that they may be able to qualify themselves for military service. But, Sir, the Resolution will not give the Indians this chance and I submit that my friend should withdraw it and bring forward another Resolution in the form which was suggested by my friend Dr. Moonje. That is the sort of Resolution which would have the support of the whole House, but the Resolution as it stands now cannot have the support of the whole House because, by passing it, you are forcing the hands of the Government of India to deprive certain people of their rightful due. I submit, Sir, that this House should be the last to adopt such a course. My friend, Colonel Porter, said that it is not easy to get qualified and physically fit boys for these schools. Sir, the sons of military soldiers have got this advantage that they do possess good physique and consequently they are better fitted to join these schools. The sons of other people also can qualify themselves and can get military training and also can acquire good physique if they are properly trained. But there are 33 crores of people inhabiting India and I do not think that these two schools would be sufficient to accommodate them. So, our demand should be that several such schools should be opened for our boys. Therefore, I oppose the Resolution because it is not happily worded, and is liable to give an impression to Indian soldiers and military officers that the Members of this House feel jealous of them and grudge the favour shown to their sons.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham: Sir, I am labouring under two disadvantages. The first is that this is the first occasion on which I have ever attempted to make a serious speech, either in this House or anywhere else. Here, however, I feel sure that I can rely on the indulgence of the House. My second difficulty is perhaps even greater. As I said just now, the form of the Resolution left no doubt whatever in my mind as to what the intention was, and it seemed to me that it would not be very difficult to deal with. The trend of the debate, however, has shown that what Honourable Members really have at heart is a matter that goes considerably beyond the scope of the actual wording of the Resolution, and there has been a desire to discuss wider issues. The Honourable the Mover of the motion took up most of his speech in referring to the recommendations of the Skeen Committee, the success that the college at Dehra Dun had attained, the expenses of Dehra Dun, the expenses of Sandhurst and the difficulties of education at Home for Indians. He also referred to certain Resolutions which were passed by this House in 1921 and subsequently, and to other matters of that kind, all of which relate primarily to the question of the method by which Indians of all castes and creeds should enter the commissioned ranks of every branch of the Army. That, Sir, is quite a different matter and a much larger matter.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar: My Honourable friend has misunderstood the trend of my argument. I did not refer to a single recommendation as such of the Skeen Committee. I used only the opinions of that Committee for the purpose of proving that the time has come when military training ought to be cheaply provided for the middle classes of India.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham: I quite realise that. I perfectly understood the intention of the Honourable Member's speech, and I hope I shall give him some satisfaction. I was merely pointing out that the debate had gone into wider channels than I had originally anticipated. I do, as I said before, want to give the House the impression that Government are distinctly sympathetic in this matter, and it will be my honest endeavour to give the House an explanation of the existing facts and an indication of what the Government can do to meet what we think to be the wishes of the House.

The Resolution proposes that certain schools which are now reserved for the sons of Indian officers and men should be thrown open to Indians of all castes and creeds, irrespective of family connections and so on; and my first duty is to explain why it is that the Government of India regret that they cannot accept this Resolution, as it stands. As certain Honourable Members have already said, there are only two military schools in India which answer the description given in the Resolution. Those schools have only been in existence for the past four or five years. Before that, there were no schools at all. They are entirely an innovation. These schools are the King George's Royal Military Schools at Jhelum and Jullundur. There are no other schools which have been started for the purpose of training the sons of Indian officers and men for entry into the non-commissioned and Viceroy's commissioned ranks of the Army. The Dehra Dun College, to which the Honourable the Mover and other Honourable Members have referred, is quite a different institution, which is already open to Indians of all castes and creeds, irrespective of their family connections. Therefore, I take it that we are strictly concerned only with the King George's schools at Jhelum and Jullundur. These schools are entirely military schools. They are run by Army officers; they are paid for from Army funds; the boys there are the sons of Indian officers and men, and the boys themselves are under an obligation to join the Army when they leave the school. There is no question, as my Honourable friend Pandit

[Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham.]

Hirday Nath Kunzru seems to think, that some of these boys will not be taken into the Army after they pass out. Every boy at the King George's schools at Jullundur and Jhelum must go into the Army. He is under an obligation to do so.

Now, I may say that the Army is proud of these two schools, and I think we are rightly proud of them. As I have said, they were started some four or five years ago. The first generation of boys has not yet passed out of them, but they have proved a success already, and I may repeat here an invitation that has been given before on the floor of this House. Government are anxious that Honourable Members of this House should go and visit these schools and see the good work that they are doing. If any Honourable Member would like to do so, we shall be glad to make all arrangements for him. I am glad that my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje is going to pay a visit to these schools in the very near future. I wish he had done so before.

Now, it may interest Honourable Members to hear certain facts about these schools. There has been, I think, a little misapprehension about them. The Jhelum school is confined to Pathans, Baluchis and Punjabi Muhammadans. The Jullundur school is confined to Sikhs, Dogras and Punjabi Hindus. Both these schools have just reached their full strength; Jhelum, 330 and Jullundur, 244. The Jhelum school cost six lakhs to build and the Jullundur school cost about 4½ lakhs. Each of them costs about Rs. 80,000 a year to run, irrespective of the cost of maintaining the buildings. There is no entrance examination for these schools. The boys are taken in at an early age, at the age of 10 to 11, by nomination from the units concerned. They remain in the school for five years. The literary education given in the school, as I explained this morning, has nothing military about it whatever. It is simply a general education up to the ordinary eighth standard, and the final examination of the school is equivalent to the "vernacular final" examination. On leaving the school the boys are under an obligation to join the units which have nominated them, and thereafter their progress in the Army is entirely a matter of merit. But, of course, we do hope that the education they have received will help them towards early advancement, including the grant of the Viceroy's Commission at an early age, selection later on to be sent to the newly opened Kitchner College at Nowgong and possibly later still selection for the annual batch of Viceroy's Commissioned officers who are sent Home at Government expense to Sandhurst, as what is known as "Y" cadets, with a view to obtaining the King's Commission. I might add that the fees at the schools are extremely low—they are only Rs. 7/8/0 a month and, in many cases, the boys get in entirely free. As I have said already, the boys are not taught any specifically military subjects, such as military science, tactics, surveying and so on. They are too young for that. That will come later on. But the most important feature of all is the tone and the spirit of the school. The whole system of discipline, the whole atmosphere and the combined efforts of the staff are all directed towards the development of character, initiative, smartness, self-reliance and all the qualities which go to make a good soldier and an efficient leader of men. The success of the schools in this respect is rendered possible largely on account of the fact that they are boarding schools and not day schools.

MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Now, Sir, I have yet to show why it is that these particular schools cannot be thrown open to the general public. The immediate reason is that they are definitely war memorials. They are the most fitting tribute that the Army could devise to the memory of those Indian officers and men who gave their lives for their country—and for my country also—in the Great War.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Are only the sons of those who died in the War admitted ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The buildings were constructed from a fund which owes its existence to the generosity of the Princes and Ruling Chiefs of India.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Are only the sons of those officers who died in the War admitted into these schools ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir ; the sons of officers or soldiers who are serving in the Army are admitted.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : How is it a war memorial then of the limited character you claim it to be ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The point is that the schools themselves are a memorial to those who died in the war. The buildings were paid for out of a fund which was collected as a war fund for that purpose. I feel sure that the House will respect the objects to which that fund was devoted, and I hope that they will agree that the character of these particular schools should remain as it is.

Now, Sir, if that is accepted by the House, I have actually disposed of the narrowest interpretation of the Resolution, but I am conscious of a feeling that I have not said enough. The fact that these schools are war memorials and therefore cannot be thrown open to the general public does not really answer the wider criticism of our policy, that is to say, our Army policy, of confining our schools to the sons of soldiers. It is true, Sir, that the Army contemplate extending these schools as and when funds permit, and I have already shown that they are by no means cheap. Our intention is very shortly to open a school for Jats and Rajputs ; we hope later on to open a school for Mahrattas in Bombay and so on ; and our hope eventually is that we shall have about a thousand boys under education in schools of this kind, but of course boys drawn from the classes which are recruited at present for the Army. That, Sir, I think is a programme on which we may have just cause for congratulating ourselves in the Army when we complete it. But I am still aware that it does not meet the wishes of my Honourable friends opposite. They want us to open schools for those who are not at present recruited for the Army. Well, Sir, I should like the House for a minute to consider the facts as they are. It has often been explained before on the floor of this House that the Army is at present constituted on a class system under which we recruit men only of particular classes.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Which is an evil.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : We know that there are many races in India who are not recruited at present but who would make good soldiers. But it is our duty, and I submit it is the duty of the Commander-in-Chief of any army, to recruit not only good material, not even the better, but the very best, and that is why we have been unable, and we are unable at present, to recruit those classes that my Honourable friends opposite would wish us to recruit. That is the situation purely from the Army point of view, and assuming that that system remains,—and I am only considering the facts as they are,—there are I think two conclusions we must draw. The first is that the duty of the Army, taken by itself, is primarily towards its own people, the people who have served it faithfully; and the second conclusion is that the Army budget cannot afford to spend money on educating boys for whom, when they have been educated, we cannot find a place in the Army. That, Sir, as I said, is the position looked at purely from the Army point of view. I admit that it leaves the wider question unsettled. If Government say that they sympathise with the desire of Indians of all classes and creeds to fit themselves for the defence of their country, then I admit it is up to Government to do something to help them. I am now, I think, in danger of trespassing outside my own boundaries and of referring to matters relating to the general educational system of the country, matters with which my Honourable friend the Education Secretary would be better qualified to deal. But what I say is this: let the Army schools alone; let the Army complete their programme of military schools. There is no doubt that the money is being well spent and usefully spent; and let us consider quite separately what can be done about the wider question.

Well, Sir, that brings me to my Honourable and gallant friend Dr. Moonje. What is it that Dr. Moonje wants? He recognises, I think, that our King George's schools should be allowed to go on as they are. He recognises that, even if other schools are started on the same lines, it may not be possible for us to guarantee to the boys in those schools an Army career. But I do not think he minds that. What he wants is to get something done. He does not mind whether the boys get into the Army immediately, but he does want Indians generally to have an opportunity of fitting themselves for the defence of their country, so that when the time comes, India may have material to call upon with which to found a national army. For this purpose he suggests that the Government of India should start a model school for the Provinces to follow if they wish. I am still not quite clear as to what the exact character of that school is and perhaps it would be going outside the scope of the Resolution if I were to deal with that matter here. But whatever it is that Dr. Moonje wants, or that other Honourable Members want, whether it is a model school for the education of Indians up to the standard of non-commissioned officers, or whether it is a model college for training boys to take the Sandhurst and other Army examinations, I say, Sir, that the models are there. They are before the country already. The Army, in fact, has given the country a lead in this matter. If you ask us to design a model school or a model college, we can only point to the King George's schools or to the Dehra Dun College, according to what you want, and say, that is our idea of a model school or a model college. We know that these are costly institutions, but if you want a good thing you must pay for it; and the question is, is it for the Army budget, is it even for the Government of India to provide the money for more of these schools and colleges? And that, Sir, brings me to the conclusion of the matter. Government realise that there is a genuine feeling among Honourable Members in this House, firstly, that some practical step should be taken to give boys of every caste and creed an opportunity of fitting themselves for a military career, and secondly, that the most practical way, in their opinion, of doing so would be by starting and founding a number of schools all over the country. Now, the Government view is that, although education is necessary for any programme of that kind, you cannot attain the objects that Honourable Members have in view by providing educational facilities alone. Literary education never did, and never will, make a soldier by itself; games, physical drill, rifle practice, by themselves, are equally useless. It is the spirit behind these things that matters, and no Government in the world, with the best will in the world, can produce that spirit unaided. They can help it: if it appears they can encourage it. But that spirit must be the offspring of public opinion and the outcome of a genuine desire on the part of the people themselves and especially of the rising generation to fit themselves for an Army career. Home life and home discipline are just as important as, if not more important than, school life and school discipline; and surely if that desire is present in the country at large, it must express itself. No government can stop it expressing itself, and the door is wide open.....

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru: What door?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham: Education is a provincial transferred subject under the control of Ministers elected by the people, and it is through that door—through the Provincial Governments and Provincial Councils—that Honourable Members must make this demand felt. Let Dr. Moonje continue the efforts that he has made and is making in his part of the country. Let other Honourable Members make similar efforts in their own parts of the country, and we on our side of the House will be prepared to do what we can to help. I take it the position is that there are certain features about our military schools which appeal to Honourable Members of this House, which they think are admirable and which they consider should find a place in schools all over the country. Well, Sir, if that is the position, we on our side are quite prepared to help; we can bring these features of our schools prominently to the notice of Local Governments; we can draw their attention, if you like, to the feeling on the subject as expressed by Honourable Members in this House; and we can inform them that, if they decide to start schools of that kind themselves, we shall be prepared to do what we can in the way, for instance, of providing military instructors or providing for inspection by military officers and so on. There is only one stipulation that we must make, and that is that we cannot guarantee to take boys from these schools, if the Local Governments wish to start them, into the regular Army. We can suggest that use should be made of the Indian Territorial Force and the suggestion made by my friend, Colonel Porter, about cadet corps might be useful in this connection. We can also take a special interest in the schools and do what we can to make them a success. But beyond that I do not think we can go.

Now, Sir, I think I have said enough, or I hope I have said enough, to show that, if there is a genuine feeling on the other side of the House in this matter, there is also a genuine desire on this side of the House to help ; and in particular I should like to say a word to my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje. We all know Dr. Moonje's sincerity and singleness of purpose ; we admire him for it and we wish there were more men like him. And I particularly do not wish that he should carry away the impression that in this matter—because we have been unable to accept his amendment in so many words—his effort has been in vain. What Dr. Moonje and men like him are trying to do is a big thing no less a thing than the reformation of a nation—and that must take time. But Dr. Moonje and men like him have sown the seed and that seed is bound to bear fruit ; it has not fallen on stony ground and I say that it will bear fruit.

Finally, Sir, I would appeal, if I may, to the Honourable the Mover of this motion and ask him whether he can see his way, in view of the assurances I have given him.....

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : What assurance has the Honourable Member given beyond pious hopes and blessings ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The assurance that we shall bring this matter to the attention of Local Governments and do our best to help them if they wish to start schools themselves. I would ask him if he would on that assurance be prepared to withdraw his Resolution. If not, Sir, I regret, and I regret very sincerely, that I must oppose it.

Mr. President : It is getting late and I think that Honourable Members who wish to speak may do so at the next meeting.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, it is a very important matter and I should like that the debate should continue for some time longer.

Mr. President : I am entirely in the hands of the House and I am perfectly prepared to sit if necessary till 9 o'clock.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Sir, the questions raised are of such importance that I ask the indulgence of the House at this hour for a short while. In the first instance I want to make it clear that the policy which the Army Secretary has enunciated is out of date now. That policy would have been very suitable if India was not going to have self-government, but India is going to have self-government and it is going to be responsible for defending the whole country through the hands of Indians. If my friend would bear that fact in mind, if the Army Department would keep that fact before its mind, then I think they would be able better to appreciate the needs of the situation and to understand the opinions and feelings of those of us on this side who want a satisfactory and adequate provision made for imparting military education in the country. Now, personally I feel that, as soon as we get power, which I hope and trust we are going to get next year,—as soon as we get power, one of the first things that we shall take in hand will be the creation and development of an Indian army officered by Indians. For that purpose we shall have to follow the example of the civilised powers of the world, and of England in the first instance. The system of education provided for in England is not that there are a few—two or three—selected schools for preparing boys to be admitted for training as officers for the Army, but that in all the district—the county schools of England—students are afforded an opportunity for preliminary military training, and these students are not drawn from any particular class. The military class as such has ceased to exist in England ; they are drawn from all classes ; and those students, who have benefited well by the military exercises and training provided for them in the county schools and show themselves to be competent to be picked up and sent to a central institution for military training, are so sent up. When we have to build up our organisation for national defence, we shall have to have recourse to the same system, namely, that in every district school, in every high school in the country, there should be a sufficient measure of military training given to our boys.....

Mr. President : Order, order : what the Honourable Member will do when he gets Swaraj is not relevant ; the question raised by the Resolution is a narrow one.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I am coming to that very soon ; this is absolutely necessary ; the road must be properly laid before.....

Mr. President : I must ask the Honourable Member to be relevant and to confine himself to the Resolution.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Certainly, Sir, I am confining myself to the Resolution, as you will see in a minute. I say that the system I have indicated would be the right system for us to adopt. In that case, the question of having two schools, like the Jhelum and Jullundur schools, will have to be looked at in a different light. I am standing here to support the Resolution in order to point out the evils which attach to this system of continuing two such schools confined to the sons of soldiers who either died in the war or who are serving in the Army to-day. That it is not a war memorial in the sense in which it was claimed by the Army Secretary is clear from the answer he gave to my question that it is not only the sons of those who died in the war who are taken into these schools but also the sons of those who are serving in the Army at present. Therefore I submit that it should be regarded as a school for providing military training to students of all castes and classes. I have a very special objection to the schools being confined to the sons of those who died in the war, because it is a wrong to them and a wrong to the country. It is a wrong to the country because they are brought up in a special class atmosphere ; the Baluchis and the Pathans and others being as one class and centred in one place and the Rajputs and Dogras and others being educated in another place. In the India of the near future, we want to train patriots in the first instance. No soldier is worth his salt unless he is a patriotic man. In the Japanese Army they say that a soldier who is lacking in patriotism is no good to the army ; and we want to fight against this principle of class selection, and of Mussalmans being centred in one place and Hindus being centred at another place. We want that they should be brought up together in the same institution under the same rules, play in the same play grounds and sit in the same classes and work and develop that sense of patriotism upon which the future of India rests. I, therefore, object to this system of selection from particular classes only and their being educated apart at particular centres. I also object to it because this system is a wrong to the students. Under it our students cannot get that advantage of association with fellow students of other classes and communities and develop the best in them by competition. And, Sir, as intelligence is not the monopoly of any particular class, so is the military spirit not the monopoly of any particular class. The sons of very fine soldiers have proved to be quite the reverse, and the sons of very ordinary men have proved to be very capable soldiers. The right course to follow, therefore, is to throw open these schools to all classes. I do not want to shut out the sons of any soldiers who have served the King. I want that they should be admitted, but it does not follow that, because they are admitted, others should not be admitted. If the schools are insufficient for the purpose, let there be more schools started. Let every son of a soldier who fought or died in the war receive admission there. Perhaps the fact of his being the son of a gallant soldier would be a circumstance which would give him preferential admission. I should not object to it. But beyond that let the sons of other classes also have a chance.

It must be remembered that this confining of selection of soldiers to particular classes is not a sound policy to follow for any country. In Japan there was a Samurai class, but they threw open the army to all classes of people, and the experiment has succeeded immensely, and the Japanese army of today is a most powerful body. In India too we have instances of a similar policy to guide us. The army of Guru Gobind Singh did not consist entirely of the then fighting classes. He did not confine his army to Kshatriyas or Rajputs. He took men from all classes of people and trained them and made the Khalsa a powerful body. In the same way, when Shivaji Maharaj raised his army, he did not confine the selection only to Marathas. He picked up his soldiers from all classes of people, Brahmans, Rajputs, Marathas, and so on, and with an army so raised he was able to re-establish Hindu dominion in the greater part of the country. Therefore, Sir, for the India of the future, of the near future, it is an evil practice that military schools should exist for particular classes only and that students of those classes should be educated separately from students of the other classes. I therefore urge that the Army Department should revise its policy, and if they find that the schools are not sufficient to admit the sons of the brave soldiers who laid down their lives in the service of the King and of those who are now serving as also of those young men who desire to serve the King and the country, then the number of such schools should be multiplied. Money shall be found. The money is not found from the War Memorial Fund alone. The Government of India is supplying the money for keeping up these schools, and the Government of India must supply more money for keeping up more schools for military education in future, but the schools should not be confined to sons of particular classes, because it is an evil both to them as well as to the country. You may train up soldiers in such schools who will be very dutiful, very smart, very active and very efficient soldiers, but if they lack patriotism, they will not be soldiers of whom the India of the near future will have need. The India of the future will have need for soldiers who are imbued with a spirit of patriotism. Therefore, I think, Sir, that this policy ought to be revised, and the schools, even though they are only two in number, should be thrown open as a matter of principle to students of other classes also, and that the insufficiency in the number of schools should be made up by establishing other schools to provide military education to those young men who pass the prescribed tests and who desire to adopt a military career.

Several Honourable Members : Sir, the question may now be put.

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Sir, I have very little to add to what I said before, except that the answer which came from the Army Secretary was extremely disappointing. Sir, two points have been urged in the course of this debate, first that these schools which have been already established in the country cannot be thrown open to outsiders. I am told that they cannot be so thrown open for two reasons which have been given by the Army Secretary, one, because they are a War Memorial, whatever that may mean, because they have been founded for the purpose of commemorating the services of those who fell in the war. A pertinent question went up from this Bench, from my Honourable friend Pandit Malaviya, whether these schools were confined to the sons of those who fell in the war. The answer was "No". If so, I cannot understand, Sir, how the War Memorial character of these institutions will be destroyed if they are thrown open to the sons of people who do not belong to the families who fell in the war. Well, may I point out to the Army Secretary, if he is ignorant of the fact, how India contributed to the expenses of the war? He is perhaps not aware that the predecessor of this House voted for the War 150 crores on one occasion. This large amount this poor country gave for the war, in which it was only distantly interested. Surely, if so, the people of this country are entitled to the fullest benefits of any War Memorial that might have been raised in this country. I submit, Sir, that it is a sufficient ground in this behalf that this country has given its munitions, men and money for the purposes of the War. I was waiting for some one to tell me whether there is anything in the rules and regulations or in the constitution of these schools which prevents a departure, but not one word has been suggested to that effect.

The other ground mentioned was that Indian Princes have contributed to the expenses of these schools. May I know if these Princes have contributed on the distinct condition that the schools should not be thrown open to boys of the middle classes? If not, I should like to know if there is anything in the constitution or charter or regulations of these schools which prevents them from being thrown open to outsiders. On the wider issue involved in my Resolution, I expected that although Government might not be able to accept my Resolution for some technical reason,—and none has been given,—they would at least be able to satisfy this part of the House by stating what their general policy on the question is; and I must say, Sir, that the statement of the Army Secretary has been most disappointing. I was surprised when he made an appeal to me to withdraw this Resolution. If anything, Sir, his speech made me more firm in pressing this Resolution. His reply is full of pious hopes and blessings. He says that Government are aware of the general desire of the House; Government will be prepared to meet it. After having said that, I asked him what his practical proposals were. His practical proposals were, "Government will provide military instructors if schools are started, but Government will not guarantee to take up boys for military careers from these schools". Then he went on adding insult to injury when he said that Government could not create the spirit. The spirit must be created apparently by the people; if the desire is there, the door will open. He wound up with very pious blessing, "Let Dr. Moonje go on casting his seeds; they won't fall on stony soil; some day they will bear fruit".—I am quoting his words, Sir. I therefore submit, Sir, that it is a most disappointing answer. Government do not extend the least hope that they are going to do anything in the way of a practical programme. The Army Secretary further stated. "Government are looking on with great sympathy and eventually"—one qualification—"when funds permit,"—another qualification—"Government will think of starting some schools". And he mentioned Bombay, from which place I come, as one of the places which is going to be honoured in the future with a school of this description. This is the answer which the Army Secretary gave. But what is really provoking, and that is the point to which I would invite his particular attention, was this. He suggested there was no military spirit; the spirit has to be created; Government cannot do it. When I heard these words, I felt extremely amused. Let me tell him that the spirit is there, and if he will permit me, I will give one incident of which I was myself a witness. The difficulty is that Government by their policy are diverting all this incipient martial spirit of our young men into channels of revolution and murder. ("Hear, hear" from the Swarajist Benches.) I will mention to this House the instance of the courage and nerve of one young man who later on committed a political murder, with whom I came into contact. I do not justify political murders, but the point I desire to make out is different. The Honourable Member suggested that there is no spirit and it has to be created by the Indians themselves....

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : I never said that the spirit was not there. I merely said that, if the spirit was there, it should surely find expression through certain channels.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : The implication behind that statement is this, that there is not sufficient spirit in the country; if there were, it would have found expression. I am right in putting this interpretation, relying on the general trend of the Army Secretary's statement. His speech distinctly conveyed to the House the impression that the spirit is not there in sufficient measure; people must create it; Government cannot do so; if the spirit is there it will express itself; if it is not there, it cannot express itself.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Sir, I will not proceed further with this unpleasant topic. I may tell him that I have myself seen some instances of the spirit he wants. Honourable friends must likewise have seen a number of such instances. I said I came across a political murderer. In his time he was having great ambitions of a career of valour and prowess. He eventually died on the gallows as a political murderer. The general policy of the Government turns these men into political murderers because Government won't give any scope and opportunity for their interperity and courage. This young man was of such iron nerve and will that he had to be roused from deep sleep at 6 o'clock and led to the gallows after a few minutes. He was fast asleep! When he once met me, he said, "Will you tell me to do anything which will show you my courage and iron nerves?" In those days there was no electric light in my house. There was a lamp burning with a ball burner. He said, "Will you be satisfied if I hold the chimney in my hand?" And in a moment, without flinching he held the chimney fast until his flesh was burnt and we had to extricate him. This iron will I have been a witness to, and I am sure my Honourable friends can vouch for several such young men whom Government turn into political revolutionaries and murderers. And yet in the presence of all this incipient material in the country, the Army Secretary says that, if the spirit is there it will find expression; let Dr. Moonje go on, his seeds won't fall on stony ground, and they will bear fruit some day; in the meanwhile Government will look on, at best providing instructors if necessary, but will not guarantee to take a single boy for the purpose of giving him a military career. My surprise, Sir, is that, at the end of such a disappointing speech, he should ask me, "Will the Honourable Member withdraw his Resolution?" May I tell him that the Honourable Member will do nothing of the kind.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the following Resolution be adopted :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the Military Schools that have been started in India for the sons and wards of Indian soldiers and officers of the Army be thrown open to all Indian boys irrespective of caste, creed or family connections, and that they be allowed admission into such schools subject to their passing the prescribed examination for ascertaining their fitness to be trained for recruitment as Non-Commissioned Officers and for the Viceroy's Commission."

As many as are of that opinion will say "Aye".

(Cries of "Aye".)

As many as are of the contrary opinion will say "No".

Mr. E. L. Price : "No".

Mr. President : Division.

(After the Division Bell was rung, Mr. President put the question again.)

As many as are of the same opinion will say "Aye".

(Cries of "Aye".)

As many as are of the contrary opinion will say "No".

(There were no cries of "No".)

The "Ayes" have it. I am sorry the Honourable Member, Mr. Price, is not a free agent.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 18th September, 1929.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 18th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock.
Mr. President in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

HINDUS AND MUSSALMANS APPOINTED TO POST OFFICES IN THE BHAGALPORE DIVISION.

617. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of appointments of Hindus and Mussalmans separately, made in the Post Offices of the Bhagalpore division during the years 1921, 1922 and 1923 : stating also reasons, if no member or only a few members of any particular community were appointed ?

(b) What is the name of the officer who made these appointments ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government do not possess the information, nor do they propose to collect it as in their opinion no public purpose would be served by examining past records relating to events which happened six to eight years ago.

BARRING OF INDIANS FROM THE LOCO DEPARTMENT OF THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

618. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 1085 of the 18th March, 1929, will Government now state if it is a fact that the Bengal and North Western Railway has a standing rule barring Indians from apprenticeship in its Loco. Department ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The Agent, Bengal and North Western Railway, reports that there is no such rule. I should add that this information was communicated to my Honourable friend in Railway Board's letter No. 7919-E. of the 3rd May, 1929, which has presumably not reached him.

SHORTAGE OF CATTLE FODDER.

619. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Are Government aware that shortage of fodder is one of the chief reasons for the deterioration of Indian cattle ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what action they have taken or propose to take to stop or to decrease export of oil-cakes and other articles of fodder from this country ?

( 1011 )

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Insufficient feeding is one of the causes of the unsatisfactory character of cattle in many parts of India.

(b) Government, as at present advised, do not propose to take the action indicated. The only cattle food other than oil cakes and oil seeds which is exported in any important quantity is rice bran, the average exports of which amount to 236,000 tons per annum, practically the whole of which is exported from Burma. Export restrictions on the exports of oil cakes, oil seeds and rice bran would be prejudicial to the interests of the growers of oil seeds and rice, without sufficient compensating advantage to the consumers of fodder. In this connection, the Honourable Member is referred to paragraph 87 of the Report of the Royal Commission on Agriculture, a copy of which will be found in the Library of this House.

SLAUGHTER OF COWS FOR THE ARMY.

620. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that on the 3rd July, 1805, General Lake, the then Commander-in-Chief of India, issued a general order prohibiting slaughter of cows in the lands of Braj ?

(b) Is it a fact that cows are now slaughtered or caused to be slaughtered by Government themselves in Muttra for the food of British soldiers in contravention of that order ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) and (b). I have been unable to trace the order quoted, but I think the Honourable Member must be aware that the practice to which he refers is not confined to Muttra, nor is it a novel departure. It has been in existence for many years all over India.

EXPORT OF MANURES FROM INDIA.

621. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that several manures such as Amo. Sulph., fish manures, etc., are exported from this country at a lower price but imported at a comparatively higher price ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, are Government prepared to levy prohibitive duties on such manures or devise other effective measures to stop their export ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government of India sent in a memorandum to the Royal Commission on Agriculture to the effect that no duty should be levied on manures exported from India ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) A statement is laid on the table which will show that the declared values of imported manures are generally lower than the values of the corresponding exports.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not therefore arise.

Statement showing the average declared value per ton of manures imported into and exported from India.

COMPETITION OF STEAMER COMPANIES WITH THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

622. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (1) (a) Are Government aware that the authorities of the Eastern Bengal Railway had occasion, a few years ago, to place on record their considered opinion as to how the interests of the Railway were being prejudicially affected by the activities of the two Steamer Companies working under agreement with the Railway ?

(b) Is it a fact that the said authorities came to the following, among other, conclusions :

"While outwardly cordial, our relations with the steamer companies have not always been such as to produce a good understanding, our policy being one savouring more of concession than an equitable division of traffic, doubtlessly the outcome of a desire to show that we have no intention of crippling private enterprise. While the Railway has shown every desire to work fairly and amicably and with a view to the general good, the same can hardly be said of the steamer companies whose policy throughout has savoured of filching—unscrupulous it may seem, but desirable in the interests of the shareholders if they are to obtain a steady dividend."

(c) Is it a fact that on the same occasion the said railway authorities recorded the following observation :

"The steamer companies, not being barred from showing undue preference, can and do guarantee space to large despatchers in a way that the Railway cannot do ..... There is no doubt that this affects the railway traffic adversely."

(d) Is it a fact that the said authorities referred to the system of rebates granted by the two steamer companies, particularly on jute traffic, which "places the Railway at a disadvantage" ?

(e) Is it a fact that, with particular reference to tea traffic, the said authorities referred to the system of block rates imposed by the two steamer companies which was characterised by the former as "a bit of sharp practice" ?

(f) Is it a fact, as stated by the said Railway authorities, that the steamer companies "can quote any rates without regard to maxima or minima, and are not obliged to give notice as railways are bound to do to their give consignors free passes, warehouses free of rent, and other concessions which railways cannot do" ?

(2) (a) Is it a fact that certain authorities of the Eastern Bengal Railway, on the same occasion, on a review of all circumstances, thought that, if the Eastern Bengal Railway were provided with a fleet of steamers, it could "fight the steamer companies by itself, and still show a profit on the working" ?

(b) Has the question been considered whether the financial position of the Assam Bengal Railway could also be improved if it were permitted to run certain steamer services in conjunction with its railway service ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : It is quite true that in the past, particularly about the year 1911, the authorities of the Eastern Bengal Railway have criticized the action of the River Steamship Companies and expressed the view that the interests of the railway were prejudiced thereby. But I have been unable to trace in the records of the Railway Board the communications from which my Honourable friend has drawn his quotations, and I am therefore unable to reply to clauses (a) to (c) of part (1) of this question or to clause (a) of part (2).

(1) (f) The statement quoted, whether made by the railway authorities or not, appears to be correct.

(2) (b) Not by the Railway Board or the Government of India so far as I am aware.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Honourable Member in a position to state whether the position has been improved since 1911 ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I do not quite understand what the Honourable Member means by "the position".

Mr. K. C. Neogy : The Honourable Member has stated that, so far back as 1911, the railway authorities entertained some apprehensions with regard to the competition of steamer companies. That is what I understand the purport of his answer to be. If that be so, have the Railway Board inquired as to whether this particular position has improved since 1911 ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : So far as the relations between the Eastern Bengal Railway and the River Steamship Companies are concerned, I think the position has greatly improved.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries from the Eastern Bengal Railway as to whether the facts stated in this question of mine are correct or not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir, before I give any undertaking as to making further inquiries from the Eastern Bengal Railway, I am entitled to ask the Honourable Member to inform me and the House as to the source of his quotations.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I will certainly inform him if the Honourable Member desires.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : If he will do so, I will consider the matter.

Mr. B. Das : Did the Honourable Member call for by wire from the Eastern Bengal Railway such records as might throw light on the subject instead of asking Mr. Neogy to state what his source of information was ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I did not refer to the Eastern Bengal Railway with regard to this question.

Mr. B. Das : Is it the practice of the Railway Board to get a copy of every minute passed by every railway ? If that is not the case, will the Honourable Member ask the Eastern Bengal Railway to furnish him with information on the matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am quite unable to accept the Honourable Member's opinion as to the duties of myself and of the Railway Board in this connection.

TERMINUS STATION AT GOALUNDO GHAT.

623. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the amounts annually spent, during the last five years, by the Eastern Bengal

Railway in meeting the cost of shifting the terminus station at Goalundo Ghat and constructing temporary railway lines, owing to changes in the position of the river Padma ?

(b) Has any portion of the said cost been met by the steamer companies who exchange traffic at the said terminus station ? If so, in what proportion ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The amounts spent annually in the years 1925-26, 1926-27 and 1927-28 were Rs. 1,39,258, Rs. 32,981 and Rs. 42,122, respectively. The amounts for the years 1924-25 and 1928-29 are being ascertained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member later.

(b) Not directly, but ghat charges are levied on through traffic by the Railway and the Steamer Companies to meet the cost of ghat shifts. Such charges as are collected by the Steamer Companies are credited to the Railway. The charges collected for the three years, 1925-26, 1926-27 and 1927-28 were approximately Rs. 64,000, Rs. 78,000 and Rs. 81,000, respectively.

MEMORIAL FROM THE LINO. AND MONO. OPERATORS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIAN PRESS, CALCUTTA.

624. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact, that in January, 1929, the Lino. and Mono. Operators, Government of India Press, Calcutta, submitted a memorial to the Government through the proper channel stating their legitimate grievances ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the said memorial ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state what action, if any, they have taken or propose to take in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Government do not propose to place a copy of the memorial on the table. The matter is still under their consideration.

PAY OF THE LINO. AND MONO. OPERATORS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

625. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that all Government servants (in Government offices and factories) have got a fixed monthly pay with yearly increment according to a certain fixed scale ?

(b) Is it a fact that salaries of the Lino. and Mono. Operators of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, are subject to fluctuations every month ?

(c) If the answer to parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons thereof ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No, but a number of Government servants receive fixed monthly pay regulated according to scales which provide for annual increments.

(b) and (c). The monthly earnings of the Lino. and Mono. Operators fluctuate according to their outturn. They are on a fixed scale of pay with annual increments, but each man is granted a bonus when his monthly outturn exceeds a certain limit, and deductions are made from the pay when the average outturn over three consecutive months falls below a prescribed minimum.

PAY, HOURS OF WORK, ETC., OF EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

626. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing the working hours, pay and yearly increment of the Lino. and Mono. Operators, the Computers, and the ordinary clerks of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, at present and before the 15th July, 1920 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The statement desired by the Honourable Member is being compiled and will be supplied to him.

PAY OF READERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

627. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that subsequent to the revision held in 1920 eight junior readers of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, were placed in the grade of Rs. 45—3—75 along with nineteen revisers ?

(b) Is it a fact that a revision was again held in 1924 and Mr. F. D. Ascoli placed the readers in the grade of Rs. 60—4—100 ?

(c) Is it a fact that subsequently by the revisions held in July, 1928, the revisers have been placed in the grade of Rs. 60—4—100, the same grade as that of a junior reader ?

(d) (i) Is it a fact that work of a reader differs fundamentally from that of a reviser and entails greater responsibility and care than that of a reviser ; and (ii) is it a fact that this was admitted by the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra in his reply to question No. 274 in the Legislative Assembly on the 30th January, 1929 ?

(e) Is it a fact that a distinction is observed between the revisers and the readers in the Bengal Government Press ?

(f) If replies to parts (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for doing away with the distinction between the two classes in the Government of India, Press, Calcutta ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (b), (c). Yes.

(d), (e), (f). I have nothing to add to the reply given by me to the Honourable Member to his starred question No. 274 on the 30th January, 1929.

PAY OF READERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS.

628. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that a memorial was submitted to the authorities concerned in May, 1928, by the junior readers of the Government of India Press ?

(b) Is it a fact that a reply was given thereto in February, 1929, to the effect that the memorial was receiving consideration ?

(c) If replies to parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what steps Government have taken or intend taking in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to part (a) of his question No. 270 on the 30th January, 1929.

(b) and (c). Government have no information, but are inquiring into the matter.

RULES OF THE WORKS COMMITTEE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

629. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that there is a Works Committee in the Government of India Press, Calcutta ?

(b) Is it a fact that the management have hitherto followed certain rules in the conduct of the said Works Committee ?

(c) Is it a fact that the present Manager is ignoring rules 6 (1) (B), 14 and 15 ?

(d) If replies to parts (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to inquire and state reasons therefor ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the 7th and 8th general meeting of the said Works Committee held in July and August, 1929 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : An inquiry is being made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

PROMOTION OF READERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

630. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact (i) that no fixed procedure is followed in the promotion of the Readers in the Government of India Press, Calcutta, and (ii) that it depends all on the will of the authorities ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the date of appointment, qualifications, certificates and testimonials received for efficiency and good conduct from the authorities from time to time, period of service, promotions received during the period of service, and the last one year's attendance of the present Readers in the Government of India Press, Calcutta ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a), (i) and (ii). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to his starred question No. 278 on the 30th January, 1929.

(b) Government do not consider that any useful purpose will be served by collecting the information.

PAY OF PIECE-WORKERS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

631. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the piece-workers of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, submitted a memorial to the Honourable Mr. McWatters, the then Member-in-charge, Department of Industries and Labour, Government of India, through the proper channel, with reference to the orders dated 21st June, 1928, passed by the Department of Industries and Labour and communicated to the Manager, Government of India Press, through the Controller by the Deputy Secretary to the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra had a talk on the subject in February last with Sjt. S. C. Mitra, M.L.A., and Sjt. Kishori Lal Ghosh, late Secretary of the Press Employees' Association ?

(c) Is it a fact that as a result of that conference, (i) the Resolution in the Assembly which was then in session standing in the name of Sjt. Mitra regarding the said orders of 21st June, 1928, and the employees' memorial thereon was withdrawn ; and (ii) the Honourable Member agreed to consider the matter and take necessary steps ?

(d) If replies to parts (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the steps that have been taken ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The Honourable Member is fully aware that there was no formal conference. In the course of the conversation which took place between him and me, I stated that the memorials, when they reached me, would receive my careful consideration. What led him to withdraw his Resolution is more than I can say.

(d) I have dealt personally with a number of memorials and some of them are still under my careful consideration.

ALLEGED ACCEPTANCE OF BRIBES BY MAHOMED ASAN, A CHECKER IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

632. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Government Servants' Conduct Rules as well as the Civil Service Rules and Regulations make provision for peremptorily dispensing with the services of any Government servant who may be found taking bribes ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mahomed Asan, a checker in the Government of India Press, Calcutta, takes bribes from the employees ?

(c) Is it a fact that (i) this fact was brought before the Works Committee of the said Press in July, August and September, 1926 ; and (ii) that the truth of the allegation was established thereat ?

(d) If replies to parts (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the case of the said Mahomed Asan has been dealt with ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No Government servant can be dismissed from his appointment on a charge of misconduct otherwise than after due inquiry.

(b), (c) and (d). The matter will be looked into and the result communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

ILLNESS OF A GALLEY PROOF PRESSMAN.

633. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that on 15th August last a galley proof pressman of the Government of India Press fell down senseless in the chamber of the Assistant Manager ?

(b) Is it a fact that the authorities on the spot did not take any steps in the matter, the man being taken to his place at last by his co-workers ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Secretary of the Press Employees' Association, Calcutta, telegraphed to the Member-in-charge, Department of Industries and Labour, and the Controller of Printing and Stationery to the Government of India, on the 16th August, 1929, and sent a letter also to them on the 20th August, 1929 regarding this incident ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the telegram and the letter of the Secretary of the Press Employees' Association, Calcutta ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state what steps Government have taken or intend taking in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). Government have ascertained that the galley proof pressman reported to the Press doctor that he was suffering from toothache and asked for a few days' leave. The doctor treated him, but refused to recommend leave. After a few hours, the man walked into the Assistant Manager's office room and fell down. His heart and pulse were immediately examined by the Press doctor who found nothing wrong and declared that the man was malingering. On a subsequent examination by the authorities of the Medical College Hospital, it was found that the proof pressman had an alveolar abscess and that his tooth required extraction.

(c) A telegram and a letter were received by me from the Secretary of the Press Employees' Association. Similar communications were probably received by the Controller of Printing and Stationery.

(d) A copy of the telegram and the letter will be furnished to the Honourable Member.

(e) In view of the facts explained in reply to part (a), Government do not propose to take any further action.

EARNINGS OF DISTRIBUTORS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

634. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the earnings of the distributors of the Government of India Press, Calcutta, are diminishing day by day ?

(b) Is it a fact that the distributors in the Government of India Press were formerly represented in the Works Committee of the Press ?

(c) Is it a fact that they are not now represented there ? If so, why ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Inquiries are being made and the results will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

MEMORIAL FROM CERTAIN EMPLOYEES OF THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY PRESS.

635. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the compositors, distributors, and binders of the Eastern Bengal Railway Press submitted a memorial to the Government of India on the 10th May last ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of that memorial ; and also state what they have done or intend to do with regard to the matter ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Government have received a copy of a memorial, dated the 23rd May. The Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway, has been requested to deal with this expeditiously. Government do not consider that there is any advantage in laying a copy of the memorial on the table till they have considered and passed orders on it.

EARNINGS OF BINDERS IN THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY PRESS.

636. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that while the earnings of the binders in the Government of India Presses are increasing, the same people in the Eastern Bengal Railway Press are getting their earnings diminished day by day ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons therefor ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether the binders in the Eastern Bengal Railway Press are in inferior service and whether their brethren in the Government of India Press are not ? If so, why ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing the highest and lowest income of the binders in the Government of India Press and the Eastern Bengal Railway Press for the last two years ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The information required is being obtained and the Honourable Member will be communicated with when it is received.

RECRUITMENT OF THE MINISTERIAL STAFF OF THE IMPERIAL COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH.

637. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the pay, prospects and conditions of service of the ministerial staff of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research are the same as those obtaining in any other Secretariat Department of the Government of India ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why the ministerial staff of the Council has not been recruited from among those who have passed the Public Service Commission examination as is the case with every other Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that the question of recruitment of the ministerial staff of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research from among those who have passed the examination of the Public Service Commission is still under consideration while all the appointments have already been filled up ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why this question was not decided before any appointment was made ?

(c) Is it a fact that a decision on this question has been deliberately postponed to enable the Vice-Chairman to appoint some of his own men, who have not passed the Public Service Commission examination?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes ; because the Council is not as yet required to recruit its ministerial staff only from among those who have passed the Public Service Commission Examination.

(b) Yes ; because the intention was and is to give the Council as much freedom as possible in regard to its internal administration, and the question as to whether it should recruit its staff through the Public Service Commission or not was not taken up till after the inaugural meeting of the Council, by which time the greater portion of the Council's existing staff had been recruited.

(c) Certainly not ; as will be seen from the answer given by the Honourable the Home Member to the Honourable Member's question No. 416 answered on the 11th September.

DIRECT RECRUITMENT OF A STENOGRAPHER TO THE VICE-CHAIRMAN OF THE IMPERIAL COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH.

638. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Vice-Chairman of the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research has offered the post of his stenographer to one of his own men from Madras who has not passed the Public Service Commission Examination, while a number of suitable applicants who had passed such examination were available in Simla and, if so, why?

(b) Is it a fact that the man who has been so appointed is a relative of the Vice-Chairman of the Council?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House a copy of the original application of the man in question, and also state his qualifications, number of years' service, pay and prospects of that man in his present appointment, and whether he is in Government service or not?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes ; the post is really that of Personal Assistant to the Vice-Chairman, and in an appointment of this nature it is obvious that the Vice-Chairman should be in a position to choose a man who suits him. The Honourable Member, I may be permitted to point out, seems to be entirely wrong as to his facts. The Public Service Commission have not yet held any examination, so that neither the man appointed nor any one else could have passed the examination that was never held. Perhaps the Honourable Member is referring to the Staff Selection Board Examination ; if so, the last examination was held in 1924, and candidates with the Staff Selection Board qualifications available are all men of inferior educational qualifications, being either middle school men or matriculates.

(b) No ; the man the Honourable Member is objecting to is a non-Brahmin while the Vice-Chairman is a Brahmin.

(c) No, but I will gladly supply the information the Honourable Member seeks. Mr. Parthasarathi Mudaliar is a B. A. of the Madras University ; he has knowledge of shorthand and typewriting and is at present employed under the District Board, Tanjore. The latter is his first appointment and he has held it for the last two years.

RECRUITMENT OF THE STAFF OF THE IMPERIAL COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH.

639. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that a number of men who have not passed the required examination of the Public Service Commission have been appointed to the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research, while men with better qualifications who had passed such examination were available, and if so, why?

Sir Frank Noyce : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. Whether, if selection had been restricted to only such men as had passed the examination of the Public Service Commission, better qualified men could have been obtained is a matter of opinion.

VISIT TO HYDERABAD OF THE VICE-CHAIRMAN AND SECRETARY OF THE COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH.

640. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the object of the recent visit of the Vice-Chairman and the Secretary of the Council of Agricultural Research to Hyderabad?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of the House a statement showing details of the work done by both these officers during the visit in question and the cost to Government of that visit?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). Hyderabad being the first Indian State to express its readiness to co-operate with the Council and offer a generous donation to its funds, it was thought that it would be fitting if these two officers visited the State not only as an act of courtesy but also to explain the aims and objects of the Council to the authorities responsible for the development of agriculture in the State and to ascertain from them in what ways the Council could be of help to the State Department of Agriculture. No definite schemes of work were discussed, but the free and cordial exchange of views on both sides has paved the way for fruitful co-operation between the Council and the State Department of Agriculture in the future. Advantage was taken of the visit to inspect the Osmania University, the State Agricultural Farm recently started at Himayat Sagar, and other State institutions. The Vice-Chairman and the Secretary would, in any case, have had to attend an annual meeting of the Indian Central Cotton Committee at Bombay, as also a conference with the Bombay Minister of Agriculture at Poona, about the time when the visit to Hyderabad was decided upon, and, therefore, the latter involved merely a slight change in route. The extra cost involved in the travelling allowance of both these officers and their staff amounted to Rs. 516-10-6.

ORDNANCE TECHNICAL SCHOOL AT ISHAPORE.

641. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that there is an Ordnance Technical School at Ishapore established in 1928 ; and several students, who are sons and relatives of the employees of the local and neighbouring ordnance factories and residents of the neighbouring places and also from different other places have taken their admissions to this Technical School? If so, will Government please state the number of boys who have been admitted in this school since it was started and what is their existing number at present?

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

(b) What are the numbers of the teaching staff engaged for both practical and theoretical training of the students of this school, and what are their qualifications ?

(c) Is it a fact that the training is given to the students of this Technical School according to the requirements for their employment in the ordnance factories, and the Works Manager of the Rifle Factory, Ishapore, is the Principal of this school ? If so, does he take any class in this Technical School and supervise the practical training of students ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes. The numbers are 133 and 97, respectively.

(b) Four. The Superintendent has passed the Intermediate Arts examination and full Student Apprenticeship of the Rifle Factory, Ishapore. He has also served as Improver for one year. The Fitting Supervisor has passed the Trade Apprenticeship course of the Rifle Factory, Ishapore. The Carpentry Supervisor is a selected first class craftsman from the Rifle Factory and the Instructor for English is a graduate of the Calcutta University.

(c) The training given to the students of the School is elementary instruction in the use of tools for wood working and metal working and in the principles of these trades. The training is not peculiar to the needs of boys destined for employment in ordnance factories, but it does produce boys suitably equipped to continue their training as boy artisans in these trades.

The Works Manager of the Rifle Factory is not the Principal of the School, but he takes a great interest in it in his spare time, and its success is very largely due to him.

The second part of the question does not arise. The answer to the last part is that it would be impossible for him to combine the duties of Principal with those of Works Manager.

EMPLOYMENT OF STUDENTS OF THE ORDNANCE TECHNICAL SCHOOL, ISHAPORE.

642. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that Government have given a pledge in the rules of the Ordnance Technical School, Ishapore, to employ most of the students in the neighbouring ordnance factories on their completion of three years' course and obtaining a proficiency certificate therefrom ? If so, will Government please state, the nature of appointments that will be offered to the students of the Ordnance Technical School, Ishapore, on completion of their trainings and obtaining a proficiency certificate from that school ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not, therefore, arise.

PROVISION OF A HOSTEL FOR STUDENTS OF THE ORDNANCE TECHNICAL SCHOOL, ISHAPORE.

643. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that there is no hostel attached to the Ordnance Technical School, Ishapore ? If so, are Government prepared to consider the advisability of providing a hostel for the students of this school ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : Yes. A hostel is not considered necessary as most of the students of the school are relatives of the factory employees and live in the neighbourhood.

EMPLOYMENT OF GRADE A APPRENTICES IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

644. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) With reference to the answer to my starred question No. 820, in the Legislative Assembly on the 26th February, 1929, regarding Grade "A" Apprentices in the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshops at Kharagpur, will Government please state why the number of recruits, viz., 26, shown in column 2 of the statement (Annexure "B") against the year 1928 does not tally with the total figure under 1928, viz., 19, in the statement (Annexure "C") furnished with the reply to my starred question No. 823, in the Legislative Assembly on 26th February, 1929 ?

(b) What were the grounds on which the recruits were discharged after they were retained for two years and more than two years in the case of recruits shown against the year 1924, three years and more in the case of four recruits shown against the years 1925 and 1928 in column 4 of the statement (Annexure "B") mentioned in the reply to my starred question No. 820, in the Legislative Assembly of 26th February, 1929 ?

(c) Were all these recruits, referred to in part (b) above, confirmed before they were discharged ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) is in the negative, will Government please state, in how many different branches or departments in the Railway Workshops at Kharagpur were they employed and tested, and what was their subsistence allowance at the time of their discharge ?

(e) Will Government please obtain and furnish the names and the addresses of all these discharged recruits shown in the statement (Annexure "B") at the time they were recruited ?

(f) How is it that during the five years (1924 to 1928 inclusive) only seven recruits against a total number of seventy-seven (sic.) shown in the statement mentioned in the answer to my starred question No. 820, in the Assembly of 26th February, 1929 (Annexure "B") have been employed and that only in the appointments of Improvers, on Rs. 45 per mensem only ? Do Government propose to direct the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, to investigate into the matter, and redress the long-felt grievances of the Indian recruits, from "A" Grade Apprentices and also of the Indian "A" Grade Apprentices in particular ?

(g) How many Anglo-Indian and European recruits were employed from apprentices of their grade during this period of five years in the various capacities in the Kharagpur Railway Workshops and what was the pay at which they started and what is the pay they are drawing now, and what was their designation at the time of their first appointment and what is their designation at present ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have called for the information from the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, and will communicate with the Honourable Member on its receipt. As regards part (a) of the question, however, I may add that the discrepancy is probably to be explained by the fact that the figures in Annexure C required only to the Loco. and Carriage Departments, while those in Annexure B were for all the railway workshops, including, for instance, the electrical shops. The fuller explanation that I have called for from the Railway Administration will, I hope, satisfy the Honourable Member on this point.

CONSTRUCTION OF A DIRECT ROAD FROM NEW DELHI TO RAMJAS COLLEGE.

645. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Are Government aware that Ramjas College is the nearest College for the residents of New Delhi, but owing to the absence of a direct road between New Delhi and that College, the parents of the students residing in New Delhi experience considerable difficulty in sending their boys to this College ? In view of this difficulty, do Government propose to instruct the local authorities concerned to construct a direct road from Raisina to the Hill on which the institution is situated ?

(b) Is it a fact that Government give financial aid to the Delhi local authorities for the development of Quraul Bagh known as the western part of Raisina ? If so, how is it that this important part of the scheme of linking the College with Raisina by means of a short and suitable road has not so far been undertaken ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The necessary information has been called for and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

THE SIR HARCOURT BUTLER SCHOOL AND THE LADY IRWIN SCHOOL, SIMLA.

646. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state whether the Sir Harcourt Butler High School and the Lady Irwin School in Simla are moving schools ? If not, do Government propose to make them moving schools ?

(b) Are these schools under the management of the Local Government ?

(c) Is the expenditure Imperial and Provincial ? If it is shared by both, what is the proportion of the Imperial to the Provincial contribution ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). The answer to the first part of the first question is in the negative. As the Sir Harcourt Butler High School is a school under private management, which is recognised and aided by the Punjab Government and with which the Government of India have nothing to do, and as the Lady Irwin School for Girls is also under private management, Government are unable to give effect to the suggestion of the Honourable Member.

(c) The expenditure on account of the grant-in-aid to the Lady Irwin School is met from Central Revenues.

ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA TO MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

647. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : (a) Will Government please state on what lines the allotment of quarters to Members of the Legislative Assembly are made now ?

(b) Is there a permanent division of quarters between the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly ? If so, with whom does the allotment rest in each case ?

(c) What were the lines on which the allotments of the Assembly quarters were made this time, especially with respect to the allotments of the orthodox quarters at Longwood and Cart Road ?

(d) Does the bringing of families by Members give any preferential rights to them in the allotment of these orthodox quarters ?

(e) Is the necessity of making special arrangements for diet, etc., and entertaining a largish establishment on medical grounds by Members in bad health, also considered a reason for preferential rights to Members asking for separate orthodox quarters ?

(f) If no consideration is made in the cases mentioned in part (e) does it mean that the bringing of a family is more important than the coming up of a person in indifferent health for attending the Assembly meetings up here in Simla ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 647, 649 and 650 on behalf of the Legislative Assembly Department.

(a) and (c). In allotting quarters to Honourable Members, preference is given to two or more applicants who are willing to share one quarter. When several Members apply separately for the same quarter, the allotment is made by ballot.

(b) No permanent division has been made. After the constitution of a separate Assembly Department a division on a temporary basis was made by agreement between the Secretaries of the two Houses, who make the allotments of quarters.

(d), (e) and (f). The answer is in the negative.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Are there any fixed rules on the subject, and could they be laid on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I think I have said that there are no fixed rules, but I would suggest to the Honourable Member that if he wants any further information he should make inquiries from the Secretary of the Legislative Assembly Department. I am sure he will recognise that it is not possible for me to give offhand, on the floor of the House, information regarding the procedure followed by the Secretariat of the Legislative Assembly.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Will it not be more useful if rules are framed and circulated for the information of the Members so that they may not have to raise questions in the House every now and then ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I dare say the Legislative Assembly Department will consider that point, and in that connection they will probably also consider the recommendation which was at one stage made by the Committee of the Central Legislature regarding the formation of a Standing Committee to deal with questions of this sort.

RENTS OF QUARTERS OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.

648. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : (a) Will Government please state on what consideration the rents of various quarters have been reduced? What rents were charged for the various quarters before and to what amounts have they been reduced now?

(b) Is it a fact that some of the quarters at Summer Hill, when occupied by one Member in the past, were charged for at Rs. 110 each and that the same quarters, when now occupied by one Member, are to be charged for at Rs. 148 each, on the ground that each "set of quarters" is meant for two Members?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Government of India, with the approval of the Secretary of State, have agreed to grant to Members of the Legislature, when occupying Government quarters on duty, the concessions permissible under rule 45-A of the Fundamental Rules. This accounts for the reduction in rent recently made.

The rents now charged and those previously charged are shown in the statement which is laid on the table.

(b) No. The rent previously was Rs. 220 per mensem per set of quarters, or Rs. 110 per mensem per Member, if the set was occupied by two Members. (The quarters are considered large enough for two Members.) The present rent is Rs. 148 per mensem per set, or Rs. 74 per mensem per Member if occupied by two Members.

(Mr. President called upon Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha to put his question No. 651.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, there are other questions of Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum which I have to answer.

Mr. President : I thought the Honourable Member had answered them.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have not yet answered question 649.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member said that he would answer questions 647, 649 and 650 together.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am sorry if I made myself misunderstood.

Mr. President : Sir Abdul Qaiyum.

"SETS OF QUARTERS" FOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

649. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : What is meant by the term "Set of Quarters" as used in the Legislative Assembly Department Circular, with respect to the Summer Hill quarters? Does it apply to each quarter and does each of these quarters provide enough accommodation for two Members, with two sets of private servants and separate kitchen arrangements? Is the present single lavatory and bath room arrangement meant for two Members?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Each block at Summer Hill consists of separate quarters and the term "set of quarters" means one such separate quarter. Each such quarter is a double quarter with sufficient accommodation for at least two Members, and is intended to be shared by at least two Members.

DIVISION OF QUARTERS BETWEEN MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL OF STATE AND THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

650. *Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : (a) Do Government propose to earmark the Summer Hill quarters for Members of the Council of State and the quarters at Longwood for Members of the Assembly, which will be more convenient for both in view of the situation of their respective Chambers?

(b) Are there any special and distinct rules about the allotment of these quarters and will Government be pleased to supply a copy of the same to each Member?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) There is no such proposal before Government. All the Longwood Range quarters, and four out of the five cottages in Longwood have been reserved for Members of the Assembly this year. The unorthodox quarters in Longwood Hotel, New Block, have been divided in suitable proportion between the Legislative Assembly and the Council of State.

(b) There are no prescribed rules governing the allotment of quarters to Honourable Members.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that there is a lot of grumbling among the Members of the Legislative Assembly on account of this dyarchy in the allotment of quarters to them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : So far as I am aware, there is no dyarchy.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that quarters are allotted to the Members during the non-Assembly Session by the Public Works Department, and during the Assembly Session by the Assembly Department ? This is what dyarchy means.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : If my Honourable friend was referring to that system, it is quite possible that there is what he styles dyarchy, but the Legislative Assembly Department refused to have anything to do with the allotment of quarters to Members who did not come here to attend the meetings of the Legislative Assembly. I think the Legislative Assembly Secretariat is probably justified in taking that attitude. That being the position, when Members come to Simla outside the regular Session, somebody has to make the allotment, and the Public Works Department is at present making the allotments.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But why is this difference made when a Member is attending the meetings of the Assembly and when he is attending the meetings of some special committees appointed by the same Assembly ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I do not know, Sir ; but that is the present arrangement.

Mr. President : Order, order. I think the Honourable Member is quite wrong in saying that the Legislative Assembly Department refused to have anything to do with the allotment of quarters to Honourable Members when they come to attend meetings of Committees. (Loud Applause.) However, I am looking into the matter and will ask the Secretary to make a representation to the Honourable Member.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I should like to add, Sir, that my information is to the contrary, and I shall be pleased to show the papers in my possession.

Mr. President : I am just informed by my Secretary that that is not so.

ENTRAINMENT OF PILGRIMS AT TEMPORARY STATIONS.

651. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 885 of 4th March, 1929, will Government please state the objection they have to allow only those pilgrim passengers, to entrain at the temporary stations, who though holding tickets for a further journey, are allowed to alight there ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply sent to him by the Railway Board on the 29th June, 1929. The main objection is that the provision of facilities for selling tickets at these temporary stations, which are only open for 14 days in the year, involves a considerable expense which is not justifiable.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : The Honourable Member says that facilities will have to be provided for selling tickets on those stations, and the railway authorities will not be justified in doing so in view of the considerable expense it involves. But what objection can there be for allowing only those passengers who hold tickets for a longer journey but are allowed to break their journey and alight at these temporary stations to perform a compulsory religious ceremony for a few hours ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I shall consider that point, Sir.

CONTRACT FOR COOLIES AT GAYA STATION.

652. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 593 of 19th February, 1929, will Government be pleased to state (a) the methods of registering the names of intending contractors, (b) the qualifications making a person eligible for selection, (c) the number of applicants from among which the present contractor of coolies at Gaya was selected, and (d) the name of the officer who made the selection ?

(b) With reference to part (a) will Government be pleased to state :

(i) If there is any scale of fee to be paid by the coolies to the contractors ? If so, what is the scale for Gaya ?

(ii) Are the scales fixed periodically ? If so, when was it last fixed for Gaya, and for what period ?

(iii) What punishment is awarded to contractors if they overcharge the coolies ?

(iv) How many cases of overcharge have been found in Dinapore Division during the last three years, and what punishment was awarded in each case ?

(v) For what period and when was the present man given the contract at Gaya ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am collecting the information required and will let the Honourable Member have it in due course.

ISSUE OF CHEAP RETURN TICKETS ON RAILWAYS.

653. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government please state how, by issuing third class ordinary return tickets at one and a half fares, fraudulent travelling will be increased when it is not so done by week-end return tickets at one and a quarter fares ?

(b) What are the reasons for not issuing third and intermediate class return tickets at single fares as is done in cases of first and second class tickets during Durga Puja, Christmas, Easter and Moharram ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) A single ticket has the date stamped on it and can only be used on that date. The return half of an ordinary return ticket can have no date stamped on it and is available on any date for a long period ahead and if it is not given up it can be used several times. The chance of week end return tickets being used more than once is minimised as the period during which they are available is short.

(b) The main reason for the issue of reduced return tickets during holiday periods is the anticipation of an increase in the number of passengers sufficient to more than compensate for the reduced fare. The

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : The Honourable Member says that facilities will have to be provided for selling tickets on those stations, and the railway authorities will not be justified in doing so in view of the considerable expense it involves. But what objection can there be for allowing only those passengers who hold tickets for a longer journey but are allowed to break their journey and alight at these temporary stations to perform a compulsory religious ceremony for a few hours ?

(b) What are the reasons for not issuing third and intermediate class return tickets at single fares as is done in cases of first and second class tickets during Durga Puja, Christmas, Easter and Moharram ?

The chance of week end return tickets being used more than once is minimised as the period during which they are available is short.

(b) The main reason for the issue of reduced return tickets during holiday periods is the anticipation of an increase in the number of passengers sufficient to more than compensate for the reduced fare. The question of these reductions is carefully considered by Railway Administrations from time to time and the reductions made, if any, necessarily vary on different railways according to local conditions on each railway. Owing to the volume of ordinary lower class traffic however, if the same reduction for those classes were made as for the upper classes, it is feared that the loss on the ordinary traffic would not be made up by the gain on the additional traffic obtained and the final result would, it is estimated, be a considerable loss in revenue.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : In the case of first and second class passengers, the concession is given and the tickets are actually issued and the Government are thus able to base their calculations on the actual number of tickets issued. But in the case of third class passengers, return tickets have never been issued. I would like to know what basis or authority Government have to say that there will not be increased traffic if third class return tickets are issued during these periods ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : It is only an estimate. The ordinary passengers travelling by upper classes are comparatively small in number, while the number of lower class passengers is ordinarily very high, and the additional traffic secured will bear only a small proportion to the ordinary traffic.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, that is begging the question ; it has never been tried.

Mr. P. R. Rau : As I have already said, it is an estimate made by the railways.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Will the Honourable Member say how the difficulties arise only with regard to third class passengers and not with regard to the higher class passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Is the question with regard to (a) or (b) ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : It arises out of the Honourable Member's answer.

Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : I am referring to (a).

Mr. P. R. Rau : The only answer to that question is that ordinarily it has been found that the practice of fraudulent travelling is more prevalent among the third class passengers than among the higher class passengers.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member whether it is not a fact that third class return tickets are issued for servants of higher class passengers and there is no fraud committed by them ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I must ask for notice of the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If it is a fact that no fraud has been noticed in connection with third class return tickets issued to servants, on what does the Honourable Member base his impression that there would be fraud if third class return tickets are issued to ordinary third class passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : That is a hypothetical question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I ask the Honourable Member to direct his attention not to hypothesis but to the facts of the case ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Honourable Member began his question with an "if" ; hence a certain suspicion arises that it is hypothetical.

Diwan Chaman Lall : It seems to me that the Honourable Member's answer is a hypothetical one. May I ask him whether he did not say that it was the presumption of the Railway Board that there would be fraud and that he had no facts to go upon ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : An answer may be hypothetical. It depends on the question.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Is it not a fact that the answers of the Railway Board are always hypothetical ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : That depends upon the question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it not a fact that in some railways third class return tickets have been issued in the past and that there has been no trouble ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think that is a fact.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Then why do the Railway Board hesitate to apply the same principles to the railway in question ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : It is a matter for consideration as regards each railway with regard to local conditions.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is it to be taken that there is more fraud in some areas and less fraud in some other areas with regard to third class passengers ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : Do I take it that the Railway Board possess an open mind and a blank mind in regard to this matter ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I should be prepared to say that I have an open mind, but not a blank mind. Obviously the matter interests the House and therefore I will look into it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Bengal and North-Western Railway do not issue third class return tickets. Are the third class passengers travelling on the Bengal and North-Western Railway more prone to commit fraud in the matter of return tickets ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has promised to look into the matter.

NUMBER OF CASES OF ABDUCTION, RAPE, ETC., IN CERTAIN YEARS.

654. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of cases of abduction, enticement, rape and other offences against the modesty and honour of women in each province of British India separately for the years 1926, 1927 and 1928 ?

(b) Are Government aware that in some provinces these offences are committed by organised gangs and for definitely set purposes ? If so, what steps have been taken for their prevention ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the returns of cognisable crime in Statement A, Part I of the Annual Police Administration Reports of the provinces for the years mentioned.

(b) I have no information that would suggest that in certain provinces the offences in question are committed by organised gangs for definitely set purposes. It is for the Local Governments to take such action as is necessary and I have no reason to think that they are not fully alive to their responsibilities in this matter.

STRIKE OF TINPLATE WORKERS AT GOLMURI.

655. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that almost all the employees, about 3,000 in number, of the Tinsplate Company of India, Ltd., at Golmuri, near Jamshedpur, in the Province of Bihar and Orissa, have gone on strike since the 7th April, 1929 ?

(b) Has there been any correspondence between the Central Government here and the Bihar Government in connection with this strike, and if so, will Government be pleased to place the same correspondence on the table ?

(c) Is it a fact that a deputation consisting of Messrs. M. Daud, V. V. Giri, W. R. Naidu and J. N. Mitra waited on the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra on the 5th July, 1929, during his last visit to Jamshedpur and prayed for his intervention in this matter ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Honourable Member did anything in this matter, and, if not, why not ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Union of workers at Golmuri represented the whole situation of the strike to the Chief Secretary to the Government of India on the 6th August, 1929, and if so, with what result ?

(f) Are Government aware of the fact that the said Union of workers at Golmuri has also represented the whole situation of the strike to the Right Honourable Mr. Wedgwood Benn, the Secretary of State for India, on the 6th September, 1929 ?

(g) Has there been any correspondence on the subject between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India, and if so, with what object and result ?

(h) Are Government aware that the local officers of the Government of Bihar and Orissa now stationed at Golmuri in connection with the strike there have been openly helping the Tinsplate Company in every possible way and that against the strikers ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to inquire into the allegations mentioned above ?

(j) Are Government aware that the strike in the Tinsplate Company at Golmuri is developing into an all-India question and that there has already been a sympathetic strike at Budge Budge in Bengal ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. Of the strikers, some subsequently resumed work and others have been replaced by new hands.

(b) Government do not consider that it would be in the public interest to place on the table a copy of the correspondence which has taken place between the Central Government and the Government of Bihar and Orissa in connection with this strike.

(c) No deputation waited on me, but I had an informal talk with the gentlemen referred to by the Honourable Member.

(d) I endeavoured to ascertain the position by informal conversation with both parties and to give such advice as might help some of the men who were out of employment to secure employment at the works.

(e) A letter addressed to the " Chief Secretary to the Viceroy " was received from the Golmuri Tinsplate Workers' Union. The Union was informed that under section 3 of the Trade Disputes Act, 1929, the question whether a Court of Inquiry or a Board of Conciliation should or should not be constituted in connection with the strike rested entirely with the Local Government.

(f) Government have no information.

(g) Yes ; some correspondence took place between the Secretary of State and the Government of India in connection with a question in the House of Commons relating to the matter and also in connection with a deputation which the Secretary of State received from the Trade Union Congress General Council.

(h) The Government of India have no information beyond what they have seen in the press reports of the debate on the motion for adjournment in the Bihar Council early this month.

(i) The Government of India do not propose to interfere in a matter which is essentially the concern of the Local Government.

(j) Government are not aware that the strike in the Tinsplate Company at Golmuri is developing into an all-India question. The strike of oil workers at Budge-Budge is said to have been brought about partly in sympathy with the Tinsplate Workers' Strike.

STRIKE OF STUDENTS OF THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

656. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) If they are aware of a general strike of the students of the Indian School of Mines at Dhanbad from 5th June, 1929 to 18th June, 1929 ;

(b) If the Principal of the said School then closed the school indefinitely and thus virtually declared a lock-out ; and

(c) If Government made or propose to make an inquiry into the causes of the strike ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I propose, with your permission, to answer questions Nos. 656 and 657 together. The information asked for by the Honourable Member will be found in the statement regarding the temporary closing of the Indian School of Mines, Dhanbad, during June, 1929, supplied to Mr. K. C. Neogy on the 4th September, 1929, with reference to his starred question No. 105. A copy of the statement is available and will be placed in the Library of the House.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that one of the main causes of the strike is the absence of suitable careers for the students after the completion of their studies in the school ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Government are aware of that fact, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What steps have Government taken to give the students suitable careers after they have finished their studies in the school ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Obviously it is not possible for Government to guarantee suitable careers to boys. The Government can only provide a certain amount of education and training.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : If Government are aware that the education provided there does not secure a career to students, is it not time that Government undertook, on a larger scale, some scheme of technical and industrial education so that employment may be found for the boys after they have undergone training in the school ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have failed to grasp the full force of my Honourable friend's question. Here Government are trying to provide technical education on a small scale and these students feel that they have not got sufficient careers before them. If education were to be given on a much larger scale, it seems to me that there would be greater difficulty in the matter of providing careers for those students.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Does not that show that there is need for different kinds of industrial and technical education ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not quite sure whether that question is really relevant to the question to which I have already given an answer.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Do the Government propose to make the students common carriers or water carriers ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have undoubtedly grasped the wording of my Honourable friend's question, but I do not understand to which students he is referring. Does he refer to the students mentioned by my Honourable friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya or to the students now being educated in the Dhanbad School of Mines ?

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I mean the students of the Dhanbad School of Mines for whom Government are not prepared to provide any other career suitable for them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : My Honourable friend is under a misapprehension. How can Government provide appointments and careers for anybody and everybody ?

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Then, why do not Government open technical schools ?

(No answer was given.)

GRIEVANCES OF THE STUDENTS OF THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

†657. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a leading article under the heading "Broken Pledge" and to a letter "Story of Broken Pledges" published in the Bombay Chronicle in its issue of the 6th June, 1929 and to a leaderette under the caption "Dhanbad School of Mines" in the same newspaper in its issue of the 24th June, 1929 ?

(b) Were the allegations made in the said leading article, the leaderette and the correspondence on which they were based ever contradicted by the authorities of the school ?

(c) Have Government made any inquiry into the alleged grievances of the students of the school ?

(d) If they have, what is the result of the inquiry ?

(e) If not, do they propose to make an inquiry ?

NUMBER OF MINES AND COLLIERIES IN BRITISH INDIA.

658. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total number of mines and collieries in British India ; and

(b) the number of collieries and mines owned by Britishers and other foreigners in British India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The number of coal mines and of mines other than coal mines worked under the Indian Mines Act in British India during the year 1928, was 556 and 1,392 respectively.

(b) Government have no information and regret that they cannot undertake to collect it as it would involve an amount of time and labour disproportionate to the result.

EXAMINATION AND TRAINING OF STUDENTS AT THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

659. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Is it a fact that only such students as have passed at least the Intermediate Science examination or an equivalent test are allowed to appear for the entrance examination of the Indian School of Mines at Dhanbad, that a selection is made out of those that pass the entrance examination, and that the selected students have to undergo theoretical and practical training for at least four years in the school of mines at an annual cost of about Rs. 1,000 ?

(b) Is it a fact that, out of the 120 students in the schools about 40 students are post-graduates ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the Prospectus of the School which gives the required information and a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

(b) Of the 118 students at present in the School, 23 are graduates.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 656.

COST OF THE STAFF OF THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

660. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to state the amount of public money spent on the maintenance of the staff of the Dhanbad School of Mines, and if it is a fact that there are about 30 monthly scholarships in the school each of about Rs. 100 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The estimated cost on account of pay of the superior and subordinate staff of the School for the current financial year is Rs. 1,20,800. There are 17 scholarships tenable at the School varying from Rs. 40 to Rs. 100 per month.

PROSPECTS OF STUDENTS OF THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

661. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) What is the average salary on which a graduate or the holder of a diploma from Great Britain, of the same qualifications as successful students of the Dhanbad school, starts on his service in British India ?

(b) Is any proposal or scheme pending before Government at present for improving the prospects of the successful students of the Dhanbad school ? If so, will the proposal or the scheme be laid on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The question is too indefinite to enable me to give a precise answer. It is not possible for me to say what exact diploma or degree of a particular institution in Great Britain is equivalent to the Certificate or the Associateship of the Indian School of Mines and the starting pay of an officer appointed to a service in India does not depend on the nature of the diploma or degree which he holds.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to paragraph 4 of the statement placed in the Library of the House in reply to Mr. K. C. Neogy's starred question No. 105 of the 4th September, 1929.

NUMBER OF INDIANS IN THE MINES DEPARTMENT, ETC.

662. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Is it not a fact that the Government of India have opened the school of mines at Dhanbad for training Indian students for employment as officers in the Provincial services and also in the Imperial Geological Survey of India and the Department of Mines, as stated by Sir Henry Hayden in his evidence before the Public Service Commission in 1913 ?

(b) What is the total number of officers at present in the State Collieries, the Geological Survey of India and in the Indian Mines Department, respectively ? How many of them are Indians in each of these Departments ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The School has been established with a view to provide training for the professions of Mining Engineer and Geologist and also to help to solve the problem of recruitment of young men of this country for the Geological Survey of India and the Indian Mines Department.

(b)

SPEECH OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY AT THE INDIAN SCHOOL OF MINES, DHANBAD.

663. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy delivered at the opening of the Indian School of Mines, Dhanbad, on the 9th December, 1926 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : A copy of the speech has been placed in the Library of the House.

COST TO INDIA OF THE GARRISON IN PERSIA SAFEGUARDING THE INTERESTS OF THE ANGLO-PERSIAN OIL COMPANY.

664. *Mr. D. V. Belvi : (a) Is any amount of money annually spent from the Indian Treasury on a garrison in the Persian Gulf to safeguard the interests of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company ? If so, what is the total amount ?

(b) Does India get any return for her money ? If so, how ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Not a pie.

(b) Does not arise.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

PROHIBITION OF THE BURNING OF THE BODY OF A DECEASED HINDU IN THE BELGIAN CONGO.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a letter from the Administrateur Territorial of Belgian Congo to Mr. Chhotalal Kurji of Kigoma, published in the daily Tanganyika Opinion of the 27th August, 1929, in which it is stated that the "incineration of deceased is prohibited in the Belgian Congo. The followers of Hindu religion are buried in a place reserved to the Asiatic population" ?

(b) Are Government aware that this order is an outrage on the religious rites and ceremonies of the Hindus ?

(c) Have Government taken any steps, and do they propose to take any now, to have this order rescinded at as early a date as possible ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a), (b) and (c). Yes.

I am indebted to the Honourable Member for drawing my attention to this extraordinary affair yesterday. His Majesty's Government have been requested by telegram to impress on the Belgian authorities the gravity of their order and the urgency for its cancellation.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Sir, I thank the Honourable Member for taking steps so promptly, but may I know whether the result of this representation will be communicated to me or to the House in any way ?

Sir Denys Bray : I shall see that it is communicated to the public.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Thank you.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

OVERPAYMENT OF A MONEY ORDER BY THE POSTMASTER, IGATPURI POST OFFICE.

183. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether a telegraphic money order was overdrawn by the Postmaster, Igatpuri Post Office, on the 28th April, 1927, and an excess of Rs. 445 was paid to one Mr. Sandford Bilimora ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Postmaster immediately communicated by wire and by letter with the different officers of the Department for the recovery of the amount overpaid to the payee ?

(c) Is it a fact that no action whatsoever was taken by the Department to recover the amount ?

(d) Is it a fact that money orders were passing through the same post office payable to Mr. Sandford to the extent of nearly Rs. 900 after the incident ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Postmaster General, Bombay, refused to apply the provisions of the Post Office Act for the recovery of the amount ?

(f) Is it a fact that the case was allowed to drag on for 22 months before the Director General issued his decision for the recovery of the difference from the Postmaster ?

(g) Is it a fact that the Postmaster was refused permission to recover the amount from Mr. Sandford by instituting civil proceedings against him ?

(h) If the answer to part (g) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to request the Director General to reconsider his decision, to refund the amount recovered from the said Postmaster and to apply the provisions of the Post Office Act for the recovery of the loss sustained by the Department from the payee ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government have no information on the subject, but inquiries have been instituted and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

APPOINTMENTS OF STAMP VENDORS.

184. Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that an assurance was given to the Standing Finance Committee, when the pay of stamp vendors in post offices was revised, that the question of converting their appointments into superior service would be taken up by Government ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table their decision in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : In the memorandum placed before the Standing Finance Committee in January, 1928, in connection with the revision of pay of stamp vendors, it was stated that new recruitment for this class of officials would be confined to postmen if the service was made pensionable, a question which would be taken up for separate examination. The question is under consideration, and no decision has yet been arrived at.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, for certain purposes, as amended, be passed.

Mr. D. F. Mulla (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause (2), the words beginning with the words ‘ for the words ’ and ending with the words ‘ be substituted, and ’ be omitted.”

This has relation to paragraph 3 of section 54. Paragraph 3 related to voluntary registration ; by the Bill it was proposed to be omitted. It is now to be restored.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 5, the words beginning with the words ‘ for the words ’ and ending with the words ‘ be substituted, and ’ be omitted.”

This amendment stands on the same footing as the first amendment.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That clause 17 be omitted.”

The effect of the omission will be to restore the original section 54 relating to sale in its entirety.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 20, sub-clause (a) be omitted and sub-clauses (b), (c) and (d) be re-lettered as sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c), respectively.”

This, Sir, has reference to the definition of “ mortgage money ” and the words “ if any ” which occurred in the original section and which were omitted are not proposed to be restored by this amendment.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 21 :

(1) sub-clause (a) be omitted, and

(2) sub-clauses (b) and (c) be re-lettered as sub-clauses (a) and (b), respectively.”

In sub-clause (a), the words “ Where the principal money secured is one hundred rupees or upwards ” were omitted. They are now proposed to be restored. They have reference to section 59 which deals with execution of mortgages.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 23, sub-clause (c) be omitted and sub-clauses (d) and (e) be re-lettered as sub-clauses (c) and (d), respectively.”

This, Sir, has reference to section 60 which deals with redemption, and by the Bill the words “ (where the mortgage has been effected by a registered instrument) ” were sought to be omitted. They are now proposed to be restored.

The motion was adopted.

( 1041 )

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 27, the words ‘ in the mortgage deed ’ be omitted.”

This clause has reference to section 63 which deals with accretion, and since voluntary registration has now been restored, it is necessary to omit these words in the mortgage deed.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 28, the words ‘ in the mortgage deed ’ be omitted.”

This has reference to the new section 63A which deals with improvements to mortgaged property and the proposed amendment stands on the same footing as the last.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 38 :

(i) sub-clause (d) be omitted,

(ii) in sub-clause (f), the words ‘ in the mortgage deed ’ be omitted, and

(iii) sub-clauses (e) and (f) be re-lettered as sub-clauses (d) and (e), respectively.”

This has reference to section 72 which deals with the rights of mortgagees. The words “ in the mortgage deed ”, which were added in the clause, are now proposed to be omitted.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in sub-clause (d) of clause 45, after the words ‘ to execute and ’ the words ‘ and brackets ’ (where the mortgage has been effected by a registered instrument) be inserted.”

This has reference to section 83, which deals with money deposited by a mortgagor in court and the words have to be inserted because voluntary registration has now been restored.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I move :

“ That clauses 18 to 64 be re-numbered as clauses 17 to 63.”

The amendment, Sir, is a formal one.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I move :

“ In clause 63, so re-numbered, for the words, figures and brackets beginning with the figure ‘ 2 ’ and ending with the figures ‘ 63 ’, the following words, figures and brackets be substituted, namely :

‘ 3, 4, 9, 10, 15, 18, 19, 27, 30, clause (c) of section 31, sections 32, 33, 34, 35, 46, 52, 55, 57, 58, 59, 61 and 62 ’.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That the Bill, as finally amended, be passed.”

The motion was adopted.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) SUPPLEMENTARY BILL.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill to supplement the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 1929, as amended, be passed.

Mr. D. F. Mulla (Bombay : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I move that :

“ In clause 6, in proposed new Rule 11—

(a) in sub-rule (a) (i), for the words ‘ fixed in the mortgage-deed, or, if no rate has been so fixed ’, the words ‘ payable on the principal, or, where no such rate is fixed ’ be substituted ; and

(b) in sub-rule (a) (iii), for the words ‘ fixed in the mortgage-deed, or, if no rate has been so fixed ’, the words ‘ agreed between the parties, or, failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates ’ be substituted.”

This, Sir, has reference to Order XXXIV, rule 11, which is proposed to be inserted in Order XXXIV. It relates to interest, and both these amendments are consequential amendments.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I move that :

“ In the Schedule, in clause 1 (i) of Forms Nos. 3, 5, 7 and 7-A, for the words ‘ as provided in the mortgage-deed or, if no rate has been fixed ’, the words ‘ at the rate payable on the principal or where no such rate is fixed ’ be substituted.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. D. F. Mulla : Sir, I move that :

“ In the Schedule, in clause 1 (iii) of Forms Nos. 3, 5, 7 and 7-A, for the words ‘ fixed in the mortgage-deed or, if no rate has been so fixed ’, the words ‘ agreed between the parties, or, failing such rate, at the same rate as is payable on the principal, or failing both such rates ’ be substituted.”

This stands on the same footing as the last amendment.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is that the Bill, as finally amended, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of clause 2 of Mr. Sarda's Bill and the four amendments moved on Monday last.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment of my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha that the word “ twelve ” be substituted for the word “ fourteen ” in the clause in question. I crave the indulgence of the House while I try to state my reasons for supporting the proposal. I wish the House to take note of what this amendment means, and of what it does not mean. It does not mean that the Bill will not be passed. It does not mean that the evil of early marriages will be left undealt with ; but, it means, that the question of the age which should be prescribed as the age a marriage below which will entail penal consequences should be further considered. Now, Sir, I wish to ask the House to remember that this legislation is meant to affect the whole of British India, an area nearly as large as Europe minus certain portions of it. There are in it various grades of society, communities at various stages of progress; and therefore in passing legislation, a violation of which is to carry penal consequences, the House is justified in considering what age would be most suitable in the circumstances of the case for the country as a whole. If the matter was to be dealt with province by province, opinion prevailing in the provinces would undoubtedly be a great help and guide to the Legislature. But as it is, in a vast country like India, the various provinces being in different stages of progress, the matter assumes a more difficult aspect; and I submit that the House has, by this time, learned sufficiently that in different provinces the stages at which this question stands differ. For instance in the Punjab and in Sind, the age at which puberty discloses itself is higher than it is in Madras and Bengal and Bombay. Therefore what may be a perfectly legitimate and reasonable proposal in certain parts of the country will not be equally legitimate and reasonable in other parts; and I ask the House not that they should for that reason drop the Bill, but that they should very carefully consider what is the proper maximum age that should be fixed in a Bill of this character.

I submit that the age of consent and the age of marriage are different in many countries. This is a legislation in which for the first time a Legislature is not only fixing the marriageable age, but also laying it down that if a person marries below that age, or if anybody assists in bringing about a marriage below that age, he will be visited with penal consequences.

This is the first time, Sir, in the history of the world, so far as I am aware, that penal provisions are being attached to a departure from the age of marriage fixed by Statute. In no country that I am aware of have any such provisions ever before been attached to the infringement of the age of marriage fixed by law.....

Mr. Abdul Haye (East Punjab : Muhammadan) : You have got it in Egypt.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : In no country, Sir, that I am aware of,—excepting possibly the one that my friend now mentions, of which I have not sufficient information,—have any penal provisions been attached to an infringement of the age of marriage fixed by law. Where the age of marriage is fixed, if a person marries before that age, the marriage is held to be null and void. But it is not prescribed anywhere that if a man marries before the age fixed by law, or if a man officiates at or helps in the performance of a marriage before the age fixed by law, he shall be visited with penal consequences of imprisonment or fine or both. I request the House to bear this fact in mind in considering the amendment before the House.

Secondly, Sir, I wish the House to remember that in this country this custom or practice of early marriages has come down from a very long time. The hesitation of the Government so long to fix the age of marriage by law has been due unquestionably to the fact that in this country, as everybody is aware, marriages at early ages have been common for a very long time past. When you find that these customs have come down from a very long time, when you remember that education is yet very far from being universal, that very great ignorance prevails in the land, that 90 per cent. of the people are still steeped in ignorance, when you also remember that it is the humblest classes among whom marriages at very early ages are very common and that they will be most affected by this Bill, and also that hitherto no such serious step as it is proposed to take now by this measure has ever yet been taken in any other country, then, I submit, the case for caution becomes strong. You are going to enact for the first time a penal provision in a country where these customs have prevailed for a very long time, in a country where the people are still very ignorant, where no adequate efforts have been made to educate them in the evils which flow from early consummation or early marriages, and I submit, therefore, that it is the duty of the Legislature very carefully to consider what should be the maximum age that should be prescribed in this first legislation in this direction. Now, Sir, the question before the Assembly at this moment is whether that age should be 14, or whether, as my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha has urged, it should be 12. In favour of the lower age, I submit, in addition to the considerations which I have placed before the House, there are many others. In many other countries which are more advanced in the modern sense of the word, and which cannot be condemned by any Western writer or speaker as backward or wanting in civilization, the age of marriage fixed by law is below 14. A statement of the age of marriage which obtains in other countries is given in Appendix XB at page 343 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report. I find from it that the minimum age, subject to no exception, which is fixed in Great Britain, Greece, Hungary, Irish Free State, Italy, New Zealand, South Africa, Uruguay and Venezuela is 12 years. It has been said that, in England, there has been legislation under consideration to raise this age from 12 to some higher figure.....

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : To 16.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : In England they are now considering raising the age from 12 to 16. But that is coming, Sir, in the year of grace 1929. Up to this time the legal age of marriage in England has stood at 12. I submit, it still stands at 12 in Greece, Hungary, Irish Free State, Italy, New Zealand, South Africa, Uruguay and Venezuela. Now, I submit, Sir, that these countries cannot be condemned as backward in civilization, and if these countries have thought it fit to keep the legal age of marriage at 12 for all these centuries, it is not an unreasonable proposition, at least an entirely unreasonable proposition to ask the Legislature of India, in view of the totality of circumstances existing in this country, to fix the age of marriage at 12 in the first instance. This does not mean, Sir, that people will be compelled or encouraged to marry at 12. It does not mean that those who have received modern education and hold advanced ideas and who marry their daughters or grand-daughters at the ages of 14, 15, 16, 17 or 18 will cease to marry them at those ages and begin to marry them at 12. It only means that those many lakhs of our humble countrymen who have been marrying their girls at 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 or 11 will be helped to postpone the date of marriage to 12. It means that the large number of children who are likely to suffer from marriages being contracted below the age of 12 will be saved from the evils of such marriages. It means that, for the first time, the Legislature will proclaim to the Indian world that no marriages should take place below the age of 12. It will, therefore, be a perfectly appropriate measure to adopt in the first instance.

I may remind the House that the British Indian Government for the first time laid down the age of 10 as the age of consent in 1860. Before 1860 there was no law made by the British Government in India prescribing the age of consent. In 1860 the age of consent was fixed at 10. 31 years after that period, the Government raised the age of consent to 12, and again after a long period, in 1925, the age of consent was raised to 13. Now, Sir, in this matter of fixing the age of marriage, the Legislature ought to follow the same cautious procedure, namely, they should not fix, what in the circumstances of the country is a high age in the first instance; they should proceed cautiously. If the Legislature will fix the age at 12 on this occasion, it does not mean that the matter cannot be considered a few years later. It can be considered later when public opinion will have been better educated, when educative propaganda will have prepared the minds of the people in a better way to understand the evils arising from early marriages. The matter can certainly be considered again, but it is important that, by this first legislation fixing the age of marriage, a shock should not be caused to large sections of the community.

It may be objected, Sir, that the age of marriage and the age of consent should not be very different. I may mention that I am in favour of the age of consent recommended by the Age of Consent Committee, that is 15 years. I will support that proposal if I am here at the time when that measure comes before the House.

The age of consent being fixed by law at 15, I submit, gives stronger reason in support of the proposal which I am at present pleading for before the House. It may be said that these ages should not be different, but that is not supported by the experience of other countries. In many countries the ages of consent are much higher than the ages of marriage. With a few exceptions, the age of consent fixed by law is everywhere higher than the age of marriage. I will mention a few instances. They are to be found at page 340 of the Report of the Age of Consent Committee. For instance, in Switzerland, the age of consent varies in different cantons from 12 to 16. In France it is 13 as it is in India; in Belgium it is 15; in Germany it is 14; in Italy it is 13 as in India; in Spain it is 12; in Sweden it is between 13 and 15; in the British Dominions, New South Wales, 17; Queensland 17, Tasmania 17, Iowa 17; Indiana 16, and so on. So we find that the ages of marriage and the ages of consent fixed by law in the different countries vary and that the age of consent is fixed at a higher figure than the age of marriage. I submit that protection is given by the existing penal legislation which relates to the age of consent, to all girls up to the age of 13, and it will be given to girls up to the age of 15 if the recommendation of the Age of Consent Committee is carried, as I have no doubt it will be carried in this House. The proposal that the age of consent should be raised affords great protection and legitimate protection to all tender girls, and that protection being provided by penal legislation, there is greater reason why the age of marriage should not be fixed at too high a figure.

Sir, there are other reasons why the age of marriage should not be fixed too high. I have mentioned what ages obtain in Europe and America and other countries. I beg now to mention that in many of the Indian States which have legislated on this subject, the age of marriage has been fixed at 12 years. You will find this in the Appendix to this Report. For instance, in Indore the age of marriage for girls is 12 years; in Kotah it is 12 years; in Mysore it is 8 years; in Baroda 12 years. In Bikaner, which is not mentioned here, but about which I have information, it is 12 years also. So that you have the States of Indore, of Kotah, of Mysore, of Baroda, and of Bikaner,—all these Indian States have fixed the age of marriage at 12.... (An Honourable Member: "Mandi".) Last year it enacted 15. Kotah has 12 years, Rajkote has enacted 15 years for females. Baroda, my Honourable friend tells me, has accepted a higher age. I am told that Baroda has not yet accepted a higher age, but that it is under consideration to raise the age above 12. I say that Baroda has acted wisely, that Indore has acted wisely, that Bikaner has acted wisely and so also Kotah, in fixing 12 years as the marriageable age in the legislation which they have passed. And this age has stood in Baroda for many years. Therefore, I submit, in view of the totality of circumstances, with these instances of so many European countries fixing the marriageable age at 12, with so many Indian States fixing the marriageable age at 12, it is not unreasonable to ask this Legislature to fix that age at 12.

There are two classes of people who will be particularly affected by this legislation. Among a number of people the age of marriage is already above 12. They will not be affected by this legislation, but there are two classes of persons who will be. The largest class which will be affected is what we describe as the depressed classes. The other large section which will be affected is the orthodox people who believe that, according to the Shastras, it is incumbent upon them to bring about the marriage of their girls before they begin to menstruate, though the period of consummation is in these cases postponed to a much later date. First, then, to take up the depressed classes. I invite the attention of the House to the statement contained at page 27 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report. In paragraph 57, the Members of the Committee say:

"According to the Census of 1921 the Chamars (depressed class) who form 1,140,000 of a total Hindu population of 9 millions, get 175 out of every 1,000 girls married before the age of 12. The Rajputs who are nearly two millions married 98 of their girls below that age. The Kumhars with a population of 574,000 married 135 girls, the Kanets married 138 girls, the Lohars 124 girls and the Julahas 121 girls below 12. The custom of early marriage is thus seen to be more largely prevalent among the menial castes than among the higher ones."

That is with regard to the Punjab. Let us see what is stated at page 33 in regard to the Delhi Province. It is said:

"The Marwaries appear to marry their girls below 12 and the Jains after 14. As regards Muslims, it seems that their girls are married at about the age of 13 or 14. The lower classes amongst them however effect child marriages which are sometimes performed at 3, 4, 7 and 8 years of age."

That is, the lower classes amongst the Mussalmans will be affected by the change. That shows what is the state of things in the Delhi Province. Let us see now what obtains in other Provinces. In Bombay it is stated at page 37:

"The age of puberty in the Presidency ranges from 12 to 15. The age is slightly lower for Gujerat and higher for Sindh, within these limits. The practice of Anu or Garbhadhan or Ritu-shanti generally prevails in many parts of the country and actual consummation is usually postponed till puberty. Among the lower castes, consummations before puberty are not however uncommon, in some castes."

So that there also it is the lower castes who are the victims of this custom to a great extent.

You have it stated at page 38, that :

"As education is spreading and social reform is making advance, the age of marriage is rising steadily."

But education is not spreading much among the lower castes. In the Deccan and Karnatak the same story is repeated. In the Deccan it is stated in paragraph 99:

"In rural areas, there has been a tendency for the age of marriage to rise. It appears that the depressed classes are the worst offenders in this respect. They marry their girls at the age of 2, 4 or 6. The backward classes in general effect the marriages of their girls before 10. For the remainder of the population, the average age of marriage is between 10 and 11, while the Indian Christians marry at about 14 or 16."

In Gujerat also we hear the same story. In paragraph 108 of the Report, the Committee say :

"These remarks apply more particularly to the town of Ahmedabad. Among them the marriage age does not appear to be below 13. Agricultural and artisan classes, Audich Brahmins, Ghanchies, Kunbis and Kolies marry early and so also do the lower classes of Muslims. The marriage age for the girls of these classes is anywhere between 4 and 10."

They tell you the reason for this. It is stated in paragraph 109 of the Report. It is this :

"If once a partner is offered and rejected, the panchayats ostracise the person rejecting and he stands the danger of having no offer at all in future. As a result he has to marry his daughter at an early age."

So, the custom is seated deep among the people. I submit that all these cases show that it is the depressed, the more humble and backward classes, of our people that suffer most from the evils of early marriage ; it is they advance the age all at one to 14 will be a very shocking legislation to them. I submit we are not justified in inflicting such a high standard at one stroke upon those classes who have not received any education, and who are still under the governance of their caste panchayats. If we have any real sympathy with these classes we ought to proceed slowly. I am not suggesting that we should encourage them to continue marrying early. I am only pointing out that, situated as these people are, it will only be a merciful consideration to them if, in their case, the marriage age is not fixed beyond 12, at least in the first instance.

The other classes of persons who will be affected by the proposed legislation are the orthodox people, the higher caste Hindus particularly in Madras and Bengal. Now, an important fact to remember in the case of Madras particularly is that which is recorded on page 53 of the Report. The Committee say that :

"Madras is one of the provinces in which the custom of early marriage is least prevalent, a fact which may cause considerable surprise to those who have been impressed by the volume of the opposition proceeding from that part."

That applies not merely to the Brahmins and Kshatriyas, but also to the humbler classes or castes as they are unfortunately called. Even among them early marriages are seldom heard of before the age of 10. So that Madras stands in the fortunate position of not being much afflicted by the evil of marriages being celebrated of girls below ten. We find there the orthodox people also following the practice of marrying their girls before the age of puberty which sets in in some cases in the twelfth year and in the largest number of cases after 12. In only 12 per cent. of cases according to an Appendix given in this Report do girls menstruate before the period of 12. In 88 per cent. of cases they menstruate after the age of 12, some in the 13th, some in the 14th and some in the 15th and some even in the 16th year. The Brahmins, the orthodox people and the higher castes, including non-Brahmins also, marry their daughters just before the age of puberty, between the ages of 10 and 12. Now, this practice has not been productive of those evil results which we all deplore in the case of marriages of tender girls in other provinces. In Madras, though the marriage ceremony is celebrated at the ages of 11, 12 and 13, the actual gauna, when the wife goes to live with the husband, is postponed to the age of 15 or 16. That is why, though the custom of marriages before puberty is said to prevail in Madras almost universally, the evil results of early marriages have been largely absent from the Presidency of Madras. I will read one passage in this connection. It is on page 56 of the Report. It shows what is claimed, and rightly claimed, for this custom, which obtains in Madras under which the marriage takes place before puberty, but the actual living of the husband and the wife together is postponed for a period of 3 or 5 years in some cases. Diwan Bahadur T. R. Ramachandra Aiyar, of the Madras Bar, says :

"In the case of Brahmins, from time immemorial, for the past thousand years, marriages have continued to take place before puberty and consummations after puberty, and the Brahmin community is physically, morally, intellectually and spiritually as good as, if not better than, any other community."

That is a point which the Madras orthodox community press upon the attention of this House. I submit that you have to take into account the custom which has come down among them from a long time. Every system has its advantages and disadvantages. The system of late marriages prevalent in Europe and America has some advantages, but no Member sitting in this House will deny that it has its disadvantages also, which are pressing themselves more and more upon the attention of parents and guardians, of the manhood and womanhood of those countries. I think most Members of the House are aware that the disadvantages are pressing themselves very hard upon the attention of speakers, philosophers, doctors and other persons in those countries. Therefore it would not be wrong on the part of this Assembly if it hastens slowly and legislates cautiously.

If it will allow this custom of marriages about or after the age of twelve to continue and raise the age of consent to fifteen, that would afford a very solid, very substantial, very real protection to girls of tender age; but if marriages after twelve are not banned, if marriages are allowed to take place after twelve, it will enable those who believe in this custom which has come down for ages that girls should be married about the time that they attain puberty, to continue this custom with its concomitant, the postponement of the actual period of consummation for three or five years,—it will enable them to live under the custom and to continue to gain all the advantages which for ages have accrued from them. I venture to think, Sir, that if this House will consider the matter in the cold light of reason, without undue passion or feeling, it will recognise that this custom of marriages about the period of puberty, with the concomitant of the period of consummation being delayed for three or five years, has also a great deal to be said in its favour. I am sure all my European friends and all my Indian friends who have lived in this country are aware that, under this custom that has prevailed in Madras and in several other parts of the country, we have not had the worst evils of early marriages to complain of. I do not claim that there have been no cases of departure from the correct rule, because lapses from the right rule occur in every country, and every reasonable man will make allowance for them. But I claim with great respect and humility that this custom of marriages taking place about twelve and the gauna taking place at fifteen or sixteen has had its good side, that morality has not been adversely affected by it, but on the contrary has reached a high degree, that the happiness of the people, according to the experience of those who have lived under it, on the whole has been as great if not greater than under the system under which marriages take place late. I submit therefore that in their case also it is not unreasonable to ask the Legislature to show consideration for their feelings.

I also submit, Sir, that the amendment I support is prompted by an earnest desire to see that the reform which this legislation aims at should succeed. No one will dispute that for the success of such a measure carrying penal consequences with it the greatest amount of co-operation and public support is needed. I think most of my friends here will agree with me that this legislation will either be worked rigidly or will not be worked. If it is enforced rigidly, it will lead to much evil in many cases, and people will be unwilling to start prosecutions and to support them. It will be likely therefore by its very severity to fail in its object. If on the other hand the age is fixed at twelve and if the people's sympathies are enlisted, the largest measure of co-operation is likely to be secured by the educative propaganda, which the Age of Consent Committee have recommended and which I very strongly support, to be carried on throughout the country, through the panchayats and other bodies for educating the people in the evils of the present system. If we shall ask them to operate in popularising a moderate measure, the chances are that we shall get the largest measure of co-operation from the public. I submit, Sir, marriageable age to the extent that is desired, but if the age is fixed at fourteen, and if a man, because he has married or allowed his son or grandson who has officiated at such a marriage, are to be prosecuted and imprisoned or fined, then the result will be that there will be a very strong agitation against the measure; and, Sir, as often happens in such cases, those who will oppose the measure will probably get more support than those who will be in favour of it. In the result, in many places it will be urged that the Legislature and the Government had interfered with the personal law of the people by this legislation. It is not a question in a case like this of a majority of people holding one view and a minority holding another view: it is a question of a personal law. If I have inherited a personal law, I am entitled not only under this Government but under all civilised Governments to be protected in the exercise of my personal law so long as it does not offend against morality, and I submit therefore that, even if there is a large volume of public opinion in favour of the higher age of fourteen, or even of fifteen or sixteen, which some of my friends have advocated, the Legislature will not be right in the existing circumstances in laying down that age of fourteen or any higher age as the age below which a marriage will carry penal consequences. I submit, the Legislature is only justified in fixing such an age as is likely to meet with general support. We should also remember that this is not the last time that the Legislature is asked to deal with a social question like this. The Legislature, I expect, will be enlarged, and will be much more representative of the people than it is today when the further reforms come into effect a year hence or so. That Legislature which will represent all classes and communities of the people in a larger measure than this Legislature does, will be better able to take up a question like this and to amend the Act if the united sense of the representatives of the people leads them to think that it should be amended. Two years or four years or six years is not a long period in the history of a country. While we secure protection to children up to the age of twelve, the question of raising the age above twelve can, I submit, with reason be left to the discretion and sense of duty of the Legislature which will succeed this Legislature. I therefore think, Sir, that no wrong will accrue even to the cause of social reform. On the contrary, the cause of social reform stands to gain by public sympathy, by the sympathy of the largest number of people being secured in favour of this reform. That sympathy is much more likely to be secured if the age of twelve is substituted for the age of fourteen in the section which we are discussing, and for that reason I very strongly urge that the amendment of my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha should be accepted.

Now along with this the only other matter to which I have invited attention is the need of a large measure of education. So long as the people remain steeped in ignorance as they are at present, to inflict a measure like this upon them—I submit it will be nothing but an infliction—will certainly give rise to strong feelings, and we ought to place ourselves, the Members of this Assembly, in the position of the men who will be affected by it. I have mentioned two classes, Sir, the orthodox class and the backward classes. Among the orthodox class the feeling is strong that their personal law is being interfered with. That feeling will rankle in their minds.

They will carry on agitation against it and we should not treat that agitation lightly. It is not given to any Member representing a popular constituency to say that he does not care what opinions they entertain. If he thinks so, he had better sit at home and not undertake to represent the people. Those who have undertaken to represent the people have to remember that, among those whom they represent, there are various classes and grades of people, at different stages of progress, and they ought to be tender in considering the sentiments of them all. Those who hold the orthodox belief are as genuine, as honest, as sincere, as any Member of this Assembly. We have no right to disregard their personal feelings and opinions. Those who are in the backward classes are in a much more pitiable condition. They have not received the benefit of education. To a very large extent they live in an unprotected state of society. Their rights are at present disregarded; in fact, they are supposed to possess very few rights. Therefore, if they have, according to a custom which has come down from ages, married their girls at tender ages for reasons which have commended themselves best to their communities, I submit that, while we are justified in asking them to raise the marriage age to a certain standard, we are not justified in proposing too high a step. It will be a very difficult thing for them to accept that high standard at once. And, Sir, bearing in mind the circumstances which exist in the country, the absence of a birth register for a number of years, the finding out of the ages of the girls will be a matter of great difficulty. The Age of Consent Committee also draw attention to this fact. In paragraph 44, page 20, they say :

"The difficulty in ascertaining the age of the girl is another impediment to the efficient working of the law. Excepting the literate classes, few people can give the correct age of the girl; and when cases come to court, the oral evidence of the witnesses regarding age is likely to be uncertain. The registration of births, excepting in a few places, is defective, particularly in rural areas. It is not certain that all births are registered; the name of the child does not appear in the register; and there is no sequence of birth given regarding the particular child entered therein. All these things tend to make the ascertainment of the age of the child difficult and uncertain. No doubt, medical evidence and X-ray apparatus may help to overcome these difficulties, but doctors often differ."

They speak of the X-ray apparatus being resorted to, but even this apparatus, should the Court think it fit to subject a girl to it, does not ensure a determination of the exact age.

Now, Sir, I submit that, in view of these difficulties, a law like this which makes it penal for anybody to marry before the age fixed by law, will be very hard in its operation if it is put into effect. On the other hand, if the public sympathy is ensured and enlisted, it will be quite easy, in the course of the next few years, to get the ideas established in the minds of the people that marriages up to the age of 12 are prohibited, and that girls should not be married until they have completed their twelfth year. This, I submit, will be a great advance, and in the totality of the circumstances existing in this country, I very earnestly commend the amendment of my friend to the Members of this Assembly.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I propose to say only a very few words at this juncture in the debate in order very concisely to explain why the Government support the age proposed in the Bill. It will, of course, be quite apparent, and that obvious fact has been reflected in the discussions on this clause, that the age fixed in the Bill is a matter of the most vital importance to the Bill. The age adopted by the Select Committee was adopted after very careful consideration. Honourable Members will observe that in the Report of the Select Committee the matter was dealt with in the following terms :

"For girls we considered the ages of eleven, twelve and fourteen, and finally, came to the conclusion that we should adopt the age of fourteen. We recognise that these ages will be regarded by many people, whose opinion is entitled to great weight, as being too high; but we also recognise that there is a strong body of opinion, particularly among those who advocate social reform, which will not willingly accept any lower age."

That opinion was confirmed in stronger words in the Report of the second Select Committee which said :

"The Committee, however, were emphatically of opinion that any such reduction would nullify the whole object of the Bill."

The same views have been strongly expressed in the report of the Age of Consent Committee after a very careful examination of the whole question.

Now, Sir, the case for reducing the age from that proposed in the Bill could not, I think, have been more persuasively or more powerfully argued than it has been argued by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. I cannot follow the Honourable Pandit in his comprehensive and learned argument, and I propose to deal only with a few points which seem to me to be the salient points. The Honourable Pandit emphasised very strongly that when, for the first time, you introduce penal legislation for a thing which hitherto has been exempt from penal legislation, very great caution is necessary. Now, I submit that a very great deal of caution has been exercised in the preliminary point of the age proposed in the Bill. The Honourable Pandit, with justification, emphasised the necessity for caution for not making too precipitate an advance. That has been recognised and not only in respect of the age. I would invite the attention of the House to the fact that this consideration has been given full effect to in the nature of the penalties proposed. It has been given effect to in such provisions as that in the case of a fine inflicted under clause 3 of the Bill, the Court shall not be empowered to impose imprisonment as an alternative penalty. In particular, it has been recognised in the careful provisions regarding the jurisdiction of the Courts which shall have power to deal with these cases. It has been recognised in the very strict provision for preliminary inquiry, and so forth. The Criticism has, indeed, been made in many quarters that these safeguards are so extreme that they will go a great way to make the Bill ineffective. I am not prepared to accept that conclusion myself, but I do think it is a very strong indication that the Honourable Pandit's point for the necessity of caution in the introduction of penal legislation has been very fully considered and been very effectively carried out. (Applause.) Another point on which the Honourable Pandit laid emphasis was the long intervals at which the age of consent has been modified in the Indian Penal Code, from 1860 to 1925. That, Sir, is perfectly true. It is perfectly true and I think the Honourable and learned Pandit is aware that that very fact has been the ground of very strong attacks upon the Government. I, myself, have been an advocate, and incurred much criticism therefor, of caution. But I do not think that, having regard to the present state of public opinion in India—I do not suppose the Honourable Pandit himself would argue that—the long intervals which have occurred in the past ought in future to be interposed between the various stages of the promotion of social reform by legislation. I would suggest,—it is at any rate my own view of the matter,—that, even in the course of the last four or five years, there has been so material a change in public opinion, so great an awakening of the public conscience in these matters, that, realising as we must, that in order to bring legislation of this kind into full practical effect, there must be a large body of public opinion behind it—I would suggest that during the last four or five years, there has been a sufficient awakening of the public conscience, a sufficient advance in public opinion to justify the Honourable Mover of this Bill in asking the House to accept his proposed legislation. I do not desire to detain the House at any further length. The issues which have been raised on this particular point of the age to be accepted in the Bill have been discussed at very great length, and I restrict myself, as I say, to touching on only one or two salient points which persuade me at any rate that it would be unwise to change the quite avowed compromise which finds its place in the Bill as it stands.

[Sir James Crerar.]

Several Honourable Members : The question may be now put.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the question be now put".

The motion was adopted.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, I should like to say a few words in reply. If you think it is not necessary, I shall sit down.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is entitled to say whether he supports the amendments or opposes them.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : What becomes of my amendment ? I support it.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I am opposing all the amendments. While I appreciate the motives, which the Honourable Members who have tabled these amendments have in their minds, while I am perfectly convinced that they think that it is in the best interests of the community that they propose these amendments, I am very sorry that I am unable to accept any of these amendments.

Mr. President : The question is :

"In clause 2 (a), for the word 'fourteen' the word 'eleven' be substituted".

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill, for the word ‘ fourteen ’ the word ‘ sixteen ’ be substituted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : We now come back to the original motion. The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill ”.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the following amendment :

“ That for sub-clause (b) of clause 2 of the Bill the following be substituted :
‘ child marriage ’ means the lawful living together under some recognised ceremony or declaration, as man and wife of parties of whom either is a ‘ child ’, but does not include the marriage sacrament as distinct from consummation of a girl not under ten years of age ’.”

I consider it may duty to place this definitely before the House. The House has just accepted the age of fourteen as the minimum statutory age of marriage and I consider that it is the duty of this House to define what exactly is meant by marriage, because whatever may be the case in other countries, here we do understand the word marriage in more senses than one. In the Madras Presidency to which I have the honour to belong, we generally, especially the Hindus, mean by the word marriage what we call in Sanskrit the Vivaha Samskara or the sacrament of marriage, and the marriage is not followed by consummation for a number of years. Therefore it would be quite open to say that a girl is married or had her marriage performed at 12 or 13 ; while another may say that the girl was not married at 12 or 13, but only had her marriage sacrament or Vivaha Samskara performed at that age. Therefore, Sir, instead of going to the law courts, and leaving it to the Judge to decide what the meaning of marriage is, I think it is better to decide here once and for all what marriage means ; and my own humble submission is that marriage means some ceremony on or immediately after that date leading to the lawful living together as man and wife of parties either of whom is a child, but should not include the marriage sacrament as distinct from consummation ; and if that be so defined I would submit that marriage sacrament as a sacrament must be exempted ; and my submission is for two reasons : firstly, and I attach the greatest weight to that reason and I beg of all Honourable Members of this House to give their most serious consideration to it, this House has no right, this Government has no right, absolutely no right whatever to interfere in the religious sacrament of any class of His Majesty's subjects ; the sacrament may be sane or insane according to the view of some ; but in the sacramental portion of it, in the religious portion of it, neither Government nor this House has any right to interfere ; and if I or the community to which I belong are so stupid as to follow a bad custom, it is open to others to go and persuade us to go back on it ; but this House and the Government cannot legislatively, through a penal law, tell that community that they have no right to follow a certain sacrament. That, Sir, is my first and strongest reason, that this Government or this House has no right to interfere with a purely religious sacramental portion of marriage as performed by a Muhammadan, Hindu, Christian or any other subject of His Majesty. Secondly, on what I call the rational ground, even if this Government or this House had the right, which they

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The Punjab Government has said.....
(Interruptions from Honourable Members). I belong to the same province to which the Honourable Advocate General belongs, and if I have not got the same amount of courage and grit as he has, at least I can follow in his footsteps and ignore these interruptions. Sir, what objection can there be to an amendment like this I fail to understand, unless as I have said, people are swayed away by feelings of their own importance ; and I think in a House like this, where reason is not always.....

Mr. President : Order, order : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to cast aspersions on the House.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : In a House like this I do not wish to say more than this, that I think my amendment will commend itself to the approval of all reasonable men.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : After listening to the trend of the debate, I am convinced that the moving of my amendment* will not be in the national interests and so I request your leave not to move it.

Mr. President : No leave is necessary : the Honourable Member need not move his amendment.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : On a point of order, may I ask, if Mr. Chatterjee does not move his amendment which is similar to Mr. Kelkar's amendment No. 5, what will be the effect on Mr. Kelkar's amendment ? Will he be entitled to move it or not ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The amendment which I wish to move runs as follows :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1932 ’ be substituted.”

The House will see that I desire that the people of the country should be given a sufficient period of time to understand the provisions of this Bill. It has been stated in this House more than once that ours is a very large country, that there are more than thirty crores of people in it, and that there are people of various opinions. Most of them, at least ninety per cent. of them, are absolutely illiterate. It is necessary to give the people sufficient time to be acquainted with the provisions of this penal measure. We are legislating here for people who include hill tribes and men who scarcely ever come to towns. It is for people of all grades that we are legislating, and therefore I do not think that a period of two years will be long enough, and therefore I request that there should be no hurry in enforcing this penal measure. I know that some of my friends are in a great hurry to enforce this measure all at once, but I think that they should be satisfied when this Bill passes into law and they should give reasonable time to people to get acquainted with the provisions of this measure. I do not think that a longer or more elaborate argument is necessary in support of such a simple proposition as I am placing before this House.

* “ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the words and figures ‘ the 1st day of April 1930 ’, the words and figures ‘ the 1st day of January 1931 ’ be substituted.”

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division: Muhammadan Rural) : I do not believe that there is any sense in this amendment simply because my Honourable friend says that he is representing the hill tribes in this Assembly ; he represents a constituency.....

Mr. President : Order, order : what is the Honourable Member doing ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : I am making a speech on the amendment moved, Sir.

Mr. President : He is not in order in making a speech unless he has been called on to do so ; he is now a Front Bencher and ought to behave himself.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I move:

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1931 ’ be substituted.”

My friend, Mr. Belvi has already moved his amendment to prolong the date of operation of this Bill to 1932. He is of course reasonable, but I think I am more reasonable still. A witty friend of mine has described my amendment as a measure of matrimonial moratorium. But I think that there is more of alliteration than of truth in it. But even supposing that it is a kind of moratorium, I think that it is necessary for saving the credit of all concerned—of those who have supported the Bill, and those that have almost come to bankruptcy by having their efforts to get useful amendments made defeated, and also in the interests of the Government, because they have already drawn a very large draft upon their credit with the people by trying to thrust this penal legislation upon them. So I say that, in the interests of all concerned, this little moratorium is necessary. But I think I have got other very good grounds for moving this amendment. In the first place it is a golden mean between two opposite extremes : on the one hand we have here Mr. Sesha Ayyangar who is going to move that the date of operation of this Bill be postponed to 1933 ; and on the other hand I know of certain friends of mine who are so impatient over this Bill that they would like to support the Governor General if he would issue an ordinance and bring the Bill into operation as soon as it is passed here—they are impatient even over the little delay that is provided for in the Bill.

But, Sir, there is another reason of mine for this amendment and that is simply an arithmetical reason. If you look to clause 1 of this Bill as passed by the Select Committee, we find the first section reads :

“ This Act may be called the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1928.”

And the same Select Committee says that it shall come into force on the first day of April 1930. That means that the Select Committee with its own hands is giving a saving period of fifteen months for the operation of the Bill before the Act comes into operation ; and in my amendment I think I am asking for precisely the same period of delay and nothing more. What I am doing is no more than what the Select Committee at one time did intend. This House has, through the proceedings on the Bill, affected and even professed to treat the Select Committee Report as sacrosanct ; and I hope that in this matter at any rate they will treat that Report as sacred and not interfere with its intentions as I have just expressed them, namely, that of giving a period of fifteen months at least before this Act comes into operation.

[Mr. N. C. Kelkar.]

is on the occasion of the Census. Of course, the census will be coming a month or two later than January 31st, but I hope, if I put it to Government, it will be relevant that they will take that occasion to instruct each enumerator to tell each one of the members of the family, when he is going to take the enumeration details from the people in the country, that such and such an Act has been passed already and that they should beware how they contract the marriages of their daughters and sons thereafter. All this knowledge is necessary for the public and for the masses especially in the mofussil, because no one knows what the attitude of the Government and the law courts will be if this Bill is passed and put into operation immediately. There may be judges who may take the view that, once they begin with deterrent punishment, it will be half the battle won. Others may take the view that the law courts may begin with administering the Act in a gentle manner, but the Government have so far expressed no opinion as to what their policy will be in the matter. Therefore, I may assume the worst, and assuming the worst I must say that these 15 months are absolutely necessary for the contents of this Bill to filter down to the masses. For these reasons I say that this amendment should be supported whole-heartedly so that the masses might know all about the provisions of this Bill.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move:

“ That in clause 1, sub-clause (3) for the figures ‘ 1930 ’ the figures ‘ 1933 ’ be substituted.”

I hope, I am not less reasonable than my friends Messrs. Belvi and Kelkar. There is another ground, in addition to the one urged by the previous speakers, in favour of this amendment. I may bring to the notice of the House that, when the Bill was introduced in 1927, the figure “ 1930 ” was inserted in this clause, thereby it can be clearly understood that the Honourable the Mover was really serious in giving at least three years’ time for the Bill to become law after it had been passed.....

Mr. President : He thought it would take three years to pass the Bill !

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I am only adding three years from now and put it as 1933 ; and I adopt also the arguments of my friends Messrs. Belvi and Kelkar. I would also add to them by saying that the principles underlying this Bill, the drastic provisions contained in the Bill and the penalties imposed by the Bill, are so very comprehensive that really three years’ time and somewhat more than that will be necessary for the people to make themselves familiar with the provisions of this Bill so that no one in this country may be taken unawares when this Bill becomes operative. Therefore, I beg to move the amendment.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I move my amendment, Sir ?

Mr. President : Is there any amendment ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Yes, Sir ; the last one.

Mr. President : That is not on this subject. The question is :

“ That in clause 1 (3) for the figures ‘ 1930 ’ the figures ‘ 1933 ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Now, it may be said that the public has had notice owing to the fact that this Bill was hanging fire for the last fifteen months ; but, Sir, I must say that notice of the Bill is not notice of the Act, if I may use a somewhat legal phrase ; and there is very good reason for my saying so. It is not only technically that I am saying it, but there is a very good reason for it. For one year no doubt the people have known that the Sarda Bill was before the Assembly, but people have got a very good idea as to what chances there are for private Bills in this House, and therefore when they came to know simply that there was such a Bill before the Assembly, they did not like to take it very seriously ; and if I may put it perhaps more plainly, I must say that my friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda would have had absolutely no chance of carrying this Bill through if Government had not come to his help and rescue and given him the grace of the necessary days for piloting the Bill through the House.

Now, something has thus happened which is absolutely unprecedented. And how can we expect the people to credit the Government with these intentions to help Mr. Sarda in this matter over this Bill ? They usually suppose or are under the impression that there is absolutely no chance for any lengthy private Bills in this House, and they might have therefore easily rested on their oars, expecting all along that such a lengthy and contested Bill could not be passed in the Assembly with one or two days at best that might be otherwise devoted to it. Therefore, again I say that the notice of this Bill is certainly not the notice of the Act.

Then, looking at it from another point of view, after all, what will be lost if we give the people one year or 15 months to reconcile themselves to the new situation that is created by the Bill ? A lot of propaganda, it is admitted on all hands, will have to be done before people even know that such an Act has come into being and that they must obey the Act. Primarily, I think it is the duty of this Government to carry on all the necessary propaganda for allowing this Bill to filter down to the lowest masses, and I should certainly feel thankful if Government would do for this Bill at least as much propaganda as they did for securing the War Loan. I do expect that they will do even a little more propaganda for this Bill among the masses than they did at the time of securing the War Loan, because certainly this Bill is more important to the public than the War Loan for which they did a good deal of propaganda. Now, what is the ordinary procedure by which people come to know of the Bills that are passed in the Legislature ? These are published in the Government Gazettes. How many people are there in this country who read the Government Gazettes and who can understand the vernacular translation that is made of these Acts in the Government Gazettes ? After all, they have got to go to their own friends and relations to understand what is passing in the country and what is happening in the country, and it is not through the Government Gazette, but through their own friends and relatives, that people will ultimately, in the mofussil at any rate, come to know that such an Act has been passed, and that its penal provisions are so and so and so. Therefore, I say that here is an instance in which very great propaganda is needed, and in the first instance it will be the duty of the Government to carry on this propaganda very effectively so as to educate the people properly. Though I am suggesting the 1st of January 1931, I may in passing refer to one great opportunity which Government will be getting for making this propaganda, and that

- (d) whether Government are prepared now to issue orders extending the benefit to Circle Offices and the Dead Letter Offices under Fundamental Rule 27 with retrospective effect as was done in the case of their co-workers in the Traffic Branches ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) and (d). An inquiry will be made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

BURIAL OF A MOSLEM WATER CARRIER FROM THE NEW DELHI COMBINED HOSPITAL.

199. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that a Moslem water carrier, an employee of the New Delhi Gymkhana, was admitted as an indoor patient in the New Delhi Combined Hospital in June last where he died, and that no arrangements for his burial were made for two days ?

(b) Is it a fact that, during this period, several co-religionists of the deceased approached the Hospital authorities and asked for the dead body but the same was not delivered for two days ?

(c) Will Government please state who was responsible for this delay in the disposal of the dead body ?

(d) Is it a fact that there is no Moslem doctor in this Hospital ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) A Moslem water carrier in the service of the Imperial Delhi Gymkhana Club died on the morning of the 4th June, 1929, in the New Delhi Hospital. It is not a fact that no arrangements were made for his burial for two days. The body was buried at Government expense within 28 hours of death, as neither the Club nor certain co-religionists who had asked to be allowed to make arrangements for burial, did so in time.

(b) No. The co-religionists who offered to bury the body were given permission, but failed to make arrangements.

(c) The answer is apparent from the reply given to parts (a) and (b) of the question.

(d) Yes.

PROPORTION OF MUSLIM OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN CLASS I RAILWAYS.

200. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that on 1st April, 1928, the proportion of Muslim officers to the total number of officers employed in Class I Railways was only 3 per cent. ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the year 1927-28, 96 vacancies of officers were filled on Class I Railways and only 3 of them were given to Muslims as brought out in the statement at page 60 of Railway Board Report on Indian Railways, Volume I ?

(c) Are Government aware that, out of 75 officers attached to the Agency Departments of Class I Railways, there are only two Muslims ?

(d) Are Government aware that in the year 1927-28 the proportion of Muslim officers to the total number of the officers on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway was reduced from 2.4 to 1.6 per cent. ?

Mr. President : The House will now resume discussion of clause 1 of the Child Marriage Bill.

The question is :

“ That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the amendment which I have the honour to move runs as follows :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the words and figures “ the 1st day of April 1930 ” the following be substituted :

“ such day as the Local Government of a Province or Presidency, with the approval of the majority of the elected Members of the Local Council may determine, and in case of centrally administered area, the Governor General with the approval of the elected Members of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly may determine ”.

It would not have been necessary for me to make any speech on this amendment, had it not been that the House has been carried away by its reforming zeal. Be that as it may, I feel it my duty to move this amendment which will at once show to the people at large and also to the world whether certain people or a certain section of the people want legislation in this matter or not. There are various opinions about this Bill and the Bill as passed has hardly even satisfied the zealous supporters of social reform. A handful of men and the heterogeneous representatives of the various sections of our community think that they have a right.....

Mr. President : Order, order. I am afraid I cannot allow the Honourable Member to go into the merits of the Bill. The Honourable Member must confine himself to the amendment before the House, which is that if the Bill is passed, it should come into operation under certain conditions. The Honourable Member cannot go into the question whether the Bill should be passed or not.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am not going into that question, Sir. I am going into the question whether the several provinces of this vast country should have one law ; because we have the opinion of at least one Provincial Government that conditions vary in different parts of the country. In fact India is a vast continent, almost the size of Europe, excluding Russia. If that is so, I think no one here, at least none of my Honourable friends who come from across the seas, will ever think that they can have one law for the whole of Europe. As I have said before, owing to climatic variations and other conditions in India, puberty in different provinces appears at different ages. It has been admitted that this Bill is mainly aimed against pre-puberty marriages. We are not concerned with that, but as I have submitted, conditions vary in different parts of the country and that being so, it would be better if we leave it to the consideration of the people of those particular provinces and the views set forth by the elected Members of their Legislatures. I think no reasonable men can object to this unless they think that they are a superior body of men with superior heads on their shoulders and also a superior right to coerce people of the various provinces. Sir, in this view I am backed by the opinion of certain Provincial Governments. (An Honourable Member : “ No ”) Punjab, if you care to read the Report.....

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 2 (a) of the Bill, for the word ‘ fourteen ’ the word ‘ sixteen ’ be substituted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : We now come back to the original motion. The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill ”.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the following amendment :

“ That for sub-clause (b) of clause 2 of the Bill the following be substituted :

‘ child marriage ’ means the lawful living together under some recognised ceremony or declaration, as man and wife of parties of whom either is a ‘ child ’, but does not include the marriage sacrament as distinct from consummation of a girl not under ten years of age ’.”

‘ I consider it may duty to place this definitely before the House. The House has just accepted the age of fourteen as the minimum statutory age of marriage and I consider that it is the duty of this House to define what exactly is meant by marriage, because whatever may be the case in other countries, here we do understand the word marriage in more senses than one. In the Madras Presidency to which I have the honour to belong, we generally, especially the Hindus, mean by the honour to what we call in Sanskrit the Vivaha Samskara or the word marriage marriage, and the marriage is not followed by consummation for a number of years. Therefore it would be quite open to say that a girl is married or had her marriage performed at 12 or 13 ; while another may say that the girl was not married at 12 or 13, but only had her marriage sacrament or Vivaha Samskara performed at that age. Therefore, Sir, instead of going to the law courts, and leaving it to the Judge to decide what the meaning of marriage is, I think it is better to decide once and for all what marriage means ; and my own humble submission is that marriage means some ceremony on or immediately after that date leading to the lawful living together as man and wife of parties either of whom is a child, but should not include the marriage sacrament as distinct from consummation ; and if that be so defined I would submit that marriage sacrament as a sacrament must be exempted ; and my submission is for two reasons : firstly, and I attach the greatest weight to that reason and I beg of all Honourable Members of this House to give their most serious consideration to it, this House has no right to give their assent to a law which would interfere with the religious sacrament of any class of His Majesty’s subjects ; the Government has no right, absolutely no right whatever to interfere in the religious sacrament of any class of His Majesty’s subjects ; the sacrament may be sane or insane according to the view of some ; but in the sacramental portion of it, in the religious portion of it, neither the Government nor this House has any right to interfere ; and if I or the Government which I belong are so stupid as to follow a bad custom, it is open to others to go and persuade us to go back on it ; but this House and the Government cannot legislatively, through a penal law, tell that community that they have no right to follow a certain sacrament. That, Sir, is my first and strongest reason. That this Government or this House has no right to interfere with a purely religious sacramental portion of marriage as performed by a Muhammadan, Hindu, Christian or any other subject of His Majesty. Secondly, on what I call the rational ground, even if this Government or this House had the right, which they

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I beg to move the amendment standing in my name :

“ That to clause 2 of the Bill the following be added :

‘ (e) ‘ widower ’ means a male who has lost his wedded wife by death ’.

‘ (f) ‘ widow ’ means a female who has lost her wedded husband by death ’.”

This amendment is a consequential amendment to the amendment to clause 4 of which I have given notice and I hope Honourable gentlemen who seem to be in a reforming spirit will accept that amendment to clause 4 when I move it. This amendment.....

Mr. President : The best course for the Honourable Member is to move his amendment when clause 4 is reached.

Mr. B. Das : I will accept that and I shall move it if you give me permission then.

Mr. M. S. Sessa Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I beg to move :

“ That to clause 2 the following be added at the end :

‘ The affidavits of the parents or the guardian or respectable relations of the child, male or female, will be prima facie evidence of the age of the child in question ’.”

L13CPB(LA)

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

This amendment only provides for the machinery of ascertaining the real age of the child in question whenever there is unfortunately a prosecution coming up. Medical experts are clear on the point that it is difficult to fix, with any amount of certainty, the ages between 11 to 16 or 17. This House, having accepted the age of 14, in the case of the girl and the age of 18 in the case of the boy, it becomes really difficult in a prosecution to ascertain with any amount of certainty the ages of the parties concerned. Unfortunately this Bill also provides for the arraigning as accused of those persons who are most competent to speak to the age of the child in question. The parents and guardians will be arraigned as accused in cases laid under this Bill; and it is a well-known principle of criminal jurisprudence that persons arraigned as accused cannot be examined on oath; and the best available testimony would be only the affidavit of the parent or guardian. Now, there might be cases where very respectable relations of the child in question happen to be officials in Simla for instance. It might be very undesirable and perhaps inexpedient to drag them from the giddy heights of Simla to a Court somewhere in Tinnevely and to examine them in the course of the prosecution. In that case, the very position that they occupy in Simla would be prima facie warrant for accepting their affidavits as evidence of the age of the child in question. This would obviate the necessity for examining them on oath. So far as the first two classes are concerned, they are precluded from being examined on oath under the Criminal Procedure Code. So far as the third category of persons is concerned, if they happen to be far away and outside the jurisdiction of the Court, in such cases, the affidavits of those persons should be prima facie evidence as to the age of the child in question. That is why I say, "respectable relations of the child, male or female". I hope the amendment will be acceptable to the House.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I move :

"That to clause 2 of the Bill the following be added :

'The solemnisation of marriage as distinct from consummation, of any girl below fourteen years of age shall not be deemed to be child marriage as defined above.'

Sir, a part of this amendment was covered by Amendment No. 24 moved by Mr. Acharya. But there is another category of cases which is outside the operation of that amendment and that is why I am moving this. In moving this amendment, the same reasoning is adopted, but I would submit a few words. This would afford a reasonable reconciliation of the two opposite schools of thought on this question; and I was wondering as to why it was that the Honourable Mover of this Bill was so insistent upon his Bill, and I find.....

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : On a point of order, Sir.

Mr. President : I have already allowed Mr. Sesha Ayyangar to move this amendment.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : In paragraph 76 of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, as regards the practice that prevails in Ajmer-Merwara, wherefrom the Honourable Mover hails, I find that, soon after marriage is performed, it is a common practice there to lock up the husband and the wife in a room for a night. That no doubt leads to very abnormal and very undesirable results. Being accustomed to that sort of thing in his own place, I thought the Honourable Member was very keen on passing this Bill. But so far as Madras, wherefrom I come, is concerned, I may tell the House that the consummation ceremony is entirely distinct from the marriage sacrament or the betrothal or kanyadhanam as it is called. This fact is borne out by the Report of the Age of Consent Committee itself. In Madras, Sir, we have got a very healthy state of things and that is testified to by the Report of the Committee itself. We are entirely free there from the custom of pre-pubertal congress of the bride and the bridegroom before they are scientifically and medically fit to submit themselves to that operation; and this fact has been commented upon by my Honourable friend and leader Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya this morning. Having fixed the age at 14, I hope the House will take to this amendment kindly and allow it to be passed. That would certainly conciliate a very large section of orthodox opinion which I have the privilege to represent in this House. Sir, in this connection I have to correct a certain statement made by the Honourable the Home Member when he said that he had really behind him the greater section of the people, when he supported this Bill. I would only refer him to one of the opinions which he has got in his hand; I refer to page 61 of Paper No. 3, in which the Collector of Madras has given his opinion. I am only reading, with your permission, two sentences from this :

"I find that not only orthodox and conservative communities object with all the force of which they are capable to the Bill, but moderate enlightened opinion is equally opposed to the root principle of the Bill. Those who have replied (Muslims of Labhai and Rowthar persuasion) also object strongly to the Bill on principle. The proposal for legislation to restrict the marriageable age of boys and girls emanates from a small band of social reformers who to my mind are long ahead of their time and clearly command no genuine following. The possible bad results of the existing system are a far less evil than the vital shock that a reform on these lines would give to the religious conscience of practically the whole of India."

Sir, I submit therefore that at least, so far as Madras is concerned, the mass mind is opposed to this Bill, and the best way of making this Bill workable and of conciliating the orthodox section, would be to accept this amendment which would make the Bill proceed with the least resistance.

The motion was negatived.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 3 stand part of the Bill."

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I beg to move :

"That for clause 3 of the Bill the following be substituted :

'Whoever, being a male above eighteen years of age and below twenty-one, knowingly contracts marriage (a) with a girl aged less than ten shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, (b) with a girl aged between ten and fourteen shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees.'

Sir, in moving this amendment I have virtually adopted the opinion of the House in having fixed the age at fourteen, but I have tried to discriminate by this amendment between two classes of cases. One is, where the girl is aged less than ten. In that case no doubt it requires a heavier punishment than the one which the House would be inclined to give to persons who may marry girls between ten and fourteen, which is less heinous. I want, with the permission of the House, to make some differential treatment between these two classes of cases. One no doubt is a gross case of misbehaviour, but the other is not so heinous, and therefore it is that I propose differential treatment, because it is a question of the offences varying only in matters of degree and there is also one other merit. The second portion of my amendment seeks to produce an excellent educative value also, if you want to make this Bill popular; for example, making it punishable with a lenient punishment would have an educative value which would go far towards conciliating that class of people by dealing with them, in the initial stages of the operation of this Bill, in a sympathetic manner, dealing with them leniently. It is therefore that I move this amendment.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I move :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill, the words ‘ being a male above eighteen years of age and below twenty-one ’ be omitted ”.

I think it is useless to adduce any argument here in this House, constituted as it is. If we are to take a census of the men that come here as representatives of the people, we will find that no less than 40 are nominated, and of the remaining 104 more than 40 belong to communities other than the great Hindu community.

Mr. President : Will you kindly come to the amendment ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The majority of the Members are not Hindus, but if you take into account, the number of Hindus and the number of Muhammadans opposed to this Bill, you will find the number to be higher than the supporters and that most of the supporters who style themselves Hindus have no place in Hindu society.

Mr. President : Including yourself ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : No, Sir, certainly not.

Mr. President : You had better come to the amendment.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I move my amendment, as it is my duty to move it.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the amendment which I wish to move runs as follows :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill for the words ‘ and below twenty-one ’, the word ‘ knowingly ’ be substituted ”.

Now every criminal lawyer will admit that it is necessary in a criminal case to prove the element of intention. A young man may perhaps be led into marrying a girl without knowing that she was less than the prescribed age. In such a case there would be no offence, but in order to make the law precise and clear I move my amendment so that, if a man commits the offence knowingly, wilfully, and deliberately, then only he should be punished. That, Sir, is the main reason I urge in support of my amendment.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, I think the House will perhaps see the reasonableness of the amendment which my Honourable friend, Mr. Belvi, has moved. Just consider the position, Sir, of the boys who are to be married. Most of them are in colleges learning somewhere, and marriages for them are settled by their parents. The boy has to accept the age of the girl with whom he is to be married and all other information given to him either by his parents or by somebody else. It may be that the girl may not be of the age which is required by this law, and yet this boy may believe or may take that information to be true. Under these circumstances, unless there is the word “ knowingly ” there is every danger that the boy will be run in for an offence which he never meant to commit and which he has never intended to commit. To obviate that difficulty and unnecessary prosecution of the boy, this amendment has been moved. I believe the Honourable Mr. Belvi's suggestion will receive careful consideration at the hands of those who want this law to be reasonably administered and to be reasonably understood also. Sir, I support the amendment.

3 P.M.

Mr. President : Will Mr. Kelkar move his amendment ?

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Yes, Sir. I beg to move :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill after the words ‘ twenty-one ’ the words ‘ knowingly or having reason to believe ’ be inserted ”.

Sir, Mr. Belvi's amendment is confined to the word knowingly, and my amendment takes the matter a little further.

The question involved here is a matter of jurisprudence. The prosecution ought to take upon itself the burden of proving that the boy who contracts child marriage must know, in the first instance, that he is doing so. But it will sometimes be difficult for the prosecution to prove that the boy had a positive knowledge that he was contracting child marriage. Therefore, I am making it a little more easy for the prosecution to prove by circumstantial evidence, if not by positive knowledge, that the boy knew that he was contracting a child marriage. It may be sometimes difficult to prove positive knowledge, but it may not be so difficult to prove the circumstances by which it can be brought home to the boy and to the conviction of the Court that the boy had good grounds to believe that he was contracting a child marriage. My amendment, therefore, carries the matter a little beyond Mr. Belvi's amendment and gives the prosecution one more chance to do the same thing by proving, by circumstantial evidence, that the boy knew that he was contracting a child marriage. I think it is an elementary principle of jurisprudence and the burden of proof must be borne by the prosecution itself. Therefore I have inserted the words, “ knowingly or having reason to believe ”.

Mr. E. L. Price : It does not make English.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : The accuracy of English is left to you, the English people; we are not concerned with it. It is quite enough for our purpose if we make our meaning quite clear. I will leave the matter there. Everybody knows what I mean by my amendment. I hope the House will not ride rough-shod over these minor amendments and will be in a mood to accept at least this amendment.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I also wish to support this amendment of Mr. Belvi. I prefer the amendment of Mr. Belvi to the amendment of Mr. Kelkar.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member opposes the amendment of Mr. Kelkar and supports the amendment of Mr. Belvi.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Yes, Sir. I support the amendment of Mr. Belvi because I think it is preferable to the amendment of Mr. Kelkar. My reasons for doing so are that the circumstances in which most of our boys are married are such that there must be some safeguards left in order to protect them from the operation of this clause. Some of the students are, at the time of their marriage, reading in schools and colleges and in most of such cases their parents or their guardians arrange marriage on their behalf and it is not possible for the boys to know exactly the age of the girls. So, if a safeguard is inserted here, it will be statutory, and put upon the prosecution the onus of proving that the boy "knowingly" contracted a child marriage, and that he knew the age of the girl. It is very necessary to put in a safeguard like that, and I do not think my Honourable friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, or the Government will have any objection to putting a clause like that.

Mr. President : How do you know ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, I have only one or two words to say in regard to these amendments. In the first instance, with regard to Mr. Kelkar's amendment, I share the difficulty which has been felt in some quarters of the House as to what the words "knowingly or having reason to believe" refer to. It seems to me that it hangs entirely in the air and it would be a very difficult matter for construction. Apart from that, when we come to the question of the insertion of the word "knowingly", I feel myself that, in the circumstances of each case, in regard to any person who comes into a court on a charge under this Bill, the burden of proof should lie upon him.

Mr. E. L. Price : Hear, hear.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is the Honourable the Home Member aware, that bridegrooms generally are not allowed to see the bride till after the marriage ? That is the social custom of the orthodox Hindus at least, who have not gone out of the pale of orthodoxy.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I am sorry, Sir, I cannot accept these amendments. I cannot accept Mr. Kelkar's amendment because it throws on the prosecution the impossible burden of proving whether the accused "knowingly" did it or whether he had reason to believe it. Consequently, I cannot accept it.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 3 of the Bill after the words 'twenty-one' the words 'knowingly or having reason to believe' be inserted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 3 of the Bill for the words 'and below twenty-one', the word 'knowingly' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I do not move my amendment No. 36.*

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 3 of the Bill for the word 'thousand' the word 'hundred' be substituted."

Sir, I do not understand the reason that led the Honourable Mover of this Bill to fix the fine at rupees one thousand, except that it was his own salary when he was in judicial service. There are people who draw less than Rs. 100, and I appeal to the Honourable Mover to accept this amendment.

* "That in clause 3 of the Bill after the words 'contracts a child marriage' the words 'or the guardian responsible for such child marriage' be inserted."

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I do not move my amendments Nos. 38* and 39†.

Mr. N. O. Kelkar : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill for the words ‘ one thousand rupees ’ the words ‘ two hundred and fifty rupees ’ be substituted ”.

This clause applies to persons who are of very early age in life. A man who is over 18 and below 21 is generally a man who has no means of his own and he is perhaps being more sinned against than he is a sinner. If he is punished with a fine of Rs. 1,000, perhaps he will be ruined all his life because he is just on the threshold of his life. Economically he cannot be self-supporting at the time when the punishment is sought to be inflicted upon him. Therefore I do not want that the maximum punishment should be so heavy as is prescribed in the Bill, and I want to make the punishment as light as possible and reduce it to Rs. 250.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I do not want to move my amendment No. 41.‡

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the word ‘ thousand ’, the word ‘ hundred ’ be substituted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the words ‘ one thousand rupees ’, the words ‘ two hundred and fifty rupees ’ be substituted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Clause 3 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 4. Mr. Acharya :

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That clause 4 of the Bill be omitted ”.

Sir, this clause refers to punishment with respect to a male above twenty one years of age. I thought that—perhaps my lawyer friends would know better—I thought that in the eye of law all persons above the age of 18 were accepted to be major and they were held to be responsible for whatever act they did. Therefore, I think for the first time in this Bill a distinction is sought to be drawn between majors between the ages of 18 and 21 and those above the age of 21. A higher punishment is sought to be imposed on those who are above 21 years of age, and it seems to me that that is a distinction which is not very reasonable. Of course in awarding fine the Magistrate will take care whether he should impose a low fine or a heavy fine according to the age and circumstances of the supposed culprit. In any case imprisonment of this kind seems to be awful and it may be necessary, according to some people, to pass this into law ; but those who want the law to work smoothly will consider how far it is desirable to send them to jail and make heroes of them. Therefore in that view I move

* “ That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the words ‘ one thousand rupees ’, the words ‘ two hundred rupees ’ be substituted.”

† “ That in clause 3 of the Bill, for the words ‘ one thousand rupees ’, the words ‘ two hundred rupees ’ be substituted.”

‡ “ In clause 3 for the words ‘ one thousand ’ the words ‘ five hundred ’ be substituted.”

that clause 4 of the Bill be omitted in the interest of humanity and of wisdom.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 4 of the Bill be omitted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That for clause 4 of the Bill the following be substituted :

‘ Whoever, being a male above twenty-one years of age, contracts a marriage (a) with a girl less than eight shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, (b) with a girl aged between eight and fourteen shall be punishable with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees ’.”

In moving this amendment, I beg to observe that, though I am against imprisonment being given in these cases, yet in this amendment I support imprisonment in the case of marriages with girls less than eight because I consider that to be a heinous offence. Therefore, in that case, I provide for imprisonment which may extend to one month. But in the latter category of cases I have suggested only a fine of two hundred rupees, because, as I said, some preferential treatment is necessary in considering this class of cases. The House will also consider that it will take some time for the law to diffuse into the villages, and until that stage is reached, the House must take care to see that the law must be known throughout the length and breadth of the country, after which we may provide for greater punishment for this class of cases. I submit that this amendment may be accepted.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, my previous motion having been negatived, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 4, the words ‘ with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or ’ be omitted ”.

I move this only with the view of saying that, at least in the beginning of the operation of this Act, let us take care to see that we do not visit offenders with any kind of imprisonment. With that view I beg to move it.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That to clause 4 of the Bill the following sub-clause be added :

‘ (a) Whoever being a widower above forty years of age marries any woman who is not a widow shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both ’.”

Sir, this amendment of mine is the acid test of the reformers. Sir, I have known Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda for many years ; I knew him when he introduced his Bill and wanted to confine the marriage of Hindu children to 12. Since he has been thrown into the good company of Sir James Crerar and his following, my friend the Rai Sahib has completely changed and he is now a mad reformer.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should confine himself to the amendment.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, this Bill wants to prevent early widowhood, but what about the young girls who will become widows even when they are married at the age of 14? What will happen when men of 40, 50, 60 and even 70 are married to young girls of 11? I think everybody in this House is aware of that particular incident in Benares when an old man of 72 married a young girl of 11, and all the men of India were condemning the action of that particular man. I know the Muslims have no such prohibition to the marriage of widows in their society. But I am speaking here not as a Hindu but as a non-Muhammadan Indian, because I am sorry to find that this Bill of my Honourable friend has roused a lot of communal feeling in this House. I saw similar feeling exhibited in this House when the Resolution about reforms for the North West Frontier Province was discussed here, and this Bill has evoked similar communal feeling here (Cries of "No, no"). That is my opinion and my view and I stand by my opinion.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member speak to the amendment?

Mr. Das : Sir, although there is a Widow Re-Marriage Act, that does not help the widows. I am not in a position to bring widows to the gate of the Assembly Chamber to convince Members of their case. But I may say that it is an injustice to young girls to be forced to marry a man who is above 40 years. Any man above 40 years, if he enters matrimony, must seek widows.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What was your age when you married?

Mr. B. Das : My age was 38 when I married; and had I been above 40 I would have married a widow.

An Honourable Member : You cannot get widows.

Mr. B. Das : There are enough widows; you have only to look at the Report and the list in which my friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava and my friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub have classified the widows. I hope the reformers will come and give their full support, and I know Government will support this amendment because their predecessors were parties to the Widow Re-Marriage Act. Sir, if this House accepts this amendment of mine, it will have to accept the consequential amendments which I have put down on the paper but about which I did not speak, about the definition of widow and widower. The reason for my amendment is this: that we are living in modern days and we find that the school of free love has sprung up. Probably there is nobody on this side of the House who belongs to the school of free love; but there may be somebody on that side of the House who may belong to that school of free love.....

Mr. President : What has that got to do with the amendment?

Mr. Das : All of us are aware of the commotion created by Miss Pankhurst about the school of free love.....

Mr. President : Order, order: the Honourable Member is wholly irrelevant.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I only want to say this. I think somebody might question what widow and widower means, and for that purpose I wanted to define those words. That is all. I commend my amendment to the support of the House, especially the reformers.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : On a point of order, Sir, is this amendment within the scope of the Bill?

Mr. President : The question is:

"That to clause 4 of the Bill the following sub-clause be added:

"(a) Whoever being a widower above forty years of age marries any woman who is not a widow shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both."

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is:

"That clause 5 stand part of the Bill."

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I am not moving my amendment*.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I move:

"That clause 5 be omitted."

Clause 5 reads thus:

"Whoever performs, conducts or directs any child marriage shall be punishable with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both, unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage."

Sir, I beg to mention to the House that this is rather a serious amendment. What the clause aims at is to cast the net rather too wide

* "That clause 5 of the Bill be omitted."

[Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar.]

and to bring under the operation of this Bill all persons who perform, conduct or direct any child marriage. In fact, these words "perform, conduct or direct" are not defined in the Bill. So these are very indefinite and comprehensive words, which, if only the blackmailer chooses to do so, will enable him to bring under the category of this section all sorts of persons as offending against this section. That is the first ground. Secondly, it widens the scope of the Bill somewhat unnecessarily, because what the House seeks in enacting this measure is to prevent the evils which the House wants to set right; but why cast the net too wide and bring in persons who, after all, may not have offended really against this law? So that it would be unnecessarily widening the scope of the Bill. It would also give rise to a multiplicity of criminal proceedings against many persons. Already the House has definitely set its face on the age 14, and as I have already said, the age being somewhat difficult even for medical experts to determine, I already visualise a great vista of perjury. Why should you unnecessarily and vexatiously multiply criminal proceedings against people who may be brought under this Act? It also places a great premium on blackmailers. There may be very many prosecutions unnecessarily undertaken only with a view to blackmail. It also places people under a great obvious disadvantage by the addition of this clause. For these reasons, Sir, I move the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 5 be omitted".

The motion was negatived.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Sir, I beg to move :

"That for clause 5 of the Bill the following be substituted :

'5. Whoever knowingly or having reason to believe, performs or conducts or directs any child marriage shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.'

Sir, this is the next best thing I am trying to get after the rejection of the last amendment. The Bill seeks to throw the net rather too wide, in my opinion. This clause obviously applies to priests and such other people who take part in a marriage. Now, the question is, should not the moloch of this Bill be content with the victims of the boy, his parents or guardians, etc.? Must it necessarily victimise also an innocent priest who is called in to officiate at a ceremony when he is not supposed to know exactly what the age of the girl is? I think this is very unfair to the priests and other people who take part in the marriage. Under this section also managers who are entrusted with the functions and duties of carrying out the preparations for the marriage will come in. The question is whether they should be penalised. After the rejection of the last amendment, I am seeking to make it a little more easy for the priests and others who will be taking part in a marriage. I want to take away the provision about the substantive punishment and I want to substitute only a fine up to Rs. 500. In deserving cases that should be deterrent enough and therefore I move my amendment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in clause 5 of the Bill, after the word 'Whoever', the words 'knowing or having reason to believe that either of the contracting parties to a marriage is a child' be inserted."

This amendment and the amendment of my friend Mr. Kelkar have something in common but his amendment is more general, whereas in the amendment moved by me the House will see that the knowledge or reason to believe, which are to be proved, have reference to the fact whether either of the contracting parties to a marriage is a child or not. In this connection, I would submit that I agree that those who perform, conduct or direct any child marriage should come within the ambit of the law and should not be allowed to go scot free, because, in a proper case, it may be that the priest or the Qazi himself may have instigated the marriage or may have conducted or directed it with the full knowledge that either of the contracting parties to the marriage was a child. But my experience shows that, in Hindu marriages, it is not the family priest alone who conducts or directs the marriage. Generally speaking, in a marriage there are four or five people who conduct or direct the marriage operations. Among the Muhammadans also, who observe purdah, more strictly than the Hindus, the Qazi comes in and he does not see the face of the wife. He may be any person, and it is not necessary that a particular Qazi or a family Qazi, if there is one, should be called in. According to Muhammadan law every person is competent to celebrate a marriage; similarly, among Hindus also any Brahmin or set of Brahmins can celebrate the marriage. It may happen that the family priest of the bridegroom may not be taken where the marriage is celebrated, and even if he is taken, the family priest of the girl may not know the age of the girl, and in respectable families who even now observe purdah, the family priest of the bridegroom is not supposed to know the age of the girl. Under these circumstances, I think, if you do not insert these words, the law will be laying the net rather too wide. Moreover, it is an accepted canon of criminal law that the burden of proving "knowing or having reason to believe" lies on the prosecution.

In regard to clauses 3 and 4 and the next clause 6, I can understand that the boy who is above the age of 18 and below, is supposed to know the age of the girl, whereas a priest who may be unconnected with the family is not supposed to know the age of the girl. Under these circumstances, I submit that these words should be inserted, especially when the words "conducts or directs" are not defined. Further, under the law of abetment, intention or knowledge has to be found. Under section 107 of the Indian Penal Code a person is said to abet who instigates, or enters into a conspiracy or intentionally aids. In the present clause the element of knowledge or having reason to believe is absolutely wanting. It may be said on the other side that the last words of the clause, "unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage" give the men some sort of protection. When the Bill was in the Select Committee I raised an objection and asked that a positive knowledge or reason to believe might be required to be proved, but it was not accepted and these words were inserted. That is why I have written in my minute of dissent that the words I have recommended should be inserted. The accepted canons of criminal law will be offended against if, in this case, the burden of proof is thrown upon an innocent man. I therefore move that these words be inserted.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I beg to move :

"That in clause 5 of the Bill for the words 'performs, conducts or directs' the words 'is actually instrumental in bringing about' be substituted".

My reason for moving this amendment is this. The words here are, "Whoever performs, conducts or directs". Now, in the performance of a marriage—my Honourable friend behind me expressed a pious hope, let them all go to jail—there are at least half a dozen priests officiating at these functions. (An Honourable Member : "Special jails will have to be built".) Besides, I do not know what is the custom in the Bombay Presidency ; at least my reformer friends in Bengal will bear me out, there is a ceremony called the "Chanlatola"—at least I hope the Honourable the Law Member knows it.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter : It is no part of the marriage ceremony.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : How are we to discriminate what is part of the marriage ceremony and what is not when it takes place at the same time and at the same place, while mantras are recited. (An Honourable Member : "Not the same house and not the same place".) Sometimes the bridegroom is taken from this place to that place, and that is part of the marriage. And even the barber who is there with only a jar of water can be convicted according to my Honourable friend. Many of my friends have no experience of village life, but I have ample experience of it, and also I have some glimpse of the life lived in the former metropolis of India. Formerly bridegrooms used to be carried in palanquins. The palanquin-bearers can also be said to "perform" because they take the bridegroom to the bride's place and bring him back to his own house. All these things form part of the marriage and they are not separable. If they are separable, we ought not to have in the Bill "Whoever performs, directs or conducts", but those words are there. "Directs". What is meant by directing ? I may say, "Get your son married" and that is directing. There is village opinion, there is public opinion in the society which may say, "You ought to marry your girl or son". That is also directing. So, instead of having such clumsy wording, I have put down, following in the footsteps of the reformers whose Veda is the Age of Consent Committee's Report,—I have put down in unambiguous language the real intention of the section, by substituting the words "is actually instrumental in bringing about". Then he cannot but be the guardian or the father.

Then, again, in Boubhat ceremony hundreds of people are invited ; that is part of the marriage also, and any one taking part in that dinner or in the dinner which is given on the day of marriage, are liable to be prosecuted. Again, you have the asirbad ceremony before the actual marriage takes place. Therefore, I submit that the clause should be more clear and unambiguous, if it is really intended to prosecute the people who are really responsible for child marriages. Let them be prosecuted and punished, and for that purpose I have made it clear by my amendment.

Mr. M. S. Aney : When I was reading this Bill, I became convinced that the members of the Select Committee were more concerned with the question of fixing the age than with anything that they might draft in the Bill. They were simply satisfied when they fixed a certain age, and after that was done, the other matters which were incorporated in the Bill were not matters for serious consideration to them.

As my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt has put it, it is perfectly true that, so far as the Hindu marriage is concerned, it consists of more than one ceremony beginning with the Vagdan ceremony, which begins just before the actual marriage takes place, and ending with the Barat ceremony when the girl is taken to the house of the bridegroom. There are five or six ceremonies, and we do not know which is the ceremony intended by this Bill in this clause ? (An Honourable Member : "Any one would do.") (Another Honourable Member : "All.") (An Honourable Member : "Even dinner ?") Has my Honourable friend any idea of how many persons are invited for each of these ceremonies ? (An Honourable Member : "You need not invite them all"). A number of persons are invited for witnessing the Vagdan ceremony and they pronounce their blessing. It is their duty to pronounce their blessing. Are they to be supposed to have taken part in the conduct of that marriage ? (An Honourable Member : "No.") How do you say "No" ? Was it not possible for you to find out a language that... (An Honourable Member : "What word should be used ?") (An Honourable Member : "The words are clear.") They conduct the ceremony on account of having chanted some mantras and can that ceremony be said not to have been conducted by them at all ? In fact, it is the Brahmins who conduct the ceremony by reciting mantras, and you cannot say they are not conducting the ceremony. (An Honourable Member : "They are conducting.") According to the intention of the clause, the ceremony should be one which is essential for the validity of the marriage, or one which will make a marriage irrevocable. If so, you ought to have explicitly stated it and it is not a thing which can be understood by using the general word "marriage". Therefore, by keeping the words so vague, you are involving a number of persons who could not be expected to know the age of the girl or of the bridegroom. Any one of them could be brought within the category of offenders under this clause, particularly because the word "marriage" is not defined. When an Honourable Member tried to make a distinction between betrothal and marriage, he was ridiculed by the House, and it was said that the meaning of the word marriage was obvious. But many persons do not know what the marriage of a Hindu means and what the marriage of a Mussalman means. Each one has an idea of marriage in his own mind according to his own conception. Therefore, I really feel that some words at least, which would require knowledge, on the part of those persons who conduct or perform or take any part in any marriage, of the ages of the bridegroom and the bride, must be added. From that point of view, the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava seems to be a very eminently reasonable proposition, and the House should see that it is accepted.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That for clause 5 of the Bill the following be substituted :

'5. Whoever knowingly or having reason to believe, performs or conducts or directs any child marriage shall be punishable with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 5 of the Bill, for the words ‘ performs, conducts or directs ’ the words ‘ is actually instrumental in bringing about ’ be substituted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 5 of the Bill after the word ‘ whoever ’ the words ‘ knowing or having reason to believe that either of the contracting parties to a marriage is a child ’ be inserted.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.

(The Honourable Member was absent.)

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do not think I should move any of the amendments in the present mood of the House. (The Honourable Member remained seated while speaking.)

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member get up and speak ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do not want to move any of my amendments, except one.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I move :

“ That in clause 5, the words ‘ unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage ’ be omitted ”.

The absurdity of this clause is apparent. Just now we have been fighting for the fact that the onus must lie on the prosecution to prove. That fell through just now. The clause as it stands represents an abnormal state of things of throwing the onus on the accused ; and I do hope that the House, even in its present mood, will accept this amendment at least.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I do not propose to move amendment No. 64*.

Clause 5 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 6 stand part of the Bill ”.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : I am not moving my amendment†.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I move :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill the words ‘ or permits it to be solemnised, or negligently fails to prevent it from being solemnised ’ be omitted ”.

I submit that these words have been introduced negligently, not knowing what would be their consequences, by those who are responsible for drafting this Bill. Little need be said about their drafting skill. In order that the House may appreciate the meaning of my amendment, I would read clause 6 :

“ Where a minor contracts a child marriage, any person having charge of the minor, whether as parent or guardian or in any other capacity, lawful or unlawful, who does any act to promote the marriage or permits it to be solemnised, etc., etc.”

I know people are punished for words which are defamatory or seditious, but here you want to penalise other words. I was not aware up till now that any other words were penal. Of course genius has grown ! The enactment is clumsily worded and no sensible man will credit you with intelligence or common sense.....

* “ That in clause 5 of the Bill, the words ‘ unless he proves that he had reason to believe that the marriage was not a child marriage ’ be omitted.”

† “ That clause 6 of the Bill be omitted.”

Mr. President : What have I got to do with it ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : You might have ruled this out. Although it is not within the four corners of the Standing Orders, the President has got inherent powers. I hope, Sir, the House will accept the amendment I have moved.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I beg to move :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill the words ‘ or negligently fail to prevent it from being solemnised ’ be omitted ”.

There is a difference between this amendment and the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. My amendment is more restricted in its scope. Proviso 2 to the clause reads thus :

“ For the purposes of this section, it shall be presumed, unless and until the contrary is proved, that, where a minor has contracted a child marriage, the person having charge of such minor has negligently failed to prevent the marriage from being solemnised.”

The upshot of this provision is that the burden of proving that a parent or guardian has negligently failed to solemnise the marriage will be always thrown on the accused. The words “ negligently failed to prevent the marriage from being solemnised ” are too vague. They do not convey any special significance to the parent or guardian whose want of act is sought to be controlled. It may happen that there may be a dispute between the father and mother of the boy or the girl and one of them may agree to the marriage and the other may not. It may happen that one of them succeeds in getting the boy or girl married. The burden will be on the accused. The accused will not be able to show that he did his very best to prevent it. After all, we know how the defence evidence in criminal cases is treated. Then again it may happen that the father is not in his house. He might have gone away to some other town or village or he may have left the country. Even then it can be argued that he negligently failed to perform his duty. So far as the positive acts of a guardian go, the words “ who does any act to promote the marriage or permits it to be solemnised ” are wide enough. The phrase “ who does any act to promote ” is wider than the word “ promote ” and the phrase “ permits it to be solemnised ” is by itself so wide that it really covers all possible cases of any positive act. I would therefore submit that we are really making the law rather too wide, thereby enmeshing a number of persons who may be absolutely innocent. In these circumstances, I beg to move that these words may be deleted.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Mr. Sesha Ayyangar :

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I am not moving it, Sir.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I move :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill the words ‘ with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or ’ be omitted.”

I appeal once more to this House to accept the amendment. (Laughter), though I believe that the House was not serious when it introduced a Bill like this. The Honourable the Home Member was also not serious.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must speak to the amendment.

L13CPB(LA)

E

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I have read the amendment, Sir, and I am addressing the House. Of course, if you do not want some oratorical efforts...

Mr. President : Go on.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What is the use of having imprisonment? With your jail rules and jail codes, if you think you will be able more to tyrannize the people who oppose your methods of Government, you are welcome to do it, but before that you should also acquaint people with what rules prevail in your jails, and that, if they go to jail, they will be treated in one way if they are black-skinned, and if they are white-skinned, in quite a different way. (Mr. K. Ahmed : "What difference is there?") Many people have not actual experience of jail life and they should be apprised of what it is. Namely, that in their jails there is racial discrimination in the jail code about treatment, food and raiment. So I appeal to my Honourable friends on this side, who pose as ardent reformers and who, I believe, have been carried away by their reforming zeal, not to perpetrate this outrage upon the orthodox community. I hope they will at least appreciate why imprisonment ought not to be inflicted. I hope the House will see its way to support my amendment.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Mr. Belvi.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I am not moving my amendment*, Sir.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, my amendment runs : (An Honourable Member : "Why move it?")

Mr. President : Go on.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : My candid friend was advising me not to move it, but the Chair has ordered me, and I must obey the Chair. Sir, I move :

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill, for the words 'one thousand rupees, or with both' the words 'one hundred rupees' be substituted."

The arguments which I adduced previously in favour of the reduction of the fine apply mutatis mutandis to this amendment, and I hope the House will accept this amendment.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I do not move No. 72†, Sir.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I beg to move :

"That clause 6 (2) be omitted."

That clause reads thus :

"For the purposes of this section, it shall be presumed, unless and until the contrary is proved, that, where a minor has contracted a child marriage, the person having charge of such minor has negligently failed to prevent the marriage from being solemnised."

I submit to the House, Sir, that the absurdity of this clause is apparent. Suppose a boy's father is staying in Madras and his son is studying in the Delhi University. The son is a minor of the age of seventeen. He contracts a child marriage in Delhi. How is the father ordinarily expected to know that his minor boy in Delhi, while pursuing his scholastic studies there, has contracted a child marriage? It is for the prosecution to prove in these cases that the guardian who had charge of the child was committing a child marriage offence. Instead, this clause 6 (2) makes the onus rest on the father to prove the contrary, and he has to start with the initial presumption against him that he knew that the child had contracted a child marriage as I, in moving my amendments, have to face the initial dead weight of Government strength. Sir, to make the guardian start with the dead weight of this presumption is not fair, and we ought to tone down the rigour of the Bill against the dead weight of Government. I submit that, at least this sub-clause (2), the House will agree in eliminating.

* "That in sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill, the words 'with simple imprisonment which may extend to one month, or' be omitted."

† "That the proviso to sub-clause (1) of clause 6 of the Bill be omitted."

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 6 (2) be omitted."

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : May I draw your attention to the fact, Sir, that it is now half past four ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Clause 6 was added to the Bill.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : Sir, I am not moving the amendment* standing in my name because.....

Mr. President : It is not necessary to give reasons.

Clause 7 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 8 stand part of the Bill.”

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I beg to move :

“ That in clause 8 of the Bill, for the words ‘ Presidency Magistrate or a District Magistrate ’ the words ‘ Magistrate first class ’ be substituted.”

Sir, I understand that the number of cases which will come under this Act will be fairly great, and I do not think any District Magistrate would be able to cope with the work which he will have to discharge if the number of cases is very large. The second reason that I wish to advance in this connection is that the cases under this Act will be very simple ; only two questions will arise in respect of the offences under this Act. The first question will be about the factum of the marriage, which will not be difficult to prove in many cases and will be an admitted fact in a number of cases. The other question will be about the age, which will be the only question that will remain for decision. Even now the first class Magistrates decide many cases in which the question of age does arise, e.g., Magistrate, who will be an Indian, will not be able to judge of the equities of a case of the nature. I, therefore, submit that this amendment be accepted.

The motion was negatived.

Clause 8 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 9 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, my amendment runs as follows :

“ That in clause 9 of the Bill after the word ‘ complaint ’ the words ‘ of the lawful guardian of the child ’ be inserted.”

Sir, clause 9 runs as follows :

“ No Court shall take cognisance of any offence under this Act save upon complaint made within one year, etc., etc.”

I want to add after the word “ complaint ” in the above clause, the words “ of the lawful guardian of the child ”. I want to add these words for this reason. It is only persons who are interested in the welfare of their children, it is only these men who are to see whether there has been any violation of this law. My Honourable friends who are not lawyers may not be aware, and I beg to inform them, that any one can set the criminal law in motion. That being so, it will give a handle not only to the system of blackmailing, as has been apprehended by several of us, but also to wreak private vengeance, and destroy the peace of society by attempting to victimise families of respectable neighbours. The jackals whose tails have been cut will try to drag respectable families to the category of cut-tail jackals. So, Sir, the only person that should be entrusted with the task of lodging a complaint under this law should be.....

* “ That after clause 6 of the Bill the following new clause be added :

An Honourable Member : The person who commits the offence.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Well, my Honourable friend says, should be the man who commits the offence under clause 6 of the Bill. Of course my Honourable friend's zeal for social reform will induce him to say anything and everything and insinuate also many things. But he ought to remember that there are men who make penance for their own sins. He ought to remember, as a Hindu son and also as a Hindu father, that there is such a thing as prashnit. Ardent follower as he is of Mahatma Gandhi, he should have known that Mahatma Gandhi practises penance not only for his own sins but also for the sins of others. I think it should not sound strange to my Honourable friend if there are people who commit sins but who would have their sins expiated. So far for the interruption of my Honourable friend.

My reason for this amendment is this. You say, you are more interested in the well being either of the minor girl or the minor boy. This reminds me of that old old saying which says that one who professes to love a child more than its mother is a witch. Do not go that length so that your action will be characterised as that of a witch who commits manifold injuries upon human society. If this amendment is not passed the clause as it stands will destroy the peace of orthodox homes and will destroy the purity of society. I am not speaking of those homes where there have been a straying away from orthodox society.

With these words, I beg to submit that these words “ of the lawful guardian of the child ” should be inserted.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in clause 9 of the Bill after the word ‘ complaint ’ the words ‘ of the lawful guardian of the child ’ be inserted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 9 of the Bill for the words ‘ one year ’ the words ‘ three months ’ be substituted ”.

Sir, my amendment is a simple one and my reasons also are simple. The Government of Bihar and Orissa, the province from which I come, say that in their opinion the Bill when passed into law will be set in operation only by blackmailers, if at all by any one. I am not a lawyer myself. I do not know the real significance of many of the clauses of the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is why the sentence should be three months and not one year.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I am giving my reasons. There are certain clauses which are very objectionable and it appears that, as soon as a complaint is lodged against a man, he is convicted. All the burden of proof is on the accused. Therefore for these reasons, that a father or a guardian should be protected from the hands of blackmailers and that they should not be harassed for so long a time as one year, it is for these reasons that I move the amendment. If the period is one year, then a Damocles sword will be hanging over their heads for the length of a whole year.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member does not mind three months ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : If there should be any period at all, it may be three months.

Mr. President : Why not support one month as proposed by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt in his amendment ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : That would be much better. Three months was what I said in my note of dissent in the Select Committee and it is only with that idea I put in my amendment.

Mr. President : Let Mr. Amar Nath Dutt move his amendment.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I think three months being a compromise between one month and one year may be better acceptable to the House than one month or one year. That is my idea in moving this amendment in preference to Mr. Amar Nath's.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 9 of the Bill for the words ' one year ' the words ' one month ' be substituted "

Sir, people who are engaged in the profession of law need not be reminded that, in civil law, there is such a thing as the law of limitation. People whose practice is solely confined to criminal courts will probably also recall that there is such a thing as a stale prosecution. Now, what are stale prosecutions ? We know that that depends upon the whims of a particular judge. When it is the case of sedition brought forward under the orders of my Honourable friend over there, probably the courts will have sixty years' time as limitation. But when it is a question of an offence committed by loyalists and the victim is a poor Congress worker, probably the Courts will think that the limitation should be a week. The courts will say, " Oh, you did not complain earlier ". Ordinarily those who practise in criminal courts know that even if a complaint is late by two or three days, the courts demand an explanation as to why the complainant is late in laying the complaint. My Honourable friends over there—at least those who have got criminal practice in mofussil courts—will bear me out, at least that is the practice in every court in Bengal, that you must file a complaint on the day of occurrence ; if not then on the next day. Unless you do so, the magistrate will invariably demand an explanation, and my Honourable friend over there, who holds the Commerce portfolio, may have had some experience of this in his earlier years of service. One has invariably to explain why one filed the complaint after such a lapse of time. In fact I can tell, you, Sir, that my Honourable friend over there would not have admitted any complaint after the lapse of seven or eight days. He would have asked for a police inquiry. He would have said that there must have been some motive as to why this case was brought so late and he would have dismissed the complaint under section 203.

Mr. President : That will do.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : You will ask the House to use its discretion and vote in favour of this amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 9 of the Bill for the words ' one year ' the words ' three months ' be substituted "

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 9 of the Bill for the words ' one year ' the words ' one month ' be substituted "

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Sir, I beg to move :

" To clause 9 the following be added at the end :

" No one is entitled to complain unless he is a resident of the locality in which the marriage has taken place or he belongs to the sect or sub-sect to which the parties to the marriage belong "

Sir, this is a very necessary amendment. Clause 9 no doubt restricts the time within which complaints can be lodged, but it does not restrict the person who is entitled to complain. It is a cardinal rule of criminal jurisprudence that any one is entitled to complain in respect of any offence committed. The Criminal Procedure Code lays down certain specified persons who are entitled to complain in certain circumstances. For instance, the husband alone is entitled to complain about the adultery of his wife. So in cases under this Act I want to restrain the classes of person who should be entitled to lodge a complaint. I shall at once make the absurdity of the present rule apparent by giving an instance. Suppose a marriage takes place in far-off Tinnevely. Is a person resident in Simla entitled, as a matter of course, to complain about that marriage ? That would leave a loophole for blackmailers to indulge in any kind of prosecution and also to a person who may be willing to injure his friend at such a long distance. Therefore, it is, in order to minimise the chance of irresponsible prosecutions being indulged in, that I want to restrict by this amendment the class of persons who will be entitled to complain. For that I am making provision for two classes of people. If he happens to be a resident of that locality there is a fair presumption that he knows something about the ages of the persons contracting the marriage. That would be prima facie some warrant for assuming in a court of law that that man at least having some knowledge of the local state of affairs comes with a fairly good case to start with. Then I also extend it to a person belonging to the sect or sub-sect to which the parties to the marriage belong. I want to shut out irresponsible people not belonging to that sect and knowing nothing about the contracting parties from indulging in frivolous, malicious and irresponsible prosecutions. I submit this is a very healthy amendment which, at least being the last of my amendments, the House would be willing to accept.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That to clause 9 the following be added at the end :

‘ No one is entitled to complain unless he is a resident of the locality in which the marriage has taken place or he belongs to the sect or sub-sect to which the parties to the marriage belong ’.”

The motion was negatived.

Clause 9 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 10 stand part of the Bill.”

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir, I do not propose to move my amendment.*

Clause 10 was added to the Bill.

“ That clause 10 of the Bill be omitted.”

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That clause 11 stand part of the Bill.”

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir I beg to move :

“ That clause 11 of the Bill be omitted.”

This clause 11 provides for security to be taken from the complainant whenever he brings a complaint, irrespective of the fact whether the court thinks that the complaint is well founded or otherwise except for reasons to be recorded by the court. The previous sections, sections 8 and 10, in my opinion provide ample safeguards against frivolous or vexatious complaints. Section 8 has provided that it is only the District Magistrate or the Presidency Magistrate who shall take cognizance of a complaint, and section 10 has gone further and made a preliminary inquiry compulsory. Even there it has to a certain extent changed section 202 and it is only a first class Magistrate who is competent to make the inquiry under section 10 ; so that before the accused is summoned on, the complaint will have passed through two sieves, first of all the District Magistrate must have examined the complainant under section 200, and subsequent to that a preliminary inquiry must have taken place either at the hands of the District Magistrate himself or by a first class Magistrate. After all that, to insist that security should be taken from the complainant is to insist, in my opinion, rather too much. So far as the success of this Act is concerned, as I submitted two or three days back, unless and until Government provide the machinery for working this Act, this Act will remain as a pious wish of this House. In that connection I have tabled two other amendments, and I shall move them at the proper time ; but I fail to see even if these amendments are not carried, why obstacles should be placed in the way of those who have public spirit in this matter and who are actuated by the best of motives to restrain these people from solemnising child marriages. This clause 11 puts a sort of obstacle in the way of such persons and I submit that placing of such an obstacle in the way is quite unnecessary and is to be deprecated. Even now the provisions of section 250 of the Criminal Procedure Code and sections 182 and 211 of the Indian Penal Code are quite sufficient in the matter and they themselves serve as a check against frivolous complaints. A question like this was considered by the Age of Consent Committee, and at page 138 their opinion will be found. They also oppose any provision of this nature, and as I have submitted that, although I am also in favour of providing safeguards which have already been provided in this Act, I am strongly opposed to making this Act absolutely inoperative. I want to know if there are people who have got that public spirit that they will come forward and deposit one hundred rupees or more. If there are people like that, why should child marriage remain in this land ? In my humble opinion these safeguards, which have already been provided for, are quite sufficient and we should not insist on a handicap of this nature.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment. This is the first time I have to oppose an amendment, at least with respect to this Bill. I am surprised that the zeal for reform of my friend should carry him farther than what was suggested by the Select Committee. He says, “ Any one who has any public spirit in him will support him in all these things.” If by public spirit he means doing away with our old social institutions, if by public spirit he means doing away with all that is held sacred by a certain section of our community and trampling under foot their sacred beliefs, if by public spirit....

Mr. President : Please come to the amendment.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I oppose it ; I was just replying to him. These social reformers, I believe, are fifty years ahead of the times. With their new Veda, the Age of Consent Committee's Report, they might have waited for fifty years and allowed us to die before they came with such outrageous laws and amendments.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 11 of the Bill be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I beg to move....

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : Sir, on a point of order, will it be in order for Mr. Das to move any amendment after the decision that the House has just come to, that clause 11 should stand part of the Bill ? The House has now decided that clause 11 shall not be omitted in any circumstances.

Mr. B. Das : Yes ; but it can be amended.

Mr. M. Keane : No. Clause 11 shall stand as it is : that is the decision of the House—that clause 11 as it stands will remain.

Mr. President : The House has decided that clause 11 shall not be deleted but in what form it should remain is another question.

Mr. M. Keane : You could not have put clause 11 if it were still in embryo form ; we could not have taken any decision on it : we decided on clause 11 in the form in which it is now before the House and the House, I understand, has decided that it shall remain.

Mr. President : All that the House has decided is that clause 11 shall not be omitted ; it has not yet decided that clause 11 as it stands should remain.

Mr. B. Das : I move, Sir :

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill, for the words 'At any time after' the words 'Prior to' shall be substituted."

This clause, Sir, provides against frivolous complainants and blackmailers. I want to simplify the process and the work of the District and Sub-Divisional Magistrates ; by this amendment and the subsequent amendments which I have put down I want to lighten their burden. In the volume of opinions that have been supplied to us we find various people are of opinion that the blackmailers only will prosper from the Sarda Bill. As I come from the province of Bihar and Orissa, I shall quote the opinion of the Governor in Council over this matter. Sir, on page 36 of Paper No. II, "Opinions on the Hindu Child Marriage Bill", the following are the conclusions of the Governor in Council acting with the Ministers who are our popular representatives. I will read the relevant portion only :

"A further difficulty is that the complaint necessary to put the law into motion will be made not by one whose object is to protect the child wife, but generally by some enemy of the family of the husband or wife, and an unlimited field for extortion and corruption will be thrown open. Finally, the difficulty of proving the husband's or wife's age in these cases is notorious, and if the law is put into motion at all extensively, the courts will be flooded with extra work, the cost of which will be far greater than any benefit secured. On the whole, the Local Government are of opinion that the Bill, if passed into law, will remain a dead letter unless it is put in force by blackmailers."

Sir, I come from the province of Bihar and Orissa and I stand by the opinion of the Government of that province, that it will enhance the work of the courts and also increase the cost if the blackmailers bring in as many cases as they like. Of course, I may ask the Honourable the Home Member if he has circulated the Report of the Age of Consent Committee to the Provincial Governments and has got any opinion on it from them. He has supplied no other opinions of the Local Governments except what have been circulated on the Report of the Select Committee on the Hindu Child Marriage Bill. I am quite sure the Local Governments still hold that opinion. There is not one who will be in favour of unnecessarily increasing the cost of prosecution. In fact, I find that, although the Government of the Punjab have approved of the principle of the Bill, they want some reserve power to enforce that particular law in that particular area. If that be the case, I do not see why my Honourable friend the Home Member should be in such haste. He has not consulted the Local Governments as to what will be the cost if the Sarda Bill is enforced. Who is going to bear all these costs, the Provincial Governments or the Central Government ? Is the Central Government going to finance all costs of prosecution and also all cost of propaganda in order to bring to the notice of the furthestmost village in a district the object of the Sarda Bill when it is passed into law and becomes Sarda Act ?

Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava : What has that got to do with the amendment ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is wholly irrelevant.

Mr. B. Das : My purpose is that the magistrates should not be influenced by backstair gossips, and so, whenever anybody wants to complain against another, he must deposit the money, and before the magistrate hears the alleged complaint from the complainant, he should ask him to deposit the money. Whenever anybody goes and makes a complaint in a court of law, he has to deposit a certain amount, before the District Magistrate or the Sub-Divisional Magistrate looks into the complaint. Why should not such a procedure be introduced in these cases also ? I feel that this Bill will benefit the lawyers and the doctors.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words 'At any time after' the words 'Prior to' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir, I beg to move :

"That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill, for the words 'shall, except for reasons to be recorded in writing' the words 'may for reasons to be recorded in writing' be substituted."

The words in clause 11 run thus :

"At any time after examining the complainant and before issuing process for compelling the attendance of the accused, the Court shall, except for reasons to be recorded in writing, require the complainant to execute a bond, with or without sureties", etc.

1086

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[18TH SEPT. 1929.]

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

This means that it is compulsory on the courts to ask the complainant in every case to furnish security.

An Honourable Member : Except for reasons to be recorded in writing.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : That is only for reasons which are to be recorded the court may in certain cases be exempt from asking a complainant to deposit security.

5 P.M.
Now, Sir, a perusal of this section will show that the preliminary inquiry shall have been completed before the process is issued, and under section 202, the court shall have to find that there is a case against the accused before issuing a summons or a warrant. Therefore, as soon as a court finds that there is a good case, it shall be obliged to ask for the security unless there are reasons to the contrary. A more logical course would have been this. As soon as a court finds that there is a case, unless there are reasons to the contrary, it should not ask for a security of this kind. After all, what is the security? The security is for the purposes of section 250. Now, in ordinary cases, this provision in section 250 comes into operation when the court believes or comes to the conclusion that the complaint was frivolous or vexatious. I do not know of any law in which the court starts with the presumption that the complainant has come before the court with unclean hands. Therefore, I submit that a presumption of this sort is certainly not justified, when a complainant comes before a court and makes a statement on oath it must be believed. There is no reason why the court should come to an initial conclusion that the complaint which is laid before it is frivolous or vexatious. I do not see why this deposit should be made compulsory. With these observations I leave the amendment in the hands of the House.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, only one word will dispose of the arguments of my friend Mr. Bhargava, and it is this, that any one, a rich enemy can set up a pauper to institute a complaint.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words ‘ shall, except for reasons to be recorded in writing ’, the words ‘ may, for reasons to be recorded in writing ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Sir, the amendment that stands in my name reads thus :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill, the words ‘ except for reasons to be recorded in writing ’, be omitted.”

My reasons for making this amendment are obvious. I do not think that any one should be exempt from depositing money or giving sureties.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I will say only one word. My reason for giving notice to omit that particular clause is that cases will happen when the complainant will leave the province for another province, and it will be very difficult to get any money from him. Therefore, the deposit should be taken at the time of receiving the complaint. That is the reason why I move my amendment, which reads :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill, the words ‘ except for reasons to be recorded in writing ’ be omitted.”

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill the words ‘ except for reasons to be recorded in writing ’ be omitted.”

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I beg to move :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words ‘ to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for a sum not exceeding one hundred rupees ’ the words ‘ to deposit in cash rupees two hundred and fifty ’ be substituted.”

The complainants may try to avoid in various ways this Rs. 100 security, and as my Honourable friend Mr. B. Das has stated, they may run away to a Native State, or the complainant may be a bad man and he may throw all the burden on his sureties who perhaps had not known what they stood surety for. So, I propose that a cash deposit of not Rs. 100 but of Rs. 250 should be demanded from the complainant. This is intended to frighten or punish those who come to the court with clandestine intentions. I hope this salutary amendment will be accepted.

Mr. B. Das : I beg to move :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words ‘ for a sum not exceeding one hundred rupees ’, the words ‘ for any sum which shall not be less than one hundred rupees but may extend to one thousand rupees ’ be substituted.”

Sir, I do not wish to say much on this amendment, seeing that the House is not in a mood to consider it.

I have to say only one thing, I do not want that the complainant should be treated as the favourite child of the Honourable the Mover of the Bill or of the Government. I would like to see the complainant punished on the same scale as one who performs a child marriage.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words ‘ to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for a sum not exceeding one hundred rupees ’ the words ‘ to deposit in cash rupees two hundred and fifty ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (1) of clause 11 of the Bill for the words ‘ for a sum not exceeding one hundred rupees ’, the words ‘ for any sum which shall not be less than one hundred rupees but may extend to one thousand rupees ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Mr. Nilakantha Das. Next amendment. (No. 90)*.

Mr. Nilakantha Das : That, is consequential.

Mr. B. Das : I beg to move :

“ That to clause 11 of the Bill the following new sub-clause be added :

“ (3) If the complainant is proved to have lodged false information the trying magistrate shall forthwith order prosecution of the complainant who shall be punishable with rigorous imprisonment which may extend to one month or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or with both.”

Clause 11, as it is drafted by the Select Committee, provides for the execution of a bond by the complainant.....

* “ That sub-clause (2) of clause 11 of the Bill be omitted.”

Mr. President : The Indian Penal Code provides for false complaints.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : The Penal Code provides seven years and why do you want one month ?

Mr. B. Das : I do not know what the Penal Code says. I would only suggest that, if the Penal Code covers this, it should be incorporated in this Bill. The Bihar and Orissa Government has stated that there are blackmailers, and the complainant should not be let go with merely a deposit of Rs. 100, and it is with that object I have put down this amendment.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : That is unnecessary.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I beg to move :

“ That at the end of the Bill the following new clause be added :

‘ Nothing in this Act shall apply to a case of child marriage where the girl married is not below 12 years of age and where any one of the contracting parties or their parents or guardians has obtained the sanction of the principal court of civil jurisdiction upon an application made prior to the solemnisation of the marriage stating the circumstances under which he is compelled to solemnise the marriage the non-performance of which would mean hardship to the girl or her family ’.”

The necessity of this saving clause struck me even when I was sitting on the Select Committee....

Mr. President : It struck you ? Were you hurt ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : That appears in my minute of dissent to the Report of the Select Committee, and this amendment is in substance a copy of what I said in my minute of dissent. Several cases of hardship will actually arise if this Act be put in operation and it is necessary to protect such cases. I have mentioned some of them also in my minute of dissent. Whatever may be the object of the reformers in having this penal Act in this form, we have not come to a stage when the boys and girls will choose their own mates and perform their own marriages and will be themselves responsible for anything happening before and after marriage. Rightly or wrongly, in imitation of the west assimilated or not, we look forward to a state of things where practically the boys and girls will perform their own marriages, but that stage is not yet come. Now you make the parents and guardians responsible not only for the marriage, but you have also penal clauses provided against them in this Act. Honourable Members should realise that girls even before their 14th year may be suddenly required to be married in haste. Otherwise it may mean ruin to the girl as well as her family. Other less emergent cases but no less important for the legislator here may however be well provided for. Suppose a man has two or more daughters and he is a poor man. He is working in Simla and Delhi and his home is in Barisal. We know what a daughter's marriage means especially to a Bengali gentleman. He saves Rs. 2,000 or 3,000 in some ten years and goes home. Let us suppose he has got three daughters, one of the age of 15, another of the age of 13 and a third of the age of 12.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : You are not a Bengali. You belong to Orissa.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : He wants to marry them together.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Marry them together ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Yes. That is possible. Now, the man takes two months' leave and wants to marry them in one year, he can marry them in one day—that is possible. (An Honourable Member : “ Suppose the third one is 11 years old ”.) Then, is it not proper, when we are just beginning to have this penal legislation, that we should make some provision for such hard cases ? Otherwise the father and mother will be ruined. They will be unable to marry their other daughters and our Fundamental Rules of service will not allow the man leave of two months the next year.

My friends on the other side know best how it will be difficult for such a father to find the money to marry his daughters one after the other and to get privilege leave or whatever you call it. I have cited only one instance of a hard case and there are several other hard cases of varied characters. Suppose for instance....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member come to the amendment ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : If the Chair is reluctant to hear instances.....

Mr. President : Order, Order. The Honourable Member is not relevant. He must confine himself to the particular points which he has raised by his amendment.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I simply want to protect such cases where there will be hardship to the parents as well as the girls, and instances, I submit, are not irrelevant. I suggest that even if a girl be 12 years of age, the parent should be able to apply to the principal court of civil jurisdiction and get permission to marry that girl under exceptional circumstances, which I am illustrating. I know no amendment will be accepted and the entire Bill will be thrust down the unwilling throats of a substantial section not only in the country but even in this House. That is why the Chair is in haste to go through this Bill....

Mr. President : Order, Order. What is the meaning of the Honourable Member's statement that the Chair is in haste. The Chair is prepared to sit till 8 o'clock. What is the Honourable Member's insinuation ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I made no insinuation. What insinuation can there be but the fact that the Bill is being run through in haste on account of Government support. If I give no more instances, I have nothing more to say.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must not refer to the Chair in those terms. Has he finished ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Yes. Thank you.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : My friend Pandit Nilakantha Das has put forward this amendment and has cited one instance in which a genuine hardship exists, not only in the province of Bengal but also in my province of Madras. So as to avoid any misunderstanding, Sir, I may say at the outset, that what I plead for is not for exemption for those who believe in this reform. I am one of those who believe in this reform and will do my very best to forward it as everybody knows in this House. I am pleading for those who have genuine hardship in carrying out this penal law. Now, Sir, the Age of Consent Committee has gone into this matter very carefully, and if I may say so, the substance of their opinion is really in favour of the exemption. The Committee was equally divided on this matter and the Chairman did not think it right to give his casting vote against the amendment but merely said that he made no recommendation. With your permission, I shall read this passage :

"Some of the members of the Committee consider it essential that the marriage law, when enacted, should provide for exemptions permitting marriages of girls below the prescribed age only in cases where the interests of the girl herself require such a marriage to be effected. In such cases, the District Judge should have the power to grant the exemption, conditional on securities being taken for separate living, custody and maintenance of the girl till the statutory age of consent is reached. As the Committee is equally divided on the question of exemption or no exemption, and as there is also a diversity of opinion as to whether exemption should be granted only in case of girls beyond a prescribed age, the Committee makes no recommendations on the point."

Now, Sir, so far as the latter part of the observations of the Age of Consent Committee are concerned, Mr. Nilakantha Das has confined his amendment only to cases of girls and therefore to that extent I can claim the authority of the members of the Committee in favour of the exemption now asked for. Rai Bahadur Kanhya Lal makes this matter even clearer. I do not wish to weary the House with long extracts. We are putting forward a very important scheme of marriage reform and all of us in this House have practically agreed that this reform should be brought about, and the only question is how best we shall enforce it. I do not say anything on the amendments that have been put forward or the divisions that have been taken, but the most curious part of the present situation is that the Government which took so much time from the last Session to examine the provisions of this Bill and who actually got an adjournment on this matter have taken absolutely no interest in any of the amendments moved. They have had nothing to say on the amendments. They want to carry through the Bill as it is because they have agreed to support the Bill. I entirely agree that this Bill ought to be supported, and every effort should be made by this House to carry the principles and the purposes of this Bill to execution, but it is necessary that this Government should examine its provisions carefully. I appeal to Government to consider this particular exemption that has been brought forward by Pandit Nilakantha Das, having regard to the fact that the Age of Consent Committee have very nearly accepted the principle of this amendment, and I would beg of them to accept this amendment and see how it works.

Mr. N. C. Chunder (Calcutta : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, Pandit Nilakantha Das's amendment has received the support of Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar ; but the opinion that Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar cited was in regard to a case where, in the interest of the girl, the civil court might give permission ; but Pandit Nilakantha Das's amendment relates to the interest of the parent of the girl.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Hardship to the girl or her family ?

Mr. N. C. Chunder : The point is whether he is compelled to solemnise the marriage. If Mr. Nilakantha Das's amendment was accepted, the primary thing which the court will have to look into is whether the parent is compelled. I do not know whether it means physically or morally, (An Honourable Member : "Financially.") or financially. Assuming that the courts have arrived at certain decisions after trying a number of cases of this description and have come to a working rule as to what is meant by being compelled, still the court will have to see whether the father is compelled to marry the girl. It may be that the compulsion is owing to some hardship to the girl or to the girl's mother or to the girl's sister. Whatever it is, the primary thing to be considered is not the interest of the girl but that of her father. Therefore, to quote the Report of the Age of Consent Committee in support of Mr. Nilakantha Das's amendment will be as good or as effective as quoting say, a rule of Muhammadan law in support of a point of Hindu law. The two things are entirely different. They are looked at from two different points of view ; and even the illustration which my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, gave was one where the interest of the girl was not considered but the interest of the parent of the girl. He has got three daughters to marry and he can pass off two ; why not let him have the third taken off his hand ? That is the sort of argument that my Honourable friend gave. Therefore, I say, Sir, that the Report of the Age of Consent Committee has got nothing to do with it, and if anything, my Honourable friend's amendment ought to be opposed.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, while supporting this particular amendment of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar had already pointed out to the House that that amendment had the support of the Age of Consent Committee itself. I would particularly invite the attention of Honourable Members to the opinion and recommendations made by Pandit Kanhya Lal in regard to this matter in his dissenting minute he wrote :

"My recommendations are :

- (1) That in any law fixing a minimum age of marriage a provision should be made empowering the District Judge, on previous application, to grant a dispensation for the performance of the marriage before the prescribed age, where the interests of the girl or her future happiness, welfare or safety urgently require it ;
- (2) That where the District Judge grants such dispensation or permission, he should have power to impose such terms, conditions or restrictions with or without security or sureties as to the separate living, custody and maintenance of the girl after marriage till she attains the prescribed age, as he may consider expedient or necessary, and also to rescind or vary the same from time to time."

(Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : "Page please ?")

- (3) That the order of the District Judge granting or refusing the permission in such a case shall not be open to appeal except with the leave of the Judge passing the order ;....."

Pandit Kanhya Lal, who made the foregoing recommendations, we were told by the Honourable the Home Member the other day, was appointed to this Committee as the representative of the orthodox community. Now, Sir, when this motion for consideration was moved, certain Members insisted that the Bill should be re-committed to Select Committee in view of the recommendations made by the Age of Consent Committee itself. This House wisely or unwisely rejected that amendment and they are now proceeding to consider the Bill clause by clause. It is up to this

[Mr. M. S. Aney.]

House, Sir, that the Committee's recommendations should be duly considered by them and they should seek to give effect to them by providing in this Bill something in the nature of a safeguard on the lines of the recommendations made by Pandit Kanhya Lal himself. People conversant with the life which members of a joint-family have to live can easily conceive of certain cases in which it would be convenient, or it would be highly in the interests of the girl herself, to have the marriage celebrated some time before the age prescribed. Such circumstances are not at all inconceivable. I would not like to take the time of this House by trying to place before this House instances after instances where this will be desirable. My friend, Mr. Nilakantha Das, has given one instance. That may not be very pertinent. In fact, my friend, Mr. N. C. Chunder has based his objection on the nature of the particular instance which Mr. Nilkantha Das has related to show that the clause which he is trying to insert here is not so much in the interest of the girl as in the interest of her guardian. But, Sir, very often the interest of the girl herself may require that she should be married before the prescribed time, as otherwise there will be nobody to look after her and find out a proper bridegroom for her. What will you do, Sir, in the face of such instances? Suppose, Sir, for instance, that there is a father who is the only guardian of that girl and that father is in a precarious state of health, and is not likely even in the opinion of competent doctors to survive at all till she attains fourteen years of age and there will be nobody left behind to look after her. Is she to be left to the tender mercies of the distant relatives who may like to rob the girl of the estate if any left by her father rather than look after her happiness? Under such circumstances it shall be the duty of the father to see that the girl is suitably married to a proper bridegroom. But is there no provision in the Bill for that? A circumstance like that, Sir, can easily be conceived of. There should be some provision made in this Bill to enable the guardians of that girl to get her married: and in the absence of any other amendment, I think the amendment moved by Pandit Nilakantha Das is the only one, which at any rate will go some way to give the relief in this direction. Although I think it might have been better worded and better phrased also, in the absence of anything else, I think here is one amendment which does seek to carry out the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee and particularly the recommendation made by Pandit Kanhya Lal, who voiced the interests of the orthodox community, and for this reason that recommendation ought to carry great weight even with Honourable Members on the Government Benches. I therefore strongly support the amendment of my Honourable friend, Pandit Nilakantha Das.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member): Sir, I oppose this amendment. There is an insidiousness in this amendment which I want to point out to this House. The purpose of the amendment is that in special cases there should be exemptions. That is the substance of the amendment. But once you make exemptions in special cases you make it possible for any man with a long purse to come under the exemption. (Some Honourable Members: "No, no". An Honourable Member: "How?") I will tell you how. (Mr. Amar Nath Dutt: "Your courts are like that".) I will tell you how. I have sufficient experience of the courts to know how these things can be done. An astute lawyer can always make out a good case, a special case, if you have got money enough. By accepting this exemption you will stultify yourself, the House will stultify itself because the House has deliberately rejected 12 years and has adopted 14 years. Once you make an exception in favour of 12 years in special cases, all that is necessary is to make out a special case. A man with a long purse will go to a cunning lawyer and the cunning lawyer will say, "Well, a special case has got to be made out in terms of the section. Have you got evidence of this sort, that sort and the other sort?" Of course evidence will be forthcoming, affidavits will be placed before the court, and any number of affidavits can be procured with a long enough purse. The judge will have no option but to make the order. I am stating, Sir, the experience of courts. When a special case has got to be made out, it can always be made out if you go to an astute lawyer and if you have got a long enough purse. Therefore, Sir, I submit that there is grave danger in our accepting this amendment because in practice the exception will be the rule.

Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava: Sir, a reference has been made to what the Committee said in their Report. It runs thus:

"As the Committee is equally divided on the question of exemption or no exemption, and as there is also a diversity of opinion as to whether exemption should be granted only in case of girls beyond a prescribed age, the Committee makes no recommendation on the point."

The House will observe that, so far as the question of exemption was concerned, the Committee was equally divided, but so far as the question whether exemption should be granted only in the case of girls of a prescribed age, the Committee was divided in its opinion, but not equally divided. As a matter of fact, I will not be guilty of disclosing any secret when I submit to the House that the majority of the members of the Committee were of opinion that if the age was prescribed, say, at 12, then exemption should be granted.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub: No. You were not present on the day when this matter came before the Age of Consent Committee. You were not in Mussoorie that day; I was present in the Committee.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava: Sir, I cannot afford to be contradicted on a matter of fact and I positively assert that I was present at the time when this decision was come to. So far as the question of exemption is concerned, we were equally divided; but when the question came before the Committee if a girl whose age was more than 12 years, then the majority of the Committee was in favour of giving these exemptions. I would also refer to the opinion given by Mr. Kadri. He has written a separate note and he has supported Rai Bahadur Pandit Kanhaiya Lal in this matter. The note is given at the end and the words are these:

"I agree with Panditji in thinking that it would be advisable to give exemptions in appropriate cases under the Marriage Law."

The reason why the Committee agreed has been pointed out by Pandit Kanhaiya Lal on page 221 of the Report:

"During the course of our inquiry in rural areas, a pathetic appeal was addressed to us by some village people, asking what would happen to their daughters if they were sick or dying, and there was legislation, forbidding marriage before the prescribed age."

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

Then, again, I would not be doing my duty if I did not place before the House that many Muhammadan gentlemen and some Hindu gentlemen, who were examined as witnesses by this Committee, gave it as their considered opinion that in hard cases exemption should be allowed.

Now, Sir, the amendment before the House relates to girls who are not below 12 years of age, so that it follows that the question of exemption would only arise in respect of girls above 12 and below 14. In these cases the principal court of civil jurisdiction shall decide one question, namely, whether it is in the interests of the girl herself that she should be married. Now, this question is really in some cases not very difficult to decide. If we look to the laws obtaining in some of the Indian States we will find that such exemptions have been provided in many States. On page 224 (paragraph 57) of Pandit Kanhaiya Lal's note, the House will see :

"In the marriage laws, enacted in the Indian States like Baroda, Indore, Rajkot and Mandi, a provision has been made for the grant of license or exemption on previous application, where the parents or guardians are, owing to old age or disease, not likely to live to perform the marriage till the girl attains the prescribed age, and there is no other guardian or relative fit and willing to undertake that responsibility in the event of their death, or where other equally unavoidable difficulty is likely to arise."

Now, Sir, there may be many circumstances which may compel a parent to come to the civil court and ask for an exemption in such cases. It will be rather long if I begin to give examples of such hard cases. Suffice it to say, that this exemption clause has worked very well in the Baroda State, and even now in the Act of Baroda State, from which some of the provisions relating to this Act have been taken, this provision is to be found. I do not think there is any room for apprehension, as has been expressed by the Honourable the Law Member, when he said that an astute lawyer, if he had got a client with a long purse, would be able to get from the principal court of jurisdiction an exemption of this sort. Sir, this is casting an aspersion on the integrity of the court, or at least the capacity of the court of original jurisdiction. A District Judge is a very responsible officer and exercises a very great responsibility. In the Punjab, the District Judge is generally the Sessions Judge, and is competent to pass the sentence of death, subject only to the confirmation of the High Court.

I would therefore submit that the present amendment, though not happily worded and though rather wide, has to be accepted in the absence of any other amendment. I would also submit that, considering the general opinion of the country, I am perfectly satisfied that a provision of this nature will conciliate the opposition to this Bill and at the same time it will be a very salutary rule of law, which will provide for hard cases.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Sir, much of what I wanted to say on this point has already been said, in particular, by Pandit Thakurdas Bhargava. There are two more points I wish to make. The first point is this, that this was an idea originally embodied in Mr. Sarda's own Bill when it was first introduced. I do not think he will deny it if I put it to him. Now, unfortunately, he has become a slave in the hands of the Select Committee and is anxious to win the Bill at any cost. He is not prepared to go against the wishes of the Select Committee. But if he has any convictions of his own, I do think that he will stand up and say : "I accept this amendment whatever may have been the fate of other amendments." I cannot sympathise with him in this matter when he is going against his own convictions by not supporting this amendment and accepting it. In his own old Bill the exemption related to even a lower age, and now when an exemption is being asked in respect of a girl of 12 he is not going to accept it.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : May I explain my position, Sir ? My original Bill was a civil measure and there the object was to make the marriage invalid. That was a very drastic provision, and in order that that drastic provision might be given effect to, I had provided there, that in cases of conscientious objection a lower age might be provided. I provided for no exemptions. The present Bill, however, has nothing to do with making a marriage invalid. The whole case is different, and therefore the provision that I incorporated there does not apply in the present case.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : The principle has hardly been affected by the change in the nature of the Bill. After all, there will be hard cases. He will admit that when he contemplated that provision, he referred not so much to the civil effect of the marriage as to the particular hardships that would be caused, and I think those conditions apply to this Bill also.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Not at all. I provided for conscientious objection.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : My next point is that, when it is convenient, the Baroda Act is taken as a model, but it has not been followed in this particular instance. When it was put forward in this House that the penalty should be confined only to fine and not substantive imprisonment, it was pointed out that in Baroda this remedy failed and the Baroda Government is now thinking of introducing, for the first time, simple imprisonment as a punishment. Now, I should like to ask, if the Baroda Act can be a good model so far as the introduction of substantive sentence is concerned, why should it not be a good model for allowing the exemptions that have been asked for in this particular amendment ? Of course, the amendment might have been better worded, but that is not the point. We must all sympathise with the principle mentioned therein.

Now, with regard to the allegation made by the Honourable the Law Member that long purses and ingenious lawyers would defeat the purpose of the Act by making too much of exemptions. I am really sorry that he is casting reflections upon his own judiciary. Why should he think so lightly of his own judiciary ? Why should he think that his own judiciary might be defeated by a combination of long purses and ingenious lawyers ? I can of course take his testimony on this point when he says that intelligent lawyers are prepared to prostitute their intelligence for long purses. That is another matter. I can take that description of his, but I cannot take his testimony when he says that there are no judges in this country who will defy not only long purses but even defeat ingenious lawyers. In that respect, as proof of what I say, I will just refer to Appendix XII of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, in which statistics are given about applications for exemption asked for and granted, and the ratio of total exemptions to total offences and the total convictions. If one will dispassionately read this Appendix, one will find that, after all, the applications for exemptions and the grant of exemptions have never been treated, even in Baroda, in as light a manner as is sought to be made out, and certainly they were not treated light-heartedly by the judiciary. In that respect, I will read to the House a few figures which will convince in my opinion both the House and the Honourable the Law Member that it is not trifled with by anybody, and that it is only in very serious cases that such applications are put forward and exemptions are granted and I am sure it will also convince the House that there must be certain loopholes left here for hard cases. Now, here are the figures given in the Baroda Administration Report for the years 1915 to 1924 :

"In 1915-16, the number of applications was 60 and the percentage of rejections, 31½ per cent. There were 4,837 cases of offences under the Act and 91.4 per cent. of convictions."

What do these figures show ? Do they show that the number of applications are made lightly to courts or that the exemptions are given light-heartedly by courts ? Certainly not.

Then take the succeeding years :

"In 1916-17, the number of applications for exemption was 331, the percentage of rejections, 5.7 ; the number of offences under the Act, 7,407 and the percentage of convictions 81.5."

What does that show ? That the number of applications for exemption is not very large. Now to come to the succeeding years :

"In 1917-18, only 19 applications.

In 1918-19, only 20 applications.

In 1919-20, only 27 applications.

In 1920-21, only 6 applications.

In 1921-22, only 237 applications."

Perhaps so many applications were necessitated from the point of view of religion.

"In 1922-23, only 11 applications.

In 1923-24, only 7 applications.

In 1924-25, only 12 applications."

Well, what do these figures show ? And all these years, the number of prosecutions has varied from 4,000 to 15,000. That means that the law is being enforced very rigorously without any light-heartedness by the judiciary, and along with that, these figures also show that the number of applications for exemptions is also not very considerable, and that even when applications are made, the proper authority deals with those applications in a considerate and proper spirit. That entirely refutes the allegation made by the Honourable the Law Member in this matter. Therefore, I think some such provision as is recommended in the amendment is necessary.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadian) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by my Honourable friend Pandit Nilakantha Das. Much has already been said in support of this amendment by many previous speakers and I would therefore confine myself to one or two observations in this connection. My Honourable friend, Mr. N. C. Chunder, thought that this amendment sought to give protection to the parents, and on that ground he did not favour the amendment. I would draw his attention to para. 52 of the note of Rai Bahadur Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, one of the eminent members of the Age of Consent Committee, in page 221 of the Report. He records the experience of his inquiry and says :

"During the course of our enquiry in rural areas, a pathetic appeal was addressed to us by some village people, asking what would happen to their daughters, if they were sick or dying, and there was legislation, forbidding marriage before the prescribed age. They asked whether the Panches or the Sarkar would provide for the protection of their girls and arrange for their marriage after their death, or pay the cost of a caste dinner to enable them to be readmitted into the caste and get married, if perchance they went wrong. Very little has been done during the last hundred years to give the masses the benefit of general education, or to teach them by active social propaganda that it was to the interest of their progeny that the marriage of girls should not be celebrated or consummated at an early age ; and if they still believe and follow the practices, which have been in vogue for centuries, does it stand to reason that we should try to restrain them by penal measures from following those practices without any serious attempt to meet or mitigate the difficulties or hardships, they have pointed out ? Economic considerations weigh heavily with these people ; and their argument and appeal deserve to be considered with sympathy rather than with scornful indifference."

I would also appeal to the House to look at the matter with sympathy and consideration and not with scornful indifference, as the Pandit describes it.

Mr. N. C. Chunder : You may go to the District Judge to make an application in the guardianship.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : It has been stated by the previous speakers, that in the Indian States which have enacted marriage laws, such exemptions have been provided for in the legislation. Now, that is with regard to India. I find that even in advanced countries of Europe, like France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Belgium, Czecho-slovakia, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway, Poland, Roumania, Sweden, Switzerland and other countries and coming nearer home in Japan, there are provisions in the marriage laws for such exemptions. I think that if the Select Committee did not make this provision, it was really a shortcoming in the Bill and it should be provided for in this legislation. If I may be permitted to quote only one or two sentences from the note of Pandit Kanhaiya Lal, I would be really telling my mind to this House on this question. In para. 58 of the Note, the Pandit says :

"In the course of our enquiry, we came across a large body of influential opinion, which favoured marriage legislation with a due provision for the grant of exemptions in exceptional and urgent cases ; and even some witnesses, both Hindu and Muslim, who were opposed to marriage legislation, agreed that that legislation was likely to be more acceptable if such a provision was made to cover suitable cases."

Sir, I venture to think that, in spite of the fact that the House has thrown out the amendment for twelve years, if the House passes this amendment it will mitigate to a very large extent the rigour of the law. Both the Muhammadian members of the Age of Consent Committee, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub and Khan Bahadur Mahabub Mian Imam Baksh Kadri, agree with the note of Pandit Kanhaiya Lal with regard to the exemption clause. I think, Sir, that when the Age of Consent Committee's Report is being cited for so many purposes, in support of this Bill, it will be followed also in this connection and the House will agree to the exemption clause.

Mr. President : As this turns out to be an important amendment, I should not like to have a division taken tonight. I should like the further discussion to continue tomorrow.

The House will now adjourn.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 19th September, 1929.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 19th September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

SIR SAMUEL WILSON'S REPORT ON EAST AFRICA.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : With reference to my short notice question on the 10th September regarding Sir Samuel Wilson's Report on his mission to East Africa, are Government now in a position to give the House any further information on the subject ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The Government of India are informed that Sir Samuel Wilson's Report will be published simultaneously in England and in East Africa on October 5 and are arranging its publication in India on the same date.

As to the Hilton-Young Report, the tentative decisions arrived at by the Government of India after consulting the Emigration Committee and the leaders of the various parties in the House were sent to the Secretary of State for India and will be laid on the table of the House. It is now intended to convene a meeting of the Emigration Committee at an early date to see if anything more should be done before Sir Samuel Wilson's Report is published. After the publication of Sir Samuel Wilson's Report, it will be necessary to consult the standing Emigration Committee on the Report soon after the publication of the Report, so that His Majesty's Government may be at once informed of our views on it. It is not possible that His Majesty's Government should defer consideration of the issue until the Legislative Assembly meets next Session, but it is most unlikely that any decision will be reached in Parliament before the Legislative Assembly has had an opportunity to record its views.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether this decision has been arrived at after considering the request of the Government of India to give the Assembly time to consider Sir Samuel Wilson's Report ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The date of publication of the Report has been fixed by His Majesty's Government. The Government of India's advice was that the Report should be published at a time which would give the Assembly an opportunity to discuss it before a final decision was taken.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if the Home Government have given the Government of India an undertaking that they will not come to any final decision on the Hilton-Young Report or Sir Samuel Wilson's Report before the Assembly could express its views upon them in the next Session ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I think, Sir, that question is answered in the last part of the reply which I have given, which is that it is most unlikely that any decision will be reached in Parliament before the Legislative Assembly has had an opportunity to record its views.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : That is only an expression of opinion. I am asking whether as a fact the Government of India have been informed by the Home Government that they will not take any decision before the Assembly has had an opportunity of arriving at a decision ?

( 1099 )

Sir Frank Noyce : I have given the Honourable Member all the information I am at present in a position to give him.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Am I to take it then that no such undertaking is in the possession of Government ?

Sir Frank Noyce : As I have said, Sir, I have given the Honourable Member all the information I am in a position to give him.

COMMUNICATION TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE re THE HILTON-YOUNG COMMISSION'S REPORT.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to put on the table a copy of their communication to the Secretary of State for India in connection with the recommendations of the Hilton-Young Commission Report regarding the East African problem ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I have placed on the table of the House a copy of the telegram which the Government of India despatched to the Secretary of State for India on the subject on the 19th March, 1929.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : May I ask whether that telegram contains the opinion of the Governor General in Council ?

Sir Frank Noyce : Certainly, Sir. The Honourable Member will himself see what it contains in the course of the next few minutes.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : I want to make sure now before I see it, because, as the Honourable Member knows, after seeing it there will be no time to put supplementary questions.

TELEGRAM P., TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, LONDON, No. 1124-S., DATED THE 19TH MARCH, 1929.

Immediate.—Hilton-Young Report has been examined and we now submit our views on main points. It is an eminently fair document and we earnestly hope that its basic principles will be accepted by His Majesty's Government and that High Commissioner will be deputed to conduct inquiries and consultations in terms suggested by Commission. Our comments are as follows :—

(a) Closer Union.—Size and influence of European settlers in Kenya create apprehension that in any scheme of closer union their political ideals will profoundly affect policy of central authority established to co-ordinate administration and policy in matters of common interest. For this reason plan of political coalescence, immediate or future, which would reduce three territories of Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika to provinces of unified State exercising both executive and legislative powers (cf. page 221 of Report) is open to objection from Indian stand-point. But we are not opposed to appointment of Governor General to co-ordinate native policy and administration of services like Customs and Transport, on the understanding that it is recognised that, (1) such step is not prelude to full-fledged political federation ; (2) Indians are adequately represented on General Advisory Council which Commission recommend should be set up in East Africa [(3) (a) page 289 of Report] ; and (3) headquarters of Governor General are located at centre free from racial animosities. Further if Governor General is appointed, his instrument of instruction should lay due emphasis on duty to enforce inter-racial justice in impartial spirit and with firm hand.

It is also suggested that Indian point of view be represented on Advisory Council proposed to be set up in London, and unofficial Indian representatives should be asked to participate in periodical conference, which Commission suggest should be held in London [(5) (a) and (6), page 289 of Report].

(b) Native Policy.—We gladly accept principle of paramountcy of native interests subject to condition that in practice principle should not be interpreted and applied to discriminate against immigrants of a particular race.

(c) Land settlement.—Indian settlers should be free to share on equal terms with Europeans in any scheme of land settlement that may be inaugurated by Government of Tanganyika after setting apart land to meet requirements of natives. Whatever position may have been in past, in future Indian demand for land settlement in Tanganyika and probably also in lowlands of Kenya is bound to be substantial. It is not suggested that financial facilities offered by His Majesty's Government to settlers from Great Britain should be extended to Indians.

(d) Association of immigrant communities in responsibilities and trusteeship of Government.—We should like to emphasise that such association should not be confined to representatives of European settlers only, but should include representatives of all immigrant communities.

(e) Kenya Legislative Council.—Chairman's proposals are not acceptable to us, but we welcome majority report as opening door to satisfactory settlement of vexed question of common versus communal electoral roll. Civilisation test is also approved in principle. On question of replacing four officials by four members nominated to represent native interests, stress should, we think, be laid on need for treating Indians as eligible to represent natives. It is, however, suggested that, if extension of experiment of replacing more officials by such representatives at some future date is contemplated, effect of such extension on Indian representation should be carefully examined.

(f) We agree to appointment of High Commissioner for local investigations and discussions, recommended by Commission, but attach great importance to allowing Government of India to send representative to East Africa to assist local Indians presenting their views to High Commissioner.

This is in continuation of our telegram No. 144-Os., dated the 14th ultimo.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC PETITIONS.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Chairman, Committee on Public Petitions) : Sir, I have the honour to lay a Report of the Committee on Petitions. There are 98 petitions, bearing 46,134 signatures, relating to the Child Marriage Bill. All these petitions are against the Bill.

BILLS PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, in accordance with rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules, I lay on the table the following Bills which were passed by the Council of State at their meeting held on the 18th September, 1929 :

- (1) A Bill further to amend the Indian Territorial Force Act, 1920, for a certain purpose.
- (2) A Bill further to amend the Indian Cotton Cess Act, 1923, for certain purposes.
- (3) A Bill further to amend the Indian Registration Act, 1908, for a certain purpose.
- (4) A Bill further to amend the Burma Salt Act, 1917, for certain purposes.
- (5) A Bill further to amend the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, for a certain purpose.
- (6) A Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, for certain purposes.

STATEMENT LAID ON THE TABLE.

PURCHASE OF STORES BY THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR INDIA.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I beg to lay on the table a statement furnished by the High Commissioner for India showing all cases in which the lowest tenders have not been accepted by him in purchasing stores for the Government of India during the half year ending the 30th June, 1929.

| £ s. d.146 5 0(British). | The Indenting Officer asked for supply of 300 gallons of a proprietary brand of enamel. Tenders were, however, invited, when the samples submitted were found to vary considerably in quality. With the concurrence of the Indenting Officer the order was divided equally between the lowest tenderer and another manufacturer in order that two qualities might be practically tested with a view to determine whether superiority of quality justified the use of the higher priced article. |

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Leader of the House) : Sir, with your permission, I should like to make a statement about the probable course of Government business during next week. On Monday, the 23rd instant, motions will be moved to take into consideration and also to pass the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes. The Report of the Select Committee on this Bill was presented to this House last Monday. On Wednesday, the 25th, the House will proceed to deal with the Supplementary Demands for Grants for expenditure of the Central Government (excluding Railways) for 1929-30. Thereafter two Resolutions—one regarding the formation of a Standing Committee for Roads, and the other on the subject of the Draft Convention regarding the machinery for fixing minimum wages in certain trades, of which the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra has given notice, will be taken up. On the same day motions will be made for taking into consideration and passing the following Bills which were passed by the Council of State :

1. A Bill further to amend the Indian Territorial Force Act, 1920, for a certain purpose.
2. A Bill further to amend the Indian Cotton Cess Act, 1923, for certain purposes.
3. A Bill further to amend the Indian Registration Act, 1908, for a certain purpose.
4. A Bill further to amend the Burma Salt Act, 1917, for certain purposes.
5. A Bill further to amend the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, for a certain purpose.
6. A Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, for certain purposes.

Copies of all these Bills have been laid on the table of this House today.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the amendment of Pandit Nilakantha Das to clause 11 of the Child Marriage Bill. But I understand that the amendment seeks to add a further clause to this Bill after clause 11. Therefore it is necessary that I should put clause 11 first to the vote and allow further discussion of that amendment afterwards.

The question is :

“ That clause 11 stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 11 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The House will now take up Pandit Nilakantha Das's amendment.

Mr. E. L. Price (Bombay : European) : Sir, I want to oppose this amendment. A number of communications which I got concerning this

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Bill asked me to support the age of 16 years. I had to refuse because I think we cannot rely on the support of Government for anything but 14 years ; and the real struggle, which is renewed over this amendment, is between the ages of 14 and 12.

Sir, those who are supporting this Bill look upon the inclusion of the age of 12 under the circumstances as being a stultification of the whole Bill. We kept out 12 from the front door ; they tried to pass it in through the window. We barred the window, and they are now trying to get it in through the back door. But I insist that the supporters of the Bill must guard all points of entry and keep out this fatal 12.

It seems to me, Sir, rather hard on Members who have stuck to their task through numerous divisions that Mr. Iyengar should reproach them for not talking. It seemed to us on this side that we could best serve the interests of the Bill by not adding to the wave of verbiage that proceeded from the obstructionists.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : I wanted you to apply your brain to the clauses.

Mr. E. L. Price : Thank you ! Sir, there is the difficulty of reasoning with the unreasonable, of placating the implacable, and of trying to remove prejudices that we know are ineradicable and have shown themselves so at every moment of the debate since the Bill was put before us for consideration, at the first meeting. Besides, Sir, how are we to know that the so numerous amendments put up from that side of the House are really serious ? I think I heard you, Sir, describe one of them as “ frivolous ” ; and I certainly heard a Member yesterday saying “ I am really serious this time ”, which is a pretty clear implication that on other occasions he had not been serious.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadian) : The Chair told you the other day that you were not a free agent ; you must remember that too.

Mr. E. L. Price : When the Honourable the Law Member yesterday represented what this amendment really would signify, when at last he spoke, he was assailed, not with argument, but with abuse. He had made it clear what this amendment would mean. Rich people can easily arrange affidavits ; they can hire a senior member of the bar to put those affidavits before the court, and there is every likelihood that that senior member will get attention. But what about the child ? Is the child going to be represented ? Is anybody going to put up an affidavit on her behalf—poor kiddy ? No ! The thing goes ex parte by default of the helpless child. The Honourable Pandit Malaviya represented yesterday that the habits as to these juvenile marriages affect the depressed classes also. If they do so, it seems to me it is quite obvious they do so as a result of the bad example set them by the higher castes ; and if you are going to do anything for the depressed classes in this matter, you have got to stop the bad example at the top, not allowing it a new method of carrying on and making, in fact, one law for the rich and another law for the poor. At the present time there is no legal justification for the marriage at 12. It is an evil custom and you want to eradicate it ; but if you permit this addition to the Bill, you actually introduce into the Bill that was ordained to prevent a bad custom, legal sanction for that bad custom.

[Mr. E. L. Price.]

Sir, the Honourable Pandit Motilal Nehru, when he first spoke, told us that the eyes of the world were on this Assembly. Letters and Press cuttings I have received by the air-mail seem to indicate that what the Honourable the Pandit said was perfectly correct. The eyes of the world are on this Assembly over this matter. It can be easily measured actually in terms of money, because newspapers will only pay for the cablegrams that interest their readers—quite obviously their readers are interested : There never was a time when the Press of the world outside India published so many cablegrams on any matter in India as they are doing over the Sarda Marriage Bill. I say this, Sir : adopt this amendment and legalise by the back-door the marriage at 12, and you bring this Assembly into contempt ; you paralyse social reform and you cover the best friends of India with confusion.

Mr. President : Before we proceed further, I wish to inform the House that I have just received notice of an amendment which is a very long one, from Mr. Mukhtar Singh on the same question. It has not been possible to distribute copies of the amendment at this late stage ; but if there is a general desire in the House that I should allow the Honourable Member to move his amendment, I shall have no objection.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kamaon Divisions . Muhammadan Rural) : Let us know what this amendment is.

Mr. President : It is a lengthy amendment.

Honourable Members : Notice.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member had a long time before him to give notice of an amendment of this character. How can there be any intelligent discussion on this amendment all at once on the spur of the moment, when Honourable Members have got no copies before them in time to understand what the amendment is ?

Mr. Mukhtar Singh (Meerut Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I be allowed to read it ?

Mr. President : Is there a general desire in the House to have this amendment moved ? (Cries of "No.")

Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Unless the House knows what the amendment is like, how can the House say whether they want it or not ?

Mr. President : I shall read the amendment to the House, and the House can then make up its mind whether it wants this amendment to be moved or not. The amendment is :

" That at the end of the Bill the following new clause be added :

' No marriage of a girl above the age of 12 years shall be deemed to be a child marriage within the meaning of this Act, if the parent or guardian solemnising the marriage has, prior to such solemnisation, obtained the sanction of the District Judge of the place where the girl ordinarily resides.

The District Judge, on application being made by the parent or guardian of a girl above the age of 12 years, stating the circumstances under which such parent or guardian deems it essential in the interests of the girl to marry her before the statutory age, shall inquire into the circumstances and, if he comes to the conclusion that the proposed marriage before the statutory age is in the best interests of the girl herself in so far as :

(a) there is no probability of the celebration of the proposed marriage within one year after the girl comes of the statutory age, or

(b) it is likely that the parent or guardian of the girl will not, owing to old age or infirmity, survive till she comes of age and there is none else fit to take care of her, or

(c) there are other unavoidable difficulties of a like nature justifying the grant of such sanction, the court may grant the sanction, provided the applicant furnishes security to the satisfaction of the court in respect of such conditions as separate living, custody or maintenance of the girl till the statutory age of consent, as the court in its discretion deems fit to impose."

Honourable Members have heard the amendment. Is it the general desire of the House to have this amendment ? (Cries of "No, no.") I am afraid I cannot allow this amendment at this stage.

Pandit Motilal Nehru (Cities of the United Provinces : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I heard the speeches in support of this amendment made from this side of the House yesterday and I went back home satisfied that this amendment need not be made in the original Bill ; but after hearing the speech of the last speaker, Mr. Price, I recalled to mind the community he comes from, and it struck me that there is something in this amendment which may benefit that community though not the other communities who have so far advocated it. I will explain why.

The reasons given yesterday were similar to those that were mentioned in the proposed amendment of Mr. Mukhtar Singh which has just been disallowed. They were want of means, old age of the parents, the possibility of there being no near relation when the girl attains the age of 14. All these reasons did not appeal to me at all, but I have been thinking whether there can conceivably be a case where it would be in the interest of the girl herself to be married under special dispensation. Now, it occurs to me that that would happen in a case where a man misbehaves with a girl of over 12 years of age and not quite 14. Now consider the consequences for a moment. So far as the Hindu law is concerned, of course her marriage is out of the question, and in that case the girl is doomed for ever. But now look at the question from the point of view of others than Hindus. If there has been such a case of misbehaviour, what is the best thing in the interest of the girl to do, if, as might happen, she conceives and bears a child. What will be the best thing in her interest to do in such a case ? She is less than 14 and she is more than 12. Cases of this kind have occurred in England, as we know from the Reports, and will occur in the future in all parts of the world. Now, let us consider the position of the girl herself, the poor kiddy, as Mr. Price styled her. She is of course to be pitied, but is that enough ? Should not the law leave some room for her to come back into decent life and not to remain for ever and ever under the stigma of a disgraceful motherhood, for which probably she was not responsible ? In a case like that, I think, the only course to adopt is to solemnise the marriage technically, to make the couple to go through the form of marriage, provided of course the two parties are consenting, and thus save the bitter consequences of a life of shame for the poor girl. If that is not done, the man who has offended against the rule as to the age of consent, will be tried and sentenced and after serving out the sentence, take no notice of the girl who will be left helpless. If she is a Hindu girl, she will in any case be discarded from society with nobody to look after or care for her. But so far as the non-Hindus are concerned, I think that there is a way to save that girl and that is to marry her under special dispensation, but that, I submit, would be impossible unless you have a provision to that effect in the Bill itself. Now, that, Sir, is what has occurred to me as the only possible case in which it may be said that the solemnisation of the marriage of a girl under 14 would be for her own benefit. I would, therefore, submit that as this Act is of general application and is not confined to Hindus, we must not overlook the interests of non-Hindus. I would therefore support the principle of this amendment in the interest of the girl and the girl alone and of no other....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member move his amendment ?

Pandit Motilal Nehru : I don't move any amendment. I simply support the principle of the amendment before the House in the special case I have mentioned.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I should like to say a few words at this stage to explain the reasons why, for my own part, I feel it necessary that this amendment must be opposed. It is indeed, as an Honourable Member who preceded me argued, a somewhat veiled attempt to defeat a decision at which this House, after very prolonged debate and mature deliberation, has arrived.

Now, Sir, I think the House would be extremely unwise and would, I think, put themselves in an extremely ambiguous position if they lent their support at this stage to an amendment which completely negatives or defeats their previous decisions, subject only to a qualification which, as I shall endeavour to establish, would make the case even worse. I submit that it is extremely important in the case of any law, more particularly in the case of any penal law, and more particularly still in the case of a penal law newly enacted in a sphere which has hitherto not been the subject of penal law, that that law should be clear, that its application should be precise and the principles on which it is administered should be uniform. Now, what does this amendment propose to do ? It proposes to place in the hands of hundreds of District Judges throughout India the substantial decision in each case as to what the law means, what is the principle behind it, and in what manner it ought to be applied and administered. I say, Sir, that it is an essentially vicious feature of the amendment. It makes the law uncertain, it deprives it of uniformity and it delegates in point of fact to an individual judicial officer what is the duty of the Legislature, namely, to lay down the principle of the Bill. What then would happen ? It might very well happen that, in cases of a similar character, you would obtain the most diverse decisions from the various District Courts throughout India. It might even happen that cases occurring in one district would be dealt with and decided on entirely different principles from similar cases in adjoining districts, according to the prejudices or the idiosyncracies of particular District Judges.

It is alleged, Sir, on behalf of those who supported this amendment, that it would go far to promote the popularity of the Bill. I venture to suggest, on the contrary, that it would have a completely opposite effect. The fact that different views were held by different Judges, that the law was uncertain, that there was no uniformity, in its application, and that the actual determination of its principles was left to individual judgments would, I think, in course of time, lead to such diversities, such irregularities, such inequalities of operation as would raise a very great measure of unpopularity and discontent on a Bill which otherwise in a very short time, as I venture to hope, would be accommodated to the social system. (Several Honourable Members on the Swarajist Benches : "No, no.")

Mr. A. Rangaswamy Iyengar : Not as you have framed it.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : So, what I urge is that if my prediction in any way approximates to the fact, then this House will either have to re-call the decisions at which they have already, with so much deliberation, arrived, or if this amendment is enacted, they will have to repeal it.

Pandit Motilal Nehru : On a point of explanation, Sir. I did not and had no intention of moving any amendment by a change of the wording. I simply threw out a suggestion to those sides of the House which might probably be affected if the principle of this amendment was not recognised. So far as I am concerned, I do not propose any amendment, nor do I support the amendment as it stands on the paper.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I have very carefully considered the merits of this amendment, and since yesterday evening I have had considerable time to apply my mind from all the points of view which were urged before this House yesterday and this morning by my esteemed friend Pandit Motilal Nehru. From the thought that I have been able to devote to this amendment, and with all the weight of Pandit Motilal Nehru's comments, I am compelled to come to the conclusion that in its present form, even from the point of view that Pandit Motilal Nehru has put forward, this amendment ought to be opposed. I am aware that the considerations which Pandit Motilal Nehru has mentioned are of a very grave character, and I expect that, before this law is put into force, we shall have to provide before long for the beneficial working of this Act a provision of the description that Pandit Motilal Nehru has in view. In fact, such a provision will be in a line with what other countries have provided, especially those where the marriageable age is high like 16 to 21 years and where the marriage is regarded as void if it is solemnised before that age, which this Bill does not do. All these countries, for the proper working of their matrimonial laws like the present Bill, have been compelled to resort to a provision like the one which Pandit Motilal Nehru has mentioned. But I submit with great respect to Pandit Motilal Nehru that the amendment, as it is worded and even with the modification which he has suggested, will not be useful for that purpose. (An Honourable Member : "You suggest one.") I am not suggesting one because it is difficult to do so off hand so as to provide for all the complexities of the case. But I do consider that it is a very grave consideration, and my opinion is that, before long, it would be necessary to have a carefully worded amendment so as to secure the object that my Honourable friend has in view.

The wording of the present amendment is far too wide for that purpose. First of all, if we take the analogy of those countries which have got a law like the amendment before us, its most distinguishing feature is that it is generally the supreme Court and sometimes the Crown advised by that court that generally takes measures to legitimatise the marriage,—not an inferior official like the District Judge. The power has always rested in the highest tribunal of the country which takes the necessary measures. I submit that the power given by this amendment to the District Judge is placed far too low for the purpose of any useful working of this amendment. My second objection is that the wording is far too wide, even accepting the modification that Pandit Motilal Nehru has mentioned. The words are : “the non-performance of which would mean hardship to the girl or her family”. First, I take the wording of this amendment as it stands. “Hardship to the girl or her family”. I can imagine several cases which will fall within these words, which can not be protected. Let us take the words, “hardship to the family”. Suppose a case occurs before the District Judge, where the facts are as follows : “The plea is that an I. C. S. husband is available for the girl at the age of 13. He has recently come from England, he is in a hurry to find a wife and is not going to wait until the girl is 14. He is in a hurry to marry, and it is a very desirable choice, no dowry, the man is intelligent and attractive and in every respect desirable. The father of the girl comes before the District Judge and argues that not to marry the girl in those circumstances is a positive ‘hardship to the girl or her family’.” The word in the amendment is “hardship”,—though not the kind of hardship that my Honourable friend Pandit Motilal Nehru has in view, it is a different kind of hardship. Take another case. Supposing an orthodox parent came to a District Judge and said : “My community has decided that if I do not accept their choice of a husband or marry the girl at the age and in the manner the caste jamat wants me to do, I shall have to pay a fine of Rs. 500, which my caste jamat may impose”. In such a case, not to perform the marriage is “a hardship to the family”. The District Judge will be very often persuaded to grant the application because the matter complained of falls within the meaning of the word “hardship”. But the most extravagant case was suggested by my Honourable friend Pandit Nilakantha Das yesterday. He practically gave to the House extreme instances which show in what way, in some cases, this amendment may come to be interpreted. His case was this : a man has three daughters ; he has very short privilege leave. He is allowed short leave to go to his province to solemnise the marriage, and he will not be allowed any extension of leave. In such a case it would be a “hardship” not to get all the three girls of 9, 11 and 14 years married together. Look at the absurd lengths to which the meaning of the word “hardship” will be taken in the cases cited by Pandit Nilakantha Das. He says that such cases ought to be protected. A father goes from the Punjab to the Deccan to solemnise the marriage of one daughter, he has no time to go there again within the next three years because he won't obtain leave. He has no money to spend for each separate marriage. Therefore it is suggested that, in such a case, protection ought to be given by enabling the father to marry the daughter who is above 14 along with those who are below 14. In other words, to put the matter pointedly before the House, what would be an offence in a single instance should cease to be so when part of a series ; what is an offence in the case of one marriage ceases to be so in the case of three marriages solemnized together.

These are some of the difficulties which are sure to arise if we allow the word “hardship” to remain. At the same time, from my experience of the Hindu Law and from what I see clearly before me, the point which Pandit Motilal Nehru has put before the House deserves serious consideration, namely, that in certain cases,—an occasion may arise when we may have to make provision to have the marriage performed before the prescribed age limit. That is a very grave consideration, and I think that a proper amendment carefully worded would have to be brought before the House, restricting protection to the specific case that Pandit Motilal has in view. The man who has contact with a girl at the age of 13 is an offender, but the girl may have to be protected by solemnizing the marriage, if certain contingencies arise ; but I do submit that the House should not pass this amendment in a hurry, widely worded as it is. As my Honourable friend Mr. Price pointed out, this amendment tries to take a coach and four through the provisions of this measure and may let in all manner of exceptions by the backdoor. The meritorious purpose of the Bill is likely to be defeated by our accepting the amendment, worded as it is, in a hurry, but I ask the Government to apply their minds seriously to the weighty considerations which Pandit Motilal Nehru has placed before us and bring in a properly worded amendment. I shall certainly support it at the right time.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, on behalf of those whose views I have been trying to voice in this House I desire just to make a few observations. I have tried to follow the arguments which have been advanced so far and I must candidly admit that I do not ardently desire the amendment that is now before the House. I do fear that there may be more cases protected by this amendment than deserve to be protected. I am glad my friends begin to perceive the law will work hard on some. I am glad to see that already sanity is returning and I hope that it will completely return sooner than most people expect. But whatever we do, let us do it frankly and candidly. I do not believe that those whose views I represent would care to have an amendment like this, that they would go to the District Judge and beg of him to permit a marriage. I do not think any self-respecting man would care to resort to that course. I am very glad that the Honourable the Leader of the Congress Party has let the cat out of the bag. I know that when this law is passed, in a few years we shall be getting social conditions in India very much like those obtaining in very many “civilised” countries. Parental authority will be disregarded. Girls will begin to make their own choice in their own way. Such cases must come of indiscreet love episodes. That is what you are providing for by this Bill and I believe that a situation will soon come when we shall have to change the law in all seriousness. Suppose a girl of 12 or 13, without the knowledge of her parents, commits some misdemeanour with a boy of 17 or 18, the parents will want to hush it up and get them married and, as the Honourable the Law Member put it, it is not the girl of a poor family that will get the benefit of this. The rich man's daughter will be able to employ a good lawyer to go before the District Judge and plead all sorts of justifications. The poorer children, who may better deserve protection, will not get the benefit of the law.

L14CPB(LA)

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

They may not even have the necessary means to go before a District Judge ; and so they will not get the protection which they deserve. I therefore feel that the deserving cases that will be protected will be so few and the cases that do not deserve to be protected but will get the protection will be so many that it is very dangerous to have an amendment of this kind. As my friend the President of the Hindu Sabha declared, you are deliberately going in for a new change in the Hindu social order. There will be abductions and seductions and things of that kind. My friend, the Editor of the Hindu, has been carried off his feet in trying to make out a case for this amendment. If we are going to penalise marriages before 14, let us do it frankly, knowing all the immoral consequences that will follow and not protect ourselves in a manner which is unworthy of the House and unworthy of the country to which I have the honour to belong.

Mr. M. Keane (United Provinces : Nominated Official) : I should like to say a few words by way of supplement to the statement of general principles and difficulties that was enunciated by the Home Member. When the Bill originally came before the House, Honourable Members will remember that there was a proposal that marriages solemnised before the age mentioned in the Bill should be held to be void. That met with so much opposition that the provision had to be dropped. It seems to me that, in dropping that particular provision, a solution was already given to the difficulty which the Honourable Pandit Motilal expressed this morning. In the circumstances referred to, it will be open to the parties still to solemnise the marriage. The amendment provides, that the court should first be approached to give its sanction to such a marriage. If the court is willing, in such circumstances, to give its sanction to the marriage, the same court or any other court, if the marriage did take place, would not be prepared to view with severity the solemnisation of such a marriage, and at the same time it would safeguard us against what I consider would be a dangerous principle that of inserting in the Bill that the court may give its sanction to circumstances which were in themselves reprehensible, circumstances in which the man concerned must have been guilty of the gravest crime which we know. We would safeguard the principle of refusing sanction in such circumstances without preventing the solemnisation of marriage, that is to say, the marriage would not be invalid, but the Act would still remain and the offence would remain. The man would not be punished severely for the performance of a marriage which the court, according to the amendment, would have been ready to condone from the very start. That is a practical consideration which I think we ought to keep before our minds in dealing with this amendment ; and furthermore, Sir, I think that, if we did allow an amendment of this sort to be inserted in the Bill, we should to some extent be condoning, and more, encouraging, reprehensible relations between the different sexes at ages below the age in the Bill. That is a principle that we should resist to the very utmost, so that from the two points of view, the point of view of principle and of practical difficulty, I think it would be far better to let the Bill stand as it is ; solemnisation of the marriage, though due to circumstances which in themselves are worthy of condemnation, will stand valid, and if the case comes before a court, no court will be willing to punish it with severity. These are the practical considerations, Sir, that I would like to put before Honourable Members before they are carried away by the argument of the Honourable the Pandit. (Cheers.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I pity the Mover of this amendment for the way in which his humble efforts to mitigate the evils of vindictive legislation have been interpreted by different Members. I regret the interpretation that has been given to this amendment by bringing in the instance of a certain community who are very few in number in this country, and a very ugly charge has been made against that community to which I do not subscribe. It is, Sir, at all times very undesirable for one community to pick out the dirty spots of another community and hold them up to ridicule by posing as their friend and urging that the amendment should be negated on that ground. I support Pandit Nilakantha Das's amendment. He, Sir, is not only a social reformer himself, but his province also supports this legislation. In spite of that fact, when a man like Pandit Nilakantha Das comes forward with an amendment like this, it deserves to be considered carefully by this House. Sir, I am very sorry that, in this matter, two gentlemen who happen not only to hail from my province but also happen to belong to the same caste as myself, have put forward arguments against the amendment. The argument of the Honourable the Law Member has been that, by a rich man, the provisions of this salutary amendment can be defeated with the help of astute lawyers. I do not know whether it will please the Honourable Members on the opposite Benches, and especially the Leader of the House, when they hear such remarks against the administration of Justice in this land, namely, that an astute lawyer always diverts the course of justice. If that is the machinery that has been put in this country in the sacred name of law and justice, I beg to observe that the sooner that machinery goes away or, if it does not go away, the sooner it is replaced by something better, the better for this country. But I do not think that the Honourable the Law Member was very serious when he submitted such arguments before this House, for he ought to have been aware, during his pretty long practice at the bar, with his ability, with his forensic skill and advocacy, in how many cases he has been able to divert the course of justice. Probably he was saying something in which he did not believe, but as the Government want to oppose this amendment, some argument, some clever argument and the argument of an astute lawyer was needed, however unacceptable. No sensible man I think will place the least faith upon an argument like that, and I think even the newest member of the judiciary in this land will not be misguided by the arguments of astute lawyers. Another gentleman from Bengal has been very hard upon my poor friend when he attempted to ridicule, without advancing any argument on his behalf, the idea of compulsion, and he wanted to know what compulsion is. It were better if he had not said things like that. Sir, gentlemen marrying their own daughters below ten years of age come and castigate real social reformers like Pandit Nilakantha Das ! These are sights for the Gods to see ; and if I am not disclosing any secret, I may tell you that, when there was a comparison of how each of us had married our own daughters, and when I gave out that I did not marry my own daughter below fourteen (Hear, hear), and when I asked my friend, " Why did you marry your daughter at less than ten years of age ? ", he said, " I was compelled ". Compulsion—and what kind of compulsion ! My

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, with his toleration and liberality of views, has shown his sympathy for those unfortunate kiddies who mis-behave themselves at the age of twelve and would try to find a place for them in society. I sympathise with him. I also believe that derelicts of society, as soon as they make amends, should be taken back into society. But at the same time, when he ridicules the idea that if a father gets an I. C. S. husband for his daughter, it would be a case of hardship if the father is not allowed to marry the girl at an age below fourteen, he is wrong. Mr. Jayakar and his friends who roll in wealth, who have ample resources, who can purchase bridegrooms for several lakhs of rupees for their daughters, fail to remember that everyone is not rolling in wealth, and that, not to speak of lakhs, even a few thousands are too much for poor men like Pandit Nilakantha Das and ourselves; and he ought to have at least tried to consider, tried by his imagination to place himself in the position of people like ourselves who cannot afford to lose an I. C. S. son-in-law when we can get him, were it not for this rule. As for the former Member from Bengal who said that he was compelled, well, I ask, why was he compelled? Was it not because he got a rich son-in-law? Sir, I will not reply to the many observations that have been made and the many abuses that have been hurled at the devoted head of Pandit Nilakantha Das, characterising this amendment as frivolous.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Nobody characterised it as frivolous.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Mr. Price called it frivolous. Sir, I will not use the same language which members of other communities have used towards the members of the Indian communities, both Hindus and Mussalmans. They have called it an evil custom, but before characterising any custom as evil, they ought to have been careful enough to know what custom this amendment wants to do away with and to safeguard against. But they would not apply their minds to the amendment itself. It is because cases of hardship do occur, which compel a man of this world to act, that he has asked the House to consider his amendment. I was also surprised to hear from the Leader of the House that different courts will interpret this section in different lights. I believe my Honourable friend at least sat on the Bench of a District Court for some time. If he did so, I would like to call to his memory how many times he failed to appreciate the true meaning of a law enacted by this Legislature? Is the wording of the amendment so bad as it has been described to be? It should be remembered that this amendment has been drafted by a layman. But what about the draft of the original Bill, which has been done by so many lawyers and which shows an unhappy specimen of legislative draftsmanship? Sir, they ought to have been ashamed of that draftsmanship before blaming my friend, who is, after all, a layman. Be that as it may, the position that has been taken that different courts will take different views of this amended section, is untenable. Is not there a superior court of appeal sitting over them to have the laws enunciated for the guidance of the subordinate courts if they vary in their interpretation? But I forget that, when it suits them, they become oblivious of all facts and try to say things which are not correct and impose them upon unwary Members of this House who would not discriminate between right and wrong. Sir, I am sorry also that the Honourable the Leader of the House had no faith in the wisdom and the administration of justice of the subordinate judiciary of this land. I do not know if he has faith even in the High Courts of this country or in the Privy Council; but because a certain Judge may not be able to appreciate clearly meaning of a certain section, is that any reason why it should be rejected? He stands self-condemned by condemning his own judiciary and also by condemning their intelligence. Be that as it may, I submit that the reasons advanced by the Honourable the Mover of this amendment are quite cogent and people who are not deaf to all reasoning and are not blind to all sense of decency in this matter will support this amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That at the end of the Bill the following new clause be added :

‘ Nothing in this Act shall apply to a case of child marriage where the girl married is not below 12 years of age and where any one of the contracting parties or their parents or guardians has obtained the sanction of the principal court of civil jurisdiction upon an application made prior to the solemnisation of the marriage stating the circumstances under which he is compelled to solemnise the marriage the non-performance of which would mean hardship to the girl or her family ’.”

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That after clause 11 of the Bill the following new clause be added :

- ‘ 12. (1) Whenever any person accused of an offence under sections 3, 4 and 6 of the Act is convicted and the Court is of opinion that it is necessary to prevent the husband from consummating the marriage or cohabiting with the wife before the completion of the statutory age of consent the Court may order him to execute a bond with or without sureties for a sum proportionate to his means.
- (2) The bond to be executed shall bind the person convicted under section 3 or 4 of the Act to abstain from consummating the marriage and cohabiting with his wife till the statutory age of consent, and the person convicted under section 6 to be responsible for such abstention by his son or ward as the case may be and to that end impose such conditions as the Court considers suitable for instance separate living, custody and maintenance of the wife.
- (3) If any person ordered to execute a bond fails to comply with such order, he shall, unless he is already in prison, be committed to prison and kept imprisoned until such time as he complies with the order or the statutory age of consent of the girl-wife is reached.
- (4) Imprisonment for failure to execute a bond shall be simple.
- (5) Sections 122, 126, 126-A and 406-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall apply as far as may be to sureties of such bonds ’.”

Sir, in moving the amendment, I have followed the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee which they have made in this particular at page 182 of the Report. They say :

“ We recommend that the court trying a case of contravention of the marriage law be empowered to require the offender or conviction to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for separate living, custody and maintenance of the girl and for preventing the husband from consummating the marriage before she completes the statutory age of consent, and that the provisions of sections 122, 126, 126A and 406A of the Code of Criminal Procedure be extended so as to make them applicable, as far as may be, to sureties in cases of breach of marriage law. Consequent upon the above recommendation in respect of separate living, custody and maintenance of girls and similar recommendations made elsewhere, we recommend that suitable aid and encouragement be afforded to the establishment of institutions giving protection to girls dealt with under such recommendations ”.

Now, Sir, the reasons for this recommendation of the Age of Consent Committee are obvious. Whatever may the other effects of early marriage, one effect which appeals to every right minded man is that, in many cases there is early consummation, and the evil effects of early consummation need not be detailed before the House now. If a husband is subsequently convicted under the Age of Consent law, the hardship to himself, to the family and to the girl is obvious. In this connection, with your permission, I will read out from one of the dissenting minutes to the Report of the Age of Consent Committee.

This is from page 247 of the Report :

“ Let the reader visualise in his imagination the condition of a devoted and pious girl wife of 15½, pregnant with a child and expecting delivery, while the husband is being hauled up for misbehaviour with the prospect of being sent to jail. Where is a girl who will not be tempted in such circumstances to have recourse to miscarriage to conceal the evidence of her person? What girl would not prefer suicide to save her lord from the consequences of an act which is supposed to have injured her and in which she participated as a result of the concurrence of the parents of the couple in uniting them before holy fire into indissoluble communion? It is said that the condition of a mother in her pregnant state affects the whole tenor of the future of the child. If it is true, the reader has to draw on his own imagination to divine how the unfortunate child of such union, the result of which is the incarceration of the father in jail with the mother brooding during her pregnancy over her misfortune and cursing herself and the offspring for it, will be affected.”

“ What one would expect in the ordinary wife is clear. The period of the stay of the husband in jail will be a period of great torture to the girl wife at home. If the husband is fined, the fine shall come out of the share of her bread and the milk of her young babe. Day in and day out, the mother-in-law and other relations will curse the young lady for having brought trouble on the family. This inauspicious lady will hardly find comfort at her father's. But the death of the husband in jail opens a chapter which few hard-hearted people will be able to read with equanimity.”

Now, Sir, it is clear that, so far as offences under the penal law relating to the age of consent are concerned, it is indisputable that such offences are very difficult of detection and of proof. And if this House wants that the evil effects of early consummation should be obviated, then it is necessary to provide that in case of conviction a bond should be taken from the offending accused to postpone the consummation and cohabitation with his wife. An analogous provision is to be found in section 106 of the Code of Criminal Procedure where, on conviction in respect of certain offences, the courts are competent even today to ask for such bonds. Wherever it is the policy of law to prevent recurrence of any offence, it always insists that bonds of this nature should be taken. The Age of Consent Committee in their Report have recommended that as a corollary to the law of the Age of Consent, the courts should be armed with such powers on the occasion of conviction under the Age of Consent law. They further recommended, as I have read out from their Report, that in the case of breach of marriage laws also, the courts should be so armed. It can be said that this provision will involve too much of interference with human liberty and will place certain restrictions on them, which will be very unpleasant to the people in general. But my submission is that, if you are going to have a penal law, then you have to place a certain amount of restriction upon human liberty, and I maintain that the restriction sought to be placed upon human liberty by this provision will be much less than the restriction which would be placed by having recourse to the law relating to the age of consent. Out of two evils the House has to choose which is the smaller evil. To give an illustration, Sir, suppose a girl of ten has been married to a man of 30. In a case like this the husband can be sent to jail and he can be made to undergo simple imprisonment for one month at the most. After that is done the husband and the wife live together and all those difficulties which beset the prosecution in a case under the age of consent law will be there. The offence of marital misbehaviour will be most difficult to prove, because the girl will not give evidence and the relations will not give evidence. The actual fact of consummation will be most difficult to prove, as I have submitted, and therefore girls so circumstanced will not be protected.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

Now, Sir, I do not think that breaches of the law of marriage will be very few, at least in the first years of the operation of this Act. In regard to such breaches, unless and until we have a provision of this nature in the Statute-book, it will be most difficult to insist that husbands will not cohabit with wives below the age of 15. I would therefore submit that, considering the question from all sides, this provision is one which is on the line of least resistance. If the provision of the consent law is enforced in its rigidity, I am quite sure that the measure of dissatisfaction and disaster in the country will be much greater than if this proposed measure is put into practice.

As regards the bonds, Sir, I have taken the phraseology from section 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code. So far as I could, I have followed the very words, because, as you know, these words have been the subject of judicial interpretation. The provision in paragraph 3 may seem to be a bit hard, but I do not know how it could be altered. Under the circumstances I have kept it in the form in which it is found in the amendment. The imprisonment provided is simple, but it is always within the competence of the accused to give a bond of this nature and get his release. In these circumstances I submit that this amendment should be accepted by the House.

The Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter (Law Member) : Sir, I oppose this amendment. The object of the amendment is to prevent consummation or cohabitation before the completion of the statutory age of consent. My first objection is that the amendment is not necessary, because we have already got the law of consent, and therefore no further measure is necessary for that purpose. Sir, the premise or the circumstances under which the court has to act under the amendment is, "When the Court is of opinion that it is necessary to prevent the husband from consummating the marriage or cohabiting with his wife before the completion of the statutory age of consent". If you use the phrase "When the Court is of opinion", you imply that the court has got to judge of the facts and come to a decision. But in this case there is no room for the court to exercise its judgment, because the law has fixed the age of consent and has defined the offence in that behalf. Therefore, the phrase, "When the Court is of opinion", etc., is meaningless.

My first objection to this amendment therefore is that it is unnecessary, and secondly, that it is meaningless. The third objection is this : the court has to order the execution of a bond directing the husband to abstain from consummating the marriage ; it will be absolutely infructuous, because in order to enforce a bond you will have to inquire into matters which are impossible of inquiry, unless by some inquisitorial process you pry into the innermost life of the people, which no Legislature ought to encourage. And since the enforcement of the bond would be infructuous, I object to the proposal on the ground that the Legislature ought not to impose upon the court a duty which the court cannot, in ordinary circumstances, perform. There is a well-known principle, Sir, that courts do not act in vain. If you pass this amendment you will be asking the court to do something which it is impossible for the court to do, and therefore the order will be in vain. My objection therefore is on the grounds that it is unnecessary, secondly that it is meaningless, thirdly that it is impossible of enforcement, and lastly, that, even if it be possible of enforcement, it will be much too inquisitorial.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That after clause 11 of the Bill the following new clause be added :

- ' 12. (1) Whenever any person accused of an offence under sections 3, 4 and 6 of the Act is convicted and the Court is of opinion that it is necessary to prevent the husband from consummating the marriage or cohabiting with the wife before the completion of the statutory age of consent, the Court may order him to execute a bond with or without sureties for a sum proportionate to his means.
- (2) The bond to be executed shall bind the person convicted under section 3 or 4 of the Act to abstain from consummating the marriage and cohabiting with his wife till the statutory age of consent, and the person convicted under section 6 to be responsible for such abstention by his son or ward, as the case may be, and to that end impose such conditions as the Court considers suitable for instance separate living, custody and maintenance of the wife.
- (3) If any person ordered to execute a bond fails to comply with such order, he shall, unless he is already in prison, be committed to prison and kept imprisoned until such time as he complies with the order or the statutory age of consent of the girl-wife is reached.
- (4) Imprisonment for failure to execute a bond shall be simple.
- (5) Sections 122, 126, 126A and 406A of the Code of Criminal Procedure shall apply, as far as may be, to sureties of such bonds."

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir, I beg to move :

"That after clause 11 of the Bill the following new clause be added :

- ' The Government shall, for the proper and efficient working of the provisions of this Act, make rules or authorise the Local Governments to make rules, providing among other matters :
- (a) for the compulsory registration of marriages enjoining upon the contracting parties in case they are not minors and upon parents and guardians if the contracting parties are minors to report within a prescribed time the factum of such marriage,
- (b) for prescribing the form of registers and reports and particulars to be contained in such reports and registers.
- (c) for issue of marriage certificates free of charge or at nominal charge to the person reporting,
- (d) for grant of copies from such registers and reports, and
- (e) for authorizing officers in charge of such registration to make complaints in suitable cases of infraction of such rules and the provisions of this Act."

In making this amendment I have followed the suggestion given by the Age of Consent Committee in paragraph 329 of their Report wherein the subject matter of this amendment has been discussed by them. They recommend as follows :

"that an accurate marriage register in a prescribed form be kept, through an administrative department of Government, containing details of marriages, including the ages of the couple, and that it be made obligatory by law on parties and guardians of parties to the marriage, either personally or through authorised agents, to report the same to a prescribed local authority :

That the officer keeping the register of marriages be empowered and also be charged with the duty to complain of any breach of the marriage law, or any omission to report a marriage or of a false entry in the details required in the registration of marriages, to the nearest magistrate having jurisdiction to try such cases, after such preliminary inquiry as he thinks fit to make.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

We also recommend that the registers of marriage be permanently retained, and that certificates of marriage be issued to the parties concerned free of cost, when the marriage is reported."

Sir, even before the Report of this Committee saw the light of day, as a Member of the Select Committee I brought it to the attention of the Select Committee that there should be some provision in this Bill for registration of marriages and empowering the Registrars of Marriages to make complaints. But unfortunately that suggestion did not find support and I could only put in my dissenting note. In the Baroda State where this law relating to marriage was perhaps first enacted, there is a system of registration of marriages, and as soon as a report is made to the Nyayadhish, he considers such report as a complaint on which he exercises jurisdiction. Automatically, as soon as a report of a marriage is made and it is found out by the Registrar that an offence has been committed in relation to any of the provisions of the Act, he sends a report and the report is treated as a complaint. The way in which this provision has been successful in Baroda has emboldened the Age of Consent Committee to make this suggestion, and I think this is one of the few constructive suggestions that the Committee have made in regard to the proper and efficient working of this Act. Now, in regard to the discussion of this Bill, I have seen that the Mover as well as the Government have taken up an attitude that not a comma is to be changed in the Bill. May I tell them this? That this amendment does not seek to make any change at all, but that it only adds another clause to the Bill. Sir, the amendment moved by Pandit Nilakantha Das was opposed by the Government and other Members of the House on the ground that they are not going to allow any the smallest loophole for any person who is accused of an offence like this and who can be convicted under the law to look askance at the Bill. I am in entire agreement with the principle that every case of infraction of the provisions of this Act should be brought to court and that this Bill should be rigorously enforced. But, Sir, after going through the provisions of the Bill which have been passed by the House, I cannot refrain from remarking that the provisions that we have so far passed do not reflect great credit upon us. Some of them are mutually conflicting. I find a provision that every person is entitled to complain so far as offences under this Act are concerned : and whereas that right is given in one clause, it is practically taken away when great insistence is laid by other provisions of the Bill that every person who comes with a good case should deposit security to the extent of Rs. 100. Now, Sir, I presume that when the entire community is not imbued with sympathy with this Bill, it will sometimes happen—perhaps it will happen in many cases—that it will be the enemy alone who will move the provisions of this Act, because the provision contained in clause 11 will debar many public-spirited men from poking their noses into other people's affairs, when to start with the court shall make an initial presumption that the case which is brought before it is false or frivolous. If an enemy wants to move this law, he will go to a law court and he will try to harass the accused in every possible way ; all the disadvantages which flow from private prosecutions will be found in the operation of this Act...

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is now going through the whole Bill.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : And he did not support us at that time.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am only submitting, Sir, that unless and until the amendment I have proposed is accepted, there is no provision in the Bill for the automatic working of this Bill. The acceptance of this amendment of mine is the acid test of the sincerity of the Government. If the Government want that a feeling should go abroad that the Government have passed this law, I think the feeling will be ill-founded and I think the Government are not justified in taking the credit of being a party to the passing of this law, unless they accept this amendment. My amendment provides that the Government will make rules for the automatic working of this Act and that a public officer will be entitled to make complaints. Unless and until the Government undertake to have complaints of this sort made by their own officers and to defray the expenses of the prosecution, the Government will not be discharging their duty.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What about your personal income at the profession? Will you not be a loser thereby?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am generally very happy when interruptions come from my friend, Mr. K. Ahmed, because they generally tend to amuse some of my friends ; but if, in a matter of this importance, my friend has got such a light heart, I have nothing but pity for him. Sir, I might clear the ground at this stage as to what I mean by registration.

Let not some of my friends think that I am in favour of civil registration of marriages of Hindus and Mussalmans. The registrations which is mentioned in my amendment only means reporting after the marriage has taken place just as the births and deaths are reported....

Mr. K. Ahmed : You have got the Kazi's Act.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Unfortunately the Kazi's Act does not extend to the whole of India, nor does it enjoin upon every person to have compulsory registration. The suggestions contained in my amendment is that, in every case, there should be a registration after the marriage has taken place, and as soon as the registration has taken place, the Registrar should compare that report with the entry in the Birth Register and see for himself if the law has been broken. If he finds that the law has been broken, it will be easy for him to find out what the age of the girl is and then he shall lay the complaint before a competent officer, and the case will run its course.

Now, Sir, clause 8 of the Bill provides for preliminary investigation. What will be the preliminary investigation without a Marriage Register or a good Birth Register? I know that, so far as the accuracy of these registers goes, it differs in different provinces. The Age of Consent Committee took great care and trouble in finding out the accuracy of Birth and Death Registers in the various parts of India, and they came to the conclusion that at present they are not regularly kept. They have made recommendations in this behalf more for the efficient working of the marriage law than for the efficient working of the consent law, and my own submission is that, unless and until you have this Register and also this provision for automatic complaints to come before the courts, this law will not work well and in many cases malefide complaints against accused will come to courts to the harassment of the accused, in spite of the provisions contained in clauses 8 and 11. After all, if I go to a court of law and submit to the court that the age of the girl is 13 instead of being 14, the court cannot make me liable for a statement of that nature, because after all I can plead that this is my information and I have no means of finding out the age of the girl. It is therefore necessary, in the interest of the efficient working of this Act, that my amendment should be accepted and that the Government should make rules in relation to matters which are mentioned herein. If however the Government cannot make rules for the whole of India on a uniform basis, then they should delegate their powers of rule-making to the Local Governments who will make rules in consonance with their own requirements and the facilities which they at present have for the registration of births and deaths.

Then, again, Sir, even if this principle of automatic working of the Act is not accepted by the Government, I would humbly ask them as to how they visualise, the prosecutions will succeed in the absence of the registration of marriages and the accurate registration of births? How will they help the courts to come to a correct finding on the question of the age of the girl or of the boy unless upon the basis that there is a marriage report and an entry in the Birth Register. In a case of a breach of the marriage law also, under this Bill the relations of the accused will not be disposed to go against the accused. It will be those people who will have the fullest information about the age of the girl, and a stranger cannot be expected to be accurate in this matter.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why did not all your colleagues agree with you in the Committee in this matter?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : My friend is sadly mistaken in thinking that my colleagues did not agree with me in this matter. He is perhaps more mistaken in other matters, because I do not think he has taken the trouble of reading this Report, otherwise he would have found that, so far as the main recommendations are concerned, not a single Member dissented, and I cannot congratulate the Government when they accept the recommendations of this Committee when it suits them and do not care for other recommendations which would really help the efficient working of this Act.

Now, Sir, I know what the objection of the Mover to this amendment is. He is of opinion that, after this Act has worked for a year or two, there will be time enough to see how this Act is to be worked in future. With great humility and with great deference to him, I beg to submit that when you want to enact a penal law, you must be absolutely clear in your minds how the law is going to work. It would not do to say that, as you had no time you could not accept the amendment. If you have no time now, I do not think you will ever find the time to accept an amendment of this character. If the Government is really anxious that every case of infraction should come before the courts, then this is the really only way which the Committee, after 10 or 11 months of labour, have been able to find out. I therefore submit, Sir, that this amendment should be accepted by the House even if the Government do not accept it.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : Sir, I fully appreciate the excellent intensions which have inspired the Honourable Member in moving this amendment, but I regret that I find it necessary to oppose it. The reasons why I do so are that I consider it premature and unnecessary and also, if I may say so, somewhat misplaced and misconceived. In the first place, a measure of this character is not an appropriate place for provisions relating mainly to the administrative question of registration. I do not deny for a moment that if we had a complete compulsory system of registration of births, deaths and marriages throughout India, it would be very valuable for many purposes,—it would be valuable incidentally for purposes of this Bill. But there are very strong practical reasons against it. In the first instance, the question of registration is, as Honourable Members are aware, not only a provincial subject, but a transferred provincial subject, which is under the control of Ministers. It is certainly true that it is subject to legislation by this House, but only under certain restrictions. It is subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature in respect of such classes as the Indian Legislature may determine. Now, that particular provision which gives jurisdiction to the Indian Legislature to legislate in respect of certain classes, doubtless has reference to certain Acts already on the Statute-book which provide for the registration of marriages of Parsis, Indian Christians and Brahmo Samajists, but my Honourable friend's proposal would extend this legislation or statutory orders to all classes. There is, therefore, to my mind, some preliminary doubt whether this House could legally legislate in the matter at all. But there are even stronger reasons why they could not properly legislate. The Honourable Member has referred to the recommendations of the Committee of which he was an important Member. I venture to say that the colleagues of my Honourable friend on the Committee seem to me to have grasped the administrative aspects of the question somewhat more fully than the Honourable Member himself. They say, for instance :

“The question what agency should undertake the work of registering marriages has been discussed by several witnesses. We have not however the material before us to make specific recommendations on the subject. It is possible that it may vary in different provinces and that some existing department of a local Government may be empowered to discharge this duty.”

If we were now to impose upon the provinces, without consultation with them and without giving them any opportunity of considering the matter in all its bearings, we should, I think, whether we have got the legislative authority or not, be invading very unduly what is a provincial subject, which is subject to provincial conditions which we here are not fully in a position to take account of. It would necessarily involve a great deal of expenditure and a very great extension of the existing establishments. Further, as the Committee themselves have recognised, it may very well be that, in some provinces, the particular machinery to be adopted may be different in some respects from the machinery in other provinces. In short, I submit that we have not before us, as the Committee themselves have admitted that they had not, sufficient material to enable us to come to a conclusion. Furthermore, even if we had that material, we should be acting very unwisely if, at this stage, we took any final determination in the matter when the whole question, along with other questions, has already been referred to Local Governments for their opinion and for their careful consideration. I think, for the present, the House will be well advised to leave it at that, and it will be extremely unwise now to endeavour to come to any conclusions at this stage which would necessarily be uninformed and which would necessarily fail to take account of important provincial conditions which are really essential to a proper and effective disposal of the question.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : My Honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava has rightly laid stress on this point of the registration of marriages in moving his amendment. In urging the House to accept the amendment, he has particularly drawn attention to the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee. They are contained in paragraphs 325 to 329 of the Report. The Honourable Sir James Crerar has tried to show that the Committee themselves did not think that there were sufficient materials before them to make any definite recommendations. If the amendment of my Honourable friend is properly read by the Honourable the Leader of the House he will find that the points on which the Committee felt doubtful have been left out by him to be covered by the rules to be framed by the Government of India (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : "Or by the Local Governments.") or by the Local Governments. On those points as regards which the Committee could not make any definite recommendations my Honourable friend also does not want this House to commit itself to any particular position. He only wants this House to commit itself to one particular thing, namely, that a register of marriages should be kept. On that point there has been no difference of opinion so far as I can see from the Report among the members of the Committee, and if my Honourable friend the Home Member agrees that such registration is an indispensable condition for the proper working of the Act about which he is so anxious, and if he agrees that it is also the opinion of this Committee, then I think that there is no option left to him but to accept this amendment. I also want my Honourable friend Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava to note that this Bill is not being supported by the Government on seeking inspiration from the Report of the Age of Consent Committee. On the other hand, the Age of Consent Committee has taken its inspiration from the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill. Only on those points which the Select Committee had already recommended, we find that the Government are very enthusiastic about the Report of the Age of Consent Committee, and they hold it up before the House and say, "Here is a practically unanimous Report and the Honourable Members of this House must accept it." But in matters which the Select Committee have not considered, the Government think this Report to be only a document which requires to be seriously considered by themselves before they can come to any conclusions whatever. It means this, that, on points which the Select Committee of this House have considered and have come to conclusions and the Government find a corroboration of those conclusions in this Report, they are prepared to accept the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee, but in other matters they think that the Members of the Age of Consent Committee had not sufficient materials before them, and therefore the Government can not accept their recommendations and must come to independent conclusions after making independent inquiries. That is the meaning of the attitude of the Honourable the Leader of the House. I want that to be brought to the notice of the Members of the Age of Consent Committee who have been very enthusiastic and vociferous in asking this House to accept their recommendations in toto. I support the amendment of my Honourable friend.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That after clause 11 of the Bill the following new clause be added :

'The Government shall for the proper and efficient working of the provisions of this Act make rules or authorise the Local Governments to make rules providing among other matters :

- (a) for the compulsory registration of marriages enjoining upon the contracting parties in case they are not minors and upon parents and guardians if the contracting parties are minors to report within a prescribed time the factum of such marriage,
- (b) for prescribing the form of registers and reports and particulars to be contained in such reports and registers,
- (c) for issue of marriage certificates free of charge or at nominal charge to the person reporting,
- (d) for grant of copies from such registers and reports, and
- (e) for authorizing officers in charge of such registration to make complaints in suitable cases of infraction of such rules and the provisions of this Act."

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I beg to move :

"That in section 60 of the Indian Christians' Marriage Act (XV of 1872) for the word 'thirteen' the word 'fourteen' be substituted."

I need not make any speech in support of this amendment. It is sufficient to point out that at present in section 60 the word "thirteen" appears, and as soon as this Bill is passed by this House, unless a change is made, there will be a conflict between this law and the Indian Christians' Marriage Act. For this purpose I move, in accordance with the recommendations of the Age of Consent Committee, that this amendment be accepted.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Where is this to come ? I do not know what my Honourable friend wants the House to do.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : I have only one or two observations to make upon this amendment. It has already been decided to take up matters consequential to the Bill if it is passed, and I think that it would be more convenient to take them up separately. The present amendment is hardly appropriate to the context of the Bill. I may point out further that the Act fixes the age at sixteen for males, and it is a matter for consideration whether the section should not be amended in both cases, namely, the ages of 18 and 14 respectively in place of sixteen and thirteen, whereas the Honourable Member has concentrated on only one age. In view of the fact that it is intended to take up the matter separately, I hope the Honourable Member will not press his amendment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I do not press this amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That leave be given to Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava to withdraw his amendment."

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly withdrawn.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 1 stand part of the Bill."

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I beg to move :

“ That after sub-clause (2) of clause 1 the following be inserted :

‘ It does not apply to Brahmans and such other communities in which post-puberty marriages are forbidden by their religion or custom or both ’.”

In moving this amendment, I may submit to the House, after a close scrutiny of the scriptures that we Hindus consider to be sacred, that pre-puberty marriages are compulsory according to the religious law at least in the case of the Brahmans. In the scheme of life of the Brahmans, marriage plays an important part, because it is only family life that can give the necessary physical environment for the birth of saints, sages and seers ; and I would reiterate my honest conviction that we Members of this House, who live from day to day and do not ordinarily see beyond our noses, cannot possibly ignore or reject such a time-honoured, sanctified and religious attitude towards life. This amendment of mine has been necessitated by two or three important facts which I cannot help recounting. The first is unfortunately our hereditary talent for inner dissensions, giving the world a babel of voices, so far as Hindus are concerned. The second is the grim determination of the Government, which they shewed, in voting down every one of the amendments moved in this House. To me it appears the tyranny of the State has become really intolerable. It is imponderable, it is intangible, it is invincible, it is invulnerable, and it has become intolerable. Another fact which has necessitated this amendment is this. Unfortunately most Honourable Members, including our theatrical leaders always look to the plaudits of the Press, and they look upon the Press as their God and the Editor, as their Prophet. Now these three things have really necessitated my moving this amendment. I would also submit to the House that, in moving my amendment, I have got some support from the Age of Consent Committee's Report. I would refer the House to paragraph 128 : Talking of cases in the Madras Presidency, the Committee say :

“ If girls between 5 and 12 are taken into consideration, we find that among the Kapus 338 out of 1,000 are married, while 200 among the Telugu Brahmans, 62 among Tamil Brahmans and 177 among the Komatis are in the married state. The population of Tamil Brahmans is 500,000, of Telugu Brahmans 520,000 and of Komatis about 400,000. The Mala (depressed class Telugu) has 107 of his girls in a married state between the 5th and the 12th years, while his brother in the South, Pariyan (Adi Dravida) marries only 38 of them. The former has a population of 1½ millions and the latter 2½ millions.”

From this the House will understand the extent of the prevalence of the custom of early marriage and the reasons for its prevalence. The Committee further say :

“ It may be stated as a general proposition that, except among the Brahmans and the Komatis, there is no argument based on religious injunctions or Shastras which can be advanced to justify pre-puberty marriages in other castes. They are merely in the clutches of inexorable custom which operates as rigorously among them as religious sanctions elsewhere.”

That is why I have put in this amendment, the words “ forbidden by their religion or custom or both ” ; and in this connection I would only quote the pathetic and sincere and most earnest appeal made by a leader of my Brahmin community in Madras :

“ It is the part of wisdom to think well and choose a middle course. The other communities in India, nay, the nations of the world, stand to gain and not to lose by intensifying the Brahmans in their ideals of Brahmacharya, Grahastya and Yoga. Otherwise a fine type built up in the course of millenia will soon be as dead as the dod. Enter the new law—Exit the ancient type.”

“ It will be a very sad day when the mass mind of India is led to believe that, after all, their religion is going to be determined and can be interfered with by the votes of this Assembly.”

The motion was negatived.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : I beg to move :

“ That after sub-clause (2) of clause 1 of the Bill the following be added :

‘ (3) It shall not apply to the Mussalmans ’.”

I know in what mood the House now is. Still I wish to say what I have got to say on this subject. The Bill affects, and I say vitally affects, the personal law of the Muslims. I take it that every Member knows that the marriage institution of the Muslims comes within the category of personal law, and we have got to see whether this law affects the Mussalmans and their marriage institution. For that purpose we have got to go into the marriage law of the Muslims. The House knows that the Muslims have a codified law and all that relates to marriage has been enunciated in a manner which no one can doubt. The law of Islam is a rule of life which is given in unequivocal terms by the Creator himself for the Universe. A Muslim carries that rule of life wherever he goes. It may be India, China or any other place. It is a rule of life conveyed to mankind in a manner which cannot be doubted by even the worst enemy of Islam. It has come down to us in the most sacred manner all these 1,400 years almost. The marriage laws of the Muslims are definite and unequivocal. Marriage under the Muhammadan law is not only a civil contract but a sacrament and an act of piety, a meritorious act for which people are to be rewarded in the next life. The general law on that question is that every Muslim of sound mind who has attained puberty may enter into a contract of marriage (Hear, hear.), but minors who have not attained puberty may be validly contracted in marriage by their respective guardians. Puberty in India is presumed, in the absence of evidence, on the completion of the age of fifteen years. As to the various kinds of guardians, the laws are different. When the marriage of a minor is contracted by the father or father's father, the contract is valid and binding except where the father or father's father had acted negligently or wickedly, that is to say, the contract had been to the manifest disadvantage of the minor. (Hear, hear.) In the latter case the contract is voidable at the option of the minor on attaining puberty. While in the case of marriages of minors brought about by other guardians, the minor has the option of repudiating the marriage on attaining puberty. This right of repudiating the marriage is lost only when, after attaining puberty and after being informed of her right of repudiation, she does not repudiate without unreasonable delay. In the case of the male the right continues until he has ratified the marriage either expressly or impliedly or by payment of dower or by cohabitation. From what I have said just now it is I think clear to Honourable Members who are willing to understand my point that sufficient safeguards have been provided when a marriage by a guardian has been contracted wickedly. I need not dwell on this part of the case in more detail because my Honourable friends might have read the Honourable Maulvi Muhammad Yakub's Note in the Report of the Age of Consent Committee. He has quoted chapter and verse for the purpose of showing how the present marriage legislation interferes with the law of Islam. At page 278, paragraph 15, the Honourable Members says : (An Honourable Member : "What about paragraph 14 ?") I am reading paragraph 15 on that page :

"Nevertheless the fact remains that under the Muhammadan law the marriage of minor girls can be contracted by the father and grandfather as well as by other guardians, and by fixing an age of marriage by legislation they will be deprived of that right. There can be little doubt that under certain special circumstances the exercise of such a right serves also the best interests of the girls concerned."

He has given only one particular case in his note, that of a father on his death-bed. That is an extreme case that he has quoted, but my experience of Muslim society is that about 50 per cent. of the marriages of girls have to be contracted in the special circumstances under the age of fourteen, and this is the class to which most of the Honourable Members of this Assembly belong. The special circumstances of course are due to many reasons. I think every family which has got a tradition behind it knows how difficult it is to get a suitable bridegroom. (An Honourable Member : "Is that the tradition ?") For that reason and for many others about fifty per cent. of the marriages are contracted earlier. (Mr. K. Ahmed : "Is that a virtue ?") But there is one thing which is strictly guarded against, and that is consummation at an early age. Among Mussalmans, so far as my knowledge goes, the consummation never takes place before the girls attain mature age,—in my part of the country I know it is after fifteen. I do not know other parts of the country so well and I have not been on the Age of Consent Committee, but so far as I know from the communications from the different parts of India by now it appears that their sole objection is to the fixation of the marriage age, and I find that my Honourable friends here in this House are not going to make any distinction between the age of marriage and the age of consummation. Muslim society, as far as I am aware, has got sufficient safeguards for not allowing consummation to take place till the girl has undoubtedly attained the age of puberty. I do not think that Honourable Members here would contend that Nikah itself causes deterioration of the health of the girl or the boy. I have heard it said that this Nikah ceremony is performed with so much publicity that it is easier to catch people there than to catch them when consummation takes place. I have read the reasons given in the Report, as to why they have recommended the fixation of the age for marriage. I am not convinced at all by the arguments which have been advanced by the members of the Age of Consent Committee in that behalf.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated : Indian Christians) : May I ask the Honourable Member whether that is the experience of the poorer classes of Muhammadans also ? Can he honestly say that these safeguards and provisions are operative among them in actual fact ?

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : I do say that the poor class amongst Mussalmans also, although they marry their girls at an early age, take care that their girls do not leave their house unless they have attained a certain age. Of course, age differs amongst different societies. Among the lower classes they allow the girls to leave their house at an earlier age than is the case with the educated persons who know when girls should be allowed to go from the house of their parents. That is my reply to my friend.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Is it not the case that in many cases they marry their girls long before their puberty ?

Several Honourable Members : Never.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : I should say that there are fewer cases of consummation before puberty amongst the Mussalmans.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : And what is your source of knowledge ?

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Do you deny that there are cases of marriage before puberty ?

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : I do not say that there are absolutely no cases of marriage before puberty, for, after all, they are also human.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : When you say "there are fewer cases", where is the comparison ? With whom are you comparing in numbers ?

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : What I cannot understand is this. Whether the Honourable Members sitting with comfort on cushioned chairs are more solicitous of the health of the girls than their father or father's father and other relations. That is really very surprising to me. (Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : "What is the custom ?") I am coming to custom also. My friend Mr. Shah Nawaz told us the other day that in September, 1928, he was not aware that such an evil custom was also prevalent amongst the Mussalmans and therefore he signed the document asking the Honourable the Home Member not to proceed with this legislation. It was, only during the course of a year that the experience of my Honourable friend taught him that the evil custom existed to such an appreciable degree that there ought be legislation, that there must be a penal clause and that such delicate relations of human life should be encroached upon by the courts. I cannot understand that he has been so innocent a year before and has become so wise a year after. However, that is not my experience. I have read this Report which has been in our hands for some time. It was very difficult to read the whole of it and to digest it during the short period especially when we have got many other things to do. I have been however, able to go through the Report. It says that the marriages are performed between the ages of 10 and 15 at the latest. Between these ages, the Report says, the marriages are the largest in number. I believe that that is true, but they ought to know that the statistics give us the number of marriages between the ages of 10 and 15 and marriages among the Mussalmans are generally performed between the ages of 13 and 15—mostly at the ages of 14 and 15 and rarely at the age of 13. The consummation is not allowed by any parent, if he can help it, earlier than the age of puberty, which is generally known to be between 13 and 14. I can understand that the age of consent or the age of consummation can be raised to any limit that the doctors may advise or that the experienced people may declare.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Will that not go against the Muhammadan law ?

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : If you find that the girl is molested, and that she might have to undergo physical injury on account of this consummation, then certainly the State has got a right to enter into that question and find out the best way of protecting the girl from the physical injury.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : So the State has got the right to interfere.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : I do not think it is a very astonishing proposition. The State has certainly got the right to interfere when it finds that some physical injury has been done to the body of a girl either in the name of religion or social custom. (Hear, hear.) But you have got to come to the definite conclusion that there is physical injury perpetrated on account of a certain custom. I submit that it is for this reason that, whenever the question of the age of consent has been raised on the floor of the House, no Mussalman Member raised his voice against it. The State has certainly got the right to see that girls should not be molested even by their husbands before a certain age if there is overwhelming evidence as to that age.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Have you ever applied for an injunction under section 144 before a Magistrate ?

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : No such occasion has come to me. I want to make it quite clear that my objection to this law is that it provides a penalty for the marriage of girls and boys under a particular age. I would not object to another Bill being brought before the House by means of which the age of consent might be raised to any limit which might be considered necessary in the interests of the girls.

What I find, Sir, is this, that when Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda felt for these unfortunate girls who, according to him, were "tortured", he tabled a Bill in 1927. This is what he said in the Statement of Objects and Reasons :

"The object of the Bill is twofold. The main object, by declaring invalid the marriages of girls below 12 years of age, is to put a stop to such girls becoming widows. The second object, by laying down the minimum marriageable ages of boys and girls, is to prevent, so far as may be, their physical and moral deterioration by removing a principal obstacle to their physical and mental development."

Now, this Bill received the sanction of the Governor General before its introduction. When a Governor General hears from a Hindu that there is no widow marriage in that community, that thousands and thousands of young children are widowed in that community and are not allowed to remarry, I can well understand that the Governor General would agree to give his sanction to the introduction of such a measure. This was how my Honourable friend Mr. Sarda got the sanction of the Governor General. I would also surmise that in his community post-puberty consummation is not rare. (Interruption.) Perhaps I may be mistaken. My idea however, is that Mr. Sarda must have pointed out to the Governor General that there is physical and moral deterioration amongst the boys and girls of his community because soon after marriage they are entitled to have consummation and they cannot prevent consummation. A simple marriage ceremony would not deteriorate physically either a boy or a girl. It is consummation at an early age which goes to deteriorate the physical well-being of the children. Whatever that may be, it is under these two conditions that Mr. Sarda obtained the sanction of the Governor General. He said very clearly in his first Bill that, "It shall apply to Jains, Sikhs, Brahmos, Arya Samajists and the Buddhists." But when this Bill emerged from the Select Committee it was made applicable to Mussalmans also. The way in which it was made applicable to Mussalmans is to be found in the first Select Committee's Report. It is said there :

"The Bill, as introduced, applied to Hindus, Jains, Sikhs, Brahmos, Arya Samajists and Buddhists and was a measure relating to the validity of marriage. As we propose to amend the Bill by making it a measure imposing criminal penalties on participants in a child marriage, it seems invidious that it should be restricted to these particular communities, since child marriages do occur, though not so frequently in other communities. We propose, therefore, that the amended Bill should be general in its scope and apply to all classes and communities in British India."

Mr. President : How long does the Honourable Member propose to take ? I should like to continue for ten minutes, if the Honourable Member is prepared to finish his speech by that time.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : I will take more, Sir.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Sir, I have told you how the Mussalmans were dragged into this Bill and how it was made applicable to them. There is a provision in the Government of India Act in regard to such questions and that is this :

"It shall not be lawful without the previous sanction of the Governor General to introduce at any meeting of either chamber of the Indian Legislature any measure affecting (L) the religion or religious rites and usages of any class of British subjects in India."

I think it is very clear that the power of allowing questions like this to be introduced in the Assembly is vested in the Governor General ; and in this particular case when Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda got his sanction, it was expressly on the understanding that the Bill related to Hindus which included Sikhs, Jains, Brahmos, Arya Samajists, etc. I do not think this Bill could by any stretch of imagination be made applicable to the Mussalmans as well, because the Select Committee have made a recommendation to this House in that behalf. I find that during the debates in this House in January 1929, this question came up incidentally and at that time the Honourable the Home Member was pleased to say that the original Bill which was introduced by Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda had received the sanction of the Governor General. So far so good. Later on he says :

"The House interpreted the general intention of that Bill to be to regulate child marriage and it was I think with that intention that the Bill was submitted for the sanction of the Governor General."

The words speak for themselves, and I need not comment on such an obvious error of judgment which has been committed by the Honourable Home Member in that connection. He says further :

"I infer" mark the word "infer" "and I think that it is with that intention that the Governor General granted sanction. My own view therefore would be that no further sanction is necessary and that the point of order regarding absence of sanction of the Governor General is not at this stage tenable."

[Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi.]

I need hardly say that this opinion of the Honourable the Home Member will not make lawful what is unlawful in itself, and no amount of argument adduced in support of this contention can be considered sufficient if it contravened the express provision of the Government of India Act. My contention is that the interpretation put by the Honourable the Home Member does not make the provisions of this Bill applicable to the Mussalmans even if it is passed by this Assembly. I think the real defect in the Bill will remain and certainly advantage will be taken of it.

Now, Sir, I find that there has been legislation in several provinces of India which makes the marriage institution sacred to the Mussalmans, and that legislation can not interfere with it. Here I will quote Act XII of 1887, for Bengal, the United Provinces and Assam, where this is laid down in section 37 :

"The civil courts of these provinces shall decide all questions relating to succession, inheritance, marriage or any religious usage or institution by the Muhammadan law in cases where the parties are Muhammadans except in so far as such law has by legislative enactment been altered or abolished."

Then again for Madras you find the Madras Civil Courts Act, III of 1873, which says in section 16 :

"All questions regarding succession, inheritance, marriage or any religious usage or institution shall be decided, in cases where the parties are Muhammadans, by the Muhammadan law or by custom having the force of law, and in cases where no express rule exists, the court shall act according to justice, equity and good conscience."

Then again I find for the Punjab as well as the North West Frontier Province, there is a provision enacted by the Punjab Laws Act IV of 1872, section 5, and the North Western Frontier Regulation 7 of 1901. This provision is as follows (I will not quote the whole thing but only the material portion) :

"In questions regarding succession, marriage, etc., the rule of decision shall be the Muhammadan law in cases where the parties are Muhammadans, except in so far as such law has been altered or abolished by legislative enactment."

In the case of Ajmer-Merwara, Regulation III of 1877 lays down almost the same thing. In the province of Oudh the provisions of the Oudh Laws Act XVIII of 1876, section 3 are the same as in the Punjab. In the Central Provinces again it is enacted in the Central Provinces Laws Act XX of 1875, that in questions regarding inheritance, marriage, etc., the rule of decision shall be the Muhammadan law where the parties are Muhammadans. It appears to me that the Muhammadan law of marriage has been held to be sacred by all these laws of the different provinces in India from time to time.....

Mr. President : Every law is sacred.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : Yes, it is if it has got the force of law, Sir. It is for this reason, I submit, that even when this very important Committee, the Age of Consent Committee, was appointed, the Government were anxious not to make its scope very wide, but to limit it and confine it to questions which really were within the domain of the State, that is the Government of India. The terms of reference of this Committee related only to the age of consent and to nothing else, not to the age of marriage. They have transgressed the scope of their terms I should think, and have thereby come to the conclusion that there should be a penalty for marriage at a certain age. The reasons given by the Members of that Committee have been read by me with close attention in order to find out whether there is anything which can convince me of the soundness of their conclusions. I find that the only thing which strikes one is that they say that this age of consent, or section 375, applying to marital relations has been in existence for so many years and has not improved the position very much in India. But a reply to this has been given by an Honourable esteemed member of that Committee itself—Mrs. Brijlal Nehru. She has endeavoured in her note to make it clear as to how this evil, wherever it exists, can be remedied, and what would be the effective method of doing it. I would quote this from page 242 of the Report, where she says :

"That work of this kind is essentially that of social reform and can best be done by non-official bodies. These, it is presumed, will consist of the leading social reformers of the locality. In the towns at any rate, there should be no dearth of them. The example of the towns will spread inevitably into the villages."

Later on at page 244, paragraph 31, she says :

"The fate of men is in their own hands. It is the men and women who can make or mar the destiny of their own country. If they are not ready to work, to put up a fight against the evil, to spare no pains to achieve the desired reform, they cannot get it by passing a thousand laws."

Mr. President : This applies to all communities.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : Certainly, Sir. I made my position clear the other day ; but if my friends go wrong I am not bound to go wrong ; that is my position ; I made it very clear the other day that my fellow countrymen are absolutely wrong in invoking the aid of the Government Benches for passing a law on their own countrymen in regard to social reform. I would quote one more passage from her note.....

Mr. President : The only question now before the House is why the Muslim community should be excluded from the operation of this law.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : I am replying to that part. My friends have accused me that I did not want to eradicate this evil of child marriage from the Muslims. I am showing them that this evil can be removed in other ways more effectively than the way they are suggesting, and I am further showing them that, because the method suggested interferes with my liberty and with my personal law, therefore I do not like that this law should apply to my community, thereby proving that I am not against the eradication of the evil but only against the method which is being adopted in this House. I hope, therefore, Sir, that you will allow me to quote the very useful suggestion made by the same esteemed lady at page 232, paragraph 1, of this Report where she says :

"We have also given ample reasons to show that there are certain inherent difficulties on account of which it is nearly impossible for this law to be as effective as other penal laws. If any drastic measures are devised—(These, Sir, are the words of a lady of motherly affection for the girls more than we can presume ourselves to be)—to make it effective, the harassment caused will be so great, in the present conditions of India, where there is a marked disparity between the legal status of men and women and the latter's condition is so helpless, that the remedy will be worse than the disease itself."

[Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi.]

I know my friends have the Report very well, more often than I have, but I have realised the importance of the pronouncement of this eminent lady, while I should say that my friends in their zeal in supporting the motion, which is the fashion of the day, are forgetting the real significance of this question. I feel, and very strongly feel, that a very great mistake is being committed to-day; the result of it of course will be out some time after; here we seem to be actuated by some motive or other, and finding that there is the solid support of the Official Benches, we join with them and shut out all that is put forward to improve the nature of the Bill. I submit, Sir, one other aspect of it. My friends had not realised the consequences of the penal clauses of this Bill; and it was for this reason that they wanted so many loopholes. I would submit very plainly that the Official Benches were perfectly right in ignoring all that they put forward by way of amendment, because, after all the mentality of the Officials in this respect, I should say, is absolutely different from ours. When you make the action penal, you must make it as plain as possible.....

Mr. President: These are not reasons for the exclusion of the Muslim community. I would ask the Honourable Member to be more relevant.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi: I think that this applies equally to the Muslim community and therefore I was going to suggest that it appears to me that my Hindu friends have willingly—I do not know whether by a majority of their own or by the help of the Government Benches—consented to the enactment of this piece of legislation. Therefore, Sir, I submit that they have not realised the consequences.....

Mr. President: Never mind about it. The Honourable Member had better speak of the Muslim community.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi: Mussulmans, after all, are human beings just as the Hindus are. There is no distinction whatever between Hindus and Muslims so far as the general question is concerned.....

Mr. President: The amendment seeks to make a distinction.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi: The amendment does not make any distinction. If I fail to convince my Hindu friends that they should not have a law of this kind and I am not here to impose my will upon my friends, what else can I do? If they are willing to have this legislation for their own community, how can I convince them that they should not have it? I am afraid, Sir, if you are under the impression that I am seeking to make a distinction between Hindus and Mussalmans, I do not know what others will think of me. I have on the very first day made it absolutely clear that I am not against the eradication of this evil if and where it exists. I have been doing it and will continue to do it as long as I am alive. But I must protest against the method which my friends are adopting in eradicating this evil.....

Mr. President: I would ask the Honourable Member to leave them alone and talk on the amendment.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi: I was going to say, Sir, that the mentality of the Officials is absolutely correct on this point, that whenever we pass a penal law we must know that law is law, it will not differentiate between this case and that case. When you pass it you are bound to apply it as rigorously as possible. I have heard some of my friends saying, "Why are you afraid? This law is simply for the education of the community; it will be a sort of propaganda; people will not be harassed by it; not so many cases will come up before the courts", and things of that kind. But I do not hold that view. I believe that if we once say that this is the law, we must apply it to every case. I would not leave anybody, be he a Rajah or a Praja. That is the mentality of the Officials, and it is for this reason that they are opposing all the amendments, although they appear to be reasonable to many of us.

You will probably remember, Sir, that in a matter of this kind I told this House some time before that the social customs and the religious practices of the Hindus and Mussalmans differ in many respects so widely that it is not proper for a Muslim to interfere with the social customs and religious practices of the Hindus, and likewise, I expected that my Hindu fellow countrymen would not interfere with the social customs and religious practices of the Muslims. The Muslims are more in need of this convention; because we in this House are only 30 or 32 in number, and any measure which is brought in by a Member of this House which consists of 145 Members might be passed in spite of the protest of all the 32 Muslim Members put together. That is the reason, Sir, why I made this suggestion some time before, and I have been reiterating it all the time. Now, in this particular matter when I found the Official Block was solid in its support of this Bill, I thought there was no help unless I approached them and justified my ground by appealing to them for non-intervention. Then I put in an application which was signed by 15 Members of the Assembly—one was absent that day although he had agreed with our view—so there are 16 Members out of 32 who have agreed on the point as far as my knowledge goes. This is what we said in our application:

"The marriage institution of the Muslims is within the category of their personal law, and legislation on any aspect of this institution is an invasion thereof. Sarda's Bill as at present before the Assembly aims at making an offence of what is permissible according to Shariat, that is the Islamic law. This is obviously an unwarranted encroachment on the personal rights of a Muslim. It is therefore clear that the Bill should not apply to Mussalmans. Since the Bill is before the Assembly, they have received numerous communications from recognised Muslim Associations and well known theologians calling upon us to oppose the passage of this Bill. The resentment and the agitation amongst the Muslims is very great. As representatives of the Muslim community in this House we desire to acquaint you with the real situation. In the circumstances we request the Government to adhere to their time-honoured policy of non-intervention in this matter."

I have not received any reply to this. I do not know what has been the result of this application by 16 Muslim Members.....

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz (West Central Punjab: Muhammadan): Some have retracted from the position they then took up.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi: I did not like to give the names in the first instance, but since my friend is interrupting me by saying that some have retracted from the position they had taken up, then, I feel bound to give the names now:

(1) Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi, (2) Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur (An Honourable Member: "Have you retracted?")

[Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi.]

(Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Sahib Bahadur : "No, certainly not.") (3) Haji Abdulla Haji Kasim, (4) Myself, (5) Haji Abdoola Haroon, (6) Khan Bahadur W. M. P. Ghulam Kadir Khan Dakhan, (7) Mr. Muhammad Rafique, (8) Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi, (9) Haji Chaudhury Mohammad Ismail Khan, (10) Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim, (11) Mr. Muhammad Ismail Khan, (12) Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, (13) Sayyed Hussain Shah, (14) Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman, (15) Mr. Abdul Matin Choudhry (An Honourable Member : "He has retracted.") (16) Mr. Abdul Haye. (An Honourable Member : "No, no. He is a supporter.")

The last gentleman agreed with us but was not present at the time of the signature, and as we were afraid that the Bill would be passed very soon, we sent up the application to the Honourable the Home Member without waiting for the gentleman who was absent. So, Sir, we gave our application to the Honourable the Home Member three or four days ago. Thereafter it transpired that there were several other gentlemen wanting to join us when we made the formula slightly different.....

Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : Who drafted it ?

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : And that formula is :

"We, the Muslim Members of the Assembly, are of opinion that any change in the personal law of Muslims of India should depend on the Muslim votes only of the Legislature, and that Government should start the convention of not voting for or against a change unless it is sure that the side on which it is voting represents the view of a majority of the Muslims of that Legislature."

This was also signed by many of the Muslim Members of the Assembly. But as I was busy here I could not know the result of it.

Khan Bahadur Mian Abdul Aziz (Punjab : Nominated Official) : Do Muslim elected Members represent the Muslim women's point of view ?

An Honourable Member : Not the nominated Members.

Another Honourable Member : Whose draft is it ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : I think those who are putting this question from that side are those who did not want to sign any of these, and if I give out their names, I think they will be satisfied that they are not to blame for it. They are Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi and Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz. My submission at the end is that this amendment of mine should not be decided by the votes of the majority of this House.....

Mr. President : That is not the rule.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : That is not the rule, but I have appealed to the Government Benches, by means of that written application, three or four days ago, and they had by now sufficient time to make up their minds. I appealed to my esteemed friends, the Leaders here of the Hindu community also, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Mr. Kelkar, Dr. Moonje, gentlemen whom I considered to be responsible leaders of the Hindu community. I appeal to them here again as I have appealed to them as well as to others outside the House—I have appealed to them not to interfere with a matter which concerns the personal law of the Muslims. I shall recapitulate in a few words my submissions. It is permissible for a Mussalman to give away his daughter under 14 in Nikah, i.e., in marriage. It is permissible, and no law should make it not permissible. To lay down a law against it, to punish a man who does a permissible act is certainly going against the Shariat of Islam. Secondly, if you are afraid of the physical deterioration of the girls, I should say I am as solicitous, of the physical well-being of girls as any other Member of this House. I hope you will give me that much credit. But I believe that the Nikah ceremony, which is quite distinct from consummation, is not a thing which deteriorates the physical well-being of either the girl or the boy. Therefore I say that the evil which you say has compelled you to legislate on this question does not arise by marriage alone. Thirdly, the evil of early consummation, if it does exist, and I know it does exist in India to a certain extent, can be eradicated more by the device which has been recommended by Mrs. Nehru in her report than by this sort of legislation. Further, I may state that this legislation is halting, because so many amendments have come from my Hindu friends showing that they are not wholeheartedly in favour of the Bill as it stands. If it is so halting, I think you will not get the support of the country when it is passed. It will remain, I am afraid, a dead letter as other laws are said to remain a dead letter on the Statute-book. I am, of course, convinced that you can eradicate the evil by methods of propaganda, education and that sort of thing and I would join hands with my Honourable friends in eradicating the evil by such methods. It must be very clear that the Muslim community as a community is not going to lag behind in the matter of eradicating that evil. But this is not the way of doing it. I therefore hope that my Honourable friends will accede to my request and allow this motion of mine to be decided by the votes of the Muslim Members alone.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, in rising to speak on this amendment, I wish to explain my attitude towards this Bill. I wish to make it quite clear that Islam does not only, not enjoin child marriages, but Islam definitely is in favour of marriages after puberty or at an advanced age. I wish also to make it clear that, neither myself nor other Muslim Members of this House, who are not supporting this Bill, as it stands at present, are in favour of early marriages. In fact, I myself, and those who think with me, do not consider that the age of 14, as is proposed by this Bill, is quite an appropriate and proper age for marriage and consummation.

When this Bill was first introduced in this House by the Honourable Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, I lent my humble support to it, considering the horrible conditions of the Hindu girl widows depicted by the Honourable Mover of the Bill and other speakers. I had also the honour of sitting on the Select Committee on the Bill, and in the Select Committee when the Honourable the Home Member, on behalf of the Government, brought out the draft of quite a new Bill in the form in which it stands now, I must confess that I never had any idea of the religious point of view, and I raised no objection to the Bill assuming the form given to it by the Honourable the Home Member. I supported it in its present form on the floor of this House and on that occasion I definitely stated :

"Mussalmans are not in any way behind any community in the matter of social reforms, so long as they do not interfere with their religion."

[Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.]

I also made it quite clear at the time, when I said :

“ I do not want Government to interfere in any religion in India.”

(Interruptions from Honourable Members.)

Interruptions like these would not do. I am speaking in my strain. I had not the slightest idea on that occasion that the persons who are in a position to speak on the religious point of view would be opposed to it. A man who has respect and reverence for the theologians of his religion is entitled to more honour and respect at the hands of Honourable Members of this House than those who make a mockery of religion and have no respect for their religious leaders. When the proceedings of the Assembly were published, the first Mussalman, who raised objection against the Bill from the Muslim point of view, was no less a gentleman than Maulana Muhammad Ali, a graduate of the Oxford University, a gentleman under whose banner my friend Mr. Shervani had the honour of working for several years. Subsequently prominent theologians and ulemas, with one or two exceptions, raised their voice against the provisions of this Bill being applied to the Mussalmans. I then tried to study the question more thoroughly, and after giving it my full consideration, I have come to the definite conclusion that Muslim religious opinion is against the Bill, and those who are in a position to speak on Muslim law consider it an interference in religion. In my note appended to the Report of the Age of Consent Committee I have tried my best to explain their point of view, which, put in a nutshell, runs as follows :

“ Islam is a self-contained and self-sufficient religion. We have got a complete set of our own codified laws and in socio-religious matters, like marriage, divorce, succession and religious family trusts, we want to be governed by our own personal laws.”

This Muslim point of view, as explained by me, is also supported by another Muslim member of the Committee, namely, Khan Bahadur M. I. Kadiri, retired District Judge of the Bombay Presidency, and now the Chief Judicial Officer of the Junaghad State. This is what he says :

“ I have had the advantage of going over the notes put up by my learned colleague Maulvi Muhammad Yakub. I agree in the main with the opinion expressed by the Maulvi Sahib regarding the religious aspect of the question connected with the proposed marriage and consent legislation.”

Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : Very good certificate !

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Perhaps better than yours. It will thus be seen that two out of the three Muslim members of the Age of Consent Committee held the same view as regards the Muslim religious point of view. I have no quarrel with those who admit that they cannot speak on this Bill from the religious point of view of Hindus and Muslims, but certainly it is highly objectionable on the part of Muslims on the floor of this House to discard and denounce the considered and weighty opinions of the ulemas and theologians of their faith. I was really surprised to see that some of my friends here have lightly brushed aside the weighty and sound pronouncement of ulemas like Molana Mufti Kifayat-ullah Saheb, President of the Jamiat-ul-Ulema, Maulvi Ahmad Saied Saheb, and Molana Moulvi Husain Ahmad Saheb, President of the Theological Academy at Deoband, whose opinions they held in the greatest respect only a few years ago, and at whose fatwa some of them suspended their practice. (An Honourable Member : “ Did you also suspend ? ”) I did not. And I should like, on this occasion, to congratulate my Honourable friend Mr. Keane for having taken his Muhammadan law from my friend Mr. Shervani, and I hope the day will come soon when he will take his political ideas also from him on the floor of this House.

Now, Sir, only as recently as the 11th August last, Maulana Husain Ahmed delivered his presidential address at Moradabad, from the platform of the United Provinces Jamiat-ul-Ulema, and he announced in clear and definite terms that the provisions of this Bill were an interference with the Shariat or the Muslim law.

Mr. Yusuf Imam : You walked out on that occasion.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I was not present in Moradabad at that time. I was on the Public Accounts Committee in Simla. My Honourable friend should ascertain his facts before interjecting. Since this Bill was taken up in this House, we have been receiving a large number of telegrams, letters and proceedings of Muslim meetings denouncing the Bill and asking us to vote against its application to the Mussalmans. I will refer to the most important ones. One is from Maulvi Kifayat-ullah, President of the Jamiat-ul-Ulema, in which he says that the present marriage bill is an interference with the Muslim law, and he calls upon the Muslim Members of this Assembly to oppose it. There is another weighty telegram which I received only last night. The telegram runs as follows :

The following Resolution was passed under my Presidentship and I am authorised to communicate the same to you. Resolution moved by Maulana Kutb-ud-din Mohammad Abdul Wali supported by Shamsul-ulama Maulana Nasir Hussain Saheb Mujtahid, Maulana Inayat-ullah, Farangimahel, Shamsul-ulama Maulana Ibn-i-Hasan, Mujtahid and Shamsul-ulama, Maulana Sibte Hasan. (Laughter.) It is not a matter for laughter. I have not sold my community for a few pice. (Hear, hear.) I have never sold my community.

An Honourable Member : But some have sold their country.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Will the Honourable Member utter those words outside the House ?

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : If the occasion comes, I will. I do not mean any insinuation against any particular gentleman. What I meant to say is that there are certain people in this country, who have sold their country and community. This is the Resolution :

“ Resolved that this meeting of the Sunni and Shia Ulemas and Muftis is strongly of opinion that the Bill to fix the age of marriage and consummation is against the Islamic law and constitutes a direct interference with religion and asks the Mussalman Members of the Assembly to oppose the passing of the Bill and also expects that, if this Bill be passed into law with the support of the majority, Government would not give their assent and allow it to be put into effect against Mussalmans because the Mussalmans will under no circumstances accept a law which interferes with their Shariat. Najmul Hasan, Shamsul-ulama, Mujtahid.”

These are weighty opinions and they are from prominent persons. They are not children, they are not fame-hunters, and it would be a cursed day in the British history if the Government of India lightly brushed away the opinions of gentlemen like these. This is another telegram from Rangoon. It says :

" Muslim mass meeting presided over by grand Mufti unanimously disapprove the Sarda Marriage Bill as it contravenes the Muhammadan law and the Victorian declaration. Requested Government to exempt from the Bill if passed."

Then there is another telegram from Madras, which says :

" Anjuman Islamia, Madras, highly appreciate your strong protest against Sarda Bill. Spare no pains to exempt Mussalmans."

Then this is a telegram from the Mussalmans of Benares :

" We, the Mussalmans of Benares, emphatically disapprove of the Sarda Bill. We believe that the Bill is a clear interference with the religious freedom of the Mussalmans and therefore strongly condemn it."

There are also other telegrams from Benares and other places in which similar feelings have been expressed. In the face of this opposition, Sir, as a humble follower of the faith of Islam, I feel it my bounden duty to give expression to the views of the Mussalman public in this country, and as a representative of the Mussalmans in this House, I feel it my duty to give emphatic expression to their views. Sir, I wish also to take this opportunity to join in offering my humble quota of tribute to the eloquent, forceful and powerful speech which the Honourable the Home Member delivered the other day in support of this Bill. How much do I wish that he would have shown the same power of eloquence, force and determination on other occasions, when his advocacy was so much needed by the Government of India as their representative in this House. (Hear, hear.) But I feel it my duty to submit, with all the determination and earnestness at my command, that, in making that pronouncement, he was deviating from the time-honoured policy of the Government of India, namely, non-interference in religious matters and the personal laws of the people of this country.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Hear, hear.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : This policy of the Government of India has been repeatedly given expression to on the floor of this House. As far back as 1922, when Sir Hari Singh Gour wanted to create an innovation in the marriage law of this country, the distinguished predecessor of my Honourable friend, the Home Member here, Sir William Vincent, said :

" The Government of India, fully realising the danger of weighing down either one side of the balance or the other, by the official vote, have decided to follow the policy, which I understand is approved by the last speaker, and to be absolutely neutral in a matter which really affects the non-official Members of this Assembly more directly than it does the Members of the Government. The fact is that in a matter of this kind by which religious sentiment is largely affected Government cannot be too careful of its attitude."

Then, again, Sir, in 1925 when this Bill was first introduced by my Honourable friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, the late lamented Sir Alexander Muddiman, the then Home Member of the Government of India, said :

" But the desire to go forward, at any rate of the Home Member, must be restricted by the caution which is necessary in dealing with a measure like this affecting the social life of the people."

The Honourable Sir James Crerar himself, when speaking on this very Bill in 1927, said :

" But one of the responsibilities, and a very heavy one, on the Government of India, is to ensure that where measures, undoubtedly impinge very deeply upon the religious ideas and social customs of very considerable sections of the population, all legitimate interests and all legitimate opinion should be carefully, fully and fairly ascertained. Another part of the responsibility which rests upon the Government of India is to see, as far as in them lies, that such measures as are proposed are readily conducive to the end to which they are directed."

Proceeding, the Honourable Sir James Crerar said :

" I confess that a note of caution seems to me to be a wise counsel. I think that, before the House proceeds to consider this Bill in greater detail, it ought to pass the motion which I moved for further eliciting further opinions thereon. Legislation, however well-intentioned, if it is hasty, is not likely in the end to promote the purpose for which it is intended. Legislation which is passed without due consideration may have consequences very remote from those which are intended."

These are words of wise counsel which were uttered, by three successive Home Members of the Government of India, on a measure like this. In making such a bold departure from this policy, I am afraid the Government of India are adopting a very hazardous and dangerous course, the disastrous consequences of which cannot be expressed in too strong language. Sir, the Government of India seemed to be so very nervous of a handful of communists in India that they twice, unsuccessfully, attempted to legislate Bill like the Public Safety Bill, and the hunger-strikers Bill, but it is wonderful that they do not seem to pay any heed to the general and strong opposition which this Bill has evoked in the country. Hundreds of petitions, containing hundreds of thousands of signatures, opposing this Bill have been placed on the table of this House and a majority of the Mussalman Members of this House have tried to convey the opinion of their co-religionists to the Government. Only the other day a memorandum, signed by 15 Mussalman Members of this House, was placed in the hands of the Honourable the Home Member but it had no effect. Recently the Honourable the Home Member declared, on the floor of this House, in connection with the hunger-strikers Bill, that, in deference to the views, so forcibly put forward in this House, he agreed to the circulation of a Bill which the Government of India considered so urgent and so necessary. I fail to understand why he has turned a deaf ear to the opinions so forcibly expressed in this House about this Bill.

At this late stage of the Bill I wish to make another fervent appeal to the Government and warn them against the consequences which may arise as a result of the passing of this Bill, against the wishes of the masses. (Loud applause from Members against the Bill.) And once the masses of the country come to realise that Government have deviated from their policy of non-interference in the personal laws of the people, the resentment and disaffection will be so great that all the resources of the country, and all the forces, that are at the command of the Government of India, will hardly help them to keep the peace of the country. The upheaval in Afghanistan must be a lesson to the Government of India. (Hear, hear.) Blessed is the man who takes a lesson from the mistakes and misfortunes of others. Sir, even if this Assembly does rush to pass this Bill into law, I still hope that an experienced Viceroy like Lord Goschen will never accord his consent to the Bill and will not allow the future historian of India to say that the first Act of intervention in the personal laws of the country was adopted in his short régime, which would certainly shake the very foundations of British rule in India.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Can the name of the Viceroy be mentioned in this connection, Sir ?

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : If the names of heretics, and martyrs like Jatindra Nath Das can be mentioned in this House, I do not see any reason why the name of the Viceroy cannot be mentioned in this House.

With these words, Sir, I make another appeal to the Government of India. As I have said already, I am not in favour of early marriages. We do not want early marriages. But I warn the Government that they should not turn a deaf ear to the united and strong opinion of the religious heads of this country, of both the communities. I warn them to be very cautious and think twice and thrice before they go into the lobbies to vote on the last reading of this Bill. (Applause.)

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment put forward by my erstwhile colleague Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi and I do so in spite of the fact that the opinion of my erstwhile leader has been quoted in the House. I revere and respect Maulana Muhammad Ali still as my elder brother.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But not as your leader ?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I followed him in politics so long as I considered his politics to be correct politics ; but I never recognised him as my religious head.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But Government think that his policy even then was wrong. And this is why you did not follow him and preferred to follow the Government.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : While opposing the amendment, Sir, I do not propose to start with vituperations like my friend over there and finish with quotations and assumptions. I will try to put before the House the true rules of Muhammadan law and the condition of Muhammadan society as it exists here and elsewhere. I think that is the attitude which ought to have been adopted by the Honourable Members who spoke before me. Sir, in my previous speech I tried to show to the House what is true Muhammadan law on the point. (An Honourable Member : "As you understand it.") Certainly as I understand it, and as everybody else ought to understand it, and I will quote, if necessity arises, the text from the Hadises and from Koran, and will show that the law is that which I assert is the law. But before doing so, I must say that I was really astonished when I listened to the arguments advanced by my friend Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi. He admitted in so many words, on the floor of this House, that an early marriage is an evil and it must be eradicated. My learned friend said he was prepared to eradicate that evil but he says that he is ready to eradicate the evil, but as that evil is sanctioned by Islam, therefore that evil must continue for the time being without any interference by this House ; but I respectfully differ from my friend because, according to my belief, Islam can never sanction an evil. That is my reading of Islam. (A Voice : "He never said that.") He admitted it in so many words, and the report of his speech will be there. He may strike off this passage now, but my friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi did say, that early marriage is an evil.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : I said that early consummation is an evil.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I knew that correction would be made but that would be an after-thought. However, let us see what Islam says in the matter. I have heard two learned speakers on the amendment, but they have quoted no authority except the authorities of certain telegrams.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : The Mussalmans themselves are the authority on the Islamic law.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : The same Mussalmans who called western education kufr. As regards following the Fatwas, it is a question of choice between myself and Maulvi Muhammad Yakub. I followed the Fatwas of ulemas when the Fatwas tried to eradicate an evil, but I do not follow the Fatwas of the ulemas of my learned friend when they instigate us to perpetuate an evil. That is the difference between my learned friend and myself.

(At this stage Mr. President vacated the Chair, which was taken by Mr. Deputy President.) (Loud Applause on Mr. Deputy President taking the Chair.)

I followed ulemas, Sir, when to follow ulemas entailed some sacrifice. But certain gentlemen—I will not refer to you, Sir, out of respect for the Chair—but say certain gentlemen follow the ulemas when following them does not demand anything but, on the other hand, secures elections. However, I do not want to waste the time of the House and will come directly to the question in issue.

(At this stage there was loud conversation going on among all the Members.)

Mr. Deputy President : I hope Honourable Members are not in a holiday mood.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Sir, I will do my best to convince the House about my point of view by quoting yourself. So far as Koran is concerned, I quoted the other day the only verse about nikah. So far as hadis is concerned, I would quote yourself.

Mr. Deputy President : Then follow me.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Sir, I would have followed you gladly if you had given the right lead. If you had stuck to your real conscientious opinion, I would have implicitly followed you.

Mr. Deputy President : The Chair never gives a wrong ruling.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : It is not your rulings but that of others. You do not rule, Sir, but follow. Sir, you quoted in your note of dissent :

"la tankehol bikra hatta tastammar wala tunkah-us-sayyab hatta tastazzana."

That is the hadis which has been quoted by you. When translated, it means, do not marry a virgin unless she gives her consent to you by inclination. The word used is tasta ammara and not tastazza. Tasta ammara means not only consent, but consent with inclination. These are the words quoted by you, Sir, in your note of dissent. In the face of this hadis, I ask my Mussalman friends whether they can oppose this Bill and ask for the exemption of Muhammadans. If you cannot find another hadis which recommends pre-puberty marriage, you must follow this hadis which does not make exception in favour of anybody. In the absence of any other hadis to the contrary, it is incumbent upon you to follow it.

So far as the opinions of the ulemas are concerned, I also received a telegram from the President of Jamiat Ulema, and in reply I addressed a long letter to him. I told him why I support this Bill. I told him that, as I was a lawyer, I presumed that I knew Muhammadan law and that I was going to follow it until I was convinced that my opinion was against Muhammadan law. I also mentioned the authorities on which I based my opinion. I reminded him again to send me a reply. My letter must have reached him on the 8th, and today is the 19th and still I have not got any reply. I have got the acknowledgment of my letter with me and it was intimated in that letter that after two or three days they were going to send me a detailed reply but none has come up till now.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Then get an adjournment of the House.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Several of my Honourable friends got together certain Maulvis and brought them to me. I discussed the entire point with them and they had to agree.....

An Honourable Member : No, no.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Listen to me. They did agree that there was not a single verse in Koran, there was not a single hadis bilqual, which recommended pre-puberty marriage. The Maulvis themselves admitted that before my Honourable friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee. I will repeat again, there is not a single hadis, there is no verse in the Koran, which directly sanctions pre-puberty marriage. What did those Maulvis say? They said that this is the existing law and, therefore, this existing law must not be interfered with.

(At this stage Mr. President resumed the Chair.)

Well, Sir, my answer to my Honourable friends is that the existing law in the Punjab amongst Mussalmans is that women do not inherit land which is against Shariat. If that law is to be brought in accordance with the Shariat, the Punjabis can put forward the same argument and say, "Do not interfere with this practice; this is our personal law." Amongst the Cutchi Memons and among the Khojas, Hindu law still prevails.

An Honourable Member : No, no.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Why? It does amongst a section of Memons. I can quote rulings to that effect to satisfy my Honourable friend. Hindu law does still prevail among them. They can come forward and say in the same way: "Although it is against the tenets of Islam, although it is an evil, so far as the Shariat is concerned, yet we must continue the evil, because this is our personal law." I am against the prevailing custom of child marriage because the custom which is in vogue now is not an Islamic custom, it is an evil which we have borrowed from others and it is against the very spirit of Islamic law. I beg of the Mussalman Members to eradicate the evil which cannot be countenanced by the Islamic law.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What is the law in Turkey?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I am coming to that. My Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub quoted some opinions—I do give him credit for collecting them—His thoughts are generally other people's opinions. I do not follow other people's opinions and form my own when I can do so.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I am the spokesman of my constituency.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : My Honourable friend quoted the opinions of certain Maulvis. He got hold of certain Maulvis to support him, and surely that support does count, especially when the elections are coming nearer.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Well, do not run to the Maulvis when your election comes.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : My Maulvis are above petty politics. I did never trouble them, nor will trouble them for my election. But on this question I count on the support of bigger people, large minded people, thinking people of all Islamic countries in the world.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : That we know.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I am supported by Turkey, not by the Turkey of Mustapha Kemal, but by the Turkey of a hundred years back when the Khalif ruled over it. I am supported in my opinion by Egypt, not by the Egypt of today but by Egypt when Sheikh-ul-Islam ruled so far as Shariat was concerned.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : They are all Islamic countries. They can do so, but not here in India which is not an Islamic Government!

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Why do you go to their courts to get decisions on Islamic law. I am supported in my view by practically the entire Muslim world. Go to Afghanistan, go to Persia, go to Arabia itself and you will not find pre-puberty marriages there.

An Honourable Member : Is there a law there like this?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Because no necessity ever arose for it. There would have been no necessity for any law here in India if you had not gone against the principles of Islamic law. Sir, I oppose this amendment because Muslims of India have gone against the practice of Mussalmans and against the tenets of Islam. A cry is raised that this law militates against the principles of Islam and the tenets of Islam. I respectfully submit that it does not. It does not in any way interfere with the institution of marriage as such. It does not declare that a marriage will be void; it keeps the marriage intact.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : It is a State interference in the institution of marriage.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : It does not lie in the mouth of my Honourable friend now to say so, especially after he had admitted and confirmed and reiterated it when I interrupted him that the State could interfere and that it had every right to remove the evils. I support this Bill because, whatever the existing law allows, Islam does not allow it. What does Fiq say? Fiq puts the person of minor persons under the guardianship of Wali in the same way as Fiq puts the property of minors under the supervision of guardians.

[Mr. T. A. K. Shervani.]

If a guardian misbehaves and abuses his trust with regards to property the State has got the right, and no system of law can go on even for a day if the State has not got the right to put the guardians straight. I say protect the person of minors in the same way. Instances have been quoted in the Report of the abuse of power by guardians. There are 2,64,000 girls under ten years of age who have been married by these guardians. What more proof do you want of the misbehaviour of these guardians and of the fact that they are not discharging their trust honestly and according to Shariat? When the state of affairs is such that 2,64,000 parents act against the tenets of Islam, I feel justified in supporting the Bill and I ask every right-thinking Muhammadan to support it. The Honourable Member from Rohilkund says that the public opinion is against it, but when you analyse the public opinion, you find that, when the Honourable Member says public opinion, he means himself. Some gentlemen have come forward and said on previous occasions also that there were millions of people behind them; the whole Muslim world was behind them and these assertions were not made once or twice but many times, and always the lie had been given to them. But habit is habit and still they come forward and assert the same thing that the entire Muslim world is behind them. Although I do not agree with the views held by my friend Mr. Neogy on the Bill, still I do agree with him on the principle enunciated by him that when you are a representative either you must follow the opinion of your constituency, or if it is against your conscience, you must resign your seat. But none of the Muslim constituencies as such have so far expressed their opinion and although ample opportunity was given to them to express their opinions they have not done so. I may acknowledge, in fairness, that I have received yesterday and today about six telegrams from Benares but the telegrams tell their own tale. There was not a difference of a comma or a full-stop in all those telegrams although they were sent by different people. (Laughter.) Exactly the same words in all the six.

Sir, it is asked, why are the Muhammadans dragged in? I myself like that dragging in and I congratulate my friend Mr. Yakub for it. It was not the Government, not the Hindus, but he himself who dragged in the Mussalmans.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : I never did, and I emphatically deny it.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Sir, while this Bill was put before the House for the first time, my Honourable friend Mr. Yakub got up and said that, when there was a question of social reform, the Muhammadans were always neglected. These were the exact words, if my memory does not fail me, uttered by my friend on the floor of this House.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But I never said that religion should be interfered with.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Probably then it was not the season of religion. Those persons who hold seasoned views can very well change them according to the exigencies of weather, but it is difficult for those persons who hold opinions according to their convictions to change them to suit even an election propaganda. Personally, I do not care for elections. Election or no election, mandate or no mandate, I must stick to my opinion and do whatever I think best for my constituency—especially when my constituency does not give me any mandate.

Now, Sir, let me take up the question of State interference. So far as interference by the State is concerned, I can answer both my friends Mr. Yakub and Mr. Shafée Daoodi by words not mine but of my friend Mr. Yakub himself. He says in his Report :

“ I will venture to say that in the eyes of every reasonable man or woman the pledges contained in the Queen's Proclamation must be read with a two-fold reservation.”

(A Voice : “ That is Lord Lansdowne ”.)

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is that my view? Please don't misquote me. I never wrote that.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Yes, I am sorry, (Laughter), but you quote it as an authority. I leave it at that. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub has accepted the Report in its entirety. He does not say that the Muhammadans should be excluded. He says that the law should be passed but it should be left to the different Local Governments to proclaim this law in those provinces. This is what he says :

“ My second and chief recommendation is that in case the Marriage Bill is passed into law by the Assembly it should not apply automatically to the Mussalmans but power should be given to the Provincial Governments to apply the Act to the Mussalmans ”, etc.

Thus he is not against the law and the principle of the law, but he cannot give his whole-hearted support because of the fear of some Maulvies. That is his chief fear, and that is the chief reason why he is not to-day in favour of the Bill.

Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Shafée Daoodi's chief argument was that Muhammadan law is a codified law. I do not know what he means by “ codified law ”. I have not seen any code so far. He further says that there is a codified law and a perfect law, and therefore no interference should be allowed or tolerated in that law. My respectful submission is that the reason why I support this Bill is that the Muhammadan law has certain restrictions. If guardians misbehave we have got a remedy under our law, but we have got no authority at present to set the misbehaving guardians right so far as marriages of innocent minors are concerned.

I ask my Honourable friend, have you ever interfered in undesirable marriages or can you interfere? My grievance is that, while there are provisions in Muhammadan law to check guardians, we have got no machinery to enforce those provisions; and unless we have got the power of the Legislature behind us, we cannot enforce them, and that is why I want this law. If guardians misbehave and marry these children to their disadvantage the law must provide for intervention. If the guardians are wicked, if they are profligate, if they are spendthrift, and give their daughters or sons in marriage, it will not be binding on the children according to the Shariat. In the name of the custom of the country, you have tied ropes round the neck of the children, the rope of custom, the rope of seclusion, the rope of bondage, in which you keep the children. Remove these ropes from round their necks, and I will then say that you do not require any law of the kind by this Legislature. But what is the state of affairs? If my friends who support the amendment honestly make efforts and try to find out cases, they will find out a considerable number of cases where the marriages are not happy marriages. Poor women suffer in seclusion and they cannot come out; they are not allowed to come out to proclaim their rights and get redress from the courts, under the present custom of the community.....

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : If I may interrupt, I would say this : My Honourable friend knows that there have been attempts on the part of Mussalmans to adopt the institution of kazi for the purpose of settling these marriage questions.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : We have had very bad experiences of these Kazis so far as Nika registers are concerned, and I am not prepared to have any more experiment of that kind. I do not mind Muhammadan judges learned in law, but no more Kazis of this type. How they behaved is well known to everybody and I for one am not going to be a party to the reinstatement of those Kazis.

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : You seem to have contempt for yourself ?

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : My friend can use all my phrases against me whenever he likes, and I know he is going to do it, still I say that I am not going to entrust my personal law into the hands of the type of Kazis who misbehaved themselves in the past when they had certain powers. You may call it contempt or anything you like. However the fact remains that the law which should have been available to these poor children, especially the girls, is not made available, and it will not be available until there is a Statute behind them.

In short, I support this Bill because the present custom of early marriage is against the tenets of Islam, because the evil is prevalent here in India, and because that evil cannot be stopped out unless we have the force of legislation behind us. So far as the principle about the State interference enunciated by my learned friends Maulvi Mohammad Shafee and Maulvi Muhammad Yakub is concerned, I entirely agree with that principle and I have said so in my previous speech and I say again that no Government, this or any other future Government, has any right to impose its will upon any community, especially as regards its personal law and religion, without the consent of that community; but I for one give my consent to this measure, for I do think that this present legislation is in accordance with the Muhammadan Law and this is why I support the Bill and oppose the motion of my friend, Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi.

Sir, an Honourable Member of this House the other day stigmatised another Honourable Member of this House by saying that he was a Muhammadan in name. I do not like the Honourable Member pretend to know anything about the beliefs and faiths of other people. I am not concerned with his pretensions, but I will not allow him to deny the facts. Facts are facts. Mr. Ghuznavi says that the evil of early marriage is not to be found amongst the Mussalmans. I presume that when he made that statement he had not read even the Report of the Age of Consent Committee. The Report gives him the lie.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I have and I can prove it.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I assure my learned friend that the evil is there rather worse in Bengal.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : What do you know about Bengal ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Don't you talk of Bengal here.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I do not know whether my learned friend has got any special licence to talk about Bengal to the exclusion of others.

Now, one of the objections raised by Maulvi Yakub is the competency of this Legislature. On this point again I seek support from my learned friend, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub. Koran says "La takulurriba" "Do not take interest." But my learned friend sought an amendment of the law, that divine law, by saying "Take interest, but not more than the amount of the principal." And he put forward a Bill to that effect.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : That is not correct; I never did anything of the kind.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member should not make repeated interruptions in that way.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But he is misquoting and misrepresenting me, Sir.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : There was a Bill about interest in which he said that interest should not accumulate more than the principal. That was his suggestion and I am quoting him correctly. Not only that, Sir, Islam says that there should be no hindrance so far as the performance of farz is concerned. There are certain things which are enjoined upon Muhammadans and one of them is Haj on those who are capable. This Government brought forward a measure under which every Haji had to deposit a certain amount of money and travel through a certain company and my friend supported it. Is that not interference in the way of Haj ?.....

(Maulvi Muhammad Yakub rose to interrupt.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member ought to know that he should not constantly interrupt the speaker in that way.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : But my friend is misrepresenting me, Sir.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : These are some of the instances, Sir, in which my learned friend not only tolerated the interference of this Legislature in the religion and religious observances, but he put forward measures and supported measures which do interfere in religion.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : On a point of personal explanation, Sir.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member cannot make a personal explanation unless the Honourable Member speaking gives way.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I always tolerate the interruptions of my friends, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub and Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, and I do rather enjoy them. The truth is bitter. But when my friends say that I have no right to talk about Bengal, or religion, there I demur. Their attitude throughout has been that nobody except themselves has got a right to speak as if one had monopolised entire Bengal to himself and the other the entire religion. But what does Bengal say? I have here a document.....

[Mr. T. A. K. Shervani.]

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : It is a manufactured document.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not entitled to talk in that way; if he wants to give any personal explanation, he must wait till the Honourable Member finishes.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I have a resolution placed in my hands just now in which Mr. Amar Nath Dutt has been disowned.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Disowned by whom?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : It is a forgery and a fabricated document.

Mr. President : Order, order; if the Honourable Member wants to make any explanation, he is entitled to do so after the Honourable Member who is speaking resumes his seat.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Now, Sir, there remains one more point. My friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi said that he had no objection to State interference, and his only objection was that the Legislature makes it penal what the Shariat has permitted. Well, I would have agreed with him if he had used the word Feka instead of Shariat, because Shariat, I may say for the information of my Honourable and learned friend, has got a different meaning. Shariat and Feka are not one and the same thing. If my friend had used the word Feka, I would have agreed with him, but if by the word "Shariat", he means Shariat, I may again tell my friend that this legislation does not interfere with Shariat. Now, with regard to Feka, when the evil exists, and my friend admits that it does exist, then Fikah must change and it has been changed before. If it must change then it can be only by this Legislature. The Legislature had to choose one of the two courses, either to enact civil legislation as was originally proposed, or penal legislation. Well, in the case of civil legislation, there would have been greater interference according to the beliefs and ideas of my learned friends. Therefore, naturally the Government have chosen the lesser evil.

My Honourable and learned friend further says that the State has got a right to interfere. When the State has got a right to interfere, if it has such right, it is exercising this right in protecting the young innocent children from the hands of unscrupulous and cruel guardians, including fathers and grandfathers. That is the only thing which the Legislature is doing. It is not interfering with the marriage law at all; it leaves the marriage law absolutely intact. It only punishes the miscreants. It simply says, "Do not marry your young children because you are not enjoined by your personal law to do so."

My Honourable and learned friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub has quoted certain Maulvis, but he forgot to quote one of the Maulvis, a very learned and eminent Maulvi, although my friend has mentioned him in very reverential terms in his Report, but he does not quote him here. This is what my friend says on page 281 of the Report:

"Maulana Sayed Sulaiman, an eminent and learned theologian and historian of the day, who could not appear before the Committee, owing to certain pressing engagements, has written to me saying that in his opinion the weight of Muslim authorities is in favour of performing the Nikah (nuptial contract) after the boy and the girl have reached an age of discretion."

Another grievance of my friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi is as he says that, so far as consummation is concerned, he is not against the restriction, but he is against the interference in Nikah. But the rule of Muhammadan law is that Nikah is a personal contract between man and woman. He read out to the House the law on the point. The quotations which he put forward were from Amir Ali's book, but my friend left out the very cogent sentence of Amir Ali that Nikah is a purely personal contract under Muhammadan Law and I want this measure on the Statute-book because the parents and guardians deprive 2,64,000 minds of the right which has been given to them by Islam, i.e., to choose their own mates. They usurp the right which is given to every Mussalman by Islam, and it is the duty of the State to relieve those persons from this tyranny by which the guardians tie them for ever with a person whom they did not choose for themselves and which is in contravention of "Faukahoo-ma Tale hokum." Look at the question from an ethical point of view, view it from a religious point of view, view it from a social or biological point of view, or from any point of view (An Honourable Member : "Common sense point of view")—yes; the common sense point of view, but not from a nonsensical, or shall I say, the bigoted point of view, and you will find that this measure is a most salutary measure. Be whatever you please, but do not be a bigot. Well, my friends here may differ from me, but my own idea is that bigotry in religion is a degradation of a lofty ideal. (Hear, Hear.) Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Sir, I am thankful to you for giving me an opportunity of expressing once more my view on this important matter. Sir, I oppose the Bill, but support the amendment which has been so ably moved by my friend Honourable Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi. That amendment says that the measure shall not apply to Mussulmans, and I shall presently show to the House that no case has been made out that Mussulmans should be included in this Bill. I will demonstrate fully that absolutely no case has been made out that Mussulmans should be included in this Bill. Sir, as I said the other day, neither the Hindus nor the Mussulmans want this Bill. They do not want this Bill, and I will prove from the opinions that have been received that no province has accepted this Bill as a good Bill.

I believe, Sir, that my friend Mr. Shervani, who is not here just now, will agree that my friend the Honourable Mr. Yakub rightly said that in Islam the performance of Nikah or nuptial ceremony is considered meritorious and an act of piety in the eyes of the Shariat, and any limitation placed on its performance is considered a violation of the sacred injunctions of the Islamic law. I hope that my friend Mr. Shervani will accept that principle. Interference with the tenets of religion, or furthering limitations where not one is placed by religion, cannot be allowed to pass under cover of the progressive nature of Islam. But, Sir, for those who consider religion a mockery, it is very difficult to understand a religious man's attitude towards religious beliefs and sentiments. Sir, the life of the Mussalman from the cradle to the grave is a series of religious performances, and, therefore, any foreign element which interrupts or puts limitations on these performances cannot be tolerated from the Muslim point of view. No doubt, there are certain laws and enactments which somewhat involve a violation of the canons of Islamic law, but, Sir, that does not create in any way an estoppel against the Muslim objection to further interference.

[Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi.]

Sir, two wrongs do not make one right. Islam is a self-contained and self-sufficient religion. As my Honourable friend said, we have got a complete set of our codified laws and in socio-religious matters like marriage, divorce, succession and religious and family trusts we want to be governed by our own personal laws. Sir, the treaty by which Shah Alam, the Emperor of India, delegated to the East India Company the civil administration of this country reserved the right of the Mussalmans to be governed according to the law of their religion, and the British Government as the successor of the East India Company is bound by that treaty and undertakings of the East India Company.

Sir, I will demonstrate conclusively on the floor of this House that no case has been made out to include the Mussalmans, as I said the other day, in this pernicious Bill.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : That is only an assumption, not proof.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am coming to that. But before I proceed further, I should like to make a few observations in regard to the statement of my Honourable friend Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz which he made the other day. According to the Hindustan Times of the 14th instant, my Honourable friend is reported to have said :

"Mr. Shah Nawaz amused the House by pointing out that he was persuaded by Mr. Ghuznavi last year to sign that precious document of 29 Members against the Bill by telling him that the child marriage evil did not exist in Bengal."

Well, Sir, I am very sorry that he made this statement. I never induced him to sign.....

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : Both you and Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I will demonstrate that that is not true from the document that you signed.

Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz : You know perfectly well that I signed it the last of all. The document will show that. You still say that the evil does not exist in Bengal.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Will my Honourable friend allow me to proceed ? I want to show that you were not induced to sign that document by my saying that that evil did not exist in Bengal, because you were not a Member of the Age of Consent Committee.....

An Honourable Member : Members can be induced.

(There were several other interruptions also.)

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Let us see what the document that he signed says. It says :

"We, the undersigned Members of the Legislative Assembly, are strongly opposed to Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda's Child Marriage Bill as it strikes at the root of the most cherished and sacred institution of Hindus and Mussalmans and penalises what is lawful under the personal law of the Hindus and the Mussalmans."

You are a counsel and an eminent lawyer of the Punjab. You must have signed this after reading the document. You say there that it touches the Muslim personal law and the Hindu personal law. Where is the statement there that you thought that Bengal had not that evil ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

An Honourable Member : You must address the Chair.

(At this stage Mian Mohammad Shah Nawaz tried to interrupt the Honourable Member.)

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : This is becoming too personal. I will leave the matter at that.

Now, Sir, as I have said, no case has been made out to include the Mussalmans. In support of that I will read to you a few passages from the Age of Consent Committee's Report. My Honourable friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub in his note of dissent at page 278, said :

".... Under the Muhammadan law the marriage of minor girls can be contracted by the father and grandfather as well as by other guardians, and by fixing an age of marriage by legislation they will be deprived of that right."

Then he says at page 279 :

"Moreover marriage under the Muhammadan law is not only a civil contract but also a sacrament and an act of piety, the performance of which is considered as meritorious deserving of Sawab or reward in the next world."

At page 280 he says :

"It is therefore evident that mere performance of Nikah or nuptial ceremony is meritorious and an act of piety in the eyes of Shariat and any limitation placed on its performance may be considered as a violation of the sacred injunctions of Islam and therefore of the treaty between Shah Alam and the East India Company."

This is important at page 281 :

"Maulana Mufti Kifayatullah (who also could not give evidence) and Maulana Ahmad Said, President and Secretary respectively of the Jamit-ul-Ulma-i-Hind, hold a contrary view. They consider any enactment, which interferes with the rights of the parents and other guardians to contract marriages of minor children, as an interference with the Islamic law and unacceptable to the Mussalmans generally. They are of opinion that it would be undesirable to enact a law fixing an age for marriage. The Ulmas of Deoband, who have got a big following in India, also hold the same opinion ; and a large majority of other Muslim theologians, who appeared before the Committee as witnesses, also considered the enactment of such a law as opposed to the Shariat."

Sir, I now come to page 282, which is very important :

"The Muslim opinion being so meagre on the record, it does not justify us to draw any conclusion on its basis. Only 166 Mussalmans, throughout the whole country, have taken any part in the inquiry ; out of them 104 sent in their written statements but they were not examined orally. Only 36 presented themselves for oral examination. The number of Mussalman witnesses who did not send in any written statement but were examined only orally is 26. The Committee is certainly not responsible for this paucity of Muslim evidence. Every effort was made to secure the opinions of prominent Mussalmans, including some of the well-known theologians, but unfortunately they were not available at the time to give the benefit of their views to the Committee. The fact remains that the Muslim point of view is not sufficiently represented ; and I do not think it would be proper and safe to introduce a measure of vast social and religious importance, until additional Muslim opinion, especially that of distinguished theologians, is placed on record."

Then he says :

"It may be pointed out here that the figures, showing the prevalence of early marriage amongst the Mussalmans, are not conclusive enough. They roughly indicate the age of married girls between 10 and 15."

An Honourable Member : That is only an opinion.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : He has given that opinion after the evidence he has heard. I hope my Honourable friend Mr. Shervani will take this down. Then he says :

"No authentic figures however are available to show those numbers. It cannot be concluded therefore on the basis of the statistics available that the evil of early marriage is extensive and widespread amongst the Mussalmans."

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Read page 65 of the Report.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : That is for you to read. Then he says :

“ In any case I am strongly of opinion that a marriage law would entail great hardship on the public unless exemptions are provided to suit special cases.”

Then he goes on to say :

“ My first recommendation is that additional Muslim evidence should be brought on record before the Marriage Bill comes up before the House for final disposal. My second and chief recommendation is that, in case the Marriage Bill is passed into law by the Assembly, it should not apply automatically to the Mussalmans, but power should be given to the Provincial Governments to apply the Act to the Mussalmans in a province where the Local Council by a three-fourths majority of its Muslim Members passes a Resolution to that effect. This procedure is not a novel one ; a similar method was adopted as regards the law relating to the filing of accounts of Muslim charitable properties.”

So far as the Islamic law is concerned which touches their personal laws, we will accept what the Ulemas tell us, and we will not listen to the Muslim lawyers, however eminent they may be, who make religion a mockery.

Sir, protests are pouring in from my constituency, and the public bodies are asking us to fight to the end to demolish this offensive Bill, and if proof is wanted, I would throw this challenge to my reformer friends. Postpone this Bill till the Delhi Session ; bring motions in the Provincial Councils ; and I shall accept this Bill if three-fourths of the Mussulman Members in the Local Councils are in favour of this Bill. I am sure the Mussulman Members in the Local Councils do not want this Bill.

The Bill was not wanted by us, and I shall demonstrate before this House, province by province, what has been said by Muslims in the provinces.

Now, Sir, the European Group seems to be jubilant over this legislation because it does not touch them in the least. My Honourable friend Mr. Price in his maiden speech, which was full of pathos and assurances, spoke of his whole-hearted sympathy for this measure. My friend Mr. Stewart-Smith went a step further. According to the Hindustan Times, he assured the Mover that the Bill had evoked the keenest interest amongst the European community in Calcutta. I will just show what that keenest interest was. For the edification of my friend I shall read what the European Association of Calcutta have said.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member go on.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, Sir. The European Association says :

Mr. President : Has that anything to do with the question of the exclusion of Muhammadans ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, Sir, from this I will show you that, even when they were giving their opinion....

Mr. President : The question is whether the Muhammadans should be excluded or not.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I want to make out, Sir.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Whatever the Honourable Member will say regarding the exclusion of Muhammadans will be relevant, but he is not entitled on this amendment to offer general criticism of the Bill as a whole.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I accept your decision, Sir. I will not now take province by province—I will leave that for the next occasion. All I would say is that from the reports that I have quoted I think I have made out a case that the Mussalmans should not be included in this Bill. With these words, Sir, I support the amendment which my Honourable friend has moved.

Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi (Central Provinces: Muhammadan): Sir, I oppose the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Shafee. (Cheers.) Sir, the Honourable Member admits that if the Consent Bill is passed and the limit is enhanced for the consummation of marriage, my friend will have no objection. May I ask my friend, is it not a fact that the consummation of marriage is regulated by religion and is it not a right conferred by the Koran and Shariats ? If a right which is conferred by religion and which is based on Nikah, which is a religious ceremony and a very important one, if a right conferred under it can be interfered with by this Legislature, why is this Legislature not competent to postpone the conferring of that particular right ?

Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi : Better ask yourself that question.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must know that Mr. Siddiqi is making his maiden speech. Mr. Siddiqi.

Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : What I say is that if the Legislature merely says that acquisition of a particular religious right should be postponed till a particular age, that amounts to this, that the conferment of the right should be postponed till a particular limit of age is reached. If after the conferment of the right it can be suspended, I do not know why the conferment of the right should not be postponed by this Legislature ; and I therefore think that, according to my friend, Mr. Shafee, this Legislature is entitled to pass this Bill. Sir, the greatest stress, that was laid on the ground of religion by the previous speakers, was on the fact that the Ulemas are against it. I have also the same respect for the Ulemas as my other friends claim to have, but I would say this. When any question is a mixed question of religion, social rules or politics, then we are not so much bound by the opinion of the Ulemas. This question is not a pure question of religious fact. It is based on certain facts, social as well as political, and in such matters, it has been the practice of my Honourable friends, who are against the Bill, and also of other Mussalmans, not to follow the Fatwa of the Ulemas. I would remind my Honourable friend, Mr. Shafee, of the Resolution passed by the Ulemas at Gaya in 1922 laying down that no Muhammadan should go to the Councils and the Assembly.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But they have come all the same.

Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : I am perfectly sure my friends have disregarded such Fatwa ; not only the Honourable Mr. Shafee but all other friends, who are opposing the Bill today, disobeyed the Fatwas of the Jamiat Ulema, a body which was much larger than those whose telegrams were received or who met at Moradabad. I am not blaming my friends for disobeying the Fatwa, but I conclude from their action that, when the question is a mixed question of religion, politics and social rules, as it is here, then we can disregard the Fatwa of the Ulemas. My opinion is that this Bill does not at all interfere with religion.

5 P.M. Had it been interfering with the vital principles of my religion, Sir, I do not think I would have hesitated to oppose it, but as my Honourable friend Mr. Shervani has already stated, it is not a question of interference with religion; on the contrary it is quite in accord with the tenets of our religion, and I, Sir, whole-heartedly support the Bill. The last speaker read out extracts from the note of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub and stated that there are fewer cases of early marriage amongst Muhammadans. I would ask my friend to read the Report again; there he will find that no less than 2,60,000 marriages of girls were performed before they attained the age of ten. This sacrifice of 2,60,000 girls is sufficient proof that the evil exists, and the remedy must be found for it. My Honourable friend, Mr. Shafee, tries to prove that all these marriages do not mean that consummation necessarily follows. But if he will read the Report, he will find that many cases have come to light of consummation before puberty; and he must know that there are many other cases which never come to light. If that is the state of affairs, is it not a proper thing, as a precautionary measure, to stop such marriages so that there may be no occasion for that evil which he admits is an evil? My friend stated that in some parts there is a habit of having only nikah which is followed by another ceremony called the Rukhsati, when the consummation is made. But I would remind my friend that this custom is confined only to some of the upper classes in Upper India. It may also prevail among some classes in Madras. But the classes for whose benefit this law is specially to be enacted are the poor or illiterate masses who do not observe that custom.

They have their marriage and everything at the same time if both are of sufficient age. At the same time, if the marriage is of children, there is no restriction among the poorer classes of not sending the girl to the house of the husband before she attains the age of puberty. Therefore, this measure is very necessary to safeguard against the possible early consummation.

Sir, I was also a signatory to the famous document which was quoted by Mr. Ghuznavi in his last speech and also to-day. I at that time really believed that the custom of early marriage did not exist among the Mussalmans in the Central Provinces and especially in the place from which I come. I hardly then knew that early marriages were performed among the Mussalmans. I was therefore of opinion that this measure should not be applied to the Mussalmans. But after reading the report of the Age of Consent Committee which has been before all of us and seeing that this custom prevails in nearly all the provinces, although it is much more prevalent in Bengal, I have come to the conclusion that there is no reason why my community should not have the benefit of this measure by putting it on the Statute-book of the country. I therefore oppose the amendment proposed by my Honourable friend Maulvi Mohammad Shafee Daoodi. (Applause.)

Mr. K. Ahmed : I move that the question be now put.

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 23rd September, 1929.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Mr. Philip Graham Rogers, C.I.E., M.L.A. (Director General of Posts and Telegraphs).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ALLEGED AFFLICTION WITH LEPROSY OF A MACHINE FOREMAN IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

665. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that persons suffering from infectious and contagious diseases are not allowed to continue in service in Government offices ?

(b) Is it a fact that Esak, a machine foreman in the Government of India Press, Calcutta, is suffering from leprosy ?

(c) Is it a fact that, in spite of his disease, he is still working in the Press ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state (i) if the said Esak has been medically examined ; and (ii) if so, when, where and what has been the opinion of the medical authorities ?

(e) If replies to parts (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, will Government state the reasons therefor ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, if they are declared unfit for further service by a competent medical authority.

(b) No.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) A medical certificate of fitness submitted by him on the 16th March, 1928, indicated that he suffered only from severe burns. He was sent for further medical examination to the Professor of Surgery, Medical College, Calcutta, who also certified that he was fit for duty.

(e) Does not arise.

INCREASE OF ABDUCTION CASES IN BENGAL.

666. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : Has the attention of Government been drawn to resolution No. 6 of the Bengal Provincial Hindu Conference held at Dacca in the last month in regard to the alarming increase of the cases of abduction, enticement, rape and other offences against the modesty and honour of women by organised gangs with a set purpose, and also containing a suggestion to make the law for these offences stiffer, and to make whipping compulsory in all such cases? If so, do they propose to take any action to remedy the evil?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The Government of India have not received a copy of the resolution referred to, but they have seen a Press report to the effect that resolutions were passed calling upon Government to take "precautionary and punitive measures" for the detection and conviction of offenders, and for "the permanent eradication of the evil" and urging that whipping should be made compulsory in cases of rape, indecent assaults and similar cases. As I stated to the Honourable Member in reply to his question No. 654 on the 18th instant, I have no reason to think that the Local Governments are not fully alive to their responsibilities in the matter.

FORCIBLE REMOVAL OF A RAILWAY PASSENGER TRAVELLING WITHOUT A TICKET.

667. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a case reported in the Amrita Bazar Patrika, dated the 21st August, 1929, in which the Special Railway Magistrate of Allahabad has made the following remarks in course of his judgment :

"I have made a careful and critical study of the provisions of the Indian Railways Act to determine whether a railway servant is authorized by law to eject or remove a passenger forcibly while travelling in a railway compartment without a proper pass or ticket; and I have arrived at this conclusion that the railways do not derive this power from the legislature which has purposely withheld it with a view to avoid accidents".

(b) Are Government aware that, in the course of his judgment, the Special Railway Magistrate refers to section 113, and section 132 of the Railways Act, under any of which such a person should be dealt with?

(c) Have Government received a copy of this judgment?

(d) Is it a fact that crewmen, or other railway employees on the East Indian Railway, and on other railways, are instructed to, and do, eject or remove a passenger forcibly while travelling in a railway compartment without a proper pass or ticket; and are Government aware that a constable who was so removed by a crewman lost his life as a result of an accident at Allahabad Station recently?

(e) Will Government please state what railways have issued instructions to their employees to eject or remove such passengers from the compartments; and under what law?

(f) Do Government propose now to issue orders asking Railway Administrations to withdraw such instructions? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government have seen the newspaper article referred to, and the Agent of the East Indian Railway has been asked for a copy of the judgment and for a full report on the matter. On receipt of the Agent's report, the Railway Board will consider what further action should be taken. I shall communicate later with the Honourable Member.

Regarding part (d) of the question, the orders to crewmen on the East Indian Railway are to prevent passengers entering a carriage without a proper ticket, and, if a passenger is found in a train without a proper ticket, to recover the fare and penalty. In the event of a passenger not having any money or refusing to pay, he is to be handed over to the station staff to be placed before a Magistrate.

It is reported that recently a constable, who was found by a crewman without a ticket, subsequently purchased one from the booking office, and attempted to board the train while in motion. His foot slipped and he fell under the train and died from the result of the injuries received.

GRANT OF KING'S COMMISSIONS TO INDIAN OFFICERS OF THE ROYAL GARHWAL RIFLES.

668. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to say how many Indian Commissioned Officers are there in the Royal Garhwal Rifles? And how many of them have been given King's Honorary Commissions since 1918?

(b) Have Government given King's Commissions, other than Honorary to any Indian Commissioned Officer of the Royal Garhwal Regiments?

(c) Have Government given direct Indian Commissions to sons of Indian Commissioned, Officers or soldiers of the Royal Garhwal Rifles. And did any of them offer for such Commissions?

(d) How many sons of Garhwali soldiers or officers have been sent to the Royal Military College, Dehra Dun?

(e) What was the approximate total number of Garhwali soldiers that were sent to Europe during the German War; and how many of them were killed and wounded?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) 70, of whom one is an Honorary King's Commissioned officer.

Honorary King's Commissions were first granted in 1920, since when five such commissions have been granted to Indian officers of the 18th Royal Garhwal Rifles.

(b) No, Sir.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. There is no record at Army Headquarters of any applications from Garhwalis for direct Viceroy's Commissions.

(d) Two. One of these is the son of a pensioned Subedar Major of the 18th Royal Garhwal Rifles and another the son of an officer of the Tehri-Garhwal State Forces. I am glad to say that both these boys were successful in the last Army and Air Force Entrance Examination and will proceed to Sandhurst next January.

(e) The approximate numbers are 2,461 and 1477, respectively.

CARRIAGE OF MAILS TO HILL STATIONS BY CONTRACTORS.

669. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) What are the hill stations in Northern India to which mail is carried in motors by contractors, and what is approximately the annual cost of carrying mails to those hill stations separately?

(b) Are tenders invited for such contracts? If so, for how many cars are contracts given?

L16CPB(LA)

A2

(c) When were the contracts given last in each case? Were the lowest tenders accepted in each case?

(d) How many contractors were new, and how many old, when the contracts were given last time in each case?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a), (b) and (c). The hill stations in Northern India, to which the conveyance of mails by motor contract is made, are Kasauli, Sabathu, Dalhousie, Dharamsala, Kulu, Murree, Srinagar and Tanmurg (for Gulmurg) in the Punjab : and Rajpur (for Mussooree), Chakrata, Lansdowne, Nani Tal, Ranikhet and Almora in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh. A statement is being furnished to the Honourable Member giving him the approximate annual cost of the service to each of the hill stations separately. The information asked for in parts (b) and (c) of the Honourable Member's question is also included in the statement.

(d) When the contracts were last entered into, seven new, and eight former contractors were engaged.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCE OF COMMISSIONED OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

670. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that Commissioned Officers of the Indian Medical Department employed in State Railways in general, and the North Western Railway in particular, are not considered as officers of 1st grade for purposes of travelling allowance?

(b) Is it a fact that, in reply to an inquiry on this subject made by the Agent, Eastern Bengal Railway, on the 22nd June, 1922, the Railway Board, in their letter No. 927/22, dated 25th August, 1923, stated that Commissioned Officers of the Indian Medical Department are 1st grade officials and that they are eligible for advantages attached to their military rank?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to issue orders to all the other State Railways, including the North Western Railway, drawing the attention of the respective Administrations to this fact?

(d) Will Government please state why these officers are denied the privilege of taking eight months' furlough continuously on average salary?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a), (b) and (c). In their letter dated the 25th of August, 1922, to the Eastern Bengal Railway, the Railway Board ruled that Commissioned Officers of the Indian Medical Department employed on State Railways should in future correspond in status to officers of the local State Railway services and be treated as officers of the 1st grade for purposes of travelling allowance. The Agents of the North Western Railway and Oudh and Rohilkhand Railways were also informed of this decision. Government understand that these orders are being followed on the North Western Railway and have no reason to believe that they are not being applied on other State-managed railways also on which Commissioned Officers of the Indian Medical Department are employed. The attention of the Agents of all State railways will, however, be drawn to the decision of 1922.

(d) Because the leave rules to which they are subject do not provide for the grant of such furlough. In this connection, I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to Army Department letter 7605/1 (D. M. S.), dated the 9th August, 1929, in which the position was explained to him.

SALE AT A REDUCED PRICE OF GOVERNMENT QUININE FOR MALARIA.

671. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Are Government aware of the enormous mortality in India from malaria?

(b) Is there an enormous excess stock of Government quinine?

(c) Have Government under consideration the question of selling the drug at a reduced price so as to make it available to all? If not, are they prepared to consider the question?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Government are aware that the number of deaths in India from malaria is large.

(b) The excess stocks are considerable, but can hardly be described as enormous.

(c) Government will consider the question in connection with the recommendation made by the Royal Commission on Indian Agriculture for the Imperialisation of the provincial cinchona departments; that recommendation is already under examination.

LETTER ISSUED BY THE AUDITOR GENERAL TO ACCOUNTS AND AUDIT OFFICES.

672. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that a letter No. 6-N.G.E.-94-Pt., dated the 28th February, 1929, was issued by the Auditor General to all the Accounts and Audit offices under his administrative control?

(b) If the reply to part (a) is in the affirmative, was a copy of this endorsed to the Financial Commissioner of Railways?

(c) If the reply to part (b) is in the negative, will Government be pleased to state why a copy was not supplied to him, and whether it is a fact that most of the establishment serving under the Auditor General, has recently been transferred from the Auditor General's administrative control to the Financial Commissioner of Railways?

(d) If the reply to part (b) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state if the copy was endorsed to all the heads of the Departments under the control of the Financial Commissioner of Railways, and if so, whether the proposals contained therein were given effect to?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (a) The number and date of the letter quoted by the Honourable Member are incorrect. If he is referring to letter No. 6-N.G.E.-94-E.-28, Part II, dated the 8th January, 1929, the reply is in the affirmative.

(b) No.

(c) The circular letter contains instructions to heads of Accounts and Audit Offices under the control of the Auditor General for the recruitment of members of minority communities in the Audit Department. The Financial Commissioner of Railways and the offices under him are not under the Auditor General's control. It is a fact that a portion of the establishment, formerly under the control of the Auditor General, has been transferred to that of the Financial Commissioner, in connection with the separation of accounts from audit on the State Railways; and it will now be for the Financial Commissioner, Railways, to issue his own orders on the subject, as may be necessary, for application to the establishments under his control.

(d) Does not arise.

RECRUITMENT TO A NEW SECTION IN THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

673. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that a new section by name the Late Register Section has been opened in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office?

(b) How many men have been taken into that section and how many out of them have been newly recruited, showing the figures direct or outsiders and transferred from other offices or branches separately?

(c) If transferred from other branches of the existing office, how many new men were taken in their posts in those branches and how many of them are Mussalmans?

(d) Were these posts advertised or was any examination held?

(e) Were there no passed candidates on the list of candidates who passed the recent examination conducted by the Controller of Railway Accounts?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No new section has been opened in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office, but some staff has been employed as an experiment to test the possibilities of preparing rate registers. This work has no connection whatever with the Railway Clearing Accounts Office.

(b) Altogether 57 men are employed for conducting the experiment, 23 of these men were newly recruited and 34 transferred from other offices.

(c) The number of new men employed in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office in the vacancies caused by the withdrawal of experienced men for the experiment is 31, of whom 8 are Muhammadans.

(d) No.

(e) These are purely temporary posts and have been sanctioned for a period of six months, and were filled by the Director of the Railway Clearing Accounts Office. The examination held by the Controller of Railway Accounts was for the selection of permanent staff, and the list of candidates who were not selected for permanent appointments was not circulated to other offices. I shall consider whether this should be done in future in order to enable offices subordinate to the Controller of Railway Accounts to select candidates for temporary vacancies.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIMS TO ACCOUNTS OFFICES UNDER THE FINANCIAL COMMISSIONER OF RAILWAYS.

674. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Was an examination conducted by the Controller of Railway Accounts for recruitment in the Accounts offices under the administrative control of the Financial Commissioner of Railways? If so, how many Muslim candidates appeared for that and how many of them passed?

(b) Were any of them provided with a post?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes. 25 Muslim candidates appeared for the examination, of whom only 4 were considered to have passed.

(b) All four were offered appointments, but three of them accepted the offer.

DESTRUCTION IN THE OFFICE OF THE RAILWAY BOARD OF A PAMPHLET CALLED "IN THE OFFICE".

675. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a pamphlet by name "In the Office"?

(b) If the reply to part (a) is in the negative, did the Railway Board authorise the then General Clerk (Ranpart Rai) and duty to destroy such literature before submission to the officers? If not, what steps do Government propose to take so that all the dak may reach the officers safely?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply to both parts of the question is in the negative.

DISCLOSURE OF RAILWAY ACCOUNTS EXAMINATION PAPERS.

676. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that recently the examination to be held by the Controller of Railway Accounts was postponed on account of the question papers being disclosed? If so, will Government be pleased to state who was responsible for making the papers public?

(b) Are Government aware that the paper for the Traffic Accounts for which Rai Bahadur Faquir Chand was the examiner was known to certain persons in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office?

(c) Did Mr. Teluram solve the paper himself and distribute it to others? If so, what action have Government taken or propose to take against them?

Mr. P. R. Rau : It is a fact that an examination to be held by the Controller of Railway Accounts had to be postponed on account of some of the question papers being known before the date of the examination. The investigation into the responsibility for such leakage is, I understand, not yet complete, but the Controller of Railway Accounts informs me that he is convinced that the allegations against the Officers named are baseless.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What steps do Government propose to take to prevent unauthorised leakage of information from their offices which is subversive of discipline?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I shall not be in a position to reply to that question till the investigation has been completed.

PAY OF AN OFFICE BOY IN THE RAILWAY CLEARING ACCOUNTS OFFICE.

677. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : Is it a fact that one office boy was recruited on Rs. 60 in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office when the pay of the clerks is only Rs. 40 and the candidates for clerkships are required to have passed in the first division whereas there is no necessity for having passed even the Matriculation examination for office boys ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The answer is in the negative.

ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS TO PRESS EMPLOYEES.

678. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that about eight years ago, 21 quarters in the Indian clerks barracks were placed at the disposal of the Press for allotment to the Press employees ? If so, is there any principle according to which allotment of these quarters is made to the Press employees ?

(b) Is it a fact that since these quarters were placed at the disposal of the Press, some employees of the Press are in occupation since the very beginning and the allotment made in the beginning has continued up to this time ? If so, will Government please state under what circumstances these men have continued to hold these quarters ?

(c) Is it a fact that some of the employees drawing salaries, ranging from about Rs. 80 to Rs. 200, are occupying two quarters each ? If so, will Government be pleased to state reasons for this ?

(d) If the answers to the above questions be in the affirmative, do Government propose to consider the advisability of making some rules according to which the allotment of the quarters should be made in future ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. Allotments are made after taking into account considerations of pay, length of service, exigencies of press work and also individual cases of hardship at the time of allotment.

(b) Yes. Owing to the limited number of quarters, there is likely to be considerable contention and dissatisfaction among the staff if allotments are changed annually, and to avoid this it has been considered desirable to make no change unless quarters are vacated on account of death, transfer, retirement or other causes.

(c) Accommodation has been allotted to the stationery keeper and the assistant section holder in order to ensure their residing within reasonable distance from the Press, their attendance being necessary during pressure of work and during emergencies. Two rooms have been allotted to each of these two officers as their status entitles them to larger accommodation than is provided by one room.

(d) The existing arrangement is considered suitable, and Government do not propose to make any change, but I am prepared to consider any concrete proposals which are likely to satisfy the majority of the staff concerned.

RECRUITMENT TO THE SIGNALLING BRANCH OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

679. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : With reference to the report of the Standing Finance Committee (Item 18, page 340 of the 24th January, 1929) and to the Memorandum issued in August, 1928, will Government be pleased to furnish :

- (1) the number of candidates from outside ;
- (2) the number of counter-clerks ; and
- (3) the number of postal signallers to be taken to the Signalling Branch of the Telegraph Department for (a) General Service, (b) Station Service ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The numbers are now being settled in consultation with the financial authorities.

RECRUITMENT OF TELEGRAPHISTS.

680. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : (a) With reference to clauses C, D and E of paragraph 5 to item I of the Memorandum issued in August, 1928, regarding the recruitment of Telegraphists, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to remove the age restrictions for those counter-clerks who have learnt signalling privately and select them for the Signalling Branch ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to grant such exemptions to outsiders also ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

HOLIDAYS FOR SUBORDINATES OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

681. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : (a) With reference to the reply to question No. 529 by Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim regarding the public holidays given in the Assembly on the 30th September, 1928, will Government be pleased to state whether those holidays also refer to the subordinates of the Telegraph Department ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to consider and grant the holidays as enjoyed by the Government servants in other Government offices ?

(c) With reference to the reply to question No. 31 put by Mr. M. K. Acharya given in the Assembly on the 31st January, 1927, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to fix the Dipavali and Ramzan days as telegraph holidays ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Question No. 529 by Mr. Anwar-ul-Azim was replied to on the 13th September and not on the 30th September, 1928, as stated. Some of the public holidays, viz., New Year's Day, Good Friday, the King's Birthday and Christmas Day, are telegraph holidays.

(b) Government do not propose to increase the number of telegraph holidays.

(c) As the days on which Ramzan and Dipavali are observed differ in different parts of India, Government do not consider that it would be practicable to declare them as telegraph holidays.

PRINCIPLES OF SELECTION OF STATION SERVICE TELEGRAPHISTS FOR GENERAL SERVICE.

682. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : (a) With reference to communication No. Staff-A-0193/28, dated the 3rd January, 1929, from the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, will Government be pleased to state the principles that have been adopted in the recent selection for General Service from the Station Service Telegraphists ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether all the men selected will be transferred to General Service immediately, and, if so, when ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) No selection has yet been made.

(b) Does not arise.

RESOLUTION OF THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE.

683. *Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have received a copy of the resolutions passed in the Indian Telegraph Association Conference held in the third week of July, 1929, and if so, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to consider them favourably and grant the demands prayed for early ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Government understand that a copy of the proceedings of the Conference referred to by the Honourable Member has been received by the Director General. The proposals will receive due consideration from Government when they are received with the Director General's recommendations.

SUPERSESSION OF INDIAN SUPERINTENDENTS IN THE ARMY DEPARTMENT AND ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

684. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government please state whether any Indian Superintendents in the Army Department Secretariat and at Army Headquarters have been superseded by Europeans for promotion, permanent or acting, to posts of Assistant Secretary or Officer Supervisor, respectively, in the last two years ? If so, what is the number of such Superintendents ?

(b) Will Government please state the names of the Indian Superintendents, so superseded, and their educational qualifications, as well as the names of the Europeans who have been promoted, or brought from outside, over the heads of the Indian Superintendents in question, and their educational qualifications ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) So far as permanent appointments are concerned, the answer is nil. In two leave vacancies (one of Assistant Secretary and the other of Officer Supervisor) European officers have been selected in preference to Indians after considering the qualifications of all concerned. In the first case there were four Indian Superintendents who were affected, and in the second case there was one Indian Superintendent, but as I have explained before, both these classes of appointment are filled by selection and no one has a right to them.

(b) Government are not prepared to give the names or to publish the qualifications of the men referred to.

Mr. A. Rangaswamy Iyengar : Were Europeans selected, because they were Europeans ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : No, Sir.

POST, OF ESTABLISHMENT OFFICER, ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

685. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when the appointment of the Establishment Officer for Army Headquarters was created ?

(b) What are the emoluments of that appointment ?

(c) Has the appointment ever been held by an Indian ?

(d) Are Government prepared to consider the advisability of appointing a junior Indian Civil Service officer to the post, when it next falls vacant ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) In April 1921.

(b) Rs. 1,500—50—1,750.

(c) No, Sir.

(d) Government will no doubt consider all possible candidates for the post when the time comes. It is desirable, however, that its holder should have a knowledge of the working of the Army Headquarters offices.

NUMBERS OF HINDUS AND MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

686. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government please state the total number of educationally unqualified clerks who have been employed in the Army Headquarters and central military offices during the last one year and how many of them are Hindus and how many Muslims ?

(b) Will Government please state how many pensioners were re-employed at the Army Headquarters and central military offices during the last one year and how many of them were Hindus and how many Muslims ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member separately.

(b) Two pensioners have been re-employed. They were both Hindus.

Mr. Muhammad Rafique : May I, with your permission, Sir, put the questions standing in the name of Mr. Abdul Haye ?

Mr. President : Yes.

NUMBER OF MUSLIMS APPOINTED AS PERMANENT WAY INSPECTORS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

687. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique (on behalf of Mr. Abdul Haye) : Will Government please state how many persons have been recently appointed as Permanent-Way Inspectors on the North Western Railway and how many of them are Muslims ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : For reasons already explained, Government regret that they are not prepared to supplement with figures for individual offices or posts the information in regard to communal representation in railway services given in the Annual Administration Report on Indian Railways.

REPORTS OF PROVINCIAL COMMITTEES CO-OPERATING WITH THE SIMON COMMISSION.

688. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique (on behalf of Mr. Abdul Haye) : (a) Will Government please state whether they intend to publish the Reports of the various Provincial Committees appointed to co-operate with the Simon Commission ?

(b) If so, when will these printed Reports be made available to the Members of the Indian Legislature ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) The publication of the Reports of the various Provincial Committees appointed to co-operate with the Simon Commission is a matter for the Committees themselves to decide.

(b) Copies of these Reports, as they are received by the Government of India after publication, will be placed in the Library of the Legislative Assembly. Copies have so far been received from Bengal and the Punjab and have been placed in the Library.

RECENT FLOODS IN THE PUNJAB AND NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

689. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique (on behalf of Mr. Abdul Haye) : (a) Will Government please make a full and up-to-date statement regarding the havoc and loss of life and property caused by the recent floods in the Punjab and North West Frontier Province ?

(b) What steps have the Local Government and the Government of India taken to grant relief in the affected area ?

(c) What loss and damage has been caused to the Railway by these floods ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). A statement containing the latest information available regarding floods in the Punjab and North West Frontier Province is laid on the table. Complete reports cannot be expected until a careful survey of the damage has been made, communication with isolated places restored and the people who left their homes have returned to them. The grant of relief in the affected areas is a matter for the Local Government and the local Administration respectively and the action they have taken in this direction as regards the floods in the Dera Ghazi Khan District and those in the North West Frontier Province is described in the statement. Further information on the subject will be obtained and furnished later. I may, however, add for the Honourable Member's information that the Board of Management of the Indian People's Famine Trust have sanctioned a grant of Rs. 1,25,000 for the relief of distress in the Punjab. No application for a grant from the Board has so far been received from the North West Frontier Province.

(c) The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

Report on the floods in the Dera Ghazi Khan District, dated August 20, 1929.

The average rainfall in the Suleman hills in the tribal area adjoining the British district of Dera Ghazi Khan is about 12 inches at Fort Munro. In the district proper at Dera Ghazi Khan the average annual rainfall varies from 3 inches in the south to 6 inches in the north. On the night of the 25th July, 14 inches of rain fell at Fort Munro in one day, and at the same time in Dera Ghazi Khan town 6½ inches fell in 13 hours, and as far as can be gathered, this downpour in the plains was general throughout the district. It will be seen that in one day both in the hills and in the plains the downpour was double the average annual rainfall.

2. As a result of this torrential rain, hill torrents which are many in number broke with irresistible force right through the network of embankments in the hill torrent country adjoining the foot-hills and swept over the canal irrigated area adjoining the Indus, carrying everything before them, and converting a great part of the canal area into an enormous lake. In the Dera Ghazi Khan tahsil, the force of the torrent may be gauged by the fact that the Manka canal, which stretches for 50 miles between the tail of the hill torrent embanked terrain and the western limit of the canal area, was breached in no less than 915 places, receiving the full force of the torrents.

3. In 1917, a similar downpour visited Fort Munro, which tore away the roads and swept irresistibly through the district, but the damage done in 1917 was not so great as has been done this year for two reasons, first the exceptional rains in the plains that caused the canal area to swim with water before the advent of the hill torrents, and secondly the bursting of the hill torrent flood into the already saturated tract at night causing great confusion, alarm and loss of life.

4. On receipt of information from the Deputy Commissioner at the beginning of August that the new town of Dera Ghazi Khan, which was re-built some 17 years ago on the old town being washed away by the river, had come within an ace of destruction, the Honourable Member for Revenue proceeded from Simla to inquire into the extent of the disaster which has now overtaken the district of Dera Ghazi Khan. In Dera Ghazi Khan an attempt was made to appraise the loss by means of the revenue staff, and on the 13th of August reports from various circles in the tahsil indicated that, in addition to the loss of 157 lives, damage has been done to property to the extent of at least eight lakhs, mainly by way of destruction of house property, though thousands of cattle are reported to have been drowned. This is an estimate of one tahsil only. There are three other tahsils. No detailed information is available regarding the northern tahsil, Sanghar, but it is known that on the Sanghar torrent one village has been wiped out, and 317 houses destroyed in another big village. Further north in the tahsil, the Vahoa torrent has caused damage to a dozen villages, which lie in its course, most of these villages having been, by an irony of fate, left high and dry for the last three years owing to insufficient flow from the hill torrent which serves them. It may perhaps be mentioned that, for the past three years, the hill torrent area throughout the district has not obtained anything like its normal cropping owing to inadequate flow from the hill torrents, and this disaster comes at a time when food supplies in the district and the resisting powers of its inhabitants are at their lowest ebb. Even in the canal tracts in which the inundation canals afford supplies from the river in the summer, the main crop, rice, has been for the last two or three years very severely damaged by the growing rice borer pest.

5. South of the Dera Ghazi Khan tahsil is the Jampur tahsil, the southern part of which was swept away by the Kaha hill torrent, the discharge of which on the morning of the 26th of July has been estimated at between 50 and 70 thousand cusecs. The waters of three hill torrents impinging on the canals in the south of the Jampur tahsil and carrying everything away with them, swept through the Qutab circle of the Rajanpur tahsil for a length of 30 to 35 miles before they breached the eastern most canal to drain slowly into the river. No estimates have been received of the damage done in the Rajanpur tahsil for the simple fact that all the villages in this tract of at least 30 miles by 8 to 10 miles are marooned, and the Sub-Divisional Officer up to the 13th of August has only succeeded in getting information to the Deputy Commissioner that the big towns are safe and there has been no loss of life, a statement which requires further verification. It is estimated that, on this one night and day, the torrents brought down three lakhs cusecs into the district. With the Indus still in flood, the difficulty of draining off these huge lakes of water needs no explanation.

6. A further disadvantage in the present floods has been the time of their coming. The present floods have come at a time when no kharif sowings are possible in the canal tract, and in the hill torrent country where the heavy rain rather than the spates has made large areas culturable, the kharif sowing time is passing and indeed will be at an end by the 25th of August or a few days later. The demand for seed may be gauged from the fact that jowar is selling at 2 to 2½ seers a rupee, or more than treble the ordinary price, but any rabi cropping in the hill torrent country is out of the question, and in the canal tract it remains to be seen whether it will be possible to extend rabi sowings on the swamped and sodden areas.

7. In the past winter, owing to acute scarcity in the hill area beyond the regular administrative border, the Punjab Government sanctioned a grant of Rs. 30,000 out of the Provincial Famine Fund for the building of tanks and by way of relieving destitution. On receipt of the news of the present flood, Rs. 2 lakhs of taccavi were placed at the disposal of the Deputy Commissioner, and the same is being distributed partly for seed and partly for cattle, but mainly for relief of distress. A second sum of Rs. 2 lakhs taccavi is being allotted for the purchase of seed for the replacement of cattle and partly for the rehabilitation of damaged wells. It is also proposed to allot a sum of Rs. 50,000 from the Provincial Famine Fund for the relief of destitution and provision of fund in the areas swept by the floods. A sum of probably Rs. 15,000 will be granted by the Provincial Red Cross Society. There is no jowar or bajra (staple foods) in the district, and except in Rajanpur, there is no rice. There is a certain amount of wheat in the district, but the intensity of the present distress will be prolonged till the harvest in the Pachahd ripens about Xmas, unless the present rice crop in places where its maturing is still possible, comes to the rescue, and there is reasonable hope that the efforts of the Canal Department will succeed in maturing the rice in favourable localities.

8. The rabi revenue outstanding 1½ lakhs is being suspended, and the desirability of converting this suspension into a remission will be considered when further details are available. It should be explained that, in the canal tracts in the south-western Punjab, and particularly in the Dera Ghazi Khan District, the country people do not live for the most part in nucleated villages, but pursue their cultivation in scattered hamlets with the well as a unit. The loss of houses and property would have been much less if the villages were nucleated as in the Punjab proper as regular villages are places of refuge, while outlying hamlets built anywhere on the site of the well simply disappear with the flood of this kind.

9. Information subsequently received estimates the loss of life in the Sanghar tahsil at 14, and the loss in the way of damage to houses and grain at Rs. 2½ lakhs. Little information is available about the loss in cattle. In the Jampur tahsil, no lives seem to have been lost, and the estimated loss is put at 2½ lakhs, including the loss to standing crops which, in the southern part of the tahsil, seem to have been irretrievably drowned. For Rajanpur the rest is still silence.

The Report on the recent floods in the Indus, Jhelum and Chenab rivers, dated September 5th, 1929.

Indus Flood.

Attack.—Lowlying areas were flooded and no estimate of losses is as yet possible. It is known however that three lives have been lost, and there has been much damage to property, crops and walls. Heavy rain locally caused a lot of houses to collapse. In addition to damage in the riverain proper, the Malakmala band burst and destroyed 500 houses in three villages without giving the villagers time to save their household effects.

Mianwali.—The whole of the extensive riverain area was swept by the flood, demolishing habitations and sweeping away cattle. The Deputy Commissioner wired on the 29th August, "No help possible for some villages in the Kacha, as boats from Kala-bagh cannot be sent owing to heavy floods", and again on the 2nd September, "Boats can now ply and people are being brought down from trees—several villages have been washed away".

Dera Ghazi Khan.—The Dera Ghazi Khan District has been in imminent danger, but though various groynes and smaller bands collapsed, the main embankments held. The damage from the present flood has been comparatively insignificant and nothing to what was feared. This district, as has already been reported, was devastated by hill torrent floods in July this year.

Jhelum flood.

Jhelum.—The Commissioner, Rawalpindi, writes on the 1st September that the damage inflicted is much greater than last year. In the town itself great havoc was wrought, and there is 4—6 inches of silt deposited everywhere. The Civil Station was partly submerged. Communication to Pind Dadan Khan is cut off, but the town is reported to be in ruins. Many villages in the Jhelum riverain have been washed away, and the Commissioner's estimate on the analogy of last year is that 160 villages are involved in greater or less degree. Most of these villages are still inaccessible. Some loss of life is reported, and it is feared there will be more when the full effects of the flood are at present.

Gujrat.—The Chenab Flood was not so serious, though three villages have been totally destroyed in the Phalia tahsil and 27 partially damaged. The Jhelum flood totally destroyed 11 villages in the same tahsil as well as one village opposite Jhelum. It is only from Gujrat that some definite information has been received of number of villages involved. In other districts the disaster does not admit of any such computation at present.

Shahpur.—Certain areas in the Shahpur District which lie low always receive the full force of floods in the Jhelum damage. The damage done in Shahpur by last year's floods was very extensive. Up to the present little official information has been received. The present flood has far exceeded last year's flood and the latest telegram can only report that the flooded areas are still out of reach and such reports as have been received show immense damage to property. The damage to house property has been unparalleled.

Jhang.—The Jhang riverain has also been swept by the Jhelum and Chenab floods. It is estimated that the damage in all tahsils will be considerable.

Combined Indus and joint Chenab and Jhelum floods.

Muzaffargarh.—This district is sandwiched in between the Indus and Chenab. It was freely swept by Indus floods in 1924. The full force of the Indus flood reached Muzaffargarh on the 31st August and protective embankments and bands right down the western front breached one after another. There are now at least five breaches open, through which water is pouring down to the south. The railway line from Mahmudkot to the north has been breached in several places, and the line to Ghazi Ghat has gone. The Punjab Government arranged to send 13 pontoons and a detachment of 100 Sappers to Muzaffargarh to rescue marooned people, and the pontoons have done good rescue work from 1st September onwards. Many deaths are reported, and at Leiah on the 2nd September it was telegraphed that about one thousand people, mostly women and children, were rescued in a deplorable condition.

The joint Chenab and Jhelum flood on the other side of the district rose above last year's level on the 2nd September and overtopped the railway line from the Chenab bridge to Muzaffargarh. Telegraphic information of 4th September is that though the Chenab has begun to fall, a breach on the Chenab side is responsible for an inundation which is converging on the incoming waters from the Indus in the neighbourhood of Shahr Sultan, 35 miles south of Muzaffargarh town. There is 40 miles of peninsula, south of this anticipated junction, which is in danger of being blotted out, and it includes the most fertile tract in the district.

6. The Gujrat, Jhelum, Shahpur and Jhang districts were visited last year with a similar affliction, though on a lesser scale. The riverain people in Mianwali and

1178

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

[23RD SEPT. 1929.]

Muzaffargarh are notoriously poor and indeed, the economic condition of the Muzaffargarh district has in recent years attracted the special attention of the Punjab Legislative Council as a backward and impoverished tract. The people have no reserves and little stamina, and the present flood is a cataclysm, the like of which has never been experienced before.

NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

III.

Reports as to floods in the North-West Frontier Province, dated 30th and 31st August and September 2nd, 1929.

On 29th August, 1929, river at Attock rose nine feet higher than during recent Shyok flood, causing heavy backwash at Nowshera. Road was breached on both sides of Attock bridge. Flood in Indus was accentuated by floods in Swate Kabul rivers tahsil and bungalows at Nowshera north of Mall evacuated. Road was also breached east and west of Nowshera, but railway embankment still intact, though threatened in neighbourhood of Akora railway bridge between Nowshera and Mardan reported unsafe: heavy flood in Swat river caused inundation on island between Khiali and Charsadda bridge completely cutting off Charsadda. Same villages have been destroyed but no loss of life so far reported. Abbottabad has been completely cut off on both sides. Due to collapse of railway and road bridges Kunar river at Garhi Habibulla has changed its course and gone north of road bridge cutting through village and removing large sections of road. Flood reached Dera Ismail Khan at 16-00 hours on 28th and up to 21-00 hours on 29th has risen two feet higher than level reached during recent Shyok flood and slightly higher than record of 1924 although bund under action of flood. So far as is known at present, no damage has been done, and there has been no loss of life. Flood has slightly fallen since six hours 29th August. Latest reports from Peshawar are that flood in Swat river has almost subsided, but floods at Nowshera were still high on 29th. Revenue Commissioner visited flooded areas in order to ascertain action necessary to provide immediate relief for sufferers from flood in Peshawar District. Relief in form of food, medical attendance and blankets were supplied to villagers in flooded areas. Flood situation Dera Ismail Khan on 31st August: Protective Bund at Dera Ismail Khan has undergone very severe test from longitudinal face scour undermining of apron and wave action against bund slope but appears to have stood test although scour outside apron 15 to 5 feet inner part of apron remains intact. As result of warning inhabitants of Khanu Khel nine miles east of Paharpur were isolated some of the villagers and eight policemen spent 24 hours up trees. Although no loss of life reported so far communications most difficult and unreliable and casualties are feared. Every effort made by means of rafts and jalas to rescue Khanu Khel from Paharpur. At Dera Ismail Khan water has subsided to 17.5 and steamer is making up stream with small boats for evacuation and all M. E. S. flat-bottomed boats have been pressed into service. Relief parties have also been detailed from Paniala to work south-east along foot Khaisor Hills in direction Bilet which is worst area at present reported for immediate relief measures. Posts with grain, firewood, etc., being established at point above present water level in northern area and similar depots will be opened in southern tract round Parea. Rafts from Paharpur have rescued 140 stranded villagers, one woman reported drowned and considerable loss of cattle feared. The Chief Commissioner visited most badly affected area in Peshawar district on the 2nd September, namely between Abazai and Charsadda. Damage and suffering serious several villages having practically disappeared. For instance 120 out of 126 houses and 46 jaribs of land and 600 jaribs of standing crops have gone. Amount required for taccavi is being worked out by Revenue Commissioner. Meanwhile further immediate measures to utterly destitute being necessary, fifteen thousand rupees were placed at disposal of Deputy Commissioner as an advance. A meeting of local gentry at Town Hall Peshawar for the purpose of starting relief fund was held on the 1st September, 1929, and, in spite of very short notice and absence in Hills of many leading citizens, a subscription of Rs. 2,500 was collected on spot. Further meetings were also arranged. Reports from Dera Ismail Khan mere reassuring. Villages were flooded but not swept away. Danger at Abazai and Amandarra including training works over. Heavy repairs necessary but works can function. Heavy expenditure will be required to restore communications in Hazara and elsewhere. Local Officers and Zaildars been working splendidly. Very little if any loss of life.

Mr. E. L. Price : May I ask, Sir, if nothing is granted for Sind ?

Sir Frank Noyce : Yes, Sir : Rs. 1,25,000, the same as for the Punjab.

Mr. E. L. Price : Thank you.

DECREASE OF MUSLIMS IN THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, HEALTH AND LANDS.

690. *Mr. Muhammad Rafique (on behalf of Mr. Abdul Haye) : (a) Will Government please state if it is a fact that, since 1924, the number of Muslim permanent first, second and third division clerks, stenographers, and Superintendents in the Department of Education, Health and Lands has considerably decreased ?

(b) Will Government please give the number of these clerks, stenographers and Superintendents for 1924 and 1929 ?

(c) If there is a fall in the number of Muslim clerks, stenographers and Superintendents in this Department, will Government please state the cause ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Seven first division assistants and three third division clerks are now employed as against nine and five respectively in 1924. There is no decrease in the number of Superintendents, second division clerks or stenographers.

|                             | 1924 | 1929 |
|-----------------------------|------|------|
| (b) Superintendents         | nil  | nil  |
| Assistants (first division) | 9    | 7    |
| Clerks (Second division)    | 9    | 9    |
| Clerks (Third division)     | 5    | 3    |
| Stenographers               | 1    | 1    |

(c) The decrease is due to the fact that two Muslim Assistants were transferred to service under the Punjab Government and two clerks to the office of the Inspector General of Forests, Dehra Dun.

RECRUITMENT OF SEAMEN BY THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL AND BRITISH INDIA STEAMSHIP COMPANIES.

691. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (1) whether they are aware of the system of recruitment of seamen in the Peninsular and Oriental and the British India lines of ships ;
- (2) whether the system is essentially different from the system of recruitment on other lines ;
- (3) whether it is a fact that the crews are recruited without the medium of the shipping brokers ;
- (4) whether some subordinates of the two shipping companies favour the Bombay Seamen's Union with orders for supply of crews ;
- (5) whether Government is aware of any illegal gratifications and other corrupt practices on the part of one Ligorio Pereira, a clerk of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and some persons of the above Union ; and
- (6) if so, what steps do they propose to take in order to check the evils ?

- (1) Yes.
- (2) Yes. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company and the British India Steam Navigation Company maintain registers of serangs and butlers in their regular employ and these leading ratings are selected at the Companies' offices by their own officers. The lower ratings are also recruited by the Companies' officers with the aid of the leading ratings. In the case of the other shipping companies, an employment register of serangs and butlers is maintained at the Shipping Office and these ratings are selected by the Company's officers at an open muster held at that office. The lower ratings are recruited by the Company's officers with the aid of the leading ratings.
- (3) It is believed that the broker has been largely eliminated as an intermediary in the selection of the crews.
- (4), (5) and (6). Government have seen allegations to this effect in a pamphlet published by the Social Service League, Bombay, but they did not find sufficient reason to institute inquiries.

CHARGE FOR A DUPLICATE CERTIFICATE ISSUED TO SEAMEN.

692. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (1) what fee is generally charged in the case of seamen for a duplicate certificate of service which is issued when the original is defaced, torn or lost ;
- (2) whether the duplicate can be issued free of cost also as is provided in the foot-note on certificates of discharge issued under section 43 of Act I of 1859 ;
- (3) whether the discretion to charge any fee or issue the duplicate free of charge is vested in the Shipping Master ; and
- (4) why so much latitude is given to him ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions No. 692, 693 and 695 together. The information asked for by the Honourable Member is being collected and will be supplied in due course.

FEES CHARGED FOR RENEWAL OF CERTIFICATES OF SEAMEN.

†693. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) what fee is charged in the case of seamen when the certificate of service is "renewed for a next higher issue" ;
- (b) whether any receipt is passed for issue of a renewal certificate ;
- (c) the number of renewal certificates issued during the official year 1927-28 ;

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 692.

- (d) the total amount of fee realised during the year on that account ;
- (e) whether any complaints regarding levy of higher fees have been made by the seamen to the Shipping Master, Bombay ; and
- (f) if so, what action was taken by him thereon ?

APPOINTMENT OF A PRINCIPAL OFFICER TO SUPERVISE SHIPPING OFFICES.

694. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether it is a fact that, consequent on the transfer of the control of Shipping and Navigation from the Local Governments to the Government of India from 1st April, 1929, they have had under contemplation the appointment of a Principal Officer to supervise the working of Shipping Offices at various ports in India ; and
- (b) (i) whether the Principal Officer's appointment has been made, and, if so, (ii) the name of the incumbent, (iii) his qualifications, (iv) the date from which he has taken charge, (v) his office address, (vi) the period during which he is on tour during the year, and (vii) when he is required to be in Bombay on his duty of supervision ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government have no proposal under contemplation for the appointment of a Principal Officer to supervise the working of Shipping Offices at the various ports in India. Under the scheme for the centralisation of the mercantile marine administration, the coasts of India will be divided into districts based on the major ports of Aden, Karachi, Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Rangoon, and each district will be placed in charge of an officer to be called the Principal Officer, who will be the chief executive officer of the Government of India in the district in all matters relating to mercantile marine administration. He will also exercise general supervision over the whole of the district staff administering the Merchant Shipping Acts, including the Shipping Masters. Principal Officers have so far been appointed at Calcutta and Rangoon only. Both these Officers are Captains in the Royal Indian Marine.

FEES CHARGED FOR RENEWAL OF DISCHARGE CERTIFICATES OF SEAMEN.

†695. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether the fee of Rs. 2 (two) for renewal of a discharge certificate is excused in some cases of seamen at the discretion of the Shipping Master, Bombay, as per the footnote in the discharge certificate form ;
- (b) the number of cases of such free renewal certificates issued during the calendar years 1927 and 1928 ;
- (c) whether it is a fact that there is a considerable number of cases in which more than Rs. 2 per renewal has been paid by seamen ;

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 692.

- (d) whether such cases of extra payments have come to the knowledge of the Shipping Master ; and
 (e) if so, what action was taken by him ?

DISCHARGE OF CREWS OF MERCHANT SHIPS.

696. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether it is a fact that the crews of certain merchant ships are discharged in six weeks, while they have been signed on for six months and are willing to serve for the full period ;
 (b) the number of such cases of discharge of crew during the calendar years 1927 and 1928 ; and
 (c) whether any crews have been specially remunerated for such premature discharge and, if so, the names of the ships, the classes of crew, their number and the total amount of such remuneration ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The information asked for is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member as soon as possible.

LOCATION OF THE BOMBAY SHIPPING OFFICE.

697. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) the reasons for removing the Bombay Shipping Office from Princess Dock to the present site ;
 (b) the period during which it was situated in the former place ;
 (c) whether they have heard of any inconvenience caused to seamen by the office being located in the present premises ;
 (d) whether there is any proposal to re-accommodate it in its former place ; and
 (e) if the answer to part (d) is in the negative, whether, and if so when they propose to make proper seating arrangements for seamen in the present premises of the Shipping Office ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Shipping Office was removed in 1927 from the Branch Customs House at the Princess Docks to the ground floor of the Development Department building, because the Branch Customs House was considered unsuitable for a Shipping Office. The latter office is situated at a considerable distance from the offices of the various shipping companies, the Banks and the Main Customs House and is in a very noisy locality. Moreover the Customs Department wanted the accommodation for its own use.

(b) For about 6½ years.

(c) No.

(d) No.

(e) Instructions have been issued for the early construction of a pucca waiting shed for the use of seamen visiting the Shipping Office.

RECRUITMENT OF CREWS BY THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL AND BRITISH INDIA STEAMSHIP COMPANIES.

698. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state :

- (a) whether it is a fact that, unlike other shipping companies, the crews in the Peninsular and Oriental and British India lines are recruited directly by the Companies' officials themselves without the shipping brokers' intervention ;
 (b) whether the shipping brokers get less commission on advances they make to the crews of the Peninsular and Oriental and British India lines than in other companies ;
 (c) if so, what are the rates of commission in either case ;
 (d) whether it is a fact that, even the advances to crews in the Peninsular and Oriental and British India lines are, of late, made by the Companies themselves without the medium of the brokers ; and if so, whether the services of the brokers are entirely dispensed with by the two Companies ; and
 (e) the approximate annual gain to the Companies in the form of brokers' commission ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I assume that the Honourable Member's question relates to the state of affairs in Bombay :

- (a) The crews required for the vessels belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company and the British India Steam Navigation Company are recruited very largely by the Companies' officers without the intervention of the broker.
 (b) to (e). Government have no information, but the points raised will be examined at the first convenient opportunity.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that the Clow Committee recommended five or six years ago that the broker system should be abolished and that officers for recruitment should be appointed ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government are certainly acquainted with the recommendations of the Clow Committee.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But is it not a fact that the abolition of the broker system was recommended some years ago ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I must ask for notice. The details of the Clow Report are not sufficiently clear in my mind at the moment to enable me to answer my Honourable friend's question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But the broker system is a nuisance, and in view of the fact that the Honourable Member is not aware of it, will he expedite the matter and bring the facts to the notice of the Whitley Commission ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I have not the least doubt that the facts will be brought to the notice of the Whitley Commission. I am sure the Honourable Member himself is in a position to secure that result.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Will that be for the benefit of the country ? (Laughter.)

RULES FOR THE ALLOTMENT OF CLERKS QUARTERS IN DELHI.

699. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Delhi clerks' quarters allotment rules provide that a man who is in occupation of any quarter on the 1st January is able to establish his lien for the future ?

(b) Why was this particular date fixed for the purpose ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, provided that he is in occupation of a quarter of his proper class.

(b) Because the lien is only established if the clerk is in occupation for the major portion of the season.

RULES FOR THE ALLOTMENT OF CLERKS QUARTERS IN DELHI.

700. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Delhi allotment rules provide for the surrender of quarters in some cases ?

(b) Are such quarters allotted to other clerks who want them ?

(c) Are they allowed to retain their liens on such quarters if they occupy them before 1st January ?

(d) Do they retain their lien if they occupy them after 1st January ?

(e) If the reply to part (d) be in the negative, will Government please state the reasons ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes.

(d) No.

(e) The reason is given in the reply to part (b) of the Honourable Member's question No. 699.

INSUFFICIENT QUARTERS FOR CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

701. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) How many men of the Government of India attached and Secretariat offices, who move from Simla to New Delhi, and who wanted D and C type quarters could not be provided with quarters last winter ?

(b) Did Government make any arrangements to accommodate them in Delhi ?

(c) Is it a fact that private accommodation in New Delhi is not sufficient and very expensive ?

(d) Did Government give any relief to those who could not be provided with quarters ?

(e) Is it a fact that such men who made their own arrangements in New Delhi were not given any house rent although they had to pay much more than what they have to pay for Government quarters ?

(f) What steps do Government propose to take in future to remove the difficulties of their migratory establishments in the matter of residential accommodation ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 523 (excluding single men).

(b) No.

(c) Yes. Private accommodation is more expensive than Government accommodation.

(d) Yes, a monthly house-rent allowance was granted subject to certain conditions to those clerks who lived outside New Delhi.

(e) Yes.

(f) 150 more quarters are under construction and the position generally is under review.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI FOR CLERKS OF THE ARMY DEPARTMENT.

702. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the Army Headquarters offices will be located in New Delhi next winter ?

(b) Will those clerks who occupied quarters in Old Delhi last winter be able to get quarters in New Delhi ?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) Yes.

(b) Some will.

ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS TO NON-MIGRATORY CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

703. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) What percentage of the total number of D type quarters in New Delhi were allotted last winter to the non-migratory staff ?

(b) Is it a fact that no provision was made for the accommodation of the local Public Works Department staff when the number of quarters to be built was decided and the quarters were built for the requirements of the Secretariat and attached offices ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) is in the affirmative, why are so many quarters given to the local staff and the migratory staff compelled to go without quarters ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 64 per cent.

(b) Yes.

(c) Under the rules governing allotment, the local staff have as much right to quarters as the migratory staff.

QUARTERS FOR OFFICIALS AND CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

704. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that almost all the migratory officers who require quarters at New Delhi are provided with them ?

(b) Is it a fact that most of the high paid officials are provided with Government residences and that many of the low paid clerks are left to make their own arrangements ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No. There is a serious shortage of accommodation which has resulted in many officers having to share accommodation with others or to make private arrangements in other ways.

(b) It is recognized that the shortage of clerks quarters is even greater than that of officers quarters.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS FOR CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

705. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that some of the clerks of the Government of India belong to far off provinces such as Madras and Assam ?

(b) Are all of them provided with quarters at New Delhi ?

(c) If not, what steps do Government propose to take to remove their grievances ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) The position generally is under review, but there is no idea of according preferential treatment to clerks who belong to far off provinces.

QUARTERS FOR CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

706. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) What is the number of migratory clerks who have applied for quarters in New Delhi for the next winter season ?

(b) How many of them will be provided with quarters ?

(c) What were the figures in respect of parts (a) and (b) last year ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) 1,303 excluding single men.

(b) 711 excluding single men, for 176 of whom there is accommodation leased to the Secretariat Association and others.

(c) (a) 1,255 (b) 657.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS IN "D" CLASS QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

707. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 1301, dated the 28th March, 1929, will Government please state whether an electric point has now been provided in the godown room of "D" Class quarters in New Delhi ? If not, when will it be done ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The electric points in the godown room of the "D" class quarters have not yet been provided. The matter is still under consideration.

FEES IN SCHOOLS IN DELHI PROVINCE.

708. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : With reference to my starred question No. 1212, dated the 22nd March, 1929, will Government please state what action has been taken regarding the raising of the limit of income for payment of double fees in the schools in the Delhi Province ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The Chief Commissioner, Delhi, was addressed in the matter and he has intimated that the scale of fees in Delhi is regulated by the orders contained in the Punjab Education Code, which has been adopted for use by the Administration. At present there is no proposal under consideration to revise the grades of fees in schools in the Punjab and there has been no move in that direction in Delhi.

SHORTAGE OF CLERKS' QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

709. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that more than half of the members of the ministerial establishment of the Government of India migratory offices who had applied for allotment of Government quarters in New Delhi for 1928-29 had to make their private arrangements in New Delhi and Delhi city for want of sufficient number of Government quarters ?

(b) If so, what steps have Government taken since the last year to remove this inconvenience ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise, but I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to part (f) of question No. 701.

SHORTAGE OF CLERKS' QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

710. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the office of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs and certain other offices have recently been transferred from other places to New Delhi ?

(b) If so, had Government taken the requirements of residential accommodation for them into consideration when constructing the quarters in New Delhi ?

(c) What percentage of them had, during the last winter, to go without quarters ?

(d) Is it a fact that as a result of no provision having been made for residential accommodation of most of the non-migratory offices at present in New Delhi there is a great shortage of quarters ?

(e) Do Government propose to construct more quarters to accommodate all non-migratory office establishments in a separate area leaving all the existing quarters for the migratory staff for whom they were primarily constructed ? If so, when ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes. Portions of these offices have recently been brought to New Delhi.

(b) To a partial extent only.

(c) The information has been called for from the local authorities and will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

(d) Yes. For this and other reasons.

(e) The position generally is under review.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member state whether it is a fact that the inadequacy of accommodation for the staff of the Telegraph Department has been under the consideration of the Government for many years, and may I ask how many more years do Government intend to wear its cap of consideration before coming to a decision in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I did not quite catch the Honourable Member's question. If he is referring to the Telegraph Department generally, I submit that that does not arise out of the main question. If he is referring to the office of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, that office was moved to Delhi within the last two years.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : I submit, with all respect to the Honourable Member, that the office of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs is part and parcel of the entire Department.

Mr. President : That is not a question.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : The question refers to the staff accommodation for members of the Telegraph Department under the Director General's office.

Mr. President : Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha.

GRANT OF HOUSE RENT TO CLERKS NOT PROVIDED WITH GOVERNMENT QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

711 *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that Government have under consideration the question of renewing the old practice of allowing house rent to those clerks who, for want of Government quarters, have to make their private arrangements for residence in New Delhi ?

(b) Are Government aware that those who make their own arrangements in New Delhi have to pay much more rent than 10 per cent. of pay charged for Government quarters ?

(c) Do Government propose to sanction house rent allowance for such clerks who have to make their private arrangements in New Delhi during the ensuing cold season ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a), (b) and (c). It has been decided to grant house rent allowance to those clerks who, owing to the insufficiency of Government accommodation, have to make their own arrangements for residence in private houses in New Delhi.

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE FOR CLERKS IN NEW DELHI.

712. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 1216 in the Legislative Assembly on the 22nd March, 1929, will Government please state what progress has since been made to improve the arrangements for medical attendance for Government employees in New Delhi ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The detailed scheme for providing both Old and New Delhi with an up to date hospital, which will provide ample accommodation for all classes, is being worked out and it is hoped that the work will be started shortly.

The New Dispensary for New Delhi is nearly completed.

MEDICAL ATTENDANCE FOR CLERKS IN DELHI AND SIMLA.

713. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the names and addresses of the medical officers specially appointed for the Government of India employees at Delhi and Simla are not communicated every season to the various offices and the Associations of the establishments concerned ?

(b) Are Government aware that the doctors in question are not usually present at their houses and dispensaries at the fixed hours and are often out for private practice ?

(c) Do Government propose to issue instructions that the doctors should always be present at their fixed places at the fixed hours ?

(d) Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing the names of the doctors specially appointed for attendance on different classes of Government servants at Delhi and Simla, stating the rules for their consultation, and the hours and places where they are required to be on duty ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The names and addresses of the medical officers specially deputed to attend the Government of India clerks who reside in Delhi City are communicated each season to the several Departments of the Government of India for the information of those concerned. Similar information for Simla is communicated to the offices concerned whenever there is a change of incumbents.

(b) No.

(c) No instructions are necessary, as the medical officers concerned are always present at fixed places during fixed hours, except when they are called out on urgent work.

(d) Information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member in due course.

PROVISION OF A SCHOOL FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE SONS AND WARDS OF THE MIGRATORY STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

714. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the sons and wards of some of the Government of India employees could not secure admission in the Government School, Simla, in April and May, 1929, on account of overcrowding in the school ?

(b) Is it also a fact that the matter had to be reported to the higher authorities and it was with their intervention that the students were admitted ?

(c) If replies to parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, what steps have Government taken to prevent the recurrence of such trouble ?

(d) Do Government propose to start an additional school (moving between Delhi and Simla) to overcome overcrowding and other troubles in connection with the education of the sons of the migratory staff of the Government of India ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) The matter was reported to the higher authorities who already had under consideration arrangements for a larger admission of pupils.

As a result of these arrangements a number of additional pupils were admitted to the school.

(c) and (d). The matter is under consideration.

PROVISION OF FACILITIES FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE CHILDREN OF THE MIGRATORY STAFF OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

715. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that Simla and Delhi are under the jurisdiction of different Universities, and the Matriculation text books at both the places are different ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, what steps have Government taken or do they propose to take to afford necessary facilities for the education of the children of their employees moving between Delhi and Simla ?

(c) Are Government considering the question of making special arrangements at Simla for the preparation of Matriculation students for the Delhi University ? If not, why not ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The answer to the first part of this question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, the books prescribed in some subjects are different.

(b) and (c). The matter is under consideration.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee : Are Government aware that the University of Delhi have nothing whatever to do with the conduct of the Matriculation examination ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I really do not know.

GRANT OF INCREMENTS TO CLERKS FOR PAST TEMPORARY SERVICE.

716. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that all those temporary men in the Government of India Secretariat who were confirmed in their appointments in 1924 were granted increments for their past service ?

(b) Is it also a fact that some other temporary men with equal or longer service who were confirmed after 1924 for no fault of their own, but for the individual circumstances of the Department in which they were employed, were not allowed similar increments ?

(c) Have some clerks in the Army Department been recently granted increments for their past temporary service ?

(d) If replies to parts (a), (b) and (c) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to extend the same concession to clerks in other offices confirmed after 1924 to remove the anomaly ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (a) and (b). When the time-scales of pay were introduced in the Government of India Secretariat in 1919, it was laid down that temporary employees should remain on a fixed rate of pay and should not begin to count service for increments until they were confirmed. Since, however, during the war many employees had been retained on a temporary footing for long periods, and in view of the fact that the principle of counting temporary service towards increments had been allowed in the case of men who were holding permanent appointments in the Secretariat on the 1st December, 1919, it was decided in 1920 that some concession of this kind might be extended, in individual cases of special hardship, to temporary men also on the occasion of their being confirmed. This was intended to be a special temporary exception to the ordinary rule referred to above, and was stopped on the fixation of the permanent strength of the Departments after consideration of the recommendations of the Retrenchment Committee and the introduction of leave reserves in Departments generally in 1924.

(c) The fixation of the strength of the Army Department, however, was more difficult than that of the civil Departments for the expansion during the war had of course been much greater. It was always recognised therefore that this Department must be regarded as a special case and be kept under continuous review for a long period. The result was that, in the case of the Army Department, an unusually large proportion of posts was kept on a temporary footing for a long period. In 1924, on the occasion of the fixation of the strength of the other Departments, to which I have already referred, it was thought that sufficient knowledge was available at least to fix a minimum strength below which the Department could not be reduced. A number of the temporary posts were therefore made permanent ; and the concession referred to in my answer to part (b) was extended to the men confirmed on that occasion. But this minimum was considerably below the actual strength at the time, and a large number of temporary posts were still maintained. In 1928 a second attempt was made to fix the regular strength, and some more permanent posts in excess of the 1924 minimum were added. On this occasion the Government of India, recognising that facts had in the end demonstrated that it would have been justifiable to make the posts in question permanent in 1924 took the view that the employees affected should not be prejudiced by the decision having been deliberately deferred. They were therefore given the same concession that they would have got in 1924.

(d) Government do not consider that any question of anomaly arises because, as I have explained, special circumstances made it impossible to fix the strength for the Army Department in 1924 as definitely as was the case with the civil Departments. Government consider that the ordinary rule in all ordinary cases should be adhered to and that no undue hardship is involved, but if the Honourable Member has in mind any individual case of special hardship analogous to those I have mentioned and if he will give me particulars I shall be glad to have it examined.

RECKONING OF SERVICE OF CLERKS RETRENCHED AND RE-EMPLOYED.

717. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that, as a result of the late Inchcape Committee's Report, some qualified men having long temporary service were retrenched and were allowed travelling allowance to their homes as on transfer ?

(b) Is it a fact that some of the retrenched men were again taken in service after a short period ?

(c) If the reply to parts (a) and (b) be in the affirmative, is it the intention that any interval between the date of retrenchment and re-employment in the case of the clerks referred to in part (b) should be included for the purpose of increment, pension and leave? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) As regards increment and leave, individual cases were dealt with on their merits at the time. As regards pension, the general rule is that temporary service does not count; but in cases of long temporary service the question of allowing it to count in whole or in part for pension is one which could only be considered on its merits when the officer actually retires. Government do not consider that any general instructions are now called for.

RECRUITMENT OF CLERKS FOR THE FIRST DIVISION OF THE SECRETARIAT.

718. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that those candidates who had appeared for second division of the Secretariat offices in the examination held by the late Staff Selection Board in 1922, and had obtained a certain percentage of marks, were afterwards declared qualified for the first division?

(b) Do Government propose to extend the same concession to those who appeared in the 1926 examination for the first division and obtained the same percentage of marks?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Departmental candidates in the 1922 examination who obtained enough marks were declared qualified for the first division, even though they appeared for the second division.

(b) No. The 1926 examination was competitive.

LIQUIDATION OF THE "INDARPRAST STORES", DELHI.

719. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that a limited company under the name "Indarprast Stores" was started in Delhi in 1921 and went into liquidation after working for about two years?

(b) Is it a fact that more than six years have since elapsed but the liquidators have not so far been able to liquidate the transactions of two years?

(c) Have Government any control over such liquidations to save the public from fraud and misappropriation? If so, what action do Government propose to take in the matter?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Inquiry is being made from the Local Administration and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

PROVISION OF A CONVENIENT MORNING TRAIN FROM SANGLA TO LAHORE.

720. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that there is no train running from Sangla which reaches Lahore at about 9 o'clock in the morning—the time at which most of the passengers have to come to Lahore to attend offices and courts?

(b) Is it a fact that a motor lorry service is running on that section between Chuharkana and Lahore and that railway earnings have decreased as most of the passengers travel in the lorries in the morning?

(c) In order to provide facilities to passengers and in the interests of railway revenues, do Government propose to alter the time of train No. 27/48 Down or start a new local train to reach Lahore before the court time? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The information required is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

NEW PENSION RULES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

721. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India started the drafting of new pension and gratuity rules in or about 1921?

(b) Is it a fact that the rules have not yet been issued? If so, what is the present stage?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I can best reply to the Honourable Member's question by taking both parts of it together. When the Fundamental Rules were being compiled out of the Civil Service Regulations, in and about 1921, the pensions portion of the Civil Service Regulations was reserved for separate treatment, and the Fundamental Rules were published without a pensions chapter. A pensions chapter for the Fundamental Rules was in due course prepared and sent to the Secretary of State for sanction, but he withheld his sanction owing to developments meantime which culminated in the promulgation in 1926 of the Civil Services (Governors' Provinces) Delegation Rules. Under those Rules the power to make pension rules for all but the All-India and Central Services was transferred from the Secretary of State to the Governments of Governors' Provinces, and that draft pensions chapter became a mere model which they might or might not adopt as they saw fit. The question remained whether the Secretary of State should apply the draft pensions chapter to the balance of Government servants; but that course was likewise not adopted owing to the further development that the Secretary of State proposed to transfer to the Governor General in Council the power to make rules determining the conditions of service of all the remaining Government servants with the exception only of the All-India Services. It is expected that that proposal will soon be carried out; meantime the pensions chapter in the Civil Service Regulations continues in force with such modifications only as the Governments of Governors' Provinces may have made in the exercise of the powers which they acquired in 1926.

EXPEDITING THE DELIVERY OF LETTERS IN SIMLA.

722. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) What is the time of the first postal delivery in Simla and at what time does the train carrying the mails reach Kalka?

(b) Is it not possible to bring the mails from Kalka to Simla by motor earlier than at present?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The first delivery at Simla is timed for 10-30 A.M. The train carrying the mails issued by this delivery arrives at Kalka at 2-25 A.M.

(b) Yes, but the employment of additional motors for the purpose would involve an expenditure out of all proportion to the volume and importance of the mails carried.

EARLIER DELIVERY OF MAILS IN NEW DELHI.

723. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) What is the time of first postal delivery in New Delhi and at what time does the mail reach Delhi City Railway Station ?

(b) Is it not possible to distribute the mails earlier in New Delhi than at present ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The first delivery in New Delhi is made at 8 A.M., and the mails arriving at Delhi Main Station up to 4-45 A.M. are included in it.

(b) An earlier delivery is not practicable without entailing hardship on the staff, nor have any representations been received that the present hour is inconvenient.

SQUARES AND INDIAN CLERKS' QUARTERS IN NEW DELHI.

724. *Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha : (a) Is it a fact that some of the squares in New Delhi are without light and grass ?

(b) Is it a fact that some of the Indian clerks quarters are not properly repaired and furnished before the date of occupation notified to the Estate Officer ? If so, do Government propose to instruct the officers concerned to attend to such things properly ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) In all cases the Squares in the Clerks' Quarters in New Delhi have lights on the roads which run through them, but lights are not provided in the grassed areas of the Squares. All the Squares have been grassed.

(b) A few cases have occurred in which it has not been possible to finish the annual repairs and to furnish the quarters properly, owing to the hot weather tenants of the quarters having failed to vacate the quarters on the due date. Every effort is made to have the quarters ready in time.

CLERICAL STAFF OF THE GENERAL POST OFFICE, BOMBAY.

725. *Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Is it a fact that the Postmaster General, Bombay, has ordered retrenchment in the clerical staff in the Bombay General Post Office by keeping the appointments vacant as recommended by Rai Bahadur Ganguli and that the Presidency Postmaster, Bombay, has carried out these orders ?

(b) Is it a fact that simultaneous recommendations of that officer supported by the Presidency Postmaster and the Postmaster General, Bombay, have been turned down by the Director General ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to reconsider the recommendations of the officer specially appointed by them and sanction the appointments ? If the reply be in the affirmative, when ? If the same be in the negative, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes, out of sixty appointments recommended for reduction, twelve have so far been kept vacant.

(b) A proposal for 18 additional selection grade posts was made by the Special Officer, while the Postmaster General, Bombay, asked for five such additional appointments. The case was carefully examined by the Director General who was unable to accept either proposal as he did not consider that there were adequate grounds to justify the creation of these additional selection grade appointments.

(c) I shall look into the matter, though I cannot obviously hold out any hope that the Director General's decision will be modified.

INCREASE OF SELECTION GRADE POSTAL APPOINTMENTS IN BOMBAY.

726. *Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether a representation for an increase in the number of selection grade appointments showing full justification for each such appointment was submitted by the Honorary Secretary of the Bombay Postal Union in the year 1923 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Postmaster General, Bombay, had assured the Honorary Secretary from time to time that the question was being sympathetically considered ? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether, and when, they propose to review the question in detail and sanction the required appointments to fill up all the important charges enumerated ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) A representation addressed to the Director General was received in 1923 from the Honorary Secretary, Bombay Postal Clerks' Club. I am not prepared to admit that full justification was shown for each appointment.

(b) The Postmaster General, Bombay, has assured the Secretary that the question was being considered. Some additional supervisory appointments in the selection grade have since been sanctioned. Others are under consideration and will be sanctioned if found justified, and as funds permit.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Within what time, Sir ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : As funds permit, Sir.

PROHIBITION OF INDIAN ADVOCATES FROM PRACTISING IN BURMA.

727. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that the Bar Council of Burma framed a rule prohibiting the Advocates of other Indian High Courts from practising in the subordinate courts of Burma without obtaining express permission of the presiding Judge in every case ?

(b) Are Government aware that the Bar Councils have no power to make rules with regard to subordinate courts ? If so, was the attention of the Burma Bar Council drawn to the rule being ultra vires of its powers and the necessity for cancelling the same ?

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a statement made by Earl Winterton in the House of Commons promising an inquiry regarding the said rule made by the Burma Bar Council ?

(d) Has the Government of Burma been addressed on this point ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay on the table any reply that may have been received ?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given by me on the 10th September, 1929, to starred question No. 259 asked by Mr. K. C. Neogy.

LAND REVENUE LEGISLATION.

728. *Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : (a) Will Government be pleased to make a statement as to the progress made in regard to the steps taken by Provincial Governments to give effect to the Joint Parliamentary Committee's recommendation in 1919 regarding Land Revenue legislation ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to make a statement on the exact scope and objects of the Conference of Land Revenue Members of the Provincial Governments, and the conclusions arrived at by the said Conference ? Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the proceedings of the said Conference ?

(c) Have the Government of India received reports or memoranda from Provincial Governments regarding the present and proposed methods of Land Revenue settlements and their revision ? If so, have the Government of India taken any action on the same ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what is the cause of the delay in publishing the Resolution that was announced to be issued shortly regarding Land Revenue legislation ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) A statement giving the information asked for is laid on the table.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Press communiqué issued on the 15th May, 1929, a copy of which was placed on the table of the House on the 4th September, 1929, in reply to the Honourable Mr. Kelkar's starred question on the subject. The Government of India regret their inability to lay on the table a copy of the Proceedings of the Conference, which were confidential.

(c) None, other than those which were involved in the fresh legislation in pursuance of the Joint Parliamentary Committee's recommendation regarding land revenue legislation.

(d) As Land Revenue is a provincial subject, the announcement that the Resolution would be issued shortly was perhaps too optimistic. No Resolution could be issued without asking Local Governments to see it, to examine it, and to offer suggestions regarding it, if they so desired. Then, the subject is such that it impinges on a number of other Departments, and it was only right that those Departments should be consulted. The delay in part, but in part only, has been due to changes in administration, and, finally, to the Assembly being in session.

Statement showing the progress made by Provincial Governments in the matter of embodying the principles of Land Revenue Assessment in Statute.

Bills have been passed by the Legislative Councils of the Punjab, the United Provinces and the Central Provinces. Legislation has not been considered necessary in Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, as large territories in these provinces are under permanent settlement. In Madras and Assam attempts to secure legislation regarding assessment of land revenue have not proved successful. In Bombay a Bill is under preparation, and it is expected that it will be introduced in the local Legislative Council in February, 1930. In Burma, on account of its special local conditions, the Local Government has, after careful consideration, decided to postpone for the present the introduction of revenue legislation.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, when the Government of India expect to be able to issue the Resolution on the subject ?

Sir Frank Noyce : In view of the explanation I have given in reply to part (d) of the Honourable Member's question, I hesitate to make any statement on that point.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Are Government aware that the Bombay Government have suspended settlement operations pending the enactment of land revenue legislation in that province ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I believe that is so, Sir, but I hardly see how it affects this question.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if the Government of India, when they addressed Local Governments, considered the question of suspending existing settlements pending the enactment of land revenue legislation in their provinces ?

Sir Frank Noyce : I am not in a position to say what was the nature of the communications which passed between the Government of India and the Local Governments on this subject.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I am asking, Sir, whether the Government of India have considered the question of suspending the existing settlements pending the enactment of revenue legislation in the provinces.

Sir Frank Noyce : I should like to have notice of that question, Sir.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Have the Government of India advised the Provincial Governments to follow the example of the Government of Bombay ?

Sir Frank Noyce : The Honourable Member, Sir, is evidently anxious to ascertain in advance the contents of the Resolution which the Government of India are about to issue. I am sorry I am not in a position to supply that information.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I am asking, Sir, as the Honourable Member says that this matter is going to take such a long time in investigation and formulation of conclusions by the Government of India, whether they have considered the question of asking Provincial Governments to suspend settlements, pending the enactment of legislation on lines which their Resolution may hereafter lay down.

Sir Frank Noyce : I have not given the Honourable Member any grounds for the inference that the Government of India are proposing either themselves to introduce any legislation on the subject or to ask Local Governments to do so. As regards the first part of his question,

I can only say that every effort will be made to issue the Resolution as soon as possible.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I am again asking—I regret I have not got my answer—whether the Government of India have considered the question of asking Local Governments to suspend settlement operations pending legislation?

Sir Frank Noyce : I am not in a position to give the Honourable Member that information.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Honourable Member furnish me with the information subsequently?

Sir Frank Noyce : No, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I want to know why, Sir,—why the Government of India are not prepared to furnish me with the information which I want.

Sir Frank Noyce : The Government of India are hoping shortly to issue a Resolution on the subject and that will contain all the information that the Honourable Member requires. I am not in a position to give any information on the subject in advance of the issue of that Resolution.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I was asking the Honourable Member some time ago what time he would take. He now says, the Government of India will shortly issue a Resolution. When I ask for time, he will not give me the time. I therefore ask whether, pending the time they will take over this Resolution, they have considered the question of asking Local Governments, or would consider the question, of suspending settlement operations.

Sir Frank Noyce : Government do not propose to issue any instructions to Local Governments; they will issue a Resolution shortly.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : What exactly is the connotation of “shortly”? Since the recommendation of the Joint Parliamentary Committee, ten years have elapsed. Is that not short enough?

Sir Frank Noyce : The statement I have placed on the table shows the action which has been taken by Provincial Governments on the Joint Parliamentary Committee’s recommendations.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Have the Government of India received a representation from the people of the Central Provinces to the effect that, pending the enactment of new legislation, the settlement operations should be suspended in their provinces?

Sir Frank Noyce : I am not in a position to answer the Honourable Member’s question off-hand. All I can say is that no such representations have come to my own notice. Whether they are in the office or not, I cannot say, but I should be happy to inquire and let the Honourable Member know.

FACILITIES FOR APPRENTICESHIP OF CADETS OF THE “DUFFERIN”.

729. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to state what facilities they propose to afford to the cadets of the “Dufferin” to undergo their apprenticeship course on sailing vessels after they have completed their three years’ training next year on the “Dufferin”?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, I will reply to questions Nos. 729 and 730 together. Eleven shipping companies have agreed to accept as apprentices cadets who have completed the course of the Training Ship. With a view to assist such cadets in securing apprenticeships, the Captain Superintendent of the Training Ship is in communication with the shipping companies on the subject, and it is hoped that it will be possible to place most, if not all, of the cadets as apprentices.

FACILITIES FOR APPRENTICESHIP OF CADETS OF THE “DUFFERIN.”

†730. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government in communication with the various shipping companies to admit a certain number of cadets of the “Dufferin” on their steamers as apprentices? If so, will Government be pleased to state if all the cadets are likely to be absorbed by the companies as apprentices?

RECRUITMENT OF INDIANS TO THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

731. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) What is the total strength of superior appointments in the Royal Indian Marine in India?

(b) How many vacancies occur every year in the superior appointments in the Royal Indian Marine in India?

(c) How is the number of vacancies determined?

(d) Have Government laid down any percentage of recruitment of Indians for appointments in the Royal Indian Marine as in the Indian Civil Service? If so, what is the percentage of vacancies proposed to be reserved for Indians every year?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : (a) The total strength of King’s Commissioned officers of the Royal Indian Marine is 126.

(b) and (c). The number of vacancies varies each year, and depends on the number of casualties and retirements. The Honourable Member will, however, realise that, with such a small cadre, the number of vacancies a year is never likely to be large.

(d) Yes. One-third of the vacancies is reserved for Indians, provided that suitably qualified candidates are forthcoming.

SYSTEM OF RECRUITMENT FOR THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

732. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government aware that under the present system of recruitment, the cadets who join as apprentices on board the vessels to complete their sea service will be unable to compete for the Royal Indian Marine appointments within their age limit and that they will have no facilities for higher literary studies on board the ships when working as apprentices?

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 732, 733 and 734 together.

Under the existing rules, entry to the Executive Branch of the Royal Indian Marine is regulated entirely by open competitive examinations held in England and in India ; and neither the training ships in England nor the Indian Mercantile Marine Training Ship "Dufferin" in India have any means of direct entry. The attention of Government has been drawn to the possible disabilities under which the cadets of the "Dufferin" may suffer in competing at the open examinations in India and they are examining the question of altering the conditions in such a way as to give them a better chance of securing commissions in the Royal Indian Marine.

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 729.

RECRUITMENT TO THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE OF CADETS OF THE "WORCESTER" AND "CONWAY".

†733. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many cadets are recruited every year in the Royal Indian Marine directly from the "Worcester", "Conway" and other British training ships ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the same privileges of direct entry into the Royal Indian Marine have been extended to cadets of the "Dufferin" as are enjoyed by the cadets on the training ships in England ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in the negative, are Government prepared to consider the desirability of putting the cadets of the "Dufferin" on a footing of equality with their compeers on the British training ships in the matter of direct entry into the Royal Indian Marine ?

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION FOR ENTRY INTO THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

†734. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government aware that the present system of competitive examination for entry into the Royal Indian Marine conducted by the Army authorities does not give the cadets of the "Dufferin" an equal chance with those competing direct from the Universities as a part of the training of the cadets is in vocational subjects which are not included for the competitive examination ?

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR TRAINING ABROAD IN MARINE ENGINEERING.

735. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many candidates have been selected this year for scholarships for training abroad in marine engineering ?

(b) How many of these scholarships have been reserved for cadets of the "Dufferin" ?

(c) What safeguards do Government propose to provide in the case of candidates who would be recruited from the colleges to ensure that, after granting them scholarships to go abroad, they will continue the sea-going profession ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Three scholarships have been awarded this year for training in Marine Engineering in England.

(b) None of these scholarships was reserved for cadets of the "Dufferin".

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 732.

(c) The scholars have not been required to give any undertaking that they will adopt the sea as their profession. It is, however, expected that, having been trained as Marine Engineers, they will seek employment as Engineers on sea-going vessels.

FAILURE OF PLANTS FOR THE ELECTRIFICATION OF JAIPUR, RAGMALL AND JHANSI.

736. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Indian Stores Department purchased three plants for the electrification of Jaipur, Ragmall and Jhansi, and if so, what is the history of these plants since the day of the purchase till today ?

(b) Is it a fact that these plants are not working satisfactorily, and, if so, has the matter been inquired into and has any action been taken against the officers responsible ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) The Indian Stores Department made contracts for electrical power plants for Jaipur and Jhansi. In neither case has the contract been completed. No contract has been made for such a plant at Ragmall. Part of the plant at Jaipur and Jhansi proved defective at the official tests and was rejected by the Indian Stores Department. The defective part of the plant at Jaipur has now been partially replaced by the contractor and the entire portion will be offered for official test in a short time. The replacement of the Jhansi plant is still under consideration, a decision having been postponed until the arrival of the contractor's representative from England. As already stated, the contract in neither case has been completed, and the Government still retains the rights provided for therein.

(b) Does not arise.

DIFFERENCE IN PAY OF SHORTHAND WRITERS IN THE SECRETARIAT AND IN ATTACHED OFFICES.

737. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state their guiding principles in fixing the pay and also the grade of a post at the time of its creation ?

(b) Is it a fact that the qualifications necessary for a post, the nature and the volume of the work to be discharged by the holder of the post and also the standard and cost of living prevailing in the locality are the basic principles which Government generally follow in prescribing the pay and prospects of a post at the time of its creation ?

(c) Is it a fact that the shorthand writers of both the Secretariat and the attached offices of the Government of India are required to possess the same qualifications, have to discharge duties of the same volume and nature and have also to maintain the same standard and cost of living ?

(d) Is it a fact that the shorthand writers of the attached offices have, in addition, to deal with technical questions ?

(e) If the answer to part (c) be in the affirmative, how is the difference in the scale of pay obtaining for the shorthand writers of the Secretariat and the attached offices explained ?

(f) Is it a fact that men recruited by a common examination for the customs, the Indian Audit and Accounts Service and Military Accounts Services are on equal scales of pay on the principle of equal pay for equal qualifications? If so, why is not the same principle followed in the case of shorthand writers of the Secretariat and attached offices?

(g) Are the Stenographers in the Government of India Secretariat who are attached to Joint Secretaries and Honourable Members in receipt of monthly allowances of Rs. 50 and Rs. 150, respectively?

(h) Do the conditions justifying the above allowances exist in the case of stenographers attached to the heads of the attached offices who rank with Secretaries and Joint Secretaries? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) The general principle is that salaries should be regulated by the criterion that so much and so much only should be paid as is necessary to enable Government to obtain suitable recruits and maintain them in such comfort and dignity as will protect them from temptation and keep them efficient throughout their service.

(b) The factors mentioned by the Honourable Member are comprised in the principle mentioned above.

(c) The initial qualifications required are the same, but the duties and responsibilities are not.

(d) Shorthand writers are not required to possess any technical qualifications beyond an adequate knowledge of shorthand and typing.

(e) It is explained by the difference in responsibilities.

(f) It is a fact that the three services mentioned are recruited on the results of a common examination, but a common examination does not imply equal pay. In the case of the stenographers in question, a Committee examined the matter four years ago and came to the conclusion that the distinction should be maintained.

(g) The reply is in the affirmative.

(h) No, because broadly speaking the work and responsibilities are heavier.

MEMORIAL FROM STENOGRAPHERS OF ATTACHED OFFICES.

738. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Government received a memorial from the stenographers of the attached offices for the extension of the Secretariat scale of pay to them?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the said memorial with their orders thereon?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) I am not prepared to place a copy of the papers on the table.

IDENTIFICATION OF ATTACHED OFFICES WITH THE SECRETARIAT.

739. *Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Will Government be pleased to give a detailed history of the origin of the attached offices and also the reasons that stand in the way of their being identified with the Secretariat in all respects?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : As regards the request contained in the first part of the Honourable Member's question I am afraid it would entail an amount of research and labour which Government would not be justified in undertaking. As to the second part, a Committee, which examined the matter fully some years ago, made it clear that differential treatment was justifiable in the case of the staff of the Secretariat owing to the more arduous nature of the work and the special conditions of service.

CADRES OF ASSISTANTS AND CLERKS IN DEPARTMENTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

740. *Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : (a) Is it a fact that the posts of assistants and clerks in the various Departments of the Government of India are not and have never been treated as in the same cadre?

(b) Was the question of constituting the establishments of all or some of the Departments of the Government of India into one cadre ever considered and, if so, when and with what results?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) The question of combining the Upper Division appointments of the various Departments into a single cadre was examined in 1922 but was not proceeded with because of the practical difficulties involved and the strong objections expressed by many of the Departments consulted.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSSALMANS AS ASSISTANT SURGEONS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

741. *Khan Bahadur Haji Abdulla Haji Kasim : (a) What is the number of Assistant Surgeons in the State Railways? How many posts of Assistant Surgeons are held by Mussalmans?

(b) Did the Railway Board fill in any posts of Assistant Surgeons since 1926? If so, have they considered the claims of qualified Muslim candidates for the posts and taken up any Muslim candidate? If they have not, on what grounds were the applications of Muslim candidates rejected?

(c) Do the Railway Board propose to take steps to see that there is a just and proper representation of Mussalmans in the Medical Department?

(d) Do Government propose to see that qualified Mussalmans are duly represented in the reorganised Medical Service of the North Western Railway?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Government regret that, for reasons which have previously been explained, they are not prepared to give figures of communal representation in individual offices or branches of railway service. Posts of Assistant Surgeons are not filled by the Railway Board, but by the Railway Administrations. The Agents of all railways, including the North Western Railway, are aware of the policy of the Government of India to prevent preponderance of any particular community in the railway services, and Government have no reason to believe that this policy is not being followed by Railway Administrations.

APPOINTMENT OF MUHAMMADANS IN THE COMMERCIAL AUDIT BRANCH.

742. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that there is not a single Muhammadan gazetted officer in the Commercial Audit Branch ?

(b) What steps have Government taken to reduce the communal inequality in this Branch in the superior and inferior grades ?

(c) Do Government propose to take some senior Indian Civil Service Muhammadan officers in that Department and also some Muhammadan probationers of the Indian Audit and Accounts Service for training there ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : With your permission, Sir, I will deal with questions Nos. 742 to 744 together.

Inquiry is being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member as soon as possible.

APPOINTMENT OF A MUHAMMADAN ACCOUNTANT GENERAL.

†743. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that the Indian Audit and Accounts Service has been completely Indianised ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is not a single Muhammadan Accountant General in India ?

PROPORTION OF MUHAMMADANS IN THE SUBORDINATE ACCOUNTS SERVICE.

†744. *Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Muhammadans being taken as probationers in the Subordinate Accounts Service in the ratio of one-third ? If not, why not ?

INADEQUACY OF WAITING AND GOODS SHEDS AND WATER SUPPLY AT ONGOLE STATION.

745. *Mr. B. P. Naidu : (a) Is it a fact that the third class waiting shed and the goods shed at Ongole Station on the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway are incommensurate for the present traffic needs at that station ? If so, will Government be pleased to state when improvements will be effected to these sheds ?

(b) Are Government aware that the water-supply at Ongole Railway Station is not sufficient ? If so, what steps do they propose to take for improving the same ? Do they propose to consider the possibility of getting enough water through pipes from Gundlakamma river, which is only about four or five miles from the station ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). Government have no information. These are matters which lie within the competence of the Agent, and can most suitably be taken up by the Local Advisory Committee.

GRANT OF THE PRIVILEGES OF THE PRESS ROOM TO THE VERNACULAR PRESS.

746. *Mr. B. P. Naidu : Will Government be pleased to state if the privileges attached to the Editors' Table have been granted to the Vernacular Press, including weeklies ? If not, why not ? If any applications were received for that purpose, how were they disposed of ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 742.

The Honourable Sir James Crerar : If the Honourable Member is referring to the privileges of the Press Room of the Government of India, I may explain that copies of Government of India reports, notifications and the Gazette of India (Part I) are supplied to those representatives of newspapers stationed at the headquarters of the Government of India who are admitted to the Press Room. A representative of the vernacular Press has been admitted to the Press Room of the Government of India.

If the Honourable Member is referring to the free supply of Government of India publications to the Press, I would invite his attention to the answer given by me in this House on the 16th September, 1929, to Mr. Siddheswar Prasad Sinha's question No. 509 on the subject. Since 1927 applications have been received from four vernacular papers for the free supply of Government of India publications, but on ground of economy such supply is restricted to newspapers with a large circulation, and as none of the newspapers in question satisfied this condition it was not possible to accede to the applications.

APPOINTMENT OF THE LIBRARIAN OF THE IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT LIBRARY.

747. *Mr. Abdul Haya : (a) Is it a fact that the clerks working in the Imperial Secretariat Library are part and parcel of the clerical cadre of the Department of Education, Health and Lands, three posts being borne on the roster of the second division and one post on the roster of first division clerks, and thus classed as second and first division posts in the gradation list of that Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that the clerks and assistants constituting the clerical cadre of the Department of Education, Health and Lands, are recruited from the candidates who have passed the late Staff Selection Board or Public Service Commission examination ?

(c) Is it a fact that second division clerks employed in the Department of Education, Health and Lands, Library Branch (besides their training in the library science), are equally eligible for an upper division post in the Department ?

(d) Is it a fact that the post of an upper division clerk (Librarian) in the Library Branch (previously held by a Muslim) fell vacant, which as a rule was subject to the same recruiting conditions as are other posts in the upper division plus training in the library science ?

(e) Is it a fact that, amongst the applicants for this post, there was a Muslim candidate who, besides being a B.A., LL.B., had passed the upper division examination of the Staff Selection Board ; had worked as a second division clerk in the Imperial Secretariat Library ; had on previous occasions officiated as Librarian of this Library and had passed the Government of India test in the library science ?

(f) Is it a fact that the Department of Education, Health and Lands, instead of appointing this candidate, asked the Public Service Commission to advertise for the post ?

(g) Has there ever been a previous case in which a vacancy in the upper division borne on the regular cadre of a Department, however technical, was advertised in this manner ?

(h) Is it a fact that the candidate to whom the Department has now sent their offer is a non-Moslem who has not passed the required Staff Selection Board or Public Service Commission examination for the upper division in which this vacancy is?

(i) Are Government prepared to reconsider their decision and appoint a superior and better qualified candidate belonging to a minority community?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) Yes.

(c) Yes, provided that they are qualified by examination held by the Public Service Commission for the Upper Division.

(d) Yes. But recruitment for the Librarian's post, which requires special technical qualifications, is made by the Public Service Commission.

(e) Yes. The candidate officiated as Librarian only on one occasion for a brief period. There is no Government of India test in library science.

(f) Yes. It is no longer open to Departments to recruit candidates for posts requiring special or technical qualifications, without reference to the Public Service Commission.

(g) Not in the Department of Education, Health and Lands, in which the only technical post in the Upper Division is that of Librarian.

(h) Yes.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE INDIAN MERCANTILE MARINE.

748. *Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Will Government be pleased to state if they propose to take, before the Delhi Session, any steps for the development of the Indian Mercantile Marine?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Addressing the annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce in December last, His Excellency Lord Irwin referring to the Coastal Traffic Reservation Bill spoke as follows :

"But I think that I am correct in saying that the main impulse behind the Bill I have referred to is not a mere desire to secure for Indian capitalists the profits which now are made by British companies. Rather it is an ambition—and who shall say that it is an unworthy ambition?—that India should have its own mercantile marine and that the ships of that mercantile marine should be officered as well as manned by Indians. The problem then as I see it is whether we can help India to realise this ambition without resort to methods of confiscation, and I should like you to regard it from this point of view. Stated in this way the problem may be less difficult. I hope indeed that a solution may be found in a spirit of co-operation and goodwill, and I commend this to your consideration. For as the political progress of India seems to me the logical and necessary outcome of the political genius of the English people, just so should British and Indian industry and commerce work together, as allies rather than antagonists, for India's commercial and industrial advancement."

It is the earnest hope of the Government of India that, as stated by His Excellency, a solution of this difficult question may be found in a spirit of co-operation and goodwill, and they would be reluctant to proceed upon other lines, until it was clear that there was no hope of an amicable settlement. They have therefore decided to bring the matter specially to His Excellency Lord Irwin's attention on his return to India in the hope that a full and frank discussion between the representatives of all the interests affected might lead to mutual understanding and agreement, and that the good offices of Government might contribute to a solution of the question of an adequate participation of Indian shipping in the coastal and overseas trade of India.

2. The possibility that an agreed settlement might in the end prove impossible must, of course, be faced. In that case, a situation would be created which Government could not ignore, and it would be necessary to explore fully the question by what means the obstacles in the way of the development of Indian shipping could be removed. In particular, the possibility of preventing the ruinous rate-wars which from time to time break out upon the coast and the desirability of legislation to bring under control the system of deferred rebates and other trade practices which tend to restrict the freedom of the shipper would have to be examined, and also the question how far direct financial assistance by Government to Indian shipping could justifiably be given. These questions are full of difficulty, and the final outcome cannot now be predicted, but Government would be ready to set on foot the necessary inquiries directed towards the development of an Indian Mercantile Marine.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Will Government be pleased to state by what time they expect the result of the Conference to be made known to the public?

12 NOON.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir, I cannot add to the statement I have just made. The matter will be brought specially to the attention of His Excellency Lord Irwin on his return to India, but the action then to be taken will rest largely in His Excellency's hands, and I am afraid I am not in a position to amplify what I have said.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it expected that the result of this Conference will be available to the public well in advance of the next Delhi Session?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I think, Sir, that I can answer that question to this extent, that for obvious reasons any prolonged delay in initiating any discussion that may take place is very much to be deprecated, and I am quite sure that the importance of this consideration will be present to the minds both of the Government of India and of His Excellency.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : What is meant by the phrase "all interests"?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I cannot amplify further what I have said.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : Surely there ought to be some meaning for the phrase "all interests".

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

SALT OF DIRTY SALT FROM KHARAGHODA AND SHORTAGE OF STOCKS OF SALT AT SAMBHAR.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : 1. (a) Will Government be pleased to state if dirty salt from Kharaghoda, which was being sold in Ahmedabad and Kaira in 1926-27, and about which protests were officially made by the Ahmedabad Municipality, the public in Nadiad and the Palanpur State, is being put on the market again in some of the areas in Guzerat ?

(b) If the reply to the above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to issue orders forthwith that no salt be offered for sale from Kharaghoda in Guzerat except salt of the average standard quality ?

2. (a) Will Government be pleased to state the quantity of salt destroyed at Sambhar on account of floods during the last July ?

(b) Is it true, that, as a consequence, the stock of salt at Sambhar is not sufficient to meet the normal demand on the source till the end of September, 1930, when the next season's output will be ready for issue ?

(c) If the answer to (b) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what steps they have taken or propose to take to supply salt from other sources for the areas ordinarily consuming Sambhar salt, and thus prevent a shortage of stocks, and the danger of profiteering by dealers ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : 1. (a) The salt produced at Kharaghoda in 1921 was of an inferior kind since it was powdery and became mixed with dust at the time of storage. Great difficulties were experienced in selling it, and in 1926 the price was reduced to three annas a maund. But the reduction in price failed in its object as the merchants refused to purchase it. Moreover, certain municipalities objected to its sale on the ground that a portion of it was mixed with sand and dirt. An experiment was then made of sifting it, and in September last, an agreement was made with a contractor for five years in which he contracted to sift the salt and to sell the sifted salt at the ordinary rate of four annas three pies a maund, his remuneration being nine pies a maund for sifting and five pies a maund as commission. In February last a proposal of this contractor that he should also be allowed to sell the salt unsifted, at three annas a maund, to any of his customers who might be willing to take it was accepted, commission being allowed at five pies a maund. Very little unsifted salt has been issued and the quantity of sifted salt which has been sold is comparatively small.

(b) I am arranging for an immediate inquiry to be made regarding the disposal and quality of this salt and am also issuing instructions that none of this salt, which has not been sifted, shall be sold pending the result of the inquiry. I would add that it is entirely at the option of purchasers to take this salt or not, and that there are ample stocks of good salt at Kharaghoda which any one desiring to do so may purchase. At the same time, I agree with what I understand to be the implication of the Honourable Member's question, that the Government ought not to offer for sale for human consumption any salt regarding the fitness of which for human consumption there is any doubt, even although it is purely voluntary on the part of the buyer whether he takes the salt or not.

2. (a) An exact figure cannot be given until the stocks have been cleared, but it is estimated that over 10 lakhs of maunds of salt have been destroyed.

(b) Yes.

(c) Sambhar salt is consumed chiefly in the United Provinces and North Behar. In the eastern districts of the former and in the latter it meets with competition from the similar salt produced at Kharaghoda in the Bombay Presidency and the adjoining source at Kuda and from the rock salt of Khewra in the Punjab although the freight on these classes of salt has been considerably higher than that on Sambhar salt owing to the great distances involved. There is an adequate supply of salt at Kharaghoda and Kuda (without touching the accumulated stocks of old salt referred to in part 1 of the question), and for present purposes an unlimited supply at Khewra. The Bombay, Baroda and Central India, the North Western and the East Indian Railways have been approached and have, I am glad to say, given very valuable concessions. The Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway has agreed to reduce by  $3\frac{1}{2}$  annas a maund the rate on the salt despatched from Kuda to stations on its narrow gauge line east of Muttra. The North Western Railway will reduce its freight on Khewra salt to stations east of Saharanpur by 1 anna 7 pies a maund and a further reduction will be given by the East Indian Railway from Saharanpur to stations on the Oudh and Rohilkhand section of its line. The amount of the reduction to the various stations is being worked out and will, it is hoped, be announced shortly. The concession given by the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway will be limited to three months within which period it is hoped to be able to despatch to the United Provinces and Behar the whole of the good salt at Kuda amounting to  $6\frac{1}{2}$  lakhs of maunds and  $4\frac{1}{3}$  lakhs of maunds of Kharaghoda salt, since salt from the two sources will be issued in the proportion of three maunds of the former and two of the latter. Issues from Kharaghoda and Kuda will commence on October, 24th, and will be under the control of the Commissioner, Northern India Salt Revenue, who will work in close consultation with the Collector of Salt Revenue, Bombay. The Government of India trust that the measures which have been adopted will be sufficient to protect the public interests and to prevent undue profiteering by salt traders. They will continue to watch the situation closely and will be ready to take further action if necessary.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas : Regarding the Honourable Member's reply to (1) (b), do the Government of India realise that when they allow inferior quality of salt to be put on the market, dealers are likely to mix it with superior quality, especially when the difference is as much as one anna per maund and thus pass on to the consumer something which is below the standard quality of salt ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I think that it is quite likely that the Honourable Member may be correct. That will be gone into in the inquiry which I have asked to be undertaken. I can quite appreciate the Honourable Member's point.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Is there any rule that beyond a certain period heaps of old salt should not be preserved but destroyed ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I am afraid I have not sufficient knowledge of the chemical and other effects of storage on the quality and composition of salt to answer the Honourable Member's question off-hand, but I will look into the matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do I understand that salt from the Kuda salt works is allowed to enter into the United Provinces and North Bihar ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : That is the intention of the programme which I have just announced.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PAY OF STAFF OF THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

185. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Controller of Currency received a deputation of representatives of the Currency office employees in May, 1919, and promised an ad interim relief to the whole of the Currency office staff in the shape of allowances at rates varying from 5 to 20 per cent. over the then prevailing rates of pay, viz., Rs. 35 to Rs. 100 ? If so, was the relief referred to granted ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : I propose to reply to questions Nos. 185 to 189 and 192 together.

The records of the past ten years relating to the matters to which the Honourable Member has referred are being carefully examined in order to provide a full and accurate reply to his questions. Naturally this must take some time ; but information will be sent to my Honourable friend as soon as possible.

PAY OF STAFF OF THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

†186. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state whether the increase of pay sanctioned in April, 1920 for the Currency Department employees was intended to be commensurate with the enhanced cost of living compared as between 1915 and 1919 ? If so, will Government please furnish a statement showing the gradual rise in the cost of living as well as in the revised pay of the Currency office staff during the corresponding years ?

PAY OF STAFF OF THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

†187. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that in November, 1921, Mr. (now Sir) McWatters addressed the Government in the capacity of the Controller of Currency suggesting a revision of pay for the Currency office staff to meet the existing increased cost of living ? If so, will Government please lay on the table the recommendations made by the said Controller of Currency ? Will Government also state whether the recommendations were accepted in toto ? If not, why not ?

DEBTS CONTRACTED BY CURRENCY OFFICE EMPLOYEES.

†188. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government please state if it is a fact that the Controller of Currency submitted a note to the Government in December, 1921, reporting therein that a good many of the Currency office employees had run into debt ? If so, what steps were taken by Government to meet the situation and what relief was sanctioned ?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 185.

PAY OF STAFF OF THE CURRENCY OFFICE.

†189. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to furnish a statement showing what immediate benefit was derived from the revision of pay sanctioned in June, 1924, by such Currency office employees who, according to the length of service, reached the maximum of the clerical grade in January, 1920 ? And what immediate benefit would they have derived had the recommendations of the Controller of Currency of November, 1921, been sanctioned in toto at the time ?

NUMBERS ON NEW DESIGN OF CURRENCY NOTES.

190. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state the reasons why, in the new design Rs. 100 notes, the serial letters and numbers have been printed in smaller types than those in the old design notes of the same denomination ?

(b) Why have the numbers been printed in the four corners ? Why have they not been printed at the same positions and in larger types as in the old pattern of notes of the same denomination ?

(c) If there are no specific reasons, do Government propose to modify the printing arrangements accordingly ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (a) and (b). The 100-rupee notes of the present design are much smaller than the old notes both for reasons of economy and because small notes are more convenient for the public to handle. At the same time, the opportunity was taken of introducing a more elaborate pattern and colour scheme as a protection against forgery. Consequently there is no room for four sets of numbers on each note, and it does not seem necessary that each half should bear more than one number. When the new note was originally printed in England, the figures were small and printed on a dark ground so that they were difficult to read. This has been altered in the notes printed at Nasik, which have larger figures printed on a light green background, so that they can be read easily. Any trouble which arises is due to the undesirable practice of cutting notes. When notes are carelessly cut, the number on the right half is occasionally mutilated, but the remedy lies in the abandonment of the practice of cutting notes, i.e., in the hands of the public themselves.

(c) No alteration is contemplated for the reasons stated in the preceding answer.

CURRENCY NOTES REFUND RULES.

191. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table the objections raised against the Currency Notes Refund Rules which came into force from the 1st July, 1927, by many different public bodies and forwarded to the Government ?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 185.

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the principles underlying the arrangement that while the claims on mismatched notes of Rs. 50 and Rs. 100 denomination will be paid, the claims on similar notes of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10 denominations will be refused?

(c) Will Government please furnish a statement showing the number of mismatched notes of Rs. 5, Rs. 10, Rs. 50 and Rs. 100 denominations tendered at the Currency offices in each quarter since the introduction of the new Refund Rules, i.e., July, 1927?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : (a) Copies of the communications received from different public bodies are laid on the table.

(b) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the Government of India, Finance Department Resolution No. F.20-XI-F., dated the 15th October, 1925 (published in the Gazette of India, dated the 17th October, 1925) which explains the object of the new rules. As was then explained, the main object is to discourage the practice of the cutting of notes, which had been proved by the repeated experience of the Currency Department to lend itself to the commission of fraud, and which also involved considerable expenditure on currency office establishments to minimise delay in the examination of divided notes. As, however, for practical reasons the habit of remitting money by half notes had to be recognised to some extent, for the time being at any rate, the new rules were framed on conservative lines and payment was refused only on half or mismatched notes of denominations not exceeding Rs. 10, on the ground that the cost of remitting sums under Rs. 50 by money order is small. A similar restriction was also in force under the old rules in the case of notes of Re. 1 and Rs. 2½ denominations and the new rule extended the same principle to the denominations of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10.

(c) As under the new rules, mismatched notes are not recognised as such, but are looked upon as two separate half notes, entries in respect of their receipt at Currency offices are made on this basis and the separate registers to record the receipts of mismatched notes prescribed under the old rules have been discontinued. As claims on half notes when the other halves are reported missing are recorded in the same way, it is not possible to furnish the figures required by the Honourable Member for mismatched notes.

No. 1.—LETTER FROM THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, HAPUR, No. 54, DATED THE 5TH NOVEMBER, 1925.

My Chamber has learnt from the papers that the Government propose to make some changes in the rules concerning the G. C. Notes. The proposed changes as given in the papers mostly concern the dividing of notes in parts on which restrictions are to be put.

In this connection I respectfully venture to submit that the restrictions proposed will cause a great deal of hardship to the business community and the general public and the currency note circulation which is just gaining its former popularity after the great war will again receive a set back.

The business people generally remit money by insured postal letters enclosing half notes in them and remitting the second halves on receipt of acknowledgment of the first halves, thus ensuring the safety of the remittance. But under the proposed change if one halves are lost the owner is entitled to recover only the half value of the notes, the balance to be subject to the rules governing lost G. C. Notes. As for smaller notes they are in every day use and change hands so frequently and are handled by so many ignorant and uneducated people that very soon they are torn in four and the proposed rules will not allow any payment for such notes. It will not be out of place to mention here that even under the present rules the village people are not generally willing to receive payment in G. C. Notes.

The proposed rules will cause further inconvenience to the trade and the public especially in smaller localities, where no other means of remittance exist. The inconvenience and hardship thus caused to the public will certainly react on the circulation of G. C. Notes and my chamber believes the Government does not propose to restrict the circulation of G. C. Notes.

Under the circumstances my Chamber is of opinion that it will be in the interest both of the public as well as the Currency to engage more staff for the detection of notes other than genuine ones than to put restrictions on the present practice and rules regarding circulation and payment of G. C. Notes.

No doubt my Chamber belongs to a very small town and it is not aware what opinion other bigger and more important bodies (which by the way may not feel the inconvenience to the same extent as we do owing to banking and other facilities) hold on the subject, but belonging to a small town puts us in better touch with the general ignorant public than the bigger bodies can claim and it is in this capacity that I have ventured to approach you on the subject. I hope our views though coming from a comparatively small and unknown body, will receive due consideration at the hands of the Government before any final decision is arrived at.

No. 2.—LETTER FROM THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, BOMBAY, No. 2831-377 OF 1925, DATED THE 6TH NOVEMBER, 1925.

I have the honour to refer to your letter No. F.20-XI-F., of the 15th ultimo, on the subject of certain proposed amendments in the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules, 1921.

2. In reply I am directed to say that while my Committee are in general sympathy with the objects which it is sought to effect by means of the proposed amendments they desire to put forward the following observations for consideration by the Government of India before final action is taken in the matter.

3. In the first place my Committee desire to point out that the habit of using notes on a large scale is of comparatively recent growth in this country and that any attempt to discourage the practice of cutting, which they understand is very general, may tend to impair public confidence in notes particularly in up-country districts where there are no banking facilities. As Government are well aware the general acceptance of notes by the Indian public was only achieved with difficulty, and my Committee fear that the proposed amendments, conservative though they may be, will endanger their popularity.

4. But there is a further consideration which carries even greater weight with my Committee. Indian Currency is extensively used in countries outside India, e.g., East Africa, Aden and Iraq. In the latter country my Committee are informed that the law provides that cut notes only may be transmitted through the post. Moreover there is no Currency Office in Iraq and my Committee understand that the note issue often gets into a deplorably dirty condition with the result that mutilated notes are by no means uncommon. If therefore obstacles are placed in the way of meeting claims on cut and mutilated notes the use of Indian Currency will certainly be discouraged in Iraq, in which country it has only been established since 1916 and this in its turn may prove a hindrance to trade with that country.

5. My Committee would be glad to know whether this question of the use of Indian Notes outside India has been fully considered by the Government of India and I am to express their opinion, in the absence of further information, and pending the further growth of banking facilities in India, that the proposed rules would appear to be premature.

No. 3.—LETTER FROM THE UPPER INDIA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, CAWNPORE, DATED THE 19TH NOVEMBER, 1925.

I am directed to refer to your No. F.20-XI-F., dated the 15th October, forwarding for the information of this Chamber a copy of a Resolution No. F.20-XI-F. of L16CPB(LA) the same date issued by the Finance Department on the subject of the amendment of the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules published in the Gazette of India under Notification No. 3201-F., dated the 24th November 1921.

While my Committee are prepared to assent to the proposals now put forward such assent must be modified by the observation that these proposals will tend greatly to discourage the practice of sending notes by post.

Under present conditions there are many places in India to which Banks or banking facilities have not yet penetrated and unless the measures now proposed are carefully regulated and unless the procedure to be adopted is, in the words of the Resolution "considerate and cautious" they will gravely interfere with financial operations in the country.

My Committee are not without an apprehension that one result of the measures proposed will be to depreciate, to a moderate extent, the value of the Government Currency Note and they would not be surprised if the levy of a permanent discount on Government Currency Notes comes to be a normal feature of banking in India in the near future.

No. 4.—LETTER FROM THE PUNJAB CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, No. 793-148—25, DATED THE 3RD DECEMBER, 1925.

With reference to your letter No. F-20-XI-F., dated the 15th October last, forwarding for the information of this Chamber a copy of the Resolution No. F-20-XI-F., dated 15th of October, 1925, on the subject of the amendment of the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules, 1921, the proposed amendments have been considered by the Managing Committee of this Chamber.

The Committee appreciate the views of the Government on the subject, but they consider that the facilities for cheap remittance in this country are not at present sufficiently universal to justify rules framed to discourage the making of remittances by half notes. It is considerably cheaper, under certain circumstances, to make remittances to many mofussil stations by half notes, and until there are greater facilities for remittance by other methods, the Committee consider that measures framed to discourage this long standing practice should not be passed.

This Chamber is opposed to the proposed amendments in the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules, 1921.

No. 5.—LETTER FROM THE MILLOWNERS' ASSOCIATION, BOMBAY, No. 1419-148, DATED THE 8TH DECEMBER, 1925.

I have the honour under directions of my Committee to address you on Government Resolution No. F-20-XI-F., dated the 15th October, 1925, in connection with the proposed amendments of Currency Notes Refund Rules.

2. My Committee note that the object of the proposed amendments is to discourage the cutting of notes, which practice, in Government's opinion, lends itself to the commission of fraud. It is also stated in the resolution that in view of the facilities for cheap remittance which are given by Government and the Imperial Bank, by means of Bank transfers, currency transfers, money orders and postal insurance of notes to the value of Rs. 2,000 the proposed amendment will not seriously inconvenience the public.

3. I am directed to point out that the general public have a decided preference for making remittances by Currency Notes rather than by the other procedures mentioned by Government. The reasons are not far to seek. Bank facilities are not available everywhere, and besides the rates for money orders and the commission charged for bank drafts, etc., make it difficult for the general public to avail themselves of these facilities and lead them to remit money by currency notes cut into halves. It is my Committee's considered opinion that the rates for money orders should be substantially reduced so as to make this system of remitting money more popular among the general public. My Committee have little doubt that a reduction in the rates for money orders will in the long run bring in larger revenues to Government by increasing the number of money orders.

4. In my Committee's opinion, the proposed innovations in the most popular system of making remittances will not be received favourably by the small remitters unless Government first popularise the money order system by effecting reductions in the existing rates.

5. As stated above, Bank facilities are not available everywhere and when hundies can not be obtained, merchants have to send currency notes. The post office will not accept any insurance for over Rs. 2,000 and when remittance of, say, Rs. 5,000 has to be made the sender will have to make three insured packets. This will seriously inconvenience the receiver who has to take delivery from the Post Office.

6. In my Committee's opinion the best course for Government to adopt it to make the new rules applicable only in the case of currency notes of lower denominations than Rs. 100, and even that only after the existing rates for money orders are sufficiently reduced so as to make the small remitter favourably inclined towards this system of remitting money.

No. 6.—LETTER FROM THE MARWARI ASSOCIATION, CALCUTTA, No. 143-1925, DATED THE 10TH DECEMBER 1925.

I am directed by the Committee of the Marwari Association to submit the following representation with reference to the proposed amendment of the Currency Notes Refund Rules, 1921, published in a recent issue of the Gazette of India together with a Resolution of the Finance Department.

It is proposed that no claims on half of mismatched Notes of the denominations of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10 will be admitted and that on half Notes of the denominations of Rs. 50 and upwards, only half value of the Note will be paid at a currency office fourteen working days after its presentation, but if full value is claimed on a half Note, payment will not be made till after the lapse of 5 or 8 years.

The object underlying the proposed changes is to discourage the practice of cutting currency Notes which has been prevalent in the country with the sanction of law since the very introduction of paper money. In sanctioning the practice, the Government, my Committee believe, was actuated by the sole desire to provide a cheap and convenient and safe means of remittance by post and messenger and to popularise currency Notes which, in the absence of banking facilities, were essential to the economic progress of the country. The system of paying the full value of Note shortly after the presentation of half Notes, which has acted as an effective check against theft in course of transmission by post and otherwise, was also, evidently devised with the same object in view, with the result that Notes have become very popular. Thus it is no exaggeration to say that the practice of cutting Notes has proved an important factor in increasing the circulation of Notes and thereby in developing the trade and commerce of the country.

It cannot however yet be said that the object which the Government had in view in permitting the cutting of Notes has been fully attained. While there is still a great room for development in the trade and commerce of the country and industrially the country is still very backward, banking facilities still continue to be inadequate and for want of a cheaper, more convenient or safer means of remittance, the people specially those engaged in trade, commerce and industries, still find themselves under the necessity of cutting Notes for remittance either by post or by messenger. If, in such circumstances, the refund rules are amended as proposed, the cutting of Notes will become extremely risky, theft will become very easy and, for remitting money people will have to resort mostly to the postal insurance system which, although safe is expensive and troublesome and not convenient to the largest users of Currency Note namely, the commercial people, who have constantly to remit large sums of money while travelling, as a safeguard against loss by theft or otherwise, but it will not be safe to do so if the rules are amended as proposed and for these reasons, my Committee feel they cannot too strongly urge the desirability of letting the rules remain as they are.

In urging the withdrawal of the proposal to amend the refund rules, my Committee do not lose sight of the fact that the universalization of Currency Notes of certain denominations and the expansion of circulation of Notes have made the examination of divided Notes somewhat more difficult than before; but that difficulty is not insurmountable and all that is needed to cope with the situation is to appoint some additional staff or to establish some more currency centres. It will entail some additional expenditure of money to meet the cost of the increased establishment, but having regard to the fact that the proposed restriction against the cutting of Notes is calculated to affect their circulation by shaking popular confidence in them and consequently to progress and development of the trade, commerce and industries of the country all my Committee submit that it will be false economy to allow the question of some additional cost to stand in the way of the appointment of a larger establishment which is so necessary in the larger interests of the country. As regards the argument put forward in support of the proposed restriction against the cutting of Currency Notes that it lends itself to the commission of fraud, my Committee fear they cannot agree with this view. Their experience is, as has been stated in a previous paragraph, that it rather minimises the temptation to dishonesty and the possibility of theft.

In the opinion of my Committee, it will be time to consider the question of amending the Currency Notes Refund Rules on the lines proposed when the country is amply provided with facilities for cheap and safe remittance and the system of paying by cheques can be more widely resorted to. My Committee are aware that steps have already been taken in this direction, but a great deal yet remains to be done and it is therefore premature to think of amending the Refund Rules. The circulation of Notes still requires to be encouraged to help forward the growth and development of the trade, commerce and industries of the country and nothing should be done which may have a restrictive effect upon circulation.

In conclusion, I am therefore to express the hope that in the best interests of the country, Government will see their way to withdraw the proposal for the amendment of the Currency Refund Rules, 1921.

No. 7.—LETTER FROM THE KARACHI INDIAN MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION, No. 11-26, DATED THE 15TH JANUARY, 1926.

Under the direction of my Committee, I beg to convey to you the following resolution passed by them, which speaks for itself, and to request you to see that the contemplated idea of the Government to abolish the system of cutting currency notes into halves is not given effect to.

"That this meeting of the Karachi Indian Merchants' Association have heard with surprise the contemplated idea of the Government to abolish the system of cutting the currency notes into halves. This proposal, if adopted, will not only hamper the trade immensely but that an extra premium and risk will be imposed upon the mercantile community by their having to make remittances through other means."

"This meeting also records its protest for not consulting this Association in a matter so important and concerning the merchants of Karachi."

"That the copies of this be sent to the Finance Member to the Government of India, the Commissioner in Sind, Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay and to the Press."

No. 8.—LETTER FROM THE INDIAN MERCHANTS' CHAMBER, No. T.100, DATED THE 18TH JANUARY, 1926.

I am directed to send hereby the views of the Committee of this Chamber on the subject of the amendments of the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules published in the Gazette of India under Resolution No. F.20-XI-F., dated the 15th October, 1925, in reply to your letter No. F.20-XI-F., dated the 15th October, 1925.

My Committee have very carefully considered all these Rules. The proposed amendments may well be divided into two parts—one relating to the 5 and 10-Rupree Notes and the other to the 50 and 100-Rupree Currency Notes.

With regard to the first part, my Committee beg to point out very strongly that the proposed changes in the said Rules will interfere with the further popularity of the Currency Notes. In their opinion facilities provided at present for sending half pieces of Currency Notes through Post should be continued as the business community finds the same very useful.

With regard to the second part, the Committee in particular would like to draw the attention of the Government to the following words in their resolution:

"In short the effect of this change is to make it easier for the public to obtain half value on a half note but to make it more difficult for them to obtain full value on half note."

The effect of this change, in the opinion of my Committee, will be a great encouragement to dishonesty and thefts because the ease of encashment now to be provided will be a great temptation to those into whose hands half pieces of Currency Notes fall to misappropriate the same. It will no doubt increase the risk of cutting Currency Notes but will also increase the chances of thefts and fraud as shown above.

My Committee therefore beg to urge upon the Government in view of all these circumstances the desirability of continuing the old practice which has been found to be suitable to the circumstances of the country and which has contributed to the popularity of Currency Notes. It is true that in other countries there is no practice, to be found of cutting Currency Notes excepting East Africa, Aden and Iraq, but the circumstances there are different, and these facilities have been in vogue in this country for many years without any serious inconvenience or loss to the Currency Department, so far as my Committee are aware.

At the same time, my Committee would beg to draw attention to another point.

Under the existing rules the period for recovery of the amount of the claim of a lost Note appears to my Committee to be rather too long and they would, therefore, suggest that efforts may be made to modify the regulations in this regard so as to shorten it as much as possible.

No. 9.—LETTER FROM THE SOUTHERN INDIA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, MADRAS, No. G.53, DATED THE 28TH JANUARY, 1926.

My Committee have considered carefully the amendments proposed to be made in the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules 1921.

My Committee fully appreciate the difficulties experienced under the existing Rules, but are unable to concede either that there is any organised attempt to commit fraud at present, or that the existing rules by reason of their inherent defect allow of such fraud, or that the currency offices have been defrauded in spite of all possible scrutiny. Neither are my Committee convinced, that the examination of divided notes entails, as stated in the above mentioned Resolution, the expense of much time and care and consequent delay and inconvenience.

Considering the fact that businessmen all over India have been long accustomed to that form of Remittance of Notes by post both on the score of economy and of convenience, and considering that the difficulties do not call for such a drastic remedy as is proposed, my Committee are disposed to think that Government would not be well-advised in bringing the amended rules into force before banking and credit facilities are available in all small towns and villages. I am therefore directed to request that the proposed amendments may be withdrawn.

No. 10.—LETTER FROM THE BUYERS AND SHIPPERS CHAMBER, KARACHI, No. 281, DATED THE 3RD FEBRUARY, 1926.

With reference to the amendment of the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules published in the Gazette of India, dated 15th October, 1925, I am directed by my Chamber to address you as under:

The mercantile community have well appreciated the facility of sending by post half pieces of Currency Notes and if this be put a stop to, there will be a great inconvenience to the trade and my Chamber fail to understand why it has been proposed to adopt such a course specially as the long existing practice of cutting Currency Notes has not so far ever proved to be prejudicial to the interests of the Currency Department.

Further my Chamber regret they cannot subscribe to the principle of making it easier for the public to obtain half value on a half note and making it more difficult for them to obtain full value on half Note. On the very face of it, it is quite obvious that as an immediate effect thereof, half Notes will begin to be cashed for half value in the bazar. Thus such a course is bound to serve as an indirect encouragement to the non-bona fide holders of half notes owing to ease of encashment with no possibility of risk whatsoever.

My Chamber will here impress upon the Government the desirability of continuing the old practice so far found to be quite suitable.

However, my Chamber will invite the attention of the Government to please shorten the period for recovery of the amount of a lost Note as far as is possible, prescribed period being rather too long.

are objections to the practice of remitting by cut notes. But in existing circumstances the practice cannot, in their opinion, be dispensed with. It is a necessary evil which must be tolerated for some time longer. Bankers might certainly be expected to support the proposals for restricting the practice. For a Bank would naturally like to see cutting prohibited, or discouraged, in view of the extra work involved in the matching and piecing together of the half notes. But Banking opinion in Calcutta is clearly against the contemplated restrictions, recognising as it does that in many instances there is no satisfactory alternative way of remitting; and this view is supported by the up-country branches of the Banks.

5. Mercantile opinion is also, for the same reason, opposed to the contemplated restrictions. The practice of remitting by half notes is general among mercantile houses and banks in Calcutta; and very large sums are involved. For instance, remittances to tea gardens are commonly made in this way; and, if the practice is restricted, tea agency houses will be placed in considerable difficulty in the matter of financing some of their estates. In many other branches of business it is also usual to remit by half notes, as being the most convenient and least expensive method. One instance which has been mentioned is the purchase of silk in the cocoon-producing districts of Bengal. There are no Banking facilities in these districts; and the only currency office available is not often in a position to disburse large sums. It follows that remittance by half notes is unavoidable. Numerous other cases might be quoted; but the extent to which the practice is followed will be evident from the fact that during last year one Calcutta firm remitted a sum of no less than Rs. 16 lakhs by half notes to tea gardens, collieries, etc. Of this amount Rs. 14½ lakhs covered remittances ranging from Rs. 5,000 to Rs. 35,000.

6. When remittances are made on this scale by one firm it is obvious that the aggregate amount remitted by all the firms and banks must be, as the Committee have already indicated, very large indeed. The firm mentioned, like many other firms, only resort to half notes when no other means of cheap and expeditious remittance—whether provided by the Government or by bankers—is available. As is the general practice they avail themselves of such facilities as are offered by the Government and by the Imperial and other banks. And they have also made arrangements in one district to take over cash collections from the local post office in exchange for a cheque on Calcutta. They suggest—and the Committee agree with them—that an extension of this practice would probably be welcomed by merchants, and that similar facilities might be arranged with the railways. But even if the fullest advantage is taken by remitters of these alternative methods it is nevertheless clear to the Committee that the practice of sending half notes will still have to be permitted. For the particulars which they have quoted show clearly that the time has not yet arrived when it can be restricted without causing grave inconvenience to the mercantile community. To send whole notes insured to their full value would be both expensive and troublesome; and the remittance by money-order of large sums is not a practicable proposal.

7. Not only is remittance by whole notes expensive and troublesome, but there is also considerable risk attached to it. For instance, a member of the Chamber has cited a case where an insured packet containing whole notes was sent from Calcutta to a colliery. It was delivered to an authorised servant of the addressee at the Post Office some four miles from the colliery. It showed no signs of having been tampered with. But upon the cover being opened it was found to contain loose paper only. A clean receipt had been, however, given for it; and the sender was accordingly precluded from making any claim on the Post Office or on the Insurance Company. Remittance by whole notes is also objectionable in that, in the event of a shortage, it is impossible to fix responsibility; and suspicion is apt to rest on the despatching staff or on the recipient.

8. Finally, the Committee would urge that if it is a convenience and an advantage to the public to cut notes, as it admittedly is, no obstacle ought to be placed in their way. Nor should they be penalised by the deferred payment of half notes as is now proposed. The wide circulation and general acceptance of currency notes throughout the country, and particularly in the outlying districts, is of the utmost importance. Notes are now-a-days becoming popular, and every effort should be made to increase their popularity, and so to accustom the public, to the use of instruments of credit as opposed to the practice of hoarding. But the present proposals will, the Committee believe, tend to detract from this developing popularity; and they consider that this is an objection which altogether outweighs the advantages which the Government expect to derive from the restrictions. As they have already pointed out, the time has not yet come for discouraging or prohibiting a means of remittance which is so useful and so popular. Discouragement and prohibition ought only to follow a wide extension of alternative facilities for cheap remittance. But the present proposals make no advance in that direction. They will merely increase the risk attendant upon what is in fact an essential method of remittance. The Committee, therefore, recommend strongly that the proposals should be withdrawn.

No. 16.—LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY, NORTHERN INDIA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, LAHORE, TO THE GOVERNMENT OF THE PUNJAB, No. F.20/28, DATED THE 29TH MARCH 1926.

I have the honour to refer to your No. F.20-XI-F, dated 15th October 1925, and enclosure and to state that my Committee have carefully considered the proposed amendments to the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules, 1921, and whilst they sympathise with the object of the proposed amendments they consider that the facilities for remittances referred to in the Resolution are entirely inadequate to counterbalance the inconvenience and hindrance to trade which would result if the present rules were altered, and are therefore not prepared to support the amendment.

2. It appears to my Committee that in framing the amendments the case of large business concerns and remittances between big towns only have been taken into consideration. The Imperial Bank of India have at present 178 Branches but they will never have, and cannot be expected to have, branches at a very large number of small towns where considerable sums of money are dealt with. This applies specially to the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province which are entirely agricultural and have large produce markets scattered all over the Provinces.

3. The Post Office offers two methods of remittance:

(a) By Money Order—

This is restricted to certain offices, costs Re. 1, per centum and not more than Rs. 600 can be remitted in one Money Order. This is of no value therefore for the remittance of large sums of money,

(b) By Insured Post—

The rate for this is 2 annas per cent. plus postage and registration charges. The amount that can be remitted is restricted to Rs. 2,000 in any one packet. It will therefore be seen, that to remit any large amounts by this method would entail a considerable amount of extra labour. It will also be seen from cases reported in the press from time to time that this method of remittances is not entirely a safe one, as the responsibility of the post office is limited according to the rules, to—

“Where there is no visible damage to the cover or Seals, it being understood that the sender must so pack the letter or parcel that its contents cannot be touched without visible damage as aforesaid, being caused.”

4. As against the above methods of remittances, we have the one at present in vogue of sending half notes by post. This is by far the safest and quickest, and the cost is infinitesimal. There are no restrictions, except the size of packets, and the cost is infinitesimal. There are no restrictions, except the size of packets, as to the amount that can be sent at any one time to any post office. This appeals specially to all classes from the big firms to the smallest shopkeepers and private individuals wherever they may be resident. The cost of all remittances under present conditions of business is an important item, and this cheap method has helped business, and my Committee consider that until equally cheap and safe methods of remittances can be offered that Government should not interfere with progress by adopting the proposed amendments.

5. In conclusion my Committee ask that before the proposed amendments are considered Government should explore the possibility of cheapening remittances and increasing facilities by—

(a) The Imperial Bank of India reducing their remittance Charges and granting freer facilities to non-constituents.

(b) By utilizing the sub-treasuries.

- (c) By reducing the charges of post office and increasing the amounts that can be despatched in any one Money Order or insured package.

No. 17.—LETTER FROM THE ASSOCIATED CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE OF INDIA AND CEYLON, No. 263-A. C., DATED CAWNPORE, THE 8TH JULY 1926.

I am directed to advert to your letter No. F.120-XI-F., dated the 15th October 1925, and to inform you that the majority of Chambers of Commerce in India are opposed to alteration of the Refund Rules, 1921, in regard to payment of claims on behalf of mismatched halves of cut Currency Notes.

The facilities for transferring money from the larger Indian cities to towns, mines, plantations and agricultural estates in the mofussil are insufficient to meet the requirements of Commerce and Industry, and the public would be very seriously inconvenienced if the restrictions outlined in your letter referred to above were imposed. Bankers and merchants consulted on the subject see no alternative to the practice of remitting money in halves of currency notes to trading and industrial concerns away from the larger Indian cities, and obstacles ought not therefore to be placed in the way of those who resort to the practice. The wide circulation and general acceptance of currency notes throughout the country, particularly the notes of small denominations, is of the utmost importance, as tending to accustom the public to the use of instruments of credit in preference to minted coin, and discouraging hoarding of the precious metals. The proposals contained in your letter would tend to detract, from the developing popularity of currency notes, and this objection outweighs the advantages which Government expect to derive from the proposed restrictions. The time has not yet come for discouraging or prohibiting a means of remittance which is so useful and so popular, and there is reason to apprehend that curtailment of the privilege of cutting notes will cause a permanent discount on currency notes in places where they at present circulate at par or at a small premium.

I am further directed to remind you that Indian Currency Notes are used in countries adjacent to India. In Irak the law provides that whole notes shall not be remitted by post, and Indian trade in that country, as also in Baluchistan, South Persia, the Persian Gulf, Aden, Somaliland, and the East Coast of Africa would be seriously hampered if obstacles to meeting claims on cut-notes were imposed in India.

This Association will be glad to be informed whether the Government of India still contemplate any alteration of the Refund Rules, 1921, and whether means cannot be found for further popularising the use of currency notes, particularly of the smaller denominations, so as to foster their use and discourage the hoarding of minted coin.

No. 18.—LETTER FROM THE SECRETARY, BENGAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, CALCUTTA, No. 1623-1927, DATED THE 8TH JUNE 1927.

I am directed by the Committee to acknowledge the receipt of your circular letter No. F.4-(XV)-F.127, dated the 20th May 1927 enclosing copies of the Finance Department's notification of 19th idem publishing certain amendments in the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules which are to come into force as from 1st July 1927. The proposal to give effect to these amendments was the subject of letter No. 1005, dated the 31st March 1926, from the Chamber, to the Government of India, Finance Department, in which the Chamber gave expression to the very strong objection taken to them by the mercantile community of Calcutta.

2. It is a matter of considerable regret to the Committee that the Government of India should have proceeded with the alteration of the refund rules notwithstanding the reasoned protest submitted by the Chamber. The object is to discourage the cutting of notes, and the Government of India recognised that exception could be taken to the amendments on the ground that, if they were adopted, the risk of remittance of notes by post would be increased; but Government considered that the public would not be seriously inconvenienced if notes were never cut for remittance by post in view of the facilities for cheap remittance now offered by the Government and the Imperial Bank. The Chamber explained at considerable length that the mercantile public of Calcutta were unable to accept the Government's view, and that on the contrary they would with equal force to any payment, half or full, to the present claimant, if refund is to be made on the principle that only a lawful holder should receive value. It is no justification for asking the present claimant to accept only half the value in full and final settlement of his claim. If the other halves of the notes, having been altogether lost or destroyed, are never presented the Government do not pay to anyone half of their indebtedness on the notes in question. If at a future date the other halves are presented by some one who establishes his claim to the entire notes, will Government pay such person full value or half value? If only half value is paid it would mean that half the value is paid to the lawful holder of the entire notes and the other half has been paid to one who was not the lawful holder and had therefore no claim. It is difficult to believe that this could have been the real intention of the framers of the rules. My Committee, therefore, would strongly urge the Government of India to suitably amend the rules with a view to remove this anomaly. A claimant on half notes, who satisfies the currency authorities that he was the last lawful holder of the entire notes, may be paid half the value on account, the payment of the other half being deferred for a period of say, 5 years. The claim may be duly advertised. If during this period the other halves are presented by some other person, the first claimant must be duly informed and given an opportunity to contest the right of entire notes was accepted by the currency authorities and the presumption must be that the second claimant is not a lawful holder. If within 5 years the other halves are not presented, they should be taken to be lost entirely, the balance of the value should be paid to the first claimant and no further claim in respect of those notes should be admissible under any circumstances from any person. If this suggestion is not acceptable to the Government, my Committee would recommend that the claimant, who satisfies the currency authorities that he was the lawful holder, may be given the option to receive no payment immediately, but to receive payment in full after the expiry of a period of five years, if, his claim having been duly advertised, no other claimant appears during this period.

My Committee hope that the matter will receive the careful attention of the Government of India and that the refund rules will be suitably amended.

No. 21.—LETTER FROM THE SOUTHERN INDIA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, No. G.296, DATED THE 6TH APRIL 1929.

I am directed to draw the attention of Government once again to the unnecessary loss and difficulties caused to merchants by the new rules introduced in Notification No. F.4(XV)-F.27, dated the 19th May 1927 imposing special restrictions in refunds on half and mismatched currency notes of the denomination of Rupees five and ten. My Committee have been repeatedly protesting against the new rules since the draft rules were first referred to them and it is understood that Government have received similar proof of the hardship from both Indian and European Chambers of Commerce in other Provinces. The Government have not so far been in a position to rescind the rules that have provoked such widespread protest, and my Committee are led to think that Government have derived considerable advantage from the new rules so as to desire to know the extent of benefit the new rules have done to the Government and whether the Government propose to rescind them in view of their extreme unpopularity.

PAY OF SHROFFS.

†192. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that they do not propose to revise the scales of salaries of the shroffs because no difficulty is being experienced by them in getting recruits for the shroffing department of the Currency offices on the existing scale of pay as stated by the Honourable Member in his reply to question No. 700 (b) in the last Session of the Legislative Assembly?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 185.

If so, is it a fact that the present revised scales of salaries for the shroffs are due to difficulties arising in getting recruits?

(b) Is it not a fact that the scale of pay is based on living wages (irreducible minimum) and standard of living? If so, why is the same consideration being denied to the shroffs?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the negative, will Government be pleased to submit statistics of living wages of the different provinces?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if there is any difference between the employees of the State Railways and those on the non-pensionable footing handling His Majesty's valuables on the Treasurer's side of the Currency offices in respect of faithful service? If not, why is no reward in the shape of gratuity given to the latter?

INCREASED HOUSE RENTS IN BOMBAY.

193. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Are Government aware of a resolution passed by the Municipal Corporation of Bombay in a recent meeting requesting Government to re-introduce the Rent Act in Bombay in view of the abnormal increases in rents of residential buildings?

(b) Is it a fact that, on the request of the Bombay Postal Union, the General Secretary of the All-India (including Burma) Postal and Railway Mail Service Union had approached the Director General for the grant of a suitable house rent allowance for the clerical staff in post offices in Bombay?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider sympathetically the question of granting a house rent allowance?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Government have no information.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to my reply to part (a) of his unstarred question No. 172 given on the 16th September, 1929.

(c) As I have already explained to the Honourable Member in my reply to part (c) of his unstarred question referred to above, the factor of high rents has already been given full consideration in fixing the rate of pay of the clerical staff of the Bombay General Post Office, and Government do not therefore propose to grant any house rent allowance to such staff.

PROFESSIONAL LETTER-WRITERS IN POST OFFICES.

194. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Is it a fact that professional letter-writers were allowed to work on post office premises free of any fees with the obligation to sell stamps to the public?

(b) Is it a fact that the Presidency Postmaster, Bombay, had invited tenders in the year 1926 for the provision of professional letter-writers at various sub-offices in Bombay by contract?

(c) Is it a fact that, on a representation from the Honorary Secretary of the Professional Letter-Writers' Association, the orders were modified and that an annual license fee was fixed for each post office and the same men were allowed to continue as professional letter-writers?

(d) Is it a fact that in the year 1929 the Presidency Postmaster, Bombay, had departed from this procedure and had again invited tenders for farming out the work by contract?

(e) Is it a fact that tenders were offered only in the case of four post offices out of 60?

(f) Is it a fact that one Sangar Khan, whose tender has been accepted for the Byculla Post Office, was previously convicted by a court of law, and that the second tenderer was bound over for good behaviour?

(g) Is it a fact that, under the old system, there was not a single case of an undesirable person being appointed as a professional letter-writer before the introduction of the contract system?

(h) If the replies to the above be in the affirmative, do Government propose to issue orders for the appointment of professional letter-writers by issuing licenses to be held as long as the person concerned is of good behaviour?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No, except at Bombay until 1927.

(b) No. In 1927.

(c) Arrangements renewable from year to year were made with the writers on certain conditions, but no assurance was held out that their tenure would be continuous.

(d) Yes.

(e), (f) and (g). Government have no information, nor do they propose to make any inquiries in regard to a matter which rests entirely with the discretion of the Postmaster General.

(h) Government do not propose to issue orders on the lines indicated. But a copy of the question and this reply will be forwarded to the Postmaster General, Bombay, for such action as he may consider necessary in the case.

PAY OF STAFF OF THE ADEN POST OFFICE.

195. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the revision in the year 1925 which was sanctioned for Bombay was not extended to the Aden Post Office staff?

(b) Is it a fact that the Aden Post Office staff are Rs. 10 per month behind the clerical staff in Bombay?

(c) Is it a fact that simultaneously with the revision of the year 1926 the local allowance at Aden was reduced by Rs. 10?

(d) Is it a fact that the locally recruited staff is not given free housing accommodation?

(e) Is it a fact that the staff had submitted a representation on all these points? If so, do Government propose to reconsider their decision?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The scales of pay for both Aden and Bombay have been identical since March, 1927.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

1227

(c) The compensatory allowance was reduced from Rs. 30 to Rs. 20 for permanent staff and raised from Rs. 15 to Rs. 20 for reserve clerks. The existing incumbents of the former class, however, continued to receive Rs. 30.

(d) Yes. After reviewing the position, it was decided that there was no justification for the grant of free quarters to locally recruited staff.

(e) Government understand that representations from locally recruited clerks, in connection with the withdrawal of the concession of free quarters only, were received by the Postmaster General, Bombay, and were disposed of by him. No representations to higher authority have been received.

REPORT ON POSTAL TIME-TESTS.

196. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (1) (a) Will Government be pleased to state the date on which Mr. G. V. Bewoor, the officer appointed to inquire and make his recommendations on the postal time-test, submitted his report?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Tarapada Mukerjee, General Secretary of the All-India (Including Burma) Postal and Railway Mail Service Union, who was associated with Mr. Bewoor in the inquiry agreed with Mr. Bewoor in his report?

(c) When is it proposed to give effect to the recommendations?

(2) (a) Is it a fact that the following branches of work were outside the scope of the inquiry entrusted to Mr. Bewoor :

(i) Accounts Branch ;

(ii) Foreign Exchange ;

(iii) Office of the Superintendent of Post Offices and Railway Mail Service ;

(iv) Inspector of Post Offices ; and

(v) Postmen and village postmen.

(b) Do Government propose to appoint a Committee, like the Bewoor Committee, to inquire into and prepare time-tests for the above-mentioned branches of work?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : 1. (a) 31st January, 1929.

(b) Yes.

(c) Government are unable to state precisely when effect will be given to such recommendations of the Special Officer as may be accepted by Government.

2. (a) Yes.

(b) No time-test Committee was appointed, nor is the appointment of a Committee to prepare time-tests for the branches of work referred to in part 2 (a) of this question at present under the consideration of Government.

CHARGES OF THE PUNJABI MOTOR SERVICE COMPANY IN AJMER-MERWARA.

197. Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : (a) Are Government aware that the Punjabi Motor Service Company enjoys a monopoly to ply motor lorries L16CPB(LA) on hire between Nasirabad-Kakri and Deoli in Ajmer-Merwara and charges at the rate of 9 pies per mile, while in places where there is no monopoly in Ajmer-Merwara, the charge is only 3 pies per mile ?

(b) Are Government aware that the monopoly given to the Punjabi Motor Service Company and their exorbitant charges have resulted in hardship and great discontent among the people of the areas concerned ? Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the agitation in the District and in the Press of the Province ?

(c) Are Government aware that the people induced another company to ply its lorries between Nasirabad and Kekri by another route via Bhinai, but that the Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara cancelled its permits within a week, on the plea that the road was unfit for motor traffic ?

(d) Is it a fact that the inhabitants of Kekri, Bhinai, Deoli cantonment, and other localities concerned submitted several representations to the Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara against the exorbitant rates charged by the Punjabi Motor Service Company, and prayed for a cancellation of the monopoly or a reduction in its fares ?

(e) How much do Government pay annually to the Punjabi Motor Service Company for carrying the dāk ?

(f) Will Government state the reasons for giving a monopoly for plying lorries to one particular company not belonging to Ajmer-Merwara ?

(g) Are Government aware that, in other parts of Ajmer, companies are working with profit while charging only 3 pies a mile ? What are the grounds on which Government permits a monopoly to this Punjabi Motor Company, while it charges 9 pies a mile ?

(h) Do Government propose to redress this grievance of the people concerned at once by either cancelling the monopoly or permitting the Company to charge only 3 pies a mile ? If not, will Government give reasons why it is bound to continue the monopoly and allow the people of the province to be exploited by an outside company ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The necessary information has been called for from the local authorities and will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

PAY OF CERTAIN GRADES OF POSTAL OFFICIALS.

198. Pandit Nilakantha Das : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether under their order No. 11-P.T.E., dated 8th March, 1928, in the Department of Industries and Labour, they have conceded the benefit of officiating service in the grade of Rs. 175—10—225 under Fundamental Rule 27 ;

(b) whether prior to 1924 the Postmaster General's Office and the Dead Letter Office at Bombay had a grade of Rs. 170—10—225 in Traffic Branches ;

(c) whether officials in Circle Offices and Dead Letter Offices were ordered by the Director General to be granted the benefit of officiating service in the grade of Rs. 170—10—220 under Fundamental Rule 32 and the Audit Office has declared the rule inapplicable ;

(d) whether Government are prepared now to issue orders extending the benefit to Circle Offices and the Dead Letter Offices under Fundamental Rule 27 with retrospective effect as was done in the case of their co-workers in the Traffic Branches ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Yes.

(b), (c) and (d). An inquiry will be made and the result will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

BURIAL OF A MOSLEM WATER CARRIER FROM THE NEW DELHI COMBINED HOSPITAL.

199. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that a Moslem water carrier, an employee of the New Delhi Gymkhana, was admitted as an indoor patient in the New Delhi Combined Hospital in June last where he died, and that no arrangements for his burial were made for two days ?

(b) Is it a fact that, during this period, several co-religionists of the deceased approached the Hospital authorities and asked for the dead body but the same was not delivered for two days ?

(c) Will Government please state who was responsible for this delay in the disposal of the dead body ?

(d) Is it a fact that there is no Moslem doctor in this Hospital ?

Sir Frank Noyce : (a) A Moslem water carrier in the service of the Imperial Delhi Gymkhana Club died on the morning of the 4th June, 1929, in the New Delhi Hospital. It is not a fact that no arrangements were made for his burial for two days. The body was buried at Government expense within 28 hours of death, as neither the Club nor certain co-religionists who had asked to be allowed to make arrangements for burial, did so in time.

(b) No. The co-religionists who offered to bury the body were given permission, but failed to make arrangements.

(c) The answer is apparent from the reply given to parts (a) and (b) of the question.

(d) Yes.

PROPORTION OF MUSLIM OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN CLASS I RAILWAYS.

200. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that on 1st April, 1928, the proportion of Muslim officers to the total number of officers employed in Class I Railways was only 3 per cent. ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the year 1927-28, 96 vacancies of officers were filled on Class I Railways and only 3 of them were given to Muslims as brought out in the statement at page 60 of Railway Board Report on Indian Railways, Volume I ?

(c) Are Government aware that, out of 75 officers attached to the Agency Departments of Class I Railways, there are only two Muslims ?

(d) Are Government aware that in the year 1927-28 the proportion of Muslim officers to the total number of the officers on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway was reduced from 2.4 to 1.6 per cent. ?

L16CPB(LA)

(e) Are Government aware that on 1st April, 1928, the proportion of Muslim upper subordinates to the total number on Class I Railways was only 3.8 ?

(f) Are Government aware that in the year 1927-28 the proportion of Muslim upper subordinates to the total number on the Assam Bengal, Bombay, Baroda and Central India, Rohilkhand and Kumaon and South Indian Railways was actually reduced ?

(g) Are Government aware that there is not a single Muslim Superintendent in the offices of the Railway Board, the Agent, North Western Railway and all the Divisional Superintendents of the North Western Railway ?

(h) If the answers to the above are in the affirmative will Government please state how they reconcile this state of affairs with the pledges so often given by the Government that 33 per cent. of all new posts are reserved to redress communal inequalities in Government services ?

(i) Will Government please state if they are prepared in actual practice to take any effective measures for the redress of these inequalities ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The answer to clauses (a) to (f) of the question and to the first part of clause (g) is in the affirmative. Government are not aware of the present position in the offices mentioned on the North Western Railway. As regards clauses (h) and (i), in the three years from 1925 to 1928 the total percentage of Muslim officers on Class I Railways has risen from 2.3 per cent. to 3 per cent., and that of subordinates from 3.1 per cent. to 3.8 per cent. The policy of Government to prevent preponderance of any one community, which includes the reservation of 33-1/3rd per cent. of posts filled by competitive examination for qualified members of minority communities, came into effect only comparatively recently, and changes in the communal composition of the railways as a whole must necessarily be somewhat slow.

LACK OF MUSLIM OFFICERS IN CERTAIN RAILWAY OFFICES.

201. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Are Government aware that there is not a single Muslim officer in the offices of Director of Railway Audit, Chief Auditors, North Western Railway, East Indian Railway, Eastern Bengal Railway, Burma Railways, Railway Clearing Accounts Office and all the Government Examiners on Company-worked railways ?

(b) Is it a fact that not a single Muslim officer has ever been posted in the office of the Accountant General, Railways, during the whole life of that office, while over a dozen Hindu officers were appointed there, from time to time, as Deputy and Assistant Accountants General ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that not a single Muslim accountant has ever been promoted to the rank of Assistant Audit Officer in the Railway Audit Department during the whole history of that department ?

(d) If the answer to part (c) is in the affirmative do Government propose to investigate the causes of this state of affairs and remove them ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that nearly sixty men have passed Part I of the Subordinate Railway Accounts Service examination held in May last and not one of them is a Muslim ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing :

(i) the number by communities of officers, accountants and clerks selected for the Chief Auditor's Office, North Western Railway, Lahore, which was started in April last ; and

(ii) the number of officers, accountants and clerks by communities appointed in permanent or temporary vacancies after the formation of that office up-to-date ?

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : Inquiry is being made and a reply will be sent to the Honourable Member as soon as possible.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIM OFFICERS IN RAILWAY ACCOUNTS OFFICES.

202. Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Is it a fact that there is not a single Muslim officer or Superintendent in the office of the Controller of Railway Accounts whereas there are three Hindu officers and a large number of Hindu Superintendents attached to that office ?

(b) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of posting at least one Muslim officer and two Muslim Superintendents in that office ?

(c) Will Government please state if it is a fact that not a single Muslim officer or Superintendent has ever been appointed in the Railway Clearing Accounts Office, Delhi ?

(d) Do Government propose to appoint at least one Muslim officer and two Muslim Superintendents in that office ?

(e) Will Government please state if it is a fact that the number of Muslim accountants in the office of Chief Accounts Officer, North-Western Railway, is very small and the non-Muslim element preponderates ?

(f) Is it a fact that certain non-Muslims who had not passed the Railway and Subordinate Accounts Service examination have been appointed as Superintendents in the office of the Chief Accounts Officer, North Western Railway ?

(g) Are Government prepared to keep in view the paucity of Muslim accountants and extend similar concessions to Muslims who deserve special treatment ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a), (c) and (e). Government regret that, for reasons already explained to the House, they are unable to supply information about the communal composition of individual offices.

(b), (d) and (g). The policy of Government to prevent undue preponderance of any one community in the public service is known to the Controller of Railway Accounts, under whose control all these offices are.

(f) I understand there is no Superintendent at present in the office mentioned who has not passed the Subordinate Accounts Service Examination.

TRAVELLING ALLOWANCES OF CREWMEN.

203. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will Government be pleased to state whether the travelling allowance of Rs. 15 of the crewmen on the East Indian Railway is a consolidated one or whether they are only entitled to it for the period during which they have to travel? If the latter, will Government state reasons for not granting a consolidated travelling allowance to the crewmen?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The information has been called for from the Agent. On receipt of the reply I shall communicate with the Honourable Member.

LEAVE OF CREWMEN ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

204. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will Government be pleased to state whether any rules have been framed as regards casual and privilege leave of the crewmen on the East Indian Railway?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The information has been called for from the Agent. On receipt of the reply I shall communicate with the Honourable Member.

HOURS OF DUTY OF CREWMEN.

205. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will Government be pleased to state the number of hours for which the crewmen are required to be on duty during a week? Is it a fact that they get only 60 hours rest in the course of a week? If so, do Government propose to increase the hours of rest? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am collecting the information for the Honourable Member and will send it to him in due course.

PERMANENCY OF THE SERVICE OF CREWMEN.

206. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : When do Government propose to make the service of the crewmen permanent?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The crew system is at present in an experimental stage. The matter will be considered if and when it is decided to adopt the crew system as a permanent arrangement.

ORDERS FROM THE INDIAN STORES DEPARTMENT FOR THE KUMARDHUBI ENGINEERING WORKS.

207. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that the Kumardhubi Engineering Works receive orders from the Indian Stores Department?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It is a fact that the Kumardhubi Engineering Works receive orders from the Indian Stores Department.

PAY OF ASSISTANT STATION MASTERS ON THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

208. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that in the Bengal Nagpur Railway the pay of the Assistant Station Masters in Class III (80—5—120) or IV (60—5—100) desiring promotion to Station Masters' grade, Class VIII (52—4—80) was reduced owing to the scale of pay of the former being higher than that of the latter?

(b) Is it a fact that some Station Masters in the Bengal Nagpur Railway were made Assistant Station Masters on higher pay and they are asked to revert to lower pay, if they ask to be appointed Station Masters? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether such anomalies exist in other Indian Railways? If not, will Government be pleased to state whether they took any steps to prevent such anomalies? If not, why not?

(c) Is it a fact that Assistant Station Masters in large stations with higher pay are asked to revert to lower pay if they desired promotion to Station Masters' grade even after serving 10 years as Assistant Station Masters in big stations? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether such a practice obtains in any other Indian Railway?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am obtaining the information and will communicate with the Honourable Member on receipt.

FIRMS RECEIVING STATE PROTECTION, BOUNTIES AND SUBSIDIES.

209. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) How many firms in India are now receiving from the State :

- (1) protection ;
- (2) bounty ; and
- (3) subsidy ;

and on which items?

(b) What are the amounts of protection, bounty, or subsidy in each case?

(c) Is there any report as to how far they have progressed by such protection, bounty or subsidy?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state what definite steps have been taken by the firms receiving State protection, bounty or subsidy to improve the condition of labour in wages, training, housing and other like facilities?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state what definite steps have been taken by the firms receiving State protection, bounty or subsidy to encourage Indianisation in management and the employment of technically trained Indians in service?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state what definite steps have been taken by the firms receiving State protection, bounty or subsidy to cheapen production in this country?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a). (1) Protection has not been granted to any particular firm but to the following industries :

- (i) the Iron and Steel Industry,
- (ii) the Paper Industry, and
- (iii) the Match Industry.

(2) and (3). No firms in India receive at present any bounty or subsidy from Central revenues.

(b) The Honourable Member's attention is invited to Part VII of Schedule II to the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, as amended, copies of which are available in the Library. This shows the amount of tariff protection afforded to the industries named.

(c) So far as the iron and steel industry is concerned the Honourable Member is referred to the Tariff Board's Report on the Statutory Steel Enquiry, Chapters II and XIV of Volume I and Chapter II of Volume VIII. Copies of both volumes were supplied to the Honourable Member on publication.

No information is readily available as to the effect of protection on the paper industry.

As regards the match industry, the protective duty being the same as the original revenue duty, the advantage enjoyed by the industry remains the same as before.

(d), (e) and (f). The Government of India have no information.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE DACCA-ARICHA RAILWAY.

210. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to resolution No. 41 passed at the annual meeting of the All-India (including Burma) Postal and R. M. S. Union, Dacca Branch, held at Manikganj on 4th August, 1929, and published in its monthly organ Samitee for August, 1929, urging the early construction of the Dacca-Aricha Railway for safety and facility of the mails for Manikganj from Dacca and Calcutta sides ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state when the construction work of the Dacca-Aricha Railway line, already sanctioned, is expected to be completed and when the mails from Calcutta and Dacca are expected to be carried on this line ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given by the Honourable Sir George Rainy to Mr. K. C. Neogy's question No. 61 on the 3rd September, 1929.

RULES IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT FOR SENDING COMMUNICATIONS FREE ON POSTAL SERVICE.

211. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Are Government aware that, under rule 90 (3) of the Post Office Manual, Volume 1 (old edition), postal officials are prohibited from sending communications relating to leave, transfer, leave allowance, fund subscriptions, etc., free on postal service ?

(b) Is it a fact that subordinate employees of the Post Office Department are required to submit such communications through their immediate superiors and that the latter while they can forward such communications to the sanctioning officers free on postal service are, under the operation of rule 90 (3) cited above, themselves debarred from the privilege, while sending such communications relating to their individual cases to their superior officers ?

(c) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the representation made by the Honorary Secretary, All-India Union, Dacca Branch, No. P.R.-10, dated the 5th November, 1928, pointing out the inconsistency of the rule and urging its relaxation which has been published in the Samitee of last July issue ?

(d) Is it a fact that, under the spirit of a letter issued by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, referred to in the Dacca Secretary's letter, the rule has been relaxed in its operation in all postal and R. M. S. divisions except in the Dacca Division where the Superintendent, Mr. N. Banerjee, has issued a special order rigidly enforcing the rule on his subordinates specially prohibiting them from sending such communications free on postal service ?

(e) Is it a fact that Mr. N. Banerjee himself infringed his own ruling by sending his application for casual leave to the Deputy Postmaster General, Dacca Range, during the last Puja holidays free on postal service ?

(f) Do Government propose to relax the rule in case of officials in active service ?

Mr. P. G. Rogers : (a) Yes. The prohibition is repeated in the current Posts and Telegraphs Manual.

(b) Yes.

(c) No. Government have not seen the representation referred to.

(d) The provisions of the rule have nowhere been relaxed. The reason for drawing special attention to the orders in the Dacca Division was their frequent infringement.

(e) No.

(f) The answer is in the negative.

EMPLOYMENT OF RELATIONS AND NOMINEES OF MR. A. N. ROY, DEPUTY POSTMASTER-GENERAL, BENGAL AND ASSAM.

212. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there are any relations and nominees of Mr. A. N. Roy, Deputy Postmaster General of Bengal and Assam, who are on the list of candidates for employment in the Postal Department in Bengal and Assam ? If so, what is their number and when will the list be exhausted ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether there are any relations of Mr. A. N. Roy, still waiting in the list of candidates maintained at (1) Alipur H. O. Division, (2) Hooghly Division, (3) Presidency Division, and (4) Calcutta General Post Office ? If so, what is their number ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a full list of learners sent to the T. T. classes during the past 18 months by the Postmaster General of Bengal and Assam ? Are any of the men sent from Alipur, Calcutta, Hooghly Division, Murshidabad Division, Midnapur Division, Nadia Division and Presidency Division, either relations or nominees of Mr. A. N. Roy ? If so, how many ?

(d) Are there any relatives or nominees of Mr. A. N. Roy, who are working in the Nadia, Calcutta, R. M. S., C., E. and N. Divisions ? If so, how many ?

(e) For how long has Babu Gangesh Chandra Bhattacharji been working as Post-Master, Krishnagar ? How long did this particular officer work as head clerk of the Superintendent's office, Nadia Division ? Is he in any way related to Mr. A. N. Roy ? Is it a fact that as a result of inspection of the Krishnagar H. O. by an independent officer during

Mr. A. N. Roy's absence from office, the Post-Master General passed orders transferring Babu G. C. Bhattacharji for unsatisfactory work? Did Mr. A. N. Roy after resuming office put up a long protest against the order in support of Babu G. C. Bhattacharji?

(f) Is it a fact that a junior officer still on probation and occupying a position at the bottom of the list was posted as Postmaster, Barrackpur? Is it a fact that there were over 200 men senior to him? Has the order been cancelled? If so, why? Was the junior man a nominee of Mr. A. N. Roy?

(g) Is it a fact that Mr. A. N. Roy has been holding appointment in the Circle throughout his whole career? If so, why?

Mr. P. G. Rogers: The information necessary for complete replies to unstarred questions Nos. 212 and 214 is being collected and will be communicated to the Honourable Member in due course.

EXPERIMENTAL POST OFFICES.

213. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao: Is it a fact that no experimental post offices have been sanctioned from April this year? Will Government be pleased to state the number of refusals with reasons for such refusal?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra: The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative.

As regards the second part, the provision of funds for opening new offices in the Budget for 1929-30 had to be restricted owing to the financial position of the Department, and this must have led Postmasters General to refuse requests for opening new offices. Government have no information about the number of such cases; and in view of what has already been stated, they do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by making inquiries.

EMPLOYMENT OF BABU JATINDRA NATH BOSE, CONTINUOUSLY FOR SEVERAL YEARS IN THE BENGAL AND ASSAM POSTMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE.

† 214. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao: Is it a fact that Babu Jatindra Nath Bose has been in charge of the Bill and Accounts Branch of the Bengal and Assam Postmaster General's Office for several years? Is it a fact that, whenever any question of his transfer to any other branch arises, the Office Superintendent puts up his protests? Is it a fact that Babu Amar Nath Bose is a brother of Babu Jatindra Nath Bose?

TRANSFER OF AN OFFICER OF THE OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL, BENGAL AND ASSAM.

215. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao: Is it a fact that one officer of the personal staff of the Postmaster General of Bengal and Assam has been transferred after a short interval and compelled to take leave? If so, why? Has Mr. B. B. Bhattacharji, S. Hooghly, been transferred to Dacca Division? If so, why?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 212.

Mr. P. G. Rogers: It is presumed that the Honourable Member refers, in the first part of his question, to Mr. N. K. Dutt, who was transferred after holding the appointment of Assistant Postmaster General for one year and four months. He was not, however, compelled to take leave, but did so to suit his own convenience. As regards Mr. Bhattacharji, the facts stated by the Honourable Member are substantially correct. The transfers of both officers were within the competence of the Postmaster General, Bengal and Assam, and were made in the interests of the public service.

LADY CLERKS APPOINTED IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT IN BENGAL.

216. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao: Is it a fact that several lady clerks in the General Post Office cadre in Bengal have been appointed? If so, will Government be pleased to state the number of such clerks, their ages and qualifications?

Mr. P. G. Rogers: There are seven lady clerks employed in the G. P. O. at Calcutta:

|             | Age. | Qualifications.                                             |

AMALGAMATION OF THE DARJEELING-SIKKIM-TIBET POSTAL DIVISION WITH THE JALPAIGURI DIVISION.

217. Mr. G. Sarvotham Rao: (a) Is it a fact that the question of abolition of the separate division named Darjeeling-Sikkim-Tibet and its amalgamation with the Jalpaiguri Division was finally decided in the Director General's Office on the recommendation of two Postmasters General? Is it a fact that Mr. Raha made his recommendations after a careful personal inspection of the work of Darjeeling-Sikkim-Tibet Division? Did the Director General of Post Offices accept the recommendations finally? If not, why not?

(b) Is it a fact that the officer holding at present the charge of the division is against the abolition and is supported by Mr. A. N. Roy, Deputy Postmaster General? Is it a fact that the division has got no work to justify the cost of maintenance of the staff? What is Mr. Raha's report? Do the mere numbers of sub-offices indicate the real amount of post office work in a division like Darjeeling-Sikkim-Tibet? Is it a fact that all post offices are combined offices in this division?

Mr. P. G. Rogers: (a) The question of the abolition of the Darjeeling-Sikkim-Tibet Division and its amalgamation with the Jalpaiguri Division, was finally decided by the Director General on the reports of three Postmasters General. Mr. Raha made his report after personal inspection of the work of this Division. The Director General has accepted the recommendation of the present Postmaster General of Bengal and Assam Circle, who reported on the question last. The Division has not yet been abolished.

(b) Government have no information whether the officer now holding charge of the Division is against its abolition and is supported by Mr. A. N. Roy. The Division was not created by Sir Geoffrey Clarke to provide for Mr. Grange. It is not a fact that the Division has no work to justify the cost of maintaining the staff. Mr. Raha reported that, in his opinion, the postal work did not justify a separate postal Division and that, although engineering, the entire work did not justify a whole-time officer. He also stated that on the abolition of the Division and its amalgamation with the Jalpaiguri Division, the latter would be a very heavy Division and he recommended a special pay to the Superintendent of the Jalpaiguri Division. The mere number of sub offices does not indicate the real amount of post office work. It is not a fact that all post offices are combined offices in this Division.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST MR. D. F. TAWSE, ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT OF CREWS, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

218. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) What are the qualifications of Mr. D. F. Tawse, Assistant Superintendent of Crews, East Indian Railway ?

(b) Is it a fact that there are several complaints of favouritism and ill-treatment of subordinates by Mr. D. F. Tawse ?

(c) Do Government propose to inquire into these charges against Mr. Tawse and try to find out the reasons of favouritism, if any ?

Mr. F. R. Rau : Mr. D. F. Tawse has been chosen for his present appointment by the local Railway Administration, who are fully competent to judge of his qualifications. The Honourable Member's question has been forwarded to the Agent, for disposal.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST MR. M. A. H. SHIRAJI AT HOWRAH STATION.

219. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that one M. A. H. Shiraji has been all along posted at the Howrah Station ? If so, why ? Have any complaints been received that he ill-treats poor passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Government have no information. The posting of staff is a matter within the competence of the local Administration to whom it is presumed any complaints of ill-treatment would be made direct.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST S. GOPAL, ASSISTANT LINE INSPECTOR, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

220. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Are Government aware that one S. Gopal, an Assistant Line Inspector on the East Indian Railway, treats the passengers harshly and even cruelly ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why he is still retained in service ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Government have no information. Complaints of ill-treatment would presumably be made direct to the Local Administration who are fully competent to deal with the matter.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

TREATMENT OF BUDDHIST MONKS IN JAILS IN BURMA.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member from Burma, Mr. Munshi, desires to ask leave of this House to move the adjournment of the business of the Assembly for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance. Honourable Members are aware that it is desirable and also necessary that we should get through the Sarda Bill today, and if we allow the adjournment motion to break through the ordinary business of the Assembly today, it may not be possible to finish the Sarda Bill. I would, therefore, suggest to the Honourable Member from Burma whether he should not agree to take up this motion tomorrow.

Mr. Jehangir K. Munshi (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, I would be the last person to stand in the way of the Child Marriage Bill, and I gladly accept the suggestion of the Chair. I only hope that advantage will not be taken of this to say tomorrow that the motion is not urgent.

Mr. President : If any objection is taken on that score, the Chair will protect the Honourable Member.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (PROVIDENT FUNDS RELIEF) BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes (Provident Funds Relief), as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

I do not think it is necessary for me to expound in detail the nature of the amendments introduced in Select Committee, as they are very clearly explained in the Report of the Select Committee. Also in view of the urgency of other business before the House, and in view of the explanations which I have already given about this Bill, I do not propose to go over the ground again or deal with the main objects. I would only like to say this ; that I wish on this occasion to acknowledge the great assistance which I have received from the representatives both of the Indian Chambers of Commerce and the representatives of the Associated Chambers of Commerce in working out this very complicated and difficult piece of legislation. The Bill is a short one and has not attracted much public attention ; but I venture to say that, taking all the matters which have come before the House this Session, the results of this Bill will be more felt in the shape of definite benefit to some of the poorer classes of this country than the results of any other business which the Assembly has discussed.

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 5 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir George Schuster : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume discussion of clause 1 of the Child Marriage Bill.

The question is :

“ That clause 1 stand part of the Bill.”

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, the amendment which I have the honour to move runs as follows :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the words and figures “ the 1st day of April 1930 ” the following be substituted :

“ such day as the Local Government of a Province or Presidency, with the approval of the majority of the elected Members of the Local Council may determine, and in case of centrally administered area, the Governor General with the approval of the elected Members of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly may determine.”

It would not have been necessary for me to make any speech on this amendment, had it not been that the House has been carried away by its reforming zeal. Be that as it may, I feel it my duty to move this amendment which will at once show to the people at large and also to the world whether certain people or a certain section of the people want legislation in this matter or not. There are various opinions about this Bill and the Bill as passed has hardly even satisfied the zealous supporters of social reform. A handful of men and the heterogeneous representatives of the various sections of our community think that they have a right.....

Mr. President : Order, order. I am afraid I cannot allow the Honourable Member to go into the merits of the Bill. The Honourable Member must confine himself to the amendment before the House, which is that if the Bill is passed, it should come into operation under certain conditions. The Honourable Member cannot go into the question whether the Bill should be passed or not.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am not going into that question, Sir. I am going into the question whether the several provinces of this vast country should have one law ; because we have the opinion of at least one Provincial Government that conditions vary in different parts of the country. In fact India is a vast continent, almost the size of Europe, excluding Russia. If that is so, I think no one here, at least none of my Honourable friends who come from across the seas, will ever think that they can have one law for the whole of Europe. As I have said before, owing to climatic variations and other conditions in India, puberty in different provinces appears at different ages. It has been admitted that this Bill is mainly aimed against pre-puberty marriages. We are not concerned with that, but as I have submitted, conditions vary in different parts of the country and that being so, it would be better if we leave it to the consideration of the people of those particular provinces and the views set forth by the elected Members of their Legislatures. I think no reasonable men can object to this unless they think that they are a superior body of men with superior heads on their shoulders and also a superior right to coerce people of the various provinces. Sir, in this view I am backed by the opinion of certain Provincial Governments. (An Honourable Member : “ No ”) Punjab, if you care to read the Report.....

An Honourable Member : What about the Punjab ?

( 1240 )

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

1241

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The Punjab Government has said..... (Interruptions from Honourable Members). I belong to the same province to which the Honourable Advocate General belongs, and if I have not got the same amount of courage and grit as he has, at least I can follow in his footsteps and ignore these interruptions. Sir, what objection can there be to an amendment like this I fail to understand, unless as I have said, people are swayed away by feelings of their own importance ; and I think in a House like this, where reason is not always.....

Mr. President : Order, order : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to cast aspersions on the House.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : In a House like this I do not wish to say more than this, that I think my amendment will commend itself to the approval of all reasonable men.

The Revd. J. C. Chatterjee (Nominated: Indian Christians) : After listening to the trend of the debate, I am convinced that the moving of my amendment* will not be in the national interests and so I request your leave not to move it.

Mr. President : No leave is necessary: the Honourable Member need not move his amendment.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (United Provinces : Nominated Non-Official) : On a point of order, may I ask, if Mr. Chatterjee does not move his amendment which is similar to Mr. Kelkar's amendment No. 5, what will be the effect on Mr. Kelkar's amendment ? Will he be entitled to move it or not ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The amendment which I wish to move runs as follows :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1932 ’ be substituted.”

The House will see that I desire that the people of the country should be given a sufficient period of time to understand the provisions of this Bill. It has been stated in this House more than once that ours is a very large country, that there are more than thirty crores of people in it, and that there are people of various opinions. Most of them, at least ninety per cent. of them, are absolutely illiterate. It is necessary to give the people sufficient time to be acquainted with the provisions of this penal measure. We are legislating here for people who include hill tribes and men who scarcely ever come to towns. It is for people of all grades that we are legislating, and therefore I do not think that a period of two years will be long enough, and therefore I request that there should be no hurry in enforcing this penal measure. I know that some of my friends are in a great hurry to enforce this measure all at once, but I think that they should be satisfied when this Bill passes into law and they should give reasonable time to people to get acquainted with the provisions of this measure. I do not think that a longer or more elaborate argument is necessary in support of such a simple proposition as I am placing before this House.

* “ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the words and figures ‘ the 1st day of April 1930 ’, the words and figures ‘ the 1st day of January 1931 ’ be substituted.”

[23RD SEPT. 1929.]

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division: Muhammadan Rural) : I do not believe that there is any sense in this amendment simply because my Honourable friend says that he is representing the hill tribes in this Assembly ; he represents a constituency.....

Mr. President : Order, order : what is the Honourable Member doing ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : I am making a speech on the amendment moved, Sir.

Mr. President : He is not in order in making a speech unless he has been called on to do so ; he is now a Front Bencher and ought to behave himself.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division: Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I move :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1931 ’ be substituted.”

My friend, Mr. Belvi has already moved his amendment to prolong the date of operation of this Bill to 1932. He is of course reasonable, but I think I am more reasonable still. A witty friend of mine has described that there is more of alliteration than of truth in it. But I think supposing that it is a kind of moratorium, I think that it is necessary for saving the credit of all concerned—of those who have supported the Bill, and those that have almost come to bankruptcy by having their efforts to get useful amendments made defeated, and also in the interests of the Government, because they have already drawn a very large draft upon their credit with the people by trying to thrust this penal legislation upon them. So I say that, in the interests of all concerned, this little moratorium is necessary. But I think I have got other very good grounds for moving this amendment. In the first place it is a golden mean between two opposite extremes : on the one hand we have here Mr. Sessa Ayyangar who is going to move that the date of operation of this Bill be postponed to 1933 ; and on the other hand I know of certain friends of mine who are so impatient over this Bill that they would like to support the Governor General if he would issue an ordinance and bring the Bill into operation as soon as it is passed here—they are impatient even over the little delay that is provided for in the Bill.

But, Sir, there is another reason of mine for this amendment and that is simply an arithmetical reason. If you look to clause 1 of this Bill as passed by the Select Committee, we find the first section reads :

“ This Act may be called the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1928.”

And the same Select Committee says that it shall come into force on the first day of April 1930. That means that the Select Committee with its own hands is giving a saving period of fifteen months for the operation of the Bill before the Act comes into operation ; and in my amendment I think I am asking for precisely the same period of delay and nothing more. What I am doing is no more than what the Select Committee at one time did intend. This House has, through the proceedings on the Bill, affected and even professed to treat the Select Committee Report as sacrosanct ; and I hope that in this matter at any rate they will treat that Report as sacred and not interfere with its intentions as I have just expressed them, namely, that of giving a period of fifteen months at least before this Act comes into operation.

Now, it may be said that the public has had notice owing to the fact that this Bill was hanging fire for the last fifteen months ; but, Sir, I must say that notice of the Bill is not notice of the Act, if I may use a somewhat legal phrase ; and there is very good reason for my saying so. It is not only technically that I am saying it, but there is a very good reason for it. For one year no doubt the people have known that the Sarda Bill was before the Assembly, but people have got a very good idea as to what chances there are for private Bills in this House, and therefore when they came to know simply that there was such a Bill before the Assembly, they did not like to take it very seriously ; and if I may put it perhaps more plainly, I must say that my friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda would have had absolutely no chance of carrying this Bill through if Government had not come to his help and rescue and given him the grace of the necessary days for piloting the Bill through the House.

Now, something has thus happened which is absolutely unprecedented. And how can we expect the people to credit the Government with these intentions to help Mr. Sarda in this matter over this Bill ? They usually suppose or are under the impression that there is absolutely no chance for any lengthy private Bills in this House, and they might have therefore easily rested on their oars, expecting all along that such a lengthy and contested Bill could not be passed in the Assembly with one or two days at best that might be otherwise devoted to it. Therefore, again I say that the notice of this Bill is certainly not the notice of the Act.

Then, looking at it from another point of view, after all, what will be lost if we give the people one year or 15 months to reconcile themselves to the new situation that is created by the Bill ? A lot of propaganda, it is admitted on all hands, will have to be done before people even know that such an Act has come into being and that they must obey the Act. Primarily, I think it is the duty of this Government to carry on all the necessary propaganda for allowing this Bill to filter down to the lowest masses, and I should certainly feel thankful if Government would do for this Bill at least as much propaganda as they did for securing the War Loan. I do expect that they will do even a little more propaganda for this Bill among the masses than they did at the time of securing the War Loan, because certainly this Bill is more important to the public than the War Loan for which they did a good deal of propaganda. Now, what is the ordinary procedure by which people come to know of the Bills that are passed in the Legislature ? These are published in the Government Gazettes. How many people are there in this country who read the Government Gazettes and who can understand the vernacular translation that is made of these Acts in the Government Gazettes ? After all, they have got to go to their own friends and relations to understand what is passing in the country and what is happening in the country, and it is not through the Government Gazette, but through their own friends and relatives, that people will ultimately, in the mofussil at any rate, come to know that such an Act has been passed, and that its penal provisions are so and so and so and so. Therefore, I say that here is an instance in which very great propaganda is needed, and in the first instance it will be the duty of the Government to carry on this propaganda very effectively so as to educate the people properly. Though I am suggesting the 1st of January 1931, I may in passing refer to one great opportunity which Government will be getting for making this propaganda, and that is on the occasion of the Census. Of course, the census will be coming a month or two later than January 31st, but I hope, if I put it to Government, it will be relevant that they will take that occasion to instruct each enumerator to tell each one of the members of the family, when he is going to take the enumeration details from the people in the country, that such and such an Act has been passed already and that they should beware how they contract the marriages of their daughters and sons thereafter. All this knowledge is necessary for the public and for the masses especially in the mofussil, because no one knows what the attitude of the Government and the law courts will be if this Bill is passed and put into operation immediately. There may be judges who may take the view that, once they begin with deterrent punishment, it will be half the battle won. Others may take the view that the law courts may begin with administering the Act in a gentle manner, but the Government have so far expressed no opinion as to what their policy will be in the matter. Therefore, I may assume the worst, and assuming the worst I must say that these 15 months are absolutely necessary for the contents of this Bill to filter down to the masses. For these reasons I say that this amendment should be supported whole-heartedly so that the masses might know all about the provisions of this Bill.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madura and Ramnad cum Tinnevely : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 1, sub-clause (3) for the figures ‘ 1930 ’ the figures ‘ 1933 ’ be substituted.”

I hope, I am not less reasonable than my friends Messrs. Belvi and Kelkar. There is another ground, in addition to the one urged by the previous speakers, in favour of this amendment. I may bring to the notice of the House that, when the Bill was introduced in 1927, the figure “ 1930 ” was inserted in this clause, thereby it can be clearly understood that the Honourable the Mover was really serious in giving at least three years’ time for the Bill to become law after it had been passed.....

Mr. President : He thought it would take three years to pass the Bill !

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I am only adding three years from now and put it as 1933 ; and I adopt also the arguments of my friends Messrs. Belvi and Kelkar. I would also add to them by saying that the principles underlying this Bill, the drastic provisions contained in the Bill and the penalties imposed by the Bill, are so very comprehensive that really three years’ time and somewhat more than that will be necessary for the people to make themselves familiar with the provisions of this Bill so that no one in this country may be taken unawares when this Bill becomes operative. Therefore, I beg to move the amendment.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I move my amendment, Sir ?

Mr. President : Is there any amendment ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Yes, Sir ; the last one.

Mr. President : That is not on this subject. The question is :

“ That in clause 1 (3) for the figures ‘ 1930 ’ the figures ‘ 1933 ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1932 ’ be substituted.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

“ That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill, for the word and figures ‘ April, 1930 ’ the word and figures ‘ January, 1931 ’ be substituted.”

The Assembly divided.

Mr. President : The only remaining amendment* is that standing in the name of Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. I want to know from the Honourable Member how that amendment is in order, because the effect of the carrying of that amendment by the Assembly would be that the House would stultify itself by going back on its own decision which it had arrived at on the motion of Mr. Sesha Ayyangar which sought to exclude Brahmins and certain other communities. I should have thought that Brahmins and certain other communities mentioned by Mr. Sesha Ayyangar were Hindus.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The part does not include the whole and I am moving this amendment for the whole of the Hindu community.

Mr. President : The whole includes the part.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : But the part does not include the whole.

Mr. President : And, therefore, if the amendment is carried as it stands, it would apply to the part and to that extent the Assembly would go back on its own decision.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Am I to understand, in that case, that such amendments are not to be allowed? Though the smaller amendment was not carried, it may be that the House may agree to the bigger thing....

Mr. President : It was quite open to the Honourable Member to move this amendment at the time when Mr. Sesha Ayyangar moved his amendment with regard to particular classes of Hindus. If I now allow the House to discuss this amendment, it means that the House is asked to go back on its decision to that extent.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I point out to you that at the time when amendments were being moved the Chair was calling upon every Member in whose name the amendments stood at that time. Unfortunately my amendment was on a separate paper and I was.....

Mr. President : That does not alter the rules or the law.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : That is quite true, but we have not the power here to question anything done by the Chair in the matter of calling Members and so on. We were on the horns of a dilemma. We would either be called to order by the Chair or.....

Mr. President : I would ask the Honourable Member to be more deferential in referring to the Chair.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am not casting any aspersion.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I submit that the question of the application of the Bill to various communities was on the agenda, and if Mr. Sesha Ayyangar's amendment was narrower than the amendment of my friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, it is only right that the wider amendment should be discussed first and the narrower one later on.

Mr. President : It was open to Mr. Amar Nath Dutt to get up and say "I want to move my amendment".

* "That after sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill the following be added :
(4) It shall not apply to the Hindus."

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : The Chair is seized of the fact that there is a wider amendment and the order is in the hands of the Chair.

Mr. President : Every Member is expected to protect his own interests.

Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : There is also the interest of the House.

Mr. President : I will not allow anything to be done which would stultify the House itself. If we allow this amendment and supposing the House goes back on its own decision, the House will be stultifying itself.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What about my other amendment, Sir.

Mr. President : I will now put it to the House.

The question is:

"That in sub-clause (3) of clause 1 of the Bill for the words and figures 'the 1st day of April, 1930' the following be substituted:

'such day as the Local Government of a province or Presidency, with the approval of the majority of the elected Members of the Local Council may determine, and in the case of centrally administered areas, the Governor General with the approval of the elected Members of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly may determine'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I call for a division.

Mr. President : Those who are in favour of the motion will stand in their places.

(Only about 2 or 3 Members stood.)

Those against :

(As a large number of Members stood up, the Chair declared that the request for a division was frivolous.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I take it that my amendment has been disallowed?

Mr. President : Yes.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : I rise to move that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be passed. In doing so, I do not propose to traverse the whole ground covered by the Honourable Members in this House during the seven days debate this Session.

As regards the religious aspect of the question, I would only say that the Vedas are the highest religious authority amongst the Hindus and the Vedas inculcate adult marriage. (Some Honourable Member : "No".) They do, the Vedas,—Rig Veda and Atharva Veda,—say that brides should choose their husbands, and no girl of 1, 2, or 3 or 8 is in a position to choose her husband.

Mr. President : What is the Honourable Member doing?

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I have moved, Sir, that the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be passed.

Mr. President : Before he does that, I must put clause 1 to the vote. Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : I move that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be passed. I was saying, Sir, that the Vedas inculcate adult marriage. Dr. Moonje has stated that the Shastras in different times prescribed 12, 14 and 16 years as the marriageable age for girls. He has divided India into two parts, Southern and Northern India, and by some manipulation of medical topography,—because he is a doctor,—he has included Bengal in Southern India. Now, as regards the Madras Presidency, the collection of opinions which the Government have received clearly shows that the Madras Presidency is in favour of the Bill. 97 per cent. of the people of that Presidency are non-Brahmins.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muham-madan Rural) : No.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : If my friend is prepared to throw over-board everything that is authoritative, the Census Reports and others, he is at liberty to do so. 97 per cent. of the population unanimously supports the Bill, and of the remaining 3 per cent., the opinions show that a majority of them are in favour of the Bill. I will give you one instance. Mr. Williams, Joint Magistrate at Guntur, says that he consulted 22 respectable people of the district and of these 22, 13 were Brahmins. Of the 13, only 3 were against the Bill, and 10 were in favour of it. Sir, I am receiving telegrams daily from every part of the Madras Presidency demanding that the Bill be passed at once. I will refer to only one of them. It is about a meeting promoted by Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer and Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar. Both these Brahmin gentlemen are well known to Members of this House. A public meeting was held under the presidency of Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer and a resolution was passed that the Bill should be passed at once, and the telegram says that this was attended by many orthodox Brahmins. It reads :

“ To-day's public meeting presided over by Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer and led by Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar, the Honourable V. Ramdas, T. R. Venkatrama Sastri and other Brahmin orthodox leaders have accorded its whole-hearted support to the policy and principles of the Child Marriage Bill.”

But the complete crushing answer to the opponents' objection is the fact that the Madras Legislative Council has unanimously passed the following Resolution :

“ This Council recommends to Government that it may be pleased to communicate to the Government of India that, in the opinion of this Council, legislation raising the marriageable age of boys and girls to at least 21 and 16, respectively, is necessary.”

There was not one single dissentient voice, though there are many eminent Brahmins as Members of the Council.

As regards Bengal, much has been made of the fact that the Provincial Hindu Conference at Dacca refused to accord its support to this Bill. Those who are acquainted with the circumstances of that Conference know the peculiar condition in which this was done. But, here is the opinion of the Bengal Provincial Hindu Sabha. The Secretary of the Provincial Bengal Hindu Sabha wires :

“ Bengal Provincial Hindu Sabha in general meeting unanimously passed resolution supporting Sarda Bill.”

And my Honourable friend, Dr. Moonje, the President of the All-India Hindu Mahasabha, will not disown the Bengal Provincial Hindu Sabha. The telegrams which I have received every day, almost every hour, during the last few days that meetings have been held in different towns of Bengal and many by ladies in Eastern Bengal and all unanimously demand that the Bill should be passed, and say that those who say that East Bengal does not want the Bill, do not represent the opinion of that province. (Hear, hear.) I have received telegrams from almost every part of India, Sir, asking when the Bill is going to be passed. They show that people in the different parts of India are anxiously waiting to see that the Bill is passed.

1 P.M.

Sir, I come now to the charge brought against me by my Honourable friend, Mr. Kelkar. Speaking on the amendment of the Honourable Pandit Nilakantha Das for making exemptions in cases involving hardship, he said :

“ That first point is this that this was an idea originally embodied in Mr. Sarda's own Bill when it was first introduced. I do not think he will deny it, if I put it to him. The Honourable Member unfortunately is in the hands of the Select Committee. If he has convictions of his own, he will stand up and say, ‘ I accept this amendment, whatever the fate of other amendments.’ I cannot sympathise with him over this matter when he is going against his own convictions by not supporting this amendment.”

My answer to my Honourable friend is : I deny that this idea as supposed by Mr. Kelkar was embodied in the original Bill. I deny that I am going against my convictions. My Honourable friend was not right in saying that, if I had any convictions of my own, I would have accepted the amendment. There is no connection whatever between the amendment proposed by the Honourable Pandit Nilakantha Das and the provision which I made in clause 6 of my Bill. That clause reads as follows :

“ The Magistrate of the district shall grant a licence for the marriage of a Hindu girl to her guardian, who files a written application for the grant of such licence with an affidavit swearing to the fact that the girl has completed her eleventh year, and that the guardian conscientiously believes that the tenets of the religion which the girl professes enjoin that the girl should not be kept unmarried any longer.”

This clause, Sir, provides for the conscientious objector. The objection is founded on religious tenets. The amendment supported by Mr. Kelkar has nothing to do with the “ conscientious objector.” It provides for cases in which guardians are compelled to solemnise a marriage the non-performance of which would involve a hardship to the girl or her family. Hardship to the girl or to the family, for instance, the illness of a guardian or the lack of means, is certainly not the same thing as a conscientious objection. I am sure, Sir, that had it not been for the annoyance caused to my Honourable friend by the House summarily rejecting all his amendments, or had he had the provision of my Bill, which I have just quoted, before him at the time he was speaking, he would not have been unfair to me. He has today objected, Sir, that Government gave me several days which were reserved for official business for this Bill and that this was a very peculiar thing and was not warranted. Probably, the Honourable Member will remember that when during the last Session Government voted for the postponement of this Bill, they promised the House that in the Autumn Simla Session they would provide sufficient time for the passing of this Bill and would place at the disposal of the House as many days as necessary in order to see that this Bill was passed. No one can therefore complain that Government, in fulfilment of that promise, are giving all the facilities necessary for the passing of this Bill.

A word, Sir, with regard to what fell from the Honourable Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. Sir, he is the Leader of the Party to which I belong.

[Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda.]

I have the highest respect for him, as I am sure everybody else in the House has, for his high sense of duty and sincerity of purpose, his undoubted patriotism, and for the great services he has rendered to this country. It gives me pain to differ from him. It was a little disappointing to see him use all those great oratorical gifts with which God has endowed him in support of a dilatory motion. And only the other day in mellifluous accents, in those soft, persuasive tones, so characteristic of him and which we all admire, he moved for lowering the marriageable age of girls. Much as I should like to follow him, Sir, I feel that more powerful than his eloquence are the tears of the child widows, the woes of the child wives, the sufferings of the victims of this evil custom that call for justice and that beckon us to the path where lies our duty to the women of our country and our motherland. It is, however, a matter of some satisfaction that I do not differ from him in this Bill on any important matter of principle. He supports the Bill; he does not want that the Bill should be wrecked, he wants that it should be passed. He only differs in a matter of detail; he wants that the minimum marriageable age of girls which is fixed in this Bill at fourteen should be reduced to twelve.

Sir, he said the other day that for the first time in the history of the world penal legislation in respect of the marriage age was being passed in this country. Is this, Sir, not a concession to orthodox opinion? When the Bill was first introduced, no penal clauses were attached to it. But the orthodox people would not have it. In other countries where marriage legislation has been enacted, the legislation is far more drastic. In those countries, marriages contracted below the minimum marriageable age are void. It is not so in this country. Even when this Bill is passed, the marriages of girls of two and three and eight will still remain marriages, and will not be held to be void, which is not the case in other countries. Consequently, Sir, it serves no purpose to compare the marriageable age fixed in this Bill with the marriageable ages fixed in other countries.

It is a matter of satisfaction, Sir, that all the Honourable Members of this House recognise the evil of child marriage. There may be a difference of opinion with regard to the method to be pursued, and the measures to be employed to remedy this evil.

A request was made by one of the Honourable Members that Government should not vote for the Bill but should remain neutral. That request, Sir, is tantamount to a demand that Government should not perform its primary function, which as everybody knows is to protect an individual or a class of its subjects from the invasion of his or its rights by another; and, Sir, when Government finds that this evil exists on a very large scale, Government is bound to interfere. The Honourable the Home Member in the brilliant speech which he delivered on the 4th September in this Assembly on this Bill said:

"The first and the most reasonable conclusion, the inevitable conclusion in reference to the particular contents of this Bill, is that there exists a great and a corroding evil in this country which is clamorous for a remedy. That evil, Sir, is one which afflicts, in the first instance, the most defenceless, innocent section of the community, those who have the greatest claims for our protection. The evil is not only limited to that. It is not merely the large number of young girls who year by year either die or sustain serious bodily injury; but those who are acquainted with the case, those who have studied the evidence, those more particularly who have come into contact with the practical facts and the practical consequences, cannot contemplate them without—

I put it no higher than this—the most serious searchings of mind, heart and conscience. It is not merely that generation after generation of young girls should be exposed to or should suffer from these evils, but there are dangers to the future generations of the country from which, if the country is not willing to adopt a remedy, it will undoubtedly suffer in its most vital and important interests."

And he concluded by saying:

"We are convinced that this evil exists; we are convinced that the measure of Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda is, at any rate, a first step in the direction of seeking a practical remedy. Where we find so great an evil and where we find a promising remedy, we feel that we must support what we think to be right. I trust, Sir, the great majority of this House will concur in that view. I trust they will concur in the view that this measure is a measure in the right direction and that it is their duty to support it with their suffrage."

I take this opportunity to offer my grateful thanks to the Honourable Sir James Crerar for the very eloquent, able and closely reasoned speech in which he announced the fullest support of Government to this measure. That announcement has been received from one end of the country to the other with satisfaction and thankfulness. (A voice: "With horror.") It reminds me of a line of Shakespeare. The greatest of the poets says:

"That the divine quality of mercy is doubly blessed; it blesseth him who gives as well as him who takes."

The support of Government to this measure is also doubly helpful—it will help the people to get rid of a widespread and a corroding evil, and it will also help Government inasmuch as it will strengthen the bonds between the Government and the people, as the people think that the Government is trying to help them in remedying this evil. In giving this support, the Honourable Sir James Crerar has therefore done a service to the Government.

Sir, in order to show with what intense anxiety and almost breathless suspense, people in different provinces of India are waiting to see this Bill passed into law, I will read a few lines from a telegram which I have received. It is from Montgomery. Rai Bahadur Ram Rakha Mal wires:

"Kindly accept and convey all concerned sincerest gratitude and congratulations on Government's just wise support for wealth and honour, nay, life-giving and nation-building Sarda Bill, for which millions helpless minor daughters, sisters and sons, now sacrificed at altar of superstition like old Sutte will bless all supporters for saving them from ruination by atrocities on minors which are cognizable offences like grievous hurt or rape under every civilized constitution."

Then he goes on to say that he is sending a cheque of Rs. 500 for a certain purpose.

Several Honourable Members: What purpose?

The Honourable Sir James Crerar (Home Member): May I say, Sir, that I have returned the cheque with many thanks for the donor's intentions.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda: He says that the names of all supporters to this Bill should be engraved on a column in the Assembly. That is, however, a matter with which I have no concern. I have quoted the telegram to show that the country appreciates the support given by Government to the Bill.

This Bill, Sir, is a very moderate and a very mild measure. Moderate as it is, it will go a long way to rehabilitate this country in the world opinion. Only the other day, we read a telegram published in the Pioneer and other papers saying that the Observer of London, a powerful paper, says that the welcome given to the Child Marriage Bill in the Assembly shows that a new India is in the making. In this connection, Sir, I will read to the House a passage which gives the opinion of one who is entitled to the highest respect and consideration. That passage will show that child marriage and forced widowhood, pardah and other similar customs have been reacting against the liberties of our nation. I read from a book called "The India we served", by Sir Walter R. Lawrence, where he describes an interview between the Prince of Wales and Mr. Gokhale :

[Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda.]

" Mr. Gokhale was the ablest Indian of his time. He was just then President of the Indian Congress and was newly arrived from Benares, where he had made an important speech which had interested the Prince. 'I gather', said the Prince, 'that you think that the people of India would be happier if they were governed by Indians rather than by the British. I may be wrong, for I can only read by their eyes, but my impression is that the people I have seen are fairly happy. Are you sure that they would be happier if you changed the present system of Government?' 'I cannot say, Sir, that they would be happier, but at any rate they would feel a pride in thinking that they were managing their own affairs, and taking their place among the self-respecting nations of the world.' 'Ah,' said the Prince, 'I can quite understand that ambition, but how can you achieve this while the women of India remain as they are at present in the unenlightened dark background?' Mr. Gokhale admitted that this was the blot, the weak point in the Progressive Programme."

This Bill, Sir, is the first step towards removing that blot. The Prince of Wales is now our King-Emperor. In conclusion, I ask the Honourable Members to remember the times we are living in and act accordingly. When India was self-contained, when it was more or less isolated, when steamships, telegraphs, railways and airships had not conquered distances and broken the barriers, behind which India lived a sheltered and independent life, when these had not pulled her out of her isolation into the full blaze of publicity and exposed her to force emanating from all quarters of the world, much of what is evil passed without doing her serious material or moral injury. But things have changed now and the impact of foreign influences is not only disintegrating our life but, unless we fortify ourselves with all the strength that we can command and get rid of the evils which are eating into the vitals of our nation, they will shatter our society into pieces. It is absolutely necessary that every man, woman and child in this country should grow to his or her full growth and be able to work without shackles for the good of the country till we reach the goal which we have set before ourselves. I beg you gentlemen to brush aside all objections, sacerdotal or profane, ancient or modern, based on tradition or custom, which stint our growth, or stand in the way of our achieving our goal. Listen not, gentlemen, to antediluvian notions which have spent their force; stick not to the worn out dead ideas, but live in the present, the living present, and fix your eyes steadfastly on the future, the glorious future of our country which we must achieve if we are to prove ourselves true and worthy offspring of our worthy forefathers, whose bones lie mingled in the dust of our sacred land and call upon us to uplift our country from the slough of degradation, wretchedness and slavery into which our own deeds, our own sins of commission and omission have thrown her.

Sir, I move that this Bill be passed.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur (South Madras : Muhammadan) : Sir, seeing that a mighty drama has been enacted in this House in connection with this Bill, the Government being the chief actors thereof, I do not propose to inflict any speech on the House, but I want to make a statement on behalf of the elected Muslim Members who are dead against the Bill which undoubtedly tampers with our personal law. We are fully convinced that this measure, if passed by a non-Muslim majority, will be an infringement of our shariat (Islamic law) which we regard as more important than any legislation made by this House. In this connection, I cannot help expressing the view that we are being subjected to the tyranny of the majority in this House. Need I bring to your notice, Sir, that when I rose to meet the arguments put forward by my Honourable friend Mr. Shervani, and to explain to him and to the House the religious point of view, an additional dramatic turn was taken.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not entitled to reflect on the vote of this House, namely, the acceptance of closure by this House.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : There can be no Parliamentary objection, Sir.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Any Member of the House is entitled to express his opinion upon a decision of this House. I do not think it is wrong.

Mr. President : It is the rule of Parliamentary practice that no Member is entitled to reflect on the vote of the House.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I submit that that should not be the practice of this House.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : I wanted simply to refer to the fact that an additional dramatic turn was given by the part which the Government played in successfully making Mr. K. Ahmed a tool in their hands. (Laughter.) I do not criticise the decision of this House. I am only criticising the action taken by the Government. The Government have already treated our oral and written representations with contempt, and they have displayed a spirit of intolerance by carrying the motion for closure and thus depriving the Muslim Members of the right of expressing their opinion on such a momentous question, that too, knowing full well that an overwhelming majority of the Muslim public is opposed to the Bill. We have therefore decided that the only self-respecting course open to us is not to take any part in the further discussion either by speeches or by votes, but to allow the Government to carry the day with them in the teeth of Muslim public opposition. Before concluding my remarks, Sir, I will quote one couplet of that famous Persian Poet, Saadi, who says :

" Ai zabardast zairdast azar
Garm ta kai bimanad een bazaar." which, when translated, means :

" Oh ! tyrant, you take delight in oppressing the helpless who are now under you. You should realise that this kind of business, this state of affairs cannot be kept up long". (Hear, hear.)

With these remarks, Sir, I beg your permission to withdraw myself from the Chamber for the present.

(The Honourable Member then walked out of the Chamber.)

Mr. President (while the Honourable Member was in the process of walking out) : When will the Honourable Member come back ? After this Bill is finished ?

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Sahib Bahadur : I may come back then only.

Sardar Kartar Singh (East Punjab : Sikh) : Sir, I rise to support the motion that the Bill be passed. Before submitting my reasons, I may at once clear the ground by saying that my community will remain substantially unaffected by the Bill, for in my province, i.e., the Punjab, especially among the Sikh community to which I have the privilege to belong, post-puberty marriages are more common than child marriages, and my duty to my country in this connection is my only excuse for my participation in this debate. As a practical man concerned more with the hard facts of actual life than with an academic discussion of what our forefathers in the past considered to be right or proper according to the circumstances of the time in which they lived, I cannot but express my surprise that, in this House, gentlemen of erudition and learning who have always advocated the application of reason and rationalism to every measure that has come up here for discussion should have raised the cry of religion in danger against a measure which is intended to improve the race physically, morally and intellectually, and which is admitted on all hands to be necessary for this purpose on medical grounds. Sir, the world has had enough of the exploitation of the name of religion for maintaining the established order of things, and every rational society has come to one and the only proper conclusion that religion proper as distinguished from ceremonial and superstitions has really very little to do with matters of detail relating to secular life. I maintain, Sir, that in marriage matters, the only principle of religion involved is that sexual intercourse between persons not married to each other is a sin. It necessarily follows, therefore, that true religion prescribes restraint upon the gratification of sexual desire and it is, I humbly submit, nothing short of a perversion to exploit the name of religion for the purpose of enabling persons of undeveloped physique to indulge in this gratification, simply because the offsprings of child marriages attain precocious puberty. The question as to the age at which people should marry and other matters of detail such as prohibitive degrees and so on are mere matters of details which every community and society has to decide in the light of reason and medical science and with which religion as such has, in my humble opinion, no real connection. I, therefore, submit that the cry of religion in danger has no force. I feel fortified in this view by the fact that I have been told by my Hindu and Muhammadan friends that neither the Vedas nor the Holy Koran say anything against post-puberty marriages ; rather they favour such marriages.

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Is not the Honourable Member criticising the decision of the House ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Sardar Kartar Singh : As far as Smritis are concerned, they cannot be said to contain the commandments of God, and it is also doubtful whether they can be looked upon as books of law as distinguished from mere compilations of custom in vogue at the time of their preparation.

The point is however not of importance. The real point, as I have already submitted, is that, even if they are supposed to contain laws, these laws have in my opinion outlived their utility, and a change in them is long over due, and as a matter of fact laws contained in the Smritis have on many points, particularly in regard to the succession, been long superseded by custom. I take this opportunity of reminding the Honourable Members of this House, and I take particular pride in this fact, that no culture in the world has probably produced more free thinkers than Hindu culture. In the domain of spiritual philosophy itself it has produced six different schools of thought. It is really surprising that the descendants of such free thinkers and tolerant people, even in matters relating to strict religion, should raise the cry of religion in danger against this Bill simply because some of the Smrithikaras considered it proper to enjoin pre-puberty marriages on account of the circumstances of the time in which they lived. The Bill therefore should be judged on its merits and not in the light of what is contained in the Smritis. The present Indian nation is perfectly entitled to have a Smriti of its own according to modern conditions of the country.

As far as Islam is concerned, it is a clear principle of Muhammadan law that any pre-puberty marriage of a girl by a person other than her father or grandfather can be repudiated by her on attaining puberty unless she has already ratified it by consenting to consummation. I take it to mean that Islam is not in favour of pre-puberty marriages. It is true that father and grandfather have the power to give the girl in marriage before puberty, but this provision of Muhammadan Law is only an enabling one and does not enjoin the pre-puberty marriage of a girl on any father or grandfather. This power was moreover given to them because they were considered to be the best custodians of the interests of their minor daughter or granddaughter and was to be exercised in their interests. Experience has however shown that pre-puberty marriage is not in their interest and therefore any interdiction of them cannot be said to be opposed to true Islam.

Sir, I have so far made an attempt to show that this Bill, if passed into law, would not offend against any religion.

The next argument advanced is that the masses are not in favour of the Bill and that this House has no moral right to inflict it upon them and that its advocates are not their true representatives. My Honourable friend Mr. Belvi has even gone to the extent of indulging in a quotation from Burke and has compared them to half a dozen grasshoppers making a noise in the forest while the masses are compared to hundreds of big animals resting under the oak. Sir, we on this side of the House have been too long accustomed to hear an argument like this from the Treasury Benches in reply to our demand for political reforms to take it seriously. An argument like this is always advanced by the changers and should not deceive anybody as to its motive. Could slavery in England have been abolished if Parliament had decided to wait for a demand for its abolition from slave dealers before legislating on the point ? Did the masses ever demand the abolition of Sutte and female infanticide, and did they ask for the creation of this House ? Have they even now asked for further advance for the reforms ? Do they know what Dominion Status is, which is at present the most lively political issue in the country ? The answer must be an emphatic No.

[Sardar Kartar Singh.]

Merged in ignorance and superstition, they are not in a position to know what a baneful influence child marriage is exercising upon the development of the future generation, and they cannot therefore demand its abolition. It is for us and us alone to prevent them from doing what is baneful to themselves. It is not only in our power to do so but also our duty. In all climes and ages, reforms, whether social, political or economical, have always been demanded and introduced by men of light and learning, and it is idle to expect the contrary in the matter under discussion.

The Bill therefore should be considered, not from the point of view of the evil practice among the masses on the point at issue, but from the point of view of its utility to the people at large. And I have not yet heard a single word against its utility, except a hint from my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje that it might lead to an increase in abductions of minor girls. Even those gentlemen who have advocated the cause of child marriage are unanimously against pre-puberty consummation. I take it therefore to be the sense of the House that pre-puberty consummation should not be allowed. As a matter of fact the Indian Penal Code has raised the age of consent to 14 years and there does not seem to be any serious objection to its being further raised to 16. If that is so, I as a practical and commonsense Punjabee am unable to appreciate the insistence on pre-puberty marriage upon what appears to me to be merely sentimental grounds. This insistence ignores the fact that the performance of marriage before the age of consummation involves the risk of widowing the bride even before consummation in a society in which widow re-marriage is not popular and is therefore capable of doing a lot of harm to the country without any corresponding good. This point was certainly in favour of my friend Mr. Mukhtar Singh's amendment, but I have also to consider the fact that the presentday boys and girls are the offsprings of child unions, and as such peculiarly prone to precocious puberty. I am therefore of opinion that it would not be safe in the present state of society to raise the marriageable age to 16 at once, and we must proceed cautiously in the matter. I have therefore decided to vote for the age fixed in the Bill itself, not because I consider it to be the ideal minimum but because I want to be cautious.

I do not propose to discuss the question of economic waste caused by early marriage, but cannot help submitting that they unduly interfere with the education of both boys and girls, which interference means a national loss.

Now I come to the question of abductions raised by my Honourable friend Dr. Moonje. He has not, in his speech, stated who the abductors are and what the causes of abduction are, and my Honourable friend will correct me if I am wrong, but I take it that the abductors belong to communities who do not practise early marriage and are therefore sexually and physically stronger than the males of the communities to which the abducted girls belong and which probably practise child marriage resulting in precocious puberty in females and sexual weakness in males. The only way to meet the evil is to remove the root cause, viz., child marriage, and not to leave things as they are. Nor has my Honourable friend stated the percentage of child widows among the abducted girls, and I venture to think it must be fairly high. Prevent child widowhood and precocious puberty among females and make the race physically stronger by raising the marriageable age and the abductions will automatically cease. The abductions referred to by him therefore are in my opinion a further and stronger argument in favour of this Bill.

My friend Dr. Moonje wants Indians to be a self-reliant nation. He wants that Indians should be made fit for military service and that they should be given military training. He also wants that the military schools at Jhelum and Jullundur should be thrown open to all Indian boys, irrespective of the fact whether they be sons of Indian soldiers or not. May I ask him if he expects that the products of child marriages could ever be efficient officers in the Army? If he wants that Indians should become fit to defend their country and if he wants the future generations to be strong and healthy, he should support the age given in the Bill. As an experienced medical man, he has told us that girls should not become mothers before they are 16 years old. Then he should rise equal to the occasion and vote for 14 as the minimum marriageable age for the girls.

The only other point to which I should like to refer is that some Honourable Members have, in a bantering tone, asked the advocates of the Bill whether they want to follow Eastern or Western culture in its entirety. While doing so, they probably wanted to convey a warning against what they believe to be the craze for an apish imitation of Western life. My reply is that no society contains only angels and therefore none is free from defects. Abuse is no argument, and to adopt such a course serves no useful purpose. Instead of wasting time in such scurrilous attacks upon each other, retain what is best in Indian culture and supplement it by what is best in the other.

With these remarks I do whole-heartedly support the motion that the Bill be passed.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. B. P. Naidu (Guntur cum Nellore : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I feel not a little nervous to speak on this occasion, for mine is a cry in the wilderness. We are about to place on the Statute-book a piece of legislation which is acknowledged to be the first large step in social reform in this country. This legislation has had a chequered career. It began with eleven years as the age limit and it is about to end with fourteen years. It began as a civil law, but it is to end as a criminal law. So, whichever way you look at it, it is an extraordinary piece of legislation, which is going to affect the vast millions of India either for good or for evil. Sir, if we only think of the ruthlessness with which all the amendments that have been moved by various Members of the House have been thrown out one after another, with machine-like precision and regularity, we cannot but feel that, lo! here is really an extraordinary law, which was made untouchable by the zealous guardians of social reform. Like every other question which has provoked a large controversy, this question has many aspects to be considered. The penal provisions of the Act and the application of them are the most important. They have naturally evoked considerable opposition, and the best efforts of those that wanted to mitigate the severity of punishments by deletion of the clause relating to imprisonment and by reduction of fine in the several cases proved futile.

Sir, this House is now launching on this country a law which radically affects the sentiments and social customs of the land in a manner never heard of before. It is legislating for a people who are mostly illiterate and who do not know what Government is and what its functions are and who are solely guided by age-long custom, and whose respect for it cannot be got rid of except by means of education. The whole ground has been so ably and lucidly traversed by the Bhishma of the House, I mean the Honourable Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, the other day, that it is unnecessary for me to go in detail into the several reasons why it is inadvisable to have legislation of this radical character. The main reason, as I have already pointed out, is that the people of the country are mostly illiterate and it will take some time before they emerge out of the strong grip of custom; and when we are dealing with such people, we must move slowly and steadily but not hurl thunderbolts on them and force on them, all at once, a new state of things to which they have not been accustomed, and a sudden restriction of the liberties they have been enjoying for ages past. They have to be gradually put in the way and a reform aimed at, step by step, by means of a natural process has a better chance of being understood by the people and followed without much offence to their feelings and without much dissatisfaction. Sir, this view, I am sorry to note, has had a very cold reception at the hands of the Government and those over-enthusiastic reformers who would see the whole country rid of child marriages in one day. However much we, some of us here, may be in favour of stamping out the evil of child marriage in this country, the above attitude is one which we cannot understand. We think it rather tends to injure the cause which is so dear to our hearts. Let me refer to the experience of others in this matter. Mysore started with 8 and Baroda has 12. We, in British India, are not better situated than the people there; when those States have observed caution in the matter of this legislation, why should we here disregard it? To me, Sir, it is a most inexplicable position. If we look at Appendix XII of the Age of Consent Committee's Report, we note that Baroda is having, year after year, a steady course of prosecutions, even with 12 years as the age limit, and the offences have not in any way diminished till now. This one fact ought to counsel us to considerable caution, which, unfortunately, has not been the case with us now.

Sir, the Honourable Mr. Keane, while speaking the other day on this Bill, remarked that the Government knew how to administer the law when the Bill was passed. Whatever might be his meaning thereby, judging from our past experience of this Government, I cannot entertain any high hopes that this law will not be enforced rigorously but will be preserved, on the other hand, safely in the archives of the Government of India as a dead letter. Sir, if the latter be the idea, it would not have been pushed through this House with this energy, not giving any quarter even to the most reasonable exemption clause moved by my friend, Mr. Nilkantha Das, and approved by my Honourable Leader, Pandit Motilal Nehru. It took away our breath to hear Mr. Jayakar opposing that eminently reasonable amendment, which finds a place in every one of the statutes on this subject in the Indian States, and advancing the astounding argument that provision will be made later on as we gain experience, as if it is not the duty of a legislator to foresee things and legislate in advance. Sir, I expected very much that the Bill, when it came out of the hands of this House, would be shorn of many of its objectionable features and presented to the country at large as a most practical and acceptable instrument of reform. But I am grievously disappointed. The law, as it has been now shaped, has all the potentialities for developing into a huge instrument of tyranny and oppression and is liable to be abused in several ways. Much as I desire—and I yield to none in that regard—that this blot on our social life, the evil of child marriage, should be relentlessly effaced, I feel that it my painful duty not to support this Bill in its present form.

Lala Hans Raj (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to support this Bill. (Hear, hear.) I shall be as brief as possible as the time at our disposal is limited.....

Mr. President : Plenty of time.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : There is no time limit now.

Lala Hans Raj : The speeches I have heard in this House from the Honourable Members posing as Pandits and Maulvis of their respective religions have, I must say, shaken my faith in their religious books, for which I had great respect, on which they wish to take their stand. It would have been more instructive and helpful to the House, if these exponents of religious ideas had given reasons on which those quotations are based, instead of repeating the Ayats and Mantras from their holy books.

There cannot be any dispute that early marriage stands in the way of proper education, and I hope that both the Maulvis and Pandits will admit that we cannot rise as a nation as long as there is insufficiency of all-round education. I cannot imagine how, by some magic wand, these religious luminaries will finish the education of children before the age of ten or twelve years.....

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will they finish at fourteen?

Lala Hans Raj : Much better. The natural consequence of good sound education will be that our children will claim independence in the matter of marriage. I may mention that I honestly believe that intermarriages encourage unity, which is a great need of India, and intermarriages can only be possible when there is enough education among the coming generation. There is no need to give instances where intermarriages have brought about unity in two communities. There might be some friends in the gallery above who would bear me out on this point.

The other aspect of these intermarriages is economic. We have been hearing so much of the loathsome system of dowry in Bengal and other parts of the country, which in some cases have driven sensitive girls to end their lives, because their parents could not arrange for the dowry asked for by the would-be sons-in-law. When the boys and girls are asked for by the would-be sons-in-law and have a voice in selecting their educated and they use their discretion and have a voice in selecting their better halves, the question of dowry eliminates itself. I know of quite a number of intermarriages among the upper middle class people where no dowry was given. I may also mention that this will break the caste system too, which is admitted to be a great curse for India.

In my opinion, Sir, these intermarriages will help to wipe out the word 'abduction' from the Indian legal dictionary, which creates so much bad blood among the two major communities of India. I may touch here on the argument put forward by my friend Dr. Moonje against this Bill, that the Muhammadans abduct Hindu girls, and that this Bill, if passed, will encourage such abductions. My advice to him is that we should treat our girls better and give them greater freedom to select their partners. Naturally, this Bill will help in improving the lot of girls and consequently there will be no abductions and no trouble then. There is the adjoining independent territory of Afghanistan, which is more populated by Muhammadans, but rarely do we hear of cases of abduction of Hindu girls by Muhammadans there. Nor do we hear of such cases in the North West Frontier Province. If anybody doubts my statement, my Honourable friend the Nawab Sahib from the Frontier will bear me out.

My next point in favour of the Bill is that, by passing this legislation, we will have more unfettered patriots like the martyr Das and lions of the type of Bhagat Singh and Dutt, who are all unmarried.

Now, Sir, as to the working of the Bill, I fear no difficulty. I come from the Punjab and from a district adjoining to which there is the enlightened State of Kapurthala, which I understand has had a somewhat similar law for the last five years. Its broad-minded, educated and well-travelled ruler is a Sikh Prince, and the Prime Minister, who has to carry out the law, is a Muhammadan, and the population in the State is mostly Muhammadan. I had a talk with Diwan Abdul Hamid, the popular Prime Minister of the State, and he told me that no difficulty was experienced in its working, and the Muhammadans and Hindus have had no complaints against the working of the law.

Last of all, Sir, I see a change in the angle of vision among the Government Benches, and this fills me with the hope that the prophecy of our worthy Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, that India will get Swaraj in 1930, is going to be fulfilled. The help extended by Government to support this Bill and the acceptance of the amendment of Mr. Kelkar, to circulate the Hunger Strike Bill is a clear dawn of Swaraj. I hope the Government will continue this co-operation with us, which they have so recently begun.

With these remarks, I support this Bill as strongly as I can.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North West Frontier Province: Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I am glad to see that this measure of reform, like a frail barge, has crossed a very tempestuous and stormy sea of obstruction and criticism in this House and is nearing the shore. I hope that this measure will be passed into law before the House rises today. It shall have my humble support. (Applause.) But, Sir, I would not like to record a silent vote on this occasion. I also trust that the Bill will not meet the fate of a similar measure moved by Sir Hari Singh Gour, and that we shall really find it on the Statute-book before long.

3 P.M.
