202. *Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that the Kashmir Government have imposed a duty of Rs. 2 per maund on imports of Indian sugar into their territory?

(b) If the answer to part (a) above be in the affirmative, how is it that the Government of India allowed them to do so when they are not charging any duty on imports of fruits, food-stuffs, etc., from that territory into British India?

(c) Have the Government of India, in view of the above step of the Government of Kashmir, decided to charge duty on imports into British India of fruits, food-stuffs, etc., from Kashmir as in the case of foreign articles?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: (a) The duty levied by the Kashmir Government on Indian factory sugar imported into Kashmir is at the rate of Rs. 1-12-0 per maund.

(b) In accordance with the treaty concluded with Kashmir in 1870, the Kashmir Government are within their rights in levying this duty.

(c) The answer is in the negative.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ALTERATIONS IN THE TERMS OF THE INDO-JAPANESE AGREEMENT.

Mr. Bhuput Singh: (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there has been any alteration in the terms of the Indo-Japanese Agreement, recently signed in London, from those previously agreed upon in India between the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore and His Excellency Mr. Setsuzo Swada? If so, what are those alterations?

(b) Are Government prepared to issue a communiqué in the matter to allay public apprehension?

(c) When is the full text of the Agreement expected to be published?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore: (a) No alteration has been made in the terms of the Agreement and Protocol agreed upon in India though a few verbal and punctuative changes have been made at the instance of the Government of Japan and with the concurrence of the Government of India.

(b) In these circumstances Government do not consider it necessary to publish a Press Communiqué.

(c) A copy of the Convention with the Protocol will be laid upon the table today.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Are such agreements outside the purview of this Legislature?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore: I heard my Honourable friend, but I did not quite understand the meaning of his question.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali: Are such agreements outside the purview of this Legislature? Do they not require the sanction of this

FLOODS IN ASSAM.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury: (a) Will Government be pleased to make a statement with regard to the devastation caused in Assam by the recent floods?

(b) Are Government aware that the resources of the deficit Government of Assam are too meagre to cope with this unprecedented havoc, and do they propose to render any financial assistance to Assam and, if so, in what way and to what extent?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: (a) A statement giving such information as the Local Government have furnished is laid on the table.

(b) The Assam Government have asked for a grant of Rs. 1½ lakhs from the Indian People's Famine Trust. The Governor General in Council has notified to the Board of Management of the Trust the existence of general and severe privation over a considerable area in the Nowgong and Sylhet districts. The request of the Local Government will be considered by the Board. No application has been received for financial assistance by the Government of India.

Statement summarising the information on recent floods in Assam as furnished by the Local Government.

From the 13th to the 22nd June, there was almost incessant rainfall in these hills and the raingauge at Cherrapunji which overlooks the plains of Sylhet registered during the last three days of the deluge a rainfall of over 21, 25 and 36 inches, respectively.

Both in Nowgong and in the north of Sylhet, the floods attained an unprecedented level. The areas affected are poor in communications. With the havoc caused by the floods communication has become extremely difficult. District officers have inspected the areas which were accessible and responsible officers have been deputed to survey the less accessible areas. It will take some time before final reports are received from the latter. Meanwhile it is possible to imagine conditions in the interior from the reports relating to areas visited by local officers.

In Nowgong, the whole area between the hills and the Kopili was for the most part submerged and cut off from the rest of the district. The Assam-Bengal Railway line running through this portion is breached and through communication is not likely to be resumed for the next two months. There are breaches in the Chaparmukh-Silghat line and in the few public roads that served the affected area. The rise in the water was so rapid that the utmost that the people could do was to save their lives. Not many persons are reported to have been drowned, but the number of cattle carried away by the floods must be considerable. The total number of families who have nothing to live on is estimated to be about 12,000 to 15,000. Gratuitous relief will be needed in most of these cases for at least two months: it will be required longer in the case of those who live in parts which are very lowlying. In Sylhet the effects of the flood were serious though not so disastrous as in Nowgong.

The Government of Assam are meeting the situation as best as they can. Apart from placing the relief work on a satisfactory basis, the efforts of local officers are concentrated on procuring cattle and seed so that as soon as the water subsides the people may be enabled to resow as extensive an area as possible. The Deputy Commissioners have been authorised to incur such expenditure as may be necessary for the immediate relief of distress. They have also sanctioned a sum of one lakh of rupees for agricultural loans in Nowgong and are awaiting an estimate of the amount needed for this purpose in Sylhet. They will in due course consider proposals of suspension and remission of Government dues. Facilities are being afforded to the people to take timber free from Government forests for the reconstruction of houses. Relief Committees have been formed locally but in view of the financially depressed condition of the people it is feared that the response will be poor. His Excellency the Governor has placed at the disposal of each of the Deputy Commissioners concerned Rs. 10,000 out of the balance of the 1929 Cachar Flood Relief Fund.

The area affected is wide and the losses will run into lakhs. Without including the heavy expenditure which the Government must incur later in replacing cattle and seed grain, the minimum estimated requirements for gratuitous relief alone are a lakh and a half.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Will the Honourable Member give us any approximate date by which the meeting of the Board will be held ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Sir, the Board is really independent of the Government of India, but I have no doubt that as soon as the Secretary, who is away on tour, returns to headquarters, a meeting will be convened.

Mr. B. Das : Are Government prepared to consider any representation that will be made by the Government of Assam for any subsidy from the Government of India towards the floods ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That seems to be a hypothetical question, Sir.

Mr. B. Das : Did not the Honourable Member say that no representation had been received from the Government of Assam for a grant from the Government of India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That was a statement of fact.

Mr. B. Das : Are Government prepared to grant any subvention to Assam if an application for a subvention is made by that Government ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : That question is hypothetical.

Who, having communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows :—

ARTICLE 1.

The territories to which the present Convention applies are, on the part of His Majesty the King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, British India, together with States in India which, by treaty with His Majesty the King or otherwise, may be entitled to be placed with regard to the stipulations of the present Convention on the same footing as British India (such territories being hereinafter referred to as India) ; and on the part of His Majesty the Emperor of Japan, all the territories and possessions belonging to or administered by His Majesty the Emperor (such territories being hereinafter referred to as Japan).

ARTICLE 2.

Articles produced or manufactured in the territories of one of the High Contracting Parties, on importation into the territories of the other, from whatever place arriving, shall not be subjected to duties or charges other or higher than those imposed on like articles produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

ARTICLE 3.

Notwithstanding anything contained in the present Convention, the Government of India shall have the right of imposing or modifying from time to time special customs duties on the importation into India of articles produced or manufactured in Japan, other or higher than those imposed on like articles produced or manufactured in any other foreign country, at such rates as the Government of India may consider to be necessary to correct the effects of any variation of the exchange value of the yen relative to the rupee subsequent to the 31st day of December, 1933 ; provided that no modification in any such rate shall be made until it has been in force for at least five weeks.

In imposing or modifying or on being requested by the Government of Japan to modify such special customs duties, the Government of India shall give full consideration to all relevant factors which tend to raise the export prices of articles produced or manufactured in Japan, and shall limit the rates of such duties to what is necessary to correct the effects of any variation of the exchange value of the yen relative to the rupee on the duty-paid value of articles produced or manufactured in Japan and imported into India.

Reciprocally, the Government of Japan shall have the right of imposing or modifying from time to time special customs duties on the importation into Japan of articles produced or manufactured in India, other or higher than those imposed on like articles produced or manufactured in any other foreign country, at such rates as the Government of Japan may consider to be necessary to correct the effects of any variation of the exchange value of the rupee relative to the yen ; provided that such right shall not accrue to the Government of Japan so long as the exchange value of the rupee relative to the yen is not below the value of 0.732 yen, and that no modification of any such rate shall be made until it has been in force for at least five weeks.

In imposing or modifying or on being requested by the Government of India to modify such special customs duties, the Government of Japan shall give full consideration to all relevant factors which tend to raise the export prices of articles produced or manufactured in India, and shall limit the rates of such duties to what is necessary to correct the effects of any variation of the exchange value of the rupee below 0.732 yen on the duty-paid value of articles produced or manufactured in India and imported into Japan.

ARTICLE 4.

While reserving to the Government of India and to the Government of Japan the right to make such changes in their customs tariffs as may be necessary for the protection of their own interests, the High Contracting Parties agree that when any modification of its customs tariff by either country results in the trade interests of the other being adversely affected in any appreciable measure, the Governments of the two countries shall, upon the request of the Government of the country adversely affected, forthwith enter into negotiations with the object of reconciling as far as possible the interests of the two countries.

ARTICLE 5.

The present Convention shall be ratified. The instruments of ratification shall be exchanged in London as soon as possible. The date on which the instrument of ratification of each the High Contracting Parties has been completed will be communicated to the other through diplomatic channels, and the present Convention shall enter into force, in advance of the exchange of the instruments of ratification, as from the date on which the later of the two communications required under the present Article shall have been made.

ARTICLE 6.

The present Convention shall remain in force until the 31st day of March, 1937.

In case neither of the High Contracting Parties shall have given notice to the other six months before the said date of his intention to terminate the Convention, it shall continue operative until the expiration of six months from the date on which either of the High Contracting Parties shall have given notice of termination to the other.

In witness whereof the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present Convention and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done at London, in duplicate, this twelfth day of the seventh month of the 9th year of Showa, corresponding to the twelfth day of July, 1934.

For India :

L. S.

John Simon.

L. S.

Samuel Hoare.

For Japan :

L. S.

T. Matsudaira.

PROTOCOL.

At the moment of proceeding this day to the signature of the Convention regarding the Commercial Relations between India and Japan, the undersigned Plenipotentiaries, being duly authorized to that effect, have agreed as follows regarding the importation of Japanese cotton piece-goods into India :—

ARTICLE 1.

For the purposes of the present Protocol :—

the expression " cotton year " means a year beginning on the 1st day of January ;

the expression " cotton piece-goods year " means a year beginning on the 1st day of April ;

a cotton piece-goods year and the cotton year in which that cotton piece-goods year begins are referred to as " corresponding " ; and the expression " yard " means a linear yard.

ARTICLE 2.

The customs duties to be imposed on importation into India of cotton piece-goods manufactured in Japan shall not exceed the following rates :—

(a) plain greys—50 per centum ad valorem or 5½ annas per pound, whichever is higher ;

(b) others—50 per centum ad valorem ;

If hereafter the Government of India should decide to impose a specific duty on cotton piece-goods other than plain greys, it will not impose on such piece-goods being the manufacture of Japan, a specific duty exceeding 5½ annas per pound.

ARTICLE 3.

(1) If in any cotton year 1 million bales of raw cotton are exported from India to Japan, the quantity of cotton piece-goods which may be exported from Japan to India in the corresponding cotton piece-goods year shall be a basic allotment of 325 million yards.

(2) If the exports of raw cotton from India to Japan in any cotton year are less than 1 million bales, the allotment of cotton piece-goods for the corresponding cotton piece-goods year shall be the basic allotment diminished by 2 million yards for every 10,000 bales of the deficit or for any residual quantity thereof exceeding 5,000 bales.

(3) If the exports of raw cotton from India to Japan in any cotton year exceed 1 million bales, the allotment of cotton piece-goods for the corresponding cotton piece-goods year shall be the basic allotment increased by 1½ million yards for every 10,000 bales of the excess or for any residual quantity thereof exceeding 5,000 bales ;

Provided that the allotment of cotton piece-goods shall not in any case exceed 400 million yards for any cotton piece-goods year.

(4) If the exports of raw cotton from India to Japan in any cotton year exceed 1½ million bales, the excess shall be added to the quantity of raw cotton exported from India to Japan in the following cotton year for the purpose of determining the allotment of cotton piece-goods for the cotton piece-goods year corresponding to such following cotton year.

(5) For the purposes of the calculations under the present Article and under Articles 4, 5, 6 and 7, any raw cotton or cotton piece-goods which have been imported and then re-exported shall be excluded.

ARTICLE 4.

(1) The allotment of cotton piece-goods which may be exported from Japan to India during the first half of any cotton piece-goods year shall be 200 million yards ;

Provided that, if in the first half of any cotton piece-goods year the exports of cotton piece-goods from Japan to India exceed the allotment for the whole of that cotton piece-goods year, the allotment for the first half of the following cotton piece-goods year shall be 200 million yards less such excess.

(2) The allotment of cotton piece-goods which may be exported from Japan to India during the second half of any cotton piece-goods year shall be the annual allotment for that year less 200 million yards ;

Provided that, if the quantity exported from Japan to India in the first half of any cotton piece-goods year is less than 200 million yards, as increased or diminished under Article 5, the allotment for the second half of that cotton piece-goods year shall include the quantity of the deficit up to a quantity not exceeding 20 million yards.

ARTICLE 5.

Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained,

(a) If less than the allotment for any cotton piece-goods year is exported from Japan to India in that year, the quantity of the deficit up to a quantity not exceeding 20 million yards may be exported in the first half of the following cotton piece-goods year in addition to the allotment for that half-year ; and

(b) A quantity not exceeding 20 million yards of cotton piece-goods may be exported from Japan to India in any cotton piece-goods year, other than the cotton piece-goods year in which the present Protocol terminates, in addition to the allotment for that year ; but such excess shall be deducted from the allotment for the first half of the following cotton piece-goods year.

ARTICLE 6.

If the present Protocol should come into effect at any time other than the beginning of a cotton piece-goods year, the first cotton year shall for the purposes of the Protocol, be deemed to begin on the 1st day of January, 1934, and the first cotton piece-goods year on the 1st day of April, 1934.

THE MECHANICAL LIGHTERS (EXCISE DUTY) BILL. 213

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the imposition and collection of an excise duty on mechanical lighters.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig (Home Member) : Sir, I move (Applause) :

“ That the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, be taken into consideration.”

There have been alarming rumours of portentous speeches under preparation over the week-end. I trust, Sir, that those rumours are not, in fact, well-founded. I do not propose myself to occupy the time of the House very long, for I claim that the issues raised by this Bill are simple and, on the whole, are very familiar to the House. But I would make this preface. As I rise to initiate this debate, I am reminded of another debate in this Chamber two years ago. The occasion was a motion for the adjournment of the House arising out of the second murderous attack that had just been made on Sir Alfred Watson following very closely on an attempt at indiscriminate massacre of a harmless social gathering of Europeans and Anglo-Indians at the Railway Institute at Pahartali near Chittagong. The House, Sir, on that occasion was, I think I may say, deeply moved with feelings of horror and shame. I remember the then Leader of the House, Sir C. P. Ramaswami Aiyar, saying that he felt ashamed that an Indian should have done this and he urged everyone in the country to come together and get rid of this terror. That was the general feeling of the House. The question that everyone was asking was—how can we help? I would like to refer, if I may, to words spoken on that occasion by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, words with which I personally was in full agreement. He said :

“ If it were in the power of any one of us or any group of this House, whether on this side or on the other side, to suppress this movement, we would have done it. It is a subterranean movement; it is a secret conspiracy. We do not know how it works, and if it is the business of any one to find out, it is the business of those who have got power at their command, who have got the means and the resources of finding out what is wrong.”

And, a little later, he said :

“ No one has been able to suggest what men like ourselves can do to help the administration. It is primarily for them to find out the remedies.”

Well, Sir, I agree with those words. It is for the Government to devise the remedies, but I do urge that it is for this House to give us the powers. Here is an opportunity for the House to give the Government the help it needs. It is true that our feelings this morning are not so moved as they were during that debate two years ago. It is natural that people feel very deeply immediately after an outrage of that kind, but I would ask the House not to allow its feelings to cool too much and not to require any continuous stimulus of actual outrages in order to maintain their serious anxieties in this very acute problem.

(511)

[Sir Harry Haig.]

Now, Sir, with that preface, I come to the Bill. The nature of the Bill is very simple. In 1932, this House passed a Bill, known as Act No. VIII of 1932, to supplement the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930, and it provided that this Supplementary Act should remain in force for a period not exceeding three years. The proposal of our Bill is simply this, that that time-limit should be removed. The necessity for the Bill arises out of the action that has been taken in Bengal. The powers under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930, to which our Act was supplementary, have now, by a recent Act of the Bengal Legislative Council, been made permanent. At the time that this time-limit was inserted in our Act, the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act was due to expire in 1935, and, therefore, our Supplementary Act with its three-year time-limit more or less covered the period still remaining for the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act as it then stood. Now it does not, and that is the immediate occasion for our introducing this Bill. I understand that it has been made a matter of some comment that we have introduced the Bill in this Session and have not waited until the next Session of the Assembly. I think the answer to that is very simple. Our existing Act expires in April, 1935. If we did not dispose of this Bill in the present Session, we could not take it up till February or March, 1935.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Why not earlier than that ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : How much earlier would the Honourable Member suggest ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : In the January Session, for instance.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Will the Honourable Member undertake to dispose of the matter before the end of January ? I know very well that the Honourable Member can give no such undertaking. But even so, that would be a quite unsatisfactory solution. I would ask Honourable Members to remember that we have under detention at Deoli something like 500 persons. The accommodation for 500 persons is very extensive. The preparation of that accommodation takes a very considerable time as we ourselves experienced when we were preparing these buildings at Deoli. The Government of Bengal have no accommodation for 500 additional detenus. It would be quite impossible for us to leave the Government of Bengal in doubt and ourselves in doubt up to within a month or two of the expiry of these powers whether they are to be extended or not.

Now, Sir, I come to the provisions of the Bill which we desire to extend. The main provision is a power to detain detenus outside Bengal. I would remind the House that this Bill does not give a power of detention which does not already exist. The power to hold these people in detention is a power that has been given by the Bengal Act. It is not given by this Act. Our Act is merely concerned not with the fact of the detention, but with the place of detention. The principle that power should exist to detain detenus outside Bengal, was accepted by the House in 1932 at a time when I should say the implications and the menace of terrorism were hardly as fully appreciated in the country as they are now. The reason for detaining these men outside Bengal are briefly that the Bengal Government finds it a matter of the greatest difficulty at the same time to wage its campaign against terrorism and to keep in effective segregation such large numbers of dangerous men living in surroundings with which they are thoroughly familiar and among people with whom they have close relations. Experience showed that they used to communicate with friends outside and they actually were able to hatch conspiracies and the Bengal Government felt very strongly that they could not cope with the measures required for dealing with this menace unless they could be relieved to a certain extent of this obligation, and the worst or what they considered to be the most dangerous of these detenus were removed to an isolated locality where conditions, such as those prevailing in Bengal, would not exist. I would just remind the House of a few figures. The total number of detenus in jails and special camps is, I think, something between 1,500 and 1,600, and the number that we have at Deoli is approximately 500. The House will, therefore, recognise what a very large element in the problem this camp at Deoli is. When this matter was debated in 1932, some criticism was made of the Bengal Government that they ought to be able to make efficient arrangements to look after these men. I think those criticisms did not do full justice to the very grave difficulties that are inherent in the problem. But I would like to mention that even in the remote Province of Madras, which had, I think, eight of what we considered the most dangerous Bengali State Prisoners, it has been found as a result of a trial that it was not possible even in Madras to prevent these men associating with other revolutionaries and in fact hatching conspiracies. I have here a rider by the jury in a recent conspiracy case in Madras. They said :

"We believe the evidence before us in relation to the lack of discipline in Trichinopoly jail and wish to record our surprise that violent revolutionaries were allowed to influence certain of the accused to inaugurate this conspiracy."

I merely mention that point in order to illustrate the fact that it is very difficult under normal conditions to prevent these men from communicating with others outside or in the jails. Now, Sir, I think a further advantage that we have from this power to detain the detenus outside Bengal is that it is in accordance with the elastic system which is at the root of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. The Government of Bengal do not desire that every one, whose liberty they feel it necessary to restrict, should be treated in exactly the same way. They realise that there are degrees, that there are great differences between these young men, that some of them are only at the beginning and that others are very deeply involved in the conspiracy. They have a system of what is called home domicile for those who are the least dangerous. These young men are merely directed to live in their own homes. Then, there is the system of what they call village domicile in which they are directed to live in a village, not their own, but otherwise their liberty is not restrained. Then the next grade are those who are in special camps or in jails in Bengal. Those who are regarded as the most dangerous are sent outside Bengal to Deoli. So much for the power of detention outside the province.

Now, the second power given by the Act, which we propose to continue, is the barring of the Habeas Corpus powers of the High Court. That has always been considered an essential complement of legislation of the type contained in the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. It is a matter which has been discussed, I will not say threadbare, for I think it is one [Sir Harry Haig.] of those subjects in which lawyers find always something fresh to say, but at any rate it has been discussed repeatedly. With regard to the technical points, I hope that if Honourable Members opposite raise any question, my Honourable friend, the Law Member, will be able to answer them; but, put in untechnical language, the justification is simply this. The Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act says in effect that, owing to the nature of this secret conspiracy, we are not in a position to put into Court the evidence we have against these men. We must have the power to detain them without putting the matter before a Court. Well, if that is once accepted, it is obvious that we cannot allow the High Court to question the action taken, because the High Court can only question it by asking the executive, what is the evidence on which you have put these men under detention and that ex hypothesi is exactly what cannot be produced. That briefly is the case for barring the Habeas Corpus provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Now, Sir, I may reasonably be asked what are the general conditions that have necessitated the removal of the time-limit from the Bengal Act. That is really the justification for the measure I am inviting the House to pass. This involves some review of the situation. I think it is fair to say that we have, during the last 18 months, by unremitting pressure, been gradually getting control over the movement. First of all, it could hardly be said that we were doing more than holding it. Latterly it would seem that we have been making some impression on it. But with much that was encouraging, the Government of Bengal, at the beginning of this year, felt that there was still much to be done. Recruitment was still going on. The spirit of the conspiracy was still alive and active. Moreover, in spite of a definite improvement, it is clear to every one that we still have a long way to go. I need hardly remind the House that only this year we have had two attempted outrages for which we have to thank Providence that there was no actual loss of life, but the escapes in both cases were very providential. The first was at Chittagong when a party of four young men attacked a gathering of Europeans,—men, women and children, who had been looking on at a cricket match. They attacked them with bombs with the intention of massacring them indiscriminately. Fortunately, none of the intended victims were killed. And then it is only within the last few months that there was that deplorable attack on the life of the Governor of Bengal. When the Government of Bengal earlier in this year introduced their new Bill, one of the most important points in that Bill was the making of their existing powers permanent. Time after time the temporary nature of the provisions has encouraged the terrorists to hope that they only had to hold out for a limited time and they would again get their chance. I wonder if we remember that this conspiracy has been going on for nearly 30 years. Each time, when the conspiracy has been brought under control, the powers have been surrendered and the organisation has started working again. It is easy to be wise after the event, but looking back it may seem that this has been a fundamental mistake in the policy of Government in the past, a mistake into which they have been led by precisely those arguments of optimism and confining our action to the very minimum required, which we shall no doubt hear in this debate. I have said it is easy to be wise after the event, and, therefore, a heavy responsibility rests on those who, even after the event, refuse to be wise who misunderstand and reject the teachings of experience. The Bengal Legislative Council accepted the arguments which the Government of Bengal put before them on this issue. The motion for rejecting the proposal to make the powers permanent was thrown out in the Bengal Legislative Council by 63 votes to 12; and amendments for a merely temporary extension were lost without a division.

We have never held, Sir, that these measures, which are often described as repressive measures, would alone bring the movement to an end, though we have held and still hold that they are the essential foundation in the fight against terrorism. Something more is needed, and I am glad to say that, within the last few months, there seem to be definite indications that that is beginning to materialise. It is not the first time I have said in this House that what is wanted is the development of an active and vigorous public opinion in Bengal which will destroy any deliberate or merely sentimental sympathy with those who are not only criminals, but I would hold, are evidently enemies to their own country and indeed to their own families on whom they bring sorrow and disgrace. The Government of Bengal are very fully alive to these considerations. They are working actively to encourage that public opinion which perhaps was called forth first unmistakably by the senseless outrage on His Excellency the Governor, Sir John Anderson, a man who it was felt had worked ceaselessly and whole-heartedly for the good of the people of the Province, who had analysed and understood the root causes of their discontent and was devoting his remarkable energies to devising a remedy. But while the House may rest assured that the Government of Bengal are fully alive to all the advantages that can be derived from the awakening of public opinion, I would ask them to remember that the Government of Bengal also regard it as essential to continue, without a time-limit, the powers they possess for dealing with this movement, and, in pursuit of that policy, they require and ask for our assistance. I feel convinced that this House will not deny them the help they need.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, be taken into consideration."

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I want to ask a question of the Honourable the Home Member. The Honourable Member has made no reference in his speech to the conditions of detention at Deoli. He realises there have been innumerable questions on the floor of this House with regard to these conditions. Will the Honourable Member make a statement as to the steps Government have taken to remove all reasonable complaints with regard to the mode of treatment of the detenus?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I thought, Sir, that the answers that I have given to the very numerous questions had proved satisfactory to the House. They certainly appeared to be satisfactory to Government. But, if, in the course of the debate, these allegations and complaints are revived, I shall, of course, deal with them when closing the debate.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : Sir, I move :

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

Sir, in making this motion, I stand on the constitutional right of trying to obstruct the passing of any obnoxious and repressive measure which, I consider, is detrimental to the best interests of the country, both for the Government and the governed. I shall presently show that there are reasons why I move that even by circulation for a short period Government may be better advised not to proceed with such a measure. Before I go into the merits of this motion, I would like to draw your special attention to the fact that when this kind of Bill is brought before this House, we on this side are supplied with a mere sheet of paper like this—it may be called a one clause Bill—actually there are only two clauses, one is the short title and the other merely says that a certain sub-section in the original Act shall be omitted. The Members are not supplied with a copy of the Act to which this is a mere amendment. In some cases, particularly in connection with this Bill, I can maintain that the mere supply of the Bill is not sufficient, because the Act also, on which this is based, was a substantive Act covering 15 sections and two Schedules, and, therefore, the Members of the House are not in a position to deal satisfactorily with the Bill which is now presented, unless they are supplied with copies of these two Acts also. I remember, on one occasion, the attention of the Honourable the President was drawn, and the Legislative Department agreed that on such occasions Members would be supplied with the necessary copies of the original Act also and of the Act to which this is supplementary. I make a special grievance—it is not a mere formal grievance—I have heard from Members that they tried to get copies from the Library of the House—I myself could not come earlier, because I was ill and even today I am ill—but when I came and asked on Saturday for a copy, I was told by the Librarian that the two or three copies that were available had been sent out. It is impossible, therefore, to do justice to such an important measure if the House is treated in this way, by whom I do not know or whose responsibility it is,—the Legislative Department or the Home Department—but I appeal to you, Sir, that this House is not in a position to deal with this Bill if they are to be treated with this scant respect. I challenge most Members in the Opposition here to tell me what are the provisions in this Bill or of the Act of 1932.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : We have only our recollection to fall back upon.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : That may be enough for Mr. Neogy who knows something about these matters, but I challenge many others who do not understand even the A. B. C. of what is now going to be discussed.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why do you challenge us ? We are with you.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : It is not your fault as I say ; and I appeal to the Honourable the President, as the custodian of the rights and privileges of the House, that the House should not be deprived of doing justice to a Bill like this if they are not provided with copies of the Original Acts or Bills.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Of course the Chair understands the purport of the complaint of the Honourable Member ; but does he mean to suggest that whenever an amending Bill, is introduced, then copies of the original Bill, of which this is an amendment, should be supplied to all Honourable Members ? If that is what he means, that has never been the practice of the House, at least during the last eleven years that I have been here.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : If sufficient copies are available in the Library, I shall be the last man to complain ; but I say this is something special. Several of my friends, I am certain, do not know what are the provisions of the Acts—only this morning through the kindness of my friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, I could get a copy—I myself did not know what are the provisions which I should have to deal with ; in the Assembly Library itself copies of the Acts are not available.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : That is quite a legitimate point, and if that is the complaint that sufficient number of copies of these original Acts are not available in the Library, then the Chair will see that sufficient number of copies are made available in the Library.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : I made a similar request last time in connection with some other Bill, that copies of the original Acts are not available and there is a race for books from the Library, because there are only two or three copies ; and it is an injustice to us, and it is not correct that we should be asked to give our opinions when the original Acts, of which the amendments are before us, are not available.

Mr. S. C. Sen (Bengal National Chamber of Commerce : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I remember, on at least two previous occasions, when Supplementary Bills were introduced to supplement Acts passed by the Bengal Council, that the original Acts of the Bengal Council were supplied to us. For instance, at the time when the Supplementary Bill regarding the Bengal (Suppression of Terrorist Outrages) Act was introduced in this House, at my request Sir Lancelot Graham supplied a copy each to all the Members, and, subsequently, on another occasion also, a similar provision was made.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Now, proceeding to the merits of this Bill, I shall read for those who care to understand this Bill the provisions therein : They run thus :

“The second paragraph of section 1 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, shall be omitted.”

If anybody has not been enlightened, it is not my fault. That is the whole clause. I shall now read section 1 of the Act of 1932. That Act says :

“This Act may be called the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1932 : it shall remain in force for a period not exceeding three years.”

That is all. Does it enlighten any Member about the scope and functions of the Bill under contemplation ? The second clause says that power is given to order custody in jail outside Bengal. Another section, as the Honourable the Home Member said, deals with the Habeas Corpus provisions allied to section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code. This Act VIII of 1932 in its Preamble says :

“Whereas it is expedient to supplement the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1930 ; it is hereby enacted as follows :”

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

So, to do justice to this Bill, one must understand the provisions of the Bengal Act, VI of 1930, which primarily deals with the question of political suspects connected with terrorism. At the very beginning, I must disabuse the minds of the Honourable Members, at least on this side of the House, that the whole series of Acts deal not with any person who is convicted for any offence, not even by a special tribunal, but for mere suspects. Government admitted, times without number, that they are not in a position to say that 100 per cent. of these suspects are really guilty or that a conviction could be had in a Court of law if proper evidence could be given against them. The highest that the Government can put their case at, is that they are suspects only. That is one point which, at the very outset, I would like to make clear to the House.

Then, I would like to make my own position clear. The Honourable the Home Member, at the very beginning wanted to prejudice this House by telling a series of murders by terrorists and anarchists in the Province of Bengal. I admit, and I have asserted more than once, and it is for the Government to believe or not, that there is no difference between the Government Benches and the Opposition on this fundamental point, that if there is abnormal crime, crimes of anarchism or revolutionary crime, certainly any Government, civilised or uncivilised, should have power to deal with it. There is no question on that point. Why is this question raised every time, with a view to prejudicing the House? We have no sympathy with terrorists. I have said on the floor of this House,—have any enactment passed, get any law you like passed and try to eradicate this evil. My fundamental difference with my friend, Sir Harry Haig, was that this would not really tackle the main question. I appealed to him, times without number, that you might exhaust your means, you are now intoxicated with power; you can do anything you like; you have a free hand. Neither the Bengal Government, nor the non-officials in Bengal, nor the non-officials in this House ever stood in your way. You had, to your satisfaction, all laws passed, repressive or oppressive, that you thought proper. We agree with you that if by any means by passing this sort of legislation you can successfully tackle this evil, then get this measure passed. But I appeal to my Honourable friend, on the eve of his retirement as Home Member, and taking up a higher place, to consider if, by passing such measures, he will be able to put an end to this evil. Even after the drastic Act of 1934 was passed, he told the House that there were two more outrages. Sir, we condemn these outrages as much as he does. As a matter of fact, we feel, more than the Honourable the Home Member does, for our country, because it is we who will have to deal with our people in future. We do want constitutional Government, and, as I said before, he will be inimical to the best interests of India if he persists only in passing these legislations instead of dealing with the real causes that give rise to these evils. Sir, who does not agree that when there are symptoms, these unhealthy exhibitions in the body-politic, drastic measures must be taken recourse to? Who is the man with any responsibility who will say that drastic measures should not be adopted? We say, do adopt all possible measures to check this evil; but, at the same time, we do ask you to go into the real causes of these anarchical crimes. Where are the laws or legislations which can keep a man away from committing a murder?

Where are the laws that can keep a man away from committing even the most brutal crime? Where is the law which can stop a man who is determined to kill or take away even the most precious life, like that of our Governor, who is loved by every man in Bengal,—where is the law which can stop a man who is determined to take away another human life with a pistol in one hand to shoot his enemy and with poison in another hand to kill himself? Are you honest in saying that by all your repressive measures you have succeeded in stopping the spread of this evil in the country? Do you think that by passing all these oppressive and repressive measures you show greater sincerity for the good government and peace of the country, that you are more concerned with the country's interests? I know it was said that when the last attempt was made on the Governor's life at Darjeeling, the police was not efficient. It may be argued that there should be collective fines imposed on the police just as they are imposed on the people of Chittagong, because, with all these wide powers, they could not check this attempt. That is a reasonable attitude, but I do not agree with it. With all the efficiency of the police, with all their determination to stop such crimes, the police could not stop the attempts of the mad man who was determined to murder his opponent with a pistol in one hand and not to spare himself by taking poison in another hand. It is not a question for a day-to-day statesman to deal with; it is a psychological question and it is also an economic question. You pass some laws and you put some people in jail, and you think by that means you will be able to solve the whole problem. Now, there are people in jail numbering in all about 2,000 or so for the last two or three years. You had no evidence whatever against any one of them; there was only some whisper of suspicion from some police spy, and so you have kept them in prison. Is it not time,—I appeal to you, Sir Harry Haig, before you leave your office that you should now try different methods? I have appealed to you several times before and said that anarchism in Bengal can be stopped, but who will care to hear me? I know that when you exhaust all your measures, the time will come when you will change your methods. I have approached you in private,—I put it before the House now,—there are ways by which this anarchism can be stopped in Bengal.....

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : The Honourable Member seems to be entirely ignoring one important part of my speech in which I made it clear that it was not the whole policy of the Government to carry out these measures; that this was the essential foundation, but that other measures were required and that the Government of Bengal were actively interesting themselves in the matter.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I wanted to hear all these details, but for an emergency you are now proposing permanent measures which will insult the Statute law of India for all time. You have put before the House that capital punishment.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order. The Honourable Member should address the Chair.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I beg your pardon, Sir. In 1934, an Act has been passed providing for capital punishment for possession of fire arms, for putting heavy fines on guardians and parents, whether they are responsible or conscious of the acts of their wards or children or not. There are also provisions in this Act to arrest a person without warrant, to search a house, and there is a provision in it which says that no suit, civil or criminal, can be instituted against any officials for any of the actions that they may take. Sir, very extensive powers have been given to District Magistrates to occupy any place, and penalty has been provided for possession of what is considered by Government as undesirable literature. Now, all these provisions have been made, but what I maintain is that these measures can only be supported as temporary measures. They can never be tolerated as permanent measures, because they will be an insult to the whole nation. When all these measures have proved futile in the past, is it not time for the Government to take the people into their confidence and see how this evil can be eradicated, which is a point on which there can be no two opinions either in Bengal or anywhere else in India? Sir, we in this House today are asked particularly to deal with those prisoners who are sent out of Bengal to other Provinces. The Honourable the Home Member has referred in this connection to my past criticism. If it is a reflection on anybody, it is a reflection on the inefficiency of the jail authorities and the police of Bengal. How is it that when a civilized Government like ours has taken all powers that one can contemplate, they cannot put a stop to having communication by these few suspects with outsiders? Is it not a ludicrous thing to contemplate that when this Government have absolute powers like the powers of the Czars of Russia, they feel helpless to make adequate provision even in their jails, to prevent the few suspects in the jails from communicating with other people either inside or outside the jails? That is the burden of the argument of the Honourable the Home Member for externing these political suspects from Bengal. What is Bengal after all? Is Bengal a little town like the city of Simla? Is it not a big Province, bigger than many of the continental countries in Europe who are original members of the League of Nations? Is not Bengal such a country that contains many hills and detached places near about, where you could certainly provide detention camps, as you have at Deoli? Why don't you have detention camps for these people in Bengal itself? Why do you use these merely flippant and unreasonable arguments to support your case and say that the Bengal Government has failed to make provisions to prevent these few suspects from having communication with others, either inside or outside the jails? When the Government have spent lakhs of rupees in erecting jails at Deoli and Hijli, when they have spent thousands of rupees for the travelling expenses of these suspects, why can't they spend some amount for building jails in Bengal itself like those at Hijli and Deoli? Is it the argument that in a vast Province like Bengal there is not a locality round which for 10 or 15 miles there is no habitation? Why is it necessary that the boys must be transferred to an uncongenial climate in Rajputana, in Ajmer or in the Punjab and Central Provinces? I shall later on give details of some of these cases, but, as regards the fundamental point, I hope the House will try to get from the Honourable the Home Member more conclusive arguments to convince them to vote for such a foolish measure when the Bengal Government is now invested with very large and absolute powers. Whatever the law they wanted, they got it passed by the Local Legislature and the Central Legislature, and why could they not control these few people communicating with people inside and outside the jail? Then the Government had to admit that the detenus were doing the same thing in Madras and other Provinces. They do it in Bengal, and if, as the Home Member says, the detenus do the same mischief in Madras, I do not find why they are transferred at all.....

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : It is a question of fact. We have, in fact, found that these communications are not made in Deoli.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : The only safe place in the whole of India is Deoli where no communication is possible, and in other places it is not safe! My Honourable friend says that he had no information about any communication with outside people from Deoli, but I shall be divulging no secret when I say that a very high official of Bengal, who is likely to know as much as the Honourable the Home Member, has said that he has heard of communications with outside people from Deoli, from these detenus as well, and, therefore, they must be kept permanently under detention. This information I derived from a personal talk I had with some big officials who are interested in these matters. They are complaining that they must continue to keep these boys for 20 years and more and crush their spirit, and that there is no other way out of it.

An Honourable Member : Is it an official?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : A high Government official who is likely to know as much as or even more than Sir Harry Haig. So, the main argument about transferring the detenus outside their Province, as I have said on the last occasion, is not convincing. The present condition is entirely ruining the health and the future prospects of these suspects. The Home Member knows full well that they are now in Deoli jail for more than three or four years. What are the prospects, what is the future career, what will be the condition of their health when they will be released—these are serious considerations to which times without number I have tried to draw the attention of the Home Member. I repeat those prayers and supplications again. Don't keep a class of men, very brilliant,—they are self-sacrificing, they are misguided if the allegations of Government are correct, but they are mere suspects. I hold that many of them are certainly innocent and some may be guilty, but Sir Harry Haig thinks that most of them are guilty and very few are innocent. Till they are judged by a competent Court of law as guilty, I as an honourable man should be the last person to consider even a single one of them as guilty.

What are the real remedies by which Government intend to combat this malady, this disease in the body-politic in this country? As an emergency measure, we are for the passing of such legislation. But has it not failed after the detention for years together of every suspect, and should it not convince the Home Member and his Government that unless the disease is rooted out and a true diagnosis is made—we have always offered our co-operation, we are always willing to help Government, because it is more to our interest or as much to our interest as of the Government to get rid of this evil? I will give a few cases to this House in order to enable it to understand what happens to these poor fellows. Only the other day, I got news of a lady who was being treated for cancer by Dr. Bidhan Chandra Roy, one of our eminent physicians. Her only son is a detenu at Deoli; I think his is the only case of a detenu who has been allowed to go out for a fortnight or a week

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.] He is the only son of his mother and has got no brothers or sisters or uncles, or any other relation in life, except his poor mother. She is suffering from cancer and the doctors declared that death was sure, it was only a question of days. Government were kind enough in that one peculiar case to grant permission to see the mother. The poor boy went to see his mother; he saw that she was approaching her end, but fortunately or unfortunately the mother could not reach her end within the date of leave the benign Government was pleased to extend to the boy. The poor boy implored, appealed to the Government, and said that with or without restrictions as they pleased they might keep him in Bengal so that he could see his dying mother breathing her last. But that prayer has not been heeded to. (An Honourable Member : "Shame!") His name is Ashutosh Das-Gupta. I can give many other cases. I remember I once told Sir Harry Haig, when he was Joint Secretary or Secretary in the Home Department,—he must have forgotten—I know from my experience that long detention in jail for years together in the same environment, in the same cell, makes even a normal, sound man, abnormal to some extent. The detenu becomes unreasonable. It is only sympathetic Jail Superintendents who are also medical men—unfortunately they are not all medical men in Bengal—who can appreciate this fact. I may cite a case from Hijli. One young man—I shall quote my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, as my witness, because it was through his "kind and sympathetic intercession that he got some privilege—I am speaking of detenu Debendra Nath Bose, he is a relation of mine. It is a typical case, and from that the Honourable Sir Harry Haig can realise the condition of these detenues. This young man was convicted in the civil disobedience days in April, 1930, when Mr. Subhash Chandra Bose was carrying on a procession. He was convicted for nine months. At the expiry of this period, when he was about to come back to his House, he was served with a notice under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act for detention. Here is the section :

"Where, in the opinion of the Local Government, there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person—

- (i) has acted, is acting or is about to act in contravention of the provisions of the Indian Arms Act, 1878, or of the Explosive Substances Act, 1908 ; or
- (ii) has committed, is committing or is about to commit any offence specified in the First Schedule (a number of sections are given) ; or
- (iii) has acted, is acting or is about to act with a view to interfere by violence or by threat of violence with the administration of justice ;

the Local Government, if it is satisfied that such person is a member, or is being controlled or instigated by a member, of any association of which the objects or methods include the doing of any of such acts or the commission of any of such offences, may, by order in writing, give all or any of the following directions, namely, that:

The direction is that he shall be committed to custody in jail. No period is given and nobody knows when he will be released. There is my friend, Mr. Sen, who says that period is given. The period is given as one year in the first instance, and then the Government of Bengal can continue it for any number of years. It may be 20 years as one responsible officer of the Government said. Now, Mr. President, you will easily realise the plight of these men who are put for years in jail. What happens is this. In this case I am telling you about, Debendra Nath Bose has been in jail from April, 1930, up to this time, which is more than four years. I appeal to you, Mr. President, to hear the details of this case. It is typical case. I want to tell you what happens when the same prisoner is put in the same jail for weeks, months and years without any change of environment. Even an ordinary prisoner is sometimes transferred from one jail to another, but these prisoners are confined mostly in one place. This thing works on their nerves and they generally get out of reason. What happened in this particular case was that this boy was losing his power of reasoning. He became very irritable. The jail authorities at once punished him and this made him more provocative in jail.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca cum Mymensingh : Muhammadan Rural) : No jail punishment was given.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : You don't know. He was in Hijli. Anyhow, let me put my case. He was failing in sanity. They instituted a case against him and he was put as an under-trial prisoner and sent to Midnapore jail. He was put in a cell there and the Magistrate put him under observation. For the last six months, his relations, in spite of repeated petitions, were being denied facilities to interview him. They became suspicious. There is no help or any remedy for these things. I have repeated similar instances in this House times without number. I myself could not secure an interview with my nephew at Deoli in spite of repeated applications for the last three years. You know at Deoli there are police officers in whose presence alone you are to communicate with your detenu relatives. The police are present there and they can stop any talk and still they do not permit these interviews. There are barriers between the detenu and his interviewer and yet interviews are often refused. So reasonable this Government are !

They may make their laws permanent, but nothing is permanent in this world. To resume the story about Debendra Nath Bose, I understand the police officers came and informed the relations of this boy that he had become insane. His younger brother and sister are students and are wholly dependent on him, and they are absolutely helpless. They were simply stunned to hear this. They informed me, and I rang up my good friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, of whose liberal heart and generous sentiments I wish to make a public acknowledgment. He really helped these poor fellows to have an interview with this boy. The relations went there. The boy was confined in a small room. There was water scattered all over the floor. His feet were swollen. There was no furniture in the room. He had to stay day and night in that small place. He has to pass his urine there and also answer the calls of nature. Things were in a terrible condition when his relatives saw him there. This is a typical case. We prayed that he might be given a chance to live with his relations for a day so that the change of environment might help in the restoration of his reasoning. The first reply was that it was impossible, because he was an under-trial prisoner and it was only the Magistrate who could release him. But, subsequently, the Political Department was pleased to grant the prayer and the order of his detention was temporarily suspended, and he was set at liberty, I again repeat, through the kindness of Mr. Ghuznavi. Bose was violent and was absolutely mad. I am mentioning these facts in order to impress on you and the House, and, if possible, the Honourable the Home Member whom God has blessed with power. Let him not forget others in distress. In jail, even the most ordinary convict can claim some change of environment and transfer from one place to another. All these are denied to these poor suspects who have not been convicted by any Court of law. If they are convicted, there is a fixed period for which they have to serve after which they can hope to get their release. Some of these people have continued to stay in jail for five and more years and Government say they should remain in confinement for even 20 years. Is that the spirit of a civilised Government? By all means eradicate this evil, but according to your present method you are only embittering feelings and doing injustice to yourselves being members of a race, which has a great reputation for fighting for liberty and freedom. Even in these days the British people do not follow other countries, and we are proud to have the British connection.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

Do not try to prejudice the issues by raising all false questions. Who tells you not to pass legislation to put a stop to terrorism? But do it decently. Give the suspects a chance to clear the charges against them. The High Court in Calcutta refused to go through these records when they were sent to them. That is the provision under the old Regulation III, that the records should be sent to two Judges of the status of the High Court Judges. I know one Chief Justice, who adorned the Calcutta High Court in those days, refused to go through these records unless they were also given the power to sift evidence and call witnesses and test them by cross-examination. Here you are going to take powers to detain these men for an indefinite period. It means an externment from their own Province out of their environment, and just now I have received a telegram saying that there is a hunger-strike in the Andamans for the last fifteen days. Nobody knows what has occurred. The telegram says:

"Andamans prisoners hunger-strike about fortnight, short notice question solicited."

Sir, while I was on my sick-bed recently, several relations of detenus at Deoli approached me and said that for the last one and a half months they were not getting any communications from any of their relations. It is most likely that there is another hunger-strike at Deoli also. Now, Government seem to take pride in that. Sir, what they will gain by this God alone knows, but what the country and the people have found out is that, in spite of these measures, the Government have not succeeded in the object they are aiming at. I think I can make bold to assert again that, if only the Government will enlist our co-operation, there will be no anarchism in Bengal. I am in a position to say, you can thus do away with it, but, alas, I know that, as long as the Government are intoxicated with power, they will only try in their own way to eradicate this evil, but if they do not succeed by themselves, I pray, Sir, even at the last moment that we may be asked to be of any service to them. Sir, I say this in no spirit of boast, but most humbly we say that this is in our own interest and that it is quite possible to achieve it. We have only to see and appreciate the root causes of this anarchism. Sir, why are these boys going to lay down their lives? My Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, once remarked that he was very angry at some of these dastardly outrages. Sir, I am more aggrieved than angry. Get any Act passed, but the difficulty will remain the same. Sir, when the circumstances are such that the young people go out with potassium cyanide in their pockets to put an end to their lives, how will you put a stop to their activities by simply passing repressive measures without caring to find out and remedying the root causes? Sir, I can say that I have come in close connection with young men in Bengal, and I can say with confidence that they are not as bad as the Government of India make them out to be. Sir, fortunately for ourselves, our present Governor does not think in that manner. He is a really practical man in whom we have great confidence. Unfortunately, these anarchists attempted the life of the very man whose life was most precious, particularly for the Hindus of Bengal, as I can say with confidence. How can you stop it in this way? These boys are inspired with a high ideal, they are reasonable people, it is not for some personal gain or comfort, in order to get some more emoluments and some titles and other advantages, that these boys go about to commit these outrages. They will not be deterred by the mere fear of deterrent punishment, but certainly a civilized Government like the British Government can appeal to the better sense of these young people and there are ways of bringing them round and there is a proper method of proceeding with the business. I have always done my best to suggest what I have thought to be the best course, and I believe and I sincerely believe that it is possible to put a stop to terrorism. As I have said, the time will come when the Government, of their own accord, will see the futility of all these repressive legislations. In the meantime, I say, Sir, that the present Bill is of such a nature that it will frustrate the purpose for which the Government are going to enact this Bill. (Applause.)

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

This Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Mr. President, I now propose to deal with some of the specific grievances of these externees and also with some of the individual cases. But, before I deal with that point, I would like to appeal to the Honourable the Home Member to try to be once with us. Sir, in a very feeling language he referred to the events when some murderous attempts were made or even murders were committed on Europeans and officials. I know that the feeling is very sincere and also strong, not only amongst the Europeans, but on this side also. But I appeal to him also to think of the other side. I mean the hundreds of cases of Indians who are being confined to the jail for years together, which is sometimes even worse than death. Then, there are deaths also in these prisons. Inhuman and brutal torture is inflicted on these suspects. I appeal to him to consider that if one case so much appeals to hundreds of Europeans, there is no wonder that the cases of hundreds of Indians' death and torture alienate the sympathies of thousands of families from the Government. They may be helpless; they may not be in a position to express their strong feelings, but it is for the Government to see and try to feel with the Indians as well. We always try to look to both sides, the official and the Indian side. I appeal to Government not to be dictated only from their sense of feeling for the official victims alone, but also feel for the inevitable victims of such harsh laws that are being enforced from day to day in this poor and unfortunate country. Sir, it may be perfectly true that all the methods of oppressions and tortures that are employed by the underlings may not be known to the highest officials. But it is a fact that the tortures are going on. These tortures are not only confined to individual cases, but I have systematically inquired from the political sufferers as to what kind of tortures they are put to. These suspects are put to third degree measures; and all sorts of tortures are inflicted on them in order to extract confessions out of them. Many have been put into water tubs during cold winter nights. Although many persons have nothing to confess, yet they have got to undergo all these barbarous measures. This is one aspect of the case.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

I know that Government also sometimes think that this method alone would not cure the country of youngmen thinking in violent ways if they become hopeless of the future. But, may I ask the Government, what steps they have taken during all these years in that connection? Can the talk of reconciliation and this oppression go hand in hand? Is it not far more true that they exercise much more of their time and energy in suppressing not only terrorism, but also all ideas of liberty and freedom and even free thinking? Even the ideas of Swadeshi and the Swaraj, which Government themselves have declared as very legitimate objects, are suppressed.

As regards the individual cases that were discussed by means of recent questions, I remember the case of suicide by Mrinal Kanti Ray Chaudhuri on the 15th of January, 1932. That was the first case of suicide which a poor unfortunate detenu at Deoli committed under circumstances which everybody regrets, but which, I for one, think should not have been possible had he been in a Bengal jail.

An Honourable Member : Give us the details of that case.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Some questions were asked on the floor of this House about him and the matter was discussed threadbare. It is known to the House. He was segregated from other detenus and put in a solitary cell. In broad day light, at about 4—25, he committed suicide by hanging himself with a rope which he put on the ceiling. Then, Sailesh Chatterjee's death occurred on the 23rd October under circumstances which we on this side consider could have been prevented if proper medical treatment had been administered in time. He had high fever for three or four days, he was brought to the segregation ward. There his fever ceased at 6 in the morning, and at 10 o'clock an injection was administered on him. There was no doctor to watch the after effects of an injection, and, within half an hour, he died. Those are the facts which are known to everybody. But we think that if he had been anywhere in a Bengal jail, where proper medical aid could be had, his life could be saved.

Then, Sir, we had cases of the type of Mr. Hem Chandra Ghosh, who was not permitted to perform the Shradh ceremony of his father. To a Hindu, that is the last duty that a dutiful son should perform in remembrance of his parents. One can just imagine their feelings when these suspects are deprived of these elementary rights of performing their religious duties. There are cases of some people who developed leprosy at Deoli although they never had any history of leprosy in their family before. To such persons, it was not possible to give proper medical treatment in a segregated place like Deoli. Naturally, these externees must suffer from all these inconveniences inevitable under such circumstances.

I have drawn the attention of the House times without number to the special difficulties which even the best attention of the Government cannot remedy from which the externees must suffer. For example, the articles of food. It is well-known that Bengalees are fond of fish. At Deoli it is not possible to provide fish. I do not complain against the Government, but I only say that it is not possible to provide the food that they are accustomed to and the manner of cooking food. There is also the difficulty about interviews from relations who have to come all the way from Bengal. It is well-known that for long periods the detenus are cut away from their relations, and it would be a source of contentment to the unfortunate female relatives if they are allowed to have interviews with the detenus who are deprived of companionship of their relatives. Deoli is about 70 miles from Ajmer, and there is no regular hotel or place of residence where the relatives of the detenus could stay when they come for interview. I have heard from female relations how difficult it is to go to that place and have an interview, because the rules are stringently enforced. All these difficulties could be avoided if the detenus are not camped in Deoli.

As regards jail visitors, my Honourable friend, Mr. Lahiri Chaudhuri, reminds me that even the jail visitors go to this detention camp at intervals of three or four months. There is one jail visitor who is a Government contractor and he may possibly be a title holder. I know from reliable sources that such kind of persons are not expected to do justice to the grievances of the detenus. My Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Harbilas Sarda, after much protest from this side of the House, was taken as a jail visitor; but, owing to ill health, he has not been able to visit this camp for many months together.

On these grounds it is necessary to put an end to this system of externment, for the harsh treatment embitters the feelings of detenus. I shall not repeat what I said already. I also know that Government feel that unless some future career is chalked out for these unfortunate suspects, who have not been convicted by any Court, you cannot reconcile these detenus. It may be news to the House that no lawyers are allowed to plead the case of these suspects and they are not permitted to appear before these two so-called Judges to explain the charges that are brought against the suspects. There are circumstances which apparently may prove almost conclusive; but, if an opportunity is given to an accused person, he may probably convince the authorities of his innocence. In spite of our protest, the Government are now trying to make the emergency measure a permanent one and no attempt is being made to give an opportunity to these suspects to clear their character about the allegations that are made behind their back on the untested evidence of low-class police spies.

In this connection, I should, with some hesitation, refer to agent provocateurs. I find there is a strange coincidence that, at the opportune moment, when there is a lull in terrorism for a long period, and perhaps when Government are also thinking of taking some remedial measures, then, all of a sudden, something happens which affects the whole policy. My suspicion is this and I put forward this with some hesitation before [Mr. S. C. Mitra.] you, Sir, for the consideration of Government, and I ask them if they are absolutely certain that there is no hand of the agent provocateur in these matters. Only the other day, I was reading in a book by the Secretary of State, Sir Samuel Hoare, how these agent provocateurs were working in Russia, and in Chapter VI of that book about "Dark force" he says how these agent provocateurs carried on their nefarious propaganda. In another Chapter, he also speaks of Indian spies. This is also a matter that Government should consider before thinking of repressive legislation. Young men are sensitive all the world over. It is well-known that there is no prospect for the younger people in Bengal or elsewhere in India. With the economic distress, the future for the people of this country is very dark. In these hard times of unemployment, it is easy for police spies and agent provocateurs to play on the sentiments of the young people. Should they not be guarded against these spies and agent provocateurs? They should not, on mere suspicion, be put in jail. They should be given a chance to be influenced by their relations and friends to come to the right path. These are the different aspects of this question. Though, as regards the main question of putting an end to terrorism, there is no difference between ourselves and Government, yet I strongly object to the palliatives which the Honourable Sir Harry Haig wants to administer as the panacea for all the troubles in this unfortunate land. I say that higher statesmanship is necessary. Our rulers should rise to the occasion and should not apply these palliatives times without number. These emergency occasions should not be made the excuse for making these repressive measures permanent. On these grounds, I strongly appeal to Government to stay their hand and see how things develop and consult the people who are in a position to give them advice and see whether it is still necessary to go on with these repressive measures and pollute the Statute-book by making them permanent. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Amendment moved :

"That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1934."

The amendment and the original proposition will now be under discussion.

Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen (Presidency Division : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : Sir, when I stood up to speak this morning before Mr. Mitra, I did so for the purpose of opposing the Bill. I now find that Mr. Mitra has made out an excellent case in support of circulation, but the arguments that have been advanced by him throughout his speech clearly and abundantly support opposition. And, speaking for myself, I have made up my mind, when the Bill will come again before this House after circulation, if circulation is allowed, to oppose the Bill straightaway. I should like, therefore, to follow the more straightforward course. Sir, I oppose the Bill not because I deny the existence of terrorism in my Province, not because I have any sympathy with terrorism, but because I hold that the prescription proposed by the Honourable the Home Member is unsound and perhaps wrong. Sir, oppression is no remedy for terrorism. It may have some effect upon one who has got a less hardened calibre, but a terrorist will be the last person to be cowed down by oppression. It may check the symptoms for the time being, but not the disease, and I am sure the disease will try to rear its head whenever there is an opportunity for it; and it is for this reason that the disease refuses to go away in spite of the continued application of this form of treatment for years together,—at least for ten years, as far as I can see. I should, therefore, like a typical and orthodox Vaid, advise Government to follow a more sympathetic and humane treatment. I would request Government to follow the following prescription. Change the whole educational policy of the country by making some religious education compulsory, so that the young people may be God-fearing citizens; give the young people some employment; find some means to give them at least a bare subsistence; encourage timely marriage of young people,—young men as well as young women (Loud Laughter); and set apart a substantial sum of money to be given to the unprovided young people, so that they may settle in life and become plain-living householders. And, last but not the least, carry on the administration with even-handed justice without any communal bias. I would remind the House of the atrocities perpetrated by Government at Dacca, Midnapore, Chittagong and many other places. Sir, I submit that this prescription will prove more beneficial than the short-cut one prescribed by the Honourable the Home Member.

Sir, this short Bill, which is composed of practically only one paragraph, is pregnant with serious implications. In short, this extending Bill seeks to perpetuate Deoli with all its objectionable features, namely, want of facilities for interviews, want of facilities for treatment of patients, want of facilities for living, and everything else. Sir, we would not perhaps have uttered a single word of protest if these unfortunate young people were found guilty in open trial; but when Government cannot prove them to be guilty in open Court, they should not run into extremes. Sir, what is the object of transferring these young people from their own native Province? It has been said by the Honourable the Home Member that one of the reasons is that there is hardly any accommodation in Bengal for these detenus. I submit, Sir, that the Civil Disobedience Movement having been called off, jails like Dum Dum and other jails have been vacated by the prisoners and these jails may accommodate these detenus. Sir, when Government cannot prove them to be guilty openly, is there any justification for sending them away to a place which is about a thousand miles distant from their native Province and where the temperature and climate are widely different from those in their native place? And is there any justification for Government in trying to make this black Act permanent on the Statute-book? Sir, this Act does a two-fold injustice; it does injustice to Bengal as well as to the Province to which these detenus are to be sent. Some very unpleasant associations will always hang over that Province, and it is for this reason that the idea will not be very much liked by those Provincial Governments even.

Sir, this is the long and short of my arguments against this Bill. I am sorry I cannot develop my points as I am hard pressed for time and have to leave for Calcutta just now on receipt of a telegram from there. Sir, I appeal to Government from the humanitarian point of view. I do not know much of law, and I am sure no amount of legal knowledge will help us, because all the law is in the pockets of Government, and it is no use harping on that point. Sir, I oppose the Bill.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : Sir, two Honourable Members from Bengal have already spoken on this Bill, but as the two provisions of this Bill are, (i) for the transfer of detenus from the Province of Bengal to other Provinces, and (ii) for overriding the powers of the High Court, I consider, though coming as I do from distant Madras, that this is a measure in which we are more interested than even Members from Bengal.

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

Sir, at the very outset, I may observe that the terrorist movement in this country is a live movement. Of late we find that the terrorist movement is not only devoting itself to high officials of Government, but also to nationalist workers. It was only the other day that we heard that Mr. Gandhi was bombed. Sir, terrorism is foreign to Indian character and it is against the very traditions of India; there can be no gainsaying that. We are, therefore, as anxious as the Government to see that terrorism is eradicated from this country. My Honourable friend, the Home Member, is anxious to protect the Government of today. I am anxious that not only the Government of today should be protected, but also that the Government of tomorrow, which I hope will be our Government, should likewise be protected. We want that the machinery of the Government should not in any way be damaged when it is handed over to us, that it must be in smooth running order, and, therefore, we welcome any measures that the Government may think of taking to eradicate this evil. At the same time, I must point out to the Honourable the Home Member that this particular measure is not really so strong a foundation as he thinks for the building of that edifice.

Before I deal with the more important provision regarding High Courts, let me first take up the question of the transfer of detenus. This morning, the Honourable the Home Member gave us an incident in Madras. I can understand his taking one view of it. He interpreted that to show how dangerous these detenus were and how capable they were of communicating their dangerous doctrines to the people outside. But I hope the Honourable the Home Member will permit me to draw another conclusion, or rather, to present the other side of the picture. I come from Madras and it was to us that the Home Member was pointing out this morning how these dangerous thoughts were responsible for some of the terrorist activities in a Province so placid as Madras is. Coming as I do from the Andhra country particularly, which is admittedly more emotional than the other parts of the Madras Presidency, I do consider that if these people are really so dangerous as the Home Member makes them out to be, he should see that they are not sent to our Province, at any rate, because our northern districts are admittedly very emotional and that is why they are sometimes called the South India Bengal. I am anxious that our Province, particularly Andhra Desh, should not be permitted to have these people if they are really so dangerous.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: We have no intention of sending any more to Madras.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju: Thank you.

The other question is a question of law. As a student of law, I am very much interested in this overriding of the powers of the High Courts. On the last occasion, when this Bill was before us, we had the benefit of receiving the opinions expressed on this measure from the Local Governments, from the Advocates General and other lawyers who are likely to know the implications of this provision better. On that occasion, one of our most distinguished lawyers of Madras, Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Iyer, expressed an opinion with regard to the overriding of powers of the High Courts. He said that on principle he was opposed to a provision like clause 4 which affects the only remedy available to a subject of questioning the acts of the Executive. If the conditions of the Statute are satisfied, the detention is lawful, and the High Court will not exercise the jurisdiction under section 491. If, on the other hand, the detention is unlawful, because the conditions of the Statute are not complied with, or an order has been passed by the proper authority, there is no reason why the subject should be deprived of his remedy under section 491, and the principle obtaining in every part of the British Empire, namely, that a person has a right to be protected from illegal imprisonment, should be departed from in this country.

On the last occasion, when I was sitting in Select Committee on this Bill, I drew the particular attention of Government to the opinion expressed by Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Iyer. Subsequently, when I had the honour of addressing this House again, I asked the then Law Member whether he would consider from his legal knowledge that we have the power to override the powers of the High Court. Have we the power to override the powers of the High Courts given under their Letters Patent? That was a point that was then engaging the best legal minds and they were of opinion that the point was not free from doubt whether this Legislature could, under the provisions of the Government of India Act, override the powers given to the High Courts under Letters Patent. In the opinion expressed by Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Iyer, he referred to certain decisions of the High Courts of Bombay and Madras; whereas, if I remember aright, the opinion of the Calcutta High Court was against that view. I hope that our present Law Member will enlighten us on that point whether we have the power to override the High Courts' powers. Assuming for the moment that we have the power, I would like to bring once more prominently to the notice of the House whether such overriding is just and proper. What does section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code provide? It provides that when a person is illegally or improperly detained, the power of the High Court would come into operation. We are not now asking that no strong measures should be taken against the terrorists; we are not now asking the Government not to take any strong view of the matter; we are not asking the Government not to take enough powers into their hands to deal with this terrorism; but what we are asking is this: supposing you have got a law like this, drastic as it is, supposing that law is not complied with by your officials, that your subordinate officials behave illegally and do not comply with the provisions of the very law that you have passed, where is the remedy? The only remedy that is provided is section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code under which you can go before a High Court and say: "Here is a law, drastic as it is, which is not obeyed by the officials: there is no remedy for us; give us that." That was the interpretation of the powers under section 491 and Honourable Members are fully aware that the High Court will not question your law. But when your law is not even obeyed, then they will say "What right have you to deprive the ordinary citizen of the fundamental right of protection against abuses of the laws of your own creation?" A lawless law is no remedy against lawlessness. Therefore, I venture to say under the circumstances that no reasonable

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

Member of this House, on this side at any rate, can even for a moment consent that the powers of the High Courts should be so ruthlessly over-ridden. On the last occasion, there was Mr. Jinnah and there was Mr. Rangachariar who were both speaking as leaders of distinct groups. They condemned such a procedure in very strong terms. Sir, why should the Government feel shy of the very Judges that they have appointed? We in this country have great respect for the law administered by those Judges whom the Government have appointed. Those Judges of the House who have administered the law in this country have in our estimation fully justified their selection and the high positions which they occupy on the Bench. Can't you, I ask the Government, put in your Judges the same confidence and the same respect which we, the people of this country, put in them? Sir, with these few remarks, I feel, I must oppose the motion.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind: Non-Muhammadan Rural): Sir, I am quite familiar with this Bill, and the law which has been enacted before in this House, and I feel I must say something on this measure, of course consistent with what I have said before.

Now, the first issue that arises out of this measure is, whether Act VIII of 1932 should be made a permanent one. When the discussion was going on in 1932, I was a party to the debate, and several legal questions arose then, and there was a full dress debate, and we came to the conclusion, of course by a majority, that the Bill should be passed, but that the measure should remain in force for only three years. Now, today, we are asked to put this measure permanently on the Statute-book, and what we have to consider is, whether the arguments advanced by Government in support of their demand to put this measure permanently on the Statute-book are such as would appeal to this side of the House and whether those arguments are sound. Now, what does this Act VIII of 1932 provide for? It provides that the Government will have power to transfer detenus from Bengal to places outside Bengal, and the main reason given then was—the same reason is advanced today also,—that the terrorist movement was going strong. Of course, I may say that the terrorist movement was really strong then.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi: It is still strong.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: You come from Bengal and you say it is still going strong, but I hope those Members on this side who come from Bengal will not agree with what you say.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi: Of course they will.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Sir, the other day I put a question to the Honourable the Home Member whether terrorism was on the decline or not. I did not get any direct reply, but what I would submit is that the real vigour and strength of the terrorist movement is not now in existence. I am, of course, speaking subject to correction on that point, because I do not myself belong to Bengal, and I have no personal knowledge or evidence to the effect that the terrorist movement is still going so strong as to demand the enactment of this measure, and that the detenus should be removed to places outside Bengal. Sir, we have listened this morning to the various difficulties which these suspects, who are now in jail, are facing and Mr.

S. C. Mitra has very eloquently placed them before this House. Sir, I am not in favour of terrorism, and I agree that, if terrorism really exists in this country, in any shape or form, it must be put a stop to by Government, and measures should be adopted to remove the evil from this country. We all know how terrorism took its roots in this country; it is well-known to everybody, and so I shall not dilate on that aspect of the question, but, speaking briefly, the people of India want to govern themselves. On that point constitutional questions arise, and I need not go into them, but up to this time no conclusion has been come to as to whether India's demands, India's legitimate aspirations are going to be fulfilled or not. That is the pivot on which numerous questions have arisen, and a few youths got into such a mood and said that they would get self-Government by resort to terrorism. Therefore, I say that the remedies which you propose are not the remedies which would eradicate the evil of terrorism; measures such as you propose to keep permanently on the Statute-book will not and cannot check terrorism; measures such as these will merely increase the harassment of these few suspects and enrage the feelings of these people against the Government. You will not gain the desired object. The proper and real remedy to kill terrorism in this country is not to delay the constitutional reforms. Sir, these constitutional reforms have been delayed beyond measure. Even the instalment, as it has been called, which had to be given after ten years, has not come and it has now been further delayed by five or six years more. Therefore, unless the best constitutional reforms are granted to this country, I do not think measures like these will succeed in killing terrorism. You had these measures for the last three years, and I learn from the Honourable Member that terrorism has not even declined. Then, why are you enacting these measures? Why not take conciliatory measures? Be conciliatory, try and meet the wishes of the people of the country, and in that way your Government can be laid on a sure foundation.

Now, there are two things to be considered in connection with this Bill. The first thing is, whether we should agree to putting this measure permanently on the Statute-book. What is the reason, I ask, for putting it on the Statute-book permanently? One reason advanced is that there are no places in Bengal where these suspects could be lodged. I really do not think that that can be the real reason. Sir, Bengal is a big Province; there are so many places there where you can make temporary jails and keep these people. Therefore, the reason advanced that there are no suitable places to keep these people in Bengal is not a sound one. If you keep these people outside Bengal in places like Ajmer, if you remove them from Bengal and deprive them of their proper food, if you keep them in uncongenial surroundings, I am afraid you will be merely enraging them, you will not be improving them; you will not be reclaiming them. Even for criminals, the jails are for punishment and not places for improving them. Therefore, if you enrage these terrorists, how can you hope them to improve themselves? Will the improvement come about by making the already rigid measures still more rigid? A little while ago, I heard from my friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra,—of course it was in the Lobby,—that if some of these detenus are released now, they are in a mood to improve. That means that if you don't keep them where they are, some of them really are in such a mood as to go in agreement with the Government, and say that they will not carry on the terrorist movement provided certain conditions are complied with.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : What are the conditions ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Give us all that India wants. You are a Round Tabler, and what have you done.....

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Are you aware that the terrorists do not want an ordered Government ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : How do you know that ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Pamphlets will show that. I have not got them here today. If you want them, I shall have them brought from Calcutta, and I shall place them before the House next week.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is it very difficult to manufacture such pamphlets ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am not unaccustomed to such assertions on the part of my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi. I have been in this House for the last six or seven years, and I have heard such things from the Honourable Member. The point is that there is no unanimity. On this side you have opinions, and why should they not be respected ? I have nothing to say about the honesty of purpose on the part of my Honourable friend, but, I ask, what the Round Tablers have done for us when they went to England ? They merely succumbed instead of putting up a brave fight.....

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury).]

I do not know when the Federation is going to come and how much of it.....

(At this stage, Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi rose in his seat.)

I am not going to give way. What I say is this, that the Federation that is going to come is not yet to be seen even on the horizon. It may or it may not come. As for Provincial Autonomy and Central Responsibility, what have we got up till now ? You are not going to get Central Responsibility for a long time to come. Otherwise, why should you have another election to this Assembly under the present Constitution ? It is evident even to a layman, the man in the street, that the Central Government is not going to get what the people want it to get. As for Provincial Autonomy, anybody, who is familiar with what is happening in England and reads the newspapers, will know what sort of autonomy it is. Law and order will be in the hands of a special officer who will be primarily responsible for it—he will be something like the C. I. D. I need not elaborate these things, nor are they relevant on this occasion. The question is, what is the remedy ? Is the passing of this Bill the remedy, or is the remedy in the meeting of the wishes and legitimate demands of the people of India ? Now, coming to making the Act permanent, I say, the Central Government are running a race with the Local Government without applying their own heads and their own brains. The argument is because the Act of 1930 has been put on the Statute-book permanently by the Local Government, therefore we must also make our Act permanent. Such an argument should not come from the highest Government in India. The Local Government may pass the measure according to the environments there ; they can extend it for a long period or they may even make it permanent. I personally do not know how that Act came to be permanent. I have experience of the Councils and the Assembly now, and I know that the mere passing of a Bill does not mean that the opinion is really what the Bill contains. If Government want to fight out the people and show their power, then measures like this are reasonable. If you want to make the thing permanent, you would appear as if you want that there should be terrorism. If we are contemplating measures to see how this terrorist movement can be brought round to sense, and, in the meantime, if you want to transfer these detenus for a year or so, you may have this Bill. But to ask the Assembly to be a party to a measure that the detenus shall always go out, is not reasonable. In the last debate, we heard about the hardships of these Bengal detenus with regard to food and clothing in a hot climate like that of Ajmer, and from that point of view it would be cruel to make this Bill a permanent measure on the Statute-book. Since we passed the Act of 1932, there have been many complaints from Honourable Members, and others about the treatment which is being meted out in the jails at Ajmer, and also the difficulties which the relatives of the detenus have in meeting them. I do realise that Government may be honestly making some arrangements to remove those difficulties. Take, for instance, an English detenu who is made to live in the hot Indian plains, what would be his feeling ? I would ask the Home Member, whose heart I know is tender, though he is stern sometimes, to realise how difficult it would be for an Englishman to be locked up here in the hot plains, and in like manner how difficult it would be for a Bengali detenu to be locked up in a hot country like Ajmer. Mr. Mitra has put forward these difficulties in a sincere manner evoking the pity of all of us and the instances that he has given are such as must enlist our sympathy. What would have been lost if the Home Member had come today not for a measure to make this Act permanent on the ground that because the Bengal Government has passed the Bill of 1930 to be a permanent measure.....

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Not the Bengal Government, but the elected Members of the Bengal Council.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I know what the Bengal Council is, what we are, and what you are. I know the Legislature of Bengal and how the elected Members have succumbed by being disunited among themselves. Therefore, do not tell me that because the Legislative Council of Bengal has made this a permanent measure, therefore the Government of India should do the same.

(Interruption by Mr. Ghuznavi.)

I am not going to give way to any interruptions. I know my ground very well.

To continue my point, To keep these people away for a longer term must be decided always by the circumstances of a particular time. There must be some evidence brought forward that these people must remain for ever away from their home. What I mean to say is that this move to [Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.] give the men transfer must remain open. My friend, sitting opposite, may say when the time comes when there will be no necessity for this Bill, it will be cancelled, but I say, why go to the extent of getting the Bill passed when there is a feeling on this side that there is absolutely no necessity for it being made permanent? Do not tease these men. On the contrary, tell them that if they behave better, we are not going to make this a permanent measure. I personally do not know whether there is any necessity any more for transfer hereafter. However, I will depend upon what the Honourable Members on this side and what the Honourable Members on the other side say and then come to a conclusion whether this Bill should be made permanent. I am not convinced that it should be made a permanent measure. Even in spite of what I know in connection with questions that have been put in this House, even not giving any credence to them, I say that there ought to be some imminent requirement that this Bill should be passed into law permanently. If the facts are placed before us, I shall be in favour of extending the Bill for two or three years. There are amendments to that effect. We should not blindly follow the Bengal Government. If the Government of India are not going to do that, then I will be with the Government. I shall not detain the House any more on this aspect of the question. The more pertinent question which is within my element is the legal question. That is a question on which we had a strong debate and we were just crossing arguments with the then Law Member. When I told him that he had lost his case, he was persistent and said that he did not so easily lose his case. I said it was obstinacy, because he was quoting a High Court ruling to which he was a party as Advocate General. I showed him other rulings of the Madras and Bombay High Courts against him, but this is by the by. I know the present Law Member, who is now sitting for the first time, but by reading a certain book which has been written by one Mr. Roy regarding him, I know him better. What I mean to say is that I want an honest, clear and distinct opinion on this law. I want to know whether he also agrees with his predecessor. I will make my point very clear if the Honourable the Law Member has not read the previous debates. My point is that a portion of this Bill of 1932 is ultra vires. This House has no jurisdiction to pass it. The provision contained in it militates against the common law that every man should have liberty and freedom. I would take the first point. We have at present two kinds of rights to the people to get their freedom. One is the Habeas Corpus by which the meanest of men should have the right of calling in question their detention. When any person is detained, the Habeas Corpus says that the High Court has got power to call that man before them and to decide the question whether that man has been rightly or wrongly detained in jail and then to give him relief if the High Court comes to the conclusion that the man has been wrongly detained. This is the first point. The second method is that the Legislature of this country has passed an Act, which is called the Criminal Procedure Code, and in that Criminal Procedure Code a section has been inserted, which is section 491. Now, that section 491 gives similar powers to the people to seek their liberty through the High Court. But that section has been hedged in by certain exceptions. The question, therefore, as I was saying, arises also whether those restrictions can be put on the Criminal Procedure Code by this Legislature and, therefore, likewise in the Act of 1932, for, in the Act of 1932, we find a clause where it is said that, under the Criminal Law Amendment Act of Bengal, if any man is detained under that Act, he shall have no power to go to the High Court. His detention and the taking away of his liberty will not be questioned and he shall have no right to go to the High Court to have his remedy. I, therefore, submit that on that first question my own opinion is what I said before; and I think, instead of giving that opinion now, I may read a portion of the view put forward then by me, and, in this connection, Sir, I would refer the Honourable the Law Member to the debates of 1932, page 2537....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : May I assure my Honourable friend that I have read the whole of the debate of 1932—part of which was very painful to me when I read it! (Laughter.)

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I do not think my friend, by saying that part of that debate was painful to him, was giving us a hint that he will be painful to us. (Laughter.) Sir, I expect differently. Sir, it all depends upon the reasonable construction which we put on the question and the way in which that is viewed by the House. Now, if my Honourable friend has read that debate—and I do not think we need an assurance that he has read it, because a matter like this has come before the House twice or thrice and the Honourable Member, being a new Member of the House, must have come quite prepared—what I was going to say was this. The first point is—is the Habeas Corpus Act under the common law when applicable to India independent of section 491 or not? I may tell the Honourable the Law Member that the former Law Member conceded that that stands apart. That means that the common law is applicable to the people of India and the High Court have got powers under that. I hope that is quite clear from the debate; and I would, therefore, ask the Honourable Member when he gets up to give me his view—is it so or not that the common law remedy of every person is existing in India or not, and independent of the provisions of section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code? Sir, it may have been quite unnecessary to make it quite plain to the Indian people that the common law right does exist, as the former Law Member conceded, and I think some of the High Court's have also decided that. Therefore, what I meant to say was this—that the common law remains intact in India. That means that we have a remedy at all times to the High Court. Then, the question arises whether the Honourable the Law Member will also say that that remedy does remain, but we have enacted a certain Statute in which we can make reservations and certain restrictions, and so forth. That is the second question that arose then and arises today also. Sir, if it is conceded as it was conceded before, that there is a right of Habeas Corpus which gives a right to the person detained and the person who is put in jail under any law, be it the Bengal special law or any extraordinary law, the High Court has got the power of investigation. If it be so, then I would ask a simple question. Why is it that section 491, which has got a similar provision, is going to create a bar, namely, that it will not apply to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930? Now, I say there are two things—either that the law we are making is redundant, or the second is that, it is unnecessary. I think certain rulings of certain High Courts are necessary to be presented to the Honourable the Law Member. He knows that one authority of the Calcutta High Court has decided that the High Court can be debarred in this manner from exercising their power by an Indian Statute. Well, with all respect to the High Court, [Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.] they have not directly given us a ruling to say that the Habeas Corpus Act also can be suspended. If it is so, however, this opinion, as I have said in a former debate, this ruling, is doubtful. But, on the other side, we have got the Bombay High Court and the Madras High Court saying that the Habeas Corpus Act remains and it is ultra vires of an Indian Legislature to bar the provisions of section 491. Sir, I submit that one broad point which is in favour of this view is that the Habeas Corpus Act is existing and that the Habeas Corpus Act provisions have not been swept away. It cannot be maintained that the British Government or rather those who have made the Government of India Act and given certain powers to the High Court did not mean to supersede the common law of every man having his liberty. So I submit that the point arises whether that Habeas Corpus Act is suspended. To use the words previously used by the Honourable the Home Member, the second question is the barring of the Habeas Corpus Act provisions—those were the words used. Now I do not think that the Honourable the Law Member will go to that extent and say that we are barring the Habeas Corpus Act.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : "Hideous" ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Sir, you may call it "hideous"—because it is hideous to those who want that our rights should be taken away, only those will call it hideous—not you and me.

Sir, what we find in Act VIII of 1932 is that the power given under section 491 to the High Court calling for the records under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act should be taken away from them. On this point an argument is always placed before us, and it is this. They say that this very Legislature at one time enacted an exception to section 491 and in it also some other special laws relating to Bengal and Madras were enacted. They say that they do not wish to have the general power under the Habeas Corpus Act. What they say is this : Well, your Legislature at one time passed these measures and made exceptions. Why not put in a provision giving one more exception ? Sir, excuse me when I say that those times and the present times are quite different even having regard to the particular matter which is now under discussion. At that time, when such a law was made, it may be that points, such as we have now put forward, were not before the House. I believe at that time the general question of the common law of Habeas Corpus was not before the House. However, what I am trying to emphasise is that this House is not infallible and it has passed once an ultra vires Act. Why should the argument be placed before us that because once this Legislature made a mistake, we should also repeat the same mistake ? We are not prepared to do that.

Then, there is another reason why I am against this Bill. If the extension of this Act was asked for for a year or so, then I might have said that as this Legislature has by a majority already, rightly or wrongly, come to the conclusion that a provision like this should be made and placed on the Statute-book for some time, therefore, let it be extended for some time more. Sir, my firm conviction is that the House had then in its mind that it was going to have his law for a short time. It was making the law under certain very special conditions and for a short time. If, on the other hand, the House had been told that it was not going to be a temporary measure, the House would not have agreed to its being passed and thus deprive the people of their very fundamental right of Habeas Corpus.

∴ An Honourable Member : Who gave the House the faith ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The House itself gave the faith or rather the Treasury Benches gave that faith. At no time was it said that this was going to be a measure for more than three years. Sir, many a time we are persuaded and induced to pass a measure, because it is not going to be placed permanently on the Statute-book, but will remain in force only for a short time. Several enactments have been passed on that understanding. The main question now before us is whether we are really going to pass an Act which will keep the Bengal people always out, and are we also going to take away the very fundamental right of Habeas Corpus from them ? These are the two questions which ought to be considered. I do not propose, Sir, to lengthen my arguments. My points have already been very plainly, and if you will allow me to say so, very distinctly placed before the House. It is for those who consider it hideous or heavenly to answer them. I think I have made it clear to the House that there is no necessity for making this a permanent measure, nor has any necessity been shown at this time that this fundamental right of Habeas Corpus should be taken away from the people of Bengal. Sir, if we allow such measures to be made permanent, there is a great danger. We will then be encouraging the Government to bring similar measures, however unreasonable they may be, to be promulgated in other parts of India. I would, therefore, submit that a full consideration should be given to the question whether this Act of 1932 should be made a permanent measure. If my arguments do not appeal to the Honourable the Home Member, I am sure the appeals of those Honourable Members, who occupy much bigger position than I do, will appeal to him. I submit that it will be wiser on the part of the Home Member, as well as the Law Member, not to press for the permanency of this measure. If there is a danger, let this measure be in operation for three or four years, because, after all, the remedy always is in the hands of this House. It is always in the hands of the Government to ask this House to increase its life. But why should we make it a permanent measure now ? Is there any fear ? The other day I put a question and said that many Bills were being rushed through this House and we were being detained here against our own interests, when we ought to be with our constituents and canvass them. The reply was that the Government had got to get through these measures. I have already said that the Government have got a lurking suspicion that they might not be so successful with the next Assembly, and, therefore, they wish to pass all such measures in this Assembly. I think that should not be the mentality of the Government. The Honourable the Home Member said that the anxiety of Government was to finish the work. I know that. But I must again request the Treasury Benches not to make this Act a permanent measure. You can tell the Bengal Government that if they have made the Act of 1930 a permanent one, let it remain so unless and until the Legislature there gets stronger and cancels it. But, so far as this higher House is concerned, it should exercise more responsibility than the Local Government. You can also tell the Local Government that we do not want to proceed whole hog in this matter, but that we will make a provision for the transfer of the detenus and also for the deprivation of their right of [Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.] Habeas Corpus for some time more, and I hope the Local Government will also be sensible enough to accept it. Sir, with these remarks, I bring my speech to a close.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Mr. Deputy President, let us not introduce any heat into this discussion. Let us consider dispassionately the Bill that is before us. The first duty of a Government, whether it is the British Government or a national Government or a Swaraj Government, must be to maintain law and order. In maintaining law and order, if any measure is necessary, I feel that every law-abiding citizen should give his hearty support to it. What is the Bill before us? I am not a lawyer, but as far as I understand the Bill which is before the House, it is really a logical corollary to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930 as altered by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1934. This Bill makes the life of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, co-terminous with the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1934. It is of the nature of a consequential amendment. Let us see what happened in the Bengal Legislative Council with regard to the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930 in 1934. There was an overwhelming support for this measure from the Members of the Bengal Council. There is no question that the provisions of that Bill received overwhelming support from the elected Members. Sir, it is admitted on all hands that the terrorist movement still exists and it is at its height. Only the other day what did we notice? Even Mr. Gandhi was the victim of a terrorist who threw a bomb.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : That was not done by a terrorist, but by a Sanatanist.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Certainly it was a terrorist and not a Sanatanist. What do we see even now? Look at the precaution that the Bengal Government had to take against the terrorists in Bengal to see that Mr. Gandhi was safe in his tour through Bengal. A number of C. I. D. detectives had to follow Mr. Gandhi wherever he went, because the terrorists were determined to aim at the life of Mr. Gandhi.

Mr. S. C. Sen : That is not the view of the Bengal Government.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : That is the view of every sensible person in Bengal.

Mr. S. C. Sen : If you look at the communiqué issued by the Bengal Government, you will know the reason.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : They are not sensible.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am afraid my Honourable friend must have read a wrong issue and not the correct issue of the communiqué. The point is whether this segregation should be in or outside Bengal, and for what period? If segregation outside Bengal was supported three years ago by this very House, what has happened since then to end it now? Again, Sir, if the substantive provisions have been made permanent in Bengal, why not the consequential provision regarding segregation outside Bengal? If it was advisable three years ago to deal effectively with the terrorist movement, it is nonetheless desirable today when the terrorist movement is still showing signs of great vitality. If you agree to the one, you should not refuse the other. Then, Sir, there is one other thing that I have to say and that is, if Honourable Members think that there are defects in the administration of detention camps, whether within or outside Bengal, let them be brought to the notice of the authorities concerned, and I am sure they would take due notice of those defects and remedy them. We have heard many speakers and particularly the most telling speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra. I must say that we have to face facts really. The terrorist movement is existing and segregation outside Bengal has become an absolute necessity. If you want to cope with the terrorist movement, you must have this weapon and you must have it not for only a fixed period. Let the terrorists understand that this measure will stand permanently on the Statute-book, so that they will not be encouraged in future, after the period of three or six years, to continue their terrorist activities. That is one point that was raised in Bengal that every time this Criminal Law Amendment Act was legislated, a fixed period encouraged the terrorists to begin their activities afresh after that fixed period came to an end, and that was the reason why the Bengal Government was forced to ask the Bengal Council to place the measure permanently on the Statute-book. That is also the reason why this House should also make the provision in this Bill permanent on the Statute-book. If, in course of time, it is found that terrorism has died down, certainly it will be time enough for Members to come to this House to repeal this Act as well as for Members of the Bengal Council to go before that Council to repeal that Act. Sir, with these words, I oppose the motion for circulation.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi (Tirhut Division : Muhammadan) : Sir, on several occasions during the course of this year, I had to read in the papers rules and regulations promulgated by Bengal Government to restrict the activities of the inhabitants of certain towns, I think they are Chittagong, Midnapur, Dacca, and others.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

My conscience prompted me at that time to write a letter to the Honourable the Home Member who is always very reasonable and to ask him whether he thought in his cooler and calmer moments that these restrictive measures were going to deal successfully with the terrorist movement in Bengal. Now, here, I have been given opportunity by the Home Member to express my feeling on some of the points in connection with this Bill. It is high time that we should express ourselves in unequivocal terms as to where we are being led by what is happening in the country. The Honourable the Home Member has rightly observed that this terrorist movement is not a temporary one. It has been going on for the last 30 years. It has become a chronic disease and that not only a small number of men are involved in it, but, as he has said, about 1,500 or 1,600 young men are involved in this movement so far as Government know them. About 500 of them have been segregated outside Bengal. We see the enormity of the movement from the figures which have been quoted this morning. I should rather say that the speech of the Home Member has given me some impetus to rise today and speak out my mind on this question. It is no doubt true that this movement has raised its head many a time and has gone down also on several occasions. There is here food for us to think why it raised its head, how long it remained in that condition and when it was that it went down. The Honourable the Home Member has again himself given us a very sober proposition to think of. He said that it was not repressive measures alone that were being enacted in Bengal; it was the cultivation of public opinion against the movement that had been aimed at,—I believe he said, of recent years. I think any man in his senses would at once agree with him that a movement of this description can be checked only by cultivating public opinion against it. Nothing else can bring the movement under control, except public opinion in the locality where the movement is on foot. But when I weigh these things together, I find that public opinion in Bengal, so far as my reading of the situation goes, is stiffening; and I feel that if drastic repressive measures of the kind promulgated by the Bengal Government, during the course of the year, in those cities were promulgated in my Province, I would have also revolted against them and protested to my utmost, both for the sake of the people as well as for Government. I do not think Government have taken this side into their consideration. They are relying, as far as I can see, on the powers that they have been endowed with by the Bengal Council as well as by this House. But that is not going to solve the problem. All attention should have been concentrated on cultivating public opinion in favour of eradicating this movement from Bengal, but I am afraid that the way in which things are being done in Bengal is not the way to cultivate public opinion. I can picture to myself, after reading those rules and regulations, how far they would be palatable to a reasonable and independent man who has a soft corner in his heart both for the country as well as for Government. I find that in the name of law and order things are enacted in Bengal which are a slur on the name of a civilised Government. I find accounts of police actions as disclosed in the newspapers,—I read the Statesman as well as the Patrika,—from which we can very well judge that the measures which have been taken in those towns which I have named are not such as to reconcile any sane man. One has to think whether life is worth living in those conditions, and although I have not been to Bengal during the last two years, I can imagine what would be the feeling of the people of Bengal. Therefore, what I submit to the Honourable the Home Member and the Treasury Benches is that it is high time that stock should be taken as to what has been done by the executive authorities who are entrusted with the task of controlling the movement, and by the terrorists themselves.

[Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi.]

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi: But what about the present Bill? We are discussing the present Bill.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi: If you look to the words alone which are contained in the present Bill, you are mistaken. Behind them is a great principle and we are giving expression to our views on those principles. It is not the words which rule the country, but the policy and principle behind them. Therefore, as I said in the beginning, I take this opportunity to warn Government of what is happening in Bengal. On the one hand, they are trying to control the terrorists and their friends and sympathisers,—so far so good. But on the other hand, they ought to control the actions of the authorities, the police, the C. I. D., the executive and the magistrates. I find they conduct themselves in such a way as if they were not subject to any law. In the name of law and order, things are being done which no loyal citizen can reconcile himself to. That is why I feel very strongly, and unless the Government of Bengal are going to deal even-handed justice both to the terrorists as well as to the authorities who are endowed with these extraordinary powers, there will be no peace and no end to the movement. The very object for which these measures are taken will be frustrated, and, for that reason, I submit that my humble submissions should be taken into consideration by Government.

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand (Nominated Non-Official): Sir, I confess I do not possess a first-hand knowledge of the conditions prevailing in Bengal, and, therefore, my remarks will be of a general nature and consequently brief.

Both Mr. Mitra and Pandit Sen, who have spoken from amongst the Bengal Members in the opposition, have cut short this discussion inasmuch as they admitted that the terrorist movement does exist in Bengal, and, therefore, some remedy should be found to check that movement. So, about the disease there is no difference of opinion between the two wings of this House. It is only on the prescription that there is difference of opinion. As has been so ably pointed out by my friend on my left, the primary duty of the Government is to give safety of person and property to the people under their charge; and, as a corollary to this principle, it is also the primary duty of this Legislature or of any Legislature for the matter of that, to arm the executive with necessary weapons to discharge that duty. If we, as Members of the Legislature, fail to arm the executive with necessary powers, what will be the result? The result will be that the executive will have to hand over the country to another agency which does not care for written laws and which goes by common sense—I mean the martial law.

The Bill in itself is a very simple one. The question which has to be decided here is, whether we will agree to these detenus being kept in a certain place outside Bengal or not. Supposing we throw it out, what will be the result? The detenus have been detained; they will be detained in some place in Bengal. That is the only principle that is underlying this Bill. Several prescriptions have been proposed. Pandit Sen made an attempt to place a prescription before this House, but Honourable Members will remember that, when he was speaking and putting his prescription before the House, he was laughing all the time: he did not believe in his own medicine, and so I need not take any notice of it especially as he is not in his seat now.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: But you have said it all the same!

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand: My friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, has dwelt at length on his prescription and has tried to persuade this House to believe that all this agitation and this terrorist movement is due to the fact that reforms are not being expedited. May I put one simple question to him? Is this an All-India question or is this question confined to Bengal? If that had been the [Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand.] reason for this terrorist movement, there would have been terrorist movement in Karachi also from where my friend hails.....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will you allow me to answer your question ? I can give you an effective reply.

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : There will be several amendments later on and you can then have an opportunity of speaking. So, Sir, if my friend's argument is pursued to its logical conclusion, it will mean that the reforms are needed only in Bengal and not in any other part of the country.....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Not at all : that is not logic.

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : Speaking generally, the so-called repressive laws, that have been passed during the course of the two years, have given the present peace of which all of us boast here. I hope Government will not resort to the old policy of drift and hide and seek, and will have the courage to meet the situation and thus guarantee peace and safety of life and property, and thus discharge their primary function to which reference has been made by me.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : As was done at Jallianwalla Bagh !

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : My friend, Mr. Navalrai, used a very good argument when he said that nobody should be punished without being placed before a Court and without a charge being framed against him, and that nobody should be sent to jail without being told as to the period for which he is being sent there. I quite agree with him there. But he has ignored another principle of criminal law and that is the preventive portion of it. Just as a good surgeon would perform an operation on one part of the body and deprive a person of a diseased limb in order to save his life, similarly the liberty of individuals can be sacrificed in order to ensure liberty to the society at large ; and it is on that principle that this Criminal Law Amendment Act has been passed.

Sir, several prescriptions have been proposed, and I do venture to suggest a prescription, not in place of what has been proposed by the Honourable the Home Member, but in addition to it.....

An Honourable Member : You dare not. (Laughter.)

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : We all know and there is no difference of opinion that the terrorist movement is generally confined to the educated classes, and these educated classes have a monopoly of Government services. Now, if you trace the pedigree of these terrorists, you will find that most of them are related to Government servants and depend upon these Government servants for the maintenance of their families and kith and kin while they are being detained or when they are taken away. Now, it is up to Government to see that money taken from Government treasuries is not utilised to keep a movement like this going by allowing their servants to stand as guarantee for the kith and kin of those who sacrifice themselves or who commit these terrorist acts. I was very pleased when I read the other day in the papers a certain instance where a son or relative of a Government servant misbehaved and the father was punished. I wish Government will take courage in their hands and extend this principle further.

and make such amendments in their service rules as to ensure that Government servants at least use all their influence to check this movement, directly or indirectly. With these few words, I support this motion.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar (East Punjab : Sikh) : Mr. President, that none on this side of the House and no responsible individual outside have any love or sympathy with either the terrorists or with terrorism is beyond the least doubt : all of us, one and all, deplore that terrorism should exist and that terrorists should exist and flourish in this land of ours. Where the difference comes is, whether by these half-hearted remedies the disease itself can be or would be checked. We deal with terrorists and not with terrorism ; and dealing with terrorists alone would not stop terrorism, but will only bring it underground and make it more complicated. By cutting the branches or plucking the flowers, we do not stop the growth of the tree. We must deal with the causes of terrorism and the roots which bring terrorism into existence. The continuance of it is much more dangerous and harmful to the progress and advance of this country than of any other country, and, therefore, we feel, more than anybody else, that this terrorism should be checked or completely eradicated as quickly as possible.

Sir, the manner in which the various penal laws have been administered has given rise to misunderstanding and discontent in this country, and my friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, has given us some food for thought this morning and to consider whether the time has not arrived for amending the existing laws dealing with terrorists. By merely confining these terrorists in jails or other places, whether within or outside Bengal, you will not be able to change the mentality of these people. The treatment meted out to these people, the manner in which they are deprived of their liberties make other young men of their class sympathise more and more with the terrorists and make them terrorists themselves who otherwise might not care to join their ranks. Therefore, I think that the Government ought, in fairness to their duties towards this country and its people, to thoroughly go into the matter and find out the real causes as to why these youngmen, after spending so much money of their parents, after spending so much time and energy in colleges for attaining academic distinctions, instead of applying their cultured minds to beneficent activities, turn their attention to nefarious activities which only bring ruin, not only on themselves and their families, but on the country at large. Therefore, it is obvious that there must be some strong reason. Psychological experts and others should be called in to give Government useful advice regarding the causes which create these terrorists. My Honourable friend, the Home Member, said that the movement is going on unchecked, and, therefore, he asked for the continuance of the measure. For how long have the Government had this measure in existence, and for how long have they been administering it, according to them, in the most sympathetic manner ? And yet have Government been able to check the spread of this evil or to kill the spirit of terrorism ? No, they have not. Therefore, I think it is time that they should, before deciding to continue these measures for an indefinite period, consider whether these measures have not failed in their objective to check the movement, and that something quite different should be had resort to, before the Legislature is asked to put this measure on the Statute-book permanently.

[Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar.]

Sir, some years ago, in this very Chamber, I talked on this subject. When the Press Act was under discussion in this august Chamber, I happened to take the view that it was not the press which was wholly responsible for bringing terrorism into being or the terrorists into creation, that the causes were deeper to seek, that it was education which the young men received in schools and colleges which made them feel that their ambitions, that the fruits of their labours have been lost practically, and that their desire to have a proper place in the service of their motherland has remained unmaterialised; when they have spent all the resources of their parents and when they had spent the best part of their lives in fitting themselves for the service of their country, the Government of the country are not giving them enough scope or field, that the Government are not alive to the needs, development and progress of the country, that all their education has become an absolute waste because of the apathy of the Government, as these youngmen are not allowed to take a proper share in the administration of the country. Therefore, Sir, unless Government care to create an atmosphere of trust and confidence in the people, unless they create an atmosphere where these youngmen will feel that the country is theirs, and it is they who have to look after its interests, and that the Government will do all in their power to help them to achieve their desire, these kinds of half-hearted measures will not bring in any good either to the people or to the Government. If terrorism is confined merely to Bengal and if you keep these terrorists within the boundaries of Bengal, then terrorism will spread and flourish in Bengal and it will prove dangerous to that Province, but why should my friend, Diwan Bahadur Harbilas Sarda's Province be infected by taking these terrorists into his Province, namely, the Ajmer-Merwara? Why should the people of that small administration be infected with this disease of terrorism? We should try to confine these people within the limits of Bengal only, so that those people, who are responsible for producing terrorists and terrorism, may alone suffer by this evil. But cannot the Government consider some other scheme of colonising and sending these people outside India? Cannot the Government request His Britannic Majesty's Government to hand over to the Government of India that troublesome territory in the Mediterranean known as Malta for the settlement of these Bengalees in that bracing climate and far and further away from India, so that terrorism may be removed from the borders of India and yet these detenus may continue in some occupation which will help them to improve themselves? If a suitable settlement is founded outside India for settling these people, their lives will become more useful, and after a time we might be able to reclaim them as faithful and loyal citizens of this land of ours, instead of ruining their lives either in Bengal or in the Andamans or in the Deoli camp. I think when the Government are considering other schemes of settlement for the repatriated Indians from South Africa and other places, they may also consider that, instead of locking up these people in the cells somewhere here and there, they may find some good land and some good area outside India where they may be able to settle and use their knowledge and experience and their energies to fruitful conclusions. If they have to be kept in cells, it is immaterial whether they are in Bengal or elsewhere. I personally consider that it does not matter much.

If you do not allow them intercourse with other people, if you are not going to permit them to go out of the jails, then it is immaterial whether you send them to the Andamans or to Deoli or keep them in Bengal. In that case the Administration will have to consider which is the best place from the point of view of administrative convenience. My appeal to the Home Member will again be that he should try to consider and deal with the causes of terrorism rather than with the terrorists individually.

Shaikh Sadiq Hasan (East Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : I had no desire to speak on this Bill, but the moving speech of Mr. Mitra has compelled me to extend my sympathy to these poor detenus of Bengal. I condemn the terrorists, but I do not agree with those Members who say that this is a new movement. Individual terrorism may be new, but I may say that those who know the history of India know very well that terrorism has always raged for ages and ages.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : All over the world.

Shaikh Sadiq Hasan : Sir, I have no sympathy with those people who are terrorists, and once they are convicted their punishment should be heavy, and if a deterrent punishment is given to them I have no objection. But the question is of these suspects,—suspects who are given no chance before law Courts, against whom police spies bring very often false charges and then are sent to detention camps. I do think that if these people had been convicted of offences, they might be sent anywhere outside their own Province, because they had committed crimes and they must suffer for the consequences. But those people who have not committed any crimes,—simply because they are suspects, if they are sent outside their own Province and kept in environments where their health suffers, I think it is a great hardship. There was one case specially which I brought to the notice of the Home Member. He showed his great sympathy in that matter and released the person. The case was similar to the one that Mr. Mitra related. It was a case of a man living in Amritsar. He was considered to be Bolshevik or something of the sort, and the police involved him and he was put in jail in Lahore. For years he rotted there without any hope and naturally his reason began to give way. He was becoming a demented sort of person. He wrote me a letter containing a letter for the Home Member. It was written over there, "My Honourable friend in power", and later on, he had also written this thing, "If anything happens to him, the entire responsibility will be on the Government of India and they will have to suffer for the consequences". When I showed this letter to Sir Harry Haig, I told him how a man of that type was not capable of doing any harm to the Government. He saw the papers and generously released him. What I do say is this, that many of these papers cannot be brought to the notice of the Home Member. There are two thousand people who are rotting in jails. I sincerely believe that many of them are not culprits, but only involved by the police. I do admit that there may be a number of them who may be guilty, but a good number are innocent. If you take away these people from their environments, from their Province and put them somewhere in Gwalior or some other place far from their relatives and without any hope of their release, their reason would suffer, and unless the Government intend to keep them for ever in jail, the result would be that, when they come out, they would come with very embittered feelings and there would be the greatest hatred for the Government and they would like this Government to be turned out of this country. I think it is really a great hardship, and naturally their reason would suffer if these people were given no opportunity to see their relatives. I agree with the Home Member that from an ordinary jail they would be able to send messages to all sorts of people outside and their friends, but if there is a detention camp in Bengal, say, at a place where there is not much of population,—I dare say there must be some such places,—and if these people like prisoners of war are put over there, it would remove all the dangers of which the Home Member is afraid, namely, the fostering of the movement. On the other hand, it will give these men facilities to see their relatives and they will not become so desperate as otherwise they would. If these people are going to be kept permanently in jail, then the best thing is for them to be sent to Deoli or trans-frontier, or anywhere that Government like. But if Government think that they are to be released after some time or other, then I submit that their feelings should not be made so bitter that they might become desperate enemies of Government and try always to injure.

[Shaikh Sadiq Hasan.]

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock, on Tuesday, the 24th July, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, the 24th July, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

Mr. Alan Duguid, M.L.A. (Bombay : European).

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to starred questions Nos. 1404 and 1405 asked by Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur on the 14th December, 1933.

HEAD LIGHT KEEPERS AND ASSISTANT LIGHT KEEPERS.

No. 1404.

* (a) Head Light Keepers	...	27	{	17 Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian Christians.
				8 Hindus.
				2 Muslims.
Light Keepers	..	76	{	27 Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian Christians.
				42 Hindus.
				7 Muslims.
* (b) (1) Muslims	..	2
				(2) Other communities, other than Anglo-Indians and Indian Christians 10
* (c)				Nil.

(d) No particular educational qualifications have been laid down. Candidates are however expected generally to be able to read and write English, to be conversant with the mechanism of the lights and to possess some knowledge of signalling. They should also be physically fit and intelligent.

(e) The claims of some of retired Muslim Light Keepers who apply for appointment to vacancies in the Light Keepers' grade will be considered, but Government are unable to guarantee that such applicants will be given preference regardless of their suitability for the posts or of the claims of other candidates.

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE GRADE OF HEAD LIGHT KEEPERS.

No. 1405.

(a) No.

(b) Muslims have been appointed to the posts of Head Light Keeper as will be seen from the reply given to part (a) of question No. 1404.

(c) The Joint Committee's recommendation to which the Honourable Member refers related specifically to the training of Indians as Inspectors of Lighthouses and expert mechanics. That recommendation was accepted by Government.

*The figures are correct upto the 31st March, 1934.

†There are no Assistant Light Keepers in the Light House Department now.

(549)

Information promised to reply given to unstarred question No. 60, asked by Mr. N. M. Joshi, on the 16th February, 1934.

SHORT TIME WORKED AND THE STAFF EMPLOYED IN THE STATE RAILWAY WORKSHOPS.

Statement showing the amount of short-time worked, the total number of staff employed and the number affected by short-time, in the various workshops on State-owned Railways.

Railway.	Workshops.	Staff employed.	Staff affected by short-time.	Short time worked.	Remarks.
Burmah Railways	Locomotive Works, Insein	1,337	447	56 hours a month	Represents position as it stood during February 1934.
	Carriage and Wagon works	1,516	499	22 hours a month
	Myitnge Signal Workshop	100	1,516	34 hours a month
	Loco. Shops, Kanchrepata	2,173	100	34 hours a month
E. B. Railway	Carriage and Wagon Shops	2,091	2,091	All Saturdays	Represents position as it stood during March 1934.
	Saidpur Shops	1,994	1,994
	Dacca Shops	248	248
	Electrical Workshops, Kanchrepata	272	272
	Electrical Workshops, Saidpur	132	132
	Marine Workshops	41	41
	Belaghata Signal Shops	158	158

E. I. Railway L203LAD	Loco. Workshops, Jamalpur	8,338	427	4 days	Represents position as it stood during April 1934.
	Carriage and Wagon Shops, Lilloosh	6,240	631	7 days
	Signal Workshop, Lucknow	137	130	2½ days
	Mechanical Workshops	9,213	..	No short time is being worked
G. I. P. Railway N. W. Railway	Electric Shops	208	208	All Saturdays, and in addition 2 hours extra when there are 4 Saturdays in a month, normal working hours on a Saturday being 5½ hours.	Represents position as it stood in March 1934.
	Clothing Factory, Petty Repair Shop (Stores) and Stores Depot, Moghalpura.	948	948	Ditto
	Signal Shops	471	471	All Saturdays of 5½ hours in addition one hour extra when there are 4 Saturdays in a month.
	Stores Depot, Karachi	260	260	Ditto
A. B. Railway	Bridge Workshop	808	808	All Saturdays, hours of work on a Saturday being 9 hours.	Represents position as it stood during February 1934.
	Workshops	2,131	..	All Saturdays, i.e., 5 hours a week
	Electrical Workshops, Ajmer	295	295	Saw Mill is closed on Friday also, making 13 hours a week short time in that shop.
	Carriage and Wagon Shops, Ajmer	3,409	3,409	All Saturdays 4 hours each, 16 hours per month.
B. B. & C. I. Railway	Loco. Shops, Ajmer	4,009	598		Represents position as it stood in February 1934.

Railway.	Workshops.	Staff employed.	Staff affected by short-time.	Short time worked.	Remarks.
B. N. Railway	Engineering Workshop, Sini	291	291	23 hours per month	Represents position as it stood in February 1934.
	Locomotive, Carriage and Wagon and Electrical Workshops, Khargpur, Nagpur and Adra.	8,592	8,592	0 hours per week
	Marine Workshops, Shalimar	230	230	3 hours per 48 hours a week
M. & S. M. Railway	Loco. Workshops, Perambur	3,109	3,109	Ditto
	Carriage Workshops, Perambur	2,325	2,325	Half day a week	*4,054 men employed in Central Work-shops at Golden Rock.
S. I. Railway	Erecting, Stripping and Copper Smith, Forge and Smithy, Mill, Carriage body, Yard gang shops at Golden Rock.	..	..

Information promised in reply to part (c) of starred question No. 212, asked by Sardar Sant Singh on the 21st February, 1934.

RECRUITMENT OF TEMPORARY CLERKS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

Statement showing the number of candidates appointed to temporary posts or vacancies (a) from the list relating to the Third Division examination held in 1932 promulgated by the Public Service Commission on the 12th July, 1932 and (b) appointed from outside that list since its promulgation.

Name of Department.	No. of candidates selected from the P. S. C.'s list. (a)	Duration of vacancies.	No. of un-passed candidates appointed. (b)	Duration of vacancies.
Legislative	..	..	..	..
Legislative Assembly	..	..	3	(1) 21st August, 1933 to 25th September, 1933. (2) 10th January, 1934 to 6th February, 1934. (3) 31st January, 1934 to 30th April, 1934.
Commerce...	1*	25th August 1933 to date continuing.	3	(1) 1st February, 1934 to (continuing). (2) 16th August, 1933 to 13th November, 1933. (3) 23rd February, 1934 to 11th March, 1934.
Education, Health and Lands.	..	..	2	(1) 21st July, 1933 to 15th April, 1934. (2) 29th January, 1934 to 14th April, 1934.
Railway (Railway Board).	..	..	12 (6 from retrenched staff). Unpassed.	(1) December, 1933, 1st to 28th January, 1934, 1—14th February, 1934, 6—12th March, 1934. (2) 6—30th November, 1933, December, 1933 to March, 1934. (3) 1—22nd December, 1933, 2nd January, 1934, to 15th February, 1934. (4) December, 1933 and January 1934. (5) 1st December, 1933 to 15th February, 1934. (6) 1—11th February, 1934.

(These persons were appointed to temporary posts or vacancies lasting from less than a week to a month. The period shown is the total of continuous temporary appointment.)

Name of Department.	No. of candidates selected from the P.S. C.'s list. (a)	Duration of vacancies.	No. of un-passed candidates appointed. (b)	Duration of vacancies.
Foreign and Political	..	..	5	*(1) 24th July, 1933 to 3rd or 4th week of June, 1934. *(2) 21st September, 1933 to 3rd or 4th week of June, 1934. (3) 10th August, 1933 to 3rd October, 1933. (4) 2nd January, 1934 to 26th April, 1934. (5) 2nd January, 1934 to 10th March, 1934. *The Public Service Commission have been asked to nominate candidates for these posts.
Reforms Office	..	..	..
Industries and Labour	2	Upto 31st March 1935 (at present).	4	(1) and (2) up to 31st March, 1935. (3) Up to 25th May, 1934. (4) Up to 18th April, 1934.
Military Finance	..	..	1	3 months and 9 days.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 477, asked by Mr. A. Das on the 14th March, 1934.

PAYMENT OF SINGLE-PAYMENT STERLING POLICIES OR PREMIUMS BY INSTALLMENTS FROM PROVIDENT FUNDS.

(a) The total amount withdrawn from Government provident funds, civil and military, during the period from the 1st April, 1930, to the 30th September, 1933, for the payment of premiums on single-payment sterling insurance policies was approximately Rs. 1,24,91,000. It has been found impracticable to collect the information asked for in respect of sterling policies on which the premiums were paid in instalments since the figures are not always booked separately in the Government accounts.

(b) As the Honourable Member will have observed from the first paragraph of the circular to which he refers, the reference was to any policy in which the insurance company undertakes to pay a fixed sum at a fixed date, with a provision that should the assured die before that date, the single premium or periodical premiums paid (plus in certain types nominal interest or profits immediately declared) would be repaid to his estate.

The reply to the second part is in the negative. 'Endowment assurance policies' and 'Pure endowment policies' are entirely different types of policies.

(c) The opinion referred to was formed as the result of the examination of the rates offered by certain British Life Offices. The rebate of income-tax was not taken into account.

(d) The circular was issued only for the reason stated in the second paragraph thereof, namely, that Government were of the opinion that the benefits guaranteed to dependents by pure endowment policies in the event of the subscriber's death before maturity of the policy are inferior to what the Funds themselves provide.

(e) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. The benefits of the Post Office Insurance Fund are confined to Government servants and persons of analogous position, and it is considered that the existing practice does not involve unfair competition with private insurance enterprise. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce on the 12th September, 1933, to part (c) of Mr. Studd's starred question No. 837.

(f) The Postal Insurance Fund has only one class of endowment assurance policies and there are no separate with-profit and without-profit policies. A quinquennial examination and valuation of the Fund is made by the Government Actuary and, as a result of these examinations, a simple reversionary bonus at the rate of .8 per mensem per 1,000 rupees of the sum assured in the case of endowment assurance policies, which works out to .96 per cent. of the sum assured per annum, was distributed for the quinquennium ending the 31st March, 1927, while a simple reversionary bonus at the rate of one per mensem per 1,000 rupees, equal to 1.2 per cent. of the sum assured per annum, has just been declared for the quinquennium ending the 31st March, 1932.

The balances of the Post Office Insurance Fund are not invested in Government securities at 3½ per cent. rate of interest as presumed by the Honourable Member. They are kept with Government as 'unfunded debt' bearing interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum free of income-tax. The reasons for the low rate of bonus allotted to policies of the Post Office Insurance Fund are—

(1) the premiums charged by the Fund are based on a 3½ per cent. rate of interest which is exactly the rate at which its balances are accumulated and no profit is therefore earned from interest income, and

(2) the provision for profit made in these premiums is comparatively lower than that made in the premiums charged by life insurance companies.

The Postal Insurance Fund was not taken into account in the calculations of Mr. Christie. The Fund does not issue any 'pure endowment policy'.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 693, asked by Sardar Sant Singh, on the 14th April, 1934.

CONSOLIDATED ALLOWANCE TO THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

(a) Yes, under orders contained in Railway Board's letter No. 7195-F., dated the 24th July, 1931.

(b) Yes, under Supplementary Rule 22.

(c) and (d). No. The Government have waived recovery of the excess amounts drawn in good faith by the special Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway.

THE HINDU TEMPLE ENTRY DISABILITIES REMOVAL BILL.

PETITIONS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I have to report that 302 petitions, as per statement laid on the table, have been received relating to the Bill to remove the disabilities of the so-called Depressed Classes in regard to entry into Hindu temples, which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 24th March, 1933, by Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer.

No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.	No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Province.
50	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.	21	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.
27	Do.	Do.	14	Do.	Do.
11	Do.	Do.	45	Do.	Do.
47	Do.	Do.	93	Do.	Do.
20	Do.	Do.	64	Do.	Do.
23	Do.	Do.	55	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	58	Do.	Do.
22	Do.	Do.	58	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	53	Do.	Do.
23	Do.	Do.	57	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	51	Do.	Do.
21	Do.	Do.	47	Do.	Do.
38	Do.	Do.	96	Do.	Do.
42	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
39	Do.	Do.	30	Do.	Do.
41	Do.	Do.	57	Do.	Do.
37	Do.	Do.	34	Do.	Do.
41	Do.	Do.	46	Do.	Do.
34	Do.	Do.	53	Do.	Do.
51	Do.	Do.	54	Do.	Do.
22	Do.	Do.	28	Do.	Do.
24	Do.	Do.	24	Do.	Do.
54	Do.	Do.	17	Do.	Do.
56	Do.	Do.	48	Do.	Do.
58	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
49	Do.	Do.	46	Do.	Do.
48	Do.	Do.	14	Do.	Do.
56	Do.	Do.	37	Do.	Do.
4	Do.	Do.	41	Do.	Do.
54	Do.	Do.	63	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
20	Do.	Do.	63	Do.	Do.
51	Do.	Do.	35	Do.	Do.
31	Do.	Do.	88	Do.	Do.
15	Do.	Do.	86	Do.	Do.
57	Do.	Do.	82	Do.	Do.
111	Do.	Do.	44	Do.	Do.
97	Do.	Do.	42	Do.	Do.
86	Do.	Do.	21	Do.	Do.
88	Do.	Do.	14	Do.	Do.
144	Do.	Do.	70	Do.	Do.
57	Do.	Do.	69	Do.	Do.
72	Do.	Do.	51	Do.	Do.

No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.	No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.
54	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.	81	Darbhanga	Bihar and Orissa.
34	Do.	Do.	51	Do.	Do.
20	Do.	Do.	60	Do.	Do.
40	Do.	Do.	63	Do.	Do.
37	Do.	Do.	65	Do.	Do.
73	Do.	Do.	30	Do.	Do.
13	Do.	Do.	75	Do.	Do.
70	Do.	Do.	76	Do.	Do.
75	Do.	Do.	63	Do.	Do.
31	Do.	Do.	50	Do.	Do.
63	Do.	Do.	66	Do.	Do.
56	Do.	Do.	66	Do.	Do.
41	Do.	Do.	74	Do.	Do.
53	Do.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
60	Do.	Do.	100	Do.	Do.
53	Do.	Do.	87	Do.	Do.
135	Do.	Do.	79	Do.	Do.
53	Do.	Do.	94	Do.	Do.
80	Do.	Do.	88	Do.	Do.
96	Do.	Do.	105	Do.	Do.
82	Do.	Do.	83	Do.	Do.
85	Do.	Do.	70	Do.	Do.
59	Do.	Do.	100	Do.	Do.
70	Do.	Do.	92	Do.	Do.
66	Do.	Do.	93	Do.	Do.
42	Do.	Do.	84	Do.	Do.
78	Do.	Do.	40	Do.	Do.
85	Do.	Do.	80	Do.	Do.
88	Do.	Do.	102	Do.	Do.
95	Do.	Do.	96	Do.	Do.
86	Do.	Do.	53	Do.	Do.
12	Do.	Do.	63	Do.	Do.
62	Do.	Do.	44	Do.	Do.
67	Do.	Do.	54	Do.	Do.
35	Do.	Do.	55	Do.	Do.
60	Do.	Do.	68	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	22	Do.	Do.
8	Do.	Do.	40	Do.	Do.
67	Do.	Do.	59	Do.	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	94	Do.	Do.
26	Do.	Do.	27	Do.	Do.
33	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
56	Do.	Do.	30	Do.	Do.

No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.	No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.
53	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.	47	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.
54	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
25	Do.	Do.	10	Do.	Do.
66	Do.	Do.	34	Do.	Do.
39	Do.	Do.	31	Do.	Do.
55	Do.	Do.	42	Do.	Do.
70	Do.	Do.	23	Do.	Do.
56	Do.	Do.	92	Do.	Do.
74	Do.	Do.	36	Do.	Do.
51	Do.	Do.	60	Do.	Do.
40	Do.	Do.	22	Do.	Do.
37	Do.	Do.	84	Do.	Do.
77	Do.	Do.	109	Do.	Do.
7	Do.	Do.	18	Do.	Do.
70	Do.	Do.	81	Do.	Do.
42	Do.	Do.	107	Do.	Do.
21	Do.	Do.	10	Do.	Do.
27	Do.	Do.	41	Do.	Do.
50	Do.	Do.	24	Do.	Do.
42	Do.	Do.	23	Do.	Do.
46	Do.	Do.	60	Do.	Do.
53	Do.	Do.	48	Do.	Do.
46	Do.	Do.	85	Do.	Do.
63	Do.	Do.	88	Do.	Do.
34	Do.	Do.	71	Do.	Do.
97	Do.	Do.	69	Do.	Do.
45	Do.	Do.	154	Do.	Do.
8	Do.	Do.	89	Do.	Do.
24	Do.	Do.	67	Do.	Do.
75	Do.	Do.	54	Do.	Do.
16	Do.	Do.	31	Do.	Do.
57	Do.	Do.	52	Do.	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	66	Do.	Do.
47	Do.	Do.	76	Do.	Do.
55	Do.	Do.	15	Do.	Do.
45	Do.	Do.	11	Do.	Do.
49	Do.	Do.	20	Do.	Do.
48	Do.	Do.	56	Do.	Do.
51	Do.	Do.	70	Do.	Do.
31	Do.	Do.	70	Do.	Do.
33	Do.	Do.	30	Do.	Do.
50	Do.	Do.	40	Do.	Do.
			8	Do.	Do.

No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.	No. of signato- ries.	District or town.	Provinces.
54	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.	14	Darbhanga.	Bihar & Orissa.
12	Do.	Do.	70	Do.	Do.
52	Do.	Do.	50	Do.	Do.
46	Do.	Do.	76	Do.	Do.
24	Do.	Do.	46	Do.	Do.
28	Do.	Do.	11	Do.	Do.
13	Do.	Do.	28	Do.	Do.
85	Do.	Do.	45	Do.	Do.
40	Do.	Do.	23	Do.	Do.
63	Do.	Do.	8	Do.	Do.
54	Do.	Do.	54	Do.	Do.
36	Do.	Do.	24	Do.	Do.
44	Do.	Do.	22	Do.	Do.
38	Do.	Do.	8	Do.	Do.
36	Do.	Do.	75	Do.	Do.
50	Do.	Do.	62	Do.	Do.
62	Do.	Do.	24	Do.	Do.
38	Do.	Do.	60	Do.	Do.
58	Do.	Do.	76	Do.	Do.
73	Do.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
47	Do.	Do.	45	Do.	Do.
20	Do.	Do.
33	Do.	Do.
19	Do.	Do.	15,504	Grand Total.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume further consideration of the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The Honourable Member in charge began his speech yesterday by saying that the issues involved in this Bill are simple. Then he went on to develop that point and stated that we in this Bill are concerned principally with the place of detention and not the power of detention which had been provided for by the Bengal Legislature ; but, a few moments later, my Honourable friend, in pointing out the second feature of the legislation which is sought to be given a permanent life by this amendment Bill, stated that the second provision was intended to bar the powers of the High Court in regard to Habeas Corpus. I, therefore, maintain that my Honourable friend was not quite correct when he stated that under this Bill we were principally concerned with the question as to where the detenus were to be detained and that the issue of detention without trial did not arise directly out of this Bill. I maintain, on the other hand, that we are asked to confirm the principle of banishment without trial of detenus who are suspected of complicity in the terrorist movement and whose guilt has not been proved before any Court of law, or any regularly constituted authority, before whom these people had any chance of making their defence. The second principle which this Bill involves is, if I may borrow the frank words that were used by the Honourable Sir Brojendra Mitter on a similar occasion before, the substitution of executive judgment in place of judicial judgment as a permanent feature of the law of this land. Now, Sir, the Honourable Member in charge stated that the Bengal Legislative Council having made permanent the provisions of their Act of 1930, our Act VIII of 1932, which was passed as a consequential measure, has necessarily to be made permanent. And, following this cue, my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, stated that this Bill is a mere logical corollary, a mere consequential amendment of a Bengal Act which has been recently passed.

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

Now, Sir, assuming that the principle of detention without trial is accepted, does banishment necessarily follow as a logical consequence of it? In my study of the proceedings of the Bengal Legislative Council in connection with the last measure which was passed just a few months ago, as also in connection with the measure which was passed in 1930, I do not find any indication in the official speeches there which show that banishment was in the least contemplated by the Government of Bengal or that Deoli was even then in contemplation. As a matter of fact, I find that some Bengal Members complained afterwards when Deoli had become an accomplished fact that they knew nothing about it. As a matter of fact, they said that it was only as a result of the report of the Public Accounts Committee, or the proceedings before the Public Accounts Committee in Bengal, that they came to learn that funds were being provided for the detention camp at Deoli. So far with regard to the necessary logical connection between the Bengal Act and the present Bill. Why was Deoli wanted? We had an elaborate explanation from the Honourable Member in charge, and his statement amounted to this in effect, that unless we provide for banishment, in the case at least of the more hardened among the suspects, their detention cannot be effected satisfactorily. "Bengal finds it difficult to keep them in effective segregation in Bengal." That is the purport of the statement of the Honourable Member. Now, Sir, I remember a similar statement was also made by his predecessor in office, when the Bill of 1932 was under discussion. But this very question was raised in the Bengal Legislative Council as well, and no earlier than the 19th March, 1934, by way of a token cut in connection with the demands for the budget grants. The following official reply was given, I am quoting from the speech by the Honourable Mr. Reid on that occasion:

"There was a great congestion in Bengal, and we could not accommodate further detenus here."

That is what he puts in the forefront. The first and foremost reason for Deoli was that there was a great congestion in Bengal and they could not accommodate further detenus there; that is one reason why it was started. I dare say that if that reason was a valid reason in the year 1932, when the Civil Disobedience Movement was at its height and the jails in Bengal were chokeful of Civil Disobedience prisoners, that reason no longer holds good today. Now, I will let the Honourable Mr. Reid proceed with his statement. The second reason was this:

"These men whom we have in the detention camp are all men who are deep in the terrorist movement. To remove them outside the Province does make a difference both to conditions here and also to their own mentality."

We do not find anything here specifically stated with regard to the communications by detenus being more feasible from detention camps with the outside world, if they are to be kept in Bengal, and a new element has been introduced here to which I should like to draw the attention of the House once more:

"To remove them outside the Province does make a difference both to conditions here and also to their own mentality."

This element of the effect of banishment on the mentality of political suspects has never before been mentioned in this House, as far as I am aware. To put it in a nutshell, the position of the Government of Bengal is that these terrorist suspects should be terrorized out of terrorism. Sir, English is not my mother-tongue, but I should like to ask my Honourable friend, the Member in charge, as to what exactly is meant by the expected "difference to the mentality" of these people which is looked forward to as a result of their banishment. I know that the Honourable Member in charge has always assumed that these suspects are as good or as bad as confirmed terrorists against whom definite charges have virtually been proved. But here comes in a fundamental difference in the outlook of this side of the House and that; and that is that, so long as these people are not placed before any properly constituted authority where they may have proper chances of putting in their defence, so long as they have not any chance of clearing themselves, public opinion will not easily take these suspects to be confirmed terrorists, which, I take it, is the case of the Honourable Member. Now, with regard to the question of the investigation which takes place, before orders of internment or detention are passed I took the occasion to look up the Rowlatt Committee Report and I should very much like to place one paragraph of that report which today sounds so very liberal in its recommendations. I would draw the attention of the Honourable Member in charge to paragraph 191 of that report where the Committee contemplated "an investigation authority":

"An investigating authority or authorities should be constituted, as to which we shall say more later on."

Then they go on to deal with the duty of the investigating authority:

"The duty of the investigating authority will be to inquire in camera upon any materials which they may think fit and without being bound by rules of evidence. They would send for the person and tell him what is alleged against him and investigate the matter as fairly and adequately as possible in the manner of a domestic tribunal. It would not be necessary to disclose the sources of information, if that would be objectionable from the point of view of other persons. No advocates would be allowed on either side or witnesses formally examined, nor need the person whose case is under investigation be present during all the inquiry. Should such person indicate that other persons or any other inquiries may throw light on the matter from his point of view, the investigating authority would endeavour to test the suggestion, if it seems relevant and reasonable. At the close of the inquiry the investigating authority would certify their conclusion to the Local Government."

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

Now, Sir, I do not know these things as well as my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, does, and I am assured on his authority that this particular recommendation, even of the Rowlatt Committee, has not been followed in practice and that the facilities and the opportunities which even that Committee contemplated that these suspects should be given have been denied to them for the past so many years. Then, to come to the question of the composition of the authority, here again I would like to read out just a few sentences from the Rowlatt Committee Report, viz., paragraph 193 :

"If the functions of the investigating authority are such as we have described, the difficulty of its composition is minimized. For an inquiry in a judicial spirit into facts, knowledge and experience are the requisites. It has been suggested to us that the judicial, the executive and the non-official elements should be represented upon the body or bodies in question. Having indicated the functions which we recommend for the investigating authority, we do not feel that we are driven to give our views as to its exact composition. But we think we may say, as based upon the experience gained in the course of our labours, that one member should be a non-official Indian selected for his knowledge of the people."

I should like to know from my Honourable friend as to the reasons why Government have departed from the recommendations of such an eminent authority as the Rowlatt Committee, both in regard to the question of the personnel of the investigating authority and its powers and procedure. As I have said before, Indian public opinion will refuse to accept the executive judgment in these cases as conclusive.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, in the course of his speech, stated that this measure alone would not end terrorism, and then he referred with appreciation to the fact that public opinion has been actively ranging itself against the menace of terrorism in Bengal. Was that the only other thing necessary, I ask? My Honourable friend left me in some doubt, because he did not mention any other thing that might be necessary,—any other action that might be necessary for the purpose of stamping out this menace from this land; and it was only when my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, was speaking that the Honourable gentleman interjected an observation to suggest that there were other steps to be taken, but that these were being considered by the Government of Bengal.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig (Home Member) : I think my Honourable friend will remember that, when I was referring to Sir John Anderson, I said particularly that he was endeavouring to devise other remedies.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am very glad my Honourable friend has explained that point. As a matter of fact, I am just going to quote a few words from a speech which His Excellency Sir John Anderson made before the Bengal Legislative Council on the 28th February, 1933. This is what he said :

"While I claim that that experience goes to show that the outward manifestations of disorder can only be dealt with by what are called repressive measures, and that any Government that neglects or fears to employ such measures, is sealing its own doom, my Government have always realized that there are certain underlying or predisposing causes of unrest that must be removed if lasting improvement is to be achieved. It is not enough to meet force by force or to overbear lawlessness by asserting the majesty and the power of the law. An atmosphere must if possible be created in which the seeds of disorder will not readily germinate. Here, in Bengal, as any careful observer must realize, there are problems,—political...."

and here I should like my Honourable friend, Captain Lal Chand, (I wish he were here) to listen to me—

"There are problems—political, social and economic, formidable no doubt in character, but amenable, I am sure, to treatment, given the imagination, resolution and good-will, the solution of which would in a short time change the whole aspect of affairs."

I should have very much liked my Honourable friend, the Member in charge, to tell this House the manner in which the Government of India are trying to help the Government of Bengal in carrying out the tremendous task which His Excellency Sir John Anderson referred to and has undertaken. I very much hope that the only contribution which the Government of India are making to the solution of this problem does not consist of this measure or measures of this kind.

Now, Sir, there are very great impediments in the way of public opinion asserting itself in an effective manner so as to combat this evil, and there are very great difficulties in the way of creating a favourable atmosphere for the effective co-operation of the people and the Government for stamping out this menace from our country. One impediment is the existence of repressive measures if, as they are as a matter of fact, they are operated in a repressive manner and in an indiscriminate fashion. And the second impediment is terrorism by local officials for which there is no remedy anywhere.

Now, Sir, I should like to refer to a statement which the Honourable the Home Member laid on the table only the other day in reply to certain allegations which were made by my Honourable friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, in the course of his speech at Delhi sometime ago. These allegations, as also the official reply, have a somewhat familiar ring about them. I was struck, when the allegations were being made by my Honourable friend at Delhi, by a strange family liking which they bore to certain incidents which I had the misfortune of witnessing with my own eyes in the distinguished company of a very distinguished friend of our present Law Member, I mean Mr. Jatindra Nath Basu, whose testimony, I dare say, he will ask his Honourable colleague, the Home Member, to accept. On that occasion—and it was about four years ago, before there had been one single terrorist outrage in the district of Midnapore—things, which I do not want to mention now, happened or used to happen as a matter of course, as a matter of routine almost; and some of us, who had gone down there, were arrested for the hardihood of having gone and witnessed the depredations that were being committed under the direct charge of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate there. And I may tell my Honourable friend, the Law Member, perhaps he knows it already, that for that offence, that is to say, for having gone to see what things were taking place, his distinguished friend, Mr. Basu, and several others, including my own humble self, were placed under immediate arrest. And, not very long after that, the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was promoted to a District Magistrateship.

Now, Sir, the countryside has been harried for the last four years, from the beginning of the second Civil Disobedience Movement, by police raids and police hooliganism. Innumerable questions have been asked here and in the Bengal Legislative Council. Allegations have been made of wanton insults to respectable people, assaults on all and sundry,—men, women and children,—and wanton destruction of property without any discrimination whatsoever. Now, Sir, I have no desire to refer to those incidents in any great detail, but for the particular benefit of my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, who, I am sorry, is not in the House just now, I should like to refer to certain incidents which happened in Chittagong and to which reference was made, not by any disgruntled agitator, but by a gentleman who had, not long before that, been the Divisional Commissioner of the Chittagong Division himself, I mean Khan Bahadur Maulvi Abdul Momin, who after retirement from that responsible office, became a non-official Member of the Bengal Legislative Council. On the 1st of December, as also on the 5th of December, 1932, he made specific allegations of a very serious character against the police authorities of Chittagong and he stated that the houses of about 150 Mussalmans of the Chittagong town (including the houses of very respectable persons) were searched on the 16th November, 1932, that in the course of searches Muhammadan ladies were rudely treated (Cries of "shame") and men were assaulted, that the Muezzin of a particular mosque was threatened with a bayonet and prevented from calling the Azan, and that this had led to a good deal of agitation among the Muslim community. Of course the usual vague answers followed denying the allegations in the usual form. This matter came up once more for discussion in the Bengal Legislative Council and Mr. Momin repeated these charges in substance. We then had Mr. Shama Prasad Mukherjee, who also spoke on that occasion, re-enforcing Mr. Momin's statements with some personal remarks of his own relating to other similar incidents that were happening in the country. I may tell this House that this Mr. Shama Prasad Mukherjee has just been thought fit by the Government of Bengal for being appointed the Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University. And this is what he stated :

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

"The report (I am reading out from the speech of Mr. Shama Prasad Mukherjee) which has been read out by Mr. Abdul Karim, is not, therefore, an isolated instance. Things like that have been happening in different parts of Chittagong."

Then, later on, referring to a particular case, he says :

"In this case, men were brought out of their houses and their hands were tied behind their backs and their women-folk were made to stand for hours. One of these women, who was pregnant, asked for permission to sit down but the result was that abuses were hurled at her. But the climax was reached and all these gentlemen, who were apparently respectable persons, were made to dance in a circle."

Then, he added :

"I do not know what particular amusement it offered to the officer in charge, as indeed I do not know what particular amusement would it offer to anybody in this House to see my Honourable friend and members of his department dancing round the circle, although that is an experiment worth trying."

Now, Sir, let me come to Maulvi Abdul Karim, a name which is universally respected in Bengal, a venerable old gentleman, who retired from Government service after holding the responsible appointment of an Inspector of Schools. This is what he stated. I am not going to read out all that he said. I will quote just a few lines :

"That innocent people have been harassed at times by zealous officers is perhaps too well-known to need detailed mention. It is to be regretted that, either for lack of correct information or for the sake of prestige Government did not seem inclined to take such action as would put a stop to these deplorable state of things. What happened at Chittagong the other day? We have received reliable information, which we have no reason to disbelieve, that a number of innocent men and Pardanashin women were roughly handled and greatly humiliated and the Muezzin of a mosque was prevented from saying the call to prayers by reason of a search for absconders."

And he stated that, as a result of the search of 150 Mussalmans' houses, not a single absconder was discovered. Then he added :

"I need hardly say (that is how he concluded) that regrettable occurrences such as this are causing indescribable sufferings to the people and creating an immense discontent and disaffection throughout the country. Even those who have all along been staunch loyalists are fast losing faith in Government's justice and fairness. I shudder to think what the ultimate result of all this would be. The sooner the undesirable impression prevailing in the country is removed and the people are assured not by mere words but by effective action that such deplorable incidents could not be tolerated any longer the better would it be for all concerned."

I do not think that this appeal or warning made by a man, who had served the Government all his life so loyally, produced any result.

Now, Sir, these allegations are met with the usual official denials both here and in Bengal. But, has my Honourable friend taken the trouble to enquire as to the percentage of people who put any belief in the Government communiqués that are issued on such occasions or in Government replies? If he had, he would have been struck by the tragedy that after 150 years of British rule in India official statements in such matters are presumed to be false by the people at large. It is my contention, and it is the contention of this side of the House, that terrorism is partially, nay, very largely, being fed by these acts of oppression committed by the local officials for which there does not appear to be any remedy at all either here or anywhere else. It is on this account that repressive measures are not proving as effective as they might otherwise be. My Honourable friend is leaving this high office in a few days. May I make one appeal to him that before he leaves, he may institute a committee of enquiry, consisting of High Court Judges, drawn from the different Provinces, who would tour the different parts of the country which are affected and make an open enquiry as to how far the Government policy and such acts of official terrorism are responsible for keeping alive the terrorist movement in Bengal. I dare say that if such action were to be taken by my Honourable friend, it would be seen that the responsibility for keeping alive the terrorist movement lies to a very large extent on the shoulders of the over-jealous local officials (Hear, hear) who are not being checked properly from above. And so long as they are not checked, such repressive measures would, in any event, prove to be futile. When we make complaints, we do not assume that things would have been better if India were at the present moment being governed by any other European nation. But it is no compliment to Government to say that the condition of things in India would have been worse if we were under Nazi rule. I do not think it would be any compliment to the British rule in India to say that. Poet Tagore in his own inimitable way has stated in a recent article :

"Even in times of hardest trials, I cannot own to myself that magnanimity is lacking in the English character; other Europeans in their treatment of subject peoples are less generous and more cruel than the English. The opposition that we show in word and deed against the English race and their administration is unthinkable against rulers of other races. Even had it been otherwise, the punishment would have been far less bearable, proof of which is not wanting in Europe itself or even in America. Even when we openly revolt and are punished by the officials, we complain in surprise, which only shows that even in the midst of the beatings we receive our deep respect for the English people dies hard."

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

I want the Honourable Member in charge to realise that they have fallen off from the great ideals that inspired the early pioneers of British rule in India. I want my Honourable friend, before he leaves the shores of the country, to do something to rehabilitate British rule in India on the old and sound foundations of justice, equity, and good conscience. It is because this particular measure is un-British in its character, it is because the policy which stands behind this measure and its likes is absolutely un-British in its character, that I must emphatically record my protest against the present Bill.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Sir, there have been so many Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Acts with their partial repeals and other supplementary Acts that it may not be altogether unprofitable to tell the House in a very few words of the exact legal situation today. We need not go back earlier than 1930. In 1930, the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act was introduced and passed. Put very shortly, the result of that Act among other things was, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, has pointed out, executive judgment was substituted for the judgment of Courts. That was done in 1930. I am not referring to its minor or to its detailed provisions. It enacted that where, in the opinion of the Government, something was happening, they would have the power to detain persons in jail without trial in any established Court of law. I need not refer to the details of notifications of residence, powers of search, this, that, and so on. That was done in 1930. The next thing was that, in 1932, this House passed an Act which was called the Supplementary Act, and the result of that Supplementary Act was that the Bengal prisoners could be segregated outside Bengal, and, on that occasion, the House, by its decision and by its passing that particular Act, the Supplementary Act, approved of the principle that Bengal being in difficulties with the grave menace which had appeared there, it was the duty of this House to go to her rescue and to allow the prisoners to be taken outside Bengal. That was done in 1932. Then I should remind the House that the 1932 Act, which was passed by this House (it was called the Supplementary Act), would expire sometime in 1935. The idea was that the Supplementary Act would expire with the main Act and, as matters stood in 1930, the main Act would expire in 1935, and, therefore, this House decided that it will help Bengal in her difficulties and in her distress by allowing the prisoners to be taken outside Bengal and both Acts would expire sometime in 1935, the hope being that by that time the situation would so much improve that neither the first Act nor the second Act would require to be continued or made permanent. In this state of affairs in 1934, the Bengal Council, as this House has been informed so often during the debates, passed what I may call shortly the Act of 1934. By the Act of 1934 they repealed the section in the Act of 1930 which was section 1(4) which limited the life of that Act of 1930 to five years. The result of the Act of 1934 has been that the Act of 1930 has been made permanent. In addition to that, again, I am not going into details, very drastic powers have been given to the Government, to the executive, in addition to the powers which they already had under the Act of 1930. It will be enough if I remind the House, for instance, of the provision that in the case of a man found in possession of arms, if it was proved that the possession was with the object of committing murder, then he could be sentenced to death or transportation for life. That was one of the additional provisions of 1934. There were further additional provisions in the shape of control over literature, punishment for possessing literature of a certain kind, and so on. Therefore, the result, when the Act of 1934 was passed, was this that the Bengal Legislature, by an overwhelming majority,—a division of something like 80 to 20,—by its Act recited that it is necessary in the interest of the State to give further powers to check the activities of the terrorists. It gave powers which are very much wider than the powers which the executive enjoyed under the Act of 1930. It proceeded to repeal the section which made the previous Act only temporary, its life expiring after five years. That was the position in 1934 after the passing of that Act. At the present moment the legal situation, therefore, is this that the main Act, of which the Act of 1932 passed by this House was a supplement, is now permanently on the Statute-book. The supplemental Act which was intended to be co-extensive with the main Act is now in this position that it will expire in 1935 leaving the main Act to operate even after the Supplementary Act had come to an end. That is the exact legal situation.

Now, Sir, I shall deal with some of the points which have been raised by my Honourable friends on the opposite Benches. I do not intend to deal with all their points, but I find that one point which has been pressed by almost every Honourable Member is this, that this law is a repressive law; this law has failed in spite of all legislation; terrorism has not come to an end; so what is the object of persisting in similar legislation? We have heard similes of quacks and doctors; we had prescriptions here given by three Honourable Members widely varying from one another. May I tell the House that if they will only apply that principle to offences which are non-political, they will find out the soundness or otherwise of this reasoning. I am applying the reasoning to non-political crimes, because, in politics, even in connection with crimes, reason has but little scope, passion and prejudice succeed in overpowering reason. Now, in the case of murder or in case of dacoity, in spite of a sentence of death or transportation for life or a long term of rigorous imprisonment having been on the Statute-book at all possible times, has it put an end to murder? Has it put an end to dacoity? Is it a good argument to say that you must abolish all these punishments and say, what is the good of having any punishment prescribed against dacoity and murder if those things are still persisting? How would the argument sound, that so long as root causes of murder, such as avarice and revenge are not removed, it is useless trying to prevent murders?

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : But this Act is a preventive Act and not a punitive one.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I am obliged to my Honourable friend for reminding me that it is a preventive Act and not a punitive one. I take him at his word. Why do you take steps for preventing murder or dacoity, when you know all your "legislation has failed", because murder has not gone out of the land? In the case of political crimes, in dealing with terrorism, you say we should go to the root cause; until the root cause has been discovered and the thing has been uprooted, it is no good indulging in these palliatives. Why don't you do that in the case of murder?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : But you passed a law only the other day. Half a dozen laws were passed in the last four years; in what other country has the Legislature passed half a dozen laws for preventing murder?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : In what other country has terrorism appeared in such a form within the last few years ? (Voices : "Russia, Germany, Ireland.") And if my friend is thinking of other countries, I do not like to talk about them, because there are countries like Germany or Italy or Russia where these measures will be considered as milk and water provisions not worth looking at. Let us not think of other countries, where there happen executions and not merely detentions without trial. I had been telling the House that Statutes for suppressing terrorism have been called repressive laws. That reminds me of the saying of a very learned Judge "that you gain nothing or lose nothing by simply adding a vituperative epithet".

Now, what is a repressive law ? I say that the case of the man who is transported for life, because he has murdered, the man who gets a sentence of imprisonment, because he has committed dacoity, and even in the case of a man in his motor car who is held up by a policeman while he is on the wrong side of the road, these are all cases of repression. Repression it must be, as, in the larger interests of the State and Society, crime has to be repressed. No one has contended, that, because, law very often is repression, therefore the amount of repression must have no bearing and no proportion to the crime which is intended to be prevented. Nor is there any issue on the question, whether the duty of the State consists solely in repressing and preventing crime. It has been conceded that the Governor of Bengal is doing all that is possible in other directions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : But His Excellency Sir John Anderson did not dispute that these measures can be described as repressive.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I think I am in good company if I say that I agree with Sir John Anderson. In fact, what I have now stated is not different from his views. I am only pointing out that nothing is gained by describing legislation for preventing terrorism as "repressive". We know exactly what they mean, what they are intended for and what their effect and operation amount to. They are meant for repressing crimes, and it is the duty of this House to help the administration in repressing terrorists.

Then, Sir, in considering the present Act, we need not go into the details of what exactly has been done by the Bengal Council. What amount of "repression" is necessary in the situation which has arisen in Bengal (Mr. K. C. Neogy : "And for all time"), and for what time and in what manner, that has been decided by the Bengal Council by men who are most competent to decide this matter. I daresay, if my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, had been in the Bengal Council, he would have tried to bring about such a change in their frame of mind that, by an overwhelming majority, the Bill would have been thrown out. But, as it is, the Bill has been passed. When a Statute is said to be permanent, of course it is always subject to its being repealed. And we have been assured that the time is not very far when some people who are not in the Assembly yet will get every repressive law repealed and that their permanency will disappear within a short time if that assurance is carried out. Honourable Members should remember, that temporary Acts have failed. They only induce the terrorists to bide their time.

Now, Sir, in considering this Bill, I beg of this House to remove from its mind certain considerations which, in my humble submission, are not relevant at all, on the sole issue which is being discussed, viz., whether suspects can be detained in jails outside Bengal. For instance, the consideration that the detenu loses his liberty, that he loses the company of friends, that in some cases prompt medical attention is not given and similar complaints,—I say in all humility that these are irrelevant considerations, because they may as well happen in jails inside Bengal as outside it. If there are cases of hardship, by reason of the iniquities of subordinate staff, they may as well occur in a Bengal jail as in a jail outside Bengal. I shall have to discuss the point as to why this additional restriction should be placed upon detenus : that is a different matter ; but I am pointing out to the House, that those factors, which are common to jails, whether they are inside or whether they are outside Bengal, do not come into the picture at all in considering the desirability or otherwise of this Act.

As regards the merits of those complaints, that is a matter which is more in the province of the Honourable the Home Member than myself ; but I cannot take it for granted, because my information is otherwise, that, as a matter of fact, these political detenus are each confined in a solitary cell. My information is, that is not the fact. Solitary cell may be prescribed both in Bengal and outside Bengal as punishment for breaches of jail discipline. The normal condition of life at Deoli is that the detenus live in large airy barracks, each barrack containing from thirty to forty persons and surely that is enough company for any one, and that is the best that can be done, assuming people have to be detained. But, as I said, those details are more in the province of my colleague, the Honourable the Home Member, than myself.

I shall advert to the Habeas Corpus Act after I have made a passing reference to the appeals which were made to the humanity of the gentlemen who are occupying the Treasury Benches. The appeal which has been made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, and by other speakers on the opposite side—I am not making light of them, I respect them for their consideration, for their concern for others and for their feelings of humanity ; but what I do protest against and protest most strongly is the assumption that this humanity, this consideration for the misery of fellow-beings is an absolute monopoly of gentlemen who occupy the other side of this House. I beg to assure them that it is no pleasure either to the Government of Bengal or to the Government of India or to the eighty gentlemen in the Bengal Council who passed this Act, it is no pleasure to them to be compelled by overriding necessity to have recourse to a measure of this kind. It is nonsense to suppose that men like Khan Bahadur Abdul Momin, whose name was mentioned by my friend, Mr. Neogy, and others who helped in passing this Act are less sensible to the misery of others than my friends on the opposite side. It is difficult to imagine that those gentlemen would be so callous that they would not pause to consider what the effect of this legislation was going to be. I submit that any sensible man would come to the conclusion that they were impelled by the grave menace which the Province has been faced with, the extreme peril to which society has been put, to take the measures which were enacted in that Act of 1934. To them, as to all reasonable men, detention without trial must be an abomination, but they were compelled to enact an abomination to get rid of, or at any rate to prevent, a greater abomination, namely, terrorism.

[Sir Nripendra Sircar.]

Now, my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, raised some questions about the power of this House to enact a law which would interfere either with the Habeas Corpus Act or with any rights under the common law which the subject has. That is purely a technical question, but I would like to put it in as non-technical language as is possible. I am sorry, time of this House has to be taken up in discussing legal questions, which really do not arise. My assertion in this House is that that question is not open to argument since the year of grace 1870, and I shall, as briefly as possible, give this House an account of the history of the decisions, not only of the Calcutta High Court, but of the Judicial Committee, relating to this matter. The thing started early in 1870 when the well-known case of Amir Khan was tried in the Calcutta High Court. He had been detained under the provisions of Regulation III of 1818. He applied before Mr. Justice Norman, and his counsel—a very eminent counsel—argued that this Regulation of 1818 was beyond the competence of the Indian Legislature. It had to be conceded by the Government that by that Act the Habeas Corpus Act had been suspended, and the other side said that the Indian Legislature could not do that, that the subject had certain rights under the Habeas Corpus Act, certain rights under the unwritten law of the Constitution, and certain other rights under the common law of England, and that none of these rights could be touched by the Indian Legislature. That was the exact point which was raised in Amir Khan's case. In the original trial, Mr. Justice Norman accepted the contention to some extent, and, if I may give his exact words, he came to the conclusion that an Act passed by the Indian Legislature which was contrary to the provisions of, say, the Magna Charta, would be beyond the competence of the Indian Legislature; he said:

"Legislation which restricted the existing rights of an individual in a manner contrary to the provisions of, for example, the Magna Charta, without the special justification expressed by the maxim salus populi suprema lex would be beyond the power of the Indian Legislature."

Having done that, Mr. Justice Norman went on to say:

"But, as a matter of fact, this law was not ultra vires, because, having regard to the conditions prevailing in this country, it was necessary for the larger interests of the State and for the society at large that some people should lose their right of going to the High Court and having matters questioned there."

That was his position. But, unfortunately, or fortunately, whatever it is, when the matter came up to the Court of Appeal, the Court of Appeal differed from Mr. Justice Norman and it will be my endeavour to place in five or six minutes before this Assembly the facts which will show that, ever since 1870, Courts, including the Judicial Committee, on repeated occasions have accepted, not the judgment of Mr. Justice Norman, but the judgment of the Judges in Appeal. The Judicial Committee, in one of the cases, rebuked counsel and told him that he ought to remember that the judgment of Mr. Justice Norman had not been accepted. When it went to the Court of Appeal—I am trying to be as brief as possible—Mr. Justice Markby and Mr. Justice Phear thoroughly disagreed with the opinion of Mr. Justice Norman and they came to the conclusion that, apart from any application of the maxim which I have quoted—salus populi suprema lex—which need not be considered at all—irrespective of that consideration, the Indian Legislature has every power to enact Bengal

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL. 571

Regulation III of 1818. And their Lordships said,—I will quote their exact words:

"The Learned Counsel who appeared for Amir Khan very strenuously argued that allegiance of the subject is co-relative with protection, and where sovereign cannot protect his subjects, their allegiance ceases."

Consequently, counsel said that Acts like Regulation III of 1818, which suspended the Habeas Corpus Act, and which prevented the High Court from testing the grounds on which detention had been ordered by executive authority, were illegal and ultra vires. Mr. Justice Phear, after pointing out that counsel was trying to convert a political sentiment into a principle of law, ended by saying:

"Surely, a more startling proposition than this was never made to this Court and it ought never for a moment to receive its sanction."

Mr. Justice Markby fully concurred, although he wrote a much shorter judgment, with Mr. Justice Phear, and if I may quote one passage from his judgment, he said:

"I see no ground for supposing that an Act affects the prerogative of the Crown, because it affects the liberty of the subject. If that were so, then the Indian Legislature would have no power at all to legislate in criminal matters,—a position which would not be entertained for a moment."

He also stated:

"I wholly repudiate the doctrine that the allegiance of a subject to his sovereign can by any possibility be legally affected by the mere withdrawal from the subject, of any right, privilege or immunity whatsoever. I think the notion of reciprocity upon which this argument depends is one which is wholly inadmissible in any legal consideration."

They once for all said that the mere fact that the liberty of the subject has been curtailed, that his privileges or immunities have been taken away, that the Habeas Corpus Act has been suspended, are no grounds for declaring an Indian Act to be ultra vires.

That was in 1870. I will tell the House rapidly how events have moved. Much later, about 23 years ago, before that eminent Judge, Chief Justice, Sir Lawrence Jenkins, this matter was again argued,—and I am referring to this case although there are a dozen, because in this case the matter, from the point of view of the subject, was argued with remarkable ability and strenuousness by the late Mr. C. R. Das, as the judgment itself will show. He pressed the argument of ultra vires, he pressed the point that the common law liberty of the subject has been taken away, he pressed the point that, under some unwritten law of the Constitution of England, the subject has the right to approach the Courts for investigating the facts upon which he was detained,—no point which could, with any reason, be argued was omitted by Mr. Das.....

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Are you not confining to the Calcutta High Court decisions?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Yes, Sir; I am confining myself to the Calcutta High Court decisions, and I shall proceed to show that the Calcutta High Court decisions have been affirmed on at least five occasions by the Judicial Committee, but I cannot take all the cases at the same time in the same breath. The contentions of Mr. Das were over-ruled by Chief Justice Jenkins who followed Amir Khan's case, and he said that the fact that, under the common law right, assuming the subject had any common law right, and assuming that the provisions of the Habeas Corpus Act had been suspended or abrogated, that did not mean that the Indian law was invalid, illegal or ultra vires. Still later,—I shall only give the House the reference,—the matter was decided by another Special Bench, again in Calcutta, of five Judges of the Calcutta High Court, and confirmed still later by Mr. Justice Carnduff. These are all Calcutta rulings,—but, before I come to the Judicial Committee, I would beg to remind the House of the fact that we are dealing with detenus in Bengal, and if in Calcutta the High Court, by their rulings, uniformly from 1870, have recognised that such an Act is not ultra vires, it is idle to say that some learned Judge in Bombay or Madras may have come to a different decision.....

[Sir Nripendra Sircar.]

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Will the Honourable Member allow me to ask a question ? Does he think that if the question of Habeas Corpus Act comes into question in other Presidencies, it will not be legal to suspend it ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat his question ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : As the Honourable Member is restricting his remarks of the Privy Council to Calcutta, I am asking that if the Habeas Corpus Act is attempted to be suspended in other parts of the country, will it be legal or not.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I shall just....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Does the Chair understand that any Honourable Member has raised a point of order whether the Bill before the House is ultra vires of this Legislature ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Sir, no point of order has been raised, but I will raise it, because, Sir, I know of a time when such a question was raised in this House. I asked the Secretary to help me to find out the ruling, and I am trying to find out the ruling given by your predecessor who held that the Legislature has got no power in that direction. I was only waiting to raise it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : May the Chair understand the Honourable Member now that he formally raises the point of order that this Bill before the House is ultra vires of the Indian Legislature ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : If the Chair will allow me to do it hereafter, when the Honourable the Law Member has finished his speech, I will do it then, otherwise I will.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : It seems to be an after-thought of the Honourable Member from the remarks made by the Honourable the Law Member.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I did not quite follow.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I must say that my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, did indicate the point, because I have it in my notes that he used the words ultra vires in connection with any Act which would suspend the Habeas Corpus Act ; he did raise that point. I have no difficulty in answering the point, whether in Bombay or Madras, a similar principle which has been laid down in Amir Khan's case will be followed. All I can say is this, that the Judicial Committee has repeatedly affirmed that an Act which abrogates the Habeas Corpus Act or which takes away any supposed common law rights, that will be intra vires of the Indian Legislature. If any learned Judge of the Bombay High Court refuses to follow the decisions of the Judicial Committee, that is a different matter. Now, Sir, about the Judicial Committee, I shall not take more than three minutes. In the case of Mrs. Annie Besant, which went up to the Judicial Committee, this principle was again affirmed, I mean the principle which was laid down in Amir Khan's case, that the supposed abrogation of the Habeas Corpus Act or the supposed interference with common law rights of the subject were not good grounds for attacking the Act of the Indian Legislature as being beyond its competence. I will quote only one sentence here from the judgment of the Privy Council in Besant's case. It was contended in the High Court and before this Board that it was beyond the competence of the Indian Legislature to enact section 22, and possibly even to enact the Press Act. This argument was mainly founded upon the language of Mr. Justice Norman in Amir Khan's case, and received some encouragement from the officiating Chief Justice,—that is my friend, Sir Abdur Rahim,—but Their Lordships found themselves unable to appreciate it. I think I may say with respect that the Judicial Committee was perfectly right in using the words "some encouragement", because, as I read Sir Abdur Rahim's judgment, from the point of view of the appellant it was encouraging in some parts, but extremely depressing in other parts, and, therefore, they are right in saying that there was some encouragement, but they were unable to appreciate it. This matter again came up before the Judicial Committee in appeal from a judgment of the Martial Law Commissioners of Lahore in the case known as the case of Bugga Singh and others. The argument was again attempted to be revived that the Indian Legislature has deprived the accused of the fundamental right of having his case tried by an established Court of law. Again the argument was advanced based on allegiance, common law rights, rights under the Constitution, Habeas Corpus Act, and every other possible matter was again pressed before the Judicial Committee. Their Lordships pointed out that counsel should have remembered that the view of Mr. Justice Norman had been thrown over by the appellate Judges. They further referred to two other cases, namely, to an unreported case of their own in the Privy Council, and also to a full bench case of the Patna High Court, all those cases affirming over and over again the principle which was laid down in Amir Khan's case. They said inter alia, the exact quotation being :

"It was contended that the Ordinances by depriving British subjects in India of the right to be tried by the established Courts of law affected the unwritten law of constitution whereon the allegiance of His Majesty's subjects in India depends. The law does not prevent the Indian Government from passing a law which may modify or affect a rule of the constitution or of the common law."

That is what the Judicial Committee said. Their Lordships again quoted fully and approved once more the appellate judgment in Amir Khan's case. Before I leave these cases, I will finally like to read a passage from the judgment of the Judicial Committee in Bugga Singh's case :

"If their Lordships were to adopt now the argument pressed upon them (that argument being based on the infraction of common law rights, the abrogation of the Habeas Corpus Act and similar and allied arguments) they would be casting doubt upon a long course of legislation and judicial decisions which must be presumed to have been known to and were in view of the Imperial Parliament when the Act of 1915 was passed."

[Sir Nripendra Sircar.]

Their Lordships then referred to various authorities with which I am not going to trouble the House, including the case of Mrs. Besant, and concluded :

"This argument cannot therefore prevail."

Shortly speaking, therefore, the position is this, that, from 1870 onwards, the Calcutta High Court consistently maintained that there is no ground for attacking legislation by the Indian Legislature on the ground of any question of allegiance or of infraction of common law rights or abrogation of the Habeas Corpus Act, and so on. The Judicial Committee, as I have shown, in these reported cases and also in their unreported case to which they themselves referred, have affirmed this principle. So far, therefore, the question seems to me so absolutely concluded by repeated decisions of the highest authority that there is no question of law which is now open to be argued so far as this aspect of the matter is concerned. With all respect to Mr. Navalrai, if I may say so, his points.....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : People know me as Lalchand Navalrai.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I am extremely sorry, and hope to be dealt with as a first offender. Regarding my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai,—his points of law will remind Honourable Members of the House of the story of the celebrated jumping frog of Mark Twain. They may remember that the owner of that celebrated frog was always boasting of the points of that frog, the particular special point being that it could jump more than any other frog. When the challenge was taken up, his enemy had taken the precaution of putting in a decent amount of shots into the stomach of the frog, and, at the crucial moment, the frog could not jump at all. I may say about my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's points that in the stomach of his frog so many shots have been put in by the Judicial Committee and by the Calcutta High Court that it would not jump at all.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I have other shots from other High Courts and other opinions.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I said that the legal frog would not jump. I never insinuated that my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, would not jump. (Laughter.)

Reading the debates on the last occasion, I find some points were made by my Honourable friend, Sir Abdur Rahim, and also by others. I have read them carefully and any arguments coming from my friends are entitled to be treated with great respect, and that is what I have done. If I differ from them, it is because I am entitled to my own opinion as they are entitled to theirs. One point made was this,—Why should you put in this section at all, 491, because it is not necessary. It was said, what could the High Court do when a man complained that he was being kept in detention without trial ? The High Court could only say whether a proper order under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act had been passed against the particular accused. If that had been done, the High Court would have no power, no authority to test the grounds on which the executive had been moved to act in the particular matter, and upon that, it was argued, what was the necessity of putting in this section ? Those arguments were met at length by my predecessor, Sir Brojendra Mitter, and I find, that in the end this House decided by a majority to have this clause, namely, to put in an express clause that section 491 will not apply to any persons detained under the Act. If we are now going to pass this Act and if we repeal that section, there can be but one implication, namely, the corresponding section 491 will apply to these proceedings. That is an impossible situation, because, by reason of the Bengal Act, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy,—I should use the full name—Mr. K. C. Neogy.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : It is not necessary in my case.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Mr. K. C. Neogy said that executive judgment had been substituted for the judgment of the Court. That is perfectly right, I am not going to dispute that for one second. But if that is so, what are the unfortunate High Court Judges going to do ? If the object of deleting the section relating to 491, is that the High Court will test the grounds on which the opinion of the Government was based, then the High Court would be helpless. They have been made helpless, not by anything which this House has done, but by the Bengal Act. Sir Abdur Rahim made another point, and that was quite a debatable point. He made the point : "Very well, but supposing the man has been kept in custody in jail, and, as a matter of fact, none of the provisions, even of this Act, had been complied with,—imagine a case where a man is put in jail. It is said that he is being kept in jail under the provisions of the Bengal Act of 1934, but, as a matter of fact, there was no order from the proper person in the Government expressing his opinion that this man ought to be kept in jail." Would the High Court have the power to interfere or not ? I think that is the point which my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, had in mind when he said, it was conceded by my predecessor that in such a case the High Court would have the power to interfere in spite of this second section relating to section 491; and, if I may say so, with respect to my learned predecessor, his answer was quite correct. All that the High Court could see in the supposed case, is, whether, as matter of fact, the provisions of this Statute had been complied with. There, its jurisdiction ends. It cannot go behind the order of the executive and then find out for itself whether the executive arrived at a right or a wrong conclusion about the guilt of this person. It has no right to sit in judgment over executive opinion, which is conclusive by reason of the Bengal Act.

Sir Abdur Rahim (Calcutta and Suburbs : Muhammadan Urban) : Then my Honourable friend agrees that the High Court can interfere with an order which does not conform to the provisions of the Act.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Yes. As a matter of information, I may tell my Honourable friend that this specific point came up before the Calcutta High Court, either last year or towards the end of the year before last. I am not sure whether both the cases have been reported. I believe one has been reported in the Calcutta Weekly Notes. I could not lay my fingers on the decision this morning. I think that Sir Abdur Rahim will remember that several applications were moved in the Calcutta High Court. Two of them were applications based on this particular ground, namely, that the provisions of this Act have not been complied with. In one case, the Bench was constituted, I think, by Mr.

[Sir Nripendra Sircar.]

Panckridge and another, and, in the other case, by Mr. Justice Ameer Ali and another Judge. However, the names of the Judges do not matter. I believe in each case they granted a rule, and I submit that they granted it quite properly, because prima facie on the affidavits there was an allegation that the provisions of the Bengal Act had not been complied with. In both these cases, rule was issued and the Crown was called to show cause and the applications were ultimately dismissed, not because the High Court had no power to go into that question, but because in each case the High Court was satisfied that there was an order by the executive which made it clear that in their opinion the man ought to be detained in jail without trial under the provisions of the Statute. I mention it specially because I find that Sir Abdur Rahim raised this question and that question has now been decided by the High Court in the way in which my friend contended.

I have only one other matter to raise. I have already said that whatever the conclusion might have been in 1932, this House thought it was unnecessary to introduce section 2, and they did act accordingly. At the present moment, the position is that this House having once considered it necessary to make it perfectly clear that section 491 was not going to apply ought not to withdraw it on the ground that it is unnecessary. After all, this House will certainly agree with me that this application of section 491, this question of law which we are discussing here and which Mr. Lalchand Navalrai raised, after all they are really of no substance whatsoever, nor of any material importance for obvious reasons. What according to my learned friends is the mischief, namely, the mischief of the substitution of executive judgment, that has been done by the Bengal Act, and having regard to the Bengal Act, it is not competent to the High Court, whether section 491 is made applicable or it is removed altogether, to go behind the opinion formed by the executive in relation to the necessity of detention under the provisions of that Act.

I do not think I shall take up more time of this House. If any other new points are raised about Habeas Corpus, common law rights or English constitution or Magna Charta, Petition of Rights, and so on, I shall certainly have an opportunity of dealing with them when the amendments are moved.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : On a point of order.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member will simply state the point of order. The Chair proposes to hear arguments in support of the point of order later on.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I want to have a ruling from the Chair whether the Habeas Corpus, the common law, can be superseded by this Legislature?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : If that is the only point on which the Honourable gentleman wants the decision of the Chair, it can straightaway give the ruling, without having the need of hearing arguments for and against. So far as the powers of this Legislature are concerned, the only restriction placed is contained in section 65 of the Government of India Act, and, under section 65 (2), the Indian Legislature has not power to make any law affecting the authority of Parliament or any part of the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom, or affecting the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of British India.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL. 577

The Chair understands the Honourable Member to mean that the Habeas Corpus law, being a part of the unwritten law and constitution of Great Britain and Ireland, any law of this Legislature affecting that law would be ultra vires. Is it not?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Yes, Sir. That is the point.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The answer to that is this. It is not merely sufficient to show that a Bill before this House affects the unwritten law or constitution of the United Kingdom, but any Member, relying upon that section, must also show that that unwritten law of constitution of the United Kingdom is such that on that alone depends in any degree the allegiance of the subject to the Crown. It has been held by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council that the allegiance of the subject to His Majesty is not conditional, but that it is an absolute duty of the subject, and no Act or law of the Legislature can be an excuse for a subject to abrogate his allegiance to the Crown. Therefore, a violation of the Habeas Corpus law cannot be construed as in any way affecting the allegiance of the subject to the Crown and the Bill before the House is intra vires of this Legislature.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am thankful to the Chair for the first portion of the ruling. With regard to the last part, namely, the question of allegiance, the Chair, I hope, will kindly hear us and also give an opportunity to other Members to be heard before coming to a final judgment, because this is a very important point. I was under the impression that this point had been raised at one time, and your predecessor, Sir, gave a ruling. I have asked for the reference, but I have not yet, up to this time, been able to find it. This is a very weighty point which involves more or less strengthening the hands of the executive against the judiciary.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order. The Honourable Member has not raised any new point. It is covered by the point which was raised before.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Mr. President, I am afraid my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, drew a red herring across our path. At any rate that led my Honourable friend, the Law Member, to deliver a very interesting disquisition on the law of Habeas Corpus and the powers of the Legislature in this country. Well, so far as a point of that nature is concerned, I was perfectly prepared to hear from my Honourable friend opposite a very learned discussion of the character he has given us. Fortunately the question really need not arise and I think on a previous occasion the matter was the subject of a ruling from the Chair, if I recollect correctly, and, therefore, I do not think it is a serious point at all arising from the Bill. But as regards the other arguments of the Honourable the Law Member,—I am sorry that he has left his seat,—I regret that most of us on this side of the House were unable to appreciate those arguments. We are perfectly aware that he has just come from Bengal, saturated with the local atmosphere, and, therefore, he is not expected to take at present that all-India view which I hope the membership of this House and the Government of India will soon bring about. His arguments in favour of the measure before us are mainly based on the fact that the Legislative Council of Bengal has passed the Act of 1934, and, therefore, we are bound to follow the Legislature of Bengal and pass the measure now before us. Before I deal with that class of argument, which, I submit to the House, has very little value, I wish, first of all, to make my position clear with respect to what the Honourable the Home Member said with reference to the attitude I took up on a question of this character on a former occasion. He cited some passages from a speech of mine which, if I remember correctly, I made in reply to a provocative speech delivered by an Honourable Member of the European Group on a Resolution which was moved in connection with the attempt, I believe, on Sir Alfred Watson, the editor of the Statesman. In that speech Mr. James tried to convey that a great deal of responsibility rested upon us on this side of the House in the matter of these terrorist crimes, that we had not done enough in order to ensure that these crimes are put a stop to, and so on, and it was in reply to that speech that I pointed out to the House that the responsibility for dealing with terrorist crimes rested primarily and substantially upon the Government and not upon the Non-Official Benches. I am glad to find that the Honourable the Home Member entirely agrees with that proposition. In the course of my speech, I pointed out also that Government must find out the remedy, and I believe my Honourable friend wants to lay stress on that proposition as if trying to suggest that we are bound to accept any measure that is put forward by the Government. Is that really the position which the Honourable Member takes up? I am sure, he does not take up any such position. I say, now that my Honourable friend, the Law Member, has returned to his seat, even if the Honourable the Law Member was inclined to be technical, the Honourable the Home Member would not say that I am bound to accept this measure, because I had previously said it was for the Government to find the proper remedy.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

Sir, the Government ask us to pass this Bill, because the provisions of this Bill are not within the competence of the Local Legislature. I should like my Honourable friend, the Law Member, to note this fact that the Local Legislature of Bengal is incompetent to enact a measure like this. That is the reason why the Government of India, under the Constitution, is compelled to come to us. Surely my Honourable friend, the Home Member, will not deny that there are extremely good reasons why legislation of this character should not be undertaken by a Local Government, but only by this Government and by this Legislature. Sir, that being the position, the responsibility is entirely laid upon us whether to approve the measure put forward by the Government or not. The question, therefore is whether the provisions of the Bill are such as should meet with our approval, whether it is the right policy for this Legislature and the Government of India to adopt or not.

Sir, there are three important questions which arise. The first is the detention of these political suspects outside the Province of Bengal.

The second is whether the power of the High Court to interfere with illegal detentions under the Act should be retained or should be taken away; and the third—the most important question—is whether the time limit should be removed and the Act made permanent. Sir, this is an Act which applies primarily to the situation in Bengal. But there are certain important principles involved in it with which the whole of India is concerned. Therefore, we have to consider the provisions from the all-India point of view. We have to take a long view of the situation and not merely confine our vision and our examination of the problem to the local difficulties that have arisen in Bengal. Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, Sir Harry Haig, has told us, as indeed we all know, that these terrorist activities began as far back as 30 years ago. He also assured us that the Government of Bengal have been able to establish some control over the activities of these misguided youngmen, but not sufficiently well to satisfy them that a law of this character was no longer necessary. I may just in passing point out that the position taken up by my Honourable friend opposite does not appear to be very logical or consistent. If, as a matter of fact, the Government of Bengal have been able to secure control over the movement remembering the fact that these Acts were passed four years back, then surely we are entitled to expect that within a fairly short period of time they will be able to complete that control and stamp out the menace. I say that that consideration prima facie arises from the statement made by my Honourable friend, but I do feel that the Honourable the Home Member realises at the same time that his anticipations may not be justified. What he fears apparently is that the terrorist movement may become a permanent feature of the Province of Bengal, and, therefore, he is asking us to make this legislation permanent. Sir, it is a very serious thing to ask of us. It means not only that the House should authorise the Bengal Government to send their political suspects anywhere they like, instead of following the normal procedure of detaining them in their own Province. Not only that, but we should be sanctioning generally a mode of dealing with political movements which can only be justified in an emergency and which should be dealt with only by emergency legislation. Sir, we have often been asked by the Benches on the other side to refer to dictionaries, but I may say from my experience of measures like this that the Government dictionary defines “emergency” as something permanent. Sir, we are seriously asked to hold that the activities of persons who are merely suspected of certain crimes can only be met by the Government of Bengal if these men are confined for all time without any trial whatever. That is to say, the Government of Bengal must be empowered to deprive the citizens of Bengal of their liberty, detaining them whether in the Province or outside the Province as they choose, without any trial, without any remedy being made available to these persons whose liberty is so taken away. Sir, that is asking of us too much unless the Government of Bengal is able to satisfy us that the condition of things that prevails at present is going to remain a permanent feature of the Province of Bengal. Sir, I myself do not believe that that is going to be the case. And I should strongly object to the making of a measure like this permanent on one ground alone, if not on other grounds. It is this. I do not want the Government of Bengal to go to sleep. I want the Government of Bengal to be vigilant and to take the necessary steps, as vigorous steps as possible, to stamp out terrorism from that Province. Sir, what would be the psychological effect of this measure on a Government which has not been able to deal with this evil for the last 30 years? They will go on in their good old ways. On the other hand, what we are entitled to expect from the Government of Bengal is that they should find out the real causes, they should spare no effort to find out what are the causes at the bottom of this conspiracy if it is a conspiracy and deal with it vigorously and effectively. Does my Honourable friend, the Home Member, contend that this is not possible? Surely, that would be a very serious indictment of the Government of Bengal. The Government of Bengal is possessed of every possible power and all the resources that can be available to any Government to deal with this menace. My Honourable friend has assured us that he is also thinking of other suitable measures in order to deal with the situation. He simply told us of one, and that is the enlisting of public opinion in condemnation of crimes of this character. But, surely, there are other measures possible by which this movement can be met. My Honourable friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, has told us that Sir John Anderson, the Governor of Bengal, is particularly loved by the Hindus of Bengal, and yet the fact remains that only the other day a deplorable attempt was made on his life.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

Sir, during the last two or three years that we have been considering measures of this character, I must say that we have been kept more or less in the dark, I do not suggest wilfully, but, as a matter of fact, we are not in a position to understand what the real causes of this trouble are. Is it a racial movement? Is it a movement purely aimed against Englishmen? If that is so, I, for one, would publicly tell these misguided youths of Bengal that if they believe that, by assassinating a few British officials, they are going to frighten the British people, that they are going to coerce them to give up their rule in India, then they are absolutely mistaken. I, for one, do not believe for one moment that a single British official will be deterred from doing his duty because of these outrages. I am perfectly sure, and I believe that the British Government would be perfectly justified, if this movement is racial, to use every means in their power to stamp it out. That is a position which no one can deny. Any one who has read the history of the different nations and of different Governments must admit that the British people cannot allow themselves to be driven out of India by a menace of this kind. If this movement is racial in origin, then of course, they would be perfectly justified in taking whatever measures they like. It has also been suggested that the causes are political. There also we are quite in the dark whether it is really the intention of these young men to overthrow British rule in India by activities of this nature. Well, I do think that the friends of these people ought to tell them in as distinct language as possible that if that is their idea, they are wholly mistaken and that they will never realise their political objective. If that is one of the predominant motives, I do not see any chance of conciliation by taking measures which will bring them round to a more reasonable attitude of mind. If by political motive is meant political concessions, then in that case we are equally in the dark, because we do not know what sort of political concessions will satisfy these misguided young men. It has also been suggested that the causes are economic, that most of these young men can find no employment and they thus become desperate and think that, by assassinating some officials, they will possibly achieve their object or that they have become so desperate that they do not care what happens either to themselves or to the officials. Sir,

I am saying all this in the hope that the Honourable the Home Member might take us into confidence as to what—I do not ask him to disclose any confidential information that he has received, but I think he ought to enlighten us what in his opinion—are the root causes of this trouble, whether racial, political or economic. If he is able to find out the causes, then I suggest that the Government will be in a much better position to find the remedy. So far as we have heard speeches from Government Benches, speaking for myself, I feel entirely in the dark. I do not know what the causes are and we must remember that this movement has been going on for over 30 years. The Government of Bengal have an adequate police establishment, they have their detective forces, they have various other means of finding out what is happening, and when they have been able to find out what the real trouble is, then it is that the Government of Bengal and the Government of India will be able to fight this menace. That is exactly what I suggested in the speech from which my Honourable friend quoted one passage. I say, as I said then, that this is a matter of administration. I cannot exonerate any Government which, for 30 years, allow this evil to go on and is unable to find out the causes. I do think, therefore, that the Government of Bengal must be awakened to the situation, and it must be kept up to the mark instead of enabling it to shift its responsibility on to other Provinces and instead of encouraging them to ask the Government of India and this House to give them a measure of this sort as a permanent feature of the Statute Law of India. What I suggest to the Government of India, through the Honourable the Home Member, is that they should tell the Government of Bengal “Very well, you have not been able to deal with this menace effectively so far, we will give you another period of three years or five years at the most, but we refuse to give you for ever laws of this character, because laws of this character, will aggravate the evil the longer they last on the Statute-book”. I, therefore, say, there is really no justification in asking us to make this law permanent on the Statute-book in order to deal with the movement.

I will just say one or two words about a specific point that has been raised. As regards detention of these political suspects outside Bengal, I am afraid the Honourable the Law Member has dealt with it very lightly. He says what does it matter where they are detained, in Bengal or outside? It does make a deal of difference. As a lawyer, for instance, he ought to know that there is a difference between transportation and ordinary imprisonment in one's own Province. Transportation is considered a heavier punishment, and rightly so. Therefore, that fact itself is enough to regard this measure of detention of political suspects outside as something abnormal and as something which ought not to be resorted to, unless the Bengal Government is really compelled to it. I do not attach undue importance to this question, but I do still say, as I said on the previous occasion, that it is a reflection on the Government of Bengal and on the administration of Bengal that they should not be able to make effective arrangements for their own political suspects. My friend, Mr. Sitaramaraju, pathetically appealed to the Government of India not to send these political prisoners to the Madras Presidency; and I believe it is clear from some of the opinions that were received that at least some of the Local Governments are not happy at the prospect of these people being shoved on to their charge. There is, from the point of view of all Provinces, a very strong objection, and under the future Constitution, each Province will become autonomous. I believe the Central Government will then find greater difficulties in inducing other Provinces to give shelter to the political suspects of Bengal.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

Sir, as regards the treatment of these men, I am absolutely sure that so far as the Government of India can ensure it, they will be treated humanly and kindly. They are not criminals who have been convicted of violating the law of the land. They are mere suspects. But I do not endorse the protest of my Honourable friend, the Law Member, when he says that it is a reflection on the Government of India to appeal to them to see that humane and fair treatment is meted out to these detenus. I think the Law Member must know that the heads of Government, though they are technically responsible cannot always ensure that the subordinate officials discharge their duties properly. And, therefore, we, the Non-Official Members on this side of the House, can only hold the Government Members responsible for seeing that these detenus are properly treated.

Now, as regards the question of the powers of the High Court to interfere with illegal orders passed by an official or the Local Government, I think the law has been correctly stated, as we all conceived it, by the Honourable the Law Member, that if the provisions of this Act are not complied with and any person is detained in custody in contravention of the provisions of this Act, the High Court, in spite of the repeal of section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code, will still have the power to interfere and set such person at liberty. That, I think, is the correct position of the law, and, therefore, it is not necessary for me to go into that matter further.

Sir, the most important question is whether this law should be permanent or not. I believe there are some amendments on the agenda with respect to this provision, and I appeal to Government that they should on no account make this law permanent, but put a reasonable time limit. I say it is not in the interest of the Government of Bengal, any more than it is in the interest of the citizens of Bengal, that a law of this character should be made permanent.

Sir, I do not propose to embark upon the subject of how some officials at times behave towards the people and thereby embitter feelings. I believe the present Governor of Bengal is very watchful and will see to it that such undesirable behaviour as far as possible is not repeated. A great deal has been made of the fact that the Bengal Legislative Council, by a large majority, passed the Act of 1934 which contains provisions of an extremely repressive character,—I use that expression in spite of the criticism of my Honourable friend, Sir Nripendra Sircar. Sir, I take that as a fact in favour of Government but that fact does not exonerate us from discharging our responsibilities in the matter. The state of things in Bengal is still not all that is desired and the Government of Bengal think that such a measure, as is contained in the Act of 1934, is necessary in order to enable them to meet the situation. Sir, I do not wish to criticise the Bengal Legislative Council; I shall give them credit for having done what in their judgment appeared to be the right thing and I do not challenge that position as taken up by the Law Member. But so far as this Bill is concerned, it is solely our concern, and I deny the proposition that it follows as a matter of course that, because the Act of 1934 has been passed by the Government of Bengal, therefore, we are bound to enact this measure. I know there is no time limit in the provincial Act, but that is not inconsistent without asking Government to put a time limit to this measure. It may be asked, what will happen? Supposing a time limit is put here, say, for three years, what will happen as regards the prisoners that will be dealt with under the Act of 1934 after the three years have expired? The answer is obvious. If the Government unfortunately find,—which I hope they will not find,—that the situation has not been brought under control in the next three years, then it is open to them to come to this Legislature, as they have come now, to extend the Act for another period. It may be said that, under the new Constitution, responsibility may be introduced in the Central Government as well. I hope it will. We are not at all sure about it, and I do not think even the Honourable the Home Member is sure about it. But even so we know that under the Constitution it is proposed the Governor General as well as the Governors will have uncontrolled legislative power. They can pass any Act they like and they can veto any measure of the Legislature. This is in addition to the power to issue Ordinances. All those powers being there, I do not see what justification there is for the Government of India to ask us to place this measure permanently on the Statute-book. On the other hand, as I have ventured to suggest to the Government, it would be bad policy, so far as the Government of Bengal is concerned, to pass a permanent measure of this kind. The Government of Bengal ought to be told in so many words: “We give you three years in which you must put your house in order. This thing has been going on long enough, and you have not been able to do much. We give you another three years and let us see what you are able to do within that time”. I do not believe really—and I have some little experience of administration—that the situation is past remedy, that it cannot be controlled by proper methods and within a reasonable time. I, therefore, strongly object to this measure being placed on the Statute-book permanently.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. E. Studd (Bengal : European) : Sir, as I listened to the lucid, and, to my mind, convincing speech made by the Honourable the Home Member yesterday in introducing this measure, it seemed to me that he was making a proposition that anybody could understand quite simply and easily. As I listened to the speech of the proposer who made the motion for circulation and, to my mind, his somewhat laboured explanation of the difficulties in understanding the question fully, it seemed to me that he was confusing the issue instead of clarifying it, and as he proceeded with his speech, it certainly seemed to me that he had confused the issues as far as he was concerned, for he spent a considerable time in arguing against detention without trial, or as he preferred to put it, detention on mere suspicion, a line of argument which one or two other speakers also chose to adopt. But, Sir, it seems to me that that argument is really entirely irrelevant to the present question. Whether the present Bill is passed, whether the Act which it seeks to extend is made permanent or is extended for a period of a few years or is allowed to lapse next year ; whichever of these alternatives may occur, detention without trial is provided for under the Bengal Act and will continue, and, therefore, I submit that question does not really arise out of this proposal.

[Mr. E. Studd.]

Sir, there are two points in my friend, Mr. Mitra's speech to which I should like to refer. I do take exception to his accusation which has been repeated by other speakers that these men become detenus on mere suspicion. He ought to know as well as others that that is by no means the fact. Definite and ample evidence has to be submitted to the appointed authority before any man is declared a detenu. Now, Sir, I think it was my friend, Sir Abdur Rahim, who, in a previous debate on this subject, stated that terrorism was a subterranean movement and that it was impossible for the ordinary man to know how it works. Now, if you have to deal with a subterranean movement, you have got to adopt underground and secret measures for getting your evidence and your information to deal with it, and if you have to work in that way, I think it is obvious to any sane man that if that evidence, when it has been obtained, has to be submitted to a Court of law, the source of that evidence becomes public property, and that means you cannot in future use that same source to get any further evidence or any further information. And, Sir, there is another very strong argument against making that evidence public, and that is, while it is difficult to get a member of the public to come forward to give evidence or information in ordinary cases, it is still more difficult in the case of terrorist activities, because of the very natural fear they entertain that, if they do come out into the limelight, they will be the victims of reprisals. I should like to remind the House that it is no idle fear, for on more than one occasion there have been cases of witnesses who have been shot by the terrorists, because they dared to give any information.....

An Honourable Member : When was the last of that ?

Mr. E. Studd : Now, Sir, there is another point on which my friend, Mr. Mitra, spent some time in arguing the question relating to complaints about the treatment of detenus. We have in this House on frequent occasions listened to long strings of questions and supplementary questions on that subject. Personally, I have sometimes marvelled at the unruffled patience with which the Honourable the Home Member answered those questions. For, Sir, it seemed to me listening to the questions and answers, that a great many of those complaints were unfounded or grossly exaggerated, and that in any case where there does seem to be any real cause for complaint, Government have always shown their readiness to investigate the matter and to adopt any measures possible to remedy the complaints. But, Sir, I submit that even if there are cases of hardship, that is no argument against the continuance of these measures. I should like to remind my friend of the saying "Hard cases make bad law", and the chief consideration is not whether individuals unfortunately are suffering hardship, but what is to be for the greatest good of the greatest number. I do not think that any sane and reasonable man will attempt to deny that the enactment of these measures has definitely achieved the greatest good of the greatest number, it has helped at any rate to check the evil of terrorism and to bring more security to the general public.

Now, Sir, in spite of what almost seemed like red herrings being drawn across the trial in the shape of legal arguments, it seems to me that the issue is a perfectly clear and simple one. It is sought to enact this Act as a permanent measure, the principles of the measure have had already been accepted by this House two years ago, and they have been in operation for something like two years,—the first is to keep the detenus outside Bengal, the second is to bar the power of intervention of the High Court. Now, Sir, I have not heard anybody in the course of this debate claim that the present Act and the present powers have done no good. I think every one is prepared to admit that they have at any rate helped to check terrorism, even though they have not cured the evil. It is equally beyond question that the evil which we are aiming to check still exists. Surely, Sir, if those two points are admitted, there can be no possible grounds for relaxation of any of the measures which are taken to deal with this evil. I certainly endorse what the Honourable the Home Member said in his speech regarding the study of the history of terrorism in Bengal during the past 30 years. This is no recent evil unfortunately, and I think any one who will study the history of those outrages and of the measures which have been taken to deal with them will inevitably come to the conclusion that it is the greatest mistake in the world to relax your vigilance or to relax the stringency of your measures just because for the moment at any rate terrorism seems to be dying out. It has been found over and over again that where special powers have been relaxed, because it appeared that the evil was decreasing, immediately terrorism raised its ugly head again. We, Sir, for our part are under no delusions in this matter. We do not believe that the task will be either an easy one or a quick one ; we believe that it is going to be and it must be a long fight and a stern fight. And I should like to tell my Honourable friends on the other side of the House that unusual powers of this kind are just as distasteful to the Englishman as they are to any Indian. The whole of our history and tradition and upbringing has taught us to dislike anything that curtails the liberty of the subject. But, Sir, we are so convinced of the evils of terrorism, we are so certain that desperate evils require desperate remedies, that we are determined to support these measures which we consider necessary, with the whole of our strength. Sir, when I say that, I am quite sure that I am not speaking merely for these Benches or for the European community in Bengal. I am quite sure that those views are shared by every European throughout this great country. Now, Sir, we hold those views, not, as I think the Leader of the Opposition seemed to suggest this morning, because our community has been the one which has hitherto at any rate suffered most, or because we think that there is anything racial about it. We are quite convinced of there being something far deeper than that. We believe that it is a blot on the fair name of India and that it is entirely contrary to the whole grain of Indian culture and Indian traditions and we maintain most firmly that the fair name of India is just as dear to those of us who spend the best part of our life in this country as it is to Indians themselves. For that reason we see in terrorism a canker which must either destroy or be destroyed, and that is the reason why we are so determined to support any measures that are necessary to cope with it. We are convinced that it is a menace not merely to the present Government, but to any Government. I have heard it argued that when Constitutional Reforms, when Provincial Autonomy come in, terrorism will die a natural death. I think that that is the greatest delusion. The terrorist's hand is against every man who does not agree with his way of thinking or does not approve of his way of doing things, and I am quite certain that the new Governments will find terrorism just as much a menace as the present Governments have found it. And it is just because we feel that the new Governments will have constantly to deal with new and difficult problems without the ripe experience and traditions which long years have given the present Government, that we feel that terrorism should, if possible, be removed before they undertake their task.

[Mr. E. Studd.]

There is another point with regard to this measure which, I think, deserves consideration. This, to my mind, is not merely a question of co-operation with the Government of India or the Government of Bengal; it is something much bigger than that. It is co-operation also with the people of Bengal. I do not think that there is the slightest question that, if it had been possible for these powers to be included in the Bengal Act, they would have been passed by the Bengal Legislative Council with just as big a majority as it did actually pass the Act as it stood. My Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, in the course of his speech, told the House that he had been informed by a high official that even from Deoli communications were being established to some extent with the outside world and that a certain amount of conspiracy was being hatched even there. Surely, that is an argument against his own case. If even from Deoli such things can happen, it is quite obvious that, if the detenues get back into the middle of Bengal, such things will happen to a very much greater extent.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalechand Navalrai, said that he would be agreeable to an extension of this Act for a few years, but he thought that it would be most unreasonable to make it a permanent measure. I do not know what was at the back of his mind in saying that. He comes from a part of India where he has not had an opportunity of coming into close touch with terrorism, and, possibly, therefore, he does not realise the strength of the movement or the magnitude of the problem. I should prefer to think that it was that, rather than weakness which prompted him to say that. But, Sir, it seems to me the great objection to extending this Act merely for a few years will be, as the Honourable the Home Member suggested, that it will hold out some sort of encouragement to the terrorists that if they can hang on for another two or three years or whatever period it may be, some of these stringent powers will be relaxed and then they will have a better chance of getting their own way. On the other hand, if the measure is made permanent now, surely it is a clear indication to them that Government, backed by the Legislatures, are out to fight them to the bitter end, and that they will not relax their efforts or relax their measures to deal with this evil until the evil no longer exists. I fail to understand how there could be any objection to making a measure of this sort permanent. It looks as if my Honourable friends thought that it was like the law of the Medes and Persians which we were told could not possibly be altered. The Honourable the Law Member has pointed out this morning that making it permanent only really means that it is on the Statute-book until it is repealed or amended. There is no question of its being there and it being impossible either to repeal or amend it. I have no doubt that if and when the day does come when the powers are no longer needed, it will be a perfectly simple matter to repeal it, but it does not seem to me that very much damage would be done even if it was not repealed, because, if there is no evil to deal with, the powers would become a dead letter for there would be no detenues.

Now, Sir, it has been said and said quite correctly that this will not cure the whole evil. That, I think, every one admits. Surely, the fact that it is only a partial cure does not mean that it should be discarded and it has certainly helped. The only question is what else can be done. I must confess that I was somewhat disappointed at the speech of the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, for I had hoped that we might get some constructive proposals from him. It is so easy to be destructive and to say that somebody has not done his job, that the Government of Bengal is inefficient, and so on, but it is quite another story to put forward some constructive proposals in order to improve matters. But it does seem to me that the two great bodies which can do more than anything else to help us are the Indian press and Indian public opinion. They should not rest until they have convinced these misguided people, and those who are inclined to follow them, that terrorism is something outside the pale. There are undoubtedly many other contributory causes which will have to be dealt with. I do not think I can do better than once again quote the Honourable the Home Member in one of the debates two years ago when he was referring to this subject. He said "mobilize public opinion, make it strong, vigorous and lively". My Honourable friend, Sir Abdur Rahim, this morning referred to a speech which was made by Mr. James from these Benches two years ago. I was not in the House at the time, but I have read the speech and I have read the comments on it made then. Now, Sir, it appeared to my Honourable friend as some sort of accusation. I do not believe it was ever intended to be taken in that light, but I should like to say this. My own view is very much the same as the view that Mr. James held. Can anybody think he has done enough so long as terrorism still exists? It is not a matter that Government can tackle by themselves. It is a matter for every right minded citizen to do his best to contribute his part in fighting this evil. I do maintain that until terrorism is dead and gone, no one has any right to claim that he has done enough. That is no reflection on what has been done. I believe if we are honest in our attempts, we can do something more. It is, I think, noticeable that public opinion is beginning to form, but until these misguided people realise that any act of terrorism is a definite act of treason to India and will be regarded as such by their relations and friends and by the leaders of their community, when public opinion gets as far as that, then I believe that terrorism will cease to be a menace. Now, Sir, I submit that there is no body of men that could give a better lead to public opinion than this House—the elected representatives from all over India. To my mind the motion for circulation is merely shirking responsibility. This is merely saying "we are not prepared to tackle this unpleasant subject until we have heard what other people have to say about it". I venture to suggest that perhaps the greatest single blow that we can strike at terrorism and the most effective way of educating and encouraging public opinion will be the passage of this Bill through this House without a division.

There is one other aspect I should like to touch upon before I finish, and that is this. Have my Honourable friends considered what the effect of refusing to pass this measure or of making great difficulties about it may be on those doubters who exist, who have openly expressed misgivings on the subject of the transference of law and order in this country or on the die-hard section at home? Whatever we may think of their views, we cannot ignore that factor in the situation. Are we going to play into their hands by refusing to take these measures, because they are unpleasant, or are we going to cut the ground from under their feet by passing this measure and rigorously enforcing its provisions. I look upon this measure as a plain duty to the present Government and the future Governments which we hope soon to see installed. It is a definite step in the furtherance of the cause of the Reforms. I am convinced that it is for the good of India, that India, which all of us, Europeans and Indians, love and seek to serve.

[Mr. E. Studd.]

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan): I think there is no one on this side of the House who would not agree with Mr. Studd that terrorism must be stamped out from this country, and there is no one on this side of the House who would not agree with all that has been said by the Honourable the Home Member that terrorism is a menace, not only to the peace of Bengal, but to the whole of India; but the question which the Honourable Mr. Studd has raised and which the Honourable the Home Member has raised seems to me, with due respect, to be wholly irrelevant. We are here concerned with the perpetuation of a Statute which was passed in 1932. The Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable the Law Member and, last of all, Mr. Studd appealed to us by stating that only two years back we had accepted the principle of the Bill. Human memory is short. If Honourable Members will recall the proceedings of 1932, they will find that emphasis was laid by all speakers on the fact that this was merely a temporary measure, and, because it was a temporary measure, this House was prepared to support the Government. Let me read to the Honourable Members what I myself said speaking from the Opposition Benches:

"That being the position of this side of the House, we are not going to intervene in the further progress of this Bill, but at the same time we wish to tell the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches that whatever you do, whether for the purpose of laying terrorists by the heels or ruling the whole country by Ordinances, it is only a palliative and not a cure."

and, then, later on, I went on to state that the primary reason which had led the Opposition Benches to support the measure was the fact that its duration was limited to a period of two or three years.

Now, Honourable Members will perhaps remember the view of the case that I am going to place before them. In 1932, the terrorist movement was at least 28 years old. The Honourable the Home Member reminded us that it is now about 30 years old. And I cannot for one moment assume that the Honourable the occupants of the Treasury Benches were not aware of the argument that has been used by the Honourable the Home Member and repeated with such vehemence by other speakers on the other side of the House that, because this is a temporary measure, therefore it ceases to serve its purpose, because the terrorists wait for their time and hope that, after the lapse of two or three years when there will be no measure at all, they will be free to resume their illegal activities. Sir, the terrorist movement started as far back as 1905, and it has continued down today.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca cum Mymensingh: Muhammadan Rural): Even earlier.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: As my Honourable friend, Mr. Ghuznavi, reminds me, it started even earlier. Now, if there was anything in the argument that permanency is a cure for the terrorist movement, I am perfectly certain that the old Legislative Council, which was responsible for the enactment of legislative measures, would have placed on the Statute-book a permanent measure against terrorism, but it did not do so. And when the late Lord Minto began to deport terrorist and others under Regulation III of 1818, we have in the words of the Secretary of State for India the following comments thereupon. Let me read to Honourable Members what the Secretary of State himself wrote in his Despatches and since published in John Morley's Recollections, Volume II, page 250. He says in his letter to Lord Minto:

"The question is the Future. It is like the Czar and the Duma."

I make a present of these words to the Honourable the Home Member—

"Are we to say, 'you shall have reforms when you are quiet. Meanwhile we won't listen to a word you say. Our reform projects are hung up. Meanwhile plenty of courts-martial, lettres de cachet and the other paraphernalia of law and order'. People here who have been shouting against the Grand Dukes in Petersburg for bullying the Duma will shout equally vociferously against you and me if we do in our sphere borrow the Grand Duke policy."

Now, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member, in spite of these observations made by his former chief, is following the Grand Duke policy. At page 217 occur the following words:

"Deportation is an ugly dose for Radicals to swallow; in truth, if I did not happen to possess a spotless character as an anti-coercionist in Ireland, our friends would certainly have kicked a good deal. As it is, if a division is forced after my speech, we shall have against us the Irishmen, most if not all of the Labour men, and a fair handful of our ordinary rank and file. This may put me personally into something of a hole; for I don't see how I could carry on, if I found myself opposed by a majority of our own party. However, we need not say good-morrow to the Devil until we meet him."

I suspect your difficulties will only now be beginning, for the reactionaries are sure, after getting their first mouthful of Energy, to clamour for more—right and left. Personally, I am not at all squeamish in such a community, or mass of communities, as India is, for a conflagration there would be too terrible."

Then, I wish to draw your particular attention to the closing passage which I shall read:

"The worst of it is that we do not really know, and cannot know, what is going on in the subterranean depth of the people's own minds."

Sir, these are pregnant words: and the Honourable the Home Member may feel that, because he is faced with an attenuated House and is sure to carry this measure on to the Statute-book, the last will be heard of it in this country. It may be so, but we have friends on the other side of the ocean, and they at any rate will recall the words of their own Secretary of State and examine the position more independently than we are able to do here today. Whatever may be the fate of this measure, this side of the House cannot be a consenting party to its passage; and I beg further to say that no measure, which the Government have hitherto brought forward, has received the opposition of this House merely because it was a Government measure. Only two years back, we supported the measure, because it was a temporary measure, but it is one thing to pass a temporary, emergent measure, just as we have had in England the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act, but what would the House of Commons say if the Habeas Corpus Act were suspended for all time? And that is what the Honourable the Home Member is now striving to do by this measure. He is suspending the operation of the Habeas Corpus Act, enacted in section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code, for all time, and I submit it is upon that crucial point that we and he are at issue.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

The Honourable Mr. Studd said that the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition had made a destructive criticism of the Government measure, but had not suggested any constructive scheme. Well, Sir, a constructive scheme it is very easy to suggest, but it would not perhaps be as easy for the Government to adopt it. If the Honourable the Home Member had come forward with a Resolution to appoint a Committee to go into the terrorist movement and to suggest means and measures, I am quite sure we would have helped him and suggested a line of action which would not have been as obnoxious as the present measure is. Even as it is, we would have gladly joined our friend, the Honourable the Home Member, in wishing this measure Godspeed, were we sure that the terrorist movement would be laid under its composite provisions? The Honourable the Home Member has himself admitted that these measures passed from time to time, have not stamped out the terrorist movement. The Honourable Mr. Studd expressed the same view. Now, I wish to ask you, Sir, this. India is suffering from a disease. The Government have been administering a pill from time to time. Now, I wish to know if, instead of administering one pill, you are to give three, is the patient going to recover or die? And the mere fact, that this measure, whether temporary or otherwise, has been in existence from 1915, when the Rowlatt Act was enacted, down to the present date, has not stamped out to any perceptible degree the forces of terrorism, makes us doubtful whether this measure will serve that purpose. If the measure is inadequate, the fact that it is permanent does not make it adequate. If the measure is adequate, its permanency is not necessary and not called for. I submit that the Honourable the Home Member should reconsider the position in which he has launched himself. I know he said that the Legislative Council of Bengal have passed by an overwhelming majority a measure of which the measure before us is a supplement. But I beg to ask the Honourable the Home Member whether the question of Habeas Corpus was before the Legislative Council. Did they pass any measure or did they pass any Resolution recommending to the Legislative Assembly the enactment of a measure in which the Habeas Corpus Act would be suspended for all time? What is the good of referring to the Bengal Legislative Council because they have passed a measure which is quite different to the measure with which we are concerned? The measure with which we are concerned is a measure in which we give the lettres de cachet to the executive Government and give the aggrieved party no recourse to the Court of law in any circumstances, not even to the High Court under the provisions of section 491. That, I submit, is a main point before us, and nobody on this side of the House is prepared to give a carte blanche to the executive to arrest and detain without trial for any indefinite period any person whom they consider to be a danger to the State. Now, Sir, that is the question with which we are concerned, and I submit that if we apply ourselves to this main question, the answer will not be far to seek. It has not only been said but admitted that, so far as this House is concerned, it has only a subordinate position or a secondary place in view of the decision of the Bengal Legislative Council. Let not Members on this side of the House remain for one moment in any delusion that the Bengal Legislative Council has either passed any law or recommended any law like the one with which we are now dealing. We are dealing here with the amendment of the Code of Criminal Procedure, with the repeal of section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which does away with the power of Habeas Corpus given to the chartered High Courts of India. And it is upon that point that we join issue with the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches. My friend, the Honourable the Law Member, upon whose maiden speech I congratulate him, made, as is expected from an astute lawyer, a special pleading on behalf of the Government. I think at times he was speaking with the tongue in his cheek because he said: "Oh, this is only a preventive measure." Well, Sir, it may be a preventive measure, but why are you going to send these people to jail for an indefinite term? A preventive measure is well understood. Bind them down to keep the peace, bind them down under the provisions of section 107 or section 108, because these are preventive sections, but to send a man to perpetual incarceration to a place unknown can never be described, with due respect to my Honourable friend, as a merely preventive measure.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: Will my Honourable friend allow me to point out that in 1932, as Chairman of the Select Committee, he fully approved of each of these principles?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria (Bombay Northern Division: Non-Muhamadan Rural): You have anticipated everybody here.

Sir Hari Singh Gour: Sir, because I happened to be a Chairman of the Select Committee in 1932, I have read passages from my speech for the purpose of saying to the Honourable the Occupants of the Treasury Benches in what circumstances we acceded to the request of the Government to legislate for a period of three years.

Then, Sir, my friend, the Honourable the Law Member, said that a complaint was made from this side of the House that the detenus deported outside the province of Bengal would suffer from hardship. He then said: "Do not the prisoners in Bengal suffer from hardship?" I think my friend must have overlooked the fact that there are degrees in hardship, and while prisoners in Bengal suffer from hardship, the Bengali prisoners outside Bengal suffer from greater hardship, and it is against that greater hardship that Members on this side have been complaining. Then my friend said: "What about this Habeas Corpus Act?" He said that from 1870 down today the Calcutta High Court and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have held that the Indian Legislature has jurisdiction to legislate in these matters. Well, Sir, assuming for the sake of argument, that it was competent for the Indian Legislature to legislate, there remains the question whether it would be proper for the Indian Legislature to legislate. Jurisdiction and authority is one thing and its appropriate use in the circumstances of the case is another. And I beg again respectfully to join issue with my friend on the other side when he read, or, at any rate, intended to read the provisions of section 65 of the Government of India Act. In it occur the following words (I am paraphrasing them):

"The Indian Legislature has no power to legislate upon any matters whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom, or affecting the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of British India."

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Now, this postulates that allegiance must be subject to some rule or power. None of the Lordships of the Privy Council have said what is intended and what is the common law upon which the allegiance of the Indian subject is dependent. Nobody has ever said that. In the Wahabi case and in the latest case that went up to the Lordships of the Privy Council, Their Lordships simply contented themselves by saying what the section does not include, but they never said as to what it really means and that is really the point with which we are concerned here. If allegiance were unconditional, what becomes of the clause? If allegiance were absolute, unqualified or unconditional, these words would be otiose and yet we find in the Indian Statute these words occurring as limiting the jurisdiction of the Indian Legislature. On a previous occasion to which my friend, the Law Member, has referred, I passed in review the whole constitutional law on the subject. I do not wish to detain this House beyond referring in very few words to what I then said. I said that under the Bill of Rights, when William and Mary got the Crown of England, it was distinctly stipulated that that would be subject to the provisions of the Habeas Corpus Act or what then amounted to the Habeas Corpus Act. Let me read from the book on constitutional law a passage.

The whole Bill of Rights, Honourable Members will find, is dependent upon what is laid down in Taswell-Langmead's Constitutional Law, page 572, upon the right of personal liberty, the most precious of all rights, as old as the Constitution itself. It is the right of liberty which is older than even the common law of England, and it was recognised as the common law of that country and was embodied in the Bill of Rights and afterwards in subsequent Habeas Corpus Statutes. I submit that it is open to argument that the allegiance subject to the common law of England referred to in section 66 must necessarily refer to some rule of common law by which allegiance is qualified.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : May I ask the Honourable Member in what circumstances a man is absolved from his allegiance to his sovereign?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am not here answering my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria's question. I am answering the Honourable the Law Member (Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : "Because you cannot answer me"), and I am pointing out to him that merely citing a number of cases commencing from the Wahabi case of 1870 down to the recent Lahore case is no answer to the plain meaning of the provisions of section 66 of the Government of India Act which lays down in unqualified terms that allegiance is qualified by some rule of law and neither Their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court nor Their Lordships of the Privy Council have ever in one of these cases pointed out as to what is that rule of common law subject to which.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Will my Honourable friend allow me to point out that he is entirely wrong. The Judicial Committee as well as one of the Calcutta judgments have pointed out what those words mean, but I am not prepared to read out the long judgments here.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : If that is all the answer that my Honourable friend on the other side can give, then the answer is somewhat more emphatic than the answer given by his predecessor, Sir Brojendra Mitter, he was not quite cocksure as to what the meaning of section 66 was, referring as it did, to the allegiance being qualified by the rule of Common Law. But let that pass. I refer that as not a primary question in this case. I am not dealing here with the question of ultra vires. I am dealing not with the authority of the Legislature. I will assume that this Legislature has the authority to legislate upon these matters. But I say that is not the point with which we are concerned. Is it right for this Legislature to exercise that power which curtails the liberty of the subject? That, I submit, is the question. That it does curtail, and curtails materially and curtails in a most significant manner the liberty of the subject will admit of no doubt. Even the Honourable the Home Member and the Law Member will not doubt it. My Honourable friend, Mr. Studd, has said that it does curtail the liberty of the subject. What are the impelling causes and reasons which would induce this House to override the fundamental principle of Indian Constitutional Law that the liberty of the subject shall be inviolate. The Honourable the Home Member says, well, terrorism is rampant throughout Bengal. We know it is rampant throughout Bengal, but how are you going to deal with terrorism by this measure? You have tried it and failed. By merely placing this measure permanently on the Statute-book, you are not likely to better things.

My Honourable friend admits that the measure is not likely to stamp out terrorism, other things have to be done. I ask him this question. How can you assert that this measure or similar measures which have been on the Statute-book for a number of years, for at least a quarter of a century which have not sufficed to stamp out terrorism will do so merely because the measure is made permanent? That, I submit, is a question upon which we have our doubts. Then, the Honourable the Home Member said this is not a measure which by itself will control terrorism. Other means have to be adopted. Public opinion has to be mobilised. I echo those sentiments, public opinion has to be mobilised. But how are you going to mobilise public opinion if the public of Bengal and throughout India feel aggrieved that this is a Draconian law—a repressive law which does not discriminate between the guilty and the innocent. If you wish to mobilise public opinion, you must take the public into your confidence. Give the accused a reasonable chance of defending himself. Give the accused the most elementary right of safeguarding his liberty. When you have done that, public opinion would be behind you. But this measure, passed without that salutary qualification, would arouse and inflame public opinion instead of rallying it to your support. (Hear, hear.) Sir, the more coercive the measure, the greater is the feeling of the public against it. As Lord Morley pointed out, you have to count against subterranean mental revolt that exists in the country and is inflamed by the repressive laws. Therefore, I say that it is in the interest of the Government that I am asking them to give the accused a reasonable chance. The Honourable the Home Member says that the executive always examines the cases, and one of the speakers behind me said that they are examined by some Judicial Officers. He further went on to say that if there was a trial or if the High Courts exercise their power of Habeas Corpus under section 491, then the evidence would have to be made public. Well, I ask the Home Member, is it not very easy to make a provision providing a special procedure for dealing with such cases, that such cases shall be tried in camera and that the evidence shall not be published? Such things do occur. There are precedents for it and that would safeguard the mischief which the Home Member and Mr. Studd apprehend. What we are fighting against is not the measure which the Honourable the Home Member has placed before us for consideration, but fighting against its drastic provisions which leave no loophole for the accused to ask for, at any rate, a summary judgment of any constituted judicial authority. That is what we are complaining of.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Sir, that leads me to the other point. How do the executive act? Those who have practised at the bar, as my Honourable friend, the Law Member, has done, know too well the machinery of the executive. It goes down from the bottom from a subordinate of the police department and then it goes up by a concatenation of dittos right up to His Excellency the Viceroy, and the result of that is that the person who really sets the ball in motion is an underling in the police department; and it may be that the executive have gone wrong. They trust too much the man on the spot as the Honourable the Home Member wants us to trust the Council on the spot. In such cases, we also know that there have been numerous cases in our very practice when, out of animosity or from motives of corruption, these underlings report against a particular person. The moment the report is made against him, he is helpless. It goes up and up and up in confidential dockets till an order comes from the Local Government that the man is detained and is transported either to the Andaman Islands or to a segregation camp in Deoli. How are you going to provide against the abuse of power? I can quite understand that in those cases, in which the order is right and the crime of the terrorist is proved to the satisfaction of the executive Government, the executive Government would be justified in detaining him. But what safeguard have you provided in this Bill against the abuse of power by the executive. You have provided no safeguard at all. No man's life is safe under the provisions of this Bill. He may be ever so innocent, but once there is a fiat of the executive, he is done for; he has no remedy. My Honourable friend, the Law Member, said that the High Court has jurisdiction to examine whether the case comes under the Statute. Of course the High Court has jurisdiction if the case falls outside the Act, but that is not the point. If once a case comes under the Act, the High Courts cease to have jurisdiction even if there was a prima facie case. What we want is that the High Courts should retain jurisdiction just as the High Courts have jurisdiction under the preventive sections of the Criminal Procedure Code of going through,—not necessarily in a detailed form, but at any rate summarily,—and seeing that justice has been done in the case of the accused. And that is the very modicum of the safeguard which we want to be inserted in the Act; and these are the things which would have been considered if you had prepared a new draft to cope with a new emergency and understood that it was to be a permanent measure. I know, Sir, that Government are very fond of tinkering legislation. During the last 14 or 15 years, that we have been in this House, we know that they have pulled out of their pigeon holes old drafts and say, here is the law. Only the other day, in connection with a similar measure, they brought out a Bill which had to be recast from top to bottom. My friend, the Law Member, may once more refer to the proceedings of the Select Committee and he will see what was done there. On this occasion, they have taken a short cut. This measure was passed for three years, those three years are now about to expire, and so they say: let us make it permanent. But you have never considered the main question whether a temporary measure is suited to be enacted into a permanent measure and whether a measure enacted to deal with a temporary emergency could serve the purpose which you have in view, namely, of checking the terrorist movement in this country. These are questions which Government have never considered, and, therefore, I submit that it is a crude measure; it is a measure which there is no justification for saying will serve the purpose which it is intended to serve. But one purpose it will serve; it will be a messenger of discontent throughout the length and breadth of the country. The student of law reads in the class rooms of the well-known phrases, "Every Englishman's house is his castle"; "Every Englishman is entitled to Habeas Corpus"; "Every Englishman is entitled to the liberty of person and property", and so on. When these catch phrases of English law are read by the Indian student in the class rooms, let alone the professors and the grown-up people, what will be the result throughout the country? There will be a growing discontent against this measure that it tramples under foot the most elementary and precious rights of man. And, therefore, I submit that it is up to you to reconsider it. We are not against measures designed to suppress terrorism; we are in favour of them.

My Honourable friend, the Law Member, has reminded you that I took part in shaping a measure which found its way into the Statute-book. But it was a measure, as I have said, which was intended to do its work in a period of two or three years; and I find, and the Honourable the Law Member admits, that this measure is not sufficient to deal with the crime of terrorism. Therefore, let us put our heads together and devise a new measure, a more effective measure, keeping in mind the fundamental rights of human beings to safeguard their liberty and to see that the measure, while it reaches the guilty, does not punish the innocent. It is very easy to think out such a measure.

My friends, the Members of the European Group, say that we have made no constructive proposal. Well, Sir, on behalf of the occupants of the Opposition Benches, I offer this olive branch to the Honourable the Home Member. Will he accept it? It is very simple to draft a measure that will deal with the mischief and prevent its abuse. It is to its abuse that we object. The measure, as it is, is a crude production, as I said; it is not well thought out. You have concentrated, like the one-eyed camel of the Arabian Nights, on one side of the road. The result is that on that side of the road there is nothing but dry field with no grass. If you had only used the other eye, you would have found yourselves confronted with verdant verdure and the result of that would have been that you would not have then suffered from starvation, but would have got every assistance from the popular section of this House. Whatever legislation you may pass in this House, whatever measure you may enact during your government will not be permanent, because there is a Nemesis awaiting these reactionary measures; and I assure you that, before many months and many years are past, these words of mine will come true. This measure will be blotted out of the Statute-book, not by this House, but by a power greater than this House possesses. (Applause.)

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Sir, the Centre Party has always stood for law and order, and in every measure pertaining to law and order the Centre Party has always co-operated with Government. This present measure essentially pertains to law and order, and, at the fag-end of the life of this Assembly, the Centre Party is not going to change its attitude. I am, therefore, authorised to associate the whole of my Party with the Honourable the Home Member in support of this measure. The arguments addressed in connection with this measure are based on law and also on facts, many of which are imaginary, as has been amply shown by the communiqué published as regards the allegations with regard to the Midnapore affairs made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, on the floor of this House. ...

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by the Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhuri).]

So far as arguments in connection with law are concerned, I think, after the very able and very powerful speech of the Honourable the Law Member, it would be sheer impertinence on the part of anybody on this side to try to supplement it.....

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Then, why do you rise ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I am not going to repeat the arguments of my Honourable friend, the Law Member. So far as arguments based on facts are concerned, it is a pity that the Pro-Leader of my Party, Mr. Sarma, who has been rightly and courageously fighting the terrorist movement in his paper, the Whip, has been forbidden by medical advice to speak on the present occasion : otherwise, he would have spoken himself and given the complete lie to the statements as regards hardships of, and oppressive acts towards, the detenus, which have been alleged on the floor of the House. (Ironical Opposition Cheers.) I am quite sure, the Members coming from Bengal know all this much better than myself ; but we have to look to a greater authority than the men from Bengal here. I mean the decided opinions of the Bengal Legislative Council (Cries of "Oh") who have passed the substantive measure with an overwhelming majority and who are far more interested than friends like my friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, here, who is now interrupting me. The primary principle on which this measure is based is that of detention without trial. As regards that principle, my Honourable friend, Dr. Gour, was completely in agreement till today with the Government, and I believe on the previous occasion there was not a single dissentient vote of any of the influential Members in this House as regards that principle on which this Bill is based.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know who are the influential Members and who are not ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : My friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, can judge for himself.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Those who have influence with the Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Or those whom the Government can influence. (Laughter.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I accept the amendment.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I am not going to take much of the time of the House, because I believe this motion must be decided upon by this evening. (An Honourable Member : "Why ?") But I will address myself simply to the motion of my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, about circulation. So far as I have followed the debates in this House on the present measure, after Mr. Mitra there was not a single Member except Mr. Studd who even alluded to this motion for circulation. No allusion was made by any Member to this motion for circulation. I ask my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, what does he want to circulate ? Is this a new measure ? Is this an unfamiliar measure ? This measure has been before this House for over the last five years. I do not understand what relief circulation will bring to my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra. The principle of detention without trial is a principle very well known throughout the civilised world. In times of stress and strain, when revolutionary activities are making headway in the country, measures giving effect to such principles and far more stringent principles than the principle of this Bill have been enacted in all countries of the civilised world. Take the history of France ; take the history of England during the French Revolutionary period ; take the history of the Irish Free State ; take the almost, if I may say so, contemporary history of Germany. The principle that has been given effect to in these countries is not detention without trial, but actual execution without trial.

An Honourable Member : Let us have it here.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Unfortunately that cannot be given effect to here.

An Honourable Member : Why ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : For reasons very well known to my Honourable friend. I ask Honourable Members, who are opposed to this measure, what will happen if this measure is not passed ? It is quite plain that the duration of this measure, which is supplementary to the Bengal Act, should be co-terminous with the duration of the substantive Act itself. Otherwise obviously it would land us into very awkward situations which can much better be imagined by this House than described by me.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Navalrai, said the other day that this House passed this measure, with his concurrence, of course, because the Government had given an undertaking that it was to be a temporary measure. I asked him, when was that undertaking given, and he was not able to reply. Today my Honourable and esteemed friend, the Leader of the Nationalist Party, has stated to the House that he gave his assent to the Bill, because he understood that the measure was a temporary one. I ask him who gave him that understanding ; who asked him to understand the nature of the measure in that way ?....

Sir Hari Singh Gour : May I reply to my friend, Sir ? Section 2 : that it shall extend for a period not exceeding three years. That is the undertaking.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : That was not the undertaking given by the Government. The Government actually opposed an amendment to that effect which was moved by my friend, Mr. Raju. That was not the undertaking given by the Government. The amendment was carried in spite of the Government votes.

An Honourable Member : Was it carried in the Select Committee or in the House itself ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : No, it was carried in the House itself. In the Select Committee, not a word was spoken about the duration of the Bill, and my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, who was the Chairman of the Select Committee, never thought fit to put forward the views which he has now propounded before the Committee or before the House.

Mr. S. C. Sen (Bengal National Chamber of Commerce : Indian Commerce) : The original Act passed in the Bengal Council in 1932 was for three years.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : That is so.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Then why do you say that you did not agree to make it a temporary measure ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : You wanted to make it temporary, but Sir James Crerar actually opposed it.

Mr. B. Das : You are doing an injustice to the Government.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : No, I am not doing any injustice to the Government. I am stating a fact which you ought to know.

An Honourable Member : Please don't get excited.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I can understand that measures like these are mere palliatives to check the immediate mischief which the terrorist movement may do, but they cannot completely eradicate the evil, and the Honourable the Home Member, as well as several other Honourable Members from this side of the House, expatiated on the imperative necessity of educating public opinion. Sir, I ask, what have the Government done to educate public opinion in this matter ? I also ask in spite of the advice and recommendations of His Excellency the Viceroy in his various addresses asking Honourable Members to educate their constituencies, what have the several Honourable Members, who have spoken on this subject, done to educate public opinion ? So far as I know, Sir, they have done nothing ; nor have the Government themselves done anything to sufficiently educate public opinion. Sir, public opinion, so far as Gujarat is concerned, has now come wholeheartedly on the side of Government, and it is prepared to fight subversive activities standing shoulder to shoulder with Government, but let me tell the Government that that transformation is not due to any act of the Government. That transformation has been solely due to the recent movement against the Hindu religion started by Mr. Gandhi, the apostle of all subversive movements in this country.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I strongly object to the words used by my friend regarding Mahatma Gandhi that he is the apostle of all subversive movements in this country.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : You may object as much as you like, but I am entitled to say what I consider to be the truth. Mr. Gandhi, Sir, did command some influence in Gujarat till a year or two ago, but he has now become an object of sheer contempt of all law-abiding people in Gujarat (Ironical Laughter from the Opposition Benches)....

Mr. B. Das : In the next election, you will lose your five hundred rupees !

An Honourable Member : It is an election speech.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I say, Sir, that Government have done little to educate public opinion, and I am quite prepared to substantiate it. On the contrary, Sir, the present policy of the Government not only does not tend to create opinion in favour of the Government, it, on the contrary, tends to create opinion against it, especially on account of the policy pursued in Bengal. It must be admitted, Sir, that Bengal contains the cream of Indian intelligentsia.....

An Honourable Member : Question.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : And I say, Sir, that it is not out of sheer wantonness that you find educated men and women cheerfully sacrificing themselves for what they consider to be the good of their country. Now, Sir, what is the real cause, what is the reason, for all this trouble ? Sir, I have tried to make some inquiries in the matter, and I have found that the root cause of the terrorist movement.....

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury (Bengal : Landholders) : Have you ever been to Bengal ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : No, I have not been there, but I have talked with Mr. Mitra who knows all about terrorism and knows Bengal as much as anybody else.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : Do you say he knows terrorism ? How ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Yes.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : How can you say so ?

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury) : Order, order.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I say, Sir, the result of my inquiries is this, that the Bengal people, I mean the Hindus, mostly from whom the terrorists are recruited, have as their hereditary vocation Government service, and the present policy of refusing jobs to Hindus of Bengal simply because they happen to be Hindus has created an amount of discontent which, as we can easily imagine, has culminated in a movement like the one we are trying to check. Sir, this favouritism shown towards certain classes, at the expense of the other classes, has created an opinion, not only in Bengal, but in my own Province of Gujarat also, that this Government are trying to rule on the maxim of divide and rule. And, Sir, it lends colour to the prevailing belief, which I have voiced in this House in the very first Session of this Assembly, that this communal partiality, a partiality towards certain communities, does create in the minds of people adversely affected a belief that justice has departed from British administration, and I appeal to the Government of India, I appeal to Sir Harry Haig.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : What is the use of appealing to him ? He is going away shortly.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : My friend asks, what is the good of appealing to Sir Harry Haig, as he is going away ? But, Sir, Sir Harry Haig will leave his influence behind him, and I am quite sure of that.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : And leave a note about you also ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I appeal to Sir Harry Haig, because I believe the times which needed a strong man have found a strong man in Sir Harry Haig. Sir, he has restored peace to India, and I ask him to bring contentment to India by getting the Government to adopt a just and impartial policy towards all communities residing in this great land of ours. (Hear, hear.) My Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, stated that you cannot suppress terrorism by terrorising terrorism. I say that, if, in the words he himself quoted, asserting the majesty of the law for the suppression of lawlessness is terrorism, I would ask the Government to go ahead with their policy of terrorism with full support of men who put India's interests first and the interests of seditious organisations nowhere.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : It was my intention to record a silent vote against this pernicious measure, if I may be permitted to use the word. When I heard the last speaker, he, so to say, out-haiged Haig and out-sircared Sircar, and I am obliged to take some of his points and to reply to them.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I ask the Honourable Member if the notes in his hands were prepared only after the last speech which goaded him to break his vow of silence ? (Laughter.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : There are some notes against my Honourable friend, Sir Nripendra Sircar's speech and some notes against the Honourable the Home Member's speech, but I think they will not be so full as they will be against my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, for whom I have a soft corner, at least as soft a corner as I have for Sir Harry Haig or Sir Nripendra Sircar. Sir, I shall begin with my amiable friend whom I have known for the last four years. When he first entered this Assembly, he assured us that we must be His Majesty's Opposition. Many of my Honourable friends remember that historic day, but we Members were not inclined to be His Majesty's Opposition, but Opposition to the Government of India. My Honourable friend, with his knowledge of constitutional law gathered in a foreign land, and with his knowledge of history of revolutions beginning from the French Revolution down to the present day revolution in Germany—apprised us of the fact that we should have His Majesty's Opposition although His Majesty is neither here, nor there, nor anywhere.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : You do not understand the word.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I do not claim that knowledge of English constitutional law and of English constitutional history as my Honourable friend claims to possess. I do humbly say that I have only gone through the pages of English history beginning from the days of King John, where I have read that, in the year 1215, the barons with swords in their hands got their Magna Charta, and here in India we want to have that Magna Charta, and of some sort as we have in section 491. The Statement of Objects and Reasons of a Bill is intended to point out to every cursory reader of the Bill all that is salient and all that is necessary to be given notice of, so that lawyers or laymen may know what is wanted of them. And when laymen vote for the Bill, they will at least know the implications of the Bill that is being introduced and attempted to be passed. I am sorry to characterise the Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill as a very, very misleading statement of its objects. A cursory glance through it will at once show that the Government only want to make certain provisions of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act permanent, by which they are empowered to send the detenus to a Province other than the Province of Bengal. And because they have enacted another Act by which they have made this provision permanent in Bengal by the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1934, therefore it has been argued that this Bill has been found to be necessary. How do they propose to give the Bengal Government those powers ? By saying that the second paragraph of section 1 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act of 1932 shall be omitted. That second paragraph runs as follows :

“ It shall remain in force for a period not exceeding three years.”

But,—a but follows after that—but I invite the attention of Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches to sections 2, 3 and 4. Was a perpetuation of section 4 wanted by the Government of Bengal, and were they competent to pass such a measure as that ? Is it within their legislative competency to repeal a certain section of an Act which has been passed by the Central Legislature ? I confess I have not got the same legal knowledge and am not versed in constitutional laws as my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, and I appeal to him to enlighten the Government on this point whether or not it is within the competence of the Provincial Government to repeal an enactment of the Government of India. I think in this matter his advice may be tendered to the Treasury Benches on the other side as they have been advised by my Honourable friend in other respects, such as those in which he has denounced one of the greatest individuals of the present day and also those in which he has given certain other pieces of advice which the Government may or may not accept. In this connection, I may be permitted to observe in passing that I do agree with one remark of his, and that is, it is the Government which is responsible for these acts of terrorism in Bengal. Of course, he has given one reason. He has said that particular communities are being favoured by the Government in that Province, and naturally the youths of other communities feel it. I do not know how far that is correct, it will be for my Honourable friend, Sir Nripendra Sircar, to say that.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : To say what ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Whether you are right or wrong.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I point out, as the question has been put, that there is no difficulty whatsoever if one has only read section 80A, sub-section (2) of the Government of India Act :

“ The local Legislature of any Province may, subject to the provisions of the sub-section next following, repeal or alter as to that Province any law made either before or after the commencement of this Act by any authority in British India.”

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Then why did not they take that task themselves ? As a clever lawyer—I have been also at the bar for more than thirty years, though I do not claim to be as clever a lawyer as the ex-Advocate General of my Province.....

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : It is not a question of cleverness ; one has only got to read the Act. (Laughter.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : If my Honourable friend will only read once more the words which are uttered in this House and bestow the attention which we know he bestowed on his cases and briefs, I am sure he will see that that does not mean that any measure which we here, after the passing of the Government of India Act, enact, they are entitled to abrogate. That is the view of the Honourable the Law Member, and I respectfully beg to differ from that opinion.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

I was just submitting about the causes of revolution or terrorism which has been stated by Mr. Anklesaria to have led to all these things. I wish also to submit that this matter of the permanent repeal of section 491 escaped our attention till it was pointedly brought to the attention of this House by my Leader, and I think we should all be grateful to him for drawing our pointed attention to that fact. Here we are not only permanently legislating for removing some detenus from the Province, but also we are depriving the whole people of Bengal of their Magna Charta, the right of Habeas Corpus which was given to them by section 491 for all times, and here, with due respect to the high office of the Law Member, I differ from the interpretation which has been given by him which may mislead the lay Members of this House, and I warn them against the advocacy of one of the greatest advocates of modern times. Sir Harry Haig, when introducing this simple Bill, as he called it, brought in things with which we have been made familiar from the Treasury Benches, not once or twice or a dozen times, but a hundred thousand times. He brought in the Chittagong riots, and so on, and then he said here is an opportunity given to this House to give their help. Sir, when you are in charge of the administration of a great country like ours, and when you have taken the duty of administering it with even-handed justice, if you really follow the path of righteousness and honour and give to the children of the soil their dues, the right of governing themselves, the right of self-determination, I think we shall then co-operate with you and allow you to administer the country certainly in our interests as well as in your interests. You are not here for a philanthropic purpose. You have not come here, six thousand miles away from your home, for that. You have come here for the sake of bread. In this connection, I am reminded of an old story. When the predecessor of this Assembly, I mean, the old Imperial Legislative Council was appointed, three great men were taken as Members, and one of the greatest of them was Sir Barnes Peacock. When introducing a very beneficent measure, he said "If we are not here to render service to Indians, then why are we here?" That gentleman, who happened to be a Member of the Imperial Legislative Council in those days, did not know English and it was interpreted to him and he replied at once in Hindi "For your belly's sake". Sir, we are not such fools as to think that Englishmen are here for a philanthropic purpose. We need their services. We are grateful to them for what they have done for India by giving us education, by giving us an ordered Government and all the benefits which we enjoy under British rule after the chaos of Muhammadan rule. We and our children will be very grateful to them, but at the same time do not try to delude us by saying that you are here for our benefit. You came for your own purpose and you are staying here in order to perpetuate your rule with the help of Omichands. But that is not the way of a true Englishman and a righteous Englishman. If only they knew to what unrighteous paths they are led by their Indian advisers, they would not adopt this method of governing the country, but our difficulty has been that they do not approach good men for advice. There are lot of Indian badmashes to advise them, who are dangerous to Indian freedom and they are misled. I warn them against this and ask them not to enslave Bengal in the way in which they are attempting. Then we have got two reasons why this Bill is being brought in the present Session of the Assembly. The Honourable the Home Member has given one reason and the Honourable the Law Member has also given us some consolation which may be taken as another reason. The Home Member's suggestion is this that it may be that after you are kicked out from this Hall, other people will come in and they may delay, and so on, but the real reason behind this seems to me that other people may not be so amenable to your influence and your Councils.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member should address the Chair.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The Chair would not be so amenable. I shall therefore address through you.

Whatever that may be, that is the Honourable the Home Member's reason—that it may be January or February or March or April, and we may not have this Legislative Assembly. But what has been our experience in the past? Well, if the Government do wish to have this Bill passed, they can get it passed within a fortnight by going to Select Committee, having it reported and then having it considered and passed, all quickly. So I beg to submit that the reason that has been given by the Honourable the Home Member is, with all due deference to him and to his opinion, is not valid. The other thing which may be taken as a reason and which was given to us as a consolation is this: "why can't you pass this Bill?" This was probably the reason of the Honourable the Law Member: "You pass this Bill, you are going away, the other people will come, stronger men, and they will do away with it. I am also an Indian. I am your friend. I do not like this measure. We will have it passed as an eye-wash for some months." (Laughter.) Sir, anyone who knows the constitution of this House, who knows the formidable array of the 40 Nominated Members—26 officials and 14 non-officials—added to those representing the interests of that community for whose interest the Britishers would give you everything save and except the market, I mean the European community which commands sixteen Members.....

An Honourable Member : No, no, twelve Members for the European community.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : All right, nearly a dozen, and then we should remember our amiable friends to whom my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, referred, that community which is being bribed from the very beginning.....

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I protest against the word "bribed". I never said the community was being bribed.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I withdraw the word "bribed"—perhaps the community is being given prizes by being given 25 per cent. of all jobs, the Communal Award and such other things. Very well, we then get almost another thirty or something like that, then it will come to about eighty in a House of one-hundred and forty-four : and knowing full well that they can pass any measure and every measure with the help of this body, the Government do not care. I remember, Sir, in a humbler sphere, that of district boards and municipalities, how the Government in former days had members through nomination to the extent of one-third and how, with the aid of that one-third, they would have any measure brought up for the consideration of the municipality or district board. So long as this House does not consist solely of elected Members and so long as any legislative enactment does not depend upon the vote merely of the elected Members, I think such consolation as my esteemed friend, the Law Member, wants to give us will not really console us in the least ; but I forget that probably my Honourable friend had not much experience, at least that experience which I can claim of these self-governing institutions either in my Province or elsewhere. Be that as it may, I beg to submit it would have been more honest and fair if the Government had not brought up this Bill, and, Sir, that ought to have been their attitude—not that of giving the dog a bad name and then hanging him, as by calling upon us now to pass this legislation so that they might say afterwards, "these are the men who supported us in such Draconian legislation".

An Honourable Member : Are you making an election speech ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The House has not been dissolved as yet. When the House is dissolved, I shall no doubt make my election speech.

Then, as regards my friend, the Honourable the Law Member's argument, that has been met by my Leader, and the only thing I want to say about it is this. He has said, and there I agree with him, that, in spite of all this repressive legislation, terrorism has not been crushed. Sir, I am not a scholar either of ancient or of modern history of the type of my friend, Mr. Anklesaria, although I may claim to be the father of a scholar of ancient Indian history and culture. Sir, it has been said that it is preventive and not punitive, and here we have the testimony of no less a person than my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, who has derived his knowledge about it from no less a person than Mr. R. S. Sarma, whose activities are confined to Bengal and who is presumed to know more of my people than my friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, or Mr. K. C. Neogy, or, for the matter of that, even that of the Honourable the Law Member ; and he has been pleased to say that these detenus are kept in nicely-furnished bungalows with all the luxuries possible—with books and the other amenities of life, and so on.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Even perfume bottles also, I am told ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Not of whisky bottles ? Be that as it may, if this House can believe one of its Members, and, I think, if I name him, nobody will say that we can disbelieve him, I mean my Honourable friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, he has his nephew in one of those fine commodious bungalows—the poor boy is not allowed to have any interview with his uncle or with his father, and that not for one month or one or two years, but for all the years he is going to be detained at Deoli, and wild stories are being recited—we cannot vouch for the absolute correctness of those stories—but wild stories have reached the ears of Mr. Mitra and his family that every now and then big blocks of ice are placed on the chest of this young man, and the reason why he is not allowed an interview with Mr. Mitra is lest such things should leak out and come to the knowledge of the Honourable the Home Member, who has tried at least to do what little justice is possible for him to do, but he is kept in ignorance of all these things that are being done. My friend, Sir Nripendra Sircar's knowledge about the mode of living of these detenus.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : My knowledge is as great as yours.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : A little more probably—because neither I nor Sir Nripendra have had the good fortune of ever being a detenu or of being a visitor of a camp for detenus. At this old age I would like to be free, but if we have books, lights, perfume bottles and other luxuries there, I will not mind going there even at this old age. But if the conditions there are as described by the nephew of Mr. Mitra, certainly I for one would not like to go there. I do not know whether Sir Nripendra Sircar would like to go there or not. It has been said by the Honourable the Law Member that in no country has terrorism appeared in such a form. I appeal to him to say from his personal knowledge of other countries of the world, where he has travelled, whether the form of revolutions there was not of a more virulent type than that of Bengal. In Bengal, we have a handful of misguided youths who are patriotic enough to think that they will free their country of the foreigners. Some of them have been driven to this method owing to the economic depression or because youths, belonging to other communities and possessing the same intellectual attainments as they, have been provided with employment and they have been neglected. This sort of thing can be cured by more humane measures than this drastic legislation. Therefore, I submit that it is not the vituperative language to which the Honourable the Law Member objects when we say that it is a repressive measure. This is not only a preventive measure, but it is a punitive measure. As for the preventive measure, we have the provisions in sections 107, 108, 109 and 110 and section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code wherein we find an iron hand in a velvet glove. Under section 144, you can do anything under the sun. In spite of all these provisions, you wish to arm yourself with these drastic powers and thereby disgrace the pages of the Indian Statute-book. I agree with the Honourable the Law Member when he says that by using vituperative language nothing is gained or lost. But I do submit that the charge of using any vituperative language can hardly be laid at the door of any Members on this side of the House at the present moment. Only we are trying to draw the attention of the Government.

Now, Sir, I have already replied to the argument that the permanency will disappear when the new Assembly comes. Then it was said that there was lot of irrelevant matter brought in. Sir, when the Government are concerned with the sending of prisoners from Bengal to other Provinces, it is up to them to see that their comforts and conveniences are looked after and it cannot be said that these things are irrelevant. With due respect to Sir Nripendra Sircar, I must say that in these matters he was, I think, more led away as an advocate of Government rather than by the consideration of relevancy or irrelevancy. Then, Sir, as regards the solitary cell, he said that it was common everywhere. Sir, for people who are fired with the imagination that they must free their country from foreign domination, and who, rightly or wrongly, think that the foreigners have no business to rule over us, and it is their inalienable birth-right to have their own government, and if, in pursuance of those high ideals, they pursue methods which are subversive of law and order, then certainly the Honourable the Home Member is entitled to ask us for more powers, and we, at least the older men, would be the last persons to deny him those powers. But you cannot blame them for holding these ideas. If you give them human treatment in the jails by giving them the diet to which they are accustomed, and if you put them in surroundings where they will not feel themselves lonely and where the climate is bearable, surely the British Government will not collapse if these things are given to them. The mighty Government, as the British Government is, can easily afford to do these things for them and thereby wean these misguided youths from the path of revolution and terrorism, and thus save not only themselves, but also save their own countrymen. I quite appreciate that when they take a step like this under laws, it will be a mistake. But if these people can be won over from the path of revolutionary activities, then I believe that even these mistakes will not be committed and the whole country will be saved. I think both you, Englishmen, and we, Indians, will be able to co-operate with each other working hand in hand for years to come. Sir, I have learnt today several legal phrases. I have practised in the mufassil and have never had the privilege of going to higher Courts, and therefore, I will not take up the time of the House by referring to these things. But when it is said that this is not a question of law, I join issue, however high the authority holding this view may be. It is certainly a question of law. The first question is whether or not this Legislature is competent to pass this legislation. Whether or not this Legislature should co-operate with the Bengal Legislative Council and accept their ipso dixit. When you ask us to do this, I beg to think that you cannot do so under the law. When the Honourable the Law Member said that his predecessor was perfectly right in giving his interpretation, he was only paying a compliment which everyone pays to his predecessor. His predecessor gave us the assurance that the measure was to be a temporary one.

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : He never gave that assurance.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I can understand the chain of reasoning by which you can arrive at propositions like this that he never gave an assurance. I beg to submit that he did not utter any such words, namely, that after the expiry of three years the Bill is going to be made permanent. Otherwise, the fate of the Bill would have been different. May I ask my Honourable friend to point out anything like that from the speech of the previous Law Member ? I wait for an answer.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : If the Honourable Member should refer to the debates of 1930, he will find that it was actually Sir Cowasji Jehangir who, on behalf of the Opposition, invited the Government to express an opinion and give an undertaking that they will come to the House to extend this Act if the Local Government extended the Act. This will be found in the debates.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am sorry that I allowed this wasting of the time of the House, because my Honourable friend has referred to some materials which are not in this astronomical universe. I think I ought to have proceeded with my speech without waiting for this answer. I would say that I feel very strongly on this measure. Even if for the sake of argument there are revolutionary youths by thousands, they have all been captured and more will be captured, I do say that the Government have no justification for perpetuating these repressive laws and putting the whole of a great Province, which once supported the British rule with loyalty and devotion, to restraint in this way, and thereby, alienate their sympathies. It has been rightly said by my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, that it is the Government that has been terrorising and that has been at the root of all this trouble.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I never said that.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I think the memory of certain Honourable Members seems to be short. If Honourable Members will go back 35 years, I mean towards the latter half on the 19th century, they will find that warnings were given by such far-sighted statesmen as Dadabhai Naoroji, Pherozshah Mehta, R. C. Dutt and Surendra Nath Banerjee and others, and these warnings were given from the Congress Pandal of those days, not the Congress of the present day, but the Congress of those days when such veterans were serving, and they gave warnings in no unmistakeable terms that they wanted to co-operate with the Government and they asked the Government not to drive sedition underground, but to allow the fullest expression to the thought and to remove the grievances. That was the demand then made. I remember, Sir, as young boys our ambition was only to have a few High Court Judges, to have simultaneous examination for the Civil Service and to have the repeal of the Arms Act. These were a few of the items in the programme of the Congress of those days when we joined it 35 or 40 years ago. What is it that occurred since to change the programme of that great constitutional body from asking for a few grievances to be redressed to one of independence. It was because the foreigners, who are administering this country, have not done their duty properly towards the children of the soil. There are a great many names in British Indian history to whom the country will ever remain grateful. We can cite Bentincks, Ripons and Macaulays and several others who devoted their lives to the good of this country. I can also name certain others who lived in recent years, because I have also some knowledge of the history of the present day, but I will not name them, but these are the men who are the greatest enemies of British rule in India. I remember, Sir, a gentleman, who was not a Congressman, but a very learned and erudite scholar, whose name if I mention will be remembered by the Honourable the Law Member, because, at one time, he lived in Bihar, this gentleman was a great Bengali scholar, and you will be surprised to hear that he used to say that the greatest enemies of India were men like Bradlaugh, Sir William Wedderburn, A. O. Hume and others. We were all boys then, and my uncle was surprised to learn that men like Bradlaugh and Sir William Wedderburn were enemies of India, because they wanted to broadbase the British rule upon our affection and thereby perpetuate our slavery. Mind you what kind of administration would give birth to thoughts like this. Have you ever cared to enquire what is at the root of this revolutionary movement ? The Honourable the Law Member was right when he said that quack prescriptions will not do. I do submit that these are quack prescriptions to which he is also going to be a party. Let them go deep into the root cause of this revolutionary movement and [Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.] try to weed it out and save the youths who are the flower of this country from ruin, and if Government take proper steps, they can win over these youths and they will be very helpful in carrying on the administration of this country to the advantage both to themselves and to their countrymen.

Sir, I see that some of my Honourable friends are impatient, and they desire that I should conclude my speech. I will only say a few words more. As regards the motion for circulation, I must honestly confess that I do not believe in circulation. I would rather oppose it, because what does the motion for circulation mean? The Government will circulate the Bill to proper quarters who are best fitted to give them advice on these matters. The Government also know what sort of opinion they will get. So, Sir, I have no faith in circulation, but my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, who has been the victim of repressive laws, desires that the Bill should be circulated, and, therefore, we are in duty bound to support him. But personally I have no faith in circulation. I have been asked to finish my speech as early as possible. I know full well that we cannot carry anything in this House. Still I thought that more than the votes of those, who are always inclined to support Government in order to please them, there are genuine hearts throbbing within the human framework of the Honourable Members on the Treasury Benches, and that if I appeal to them for a more humane consideration for these people, who are taken away from their hearths and homes to a distant Province, I shall get some response. Sir, in my earlier years, I lived for several years in the Rajputana desert and I know the trial and the trouble of living in those deserts. There were no electric fans in those days and the punkha had to be pulled the whole night. But if the punkha-puller went away at 5 o'clock in the morning,—and I am a very late riser,—I would at once get up as soon as the punkha ceased. Then, I remember the difficulty about fish. I remember fish used to be brought one day in the week from far off Delhi by sending a man there and fish could not be had anywhere else. As you know, Sir, we Bengalis are not meat eaters, but we are accustomed to fish.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney (Nominated Non-Official) : When was that?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : That was from 1882 to 1886.

Then, again, there is the question of climate. My friend, Diwan Bahadur Sarda, if he had been here, could have given us some idea of the climate of a place like Deoli, and Deoli is 70 miles away from Ajmer. There is also the difficulty about getting interviews. Sir, we can well understand that some police officer should be there at the interview. If these detenus are of the type, who cannot be trusted to carry on a conversation, keep a police officer there, but allow them interviews at times with their friends and relations, and give power to the police officer to stop the interview as soon as he finds that something objectionable is being uttered by the detenu or the man who is interviewing him. He will be on this side of the bar and the interviewer will be on the other side. This is a small humanitarian treatment, which I am pleading for, before the Honourable the Home Member, whose term of high office ends in a day or two, and who is going to take up his exalted office of Governor of a great Province, on which we all congratulate him. (Applause.) We appeal to him to do something for these detenus. Sir, at one time I despaired about getting anything. I know that this Bill will be passed and we will not be able to check its passage. But in the language of the great poet, I was tempted to say, in the words of Karna to his mother Kunti, when the latter wanted to bring him to the side of the Pandavas :

“*Jé pakshér parājay,
Sé paksha tyajitē morē karonā āhrān ;
Jayi hōk Rājā hōk Pandava santān ;
Ami rabo hatāshēr nishfalēr dalēy.
Āmārēy nirmam chittēy tyāgā jananee,
Deeptiheen, keertiheen parābhav parēy,
Shoodhoo āi āshirbbād diyē jāo morē,
Jayalōbhē jasholōbhē rājyalōbhē ār,
Virēr sadgati hotē bhrashṭa nāhi hōi.*”

“Don't ask me to leave the party that is to lose the fight. Let the Pandavas be victorious and win the kingdom. I shall remain with those whose hopes have been smothered and do not expect success. Leave me to the darkness of defeat and being unknown to fame. I pray only for your blessings, so that I may not swerve from the path of righteousness to secure victory, fame or kingdom.”

So, Sir, that was the thought which was uppermost in my mind. I knew full well that this Bill will be passed and my protestations will be of no avail. But I once more appeal to the Home Member to do some more acts of justice to these detenus as he has done in the past.

Several Honourable Members : The question may now be put.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“That the question be now put.”

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Sir, the hour is late. It is said that every action produces an equal and opposite reaction and certainly the action of my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt's speech impels me to be brief. (Laughter.) The debate has ranged over a very wide field, and I think the House can consider that every relevant argument, every consideration bearing directly or even remotely on this problem, has come before it. Now, Sir, that reminds me of the amendment that stands in the name of my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, the amendment for circulation. That is an amendment about which we have heard very little, and particularly from the Mover of it ; and I think the reason is clear. The facts, the considerations, the arguments, are all before this House, and no real reason has been advanced as to the advantage that would be derived from circulating this Bill for further opinion. I think, Sir, it may be regarded as merely a means of postponing a decision, and I submit that all the materials for a decision are before the House now.

Now, Sir, the Honourable Member, Mr. Mitra, with some engaging sentences occasionally interposed which indicate that he is as much interested in the suppression of terrorism as we are, nevertheless seems to me to suffer from certain blind spots in his outlook on this problem ; and the most amazing blind spot that I observed when he addressed himself to this problem was that he actually took me to task for reminding the House of what terrorism really means. He made it a complaint that

[Sir Harry Haig.]

I referred to some of these outrages and recalled them to this House. But, Sir, what is the subject we are debating? It is terrorism. What is the justification for this Bill? It is terrorism. And does the Honourable Member really think it reasonable that we should lull ourselves into a sense of security or of negligence; that we should not remind ourselves of what terrorism really means, the menace that it is, or,—to borrow the words of my Honourable friend, the Law Member,—the abomination, an abomination which we are determined to root out? I hope, Sir, we shall hear no more complaints that I have endeavoured to recall the House to a sense of the gravity of this problem.

Now, Sir, I was asked by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition whether I could give any account of the origin of the movement. In a few casual words, at the end of the debate, I cannot attempt to give any exhaustive analysis of it. But I think the House recognises well enough that it originated in what one might call a revolutionary movement; the object was to overthrow the Government by the method of assassinating Government officials. The movement has spread since then; its aims are possibly wider now than in its origin. A movement like that gathers to itself and embraces all the revolutionary and subversive movements that may arise from time to time. Its aims broaden out, and that has been the case with the terrorist movement. In origin, perhaps the movement of a few people, it has been, I think, reinforced by some belief among a considerable section of the people in Bengal—a belief that is, I think, now disappearing—that the movement had something valuable in it, that it would pay, that it would succeed. That is why I continually stress the importance of public opinion. As long as public opinion is not genuinely opposed to this movement, genuinely determined to root it out, it is very difficult to make an end of it. And besides that, there have been certain predisposing causes among the boys who are recruited to this movement. They are very definitely recruited by revolutionaries for their own ends; but there are certain causes which predispose them to be recruited, and those causes might perhaps be found partly in an educational system which it is suggested is not altogether in accordance with the needs of the Province and partly in economic conditions. Perhaps one might say that a number of these boys are turned out with a certain lack of hope, with little to look forward to in life, and in that way they tend to become the prey of these people who recruit them into this vile movement. My Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, acknowledging, I think, that His Excellency the Governor of Bengal and the Government of Bengal were addressing themselves to these wider causes, asked me whether the Government of India were doing nothing. This is a provincial problem; it has to be handled primarily by provincial means; but I would remind the House that the problem is to some extent economic, and that the Government of Bengal believe that greater financial resources will help them greatly in removing what I have called some of those predisposing causes, and my answer to Mr. Neogy, therefore, is that this House has already made some contribution in that direction by placing at the disposal of the Government of Bengal half the jute tax—a very substantial contribution.

Now, I want to say a little about the treatment of these detenus at Deoli. That is a very direct responsibility of the Government of India.

One of the last acts of my predecessor was to secure the passing of this Act, VIII of 1932, which we are dealing with today; and, consequently, I found that one of the first responsibilities that faced me when I took over charge was the organisation and superintendence of a camp for the detenus at Deoli. I realised that it was a very serious responsibility; I realised that it was difficult to deal with these men in a remote place, far from their own Province, and that it was necessary to have an efficient staff and to have arrangements that so far as we could ensure would work effectively. I got into touch at the very beginning with the officer who had been selected to be in charge of that camp, and until he went on leave a few months ago, I maintained constant personal touch with him. He has visited me here in Simla and in Delhi several times. I myself have been to Deoli and seen conditions on the spot; the Secretary in the Home Department, Mr. Hallett, has also been to Deoli and seen for himself; and we have been fully satisfied that the officers on the spot have administered their very difficult charge with patience, with discretion and with good sense. I would remind the House that their task is a peculiarly difficult one, for these men, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, has himself suggested, are very often not what one describes as altogether normal. They have a considerable measure of freedom, that is to say, from the ordinary restrictions of jails, and they have a great deal of leisure on their hands: they tend to become introspective and self-centred; the fact that they have no definite work to do, that we cannot give them any tasks, is really, I believe, looking at the matter broadly, bad for them; and yet I fear this House would not support us if we gave them any compulsory task....

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury: Why do you not give them proper education in jail?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: It is an exceedingly difficult problem, and I think it must be admitted that these men are the most difficult prisoners in all India to deal with. My Honourable friend asks me why we do not give them education in the jail; we do what we can to give them facilities for occupying their time; we give them ample facilities for games and physical exercises; we give them a reasonable supply of books; we allow them to enter for examinations, and I think the House will remember that, only a short time ago, the Government of Bengal brought out a scheme for precisely what my Honourable friend is suggesting—some form of education to fit these boys for something useful when they are released; but on some point of, shall I say, pride—I do not know what the cause is—I understand that they have rejected the offer.

Well, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, suggested that he could deal with these detenus, that the solution was to let them out, and I think his view was that he would be able to control them. That is what I understood to be his position.....

Mr. S. C. Mitra: You are not to let out all of them at the same time, but by batches and groups.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: I would only say that to take that action at the present time would be inconsistent with the lessons of experience. I would remind the House that in 1924 and 1925, a number of detenus were sent to jails or camps. In the course of the next two or three years, they were gradually released, and by the end of 1928,—I think I am right in saying,—that there was not a single detenu still under detention. Well, Sir, if the release of these men is really the cure for this evil, how was it that two or three years later this movement broke out again with a force that it had never possessed before, and we had that formidable outbreak at Chittagong in April, 1930? Did any of these gentlemen, who now suggest that they can control the detenus, control them between 1928 and 1930, and, if not, why not?

[Sir Harry Haig.]

Again, Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, suggested that some of these manifestations might be due to agents provocateurs. I think his suggestion was that when a long interval passed without an outrage and the Government were beginning to think of relaxing their measures, then some new outrage always supervened, and his suggestion was that cannot be the work of the detenus themselves, but that must be the work of the Government acting through its subterranean agents. Well, Sir, again I would appeal to the lessons of experience. How does a theory of that sort fit in with what happened in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930? In 1927 and 1928, there was practically a complete cessation of outrages, and acting on that, the Government did release all these men, and then when the powers of Government had been removed, and not before then, these outrages were resumed. Is that consistent with this theory of agents provocateurs being used in order to create incidents which will justify the retention of these powers? The facts are exactly the opposite.

Now, Sir, my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition referring to the speech which he had made two years ago, which I have mentioned, said that he hoped my view was not that I felt he was bound to accept any remedy which the Government put forward. That, of course, was not my intention. What I did welcome in his former speech,—and I must say I found some traces of it in his speech today,—was a spirit of some helpfulness, an inclination to examine fairly our proposals. The main point that the Honourable Sir Abdur Rahim has made against our Bill is that the powers we are taking should not be permanent. He argued that to give these powers to the Bengal Government in permanence would be likely to induce them to relax their efforts. I was surprised to hear such a view coming from an Honourable Member who is well acquainted with Bengal and well acquainted with administration. For surely if one fact stands out more clearly than any other, it is that circumstances themselves absolutely compel the Government of Bengal to devote the main part of their attention to this terrible menace of terrorism, and they cannot possibly relax their attention so long as that menace continues.

Now, Sir, what is the justification for making these powers permanent? That justification, I think, is very clearly to be found in the experience of the past. Let me remind the House of one or two facts. In 1915, the Defence of India Act was passed, and that Act for the first time gave the Government powers similar to those which are now contained in the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. While that Act was in force, the movement was brought very definitely under control. Those powers of the Defence of India Act were removed, I think, in 1919 or in 1920, and in the next year or two, all the main weapons with which the Bengal Government had been fighting the terrorist movement were repealed. The result was that, within a year or two, there was a very serious and dangerous recrudescence of the movement,—so much so that in 1924 it was necessary for the Governor General to issue an Ordinance re-imposing those powers, and that was further confirmed by legislation undertaken in the Bengal Legislative Council in 1925.

Now, Sir, as I mentioned before, all the detenus were out by 1928, and again the question arose whether these powers should not be allowed to lapse as they naturally would in 1930. It was decided to allow them to lapse. They lapsed in 1930, and, within a month or two, we had that very serious outbreak at Chittagong—clear evidence that the terrorist movement was stronger than it ever had been before. Consequently, in 1930, those powers were again taken, and now once more they are due to lapse in 1935. I say, Sir, that it would have been flying in the face of all experience to continue those powers still on a temporary basis. The experiment has been tried, not once, not twice, and has failed. That, Sir, is the justification for making the powers permanent, and I do appeal with confidence to the House to support a measure which will help us to continue without intermission the struggle against terrorism until it is finally rooted out.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The question is :

“That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 31st August, 1934.”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The question is :

“That the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, be taken into consideration.”

The Assembly divided :

AYES—60.

Abdul Aziz, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Ahmad Nawaz Khan, Major Nawab.
Ali, Mr. Hamid A.
Allah Baksh Khan Tiwana, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Anklesaria, Mr. N. N.
Bagla, Lala Rameshwar Prasad.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Bhadrapur, Rao Bahadur Krishna Raddi B.
Bhore, The Honourable Sir Joseph.
Brij Kishore, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Buss, Mr. L. C.
Chatarji, Mr. J. M.
Dalal, Dr. R. D.
DeSouza, Dr. F. X.
Duguid, Mr. A.
Fazal Haq Piracha, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry.
Grantham, Mr. S. G.
L203LAD

Grigg, The Honourable Sir James.
Haig, The Honourable Sir Harry.
Harbans Singh Brar, Sirdar.
Hockenhull, Mr. F. W.
Hudson, Sir Leslie.
Ibrahim Ali Khan, Lieut. Nawab Muhammad.
Ismail Ali Khan, Kunwar Hajee.
Jawahar Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sir.
Kamaluddin Ahmad, Shams-ul-Ulema Mr.
Lal Chand, Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Lee, Mr. D. J. N.
Lumby, Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R.
Metcalf, Mr. H. A. F.
Morgan, Mr. G.
Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, Mr. Muhammad.
Mujumdar, Sardar G. N.
Mukherjee, Rai Bahadur Sir Satya Charan.

Nihal Singh, Sardar.
 Noyce, The Honourable Sir Frank.
 Pandit, Rao Bahadur S. R.
 Perry, Mr. E. W.
 Rafiuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Maulvi.
 Raghubir Singh, Rai Bahadur Kunwar.
 Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
 Rastogi, Rai Sahib Badri Lal.
 Rau, Mr. P. R.
 Row, Mr. K. Sanjiva.
 Sarma, Mr. R. S.
 Scott, Mr. J. Ramsay.

Scott, Mr. W. L.
 Sher Muhammad Khan Gakhar, Captain.
 Singh, Kumar Gupteshwar Prasad.
 Singh, Mr. Pradyumna Prasad.
 Sircar, The Honourable Sir Nripendra.
 Spence, Mr. G. H.
 Studd, Mr. E.
 Trivedi, Mr. C. M.
 Wajihuddin, Khan Bahadur Hajji.
 Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad.
 Zakaullah Khan, Khan Bahadur Abu Abdullah Muhammad.
 Zyn-ud-din, Khan Bahadur Mir.

NOES—17.

Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Mr.
 Bhuput Sing, Mr.
 Das, Mr. B.
 Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
 Gour, Sir Hari Singh.
 Gunjal, Mr. N. R.
 Jog, Mr. S. G.
 Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. D. K.
 Lalehand Navalrai, Mr.

Mahapatra, Mr. Sitakanta.
 Mitra, Mr. S. C.
 Neogy, Mr. K. C.
 Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
 Parma Nand, Bhai.
 Patil, Rao Bahadur B. L.
 Sen, Mr. S. C.
 Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 25th July, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 25th July, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CHANGE IN THE ARRANGEMENT FOR THE CARRIAGE OF MAILS BETWEEN DELHI AND CALCUTTA.

203. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to give reasons for changing the old arrangements of carrying the mails between Delhi and Calcutta ?

(b) Is it not a fact that the mails are not carried by the down mail train between Delhi and Howrah ?

(c) What is the present arrangement for carrying the mails from Simla to Allahabad, and intermediary stations ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The old arrangement of carrying mails between Delhi and Calcutta had to be altered owing to the changes in the time tables introduced by the East Indian Railway with effect from the 1st October, 1933.

(b) It is not a fact that mails are not carried by the 2 Down Mail train between Delhi and Howrah.

(c) Mails from Simla for Allahabad are sent by the 14 Down Mail of the Kalka-Simla Railway from Simla to Kalka, by the Kalka-Delhi-Calcutta Mail from Kalka to Ambala, by the 6 Down Punjab Mail from Ambala to Partabgarh and by 4 A. F. Down Passenger from Partabgarh to Allahabad. Mails for intermediate stations are sent from Simla to Kalka by the 14 Down Mail train to Kalka. They are despatched from Kalka by the 2 Down Kalka-Delhi-Calcutta Mail to Delhi and therefrom a portion of the mails for certain important places is sent under weighment system by the Kalka-Delhi-Calcutta Mail while the rest of the mail is sent by the 16 Down Delhi-Mughalsarai Fast Passenger.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that by this new arrangement the delivery of the mails is delayed by one day ? Instead of being delivered on the following day, they are delivered a day later ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I have no information on that point, but I shall be happy to inquire. I hardly think it is likely.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The mails reach Delhi early in the morning and the whole day they remain lying in Delhi, and are sent at 10 p.m.

(615)

PROHIBITION OF BEARERS OF INDIAN REFRESHMENT ROOMS FROM GOING NEAR THE CARRIAGES OCCUPIED BY UPPER CLASS EUROPEAN PASSENGERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

204. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Is it a fact that the North-Western Railway administration issued a circular prohibiting the bearers of Indian Refreshment Rooms from going near the carriages occupied by upper class European passengers ?

(b) Are they prohibited to approach Indian passengers travelling in upper classes ?

(c) Are these orders issued for economic or hygienic reasons ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). No.

(c) Does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if there are still separate first class carriages for European passengers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not aware of any.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that the opening of Indian refreshment rooms is an eyesore to the Kellners and the Spencers whose income is going down ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not in a position to answer that question.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The answer given to part (a) is "No." I have got a copy of the circular in my room, and therefore, the statement "No" is definitely incorrect.

Mr. P. R. Rau : If the Honourable Member will send me a copy of that circular, I shall make further inquiries. I have been informed by the North Western Railway that there is no such circular.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are more facilities given to Kellners and Spencers who cater for European passengers than to the Indian refreshment rooms ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : What are the facilities that my Honourable friend is referring to ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : One of the facilities, if I understand it correctly, is that any number of bearers of the European refreshment rooms are allowed to travel in railway trains if they are in charge of crockeries, while this facility is denied to the bearers of Indian refreshment rooms. That is one of the things.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not aware of that. If the Honourable Member will put down a question, I shall obtain information.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Was it to encourage the European caterers that the Members of the Central Legislature from the Madras Presidency are now allowed Rs. 33 extra to travel via Bombay and not necessarily via Nagpur ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : This particular notice was shown to me by Mr. Shafie Daoodi who is not here. If I show it, will the Honourable Member take action ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Most certainly.

(616)

STOPPAGE OF THE TRANSMISSION OF TELEGRAMS TO GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, EDITORS AND OTHER PERSONAGES.

205. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Have Government issued instructions to the Post Masters, authorising them to stop transmission of telegrams to Government officials, editors and other personages under certain conditions ?

(b) What are these conditions ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). Telegraph Offices including Combined Offices which are in charge of postmasters are authorised, under rules 15 and 180 of the Indian Telegraph Rules, to refuse to accept or to forward any inland or foreign private telegram or radio-telegram or any part of such telegram of a plainly objectionable or alarming character or which appears dangerous to the security of the State or contrary to the laws of the country, to public order or decency. In cases of doubt, the matter is referred by the officer in charge of the Telegraph Office to a Secretary to Government or other officer nominated by the Local Government from time to time for this purpose if the office is located at a seat of Government, or to the Chief Civil or Military Officer, if the office is located elsewhere.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I just ask whether these telegraph officers are entitled to stop messages even if they are sent to higher Government officials ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I imagine if a telegram sent to higher Government officials offends against public order or decency, it will be subject to the same criterion as any other telegram.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : If the telegrams give details of facts which have happened, are the Telegraph Department entitled to stop the message even if it is addressed to the Governor or any other high Government official ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : They have to follow the rules to whomsoever the telegram is addressed.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I can give one instance if the Honourable Member is prepared to inquire. There has been a great misuse of this power and in one case the telegrams addressed to the Governor have been stopped, and, therefore, the Governor had no opportunity to know the other side of the picture.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : If the Honourable Member will send me information about that, I shall be happy to make inquiries and see whether the orders were carried out or not.

NON-PROVISION OF LATRINES IN THE THIRD CLASS CARRIAGES ON CERTAIN SECTIONS OF THE BARSII LIGHT RAILWAY.

206. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that there are no latrines provided in the third class carriages on the Kurduwadi-Miraj Section, and Kurduwadi-Latur Section of the Barsii Light Railway, and are Government aware that this causes great inconvenience and discomfort to travellers ?

(b) Do Government propose to take any steps to remedy this state of affairs ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) So far as Government are aware fourteen out of 49 third class carriages on the Barsi Light Railway are provided with latrine accommodation.

(b) The Honourable Member's question is being communicated to the Agent of the Barsi Light Railway for consideration.

NON-APPOINTMENT OF AN INDIAN TO THE PORT ADVISORY BOARD OF KENYA.

207. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the leading article, headed "Flimsy grounds", in the Kenya Daily Mail, dated the 13th June, 1934, on page 14, in which it is stated that there is no Indian appointed to the Port Advisory Board of Kenya?

(b) Are Government aware that, in reply to a question in the Kenya Legislative Council on the subject, the Government stated that :

"The constitution of the Port Advisory Board provides for full representation of all interests primarily concerned in the administration of the Port, and Government considers that no useful purpose would be served by amending the Order in Council to provide for representation on a racial basis."

(c) Are Government aware that Indians are making use of the Port in Kenya in a greater degree than the Europeans, that the Indians are exporting cotton in large quantities, that their imports are definitely more than those of Europeans, and that Indians are, along with other sections, shouldering the responsibility of meeting the interest and sinking fund charges on loans taken for the development of the Port?

(d) What is approximately the number of Indians and Europeans in Kenya?

(e) Is it a fact that the Association of East African Chambers, and the Mombasa Chamber of Commerce have been given representation on the Board?

(f) Do Government propose to enquire into this matter and take steps to see that the Indian Chamber which represents Indian commercial interests in Kenya, is also given representation on the Board?

Mr. G. S. Bajpi : (a), (b), (c), (e) and (f). Government have no information beyond what is contained in the Press article referred to by the Honourable Member, but are making enquiries.

(d) According to the census of 1931, the Indian population in Kenya was 39,644 and the Europeans, 16,812.

NON-APPOINTMENT OF A SINGLE BIHARI HINDU MEDICAL GRADUATE AS MEDICAL OFFICER ON ANY OF THE STATE RAILWAYS.

208. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that there is not a single Bihari Hindu medical graduate, appointed as Medical officer, on any of the State-managed Railways in India?

(b) Are Government aware that there is in existence a Medical College in Bihar which turns out about 25 medical graduates every year?

(c) Do Government propose to take any steps in this matter?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Government have no information.

(b) Yes.

(c) No.

LIQUIDATION OF THE EAST AND WEST CORPORATION, LIMITED, DELHI.

209. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the East and West Corporation Limited, Delhi, was floated some time back to push on the sale of Lancashire piece-goods in the Indian markets and that the official liquidator's report says that about Rs. 2 lakhs worth capital subscribed by the Mussalmans is not accounted for?

(b) Is it a fact that several European firms and banks, which had materially helped the Corporation, show large debit balances against the defunct concern? What are the names of these European firms and banks?

(c) Is it also a fact that several high officials helped the promoters to bring into existence this commercial organisation? If so, who are these officials?

(d) Do Government propose to place a copy of the official liquidator's report in the Library of this House?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : An enquiry has been made and the result will be furnished to the House in due course.

INTRODUCTION OF NIGHT FLYING FOR AIR MAIL SERVICES.

210. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government kindly state if night flying for Air Mail Services has been, or is going to be, introduced in India? If so, on what routes, and since when?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The schedules of the air services operating in and across India, in the main, provide only for day flying. A considerable amount of flying before daylight and after dark is done, particularly when services are delayed and in the winter months.

The introduction of regular night flying depends on the provision of adequate aerodrome and route lighting, and this requires money. Government intend to provide the necessary equipment as soon as funds are available.

NON-REMOVAL OF BAN FROM THE RED SHIRT ORGANISATION.

211. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Is it not a fact that Government removed the ban from the Congress Working Committee and from all Congress Sub-Committees?

(b) Is it a fact that Government have not yet removed the ban from Red Shirt Organisation of the North-West Frontier Province? What are the reasons for this differentiation?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions Nos. 211 to 216, together. With one exception I think the points raised have already been dealt with in the replies given by me to questions Nos. 81 and 112 on the 18th and 19th July, and in the supplementary answers. The Red Shirt Organisation has never been regarded by Government as a terrorist organisation, but as a revolutionary organisation, the object of which was to drive out the British from India by force. Specific acts of violence have included the murder of an Assistant Superintendent of Police by a mob of Red Shirts near Mardan, and an attempt to murder the Assistant Commissioner at Char-sadda following on the performance of a seditious drama containing direct incitement to his murder.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Has the Honourable Member seen the special cartoon in the Hindustan Times of today by Mr. Sarma in which he showed clearly that the terrorist movement is entirely the imagination of the Home Member and that he is looking into his own mirror ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I am afraid I have not had the privilege yet of seeing that cartoon.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Supposing there have been isolated cases of violence on the part of some members of the Red Shirt Organisation, does it follow that it is part of the creed of the Red Shirt Organisation ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir, not necessarily ; but our view is that the whole of the teaching and preaching of the Red Shirts was really directed to those results. After all the Red Shirts were definitely trying to stir up the trans-border tribes, and the latter were not going to act on principles of non-violence.

Sir Abdur Rahim : But is it not correct that the creed of the Red Shirts is non-violent non-co-operation, the same sort of creed as that held by the Congress ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I think if my Honourable friend will study some of the speeches of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan mentioned in those statements to which I have already referred, he will draw the same conclusion himself that he was not aiming at peaceful revolution.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not the creed of the Red Shirts that their activities should be confined to British India and not extended to tribal area ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir, it is quite definitely the case that their activities extended beyond the border.

Mr. B. Das : Have the Government documentary evidence that the Red Shirt movement was planned out as a revolutionary movement ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : We draw our conclusions from speeches and acts.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is it not a fact that Mr. Gandhi, the apostle of non-violence, blesses the Red Shirt movement and adopts it as an intimate part of the Congress ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : That may be so, but the Red Shirts were at the time useful allies of the Congress, and that is how they regarded themselves.

RED SHIRT ORGANISATION.

†212. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Was not the Red Shirt Organisation a branch of the Congress, and formally recognised by Congress as such ?

For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 211.

RED SHIRT ORGANISATION.

†213. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that the objects of the Red Shirt Organisation are identical with the objects of the Congress ? If not, what are the points of difference ?

RED SHIRT ORGANISATION.

†214. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Was the Red Shirt Organisation a terrorist organisation ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to mention the details of the political murders and political dacoities committed by the Red Shirt Organisation ?

RED SHIRT ORGANISATION.

†215. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Did the Government of India consult the Government of the North-West Frontier Province about removing the ban from the Red Shirt Organisation ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, what reply did the Frontier Government give ?

BAN ON CONGRESS ORGANISATIONS.

†216. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is there any Province, other than the North-West Frontier Province, which has refused to remove the ban from the Congress Organisations ?

RELEASE OF KHAN ABDUL GHAFFAR KHAN.

217. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) When do Government propose to release Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan ?

(b) What are the conditions which must be satisfied before Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan will be released ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : (a) and (b). I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given by me to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 152 on the 19th July, 1934, and to the supplementary questions.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : What is the answer to part (b) ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I think my Honourable friend will find that point dealt with in the supplementary questions.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I do not think there were any supplementary questions regarding the conditions to be satisfied for release.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Actually there were a number of questions on that point, and I referred to the previous answer. I said that the answer given was that he will be released when Government are satisfied that his detention is no longer essential in the public interest.

For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 211.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : What are the conditions which must be satisfied before the Government are satisfied ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : The conditions are that his release would not cause further trouble in the North-West Frontier Province.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan was at the head of this Red Shirt movement ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Yes, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it the contention of the Government that Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan used to indulge in revolutionary and unlawful activities before he was detained ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : He was indulging certainly in activities which were tending to violence.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it fair on the part of Government to make this charge behind the back of a man whom they have kept in prison without giving an opportunity to him to justify his conduct ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I am not making this charge for the first time. The statements to which I referred were made simultaneously with the arrest of Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Was he given a chance of repudiating or explaining those charges ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir. He was dealt with under Regulation III.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Why was not an opportunity given to him to answer those charges if there is any substance in them ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Because the Government considered at that time that the situation was such that he must be arrested and dealt with at once under Regulation III.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that prominent members of the Indian National Congress have issued a statement repudiating the charges made with regard to this gentleman ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I have not observed this.

Mr. Lalchand Navarai : In view of the fact that the general situation has now changed, do Government propose to give him an opportunity now to explain the charges against him ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Did the members of the Red Shirt Organisation commit any act of violence after it had been formally recognized as a branch of the Congress ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I am not quite sure at what date it was recognized formally as a branch of the Congress, but I do not think that that indicated any particular change in its policy. It had been working as an ally of the Congress since 1930.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member kindly explain if they have any evidence in their possession that, after the lapse of these two or three years, if the Khan is released, the work of the organisation will continue in the same way, on the lines of preaching violence ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : I am afraid, the view of the Local Government, with which the Government of India agree, is that the past activities of Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan in the Frontier Province were of such a nature that at the present moment it is not possible to contemplate allowing him to return to that Province.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is it not a fact that the attitude of the Local Government of the Frontier Province has been greatly influenced by the political opponents of Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan, and that they are afraid that at the next election, if Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan is free, his political opponents will find it very difficult to meet the electors ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir. I do not think that is a fair statement of the case. Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan's activities in 1930 and, later on, in 1931, produced such a state of disorder, unrest and insecurity in the North-West Frontier Province that the Local Government are fully justified in objecting to his release.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : If there is sufficient evidence in the possession of the Government, what, I ask, is the objection to their placing Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan before a Court of law and convicting him in a regular way ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Government are satisfied that they have a sufficient case for detaining him under Regulation III.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : And this case they are not prepared to make known before a Court of law or before the public ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : They have not considered it suitable to prosecute him.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is it not a fact that the attitude adopted by the Government towards the Red Shirt Organisation and Khan Abdur Ghaffar Khan as distinct from the attitude they have adopted towards the Congress has led to a great deal of misunderstanding and uneasiness ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : According to my information, it has not led to any such results in the Frontier Province ; there is a certain amount of fictitious agitation in other parts of India.

REPORT OF THE TARIFF BOARD ON THE PROTECTION OF THE STEEL INDUSTRY.

218. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to give an opportunity to this House to discuss the Tariff Board Report on the protection of steel industry ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : The Honourable Members will have an opportunity to discuss the report when the Bill, embodying the decisions of the Government of India on the recommendations contained in the report, is before the House.

ILL-TREATMENT OF INDIANS IN ZANZIBAR.

219. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Have the Government of India made any representation to the Government of Zanzibar about the ill-treatment of Indians ?

(b) Are Government prepared to lay all the relevant papers on the table of this House ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 219 and 220, together. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer's question No. 196 on the 23rd July, 1934.

ANTI-INDIAN LEGISLATION IN ZANZIBAR.

†220. Sir Muhammad Yakub : Will Government be pleased to state fully the situation arising out of the anti-Indian legislation in Zanzibar and the steps taken by the Government of India for protecting the interests of the Indians ?

SELECTION OF AN OBJECTIONABLE DRAMA BY THE TEXT BOOK COMMITTEE, DELHI.

221. Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : With reference to the reply given to my starred question No. 458, vide statement laid on the table on the 14th March, 1933, regarding selection of an objectionable drama by the Text Book Committee, Delhi, are Government prepared to consider the advisability of (a) nominating at least one Muslim to the Committee of Courses and Studies in English, (b) forfeiting to His Majesty's Government the drama in question, and (c) prosecuting the author, printer and publisher of the book in question ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Government have no power to nominate members of the Committee of Courses and Studies in the Delhi University. Moreover as stated in reply to part (h) of the Honourable Member's question No. 458, on the 14th March, 1934, they are quite sure that the Committee will always pay due regard to Muslim susceptibilities.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to parts (e), (f) and (g) of his question No. 458 on the 14th March, 1934.

CONSTRUCTION OF QUARTERS FOR DUFTARIES IN NEW DELHI.

222. Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : (a) Is it a fact that the Standing Finance Committee has sanctioned the construction of 100 quarters at Delhi for duftaries ?

(b) Will Government please state if these quarters will be constructed according to the application and the map submitted by the Record-sorters and Duftaries Association ? If not, why not ?

(c) At which site will these quarters be constructed ?

(d) Is it intended to allot these quarters, when ready, to the staff of the Imperial Secretariat only, or to that of the Attached Offices also ?

(e) Are Government prepared to place on the table of this House the application and the map referred to in part (b) above ?

(f) Is Block No. 90 of the duftaries' quarters a permanent building or a temporary one ?

(g) Is it a fact that the Health Officer, New Delhi, has condemned the old type duftaries' quarters as being unfit for habitation ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 219.

(h) Is it a fact that there are more than one thousand peons' quarters ready and that the Standing Finance Committee has sanctioned the construction of 200 more ? If so, what is the reason for not sanctioning the construction of more than 100 duftaries' quarters ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The question was carefully considered by Government, and the design actually adopted was considered suitable, having regard to the status and pay of those for whom the quarters are intended.

(c) In the City Extension Area, New Delhi.

(d) To both.

(e) A copy of the application and of the plan is being sent to the Honourable Member.

(f) A permanent building.

(g) No.

(h) The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, Government do not consider it necessary at present to build more quarters. With the completion of the new quarters the percentage of quarters to applications will be approximately 66 for duftaries and 81 for peons and this is regarded as sufficient for the present, as the demand is falling.

PROVISION OF A TURNSTILE GATE AT THE GARHI HARSARU RAILWAY STATION ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

223. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Is it a fact that there is a railway station on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway named Garhi Harsaru ?

(b) Is it a fact that a large number of railway passengers use that station day and night ?

(c) Is it a fact that most of the trains on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway stop at that station in the night ?

(d) Are Government aware that such railway passengers getting down at night at that station used to be without shelter from the inclemencies of the weather and without any protection against dacoits and ferocious animals owing to the want of waiting rooms ?

(e) Are Government aware that with a view to help such railway passengers a generous minded philanthropic person built a Dharamshala at a cost of Rs. 50,000 by the side of the railway fencing of the said station platform for the use of all railway passengers using that station, irrespective of caste, creed or sex ?

(f) Are Government aware that the said philanthropic gentleman has employed four men at his own cost, to supply water to railway passengers either in the train or on the railway station platform ?

(g) Is it a fact that the said philanthropic gentleman requested the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway authorities for providing a turnstile gate on the railway wire fencing nearest to the station road for the convenience of the railway passengers using the said dharamshala ?

(h) Is it a fact that the District Traffic Superintendent of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway recommended the provision of the turnstile gate nearest to the dharamshala and the station platform ?

(i) Is it a fact that some officers of the Engineering Department of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway demanded from him some money for the provision of such gate ?

(j) Are Government aware that on the refusal to comply with that demand the provision of a turnstile gate was refused by the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway authorities ?

(k) Is it a fact that the proprietor of the dharamshala expressed his willingness to the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway authorities to execute a bond waiving all his rights over the said turnstile gate if provided by the Railway Administration ?

(l) Do Government propose to enquire into the causes for such a refusal to provide a gate for the convenience of the Railway passengers and do Government propose to remove the said grievance of the railway passengers of the said Garhi Harsaru Railway Station ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Will you permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 223, 225 and 226, together. Enquiries are being made from the Railway Administrations and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

VACANCY AMONG THE MEMBERS OF THE RAILWAY BOARD.

224. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Is it a fact that there is going to be a vacancy among the Members of the Railway Board in the near future ?

(b) Is it a fact that generally the Members of the Railway Board are recruited from amongst the incumbents of the posts of Agents of the different Railways ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state how many vacancies among the Members of the Railway Board occurred during the last ten years and how many of such vacancies were filled by the recruitment of Agents of State Railways and other Railways ?

(d) Do Government propose to fill the next vacancy by promoting one of the Indian Agents of State Railways, if there be any ? If not, why not ?

(e) Is it a fact that generally Government fill up the vacant posts of the Members of the Railway Board by men with technical qualifications of Railway Engineering together with the qualifications of general administration of Railway management as Agents ? If so, do Government propose to recruit such a qualified Indian Agent of a State Railway or a Company Railway, if there be any ? If not, why not ?

(f) Are Government aware that this House always insisted, during each Railway Budget discussion during the last so many years, for bringing in qualified Indians as Members of the Railway Board ? If so, do Government propose to give effect to these popular demands of this House by recruiting an Indian with Railway Engineering qualifications as well as with the qualifications of running a railway administration as Agent of a Railway in India to fill up the post of the Railway Board Member, if there be any vacancy in the near future ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Since the re-organization of the Railway Board, there have been 11 permanent Members (including Chief Commissioners, but excluding Financial Commissioners). Of the officers holding these posts, five had been permanently Agents of Railways before appointment ; and four others had officiated as Agents.

(d) Mr. Tylden-Pattenson, Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, has been selected for the post.

(e) All relevant factors are taken into consideration and the most suitable officer is selected. Engineering qualifications are not by any means essential in the case of all Members of the Board.

(f) Government are aware that this opinion has been expressed during the discussion of the Railway Budget, but Government have more than once explained that these appointments must be filled by selection from the most suitable candidates, irrespective of nationality.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask the Honourable Member if no Indian is available to fill up the place of one of the Members of the Railway Board ? Has any attempt been made in that direction ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : My Honourable friend may take it from me that, after taking into account seniority and other factors, the choice has, in the opinion of the Board, fallen upon the most suitable candidate.

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN ALLOWING THE USE OF THE CAB ROAD BETWEEN PLATFORMS NOS. 6 AND 7 OF THE HOWRAH STATION.

†225. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Is it a fact that there is a cab road between the platforms Nos. 6 and 7 of the Howrah Station ?

(b) Are Government aware that Indian passengers going to the platform of the Howrah Station to entrain the outgoing Bengal Nagpur Railway Bombay Mail are not allowed to take their motors through that road upto platforms Nos. 6 or 7 ?

(c) Are Government aware that European motorists are allowed to take their motors right up to the side of the platforms ?

(d) If Government are not aware of these facts, do they propose to enquire into the matter ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will they be pleased to state the reasons for this racial discrimination by the Howrah Station authorities ?

(f) Do Government propose to remove immediately this racial discrimination between Indian motorists and European motorists ? If not, why not ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why this road should be closed for motorists, either European or Indian ?

(h) Is it a fact that owing to the absence of side fencing and barrier to the two platforms, Nos. 6 and 7, the road is being closed ? If so, do

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 223.

Government propose to put fencing on the road side of the two platforms with an entrance gate on either side of the two platforms adjoining the said road? If not, why not?

ACQUISITION BY THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY AUTHORITIES OF LANDS ATTACHED TO HINDU PLACES OF WORSHIP AT AZIMGANJ.

†226. *Mr. Bhuput Singh: (a) Are Government aware that there are two idols of the Hindu god—Shiva—situated close to the railway line passing between Azimganj Junction and City Station on the East Indian Railway?

(b) Is it a fact that the East Indian Railway authorities have decided to take possession of the lands attached to those two places of worship and to remove those idols?

(c) Are Government aware that on the day of the last Chaitra Shankranti when, according to the usual old custom prevailing there, a fair was being held on the grounds of that Hindu place of worship, the Railway authorities sent police to prevent people from going into that place of worship?

(d) Are Government aware that the said place of Hindu worship was desecrated by the Muslim constables sent by the Railway authorities, or under the instruction of the Railway authorities?

(e) Are Government aware that there is strong resentment being felt by the Hindu population of Azimganj City owing to the attitude of the Railway authorities in trying to demolish the temples and the usurpation of the lands belonging to such places of Hindu worship?

(f) Is it a fact that the Railway authorities have left only 10 square feet area of land for one of the temples in place of the original 100 square feet area?

(g) If Government are not aware of the facts mentioned in parts (a) to (f), do they propose to enquire into the allegations of high-handedness and zulm of the railway authorities concerned over the Hindu public of Azimganj?

(h) Do Government propose to return the old lands attached to those places of Hindu temples? If not, why not?

CONTROL OVER THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE MADRAS PORT.

227. *Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they exercise any control over the administration of the Madras Port?

(b) What are the harbour dues and landing charges prevailing in the Madras Port as compared to those in the other ports of the Madras Presidency?

(c) What is the fall in the volume of traffic in the Madras Port during the last three years?

(d) What is the number of Indian and foreign insurance companies with whom the properties of the Madras Port Trust are insured against risk of fire?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 223.

(e) What is the proportion of Indians to Europeans on the Madras Port Trust Board?

(f) (i) What is the daily average number of quays that were vacant during 1933-34 in the Madras Port; (ii) how many vessels discharged cargo in the moorings during that period; (iii) to what company or companies those vessels belonged; and (iv) what amount did the Port Trust pay to such companies on account of discharge having taken place in the moorings rather than at the quays?

(g) What is the total amount spent by the Madras Port Trust in connection with the insolvency of Messrs. C. K. Narayana Iyer & Sons, who are the solicitors, and what was their share of the amount so spent?

(h) Is it not a fact that even the Chairman of the Madras Port Trust overdraw salary or allowances due to him and whether the Trust Board did not recover the amount but condoned it?

(i) Do Government propose to appoint a Committee of Inquiry to investigate and report on the matter?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the Indian Ports Act, 1908, and the Madras Port Trust Act, 1905, which define the statutory powers of Government over the administration of the Madras Port.

(b) to (i). The Government of India are making enquiries on the subject and when information has been obtained, a reply will be laid on the table.

MEETINGS OF THE MADRAS AND SOUTHERN MAHRATTA AND SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY ADVISORY COMMITTEES.

228. *Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of the meetings of the Madras and Southern Mahratta and South Indian Railway Advisory Committees held in 1933 and 1934?

(b) Did the two Railways hold any periodical conferences with merchants, as is done in Bombay and Calcutta?

(c) Are their mercantile coupon tickets interchangeable as between themselves and over other Railways in India? If not, why not?

(d) Have those two Railways appointed any traffic canvassers as has been done on the Great Indian Peninsula and Bengal Nagpur Railways, etc.? If not, why not?

(e) Did the Agents of the two Railways, or their deputies, or other officers, accompany Mr. P. R. Rau to the Southern India Chamber of Commerce meeting on his two visits to Madras? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau: (a) Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway. In 1933, there were held five meetings of the main Committee of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway at Madras and four of the branch committee, the meetings of which are generally held at Hubli. In 1934, the meetings held up to May were three and one, respectively.

The South Indian Railway Advisory Committee had four meetings in 1933, and two up to May, 1934.

(b) No. The Agents of these two Railways consider that their administrations are sufficiently in touch with commercial interests to make such conferences unnecessary.

(c) No. Interchangeability is not practicable owing to the basis of charge for such coupons on the different railways not being uniform.

(d) Government have no information. I am forwarding this suggestion to the Agents for consideration.

(e) They did not, because they were not asked.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : With reference to part (c), are the rates of the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway and the South Indian Railway the same, and how do they differ from the other railways with the result that the interchangeability cannot be put into practice?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have no information at the present moment as regards the actual rates for coupons on different railways, but if my Honourable friend wants the information, I shall be glad to supply it to him.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Previously they were interchangeable. May I ask what were the rates then?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I understand that at present the basis of charges is not the same.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Are these mercantile coupon tickets issued on State Railways also?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not think they are issued on all railways.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Are they issued by the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsular Railways?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I must ask my Honourable friend to give me notice of that question.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Regarding part (e), will the Agents of the two Railways accompany the Member, whether he is an Indian or a European in the future.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not quite understand that question.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : When European Members used to go there, the Agents of the two Railways used to accompany them when they met the two Chambers of Commerce, but in the case of an Indian Member, when he went to the Southern India Chamber of Commerce last, the two Agents were conspicuous by their absence.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not think that my Honourable friend is entitled to make that inference. The fact was that when I met the Southern India Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber did not ask that the Agent should accompany me, and, in the absence of such an invitation, I did not ask the Agent to accompany me either.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : But in previous years no invitation was sent to the Agents and still the Agents used to accompany the European Member?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not know anything about previous years.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Will the Honourable Member please make inquiries in the matter?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think it does not matter.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask if the Honourable Member did not want them because there was no necessity for them to accompany him?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I understood that the Chamber wanted to meet me.

MADRAS TELEPHONE COMPANY, LIMITED.

229. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : (a) Will Government be pleased to state, whether the Madras Telephone Company, Limited, which is a public utility concern, pays a dividend of nine per cent.?

(b) How much have its shares appreciated since the formation of the company?

(c) Were its shareholders given free bonus shares from the General Reserve?

(d) Were its shareholders given new issues of shares at a nominal premium of rupee one when the market premium was seven or eight times that amount?

(e) Have Government received a representation from the Southern India Chamber of Commerce for reasonable reduction in the monthly rental and other charges of the company?

(f) Do Government propose to ask the company to reduce the charges accordingly?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) A dividend of 9 per cent. was paid by the Madras Telephone Company during the calendar years 1932 and 1933 only, dividends paid during the previous years being less than this rate.

(b) and (d). Information has been called for, and will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

(c) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(f) The Madras Telephone Company, Limited, have already decided to make a reduction in their monthly telephone rent charges with effect from the 1st January, 1935, and the Government have accorded their approval thereto. Government do not propose to ask the Company to make any further reductions at present.

FORMATION OF A SEPARATE DEPARTMENT TO LOOK AFTER THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE INDIAN COMPANIES ACT IN MADRAS.

230. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are not aware of grave defects in the Indian Companies Act, 1913?

L205LAD

(b) Is the Registration Department of Madras looking after the administration of the Companies Act as also of the Indian Partnerships Act?

(c) Is the administration of the Acts in Bombay and Bengal in a separate department?

(d) Has Government's attention been drawn by the Southern India Chamber of Commerce to the necessity of improving the position?

(e) Do Government propose to form a separate department in Madras also for the purpose?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : (a) Certain alleged defects in the existing company law have been brought to the notice of Government and it is proposed now to undertake a revision of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, at an early date.

(b), (c) and (d). The reply is in the affirmative.

(e) The question is already under the consideration of the Government of India.

Mr. B. Das : May I ask, Sir, if the amendment of the Indian Companies Act will take place in this Session of the Assembly or will it be postponed till the new Constitution?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I can remove all anxiety on that score from my Honourable friend's mind. It will certainly not be brought before the Assembly this Session.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Is it possible for the Government to name the gentleman who will be in charge to look after the business of these amendments?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : A communiqué will be issued in due course.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that the Standing Finance Committee has already given sanction to appoint a special officer to prepare the preliminary draft?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : That is quite right.

Mr. B. Das : Will Government consult the different Chambers of Commerce and get their opinion about the amendment of the Indian Companies Act?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I have no doubt that all responsible opinion, which is concerned in this matter, will be consulted.

RICE IMPORTED INTO THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

231. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the quantity of imported rice into the Madras Presidency by coasting and foreign trade and what is the quantity of the production in the Presidency during 1932-33 and 1933-34?

(b) How much has the price of rice fallen during that period?

(c) How much has the export of Madras rice diminished during the period and is it not expected to diminish more and more in the future?

(d) Do Government propose to negotiate for recapturing old markets, and to order a substantial reduction in the railway freight?

(e) Do Government not propose to stop the import of rice, at least for the time being, in order to try to raise the price level?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). A statement giving the information required is laid on the table.

(c) The exports of rice abroad from Madras have not diminished, but increased from 66,912 tons in 1932-33 to 79,344 tons in 1933-34.

(d) The Ottawa Agreement has already had the effect of substantially improving the export of Indian rice to the United Kingdom. The recent Crop Planning Conference recommended that the question of improving prospects in Ceylon and British Malaya should be taken up. This suggestion is already receiving attention. As regards railway freights, the Railway Board have already advised the various Railway Administrations that where special rates are required to facilitate particular movements of special crops, the question should be sympathetically considered.

(e) I would refer my Honourable friend to the reply given to Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad's starred question No. 18 on the 16th instant.

Statements showing the imports, production and prices of rice in the Madras Presidency.

Imports :

(i) By sea from abroad—

	1932-33.	1933-34.
	Tons.	Tons.
Rice in the husk	10	4,381
Rice not in the husk	35,418	77,665
Total	35,428	82,046

(ii) By sea coastwise from other parts of India—

	1932-33.	1933-34.
	Tons.	Tons.
Rice in the husk	69,399	80,696
Rice not in the husk	445,374	533,927
Total	514,773	614,623

Production :

	1932-33.	1933-34.
	Tons.	Tons.
	54,06,000	50,90,000

(Fort St. George Gazette.)

Retail Prices of Rice.
(in Rs. per md. = 82 2/7 lbs.).

	West Goda- vari	Tanjore.		Tinnevely.		Malabar.		Madura.		Trichinopoly.		Madras.
		1933.	1934.	1933.	1934.	1933.	1934.	1933.	1934.	1933.	1934.	1933.	1934.
First week of
January	2.50	3.15	3.41	3.70	3.86	3.16	3.45	3.69	3.93	3.19	3.49	3.83	4.74
February	2.48	2.87	3.57	3.06	3.71	3.08	3.55	3.69	3.93	3.49	3.73	3.63	4.69
March	2.41	2.89	3.08	2.96	3.66	2.99	3.33	3.28	3.58	3.28	3.35	3.48	4.49
April	2.43	2.69	2.93	2.69	3.43	2.97	3.18	3.14	3.44	3.30	3.45	3.24	4.49
May	2.49	2.68	3.12	2.62	3.27	3.05	3.29	3.10	3.40	3.45	3.42	3.24	4.31
June	2.75	2.75	3.14	2.86	3.30	3.20	3.33	3.31	3.44	3.43	3.41	3.26	4.45
July	2.81	2.81	3.25	3.23	3.58	3.23	3.30	3.44	3.44	3.57	3.64	3.47	4.53

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: May I ask, Sir, if the negotiations with the foreign Governments in the matter of rice have progressed any further, and can the Honourable Member throw any more light on the matter?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: They have progressed no further except chronologically, I presume, since I made my last answer.

ENFORCEMENT OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT.

232. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the letter from the correspondent of the Madras Mail, dated the 2nd July, 1934, stating how the provisions of the Sarda Act are being violated by performing marriages in Yanam, a French territory in the Madras Presidency?

(b) What steps do Government propose to take to enforce the provisions of the Sarda Act?

(c) Do Government propose to draw the attention of the High Courts in India and request them to instruct the Courts to inflict punishment by way of imprisonment, along with the fines, so as to deter the public from violating the Sarda Act?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: (a) Yes. I am making enquiry into the facts.

(b) and (c). Government do not consider that any special steps are called for.

Mr. B. Das: Have Government communicated with the French Government not to permit British Indians to violate the British Indian laws in the French territory?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: No, Sir. I said that I was making enquiry into the facts of this case and nothing can be done until the facts are ascertained.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: If the Government do not propose to take any further action, will it not be defeating the Act which has been passed by the Legislature?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig: I cannot anticipate whether any action will or will not be taken when the facts have been ascertained, but I submit that the first thing to do is to ascertain the facts.

TRADE BETWEEN INDIA AND CEYLON.

233. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the leading article of the Hindu, dated the 4th July, 1934, regarding "Trade between India and Ceylon"?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state what the Indian commodities are that suffer under the new prohibitive duties imposed by the Ceylon Government?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to safeguard the interests of India as a whole and of the Madras Presidency in particular?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) and (c). Government have no information beyond what is contained in the Press reports. Enquiries have, however, been made and the matter will receive the careful consideration of the Government of India.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Have the Government of India taken any action to prevent the dumping of copra from Ceylon to the west coast of India ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I am not prepared to say whether it is dumping or not, but as my Honourable friend knows, there is a very substantial import duty on copra.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : On account of the ten per cent. concession allowed to Ceylon Government under the Ottawa Agreement, is not Ceylon enabled to dump copra on the west coast ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : The Ottawa Agreement gives them a ten per cent. preference, but if my Honourable friend will remember, we did not reduce the duties, but we gave preference by increasing the duties against others.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Will the Government increase the duty still further ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I made it clear to the House on a previous occasion that we were awaiting the report of the special officer who has been appointed to conduct enquiries in regard to the coconut industry. We can do nothing, nor can I make any announcement to the House until the report of that officer has been considered.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : When is the report expected ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I do not know.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Would it be the next season ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : The officer was not appointed by the Commerce Department, and I am, therefore, not able to give my Honourable friend any definite information on the point.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Who appointed that special officer ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I think it was the Imperial Agricultural Council.

Mr. B. Das : May I ask the Honourable Member, Mr. Bajpai, as to when the report is likely to be published ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I shall have to make an enquiry on the point.

Mr. B. Das : Is it because Madras is a benighted Province that much interest is not taken in its affairs ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The mere fact that an officer has been appointed disproves my Honourable friend's suggestion that Madras is neglected.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Madras is well represented in the Executive Council also.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I do not think I need stress the obvious for the information of my Honourable friend.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : May I protest against the remark of my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : There is no point in the protest. Do these gentlemen deny that they do not belong to the Madras Civil Service ?

GRANT OF SUBSIDIES TO THE BRITISH SHIPPING INDUSTRY.

234. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to Reuter's telegram of the 3rd July, published in the newspapers on the 5th July, 1934, about Government's conditions for granting subsidies to the British shipping industry ?

(b) With reference to the telegram wherein Mr. Runciman said "that it was essential to have the co-operation of the Dominions and India with whom the Government were consulting in the matter", will Government kindly lay on the table of this House the correspondence in the matter and indicate to what extent and on what conditions India is expected to co-operate in this scheme ?

(c) Will the Central Legislature be consulted before the Government of India render any financial help for granting subsidies or special facilities to the British Shipping Industry ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : (a) Government have seen the Press telegram referred to.

(b) The Government of India have not so far been consulted in the matter.

(c) Does not yet arise.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Will the Central Legislature be consulted in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : Should the occasion arise, I have no doubt that Government will take appropriate and suitable action.

Mr. B. Das : Have Government received any communication from the Indian Shipping Companies regarding the point referred to, namely, Mr. Runciman's speech ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I must ask for notice of this question.

PROVISION OF MORE SPACE FOR CLERKS WORKING IN THE NORTH BLOCK OF THE SECRETARIAT IN NEW DELHI.

235. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Is it a fact that in some offices located in the North Block of the Delhi Secretariat, there is great congestion in the rooms occupied, by the clerks, while the space provided for officers is more than what is admissible ?

(b) Is it also a fact that some of offices have more space for their clerks, while in others the rooms occupied by the clerks are very much overcrowded ?

(c) Are Government aware that the congestion in the rooms affects the health of the clerks and is a source of discomfort, specially in summer months ?

(d) If the replies to the preceding parts are in the affirmative, do Government propose to accord equal treatment in all offices and provide more space for the clerks ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). No.

(c) and (d). Do not arise.

SPACE ALLOTTED TO EACH CLERK, SUPERINTENDENT, ETC., IN THE IMPERIAL SECRETARIAT IN NEW DELHI.

236. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Will Government please state whether there is a standard scale of space to be occupied by a clerk, a Superintendent and a gazetted officer in the Government of India Secretariat in New Delhi? If so, what is that scale for each class of officers?

(b) Is the space occupied by racks and almirahs for keeping current records, etc., included in the scale?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The standard scale of space allowed is 40 sq. ft. for a clerk and 64 sq. ft. for a Superintendent. No standard scale is prescribed for gazetted officers and the accommodation allotted to them depends on circumstances. Some gazetted officers are given rooms to themselves, while others share rooms. The space actually available in the New Delhi Secretariat is considerably in excess of the standard scale.

(b) Yes.

REPORT OF THE VARMA COMMITTEE.

237. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) When was the Report of the Varma Committee presented to Government?

(b) When was it printed?

(c) What action have Government taken, or propose to take, on that Report?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) to (c) The Report was available in print in June, 1933. Consideration of the Report was, however, deferred for reasons explained in the reply to Mr. S. C. Mitra's unstarred questions Nos. 178 and 179 in this House, on the 21st November, 1933. Government have recently received the views of the Director-General on the Report and hope to pass orders shortly.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask whether the orders will be passed sometime in this Session of the Assembly?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I should think it somewhat doubtful.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know the reason for delaying the consideration of this report specially when it was urged that it was of an urgent nature and that tax-payers were losing money?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I shall be very happy to satisfy my Honourable friend's desire for information on that subject. The fact is that the report is a very technical one and involves issues of the greatest importance to the Telegraph Department. It was, therefore, felt necessary, as I have already explained in this House in reply to a question put by my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, that the views of the Departmental Associations should be taken on the report before the Director-General's recommendations were submitted to Government. That, naturally, took time. Sir Thomas Ryan was busily engaged on the report when his tragic death took place. It had been his desire to submit his recommendations to Government before he retired. But unfortunately his death prevented his doing so. The notes he left were not complete and that meant that the new Director-General, being fresh to the Department, had to go through the report from beginning to end. I received his recommendations on the subject a few days ago, and I hope to pass orders on them as soon as possible. The report, as I have said, is a very technical one and difficult to deal with, and it is possible that my pre-occupations with this Assembly will prevent my dealing with it before the end of this Session. That is the position. The delay is very much to be regretted, but it is, I think, the House will agree, due to circumstances over which we have had no control.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Will the Honourable Member please see that copies are placed in the Library before Government passes any order?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I am replying to that in answer to another question. Copies have already been placed in the Library of the House.

REPORT OF THE VARMA COMMITTEE.

238. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that Government considered the establishment of the Varma Committee very urgent on the ground that tax-payers were daily losing money?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The Committee was appointed to investigate the methods adopted to determine the number of posts in the telegraph traffic establishment and to make, as early as might be found possible, recommendations to secure the most economical organisation compatible with efficiency.

REPORT OF THE VARMA COMMITTEE.

239. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Do Government propose to circulate the Varma Committee Report among the Members of the Legislature?

(b) Are Government prepared to give an opportunity to the Legislature to discuss the Report?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) and (b). The replies are in the negative. In this connection the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the reply given to Mr. Dudhoria's starred question No. 890 in this House, on the 23rd March, 1933. I may add that a copy of the report has been placed in the Library and is available for such Honourable Members as may desire to study it.

RURAL INDEBTEDNESS IN BRITISH INDIA.

240. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) What is the probable amount of rural indebtedness in British India?

(b) What is the amount in each Province?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). The total rural indebtedness of India was roughly estimated at about 900 crores of rupees by the Indian Central Banking Enquiry Committee in 1931. The figures for the Provinces are given in paragraph 77 of the Committee's report, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: May I know whether Government have calculated the amount in 1933-34, and have they calculated by any method the usual rate of interest charged?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: There has been no calculation so far as I am aware since 1931.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: Has any attempt been made in any Province in India to bring the figures up-to-date?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: According to my recollection of the proceedings of the Provincial Economic Committee, all the representatives of the Provinces took their stand upon the Banking Enquiry Committee's calculations, which, as I have already stated, were up to 1931.

RURAL INDEBTEDNESS IN BRITISH INDIA.

241. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: (a) Have Government framed any policy of meeting the rural indebtedness? If so, what is their policy?

(b) Do Government propose to help the Provincial Governments who cannot make up their minds?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: (a) and (b). This question was discussed at the Provincial Economic Conference held at Delhi in April last. The general view of the Conference was that the diversity of the conditions of the agricultural classes in India was so great, both in respect of land tenures and general economic status, that any legislative measures to afford relief must be primarily provincial. The question of ensuring a regular exchange of information on this matter between various Local Governments is under consideration.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: What is the answer to part (b) whether Government propose to help the Provincial Governments who cannot make up their minds?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: I would rather leave that task to my Honourable friend.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: We know that the Government, to which the Honourable gentleman belongs, could not make up their mind for the last four or five years.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: I do not think my Honourable friend is correctly representing the position when he says that he and I belong to the Government of the United Provinces, at least I do not.

CIRCULATION OF COUNTERFEIT RUPEE COINS.

242. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: (a) Are Government aware that since lately a very large number of false, counterfeit and suspicious rupee coins have got into circulation in India and in consequence thereof there is no safety and convenience in generally accepting any rupee coin?

(b) Are Government aware that by ordinary scrutiny nowadays it is difficult to distinguish a good rupee from a bad one and therefore rupees are being rejected on a mere suspicion by Government banks, treasuries, post and railway offices, which affects the commercial and general currency of them?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take to meet the situation and to eradicate the mischief caused thereby and the fraud perpetrated?

(d) Do Government propose to issue one-rupee notes at least until such time as the spurious and suspicious coins are excluded from circulation? If not, what other method do Government propose to adopt?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: (a) The number of counterfeit rupees which came to notice increased substantially between 1928 and 1930, but since 1930 there has been comparatively little change. The total for 1933 is slightly higher than the totals for 1930 and 1932 but slightly lower than the total for 1931.

(b) Government have received no report to this effect.

(c) and (d). Government do not consider it desirable to issue one rupee notes so long as India has a large surplus holding of silver. Measures for the suppression of counterfeiting are, however, engaging the attention of the Departments concerned, and any marked increase in the number of counterfeit coins reported in any particular area is brought to the notice of the appropriate Local Government.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: May I inquire whether there is more counterfeiting in currency notes or in coins?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: I should like to have notice of that question.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: Is it not a fact that the Bank of England does not issue any note below £5, and, in view of that, is it not necessary that India should not issue any currency note below Rs. 5?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: No, Sir, that is not correct. The Bank of England now issue currency notes of the denominations of £1 and 10 shillings.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: With regard to clause (b), my object was to show that at present there are suspicious rupees in circulation, and people are inconvenienced, because the scrutiny applied is very strict, and the coins are returned on the slightest pretext. May I know from the Honourable Member if he is aware of this fact?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: My answer to clause (b) was that Government have received no report to this effect. But I would like to make it clear that if the Honourable Member has in his possession conclusive evidence to that effect, I will be very glad to consider it if he would furnish me with it.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: Will not one-rupee postal stamps do instead of printing fresh one-rupee currency notes?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: That is a new question, and I should like to have notice of it.

Mr. B. Das: Is it not a fact that the Honourable Member's predecessor, Sir Basil Blackett, had to stop the circulation of one-rupee notes, because there were losses caused to the poor people in the villages because these paper notes got destroyed in water?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: I was not aware of it, but I am quite prepared to take it from my Honourable friend that it is so.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Is it not also a fact that Government found that the circulation of one-rupee notes was costing them too much, much more than the coins in circulation ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : There also I have no information myself, but I am quite prepared to take it from my Honourable friend.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : What testimony does the Honourable Member want me to give him with regard to the inconvenience caused to the people ? Shall I take him to the stamp vendor downstairs and prove it by offering him a rupee ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir ; the evidence I would like to receive is the indubitable evidence which the Honourable Member says he has in his possession.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I never said there is any evidence in my pocket. I only say it is common knowledge that the scrutiny of rupees at present is very strict, and even genuine rupees are rejected on very flimsy grounds. Will the Honourable Member make inquiries about this ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : All I can say is that I have received no report to that effect. The Honourable Member said it is common knowledge. If it is common knowledge, it must be quite simple for him to produce instances and bring them to my notice.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Is the Honourable Member prepared to inquire even from his own office people ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Presumably the answer which I have given the Honourable Member was not prepared in any other office, but my own. (Laughter.)

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

INTRODUCTION OF MOTOR BUS SERVICES BY RAILWAYS.

20. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What are the names of the Railways which have opened motor-bus services since the passing of the Railway (Amendment) Act on this subject, and from which place to which place ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : None of the Railways affected by the Indian Railways (Amendment) Act, 1933, has as yet instituted road motor services.

THE INDIAN CARRIAGE BY AIR BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to give effect in British India to a Convention for the unification of certain rules relating to international carriage by air.

THE INDIAN AIRCRAFT BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to make better provision for the control of the manufacture, possession, use, operation, sale, import and export of aircraft.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume consideration of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Supplementary (Extending) Bill.

The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.”

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That for clause 2 of the Bill, the following be substituted :

‘ 2. In part 2 of section 1 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, for the words ‘ three years ’ the words ‘ six years ’ shall be substituted.’ ”

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Sir, on a point of order. We find from the supplementary agenda that the Indian Iron and Steel Duties Bill will be given preference over any other business today. What has happened to that Bill ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Indian Iron and Steel Duties Bill will be introduced at about 1 o'clock. Copies of the Bill have not yet come from the press.

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : Sir, in moving my amendment, I feel that most of the important points have been already fully threshed out in this House, and that very little remains for me to put before the House. However, I should like to place before the House my points as to why this amendment should be accepted. In the first place, my amendment assumes that this terrorist menace exists in Bengal. It further assumes that the Bengal Government are confronted with a serious situation. Lastly, the amendment also assumes that some help should be given to the Bengal Government at this juncture. But the amendment seeks to protest against making the provisions of Act VIII of 1932 a permanent feature of the Statute-book. Sir, in reply to yesterday's debate, the Honourable the Home Member stated perhaps as his foremost ground that because from time to time Government were required to place before the Legislature similar measures, it is no use fixing a time limit for this

[Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil.]

Bill, but that once for all it should be made a permanent one. In placing this argument before the House the Honourable the Home Member referred to an Act of 1915 known as the Defence of India Act. I may submit, Sir, that this reference to that Act does not take the case of Government any further. The Great War began in the year 1914, and it was necessary for the Government of India as well as the Government of Great Britain to enact such measures, and it was in order to safeguard the interests of the State as a whole that this Act was enacted in India. Let me point out a few provisions of that Act to show that it had nothing to do with the terrorist movement in Bengal or in any other part of British India. In section 1 (4), it is stated :

" This Act shall continue in force during the continuance of the present war and for a period of six months thereafter."

This conclusively shows that this Act had absolutely nothing to do with the terrorist movement. In my humble opinion, the Government of India's first resort to this procedure of transferring detenus from the Province of Bengal to the other Provinces started in the year 1925. Therefore, the argument which was put forward as the one justification for making it permanent does not hold good at all. On the one hand, we know that it has become difficult for the Government of Bengal to accommodate a large number of detenus and also to segregate them in a proper manner, and to prevent them from making unauthorised communications with the sympathisers outside the jail. We know also that, on the other side, there are serious objections to the continuation of this procedure of transferring the detenus to jails outside Bengal. My Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, the other day protested against this procedure of sending detenus to his own Province and causing any contamination to take place in his own Andhra Province. May I bring to the notice of the Honourable the Home Member that it is not one individual Member who has protested against this procedure, but practically every Provincial Government and every jail authority had something to say against this when opinions were called for in 1932. That being the case, what justification have the Government of India to force upon the people of other Provinces and upon their Governments to accept the detenus in their jails? My Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, also alluded to some instances that recently occurred in Poona. In my opinion, by this Act, the Government of India are doing a great injustice in forcing upon the other Provinces to accept these dangerous detenus. Here I assume that all the detenus are dangerous; but if that is not the case of Government, if they say that all of them are not so dangerous as some of us think or as some Provincial Governments think, then I urge why should they not be kept in the Province of Bengal itself?

Another serious objection taken is with regard to the personal inconveniences of the detenus themselves. We have heard during the last two years a number of questions put forth from this side of the House with regard to the treatment of detenus in other jails. We have heard that no facilities are given, if any are given at all in a few cases, to the relatives of these detenus to visit them. We know that the detenus are hard put to in the matter of maintaining their families. We know that with regard to food and the surroundings, and different climates, the detenus are greatly inconvenienced. These are certainly serious matters.

Then, we have to weigh the inconveniences on both sides. If the Government of Bengal still think that it is necessary that these detenus should be removed from the Province of Bengal, it is up to them to make their own arrangements. They have had sufficient time. I do not think they hoped that it would end sooner than now. I do not think that the Bengal Government are not spending money for the suppression of this movement. We know that lakhs of rupees are lavishly spent in suppressing this movement. Then, why should they not make proper arrangements for accommodating all these detenus? They are, after all, 1,500 at present. My Honourable friend, Mr. Sen, the other day suggested, as also my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, that the Civil Disobedience prisoners being let off, there is sufficient accommodation in the jails in Bengal. These being my few reasons in addition to whatever has already been urged before the House, I should like to deal with one or two other points.

It appears that the Government are under the impression that in 1932 this House accepted the principle of sending these detenus outside Bengal in perpetuity. That is not a fact. Any one who refers to the debates in 1932 can very easily see that it was not so. The question then was whether the Bill introduced in 1932 would automatically be tagged to the local Act if that Act were extended before it lapsed. The opinion of the then Honourable the Law Member was that if it was extended before it lapsed, the Bill before this House would become tagged to that local Act, but if it was extended after the Act had exhausted itself or lapsed, it would not be so. Under those circumstances, and fortified with the legal opinion which was placed before this House, this House accepted the time limit of three years. Sir, may I submit that this House did not accept the principle of making it a permanent measure? It only gave a qualified support to the Bill.

Then, Sir, another argument advanced by some of the Honourable Members as well as by the Honourable the Home Member is that such time limit gives encouragement to these detenus. Now, let us consider what will be the position when the time limit is over. The result will be that these detenus would be taken back to the jails in Bengal. How can their mere transfer back to Bengal jails give them any encouragement? Under the local Act, they would still be kept in prison. The Local Government will have all the powers under the local Act to deal with these terrorists. Sir, I do not see any relation between these two things. It cannot give them any encouragement. But, I am sure, Sir, if they are taken back to Bengal, you will remove the anxiety of other Provinces, the burden on their jails, and at the same time you will temper the administration with justice. For these reasons, I commend my amendment for the consideration of this House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Amendment moved :

" That for clause 2 of the Bill, the following be substituted :

" 2. In part 2 of section 1 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, for the words ' three years ' the words ' six years ' shall be substituted."

Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur (North Madras : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment. It occurred to me that after the most lucid and convincing speech which the Honourable Mr.

[Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur.]

Studd made yesterday, my friend, Rao Bahadur Patil, would not move his amendment, but as he has moved it, I think I should place my view of the case when I rise to oppose this amendment.

Sir, the objection raised is that this Bill should not be placed permanently on the Statute-book. My friend, Mr. Studd, yesterday pointed out the necessity for a permanent legislation of this character, and he also, in the course of his very eloquent speech, said that the fair name of India is being sullied by acts of terrorism, and that, in the interest of the preservation of law and order in this country, the terrorists should know that a drastic measure of this type is going to remain on the Statute-book for all time. Sir, from one point of view, I admit, that we should have a permanent legislation of this kind on the Statute-book. It is a slur to Indians, no doubt; but, at the same time, I must say that from another point of view it is a still greater slur on the Government of the country when they introduce this measure as a permanent one, but while they do so, they must be feeling that they are compelled to do it. Knowing as they do that terrorism ought to be stamped out of this country by any means and under any circumstances, and knowing as they do that the credit of the Government of this country would be lowered in the estimation of the outside world by the introduction of such a measure permanently on the Statute-book, that the Government of the country are bringing discredit to themselves, they still maintain that such a legislation is necessary, whatever may be the consequences, and however much their reputation may be lowered in the estimation of the outside world. Sir, I say that the Government are prepared to do it simply because the necessity demands it. Terrorism is an exceptional malady, and it requires exceptional treatment. That is admitted on all hands, and if it is alleged, as some Honourable Members did, that terrorism was due to the unpopularity of the Government, then I ask them, how is it that it is peculiar to the Bengal Province alone? If the Government of the day is unpopular, it is equally unpopular in every Province, and not in Bengal alone. While I admit that there must be some cause, political or economic, and that we have not tackled these questions in the way we ought to, still the fact remains that we have got to legislate some such law, we have got to take drastic measures as a palliative until the root cause is discovered.

Then, Sir, dismissing the question of the legality or the illegality, fairness or otherwise, of detaining persons without trial, I should say that it is a matter entirely foreign to this debate. It is a matter which has been conclusively determined by the Legislative Council of the Bengal Province, and we have nothing to say further upon it. But, in the course of the discussion, it was pointed out that when persons are detained without trial, it almost amounts to their being detained on the barest suspicion. That is what my friend, Mr. Mitra, said yesterday. I should think, Sir, that although there may be a certain margin of error in these arrests and detentions without trial, although it cannot be claimed that these detentions have that margin of certainty which exists in the case of an ordinary judicial trial, still we have to consider the fact that, even in the case of ordinary judicial trials, there is a certain margin of error in many instances. In the case of acquittals and convictions in ordinary trials, can my friend, Mr. Mitra, assert that they are always right? There is a certain margin of error even in the case of judicial trials. Well, my friend, Mr. Mitra, might say,—then do away with judicial trials altogether. I say,—No, why should we do away with judicial trials? We are dealing here with a peculiar set of circumstances, we have to deal here with a peculiar disease, and we need a peculiar prescription for it. I think if my Honourable friend, Rao Bahadur Patil, applies his mind to it for some time more, he is bound to change his opinion. I think he will be on my side and would say that “I shall not move my amendment”. (An Honourable Member: “Question.”) In my opinion, what is exactly needed is a strong, lively and vigorous public opinion expressed in unequivocal terms, public opinion which exerts itself every moment. It has occurred to me that my Honourable friends from Bengal, those who are anti-terrorists, if I may say so, have not applied their minds in the way they ought to. For instance, when in any city there is a scare of kidnapping, as we have had in some cities in India, every home is vigilant, is on the alert to find out who the kidnapper is, and some such sort of feeling ought to exist in Bengal if they are determined to root out this malady. With these words, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. G. Morgan (Bengal: European): Mr. President, I rise to oppose this amendment. From the speeches I have heard in regard to this Bill, most of the speakers have been dealing with the result of the administration of the Bengal Act of 1930 and the Supplementary Act of 1934. The Bill before us merely deals with the question whether the three years should be omitted from the Bill. The Bengal Act of 1930 will remain in force whatever we do with this Bill. The 1930 Act was put permanently on the Statute-book. Our Act of 1932 expires in 1935, the date on which the original Bengal Act of 1930 would have expired, and it is to bring it into conformity with the Act now in force in Bengal that the Government wish to have this Bill passed. That, I take it, is the plain issue before us at the moment. Sir, with regard to the terrorism in my Province, a good deal has been said about stirring up public opinion. I would like to inform the House that within recent months public opinion is being stirred. In Chittagong, in Dacca, in Calcutta, there is a good deal going on to try and combat this terrorist movement. I myself have attended anti-terrorist meetings of the British Indian Association in Calcutta, both a general meeting and also the committee meetings, and I am co-operating with them in every way. They are now working out the question of propaganda. They are co-operating with Government with regard to propaganda in the districts and they are proposing to have committees at some big centres like Mymensingh, Comilla, Dacca, and so on, and in that way to help to tackle this unfortunate movement. Sir, as regards the Calcutta Committee there are many eminent Bengalis connected with it, and I am glad to say that my friend, Mr. Nalini Ranjan Sarkar, now the Mayor of Calcutta, is one of the prominent members of that committee. He would be in a position to do a great deal, so far as Calcutta is concerned, because there has always been a suspicion that the schools of the Calcutta Corporation certainly did not help to stop this terrorism, whatever they may have done to keep it more or less alive. Mr. President, I want my Honourable friends to understand that apathy has now been broken. It is not easy to get a general interest in anti-terrorism, but a beginning has definitely been made. I may mention also that we are in close touch with the Educational Officer of the Bengal Government with a view to helping the students in schools and colleges to a proper perspective of the situation, and I have every hope that some real good will come out of this anti-terrorist movement inaugurated by the public in Bengal.

[Mr. G. Morgan.]

Sir, I am sorry to have to refer to the administration of the Act, but I should like to say that one of the difficulties of the position referred to by my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, is that the bulk of the administration in India is carried on by various grades of officers, and it is very difficult to control the last rung of the ladder. The top rung of the ladder will always get the blame of whatever objectionable may happen in the lower rungs of the ladder. Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, is not here. I believe he has entirely forgotten what Bengal climate is like when he refers to the terrible ordeal of waking up in the morning at Ajmer and finding the punkah had stopped. All I can say is that when I had to sleep under the old pull punkah, it would be more trying from the time I went to bed and the time I had to get up in the Bengal climate than the Ajmer climate, if the punkah had stopped. (Mr. S. C. Mitra : "To Mr. Morgan.") My Honourable friend, Mr. Patil, said,—at least I understood him to say, it was very difficult to follow what he was saying,—I understood him to say that the Government of Bengal are not spending any money to combat this movement.

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : I said that the Government of Bengal were lavishly spending money.

An Honourable Member : Not slavishly !

Mr. G. Morgan : Quite unwillingly. Unfortunately as you, Sir, know, the coffers of the Bengal Government are not what you might call overflowing. I think I am right in saying that it cost Rs. 77 lakhs on account of extra administration, police, and so on, for the year 1933-34. Mr. President, I have nothing more to say about the Bill before the House. Sir, I oppose the amendment.

Mr. J. M. Chatarji (Bengal : Nominated Official) : Sir, I appreciate the opportunity that has been allowed to me of saying a few words on the measure now under discussion which concerns my Province. The necessity for the measure.....

An Honourable Member : Louder please. We cannot hear.

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : The necessity for the measure and other points have been discussed so threadbare that I do not propose to go over them again. We are not considering whether the old Act of 1930 should have been placed permanently on the Statute-book, but we are considering whether the powers which this Legislature gave to Bengal in 1932 for a period of three years should be made permanent. We have had a lot of discussion over matters which are cognate, though not strictly relevant, to the measure under discussion. I do not propose to touch on any of those points, but in case I happen to digress into some of them, I hope I will be pardoned for being in good company.

I listened to the speech of my Honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, with the attention which his utterances always deserve. The main ground that he made out was, why should the power to send the detenus outside Bengal be given permanently and not for a term of years, and why should not she be asked in the meantime to set her house in order.

I believe he could not have struck a safer ground, because I hardly think it was possible for him to attack any of the provisions of Act VI of 1930 which was but an offspring of the Act of 1925 in favour of which he had voted with a minority of 57 in the Bengal Legislative Council. I did not find in my Honourable friend's speech any reference to the reasons which the Honourable the Mover of the Bill had given for making this measure permanent. Temporary measures lead to a quiescence for a period and keep alive the expectation that it may be possible to revive the movement, and to strengthen it, should the measure be withdrawn from the administrative armoury. Again, the mere fact that the measure is being made permanent does not necessarily mean that it could never be repealed. Should the situation fortunately improve, there will be nothing to prevent the Legislature from asking for a repeal of the measure.

Another point on which my friend laid much stress was that proper and right steps have not been taken by Government in the past to meet the evil which has been in existence for the last 30 years. He does not even now prescribe any medicine which he thinks is likely to be effective. May I remind the House that he was himself for years an honoured Member of the Bengal Cabinet which he now accuses of inefficiency in grappling with the evil. If the remedy that he knew was so patent or potent, he would have saved a generation of blooming young men from trouble and misery if he had himself pressed for the application of the remedy in the comparatively initial stages of the disease.

Sir, my friend, Mr. Mitra, has given us a moving picture of the conditions in which the detenus live. We all know that, the more moving a picture, the greater perhaps is its indebtedness to imagination. Detenus are not, as they have been described to be, prisoners confined in solitary cells. The Honourable the Law Member has already touched on the point.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I do not want to interrupt my Honourable friend when he is making a maiden speech. There are detenus, not only at Deoli, but also in Mianwali, in the C. P., Madras. They are put in jails and in cells also.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig (Home Member) : I think the Honourable Member is under a misunderstanding in calling them detenus. I think I am right in saying that the detenus outside Bengal are all held at Deoli and those who are held in other Provinces are State Prisoners under Regulation III. It is a technical point, perhaps, but it is of some importance with regard to this Bill.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Only the other day I put a question about State Prisoners at Mianwali, and I was corrected by the Honourable the Home Member. The man has now been transferred to Bengal, though he was under the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act. He is Satyendra Nath Sen. He was not a State Prisoner.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : The Honourable Member is right. There may be one or two cases like that.

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : I do not propose to deal with the conditions of detenus outside Bengal, because I have no experience of them ; but from what I gathered from the speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, I thought his observations referred to the condition of detenus in general, and what I am speaking about is the condition of detenus in a camp of which I have myself some experience. There is a tendency to assume that these detenus are confined in cells. It is nothing of the kind. The camp is a big enough place with a large number of houses for living accommodation and with all the paraphernalia of a camp including hospitals, dispensaries, kitchens and other things. At night the detenus are locked in their own rooms, but during the day their freedom is not interfered with in any way except that they are not allowed to go outside the boundary wall. It cannot possibly be said that the sameness and monotony of a detenu's life affects his mental equilibrium. It will perhaps be truer to say that some of those who have to administer their camps run the danger of qualifying themselves for a short stay in a mental asylum. The detenus have their hands full of work, if they want to do it. They have got their own committees for looking after the supply of provisions, for cooking, and sanitation, and if he has any time to spare after finding fault with the servants and after carrying his complaints to the Commandant, he can devote it to books of which he has usually a plentiful supply, and he can take to sports, both indoor and outdoor, for which he is given sufficient facilities.

[Mr. J. M. Chatarji.]

Mr. B. V. Jadhav (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know from the Honourable Member whether he has ever visited Deoli ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : He is speaking of his own experience in a Bengal camp.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : As a detenu !

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : My Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra has spoken of torture on the detenus, I was not quite sure whether he referred to torture inside or outside detention camps. If he referred to torture inside detention camps, I could unhesitatingly tell the House that such a thing is unthinkable. The Commandant of a camp has usually reason to congratulate himself if on any day he can persuade the inmates to partake of a kind of fish different from that which they indented. In such circumstances, to think that any person would think of putting any pressure upon a detenu in a camp would be thinking something which is impossible ; and it must be remembered that there are about four to five hundred of these detenus and their compatriots looking on all the time.

Another question that has been asked is, why send them out of Bengal, why not keep them within the jurisdiction of the Local Government ? Sir, the answer is perhaps simple. It would then be extremely difficult to prevent any communication between the detenus and the outside world. Again, to confine them perhaps in detention ships in the Bay of Bengal or to dump them into the Sundarbans will probably not give them better conditions than they can have outside Bengal. There is also, Sir, some misapprehension about the scope of the Bill. There is a tendency to assume that if the Bill is passed, all the detenus will be sent out of Bengal. No doubt the Local Government of Bengal will have the power to do so, but the whole purpose of the measure is not to extern detenus wholesale, but to assume powers to extern only those who are found to be too dangerous to be kept inside Bengal.

Now, Sir, about the reason for the measure, what are the facts today in Bengal ?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : On a point of order, Sir. Is the Honourable Member speaking on the third reading or on the amendment before the House ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair does not want to interrupt the Honourable Member, but the further remarks to be made by him must now be confined to the amendment before the House, namely, whether the Bill ought to be made a permanent measure or should remain only a temporary measure.

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : Sir, I stand corrected. As regards the question of the term of the measure, I have already said what I have to say. My main point is that even if the measure becomes permanent, there will be nothing to prevent the Legislature from repealing the measure at any time it is found possible to do so. Sir, I am afraid I should be digressing into other features of the Bill if I were to speak on all the matters on which we have already heard very useful speeches. I do not think I should now detain the House any longer on this point. Sir, I oppose the amendment. (Applause.)

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Sir, the sum and substance of this amendment is to extend the power, which has been conferred by the measure already passed, for another three years from the time when it is going to expire next year. I venture to think that this is an amendment which my Honourable friend, the Home Member, should seriously consider before summarily rejecting it. I know he commands a majority in this House and it is very easy for him to reject this amendment. But in the very interest to which he referred yesterday, I would very seriously appeal to him to consider this amendment. Yesterday, Sir, my Honourable friend said, if I remember aright, that without the force of public opinion behind the back of the Government, it is not possible to stamp out terrorism from Bengal or from any other part of the country. Now, I would ask him to consider whether the proposal of the Government to make this Bill permanent on the Statute-book is likely to win over public opinion to his side. As is very well-known, public opinion, not only in Bengal, but in other parts of the country, is seriously opposed to this measure being permanently placed on the Statute-book, and if the Government ride roughshod over public opinion, they will have no reason to complain if public opinion is not arrayed on the side of Government measures designed to stamp out terrorism from Bengal or from any part of the country. Sir, when an outrage occurs, all and sundry, including the Members of the Legislative Assembly and the leaders of opinion, proceed to condemn unmistakably these outrages and rush to the rescue of Government to save the fair name of India, as it is said, but when disgraceful and obnoxious measures are sought to be rushed, should this House support Government when they spurn public opinion and endeavour to give effect to the prescription which comes uppermost in their mind ? I would, therefore, ask my Honourable friend, the Home Member, to consider whether it is not possible to limit this Bill to a stipulated period. Sir, had the so-called terrorists been convicted by a properly constituted tribunal, there would have been some justification for the proposal which is before this House, but these so-called terrorists have not been put before any Court of law : they are at best kept in detention on mere suspicion.

[Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.]

Sir, is my Honourable friend, the Home Member, I ask, prepared to stand up and say that he is morally satisfied that all these detenus in Deoli or elsewhere are really guilty of the offences of which they are suspected ? It is just possible, is it not, that several of these prisoners may, after all, be innocent. I say, it is just possible, because their guilt has not been proved before any Court of law. We know how the guilt is usually established in the case of political prisoners. The police officer submits a report, a confidential report which forms the basis of further action by his superior officer, and thus we have seen how innocent persons are sometimes clapped in jail and kept in detention. I do not assert that none of the prisoners may be guilty, but I merely want to say that it is just possible that the guilt of at least some of the prisoners may be open to question. Now, if an innocent person is kept in detention, what will be the state of feelings of his relatives and friends ? One can understand this temporary inconvenience being undergone in the interest of law and order, but when this legislation is going to be made permanent, one should think over the consequences of such a measure. Thousands and thousands of young men, consisting of the friends and relations of these detenus, must be smarting under a sense of injustice and must be highly discontented, and I would ask my Honourable friend to consider whether that condition of things is conducive to the effect which we are anxious to secure in Bengal. Sir, we seem to be moving in a vicious circle. Outrages unfortunately sometimes occur which we all deplore, but the conditions under which such outrages occur must be thoroughly investigated before a proper remedy can be prescribed. The very fact of these detenus being imprisoned without trial for an indefinite period is hard enough, but to compel them to live for an indefinite period outside their own Province, and amid circumstances to which they are not accustomed, is harder lot still for them. Sir, I am opposed to the outbreak of violence. I am equally opposed to violence whether it proceeds from the side of the people or whether it proceeds from the side of the Government. I am equally prepared to condemn any murderous outrage in Bengal committed by a misguided youth as I am prepared to condemn the act of General Dyer when he massacred hundreds of our innocent men, women and children at the Jallianwala Bagh. But, are the Government on their side, prepared to condemn the outbreak of lawlessness on the part of the Government officials in an equal measure ? That is just the point on which Government and the Members of the Government are silent. That creates a state of feeling in the country which is very deplorable. Sir, this amendment is a limited one. We are not yet at the stage of the third reading. I would, therefore, finally appeal to the Government to consider what would be the consequence of making this feature permanent in the administration of the country. I know it is no use appealing to Government because in this Assembly, they command an absolute majority and they can carry everything before them. Is it going to soothe the feelings of the people or is it going to embitter the feelings which have already been roused over this Bill ? With these few words, I beg to support the amendment.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Sir, I rise to support the amendment. There have been a number of detenus in Bengal, and the Government of Bengal saw that it was necessary to keep them outside that Province. The Bengal Legislative Council passed the Criminal Law Amendment Act three years ago, and this House was asked to sanction the same measure in order to empower the Government of Bengal to keep the detenus outside that Province. The then Home Member drafted the Bill for a limited period of three years. Now, the Bengal Legislative Council have passed the same measure on a permanent basis, and the Government of India here have come before this House to pass a similar legislation. This House need not follow implicitly the example set by the Bengal Legislative Council. This House has a will of its own and it ought to exercise it in the best interests of the country. The amendment of Rao Bahadur Patil is to limit it for a further period of three years. It has been said here that such a drastic legislation is a slur on the fair name of any country, and I perfectly agree with it. Therefore, such measures ought not to be made permanent but they ought to be passed for a certain stated period.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL. 653

I am very much obliged to my Honourable friend, Mr. Morgan, for describing here the steps that are being taken in Calcutta and the whole of the Province of Bengal to co-operate with Government in putting down this outrageous movement. I am confident that with the active co-operation of the European members and the Indian members in Calcutta and outside, this pernicious movement will be put down during the period of the next three years. If it is not put down within the period of six years, then it shows that the repressive measures are not very effective. I think the repressive measures during the past three years have had a very considerable effect in curbing the movement, and I am quite confident that the active movement that has been started in Calcutta with its branches in every important city will surely succeed in putting down the pernicious movement within the period of next three years. Therefore, the period proposed in the amendment can be very safely accepted.

Sir, this House by questions and Resolutions has brought to the notice of the public and the Government that the conditions at Deoli and other camps are not very desirable. The Honourable the Home Member has personally visited that place and he has assured this House that the treatment given to the detenus is according to law, and, I think, according to the circumstances of the place. I have full confidence in his statement, but what I urge is this, that this question of the treatment of the detenus ought to come for discussion on the floor of this House periodically, and this is one of the other reasons for our urging that the duration of this Bill should be limited to a further period of three years. The Government of India, if they unfortunately find that the period ought to be prolonged, will have to come before this House and place the facts before it, so that there will be a general discussion before any further extension of the period is granted. In the interests of the detenus as well as in the interests of the general administration, it is necessary that such a drastic measure ought to be discussed periodically in this House. I do not think that the acceptance of this amendment will embarrass either the Government of India or the Government of Bengal in any way, as the Bengal legislation is for an unlimited period and the detenus or the would-be detenus will be governed by that legislation. Therefore, if the extension of this measure is made here only for three years, it need not have any deleterious effect upon the minds of the people there. On the other hand, it will show the desire of Government to do away with the legislation as early as possible.

[Mr. B. V. Jadhav.]

The Honourable the Official Member from Bengal has given a very important piece of information to this House, namely, that even the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act can be repealed at any time. That is a fact known to everybody. But when an Act is passed for an unlimited period, it is not expected that a repealing Act will be introduced at any time. If there is no necessity for making use of that legislation, it will lie dormant, but then in that case nobody takes the trouble of getting it repealed. And, as it has been said, such a drastic measure is always a slur on the fair name of any country, such a measure ought not to be made permanent, so that it will lead to the lasting shame of that country. That is another reason why the period of the operation of the Bill should be limited to three years, and no more. If, unfortunately, there is any necessity for the measure again, then, the Government will be free to come to this House and ask for another extension. With these words, I support the amendment.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : Sir, I quite appreciate the spirit in which my Honourable friend, Mr. Patil, has moved this amendment. He is prepared in the circumstances to give some assistance to the Government of Bengal in coping with their difficulties. But he proposes to limit that assistance to a period of three years. I gave at some length yesterday to the House my reasons against that principle. I tried to show the House that in the past this principle of temporary legislation to deal with terrorism had been tried a number of times, and it is my own conviction that it is because the legislation was not continuous and it has not been permanent that this movement has continued for such a long period. I think it might not have revived with such strength as it undoubtedly did revive in 1930—that is the root of our present troubles—had the legislation, for instance passed in 1925, been of a permanent character.

Now, Sir, I do not know that I need follow my Honourable friend, the Mover, in his reference to the Defence of India Act. It is perfectly true that the Defence of India Act was an Act passed for the general defence of India during the period of the Great War and that it was not passed specifically in order to deal with terrorism in Bengal. But the powers given by that Defence of India Act were used with very great effect in Bengal, and the lapsing of these powers, as my Honourable friend reminds me, in 1919, did give a great opportunity to that movement to start again. With regard to the other Provinces there seems to be some misunderstanding of the position. I can quite appreciate that Honourable Members from other Provinces are particularly anxious that these detenus should not be detained among them. They do not feel exactly the same confidence about their innocence as some other Honourable Members in this House. But, Sir, it is not our policy to distribute these men all over India. We have a limited number of what were originally considered the most dangerous men who were dealt with under Regulation III and who have been distributed in small numbers in various Provinces. But that was not done under the provisions of our Act VIII of 1932. The action we took under Act VIII of 1932 was to constitute this big camp at Deoli which is under the charge of the Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara, and that is our policy at present—to keep these detenus in Deoli where a very large expenditure has been incurred by the Government of Bengal on providing buildings and a suitable water supply amounting, in all, I think, to about four lakhs of rupees. My Honourable friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, said that by continuing these powers we were offending and affronting public opinion. I am not sure that I agree with my Honourable friend in his interpretation of public opinion. After all, should we not consider the public opinion of the Province of Bengal? They, after all, are the people most intimately concerned, and it is reasonable to look to that public opinion being reflected in the Bengal Legislative Council where, as we have heard so many times, these provisions in regard to terrorism have just been passed by an overwhelming majority and made permanent.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : But the Honourable Member assumes that the Bengal Legislative Council today represents public opinion!

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : It is as representative of public opinion as this House.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do not say then that it is the public opinion in Bengal which supports such measures.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : At any rate that is the constitutional means of expressing public opinion. I really think that my Honourable friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, does a certain injustice to public opinion by identifying it with his own.

We have heard an interesting speech from my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatarji, who gives from his own personal experience some idea of the conditions in a detenu camp. I do not want to go over that point again, because, as I said yesterday, I have endeavoured, since I have had on myself the responsibility for this Deoli Camp, to keep in touch as closely as I could with the officers who are actually administering the Camp, and I am convinced that they are doing their best to look after these detenus in a reasonable way.

In conclusion, I would merely say that the Bengal Legislative Council have decided that it should be made clear that their policy is to last so long as the menace continues, and I submit that we should also make it clear that our help continues for the same period. (Applause.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That for clause 2 of the Bill, the following be substituted :

“ 2. In part 2 of section 1 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, for the words ‘ three years ’ the words ‘ six years ’ shall be substituted .”

The Assembly divided :

AYES—23.

Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Mr.
Abdur Rahim, Sir.
Azhar Ali, Mr. Muhammad.
Bhuput Singh, Mr.
Chandi Mal Gola, Bhagat.
Das, Mr. B.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Hoon, Mr. A.
Isra, Chaudhri.
Jadhav, Mr. B. V.
Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. D. K.
Lalechand Navalrai, Mr.

Mitra, Mr. S. C.
Mody, Mr. H. P.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi-Sayyid.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
Parma Nand, Bhai.
Patil, Rao Bahadur B. L.
Sadiq Hasan, Shaikh.
Sen, Mr. S. C.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Ziauddin Ahmad, Dr.

NOES—57.

Abdul Aziz, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Ahmad Nawaz Khan, Major Nawab.
Ali, Mr. Hamid A.
Allah Baksh Khan Tiwana, Khan Bahadur Malik.
Anklesaria, Mr. N. N.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Bhadrapur, Rao Bahadur Krishna Raddi B.
Bhore, The Honourable Sir Joseph.
Brij Kishore, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Buss, Mr. L. C.
Chatarji, Mr. J. M.
Dalal, Dr. R. D.
Fazal Haq Piracha, Khan Sahib Shaikh.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Gidney, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry.
Grantham, Mr. S. G.
Grigg, The Honourable Sir James.
Haig, The Honourable Sir Harry.
Hockenhull, Mr. F. W.
Hudson, Sir Leslie.
Ibrahim Ali Khan, Lieut. Nawab Muhammad.
Ismail Ali Khan, Kunwar Hajee.
Jawahar Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sir.
Kamaluddin Ahmad, Shams-ul-Ulema Mr.
Lal Chand, Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Lee, Mr. D. J. N.

Lumby, Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R.
Metcalfe, Mr. H. A. F.
Morgan, Mr. G.
Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, Mr. Muhammad.
Mujumdar, Sardar G. N.
Mukherjee, Rai Bahadur Sir Satya Charan.
Nihal Singh, Sardar.
Noyce, The Honourable Sir Frank.
Pandit, Rao Bahadur S. R.
Perry, Mr. E. W.
Rafiquddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Maulvi.
Raghubir Singh, Rai Bahadur Kunwar.
Raisman, Mr. A. J.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Rau, Mr. P. R.
Row, Mr. K. Sanjiva.
Scott, Mr. J. Ramsay.
Scott, Mr. W. L.
Sher Muhammad Khan Gakhar, Captain.
Singh, Kumar Gupteshwar Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Pradyumna Prashad.
Sircar, The Honourable Sir Nripendra.
Spence, Mr. G. H.
Studd, Mr. E.
Trivedi, Mr. C. M.
Wajihuddin, Khan Bahadur Haji.
Wilayatullah, Khan Bahadur H. M.
Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad.
Zakaullah Khan, Khan Bahadur Abu Abdullah Muhammad.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Sir, I rise on a point of order. It appears that some gentleman cast his vote on one side and the paper was torn up and another paper substituted and the count was taken afterwards. Is that in order ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : If any Honourable Member voted wrongly and immediately corrected the mistake, it is perfectly in order, and there is no objection.

The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

THE INDIAN IRON AND STEEL DUTIES BILL.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel.

I ought to explain, Sir, and apologise for, an omission which has occurred in the course of printing in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. I understand that in certain copies of the Bill the word “ proposed ” has been omitted at the end of the Statement of Objects and Reasons and I would ask Honourable Members who have copies in which that word has been omitted to be so good as to insert the word “ proposed ” after the words “ has not been ”.

Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That leave be granted to introduce a Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel.”

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 26th July, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 26th July, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock.
Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

HUNGER-STRIKE BY POLITICAL PRISONERS IN THE ANDAMANS.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that there has been a hunger strike amongst the political prisoners in the Andamans ? If so, when did it begin and is it still continuing ?

(b) What are the reasons for this hunger-strike ?

(c) How many persons are involved in the hunger-strike ?

(d) What steps have been taken, or are proposed to be taken, by the Government to meet the wishes of the hunger-strikers in removing their grievances ?

(e) What is the present state of the health of the strikers ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : (a) to (e). It is not a fact that there has been any recent hunger-strike amongst the terrorist prisoners in the Andamans. The rumour may have arisen from the following facts. On the 7th July, the Superintendent of the Cellular Jail had occasion to punish a terrorist convict from Madras with seven days cross bar fetters for assaulting a head warder, the assault being entirely unprovoked. The next day, the majority of the terrorist convicts protested against the punishment inflicted. They were informed that the infliction of a punishment and the form of punishment were matters for the decision of the Superintendent. On the 9th July, when the weekly parade was held, about twenty of the terrorist convicts refused to turn out of their cells for inspection. It was found that this action was deliberate and had been taken as a protest against both the punishment of the convict and the refusal of the Jail authorities to cancel the punishment at their request. In consequence of this action, all those convicts, who were absent from parade, were deprived for a period of certain privileges. I am informed that everything in the Cellular Jail is now absolutely quiet and normal.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if there are any other persons who are on hunger-strike who are not terrorists ?

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig : No, Sir ; there is no hunger strike in the Andamans.

received, relating to the Bill to remove the disabilities of the so-called Depressed Classes in regard to entry into Hindu temples, which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 24th March, 1933, by Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer.

No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.	No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.
3,367	..	Bengal.	1	..	Bengal.
27	Howrah.	Do.	89	Burdwan.	Do.
15	Do.	Do.	89	Do.	Do.
47	Tippera.	Do.	92	Do.	Do.
51	Do.	Do.	81	Do.	Do.
24	Do.	Do.	90	Howrah.	Do.
47	Do.	Do.	11	Do.	Do.
57	Do.	Do.	37	Burdwan.	Do.
85	Dacca.	Do.	94	Do.	Do.
65	Do.	Do.	71	Howrah.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	93	Do.	Do.
13	Do.	Do.	14	Do.	Do.
13	Do.	Do.	91	Do.	Do.
44	Sylhet.	Assam.	95	Burdwan.	Do.
50	Do.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
18	Do.	Do.	50	..	Do.
42	Howrah.	Bengal.	94	Midnapore.	Do.
670	Do.	Do.	10	Howrah.	Do.
26	Do.	Do.	95	Midnapore.	Do.
7	Do.	Do.	95	Do.	Do.
42	..	Do.	94	Do.	Do.
6	..	Do.	91	Burdwan.	Do.
86	Chandpur.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
40	Jessore.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
54	Do.	Do.	13	Howrah.	Do.
42	..	Do.	23	Kidderpore.	Do.
43	..	Do.	94	Howrah.	Do.
48	..	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
88	Burdwan.	Do.	59	Burdwan.	Do.
33	Howrah.	Do.	75	Howrah.	Do.
77	Do.	Do.	40	..	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	90	..	Do.
92	Do.	Do.	2	Calcutta.	Do.
71	Do.	Do.	21	Howrah.	Do.
80	Do.	Do.	89	Do.	Do.
63	Do.	Do.	78	Do.	Do.
5	Do.	Do.	211	..	Madras.

No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.	No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.
8	Guntur.	Madras.	52	Gauhati.	Bengal.
4	Do.	Do.	90	Larkana.	Sindh.
41	..	Do.	238	Do.	Do.
21	..	Do.	32	Do.	Do.
222	Godavary.	Do.	812	Do.	Do.
34	Tanjore.	Do.	11	Benares.	United Provinces.
27	Do.	Do.	15	Do.	Do.
31	..	Do.	10	Do.	Do.
33	Howrah.	Bengal.	5	Do.	Do.
16	Calcutta.	Do.	10	Do.	Do.
23	Kidderpore.	Do.	127	..	..
4	Hooghly.	Do.	49	..	..
3	Do.	Do.	52	..	..
23	Do.	Do.	62	..	..
86	Howrah.	Do.
183	Patna.	Bihar & Orissa
325	Gauhati.	Bengal.	10,928

THE UNTOUCHABILITY ABOLITION BILL.

PETITIONS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, under Standing Order 78, I have to report that 79 petitions, as per statement laid on the table, have been received, relating to the Bill to provide for the abolition of untouchability among the Hindus, which was introduced in the Legislative Assembly on the 24th March, 1933, by Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah.

No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.	No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.
425	..	Bengal.	93	Burdwan.	Bengal.
263	..	Do.	82	Do.	Do.
41	Howrah.	Do.	88	Do.	Do.
43	..	Do.	101	Midnapore.	Do.
42	..	Do.	11	Howrah.	Do.
48	..	Do.	37	Burdwan.	Do.
16	Howrah.	Do.	93	Do.	Do.
24	Do.	Do.	71	Howrah.	Do.
3	Kidderpur.	Do.	94	Do.	Do.
3	Hooghly.	Do.	14	Barrackpur.	Do.
23	Do.	Do.	95	Burdwan.	Do.
86	Howrah.	Do.	90	Do.	Do.
89	Burdwan.	Do.	94	Midnapore.	Do.

No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.	No. of signa- tories.	District or town.	Province.
95	Midnapore.	Bengal.	72	Howrah.	Bengal.
95	Do.	Do.	29	Hooghly.	Do.
94	Do.	Do.	80	Do.	Do.
49	Do.	Do.	64	Howrah.	Do.
90	Burdwan.	Do.	5	Do.	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	4,128	..	Do.
91	Do.	Do.	73	..	Do.
21	Do.	Do.	102	..	Do.
94	Howrah.	Do.	52	..	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	57	..	Do.
41	..	Do.	49	..	Do.
56	Burdwan.	Do.	47	..	Do.
75	Howrah	Do.	58	..	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	56	..	Do.
2	Do.	Do.	27	..	Do.
21	Hooghly.	Do.	11	Rangpur.	Do.
89	Calcutta.	Do.	51	..	Do.
91	Do.	Do.	16	..	Do.
88	Do.	Do.	47	..	Do.
13	Howrah.	Do.	12	..	Do.
11	Do.	Do.	47	Noakhali.	Do.
90	Do.	Do.	52	Tippera.	Do.
88	Midnapore.	Do.	44	Noakhali.	Do.
89	Burdwan.	Do.	35	Do.	Do.
33	Howrah.	Do.	9	Do.	Do.
77	Do.	Do.
90	Do.	Do.
92	Do.	Do.	9,237

RESOLUTION RE CONSTITUTION OF MALABAR INTO A SEPARATE PROVINCE.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer on the 6th April, 1934 :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that steps be taken to constitute Malabar (Kerala) (Madras Presidency) as a separate Province together with neighbouring Malayalam-speaking areas."

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the principle underlying this Resolution, namely, the need for redistribution of areas on a linguistic basis. As an Andhra, the principle appeals to me very much, because for nearly two decades the Andhra people have put strong faith in this principle. Long before the Utkals dreamed of an Oriya Province, long before the Sindhis realised the benefits of separation, the Andhra districts demanding that the provincial boundaries should be readjusted with a view to ensuring linguistic and racial and cultural affinities. That being so, I am only doing my duty in supporting the principle underlying this Resolution. The principle is not only confined to any particular section like the Andhras, but it has been a demand from the whole country that the provincial areas should be redistributed. The Government did recognise that the existing Provinces are not based on any particular principle, that they are more a result of historical accident, and that the redistribution of areas could be made provided certain conditions are fulfilled. The Statutory Commission observed as follows on this question :

"There is a considerable body of opinion in India which calls for some readjustment of boundaries and redistribution of areas, and we entirely share the views of those who think that the present arrangement is not altogether satisfactory. The existing provincial boundaries in more than one case embrace areas and peoples of no natural affinity and sometimes separate those who might under a different scheme be more naturally united."

Further on, they say :

"If those who speak the same language form a compact and self-contained area, so situated and endowed as to be able to support its existence as a separate province, there is no doubt that the use of a common speech is a strong and natural basis for provincial individuality."

Further down, they make these important observations at page 26 of their report :

"As long as the Government of India was entirely centralized, and both the administration and the finance of any area were provided and directed from the Centre, the line taken by a provincial boundary was of less importance. But now that the provinces have a real political existence of their own, the situation is changing, and if, as we hope, the time is coming when each province will not only have its own provincial Government and its own provincial resources, but will form a unit in a federated whole, it is extremely important that the adjustment of provincial boundaries and the creation of proper provincial areas should take place before the new process has gone too far. Once the mould has set, any mal-distribution will be still more difficult to correct. We therefore propose and we regard it as a matter of urgent importance, that the Government of India should set up a Boundaries Commission with a neutral Chairman, which would investigate the main cases in which provincial readjustment seems called for, and should endeavour to work out schemes with a view to seeing how far agreement is possible."

As has been pointed out by the Royal Commission, for the very success of the Federation which is now in sight, it is necessary that the various units composing it should, as far as possible, be natural units. It is no longer a matter of simple faith nor a sound principle to be thought of, but a matter of urgent necessity in order to promote rapidly the process of evolution of really natural units into a harmonious group of Federation. It is not born out of any narrow-minded provincialism as some people would like to call it, but, Sir, it is born in the desire to create really natural units for building a sound federal scheme. Sir, having said, and having also referred to the weighty words....

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadian) : Will the Honourable Member kindly speak up ? We can't hear him.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Having said that, and having also referred to the weighty words of the Simon Commission on this subject, I would like to point out that the linguistic and racial considerations, however primary they may be, there are also other considerations to be taken into account, namely, the economic and the administrative factors. They are also of as much importance in the consideration of this problem as the other two. Sir, with my limited knowledge of Malabar, I have tried to picture to myself whether these tests could be applied to Malabar. Sir, it would satisfy the linguistic considerations; it would satisfy the racial considerations, and when the test made whether it has got a due share of country and town and coast line and interior, I submit that Malabar would satisfy those requirements also, though I am not so hopeful as my friend whether economically it would be paying its way. My friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, the other day said that economically it will be able to support itself. He said that he will cut his coat according to his cloth. It really does not rest with him or with us to reduce the cost of administration, but it rests with the Government of India and His Majesty's Government. They prescribe certain standards of administration and services which must be paid in a certain scale. If it rested with us, we could make our administration cheaper, but it is the Government which prescribe the pattern and the length and breadth of that coat. Such being the case, I am not so sure about its ability to pay itself. If it does, as my friend says it does, then I for one would certainly welcome the day when it shall be a separate Province. Sir, the All-Parties Conference in 1928 observed as follows:

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

"Partly geographically, partly economic but mainly the consideration must necessarily be the wishes of the people and the linguistic unity of the area concerned. We are of opinion that ordinarily a province should be self-sufficient in regard to finances and must not look to Central Government for doles."

Sir, I do not attach much importance so far as the Province of Malabar is concerned with regard to the wishes of its people, because Honourable Members are aware of the fact that the Tamils wanted to have a separate Province of their own, and a Resolution to that effect was moved in the Council of State by Sir Sankaran Nair; similarly, the Andhras wanted to have a separate Province of their own and moved Resolutions in the Madras Council and the Council of State, while the Karnataks wanted a separate Province of their own. Now, if all these races have their own separate Provinces, what would be left in the Madras Presidency would be only Malabar itself, whether Malabarese would like to have a separate Province of their own or not, Malabar would be a separate Province.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural): May I inform my Honourable friend that every Taluq Board in Malabar has passed a resolution, as I shall show, supporting my plea for separation of Malabar.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju: I am glad to hear that, Sir. I have referred to the All-Parties Conference of 1928 welcoming linguistic Provinces which can be self-supporting. The Central Government should not be asked to pay any doles to any Provinces. Further, Sir, in 1931, the Council of the All-India Moslem League resolved:

"The Council is of opinion that the question of re-organization of Provinces should be taken up as a whole and not piecemeal."

Again, Sir, the Sub-Committee, which was constituted under the Simon Commission, observed that their decision to create the Utkal Province involved the larger question of the sub-division of existing Provinces, and that the creation of the Sind and Utkal Provinces are part and parcel of a larger scheme of re-distribution of provincial areas. We demand that the scheme should be carried, and that the Boundary Commission, which was pointed out as one of urgent necessity, should also be constituted as early as possible. However, Sir, I cannot overlook the fact that subsequent developments did not give us much confidence in the matter. The Second Round Table Conference, after considering the question of Sind and Utkal, have said that the further re-distribution of Provinces should be left to be considered only by way of amendment to the new Constitution. That means to say that for the present the question is shelved and the constitution of a Boundary Commission is passed over. Sir, when the Secretary of State, giving his evidence before the Joint Parliamentary Committee, was asked as to what he proposed to do with regard to the question of the constitution of a Boundary Commission, the Honourable gentleman said "Boundary Commission for what?" Sir, he was pointed out that it was the Boundary Commission which was recommended by the Statutory Commission to be constituted for the re-distribution of provincial areas, and this was his reply:

"The Simon Commission recommended the setting up of a Boundaries Commission (they say it is an urgent matter) to investigate the main cases in which provincial readjustments might be called for. I would very much hope that we should not have a Boundaries Commission. I would not like to pre-judge the decision at all now, but I do not want these constitutional questions to get confused in a maze of disputes about frontier delimitations. We have dealt with the two most urgent questions of provincial redistribution by dealing with Sind and Orissa, and I very much hope that we are not going to get into an endless dispute about the boundaries of every other Province in India."

The Secretary of State having thus thrown cold water upon the whole, as though it is a matter in which he could not possibly take any action or encourage the idea, I venture to submit that the view taken by His Majesty's Government on this matter is not just and proper. The very success of the Federation depends upon the units of the Federation being homogeneous and capable of having individuality of their own. Unless they feel conscious that they are one, it will not be possible for a real Federation of natural units. Therefore, Sir, I submit that on the question of re-distribution of Provinces and of constituting a Boundaries Commission, the Government of India should convey to His Majesty's Government the desire of the people of this country that the question of the re-distribution of provincial areas should be taken up and not postponed. Sir, with these words, I would like to resume my seat.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras: Indian Commerce): Sir, in view of the statement made by the Honourable the Mover of this Resolution to the effect that he has got the fullest support for his proposition from almost all the District Boards and Taluq Boards and Municipalities,—and we all know how these District Boards and Municipalities are run, how their finances are bad,—I would like to read a letter which I have received from a very responsible body, and it is my duty as a Member representing the Indian Commerce Constituency of the Madras Presidency to read that letter for the information of the House. This is a letter from the Malabar Chamber of Commerce.....

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: Run by Chetties?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya: Malabar Chetties or outside Chetties?

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer: Outside Chetties having settled down in Malabar.

[Mr. B. Das.]

to see the Province of Kerala made into a separate Province, because it is the one area in the whole of the universe where the women have the right of ownership of property and enjoy rights and privileges that women nowhere else in the world enjoy.

An Honourable Member : With a right of divorce !

Mr. B. Das : Yes, not only the right of divorce, but a right to govern, to own property, and the right to displace their menfolk from property. Kerala arts, Kerala civilisation—they are well known in the ancient history of India. Kerala has contributed its arts and its music to the greatness of India, and today the people of Kerala are noted for their arts and culture. Nobody would deny them separate existence if they can justify such an existence, but of that little knowledge has been placed before the House by my Honourable friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer. Unfortunately, the Government of India's proposition of creating Federation and separating the princes from the people of British India is a barrier to the cherished hope of my Honourable friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer. If Cochin, Travancore and Malabar could be joined together, surely it would be a nice little Province and the people could go on developing their culture and art and find their self-expression, and probably they will be much more homogeneous than my own Province of Orissa ; but, unfortunately, under the system of Federation—I do not know when that Federation is coming—but with that anticipation of the Federation, there is no chance of States like Cochin and Travancore joining with Malabar, simply because they will have a unified culture. The people of Malabar have a tradition. They are a very ancient people. It is they that gave refuge to the Syrian Jews, and Malabar is the only place where we find villages that remind us of the Jewish homes of Palestine and Syria. My Honourable friend, Mr. Pandya, reminds me that the Britishers landed there first, and, I believe, they were received with the same courtesy and the same oriental hospitality as other refugees and other visitors were received with by the Zamorin of Malabar. There are other aspirants to new Provinces. There is my friend, Mr. Raju, who asks for an Andhra Province. I have every sympathy with my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, because he belongs to an old civilisation, the old Telingana Empire which held sway during the 14th and 15th centuries from the Empire of Vijayanagar and the town of that name. That was the admiration of the European travellers. The people there talked Telugu. My friend, Mr. Raju, has a just claim to have a Province of his own, but they must go through the processes and the travails that have been laid down in the Government of India Act.

But, unfortunately, Sir, I find that the White Paper contains no clauses which lay down as to how, in the future Constitution of India, there should be re-distribution of Provinces or re-adjustment of boundaries as is provided under section 52A, of the present Government of India Act. I have read the reports of the Round Table Conferences. I find none of the members of these three Round Table Conferences did lay stress on that point, not even before the Joint Parliamentary Committee.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : In the Second Round Table Conference, under Article 42, I think they said that it could be done only by way of amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. B. Das : It could be done but it is not provided for.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Amendments must be by an Act of Parliament.

Mr. B. Das : It is not provided in the White Paper. I was the sole, solitary representative of Orissa, nay of India, who was present at the time in London and who presented a memorandum before the Joint Parliamentary Committee that the Constitution Bill should provide for such an emergency. I had not the opportunity to give evidence before the Joint Parliamentary Committee. Had I given evidence, I would have laid stress on that issue, but I saw the high and the mighty of the India Office, and I told them that they should not ignore such contingencies, because there is prospect of new Provinces being created in future under the new Constitution.

I am grateful to my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, for quoting that pregnant passage from the report of the Simon Commission. I have a grievance as an Oriya. I have got a Province, but I have not got all the boundaries that Orissa should contain. There are tracts that have been left out in the Central Provinces, in my Honourable friend's Province, Madras, and in Bengal, and also in Bihar, which are properly and purely Oriya-speaking tracts and which ought to be included in the Orissa Province.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Question.

Mr. B. Das : You may question, but if you want to ensure the contentment of these people and ensure homogeneity,.....

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Await the Secretary of State's decision in the matter. You do not know the boundaries as yet.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House is not discussing the Orissa Boundary now.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I was only pointing out that the new Provinces which are sought to be created should be homogeneous. As the point of re-distribution of boundaries under the new Constitution has been raised, I do hope, the Honourable the Home Member would look into the issue I have raised, that the White Paper does not provide anything that there should be re-distribution of boundaries or there should be creation of separate Provinces under the new Constitution Bill. If the draft new Constitution Bill does not provide for such an emergency, I hope that when my Honourable friend visits London in the near future, he will at least point out that deficiency.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : May I just point out that the White Paper Constitution proceeds upon the existing basis of the present provincial units and they said that any alteration of the provincial boundaries could only be done by way of amendment to the Constitution Act and the powers under the Government of India Act, which the Governor General possesses with regard to the distribution of areas, is not to be found in the new Constitution, because it was held that whatever changes may be made with regard to these boundaries of Provinces must be done by way of an Act of Parliament.

Mr. B. Das : But my contention is that the Act of Parliament, which will be the new Constitution Act, should provide for such an emergency. Otherwise, future agitators and propagandists like my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, will be left in the lurch, and they will have no opportunity to agitate. As regards the subject matter of this Resolution, whether

[Mr. B. Das.]

Malabar can be made a separate Province, although it is a welcome proposition, I have my doubts whether one small district can be made into a Province, but I would very much like to hear my Honourable friend, Mr. Thampan, and also the Home Member, to know whether such an eventuality can arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I may assure the House that I had absolutely no intention to intervene in this debate especially as I was not feeling well this morning. However, I must say that this Resolution of my friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, is not really wanted. My reasons are quite plain. If I give a silent vote on this occasion, it might give rise to some misunderstanding that I am in favour of the separation of Sind. If this small Province is going to be separated, it is going to be an agony. Sind is in that agony from which she has not yet come out. Sind is even being coveted by a high personage as His Highness the Aga Khan who wishes to have a territory of his own. Sir, I submit that though the papers say that there is no truth in His Highness the Aga Khan gaining a territory here as a ruler, yet, when we have heard such rumours and when we remember the manner in which the question of Sind has been considered, there should be no surprise in seeing one day that he is made a ruler of one of the territories in India. Sir, I do not say that so far as Kerala is concerned, there is any such high personage like the Aga Khan who is insisting upon Kerala being separated. Therefore, there is no great danger of Kerala being separated; but I just want to say one thing that that is that, when I thought of this Kerala being separated, I put the question to myself—have I the facts before me about any demand about Kerala being separated? Well, Sir, I have none; but I am very glad to see today that several Members on this side have expressed themselves plainly and declared that the main question which is relevant is the same which applies to Sind also, namely, the financial difficulty. Sir, financial difficulty is a matter which can curb down all our rights, all our privileges and all our benefits when we wish to have a new Province. The question of Sind unfortunately is such that even though it has been so prominently found out by not only one, but by two Committees and other officials and by the Bombay Government itself that there are no spare finances, yet the threat is at least that Sind might be separated when the federal legislation and the Federal Government comes into operation. Sir, if that is so, if Sind is going to be separated, then I shall curse that day when that Federation comes into force.

Sir, the second point is that when you receive such Resolutions as this and when you comply with them, the difficulties of the Government are augmented. The Honourable the Finance Member is not here; otherwise he would have told you that he also has not got lots of money to give away subventions: and if Kerala is not going to be self-contained and it is not going to supply the finances that will go to make it a separate province, I submit it will operate as an unnecessary and unbearable burden upon the tax-payers of the whole of India. Why, I ask, should Bengal be called upon to pay, why should other Provinces similarly be called upon to pay just in order to get Sind or Kerala separated? Sir, that is the main point; take hold of it, and such Resolutions should be thrown into the waste paper basket. Sir, I have on the contrary now learnt facts which have been made out showing that Kerala could not be separated, but further, on the ground of principle, I oppose the proposition very strongly. What is the principle underlying the Resolution, and what is the authority for it quoted by two of my Honourable friends on my right? They quoted for their principle the Simon Commission. Sir, there was a time when these same gentlemen had a hatred for the Simon Commission, and now they come forward and say that this is the opinion of the Simon Commission. Sir, I do not endorse the principle that is sought to be enunciated in this House that every Province should be separated on a linguistic basis. Sir, I am exceedingly opposed to such a dangerous principle. Sir, don't you see that when we want India to be united, our opponents want to make it disunited, and they seek to make as many different Provinces as possible, so that we may be so segregated that there should be no union but disintegration and questions like the Hindu-Muhammadan question, the Anglo-Indian question and such like should loom large and come into prominence, all tending to make for the disintegration of the very unity and solidarity of India.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Then abolish all the Provinces!

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I submit, Sir, that the principle is one which should not appeal to anybody. Sir, what is it that the Congress wants? Why is the Congress suffering so much? What for? What do the people want? The people want that there has been a great deal of disunion amongst us and that has been on account of several reasons,—but we want to unite the various sections. The Congress and the people have from early times been crying and crying that there ought to be only one language current for the whole of India. (Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : “Hear, hear”.) Do you want that the multifarious languages should all remain permanently and perennially separating the nation, so that people may not understand one another and the language and interest, and get into chaos. Sir, I say it is not even in the interests of the Government to separate these Provinces on a linguistic basis. Sir, if you adopt the principle of separating provinces on a linguistic basis then you shall have to consider many more such Provinces. When I went to Madras, I found a language which was going to be universal for that Province, although their own indigenous languages were four or five—Malayalam, Telugu, Tamil, Canarese, Urdu, Oriya. But nonetheless English is going to be the uniform language in Madras. Even the rickshaw driver who took me spoke in English, and unhappily he told me that he was a matriculate, though, of course, I shuddered when I got into his rickshaw that I should be driven by a matriculate who has got so much respect in this part of the country. Go anywhere, Sir, in Madras, and they all speak English. But if you are to have this separation of Kerala on the ground of language, then you have to separate the other four parts of the Provinces also which have different languages. On the contrary, the attempt of all patriotic people, people who have any love for India and for unity, should be that there should be one and one language only for India, and I submit that Hindustani is already getting to be the lingua franca the common language of India (Hear, hear), though Hindustani is not known so much in two parts of India, namely, Madras and Bengal. On the Madras side, however, I found Muhammadans speaking Urdu. Of course Urdu and Hindustani are alike, and it was thus easy for the Madras Muhammadans to talk in Hindustani, though, so far as the other communities are concerned, I found they had different languages and they could not understand Hindustani.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : They are learning Hindi now.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am very glad my friend on my right says that they are learning Hindi. I pray for that day.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Four lakhs of people have learnt and passed in Hindi.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : So I am correct in opposing this Resolution. Sir, I think the Mover of this Resolution will excuse me when I tell him that he was probably thinking of some journalistic venture when he proposed the question of Kerala's separation.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : If my Honourable friend will wait to know the truth, he will find that not only every district board, but every taluqa board in Malabar and every public-spirited Kerala gentleman wants separation.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I have heard several such assertions.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : I am quite willing, when my turn comes, to place documentary evidence on the floor of this House.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am sure that will not move me an inch. Sir, these reasons are overwhelming, namely, as the Congressmen have all along insisted upon,—we have all remained for a long long time in segregation ; if we now want unification, then we must have one language in India, and, therefore, I say, Provinces should not be separated on the score of linguistic differences.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Did we not, as Congressmen, take a large part in the Congress resolution which altered the Congress creed under which Malabar ought to be treated as a separate Province on linguistic grounds ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : It is not a direct reply to me, and, therefore, I will proceed. Sir, what I submit is this that we must have the common welfare of India at heart. I would not even object if we have English as a common language of the whole of India. I have no objection to that at all, especially as our destinies are linked together with the English people. It is on that ground that the English education is advancing. It may be that if we are not careful to have Hindustani as our common language and try our very best to see that this is done, then one day in the near future we will find that we will not only be speaking in English but even thinking and dreaming in English. I, therefore, submit that I am strongly opposed to this Resolution. Sir, I am sure my points are such that they will at least appeal to the public outside and to many of the Honourable Members on this side of the House. Although my learned friend, the Mover of the Resolution, may persist in sticking to his opinion, I can assure the House that one day we will read a contribution from him in some paper to the effect that he has re-considered the question and that he is not for a separate Province on linguistic basis.

Sir, my grievance was about the separation of Sind, and that made me get up. I know that the moment I mention the Sind question, the Muhammadan Members will attack and say : " Do not raise that question at all ". But I must say that Sind is not a Province which should be separated. It will be a grievous mistake to do so. I would make it clear to the Honourable the Muhammadan friends of mine in this House what they are really going to get if Sind is at all separated. The Barrage area is included in the area of Sind and practically the whole of it is going to be a reserved subject in the hands of the Government. Then comes the question of law and order. A strong case has already been made out, not only before the Round Tablers, but also before the Joint Parliamentary Committee that Sind is full of atrocities, dacoities and abductions.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member should now bring his remarks to a close.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am going to finish, Sir. Therefore, without saying much on this point, I would only submit that on principle I am absolutely against this Resolution, and I hope the House will realise all these points. Let Sind remain apart, but this is a principle which we should not endorse.

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : You do not want the separation of Sind ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : You have not understood me up to this time at all. I never wanted Sind to be separated, and I am a strong advocate of no separation of any Province. With these reasons, and without taking any more time of the House, I oppose this Resolution.

Sir Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Mr. President, the question involved in this Resolution is really a very important one, namely, the re-distribution of the Provinces in India, and I think that the success of the Federal Constitution in India, to a very large extent, depends upon this question. It is indeed very unfortunate that this question was not threshed out, as it ought to have been, before the Round Table Conferences or the Joint Parliamentary Committee, but I think that it is not yet too late to take it up and give it the consideration that it deserves.

The Provinces of India, as we know, were not constituted and formed on any logical or reasonable grounds. The fact was that the British came to India as traders, and not as conquerors ; but when the circumstances of the country led them to take possession of different territories under their administration, then, as soon as a portion of some territory came into their possession, they attached it to another portion already in their possession, without seeing whether there were any logical or reasonable grounds for adding or attaching it to a particular Province. In this way, we find that in India there is a heterogeneous collection of Provinces, and they have got no affinity with one another. One of these tracts of land, the Province of Malabar, was attached to the Presidency of Madras. Now, Sir, you know it very well, in fact, more than I do, that there is no affinity between the traditions, the culture, the language or anything else, between Madras proper and the people of Malabar. Therefore there is no reason why Malabar ought to have been attached to Madras.

Mr. K. P. Thampan : West Coast and Nilgiris : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I know what the Honourable Member means by " Madras proper " ?

Sir Muhammad Yakub : By " Madras proper " I mean Madras excluding Malabar.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Does my Honourable friend know that Tamil and Malayalam are very much alike to each other ?

Sir Muhammad Yakub : Many languages are alike to each other. For instance, English and French are very much alike to each other, but it does not follow that English should be merged into French. Then, Sir, in the same way, we find that there is no affinity whatsoever, geographically, linguistically or culturally, between Sind and Bombay, and there was absolutely no reason why Sind should have been amalgamated or attached to Bombay. Sind and Hind are, in fact, two different portions of the country. Geographically, Sind is a part of Arabia, and, therefore, I say there was no reason why Sind should be attached to Bombay. The very idea of the Federation of Provinces means that there should be small Federal States having something in common between them. My friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, has been talking about the Congress and the unity which the Congress wants. The Congress has all along been for the creation of a nation in India. Now, Sir, can anybody claim that the huge sub-continent of India ever be formed into one nation ? If you can form the whole of Europe into one nation, then certainly you can form the whole of India into one nation. But as they have divided Europe into different small countries, such as, France, Germany, Italy and others, most of which are even smaller than the Provinces in India, you can also divide India into several small units you may call them Provinces or States as you like, in such a way as to create a nationality in those Provinces. Then and then alone you can introduce and run the Federal system in India successfully, and then and then alone can the national ideal of Congress be realised.

Let us examine what is it that goes to form a nation ? The first and foremost thing which goes to form a nation is a common language. Then come the culture and the family traditions. What we want is that India should be divided into small States having a common language, common culture and common traditions. If you can achieve this object, then really you can form a Federation of States in India. My Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, has referred to the separation of Sind. I think there was a time when the Congress, and members belonging to the community of my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, wanted the separation of Sind.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Question.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : That question can be replied in the affirmative, and it can be proved by documentary evidence on record, but as soon as they found that the Mussalmans were in favour of separation of Sind, only from that very day they turned round and said that they did not want the separation. (Laughter.) There is, I understand, a distinct resolution of the Congress in which the separation of Sind from Bombay was demanded, and my Honourable friend, who talks in the name of the Congress, now says that he is opposed to the separation of Sind.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The Honourable Member is not correct in saying that there is a resolution. No doubt there is a resolution with great reservation and safeguards and others which were also tentative, and they all fell through.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : All resolutions are always tentative. As regards safeguards, we have never denied that the minority community in Sind should have adequate safeguards. In fact we have always been for safeguards, and Muslims have always extended the same safeguards to the minority communities which they want for themselves in Provinces in which they are in a minority.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Poor consolation.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : Sir, it is very unfortunate indeed that the name of His Highness the Aga Khan was dragged in this debate by my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai. If he adopts this attitude, he is widening the gulf of disunion between Hindus and Muslims in this country. (Hear hear.) Nothing has hurt the feelings of the Muslims throughout the country so much as that the name of His Highness the Aga Khan was introduced in this Assembly. On the basis of some rumours, for which there was no foundation, and on the basis of some information from official documents, which somehow or other, through the subversive agency of the Congress, has leaked out into the Press, this question has been brought to the notice of the public. Those who cry for union between the two communities must understand the effect of making allegations like these and wounding the feelings of Muslims.

Mr. B. Das : How can the Congress steal the secrets from Government offices ?

Sir Muhammad Yakub : They have got secret agency in all the offices of Government. I can make this assertion on the floor of the House, and I warn the Government to take very great care about the leakage of confidential news from their offices, through the subversive agency of the Congress.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : So it appears that the matter alleged is true.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : Well, Sir, my Honourable friend has also made another unfortunate reference to Hindustani. This is another contrivance which is now being made in order to destroy Urdu, which is the language in which the culture, the religion and traditions of Mussalmans are embodied today in India. It is another method to destroy Urdu and to bring Hindi, with Sanskrit in it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Excuse me, you are thoroughly wrong.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : I assert that this is bound to widen the gulf of disunity between the two communities in India. The other day a question was asked in the Assembly about some resolution which was passed in Delhi requesting the substitution of Hindi for Urdu in the Courts of Delhi. Without having any reference or any relevancy to the resolution, my Honourable friend has again introduced this question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Urdu and Hindustani are similar.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : They are quite different, and there is no affinity whatsoever between them. If Hindustani means anything, it is a combination of bhasha and Sanskrit, which the Mussalmans do not know and which it would be extremely difficult for them to learn. Therefore,

[Sir Muhammad Yakub.]

I say that it is very unfortunate that, in a simple Resolution about the separation of Malabar, all these points, which tend to create trouble between the two communities, have been brought in. As regards the desire of the people of Malabar to form a separate Province of their own, I would only quote some resolutions passed by the Moplahs of Malabar. I have got in my hand the proceedings of the Ernad Taluk Board passed at its meeting held at Manjeri on the 5th February, 1934. The resolution runs thus :

“ Resolution No. 6 : Read the following resolution by Member K. Mammad Moyan Kurikkal Sahib Bahadur :

“ Since Malabar has got an individuality of its own on account of its extensive area, dense population and peculiar language and culture, this Board resolves to request the Government of Madras to pass before the Joint Parliamentary Committee the claims of Malabar to be constituted as a separate Province when the Reforms are given effect to.”

This is signed by the President, Mr. V. Kunhi Moyi.

There is another resolution passed by the District Board of Malabar at its meeting held at Kottakkal on 16th October, 1933 :

“ Resolution No. 10. Moved by Mr. Abdur Rahiman Sahib Bahadur, District Board Member :

“ This Board considers it to be in the best interests of the people of the West Coast to have a separate Province to their own and requests the Government to take early steps to form such a separate Province and bring into working along with the reconstituted new provinces under the Reforms Scheme.”

Mr. K. P. Thampan : Is that all, only one Taluk Board and the District Board ?

Sir Muhammad Yakub : These will show that the people of Malabar are highly in favour of the separation of Malabar. As I have said in the very beginning, this is a very important question, and if the Government want that the Federal Constitution should work successfully, they should consider the whole question of the re-distribution of Provinces on linguistic and cultural basis before the new Constitution is fully in working order. With these remarks, I heartily support the Resolution.

Mr. K. P. Thampan : Sir, before I came to the House this morning, my idea was to request you to adjourn this motion, because I felt unequal to the task of making a speech having been in the train for the last four or five days. I arrived here only this morning and came into the House straight without taking my food and I found that the discussion has been proceeding and has gone too far to make a request for adjourning the debate. I must, therefore, content myself with what I can do under the circumstances.

Sir, I had the pleasure of carefully listening to the speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Ranga Iyer, when he moved this Resolution on 6th April last. I had also the benefit of reading in cold print the full report of the debate as published in the proceedings of the Assembly. Having read it, I find that Mr. Ranga Iyer's speech contains more of abuse and vilification of the party to which I have the honour to belong and of myself than anything about the merits of the question. Sir, I would be very sorry to assume the role of a bad lawyer who abuses his adversary, finding that he has a very weak case. That is precisely what Mr. Ranga Iyer has done, but I must in duty bound to myself and to my constituents offer certain explanations by way of answering the charges and allegations made against me. Before I deal with the merits of the question, I will deal with that aspect of the case, and I crave your indulgence for a short while. Mr. Ranga Iyer says that the representative of Malabar has :

“ Disappointed his own constituents in Malabar and judging from a newspaper article in the Matrabhumi, a very cautious newspaper, it appears that Malabar is not represented in this House as it ought to be represented.”

Sir, I would not care a tuppence for an opinion like that from Mr. Ranga Iyer. The proper persons to come forward with such expression of opinions are my constituents. If anybody in Malabar,—never mind who he is,—holds a public meeting and passes a resolution condemning my attitude in this Assembly, it is my duty to answer it, but not the vilifying attack of an Honourable Member who ought to know his duty better. Sir, he refers to the newspaper Matrabhumi. The Matrabhumi is a Congress paper and the Congress, as all people know, is for a separate Province. If the people for whom the Matrabhumi speaks are the people of Malabar, then I do not represent them here, I do not represent the Congress and I do not think the Congress has got a majority in my district. Sir, Mr. Ranga Iyer says that I uttered a falsehood in saying that nobody wanted the separation of Kerala. Sir, I did not mean literally what I said. I knew Mr. Ranga Iyer wants it, I knew Mr. Palat wants it, and I knew a handful of his followers want it ; but they are such a microscopic minority in the district that one can safely say that nobody wants it. It is in that sense that I used these words. And if what I said is a falsehood, Mr. Ranga Iyer's statement that people of Malabar want separation is certainly a malicious falsehood.

Then, Sir, there are one or two attacks that are more or less personal. He compares me to Mr. Palat who is no doubt a very respectable gentleman and a friend of mine ; he says that Mr. Palat occupies a position that I have yet to occupy and that, during my political career, I have failed to occupy that position,—i.e., the Chairmanship of the District Board. Well, Sir, if Sir Charles Innes, whom everybody in the House knows, and who was our Collector, were here, he could tell Mr. Ranga Iyer that if I cared to be President of a Taluk Board or the District Board, it was not very difficult for me to get it. And it would not be a travesty of truth to say that, after the advent of the present Constitution, when a vacancy occurred in the Presidentship of the Malabar District Board, the then Minister, my revered friend, the Raja of Panagal, made himself sure, before he nominated one, that I did not care to have it. Frankly, I have not got those qualities which go to make a District Board President. I confess I am not made for that kind of work, and I have no ambition in that way.

Sir, one other aspersion that he made is that I wanted to exploit the position of the Muslims of Malabar. I am sorry, my friend, Mr. Uppi Saheb, is not here, but if he were here, he would have told the House what my views on such matters and what my relations with the Muslims are, how kind and cordial they are to me as I am to them. If he had made a statement that the Muslims of Malabar were not having their due share, I should have respectfully heard it, but it is not for a gentleman like Mr. Ranga Iyer to take up the cause of the Muslims. I might have failed in my duty, but why should he cast aspersions on my friend, Mr. Uppi

[Mr. K. P. Thampan.].

Sahab, also, for whom it was open to agitate for the due share of the Muslims, both here as well as in the Local Council where he was a distinguished Member? Sir, the Muslims, the Moplahs of Malabar, have not yet begun to take to English education and are not well represented in the public services. They are quite well off in other walks of life. As merchants, they hold a unique position in the district, as agriculturists they are second to none, and there are a very large number of landholders amongst them, people who pay more than Rs. 3,000 as revenue and are eligible to vote in the landholders' constituency. In my election campaign to represent the landholders in the Madras Legislative Council, I came across many of them, and I know the enormous influence which they wield in their place. They are after all not a very unimportant community, and judging from the number of Moplahs who are already in the service, the proportion of unemployment among the educated Moplahs is not so great as it is among the other communities in Malabar.

This is all, Sir, by way of preface. I now come to the merits of the question. In the first place, I maintain that this is not the place to discuss this question. The Joint Select Committee in 1919 said that if a Local Legislative Council by a majority passes a Resolution to separate a portion of its Province and constitute a different one, then the Government must appoint a committee to investigate and report on the question before taking any action. And section 52A of the Government of India Act says that the Government of India must satisfy themselves by consulting the Local Government and the Local Legislative Council before doing anything. Sir, this question was by way of an amendment to another Resolution fully discussed and turned down in the Madras Legislative Council, and it is curious to find that only two out of the six representatives from Malabar supported it. The Madras Government also opposed it. If the people of Malabar had a grievance on this subject, it was up to the representatives of Malabar to take it up in the Local Council.

Sir, I must apologise to the House for making a digression and going back to answer another aspersion of my Honourable friend which I left out. Mr. Ranga Iyer says here that Members of the Democratic Party

"run with the hare and hunt with the hound ignoring their duties and responsibilities to their own constituents."

Sir, hunting with the hound and running with the hare is a very happy phrase. The House knows very well who all are flirting with the Congress on the one hand and flirting with our friends on the Government benches on the other; who all are moving Resolutions such as the release of Mahatma Gandhi, the abolition of untouchability and the disabilities as regards entry into temples to placate the Congress, and, at the same time, are voting with Government in regard to the Press Law and other repressive measures and angling for preferances such as nominations to go to England as members of Railway Board and Reserve Bank Committees. Sir, I have been in this House for four years, and sitting in that Chair you must have seen how many times I have gone into the Government Lobbies; except once, namely, in the matter of tariff duty on hosiery, in which many of my constituents are interested, I have not voted with the Government. I am a Member of the Opposition, and it is my duty to be in my place and oppose the Government.

Who are hunting with the hounds and running with the hare is very plain and obvious to the House and people outside. To come back to the subject, Mr. Ranga Iyer urged, as one of the main reasons for separation, that Malabar has got its own greatness and genius, and he wanted the people of Malabar to keep up that genius. It is, indeed, a noble endeavour. My friend very well knew that the one instance, the marumakkathayam system, which he quoted, was proposed to be uprooted in the district by means of a legislative measure: his very friend, Mr. Palat, was the sponsor of that measure in the Madras Legislative Council. Did he do anything then? Where did his magnanimity go? Did he discuss the matter with his friend, Mr. Palat, or any other, and persuade them not to destroy it, but to keep that characteristic genius or greatness of Malabar to itself? The only instance of that great genius he quoted was the marumakkathayam system and that was completely abolished by that measure. There is, now, absolutely no difference between the law of inheritance and marriage in Malabar and that of other districts in Madras. He did not move a single finger then to agitate against that measure. If he was sincere in his declarations, it was up to him to carry on a propaganda with a view to keeping that genius; but, now, after the law was passed and the system was totally abolished, very generously he says "Why not keep it?" He wants the people of Malabar to keep their genius. Keep what? Surely there ought to be a limit even for Mr. Ranga Iyer. One could fool a few people for all time; one could also fool all people for some time; but one cannot fool all people for all time. This is just what Mr. Ranga Iyer vainly attempts to do.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The Honourable Member has just got two minutes more.

Mr. K. P. Thampan: I have not touched the fringe of the question and have a good lot more to say.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): He must finish in two minutes.

Mr. K. P. Thampan: Sir, we in Malabar do not want separation. We are well off as we are. When the Andhras, Tamilians separate or when Cochin and Travancore will consent to join us to form a Province, the time may come. The present move is a mischievous one and will end in ruin. The District Board or the Taluk Boards do not count. I will wind up by reading two or three letters from among many which I have received from leading and representative gentlemen to whom I wrote for an expression of their opinion on this subject. Sir M. Krishnan Nair, one of the foremost men of my district, writes:

"Dear Thampan, with reference to your letter requesting me to state my views about the desirability or otherwise of constituting a Kerala Province, I have to state that in my opinion the formation of a Kerala Province will be against the interests of the people of Malabar. If it were possible to include the whole of the Malayalam speaking country consisting of the Indian States of Travancore and Cochin, the British District of Malabar and the Kasergode Taluk of the S. Kanara District in a Kerala Province, it might be desirable to have a Kerala Province. But you know as well as I do that it will not be possible to include the tracts referred to above in a single province. I have no objection to your making use of this letter in any way you like."

[Mr. K. P. Thampan.]

Another gentleman, Mr. K. P. Raman Menon, the uncle of Mr. Palat, who has a very good record of public career, writes—this was long before the Resolution was moved :

“ Your letter of the 24th re Kerala Province could be read by me only on the 2nd March when I returned from Madras. My views are decidedly against the separation of Kerala from the present Madras province. Most of my reasons have been stated by me in the debate on a similar resolution moved in the Madras Legislative Council and negatived there, I believe last November or so, to which please refer. Over and above those reasons I may mention one or two more. What are you going to do with Travancore and Cochin? If those Rajahs are to be pensioned off and all Malayalam speaking people are brought together as one Province there is some semblance of common sense behind it. Again how can a small province like this sustain the financial burdens that would arise from the top heavy machinery of a Governor, ministers, secretaries, etc. As far as I can gather from the trend of the discussion people who advocate separation can be classed under two heads (1) those suffering from what I call pseudo-patriotism who want their language, their culture, etc., to predominate, (2) those who think that in a sphere more restricted than the Madras Presidency they could make themselves masters either honestly or dishonestly. A smaller legislative council can be better managed than a larger one either by corruption or by honest endeavour and hence the craving to separate, because men of this persuasion are in too great a hurry to thrust themselves into the lime light.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member's time is up.

Mr. K. P. Thampan : I have got letters condemning this proposal from all classes and creeds of people, merchants, landlords, Government servants—people in all walks of life and Brahmins, Tiegys, Nairs, and Rajas representing all communities.

The financial aspect of the question has also to be considered. The Government of Madras was good enough to supply me with certain relevant figures and I can show.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member cannot embark upon a new topic just now.

Mr. K. P. Thampan : I oppose the motion and request the House to vote with me.

Bhai Parma Nand (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadian) : Sir, in one respect I appreciate that I cannot say much on the particular subject of the separation of Malabar from Madras. But as this subject has another aspect and that aspect has involved in it the interests of the country as a whole, I would like to make a few remarks on it. The main argument that Mr. Ranga Iyer has given to us, is the linguistic reason. If we take the linguistic reason as a main ground for the separation of a Province, then I think there will be so many different Provinces in this country that it would become very difficult to make arrangements for the separation of each. If Malabar is to be separated from Madras, then the question which Andhra people would ask is, “ Why should not Andhra be made a separate Province ?”

An Honourable Member : They have already done so.

Bhai Parma Nand : I quite agree with Sir Muhammad Yakub in his view that the division of the country into separate Provinces was not made by any particular design. It was done gradually as the British East India Company went on conquering one part after another in India. Taking that as a reason for re-distribution of Provinces of India, I think the best form of the Resolution ought to be that some Royal Commission should be appointed which should take up the question of re-distribution of India into various Provinces. I would agree and support this form of Resolution. I cannot understand that if the present division into Provinces is not satisfactory, how the demand to separate one portion now and again another, would be a satisfactory solution for it. The real remedy for this difficulty is to take the country as a whole and then try and find out a proper way of distributing it into various Provinces.

Take the case of Sind. It was only the Muslim majority of that Province who have made it one of their demands. Sir Muhammad Yakub said that before the year 1925 the Hindus of that Province were agreeable to the separation of Sind. Sir, I have also studied this question of the separation of Sind, and what I find from the statement of the Hindu leaders, is that they never wanted the separation of Sind from Bombay ; what they wanted was to have the judiciary separated from the Bombay Presidency. When the Hindus wanted this, the Mussalmans of Sind were not agreeable to the proposition. It was in 1925 or 1926 that the demand for separation of Sind on behalf of the All-India Muslim League was made, and then the Mussalman community of Sind was set up to make this demand for the separation of Sind for themselves. The demand was altogether given a new shape by the All-India Muslim League by making it an All-India question.

In the same way, Sir, as this demand was made by the Mussalmans of Sind or by the All-India Muslim League, I think some people, who call themselves as belonging to the Delhi Province or Delhi plus Ambala Division, which I have the honour to represent here, have also been making a similar demand for a long time, for separating them from the Punjab. Their reasons are also quite clear and cogent enough, because Ambala was never a part of the Punjab proper. The people of Ambala, Rohtak, Hissar and other neighbouring Districts were altogether different from the people of the Punjab until the British conquered the Punjab from the Sikhs. Their traditions, their history, their language and their customs are altogether different even today from the people of the Punjab, and, therefore, the demand of the people of Delhi plus Ambala Division was that they should be separated from the Province of the Punjab. I personally agree with that view. The people of Ambala sent their representations to the Parliamentary Committee and also passed resolutions at several of their Conferences. Sir, if the demand for the separation of Provinces on a linguistic basis is acceded to, if Honourable Members, one after another, bring out Resolutions to separate Provinces, it will be no real remedy for the troubles we are facing today in the country. Therefore, what I say is, if a real remedy is to be sought for our troubles, the Resolution should take some such a form that a Commission should be appointed for considering the whole question.

Now, Sir, before I sit down, I just want to say a few words with regard to certain remarks that fell from my friend, Sir Muhammad Yakub. Some of his remarks were so flagrantly wrong that I do not think that they should go unchallenged. My friend, Sir Muhammad Yakub, said that Sind was a part of Arabia, and, therefore, the people.....

Sir Muhammad Yakub : I said that geographically it is a part of Arabia. I never said it was a part of Arabia.

Bhai Parma Nand : Yes, that is what my friend said, that geographically Sind was a part of Arabia. Referring to the name of Sind, he also said that Sind was different from Hind, and, therefore, Sind was a different country making it geographically or in other ways a part of Arabia,—it may not be so politically,—I do not think my friend was serious in making such a statement. I am afraid my friend is making a serious mistake in saying that Sind was a part of Arabia.....

Sir Muhammad Yakub : It is not a mistake, but it is a fact.

Bhai Parma Nand : The word Sind is derived from the river Sindhu or Indus. Sindhu in Sanskrit means river, and it is from this word "Indus" that the name of the country "Hindustan" is derived; but my friend, Sir Muhammad has been telling us quite a different story. In fact, Sind is the Province which has kept up really the original name of the whole country, i.e., Hindustan and its people.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : As Punjab is derived from the five rivers.

Bhai Parma Nand : Then, again, my friend, Sir Muhammad Yakub, also said something about the Hindustani language. I beg to differ from him entirely. Hindustani is the word used for the spoken language, and it includes Urdu just as well as Hindi. It was a mistake to suppose that Hindustani meant only Hindi. Of course, my friend's prejudice against Hindi impelled him to make certain remarks and he went so far as to say that Hindustani should not be the language of India, and that if any one would repeat it, he would be throwing Hindu-Muslim unity to winds. Sir, spoken Hindustani is the common language spoken by the major portion of the people of India. Of course, my friend may not agree that Hindi should be the common language of India, but Hindi is altogether different from the Hindustani that is spoken. Hindi is written in Sanskrit characters, while Hindustani can be written either in Urdu or Hindi. Hindustani is being used by the people of the South and it is being popularised more and more to serve as a medium of communication between the North and the South.

Then, my friend, Sir Muhammad Yakub, also said that India was just like European countries. My Honourable friend was a member of the Round Table Conference. He has been favouring Federation in India. I do not think, Sir, that being a member of the Round Table Conference and holding such a responsible position as he does, he should indulge in such remarks that India should be considered like Europe and should have separate Governments just as Italy and France have got different forms of Government.

Sir Muhammad Yakub : There was nothing irresponsible in the remarks which I made when I said that India was as big as the whole of Europe minus Russia, and that some of the Provinces of India were greater than the countries of Europe. I was perfectly right in saying that you cannot have one standard for a sub-continent or one language for the whole of a sub-continent.

Bhai Parma Nand : That is what I said, that for a gentleman, who was a member of the Round Table Conference and who has been supporting the Federal Government scheme, it was foolish to suggest that India should have separate governments.....

Sir Muhammad Yakub : You have entirely misunderstood what I said.

Bhai Parma Nand : That is all what I have to say to Sir Muhammad Yakub.

Therefore, I would say that, although I am no authority on Malabar, the proposed Resolution is no remedy, that is to say, that the Andhra people should have a separate Province, or the Sind people should have a Province for themselves, or that the Ambala people should also have a separate Province, but the real remedy is that Government should set up a Royal Commission to settle the question once and for all, whether the Provinces should be separated and distributed on a linguistic basis or on some other lines.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I think the question of separation of Provinces should be left to the people of each Province to decide for themselves. Sir, I am not an authority to speak for Malabar, and I am not in a position to say what is the difference between the two cultures of the Malayalam or Kanarese speaking people. I know that Malabar had for a long time past had a civilization of its own. I find, though only through history, that Malabar had nothing in common with the rest of the Madras Presidency. If the people of Malabar unanimously demand that they should be separated from the rest of the Madras Presidency, I will whole-heartedly support their demand. But if I find that they do not wish to be separated, either on account of political reasons, or on account of administrative difficulties, or on some other grounds, I will be the last person to lend my support to the Resolution on the flimsy ground of sentiment and linguistic affinity. I leave this matter entirely to the people who come from Madras and who only can authoritatively speak on the subject. I can only speak on the principle. The principle is that if the civilization of a people is different from the rest of the people of the Province and if they can be easily separated, then they should be separated, and if the separated province can work in harmony for the settlement of its affairs and its administration, then I think the Government must see their way to give effect to the demands of the people.

I have got no controversy with my Honourable friend, Bhai Parma Nand, when he says that the Ambala Division may be separated from the rest of the Punjab. I know that the Ambala Division is quite different from the rest of the Punjab. People living on this side of the Sutlej have not got very much in common with the people living on the western side of the Sutlej. But I do not see eye to eye with my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, when he says that Sind is a part of India. If my Honourable friend will only read the one and the only history which had been written before the Muslims came, namely, Chao Nama, he would find that Sind never formed part of India. Sind was always considered to be a different country from the rest of India. The words "Sind" and "Hind" show that they are two different things. If my Honourable friend has not made up his mind but is open to conviction, the recent excavations in Harappa and Mohenjo-Daro will show that the civilization of Sind was quite different from the civilization of India. (Interruption.) My Honourable friend says that Sind did not form part of the countries to the west of it. That is only sentiment, but historically, it can be proved that the civilization which existed up to the banks of the Indus extended, not only as far as Babylon, but right upto Egypt.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order. The Chair must now intervene and ask Honourable Members to confine themselves to the Kerala Province.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I am only replying to what my Honourable friend had been saying and challenging when he remarked that Hind and Sind have got the same civilization. I say, no. They are different. (Interruption by Bhai Parma Nand.) My Honourable friend is excited, but the history is different.

(At this stage, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai rose in his seat, and there were also other interruptions.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Therefore, if the people of Sind want separation, I do not see what business we have got in this House to say that they should not be separated.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I rise to a point of order, Sir. Your ruling was that Kerala should be talked about.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : It is the Honourable Member himself who first violated that. (Laughter.)

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : My Honourable friend comes into this House to challenge a thing with which we are not concerned ; that question has been settled somewhere else, and it is a pity that that question was brought in here in a round about manner. I say that my Honourable friend has no right to re-open that question in this House or to ask for our opinion. That is left to the Sind people of whom Mr. Lalchand Navalrai is one. There are others also in Sind whose voice we have to consider, and if their voice is that Sind should be separated, that will have to be separated, and the voice of this House can have no effect on that point.

Bhai Parma Nand : He is the representative of the Hindus.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : He may be representative of the Hindus, but there are other people who are representatives of other communities.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : None in this House except myself.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I will put a pertinent question to my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, and if he answers that, I will be the first person to concede him whatever he wants.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order. It appears that a passing reference to Sind which the Chair permitted in the case of one Honourable Member has given an entirely new turn to the debate. The Chair does not want unnecessarily to intervene ; but, in the case of future speakers, the Chair must ask them strictly to confine themselves to the Kerala Province.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I will only say, let my Honourable friend say what he wants to have in Sind, and I am ready to give him that. That is not only my personal opinion, but also of many other Muslims—namely, whatever rights he wants let him mention and we shall concede. If he does not want to ask, then it is his look out. The mere adoption of this Resolution will have no effect on the decision of the Government, because, this House, as it is composed, has got no authority, has got no right to speak for the people who are living in different Provinces. But I will tell the Government that if they find a real and genuine desire on the part of people, who are going to be affected, there should be separation, they should do something in the way of accepting their demands. With these words, I support the Resolution.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Sahib Bahadur (South Madras : Muhammadan) : But for the absence of Mr. Uppi, who is the only Muslim representative of Malabar, I would not have risen to make a speech on this occasion. So far as the Muslims of Malabar are concerned, I think they are quite indifferent regarding the separation of Malabar from Madras. The same attitude is to be adopted by the Muslim representatives of Madras, I mean Mr. Muhammad Muazzam and myself, but the House may ask how it was that I was the man who moved a Resolution regarding the introduction of reforms into the North-West Frontier Province and placing it on the same level as other Provinces of India. If the same was the case here, as it was in the case of the N. W. F. P., I should favour this Resolution ; but I want to convince the House that I am neither in favour of, nor against, this Resolution. I will adopt the same attitude as has been adopted by the Congress regarding the communal question. They are neither for rejecting it nor accepting it. Questions like these should be viewed from this point of view. If the majority of a certain Province do want its separation, we should favour it. As my Honourable friend, Mr. Thampan, said, the majority are not in favour of the separation of the Province. So far as the Muslim representative is concerned, unfortunately he is absent, but I have some connection with Malabar. I happen to be the President of the Majlis-i-Ulema, the association of the divines of that district, and, as such, I know their attitude. They will favour separation if the majority favours it. They would not at all stand in the way if the majority want separation. Personally I would not like it, because the House is fully aware of the fact that we are only seven per cent. throughout the Madras Presidency, and, if Malabar should be separated from Madras, our percentage will be even less than that. It is Malabar which contributes largely to the Muslim population of the Madras Presidency. Out of 35 lakhs throughout the Presidency, about one-third or even more than one-third is the Muslim population of Malabar, and, so personally I would not like it, but if the Hindus, who form the majority of the Province, want separation in their own interests, I know the Moplahs of Malabar would not stand in the way and they will make common cause with them, because, so far as I know, the Muslims and Hindus of our whole Province are living on terms of cordiality. The same is the case with the Moplahs of Malabar. So I speak on behalf of the Muslims of Madras when I say that we will remain neutral so far as this question is concerned.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca cum Mymensingh : Muhammadan Rural) : I would not have intervened in this debate but for Mr. Lalchand Navalrai who brought in the question of the separation of Sind.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair cannot allow any further discussion of the separation of Sind.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Hear, hear.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : If that is your ruling, certainly I have nothing more to say than that Mahatma Gandhi accepted the separation of Sind in England, when he was there representing the Congress. That is a fact which you cannot deny.

Bhai Parma Nand : He did not represent the Hindus though.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : As one of the members of the Round Table Conference, it is my duty to inform this House that not a word of protest was said about the separation of Sind either in the first Round Table Conference or in the Second Round Table Conference in which Mahatma Gandhi was a delegate and a member. He was entirely with the Muslim view that Sind should be separated from Bombay. When the partition of Bengal was proposed by Government, what was the reason? The reason was that Bengal was a very bulky Province for a single administration to carry on, and, if I am not wrong, that is also one of the points that were raised in the case of the Bombay Presidency.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Not at all.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am not here to contradict my friend. That was the point that was raised in the Round Table Conference. Mr. Jayakar, who was a member of the three Round Table Conferences, did not oppose the transference of Sind from Bombay. It was only an afterthought. The Communal Award was published in India in 1932, and then this agitation was carried on by the Hindu Mahasabha. So far as the question of Malabar, which we are discussing, is concerned, Mr. Murtuza Sahib has just said that our policy should be neither for nor against. It is for the Malabarees themselves to say whether they want separation or not. One thing more, and I have done. It pained every Muslim Member in this House that the honoured name of our leader, His Highness the Aga Khan, has been dragged into this discussion. It is a historical fact and will be borne out by my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, that so far as His Highness the Aga Khan is concerned, he has worked in all the three Round Table Conferences and Joint Select Committees, not only as a representative of Muslims, but he has also taken India's interest as a whole, and, but for him, Sir Hari Singh Gour will confirm me, that historic memorandum, which has demanded much more than is contained in the White Paper, would not have seen the light of day.

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig (Home Member) : This Resolution makes a positive recommendation that steps should be taken to constitute a new Province of Malabar. As I see the matter, there are three methods by which effect could be given to that Resolution. In the first place, effect could be given to it under the present Constitution. Now, it is laid down in the present Constitution, in section 52A of the Government of India Act, that action of this kind should only be taken after obtaining an expression of opinion from the Local Government and the local Legislature affected.

Now, as I have listened to the debate this morning, it appears to me that the advocates of this proposition have still a good long way to go before they can show us that they really have strong and unanimous opinion in favour of the proposal; and I am confirmed in that view by a reference to the debate which took place not very long ago in the Madras Legislative Council, where, in fact, this proposal was rejected. I do not propose myself to take any line on one side or the other on the merits of this case; but I do submit that at the present moment it cannot be held that local opinion has declared itself in favour of the proposal, and therefore, we are not in a position to take steps under the present Constitution.

Now, Sir, the second way in which effect could be given to this Resolution would be to include the proposal as part of the new Constitution for India. As various Honourable Members have pointed out, there is no such proposal included in the White Paper. The White Paper, as we all remember, contemplates the creation of only two new Provinces, namely, Sind and Orissa; and, as a matter of practical politics, I think we can take it that it is now too late to ask Parliament to consider the constitution of new Provinces in the measure that they will shortly be asked to consider. Therefore, Sir, I am led to the conclusion that the only way in which practical effect could be given to this Resolution would be after the introduction of the new Constitution, and, in that connection an important point was raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. B. Das. He pointed out that, in the White Paper proposals, there is no definite reference as to what procedure there would be for any future readjustment of boundaries or the Constitution of new Provinces. Well, Sir, I admit that that is a very important question, and I think it is a question which should undoubtedly be brought to the notice of the Secretary of State, and I would, therefore, suggest, as possibly a suitable method of dealing with this Resolution—which in its present form, I must make it clear, the Government of India could not accept—I would, therefore, suggest that the Government of India might forward a copy of this debate to the Secretary of State and invite his attention, in particular, to that point as to whether provision will or will not be made under the new Constitution for the constitution of new Provinces, should it be found desirable (Hear, hear); and I hope that perhaps my Honourable friend, the Mover, might be content with that assurance and be prepared on that assurance to withdraw his motion. I make that suggestion to my Honourable friend. (Loud Applause.)

Mr. C. S. Ranga Iyer : Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my motion, and I would like to express my gratitude to the Honourable the Home Member, who has always been good to us and whom I wish all good in future. (Loud and Prolonged Cheers.)

The Resolution was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

RESOLUTION RE CATERING CONTRACTS ON RAILWAYS.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to appoint a committee consisting of Railway officials and others not connected with Railway Administrations to enquire as to how far the present system of giving contracts and sub-contracts, to outsiders and not to local persons, for catering to the Railway passengers is responsible for the supply of bad food and drinks at very high prices by the vendors either at the Railway platforms, in the refreshment rooms or in the running trains and to suggest ways and means to remove these grievances."

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

Sir, the most important problem in connection with the road-rail competition is to provide good facilities in the railway traffic in order to divert the traffic from road to rail. In this connection, there are three very important questions out of which we are discussing only one today. The first question is the over-crowding of all railway trains. We know that the buses are unpopular on account of their being over-crowded, and if the railways are equally over-crowded, there will be very little to choose between the two. The second is that we should have the system of concession tickets. In England, about 70 per cent. of the travellers travel by means of concession tickets. In India the concession tickets are very few. It is desirable to increase these concessions. The third point, which will be the subject-matter of discussion today, is the supply of cheap and good food. Sir, when we calculate the cost of travelling, the price of food is always added to it, and it is desirable that we should make the budget of the travelling as low as possible in order to attract a larger number of men to travel by rail and in preference to the motor service. The question of food was taken up by several Advisory Committees of Indian Railways, and I do not like to quote them at any great length, but just to mention a few facts. The Bihar and Orissa Branch Committee discussed this question and their item No. 7 ran as follows :

"This Committee thinks that separate contracts should be entered into for Indian refreshment rooms and stalls at stations, the contractor being under the supervision of the station master."

The reply was :

"The suggested procedure was tried in 1926 on the Bengal Nagpur Railway and had proved unsatisfactory. Since the local shop-keepers are men of small means, they found themselves unable to maintain the required standard of Bengal Nagpur Railway catering service."

The Bengal Nagpur Railway wanted to maintain a very high standard of service, and, therefore, they undertook the catering for themselves and money was no consideration to them. The Railway Retrenchment Committee in their report of 1931 remarked as follows about their extravagance :

"We understand that the Bengal Nagpur Railway runs its catering departmentally and at an annual loss of over half a lakh of rupees, and for a number of years the total cost of the establishment has been 2½ lakhs. We can see no justification for continuing this department at a loss and recommend that the question of adopting the system in force on other railways of letting the catering to contractors should be considered immediately."

Therefore, the suggestion of the Bengal Nagpur Railway was found to be too expensive, and it was criticised by the Railway Retrenchment Committee. The second occasion, when this question was taken up, was by the Sind Committee of the North Western Railway. In paragraph 36, they said :

"The rates of selling food at the refreshment rooms and at restaurants are exorbitant."

It was suggested that a small sub-committee be appointed to go into the whole question and place their views before the Committee at an early date. The reply was disposed of in the following terms :

"As the general question in regard to food vending was under consideration, the Mover did not press this Resolution."

I do not know whether the North Western Railway went even one step further to settle this particular question. The question was also taken up by the Assam-Bengal Railway. In paragraph 11, they said :

"The reduction in the scale of charges in refreshment rooms should be considered."

They decided that the contractors ought to be consulted whether they would be willing to reduce their rates, and naturally the contractors gave it as their opinion that they could not do it and the railway authorities accepted it.

This question was also taken up by the Central Advisory Committee of the Railways. I moved in the Central Advisory Committee that the prices are abnormally high. Then Sir Leslie Hudson pointed out that this question ought to be inquired into and we ought to have some more details about the prices of various articles at different stations compared with their prices in local markets. At his suggestion, I put a notice in papers and I got a very large number of replies simply by putting in one notice. This in itself shows how much interest the travelling public takes in the question of catering. I have got two files about the answers which I have received in reply to the notice which I put in the papers, and I will make some reference to them. I have made a summary of these replies. In reply to Sir Leslie Hudson's questions, we find that at Lucknow it was said that the price of one meal consisting of two vegetables and rice and sweets was Rs. 1-4-0 at the Hindu restaurant, whereas the same food at a decent hotel could be obtained for eight to ten annas. At Fatehgarh and other places, the price of puris at the railway stations was from ten to twelve annas a seer, whereas, in the town, its price was six to eight annas a seer. The same remark about puris applies to a large number of places. At Jodhpur, though the prices at the railway station and the town are the same, the weight of the seer is different. At the railway station, the seer is of 80 tolas, whereas in the town it is of 100 tolas. Thus, the difference in prices is made up by a difference in weight. At the Agra station, somebody writes to me, the pethai-ka-mithai is sold at eight annas per seer in the city, and it is sold at 12 annas a seer at the railway station. Dal moth is sold at the rate of 12 annas in the city and at Rs. 1-4-0 at the railway station. The model of the Taj is being sold for Rs. 6 in the town and for Rs. 10 at the railway station.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Is that an article of food ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : This affects the pockets of the travelling public. At Gaya, I am informed that the jalaibeas are sold at six annas per seer in the town, and at ten annas per seer at the station. Then, ghi-ka-pakwan is sold at 12 annas a seer in the town and at one rupee a seer at the station, and the pakwan in oil is sold at four annas a seer in the town and at eight annas a seer at the railway station. One gentleman, Mr. Ajodhya Prasad, writes to me that on the 8th May, 1934, he could buy raiwries at six annas per seer at the Lucknow railway station, but, on the 10th July, the price was raised to eight annas. On making an inquiry, it was found that there was a vendor outside the railway station who used to sell at the former rate. The outside vendor was induced to increase the price, and, therefore, the vendor at the railway station also increased it.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

As regards the cost of tea, I was also told and I also calculated myself that the price of articles which are given in what is called the chota hazri, consisting of two toasts and tea is about one anna, if they are purchased in retail, and nine pies if purchased in wholesale. But we have to pay for chota hazri a sum of eight annas, that is, it is eight times or ten times the price at which the caterers purchase the articles. As regards aerated waters, we all know that it costs about three annas a dozen to make, but they are sold at six annas a dozen in towns, and at the railway stations on the East Indian Railway they are sold at Rs. 1-8-0 a dozen, and I understand in the North Western Railway, it is sold a little cheaper. I have not got the figures for the North Western Railway at present with me. The same is the case with ice. The wholesale price is eight annas per maund, but it is sold in all the stations, where there is no ice factory, at three pice per seer, and at the railway station it is sold at two annas per seer which is abnormally great as compared with the price prevailing in towns. This is really the answer to the question raised by my Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, in the Advisory Committee. This was also one of the questions which I put down on paper for which I have got a reply. I, therefore, submit that if proper enquiries are made, you will find that in each and every article the prices at the railway station differ from prices in towns by 30 per cent. to 75 per cent., and in some cases even cent. per cent. These are heavy taxes on the travelling public, and it adds to the cost of travelling.

Now, coming to the quality of food, I have got my own personal experience, and I think a good many other Honourable Members have got their own experiences. It is rather more comfortable to go without food than to have the food supplied by these vendors at the railway stations. I have got with me some of the opinions expressed by some gentlemen. One gentleman says about tea that the quality of tea served at railway stations is hopelessly poor, and in some cases the balance of tea of the morning is kept up warmed till eleven o'clock, so that illiterate passengers who arrive by later train may be served with that tea. The same gentleman also says that, at the Marwar junction, the trains arrive at close intervals and the old tea is served for passengers who come by later trains. Another gentleman says about the quality of food that two men in the refreshment room at Gaya were attacked by cholera on the 11th May, 1934, and one of them died in the cholera hospital and the other was sent to an unknown place. No steps were taken to destroy all the food-stuffs that were remaining. No steps were taken to clean and whitewash the premises or close the room temporarily. The infected eatables were sold to the public without any interference by the contractor or by the railway authorities.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca cum Mymensingh : Muhammadan Rural) : Was it only on the East Indian Railway or on other railways also ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Gaya is on the E. I. R. As regards cooking in vegetable ghee, my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, has passed the Bill to protect the industry of vegetable ghee in this country. I will now give the House the opinion of a doctor from my constituency from Fatehgarh, Doctor Ayodhia Prasad ; and he says that the stuff sold is inferior in quality and the preparation is often stale, and unwholesome foods are often sold to the passengers who have no alternative but to accept them or to starve. He continues to say that you cannot get this vegetable ghee even to put in your eyes and that is also a thing which is not possible and he deplores the absence of good ghee altogether, and he recommends that the import of vegetable ghee should be stopped altogether, but, alas, we do the reverse. Sir, so far I have proved by the evidence that I have received and based also on my own personal experience that the price of articles sold at railway stations is very high, that the quality of food that is given to the passengers is not good, and this is criticised by the medical authorities whose opinions I have received.

Now, I will make just one or two observations. The first thing is that I should very much like that the system of sub-contracts should be abolished altogether. Under our very nose, at the Delhi Railway Station, the contract for a large number of articles is given to one person who is not even a resident of Delhi, he comes from some place in the United Provinces. He comes once a month to Delhi and collects about Rs. 1,000, or Rs. 1,500 every month from the sub-contractors and goes away to his house. What for is he allowed to collect these sums ? Because he was fortunate enough to have the contract for such a large number of articles from one of the officers of the railway. In this connection, I wish to bring to the notice of the House that Sir Guthrie Russell pointed out at a meeting of the Advisory Committee that the sub-letting of contracts was not permissible under the terms of the agreement with the contractors. This view may be correct, but we find that it is not followed in practice by subordinate railway officers. It may be the opinion of the Chief Commissioner for Railways, but if enquiries are made at different places, it will be found that his opinion is not being carried out by the subordinate railway officials. In fact, every officer of the railway has got his own opinion, and he carries out the system in his own way, and he is guided by several considerations. When Sir Guthrie Russell was the Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula he stopped the system of selling contracts, and Mr. Tyldon Patterson, in his capacity as the Commercial Superintendent, recommended that the system of selling contracts should be abolished. Sir Guthrie Russell has come to the Railway Board, Mr. Tyldon Patterson has become the Agent and the present Commercial Superintendent, who succeeded, again introduced the very same system which Mr. Tyldon Patterson himself recommended to be abolished. Now, he has shown great weakness in accepting the recommendations of his subordinate in restoring a system which he himself recommended to abolish. As regards the Great Indian Peninsula, they have sold contracts at several stations and they have given passes to the men who hold contracts. In one case, it was discovered that a contractor had carried under this cover a large number of heavy articles for sale, because he was engaged in that trade and he carried on trade both at Delhi and Bombay. He used this privilege of passes in carrying his articles from Delhi to Bombay. This fact was published in some of the newspapers in Bombay, and I also put a few questions on the subject, but nothing came out of it ; and the system of selling contracts is vigorously being pursued in the Great Indian Peninsula. One of my correspondents writes to me about the sale of contract as follows. He says that the contract of the Moradabad railway station miscellaneous goods was given for about Rs. 1,200 a year only a few years back, and this year it was given for Rs. 3,900 to the same person. And then he says that to crown all this the railway sells its tender forms, two sheets of brown paper for Rs. 5 each and demands big amounts as earnest money which they promise to return in case of non-acceptance by the officer. Then he goes on to describe the difficulties in returning the earnest money.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

I simply demand that the opinion of the Honourable Sir Guthrie Russell and the principle already accepted by the Railway Board ought to be literally carried out in all the railways. Inquiries should be made whether the system of giving sub-contracts is prevalent at any station and the system should be ended.

My second suggestion is that railways should not make money on contracts, that is, they should not sell the contracts, an example of which I have already given. In this connection I may say that, about Dinapore, there have been a series of questions in the Assembly, that is, the small men who had the contract had to lose their contracts which went to the big capitalists for which no evident reason exists.

The next thing I should suggest is that the prices should be the same as prevail in the towns. In fact I found on inquiry that the people are willing to sell at the railway stations even at cheaper rates than prevail in the towns, because they are certain of a market, they can sell it with certainty, and, on account of this certainty, they are willing to undersell at railway stations as compared with the towns.

The next thing is that there should be some kind of a supervisory committee at each station in which non-railway men should be associated, because this question of eatables is not an expert railway question requiring expert knowledge. This is, in fact, a question in which the travelling public are more interested than the railway officials. Therefore, it is just and reasonable that in each town you should appoint a committee consisting of the Station Master as convener and two other persons to assist him, whoever they may be, officials or nominees of the local bodies. Circumstances differ and probably you will have to adopt different methods in different Provinces. But the important principle is that non-railway men ought to be associated in giving contracts, in fixing rates and in supervising the quality of the foodstuff. Then, in the same category, we come to drinks. To give a contract for drinks for all stations from Bombay to Delhi or from Calcutta to Delhi is not very good. We should always give the contracts for a particular branch of the line and on terms which may be reasonable. The unreasonable rates, that are at present provided in hot weather, debar a large number of third class passengers from getting cold water or cold drinks, because they cannot afford the high prices which they are required to pay in running trains.

Sir, there is one more suggestion which I should like to make, and it was also discussed very often that the third class passengers will be very much benefited and their comforts will be increased if we have this system of stopping these express trains at some station between 9 and 12 A.M. for about 20 minutes or half an hour. There should be bathing facilities, because we know that many Hindus would not like to have meals without a bath. Bathing facilities should be provided there and cheap food should be provided costing about four annas, and for better class passengers eight annas. If these facilities are provided, I am perfectly sure, the travelling public will very much appreciate these conveniences supplied to them.

Now, Sir, I do not like to go more into details, because there is a good deal of business, and I could not touch upon the question of refreshment rooms and the question of refreshment cars. But those questions are very analogous to the questions I have discussed, and all these matters should be inquired into and some satisfactory solution should be obtained for the benefit of the travelling public. We should also provide some machinery to ensure that whatever decisions the Government and the Railway Board may arrive at, they are carried out by the subordinate railway staff, who considered themselves masterless masters.

Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Resolution moved :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to appoint a committee consisting of Railway officials and others not connected with Railway Administrations to enquire as to how far the present system of giving contracts and sub-contracts, to outsiders and not to local persons, for catering to the Railway passengers is responsible for the supply of bad food and drinks at very high prices by the vendors either at the Railway platforms, in the refreshment rooms or in the running trains and to suggest ways and means to remove these grievances."

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, the Resolution moved by my esteemed friend, Dr. Ziauddin, is an extremely reasonable one. Agitation on the subject was really overdue. Coming as I do from Orissa, where the Bengal Nagpur Railway runs for over 600 miles, I know personally how railway passengers there suffer on account of bad food and drink and those at abnormally high prices. I am sure, Members of this House who have ever been to Puri must have suffered also. I have travelled in many railways. But as regards supply of food and drink, the Bengal Nagpur Railway is the worst. This bad food and drink in the Bengal Nagpur Railway is, to a very large measure, due to the faulty system of giving contracts. I believe, since the introduction of railways in our parts, no local man has ever been able to get a contract for the supply of food or drink from the Bengal Nagpur Railway. There is a catering superintendent for the Bengal Nagpur Railway. He is responsible for giving these food and drink contracts. Till some time back, due to a quite mysterious system of calling for tenders, if there was ever any call for tenders, two fixed persons used to get contracts for the whole system of the Bengal Nagpur Railway for fixed amounts for many years, perhaps because one man was catering superintendent for all those years. But, with the change of catering superintendent, this system has undergone some change. In place of two contractors, there are now a number of contractors, and the amount has gone up about six times. But still it is confined to those persons who keep themselves in very close touch with the catering department of the Bengal Nagpur Railway.

I submit, Sir, making money should not be the only consideration where supply of food and drink to passengers at stations is concerned, even taking it for granted for arguments' sake that contracts are given to the highest bidders in open bid. Supply of good food and drink and that at reasonable rates should be the main consideration.

Food contractors in the Bengal Nagpur Railway now, as before, being all outsiders and on account of their taking contracts at heavy amounts naturally try to make money as much as possible at the cost of passengers.

[Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra.]

Sub-contracts are sometimes given to local men at unimportant stations by these outside and absentee contractors. But they are helpless and do not count. There are, of course, inspectors of food. But they receive their pay both from the company as well as from the contractors regularly. I suppose, Sir, you have always used the restaurant car of the Madras Mail for food and drink purposes, and have got no personal knowledge of the food and drink supplied in stations in the Bengal Nagpur Railway locally. But you might have chanced to mark how absolutely uneatable they often are. If not, I would request you to try it on your way back this time.

I believe a local food and drink contractor would have been more human and amenable to reason. But nobody even sees the present contractors. They, being outsiders and rich men, place the entire management in the hands of servants instead of looking after the business themselves and enjoy the earnings. These servants also naturally in their turn try to fork out as much for themselves as possible, and the accumulated burden is borne by the poor and unfortunate passengers. The company must gain, then the contractors must gain, then the sub-contractors must gain, and then the servants who manage must gain. Besides, there are many others whose gains are not open. During festivals at Puri, large number of upcountry passengers are carried by this railway like hoards of sheep, sometimes by passenger trains, but more often by goods vans. This is the time when the inhuman treatment of these food contractors rises to a pitch. Of course, these up-country passengers are not so calculating as regards the quality of food available. Even then the contractors never feel that they are catering to human beings and these hungry long-distance passengers are exploited to the utmost. The Honourable Member for Railways and the Leader of this House, who is today one of the ablest civilians in India, built his splendid future career, both official and private, in one of our districts through which the blessed Bengal Nagpur Railway passes, and I trust he may still remember or be reminded of the conditions of food and drink supplied in the Bengal Nagpur Railway : I believe he will interest himself in the question of improvement of food and drink supplied in railway stations in general and personally take up the question of the Bengal Nagpur Railway which, I have no doubt in my mind, can be done easily if the system of giving contracts at present in vogue is thoroughly overhauled and ways are found by which local men can get these contracts. Sir, I support the Resolution.

Rai Bahadur Lala Brij Kishore (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : Sir, catering of foodstuffs and drinks to railway passengers, specially the Indian passengers, is a much neglected item of the Railway administration in India. Every railway administration has a policy of its own in the matter and every railway official his own favourites to patronise at the expense of the travelling public. The prices charged for foodstuffs and drinks are quite out of proportion to the prevailing market prices of the same, and in the bargain third class and worthless material is supplied, much to the inconvenience and detriment to the health of the travelling public. As an instance in point, soda water on the East Indian Railway system is sold at 2 annas 6 pies per bottle when the market price of the same is only one anna.

In allowing a vendor to sell foodstuffs and drinks at the platforms, refreshment rooms and passenger halls, the railway provides the vendor an exclusive monopoly of this market. The vendor is not required to meet any competition, and, therefore, can have no justification in lowering the quality of his products. Railway officials like station masters and inspectors are expected to inspect the foodstuffs exhibited for sale, but, whether this is done or not, I cannot say ; but the result is obvious.

The first step in this direction should be the appointment of an Indian officer, who knows something of the art of catering and the Indian taste, on each Railway administration, and to have under him a staff of inspectors for the purpose of examining the foodstuffs at each station, and to see whether food is available at every station. It is very difficult to get milk at way-side stations by those who cannot afford to pay in English refreshment rooms, or whose misfortune it is to live in old ways and not to go straight to refreshment rooms.

The second step will be to place vending contracts under a mixed committee of officials and non-officials.

If the local authorities are associated in supervising the prices and in giving contracts to local persons, I am certain that the situation will substantially improve.

The third step will be to open separate vegetarian and non-vegetarian refreshment rooms at all principal stations and to give the vending contracts to a local man and to one who is already in the trade, and to strictly prohibit the system of subletting which at present prevails.

The fourth step will be to provide refreshment cars on each main line and such branch lines where there is sufficient traffic for the convenience of Indian passengers, and to fix prices for each at the current market rate.

This is the barest minimum that the Railway administrations should do, and there is no question of incurring any expenditure in this matter. On the other hand, the whole thing can be made a source of income to the railways after meeting the cost of the catering department. I for one would have suggested to the railway administrations, for the purpose of attracting traffic, to have its own inexpensive hotels at each hill station, place of pilgrimage, and famous sea-side resorts, but it would be too much to expect from the administration at this stage.

If the railway administrations are anxious to run the railways on a profitable basis and meet the hard competition from motor bus, etc., it is necessary for its officials to study the convenience of the travelling public and meet it.

I, therefore, support the resolution to appoint a committee of officials and non-officials with a view to exploring the possibilities of this department and devise ways and means for putting it on a satisfactory basis. I hope, there will be no objection from the official Benches to associate non-officials with officials on such a committee, for the railways are a public concern ; and, further, this is a matter which concerns purely the convenience and well-being of the travelling public. With these words, I support the Resolution.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney (Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I rise to support the Resolution placed before this House by my friend

[Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney.]

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad. My remarks will be very few. I think Dr. Ziauddin has done a great service in giving publicity to this matter. He has pointed out that the food sold on station platforms is not only unwholesome, but is bad and costly. I agree with that opinion, and, as a medical man, I can assure this House that I have at times been staggered to see the unwholesome food for sale at station platforms. I desire to refer to the adverse criticisms that my friend, Mr. Mahapatra, made about the catering department of the Bengal Nagpur Railway. In my opinion, the Bengal Nagpur Railway is about the best administered Railway in the whole of India, I know that its catering department is administered by the Railway itself and is managed by its officials; and I do submit that since that practice has been in vogue the food has been of very good quality indeed—I would go so far as to say that you would not get a better or as good a meal in any first class hotel in the East than you would get in the dining saloons and refreshment rooms on the Bengal Nagpur Railway.

Let me refer to what Dr. Ziauddin has suggested as a remedy for these conditions—the appointment of a committee. Whilst I should vote for his Resolution in the belief that something is better than nothing, I do not see what a committee of this nature will be able to do to ensure better food being sold to passengers or to supervise the preparation of this food and its protection from contamination of flies. I think the real remedy lies in the Medical and Sanitary Departments on Railways and I should advise the Honourable Member in charge of Railways to impress on the Medical Departments of Railways that this is one of their chief duties and needs closer attention. I should like to know how many railway medical officers inspect the food sold on the smaller station platforms. I go further, and I doubt very much whether many of them inspect or examine the drinking water offered for consumption at the smaller wayside stations. Neglect of these duties is the prime cause of a great deal of disease among passengers, and I know of cases of cholera which have been traceable to bad drinking water supplied at wayside railway stations. That is perhaps rather a damning statement to make,—though I must admit it happened years ago, since when matters have considerably improved. But I do think that there is imperative necessity for a better medical and sanitary supervision of foodstuffs sold at wayside stations, particularly on stations which can be very easily controlled by local administrations,—I refer to Calcutta, Delhi and such other big stations. Sir, I do think the railway authorities should give this Resolution their very serious and very early consideration. Sir, I support this Resolution whole-heartedly.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Sir, I have been travelling very often on the East Indian Railway and the Great Indian Peninsula Railway as also on the North Western Railway. I think it can be safely said that the foodstuff sold on the East Indian Railway stations are the worst.....

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney : I quite agree.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : So far as the first class refreshment rooms in the Bengal Nagpur Railway are concerned, they are the best in my experience.....

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : What about the platform supply ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I will come to that. Next is the North Western Railway where Spencers cater.....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I have to say something about it.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : There the catering is the best, the same is the case on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway,—I forget the name of the caterers.....

Mr. P. R. Rau (Financial Commissioner, Railways) : Brandons.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : That is right. But the worst arrangement is on the East Indian Railway. The food is bad there, and the prices also are higher than the prices charged by Spencers.....

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Kellners is owned and managed by Spencers.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I ought to know more than my friend, coming as I do from Calcutta. Until recently Spencers were responsible. Up to Ghaziabad or some station, Kellners are responsible, and after that Spencers are managing the thing.

Now, Sir, as regards the foodstuffs sold at the wayside stations and at Howrah, Mr. Abul Kasem, who is a Member of the Bengal Legislative Council, and a member of the Advisory Board of the East Indian Railway, has sent me a long note on the sort of foodstuffs sold at the stations and how these things are managed by the railways. He has pointed out that the Railway authorities generally auction out the contracts and give them to the highest bidder, with the result that the man who pays the highest gets the contract, and he sells as bad and as cheap food as he possibly can at the highest price possible. That is where the trouble comes in. There should be no highest bidder system. The Railway authorities should never try to make any profit by the sale of foodstuffs to the passengers. It is their duty to give the travelling public the best food at the cheapest rates possible. They should give the vendors licence to sell their foodstuffs, and not let out the contract to the highest bidder for the sale of foodstuffs.

Sir, Mr. Abul Kasem, in a letter to the Chief Operating Superintendent, East Indian Railway, Calcutta, says this :

“Some time back, Sir Hugh Hannay, at a meeting of the Advisory Committee, made the statement that after full consideration, the Railway authorities have definitely decided not to give large area contracts to one contractor and that it would be limited to twenty or thirty miles and that no tender will be called, but the contract given to respectable and reliable vendors at reasonable rates and that there would be separate Hindu and Muhammadan vendors. This was satisfactory, and if carried out, would be of very great convenience to the travelling public, but I find that in practice the policy followed is quite contrary to the spirit of the decision arrived at by the authorities. It appears that there are certain firms and individuals who are particularly favoured. It is for the railway authorities to lay down a policy as well as to see that it is carried out in practice.”

He then draws attention to the following facts. He says :

“The contract for the sale of foodstuffs and miscellaneous articles is given ad hoc to a big area contractor who necessarily lets out the sale of particular articles to different vendors at different stations. The contract for Hindu and Muhammadan refreshment rooms at Burdwan is being given to the same man and is causing much inconvenience to the passengers. This contractor who is a Hindu has let out the Muhammadan Refreshment Room and the Teastall to a Mussalman, but he is not allowed to sell beef. A large number of Mussalman passengers want kabab roti, paratas and curries, but they cannot get these things.

Under the present arrangement the passengers have to pay higher prices for the commodity, and also generally get inferior articles. This is inevitable.

[Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi.]

The railway authorities may say that they have rates fixed and standard prices for all articles particularly foodstuffs, but it is absurd to suppose that prices can be controlled particularly when the vendors are to deal with the moving customers. I need scarcely labour the point."

Then, further on, he says this :

"Considering the fact that Messrs. G. F. Kellner & Co., pay only Rs. 12,000 a year for their refreshment rooms all over the line and the dining cars, it is not reasonable to charge a heavy rate for one refreshment room at Howrah."

Here he refers to a Hindu refreshment room at Howrah where the man had to pay Rs. 1,500 per annum for one single room, whereas Kellners are paying only Rs. 12,000 for all the refreshment rooms on the entire East Indian Railway line including their dining cars. This one Hindu refreshment room keeper at Howrah had to pay Rs. 1,500 for one room.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney : Does that Rs. 12,000 include dining cars ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, that does include dining cars as well.

Now, as I said, the refreshment room at Howrah was given to this Hindu gentleman for Rs. 1,500 per annum, and, at the end of the year, it was again put up for auction. When he went up and protested to Sir Hugh Hannay,—that is what is stated in the letter,—they were not satisfied with even Rs. 1,500 and the rooms were again put up for auction and the poor man's protest went unheeded.

Then, Mr. Abul Kasem says :

"The sale of foodstuffs and other miscellaneous articles at stations is intended for convenience of passengers and not meant to be a source of income to the railways."

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury).]

All this trouble about bad food and high price is due to the fact that the railways want to make it a source of income by giving out these stalls to the highest bidder. Regarding the Burdwan station, he says :

"Burdwan is well-known for a particular kind of sweetmeats," —my Honourable friend, Mr. Sen, will agree with me that Burdwan is noted for sweetmeats—

"and for all times the sweetmeat stall had been kept by well-known confectioners of the town, but under the present arrangement the stall is given to an outside contractor, with the result that the sweets are of inferior quality and the prices very high."

He suggests that the system of contract should be abolished and licences should be given to different vendors at fixed rates, or, in the alternative, the Hindu refreshment room, tea stall and sweetmeat plus pan should be given to one Hindu licensee at each station and the Muslim refreshment room, the Muslim tea stall and miscellaneous articles should be given to a Muhammadan licensee. He states that it is not desirable to give the licence to one particular firm or individual for several stations together. Sir, I support this Resolution.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I support this Resolution. It is noteworthy that this Resolution originally stood in the name of my Honourable friend, Seth Haji Abdula Haroon, who comes from Sind and who has much experience of the N. W. Railway. But as he has not been able to be present today, I submit that Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad has done signal service to the public by asking your permission to move this Resolution. It seems to me that the local Advisory Committees and the Central Advisory Council have not sufficient powers in this respect. No doubt the Advisory Committees make suggestions, but this is a typical instance of their inability to do anything in the matter, so that Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad has had to bring it on the floor of the House. I am very thankful to Dr. Ziauddin for collecting so much material to prove his case. I am very sorry that these materials had not been placed before ; otherwise the Chairman of that Central Advisory Committee would have had a different opinion.

This Resolution is a very simple and modest one. What is wanted is that a Committee should be appointed to enquire into the system of giving contracts or having vendors at the stations. The present system should be reviewed by that Committee. Are these complaints against vendors of the refreshment rooms false, or is there any truth in them ? These complaints are old ones, and they are also incessant ones. Therefore, it cannot possibly be said that they must be unfounded. These complaints show that the system is rotten and requires to be revised and improved. If it had been a question of giving instructions to the Railway Board that the thing should be done in such and such a way, that would have taken a very long time. Therefore, we are asking that a Committee should be appointed to go into the question. The first defect in this system is the question of the monopoly. May I enquire from the Honourable Member for Railways since when Kellners and Spencers have been in the enjoyment of this monopoly. I should think, from ages. Then, I ask, why should they enjoy the monopoly, and why should they not make way for other Indians, Anglo-Indians and Europeans ? Why should there be this pernicious system of patronising one or two men for ever ? The refreshment rooms on the North Western Railway are no exception. I am very glad to learn today that the Bengal Nagpur Railway administration has taken care about this matter. Very recently I had to travel on the Bengal Nagpur Railway, and I had the pleasure of meeting its Agent, Mr. Jerrad. It seems to me that he takes personal interest, and if he can do so, the other Agents can follow him and see that this monopoly is stopped and some measures taken for the supervision of the business. Let me deal with the North Western Railway administration. There are two questions with regard to that, one is of the vendors on the station platforms where they have got stalls, and the other is of the refreshment rooms and dining cars. It has been proved that the materials from which the food is supplied can be got from the bazar cheap, but still, as pointed out by Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, the things are sold at a very high price in the refreshment rooms. Why should it be so ? When the price of foodstuffs has gone down in these days, why should Kellners and Spencers charge the same prices, eight annas or ten annas for the morning tea and toast, and similarly in the case of other stuffs ? If the railways had departed from their former practice of giving favours to a particular man, I do not think we would have come with such complaints here. So that, this is the first thing that should be enquired into. Coming to the vendors on the platforms, what do we find ? There also is the same system, giving contract to one man, not for one station, but for 6 or 10 stations.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : For the whole line.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : It may be for the whole line perhaps on the East Indian Railway, but so far as the North Western Railway is concerned, I brought it to the notice of the House here that six stations were given to one man, because he happened to have some one in the Divisional Superintendent's Office, Karachi, as his relative. Six stations were being given from time to time to that man. If that man is favoured like that, are you sure that he will give us good food, good ghee, wholesome things? The Railway created some Inspectors and they had also their medical officers, but, may I ask, if this is one of their functions? No. On the North Western Railway, the Inspectors were created, but that cadre has now been done away with.

Now, the other day, a question was put, and my amiable friend, Mr. Rau, gave a reply that the station masters take care of their business. If only the vendors take care of the station masters and their families, then the whole thing is done. Therefore, I say that giving a monopoly to one man and favouritism shown to another are the causes of the mischief.

An Honourable Member : What is the remedy?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The remedy is suggested in the Resolution. It asks for a committee to consider this question. For a cure of this evil, the Agent himself should take a personal interest in this matter and not leave it, as he does now, to the station masters.

Then, as regards the sanitary nature of the food, my friend here (Mr. Pandya) gave me a story which I shall narrate to the House. At one time, one man came to buy a cup of tea. The vendor prepared a cup of tea and a fly went in. The man asked the vendor what is this, you are giving me a fly with the tea. The vendor said: "What, do you want an elephant in the tea for one anna!" (Laughter.) This is the kind of thing that goes on, flies fly into the tea. The thing is that there should be proper sanitary and medical supervision. The second thing is that the Agent should give more power to the Advisory Committees who should be allowed to bring these things to the notice of the Railway by means of resolutions. When they put in a resolution, the Agent comes in and says: "I am not going to accept it". I have been on local committees and now I am also on the Central Advisory Council. So I know what is done in these committees. What I submit is that the functions of the local Advisory Committees should be increased and more powers should be given to them. The third remedy is that you should have a Committee which should find out ways and means to remedy this evil. With these words, I support the Resolution.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan): There is a fourth remedy, and that is to abolish the monopoly in the vending of sweets and refreshments on the railway station. The food that is supplied to the passengers at the third class refreshment rooms is spiced by flies, sampled by black ants and seasoned by dust and cockroaches, and, for supplying this food, the Railway Company put up to auction, I believe, every year the monopoly of sale from which they derive a handsome profit, and when you ask the sweetmeat sellers as to why they charge such exorbitant prices for such low quality, their reply is "Don't you know that the Railway takes so much from us? How are we going to pay ourselves if we do not charge the price we do". Is there any relation between the prices charged at the railway station and the prices charged outside the railway fencing? I think Honourable Members who have been outside the railway fencing will bear me out that the prices outside the railway fencing are perhaps half or two-thirds of the price charged for similar goods within the railway precincts. Take, for example, the cost of meals supplied to higher class passengers. Those who have been in England will find that the ordinary charge for a dinner is either 3s. 6d. or 5s. Here, the ordinary charge for a dinner used to be before the War Rs. two. Now, after the War, it rose to Rs. three, and now it has gone up to Rs. 3-8-0, and, adding a eight anna tip, it comes to Rs. four, and this in a country where the index of prices at the present moment is lower than it was on the eve of the War—somewhere between 96 and 98, and this when the whole country is suffering from unprecedented depression and when the railway rates have been enhanced by about 30 to 40 and even 50 per cent. I must pity the unfortunate passenger who is driven to journey by train, and I do not for one moment sympathise with the Railway Companies, because their management is bureaucratic from beginning to end. The other day when I was coming to Simla, I was besieged by a large number of chauffeurs who came up and asked me "are you going to Simla?" I said "Yes", and asked them "How much will you take to take me to Simla in a motor car?" He said, he will take Rs. three for a seat and Rs. nine or Rs. ten for the whole car including the luggage, and, I believe, the railway fare from Kalka to Simla is about Rs. 21, but that is not all. The moment you land at Kalka, a man comes up to you and says "Have you weighed your luggage?" You have got your overcoat and a few pieces of luggage. They are all thrown into the weighing scale, and if there is one ounce extra, you are charged for a quarter of maund from the place of the journey to the place of the destination, as my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, reminds me. On the other hand, if you get into a competing motor car, all your luggage is tied up on the luggage carrier. The driver gives you a comfortable seat, and, instead of penetrating through 103 tunnels, you make your journey in comparative comfort by the road where there are no tunnels, and no railway servants to worry you.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member): May I put a question to the Honourable Member? Do I understand that for Rs. 3 the chauffeur takes you to Simla and also gives you a good feed? (Laughter.)

Sir Hari Singh Gour : No, he does not give you a good feed, but out of the balance from Rs. 21 you can have a very good feed on the road for half the money you have to pay at Barogh. That is the point I make.

Now, Sir, this is perhaps one of the contributory causes for the annually recurring deficits in the Railway Budget. I do not say, it is the primary cause. I do not say, it is the main cause: but the discomfort to which the railway passengers are subjected, the discomforts which they suffer from the pangs of hunger from which they have to suffer (Hear, hear) on account of the unwholesome food prepared in insanitary surroundings and sold at prohibitive prices perhaps deter many a man from taking the shorter route by railways if there is a bus handy.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Sir, the other day, the Honourable Member for Commerce brought up a Bill to do away with the road-rail competition. Let me remind the Honourable Member for Railways that the road-rail competition will be a crying menace to the development of the Indian railways, unless the management of the Indian railways is thoroughly rationalised and commercialized. It has neither been rationalized nor commercialized (Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney : "Hear, hear.") The system of management is an anachronism, and an outsider coming from America and parts of Europe is aghast when the morning cup of tea is presented to him and he is asked to pay four annas for it, which anywhere in England you will get for a tuppence.

Now, these are small discomforts which are only commensurate with the bad system of management all along the line, and the Resolution which my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, has moved today focusses the attention of the Government upon the one crying need of reform and that is the reform of the refreshment rooms, the refreshment cars, the rationalization of prices, the supply of wholesome food and that for a reasonable price. If this is achieved, I am sure, one blot upon the railway administration shall have been removed, and then it cannot be said that the railway passengers have to starve themselves whenever they get imprisoned into the train till they have reached their destination.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, notwithstanding the fact that I am not so very well (Voices : "We can't hear you")—Sir, notwithstanding the fact that I am not so very well (Voices : "Louder, please")—Sir, notwithstanding the fact that I am not so very well as to speak on this motion vehemently so as to impress this House about the reasonableness of this Resolution moved by my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, I would appeal to the Official Members to consider this. Sir, whenever they travel in a railway carriage, most often they have either their own carriages, especially the high officials, or if they are railway officials, then they have the strength of the whole Railway Department behind them and thus perhaps it will not be so easy for them to realise the difficulties of the general public who suffer so much for the bad management of the contract system. Sir, this Resolution does not in any way blame the Railway Department for its management or for its giving contracts to undeserving people, but what it presses for is this, that an inquiry should be made by non-officials, whoever they may be—it does not say that they should be Members of the Legislative Assembly, it does not say "exclude the railway officials", but it only says that an inquiry should be made, so that the public may have more conveniences on railway journeys.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, has depicted the condition of the railway passengers. The fortunate officials of the Government here may not believe it, but it is a fact that the railway passengers have really some very great troubles to endure, because they pay for their fares, they pay for the articles they purchase, they pay for the purchases they make, but still I can say from my own experience in my own constituency at Lucknow that those very articles which are sold in the Bazaar near about the railway station are really sold at double the price at the railway station itself. Now, the reason for this is not far to seek ; it is only this that those people who monopolise these contracts, those people who are given the contracts, whether by the favour of some friends or by means of bidding at the highest bid, do as they like. This Resolution does not discourage or does not say a word against the officials ; it is meant simply to remove the grievances of the passengers, whether they be first-class or second-class or third-class passengers. Sir, I would appeal to my official friends here to accept this Resolution, not as being a censure on the Government, but only as a recommendation to remove the grievances of the railway passengers. It is only in the name of the public that we are crying here and that we ask the railway officials to look into the substance of this motion. It is not in any way a censure on the Government. With these words, I heartily support the Resolution.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Sir (Applause), I trust that the House will consider this matter in an atmosphere not charged with prejudice, which I fear so often warps the consideration of railway matters. (Voices : "No, no.") I must, first of all, congratulate my Honourable friend, the Mover, on the very restrained manner in which he has set out his case and which has certainly added to the weight of its presentation. As regards my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, to use a phrase which he himself used yesterday on a recent festive occasion, "the less said, the better". (Applause and Laughter.) Where it was not irrelevant, I may say that it was very largely inaccurate. Now, Sir, as regards the reason for the prejudice to which I referred, I have tried to explain that on a previous occasion. Perhaps the House will forgive me if I repeat what I said on the occasion of the discussion of the Railway Budget last February. I said :

"I have often attempted to analyse and tried to account for the attitude, almost of hostility, towards the Railway Department which has so often been exhibited in this House and which is prepared to take for granted the guilt of the Railway Department and throw upon it the onus of proving its innocence. It seems to me that no organisation, public or private, is brought into such close, such intimate and such continuing contact with the public as the Railway Department. It is so to speak continually and ceaselessly on its trial, literally every minute of the day and every day of the year. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that occasions should arise for legitimate criticism. The only wonder is that those occasions do not arise more often. A single instance of discourtesy or rudeness on the part of an employee, a single instance of negligence or inconvenience that may be experienced will very often warp the whole outlook of the person so affected towards the Railway Department."

I have no doubt that most of us here have, at one time or another in our lives, had very just cause of complaint against the Railway Department. I myself have very often had such causes of complaint. But, Sir, I would ask that, however legitimate those personal complaints, they should not be allowed to colour our judgment on every occasion upon which we discuss a railway matter.

Now, Sir, let me turn to the Resolution itself. It assumes that bad food and drink are always supplied at exorbitant rates at every railway station. Sir, no one will have the temerity to assert that the food supply at the railway stations and platforms is always good. It may very well be that on many occasions, and, in respect of certain places, the standard of quality may very justly be challenged, but I submit that that is perhaps almost inevitable in a railway system which extends over a sub-continent. Since the matter was ventilated in the Central Advisory Committee, I took the opportunity of my own journeys to observe the quality of food vended at railway stations en route.

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

Mr. K. P. Thampan (West Coast and Nilgiris : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : Did you get cockroaches ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : No, Sir. That is one of the inaccuracies in my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour's speech to which I referred. I noticed that the food varied a good deal in quality and that no single judgment was possible which would be applicable to all cases. In a few instances, at a few large stations, the food was noticeably excellent. In a few other cases, I found that the food was undoubtedly poor in quality. But I was told that in these cases the people who had to be catered for were poor people and that the quality of the goods and their price had to bear some relation to the length of their purses. But I found in the majority of cases that the food was certainly fair in quality. Now, Sir, I hope that the result of my own observations will be largely borne out by the experience of people who have had occasion to travel frequently on railways. That, I think, is also borne out by the proceedings of the various Advisory Committees. We have examined those proceedings very carefully, and I find that they do not reflect any serious dissatisfaction with the quality of food that is being supplied. I entirely agree with my Honourable friend that the closest possible supervision should be exercised over vendors. The orders in existence provide for that. On some railways, there are regular food Inspectors. On most railways, however, the work is entrusted to the station masters, and travelling officers like the Railway Traffic Inspectors, Medical Officers and others, are enjoined to inspect and supervise the quality of the food and the wares of vendors at various railway stations. In all dining rooms and refreshment rooms, there are complaint books, and, if there are any complaints, extracts are sent at once to the District and Divisional Officers. The superior officers themselves are enjoined to examine these books and to take suitable action wherever this is possible at the earliest opportunity. I merely mention these facts to show that we go, as far as we possibly can, to try to remove causes for just complaint. I do not for a moment say that there is no cause for complaint at all. Adverting for one moment to food in railway trains, I have heard from a number of independent quarters that the food supplied, for instance, in the Indian Restaurant Car on the Grand Trunk Express is absolutely first class, well served and extraordinarily cheap. I am sure that Honourable Members, who have occasion to use that route, will bear out what is an almost universal testimony. Unfortunately, our President is not here, or I should have appealed to him to substantiate that allegation of mine. Sir, I merely mention this as an instance in order to show that it is dangerous to indulge in generalization or sweeping condemnation.

Then, let me turn for a moment to the question of price. Here, again, I do not think that the complaint of gross and extortionate over-charging can be established as a general proposition. I have no doubt that the charges at railway stations are high, but my experience is that the charges at all railway stations in every part of the world are higher than the charges in, say, the local market. The question, however, is : Are these charges reasonable and do we exercise adequate control over those charges ? Well, Sir, I have made inquiries, and I am told that these charges are generally fixed by responsible railway officers on the basis of the Bazaar prices ruling in the locality and on several railways also in consultation with the local civil authorities. These prices, I am told, are scrutinised periodically to see if any revision is called for. Local Advisory Committees on Railways have occasionally also initiated discussions when it has seemed to individual members that the rates charged were susceptible of reduction. Vendors are required to exhibit on their stalls or on their trays printed tariffs of charges. I do not know whether this is always done. This should enable the public to satisfy themselves that they are not being charged higher rates than those fixed.

Now, Sir, I come lastly to the remedy suggested in the Resolution, and I suggest that the remedy is inappropriate. The actual appointment of vendors is a matter of minor administrative detail, and I do not think that it would be appropriate to leave this matter to a Committee such as that envisaged in this Resolution. I fully realise the interest taken by the public in this matter. It is a matter which very nearly concerns all of us, and, in a matter where amenities to the travelling public are concerned, the Railway Department cannot afford to be either careless or irresponsible. I have emphasised this point more than once in speeches made in this House, and perhaps the House will forgive me if I quote just a few lines from my closing Budget speech. I said :

" I would close with one final remark in regard to the attitude of the Railway Department towards the competition which they will be called upon more and more to face from many quarters in the future. Whatever may have been their attitude in the past, my close contact with the Railway Administrations during the past eighteen months has left this much perfectly clear in my mind, namely, that the railways are alive to the fact that it is only by endeavouring to give better service, by endeavouring to give better value for money than their competitors, that they will be able to keep and to increase their clientele in the face of competition."

This, Sir, will, I am sure, convince the House that there is no difference in its point of view and ours. We are both working to the same end. It seems to me that this particular question is one which can be most suitably and most appropriately considered by Local Advisory Committees. They are in close touch with local conditions, they know what the local requirements are, and if my Honourable friend will withdraw his Resolution, I will undertake that, in so far as the railway administrations over which we have control are concerned, they will be required specifically to remit this question to Local Advisory Committees and to record their views and suggestions. When these views and suggestions have been received by the Railway Board, I will give the assurance that the Railway Board will see what steps are possible and what steps can appropriately be taken in order to secure the result we both want to secure, namely, the provision of good and wholesome food at reasonable rates for the travelling public. Sir, I must oppose the Resolution. (Applause.)

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Sir, we on this side of this House are very thankful to the Honourable the Railway Member for his promise to look into the matter. There are certain matters in which the Opposition is a greater authority than the Members on the Treasury Benches and one of them is the quality and the price of food supplied to the travelling public, because the Members of the Treasury Benches, who travel in their saloons, have no personal knowledge. The Railway Board has promised to refer the matter to the Advisory Committees all over India, and I would suggest that the Honourable the Railway Member may also be pleased to send a copy of the proceedings of today's debate to the different railways.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

In the course of the debate specific questions were raised, namely, (1) the system of giving big contracts to one man, (2) the system of sub-letting the contracts to other individuals, (3) the system of selling contracts, (4) the fixation of prices, (5) the supervisions by a body in which non-Railway men may be associated, etc., etc. The Railway Board or any Committee under the direction of the Honourable the Railway Member might examine these opinions received from Advisory Committees on these specific points. The conclusions of the Board or the Committee should be effectively carried out. If it is done, the purpose of my Resolution would have been served.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhole : I will certainly have this done.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : With this assurance, I beg leave of the House to withdraw the Resolution.

The Resolution was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE REPRESENTATION OF INDIAN CHRISTIANS IN THE SERVICES AND COMMITTEES.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza (Nominated Non-Official) : Mr. President, as the Honourable Members, Mr. Jagan Nath Aggarwal and Lala Hari Raj Swarup, in whose names Resolutions Nos. 3 and 4 stand, are absent, and as they would have authorised me to move the Resolution if they had been present, I beg to move the Resolution which stands on the Order Paper in my name and which runs as follows :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the claims of the Indian Christian Community for adequate representation in the services and for representation on any Committee to be constituted by the Government of India, by the decision of which the political future of the Community may be affected, should be recognised."

I should like to state at the very outset that I am not a communalist. (Hear, hear.) On principle, I should like no special privileges to be conferred on my community or on any community. (Hear, hear.) I stand for absolute democracy where merit and personal considerations are the only things that qualify for political privileges or opportunities of public office. But the Communal Award issued by His Majesty's Government has introduced the principle of communalism in the general polity. And the Government of India, Home Department Resolution of 6th July, 1934, regarding the representation of minorities in the Services has accentuated this principle. The Communal Award gave us insufficient weightage in the Legislatures and in the public life of the country. The Home Department Resolution virtually ignores our claim to a share in the public services.

The result is that while on the one hand we are being gradually elbowed out from our position in the public services by the more powerful communities, on the other the Government of India and the Home Government act as if we are not entitled to claim a share in the public life of the country. In the composition of the several Royal Commissions, Conferences and Committees appointed to work out the details of the Reformed Constitution, no member of our community has found a place and though these Committees shape our destinies, we have no voice in their deliberations.

And yet we form the third largest community in India, numbering according to the last census 6,297,000 souls. Our numbers are increasing by leaps and bounds, having risen by 32.5 per cent. during the last decennial period and by 238.1 per cent. during the last half century. Apart from natural increase which may be expressed at 12 per cent. for the decennial period, more than 20 per cent. out of the total increase is due to conversion from depressed classes and still more so from the hill and forest tribes. In the circumstances the following figures of the standard of comparative literacy among the several communities taken from the last Census Report are an amazing indication of the educational and moral uplift which Christianity has brought to the masses who have come under its influence.

Literacy per mille.
Hindus.		Muslims.		Christians.
Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.
144	21	107	15	352	203
Literacy in English per 10,000.
Hindus.		Muslims.		Christians.
Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.	Male.	Female.
204	16	164	11	1,174	649

The political significance of this educational advance is obvious.

I have, on more than one occasion, drawn the attention of the Government in this House to the feeling of alarm created amongst the Indian Christian Community by recent pronouncements made by the Nationalist Leaders affecting our fundamental rights—religious and civil. The warning held out by Mr. Gandhi, in March, 1931, to our missionaries, denying their rights to proselytise—a right which he concedes to Muslims—sent up a storm of angry protest throughout the country, as being a threat to our liberty to practise and preach our religion. The Bill introduced by Mr. Kelkar, a prominent nationalist, in the Legislative Assembly in 1928 for the repeal of Act XXVI of 1850 which we regard as our Magna Charta, as it secures us against forfeiture of civil rights by conversion, was an ominous indication of what might be in store for us if a Swaraj Government were installed in office. Certain orders recently passed by the Government of Madras discriminate in an invidious manner against our religious and charitable foundations in the matter of acquiring Government land holding that they are alien institutions, under the absurd notion that they vest in a foreign Ruler, the Head of our Church.

L223LAD

[Dr. F. X. DeSouza.]

There is also serious resentment in the Madras Presidency against the refusal by the Minister of Education to grant recognition and adequate grants-in-aid to our denominational schools which our children are bound in conscience to attend.

These, Sir, are fundamental rights which we think should be inserted in the Constitution, so as to make it possible to challenge the validity of any future legislation in contravention of these rights in the Supreme Court or the Federal Court. The feeling was universal in the community to which I gave expression in my speech in the Assembly, on 30th March, last year, that we should be given an opportunity to urge before the Joint Select Committee our point of view on these vital questions. But while microscopic minorities were allowed the privilege of a seat on the Select Committee and insignificant interests were invited to state their case as witnesses before that Committee, we, the third largest community in India, with our fundamental rights seriously threatened, were not considered of sufficient importance even to be invited to give evidence. As a measure of despair, I, as President of the All-India Catholic League, submitted to the Joint Parliamentary Committee a written statement of our case which I trust will receive due consideration.

Nor has a single Indian Christian found his way to any of the numerous Commissions and Committees appointed to prepare the ground for the New Constitution and work out its details. From the third and decisive sitting of the Round Table Conference we were excluded. We were not only not represented on the Joint Select Committee of Parliament, but the Committee did not even care to hear us, so that there is great danger of our case going by default. The Franchise Committee, which was meant to be a representative Committee, and whose deliberation will vitally affect our future, could not find place for even one member of our community. It is not too much to say that the Indian Christian Community feel humiliated at the continuous slight offered to them by the Government of India as if they were untouchables in the public life of the country.

I had occasion to address an interpellation on the subject, in this Honourable House, and I was informed that it was either the Home Government or the Joint Select Committee who were responsible for the omission. I trust that the Government of India will not wash their hands of all responsibility in the matter on the present occasion or suggest that they did not tender any advice to the Home Government on the subject.

I cannot help thinking that this callous indifference of the Government of India to the claims of our community has its origin in history. The East India Company, the predecessor in title of the Government of India, was incorporated for trade, not for empire. From the very beginning they showed a nervous dread of any appearance of friendship towards Christianity for fear of offending Indian susceptibilities and endangering the sale of their broad-cloth and hardware. It was not till 1813, that the embargo on Christian educationalist and missionary enterprise was lifted. And though the Government became more and more Christian in its activities after that date, due to evangelical influence in England, it became more and more anti-Christian in its treatment of Indian Christians. It has been pointed out by Mr. Arthur Mayhew, formerly a Director of Public Instruction in the Central Provinces, in a recent volume on Christianity and the Government of India, at page 137, that the Charter of 1833 which enunciated the principle of equality of all races and castes and creeds in recruiting for public offices was subject to one important exception, viz., in the case of converts to Christianity. They soon came to understand that so far as Government office was concerned no Christian need apply and that the profession of the same religion as their Rulers far from being regarded as a qualification for office actually disqualified them and served as an excuse for violating the spirit of the equality clause in the Charter. Again, the same authority points out at page 158 that, while every other form of religion was tolerated in the Army, the case in 1819 of Prabhudin Naik, a Sepoy of a Brahmin regiment of the Bengal Army, who was converted and baptised by a Company Chaplain and was dismissed from the Army in consequence, showed that the Government was not prepared to tolerate Christianity in the Army. From that date, the Army, as a profession, has been closed to converts to Christianity, even though they belong to the martial races.

The transfer of the Sovereignty to the Crown has not materially altered the status of the community though it has done away with the discrimination against us practised in the days of the East India Company. We do not now complain of ill-treatment or of oppression; only we have become minor pawns in the rivalries of communities and the Government have abandoned us to the exigencies of higher politics. The East India Company was a stepmother to our community but there is no one to act as godfather in the present Government of India. It is unnecessary to go beyond the White Paper to furnish an illustration. In the matter of seats, in order to placate more powerful interests, no weightage whatever has been given to the Indian Christians in the Punjab, a wholly inadequate weightage in Madras, where in spite of our numbers, we are placed in a position of absolute inferiority vis-a-vis the Muhammadans and no representation whatever in the Central Provinces and in separated Sind. While providing that important minorities should be represented in the Provincial and Federal Cabinet, there is no provision that the Indian Christian Community should be declared an important minority community in Madras where it is one of the most advanced communities, nor is there any provision that it should ever be represented in the Federal Cabinet.

There are several Committees to be appointed shortly to work out the details of the Reformed Constitution. Among those is the Committee for the Delimitation of Constituencies in each Province. The Indian Christian Community is vitally interested to see that there shall be no gerrymandering of constituencies. And I would respectfully ask that the Government of India nominate at least one member of our community from each Province on these Committees.

I have not said much about the representation of Indian Christians in the Public Services. Thanks to our advance in education and training, till recently we occupied a position of advantage in the matter of subordinate appointments in the public service, participation in educational work and public utility services. But the Home Department Resolution has rung the death-knell of our hopes for the future. The Indian Christian Community is the only all-India minority community whose prospects have been sacrificed by that Resolution to placate other minorities. The Sikhs are virtually confined to the Punjab and are strong enough to look after themselves. The net result of that Resolution, so far as we are concerned, is that while, since 1925, we had a fair field with other minorities to compete for 33 1/3 per cent. of the vacancies, under the new scheme we have to compete with Sikhs, Parsis, Jains, Anglo-Indians and others for 8 1/3 of the All-India appointments, and with Sikhs, Parsis and Jains for 6 per cent. of the local appointments. We do not grudge the Muhammadans the 25 per cent. of all appointments, Imperial and Provincial, which they have secured for all time, nor the Anglo-Indians 8 1/3 of the local appointments which they have been guaranteed—a weightage of 1,000 per cent. on their numerical strength. All honour to the doughty champions of these two communities, Sir Muhammad Yakub and Sir Henry Gidney. But in the name of justice and fair play we ask that the same consideration that apply to them should be held to apply to us also.

[Dr. F. X. DeSouza.]

We have neither zamindars nor moneyed classes among us, and like the Anglo-Indians we depend to a large extent on employment in Government service for our economic life, and rapid displacement may lead to a serious dislocation of the economic structure of our community. Besides, in a competition with other minorities more powerful than ourselves, even for the very limited percentage of vacancies now reserved, the dice will be heavily loaded against us as we shall have no friends at Court who can influence the distribution of patronage. The proviso, that when qualified candidates from the minor communities will not be available for nomination to make up their quota, the residue will be available for Muslims, is specially obnoxious because members of the latter community will thereby be placed in the position of stakeholders and judges.

Only the other day I heard of a member of one of the smaller minority communities, which shall be nameless, appointed to a high office who immediately proceeded to fill his office with members of his own community rejecting all Indian Christian candidates on the ground that his own community was not well represented in his office and there was no separate quota fixed for the smaller minority communities inter se.

Another glaring instance of injustice which is likely to occur under the resolution : an Indian Christian holding a temporary appointment in the clerical branch of the Calcutta Customs Preventive Office and who would have, in usual course, got one of the posts to be filled up immediately was, as soon as the Resolution was published, thrown out on the ground that paragraph 8(1) of the Resolution lays down that 8 1/3 per cent. are reserved for all minority communities including Anglo-Indians and the latter must be given the preference in the Customs Service according to paragraph 8(4) of the Resolution. This is an extension of the principle of reservation to cadres of subordinate services which the Resolution does not contemplate.

May I respectfully request that a fixed percentage of vacancies with a reasonable weightage in our favour, be reserved to us also as in the case of Muslims and Anglo-Indians and that in the annual returns of recruitment called for in paragraph 5 of the Resolution, a column be added for Indian Christians also so that we may not be entirely lost sight of ! Otherwise, our last state will be worse than the first and we fear that, under the Swaraj Government as under the East India Company, no Christian need apply.

I can assure the House that it goes much against the grain for me to urge our communal claims for appointments in the public service. But to sit with folded hands in the name of nationalism, while the ground is being cut from under our feet by more militant minorities, may be magnificent but it is not practical politics.

The apathy of the Government of India to our claims is regarded by some members of our community as a blessing in disguise. Educated youths of the community have realised their true position in the general polity during the past decade and, as pointed out by the Census Commissioner, their attitude has tended to change from that of a separatist minority towards co-operation with moderate nationalists—a change expressed by the formation in Bombay of the Christian Nationalist party. On the other hand, the Extreme Nationalists are gradually realising that Christianity is not an exotic plant from the West, inconsistent with a nationalist outlook, but having been established in Southern India as long ago as Christianity in most parts of Europe, and earlier than Islam or the religion of Zoroaster, has as much right to be regarded as an indigenous religion today as the religion of the Muslims and Parsis. A striking proof of this change of mentality is furnished by the election by the Madras Legislative Council of two successive Presidents from among the ranks of Indian Christians and by the selection by Provincial Governments throughout India of Indian Christian Magistrates to adjudicate in communal disputes.

Sir, it is in no spirit of self-aggrandisement, but in the spirit of service, that we ask for opportunities to serve the Motherland. With the gradual elimination of the Christian element in the personnel of the Government of the country, the duty will devolve on the small Indian Christian Community to maintain Christian standards and Christian principles in public policy. Our Master came to be the servant of mankind. He came "not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many". In the New India it is the Motherland which will have the first claim on our ministry. In the public services of the country, in the Legislative Assembly, in schools and colleges, in the work of industrial education and village uplift, in medicine and surgery and maternity work, in sanitation and hygiene, in art and literature, in trade and commerce, in science and engineering, in agriculture and public works, we desire to have unlimited scope for the service of our country. Belonging to no caste or sect, able to hold the scales even between Hindu and Muslim, we feel that in the India of the future we shall have the role of peacemakers to fill. That is why we chafe at the prospect of being cribbed, cabined and confined within the narrow limits of our numerical quota in spite of our great educational advance. Many indeed there are who believe that the great spiritual revival for which Christians in the West are waiting may take place in India and that Indian thinkers and sages will recall the forgotten meanings and values of the Christian faith. And Narayan Vaman Tilak, the Christian poet of Maharashtra, in a spirit of prophecy exclaims :

"Yee, at the end of pregnant strife
Enshrined as 'guru' of the Earth,
This land of Hind shall teach the worth
Of Christian faith and Christian life."

Two great communities have emerged from the impact of European influence in India,—the Anglo-Indian Community and the Indian Christian Community. The former will be launched by the Government of India to try its fortunes under the New Constitution fortified by every privilege with safeguards as regards education, employment in the public service and their economic future. Truly blood is thicker than water, especially when the water is the water of baptism. But the latter has been left to its own resources to wage an unequal fight and goes forth branded with the mark of inferiority. We ask for no special privileges, for privilege creates odium. All that we ask for is that the Government of India before surrendering the reins of power to the Swaraj Government shall give adequate recognition of our status as numerically the third largest community in India, in literacy superior to all other communities, in education and culture second to none, in the political and public life of the country. With this brand of inferiority removed and our fundamental rights safeguarded in the Constitution, we trust to our own strength to work out our salvation in the future Government of the country in the Provinces as well as in the centre.

[Dr. F. X. DeSouza.]

Quite recently, the Government of Madras have made the announcement that a member of our community has been appointed by the King Emperor as a Member of the Government of Madras. On behalf of the Indian Christian Community, I tender my sincerest thanks to the Government. It is the result of constitutional agitation, long and patiently pursued. The appointment will undoubtedly enhance the political status of the community throughout the country.

Public opinion in Madras is expressed by a leader of the community in one of his letters to me, in the following words :

"The Government by one stroke of the pen have atoned for all their past sins of commission and omission, in respect of Christians, by appointing an Indian Christian as Home Member.... Christians are naturally jubilant because the Government have, at long last, recognised the claims of the Indian Christians to a share in the Government of their own country."

But one swallow does not make a summer. It is to be hoped that the appointment indicates the orientation of a new policy towards the community in the India of the future and that, side by side with the doors thrown open to leaders leading to Councils and Governments, the rank and file will also not find the door barred against their entry in the public services, so that the economic life of the community may be maintained intact. We merely ask that the pledge given by His Majesty's Secretary of State, in addressing the Anglo-Indian Association the other day, be redeemed in our case also. "We are insisting" he said, "on these safeguards with the object of introducing stability and ensuring that no community is aggrieved at the start of constitutional changes". We ask for nothing more.

With these words, I move the Resolution that stands in my name.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Resolution moved :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the claims of the Indian Christian Community for adequate representation in the services and for representation on any Committee to be constituted by the Government of India, by the decision of which the political future of the Community may be affected, should be recognised."

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, there appears to be no escape for us on this side of the House from these communal claims. Two years ago, Mr. Bhagwandas, addressing a huge Hindu gathering, gave some advice to the Hindu community. He said that it had no future before it, and that it must make up its mind whether they should become Muslims or they should become Indian Christians....

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : Then become Indian Christians.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : And Mr. Bhagwandas said that there would be an obvious advantage if the Hindu community were to become Indian Christians, and I realised the truth of that statement when I read these papers placed before me. Before I give Honourable Members the percentage of Indian Christians in the public services of this country from the statistics before me, I must at the outset tell my friend, Dr. DeSouza, that we have no objection to his community getting a legitimate share in these services ; let it get as many posts as possible, but, for God's sake, let it not be said that they, the Christian community, have not got enough.

Dr. F. X. DeSouza : Have you got enough ?

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : If Mr. President will allow me, I shall be pleased to read to the House the figures to show who has got enough.

An Honourable Member : We cannot hear you. Please speak up.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Before I take the statement showing the communal strength of the community in the Departments of the Government of India, let me deal with their position in the Provinces. The Indian Christian community, including those in the Indian States and in the Provinces, form about six and odd millions, of whom it is admitted that a great number are in the Presidency of Madras. Now, Sir, as you know, Madras has tried to solve this communal problem in a peculiar way. It has introduced what is called the communal rotatory system by which the various communities in the Provinces are given their due share on a population basis, and even more in case of minorities. According to that rotatory system, all recruitment is made to the public services on communal rotation. They followed the principle that, consistent with considerations of efficiency and necessary qualifications, a due share should be given to all communities. In that way they prescribed minimum qualifications and other tests by which the communities should be qualified to enter the services in the proportions to which they are considered to be legitimately admissible. But, in regard to promotions, different considerations prevail, because promotions do require some merit also ; and, therefore, the Government have reserved a certain proportion of appointments to be given on merit, and a certain proportion has been reserved for racial and communal considerations. Therefore, it cannot be said that the claims of this or any community is overlooked, at any rate, in Madras, where this community is found in very large numbers.

Leaving, therefore, the question of Provinces aside, I will now take up the question of the services of the Government of India. In the Government of India, we find that in the Army, the percentage of Indian Christians is 1.2 ; Commerce 1.09 ; Education, Health and Lands 1.12 ; Finance 2.44 ; Foreign and Political 2 ; Home Department 2.94 ; Imperial Research Council,—they have not given the figures ; Industries and Labour 5.18 ; Legislative 1.18 ; Legislative Assembly Department 1.96 ; Military Finance 1.1 and Railway Department 2.17 ; A. D. O. S. 2.17 ; A. G.'s Branch 3.1 ; Director of Contracts 7 ; Engineering Branch 7.4 ;

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

Master General of Ordnance 8 ; Q. M. G.'s Branch 1 ; Royal Air Force 2.08 ; Director General of Archaeology and D. G. I. M. S. 3 ; A. G. C. R. and Auditor General's Office 4, and so on and so forth. Under Commerce Department, there is the office of the Superintendent, I. M. M. T. S. "Dufferin", and there you have 66.67 Indian Christians, Shipping Office 37.0.....

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : You have omitted the Executive Council here which has a Member of that community as the Leader of the House.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : I am coming to my friend, the Leader of the House, which would give 16 per cent. in the Government of India, and also to the Member of the Executive Council of Madras which would give 33 per cent in the Government of Madras. It must be remembered that the Indian Christian community ought to be grateful to the Government, because, for the first time, this seat in Madras which had hitherto been given to members of the Muslim community, has been given to a member of the Indian Christian community, and today, Rao Bahadur Pannirselvam is the Executive Councillor in Madras. And, Sir, with a population, so small as the Indian Christians, if they have got such a high percentage, I do not understand why my friend, the Mover of this Resolution, still complains by stating that he wants a special consideration for his community. If the special consideration for his community is to be based merely on the question of religion, then I don't see any reason why he should leave my friend, Sir Henry Gidney, aside, and also my friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, because, from the point of view of religion, they all belong to one religion, and, therefore, form one group. If it is from the point of view of race, Sir, then my friend's place is not there in isolation, but with us. If it is from the point of view of backwardness, that is no reason why that claim should be made, a claim allowed to the Depressed Classes, because, even according to his own showing, they are in every way far more advanced than the other communities. Therefore, I ask, what right have the Indian Christians got to claim special consideration for,—not that I grudge them their due share, but let them not say that they have not got enough. They cannot claim consideration partly on religious or racial basis and partly on importance. That is another important absurdity in this matter. Recently, an instance occurred in Madras, and I should like to mention that particularly for the information of the House. You remember, the goldsmiths class in Madras have been claiming that they are Brahmins. They applied to the Government that they should be registered as Brahmins. The Government said that if they were so particular to be classed as Brahmins, they for their part had no objection, and so these goldsmiths class were classed as Brahmins. Subsequently, a member of that community applied to the Collector of the District for a certain post. The Collector informed him that the Brahmin quota having been exhausted under the rotatory system, the candidate would have to wait till the turn of the Brahmin came again in its usual course. Then, this candidate said : "No, Sir, we are non-Brahmins ; you must give us our share from the non-Brahmin community". Then the Collector told him : "Well, my dear man, you are registered as a Brahmin, and therefore, you can go only under the Brahmin category". "No, Sir", said the candidate, "for the purposes of services we are non-Brahmins, but for social superiority we are Brahmins". (Laughter.) Therefore, Sir, in order to avoid this sort of absurdity, I suggest that Honourable Members should take a broad view. There should be a just and proper appreciation of the inherent rights the others have and the difficulties the various communities are labouring under these exorbitant claims. Sir, as a Hindu, I am always a patient man. I always believe that this narrow communal consciousness is a calamity which we have to put up with. Here is my friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad. There is no greater friend than he to me, but his views about these matters are different from mine. What we do, is, we try and find as much as possible a common agreement among ourselves. If we are bent on finding only differences, there are plenty of differences ; but the highest thing that legislators can do is to try and find a common agreement among ourselves and see that, by our co-operation and our sympathy, we understand each other's difficulties and try to achieve greater unity.

Bhai Parma Nand (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : So far as the claim of the Indian Christian community in the public services is concerned, as the principle has already been settled by the Government of India by giving a certain proportion to one minority or another, I cannot object to the claim that is put forth by Dr. DeSouza. But I strongly object to the very principle of dividing the public services among different communities. The claim is that, being a minority, the Indian Christian community also should have a certain share reserved for them. I object to this on the following grounds.

In the first place, we should look at the question of the minorities' rights as have been settled by the League of Nations' Minorities' Sub-Committee. There the rights and privileges of the minorities in the populations of Europe were discussed and certain principles have been laid down with regard to them. Firstly, it has been settled that a minority cannot be counted a minority for political purposes unless it is above 25 per cent. The next point was as regards their rights. So far as the rights are concerned, they are divided into three categories ; one is the safety and freedom of their religion ; secondly, the education of their children should be arranged for by the State, and, thirdly, their culture, i.e., history and traditions, should be preserved. These are the three main rights which have been conceded to the minorities in the European countries by the League of Nations. When we were discussing about the question as to how long India has been a member of the League, and what were the contributions that were made by the Indian Government to the League of Nations, I was thinking at that time whether we were bound to follow the decisions of the League of Nations on all matters or not. India is an original member, and, being an original member of the League of Nations, if we were to claim certain rights in its management, it was also the duty of the Government of India to follow the principles laid down by the League of Nations in its Minorities Sub-Committee on these questions.

My next point is to show what is meant by public service. Public service, as it is understood in America, England and other European countries, means that the man, who is more fit for serving the public, should be selected for that service. It is very strange that here we want that the public service also should be regulated according to the religious beliefs held by different sections amongst us. This naturally brings in another form of communalism, and religion comes in to play a part in the Government by the apportionment of public service to different religious communities. Not only that, but distinctions of occupations and professions also come in. In the South, we have got divisions, for instance, of Brahmins and Non-Brahmins. They would claim separate distribution of public service for them. In the Northern India, similarly in the Punjab, there is being created a division between the profession of zamindars and non-agriculturists. They are in possession of land and, forming the main population, they should be given special favourable privileges in the public service. I do not understand how this public service is being interpreted by different communities and different classes in India in the sense of demanding certain privileges and certain rights.

[Bhai Parma Nand.]

Again, this kind of reservation, will destroy the principle of efficiency altogether. I have had opportunity to explain this to the House many a time before. If you give preference to a person simply because he follows a certain creed, or his parents follow a certain profession,—be he fit or not,—it becomes communalism of the worst type, and the country that has got such a principle in its administration can never grow or develop self-government in it. This will deprive the best people who are really fit for and willing to devote their energy and ability to the service of their country.

Going to the root of evil, I think, as the current systems of Government give very big salaries to certain persons and to certain services, it is a great temptation for us all and that is why every community is trying to stress the principle of communal rights in this country. As against that, the principle of social equality or socialism would be far more preferable. In order to select persons for public service, their salaries and remunerations should be equalised in such a way, that they could not get more than they could make otherwise. I may be excused if I give an illustration from what I saw in the United States of America. I was in America, and, on one occasion, I had to act as an interpreter in a case of some Indians before a Court. What I found there was that the Judge was getting 500 dollars a month, the clerk was getting 450 dollars a month, and the orderly was getting 400 dollars a month. There was not much difference between the peon, the clerk and the Judge, and the result was that there was not much temptation for running after Government service. I, therefore, say that it is the hope and desire of big salaries which is responsible for this communalism.

In our case, however, I would put the blame on the shoulders of the British Government who, by giving the Communal Award in our Constitution, and, along with this Communal Award, by bringing in communalism in all kinds of services, have practically made this communalism so deep-rooted in this country that I think it would not be possible for any human agency in the future to uproot this evil, which is going to be a sure check to the growth of nationalism in this country. We talk so much of self-determination and Swaraj, but I consider, before we begin to think of Swaraj, of having self-government in this country, we should do away with or prepare the minds of the people to get rid of this curse of communalism in every department. Dr. DeSouza has told us that the Christians are so highly advanced in education that they can compete with anybody. I would not mind at all if by competition all posts go to Christians in any service; in that case, there would be no possible objection to it. But if a man is selected simply because he is a Christian, it brings in an element of interference with freedom of religion. I know personally of some cases in which some qualified engineers and doctors have been told that they would be eligible to get the jobs if they changed their names and their religion, but not otherwise. They were highly qualified persons and this is what they were told. This idea of manning the services by men belonging to particular religions and professions is the worst form of communalism, and it does interfere with religion and it becomes and would gradually become an ugly unfair means of conversion.

Now, coming to the main point, the recent decision of the Government of India is that 25 per cent. of the posts should be given to Mussalmans. If the Government give 25 per cent. to the Mussalmans on a population basis, well and good. If the Muslim leaders and the Muslim community want it, let them have their share but there should be one uniform principle. Let it be that all posts are to be distributed on a population basis, though it is opposed to all principles of nationalism and national progress of the country. If, at all, this principle is conceded, let it be on a population basis. Let us take the railway service. Taking Mr. Hasan's report as our basis, I am prepared to show that 25 per cent. of the Mussalmans are already there in the railway service, but injustice comes in when it is added that, besides this reservation, they can compete with others and get more jobs. This is a wrong principle. There is 8-1/3 given to Anglo-Indians.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Division: Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order. Is the Resolution of the Government of India just issued about service under consideration now?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair was going to allow two minutes more to the Honourable Member to finish his speech, and, therefore, it did not draw the attention of the Honourable Member to it itself. The whole problem of communal representation is not for discussion before the House. It is purely a question of the demand of the Christians for an adequate share in the representation in the public services. The communal G. O. and all that may be just referred for purposes of analogy and comparison, but the Honourable Member should not dilate on it at great length.

Bhai Parma Nand : I would submit, Sir, that I am opposed to this demand of the Christian community on principle, because it is communal. But as the principle is accepted by the Government, I don't mind if the Christians also have as much as they can. I must oppose the principle. Supposing we gave 25 per cent. to Mussalmans, 8-1/3 to Anglo-Indians and eight or ten per cent. to Indian Christians, and five or ten per cent. to Sikhs, then would come the zamindars and depressed classes; in short, the minorities of India would monopolise all the services and they would deprive the main community of India, i.e., the Hindus, of all share in the services. This is quite a wrong way of proceeding with the administration of the country, and, therefore, I oppose this demand on principle.

STATEMENT OF BUSINESS.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré (Leader of the House) : On Monday next, Sir, we propose to proceed with the unfinished business standing on the combined list for the three opening days of this week other than the remaining stages of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Supplementary (Extending) Bill and the Assam Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Bill. On Tuesday, I shall move for reference to Select Committee of the Indian Iron and Steel Duties Bill which I introduced yesterday and the debate on that motion, if not finished on Tuesday, will be continued on Wednesday, whereafter, if time permits, the remaining stages of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Supplementary (Extending) Bill may be taken as well as any unfinished items of the business for Monday.

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 30th July, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 30th July, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN :

Mr. W. J. C. Richards, M.L.A. (Burma : European).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

MILITARY FORCES SENT TO THE BURMESE FRONTIER.

243. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Have Government sent military as to the Burmese Frontier ? If so, why ?

(b) What is the number of the forces which have recently been sent India to Burma ?

(c) In case Burma is separated from India, will the cost of the troops be debited to the accounts of Burma ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) At the request of His Excellency the Governor of Burma one section of a Mountain Battery was sent to the Burma Frontier to support the Burma Military Police. The reasons were explained in the statement supplied to the Press on the 27th June, 1934, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

(b) None.

(c) I am afraid I am unable to answer such a hypothetical question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member whether there is already any military force on the borders of the Province ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The armed forces on the actual frontier in this particular part of the Sino-Burmese frontier are the Burma Military Police and the one section of a Mountain Battery to which I have already referred in my reply.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know what necessity has actually arisen on the border, so that a force should have been sent additionally.

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : No additional force has been sent to Burma.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The Honourable Member gave us the reply that the military forces of Government had not been sent, as in clause (a) of his answer. I did not quite follow the Honourable Member ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The reply to clause (a) of the question was that there had been sent to the frontier one section of a Mountain Battery. The reply to clause (b) was that no additional force had been sent from India to Burma.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Has this not been necessitated by the entry of the Chinese into that Province ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Undoubtedly the steps taken were necessary.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Why was it not necessary, if the Chinese have actually entered our country ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : That question cannot be asked.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is the separation of Burma from India of the same hypothetical nature as the question of the separation of Oudh from the United Provinces ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I think that, so far as these particular operations are concerned, the question is a hypothetical one.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I would ask, Sir, that the questions relating to the Home Department be taken up next Wednesday ; I regret to say that the Home Member has not yet reached Simla.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Questions relating to the Home Department will be taken up on Wednesday.

†244*.

†245*.

INCLUSION OF A TABLE OF EXPORT TRADE IN THE REPORT ON THE WORKING OF THE OTTAWA AGREEMENT.

246. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the report on the working of the Ottawa Agreement will include a table of our export trade in principal commodities to—

- (i) the United Kingdom,
- (ii) the countries other than the United Kingdom included in the British Empire,
- (iii) the countries outside the British Empire ; and
- (iv) detailed figures to show that the increase of our export trade to the United Kingdom (if any), is real increase or only a diversion from non-Empire countries to Empire countries ?

(b) If the reply to part. (a) be in the negative, are Government prepared to take steps to see that the information regarding items Nos. (i) to (iv) of part (a) is included in the report ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Government are of opinion that the Report contains all the information necessary to judge of the results of the working of the Ottawa Agreement.

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know whether the Report will give explicit figures as regards item No. 3 and item No. 4 ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I would ask my Honourable friend to wait until he sees the Report.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : May I know when the Committee of the House appointed to consider this question will meet and review the Report ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Sir, it is not a question of its being a report of the Government : it is a report compiled for the Committee itself, and it will be placed before the Committee, which I hope will meet some time next week.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : May I know if this House will have an opportunity to consider the report of its own Committee after that Committee has considered all the materials placed before it ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : The report certainly must be made to the House.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : To this House ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Undoubtedly.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : In view of the fact that this will be the last Session of this Assembly, the Chair thinks it would be desirable that Government should make available the Report of the Committee to this House before the Session is adjourned.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : That certainly will be our endeavour.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : When the Committee was appointed, the Members of this House, I think, understood that this Committee would meet before the Sessions of the Assembly, so that the Report might be in our hands in the earlier stages, and we might have the opportunity of discussing it.

†247*.

ADMISSION OF MEDICAL GROUP STUDENTS OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY IN MEDICAL COLLEGES IN INDIA.

248. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the F. Sc. Medical Group students of the Delhi University are not given admission to any Medical Colleges in India, except two from Delhi to the King Edward Medical College, Lahore ? If the admission is not open for the Delhi students, do Government propose to take any steps to ensure the admission of the Delhi F.Sc. Medical Group students to other colleges in India ?

(b) If admission to the Medical Colleges in India is not made open to the Delhi students what is the utility of retaining the Medical Group of the Delhi University ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Selection Board held at Delhi for interviewing these students have not interviewed all students but only a few ?

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.

L236LAD

(d) Will Government please state reasons why the students, who have passed F.Sc. (Medical Group) examination of the Delhi University, are not permitted to appear at the "Test examination" for the admission to the Medical College, Lucknow?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) to (d). Information is being collected and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

REBELLION IN CHINESE TURKISTAN.

249. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government kindly make a statement on the situation, arising out of the rebellion in Chinese Turkistan, in course of which many British Indian subjects were killed and injured, and their properties looted?

(b) How many Indians are there in that territory, how many of them were killed and wounded, and approximately how much property has been looted up to date?

(c) What is the present position there, and what steps have Government taken for the protection of the British Indian subjects, and for the compensation of those who have suffered?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : (a) and (b). The Honourable Member is referred to the answer, given by Major Fraser-Tytler, to his starred question No. 23, during the last year's Simla Session. There are about 450 British Indians in Chinese Turkistan. Government have since received a complete list of the losses sustained by British subjects in lives and property in Chinese Turkistan during the disturbances, showing 12 British subjects killed, four wounded and two missing. The approximate value of property claimed to have been lost is Rs. 2,67,000. Most of these casualties and losses occurred during the beginning of the rebellion.

(c) The present position is still obscure, but the latest information indicates that there is a possibility of the Chinese Government regaining control. His Majesty's Government have made strong representations in the proper quarter, and the question of claiming compensation is under consideration.

CONVICTION OF KHAN ABDUL SAMAD KHAN OF BALUCHISTAN.

250. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Will Government be pleased to state whether :

(a) it is a fact that Khan Abdul Samad Khan of Baluchistan was tried and sentenced to three years' rigorous imprisonment under section 124, Indian Penal Code, and ordered to furnish security for Rs. 3,000 in connection with speeches delivered by him at Hyderabad, Sind; and

(b) it is a fact :

(i) that the first Jirga pronounced him innocent, but the Political Agent, Quetta, pressed for his punishment;

(ii) that all the facilities, which are usually afforded in jail to Indian political prisoners in the ordinary course, were taken away from Khan Abdul Samad Khan with the result that he has been undergoing rigorous imprisonment unlike political prisoners.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions Nos. 250 and 253 together. Information is being obtained from the Local Administration and will be given to the House as soon as it is received.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it permissible for the Chief Commissioner of Baluchistan to punish a person for speeches delivered in Sind? Should it come under the cognizance of the Chief Commissioner of Baluchistan?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think the Chief Commissioner acted within his own competence.

WATCH ON THE ACTIVITIES OF YOUNG MEN IN BALUCHISTAN WHO READ NEWSPAPERS.

251. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Is it a fact that the Baluchistan authorities watch the activities of young men in Baluchistan who read newspapers, and are Government aware that this indirectly prevents reading of national papers there?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions Nos. 251 and 252 together. Information is being obtained from the Local Administration and will be given to the House as soon as it is received.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will this information be laid on the table of this House during the life of this Assembly?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think every endeavour will be made to lay it on the table of the House during the life of the present Assembly.

PERMISSION TO CERTAIN GENTLEMEN TO ISSUE NEWSPAPERS FROM BALUCHISTAN.

†252. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Will Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to grant permission to Messrs. Abdul Kudus Khan Achakzai and Pir Baksh Baloch to issue newspapers from Quetta, if they could satisfy Government that the policy and the tone of their papers will be mild and pro-Government?

TRIAL OF KHAN ABDUL SAMAD KHAN IN BALUCHISTAN.

†253. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Will Government be pleased to state why Khan Abdul Samad Khan was tried in Baluchistan for the speeches delivered in Sind?

RELEASE OF POLITICAL PRISONERS IN BALUCHISTAN.

254. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Do Government propose to release all the political prisoners in Baluchistan, when the former have compromised with the Congress and all the political prisoners in India are being released? If not, why not?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Honourable Member appears to be under some misapprehension in regard to the attitude of Government vis-à-vis the Congress. I would refer him to the Government of India's Communiqué of the 6th June, 1934, which states the position and the action being taken in regard to the release of civil disobedience prisoners. No question of releasing any other class of prisoners arises.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 251.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 250.

INTRODUCTION OF CERTAIN REFORMS IN BALUCHISTAN.

255. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (on behalf of Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon) : Will Government be pleased to state whether they have ever considered the question of introducing reforms in Baluchistan, such as freedom of speech, introduction of local board system, education, and judicial reforms ? If so, to what conclusion have they reached ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Government of India are not aware that the position regarding freedom of speech is different in Baluchistan to that which obtains in any other part of India.

(b) By Local Boards, the Honourable Member presumably has in mind the introduction of a system of District Boards in rural areas. The established form of Local Self-Government obtaining in Baluchistan is tribal, and Government are satisfied that an attempt to introduce local self-governing institutions in rural areas on the lines obtaining in Governor's Provinces would not only be expensive but would not accord with the desires of the people.

(c) With regard to education, the Honourable Member is referred to the replies given to questions Nos. 420 and 426 asked by himself in the Spring Session of 1933. Government have nothing to add to the answers then given.

(d) As the Honourable Member is aware, except in certain areas such as the Quetta Municipality, the judicial system in Baluchistan is based on the Tribal Jirga. Government are not convinced that the substitution for this system of regular courts and an expensive judicial machinery would, at their present stage of development, either be welcomed by the people or be in the interests of the tribes themselves.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask, Sir, whether, in the year 1934, the Honourable Member is still in favour of the Jirga system, which really is the negation of justice ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Sir, it is not a question of any Honourable Member's opinion in the matter.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I mean the Government.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : On behalf of Government I have already stated that they consider that the Jirga system is not merely suited, but is in conformity with the desires of the people of Baluchistan.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is the Honourable Member sure that it is in conformity with the desire of the people ? My information is that it is just the reverse. Has not the Honourable Member got the experience of the North-West Frontier Province and was not Jirga system condemned and subsequently abandoned there ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Sir, I think my Honourable friend is not instituting a correct comparison between the North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan. I think the conditions of Baluchistan are quite different.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know, Sir, the reasons which have led the Government to think that the Jirga system is liked by the people in Baluchistan ? My own information is that this system is hated by the people.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My Honourable friend is welcome to his information, but I base my replies upon the information furnished by the Agent to the Governor General, who, presumably, is entitled to speak for the great bulk of the people.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Is it a fact that people in Baluchistan are not allowed to publish their vernacular papers in order to express their views on these and on other religious or political subjects ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am not aware that there are any restrictions on publicity in Baluchistan independently or different from those which prevail in the rest of British India.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Are Government aware that Khan Abdus Samad Khan made an application for the publication of a vernacular newspaper and it was refused, and, in this connection, questions were put on the floor of this House ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It is possible that questions were put ; I am not personally familiar either with those questions or the answers that were given. But the fact that, in the case of one individual, permission has been refused may have something to do with the character of that individual.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : I want to know the reply of this question from the Political Department, if my friend is not familiar, who have dealt with this subject and who should reply to this question.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order order. Honourable Members cannot dictate as to which Member of Government should reply his question.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : I said so, because my Honourable friend does not know the facts of the case. Is it a fact that when Abdus Samad Khan applied for publishing a newspaper, the Commissioner of Baluchistan informed him that the paper should contain no articles on politics, religion or social matters, and, if he would agree to this condition, then only the publication of the paper could be allowed ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My Honourable friend's question originally was as to whether permission was generally given in Baluchistan to the printing of newspapers. I gave answer to that question. Now he wishes to know in regard to the action taken by the Agent to the Governor General with regard to a particular individual. I regret to say that I am not familiar with the earlier history of that individual, and, therefore, cannot answer the question.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Is it a fact that Government are also not aware of these facts ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I daresay Government who have a comprehensive mind have information available about this individual in some compartment of that mind ; only I don't happen to be in charge of that compartment.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is the Honourable Member himself familiar with the Jirga system in Baluchistan, so that I may ask one or two more questions from him ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : So far as knowledge of the Jirga system is concerned, undoubtedly I cannot contend with the erudition of my Honourable friend, but I think I am familiar with the general features of the system. If my Honourable friend wishes to put me under cross-examination, I would be prepared to do my best. But I do not know whether such questions exactly arise from the answer that I have given.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : My Honourable friend said that the Jirga system was popular among the people. Is he not familiar with such cases that if one Jirga, which is appointed to decide a case, does not decide that case to the satisfaction of the authorities, that Jirga is discharged and another new Jirga is appointed and this process goes on till the decision of the Jirga is to the satisfaction of the authorities ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair does not think that all these details are relevant.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The Honourable gentleman says that the Jirga system is popular with the people of Baluchistan, and I am trying to ask questions and elicit that it is not.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Next question.

ADMISSION OF MEDICAL GROUP STUDENTS OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY IN MEDICAL COLLEGES IN INDIA.

256. Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : Will Government be pleased to state the number of students during the past five years, who have passed the Intermediate Examination of the Delhi University in Science (Medical Group) and those who have been able to secure admission to the Medical College at Lahore, or elsewhere, and the number of those who wanted to join medical colleges but failed to get admission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : A statement containing such information as is readily available is laid on the table.

Statement.	1930.	1931.	1932.	1933.	1934.
Number of students who passed the I. Sc. (Medical Group) Examination of the Delhi University during 1930-1934	11	9	16	21	28
Number of students who secured admission to the King Edward Medical College, Lahore	3	3	2	1	2
Number of students who applied for admission to the King Edward Medical College, Lahore, but failed to secure admission during 1930-1934	5	6	5	4	10

Information is not readily available in respect of the admission of students to medical colleges other than the King Edward Medical College, Lahore. It is understood that certain students were admitted to the medical colleges in Bombay, Calcutta and Lucknow privately and without the aid of the University of Delhi.

NON-RECOGNITION OF THE INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION IN SCIENCE, MEDICAL GROUP, OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY BY THE LUCKNOW UNIVERSITY.

257. Mr. B. V. Jadhav : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware of the fact that the Intermediate examination in Science (Medical Group) of the Delhi University is not recognised by the Lucknow University for purposes of its pre-Medical test for admission to the King George's Medical College, Lucknow ?

(b) Do Government propose to have the said Delhi examination recognised by the Lucknow University for the aforesaid purpose ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). Certain information is being collected and a reply will be furnished as soon as possible.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask, Sir, if there is any fixed number of students to be admitted to this college ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : So far as my information goes, there is a provision made every year for the admission of two medical students from Delhi to the Lahore Medical College.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Who makes that provision ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Obviously the Government of India make provision for that in the Budget of the Delhi administration.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is that provision considered sufficient for the Delhi students ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : When we went into this question last in 1931, we came to the conclusion that that was adequate.

TIME TEST FOR WORK DONE BY CLERKS IN POSTAL CIRCLE OFFICES.

258. Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any time test has been fixed in respect of the work done by the clerks in the Circle Offices of the Post Office and, if so, to what effect ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, has a similar time test been fixed in respect of the work done by the clerks in the Divisional Offices of the Post Office and Railway Mail Service and, if not, why could not the one prescribed for the Circle Offices be applied to the Divisional Offices ?

(c) If the replies to parts (a) and (b) be in the negative, do Government propose to prescribe a time test in respect of the work done by the clerks in the Circle Offices and Divisional Offices ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. The second part does not arise.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) The question of framing a suitable standard is under investigation by the Postal Enquiry Committee.

INCREASE OF WORK IN THE POSTAL DIVISIONAL OFFICES.

259. Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Are Government aware that, as a result of the delegation of certain additional powers to the Superintendents of Post Offices and Railway Mail Service, the clerical work in those offices has increased ?

(b) Are Government also aware that, as a result of the economy campaign, the retrenchment scheme and grant of concessions for voluntary retirements, the work in the Divisional Offices has greatly increased and thereby the staff of those offices are over-worked and required to work for longer hours?

(c) If the replies to parts (a) and (b) above be in the affirmative, are Government prepared to sanction the additional staff for the purpose? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No. In fact the delegation of increased power to Superintendents of Post Offices and of the Railway Mail Service should result in a decrease in the work of their offices since it removes the necessity for references to higher authorities in many cases.

(b) and (c). Government have no precise information but if in any Divisional Office the facts are as stated by the Honourable Member, Heads of Circles have full discretion to increase the clerical staff of such Divisional Offices when necessary.

A copy of the question and of this reply will be sent to all Heads of Circles for information.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask, Sir, how far this Postal Enquiry Committee has progressed?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I think it is somewhere about half way through its enquiry.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is the formula of the Honourable Member about 54-hour weeks applicable to these clerks in the Superintendent's office also?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I am afraid I must ask for notice of that question. To the best of my knowledge, none of these clerks work 54 hours a week.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I understand the rule is that they should not work for more than 54 hours a week. They should not work more than a labourer does.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : They do not come within the definition of industrial workers; that is obvious. As to their hours of work, I should have to make inquiries.

QUARTERS FOR INFERIOR SERVANTS IN THE POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT AT POONA.

260. Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) With reference to the reply to my starred question No. 475, dated the 14th March, 1934, will Government be pleased to state whether it is not a fact that the accommodation at present allotted to the peons and porters of the Posts and Telegraphs Department at Poona does not provide for a small cookshed measuring five feet by five feet, a verandah four feet wide and a court-yard with a pukka bathing platform five feet by five feet properly drained?

(b) If the replies to part (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to take steps to provide adequate accommodation to the peons and porters and, until this could be done, either to exempt them from the payment of water and other service taxes, or to allow them to vacate the quarters and to resume payment of the house-rent allowance?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The facts are substantially as stated by the Honourable Member.

(b) As regards the first part of the question, the Postmaster-General, Bombay Circle, will be asked to see what can be done to improve their accommodation; as regards the latter part, I may inform the Honourable Member that the occupation of the rooms by the lower grade staff is optional.

†261*.

PUBLICATION OF THE REPORT OF THE JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE ON INDIAN REFORMS.

262. Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will Government be pleased to state whether there is any truth in the Reuter's message, dated the 14th July, 1934, from London, that the Report of the Joint Select Committee will be released before Parliament rises at the end of this month? If not, when is the Report expected to be published?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given by me to parts (b) and (c) of Mr. B. Das's starred question No. 172, on the 23rd July, 1934.

UTILISATION OF THE EXPORT OF GOLD.

263. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the extent to which they have utilised the export of gold amounting to about two hundred crores for improving the public finances of India?

(b) Will Government be pleased to give the details?

(c) What portion of this amount has come to the Government of India in the shape of deposits (savings bank, cash certificates, Government loans)?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I would refer the Honourable Member to the very full statement made by Sir George Schuster in paragraphs 17—29 of his Speech on the Budget for 1933-34. I can add nothing to the information which he then gave.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : As that information is now about 18 months old, will the Honourable Member kindly give the correct figures up-to-date?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : If the Honourable Member will refer to the speech of Sir George Schuster, he will find that the calculation in question is based on certain materials. It is true that that information was compiled for 1932-33, but if the Honourable Member is desirous of making a similar calculation, I think he will find all the material which he requires in the last report of the Controller of Currency for the year 1933-34.

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : With regard to part (c) of the question, is the Honourable Member in a position to give a reply to that specifically or that is also included in that discussion?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I think the Honourable Member will find the relevant statistics in the report of the Controller of Currency.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : The report of the Controller of Currency deals with facts ending 31st March, 1933.

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I am talking of the latest report which was published a few weeks ago. It deals with the year 1933-34.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Does it deal with the facts which have happened till the 31st March, 1934?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : Yes, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the report is in the Library?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I think so, Sir.

NOTE WRITTEN BY SIR SHAH MUHAMMAD SULAIMAN IN THE CAPITATION TRIBUNAL.

264. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of this House the note written by Dr. Sir Shah Muhammad Sulaiman in the Capitation Tribunal?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Government are not prepared to lay the note in question on the table of the House. They are, however, prepared to show it to the Leaders of Parties or their nominees, subject to certain conditions which were communicated to the former during the last Delhi Session.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I am the Deputy Leader. Can you show it to me?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : What I said was "They are, however, prepared to show it to the Leaders of Parties or their nominees".

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Under what conditions will it be shown?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The conditions originally stated were :

"The papers will be shown in strict confidence and on the clear understanding that those who read them, whatever use they may make of the information disclosed, will not quote the writers of the notes as their authority for such information, still less make copies or take verbatim extracts from the notes for use either in the press or in public speeches and of course that no reference is made to any foreign power by name as having been alluded to in those notes."

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Is it a fact that the Leaders of Parties declined to take the responsibility of either seeing these notes under those conditions or nominating any of their Members to see the notes under those conditions?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : That is true, certainly of two Parties, but I know that one Party took advantage of the offer made.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE CONCESSION GIVEN TO POOR PATIENTS TRAVELLING TO KASAUJI.

265. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) On what date did the Railway Board inform the Education Department that they had withdrawn the concession given to poor patients travelling to Kasauli?

(b) What action, if any, did the Education Department take on receipt of that information?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Department of Education, Health and Lands, came to know of the withdrawal of the concession on the 29th May, 1933.

(b) The Railway Board were unwilling to press the Indian Railway Conference Association, who came to this decision, to reconsider it, but steps were taken to have the concession extended by six months so as to enable Local Governments, if they so wished, to arrange for the issue at their own expense of free passes to indigent persons residing within their jurisdiction. Instructions were also issued to authorities in the directly administered areas to meet the expenditure involved from their budgets.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE CONCESSION GIVEN TO POOR PATIENTS TRAVELLING TO KASAUJI.

266. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Is it the intention of the Government of India that the Kasauli Pasteur Institute be reserved for the rich people?

(b) Are Government aware that poor people will not be able to pay the expenses of travelling to Kasauli from their houses?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No.

(b) Attention is invited to the reply just given to part (b) of the Honourable Member's question No. 265.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE CONCESSION GIVEN TO SOLDIERS AND OFFICERS TRAVELLING TO KASAUJI.

267. Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : (a) Have the Railway Board withdrawn, or do they propose to withdraw from the soldiers and officers the concession of travelling to Kasauli?

(b) What is the nature and extent of these concessions?

(c) What is the net loss to Railways on account of these concessions?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No special concession is given by Railways to soldiers and officers travelling to Kasauli.

(b) and (c). Do not arise.

†268*.

†269*.

†270*.

REPRESENTATIVES OF INDIA AT THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

271. Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the names of India's representatives at the League of Nations from the very beginning to its ensuing session?

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.
‡This question was withdrawn by the questioner.

(b) Were these representatives selected direct by His Majesty's Government, or upon recommendations of the Indian Government?

(c) What is the procedure of selection in other parts of the British Commonwealth?

(d) Has any vacancy in the League Council occurred by the retirement of China?

(e) What is India's quota towards League expenses in proportion to other Dominions of the Commonwealth and the nations of the world?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : (a) A statement is laid on the table.

(b) India's representatives are selected by the Secretary of State in consultation with the Government of India.

(c) The Government of India have no information, but it is presumed that the selection is made by the Dominion Government of the day.

(d) China was elected to the Council by the Assembly of 1931. Temporary members of the Council are elected for a period of three years and China's seat will therefore be required to be filled up by the Assembly in 1934.

(e) The Honourable Member is referred to page 1258 of the League of Nations Official Journal, 14th Year, 1933, a copy of which is in the Library.

List showing the composition of the Indian Delegations to the Assembly of the League of Nations, 1920-1934.

1920.	Delegates	..	..	Sir William Stevenson Meyer. Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar. Sir Saiyid Ali Imam.
1921.	Delegates	..	..	Sir William Stevenson Meyer. His Highness the Maharao of Kutch. The Right Hon'ble V. S. Srinivasa Sastri.
1922.	Delegates	..	..	Viscount Chelmsford. Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar. Sir P. S. Sivaswamy Aiyer.
1923.	Delegates	..	..	Lord Hardinge of Penshurst. Maharaja Jam Saheb of Nawanagar. Syed Hasan Imam.
	Expert	..	..	Mr. J. Campbell.
1924.	Delegates	..	..	Lord Hardinge of Penshurst. Maharaja of Bikaner. Sir Muhammad Rafique.
	Substitutes	..	..	Captain Maharaj Kumar of Bikaner. Sir Stanley Reed. Mr. J. Campbell. Mr. P. J. Patrick (Secretary and Substitute Delegate).
1925.	Delegates	..	..	Viscount Willingdon. Maharaja of Patiala. Sir Atul Chandra Chatterjee.
	Substitute	..	..	Sir Edward Chamier.

1926.	Delegates	..	..	Sir William Vincent. Maharaja of Kapurthala. Khan Bahadur Shaikh Abdul Qadir.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir C. P. Ramaswami Ayyar. Sir Edward Chamier. Sir Basanta Kumar Mullick.
1926.	Special Session Delegate	..	..	Sir Muhammad Rafique.
1927.	Delegates	..	..	The Earl of Lytton. Maharaja of Kapurthala. Sir C. P. Ramaswami Ayyar.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Edward Chamier. Khan Bahadur Mian Sir Fazl-i-Husain. Sir Basanta Kumar Mullick.
1928.	Delegates	..	..	The Earl of Lytton. Nawab of Palanpur. Mr. S. N. Mallik.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Edward Chamier. Sir Kumar Venkata Reddi. Mr. A. Yusuf Ali.
1929.	Delegates	..	..	Sir Muhammad Habibullah, Leader . Maharaja of Kapurthala. Sir William Ewart Greaves.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Chunilal Mehta. Sir Geoffrey Corbett. Syed Raza Ali.
1930.	Delegates	..	..	Maharaja of Bikaner. Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan. Sir William Ewart Greaves.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Deva Prasad Sarvadhicary. Sir Denys Bray. Sir Jehangir Cooverjee Coyajee.
1931.	Delegates	..	..	The Hon'ble Sir Brojendra Lal Mitter. Khan Bahadur Diwan Abdul Hamid. Sir Denys Bray.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Jehangir Cooverjee Coyajee. Rao Bahadur Sir Annepu Patro. Dr. L. K. Hyder.
1932.	Delegates	..	..	H. H. The Aga Khan. Sir Denys Bray. Sir Prabhashankar Dalpatram Pattani.
	Substitutes	..	..	Sir Jehangir Cooverjee Coyajee. The Hon'ble Mr. Bijay Kumar Basu
1933.	Delegates	..	..	Sir B. L. Mitter. Sir Denys de S. Bray. Sir Abdussamad Khan.
	Substitute	..	..	Sir Homi Mehta.
1934.	Delegates	..	..	H. H. The Aga Khan. Sir Denys de S. Bray. Sir V. T. Krishnamachariar.
	Substitute	..	..	Sir Homi Mehta

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will Government state whether Local Governments are consulted in the selection of the delegates to the League of Nations ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I have no information on the matter, but if my Honourable friend will put down a question, I will make inquiries.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know on what basis is this quota fixed ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I want notice of that question. That question cannot possibly arise from this question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : It arises from part (e).

Mr. B. Das : Arising out of the reply regarding the personnel chosen from India, will the Honourable Member kindly tell us why there is a change of attitude by Government in choosing only loyalist gentlemen to represent at the League of Nations and not politicians of outstanding merit ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Government do not admit any of the six fallacious assumptions made in this question.

Mr. B. Das : The Right Honourable Srinivasa Sastri and others used to represent in the good old days at the League of Nations.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : In view of the fact that Indian States are always represented in the delegation of India, have the Government of India ever asked the Indian States to contribute their quota of expenses to the League of Nations ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : My Honourable friend, like his predecessor, has made another wrong assumption. They are not always represented.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : During the last four years ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The question was that the Indian States were always represented. My reply is that they are not always represented, but sometimes represented. If any further information is required, I want notice.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : If in any particular year the Indian States are represented, then, in that particular year, are the Indian States required to give their quota of expenses ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I want notice.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I have a reply particularly to part (e), and, if the Honourable Member is not in a position to give reply, he may do so hereafter after making enquiries. I want to know what is the basis on which the Dominions and the Nations of the world are taken to the League ? On what basis and on what proportion ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I want notice.

Mr. H. P. Mody : Was not this question asked sometime ago ? Why does the Honourable Member want fresh notice ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : It must have been answered at that time.

Mr. H. P. Mody : No, Sir. My Honourable friend wanted notice even at that time.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : A few days ago, that question was put as a supplement to some supplementary question, and that was answered to the best of my ability. I insist on notice for this question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I give then two notices of the question.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA.

272. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state when it is proposed to start the Reserve Bank in India ?

(b) Have the Governors and Deputy Governors been nominated ? If so, what are their names ?

(c) What is the approximate initial cost estimated for the starting of the Bank ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : (a) Government are not yet in a position to make an announcement.

(b) No.

(c) It is not yet possible to frame a reliable estimate.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a fact that the Governor has already been appointed as announced in the newspapers of today ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I am not in position to add anything to the reply I already gave.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Has the Honourable Member read today's Hindustan Times ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : No, Sir. (Laughter.)

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Will Government now read that paper ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Has the Honourable Member read the Statesman of this morning ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : No, Sir. (Laughter.)

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : When will the Government issue their communique ? Everybody knows what the position is.

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I am not in a position to say anything further than I have said just now.

†273*.

ANTI-INDIAN LEGISLATION IN ZANZIBAR.

274. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the exact nature and the salient features of the new laws against Indians in Zanzibar ?

(b) Is there any Agent of the Indian Government in Zanzibar ? If so, did he inform the Indian Government before these laws were passed ? If not, is it intended to appoint an Agent to safeguard Indian interests ?

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.
L236LAD

(c) When did the Indian Government first get information of these laws ?

(d) Have these laws been already brought into effect ?

(e) What steps are Indian Government taking in the matter, and with what result ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) A copy of the decrees, to which the attention of the Honourable Member is invited, has been placed in the Library of the House.

(b) There is no Indian agent in Zanzibar. The second part does not arise. The answer to the third is in the negative.

(c) On the 24th June, 1934.

(d) The laws have been passed.

(e) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given by me to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 148, on the 19th of this month.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that Party Leaders waited on the Honourable Member in charge of Education, Health and Lands, and that the Honourable Member assured the deputation that Sir Maharaj Singh will be deputed to Zanzibar to enquire on the spot ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Certain Honourable Members saw the Honourable Sir Fazl-i-Husain, and the suggestion was made that the Government of India should depute an officer to Zanzibar to make local investigation. The Honourable Sir Fazl-i-Husain gave the assurance that that suggestion would be promptly and carefully considered. I regret to say that I am not in a position to announce any names.

COMPETITION OF BRITISH FIRMS WITH INDIAN STEEL MANUFACTURERS.

275. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the report of the Tariff Board regarding abuse of the Ottawa Agreement preference by British firms in steel manufactures has been accepted by them ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to take any drastic action against the British firms who, taking advantage of the preference, are competing with Indian steel manufacturers by underquoting them ?

(c) Do Government propose to withdraw the preference and exclude British steel from the Indian market in view of the action of the British manufacturers ?

(d) Is it a fact that Government intend to extend further concessions to British steel ?

(e) Are Government aware of the strong public feeling in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bore : (a), (b) and (c). So far as Government are aware no Ottawa preferences have been given in respect of iron or steel which have been abused in any way.

(d) and (e). The decisions of the Government of India on the recommendations of the Tariff Board are embodied in the Bill which was introduced on the 25th July, 1934.

EFFECT OF THE NEW EXCISE DUTY ON THE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

276. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there has been any effect of the new sugar excise duty upon the sugar industry in this country ?

(b) What is the amount of excess collections of duty since its imposition till June, 1934 ?

(c) Do Government propose exempting the Bihar sugar mills, affected by the earthquake, to enable them to recoup their losses ?

(d) Have the sugar imports increased after the imposition of the new duty ? What are the comparative figures of imports from April to June for 1933 and 1934 ?

(e) Has there been a 25 per cent. decrease in sugar consumption in 1933-34 as compared with the average of the last six years ending with 1930-31 ? If so, have Government found out the reasons for this ? What steps, if any, do they propose to take to increase the sugar consumption ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : (a) I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the statement contained in section XIII of the Review of the Sugar Trade in India, published in the Indian Trade Journal (Supplement), dated the 5th July, 1934. This contains the latest information available and the Sugar Technologist's conclusions are that the immediate effect of the excise duty has been to put a wholesome check on excessive expansion ; that factories are taking steps to increase their efficiency and employ better technical staff and that future development will be on desirable lines.

(b) The information is being collected and will be placed on the table in due course.

(c) The Government of India have already agreed to the grant of exemption to such factories in respect of stocks of sugar held on the 1st April in excess of the stock which would have been held but for the earthquake.

(d) No. The total imports during April, May, and June, 1933, were 71,915 tons, and during the corresponding period of 1934, have only reached 49,971 tons.

(e) There are no statistics of the consumption of sugar in India. Any estimates framed by adding figures for the imports to the figures of Indian production are liable to serious error as there are no figures of sugar produced by the Khandsari process. A reference to the Review quoted in reply to (a) will show that the consumption of factory sugar in India has fallen steadily since 1929-30. The estimated consumption for 1933-34 is still as high as in 1924-25, while the net quantity of gur consumed is estimated to have gone up from 2,400,000 tons to 3,245,000 tons.

Sir Leslie Hudson : Sir, before question 277 is answered, I rise to a point of order. I submit that clause (f) of this question offends against Standing Order 36, clause (3), which states that questions should not be asked if they contain inferences or defamatory statements.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The President carefully examines the questions in the light of all the Rules and Standing Orders before the questions are admitted, and, when the questions once appear in the order paper, it is presumed that all those points have been considered by the President.

HARDINGE BRIDGE ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

277. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether contract works of the Hardinge Bridge on the Eastern Bengal Railway, worth several lakhs of rupees, have been finished and works worth one crore of rupees or so have still to be completed ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Deputy Chief Engineer in charge of the Hardinge Bridge has got only three contractors to whom he gives contracts and is it also a fact that the agreements are made with the son, brothers and partners of the said contractors, who work jointly ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state why the tender system is not in force on these works ?

(d) Do Government propose to introduce the system of calling public tenders in all future works ? If not, why not ?

(e) Are Government aware that the subordinates of the Engineering Department take the measurements of earthworks and check the number of coolies as dictated by the said contractors ? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter ? If not, why not ?

(f) Is Mr. Harvey an unmarried man ? Are Government aware that the contractors have to arrange for his enjoyments, feasts and boat joyrides ? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter ? If not, why not ?

(g) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the article by Mr. C. C. Banerjee, a retired engineer, published in the Anurita Bazar Patrika of the 26th May, 1934 ? If so, has his advice been followed ? If not, why not ?

(h) Is it a fact that these contractors have been promised by Mr. Harvey that the less percentage below the scheduled rates of the Eastern Bengal Railway shall not be deducted from them and they will be paid bonus ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 277 and 278 together. I am making enquiries from the Railway Administration and will place a reply on the table in due course.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will the reply be laid on the table in this Session ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I cannot say now.

Mr. B. Das : Is it a fact that, with reference to the construction of this Hardinge Bridge, the opinion of Indian experts is that Government are not following the right kind of advice in the matter of construction of this bridge.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think my Honourable friend is aware that we did get the best possible advice, and, specially in Sir Robert Gales, we have one who is an engineer of great experience in these matters and who himself originally constructed the Hardinge Bridge.

Mr. B. Das : But have these experts got any experience of Indian rivers and the vagaries of the current, particularly of the river near Hardinge Bridge ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Of course. As I have already informed the House, Sir Robert Gales was himself the person who constructed this bridge.

Mr. B. Das : Has the Honourable Member read the statement of Mr. C. C. Banerjee, and does the Honourable Member realise that that is the view held by many Indian engineers ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I realise, Sir, that that is the view held by Mr. C. C. Banerjee.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : In view of the fact that the allegations in these two questions are of a very serious nature, will the Railway Board make special inquiries, and, after those inquiries are made, lay a statement before this House, instead of simply referring to the report of the Agent ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have already asked for the information, and, as soon as the information is available, I shall place a statement on the table of the House.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : My question is, after the information is received by the Railway Board, will they make additional inquiries if they are found necessary ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Additional inquiries are always made if necessary.

CONTRACTS FOR WORKS ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

278. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether there is any Eastern Bengal Railway contractor of the name of Teomal Seth with his head office at Lalmonirhat, in the District of Rungpur ?

(b) Is it a fact that all the big contract works are always given to him, at very high rates, for the last so many years, though many contractors offered to do the same work at half rates ? If so, will Government be pleased to state why public tenders are not called for the works over the Eastern Bengal Railway ?

(c) Is it a fact that on the 21st April, 1931, Mr. Mellot, an Executive Engineer of Paksey, invited tenders for relaying 75 lbs. rails with 90 lbs. trucks, between Domar on Siliguri and Parbattipur Section, but before the opening date of the said tenders the then Chief Engineer of the Eastern Bengal Railway encamped at the spot and got the said work done by the said Teomal, contractor, on his executing an agreement, which in the beginning amounted to Rs. 42,000 but in the end became worth Rs. 1,10,000 ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. L. F. Jackson, the Chief Engineer, after inspecting the construction of Dhaneshwari Bridge and Tungle Line, issued a circular order that Teomal should not be given any works in future, and fined him Rs. 8,000 for supply of boulders of smaller weights than contracted for the Hardinge Bridge from his Siliguri quarry ? If so, do Government propose to institute an enquiry into the allegations and inform this House of the result ? If not, why not ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 277.

PROPOSED INCREASE IN PRESS TELEGRAM RATES.

279. *Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have received any memorandum from the Indian Journalists' Association, objecting to the proposed increase in Press telegram rates ?

(b) Have Government sent any reply to it ? If so, will they be pleased to lay a copy of it on the table of this House ? If not, why not ?

(c) Do Government propose to drop the proposed increase in view of the submissions made by the Journalists' Association ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) The answer to the first part is in the negative. The second part does not arise. As regards the third part, a communication, dated the 4th July, 1934, has been received from the Indian Journalists' Association, Calcutta, with reference to the Press Notice, issued by Government, calling for the views of all affected interests on the proposed revision of the rates for inland Press telegrams. The views expressed by the Indian Journalists' Association will be considered, with such other views as may be received, in due course, from various bodies on the same subject and consequently no reply has been sent to the communication.

(c) Government have not yet arrived at a final decision on the subject. In response to requests received from the various interests affected they have extended the period originally fixed for the submission of views from the end of April, 1934 to the 15th August, 1934.

MR. CHAWLA'S FLIGHT BY AEROPLANE.

280. *Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Was any representative of the Indian Government present at the Delhi aerodrome to see off Mr. Chawla, the first Indian aviator on his world flight ?

(b) Do Government view with disapproval Mr. Chawla's flight ?

(c) Was it under instructions that the aerodrome people were also conspicuous by their absence ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The Aerodrome Officer was present at the aerodrome to see Mr. Chawla off, in the ordinary course of his duties. No other Government official was present.

(b) No. On the contrary, a great deal of trouble has been taken to obtain permits for Mr. Chawla's flight and to assist him by seeing that he started with all the documents and information necessary to ensure that he will not be delayed in other countries. The arrangements made only cover the flight to Europe so far as Government are aware Mr. Chawla has made no arrangements which will enable him to fly round the world.

(c) No instructions were issued.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask whether any representative of this Assembly was present on that occasion ?

TRANSFER OF THE RESEARCH INSTITUTE FROM PUSA TO DELHI.

281. *Rai Bahadur Sukhraj Roy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it has been decided to remove the Agricultural Institute from Pusa to somewhere near Delhi ? If so, when ?

(b) What are the reasons for the proposed removal and at whose initiative has it been so decided ?

(c) What will be the approximate cost of acquiring the lands and constructing new buildings for the accommodation of the Institute ?

(d) How will the present buildings and lands be disposed of ?

(e) Will this House be consulted before taking the final decision ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 69 on the 18th July, 1934, and to connected supplementaries.

†282*.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ORISSA BOUNDARY COMMITTEE.

283. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government be pleased to state what action has been taken so far by them to give effect to the recommendations of the Orissa Boundary Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bore : I invite the Honourable Member's attention to the footnote to paragraph 61 of the Proposals for Indian Constitutional Reform.

†284*.

ORIIYA-SPEAKING PEOPLE IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT.

285. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government be pleased to state how many men belonging to Income-tax Department are working in the districts consisting mainly of Oriya-speaking people, and will they be pleased to state how many of them belong to Orissa proper ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : In all 15 men are working in the districts referred to by the Honourable Member and of these, nine belong to Orissa proper.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if there is any rule or regulation that people will be taken from each district and from each Province ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : There is no such rule, Sir, as far as I am aware.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Is there any practice like that ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I am not aware that that is the practice, Sir.

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.

TRAIN CLERKS WORKING AS GUARDS.

286. *Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : (a) Is it a fact that train clerks are ordered to work as guards ?

(b) Do they get in such cases pay and allowances as guards and enjoy all the privileges which a guard is entitled to enjoy ?

(c) Is there any rule to permit the appointment of railwaymen to such posts, the duties of which they do not know ?

(d) Is it a fact that if train clerks when working as guards, commit any mistake, they are punished and penalised for the mistake ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Railway Board recently issued orders that the staff appointed for a specific service should not be allowed to work on other posts, the duties of which they do not know ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) I understand that train clerks, who are qualified in guard's duties, are occasionally required to work as guards.

(b) and (d). Government have made no enquiries on these points, but presumably the position is as stated.

(c) and (e). No.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Is it a fact that, in spite of train clerks not knowing the duties of guards, they are asked to go and work as guards ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : In reply to part (a) of the question, I said that I understand that train clerks who are qualified in guard's duties are occasionally required to work as guards.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : What does the Honourable Member mean by "qualified" ? Does he mean qualified by passing the examination of guards, or simply qualified in the opinion of the Traffic Superintendent ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Those who are qualified in the opinion of their superior officers.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Though they might not have passed the guard's examination ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have no information on that point.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to inquire whether it is not a fact that sometimes train clerks, who do not know the duties of guards and have not passed the guard's examination, are asked on the North Western Railway to work as guards of trains ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : If my Honourable friend has any specific instances to bring to notice, I shall be quite pleased to take action, but on purely hypothetical assumptions I do not think it is fair to ask Government to inquire from all the Railways what the practice is.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask whether the work of a guard does not require technical knowledge and special training ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not acquainted personally with the duties of guards, but I am quite willing to take it from my Honourable friend that their duties might be described to some extent as technical.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Is it a fact that when they go with trains, they enjoy all the privileges as guards ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have no reason to believe they do not.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I ask whether passenger trains are put in charge of untrained persons ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not think so. I do not think that a train will be put in charge of an untrained person, but if my Honourable friend has any reason to believe that such is the case, and if he gives me evidence in support of his allegation, I shall be quite prepared to inquire into it.

CONTRIBUTION MADE FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE STUDENTS OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY IN THE LAHORE MEDICAL COLLEGE.

287. *Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether any contribution is made by the Delhi Province to the Government of the Punjab as capitation charges for the students who pass the Intermediate Examination in Science (Medical Group) from the Delhi University and who are sent to the Lahore Medical College after being selected for the purpose by the Chief Commissioner ? If so, what is the charge per student ?

(b) During the last five years how much of these charges, if any, was spent on account of the sons and wards of the employees of the Central Government and how much on those of others who are not employed under the Government of India and have got Medical Colleges in their provinces ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) A contribution of Rs. 1,050 per student per annum is paid.

(b) The total amount spent on capitation charges was Rs. 83,551. The other information asked for by the Honourable Member is not available.

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : May I ask what is the number of students admitted into the Lahore Medical College every year ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I really would have to make an inquiry on that point—I cannot say what the total number of students admitted into the College is, because the college is under the Local Government : what I do know is that two are admitted every year from Delhi.

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : May I ask what is the number of students that passed in this Medical Group in Delhi ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already laid a statement in regard to that in reply to a question, I think, asked by Mr. Jadhav or by Mr. Patil himself. The numbers are 11 in 1930, 9 in 1931, 16 in 1932, 21 in 1933, and 28 in 1934.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to say how many students had applied and how many of them were not sent to Lahore ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My Honourable friend's question, No. 287, is as regards capitation charges : not as regards the number of students who applied : but I have already answered that question in reply to an earlier question.

†288*.

†289*.

MUSLIM GAZETTED OFFICERS RECRUITED IN CERTAIN DEPARTMENTS OF STATE RAILWAYS.

290. *Kunwar Hajee Ismail Ali Khan (on behalf of Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan) : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslim gazetted officers recruited during the last one year in each of the following departments of the Indian State Railways and how many of such officers were Bengal Muslims :

- (i) Traffic Department,
- (ii) Loco. Department,
- (iii) Audit and Accounts Department,
- (iv) Engineering Department ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims recruited during the last one year in the subordinate ranks of the Indian State Railways in each of the above Departments and how many of them were Bengal Muslims ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No direct recruitment to the gazetted ranks in any of the departments referred to in part (a) of the question was made on the State-managed Railways during the period 1933-34.

(b) All the information available will be found in Appendix C of Volume II of the "Report by the Railway Board on Indian Railways for 1932-33", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

†291*.

INDIAN OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

292. *Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : (a) Will Government please state

- (i) the number of officers employed in the Army Headquarters, and
- (ii) the number of Indian officers employed in the Army Headquarters (with the exception of any if employed for the publication of Fauji Akhbar) ?
- (b) If the reply to part (a) (ii) be in the negative, will Government please state the reasons underlying the fact that Indian officers are not employed at the Army Headquarters ?

(c) Are Government prepared to bring Indian officers for employment at the Army Headquarters ?

(d) Is it a fact that the prescribed period for each officer's employment at the Army Headquarters is four years ?

†This question will be answered on the 1st August, 1934.

(e) Will Government please state the number of officers now employed at the Army Headquarters, and of those who have been there for more than four years ?

(f) Is it a fact that in order to allow officers to stay at the Army Headquarters for more than four years, their appointments are changed, thus giving them another four years and so on ?

(g) Is not this practice a set-back for other officers of the Army ?

(h) Are Government prepared to order specifically that under no circumstances, an officer's stay at the Army Headquarters should exceed four years ? If not, why not ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) I presume the Honourable Member is referring to King's Commissioned officers. If so, the numbers are :

(i) 140.

(ii) None.

(b) and (c). As the Honourable Member is no doubt aware, there are no Indian King's Commissioned officers who have more than fifteen, and few who have more than ten, years service as yet. It is only rarely that British officers with less than fifteen years service are selected for staff or departmental appointments at Army Headquarters, and in the case of the former, the officers selected are as a rule Staff College graduates. The first Indian officer to be chosen to attend the Staff College has not yet completed the two years' course of instruction there. When Indian officers have the necessary training and experience, they will of course be considered for these appointments.

(d) Yes.

(e) and (h). Out of the 140 officers employed at Army Headquarters only ten have been there for more than four years. Five of these commenced a fresh tenure on promotion to a higher grade, while the other five possess special knowledge of particular subjects and are, therefore, difficult to replace in their appointments at any given moment. Government are not, therefore, prepared to tie their hands particularly as regards officers of the latter category by issuing a specific order on the lines suggested by the Honourable Member.

(f) No.

(g) Does not arise.

INDIAN OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE MEDICAL DIRECTORATE.

293. *Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : (a) What is the number of officers employed in the Medical Directorate of the Army Headquarters ?

(b) How many of these officers are Indians ?

(c) Has ever an Indian officer been employed in the Medical Branch of the Army Headquarters ? If not, why not ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) Seven Medical Officers.

(b) None.

(c) No. These appointments are filled by selection from officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps and the Indian Medical Service. There is nothing to prevent an Indian officer of the latter Service, who possesses the necessary qualifications, from being selected for an appointment at Army Headquarters. It has, however, been found that Indian officers, who are suitable practically, always prefer to serve on the civil side.

PURCHASE OF STORES FOR THE ARMY.

294. *Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : (a) Is it a fact that the Director of Contracts, Army Headquarters, is responsible for the purchase of stores required for the Army, and disposal of stores no more required for the Army ?

(b) Can not the purchasing work for the Army be done by the Indian Stores Department ? If not, why not ?

(c) Are Government prepared to merge the Purchase Branch of the Contracts Directorate, Army Headquarters, into the Indian Stores Department, creating a Military Section in that office ? If not, why not ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) The Director of Contracts is responsible, under the orders of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, for the purchase of stores (other than such articles as lethal weapons and technical apparatus and equipment), and for the disposal of surplus and waste material.

(b) Not fully. Actually a large proportion of the stores required for the Army is purchased through the Indian Stores Department. After full consideration it was decided that it was essential to retain the present system, which provides an agency possessing special knowledge of the needs of the Army in peace and war.

(c) No. The present system is cheaper and more efficient.

INDIAN OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE CONTRACTS DIRECTORATE.

295. *Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : (a) What is the number of officers employed in the office of Director of Contracts, Army Headquarters ?

(b) How many of these officers are Indians ?

(c) Have Government considered whether it is necessary to employ Indian officers in this office where knowledge of Indian markets would be an asset ? If not, why not ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) Five.

(b) None.

(c) The work of the Contracts Directorate requires not only business capacity, but experience in the executive duties of the Army and knowledge of its special requirements in stores and material. The combination of qualifications is not to be found outside the Army, which as yet has no Indian officers of its own possessing them to a sufficient extent. When Indian officers of these necessary qualifications and experience become available, they will certainly be considered for employment in the Directorate.

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The qualifications, I referred to in my reply, were "business capacity and experience in the executive duties of the Army, and, knowledge of its special requirements in stores and material".

RECRUITMENT OF ORIYAS IN THE SALT DEPARTMENT.

296. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of men, belonging to the Salt Department of the Government of India, who are employed in the districts of Bihar and Orissa where the population is preponderatingly Oriyas ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Oriyas amongst such officers of the Salt Department ? If there are none, do Government propose to take immediate steps for the recruitment of Oriyas ? If not, why not ?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : The information is being obtained and will be laid on the table in due course.

RECRUITMENT OF ORIYAS IN CERTAIN DEPARTMENTS OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOP AT KHARAGPUR.

297. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of men recruited during the last one year in the subordinate ranks of each of the following departments of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshop at Kharagpur :

(i) Engineering Department,

(ii) Accounts Department,

(iii) Loco. Department,

(iv) Carriage and Wagon Department ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Oriyas recruited in the above Departments of the Kharagpur Railway Workshops during the same period ? If none was recruited, why not ?

(c) Do Government propose to take immediate steps, such as the issue of instructions to the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities for the recruitment of more Oriyas in the subordinate ranks of the different Departments of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Workshop at Kharagpur ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). Government regret they cannot undertake to collect information in addition to what is already contained in the Annual Administration Reports of Railways.

(c) I am sending a copy of the question to the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, for his consideration. The staff, I may add, are not Government servants, but servants of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ORISSA BOUNDARY COMMITTEE.

298. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India are still in correspondence with the Secretary of State on the recommendations of the Orissa Boundary Committee? If so, do Government propose to lay a copy of such correspondence on the table of this House? If not, why not?

(b) Is it a fact that Government are putting obstacles in the way of the immediate creation of a separate Orissa Province?

(c) Is it a fact that on the contrary Government are trying to hasten the creation of a separate Sind before the creation of a separate Orissa?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : In reply to the Honourable Member's question I cannot say anything more than that the proposals of His Majesty's Government for the creation of the separate provinces of Orissa and Sind are presumably now under the consideration of the Joint Parliamentary Committee.

MANUFACTURE OF PYROTECHNIC MATCHES.

299. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Are Government aware that pyrotechnic matches are manufactured in Bengal as cottage industry in different places and that each box contains twelve sticks?

(b) Are Government aware that the pyrotechnic matches are not for ordinary daily use and are used only during religious festivals?

(c) Will Government please state whether the present Matches Act applies to the manufacture of pyrotechnic matches?

(d) If the reply to part (c) be in the affirmative, do Government contemplate passing orders for exempting such cottage industries from the operation of the Matches Act? If not, why not?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : (a) and (b). Government have no precise information. I am prepared to accept the facts suggested by the Honourable Member in part (a) of his question, but as regards part (b) of his question, I am not aware that the use of pyrotechnic matches is confined solely to occasions of religious festivals.

(c) The answer is in the affirmative.

(d) Government see no sufficient reason for exempting such industries from the operation of the Act. They are eligible for the rebate provided by the rules made under section 19 of the Matches (Excise Duty) Act to the same extent as cottage factories producing ordinary matches.

EXTENSIONS GRANTED IN THE CURRENCY OFFICE, CAWNPORE.

300. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether their attention has been drawn to the resolutions passed at the Annual General Meeting of the Cawnpore Currency Association held in January, 1934?

(b) Is it a fact that in Cawnpore Currency Office extensions are repeatedly granted to the employees who are due for retirement? If so, does this not block the promotions of the deserving persons in these hard times?

(c) In how many cases have such extensions been granted in that Office?

(d) What is the number of employees who are due for retirement by the end of this official year in Cawnpore and other Currency Offices in India?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : The necessary information is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE RESERVE BANK OF INDIA.

301. Mr. S. G. Jog : Will Government be pleased to state when the Reserve Bank is likely to be started?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : I am not yet in a position to make an announcement.

DWINDLING TRADE OF BOMBAY.

302. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to a letter, dated the 23rd June, 1934, published in the Bombay Chronicle under the nom de plume "Tempus Fugit" regarding Bombay's dwindling trade?

(b) Is it a fact that during the last 15 years there has been a gradual decline of re-export trade of India?

(c) Is it a fact that the entrepot trade in Japanese cotton and other piece-goods is being diverted to the Persian Gulf owing to the prohibition of import of piece-goods without a quota certificate?

(d) Is it a fact that the Government of Straits Settlements have established transshipment depôts to minimise the inconvenience to and to prevent the diversion of entrepot trade?

(e) Do the Government of India propose to take immediate steps to establish similar transshipment depôts in Bombay and other ports?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) There has been a gradual decline in the value of re-exports from British India since 1919-20 though the figures for 1933-34 show an increase over those for the preceding year.

(c) No. I may add for the information of the Honourable Member that certificates are not required in respect of cotton piece-goods which are manifested for transshipment to a foreign port.

(d) Government have no information.

(e) No.

NON-STOPPAGE OF THE POONA FAST PASSENGERS AT KURLA, GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.

303. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration have removed the halt at Kurla of the Up and Down Poona Fast Passenger trains since March, 1933? If so, why?

(b) Is it a fact that all the Up and Down Poona Passenger trains used to stop at Kurla before March, 1933, since the commencement of the Railway journey to Poona?

(c) Had any representation been received from the residents of Kurla regarding the inconvenience caused by the non-stoppage of the Up and Down Poona Fast Passengers at Kurla, and if so, was any reply given?

(d) If the halt was removed owing to the dearth of passengers, were any statistics collected? If so, what was the exact period of statistics, and was any notice thereof given to the public?

(e) Do Government propose to issue orders to stop the Up and Down Poona Fast Passenger trains at Kurla? Is it a fact that these are the only trains running during the day time and that the population of Kurla is over 30,000 and that more than half of it comes from up-country?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes. I understand this halt among others was eliminated to meet the public demand for the acceleration of these trains.

(b) I have no definite information, but am prepared to take it from the Honourable Member.

(c) Government have no information, but understand that this was discussed at a meeting of the Local Advisory Committee.

(d) I understand some statistics were obtained, but am not aware for what period.

(e) Government do not propose to interfere in the making of time tables for such services, as the matter is one which can usefully be discussed, as it has already been, at meetings of the Railway's Local Advisory Committee. The question will, however, be sent to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, for consideration.

OLD SINGLE PICE COINS.

304. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that new and old single pice coins are mixed in the Bombay Currency Office before they are issued to the public? If so, what is the reason for doing so?

(b) Were the old single pice coins brought to the Bombay Small Coin Depot from mofussil treasuries in exchange for new coins at considerable expense to Government? If so, what was the total expenditure on this account during the year 1933-34?

(c) Were some new coins sent to the Mint to make them dark by putting them into acid when old coins were not available for issue in the Bombay Currency Office? If so, what was the total expenditure for doing this?

(d) Are no new copper coins issued now in the Bombay Currency Office? If so, what is the object of not issuing new copper coins and incurring this expenditure as stated in parts (a), (b) and (c)?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose now to issue instructions to the Bombay Currency Officer to issue new coins at least to those who want them for ceremonial purposes? If not, why not?

Mr. A. J. Raisman : (a) New and old single pice coins are sometimes mixed, because it is not possible for reasons of economy to issue new coin in all cases, and it is considered desirable that all applicants should be treated alike.

(b) Old coin was brought from mofussil treasuries when stocks at Bombay were low and could not be replenished in time with new coin from Calcutta. Figures regarding the expenditure incurred are not available.

(c) A mechanical process of this kind was tried as an experimental measure, for about a week, but was not pursued. The expenditure incurred was negligible.

(d) For reasons of economy new coin is only issued when the supply of old coin is insufficient.

(e) No. This would cause additional expenditure, and it is not practicable to distinguish one kind of demand from another.

TRANSFER OF THE RESEARCH INSTITUTE FROM PUSA TO DELHI.

305. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of this House all correspondence that may have passed between them and the Secretary of State regarding the proposed removal of the Agricultural Research Institute from Pusa to Delhi?

(b) In the event of the transfer, is it intended, to meet the expenditure by raising a loan or by any other source?

(c) Are Government aware that the notification for the acquisition of land in the vicinity of Delhi has given rise to much discontent among the villagers, and they have been holding punchayats to protest against this step?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) A copy of the correspondence is laid on the table of the House.

(b) It is proposed to meet the expenditure from loan funds.

(c) So far as Government are aware there is no general agitation amongst the Jats and no meetings have been held.

Correspondence with the Secretary of State, regarding the transfer of the Imperial Institute of Agricultural Research from Pusa to Delhi.

TELEGRAM TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, No. D-1228-A., DATED THE 22ND APRIL, 1934.

We have recently reviewed position as regards agricultural Research in connection with which a question for urgent decision has arisen owing to earthquake damage to Central Institute at Pusa. Reconstruction there will cost about 9 lakhs but position will not be certain until possibilities of further subsidence have been tested after monsoon and cost may be greater.

You will recollect that Royal Agricultural Commission strongly expressed view that central Agricultural Research Institute in India could never operate satisfactorily nor attain full value if situated at inaccessible and ill-adapted place like Pusa. It is becoming increasingly apparent that location there was an extremely bad mistake. In these circumstances we view with reluctance the necessity for sinking more money at this station, and after careful consideration have reached conclusion that present occasion should be taken to correct the original mistake and reconstruct the Institute at a central, typical and accessible site. We believe that suitable site could be found within 20 miles of Delhi and this location has been supported by all Directors of Agriculture. We have not yet worked out details of new plans but it is clear that expenditure on new construction and land purchase should not exceed 30 to 35 lakhs. We consider that a scheme of this kind can be justified on broad economic grounds as a suitable object for capital expenditure especially at a time like the present when borrowing rates are low and other demands for capital expenditure much reduced.

TELEGRAM FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, No. 1338, DATED THE 23RD MAY, 1934.

Your telegram dated April 22nd. Reconstruction of Pusa Institute. I approve your proposals.

L236LAD

FLOODS IN NORTH BIHAR.

306. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has there been any correspondence between the Government of India and the Government of Bihar and Orissa regarding the alarming situation in Motihari, Muzaffarpur, and in North Bihar generally, due to abnormal floods, and the changes in the courses of many rivers, resulting in the loss of crops and properties ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to make a statement on the subject, explaining the steps taken by them to meet the situation and save the people of the affected areas from starvation and epidemic ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). The Government of India have not received any communication from the Local Government on the subject. A reference, to pages 14-15 of the recently published Report on the progress of earthquake reconstruction in Bihar, will show that the Local Government were fully alive to the possibilities of heavy floods and prepared to cope with them. Copies of this Report are available in the Library of the Central Legislature.

ABSENCE OF AN INTERMEDIATE CLASS WAITING ROOM AT DELHI.

307. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that there is no Intermediate Class Waiting Room for male passengers at Delhi Junction railway station ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I understand that this is the case, and am bringing the Honourable Member's question to the notice of the Agent, North Western Railway, to consider whether there is any necessity for providing one.

REMODELLING OF THE PATNA JUNCTION RAILWAY STATION.

308. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : When do Government propose to take up the remodelling of the Patna Junction railway station (East Indian Railway), so as to make the Indian Refreshment Room on the platform like the European Refreshment Room ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I understand the remodelling is under consideration, but I am not able to say at present when the work, if sanctioned, will be taken up.

THE INDIAN DOCK LABOURERS BILL.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to the Convention concerning the protection against accidents of workers employed in loading and unloading ships, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

In making this motion, it is unnecessary for me to say very much. This Bill has been before the House for a very considerable time. It was the subject of a long debate on a memorable occasion when the House sat until midnight. It has passed unscathed through the hands of the Select Committee which has reported the measure in almost exactly the same form in which it was originally presented to the House, the changes made being of a very minor character. I trust the House will accept this beneficent measure.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to the Convention concerning the protection against accidents of workers employed in loading and unloading ships, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : Sir, I want just to say a few words with regard to this Convention which has been proposed for ratification by the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore. This Convention was adopted in the year 1929, and, in that year, I had the privilege of attending the Session of the International Labour Conference in which this Convention was passed. I also had the privilege to serve in that Committee which dealt with this particular matter, and though myself and my friend, Mr. B. Das, pressed our viewpoint there, the opinion of the Government was entirely non-committal. I am glad, Sir, that they have now come round our view. This measure makes provision against accidents to dock workers and others engaged in hazardous occupations, and loading and unloading ships is an hazardous occupation, and, owing to the absence of a suitable provision, Indian workers were hitherto exposed to dangers of accidents which can now be avoided by proper precautions. By this Bill, the Government made regulations, so that the Indian States, which possess ports, will also have to provide for safety provisions for the welfare and safety of workers engaged in these hazardous occupations in their States, and this, I think, is a step in the right direction and will bring the Government of India in a line with the Governments of other progressive countries of the world.

Sir, my friend, Mr. Joshi, could not attend the meeting of that Select Committee, but he sent us a note even in the midst of his pre-occupations, and we discussed that note in detail. Mr. Joshi had no suggestions to make with regard to the clauses of the Bill, except that the Preamble should be re-worded to make it clear that the Bill applies to workers working in docks, wharfs, quays or warehouses, and I think Mr. Joshi's view will satisfy all Members of this House. Sir, I support this measure.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I should like to refer to only one aspect of the question which has been adverted to in the Select Committee's Report, and that is the great necessity and importance of bringing Indian States in line so far as this legislation is concerned. We have been very much handicapped in the past in all matters of labour legislation, because British India is an island by itself and the rest of India is not concerned with it. This is a matter of humanity, even more than a question affecting any capitalist class, and in this matter, at any rate, I trust that the fullest endeavours of the Government of India will be forthcoming to see to it that the maritime States of this country conform themselves to the general provisions of this Bill. I do not know under what circumstances and in what manner the Government of India will be able to bring their persuasive efforts to bear on the administrations of Indian States, but I do venture to think, knowing something of the relationship of the Government of India with the Indian States, that in a question of this nature, no maritime State can afford to make light of the efforts of the Government of India and decline to come into line with them. I trust that these efforts have already been started, and that, in a short time, we may hope to get a satisfactory statement from the Government of India to the effect that all maritime States in India have virtually copied the excellent provisions of this Bill.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Pious hopes.

Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, as regards the question raised by my friend, Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar, there is one little difficulty that I was always faced with when dealing with questions like these. The Government of India sitting in their Cabinet come to a certain conclusion, they make their own inquiries,—and so far as I am aware, in the course of their inquiry stage the Government of India never consult any of these States. They, however, come to certain conclusions, and I have no doubt their conclusions are perfectly reasonable and just. But what I very strongly object to is this, that having considered the question only from a certain standpoint so far as they are concerned, a Bill is introduced here, and the Indian States have got to fall into line with them,—not because they have been consulted, not because their opinions have been taken, not because these States came to the same conclusion as the Government of India, but because certain gentlemen sitting over here have come to a certain conclusion, and those that have got the misfortune of having ports must fall into line with them. Sir, I strongly object to that principle. I do not say for a moment that you should not incorporate this salutary provision in this Bill in such a manner that the Indian States may also fall in line with the rules and provisions obtaining in British India in this matter, but what I do object, and object very strongly, to is the line of action which is generally taken by the Government of India in enacting legislation for Indian States without giving them an opportunity to have their say.

Sir, I may here cite the instance of the factory legislation that took place some time ago. The Government of India appointed a Commission. That Commission toured throughout India, but they did not visit a single State. But Government passed the Factories Act, and I know it for a fact that those powers of persuasion, which my friend just referred to, have been brought to bear upon each and every Indian State, and most of them were compelled,—of course not by force or show of force or by over-awing,—to agree to fall in line with the provisions of the Factories Act. Therefore, I submit that while I entirely agree that the maritime States should be asked to fall in line with the action taken in British India in this matter, I feel that at least, as a matter of courtesy, they should have been asked what they thought of it and whether they agreed to this position or not. If they had been asked or consulted, then I withdraw everything that I say now. So far as I am aware, Sir, no such reference was made either in the Select Committee or anywhere else in the Report of the Select Committee to point to the fact that these States were consulted at any stage before enacting this piece of legislation. In the absence of any information of this sort, as to whether the Indian States were consulted or not on this matter, I feel that I am perfectly justified in bringing to the notice of this House, that the persuasive powers which the Government of India have,—and I know they have very strong persuasive powers,—will not be exercised until proper expression of opinion is invited from the States concerned.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I wish to say a few words on this Bill, and my justification in rising on this measure is that I was a party to the Select Committee. Sir, two important questions arose before the Select Committee, and both of them, I must say, were very satisfactorily decided. I am glad to say that the Honourable Member in charge of this Bill agreed with our views on those two points. The first point was the one which was intimated to the Select Committee by Mr. Joshi who is supposed to be a specialist on the question, and the same point was also raised by some other Members as well, and that point was that, in the definition of "processes" in clause 2 (a) should be included work in docks, wharfs and quays and also work in connection with the transfer of goods from a railway wagon alongside a ship or from a warehouse on a wharf or quay. It is well-known now to the House that this measure attempts to deal with the welfare of the workers engaged in hazardous occupations of the kind I have just mentioned, and, with this end in view, the Government of India want to lay down what the Convention agreed to and make certain rules and regulations to give effect to that Convention. Now, Sir, safeguards have been provided against accidents to workers employed on loading and unloading ships. Mr. Joshi thought that loading and unloading ships meant only making a provision as regards accidents on the ships themselves, and so he wanted that the definition should be expanded, and in the note he sent us he wanted the following to be inserted : "Whereas it is necessary to secure protection against accidents of workers working in every dock, wharf, quay or warehouse generally",—this was a point which was taken before the Select Committee, and the Select Committee came to the conclusion that those points were already covered by the very definition of "processes". The Select Committee extended the definition to some extent, and in their Report they explained what the real meaning of the word "processes" was. Sir, I will read paragraph 2 of the Select Committee's Report :

"So far as this proposal does not involve an extension of the scope of the Bill to matters alien to its expressed scope, we are satisfied that a change is unnecessary. The definition of 'the processes' in clause 2 (a) includes work in docks, wharfs, and quays and would include work done in connection with the transfer of goods from a railway wagon alongside a ship or from a warehouse on a wharf or quay."

So far as warehouses generally are concerned, it was decided that only the definition as given here would apply and the benefit of the Act should be given only in the case of warehouses which are in close proximity to the wharf or quay, and not those that are far away, for which there are regulations already in existence. Therefore, the first point was very amicably and satisfactorily decided. The second point also is an important point, and that relates to the Indian States. It is desirable, and even necessary that, in the case of maritime States, the provisions of this Act should apply. It will not be denied that this salutary provision should also apply to the Indian States. I can assure the Raja Bahadur that no principle has been departed from. The States are not to be compelled or forced to apply this Act. The States are only to be asked, the words are very cautious in the report of the Select Committee. We know that the administration of States is being watched today and their defects are not covered up as before, and, for the good government of the States, a provision of this nature should be made, and 12 Noon.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

for that purpose this suggestion has been made in the report of the Select Committee as follows :

"We received an assurance that the Government of India would bring to the notice of the Administrations of those Indian States which possess ports the action now being taken in British India, so that those Administrations may consider the advisability of adopting similar measures in respect of any of their ports which attain dimensions rendering such measures advisable."

Therefore, those two points have been properly provided for, and now there are no differences. I had raised one or two other points in the Select Committee, about the time for prosecuting people and with regard to the quantum of punishment, but then I was referred to the Factories Act where provisions of the same nature exist, so I dropped them and I do not propose to pursue them here. I hope that this Bill will be passed.

Mr. B. Das : It was a pleasure to listen to my Honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, who has infused a breath of fresh air on the floor of this House. It is very seldom that we hear what is agitating the mind of the dark side of India, I mean the Indian India. My Honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, who occasionally forgets that he represents British India and tries to represent an exalted State and speaks the mind of the exalted princes, told us that the Leader of the House and the Government of India do not consult these Indian Princes, and that the latter are so very civilised and so very human in their ideals and ideas that they would gladly jump into the civilised Conventions that the League of Nations and the International Labour Conferences adopt. It is a very good piece of news, and I am very grateful to my Honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, for having expressed that view on behalf of the Indian States, particularly when he represents a very big State, the largest State in India.

Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar : I do not represent any State at all here.

Mr. B. Das : Not here, but you represent the viewpoint of that State. My Honourable friend, the Deputy President, must have felt very happy to have listened to that speech. I think my honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, was not present when the Factories Act was discussed. The Honourable Member in charge of Industries and Labour at that stage stated that there were 34 Indian States which had fallen in line with the humanising legislations of the Department of Industries and Labour.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce, (Member for Industries and Labour) : I am sorry to interrupt my Honourable friend. Did I hear him say 34 Indian States?

Mr. B. Das : Yes.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I do not think I gave the figure 34 States. To the best of my recollection, I only mentioned 8 or 10.

Mr. B. Das : My recollection was that my Honourable friend had mentioned 34 States and gave list of 8 States who have followed up the legislations enacted for British India. However, there are some States, and, of course, if any particular State was anxious to identify itself with the Whitley Committee's recommendations or those of any other Committee that the Government might appoint for the amelioration of the conditions of workers, that Indian State had only to ask the Government of India, and the Government of India would gladly help them. To me it is a pleasing situation that the Indian States are willing to accept such Conventions. But, of course, I know that my Honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, is not connected with any of the maritime States. And we know how turbulent those maritime States are, and whether they will follow any of the measures that are passed here, because it will reduce their income, and, if they introduced a civilised system in one phase of their administration, they would have to become civilised in other phases also, and I believe they are afraid to do that. However, I do hope that the Honourable the Leader of the House will accept the offer that has been made by the Raja Bahadur on behalf of certain Indian States and will try to ask them whether they cannot legislate on the lines of the British Indian enactment. Otherwise, the Government have got the whip hand and they will see that in future no Indian Prince and no subject of an Indian State represents India in the League of Nations or the International Labour Conferences.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I have very little to say. I am sure that my Honourable friend, the Raja Bahadur, will not take exception to the procedure which we propose to follow in this case. Surely, even he would not object to the assurance given by Government in the terms set out in paragraph 3 of the Report of the Select Committee. I am glad that the House has approved of this measure which will go to swell the stream of beneficent legislation which has been initiated during the last few years on behalf of the workers of India.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to the Convention concerning the protection against accidents of workers employed in loading and unloading ships, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 12, both inclusive, were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be passed."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE REPEALING AND AMENDING BILL.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to amend certain enactments and to repeal certain other enactments be taken into consideration."

This Bill does not lend itself to any contentious matter. The whole object of the Bill is to get rid of certain words which have become unnecessary by reason of later Acts that have been passed. It also purports to correct certain of the errors in some Acts. I do not feel justified in taking the House through each of these different enactments, but to give the House an example of what is meant by correcting mistakes, if the House will kindly turn, for instance, to the Indian Partnership Act, it will be found that by mistake section 55 was mentioned, whereas section 56 ought to have been mentioned. Explanations have been given in respect of the different Acts which are found in the Schedule, and I can assure this House that this Act does not make any change in any law, but is absolutely necessary by reason of certain subsequent enactments and the discovery of mistakes.

[Sir Nripendra Sircar.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to amend certain enactments and to repeal certain other enactments be taken into consideration."

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad (Patna and Chota Nagpur cum Orissa : Muhammadan) : In this connection, I want to say that I do not agree with my Honourable friend, the Law Member, that in this Bill there is nothing controversial. If you will see, Sir, you will find there are two lists in the two Schedules in this Bill. One is for amendments and the other is for repealing certain sections of certain Acts. In the Second Schedule, take item No. 3, the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923. In this, they have proposed that in sub-section (1) of section 213, clause (mm) should be repealed. I say that this portion affects my community to a very great extent. The portion which is amended is not only with regard to merchant ships, but rather it is specially in connection with pilgrim ships. If you will see section 213, which has been referred to, it deals with those ships which are native passenger ships and pilgrim ships. At the same time, this portion was specially mentioned when Act XI of 1933 was discussed in 1933 on the floor of this House. This sub-clause (mm) was specially inserted in the Act for the reason I had pointed out on that occasion ; for the inoculation of cholera, the period was mentioned as six months, and I had mentioned on that occasion that in other countries the time is much more, and, then, on behalf of the Government, it was said that this power was given to the Governor General in Council to fix the period for this purpose. Clause (mm) reads in this way. I read that clause to make it more clear. Section 15 (1) (d) says :

"After clause (m), the following clause shall be inserted, namely : ' (mm) The period referred to in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 206 '."

Sir, it means that the period was to be fixed by the Governor General. At the time of discussing the Bill, it was agreed to six months, and then this power was given to the Governor General to increase this period if he was satisfied, and for that reason this House had passed this measure, and now Government want to delete that portion. To my great surprise, I find they have given reasons for all the amendments, but they have specially omitted this amendment in the aims and objects. This is very objectionable. An important question, which is a very controversial point and which affects my community, has been brought up in this form.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Does the Honourable Member refer to the Indian Merchant Shipping Act ?

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Yes. In this Bill, they want to repeal sub-section (1) of section 213, clause (mm) of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act. I say, it is not fair on the part of the Government to repeal that portion. I am pointing out that the reason for repealing this clause has not been mentioned in the aims and objects. Government wanted to shut our eyes, and, for that reason, they have not mentioned it in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. In the past three years, our experience is that Government are trying to make our Haj pilgrimage more difficult, and, with that object, they have brought this. This portion was entered into on that occasion to give power to the Governor General in Council to increase the period. I myself had pointed out on the previous occasion that in other countries the period is two years and ten years. I am sorry, my friend, Mr. Bajpai, and my Honourable friend, Sir Fazl-i-Husain, are absent on this occasion. I think the House remembers it. It was definitely undertaken by the Government that power to fix the period had been left to the Governor General in Council with a view to increasing the period of six months, and now the Government want to repeal that portion in this way and say that this is a non-controversial measure. So, Sir, I seriously object that this measure should not be brought before the House in this way by a Repealing and Amending Bill. Had Government any idea of repealing that portion, it was fair for the Government to bring that in a separate Bill and not in this way that this is a non-controversial measure and that it has been brought in order to clarify the law. With these words, I oppose the motion.

Sir Abdur Rahim (Calcutta and Suburbs : Muhammadan Urban) : It seems to me from the statement made by Mr. Maswood Ahmad that perhaps it is a slip on the part of the Government and it could not be the intention of the Government to bring in any controversial point in a Bill of this nature. The Honourable the Law Member pointed out that the whole object of the Bill was to correct certain obvious errors. I am very glad to see that my Honourable friend, the Law Member, seems to assent to the suggestion that I have put forward, and, I am sure, the Government will rectify the mistake that has been made.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : This Bill is intended to repeal certain provisions, because they are now superfluous by reason of certain other amendments. If I get three minutes more time, I will find out the position in regard to this matter. If I find that this is changing the law, then certainly I would not press for it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I have only a word to say with regard to the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1930. Sir, it is said in the First Schedule attached to this Bill—and I want to draw the attention of the Honourable the Law Member, so that he may explain with regard to the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1934, exactly the amendment that is required in it—Sir, we find that in that Schedule it is said that :

"In Schedule II, in the amendments relating to the Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, the words, brackets and figures 'In sub-section (1) of section 32, the proviso shall be omitted' shall be omitted."

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Now, Sir, referring to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, I find that it is said again there—and I hope the Honourable the Law Member will give me a reply on this point :

“The Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, and the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1930.—The amendments are designed to correct a mistake made in the latter Act.”

That perhaps means the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1930, but it does not explain how this mistake crept in, so that the proviso should be taken away. I should be very much thankful to the Honourable Member if he will enlighten me on that point.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, I think I was right in stating that no change was intended, and (1) (mm) had become unnecessary. The history of that legislation is this. In the course of the passage of clause 9, on the motion of Mr. Maswood Ahmad, sub-clause (a) was amended in section 206. Section 206, as it stood, was changed, and what was introduced was this :

“No pilgrim shall be received on board any pilgrim ship unless he produces medical certificates signed by persons who in the opinion of the officer making an inspection under this section are duly qualified to grant such certificates showing that.....”

and I would draw the attention of the Honourable Member to this passage :

“such pilgrim has been inoculated against cholera within six months before inspection”— so that 206 (1) (a), which refers to the six months, remains. That is not going. That was, as I understand—I was not familiar with the earlier history—that was introduced as the result of a motion by my Honourable friend, Mr. Maswood Ahmad. Having regard to the result of that amendment, to leave (1) (mm) would now be idiotic. My friend's point is already there by reason of the amendment which he has succeeded in introducing. Therefore, I do not admit for one second that we are going to change the law. The point for which my Honourable friend tried he has succeeded in achieving and that we are not going to affect in any way. That is the whole explanation ; there is nothing sinister behind it.

Sir Abdur Rahim : What is the provision of (1) (mm) ?

Mr. G. H. Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, if I may be allowed to read that, sub-section (1) of section 213 of the principal Act runs as follows :

“The Governor General in Council may make rules to regulate all or any of the following matters, namely, (a), (b), (c), etc.”

Then, we come to (mm) :

“The period referred to in clause (a) of sub-section (1A) of section 206.”

When that was put in, clause (a) of sub-section (1A) of section 206 referred to the prescribed period and left the period to be prescribed. Subsequently, clause (a) of sub-section (1A) of section 206 was amended, so as to specify the period in terms “within six months”. Therefore, it became clearly inept to retain the rule-making power to prescribe a period which is laid down in terms in the Act itself.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : The main point here is concerning the period of six months. It was fixed and then power was given to the Governor General in Council to extend that period. My point was that the period should be one year, as it is in the Egyptian law—and I quoted some law on that point—but at that time it was not agreed to by the House and it was fixed to six months only, but, then, afterwards, this clause (mm) was kept, so that this power was given to the Governor General in Council to extend the period, that is, if he wants to increase it, that will be in the hands of the Governor General in Council. As far as I understood on that occasion, the period of six months, referred to in clause (a) of sub-section (1) (i) of section 206, was to be increased by the Governor General in Council at the time of making rules. But, now, after repealing this, the Government want that this power should be taken away from the Governor General in Council, and I say that, if for any reason these two portions are not in conformity with each other, then, in that case, I would prefer to repeal that portion of clause (1) (iv) and not this clause (mm). That is the main point. In my opinion, six months is a very short period. If these two clauses are not in conformity with each other, I and my community would prefer to omit that portion of clause (1) (iv) instead of repealing this portion of (mm), because we have got ample power to represent our case before the Governor General in Council, and, after that, we may satisfy the Governor General in Council that, in all other parts of the world, the time fixed for a pilgrim is one year or two years, and why should it be that in India it should be six months,—and so, Sir, this is a controversial measure. In any case, it cannot be called a non-controversial measure and should be examined by a Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Is it that the prior Act left the power of fixing the period to the Governor General in Council, and that the subsequent Act fixed that period in the Act itself ?

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : That power was also given to the Governor General in Council by the same Act,—and the six months period was fixed by the same Act, it was not by a subsequent Act. Had it been made subsequently, then the case would have been quite different. Both the powers were conferred by the same Act, and, so, if there was anything of that nature, I would ask the Honourable the Law Member to repeal that portion and not this portion of (mm). So this is a controversial measure, and I hope controversial measures should not be brought up in the form of this Bill.

Sir Abdur Rahim : If both provisions were brought in by the same Act, then the matter becomes controversial, undoubtedly.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, this only illustrates that some people can raise a controversy where none exists. If the two sections had said that the period in one section is six months and in another it is nine months, the argument of my Honourable friend, Mr. Maswood Ahmad, would have been very legitimate. He could have said : “Why keep it at six months, and why not nine months ?” That is not the position. Under (1) (mm), certainly the time could be prescribed, but, as the result of my Honourable friend's amendment, 206 (1) (a) fixed the period at six months. Therefore, the Governor General cannot by rules change what has been fixed in the Act itself.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : This power was that the Governor General.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : If my Honourable friend will not interrupt me, that is the exact situation, and I still maintain that there is no change. The Governor General cannot, if (1) (mm) remains now, go against the express provision of the Statute which fixed the period at six months. I cannot make the point clearer, and that is all I have got to say.

Sir Abdur Rahim : If, by the same Act, both the sections were enacted, then surely it is a matter on which the judgment of this House is required as to which of them should be repealed or which of them should be retained. Because one confers power on the Governor General which is inconsistent with another section of the Act, it does not necessarily follow that that power should be taken away. It may follow that this House may decide that section 201 should be modified and not the rule-making power. Apparently it was due to some mistake or oversight on the part of the House to pass both those provisions. Now, the question is, what would the House have done if this matter was brought to its attention? I submit to the House that it is really a matter for the House to decide, and I do not know that this is an occasion on which it can decide. The Act is not before us, nor is the policy, as regards inoculation of the pilgrims before they are allowed to embark, is before the House, and I think that it cannot be decided in this way in an indirect manner.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, may I say a few words just to place the position, as I understand it, before the House. When this amending Bill was introduced, there was primarily a provision in the Bill which amended section 206 and which stated that the period would be prescribed by the Government. The period will be a prescribed period, and it will be so prescribed by the Governor General in Council. It was, therefore, taken for granted that the Governor General will prescribe the actual period which would lapse before this particular inhibition would pass away. In consonance with that provision in the earlier portion of the Bill, the later provision maintained that (mm) should be added, whereby the Governor General in Council will frame rules to prescribe the period. Now, when these two provisions were simultaneously before the House, because the Bill was one Bill and it should be understood in that sense alone, the earlier provision was first taken up and the later provision was only a corollary to the earlier provision which suggested that the time should be a prescribed time. The House felt that it should not be left to the discretion of the Governor General in Council. My friend, Mr. Maswood Ahmad, moved the amendment that the time should be an ascertained time and not a vague time which may depend upon the will and discretion of the Governor General in Council. He, therefore, moved the amendment that six months should be the period prescribed, and it should not be left to the discretion of the Governor General in Council. When that amendment was before the House, I venture to suggest that the House gave its decision on the issue, which my Leader, Sir Abdur Rahim, has now presented to us, namely, whether the period should be a prescribed period, that is to say, a period dependent on the will and the discretion of the Governor General in Council, or whether it should be a definite and ascertained period, namely, six months, which Mr. Maswood Ahmad wants. The House then decided that it will not leave the question to the discretion of the Governor General in Council, but will put in a definite and ascertained period, namely, six months, and adopted the amendment of Mr. Maswood Ahmad. It was then for the Member in charge and for Sir Lancelot Graham, whose vigilant eye never misses a thing like that, to have brought in a consequential amendment deleting the latter provision to add clause (mm), which was the right thing to do. That was not done. It was passed. It was for the Government spokesman to have brought in an amendment. As that amendment was not brought before the House, my Honourable friend, the Law Member, now seeks to amend the Act. That seems to me to be the position. There is no controversy involved. It is merely re-inforcing a decision which has been already arrived at, as recently as 1933, by this House that the period should be a definite and an ascertained period, namely, six months, and should not depend upon the discretion of the Governor General in Council.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair would like to hear from the Law Member what the legal position is. So long as section 206, clause (1) (a), remains on the Statute-book, that is, prescribing the time for six months, can the Governor General exercise the power under section 203 (mm) ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : In my humble view, he cannot.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Therefore, the amendment to clause 203 is a consequential amendment.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That is my submission.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : What has Mr. Maswood Ahmad now got to say ?

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : I wanted to say that if these two clauses do not agree with each other, and, in the presence of clause 206 (1) (a), the Governor General cannot exercise his power under clause (mm), then my community want that that should be deleted and not this.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member can oppose that.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, there is some sort of ambiguity, and it may be that the explanations given by the Government or by my friends here may stand the test of being true. But, I am sure, that in the form in which the amendment has been brought, it seems to me that it might be referred to the Select Committee for their decision. If, however, you give it as your ruling that it is all right, then my submission is that it will satisfy perhaps this side of the House more than if it is decided arbitrarily.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : There is no question of a ruling on this point.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Then, I move that it should be sent to the Select Committee. I may mention the names of the members of the Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : There is no amendment on the Order Paper for reference to the Select Committee.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : It is only with the permission of the Chair that I wish to move that motion.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I believe the Honourable Member was in the middle of his argument and he has not yet replied to the question that I put to him. I do not know if the Honourable Member followed me in the heat of the other question. If not, I will repeat my question.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : If you please.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : My question is that an amendment is going to be made on account of the enactment of the Dangerous Drugs Act of 1930. You will find that on page 3 of the Bill, it is said that "In sub-section (1) of section 32 (which means the Abkari Act) the proviso shall be omitted". Then in the Statement of Objects and Reasons under clause (8) it is said that "the amendments are designed to correct a mistake made in the latter Act". That means that there is a mistake in the Dangerous Drugs Act which is going to be corrected by eliminating the proviso from the Abkari Act. I would request the Honourable the Law Member to enlighten me as to where is the necessity for it and what is the underlying object of the amendment.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Will my Honourable friend kindly repeat what is the portion which he read just now?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I read from the Statement of Objects and Reasons. It is clause 8 and its heading is "The Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, and the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1930. What I want to know is whether it is a real mistake and how is it that it is interfering with the law that has been made under the Dangerous Drugs Act, or was there a mistake in the Dangerous Drugs Act itself?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The answer to my Honourable friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, is this, in the Dangerous Drugs Act, II of 1930, a large number of amendments were made. They, in fact, covered one full page in close print, but I do not propose to read them out. That is Schedule II. The note which my Honourable friend read out is this :

"In Schedule II, in the amendments relating to the Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, the words, brackets and figures 'in sub-section (1) of section 32, the proviso shall be omitted' shall be omitted."

That is to be found as one of the amendments here. If my Honourable friend will turn to the Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, my Honourable friend will then find that this is a mistake, because there was no intention to change the Bombay Abkari Act, 1878. Therefore, if the question is in which Act the error has been committed, the answer is that the note is correct, namely, the amendments are designed to correct a mistake made in the latter Act, namely, in Schedule II. This is a very long Schedule of the Act of 1930. It does not involve any change in the law as it now exists.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am not satisfied with the reply at all. The point is that there is some mistake in the provisions of the Bombay Abkari Act, and I want to know what is the mistake.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The mistake is indicated by the words which are quoted.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : But the proviso is going to be removed.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The mistake is indicated in the words which are quoted. If my Honourable friend will turn to the Schedule, it says :

"In Schedule II, in the amendments relating to the Bombay Abkari Act, 1878, the words, brackets and figures 'in sub-section (1) of section 32, the proviso shall be omitted' shall be omitted."

That is what appeared to be a mistake. It ought not to appear there at all. It makes no sense. That is a clear error. Our amendment will not change either the Bombay Act or the Indian Act.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Then a certain proviso is not actually going to be removed.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The words which are appearing here by mistake will be removed, and the mistake will be corrected.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill to amend certain enactments and to repeal certain other enactments be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2, 3 and 4 were added to the Bill.

The First Schedule was added to the Bill.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Second Schedule stand part of the Bill."

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Sir, it now appears that all the entries are for consequential amendments. I want to move an amendment to the effect that a portion from the Second Schedule should be deleted. Unless you allow me to move my amendment, I have no right to do so. The Honourable the Law Member also said that no controversial measure would be brought before the House, and I hoped he would agree to delete that controversial portion, but he did not accept my suggestion and now I have no alternative but to move an amendment, and, I think, the Government will raise no objection to my moving the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : What is the item that the Honourable Member wants to delete?

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : I want to delete the item relating to the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1923.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Does any Honourable Member object?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : When the amendment is moved, I shall oppose it. I shall not adduce any further argument, because I have already adduced my arguments.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Sir, I beg to move :

"That from the Second Schedule the following item shall be deleted :

1923.	XXI	The Indian Merchant	In sub-section (1) of
		Shipping Act, 1923.	section 213 clause
			(mm) '."

I only want to add a few words in this connection. When I quoted from the different Acts of the Straits Settlements, on which the Indian

[Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad.]

Merchant Shipping Act was based, I pointed out that in some cases it was one year and in some other cases it was two years. As far as I remember, it was then said—I am sorry I have not got a copy of that Act at present in my hands—that this power would be in the hands of the Governor General. At that time I moved for a longer period, but this House decided that the period should only be six months. At that time we thought that the power to increase the period will remain in the hands of the Governor General and that he will be in a position to extend that period. If you will see that section, there was this possibility. The section reads :

“No pilgrim shall be received on board any pilgrim ship unless he produces medical certificates signed by persons who, in the opinion of the officer making an inspection under this section, are duly qualified to grant such certificates, showing that such pilgrim—

(a) has been inoculated against cholera within six months before the inspection, and

(b) has been vaccinated against small-pox within five years before the inspection :

Provided that the officer making the inspection may dispense with the certificate of vaccination, if in his opinion the pilgrim has marks showing that he has had small-pox.”

It was admitted at that time that six months time should be given, and, at the same time, the power was given to the Governor General who may extend the period. My opinion up till now is the same. But if the House thinks that both portions cannot remain on the Statute-book, I will appeal to the Government at least to omit this item at present and to refer the matter to the Select Committee who may decide whether to omit this portion or that portion. No doubt at present we are not in a position in this House to carry any amendment by a majority of votes, because the Government have sufficient votes to defeat us. I, however, appeal to the Honourable the Law Member, in view of the fact that the Leader of the Opposition has also supported the plea that this is a controversial measure, I appeal to the Government that this Bill should be referred to the Select Committee, so that the Select Committee may decide whether they want to give this power to the Governor General or they want to restrict the period to six months only. This is a very important point, and, if the Select Committee agrees to the suggestion that the period should be only six months, in that case no one will object. This question has not been decided and many Members, both in this House and outside, thought that this power should be given to the Governor General and the period of six months was not sufficient. I, therefore, suggest that this measure cannot be passed without sending it to the Select Committee, or at least this provision should be deleted from the Second Schedule at present.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Amendment moved :

“That from the Second Schedule the following item shall be deleted :

1923.	XXI	The Indian Merchant	In sub-section (1) of
		Shipping Act, 1923.	section 213, clause
			(mm) .”

Mr. G. S. Bajpai (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I confess that my Honourable friend has taken us all somewhat at a disadvantage, because he did not give us timely notice of the point which he has now raised. As far as I can make out, he wants now that power shall be retained by the Governor General in Council to prescribe any period that he likes as the period which must elapse before a certificate for inoculation against cholera can be given. May I, Sir, on this occasion, take the opportunity of reminding him of his own words when he was moving the amendment to the relevant clause of the Indian Merchant Shipping (Amendment) Bill, i.e., the Haj Bill ? He moved,—and I am reading from page 3362 of the Proceedings of the Legislative Assembly for 8th April, 1933 :

“That in clause 9 of the Bill, for part (a) of the proposed sub-section (1A) the following be substituted :

“(a) has been inoculated against cholera within six months before the inspection ; and .”

Then, Sir, he proceeded to read from the Straits Settlements Ordinance on the subject and finally he made this remark :

“Sir, the suggestion that it should be for six months is in the Ordinance of the Straits Settlements and in the International Sanitary Convention. Government have said ‘such period not being less than one month as may be prescribed’. This is not satisfactory. I say, there should be a definite mention of six months.” (Laughter.)

Then, Sir, I would, in all humility, quote my own words also. I said :

“The reason why I have risen is to save the time of the House. This morning, my Honourable friend thought that the Straits Settlements Ordinance was the most retrograde measure in existence, but now he is drawing upon that measure in order to support his argument. However, animated as I am by great goodwill towards my Honourable friend, I am prepared to accept this retrograde amendment, though I would explain that it would not stop short at the word which he has mentioned.”

And then I went on to suggest something else. It appears to me that, if a controversy has arisen, it is because my Honourable friend has had a controversy with himself. For the rest, this is really carrying out, as my Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Mudaliar, pointed out, the verdict of the House on an amendment which was moved by my Honourable friend himself who has now conveniently forgotten what he said in 1933 and wants something else done now.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“That from the Second Schedule the following item shall be deleted :

1923.	XXI	The Indian Merchant	In sub-section (1) of
		Shipping Act, 1923.	section 213, clause
			(mm) .”

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“That the Second Schedule stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

The Second Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill be passed."

I really have nothing to add, and I do not think I should take up the time of the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE SEA CUSTOMS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. A. J. Raisman (Government of India : Nominated Official) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill further to amend the Sea Customs Act, 1878, for a certain purpose, be taken into consideration."

Honourable Members will perhaps recall that this Bill was introduced in this House during the course of last Session by Sir George Schuster on the 29th January. It has, therefore, been in the hands of Honourable Members for several months now. It is, as will be seen from the Statement of Objects and Reasons, a measure of a very simple nature, and in view of the time that has elapsed and the fact that nothing has occurred during that period to suggest that the Bill raises any difficult or controversial points, I make this motion for consideration. I should perhaps first explain what the real object of the drawback provisions of any sea customs Act is. The object is to facilitate entrepôt trade; that is to say, when merchandise has been imported for sale into the country, but, for any reason, has remained unsold for a reasonable time, it is obviously desirable that the goods should be able to be re-exported to another market without the merchant incurring the loss of the whole of the import duties originally paid on them. This is a facility which trade may naturally expect from the administration; and I want to make it quite clear that there is nothing in the present Bill which will detract in any way from those facilities. Goods imported into this country and not taken into use will be entitled to the full benefit of the drawback provisions in the same way as hitherto.

There is, however, another class of goods which at the present moment qualifies equally for the benefit of the drawback provisions of the Act, and that is, goods which, after importation, are taken into use. Those goods in many cases spend quite a considerable part of their useful life in India. Now, it is a generally recognised principle that customs duties are a tax on consumption. These goods having been in India for two, and in some cases three, years, can nevertheless be tendered at a custom house for export, and provided they are identified and provided they are worth the amount of money which the exporter claims back from the custom house, they may be exported and the owner may obtain a refund of 7/8ths of the duty originally paid. I might perhaps exemplify this anomalous provision by taking one or two instances.

Take, for instance, a motor car imported at Bombay. Suppose it is valued on import at Rs. 4,000 and it is dutiable at 30 per cent. It pays Rs. 1,200 as import duty, and it is now worth Rs. 5,200. It is taken into use and run for three years during which time it may do 50 or 60 thousand miles. The average life of a car, I would suggest, is not more than (say) five years. Nevertheless, before the expiry of three years, this car may be tendered at a custom house, and, on proof that it is the identical car, the owner may ship it and claim Rs. 1,050 back of the Rs. 1,200 which was paid on importation. So that, for three years' use in the country of a car worth Rs. 5,200, the consumption tax paid is Rs. 150 on an article on which the customs duty is 30 per cent. I will take another instance, that of cinematograph films. Now in the case of cinematograph films, the value at the time of import includes the charge which is made for royalty, that is, the charge for the use of the film. This is important in connection with films, because, for two or three years the films may be exhibited up and down the country, and, of course, that part of the value which is represented by royalty is fully consumed. Nevertheless, the owner may come back with the film, and,—I admit it will be difficult to prove that the film so used was worth 7/8ths of the import duty originally paid,—but if he can prove that, he would be entitled to get 7/8ths of the import duty back. The situation, I would submit, is plainly anomalous, and the object of this Bill is to rectify that anomaly by taking powers to restrict the facilities for the grant of drawback. The method would be that the Governor General in Council would make rules which would be published in the Gazette of India. It will be seen from the wording of the Bill that we do not contemplate that a single body of rules will necessarily cover the different classes of cases which have to be dealt with. Naturally, a good deal depends on the nature of the goods, especially on the length of their useful life. I would further like to make it clear that there is no intention of acting in a precipitate manner. The Government are quite prepared to consult the interests affected before they actually enforce rules which will introduce a modification in the position, and in particular they are quite prepared to allow such time to elapse as will enable persons who have imported goods in the expectation that drawback facilities would be available to export those goods and obtain the drawback. Such a period would also enable persons, who had placed orders for goods in the expectation that drawback facilities would be available, to take action and possibly cancel their orders if they thought necessary.

There is only one small point which I think I might add, and that is that almost the only objection we have received to this

1 P.M.

Bill is from automobile associations, who have represented that the present drawback provisions do make it possible for the tourist or temporary visitor to the country to bring his car with him and use it in the country and when leaving the country to obtain the greater part or 7/8ths of the duty back. In regard to that, I am glad to be able to say that we now have under consideration the introduction of the system which is now in vogue in most countries in the world, namely, the trip-tique or the international carney which enables the owner of a motor car to import his car free into any country on a guarantee furnished by an automobile association that he will re-export it within a prescribed time and that failing that the association will pay to the Government the amount of customs duty involved. We are at the present moment working out the details of that system, and I hope that in a short time now it will be made applicable to India. Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill further to amend the Sea Customs Act, 1878, for a certain purpose, be taken into consideration."

Mr. B. V. Jadhav (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support this motion. I had on more than one occasion to bring to the notice of this House the condition of the film industry and the indifference with which it was treated by Government. I need not go into the same matter over again, but I should like to refer to it in a few words.

In other countries, the Government are anxious to encourage the film industry. In England, for instance, there is the quota system, under which the English made films are to be exhibited for a certain period of time in every theatre. The Government of India have not seen the necessity of introducing any such measure. But, in spite of Government's indifference, the film industry is making some progress, but it is handicapped in a number of ways. The raw material of that industry is very heavily taxed, and, not only the raw film is taxed, but the mechanism of exhibition, such as producers, projectors, amplifiers, loud-speakers, etc., which are required for wiring the theatre to change it from a silent theatre to a talkie theatre, is also very heavily taxed. Formerly, these parts of machinery were treated by the customs officer as machinery and they were taxed only at 10 per cent. Latterly, the Government appear to have made changes in their rules, and, instead of 10 per cent., they are charged at 20 per cent. for British made goods and at 30 per cent. for foreign made goods. In this way the tax is levied upon the instruments that are used in this industry.

I may bring to the notice of the Government that the Film Group of India has made certain representations to Government and their grievances were ventilated in this House by my humble self and by my friends. It was brought to the notice of the Government that the rebate system on exposed films acted as an impetus or encouragement to foreign films, and, therefore, foreign films competed severely with Indian made films. I am very glad that Government have come to appreciate that view, and this Bill is the result. In the same way, we pointed out that the duty on foreign made films was not adequate—it was very light—and that helped the foreign made films to compete with the Indian made films. Government have also reconsidered their decision and they have increased the duty on imported exposed films. But, then, I am very sorry to repeat on the floor of this House that the Government at that time could not carry out the promises they had held out. Government had stated that any income derived from such sources will be utilised first in reducing the duty on raw films, and so on. I am very sorry that the Finance Member saw that it was not possible for him to make any reduction in that duty. There is a well-known saying in Sanskrit that a hungry man will commit any crime, and a man reduced to the lowest straits is merciless. So I do not blame the Finance Member for being merciless and for having committed the sin of having gone back on his words. I hope his successor, who is not here today in this House, will help the industry by reducing the heavy duty on raw films and also by bringing the projectors, amplifiers and loudspeakers, which are used for wiring talkie theatres, under the category of implements or machinery. Sir, it is a fact that these things are used for other purposes as well ; and, therefore, an objection might be brought forward that it will be very difficult for the customs officer to distinguish the instruments that are used for the cinema trade, and those which are not used for the cinema trade. Sir, I think, there need be no insuperable difficulty, because a system of rebates can be instituted by which a certificate from a District Magistrate to the effect that certain machinery is used in wiring a particular house in a particular village or town should be sufficient to grant a rebate to the owner of that theatre. In that way, the heavy burden put upon the cinema industry can be removed.

The question of the use of motor cars stands on a different footing. In the case of exposed films of foreign manufacture, it was clear that the long period of two years was made use of by the importers of foreign films in exhibiting those films at various places, and they contrived to send back almost worthless films and draw the rebate, and ultimately they were destroyed at the ports where they were received. So Government were deprived of a part of their revenue. Now, Government have realised the position, and I welcome this measure.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I have very great pleasure in supporting this motion. The operative part of this Bill relates to section 43 of the Sea Customs Act which runs as follows :

"When any goods, having been charged with import duty at one Customs-port and thence exported to another, are re-exported by sea as aforesaid, drawback shall be allowed on such goods as if they had been so re-exported from the former Port :

Provided that, in every such case, the goods be identified to the satisfaction of the officer, in charge of the Customs-house at the port of final exportation and that such final exportation be made within three years from the date on which they were first imported into British India."

Now, I am glad that the Government have brought forward a Bill for the purpose of doing away with this drawback system. This drawback system has many disadvantages. It was, in the first place, doing a damage to the customs duties of the Government. In the second place, it was sometimes difficult to identify the exact goods which, on its import, had once paid duty and then was subject to drawback at the time of its re-export abroad. In the Statement of Objects and Reasons, two classes of goods have been mentioned, I mean motor cars and cinematograph films. Both these two classes of goods have been mentioned by my Honourable friend, Mr. Jadhav, in his speech. So, I do not want to repeat the same arguments over again. The film industry is in its infant stage in this country and it is the duty of both the Government, and those of us who sit on this side of the House, to give an impetus to the film industry. The import duty on raw films puts the indigenous industry at a disadvantage, and so it is advisable that that point should be taken into consideration. I am very pleased that Government have at last thought it proper to bring in this Bill. There is only one point which I should like to bring to your notice in this connection and it is this. I should like to be satisfied that the rule-making powers which are being given to the Governor General in Council are not of too wide an extent. I should have thought that some of the important points which are to be embodied in the rules might perhaps have been embodied in the text of the Bill itself, but I hope that the Government will give an opportunity before framing these rules, to the public and the individuals concerned, to submit whatever objections or suggestions they may have to make in the rules. With these few words, I support the motion.

[Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Sea Customs Act, 1878, for a certain purpose, be taken into consideration.”

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That clause 2 stand part of the Bill.”

Sir Leslie Hudson (Bombay : European) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That in clause 2 of the Bill, in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 43A, after the words ‘ The Governor General in Council may ’ the words ‘ subject to the condition of previous publication ’ be inserted.”

Sir, on the whole, there is very general agreement about this Bill. I am quite sure that there will be wide satisfaction at the statement made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Raisman, in moving the consideration of the Bill that the Government have under consideration measures legalising the “ Triptyque ” system which is in force in most of the world and which is badly in need of enforcement here.

There are certain instances where the withdrawal of the drawback concession would be a definite hardship on persons and firms and commercial bodies of which I propose to give one or two instances later, and it is for that reason that I move this amendment, which I hope, from what has fallen from the lips of Mr. Raisman, will be accepted by Government. Instances that occur to one are, firstly, the component parts of machinery which may be found unsuitable for the purpose for which they have been imported or which may be defective. In cases like that, it seems to me right and just that the importer should have the benefit of the drawback concession. Similarly, containers which are used in the carriage of compressed liquids and compressed gases and acids, which are imported into this country for manufacturing purposes, are sent back to the country of origin for being re-filled and brought out to this country again. Under the present concession, whereby 7/8ths of the duty is refunded on re-export, it is obvious that it only requires eight movements to and fro for the Government to realise the 100 per cent. duty after which time there will be a steady revenue coming in. If the concession with regard to these containers is withdrawn, I maintain that it would entail a distinct increase in the cost of manufacture and distribution of the goods for which the containers are required. The same thing applies to component parts of machinery which I have already mentioned. The Honourable Member has already spoken about motor cars, but there are other articles on which, under certain conditions, I think the drawback should be retained, — articles, such as cameras and radio sets, scientific instruments and firearms which may be brought out to this country for a purely temporary period. I hope the Honourable Member will accept this amendment. He has already given us an assurance that the rules will be sufficiently wide to exempt articles and goods where it can be shown that real hardship does exist and where definite hindrance to trade and industry may be caused.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Amendment moved :

“ That in clause 2 of the Bill, in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 43A, after the words ‘ The Governor General in Council may ’ the words ‘ subject to the condition of previous publication ’ be inserted.”

Mr. A. J. Raisman : Sir, I have no objection to accepting my Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson's amendment. On the contrary, I welcome it. I ought perhaps to explain why the words were not inserted in the first instance. The clause in question will form part of the Sea Customs Act, and, for reasons which are obvious, it is not usual in the case of legislation or rules relating to customs to provide for previous publication, because there is a possibility of “ forestalling ”. In the case of drawbacks, there is, of course, no serious objection on this score, and so I am quite prepared to accept the amendment. With regard to the few remarks which fell from my Honourable friend, they do illustrate the point I was making, which is that we cannot at this stage indicate precisely what rules will be made to cover the different cases, because each class of goods will have to be carefully considered, and, when we publish our rules for criticism, we shall then come up against various kinds of difficulties and hard cases, such as Sir Leslie Hudson has pointed out, and I hope we shall be able to make the necessary modifications to cover cases of the type which have been mentioned.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That in clause 2 of the Bill, in sub-section (2) of the proposed section 43A, after the words ‘ The Governor General in Council may ’ the words ‘ subject to the condition of previous publication ’ be inserted.”

The motion was adopted.

Sir Leslie Hudson : I do not wish to move the second amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That clause 2, as amended, stand part of the Bill.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2, as amended, was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. A. J. Raisman : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That the Bill, as amended, be passed.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That the Bill, as amended, be passed.”

The motion was adopted.

THE NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. K. Sanjiva Row (Government of India : Nominated Official) :
Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State and as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The Bill is a short one, but it has a long history behind it. In 1924, the Bombay High Court gave a ruling with reference to a hundi which was on the face of it payable to a particular person or bearer, but which had an endorsement on the back authorising payment to a third party. The Bombay High Court held that the endorsement changed the character of the hundi and was no longer payable to bearer, but to the person whose name was mentioned in the endorsement or in accordance with his directions. This ruling of the High Court caused some consternation among the commercial and banking circles who had previously assumed that so long as a negotiable instrument was on the face of it payable to bearer, the drawee need not trouble about anything that was written on the back and could safely pay its value to the person who might present it. Government were, therefore, urged to introduce legislation which would restore to the bankers the security which they had previously imagined themselves to possess. After consultation with Local Governments and commercial bodies, a Bill was introduced in this House which provided that negotiable instruments which, on the face, were payable to bearer, should, in no circumstances, change their character as bearer instruments, in spite of anything written on the back. This Bill was, however, rejected by this Assembly in September, 1929, partly because it was considered that the application of the legislation to hundis might involve undesirable interference with the traditional methods and practice of indigenous bankers and partly because it was considered that the question should be first examined by the Indian Central Banking Inquiry Committee. That Committee duly examined the question and recommended that cheques, which were originally drawn payable to bearer, should not lose their bearer character on account of any endorsements written on the back. They considered, however, that the proposed legislation should not apply to negotiable instruments other than those which were drawn in the form of cheques. The simple measure now before the House is the result of this recommendation. The House will observe that, in accordance with that recommendation, the proposed amendment refers only to cheques and not to negotiable instruments in general. The main objection raised in connection with the previous Bill regarding its application to hundis and possible interference with the traditional methods and practice of indigenous bankers is, therefore, no longer applicable to the present measure. Sir, this is the immediate purpose of the Bill, but it has a wider object than the protection of the banks. In the interests of the financial development of the country as a whole, it is essential that we should encourage the use of cheques by the general public much more freely than at present. It is possible that the growth of the cheque habit may be retarded if the purport of a cheque can be changed by an endorsement written in a script or language which may be unintelligible to the party to whom it may be subsequently transferred. If, on the other hand, a cheque payable to bearer is always payable to bearer, unless the word "bearer" on the face of the cheque is altered to "order", the necessary confidence is more likely to be acquired. Sir, the Bill is the result of long and careful consideration, and the Select Committee has unanimously recommended that it be passed. I have, therefore, no hesitation in commending it to the acceptance of this House. Sir, I move. (Applause.)

(774)

THE NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

775

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State and as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. K. Sanjiva Row : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill be passed." (Applause.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State and as reported by the Select Committee, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN TRUSTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. K. Sanjiva Row (Government of India : Nominated Official) :
Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration."

Sir, the purpose of this Bill is to enable trustees to invest trust funds in securities which, under the present sub-section (a) of section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act, are not Government securities, but which are fully guaranteed by the Government of India or a Local Government. For some years the Government of Madras have been trying to secure trustee status to the debentures of the Central Land Mortgage Bank of Madras. But, so long as those debentures were not fully guaranteed, the Government of India could not accept the proposal. This attitude of the Government of India was not due to any lack of sympathy with the object which the Government of Madras desired to achieve. The distinction between trustee securities and other securities is mainly intended to protect beneficiaries who are not able to look after their own interests, and it is, therefore, the duty of the Government of India to see that the protection is as complete as possible. If trustee status were accorded to any securities, which were not fully guaranteed, it would be very difficult to resist claims on behalf of other securities which were of a less reliable type and this might lead to an undesirable relaxation of the standards which Government feel bound to maintain. The question was, however, reconsidered in connection with the Resolution moved in this House by my Honourable friend, Mr. Thampan, and it was decided that it would be justifiable to introduce legislation on the lines proposed if the Government of Madras were prepared to substitute a complete guarantee of both principal and interest for the limited guarantee which had previously been given. The Government of Madras accepted this condition and agreed to extend the guarantee. The next question was, whether the trustee status should be given only to the debentures of the Madras Central Land Mortgage Bank or whether legislation should be undertaken covering all securities which were similarly guaranteed by a Local Government. We preferred the second alternative, as there appeared to be no reason why the debentures of other Provincial Banks, which had been similarly guaranteed, should not acquire trustee status. In deciding the form of the amendment which is now before the House, we were also influenced by the fact that, in accordance with the recommendation of the Joint Select Committee on the Reserve Bank Bill, a proviso has been added to sub-section (8) of section 17 of the Reserve Bank Act to enable the Bank to purchase and sell securities which are fully guaranteed by a Local Government. Sir, I do not think I need elaborate the justification for this Bill. Government have frequently been urged to take more active measures to encourage the development of Land Mortgage Banks. The measure now before the House will materially assist the Land Mortgage Bank of Madras and may also benefit Land Mortgage Banks in other Provinces. I am sure, the House will share my satisfaction that the Government of India have now found it possible to offer this assistance. Sir, I move. (Applause.)

L236LAD

[Mr. K. Sanjiva Row.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration."

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I certainly for my part share the satisfaction of my Honourable friend, Mr. Sanjiva Row, that at long last even the Government of India have moved in a matter on which agitation has been so strenuous and consistent, not merely from the public and from a known agitator, if I may say so, even like myself, but also from a well-established, orderly and sacrosanct Government like the Government of Madras. Sir, it took several years to convince the Government of India and the Finance Department in particular that nothing revolutionary was intended by the proposal which we put forward that debentures of Land Mortgage Banks should be treated as trustee securities, so that the investing public may invest in these securities with greater confidence. It is not exactly correct, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Sanjiva Row, tried to convey that Land Mortgage Banks must always have been guaranteed by the Local Government if their debentures were to secure trustee status. So far as the Land Mortgage Bank of Bombay is concerned.....

Mr. B. V. Jadhav (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : There is no Land Mortgage Bank in Bombay.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : At any rate, there was legislation as early as 1914 giving Land Mortgage Bank debentures of Bombay.....

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Bombay Provincial Co-operative Banks.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Well, I stand corrected to that extent. Giving them the status of a trustee security without any backing of the Local Government,—and that was the point I was on—it does not matter whether it was Land Mortgage Banks or other Banks. My friend says it is not so ; I certainly was under the impression that the legislation in 1914 did not require, as a pre-requisite, the backing up of the Provincial Government, so far as principal and interest were concerned. I, however, have no quarrel with that suggestion ; and, in fact, at the informal conferences, that some of us had with the Honourable Sir George Schuster, we accepted the condition that the Provincial Government should back up these securities, and that then and then alone should the status of trustee security be secured for them.

Mr. K. Sanjiva Row : The debentures of the Bombay Provincial Co-operative Bank are included in trustee securities on the condition that the interest thereon is guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

An Honourable Member : What about the principal ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Now, Sir, as I stated, I have no quarrel with this condition that the Provincial Government should guarantee both the principal and the interest, in case the trustee status was given to these securities. In fact, in our informal conferences, we accepted that condition, and we are glad that the Finance Department has at last moved in this matter. But, while I am on this subject, I should like to refer to another condition which the Finance Department has insisted upon and is now insisting upon and which does not find a place in the Bill. They told us that the amount of guarantee which the Provincial Government can extend is of a limited character, that it cannot be beyond, for instance, fifty lakhs of rupees, and that the Provincial Government, which is under the control of the Government of India with reference to its loan policy, will not be permitted to back up these securities beyond a sum of fifty lakhs of rupees ; at any rate, that was what I was given to understand at the informal conference we had, and, I believe, in the letter which the Government of India have addressed to the Local Government on the subject, whether it is exactly the amount of fifty lakhs or not, certainly a certain amount of maximum is prescribed, beyond which the Local Government cannot go, in backing up these trustee securities. I speak subject to correction, but that is the recollection I have of the negotiations that took place with the Minister in charge of this Department of my Presidency who was in Delhi, and, if I am correct, that is also the content of the letter which the Government of India have addressed to the Local Government. Now, it is about that condition I should like to say a word.

The object of this Land Mortgage Bank is to redeem the indebtedness of the landholders in my Presidency—in fact in any
3 P. M. Presidency. We have heard recently an official conference on the subject, and a great deal of talk has been indulged in about Debt Conciliation Boards, about the methods by which rural indebtedness could be relieved, and so forth, but from newspaper reports and even from the communiqué of the Government of India, there is no indication of a solution of the problem, and the impression left is that the Conference broke up, if I may say so, "as usual" without anybody being the wiser for the Conference having been held. They were wiser certainly in that they knew each other's deficiencies, but so far as any project to redeem the rural indebtedness of the peasant or to mitigate the aggravated circumstances in which the landowner finds himself today was concerned, the Conference does not seem to have produced any result whatsoever. Here is a practical proposition, whereby the operations of the Land Mortgage Bank may seriously tend to minimise the indebtedness of the landowner. Now, the total indebtedness of the whole of India, so far as the landed proprietors are concerned, is estimated somewhere between 200 and 225 crores of rupees. Any suggestion of raising a large loan, which can be utilised to buy up this indebtedness and to transfer it to lower rates of interest is looked upon as an extremely heterodox proposition by the orthodox Finance Department of the Government of India. They talk of Sanatanists and their orthodoxy, but I venture to think that the most confirmed Sanatanists are those who adorn the Finance Department of the Government of India. (Hear, hear.) Other countries have made this experiment and have been benefited by it. In our country, one Indian State—and Indian States are so often held up to ridicule and obloquy in this House, that I should like to refer, with appreciation, to one State—a State which can be held as a model for the Government of India to copy in this respect—the State over whose fortunes my esteemed friend, Sir Prabha Shankar Pattani, presides with so much of credit, has solved this problem. The State itself has bought up all the indebtedness. It has compelled many people to have their indebtedness settled at lower rates than would have been possible in Courts of law, and, if the reports are correct, it has done what the Government of India have not even dreamt of doing, namely, it has conciliated many of these debts and made it more possible for them to bear the burden of their indebtedness. As I was saying, in the absence of the Government of India and of the Local Governments moving in this matter—and it is a vicious circle in which the Government of India expect the Local Governments to move, because it is their primary concern, and the Local Governments say that they cannot raise a loan, because it is the primary concern of the Government of India,—the rural indebtedness problem is just where it was, and the peasant is expected to remain in the same position as he is or rather he is gradually getting into a worse and worse position. So far as the Government of India are concerned, we, in the South, unfortunately know that it is so far off that it does not even understand our problems. The problem of rice, over which we have been agitating for months past, is exactly where it has been. What do we find? Paddy is being dumped from Siam and Indo-China. We made representation after representation without any avail. If I were to be returned on the Congress ticket, I know exactly the language I shall use much of which would hardly be parliamentary and little of which will be taken note of by the Treasury Benches owing to its very extravagance; but as I hope to be returned on the ticket on which I have fought every election during the last 15 years, I shall use the language which I have been accustomed to use and say that it is a scandal that this Government should be impervious to all our arguments on the subject and that unless they wake up at least now, they will be faced with a fearful agrarian crisis, with disastrous consequences to the stability, financial and otherwise, of the Local Government. The Commerce Member has heard us so often, the Member in charge of Lands has also heard our representations and the Finance Member has been even compelled to hear at odd moments what we had to say, and yet none of them has awakened to a realisation of their responsibilities. That is what we call responsive Government in this country as opposed to responsible Government. As I was saying, if the indebtedness, which has become more and more acute, of the peasant and of the landowner is to be redeemed in any sense at all and to any extent, then the Land Mortgage Bank is the last resort of the rural peasant today. The Land Mortgage Bank is making slow progress. Its funds are very limited, and it is to augment those funds that its debentures may be treated as securities. As this Bill is going to be passed, I hope that the Land Mortgage Bank's beneficent activities will expand and the non-official agency at least will put to shame the Government of India as well as the Local Governments by coming to the relief of the indebted peasant. I welcome this proposal, and I must express my gratitude that the Finance Department and the Government of India as a whole have at long last come to our help and accepted our suggestion.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Mr. K. P. Thampan (West Coast and Nilgiris : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not want to take up the time of the House by making a long speech on this motion. The Honourable the Mover of the Bill referred to the Resolution that was moved by me with a view to giving the debentures of the Madras Land Mortgage Bank the status of a trustee security. The Honourable the Finance Member promised to comply with that request if the Local Government were to guarantee, not only the principal, but the interest of the debentures as well. Since then, the Madras Government has guaranteed the interest also, and the conditions that were required by the Honourable the Finance Member have now been complied with. Coming as I do from Madras, I am grateful to the Government for the promptness with which they have come forward to give our debentures the legal status of trustee securities. I have great pleasure in supporting the motion that is now before the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“That the Bill further to amend the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration.”

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. K. Sanjiva Row : Sir, I move :

“That the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.”

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“That the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.”

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 31st July, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 31st July, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN.

The Honourable Sir Henry Duffield Craik, Bart., K.C.S.I. (Home Member).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ABOLITION OF OCTROI LEVIED IN SOME PLACES UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

309. *Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen : (a) Is it a fact that octroi is levied in some places under the Central Government ?

(b) Are Government aware that octroi is regarded by the people as a very vexatious item ?

(c) Are Government aware that octroi has been abolished in many countries on the continent ?

(d) Do Government propose to abolish it in the near future ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) Yes.

(b) No. Such evidence as is available indicates that octroi is less unpopular than any form of direct taxation which can be imposed by local bodies.

(c) Government have no information.

(d) No. It is open to municipal committees, if they see fit, to initiate proposals for the revision of their schemes of municipal taxation.

PROSECUTIONS UNDER THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT ACT.

310. *Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen : (a) How many prosecutions have been made under the Sarda Act since the passing of the said Act ?

(b) How many of them have ended in conviction ? What has been the maximum punishment and in which case ?

(c) What is the total amount of fine realised under the said Act ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I would refer the Honourable Member to the statement laid on the table on the 8th February, 1933, in answer to question No. 356 asked by him on the 16th September,

(781)

L240LAD

1932, showing the number of prosecutions, the number of cases in which imprisonment was awarded, the number in which fines were imposed and giving certain other information in regard to cases under the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, in the various Provinces from the 1st April, 1930, to the 31st August, 1932. No more recent information is readily available.

COWS SHOT BY MR. WAUGH, HONORARY MAGISTRATE AND PRESIDENT OF THE SHAHDARA NOTIFIED AREA COMMITTEE.

311. *Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen : (a) Have Government received any representation relating to a case of cow-shooting by Mr. Waugh, Honorary Magistrate and President of the Notified Area Committee at Shahdara, Delhi ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government please give details of the case ?

(c) What action, if any, has been, or is proposed to be taken in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). On hearing of this incident the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, made enquiry and learnt that the animals belonged to a herd of wild cattle which had been damaging the fields round Shahdara for a long time past. Mr. Waugh had made previous efforts to have the animals caught, but without success.

(c) Mr. Waugh, at the suggestion of the Chief Commissioner, has resigned the posts of Honorary Magistrate and President of the Shahdara Notified Area Committee and Government do not think that any further action is necessary.

RULES REGULATING DISCHARGE AND DISMISSAL ON THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

312. *Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen : (a) Are Government aware that the rules regulating discharge and dismissal are sometime not adhered to by the Eastern Bengal Railway ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, will Government please state if the Eastern Bengal Railway followed those rules in discharging one Mr. J. J. Stalkey, Travelling Ticket Inspector, in May, 1932 ?

(c) What were the charges in his case ?

(d) Was there any formal enquiry in his case ? If not, why not ? If there was any enquiry, when and by whom ?

(e) Is it a fact that Mr. Stalkey gave evidence on behalf of Travelling Ticket Inspectors before the Court of Enquiry in connection with the Railwaymen's Federation in 1931 ?

(f) Is it a fact that in 1923 Mr. Stalkey was prosecuted at the instance of Mr. Van Sameron, the then District Traffic Superintendent, Eastern Bengal Railway ?

(g) Is it also a fact that Mr. Stalkey was honourably acquitted by the Sessions Judge and received costs and damages from the Eastern Bengal Railway, and shortly after that Mr. Van Sameron had to go home on long leave ?

(h) Is it a fact that in 1932 the said Mr. Van Sameron became the Deputy Traffic Manager, Commercial, by whom the order of discharge of Mr. Stalkey was signed ?

(i) Is it a fact that the said Mr. Van Sameron has now become the Traffic Manager, to whom an appeal was preferred by Mr. Stalkey in May, 1932, but from whom no intimation has been received yet ?

(j) Are Government aware that Mr. Stalkey has been paid his gratuity ? If so, on what grounds ? Will Government kindly quote the rule which made him eligible for gratuity ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No.

(b) to (j). I have called for certain information and will lay a reply on the table in due course.

FACILITIES FOR THE CARRIAGE OF CHILKA FISH TO CALCUTTA MARKET.

313. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Is it a fact that refrigerating vans have been provided over the North Western Railway and the East Indian Railway for the carriage of fresh, perishable articles from Northern India to Calcutta and vice versa ?

(b) Is it a fact that no refrigerating vans are provided by the Bengal Nagpur Railway for the easy movement of Chilka fish to Calcutta ?

(c) Are Government aware that the trade in the export by railway of Chilka fish is one of the most important trades in Orissa ?

(d) Are Government aware that the absence of refrigerating vans on the Bengal Nagpur Railway is handicapping one of the flourishing trades of Orissa ?

(e) Is it a fact that for the easy movement of fresh fruits from Northern India to Calcutta, comparatively lower railway freight is charged by the North Western Railway and the East Indian Railway ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why for giving impetus to the Chilka fish trade of Orissa, they have not introduced the system of lower freight over the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

(f) Do Government propose to introduce a lower railway freight for the carriage of Chilka fish to Calcutta market and other important places in Northern India ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Cold storage vans, provided by the North Western Railway, are used principally for the carriage of fruit, some of which is booked to Calcutta. The East Indian Railway provide similar vans for the carriage to Delhi and certain intermediate stations en route, of perishables kept in cold storage at Calcutta.

(b), (c) and (d). I am asking the Agent, Bengal Nagpur Railway, for a report and will communicate the information to the House in due course.

(e) and (f). I understand that half parcels rates are generally charged for fresh fruit as well as fresh fish on most railways. Some railways have recently introduced special reduced rates for fresh fruit in wagon loads. I am communicating the Honourable Member's suggestion to the Agents, Bengal Nagpur and East Indian Railways, for consideration.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government state whether these vans pass via the chord line or via the main line ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I want notice.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the vans are refrigerated for the convenience of the passengers also ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think the railways will make themselves liable to prosecution in a Criminal Court if they put passengers in cold storage. (Laughter.)

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : What I meant was whether the carriages are being cooled just as the saloons are cooled.

Mr. P. R. Rau : I am not aware whether saloons are cooled in any particular manner separately from carriages.

EXPORT OF CHILKA FISH OF ORISSA.

314. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Income-tax assessee, whose sole business is the export of Chilka fish of Orissa ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 314, 315, 316, 318 and 319 together. The information is being obtained and will be laid on the table in due course.

ACCOMMODATION PROVIDED FOR THE ASSESSEES IN THE INCOME-TAX OFFICES AT CUTTACK, CHAIBASA AND PATNA.

†315. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the exact nature of the waiting accommodation provided for the assessee and their representatives in the Income-tax Offices at Cuttack, Chaibasa and Patna ?

(b) Are Government aware that the waiting accommodation that is provided can never be utilised by respectable people who are expected to pay income-tax ? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter ? If not, why not ?

(c) Are Government aware that the practice of holding back of demand notices and appellate and revisional orders sine die or indefinitely for months and in cases even for years without even intimating the time it is expected, keeps the assessee concerned in terrible suspense and greatly hampers and affects adversely the regular and free conduct of their business ? Are Government also aware that it does not permit the business-men to go out of station, even if required to do so on their business ?

SERVING OF DEMAND NOTICES OF INCOME-TAX IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

†316. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of cases :

(i) in which the demand notices, the appellate and revisional orders were served on the date of hearing in each of the districts of the Province of Bihar and Orissa,

(For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 314.)

(ii) those in which they were served within one month from the date of hearing fixed, and

(iii) those in which they were served more than a month after the date of hearing, separately under each category in the year 1933-34, excluding lower grade cases in which incomes assessed are below Rs. 2,000 and cases assessed summarily under section 23, sub-section 4, in default ?

(b) Is it a fact that in several instances demand notices for cases heard even some six or eight months before, are served at the far end of the year, scarcely allowing the assessee two days' time to collect and deposit the money ?

(c) Are Government aware of the hardships and inconveniences such procedure entails on the assessee, and if so, do Government propose to redress the grievances aforesaid ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing the number of demand notices served in each of the districts after 1st March, 1934, in the province of Bihar and Orissa ?

(e) Are Government aware that in the matter of fixing the time and place for examination of accounts or hearing of appeals or reviews, the convenience and facility of the tax-payers or their representatives are the last considerations with Income-tax authorities in Bihar and Orissa, and such requests from assessee are ignored and rejected ? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter and remove those grievances ? If not, why not ?

INSPECTION OF ASSESSMENT FILES BY THE INCOME-TAX ASSESSEES.

317. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the definite provision in the Income-tax Act XI of 1932, which denies the assessee, as in every other judicial proceedings, to inspect his assessment file either personally or through his representative ?

(b) Is not the assessee, as a matter of right in every judicial proceeding, entitled to be apprised of all informations and materials collected against him, and allowed an opportunity to meet the same before the final orders of assessment are passed in his case ?

(c) Is the assessee denied the right to inspect his assessment file, even when such files are sent to High Court in connection with references under section 66 of the Income-tax Act ?

(d) When is this discretion to permit assessee or their representatives to inspect their assessment file to be exercised by the Income-tax authorities, and what are the principles which regulate it ?

(e) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of permitting the assessee, or their authorised representatives, to inspect their own assessment files in the presence of an Income-tax official after such indenting as might be deemed necessary and payment of such costs as might be laid down, on the lines of the procedure followed in civil courts ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) The Income-tax Act does not confer any right upon an assessee to inspect his assessment files.

(b) Yes.

(c) Does not arise as assessment files are not sent to High Courts in connection with references under section 66 of the Income-tax Act.

(d) and (e). As stated in answer to part (a), the Income-tax Act is silent on this question. The Income-tax authorities, however, in their discretion, do in fact permit an inspection whenever that course appears to them to be advisable for the proper administration of justice to an assessee.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if these are not public documents which shall be open to inspection ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Certainly not. They relate to individual assessments and they are certainly not public documents. The Income-tax authorities are debarred from disclosing these documents to the public under the secrecy provisions of the Act.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The documents pertain to the public and they would come under the Evidence Act and so they can be inspected by the public. Does the Honourable Member know that ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : There is a secrecy section in the Income-tax Act.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : But is the Honourable Member going to issue an order or notification that they should be done according to the Evidence Act which applies everywhere ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Why not ? That would be in the interest of the public.

Mr. President. (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Next question.

AVOIDANCE OF ASSESSMENT OF INCOME-TAX BY THE TRANSFER OF PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS FROM BIHAR AND ORISSA.

†318. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Are Government aware of the fact that transfer of principal place of business from Bihar and Orissa to other Provinces is invariably sought for to avoid the heavy arbitrary assessments in Bihar and Orissa, and if so, what steps do Government propose to take to stop this increasing tendency ?

AVOIDANCE OF ASSESSMENT OF INCOME-TAX BY THE TRANSFER OF PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS FROM BIHAR AND ORISSA.

†319. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing (i) the total number of applications filed for transfer of principal place of business out of Bihar and Orissa, district by district, during the period of the last five years and how many of them were successful and (ii) the total number of cases transferred into Bihar and Orissa from other provinces, within the same period excluding the cases of salary holders and house property and Government security owners ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 314.

(b) Is it a fact that in almost all such cases as have succeeded in getting their principal place of business transferred out of Bihar and Orissa, there has invariably been considerable reduction in the average of tax charged in such other provinces, subsequent to the transfer from that charged in Bihar and Orissa prior to such transfer ? If so, will Government please state the measures adopted to stop transfers from the Provinces ?

ABOLITION OF SURCHARGE ON RAILWAY FREIGHT ON COAL.

320. *Mr. G. Morgan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the arrangements (foreshadowed in the speech by the Chief Commissioner of Railways in presenting the Railway Budget for 1934-35 in the Council of State) to collect further and more detailed statistics to enable Government to make a more comprehensive review of the position in regard to the 15 per cent. surcharge on railway freight on coal, were actually made ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, what was the result of this further and more detailed examination of this question ?

(c) If the reply to part (a) be in the negative, what steps do Government propose to take to obtain the further information required ?

(d) Do Government propose to abolish the whole, or any part, of the 15 per cent. surcharge on railway freight on coal in the immediate or near future ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : As mentioned by the Chief Commissioner of Railways in his speech presenting the Railway Budget, the Railway Board made arrangements to collect detailed statistics to enable them to ascertain whether the surcharge had a serious effect on long distance traffic. Railways were instructed to collect figures of tonnage and earnings in respect of public coal by zones. These statistics have been received only recently and are at present under examination by the Railway Board.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ECONOMIC CONFERENCE.

321. *Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to circulate among Members of this House the proceedings of the Economic Conference held in April, 1934 ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I regret that it is not possible to circulate the proceedings of the Economic Conference. The discussions were of an informal character, and were conducted on the understanding that the views expressed by individual members of the conference would not be published.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will it be possible to circulate their recommendations if not the speeches delivered by individual members ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I was under the impression that the recommendations had been published in the form of a Government of India Resolution.

PROTEST AGAINST THE TRANSFER OF THE RESEARCH INSTITUTE FROM PUSA TO DELHI.

322. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following telegram received by me today from the Chhateerane Gramrakshnie Sabha, Delhi (which I have forwarded in original to Mr. Bajpai) ?

"Jats of Delhi and Rohtak Districts who sacrificed their money men in Great War deady against transfer proposal of Pusa Institute in Delhi villages hundred villages meeting next week sensation prevails."

If so, what steps do they propose to take ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes.

The attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the answer I gave yesterday to part (c) of his question No. 305.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that protest meetings are being held in the vicinity in which the land is being acquired protesting against it, and that recently a meeting was held in which Chaudhuri Chhotu Ram, an ex-Minister of the Punjab, and other influential gentlemen attended ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have read about one such meeting, but my information is that these gatherings are due more to the inspiration of the Press than to any serious dissatisfaction among those concerned.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that these villagers have sent a formal petition to the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi in which they have set forth their views against the proposed acquisition of lands ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My information is that a copy of the petition had appeared in the newspapers, but it has not yet reached the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that I have received a petition in which the name of an Advocate appears, and it is stated therein that the petition was filed in the Court of the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member himself is in a better position to answer that question.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware, as it appeared in the newspapers, that a long memorandum over the signature of about 200 persons belonging to the villages to be acquired for the location of the Research Institute, has been sent to the Secretary of State for India requesting him not to dispossess them of their lands in view of the services rendered by them during the Great War and in view of the present economic condition ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have read a statement to that effect in the Press, but I regret to say that the memorandum or a copy thereof has not yet reached the Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government please lay on the table the note or report or any memorandum submitted by Sir T. Vijayaraghavachariar in connection with this question ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I submit that that does not arise on this particular question. But I may inform the House that I am not in possession of any note submitted by Sir T. Vijayaraghavachariar.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government please state whether these lands, which are to be acquired, are part of the Punjab or the Delhi Province ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : They are a part of the Delhi Province.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Will Government give up any project of railways or any other project if objection is taken by the land owners in case the Government are thinking of acquiring them ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Not necessarily, Sir. The question will depend upon the balance of advantage to the public.

RETIREMENT OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHÆOLOGY.

323. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that the present incumbent of the post of Director General of Archæology is to retire on attaining the age of 55 years in December next ?

(b) Do Government intend to put him on special duty after his retirement for writing archæological books ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) The question of re-employing him after retirement is under consideration.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

324. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Will Government please state if the publication of the Annual Report of the Archæological Department, has been abolished ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, will Government kindly state how many reports were published during the present Director General of Archæology's tenure of office ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) No.

(b) One, namely the report for 1928-29. The report for 1929-30 is expected to issue before the end of the year.

RECRUITMENT OF ASSISTANT ENGINEERS IN DELHI.

325. *Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Is it a fact that the Delhi Administration and the Central Public Works Department propose to recruit some Assistant Engineers very shortly ?

(b) Is it a fact that recruitment of Assistant Engineers in other Provinces is confined to the persons domiciled in those Provinces ?

(c) Is it a fact that the said recruitment is to be made through the Public Service Commission ?

(d) Do the Delhi Administration propose to confine the recruitment to the persons domiciled in Delhi and Ajmer-Merwara ?

(e) Are Government aware that properly qualified Engineers from Delhi Province are not even allowed to take up apprenticeship in other Provinces?

(f) Are Government aware that such duly qualified persons are not held eligible for any job in the Provincial service of other Provinces?

(g) Do Government therefore propose to restrict the choice to the properly qualified persons domiciled in Delhi?

(h) Do the Delhi Administration propose to give preference to their nominees at the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorki?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No. The Government of India, and not the Delhi Administration, propose to recruit three Assistant Executive Engineers for the Central Public Works Department.

(c) Yes.

(b), (d), (f) and (g). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me to parts (c), (d) and (e) of starred question No. 123 asked by Diwan Bahadur Harbilas Sarda on the 13th February, 1934.

(e) Government have no information.

(h) No.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ENGINEER-IN-CHIEF'S BRANCH, ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

326 Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : (a) Will Government please state how many vacancies occurred in the first and second divisions of the clerical establishment of the Engineer-in-Chief's Branch at Army Headquarters since the 1st April, 1930, and how they were filled, i.e., either by departmental promotion or by external recruitment?

(b) Will Government please state whether in making the promotions and appointments, the rules (promulgated by the Home Department and the Public Service Commission) on the subject were duly given effect to?

(c) Is it a fact that recently certain departmental promotions have been made in the Engineer-in-Chief's Office, which included the promotion of a second division clerk (Bhagat Ram) to the first division? Is it a fact that this clerk is the cashier of that office?

(d) Is it a fact that in making the above promotions the rules on the subject, issued by the Home Department and the Public Service Commission, were not observed? If so, was the concurrence of the Home Department and the Public Service Commission obtained to a departure from those rules?

(e) Is it a fact that the cashier of the Engineer-in-Chief's Office has failed to qualify for the first division at examinations held by the Staff Selection Board and the Public Service Commission on two occasions?

(f) What is the reason for promoting him now? How many clerks are senior to him, and how many have duly qualified for promotion to a high grade?

Lieut. Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Enquiries are being made in the matter, and the result will be communicated to the House in due course.

DETENTION OF ONE GURUMUKH SINGH IN THE KABUL JAIL.

327. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Are Government aware that Gurumukh Singh, a British Indian subject, has been detained in the Kabul Jail for over a year without trial?

(b) Has any representation been made by Government in this connection?

(c) What are the facts of the case, and has the charge of ill-treatment in jail been enquired into?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). Government are aware that Gurumukh Singh was detained in jail in Kabul. It is understood however that he has recently been released. No representation was made by Government in the matter.

(c) Government have no precise information. The matter is one which concerns the internal administration of a foreign State.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are not the Government of India in a position to give protection to British Indian subjects if they are in a foreign territory?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It depends upon (a) whether the individual concerned makes any representation to Government on the matter, and (b) the character of the offence for which the individual is detained by the foreign Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Do I understand that, without any representation from a resident of British India in a foreign territory, the Government of India are unwilling to take any suitable steps in such matters?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The question is not susceptible of what might be called a general answer, but I should say that if a person offends against the laws of a foreign State and is detained there, Government would not, of their own initiative, inquire unless there were very good reasons for doing so.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : As the Honourable Member assumes that he has violated the laws of the State, it seems he knows the facts of the case. In view of that, is he now in a position to answer part (c) of the question?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already given the answer that Government have no precise information as to the nature of the offence that he committed, but they have general information of the fact that he entered the country after having been deported and that that is looked upon as a grave offence by the Government of Afghanistan.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Does not the criminal law require that, if a British subject is detained outside in a foreign territory, the approval of the Government of India or the British Consul or Resident there has to be obtained?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : So far as the criminal law of India is concerned, my Honourable friend is a greater authority than I am.

PUNISHMENT FOR ENTERING AFGHANISTAN WITHOUT A PASSPORT.

328. *Mr. Bhuput Sing : What is the maximum punishment for entering Afghanistan without a passport ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government have no information. The matter is one pertaining to the law in Afghanistan.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

TENDERS IN THE REMOUNT DEPARTMENT.

22. Bhagat Chandi Mal Gola : (a) Will Government please state why this year the tenders in the Remount Department were called by the Officers Commanding of Depôts and kept secret at the opening time, and why they were not opened before the contractors as usual ?

(b) Has the Director of Remounts accepted the highest tender of Rs. 3,000 this year in Sargodha Remount Depôt when there were three more lower tenders of old and approved contractors of the Department, who are working in the Department most satisfactorily since a long time ? If so, why ?

(c) Do Government propose to take action to cancel such orders, if any, and to give instructions to those concerned to open the tenders in the presence of the contractors so as to give a clear chance to each approved contractor to appeal for his rights to the higher sanctioning authorities against the injustice, if any, that might have been done to him by the Officer Commanding ?

(d) Do Government propose to try to do justice and give a clear chance to each lowest possible tenderer of the approved contractors by accepting his tender, if his rates are favourable and he gives enough security to Government ?

Lieut. Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) In order to conform to the normal practice in the Army, tenders this year were not opened in the presence of tenderers. The regulations on the subject do not require this.

(b) Neither the highest nor the lowest tender was accepted. The one accepted by the Director of Remounts was deemed to be the most advantageous to Government.

(c) No. All contracts made on behalf of the Army Remount Department are sanctioned, not by Officers Commanding, Army Remount Depôts, but by the Director of Remounts at Army Headquarters. That officer safeguards the interests of Government and of the tenderers. The latter have in addition a right of appeal.

(d) There is no question of injustice. The lowest tender is accepted, provided it is considered the most advantageous to Government in every respect.

TRANSFER OF THE HEAD CLERKS OF THE REMOUNT DEPÔTS.

23. Bhagat Chandi Mal Gola : (a) Do Government propose to transfer the Head Clerks of Remount Depôts from one Depôt to another after such time as the Officers are generally transferred, i.e., within a reasonable period of five years ?

(b) Is it not a fact that many Head Clerks in the Remount Department are working at one place for a very long time ?

Lieut. Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) No. Transfers of Head Clerks, from one remount formation to another, are made in the interests of the service ; no period can be laid down for their stay in any one place.

(b) No. Out of 13 Head Clerks only one has remained in the same formation as Head Clerk for more than five years.

BALANCE STOCKS OF COAL AND COLLIERIES CLOSED.

24. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of this House a statement showing :

(a) the Balance Stocks of coal on the 31st December, 1933, at collieries working within British India ;

(b) the Balance Stocks of coal on the 31st May, 1934, at collieries working within British India ;

(c) the number of collieries closed during the year 1933 ;

(d) the number of collieries closed from January 1934, to June 1934 ;

(e) the number of collieries closed each year, which were under the management of (i) European Firms, and (ii) Indian Firms, since 1930 ; and

(f) the total quantity of soft coke despatched from collieries in 1933, as per Chief Inspector of Mines' Report ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) 1,143,891 tons.

(b) to (e). Information has been called for and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

(f) 823,073 tons.

CESS ON SOFT COKE.

25. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that the Soft Coke Cess Committee got cess on more quantities than reported by the Chief Inspector of Mines ?

(b) Are Government aware that this is due to the fact that large quantities of second class hard coke are being despatched as soft coke to avoid paying surcharge ?

(c) Are Government aware that this is being done by some of the coke plants located in the coal fields ? If so, what are the names of those firms and their managing agents ?

(d) If the reply to part (c) be in the affirmative, were steps taken against any party for doing this, under the Railway Act ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Inquiries are being made in the matter and the result will be communicated to the House in due course.

STEAM COAL AND SLACK COAL DESPATCHED FROM CERTAIN COLLIERIES.

26. Mr. K. C. Neogy : What were the quantities of steam coal and slack coal, respectively, despatched during the year 1933, from the collieries under the management of (i) Messrs. Bird and Company, (ii) Messrs. Heilgers and Company, (iii) Messrs. Macneill and Company, Limited, and (iv) Messrs. Andrew Yule and Company, Limited ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The annual production of each coal mine is given every year in 'Indian Coal Statistics'. The Government of India have consistently refused to anticipate and elaborate this publication by giving earlier and more detailed public information of the raisings and despatches of individual collieries, because they consider that such action would be regarded by the industry as prejudicial to its interests.

GAZETTED AND NON-GAZETTED STAFF IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

27. Sir Muhammad Yakub : Do Government propose to prepare and put on the table of this House a statement showing the present strength of permanent members of different communities among the gazetted and non-gazetted staff in each grade of every Department of the Government of India and its subordinate offices ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Statements are placed in the Library of the House, every year, showing the communal composition of the All-India Services and Central Services, Class I, and of the clerical staff employed in the Departments of the Government of India and their Attached and Subordinate Offices. The statements relating to the year 1933 are in preparation and will be made available to the House in due course. Government are considering what statements will be required in order to watch the observance of the rules laid down in the recent Home Department Resolution about recruitment to the services.

INCOME FROM ONE-ANNA ENVELOPES, ETC.

28. Mr. Bhuput Singh : Will Government be pleased to lay on the table of this House a statement showing :

- (a) the total amount of income from April till June, 1934, derived from one-anna envelopes, and the comparative figures of five-pice envelopes for the same period last year ; and
- (b) the total number of one-anna envelopes from April till June, 1934, which exceeded the weight limit and became due as compared with the total number of five-pice envelopes which became due in the same period last year ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) I presume that by envelopes, the Honourable Member means stamps. No separate account of the monthly sale proceeds of one anna or one and a quarter anna stamps is maintained. The information required by the Honourable Member is, therefore, not available.

(b) No separate statistics of letters bearing one anna or one and a quarter anna stamps which exceed the weight limit are kept in the post offices and it is not, therefore, possible to furnish the information required by the Honourable Member.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 108 asked by Bhai Parma Nand on the 13th February, 1934.

RATES OF INTEREST CHARGED BY AFGHAN MONEY-LENDERS IN INDIA.

Province.	Rates.	Remarks.
Madras Presidency ..	75% to 300% per annum	Interest invariably deducted at outset from principal amount lent. The number of Afghan money-lenders is however very small.
Bombay Presidency ..	75% to 300% per annum	In some cases interest is deducted from the amount before it is paid.
Bengal Presidency ..	37½% to 150% per annum.
United Provinces..	23-1/3% to 450% per annum	Average rate is between 100% and 150% per annum.
Punjab	75 % per annum	This is the lowest rate and the actual rate may be twice as much.
Burma	24% to 240% per annum.
Bihar and Orissa ..	25% to 300% per annum and even higher.
Central Provinces ..	37½% to 325% per annum	Generally the rate of interest on small loans is between 150 and 300% per annum.
Assam	37½% to 225% per annum.
N. W. F. Province ..	75% to 225% per annum	The usual rate is about 150% per annum.
Baluchistan	No money lending business is carried on by Afghan subjects in Baluchistan.
Ajmer-Merwara	75% to 225% per annum.
Coorg	There are no Afghan money lenders in Coorg.
Delhi	75% to 300% per annum	The usual rate is 75% and 150% per annum.

Information promised in reply to unstarred question No. 62 asked by Mr. N. M. Joshi on the 16th February, 1934.

RAILWAY LINES OUTSIDE THE OPERATION OF THE INDIAN RAILWAYS ACT.

According to the information available with Government, the following is a list of the Railways which do not come within the operation of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 ; as jurisdiction over them has not been ceded to the British Government :

- (a) Sirhind Rupar Railway (portion lying in Patiala State Territory).
- (b) Khanpur-Chachran Railway.
- (c) Bahawalnagar-Fort Abbas-Kut-ul-Amara Railway.
- (d) Karepalli-Kothagudiam Railway.
- (e) Parbhani-Purli Railway.
- (f) Vikarabad-Bidar Railway and extension.
- (g) Mysore-Arsikere Railway.
- (h) Bangalore-Mysore-Nanjangud Section.
- (i) Birur-Shimoga Section.
- (j) Shimoga-Arasalu Anandapuram Railway.
- (k) Kolar District and Bangalore-Chickballapur Light Railway.
- (l) Chickajur-Chitaldrug Railway.
- (m) Kolar Gold Fields Railway.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 26 asked by Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad on the 16th July, 1934.

STRIKES OF THE TEXTILE WORKERS OF BOMBAY.

(a) The textile mill strike in Bombay, which had been advocated by the All-India Textile Workers' Conference in January last, and in favour of which propaganda had since been carried on by the Joint General Strike Committee and other bodies, began on the 23rd April, 1934. On the first day four mills were affected ; on the second day fifteen and on the third day thirty-one. The peak was reached on the 17th May when 49 textile mills in the City and Island of Bombay were affected and the total number of work people involved amounted to about 90,700.

Peace was disturbed on several occasions and cases of assault and intimidation were of frequent occurrence. The Government of Bombay, in accordance with their general policy of allowing the utmost possible freedom to labour movements, consistently with the requirements of the public safety and peace, placed no obstacles in the way of the proposed strike and used its opening stages to test the bona fides of the organisers and the wishes of the workers. After watching the course of events for about a week, the Government of Bombay considered that, owing to the manner in which the strike was being conducted, an emergency involving grave likelihood of disorder had arisen and that it was necessary to use the powers conferred by the Bombay Special (Emergency) Powers Act to remove the ringleaders mainly responsible for the situation. Fourteen prominent strike leaders were therefore arrested on the 30th April, 1934. The persons arrested were all professed Communists and had been conducting the strike not with a view to settlement but with the apparent object of spreading and intensifying the disturbed conditions. On the 25th May, the Government of Bombay again found it necessary in the interest of public safety and peace to arrest and detain under section 3 of the Bombay Special (Emergency) Powers Act, fourteen persons who were professed Communists connected with the leadership of the strike. It had for several days been evident that these persons and others acting under their direction had been abusing the liberty of speech allowed to them by delivering to the millhands speeches of an inflammatory nature which had small reference to any dispute in the textile industry and the main object of which was to incite the strikers, to attack the police and to defy all lawful authorities. It is significant that in an anonymous letter issued in the name of the Communist Party of India, workers of all industries were urged to join the strike, collect arms and ammunition and fight the police and the military.

There was no attempt at negotiation made by either party in the earlier stages of the dispute. On the 9th May, the Joint Strike Committee forwarded a list of 20 demands to the Millowners' Association and sent a copy to Government.

Towards the end of May, 1934, the Indian Merchants' Chamber, Bombay, endeavoured to bring about a settlement but to no purpose. The strike continued with unabated vigour for some time in spite of the counter-propaganda carried on by the millowners. Towards the end of May, however, the situation began to show signs of improvement and the workers began gradually to return to work. The strike practically terminated on the 20th June.

(b) (i) Yes.

(b) (ii) The strike was called ostensibly as a protest against wage-cuts and the introduction of rationalized methods of work. The demands put forward by the strikers [see under (b) (iv) below] were, however, concerned with other matters also. In all, 49 textile mills employing about 90,700 workers were involved in the strike which lasted for nearly eight weeks.

(b) (iii) Having regard to the fact that reductions in wages had either been effected or were in contemplation in several centres of the cotton mill industry in the Presidency, the Government of Bombay thought it desirable that the fullest possible information should be obtained and made available to the public on the subject. They therefore instructed the Labour Office to make a special investigation into this question in order to ascertain the facts. The enquiry was announced in the Bombay Legislative Council on the 26th February, 1934, and began immediately, that is, before the strike took place on the 23rd April. The report of the enquiry was published on the 21st June, 1934, and the Local Government are now considering in the light of this enquiry what further action should be taken by them. The matter was primarily the concern of the Local Government, and no occasion for intervention by the Government of India arose.

(b) (iv) The following were the demands of the workers as put forward by the Strike Committee :

- (1) No wage-cut and restoration of all cuts effected since January, 1933 ;
- (2) No rationalization ;
- (3) Unemployment benefit and maternity insurance at the expense of Government and owners ;
- (4) No retrenchment ;
- (5) Eight hours' duty for day-shift and seven hours for night-shift ;
- (6) Equal wages for equal work ;
- (7) One month's leave with full pay every year ;
- (8) Minimum living wage of Rs. 45 per month ;
- (9) Recruitment of labour through Workers' Committees to be set up in each Mill.
- (10) Full liberty for union work within the mills and right of mill committee to supervise the condition of work in the mills ;
- (11) No victimization of active trade union workers and reinstatement of a victimized workers ;
- (12) 50 per cent. reduction in house-rent ;
- (13) Well-defined regulations and fair treatment with regard to leave, abolition of fines, etc. ;
- (14) No recruitment of boys up to the age of ten ;
- (15) Recognition of the unions ;
- (16) Consolidated wages ;
- (17) Right of organization, speech, assembly, etc. ;
- (18) Right of strike and picketing ;

(19) Trade union legislation and right of trade union organization within Native States ;

(20) Withdrawal of all repressive laws and anti-working class legislation and release of all political prisoners.

(b) (v) Seven.

(b) (vi) While the Labour Office enquiry was in progress, the Millowners' Association, Bombay, gave an assurance to the Government of Bombay that the mill-owners had no intention of making any further alterations in wages and conditions of labour until the report of the departmental enquiry was published and considered. Since the publication of that report, the Association have evolved a scheme for standardization of wages with a view to removing the disparities in wages between mill and mill.

(b) (vii) The Bombay Millowners' Association have granted general recognition to registered trade unions of textile workers in Bombay, but the recognition of the Bombay Girni Kamgar Union was withdrawn in 1929 after the publication of the Report of the Pearson Court of Enquiry.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 149, asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh on the 19th July, 1934.

FORCIBLE ABDUCTION OF ONE SRIMATI GORI FROM DHAN JOLENGRA IN MALKAND AGENCY.

Musammat Gori, aged 17, wife of Dina Nath of Mardan, was abducted while on a visit to her parents' house at Dheri in the Malkand Agency on the 21st May, 1934, by one Said Khan, and taken to Agra, in Shamoza territory. As a result of strong political pressure on the tribe, she was handed over on the 30th June, and restored to her relations in Mardan on the 1st July. The efforts of the political authorities were greatly handicapped by exaggerated propaganda in the Press and elsewhere, which exacerbated local feeling and engendered resistance to the demand for surrender of the girl.

As long as human nature remains unaltered no guarantees against a recurrence of such an incident can be given ; but the local authorities may as in this case be entrusted to do all that is possible in the matter.

THE HINDU TEMPLE ENTRY DISABILITIES REMOVAL BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PETITIONS.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Committee on Petitions on the Bill to remove the disabilities of the so-called Depressed Classes in regard to entry into Hindu temples.

THE UNTOUCHABILITY ABOLITION BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PETITIONS.

Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Committee on Petitions on the Bill to provide for the abolition of untouchability among the Hindus.

THE INDIAN IRON AND STEEL DUTIES BILL.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. H. P. Mody, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. B. Das, Mr. S. C. Sen, Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla, Mr. R. S. Sarma, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra, Sir Leslie Hudson, Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sabib Bahadur, the Honourable Sir James Grigg, the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before Monday, the 13th August, 1934, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Once again, Sir, it has fallen to my lot to place before this Assembly a protective measure of major importance designed to extend the period of shelter given to one of the key industries of this country. The consideration of the case of the Indian iron and steel industry presents a somewhat simpler task than did, for instance, that of the cotton textile industry.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Mr. Mody is interested in both.

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : I hope so.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Iron and steel production is more localised ; it is for the most part concentrated in a few centres ; its products do not vary very greatly in character and quality, and comparisons of price are generally more easily and more reliably made. I will endeavour, Sir, to the best of my ability, to present the problem which we have to examine as simply and as free of technicalities as I possibly can. Here, as in the case of the cotton textile industry, we are faced with four principal questions, and when we have answered those questions, we will have covered the entire ground necessary to enable us to come to conclusions in regard to the problem before us. The first of these questions is, has the industry utilised the period of protection during the past seven years to improve its efficiency ? If that question is answered in the affirmative, the second question is, has that improvement been purchased at an unduly or disproportionately high cost to the consumer ? Thirdly, if the price paid has not been excessive, should protection be continued ? And, lastly, if protection is to continue, what should be the extent of that protection ?

Now, Sir, I will attempt to answer the first of these questions,—has the industry under the shelter of protection done what lay in its power to improve its organisation and its methods of production ? Has the improvement, secured during the past seven years, been such as to justify the anticipation that it will, in a reasonable measure of time, be able to hold its own without protection against outside competitors ? In the first place, Sir, it must be remembered that the wave of depression which passed over this, as over other industries, has imposed a severe handicap. The demand has fallen, and output has had to be curtailed with a consequential increase in costs of production. But apart from this uncontrollable factor, the Board has pointed out in an interesting Chapter, Chapter VII, entitled "Technical Equipment and Efficiency", certain directions in which the abandonment of obsolete plant and the adoption of revised methods would lead to enhanced efficiency and to a reduction in costs. Nevertheless, the Board has found that no general charge of inefficiency can be brought against Tatas despite the fact that improvement is possible along certain lines suggested by itself. Its final conclusions are summarised in the following terms at page 81—paragraph 139 :

"Although mention has been made of several cases in which the equipment of the Tata Company's works falls short of the best attainable efficiency, it should not be thought that the works are inefficient as compared with other works abroad of similar age. Doubtless a few works on the continent and in America which have been entirely planned and built since the war are better equipped, but it would probably be difficult to find a works dating back to the pre-war period with which the Tata Company's works does not compare favourably. The steel smelting section is its weakest point, but with this put right and with the proposed improvements in other departments there should be very little which could be criticised seven years hence.

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

No complaints have reached us as regards the quality of the steel supplied by the Tata Company, whether made by the duplex or open hearth process. All the information we have obtained indicates that the railways, the engineering works and others using the company's products find them satisfactory and fully up to the standard they require."

But the proof of the pudding is after all in the eating, and we must turn to the actual results if we want to apply the real test. Those results strongly endorse the finding that a high standard of efficiency has been pursued and has been achieved. If you ask what those results are, I would point to the striking reduction in works costs in all the products of the Tata Iron and Steel Company. I would like to give the House just four typical instances. In the case of rails, the works costs in May, 1927, was Rs. 82.41 a ton. The Tariff Board of 1926 estimated that this would fall to Rs. 61.6 in 1933-34. In May, 1934, the actual cost was Rs. 58.03. In the case of plates, the figures are Rs. 103.45 a ton, Rs. 80.3, and in May, 1934, Rs. 66.23 a ton. The figures for bars are Rs. 87.51, Rs. 77, and Rs. 56.33. The figures for galvanised sheets are Rs. 254.95, Rs. 200, and Rs. 119.01. These, I am sure, the House will agree, are very satisfactory results, and their achievement is an indication of the success which has attended our policy of discriminating protection. It must, I think, so far as the first question is concerned, be definitely found that material improvement has taken place in the efficiency of the industry.

That brings me to the second question. Has this improvement been secured at an unduly high cost to the consumer? Obviously the reply to that question must be largely coloured by the predilections, the prepossessions, and the interests of the person answering that question. The confirmed free-trader or the outside competitor, who sees in the development of Indian industry a contraction of his market or a challenge to his own production, would certainly not pronounce the same verdict as the rabid protectionist. I have no doubt that some sort of a case could be made by the exponents of both these extreme views. Our standpoint must be that of the discriminating protectionist who realises that protection involves the payment of a price and who judges the worthwhileness of the price by considering the nature of the industry in question, the facilities for its establishment, its value to the country and the part it is likely to play in the economy of the nation. As far as I am aware, I do not know of any other major industry which can compare with the Indian iron and steel industry in the abundance and quality of the raw materials necessary for its products which are available in India. To my mind, however, the consideration of crucial importance is the value of the establishment, on sound foundations, of an Indian iron and steel industry to the country at large. It must, I think, be admitted that it is a key industry of national importance. Memories are proverbially short, but I think it must be within the recollection of many of us here what part the then comparatively young Indian iron and steel industry played during the fateful years of the Great War. The value and the importance of this industry to the country must be prominently borne in mind when we consider the cost to the country of its establishment. What that cost has been it is almost impossible to calculate with any degree of accuracy. The reasons for that have been stated by the Board, namely, the existence of many factors in regard to which it is impossible to do anything except indulge in the wildest possible guesses. When it comes to a question of trying to make up some sort of balance sheet of gains and losses, of trying to estimate what the net advantage or disadvantage is to the country, then we are faced with a problem which, I think, is almost impossible of accurate solution. The utilisation of vast natural resources, which would otherwise have been wasted, the employment of a large labour population, the stimulation of subsidiary industries are all benefits which must be taken into account, but on which it is almost impossible accurately to place a money value. For these reasons, I for my part think that it would be a barren pursuit to attempt to frame any sort of balance sheet.

The answer to the question which I have put can only be satisfactorily given on other and much wider lines. If we are satisfied that it is a matter of vital importance to the country, that the iron and steel industry of this country should be established on sound foundations, if we are satisfied that the industry has used the protection given in the past to achieve substantial improvements, both in efficiency and in organisation if we are satisfied that within a definitely measurable distance of time it will be possible for that industry unaided to withstand the competitive challenge of its outside rivals, then I say that we are justified in finding that the decision to give protection in the past has been fully justified and that it has been in the public interest. That, Sir, is the conclusion to which we have been led, and that is the conclusion which I would ask the House to accept.

I now come, Sir, to consider the two remaining questions: should the period of protection be extended, and, if so, what that protection should be. In regard to the first of these questions, I do not think the answer can possibly be in doubt. Obviously, Sir, if we have come so far along the road to our objective, if we have already made substantial sacrifices in order to secure the advances made until now, if the end which we have in view has been definitely brought nearer to complete attainment, then, Sir, it would obviously be a wholly false economy if we now throw away the sacrifices that we have made in the past, abandon protection, and allow our objective to slip away from us when it is almost within sight. But, Sir, we have the right to ask for incontrovertible proof that such improvement and progress has taken place in the industry during the past seven years as to justify the extension of protection for a further period of a similar duration. I gave to the House, Sir, typical instances of reductions in works costs during the period of protection. I think I am right in saying that that reduction has taken place over the whole range of production. It ranges from something like 27½ per cent. in the case of rails to something like 55½ per cent. in the case of galvanised sheets, and this, Sir, notwithstanding the fact that increased wages have been paid. That is a point, Sir, I think of more than passing interest, and I hope the House will bear with me if I read the relevant passage from the Report itself. It is from paragraph 59:

"The Board's opinion in 1926 was that the total cost of labour for producing 600,000 tons of steel in 1933-34 should not exceed Rs. 148.4 lakhs which would give a cost of Rs. 24.7 per ton. The total cost of labour over the first six months of 1933 gives a figure of Rs. 27.2 per ton. It will be seen that while the output per employee is greater than was anticipated (due to a substantial reduction in numbers) and therefore a lower labour cost per ton should be expected, this cost has actually increased by Rs. 2.5 per ton which shows that higher rates of wages are being paid than were anticipated."

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

That, Sir, is, I think, not a negligible achievement. It is a result which, I venture to think, justifies the protection given in the past and its extension for a period in the future. If the further reduction in works costs anticipated by the Board eventuated by the year 1940-41, provided always that our competitors sell at economic prices, we may then, Sir, look forward to the prospect of protection coming to an end. We may reasonably hope, Sir, that these anticipations will be fulfilled, for, as I have pointed out, the anticipations in regard to reductions made in 1926 by the Board, as likely to be achieved in the year 1933-34, have in every case been exceeded. In other words, the industry has done much better than it was thought that it could or would be able to do.

I come, Sir, finally to the last question, namely, the extent of protection required. In arriving at the actual figures of the import duties which are necessary in each case to secure the degree of protection which is required, we must, I submit, be very largely guided by the Tariff Board whose recommendations are based on the most careful and detailed calculations made with the assistance of highly skilled technical advice. Nevertheless, there are certain general considerations which must influence our attitude towards those individual recommendations. One of the most important of these is the question, how does the level of duties, now recommended by the Board, compare with the duties recommended by the Board in 1926 and with the actually existing duties. The reply to that is very instructive indeed. It is given in Table XXIV at page 54 of the Tariff Board's Report. In the case of no less than five articles of rolled steel, many of them are of considerable importance, namely, Rails, Fishplates, Structural, Tested plates and Sleepers, the Board finds that the Indian product needs no protection whatsoever, and this, Sir, as against the existing specific duties of Rs. 16½, Rs. 7½, Rs. 23½, Rs. 25 and Rs. 12½ a ton respectively. In the case of seven other articles, the proposals show very large reductions below the rates now prevailing. The most noteworthy reductions are in the case of the following :

Tested Bars from	Rs. 32½ to Rs. 10 a ton.
Untested plates from	Rs. 45 to Rs. 25 a ton.
Tested Black sheets from	Rs. 43½ to Rs. 11 a ton.
Untested Black sheets from	Rs. 73½ to Rs. 32 a ton.
United Kingdom Galvanised sheets	Rs. 53 to Rs. 10 a ton.
Continental sheets from	Rs. 83 to Rs. 40 a ton.

Only in one solitary case is a slight increase recommended, namely, in the case of untested structurals from Rs. 37½ to Rs. 43 a ton, and, in this case, the Board is satisfied that sales are being effected in this country at wholly uneconomic rates. This, Sir, I venture to submit, is a very satisfactory result from the point of view of the consuming public.

Another important consideration is how the fair selling prices for the various Indian products now proposed by the Tariff Board compare with the duty-paid prices on similar articles imported from outside. That information is given in Table XXV at page 55 of the Report, and is again of very great interest,—such great interest indeed, Sir, that it will bear re-statement. The actual duty-paid prices noted by the Board, I may say, are averaged for the period January to June, 1933. In only one case, again, that of untested structurals, is the fair selling price now proposed a little higher than the duty-paid price, namely, Rs. 107 as against Rs. 98.6. In every one of the remaining 12 cases, the fair selling price now proposed is lower, and in some a very great deal lower, than the duty-paid price. A few striking instances will bear this out. In the case of rails, the duty-paid price given by the Board is Rs. 110 as against a fair selling price for the future of Rs. 95 ; in the case of tested structurals, it is Rs. 135.7 as against Rs. 111 ; in the case of tested plates, Rs. 138.6 as against Rs. 110 ; semi-finished steel Rs. 83 as against Rs. 53, untested black sheets Rs. 168.9 as against Rs. 129 ; galvanised sheets Rs. 219.6 as against only Rs. 170. The figures, to which I have ventured to draw attention, serve to show that the scheme of protection as proposed for the future will result in a very considerable lightening of the burden on the consumer, and, at the same time, holds forth, as I have said, the prospect of the industry being able to stand on its own feet within a definitely measurable distance of time.

Sir, we consider that the Board's recommendation should be accepted as a whole. I would point out that its acceptance involves, among other things, the acceptance of the proposal that tested structurals and tested plates should come in free and that the duty on United Kingdom galvanised sheets should be Rs. 10 a ton or the revenue duty, whichever is higher. The recommendation of the Tariff Board in respect of tested structurals and tested plates is founded on its finding, firstly, that the Indian article does not need any protection against its outside competitors, and, secondly, on its finding that, in the interests of those Indian industries and public utility works which use these materials, it is essential that the price should be kept down as low as possible. The Board's recommendation in regard to United Kingdom galvanised sheets depends upon its finding that Rs. 10 is a sufficient margin of shelter for the Indian product. I may say, Sir, that this latter duty is partly of a preferential character. We asked His Majesty's Government in return for accepting these proposals to allow Indian pig iron to enter the United Kingdom free of duty and to give us certain preferential treatment in regard to our manganese. I am glad to be able to say that His Majesty's Government have agreed to allow our pig iron to enter the United Kingdom free of duty. (Applause.) I understand that the duty on foreign pig iron is 33 1/3 per cent. ad valorem.....

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadian Urban) : Is there any rebate given to any foreign country by England ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I am not aware that any such rebate is given.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Argentine in particular.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhole : In regard to pig iron ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Not Argentine, but foreign countries.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhole : Not that I am aware of. His Majesty's Government have also agreed to consider our other request, in respect of manganese very carefully and sympathetically. I may here say that the admission of tested structurals and tested plates free of any revenue duty, and the levy of an excise duty are matters which fall within the purview of the Finance Department and will be dealt with by my Honourable colleague, the Finance Member, at a later stage if it is found to be necessary.

I would commend the scheme of protection as a whole for the acceptance of the House. It involves a further term of protection for seven years beyond the past term. In regard to the term of further protection, I have nothing to add to the reasons which have been given by the Tariff Board for its recommendation. I would only say that we are now proposing a substantial all round reduction of duties and that it would serve no useful purpose if we reduced the period of protection below what the Tariff Board considered essential, to enable the industry to dispense entirely with protection.

There remain a few matters to which I should make a reference, though perhaps it is unnecessary that I should comment on them at any length at this stage. The House will have noticed that we propose to take powers to impose offsetting duties to prevent our intentions in regard to protection being defeated by unforeseen contingencies. This is in accordance with the recommendations of the Tariff Board. We have also taken power to lower the duties if unforeseen contingencies make the present level of duties unnecessarily high. Such a contingency would arise in respect of the suggestion made by the Tariff Board in paragraph 166 of their report in connection with fabricated steel, the produce of the United Kingdom. I do not think that it is necessary for me to deal specifically with the cases of fabricated steel, wire and wire nails and iron products. But I cannot omit reference to two matters which form the subject of special comment by the Tariff Board, namely, the supply of billets to the re-rolling industry and the supply of tin bar to the Tinsplate Company. The importance of the re-rolling industry to the country has been stressed by the Tariff Board and the Tariff Board has found that some, at any rate, of the complaints of the monopolistic attitude of Tatas towards small subsidiary companies are not without foundation. We propose to levy a revenue duty on billets for re-rolling with, however, a proviso. The Board has found that normally the fair price for imported billets is Rs. 64 a ton at port without duty. If Tatas are able to sell their billets at this price, they would be making a very good profit indeed. If, therefore, the Government are satisfied that Tatas are refusing without good reason to sell billets to the re-rolling industry, or if they are demanding a price which is higher than the price which I have mentioned, namely, Rs. 64 plus, of course, the excise duty, or if they are unable to meet the demand, then the Government will reduce the revenue duty to the extent that may be necessary to enable the re-rolling mills to obtain their billets at the price which I have mentioned, namely, Rs. 64 plus the excise duty. There remains fair selling price of Tatas' tin-bar is the same as the price of semis at port, namely, Rs. 64, without duty. Under the agreement, however, which subsists between the Tata Iron and Steel Company and the Tinsplate Company, the latter have to pay a price of Rs. 83 a ton for their tin-bar until the end of 1936, and, after that, it will drop to a figure somewhere in the neighbourhood of Rs. 70, giving an average of Rs. 74 a ton over the whole period of protection. This is excessive having regard to the estimated fair selling price of Tatas tin-bar and entails an unnecessarily high protection for tinsplate. If the average price of tin-bar to the Tinsplate Company could be reduced to Rs. 64 a ton, it would be possible, the Board points out, to reduce the duty on tinsplate by something like Rs. 13.3 a ton. The Tariff Board, therefore, suggest that the agreement between the two companies should be revised so as to allow for the purchase of tin-bar at the fairer rate of Rs. 64 a ton. We, Sir, endorse that suggestion, though, of course, the excise duty would have to be added on to Rs. 64. I would point out that if, by the end of March, 1935, Tatas have not been able to modify their arrangements with the Tinsplate Company more in accordance with the fair selling price of their tin-bar, Government will have to consider what steps they should take to prevent an excessive profit being made upon this item and the users of tinsplate being unnecessarily penalised. I must not be understood as indulging in threats or menaces. The Board's finding, however, is that in some cases the Tata Iron and Steel Company have not realised their obligation to the smaller subsidiary industries which look to them, and rightly so, for some measure of help and assistance. If the Tata Iron and Steel Company desire to be regarded as a great national industry and a great national asset, if they desire this country to make substantial sacrifices over a substantial period of time to set them securely on their feet, then I say that it is up to them to realise and to implement their obligations to the smaller ancillary industries of the country. I, Sir, for one, am quite prepared to believe that what is necessary to induce them to do so is not threat or coercion, but an appeal to the lofty aims and ideals of their own founder, that truly great Indian, Jamshedji Nusserwanji Tata. (Applause.)

Sir, I must now refer very briefly on the excise duty which, as I have said, will, no doubt, at a later stage, be dealt with by my Honourable colleague, the Finance Member. In this case, as in other similar cases, we have to face the ultimate consequences of a policy of protection upon our customs revenue. I would commend, for the careful consideration of this House, paragraphs 119 and 120 of the Tariff Board's Report. I am not now raising any question of general policy or principle. We are faced with certain inexorable facts, namely, heavy losses to our customs revenue and we have to make good those losses. The Board estimates a loss of revenue of roughly 60 lakhs of rupees as the result of the lowering of the duties now proposed. Estimates of losses must inevitably be uncertain, but even if we regard this as an over-estimate, it is absolutely certain that we shall have to face serious diminution in our customs revenue. In these circumstances, we have no option whatsoever but to accept the suggestion of the Tariff Board in paragraph 120 of its report and to levy an excise duty with a countervailing addition to the import duty so as not to impair the protection in any particular case. We have allowed for an increased import of galvanised sheet as the result deration, we estimate that the loss of revenue will not be less than Rs. 30 lakhs. We propose to make good that loss by the imposition of an excise duty of four rupees a ton on ingot steel manufactured in this country. Such steel is, I understand, manufactured commercially only by Tatas at the present moment, so that the collection of duty will be easy, and it will be spread over the whole range of steel products, thus preventing an unduly heavy incidence on any one class of production. The corresponding addition to the import duty has been calculated on the assumption that it takes four units of ingot steel to make three units of rolled steel and that the further loss on fabricated steel is approximately 10 per cent. more. I need only emphasize that there is no intention that this excise duty should form a permanent feature of our fiscal system. Its removal or reduction, however, must largely depend upon our general financial position. In conclusion, I need only say that the recommendations of the Board appear to me to balance very fairly the interests of the industry and the interests of the consumer. It cannot, I think, be possibly argued that they do not afford sufficient protection to the industry and the industry cannot complain if the interests of the consumer are allowed to prevail against any demand for excessive profits. Sir, I commend my motion for the consideration of the House. (Applause.)

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

“That the Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. H. P. Mody, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. B. Das, Mr. S. C. Sen, Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla, Mr. R. S. Sarma, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra, Sir Leslie Hudson, Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, the Honourable Sir James Grigg, the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before Monday, the 13th August, 1934, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five.”

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : Sir (Applause), at this stage, when the Bill is being referred to the Select Committee, the question that this House has got to consider is this,—whether the iron and steel industry deserves and requires protection for another period of seven years as recommended by the Tariff Board,—and, I think, Sir, that having regard to all the relevant considerations, there is one answer possible to that question and that answer is in emphatic affirmative.

Sir, the Tata Iron and Steel Company of Jamshedpur occupies such a predominant position in the iron and steel industry of this country that protection to this industry has come to be regarded as synonymous with protection to the Tatas, and, therefore, the question of this protection will have to be discussed mainly with reference to the protection to the Tata Iron and Steel Works at Jamshedpur. Now, the importance of the Tatas in the national economy of India hardly needs any emphasis. The iron and steel industry is a basic industry ; and if India is to be economically independent, then the growth and development of this basic industry will have to be fostered and promoted, and every possible assistance must be given to the pioneers of this industry till they are in a position to withstand foreign competition. Now, the phenomenal rise of Japan as a great industrial power, within the last fifty years, shows what State assistance can do in the matter of the development of a national industry. (Hear, hear.) Our economic helplessness was never revealed in a more depressing and in a more naked form than during the Great War. At that time, the foreign supply was practically cut off, and prices soared to unprecedented heights, to the delight of the profiteers and to the distress of the consumers. Now, under this policy of protection, the Tatas are able to produce 72 per cent. of the requirements of India. Our economic dependence has dwindled to a very great extent, so far as the iron and steel industry is concerned, and, with proper assistance, I think that the day is not far distant when the Tatas will be able enough not only to supply the entire requirements of India, but to compete on an increasing scale with foreign markets. Sir, the economic Swaraj which nationalist India is preaching today, the Tatas are actually achieving, and I think this House may take some credit for that achievement, having given the Tatas the protection that they have deserved.

There is another aspect of this question. Owing to the pressure of the population on the land, there is a steady migration of the unemployed agricultural population towards the industrial areas. It is, Sir, in the industrialization of the country that lies the solution of this menacing unemployment in this country. Every factory and every mill started means the absorption of a large number of the unemployed in those workshops, and to the unemployed it means food for their family, education for their children and sustenance for their lives : and in this industrialization of the country the Tatas occupy a very pre-eminent position. I consider, Sir, that Mr. Jamshedji Nusserwanji Tata was one of the greatest benefactors of India. (Hear, hear.) The Tata Iron Works at Jamshedpur I do not consider merely as an industrial undertaking : I consider they are a great national institution in whose success every patriotic Indian takes a legitimate pride and whose interest is dear to his heart ; and, I am sure, Sir, that any proposal for protection to the Tatas will receive sympathetic consideration from the Members of this House.

Now, in the general remarks I have been making, probably Honourable Members will think that I have been emphasizing the obvious. But there are occasions when it is necessary to emphasize the obvious also. Honourable Members may ask me,—“We gave protection to the Tatas seven years ago in the expectation that at the end of the period they will be able to dispense with it. Why has not that expectation been realized ?” They may also ask,—“Are we going to give protection to the Tatas for an interminable number of years, at the heavy cost of the consumers that it involves ?” These, Sir, are very pertinent questions, but not very difficult to answer. Honourable Members, who have glanced through the Report of the Tariff Board and the memoranda supplied by the Tata Company, will find that the breakdown of the scheme of protection in 1926 was due to causes which were beyond the control of the company. My Honourable friend, Sir Joseph Bhore, has referred to the great trade depression, the severest on record, which was responsible for the failure to achieve the results which were anticipated by the Tariff Board. The fall of prices was tremendous and the demand for the Tata products in their customary markets shrank to such an extent that they had to seek for fresh fields, for new areas, in parts of India distant from their workshops. That meant heavy expenditure on the part of their Sales Department and additional railway freight. The most important of those factors responsible for this [Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury.] The failure to achieve the result anticipated was that, owing to the curtailment of the railway construction programme, the demand for the Tata products from the railways fell considerably. To give one instance, the Tariff Board calculated that during the last four years' protection it has received, the Tatas received orders for rails to the extent of 253,000 tons while the Tariff Board had calculated that they would receive orders to the extent of 780,000 tons. This difference meant that the demand for Tata products from the railways fell by two crores of rupees, and added to this, there was the disastrous strike of 1928 which crippled the productive capacity of the company to a very considerable extent. And yet, Sir, in spite of all those handicaps, the Tatas attained such a degree of efficiency in their management that they were actually able to reduce their costs and at the same time to maintain their output. My friend, the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhowe, has read out to the House a passage from the Report of the Tariff Board where they say that from the point of view of efficiency the Tatas can compare favourably with any pre-war iron works either in Europe or America.

Now, there is one criticism that is generally urged against the policy of protection. It is said that the policy of protection towards an industry is at the expense of the consumer. This element of heavy cost to the consumer is, I think, inherent in any scheme of protection whether it is given to the iron and steel industry or to any other industry. When India adopted the policy of discriminating protection, they counted the cost that will have to be paid, and the sacrifice that will have to be made, to make India industrially self-sufficient. I think this argument of heavy cost to the consumer applies with less force and validity in the case of the Tata Iron Works than in the case of any other works. Let me examine how much extra amount the consumer pays to the Tatas and what he gets back from the Tatas in return? The Tariff Board calculated that during the period of protection the Tatas got Rs. 4,46,00,000 as a benefit of protection and Rs. 2,08,00,000 as a benefit from bounty, total Rs. 6,54,00,000. I may remind the House that during the period of the war the Tatas surrendered profit to the Government to the extent of over 6 crores of rupees. I shall explain how. During the period of the war, the Tatas supplied three hundred thousand tons of steel material to the Government at the average rate of Rs. 150 per ton and the prevailing market price was Rs. 350 per ton. Had the goods been supplied at the prevailing market rate, Government would have to pay six crores of rupees more to the Tatas than they actually did pay, and by this self-denying action of the Tatas the Indian Exchequer benefited to the extent of over six crores of rupees. That is from the point of view of the tax-payer. From the point of view of the consumer you may consider...

prices and the consumers would have to pay far more exorbitantly than they are doing at present. The income from our railways would have been less by a crore of rupees if there were not in existence a company like the Tata Iron and Steel Works at Jamshedpur. The Tatas pay about a crore and a half as wages to their labourers and if a balance-sheet were made of what the Tatas contribute to the well-being of the country and what they get in return, I think the balance will be in favour of the Tatas.

Now, Sir, what turned me into an admirer of the Tatas is the keen solicitude that is shown by the Tatas for the welfare of the labour in their workshops. The Tatas are a very good pay master. (Ironical Cheers.) Perhaps the House has not appreciated that sentiment, and I will, therefore, repeat again that the Tatas are a very good pay master.

Mr. B. R. Puri (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : In what direction please?

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : I am going to tell you that. In the Tatas workshops, there are, from my own district of Sylhet, 2,000 workmen working in Jamshedpur. They get far better wages there than they could get anywhere else in India. The daily rate of wages for these illiterate workers varies from 12 annas to three rupees a day, and, even during this period of depression, the Tatas have not thought it fit to reduce the wages. The pet theory of my friend, Mr. B. Das, that, with the fall of prices, there should be a fall in the wages of labourers, also has not found favour with the Tatas management. I think it is correct to say that they believe that, in the contentment of the labour, lies the prosperity of the Company and contented labour is the Company's greatest asset. With regard to the housing accommodation, everyone knows that, before the Tatas started their works at Jamshedpur, it was a mere wilderness. There now has sprung up the nice little modern town of Jamshedpur and the Tatas have spent over a crore of rupees over house accommodation of their employees. As regards medical assistance, the Tatas give free medical attendance to their workmen and they have spent over four lakhs of rupees on hospital and building equipment alone. They have adopted the scheme of maternity benefit in their workshop though the Government of India have not yet thought fit to introduce an All-India legislation for maternity benefit in this country. They provide rest houses for their women workers where they can change their dress and have their meals.

Mr. B. R. Puri : Are they doing it out of charity?

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : They are doing it for the welfare of the workers. They did it even in anticipation of the report of the Royal Commission on Labour. Then, Sir, the Workmen's Compensation Act is administered more liberally in Jamshedpur than anywhere else. When the Workmen's Compensation Act was under discussion, we reduced the waiting period for a temporary disablement from ten days to seven days and our amendment which sought to reduce it to three days was rejected by this House. Now, the Tatas have abolished the waiting period altogether and they pay compensation to their workmen from the very day on which they receive the injury. Evidently, they do not believe with my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, that malingering is a standing vice of the Indian workman, and, now that Mr. Mody has gone to Tatas, I hope, he will not infect the company with his pernicious theories. As regards the compensation paid to the workmen for injuries received, the Tatas pay at a much more liberal scale than what is provided even in the Workmen's Compensation Act. During the year ending 1933, the Tatas paid Rs. 50,000 as compensation to workmen who received injuries, though according to the standard laid down by the Workmen's Compensation Act, they were entitled to Rs. 30,000 only. Then, Sir, besides the wages, the Tatas pay bonus to their workers. They have provided amenities in the form of free supply of ice and soda water to their workmen who work in the scalding heat of the blast furnace. The Company pays also liberally towards the Provident Fund. Sir, this is a record of welfare work for which the institution will deserve a credit.

[Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury.]

Now, Sir, I have said that the Tatas because of their importance in the national economy of India, because of their efficient management, because of their contribution to the well-being of the country and because of their sympathetic attitude towards labour, have earned the right to protection for another period. Now, Sir, the question is, whether the protection is adequate. The Tatas are now producing 72 per cent. of the requirement of India. The question is, does the protection ensure that they should be able to produce 100 per cent. of the requirements of India. My own impression is that this Bill instead of promoting the growth of iron and steel industry will hamper and deter the growth and expansion of the Tatas. This Bill gives effect to the recommendation mainly of the Tariff Board. Now, this particular Tariff Board has devised a very peculiar scheme of Imperial Preference of the most objectionable kind. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Do you expect anything better ?

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Not many years ago, this House was very strongly opposed to the policy of Imperial Preference on general and on political grounds.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Also on economic grounds.

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury : The second stage was reached when we accepted the principle of Imperial Preference when it was in the mutual interest of India and England. That was the Ottawa spirit, the spirit of Mody-Lees pact. (Hear, hear.)

Now, Sir, we are asked to go a step further and to accept Imperial Preference even when it is detrimental to the interest of India. During the last four years, we have swallowed many an ancient prejudice, we have swallowed many a bitter pill, but the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore will find it difficult to make us gulp this particular pill down our throat. (Hear, hear.) We welcome Indo-British co-operation in trade, but never at the expense of India.

This Tariff Board has recommended the abolition of revenue duty on rails, fishplates, United Kingdom structurals and tested plates. As regards structurals, the landed price without duty of United Kingdom structurals is Rs. 113 per ton and the fair selling Tata price of the same is Rs. 111 f.o.r. port. The margin is so small that, with a slight manipulation of prices, the British manufacturer will be able to undersell the Tatas even in the Indian market. The same is also true of the case of British tested plates. The import price is Rs. 114 per ton and the price of Tatas is Rs. 110. Still, the Government refuses to give the Tatas the usual advantages that are afforded by the revenue duty on the British imported structurals and plates.

I should like to address my remarks to the Honourable the Finance Member. I do not think the Government of India have got a superfluity of funds in their treasury. Government have not been able to restore the five per cent. cut in the salary of their employees. The Government have also imposed a duty on matches to replenish their depleted exchequer, and yet the Government go out of their way to make a gift of the revenue duty to the British manufacturers. That, Sir, is a direct encouragement and an open invitation to the British manufacturers to come to India and capture the Indian market. I hope, Sir, the Government will still reconsider this position, and, when the Bill comes out of the Select Committee, impose the revenue duty and abolish this excise which is unnecessary. (Applause.)

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Sir, we are here to consider a very important question of giving further protection to the Tata Iron and Steel Company. There is no separate steel industry, and practically the whole of the iron and steel industry in this country is in their hands. If there are any other concerns, they are practically closely connected with them and a sort of combination exists with the result that, whatever concession is given, it practically reaches only the Tata concerns. I am not opposed to giving protection to the steel industry, but the main question is in what form and to what extent it should be given and we must closely examine the Tariff Board report and at the same time carefully consider what are the principles laid down in the Fiscal Commission report and to what extent the Tariff Board has taken into consideration those principles laid down in that connection and to what extent they have deviated. But before I proceed to do so, let me express my thanks to the Tariff Board for their very valuable report and for the trouble and care they have taken in presenting the case in favour of the steel industry or rather the Tatas. Though I do not agree with the methods and the conclusions of the Tariff Board, I do not wish to keep back my appreciation of the trouble they have taken in preparing the report and for my present purpose I need not enter into all the details of omission and commission as displayed in their voluminous report. Next, Sir, let me thank also the Tatas for their nicely got-up volume. But before I proceed with that, I may mention about this Tariff Board report. It is dated the 19th April but it was released on the 12th July. While I realise that it requires careful consideration by the Government, before it could be released, the Government has as usual taken too long a time to consider the matter, forgetting that Members of the Assembly also required time to study this voluminous literature put before them. Anyhow the report could have been released much earlier than the Government order on it. The Government took three months while they have given barely two weeks for us to consider the same.

Now, I come to that well got-up volume of the Tatas, which is a representation of the Company, to the Tariff Board. Along with that there is a very beautifully illustrated pamphlet of the welfare report which speaks of the housing, medical relief, education, technical training, welfare activities and Indianisation of staff and speaks of various amenities which are provided including a baby show or rather a [Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]—It is well known, as has been represented by a theatrical performance at Simla recently, that advertising pays. I need not speak of their activities in that behalf as the Honourable the Deputy President has already dealt with that point. It is well known that advertising pays. We should not be misled by this advertising propaganda of the company but must look to the facts justifying the protection which they ask for and the Tariff Board recommends. Though we have got this representation of the Tata Company the 66 other representations received by the Tariff Board have not seen the light of day. Nor has the evidence of about 30 bodies which gave oral evidence before the Board been made available to the Members of the Central Legislature. Will Government at least now place that evidence in the hands of the Members before they call upon the Assembly to renew the protection?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I may inform my Honourable friend that copies are available to the House and, I believe, I saw my Honourable friend, Mr. Das, with those copies in his hand.

Mr. B. Das : A copy has been placed in the Library and I borrowed it. But it contains just a portion, and not the whole. I do not find the evidence of the British steel section.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : We ourselves are not in possession of the whole evidence.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Next, Sir, I will add a supplementary question to that. Why has not the balance-sheet of the Tata Company for 31st March, 1934, been made available to the public? It is rumoured that there are certain secret agreements between the Tata Company and other iron and steel firms. I should like to know whether those agreements will also be available to the Members of the House for their perusal. I wait for a reply. (After a pause.) Sir, my question remains unanswered. Now, I come to the third pamphlet which has been placed at our disposal and that is that, the Muslim missionary representing the Muslim interests has issued a pamphlet, not only championing the cause of the Muslims, but running down the Company for not giving Muslims 33 1/3rd per cent. employment in all departments, with or without any qualifications. (Laughter.) I hope, in coming to their conclusions, my Muslim brethren here will not be swayed by this thoughtless and suicidal propaganda as contained in this representation. This will not tend to the efficiency of the Company, nor will it result in any benefit to the country.

Now, Sir, coming to the report, the Tariff Board should have been guided by certain rules prescribed by the Fiscal Commission's report. I am sorry to observe, that in some of the most important respects, the Tariff Board has not followed the sound principles laid down by the Fiscal Commission. For instance, in paragraph 97 of the report of the Fiscal Commission, it has been laid down that in cases like this, very wide publicity should be given to invite criticism of any scheme of protection, but in the present case not only no adequate publicity has been given but even the Local Governments have not been consulted or called upon to collect information as to the effect of protection on the consumers or asked to give an opinion on the matter. The Government of the Punjab, if I am not mistaken, are said to have gathered some useful information but it has not been submitted to the Government of India. Even the consuming departments of Government did not take any interest and were not invited to express their views although their vital interests were affected. The Indian States were equally interested but are conspicuous by their absence from among those who should be heard in the matter. I do not know why no opinion was collected from the Local Governments nor why the Indian States were not asked to say what they had to say in the matter, and, as such, the proper publicity which should have been given to the matter has not been given.

Not only the Tariff Board, but even Government have not strictly followed the principles laid down in the Fiscal Commission's report. For instance, in paragraph 86 of the Fiscal Commission's report, it was contemplated that in case of combinations or monopolistic production, tariff should be lowered or even withdrawn or special legislation introduced; but we all know that, during the continuation of the protection under the Act, no steps were taken to review the position, although the Tata Company and three other concerns manufacturing iron had combined themselves and fixed the prices. Healthy competition, which should have been expected to lower the prices, has not operated at all. Not only that, but also another Company, called the Kumardhobi Steel Rolling Mill, when it began to compete, was taken over into the combine, and the healthy rivalry stopped. I understand that, although this aspect was brought to the notice of the Board, it did not receive their consideration.

Cheapness of the steel is necessary to foster and create subsidiary and other industries, and it is, therefore, necessary that the protection which necessarily inflates the prices should not be used to the detriment of other industries. It is, therefore, necessary that the selling price of iron and steel by the Tata Company must be regulated and fixed by Government and should not vary with the rate of foreign importing prices including the duty. It has been found in the past that when the prices have gone up, and the price of the imported article including the duty has become higher, Tatas have also raised their prices instead of keeping at the proper level of their own manufacture. As such, when we are giving the protection in the interests of the country, it is necessary that Government should fix the prices for the sale of their goods, so that they do not make any inordinate profits on account of the rise in foreign prices.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : What about their losses?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : They have to thank themselves for it.

Though, under clause 2, Government have now proposed to take power to increase or decrease the amount of protection, they have not yet taken powers to regulate the selling price of the produce of the Tata Company. No doubt it should be a fair selling price, having regard to the cost of production. In paragraph 104 of the Fiscal Commission's report, the Tariff Board was not only expected to examine carefully the cost of manufacture of any article under examination in India, but also in foreign countries as well. The cost of manufacture to be taken into account and consideration should be the reasonable cost at which an article can and should be manufactured, and not the cost at which a certain concern pleases to manufacture it. A competent association, which knows what it says, has said as under :

[Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]

"The cost of manufacture has not been critically examined at all and not compared with the works in India, even nor any attempt made to examine costs in other countries. Many large works of foreign countries and foreign trade commissioners and import houses stationed in India would have been glad to supply the cost figures in their own interests. Re-rolling costs of sections in Kumardhubi Mills, cost of rolling black sheets and manufacturing galvanized sheets and their respective overhead charges in the Tin-Plate Company situated next door, production costs of bars of the Indian Steel and Wire Products Company were available in India. Persons who had claimed lower costs may have proved their assertion if an opportunity had been offered.

We are led to assert that no comparison or proper investigation in this behalf has been attempted.

It is admitted that raw material in India is cheap and rich in its contents, that labour is cheap and overhead charges have been considerably reduced, the technical equipment and efficiency has been discussed in details in Chapter VII by the Tariff Board, and yet the conclusions are that cost of manufacture is such that Tatas require heavy protection. Comparison with the overheads, etc., allow in the recommendations on the previous occasion (7 years ago) have not been made in details.

American and continental technical papers very often give details of manufacturing costs, but no attempt has been made to refer to any of these documents for purposes of comparison.

The technical adviser (Mr. C. G. Atha) has not mentioned anywhere that he is satisfied that costs in Tatas are as low as they can be and compare favourably with works abroad.

It would seem that the Tariff Board (para. 139), would want it to be believed that Tatas Works are of pre-war period, whereas a major portion of the works have been built and equipped since the war.

Under the circumstances, we again beg to repeat that costs want a more close examination and they should be accepted with due caution and reserve.

Considering that production is on a very large scale, the efficiency obtained should be the highest and Tatas should have established beyond doubt that their cost of production, administration, overhead charges and recovery from waste and by-products is the highest and their method and practice of purchase and sale was most efficient and above suspicion."

They further say :

"Comparison of cost of manufacture of Iron and Steel : The Tariff Board has discussed the works cost of manufacture of Iron and Steel, in Chapter III of their Report (paras. 38 to 64), and have contented themselves by concluding the chapter with the following remarks :

"As the Tata Company is the only producer of rolled steel from raw material (iron ore and coal) in India, our estimates are based entirely on what has been accomplished and what we believe can be accomplished by the company in future."

Iron is manufactured in Kulti and Burnpur under very similar conditions and on an equally large scale. The Tariff Board have closed their eyes altogether probably. A comparison of cost of manufacture of Iron with the Bengal Iron Company and the Indian Iron and Steel Company would have revealed the cost of manufacture of Iron and the wastage and recovery from the most important by-products such as coal-tar, ammonia, etc., and also given an idea of comparative overhead charges under a different control.

Complaints levelled against Tatas, and referred to in paragraph 65, are definite that production cost is too high, wastage is excessive and sufficient credit is not obtained for waste and by-products, and that the Managing Agency charges and overheads are too excessive."

The raw materials, viz., ore, coal, dolomite, manganese, power, firebricks, rail rights and many preliminary charges mainly come into consideration up to the manufacture of iron. The conversion of iron into steel is simpler so far as checking costs is concerned."

Under these circumstances, I would ask the Government to take power under the Bill itself to fix and control the fair selling price from time to time and not to allow the Company to vary its prices according to the import prices with the duty on foreign articles. Tatas must sell at a fair selling price to be fixed by Government after comparing the costs of manufacture of other concerns, both in India and outside. The Honourable the Commerce Member has referred to table No. 25 at page 55, and it will be clear that there is room for reducing the price of their products. I need not dilate in detail about certain other details, as I think they will be for consideration by the Select Committee.

In paragraph 83 of the Fiscal Commission's report are discussed the disadvantages of protection, and it was feared that protection might lead to political corruption and combines and monopolies and inefficiency. In that connection, I may again read the following :

"Incident of freight disadvantage : In para. 105 of their report, the Fiscal Commission writes :

"It would not be right to endeavour to secure for an industry such protection as will enable it to compete in every possible market in India if this involves giving protection appreciably higher than is required for the success of the industry in the greater part of the country."

That is a quotation from the report. In the face of this, the Tariff Board having allowed an incident of freight disadvantage is unfair and uncalled for, and it is but just and right that protection to this extent should be reduced,—paragraphs 86 to 88 of the Tariff Board Report. If this allowance for freight disadvantage is struck off, the economical possibility of another works in a suitable part of the country can be imagined with hopes of success and the position of the re-rolling mills also becomes secure. Now, Sir, I hope the Select Committee will go carefully into all these matters. I would here draw their attention to one or two other points, and that is, they must put a limit to the profits of the concern. We have not got the balance sheet, as I have mentioned, to show what are the profits made by this concern, but the value of the shares is jumping up slowly.....

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : How could it be ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : That is where they specialise in.

Then, Sir, the Committee should take into consideration the profits of the managing agents as well as of the shareholders. As I have said before, they are, of course, entitled to fair earnings, but when they seek protection for the industry, they should also see that their demands are not unduly high. Then, there is also a very great necessity to check inefficient, wasteful methods in working, and the heavy overhead charges also require attention and consideration. No doubt, as I have said twice before, the company should earn fair profits, but the excessive protection duty should not be a gift from the taxpayers with a view to checking and stunting the growth of other industries.

Then, Sir, the incident of surcharge of import duty has added undue profits in the past, and we must take that point into consideration now,

[Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya.]

Because, when protection was granted, it was not thought that there would be a surcharge of 25 per cent. on these various items, and, therefore, the company has automatically made a profit in that direction. Therefore, it is very necessary that powers should be reserved in the bill to cover it by excise duty by an executive order, and such excise duty should be utilised in giving rebates on the sale prices or in giving bounties to deserving smaller industries of steel in proportion to their consumption of steel, so that the prices of materials to them may be such as are available to manufacturers of similar articles in other countries and the burden of protection is minimised because this will go to encourage and foster local subsidiary industries. Sir, the protection has been given, not only against foreign competition, but also against internal competition with the smaller industries which have grown or are growing. As such, a surcharge must be returned as an excise duty which should be utilised to assist deserving consumers of steel. In this connection, Sir, I may also add that the case of other industries, which depend on steel products, must be taken into consideration in the matter of granting them rebates. For instance, some of the oil companies and other concerns, which use steel materials, are not able to compete on account of the high cost of the products.

Then, Sir, there is another matter that I should like to advert to, and that is the question of depreciation which is treated as an investment. The return on depreciation as investment (paragraph 74 of the report) does not come into the calculation of costs but gives an additional income to the Company and the assumption of the Tariff Board is decidedly wrong, and therefore I should like that point to be carefully considered by experts.

I do not wish to tire the patience of the House.....

Honourable Members : Go on, please.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : For the present I shall content myself with reading a telegram which I have received....

Several Honourable Members : Many of us have also received telegrams.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Yes, others also may have received telegrams, but I have got the priority of reading the telegram that I have got, and so I shall proceed to read it.

"Committee Bombay Shareholders' Association submit iron and steel duties bill embodies three undesirable principles. Firstly it confuses question of Government revenue with the issue of protection to indigenous industry. Secondly it seeks to impose excise duty on Indian manufactured steel while certain classes of British steel are to be admitted free of revenue duty. Thirdly, it seeks to impose burden on consumers for Government revenue in the name of protection in the middle of the year and that too for a period of seven years in advance. Committee strongly opposes proposed excise; it being tax on production. Committee would point out that Tariff Board's suggestion for excise for revenue purposes was outside the scope of their reference. Committee strongly opposes exemption of British structurals, plates and sheets from revenue duties. Committee further submits countervailing duties are imperative in case of certain articles such as British galvanized sheets where proposed revenue duty is more than protective and countervailing duties combined. Committee therefore urges levy of revenue duty on British structurals, plates and sheets on all articles. Committee further submits that landed price of galvanized sheets calculated by Tariff Board at Rupees 160 in para. 96 of their Report is unduly high and reasons given therefore in para. 107 are unconvincing. Committee strongly urges correction of landed price and consequent adjustment of duties. So-called preferential treatment to Indian pig iron shipped to United Kingdom is infinitesimal compared to substantial preference given to British galvanized sheets. Prices of both semis and continental structurals are given as Rupees 64 in para. 96 of the Report which appears to Committee to be an obvious error as price of the latter which is a finished product invariably commands higher market rate. Committee therefore urges that this price should be corrected and duty increased accordingly. Committee also urges that duties on imports of British untested steel should be higher than those on tested steel, otherwise fair selling prices might not be realised by the Indian industry and British producers might dump untested steel on Indian markets. In this connection Committee invites Government's attention to memoranda submitted by National Federation of Iron and Steel manufacturers to the Tariff Board. Committee further submits that the Act as amended on the lines suggested above should not be brought into force before 1st November as existing protection expires on thirty-first October and it is only fair that status quo should be preserved till then. Representation follows."

That is from Bombay, and here is another telegram from Madras.

1 P.M.

The Southern India Chamber of Commerce, through their President, have sent the following telegram :

"Southern India Chamber strongly protests against imposition of any excise duty on iron steel products as consumers already long overburdened with high prices following protective policy and as recovery of other trades industries will be further retarded. Chamber strongly opposes system of preference to British goods being extended to new items except by fresh reciprocal agreement. Chamber alarmed at prospect of new lower duties coming into force before 31st October as heavy stocks in market and due for delivery in interval are bound to cause immense losses all over country."

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : What about Karachi ? Have they not sent a wire to you ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I do not think they had enough time to go through these matters. Now, Sir, there are other matters such as the Indianisation of this Tata Company. But I do not think I should monopolise all the points, and I shall leave it to other Members to press those points, and, with your permission, I will now sit down.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : The Centre Party has unanimously resolved to support this motion for referring the Bill to a Select Committee. I hold no brief, either for or against the Tatas, but I should on this occasion like to warn the House against the propaganda which is going on in some of the Indian newspapers. An Indian newspaper, whose impudence, in offering gratuitous advice to the Government and to Honourable Members of this House is surpassed only by its ignorance, has taken upon itself to champion the cause of the Tatas, I am quite sure, unwanted and unsolicited by the Tata firm themselves. That newspaper ought to be now by this time well-known to the Government. It has been carrying on in a covert and cowardly manner a seditious and anti-British propaganda and the sins of that newspaper should not be visited upon the Tatas, who, as the Honourable the Leader of the House has shown, have well deserved of the country.

The ten clauses of the Bill seek to provide that protection shall be continued to the Tatas, secondly, that the cost of protection should be provided against, and thirdly, that the policy of the Ottawa Agreement should be implemented so far as that implementing is consistent with the interests of our country. So far as I can see, if these three are the objects of the Bill, as I take them to be, no Honourable Member, no

[Mr. N. N. Anklesaria.]

Bill. (Mr. B. Das : "Question.") As regards the first object, I think every Honourable Member will agree that the Tatas have deserved the continuance of the protection granted to them under the Bill. I will not expatiate on the services which the Tatas have rendered to the country. They are very well-known, and do not need repetition from me. The Tatas have, at a tremendous sacrifice, carried on a key industry on which the safety of the nation depends, and it was, on the ground of protecting a key industry, that the first inroad on the free trade doctrine in England was made. And if India follows suit, I think there is nothing to cavil at India following England in this connection.

As regards the second object, namely, recouping the losses which the revenue is bound to suffer on account of protection being granted to the industry, it is a question which has been before the minds of this House and of this country for some time, and it was very gratifying that the ex-Finance Member at last listened to the justice of the demand of the free-traders in the interests of the nation at large. He pointed out in his last Budget speech the tremendous cost which this country was paying in carrying on the policy of protection. He pointed this out in the interests of the agricultural classes of this country (Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : "Question"), and stated that the agricultural classes ought to have the paramount attention of the Government, and he pre-visualised a policy which we are today by this Bill implementing in part. Opinions may, of course, differ as to the extent and amount of the protection to be granted. That is, however, a matter for the Select Committee.

As regards the method of recouping the losses, consequent upon this policy of protection, opinions may differ. The Tariff Board has stated that the obvious method by which these losses could be recouped would be to put an excise duty on the home product. Sir, the eligibility of this method has also been pointed out by the majority report of the Fiscal Commission. They point out that taxation by means of excise duty is a form of taxation which has got the least objectionable character about it, and they give an instance to illustrate their point. Suppose Government want one crore of revenue from taxing the product of a certain industry. If they put five per cent. duty on the imports of the commodity into this country and five per cent. countervailing duty on the home product, the Government would get one crore of rupees. On the contrary, if they impose a protective duty only, then they must make it ten per cent. for then alone they would get one crore of rupees as revenue of the 2 crores taken from the tax-payer, the other crore being shared by the home producer and the foreign producer, thus mulcting unnecessarily the tax-payer to the extent of one crore of rupees. Sir, the superiority of taxation by means of excise duty in the present connection is, therefore, clear from this illustration. No doubt, as I said, there is room for very honest difference as regards eligibility of excise as a form of taxation in the present connection, but both the Tariff Board as well as the Government, after due consideration, have advocated excise taxation as the best means for recouping the revenue losses. If Honourable Members criticise the proposal of the Government in this connection, they should be prepared to offer an alternative proposal by which the losses due to following the protective policy could be recouped.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member can resume his speech after Lunch.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Sir, when the House rose for recess, I was telling the House that those who criticized this excise duty must be prepared to suggest a better alternative to the excise duty if their criticism is to be of any value. My Honourable friend, Mr. Das, interrupted me and he said, he was going to suggest a better alternative. Sir, during the recess I took the opportunity of talking to Mr. Das and asking him whether he was prepared to tell me what that better alternative was. My Honourable friend, however, simply refused and said he was not going to tell me what that better alternative was till his turn came, and then it would be for the Honourable the Finance Member to answer him.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Sir, can private conversations be referred to on the floor of the House ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Sir, I, therefore, take it that no such better alternative, as promised by Mr. Das, exists.

Mr. B. Das : What logic !

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Now, as regards the third object of this Bill, namely, that of implementing the policy of the Ottawa Agreement, I should like to offer a few remarks. Sir, the Ottawa Agreement was endorsed by this House by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. B. Das : Thanks to you !

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Thanks to you also ; you also voted in favour of it.

Mr. B. Das : I voted for it ? I was quite against it !

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Your Party or your Leader did.

Mr. B. Das : No, no. That is why the Democratic Party has been formed.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Any way, it was a very wise course which this Assembly adopted in supporting the Government proposal for the Ottawa Agreement. I personally welcomed it as a substantial measure towards free trade. Sir, I am a convinced and a confirmed free trader, and I believe the economic salvation of the world lies not in tariff wars, but in tariff agreements. Of course the ideal of world free trade cannot be had, but the world is now realizing the folly of tariff wars. The other day, Sir, reading the report of the Geneva Economic Conference of 1927, I was surprised to find that the President, Mr. Theums, propounded the doctrine of free trade and advocated it in almost the very same words as the French statesman Condillac did somewhere about 1782. The other day, my Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar said,—in face of the world-wide enunciation of economic nationalism and in face of the emphatic remarks regarding the cost of protection which this country was paying made by the Honourable the Finance Member in this House—that free trade was as “dead as Queen Anne”. Now, Sir, as I said on a previous occasion, a greater man than my Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Mudaliar, stated (An Honourable Member: “Who is he?”)—he was Disraeli—he stated as far back as 1862 that protection was “dead and damned”. There is no doubt that free trade is coming by its own, and this measure is in some way implementing the doctrines of free trade and is a move towards free trade. I, therefore, welcome it. Sir, as I said, if we cannot have the ideal, we must aim at the practical. We cannot have free trade all over the world, because unfortunately of the weaknesses to which human nature is subject all throughout the world, but, as a pis aller—as something in place of the better thing—men have propounded the doctrine of inter-Imperial free trade so far as the British Empire is concerned, and I think the economic salvation of India as well as of Great Britain lies in acceding to that doctrine of inter-Imperial free trade. Sir, I take this occasion of telling the British Government and the British people, that agreements can be worked, not by one side only, but they must be worked by both sides. It is impossible that one party to the agreement should take everything and give nothing in return. We have given very substantial preferences to the British manufacturers and traders in several respects. The present Bill continues the existing preferences and gives the British manufacturers increased preferences and the Honourable the Leader of the House has stated that in return we do get preferences as regards pig iron and manganese and something else. How far that is a quid pro quo, I am not competent to pronounce. I am sure, my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, who knows the technical side of the whole question, will be able to tell the House how far what the British Government have given us is compensatory for what we have given to them. Sir, the French have a saying:

[Mr. N. N. Anklesaria.]

“L'Anglais est un mauvais coucheur. Il tire toute la couverture à lui-même”, meaning that the Englishman is a very bad bed-fellow, because he draws all the bed covering to himself. (Laughter.) I trust, Sir, this is not true, and I hope the remarks of the Frenchman were due more to his inherent suspicion of the perfidious Albion than based on reasonable grounds. Sir, I support the motion.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: Sir, a few years ago, a person, more a politician than a physician, advertised cholera pills (Laughter), and persons having some humour asked him what those pills were intended for—whether they were intended to check cholera or to develop it. Now, after investigation, it was found that it served both purposes—that it checked cholera if it was due to local conditions, and developed cholera if it was due to the invasion of foreign bacilli. Sir, the same is the case with our Commerce Department. (Laughter.) Here I have got in my hand the cholera pills of the Commerce Department and it is still a sporting question to ask and answer whether our Commerce Department is intended to check commerce or to develop it. The cholera pills of the Commerce Department is the Tariff Board. Sir, the measures that we have passed this year may or may not develop the industries, but certainly they do not develop the commerce.

In fact, it is one of the great mistakes in the division of the Departments of the Government of India that we have divested commerce from industry. Both of them, in fact, go hand in hand, and the measures which the Commerce Member has adopted and is still going to adopt will help his neighbour (I mean the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce), more than himself, and I think he has got a dictum that charity does not begin at home, but it begins with neighbours. My Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, is unfortunately a much maligned person in this House, but in this case I have great sympathy for him. I will just tell a story before I apply it in his case.

A person lost a camel and he could not find it. Then he made a vow that he would sell it for nothing if he could find it. Fortunately he found his camel, but he adopted the ruse that he fastened a cat to the neck of the camel and said that the price of the cat was Rs. 100. So, to any one who came to purchase the camel, he said: “You can have the camel for nothing, but the price that you will have to pay is only for the cat which is Rs. 100 and you cannot have one without the other”.

So, my friend, Mr. Mody, can have his Protection Bill all right. He can have it for nothing, provided he pays the price of this cat in the shape of the excise duty. Sir, I said three years ago that the wrong theories of political economy have contributed more to the miseries of the world in recent years than anything else, with the possible exception of the Great War. Similarly, I say that the theories of taxation, ill-digested, badly thought out and incorrectly calculated are more responsible for the general depression in the country than all the other factors put together. In the year 1931, we put up the duties by 25 per cent. irrespective of the fact whether they were protective duties or revenue duties. We did not have the time to consider whether the duty will bear this additional taxation and the results have proved that it was a false move. Now, two notable examples of the mistake committed in 1931 are in regard to sugar and steel. The sugar had a protective duty which was very well calculated by the Tariff Board, and this House passed it after great deliberation. We suddenly increased this protection by 25 per cent. to the great detriment of the consumer. Now, we found an array of vested interests in favour of it, and experience showed that it was exceedingly difficult to take it off, and we could succeed in doing it only by levying a kind of excise duty on sugar. The second example, now before us, is that of steel. In 1927, on the recommendation of the Tariff Board, we minutely calculated the exact amount of the protection which we ought to give to this particular industry. Then, may I ask, what right had the Government got in 1931 suddenly to increase this duty by 25 per cent.? Was it not a great injustice to the consumer of this country that a well-planned taxation made in 1927, in which every aspect of the case was calculated, was suddenly increased by 25 per cent. in 1931 without any calculation and without any reference to any person, and the result is what we are facing today. The Government no doubt recognised their mistake in the case of sugar, and now they are feeling the pinch with regard to steel, because of the mistakes which they committed in 1931 by suddenly increasing the duty by 25 per cent. It is not easy now to remove these duties. Sir Charles Innes in 1924 pointed out:

“The experience in other protectionist countries shows that it is easier to put on these protective duties than to take them off. One of the disadvantages of the protective duties is that they tend to create vested interests and these vested interests very naturally oppose tooth and nail any reduction of the protective duties even though the apparent need for them may have disappeared."

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

This was the opinion expressed by Sir Charles Innes. The same opinion was expressed by the Fiscal Commission. They said :

"But we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that in protectionist countries considerable difficulty is experienced in reducing and removing duties even when they are not required and it is probably that such a thing will impose on the whole a greater burden on the consumer than its conditions really required."

Sir, these are the warnings which Sir Charles Innes gave when he first introduced the Bill in 1924, and the Fiscal Commission pointed out that we should be on our guard that, whatever burden we put on the consumers, we should not overburden them, but we should be very careful about the quantum of protection and should have no hesitation to remove it if the circumstances warrant it. Sir, as I said, this wrong policy of the taxation has created enormous difficulties with the policy pursued during the last five years. In the year 1930-31, the income of India under customs was 46.81 crores, to which we added the customs duties to the extent of 30 crores. Last year the income was only 46.87 crores and the estimate for the current year is 46.48 crores, and, I am sure, the total income will never exceed 46½ crores. Our income, as well as the purchasing power of the people of India, has enormously gone down. I made a calculation and mentioned it in the Assembly during the last Session that the income of the people of British India alone has gone down by 800 crores per annum, of which 500 crores represents the agricultural income, 100 crores represents the income of those persons who pay income-tax, and their number is 6 lakhs, and 200 crores represents the income of other persons who are neither agriculturists nor income-tax payers.

Now, I appeal to the Honourable the Finance Member, Sir James Grigg, to evolve some theory of taxation and put us on the right track. We have been imposing all kinds of taxes and have evolved absolutely novel theories on the floor of this House. The first theory that we evolved is that we should raise the price level of the manufactured articles or restore the same competitive conditions that existed a few years ago. Now, this is a theory which is not supported by any economical consideration. Then we have got another theory that we can increase, without consideration, the taxes by 25 per cent. all round.

This will also look quite strange in the eyes of any person who has got any knowledge of political economy. The next thing is about protection. No doubt we all agree that protection should be given, but the point is about the quantum of protection. That is an exceedingly important thing. I think we have been paying no attention to it. We have never demanded year after year the budget or the balance sheet of those concerns to whom protection has been given. We have never demanded from them as to how much profit they were making. From this side of the House we have been demanding, since 1924, that the Government should place before this House or a Committee of this House an account of the profit and loss together with the balance sheets of the companies to whom protection is given, but no action has been taken. This is really very important for determining the quantum of protection that we might give to an industry.

Whatever theory of taxation we may evolve, it is essential that we should know the exact income that would accrue from any measure of taxation and we should get the whole amount. Sir Charles Innes, in connection with a previous debate said that the ideal tax is the tax which brings to the coffers of the Treasury precisely the same amount of burden placed on the consumer. That is, whatever burden you put on the consumer, the whole profit must come to the exchequer. Whatever income you anticipate, unless very unforeseen circumstances happen, such as floods and earthquakes, the same amount must come to the exchequer. This is really the ideal of taxation, and I hope that in every taxation this principle should be kept in mind. I am not opposed to protection as such, but I would suggest for the consideration of the House that we should have some sound theory about taxation and not come forward from time to time with all kinds of taxation. Sometime ago, we had only one Finance Bill on the 28th February of every year. But now the merchants of India are staggered, and they do not know what would happen to them any day. Now, for the merchants, every day is the 28th February, because they do not know what would happen to them tomorrow. By such action we have really paralysed trade and commerce in this country, we have made the minds of merchants in this country unsettled, and they have become nervous. It is really one of the reasons why trade and commerce are so much depressed in this country. If the Government want taxes, I may mention for the consideration of the Honourable the Commerce Member a few points, and, if these are followed, the Government might get all the money they want. I suggest that they should take up, first of all, a few commodities of inelastic nature and the Government should get from these commodities all the revenue they want. The Government of the day must be carried, and they should have sufficient revenue. So let them pick up a few commodities.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Honourable Member is evidently imagining that he is on the 28th February and discussing the Finance Bill. We are discussing the Indian Iron and Steel Duties Bill.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I am just coming to that, and it is my second point. I was saying that the first principle is that we should select inelastic commodities and get the whole revenue from them. Secondly, we may have protective duties. But before we impose any protective duties, we must first be satisfied that the three conditions, which the Fiscal Commission laid down before the imposition of protective duties, are fulfilled. These are well-known conditions which I need not repeat. In addition to those conditions, which the Fiscal Commission mentioned, there are two more conditions which must be satisfied, and unless these two additional conditions are satisfied, protection duties are not justified. These two conditions are that this money, which the consumers are giving in the shape of a loan year after year, should be paid back to them. This is not a free gift to the industry. The consumers have no interest to give this free loan to the capitalists. This is really in the shape of a loan which ought to be paid back after a certain number of years by those concerns in the shape of supplying those goods at cheaper rates. When the industry, which is receiving the protection, is able to stand on its own legs, at the foreign countries do.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

The next condition to be satisfied is that before we agree to the principle of protection, this House, as has been pointed out by Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, should have an opportunity to examine, year after year, the balance sheet of all the factories which come under protection. We should know the profits they have been making. For instance, in the case of sugar, which was given protection, we were told that some sugar concerns were making 50 per cent. profit and that others were making 100 per cent. profit. This may have been correct, but there is no authoritative information, either for or against this assertion. We do not know, in the case of the steel industry, what profits the Tatas are making. Even the balance sheet is not before us. Nothing has been given to us. We do not know whether they are making a profit, and what is the amount. Is it a fabulous figure or a reasonable figure? Others say that they are running at a loss. We ought to know the real position of the Tata Company. I, therefore, suggest that, unless these two additional conditions are satisfied we should refuse to accept any taxation of the nature of protection. These conditions are that the balance sheet must be produced and examined by the Government and also examined either by the whole House or by a Committee of the House. The next condition is that this protection should be considered as a loan, and every year the House should know what is the amount given as a loan by way of protection to this industry. We should know its amount year after year.

I now come to the Tariff Board Report. I have got a great grievance against this Tariff Board. Certain allegations were made on the floor of the House by my Honourable friend, Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar, but no answer was given by the Government. If we appoint any Tariff Board, it must be above suspicion and we should not be able to quote anything against any Member of the Tariff Board. If we want to accept the findings of the Tariff Board, the Government should take care in appointing the personnel of the Tariff Board and remarks of the nature which Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar made on the floor of the House should never be made in the case of these Members. In addition to this, there are certain duties which Sir Charles Innes laid down in 1924 when the previous Tariff Bill was under discussion. I will just mention his own words. He said:

"The Tariff Board is charged with the most responsible function. It is the duty of the Board to advise the Government of India not merely whether a particular industry requires protection but whether on the whole the balance of advantage lies in giving it protection. It is their business to weigh all the interests not merely of the particular industry claiming protection but also of all other industries which may be affected. Above all it is their duty to consider the effect of any proposals which they may have made upon the general consumer and upon the general taxpayer."

One of the most important duties of the Tariff Board is to give us exactly the amount of burden which will fall on the consumer and the amount of burden which will fall on the tax-payer, which is the same thing as Government. When we first introduced this Tariff Bill in 1924, Sir Charles Innes gave in his speech greater details of the question of protection and how the burden of protection would be divided. He said clearly that the protection was about 1½ crores per annum out of which one-third would be on the consumer, one-third on the industry and one-third would be on the Government. He did not stop here. He quoted Sir Alan Parsons who was then the Financial Commissioner who went so far as to calculate that the exact burden on railways would be 29 lakhs, of which 15 lakhs would fall on capital and 14 lakhs on revenue. These were the details which were calculated when the first Protection Bill in 1924 was laid before the Assembly. May I ask, what are the figures for this particular Bill? What is the exact amount of burden which we are going to put on the consumers of India? How this burden will be shared between the Government, the Tatas, and the other industries in India and outside. You should have accurate figures. We should know where we are. At present the Bill, that is presented to us, says that Government have reduced the amount of taxation, but we forget all the time that we had quietly increased the taxation in 1931 by 25 per cent. without any justification, and that thing has altogether been ignored all the time. Therefore, this is one of the disadvantages in this report, and I think the Tariff Board have not carried out their duties properly and they failed to give the exact financial effect of their proposals and visualise the effect of increasing 25 per cent. protective duties all round. I was rather disappointed in this respect in the speech of the Commerce Member also, because I thought that this gap would probably be filled up by him, and he would be able to give us the exact amount of the burden. I did not have the time to calculate it myself, because it requires a number of data which are not exactly before me. But, on one very small item, I calculated these figures, and that small item is iron bars. We know that iron bar is a very trifling item in the steel industry, and I will give the conclusions that I arrived at in connection with the iron bar industry, that is, our total consumption of iron bars in this country, and I got the figures of import from Seaborne Trade, which is given here on page 78, and it is equivalent to 65,000 tons. Tata's figures are given in the report supplied by Tata's themselves as 80,000 tons making the total consumption to be 146,000 tons. Now, here we are given the figures of the sale price of British goods, continental goods and Tata Iron Works as well. I find that if protection duty is removed and all the customs duties are abolished, naturally every consumer will buy the cheapest, and the cheapest price is the continental price which is Rs. 65 per ton. So it really means that if protection is removed, then the consumers in India will have to pay 94 lakhs and 90 thousand rupees altogether, that is, 146,000 tons at Rs. 65 per ton. Now, if we accept the recommendations in the Bill and put on all the duties that are proposed in the Bill which is now before us, I find that the duty on Tata's will be Rs. 4, that is, the excise duty, and the selling price will be Rs. 101. The duties on English goods will be ten per cent., that is, it will rise from 96.1 to 105.62. The duties on continental goods will be 44 1/3 per cent., that is, 1 1/3 of the excise duty plus Rs. 39 per ton, that is, Rs. 109 1/3. Therefore, if the same amount be purchased at the prices which are really mentioned in this particular Bill, then the total burden on the consumers will come to 155 lakhs and 34 thousand; or, in other words, the burden on the consumers by one item alone, that is, iron bars which is a very trifling part of the whole scheme, is 60 lakhs per annum. That is on one item alone. Now, let us see how this 60 lakhs will be divided among the three important parties, that is, Government, Tata's and the British manufacturers. And I find by the same method that out of this Government will get 24 lakhs, Tata's will get 32 1/2 lakhs, and the British manufacturers will be profited by 4 1/2 lakhs. This is the distribution of the 60 lakhs out of this one item. In the same way, I would very much like that our Select Committee should calculate the exact amount of the burden on the consumers if their proposals are accepted, and in what way the income which will accrue from this burden on the consumers will be divided between the three important interests, that is, Tata's, Government and other manufacturers. This is really a very important aspect, and unless we know very definitely the exact amount of the protection that we are going to give to Tata, you are really asking us to swallow what I call cholera pills without understanding what they are. And these pills have now become so big that I think you will have to force them down our throats before we can swallow them. I calculated for one or two more items in the same manner, but I think I will tire the House if I give too many details at this stage. But there is one thing which I think the Committee might consider, and that is the question of the discounts or the reverse of the premium which we are giving to the foreign countries.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

Now, we have no doubt, this House accepted the Ottawa Agreement.

3 P.M. We have already accepted the ten per cent. preference.

But, in this particular case, the preference goes to any figure from 10 to 47 per cent., and I think this is beyond what this House has been committed to, and it is very desirable that we should seriously consider this question from the point of view which I am just going to advance. As regards foreign countries, we know very well that some of the important countries of Europe are still on the gold standard, and we have already given them a discount of 34 per cent.,—that is due to exchange,—and if, in addition to that, we give them another preference about 40 to 45 per cent., then their discount, compared with the United Kingdom, will be something like 80 per cent. in some cases. I doubt very much whether, with this 80 per cent. discount, it will be possible for countries like Belgium and other countries to send these articles at all to India. I accidentally met one of the dealers in steel and iron, who import articles both from the United Kingdom and from other foreign countries; and he said that, after this Bill is through, it is nearly certain that all the import from foreign countries in iron and steel will stop, because the duties are so prohibitive that it will be impossible for them to compete under the conditions laid down in this Bill. Of course, I had no opportunity to examine the accuracy of this statement and I cannot mention it authoritatively; but if it is correct, it will become a very serious matter, because if we impose some very high duty, so as to stop their import altogether, then it is certain that they in their turn will put similar duties on our goods, and our export to these foreign countries will also stop. Of course we have not before us the Ottawa Agreement by means of which we can judge what has been the effect of the agreement on foreign trade. But we know definitely that our trade with the United Kingdom has increased although we cannot say yet, until our Committee reports, whether this increase has been only a diversion from foreign countries to England or whether it is a real increase. But we are waiting for the opinion of this Committee, and I am not in a position to make any authoritative statement on this particular point. But the point which I should like to emphasise is this that if we, by this high tariff, stop our import from foreign countries, then they are bound to retaliate; and what would be the result? The result would be that there will be some kind of separate trade agreement with every country. I read in the papers today that Italy is thinking of entering into a separate trade agreement with India, and probably it may be absolutely necessary on account of the high tariff policy that we are adopting. Then tomorrow we may have another trade agreement with Belgium, and, probably, if we develop this policy, we will have trade agreements with all the remaining 56 countries that are members of the League of Nations, because they are all countries that demand reciprocal treatment. If the Tariff Board is really punctuated by 56 trade agreements with 56 different countries, I do not know what the position will be. The position will be the same as was described by King Alphonso of Spain about the solar system. Of course we know that whenever the astronomers, believing the earth to be the centre of the solar system, were in trouble about the exact position, they added one more circle and they called that the epicycle, and thus they went on adding more circles one after another. When these things were explained to Alphonso, he said: "Had I been God, I would have devised a better solar system that exists at present". Of course the fault did not lie with God: it lay in the human understanding, because he did not know the simplicity and beauty of the arrangement. So, instead of having a simple tariff, we will be having epicycles of a very complicated Tariff Act for the country.

I should, therefore, like to request the members of the Select Committee to go thoroughly into the details and give us clear figures. I shall come now to the sale policy adopted by Tatas. This requires very serious consideration. I am told that these sale houses are entitled to get any discount from zero to five per cent. or so. My information is that by various methods they get more than five per cent. I understand that each of them has invested a capital of Rs. 15 lakhs, and no merchant will be satisfied unless he gets an income of about ten per cent. at least (six per cent. interest plus four per cent. profit). Therefore, if the present sale policy is changed and the Tatas begin to sell directly to these merchants and avoid the middlemen's profits, it will bring in more than the excise duty which we are imposing on the Tatas: this one change will bring in the amount of the excise duty. I have not got the figures, but, speaking subject to correction, it would amount to Rs. 7½ lakhs a year if we calculate it at ten per cent. on the money invested in these agencies—five merchant houses each investing Rs. 15 lakhs each. In addition to this financial loss to the consumer, there are two other disadvantages to which attention has been drawn by the Tariff Board at page 16 of their report where they say:

"The complaint of the Calcutta merchants that they have been converted from independent merchants into mere shopkeepers, we are afraid, is an inevitable consequence of the introduction of protection which has enabled the Indian industry to capture so large a proportion of the market hitherto open to the foreign dealer."

They say previously:

"We would not have it thought that we accept at their face value all of the complaints made by the re-rolling mills and dealers against the sales policy of the Company and the methods the Company has followed in the efforts to introduce its products into new markets, such as the agreement which binds Tata dealers to deal only in Tata products."

I am told that these merchants go to very small places where there are local small industries, and they practically destroy them by under-selling the Tata articles in those localities. This probably is done against the intention of the Tata Company. All these troubles will be avoided if the Tatas change their selling policy and adopt the policy which every manufacturer adopts. Any merchant in Upper India can purchase from the biggest manufacturers in England or Europe or America direct, but he cannot purchase directly from Tatas unless he gives a commission which may be anything up to five per cent. to a middleman. Why should there be this additional taxation on the consumer on account of the want of managing capacity in the sale department attached to this particular firm?

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

I say clearly that I and others on this side are not opposed to protection being given to Tatas. We consider it a national industry, and I think it is the duty of every one, interested in the well being of India, to support the development of the industry; but what we should like is that we should clearly know what we are doing. We should not act like Yacoub Al Kandi, who got a solution without knowing what he was doing. Yacoub Al Kandi, a great mathematician, wanted to find out the value of one degree: he calculated the value of $15/16$, because one degree cannot be obtained without the trisection of an angle which he could not do: and he then added $1/15$, in order to get the value of one degree: and Alberuni said that although his results be right to two places of decimals, yet he did not know what he was doing. So, even if all the recommendations made in this Bill are right, we will not know what we are doing unless we know what the financial effects of these proposals are. We will be acting without knowing what the effects of these proposals will be on the purse of the Finance Member or on my own individual purse as representing the consumer.

Another point is that while we are not against giving protection, we have every right to demand through the Government that the balance sheet of the Company should be laid year after year before us, so that we may know what profits exactly the Company is making.

Before I sit down, I would like to refer to what Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya said: he spoke about the memorandum re Muhammadan representation. I also saw the memorandum and the summary. I quite agree with him, and there can be no difference of opinion that the first thing we should look to is the efficiency of this institution. Communal considerations and the like should not find a place compared with efficiency. But what I actually find is that in all posts, where technical knowledge is required, the Muhammadans have comparatively not much to complain about: their complaint lies in the posts where technical knowledge is not required, and I can show the facts and figures to Mr. Pandya. I do not know what his object was in mentioning this matter, whether he meant that the Muslims were going to strike a bargain about these posts with the Tatas: I can assure him that there is nothing of the kind, and I can produce Mr. Pandya himself as my witness that, as far as we are concerned, nothing of this kind will happen. But what we want is that Muslims or other minorities should have fair opportunities along with others: and the opportunities should be of equivalent value. My friend, Bhai Parma Nand, is not here—I shall develop this point later on—but he always refers to the League of Nations, whenever the question of minorities comes up: I would also refer to the League of Nations, and I say we do not want anything except fair opportunities and opportunities of equivalent value. I shall not waste the time of the House now in explaining what I mean by opportunities of equivalent value, unless the question is taken up directly. We do not want any kind of inefficiency in Tatas: we want to have the best men there, but we want opportunities of equivalent value to be extended to minorities. With these words, I support the motion.

Dr. R. D. Dalal (Nominated : Non-Official) : Mr. President, coming as I do of a distinguished mercantile family in Gujarat, Western India, I have all my life taken a deep interest in commercial matters, in fact, my leanings are more towards commerce and finance. So I should be failing in my duty if I did not make a few general observations on this important Bill, which seeks to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel. At the outset, I would say that the Report of the Indian Tariff Board is a document of outstanding importance, setting out, as it does, the considered views of the Board on the present position of the iron and steel industry in India, and what makes it the more important is that it endeavours with manifest sincerity to discuss the whole question from a national point of view. But, Sir, I fear this measure will create considerable criticism and consternation throughout the length and breadth of India. I have made a careful study of the Tariff Board's Report, the representation of the Tata Iron and Steel Company, and also this Bill, and, to my mind, three important points stand out most prominently, namely a reduction in the level of import duties, the price of untested steel and tested steel, and the imposition of an excise duty on steel ingots. So far as I understand the amendments in the Schedule, I think there will be keen competition between Tata Steel and British steel, but I hope the Select Committee will go thoroughly into this point and will eventually set the matter right. Sir, during the last few years, several re-rolling mills have sprung up in various parts of the country. These mills are keenly competing with the Tata Company. They import their raw material; they cannot be considered as an Indian industry. So in my opinion the free entry of steel billets for re-rolling should not be allowed.

Then, Sir, there is another matter of considerable importance, and it is this. Untested steel cannot possibly sell at the same price in competition with tested steel. If the untested steel and tested steel are sold at the same price, the whole bazar trade throughout India in untested steel will be ruined. So, in my opinion, there must be a difference of twelve annas per one cwt. or at least Rs. 10 per ton between the selling price of untested steel and tested steel.

As regards the excise duty on steel ingots, I would point out that for some time it has been realised that the dwindling revenue from import duties would have to be off-set. Accordingly, this year excise duties were levied on sugar and matches, and at that time it was foreseen that these excise duties were merely the precursors of others....

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : No, no; never.

Dr. R. D. Dalal : Now, Sir, I shall refer very briefly to the Tata Works at Jamshedpur. The Tata Works are the largest and the best equipped single works for the production of iron and steel, and they own large deposits of iron ore and abundant supplies of coal. As regards their efficiency, management, and equipment of the plant, they are not in any way inferior to iron and steel plants in any other part of the British Empire. During the period 1911—1933, the Company's output was 2½ million tons of pig iron, and 4½ million tons of rolled steel. During the last three years this industry has made substantial progress, impeded though it has been by the effects of the unparalleled economic depression. Much credit is due to my lifelong friend, Mr. A. R. Dalal, I.C.S., who has worked his brain and legs off since his retirement from Government service ; and I am sure his extraordinary devotion, his complete mastery of the work, and his assiduous industry have brought about this satisfactory result. The Company manned by experts, both from within the industry and outside it, has made great progress in reducing the cost of production and has thus met the wishes of the consumers. The needs of the consumers are that they shall have the right material at the right price, and the company has done its utmost to supply the needs of the consumers.

[Dr. R. D. Dalal.]

During the Great War during the period 1914—1918, the Tata Works supplied to Government three hundred thousand tons of rolled steel. In fact, the Tata Works were the chief source of supply for the Mesopotamian, Egyptian, and Palestine campaigns. These supplies were made at a total price which was several crores less than what would have had to be paid by Government for steel from other countries, and the Government gratefully acknowledged the services rendered by the Tata Works.

Then, Sir, the coal industry is vitally interested in this industry of the manufacture of pig iron and steel. The Tata Works consume annually 1½ million tons of coal, whereas all cotton mills and jute mills of India, put together, consume only two million tons of coal. So, we are very much interested and naturally concerned in the growth of the iron and steel industry.

Sir, the contribution of the Tata Company to the well-being of India should not be measured only by the output of iron and steel. Where 25 years ago there was only a dense jungle infested by wild animals and sparsely inhabited by aborigines, there is now a fine industrial town of a hundred thousand inhabitants, who enjoy the advantages of well-built sanitary houses, wide roads, an abundant and pure water supply, drainage, conservancy, an up-to-date hospital with X-Ray apparatus, and five dispensaries. The Company has an efficient medical and public health service. The town of Jamshedpur is supplied with electricity for lighting purposes. The Company employs very many more work-people than any other industrial concern in the whole of India. The Company has adopted the 8-hour day for its work-people, and pays higher wages than any other industrial concern in the whole of this country. The Company has provided housing accommodation for its employees in accordance with a regular town planning scheme by limiting the incidence of population to 12 families per acre. At the end of March 1933 the number of houses available was 13,200. The Company maintains 40 schools, and provides education for the children of its employees. The Company has achieved a fine record of training Indians at its own Institute at Jamshedpur for filling even highly technical posts with the result that now very few covenanted non-Indians are employed.

Sir, I submit that an industry so vital to India must continue to be encouraged, inasmuch as the maintenance of a prosperous iron and steel industry, in the highest degree of efficiency, is essential to the economic progress of the country ; and having regard to the conspicuous services rendered by the Tata Works to the Government during the Great War, in time of need, I submit that every consideration, every sympathy, every justice should be shown to the Tata Iron and Steel Company. The Government should support this industry by every means at their disposal and they should do all they possibly can to assist it and to promote its welfare. The share of the available Indian market for steel products supplied by the Tata Company is at present 72 per cent. ; so every endeavour should be made to make India self-supporting in the matter of iron and steel. For the life of me I do not understand why we should pay foreign markets millions of rupees for a manufactured article, which can be made by labour from material in the ground under our own feet. The people of India had great faith in Mr. Jamshedji Tata, the founder of the Tata Iron and Steel Company ; and it so came to pass that thousands of Indian widowed ladies invested their money in this industrial concern. I am sure the Government of India are not too bankrupt of solicitude for the good of these poor Indian widowed ladies that they will be indifferent and apathetic to their welfare.

Now, Sir, in conclusion, I earnestly request and pray the Honourable the Commerce Member and the Honourable the Finance Member to stand by this national industry, and to devise ways and means in the Select Committee, and to make substantial modifications and changes in the Bill, which will enable the existing industry to thrive and to prosper and which will induce new works to come into existence ; and I need hardly add that the sympathetic and favourable treatment of this important question will earn for them the gratitude and commendations of thousands of poor Indian widowed ladies, on whom this Bill, as it is in its present crude form, is likely to bring much suffering, misery, and even ruin.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, much of what fell from the Leader of the House about the sound management of the Tata Iron and Steel Works and about the high percentage of efficiency that they have evolved by the criticism of this House and by a certain amount of control exercised through the Government, I entirely endorse.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury).]

I also take this opportunity to congratulate you, Mr. Deputy President, on the fact that you have bridged the gulf between workers and employers and have identified yourself with capitalists. Today, the Deputy President, the representative of the workers on the floor of this House, spoke as an employer. If the gulf has been bridged, if the workers in India do appreciate the difficulties of the employers in India, in future there would be less strikes. The Deputy President had a gibe at me that I still insist that there should be reduction in the wages of the workers. I did not find any argument advanced by the Deputy President, whereby I could have been convinced that the time was not yet ripe when the salaries and wages of industrial workers, whether they are employed in cotton mills or steel works or even the railways, should not be reduced. The index prices have gone very low, and the commodity prices are so low that the cost of living has gone down, particularly of the working classes, who entirely live in the Indian conditions of living. And, if they are guided by the same spirit, the same patriotic spirit, as the Honourable the Deputy President exhibited this morning on the floor of this House, if the workers are anxious that industries must thrive and compete with foreign products, then they must be prepared to accept lower wages.

L240LAD

[Mr. B. Das.]

I do not know where to begin the criticism of this Bill and where to end. I was surprised that even an astute industrialist like my Honourable friend, Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, was praising this Tariff Board's report which is not worth the paper on which it is written. My Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, quoted noble sentiments expressed by an ex-Commerce Member, Sir Charles Innes, who was instrumental in granting protection for the first time to the steel industry in 1924. Sir, Commerce Members come and Commerce Members go, but the die-hard policy of the British Government is so undermining the policy of the Government of India that they are nothing but mere handmaids of the British Government and have simply to carry out orders. Today it is not protection to the Indian steel industry; it is protection to the British steel industry. Do we find the spirit of Sir Charles Innes even in the appointment of the personnel of the Tariff Board? I am not concerned with the representative of the Civil Service on the Tariff Board. It is Government's look out. They must have a representative of their own order in that Board, but they have placed a representative of the Indian Legislature in the guise of a Nominated Member of the other House situated somewhere in the distant end of this hill. That Nominated Member has never been elected to any municipality, any council or any Legislature.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : He is an elected member of the Madras Corporation.

Mr. B. Das : I stand corrected. I am glad to hear that. His behaviour and attitude has never justified the belief that he has ever been an elected member in his life. However, if Government go behind the spirit with which this Tariff Board was constituted at the outset in 1923, I do not know how far I can blame the Government for it. The whole policy has changed. My Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, said that it was the Ottawa spirit which he wanted. He reciprocated this by a visit to Lancashire also and I believe my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, also visited Lancashire. It is that Ottawa spirit which has demoralised the Treasury Benches and they cannot visualize what is good for India. Sir, what were the terms of reference to the Tariff Board? These gentlemen entirely misunderstood, and misunderstood the terms of reference to the Tariff Board. What were the terms of reference? Accidentally one sentence was mentioned: "The Board is requested to re-examine... the Indian Tariff (Ottawa Trade Agreement) Amended Act of 1932". This particular sub-sentence inspired the fossilized Tariff Board. I wish the Tariff Board is abolished for ever. If the so-called experts recommend this kind of protection, India seeks no protection. Indian industries do not need any protection. It is better that no protection is given for the steel industry and that the present revenue duty is maintained than to give a system of protection that humiliates the whole nation. What was the policy that guided the Tariff Board? I would refer Honourable Members to para. 107, page 62 of the report. They say:

"We have however decided to adopt the other method which is calculated to give the British manufacturer a definite advantage consistently with the interests of the Indian industry. Our object in doing so is to maintain as far as is now possible the principle of reciprocity underlying the Ottawa Agreement relating to galvanised sheets."

Sir, either these gentlemen do not understand English or they do not understand the Ottawa Agreement or they do not understand that part of the Agreement which affects the question of galvanised sheets. What was the recommendation of the Ottawa Agreement? Mr. Deputy President, the Honourable the President is not in the Chair. He was one of the participants at the Ottawa deliberations. Only this morning I was reading the Indian Finance in respect of Sir Padamji Ginwalla, another delegate, a former Director of the Tatas. I do not know if he is still a Director. Perhaps Mr. Mody will be able to say.

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : He is not.

Mr. B. Das : Sir Padamji Ginwalla was also a participant at the Ottawa deliberations. These gentlemen were careful to see that protected industries were not touched by the Ottawa Agreement. They were completely kept out of it. I will read one or two lines with reference to the steel industry. It is on page 33 of the Ottawa report :

"To concede a preference by reducing these rates to a lower figure in favour of British steel would impair the protection intended by the Legislature to be afforded to the Indian industry and to raise the duties on foreign steel to a higher point than was required in India's own interest would have been a grave departure from the fundamental principle of the policy of Discriminating Protection."

Sir, the Honourable the Commerce Member has changed his attitude. The attitude of the Government today is not discriminating protection, but indiscriminate protection to British industries. The Tariff Board, having these facts before them, these so-called super-experts, misread this and they want reciprocity with the British Empire and they talk in a subsequent passage about reciprocal benefit to India. I know this House will not agree with me except a few noble friends. If I had my own way, I would oppose this measure tooth and nail. I will throw it out. I will throw a challenge to the Government to introduce this Bill next year in February or March and stand on their legs and make a speech supporting this revolutionary principle and ideal—supporting this idea of British preference which is so shamefacedly and so brazenly brought out by the Tariff Board report and in the body of this Bill. The Government dare not. If they are honest, let them give protection for one year to the Tata steel with a proviso that this Bill should be extended for another six years when the new Legislature comes in. This House is not representative.

We hear of the talk of free trade. Free trade is as dead as Queen Anne. My friend, Mr. Anklesaria, if he wants to follow his policy of free trade, ought to go to one of the islands in the Pacific Ocean, I believe it is called the Sandwich Islands. Does not my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, know that the Liberal Party in England, that big party which was controlling the British Government, crashed, because it used to advocate free trade? We will hear of free trade when the Honourable the Finance Member rises; I have not read "Who's Who", but I have seen it in the papers that my Honourable friend was Private Secretary to three or four Liberal Chancellors of the Exchequer and British Ministers. Whether my Honourable friend himself holds that view personally, that the world should be free thinkers or free traders or free booters, I do not know, but this Bill anyway is giving nothing but a free-booter's licence to Great Britain. (Laughter.) My friend, after taking the oath of allegiance to the Government of India, will have to adopt a policy of protection, a high tariff wall; but whether he supports the vicious principles embodied in this Bill, that is a different question—he is nothing but a part of the machinery. Sir, not only that, but what have these super-pedagogues of the Tariff Board done? Sir, they have gone out of their way and they have advised the Government of India, and they have advised the nation, because they were paid from the tax-payer's money—I believe this advice is not only to the Treasury Benches, but also to the representatives of the nation that sit on this side of the House and also to the world at large—Sir, they have advised that there should be no revenue duty. Sir, who asked them to pass those unwanted remarks? Sir, I am grateful to the Honourable the Commerce Member for placing in the Library some pieces of evidence, but only the pieces of evidence of the Tata Iron and Steel Company, both oral and written, are found—the other pieces of evidence, particularly those in which I was interested have not yet been placed in the Library table. If you ask me what pieces of evidence I am particularly interested in, I will say I am interested in the evidence of the National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers of the United Kingdom, London, the Sheet-Makers Association of the United Kingdom, London, and the Welsh Sheet-Manufacturers' Association, London. I hope the Honourable the Commerce Member, when he receives these from Calcutta, will place them in the Library or on the Select Committee table, so that Members may take advantage of knowing all about the written and oral evidence of these sections of the British thought. Sir, I had no time—this was placed only this morning in the Library, but I was just glancing them through, and I said to myself: “Who was that super-genius of the Tariff Board experts who conceived the idea that the task had been imposed upon them, so that they could make a recommendation that there should be no revenue duty”? I find it is the President.

[Mr. B. Das.]

An Honourable Member: Who was the President?

Mr. B. Das: The President was Dr. Mathai who is supposed to be a great economist. He was questioning one Mr. Mather, thus:

“President: What I am trying to do is to arrive at some kind of principle with regard to the Government policy in the matter of the purchase of rails on which we could base our proposals.”

and then he goes on and discusses the question whether there should be no revenue duty; but, Sir, that leads me to ask a question of the Honourable the Commerce Member. Besides the terms of reference, did the Government of India at any time ask the Tariff Board to make an inquiry about the principle of taxation—whether there should or should not be any revenue duty or whether the revenue duty can be reduced. Sir, I pause for a reply.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré: Not that I know of.

Mr. B. Das: I am very glad to hear that. But here these theorists—we know what they are—take upon themselves a self-assumed responsibility and the President assumes to himself the responsibility of thinking that the Government of India have asked him that he should inquire whether there should be a revenue duty or not; and we find the recommendations; of course it is all based on false calculations.

Now, my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, asks us to look into Tables 24 and 25; but although in Table 24 the Tariff Board reaches the conclusion that certain items should not have any duty at all, because the Tatas' steel gets its proper price without any protective duty, at the end of the book in the table of tariff that is given, they make no mention that the revenue duty should be taken off, because it was beyond their power, and if this Tariff Board recommended this, I say they went beyond their jurisdiction. If, of course, the Honourable the Finance Member appoints at any future date a Committee or a Commission to consider what should be the proper tariff policy, the proper fiscal policy for India, and if such a Committee recommends that such and such a revenue duty should be removed, this House will give due consideration to it. Then, I shall also respectfully go through that Committee's Report and see whether I could accept those recommendations or whether I should suggest any alterations,—but for these experts, the so-called experts who were asked to modify the scheme of protection, to come and suggest methods of reduction of revenue duty is absurd.

And, Sir, this Government stands pilloried, they cannot reduce any revenue duty without fulfilling the pledge which Sir George Schuster gave on the floor of this House in September or October, 1931. When the surcharges of 25 per cent. were levied, as my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin, has already referred to the fact that the protected industries got a benefit thereby of 25 per cent. surcharge, but that is another issue. We were given an assurance that if at any time there should be any reduction of revenue duty, it should be first in the direction of taking off the surcharges and abolishing the low level of income-tax—that is, the limit from Rs. 1,000 to Rs. 1,999 should be taken off first, and also simultaneously the restoration of the salary cuts. Already my friends in the services have received the restoration of five per cent. of their salaries. An assurance was also given that the salary cuts should be restored and the low level of income-tax should be raised to Rs. 2,000. That Finance Member is not present here. But today or tomorrow, when the present Finance Member will rise, he will, I suppose, justify his position whether the pledges or assurances of his predecessors have any moral value before the Government of India and before the country, because the Finance Member holds a very peculiar position in India and in fact in every country in the world. His words on financial questions are taken as gospel truth, and, if he likes, one word of his will completely upset the money-markets—whether it is the Stock Exchange of Calcutta or Bombay. Sir George Schuster, who was nicknamed “Surcharge” Schuster, because of introducing those 25 per cent. surcharges in 1931, gave us those assurances, and if he gave those assurances, let the Government cogitate over them, let them read over the speeches of Sir George Schuster. Sir, how is it that in the disguise of a protective Bill, the Government have introduced a system of fiscal tariff policy by which they are reducing the revenue duties? Sir, Government had no right to reduce revenue duties in the autumn Session. This Bill incorporates the principle and the policy of taxation which my Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, recognises and he asked his colleague, the Finance Member, to explain the present policy of levying an excise duty of Rs. 4 a ton on the steel ingot as has been incorporated in the Bill. I say, it is against the financial and fiscal policy and against the budgetary system of any Government to introduce, under the guise of a protected measure to an industry, new principles of taxation. New principles of taxation require discussion and the consideration of the whole nation. The principle is so disguised that even the country at large have not found time to express its opinion. My Honourable friend,

[Mr. B. Das.]

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, has already quoted the considered opinion of the Secretary of the Shareholders Association, Bombay. I wholeheartedly endorse their financial recommendations, and I believe these endorse the views of every nationalist all over India, and I do hope they do not upset in any way my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, however he may disagree with the oft-expressed views of the Secretary of the Shareholders Association, Bombay. So, I think the Government are taking advantage today. They are depriving the country of the right of criticism and are introducing principles of taxation which they have no business to introduce.

They have also no business to introduce that vicious taxation called the excise duty. It is true that I supported the former Finance Member's taxation policy last Budget Session by agreeing to the excise duty on matches and sugar. Not that I was enamoured of it, but I knew that the Government of India were in such a bankrupt position that they could not carry on unless they stole a march on the new Federal Constitution and on the resources that were meant for the new Provincial Governments. I had to support it reluctantly, and I also know that I have earned a bad name amongst my colleagues in the Indian mercantile community because of that support. But I gave that support, because I felt the Government of India were bankrupt. If the Government of India have not received as much money as they expected, then it is for the Finance Member to bring out a new Bill next Session on the 28th or the 29th of February, whatever it may be next year. Before that, they have no right to smuggle an excise duty by means of this Bill. And what does this mean? The Tariff Board, like my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, have inculcated a new spirit of reciprocity. They wanted that certain items of steel will have no revenue duty. The Government of India have magnified that issue and they have levied this excise duty, so that the Indian steel will have always a certain handicap. It will not be able to compete with British steel. Sir, that pregnant passage, which I quoted from the Ottawa Report, says that the consumers will not be handicapped. My friend, the representative of the free trader, Mr. Anklesaria, talked a little on behalf of the consumers and he wholeheartedly blessed the vicious principle of this Bill which reduces the duty on British steel to nil or to a few rupees and levies a heavy duty of Rs. 39 and more in the case of certain items of continental steel. I am not going to discuss here the question of tested and untested steel, but it is well-known that the continental steel was untested and it was coming at a low price. The consumers and the masses, who are not as bureaucrat as my friend, Mr. Mody, is, did not mind to buy this untested steel, because they could purchase it at a low price. So, the consumer is affected, because he cannot get the steel at a low price. Again, I test the knowledge of the super-experts of the Tariff Board. They have evaluated the tested and the untested steel at the same price, so that they may put a further handicap on the Indian steel industry, with the result that the Tata Iron and Steel Company will be able to sell only tested steel and shall have to compete with the British tested steel.

[At this stage, Mr. President, (The Honourable Sir, Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

Sir, the Honourable the Leader of the House very aptly compared the principle of the present Bill, which he has introduced, with the principle of the Indian Cotton Textile Act passed last Session. Sir, I need not repeat the history of the Cotton Textile Bill. I believe it was the Deputy President who referred to the Mody-Lees Pact. I did point out last Session that if Mr. Mody gave an extra five per cent. at some future date to the British textile manufacturers, it was the leaders of the mercantile community of India who acquiesced to the Indo-Japanese Agreement and gave 25 per cent. preference to England. So, in one way, the Honourable the Leader of the House was right that this Bill is similar to the Indian Cotton Textile Bill which gave 25 per cent. preference to the British textiles, and, in certain cases, even a preference of 30 per cent.

Now, Sir, there is one point to which I would like to refer. Even the Ottawa Agreement gave only 10 per cent. preference to British goods. There were certain iron and steel articles which were assessed to 20 per cent. if they were continental, and 10 per cent. if they were British. Now, what was the occasion for the Tariff Board or the Government to include all those items as protected articles? Did the Tatas ask for it? I do not think the Tatas asked for it. I have gone through their memoranda, and I do not find any such thing. When Government have brought out a measure to modify a system of protection, they have no business to include new items. I find from item 2 (35) of the Tariff Act of 1890, as modified on the 15th of May, 1933....

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Modified or Mody-fied?

Mr. B. Das : As my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, is everywhere, so I will say "Mody-fied" it.

I find that some of the articles of the British steel industry have been put on the protected tariff, and the continental steel will have to bear a heavy duty of Rs. 39 or Rs. 43. This is simply absurd. Not only is this absurdity perpetrated by the Tariff Board, but also by this Government. If this Government feel that the Tata Steel works deserve adequate protection, let them continue the same protection as it is today. But this is not their policy. Their policy is to give enlarged protection to the British steel industry. As I stated elsewhere, this Bill and the Tariff Board have out-Ottawaed the Ottawa Agreement. At the time of the Ottawa discussions, I heard the talks of those who have been to Ottawa.

The British steel industry never put forward such an absurd proposition and even Mr. Baldwin, who was a signatory to this Pact, could not propound such a proposal, however greedy the mercantile community of England might be. Today the Tariff Board, consisting of two Indians, belonging to my own race, have gone out of their way, and they have introduced the system of differentiation in Tariff by which a high tariff wall has been put against continental goods and a very low rate is put on British goods. Who asked the Tariff Board experts to follow the spirit of reciprocity and thereby evolve a scheme by which British steel should come into India at favourable rates? They themselves recognise that, and this is evident from what I have already quoted. If that be so, then this Tariff Board report is not an expert report, and we cannot place any reliance on this report. It is anti-national and revolutionary in spirit.

My Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, said that he was very anxious that subsidiary industries should find certain relief from the steel industry, and then he paid a high compliment to the late Jamshedji Tata. I also reciprocate the compliment that he conveyed to the spirit of Jamshedji Tata, and I take the opportunity to say that had the successors

[Mr. B. Das.] of Jamshedji Tata followed the spirit of Jamshedji, then they would not have come with a beggar's bowl to Simla and Delhi for protection. They would not have been instrumental in 1927 for the introduction of the principle of Imperial Preference in the fiscal policy of India, and that too, for the first time in the history of India. We then swallowed that bitter pill for the descendants of Jamshedji Tata. Although I join wholeheartedly in the high compliment that is paid to the spirit of Jamshedji Tata today, I am not going even for the sake of the spirit of Jamshedji Tata to swallow this bitter pill that has been incorporated in spite of the persuasion of Mr. Mody which will come tomorrow, and we will see how Mr. Mody supports this vicious principle of Imperial Preference, preference to British steel. Surely the soul of Jamshedji Tata will writhe in anguish in heaven that his descendants have fallen to such low depths. (Laughter.)

Sir, I was talking of subsidiary industries. My Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, appealed to the generosity of feeling of the management of Tatas that they will give steel at a fair selling price to these nascent industries and other subsidiary industries. I have often laid my charge against the Tatas on this issue specially for their selling pig iron to England and Japan at a low price and selling pig iron at a high price in India whereby, six or eight years ago, the Indian Applied Engineering industries were ruined. Today I do not like that the Leader of the House should indulge in such platitudes. If that is the intention of the Government, if that forms part of the recommendations of the Tariff Board, and I know in one of the passages they say that the representative of the Tatas assured them that they will do their very best to sell to subsidiary industries at a reasonable price, I say let it be incorporated in the body of the Bill. This is not a taxation measure that we cannot introduce beneficent clauses in this measure. Steel and pig iron form the raw material of various other industries, and we are here not protecting one particular industrial firm, but we have to protect all the allied industries, and I do hope that in the Select Committee the Government will see their way to accept such a proposal.

I do not find the Honourable the Finance Member present in the House just now. I have made a certain amount of criticism about the vicious principle of introducing in this protective measure principles of taxation in the shape of reduction of revenue duty and of levying excise duty. I do advise the Honourable the Finance Member to discuss with his colleagues and to withdraw this Bill. Let the Government bring forward a pure protective Bill. Let them forget that they have to protect the British steel industry, let them only remember that they are here to protect an Indian industry. If they do not want to modify the Bill, then, for any representative of the Treasury Benches to talk of granting protection to Indian industry, is mere sop. The whole country has understood the game. We are too weak-kneed here, and we cannot register our protest and we cannot make the real view of the nation prevail here in this House. As I said a few minutes ago, in spite of the handicap, I have thrown out a challenge. Let the Government withdraw the whole Bill and bring forward the measure next March, and they will see the result. Sir, I am not a shareholder in the Tatas. Others are here who are shareholders or Directors. I am an Indian, and I am a well-wisher of that huge Indian industry. I want to give honourable protection to the Tatas, and, as I said before, if this scheme of protection comes out, as it is, from the Select Committee, I will oppose it tooth and nail. We do not want any protection to an industry, however much it needs it, by humiliating that industry and those who control that industry and thereby humiliating the whole nation. (Applause.)

Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, before I proceed to submit for the consideration of the House certain observations in connection with this Bill, I state that I entirely agree with what the Honourable the Deputy President said regarding the services rendered by Jamshedji Tata to the country. I do endorse the statement that he was a great benefactor to the country, and I do endorse that he did a good many things, in order to show us the way how to stand on our own legs and how to keep our self-respect in the matter of trade improvement. Sir, as a matter of abstract proposition, I agree that a national key industry should be protected, even that I agree to. But having agreed to all these things, it is quite a different thing to agree to a scheme of protection which takes the money from some other person and professes generosity in the name of what they call a national and a key industry. But, Sir, before I go to that, there is one other point, the usual hardy annual that I always bring forward in this House and which my Honourable friend, Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, also alluded to, and that is that we have been supplied with these papers only a few days ago. Of course I was not here, but those of the Members who are here got the papers about the 14th or 15th of this month, and today we are supposed to be so much conversant with all the details that we should be able to criticise the most elaborate speech of my Honourable friend, the Leader of the House, who has been enabled to make that speech aided by his Secretary and all the official notes et hoc genus omni, and I think it is rather hard lines that we should be treated in this manner.

Another matter that I should like to bring forward is that the papers to which the Tariff Board had access must be placed before this House, so that we may be in a position to see whether their conclusions are justified by the premises that they had at their disposal. I quite agree that the report itself will not give sufficient materials to us in order to come to a conclusion. As the Privy Council said in a famous case from Bengal, where a judge makes up his mind, he, of course, lays stress upon points that go to support his view, but it does not follow therefrom that he has not considered the opposite view. That may be all right where you have got access to a superior Court which has got a chance of reviewing the evidence upon which one Court came to one conclusion. But here the Tariff Board makes a report, and, my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, says that in these matters we have got to be guided by the Tariff Board's report. I quite admit that. The Tariff Board was appointed on the ground that they are experts. I suppose the Members are paid handsomely, and they take a great deal of trouble over their deliberations. I have no objection to admit that they have taken a great deal of trouble in collecting materials. Only I do not know what opposing materials they had before them. I do not say we will disagree with them but my complaint is that we have not got the whole of the materials. And as I assert that it is the privilege of this House to judge whether the Tariff Board is correct or not, I submit that it is a somewhat tall order from the Commerce Member to tell us that in all these matters we must accept the verdict of the experts. Sir, today I have not got that book with me called "The

[Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar.]

New Despotism", written by the present Lord Chief Justice of England, in which he states that where an expert is installed in a certain place he does not believe that anybody else has any right to say as to what conclusion he will come to ; and he says that after all an expert knows everything. That is the position of the experts and although we have got the highest regard for the experts I must say that as laymen we can come to a better judgment than experts who are obsessed with their own ideas. I, therefore, say that in order to enable us to come to a conclusion as to the correctness or otherwise of the report or the decision of the Tariff Board we ought to have been supplied with materials which we have not been. Such of the materials as were supplied were not supplied to us in time. Considering the fact that we are not assisted by a secretariat, considering the fact that we do not profess to be experts, I say that Government have not been dealing with us fairly.

While I admit that the Tariff Board did devote a lot of trouble and took advantage of the extra time granted to them by the Act, for the temporary extension of the protection till October next, I submit, Sir, that they have entirely failed in their duty because they have started this inquiry upon an untenable basis and upon a ground which, I beg to submit, so far as this House is concerned, will not be admitted at all as correct. They say at page 20 of the report, paragraph 33 :

"We have examined in some detail the effects of protection on the industry. It remains to consider whether any estimate is possible of the cost of protection to the country. It is desirable at the outset to draw a distinction—

—and that is the point upon which I make my complaint—

"between the cost of protection and its burden on the country. The Tariff Board is assisting in the administration of a settled policy, which was determined by the Legislature on consideration of general benefits to be ultimately purchased at a certain cost. It is not for us to compute the sum of these general benefits which are to be set against the cost, and to attempt to draw up as it were a balance sheet of the assets and liabilities of the scheme."

I say, Sir, that they have entirely misconceived their duty. I admit that the Legislature, so long ago as seven years back, did accept the principle of protection for the Tata Company. It is perfectly true that these gentlemen were asked to say whether that protection should continue or should be modified or should be completely annulled. But at the same time there is a very important thing and as regards that also I have my complaint against the Honourable the Commerce Member. The whole scheme of protection, everything that you want to give to these gentlemen, depends upon your resources. What the Legislature has decided is that you must give protection. But supposing there is no money out of which to give protection, what is the point in flourishing before us the decision of the Legislature? The Legislature did not say that you must give protection at any cost, even if you become bankrupt by giving it. That was certainly not the decision of the Legislature. The Legislature took up the question of protection to a national and a key industry and they came to the conclusion that that industry ought to be protected. But, Sir, the question of the cost to the country also comes in ; whether that cost can be afforded by the country, is the most important question and, unless you can come definitely to the conclusion that there are resources out of which you can give this protection to this company, what is the use of your inquiry? Of course, two plus two makes four ; we do not want you to make that calculation. Consequently I submit that they have proceeded upon an entirely wrong basis and have shirked,—I do not say wilfully but out of an error of judgment,—the most important portion of the inquiry by enunciating for themselves a proposition which, so far as this report is concerned, goes against the real position which the Tariff Board had to reckon with. Therefore, Sir, I submit that this matter should be made clear as to what benefit the country has reaped and what the burden on the country has been in consequence of this protection, what is the benefit of the whole thing. It will not do to simply say that, as these gentlemen have had protection for seven years, it will be a pity after having spent so much to leave them in the lurch. But at the same time you must say what is it that we have benefited by. The Commerce Member asked, have they or have they not taken advantage of the protection and have they not improved their situation? He expressed his satisfaction that they have improved their situation. Sir, in the olden days when we were at school, those of us who were fortunate enough to win prizes used to get a chit attached to the book that was given to us as a present where it was stated, "As reward of merit and an incentive to further improvement". Is that the principle upon which this protection is being granted? I respectfully submit that that is an entirely wrong principle. It has been admitted and stated over and over again that expenses, which are perfectly reasonable and probably a necessary item, would be absolutely undesirable if resources are not at your disposal. Now, what is the position? They put up a scheme of protection where they find that there will be a huge deficit : and how are you going to make up this deficit? By putting on an excise duty. I ask : "Why do you put forward a scheme when you have no money and why do you try and knock it out of somebody else, the consumer, who is the milch cattle in India?" I say the Government has absolutely no money in order to give this protection. I say it on their own statement. Time after time we have approached the Government all over the country for some grant, for some improvement in the condition of the wretched agricultural community of India. We were always told that there is no money : we are told : "All your complaints are perfectly right : we entirely admit the justice of your complaint ; but where is the money?" Now, what is the cost to the country on account of this protection? If the Tariff Board had told me exactly what the country has to pay for the protection of this steel industry, then I should be in a better position to lay my complaint against the Government of India and say : "I came to you time after time for money in order to improve the condition of the agricultural classes, in order to remove their rural indebtedness, in order to remove so many of their other troubles from which they are suffering. I have been told that you had no money. Will you kindly tell me where you get this money from? Why do you want to put your hands deep in our pockets in order to help this industry?" Theoretically, as an abstract proposition, it is a very good thing, just as so many other things are good, and yet you are not able to meet them in consequence of want of resources. I submit, therefore, that when the Government has no money for anything else, when, in order to get this scheme of protection through, they have to put their hands in the pockets of other persons like myself, that is to say, the consumer, it ought not to do this. What did the Tariff Board say in paragraph 120 ? They say :

[Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar.]

"In all cases where you give protection or in all cases where you impose an excise duty the consumer must suffer."

Thanks. But what about all of you gentlemen who resent even this five per cent. cut in your salaries ? But of course it is the consumer here ; what does it matter ? He has got to pay for an eventual benefit : and what this benefit is going to be I do not know : you do not know : nobody else knows. Seven years ago they made a calculation and they thought at the end of seven years this protection will cease. We have seen the end of seven years and we have passed an extra six months and what is the result ? The Tariff Board says : "Give them another chance for seven years." Does anybody know that at the end of seven years this protection is going to cease ? I do not know. He would be a bold man who can prophesy that they will not claim protection again. Upon what ? Upon the most extraordinary ground that because there was a strike among the workers of that institution, it cost them 2 crores. Ergo, the people of India must pay. What is there to prevent these gentlemen coming again after the end of seven years asking for protection again ? What is the standard which you have laid down to be reached before you withdraw this protection and say to them : "Look here, we have given you sufficient protection : we set this standard before you as the goal which you have got to reach ; and as you have just reached or not reached it, we will not give you any more protection." What is the goal at which we are driving ? Absolutely none. Nobody knows. It is perfectly true that they have done a great deal since the time protection was first given in 1926, and I have absolutely no doubt that if this protection is granted for another seven years there will be a better report regarding what they did. But how long is this to go on and how long am I to suffer under this agony ? The Government of India must be consistent. If they have money to throw away like this, then they have no business to say that they have no resources for other matters ; and without knowing where you are going, without knowing to what extent you will be mulcted in money from the pocket of the poor Indian public, I submit it is not fair, it is not just, it is extremely undesirable, that the Government should take money from the poorest population in the world, simply because they, (the Board), want this protection to continue. These gentlemen of the Tariff Board say the cost of protection is shared by all or any of the following four parties—the foreign manufacturer, the Indian merchant, the consumers in India and the taxpayers in India. These last two items I am concerned with—consumers in India and taxpayers in India. After writing a whole page of, if I may respectfully say so, platitudes which are entirely irrelevant, they come to the conclusion that you cannot exactly say what the cost to the country was or what the burden imposed on the country was. But they give some sort of figure here. "We might, therefore, put down the gross cost of protection to the country,—(it almost takes my breath away),—at Rs. 1,428 lakhs." That means, I suppose, 14½ crores. I should be very glad if I was given three crores to improve the agricultural community. I do not claim all the 14½ crores : I do not want even 10 crores—I want only three crores to be allotted, for instance, to the Madras Government and then we should have had a remission in land revenue to the extent of 25 per cent. that the Council, the country and everybody who had suffered from this agricultural depression, wanted ; and yet Government will not give it. They say that 14½ crores is the gross cost : and what is the net ? They lay down certain propositions and come to the conclusion that they cannot say what exactly the net cost is. I do not know where I am. I launch upon a scheme of protection which has so far landed me in Rs. 14½ crores gross : I do not know where it is going to lead me to. There is no money. You put your hands deep into the pockets of the poor consumer and put down an excise duty and make up the money : for what ? To protect a national industry of course. If you have the money I shall have no objection : I shall be the first to say, there is the money, you may go and take it. We have been told, and the Honourable the Deputy President was very eloquent over the way in which these gentlemen looked after their labourers and all that sort of thing. I will first take the war. During the war it seems they did forego a portion of their profit, and the benefit to the exchequer was two crores or something like that. Will the Honourable the Deputy President and the other Honourable Members calculate the cost in men and money contributed by the agricultural population of India for the resources of the war ? How many members of the agricultural community were recruited for the war and how many laid down their lives in the service of their country ? What did the Tatas do then ? What did the Jamshedpur people do ? They say : "We abandoned two crores of our profits." But may I know whose money it was ? It is my money. Why do I say that it is my money ? Because I gave the protection to these people, and these gentlemen claim that they have foregone these two crores, but they do not take into account the contribution that the entire agricultural community made for the war in men and money and in so many other ways to enable the war to be conducted in a successful manner, and it would take me many hours to recapitulate all those things before the House. That is so far as the war is concerned. And as for the welfare of their population, it is a very good thing that they have improved the amenities of life for their workmen and so forth. I have not had the honour of receiving one of those books that my friend, Mr. Pandya, referred to, but I know from whose money all those improvements that are referred to in that book are made. They have attended to the welfare of their labouring population partly because of self-interest, because if you don't give them the necessary conveniences they will run away and the work of the factory will be stopped,—and partly out of the money that I put into the pockets of Tatas in order to enable to do certain things. Sir, therefore I say it is not fair, it is not just that those of us who have to consume their materials should be called upon to pay higher prices for those materials. Consequently, though I agree in theory with the question of protection I do not agree to grant protection in this particular case simply because that the Tariff Board has stated that Tatas are entitled to protection. I say no protection of any kind should be given to these people. Of course, I am fighting a losing cause, I know, because I know that Government has brought forward this Bill, and throughout the history of this Legislature no measure which has been brought forward by Government has been defeated in this House. Sir, in the absence of the necessary material before the House, I say that no protection should be granted simply because the Tariff Board have recommended it. It is not just, it is not fair to the country to saddle us with this liability. And, talking of this welfare business, it reminds me of the old proverb "Halwai ka dukan men dada jan ka fatiha". But I ask whose money is it with which you grant these people protection? Therefore, on principle this protection which these gentlemen of the Tariff Board have recommended, and which the Government of India have agreed to pay, should not be given, especially because the Government have not been treating fairly the agricultural population of this country which forms the largest proportion, which contributes the greatest amount of revenue, and which is really the pillar and strength of the Government and upon which Government stands. I admit I am not sufficiently conversant with the figures and details to say whether 3.8 or 8.9 per cent. should or should not be given.

[Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar.]

Then, Sir, the only last thing which I would like to refer to is the paragraph in the Tariff Board Report relating to the manner in which the Tata Company, the parent Company as it is called, treats the poor children, I mean the subsidiary industries. Those children are still minors. It must be remembered that the Tata Company were given protection not for themselves; they were given protection upon the distinct understanding, that they were going to encourage the other industries, the bye-product industries and such other things. Did they do it? I am glad the Honourable the Commerce Member has stated strongly his opinion regarding the methods adopted by the company in dealing with these subsidiary industries. When the extension of the old Act was first brought before the House, I remember to have quoted a conversation that took place between the President of the Tariff Board and the representatives of the Tatas where they went from point to point in order to justify their position, and the President of the Tariff Board said it was an extremely unjustifiable position. Therefore, as I have already said, this protection that is now asked should not be given. I say there is absolutely no point in this Bill going to the Select Committee unless the members of the Select Committee can devise some means by which the Tatas and the consumers will be satisfied, in which case I should be the first to stand up before this House to congratulate the members of the Select Committee and apologise to them for opposing the scheme. But remember you want to put your hand into the treasury which you have filled by the sweat of the peasantry, and from that you want to give this money, and therefore I object, and object very strongly to the proposal.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Sir, I rise to congratulate not my friend, the Commerce Member, although the three parts of his speech which he delivered this morning could very well have been delivered by any one of us on this side of the House. He put himself four questions, and, in answer to the first 3 of his 4 questions, he spoke in a way which we expected the first Indian Commerce Member to speak. Sir, we are glad that, so far as that portion of his speech was concerned, it was in accordance with our own views on the subject, but on the fourth part of his speech, which I consider by far the most important part, I am afraid, I cannot congratulate him. But, in rising now, it is my intention first to congratulate my friend who was sitting next to me,—unfortunately I do not find him now in his seat,—I hope Honourable Members in this House will convey my congratulations to him,—(At this stage, Mr. Mody who was away from his seat, entered the Chamber amidst applause of the Nationalist Benches),—my friend, Mr. Mody, had all along been an enthusiastic advocate of Imperial Preference. He is now given a good dose of it, and, I daresay, he is given a deal more than even he would be able to swallow. He cursed us that day, but today those curses have come home to roost. Needless of our protests and unmindful of our warnings, he thought it good fun to ride a Lion, and that the British Lion :

"Master Mody of Jamshedpore Smiled as on a Lion he rode
They returned from the ride
With Master Mody inside
And the smile on the face of the Lion."

Ever since my Honourable friend entered this House in 1930, the House, by a majority, had been committing itself to the policy of preferential tariffs. Therefore, no useful purpose will be served in raising a controversy on that question beyond the fact of recording, on the principle, "Let us agree to differ".

The Government of India, in introducing this measure, stated in their Statement of Objects and Reasons that the Bill seeks to give effect to the protective measures recommended by the Tariff Board. Before I deal with those recommendations and the way in which the Government propose to give effect to them, let me at the outset observe that, if the Government were to believe that the very name of the Tariff Board would impress us, they are very much mistaken. We have been losing our faith in the Tariff Board, of late, not because we do not want a Tariff Board, but because we could not have it composed of men who can command the confidence of the country. The reports of the Tariff Board, and in particular, the one now under discussion, has convinced us more than ever that if this Board is to render useful service, it should be composed of a Chairman of the status of a High Court Judge and two members selected on the principles adopted by the American and Australian Governments. I am not making this observation without cause, but I do not want to cast any reflection on the motives of the personnel of the present Tariff Board. On the last occasion, when we were discussing the reports of two Tariff Boards simultaneously, I came across two sets of important recommendations on one and the same subject, but diametrically opposite to each other. Then I drew the attention of this House to that and some other matters and promised myself that I would come before you and suggest even the abolition of the Board itself. If it cannot be mended, it must be ended. While I do not question the abilities of Dr. Mathai and his expert knowledge of economic problems, it is surprising, to say the least about it, that a person who wrote the cotton textile report is the same person who wrote this report and who today advocates preferential duties, and even no duties, in favour of Great Britain in a manner which has not helped to create any confidence in his judgment. As for the other Indian Member, to use the language of Sir Hari Singh Gour, the less said about it the better. (Laughter.) If the Government desire that we should have confidence in the Tariff Board, the Government should adopt the recommendations of the Indian Members.

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

who were in a minority on the Fiscal Commission. The Indian Members of the Fiscal Commission observed in their minority report as follows :

"In our view, the Board should consist of three members and the Chairman should be a trained lawyer occupying the status of a High Court Judge. A Judge of a High Court has to adjudicate on important and complicated problems of litigation and his impartiality cannot be questioned.....

As regards the two other members we must examine the principles adopted by America and Australia in constituting their respective Boards. 'The members of the United States Tariff Commission appeared to be for the most part men of wide general attainments.' Members other than the Chairman 'appear to be for the most part men who have distinguished themselves in law or in politics'. We may quote from the Act creating a Tariff Commission in the United States of America, Section 700 :

'That a Commission is hereby created, and established to be known as the United States Tariff Commission (hereafter in the title referred to as the Commission) which shall be composed of six members who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate.'

We think it is desirable to adopt the same principle for selecting the two other members. They should be elected by the non-official members of the Legislative Assembly, who represent wide electorates throughout the country and may well be relied upon to choose 'men of ability, of integrity and of impartiality'. The principle recommended by us is similar to the one adopted by the United States of America. The best way of making appointments 'by and with the advice' of the Legislature is to allow them to elect such members. We have recommended that the Chairman should be a trained lawyer. The two other members, if our recommendation is adopted, will be distinguished men who may be expected, while representing the interests of the consumers, to be capable of taking broad views in the larger interests of the country."

I draw particular attention to these recommendations of the Indian Members of the Fiscal Commission, men in whose judgment the country had great confidence and who had established their reputation for sound judgment. Unless the Tariff Board is so constituted as to give general satisfaction to the people of India and command for their decisions the general support of the country, their recommendations will not carry any more weight than the recommendations of any Department of the Government of India. Therefore, I propose to deal with these recommendations and the proposals made thereon with caution.

The steel industry of this country, to use the words of the Indian Finance, is a national industry. It is a key industry, it is an industry essential for defence purposes. It is an industry which utilises the indigenous raw materials to the fullest extent and caters to the home market in the largest degree. It is an industry which employs in a single unit the largest number of labourers, pays them adequately and provides them with various amenities. It is an industry which in less than a decade has brought down the number of foreign technical experts from 229 to about 60 and replaced every one of the retired non-Indian officials by Indians for whose training it has spent all the money and taken all the trouble. That is the industry. Are these recommendations of the Board or the proposals of the Government calculated to promote the prosperity of that industry? That is the question we should ask ourselves. A perusal of both has given me the uncomfortable feeling that the industry is to be deprived of such advantages as it may have a right to expect in order to facilitate the exploitation of the Indian market by the British industry. We do not stand in the way—let me assure you that we do not stand in the way—of the prosperity of the British industry. But we do not want that prosperity to be built on the ruin of our industry or at the sacrifice of our economic interests. We are not enamoured of reciprocal arrangements between British manufacturers and ourselves. I am not yet in a position to speak generally on the Ottawa arrangements and their effects as the matter is still sub judice. But I can refer to the Ottawa arrangement with regard to this industry. The Tariff Board, in referring to it, have not disclosed some material facts which, if known, would put a totally different construction to the indications sought to be conveyed by the Board that it had worked well.

It was said that our industry was threatened on the eve of the Ottawa and the Steel Agreement, that if we did not enter into this agreement the Import Duties Act of the United Kingdom would be applied and our iron and steel would be very seriously affected, that the exports of Indian pig iron which were so necessary to India were already losing the Japanese market; that the United Kingdom market was growing in importance in recent years, and therefore, if free entry was not secured under this arrangement, dire consequences would follow. In return for this enormous gain, under that agreement we were asked to accord preference in the matter of galvanised sheet. But we said in our Minority Report that neither this Legislature nor the country would feel happy over this arrangement, and strongly disapproved of the arrangement of sending bars for the manufacture of sheets and the sharing of the profits system. Without going into further details, since the Commerce Member has said that we would continue to have the same benefits with regard to pig iron and that His Majesty's Government have favourably considered the proposal of the Government of India with regard to manganese, let me proceed to an examination of the figures. Let me examine the gain and losses account. The most important part of it is our pig iron exports. During the year 1932-33, we exported to the United Kingdom 75,000 tons and, in 1933-34, we exported 93,000 tons, whereas in 1932-33, when our exports to foreign countries was 138,000, in 1933-34, it was 280,000. On a percentage basis, during the period of preference, our exports decreased from 35 per cent. to 25 per cent. in the case of the United Kingdom, whereas our percentage rose from 63 per cent. to 74 per cent. in the case of foreign countries. In value, exports to the United Kingdom decreased from 26 lakhs to 21 lakhs, while they increased from 46 lakhs to 62 lakhs. Thus you will find that our foreign export trade prospered, and Japan, whose market we were said to be losing, actually remained our best customer. It was said that the United Kingdom market was growing. The total imports of pig iron into the United Kingdom during the years 1931, 1932 and 1933, have been 284, 135 and 93 in thousands of tons, respectively. These figures would show that the United Kingdom imports instead of increasing are diminishing; although the Indian share during the preference period rose from 61 to 86 per cent. This only shows the fact that the United Kingdom was able to increase her home production under protection of their duties and the time is coming when even the little market we have there is replaced by their home production. Before I turn to the other side of the picture, I would like to say that I have just been trying to get some figures with regard to manganese in a hurry. They are liable to correction. I find from the statistical records that the exports of manganese from India are as follows : In 1931 and 1932 figures, United Kingdom 53,843, Germany 1,820, Netherlands 2,500, Belgium 35,400, France 80,221, Japan 6,129, United States of America 28,120, other countries 36,000. The total was 211,000 tons of which 53 is the share of the United Kingdom. That is about roughly one fourth. Then again take the next year's figures for 1932-33. These figures would show that in the case of the United Kingdom they were 55,377, in the case of Germany 1,311, in the case of the Netherlands 2,000, in the case of Belgium, 32,452, France 7,459, Japan 30,599 and other countries 1,900, total is about 197,730. These are for the years 1931-32 and 1932-33. With regard to the imports of England, I find from the statistical records of the United Kingdom, which are given for calendar years, that the imports in the year 1928, were 205,965, in the year 1929, 289,353, in 1930, 216,443 and in 1931, 78,265. In 1932, it was 78,578. Further there is one important circumstance which I find it very difficult to pick out and I hope some Honourable Member will be able to do so and that is with regard to the re-exports from the United Kingdom. Unless we are furnished with accurate figures of the exports of these materials from the United Kingdom, unless we are furnished with statistics as to the quantity sent under orders, it is not possible for us to come to any accurate conclusion in regard to the United Kingdom market figures. Now, I shall turn to the other side of the picture. From the review of main items of foreign trade for the year 1933, I find on page 20, that the United Kingdom increased from 52,000 tons to 54,000 tons in galvanised sheets and plates and that Belgium fell from 23,000 to 6,000 tons, while the absurd and crude arrangement of sending our bars, turning them into British sheets, Tatas paying the transit charges about which we commented, has now been found to be a wash out.

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

Now, it is said that as that scheme has fallen through, we need not bother about it. On the contrary, we find there is cause for apprehension. Although this crude arrangement of transfer arrangements have been abandoned, the study of British industrial interests was not lost sight of. Under the provisions of this Bill, the British industry is given the same advantage and preference over Belgium and other customers of ours, but without being obliged to take our bars and roll them into sheets. If Honourable Members will turn to the Bill, you will find a preference of Rs. 30 is provided for the United Kingdom in the matter of these galvanised sheets with an excise on us. So much for the antecedents of the reciprocal arrangements we had and the prospects of prejudicing our foreign customers and handicapping the indigenous ones.

Sir, there can be no reasonable reciprocal arrangement between the lion and the lamb and the only prospect for the lamb will have is the chance of being devoured at any time. Reciprocal arrangements are virtues between equals. Such arrangements between a master and a slave are called by another name.

like to know by whose permission and under what authority the Board was authorised to receive the representation from British industries. They say they received representation in response to the Board's Press Communiqué. Sir, the Press Communiqué was given in the Tariff Board Report itself. It is difficult to understand how a communiqué which specifically asked for representation from industries claiming protection, which must necessarily be Indian, could have been read as an invitation to the British industries to make a representation. The directions of the Government as published in this Report do not give scope for such a construction. There must be something behind it. What is it? Further, I would like to ask how the Board, which has evidently scrutinised the Indian industry without having the same opportunity and privilege, can come to the conclusion that they know all about it. Sir, will mere price quotations enable them to judge properly? Notwithstanding the denial of my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, in answer to my friend, Mr. Bhuput Singh, and his assurance of the bona fides of the British industries, I feel that the real picture of the other side is not before us to judge them as our industry is being judged. If Honourable Members will turn to paragraph 165 at page 100 of the Tariff Board Report, they will find a reference to the export refund arrangements designed to assist the British as against us,—and it was admitted by the British Federation in this passage, along with a promise to behave better : Tariff Report, paragraph 165, runs as follows :

" 165. When the representatives of the National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers, of which Messrs. Dorman, Long and Co., are members, appeared to give evidence before us, we took the opportunity of discussing this question with them so that if possible a satisfactory settlement by agreement might be arrived at. In response to this suggestion, Mr. Elliott on behalf of the National Federation has reported to us as follows :

" It is clear to the Federation that the British Steel Makers have, although without any such deliberate intention, contributed to the difficulties of the structural engineering industry in India through their export refund arrangements, designed for the assistance of the British Structural Engineers'....."

—and, then, further on, it says—

" the British industry undertakes not to grant refunds for fabricated steel work exported to India, beyond what is necessary to bridge the gap between the home price current at the time and the established export price for plain material for India."

Although this passage by itself does not take us much and gives much to go on with, it is enough to give us an indication of the unreality of the situation on the other side.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : How long is the Honourable Member likely to take ?

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : I will take some time more.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Wednesday, the 1st August, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Wednesday, 1st August, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Questions relating to the Home Department that were left over day before yesterday may now be asked. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai. Question No. 244.

HOME DEPARTMENT RESOLUTION REGARDING COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN SERVICES.

244. Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the editorial comment published in the Tribune, dated the 9th July, 1934, in the editorial, on the Resolution recently issued by the Home Department of the Government of India in respect of communal representation in the services ?

(b) How do Government justify their action in issuing the Resolution ? Is it not a fact that the Joint Parliamentary Committee is seized of the subject and their report is not yet out ?

(c) Why have the Government of India issued at this stage such a Resolution ? Are Government aware that the majority community is not satisfied with the Communal Award ?

(d) Do Government recognize that efficiency is the only sound principle for recruitment and promotion in the services ? If so, why do they depart from this principle and not leave the recruitment question to be met with only by open public service competition, free from any communal tinge ?

(e) What minimum qualifications do Government propose to fix for admission into the public services, as indicated in the Resolution, for giving services in the proposed ratio on the communal basis ?

(f) Will the qualifications be uniform for both the majority and minority entrants ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). As explained in the Resolution itself, a review of the results of the policy followed since 1925, in regard to recruitment, was made in accordance with undertakings given in the Assembly. The question is one of administration and the rules were issued by the Government of India with the approval of the Secretary of State as soon as a decision was reached. With reference to the last part of question (c) Government have observed that some members of the majority community are not satisfied with the Communal Award.

(d) It has long been established policy to prevent the preponderance of any particular community in the public services. The adoption of the Honourable Member's suggestion would not be consistent with this policy. Nor can I accept the implication that efficiency must suffer if recruitment is not made by competitive examination alone. I would also mention that the recent orders apply only to direct recruitment and not to promotions, which will continue to be made on merits as at present.

(e) The same minimum qualification cannot be prescribed for all services. The minimum is fixed in view of the requirements of each case, but there is no intention of revising it so as to endanger efficiency in any case.

(f) The minimum qualifications prescribed for admission to the services will be the same for all the communities.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask the Honourable Member who will fix these minimum qualifications—the Public Service Commission or the Government?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I imagine that they will be fixed by the Department which is recruiting in each case probably with the advice of the Public Service Commission.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I also know from the Honourable Member how is this reserved percentage for Muhammadans going to be divided amongst the Muhammadans of the different Provinces, e.g., Bengal, Punjab, Madras, Bombay and others?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am answering a question later on today which deals with that point.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know which is that question?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It comes later on today.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask another question,—and if the Honourable Member is not prepared to give a reply now, he may give it hereafter. May I know if the same rule will apply in the case of the Hindus of the different Provinces for the residue services left for them to be divided amongst them?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I did not quite follow the Honourable Member. But it has never been the policy of the Government, so far as I am aware, to lay down that each Province shall receive a certain percentage of appointments in the Central Services. The percentages have always been fixed by communities and not by Provinces.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I, therefore, know from the Honourable Member if he knows that now there is a competition amongst the Muhammadans also, because they too have got graduates, and will the Honourable Member say if there will be a division amongst the various Provinces according to the ratio of population, or will the Muhammadans of any Province be taken up?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That point is dealt with in a question that is coming up later on today.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Are Government aware that instead of there being a division amongst the Mussalmans of India, they are united in expressing their dissatisfaction at the ratio of 25 per cent. that is proposed in the Resolution?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I myself arrived in India too late to see the Press comments, but I understand that the comments in the Muslim papers were generally favourable.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not very ungrateful on the part of Muhammadans not to be satisfied with this?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member that, as this is a division of services, will it form part of the new Constitution or not? And, if it is so, was the Secretary of State or the Joint Parliamentary Committee consulted on this point, and if there is any correspondence, will it be laid on the table?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : As I stated in my reply to part (b) of the question, the rules were issued by the Government of India with the approval of the Secretary of State, and I think I noticed in the newspapers yesterday that the Secretary of State stated in the House of Commons that this matter had been brought to the notice of the Joint Select Committee.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Am I, then, right in understanding that after the Government of India made their determination to issue this Resolution, the Joint Parliamentary Committee and the Secretary of State were informed of it and their approval obtained? That is what I want to know.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Secretary of State was informed before the Resolution was published. As regards the Joint Select Committee, I am not in a position to reply, but, as I said, I think I saw in the newspapers yesterday that the Secretary of State had stated in his reply to a question in the House of Commons that he had kept the Joint Select Committee acquainted with what was being done. At what stage exactly he informed them, I am not clear.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state what will be the test for efficiency for the officers at the time of promotion? The Honourable Member has just now said that only efficiency will be the criterion for promotion.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Sycophancy will be the criterion in a case like that.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The minimum qualification will necessarily vary for different services, and I cannot give one comprehensive answer to that question. But I presume that in most cases it would either be a University degree or a technical qualification of some kind.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Next question.

ALLOCATION OF SEATS IN THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY FOR THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

245. *Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : (a) Is it a fact that every Governor's province, except the North-West Frontier Province, is entitled to send elected representatives to this House ?

(b) If so, will Government please state why the North-West Frontier Province is deprived of the privilege of sending any representative to this House ?

(c) Do Government propose to take early steps for the allocation of seats in this House for the North-West Frontier Province in the general elections to be held this year ? If not, what are their reasons for doing so ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The North-West Frontier Province, at the time of its conversion into a Governor's province, was represented in this House by a nominated seat. It has now been decided to convert that seat into an elected seat at the forthcoming election and the necessary amendment to the Electoral Rules was published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated the 31st July, 1934.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : How many seats will be given to the North-West Frontier Province ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : One, as at present.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Is it a fact that it was recommended by some Committee that three seats would be given to the North-West Frontier Province ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Unless the Honourable Member can specify the Committee which made that recommendation, I cannot either affirm or deny that statement.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will that seat be a joint seat both for the Hindus and the Muhammadans of the North-West Frontier Province, or will it be only for Muhammadans ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It will be a joint seat.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state whether the seat will be filled by joint electorate or by separate electorate ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : By joint electorate.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : As it is a fact that the Hindus are in a microscopic minority in the North-West Frontier Province, may I ask what steps are being taken by the Government to ensure that they get an adequate share of representation in the electorate ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I really cannot see what steps are possible to have a proper representation of a microscopic minority in an electorate for a single seat.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : In view of the fact that other minorities have been given weightage and special representation, do Government propose to take any steps to redress the grievances of the Hindus in the North-West Frontier Province who happen to be in a minority ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think that hardly arises out of the original question.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Would not a separate seat be reserved for Hindus ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Next question.

USE MADE OF THE HARIJAN FUND AND OF THE CENTRAL RELIEF COMMITTEE'S EARTHQUAKE FUND.

247. *Sir Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what information they have of the use that is being made of the so-called Harijan fund, and of the Central Relief Committee's Earthquake Fund ?

(b) Are Government prepared to take steps to ensure that these funds are not collected under false pretences but are employed for the purposes for which they have been subscribed by their contributors ?

(c) Are Government aware of any instances of the notorious misappropriation of similar funds in the past, and are Government prepared to consider the possibility of legislation providing for the compulsory public auditing of all funds collected from the general public for supposedly charitable objects ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Government have no information other than what has appeared in the Press regarding these funds.

(b) Government have not at present any such proposal under consideration.

(c) As regards the first part of the question, Government are aware that there have been allegations in the past that funds collected from the public have been devoted to purposes other than those for which they were subscribed. As regards the second part of the question, as I have said in answering clause (b), the Government have not considered the possibility of legislation.

RELEASE OF MR. SARAT CHANDRA BOSE.

261. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose, the well-renowned lawyer of the Calcutta Bar, was imprisoned under Regulation III, and is it a fact that Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was also imprisoned under the same Regulation ?

(b) Is it a fact that Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel has been released owing to the Congress having rescinded the Civil Disobedience Movement and for adopting the policy of running candidates for the ensuing Assembly election ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose is still being detained ? Do Government propose to release him forthwith for the same reasons for which Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel has now been released ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. Mr. Patel was detained under the provisions of the Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827.

(b) Mr. Patel was released because the Government of Bombay and the Government of India were satisfied that his detention was no longer necessary in the public interest.

(c) Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose is detained as a State Prisoner, for reasons not connected with the civil disobedience movement, and the restrictions on him will be maintained so long as this is necessary in the public interest.

Mr. Bhuput Singh : May I know what are the reasons other than the Civil Disobedience Movement for detaining Mr. Bose ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Because there were strong grounds for considering that he was deeply involved in the terrorist movement.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that Mr. Bose made repeated representations to the Government of India to be allowed to know the ground on which the Government had determined to detain him under Regulation III ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, Sir. That was the subject of question and answer in this House some little time ago. The Honourable Sir Harry Haig answered a number of questions on that point. Mr. Bose did make representations.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : With what results ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The result was negative.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it also a fact that Mr. Bose expressed a desire to be placed before a regular Court of law for trial if there were any specific charges against him ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I must have notice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that the materials under which Government took action against Mr. Bose were at a particular time placed before the Advocate General of Bengal for his opinion as to whether there were sufficient grounds for any action ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say whether they were placed before the Advocate General of Bengal. But certainly they were placed before two Judges, who came to the conclusion that, in the interests of internal order, the internment of Mr. Bose was justified.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries and find out whether it is not a fact that the Advocate General of Bengal was consulted in the matter and that his opinion was that there was no evidence against Mr. Bose to justify the action of Government ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I will look that up. I cannot say off-hand.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is the Honourable Member in a position to give this House some idea about the charges that were brought against Mr. Bose and that were placed before two Judges ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir. I am not in a position to do that.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : District and Sessions Judges.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government prepared to place on the table the periodical reports about Mr. Bose which are required to be submitted under Regulation III ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir. These reports are not published.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government at any rate prepared to make a statement giving the substance of these reports in so far as they relate to the conduct of Mr. Bose while in detention ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If the Honourable Member will put down a question on that point, I will see.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member take this as notice ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think you had better give me formal notice.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member tell this House if there is any truth in the statement that has been published in the Press today that the only evidence against Mr. Bose is that some of the money he gave freely for charitable and political objects found its way in other hands and was used for purposes other than pure charity ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir. There was certainly a great deal more evidence than that.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What objection there is in informing Mr. Bose of the charges which are against him ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That point was gone into at some length by way of question and answer in the time of my predecessor, and he made it clear that it was not usual to give persons whom it is proposed to intern a statement of the charges against them and he said that that was an essential part of the procedure.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it fair on the part of Government to imprison a man without trial and then to malign him before the world by asserting that he has got complicity in terrorist activities without informing him of the charges and giving him an opportunity to rebut them if possible ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Honourable Member is asking me for an expression of opinion as to whether that procedure is fair. I do not think I can very well pronounce an opinion or am called upon to answer that. That is the ordinary procedure inherent in the use of the internment method of dealing with these people.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Have any of the restrictive conditions imposed on Mr. Bose in connection with his detention been relaxed since his transfer to Kurseong ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : He is living, I understand, in his own house and he is allowed to move within certain limits.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do I take it then that, in the opinion of the Government, a relaxation has been justified in the restrictive conditions ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I understand that he was allowed to move to Kurseong to his own house largely on grounds of health.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : But the Honourable Member just now stated that with regard to his movements he enjoys certain enlarged liberty.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : He is allowed to move about within certain specified limits.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : In that case, am I justified in drawing the conclusion that, in the opinion of Government, this relaxation was justified?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not really quite understand what the Honourable Member means. So far as I know, we have no complaints that the greater relaxation has been abused in any way.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I take it then that whatever relaxations may have been given, the Government are satisfied that there is no danger in granting those relaxations.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If Government thought that there was any danger in granting these relaxations, they would remove them. As I say, I see no reason to think that the relaxations have been abused in any way.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government now reconsider his case in view of the fact that Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose is now in Europe and is not likely to come back soon to associate with his brother, the main charge against Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose is, perhaps, that he is an associate of his brother?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The case of Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose was very recently most fully considered in consultation with the Government of Bengal. I am afraid, I cannot promise any further reconsideration at present. The Bengal Government's considered opinion was received only a few days ago.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do I take it that the Bengal Government have anything to do in this particular matter?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Certainly.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : The Honourable Member must, I am afraid, read Regulation III before he gives this answer.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The responsibility is the Government of India's.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Under Regulation III?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Naturally we consulted the Bengal Government.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : In what matter does the Government of Bengal come in at all in connection with this question?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It is obvious that Mr. Bose is an inhabitant of Bengal, and the terrorist movement, with which he is alleged to be connected, is prevalent in Bengal, and surely the Government of Bengal is most deeply interested.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I infer from the answer of the Honourable Member that the Government of India have not applied their mind to this particular case, but that they blindly followed what the Government of Bengal decided?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Certainly not.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will Government please state the section in Regulation III of 1818 which gives to the Local Government a hand in the matter of determination of this question of detention or release?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Will the Honourable Member show me any section in Regulation III which prohibits the Government of India from consulting the Local Government or any other agency of its own?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Honourable Member says that Mr. Bose has been detained under Regulation III. Will Government kindly state under what section of that Regulation the Local Government has a hand in the matter of the determination of the question of detention of the person?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : As I have said, the Government of India are perfectly entitled to consult, and, in fact, they would be failing in this duty if they did not consult the Local Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Under what section?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Under the section of common sense.

TIME LIMIT FOR A GAZETTED OFFICER TO REMAIN AT ONE STATION.

268. Kumar Gupteshwar Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to state whether there is any time limit for a gazetted officer to remain at one station?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have no information whether any time limit is in force in the various provinces, other than that which was given in reply to Mr. Jagan Nath Aggarwal's question No. 648 (b), on the 5th September, 1933.

CONCESSIONS GIVEN TO THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

269. Kumar Gupteshwar Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government please state whether there is any difference between a Government servant working in the Army Headquarters and one working in the Government of India Secretariat? If so, what is the difference?

(b) If there is no difference, will Government kindly state why Government servants in the Army Headquarters are entitled to—

- (i) free train service between Simla and Summer Hill;
- (ii) free medical service for the staff and family;
- (iii) free services of an eye specialist; and
- (iv) free dental services?

(c) Are Government prepared to consider and allow the same concessions of their staff in the Civil Secretariat? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Yes, there are differences in pay, leave terms and location of headquarters.

(b) and (c). Do not arise. I may however point out as regards item (iii) in clause (b) that all Government servants at Army Headquarters are not entitled to the free services of an eye specialist as a matter of right but only when the services of such a specialist are available in Simla and no extra expenditure is caused to Government. As regards item (iv), the civilian staff of Army Headquarters is not entitled to free dental treatment.

RELEASE OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE PRISONERS.

273. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why Civil Disobedience prisoners have not yet been released in spite of the withdrawal of civil disobedience ?

(b) What was the total number of such prisoners on the 1st July, 1934, in each province of India ?

(c) What are the reasons for the delay ? When are all the prisoners expected to be released ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons for examining the individual cases of Civil Disobedience prisoners in detail when they have been convicted of Civil Disobedience by the trying magistrates ?

(e) What time was taken by Government in releasing the prisoners after the Irwin-Gandhi Pact ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a), (c) and (d). I would refer the Honourable Member to the last part of the communiqué issued by the Government of India on the 6th June, which states the policy which is being followed in this matter, and to which I have nothing to add.

(b) I lay a statement on the table.

(e) This does not arise, as the circumstances were wholly different.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if the communiqué shows that all the persons have been released ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No, Sir, it does not say so.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will the Honourable Member say how many have been released and how many not released ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : That is given in the answer to part (b). The Honourable Member cannot repeat questions which have been already answered.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I put the question as no definite reply was made.

HOME DEPARTMENT RESOLUTION REGARDING COMMUNAL REPRESENTATION IN SERVICES.

282. *Rai Bahadur Sukhraj Roy : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what the immediate necessity, if any, was of issuing the Home Department Resolution regarding the representation in public services of minorities and of Muslims in particular ?

(b) Why was not this House consulted before issuing the Resolution ?

(c) What was the necessity of introducing other minorities when the question was of improving the position of Muslims only ?

(d) Why has not the Sikh community been mentioned among the minorities in the Resolution ?

(e) What is the present percentage of Hindus in Railways, Posts and Telegraphs and Indian Civil Service as compared with their population ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) I invite attention to the terms of the Resolution itself and to the reply given by me to Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's starred question No. 244.

(b) The House has been aware, for some considerable time, that the Government had this matter under consideration and were endeavouring to reach conclusions as early as possible.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to paragraphs 1 and 2 of the Resolution.

(d) As stated in paragraph 4 of the Resolution, Government considered the position of minorities, other than those to which special reference is made, and were satisfied that the new rules would provide for them, as at present, a reasonable degree of representation in the services.

(e) According to the last census, the population of Hindus in British India is about 65 per cent. Their percentage in the Indian Civil Service to the total number of Indians, excluding those who hold listed posts, is 68 and to the total cadre about 23.

On the Railways to which the new rules apply, i.e., all Class I Railways except the Burma Railway, the Jodhpur Railway and the Nizam's State Railway, the percentage of Hindus to the total subordinate Indian staff, (excluding inferior servants and labourers), was on the 31st December, 1932, 67.9. In the gazetted ranks the percentage of Hindus to the total number of Indians, is 60.8.

In the Posts and Telegraphs Department, the percentage of Hindus to the total Indian staff, excluding inferior servants, is 69.5.

RECRUITMENT OF ORIYAS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

284 Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Are Government aware that in the whole of the Government of India Secretariat there is no Oriya in service ?

(b) Is it a fact that in all the Attached and the Subordinate Offices of the Government of India located in the Headquarters at Delhi and Simla, there are no Oriyas in service ? If so, do Government propose to issue instructions to the Public Service Commission to recruit Oriyas for the offices of the Government of India Headquarters, including the Secretariat Departments ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). As has been explained on several occasions in this House, the Government of India have not undertaken to secure representation for provinces, either generally or in terms of particular communities. Candidates from Orissa have equal opportunities with those from other provinces and it is not proposed to take any special action in the matter. I have no information whether there are any Oriyas in the Government of India offices at the headquarters and I do not think any useful purpose would be served by collecting the information in view of what I have just stated.

EMPLOYMENT OF THE SONS AND WARDS OF THE EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN THE PROVINCES.

288. Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : (a) Are Government aware that the sons and wards of the employees of the Central Government at headquarters find it very difficult to get employment in the provinces from which they come, and also experience similar difficulties in securing admissions to medical, engineering and other technical institutions ?

(b) Do Government propose to address the Local Governments and Administrations to look after the interests of the sons and wards of the employees of the Central Government properly by reservation of a certain number of seats for them in educational institutions and vacancies in all services under the control of the Local Governments ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). (i) A representation, as regards the difficulties of securing employment in the provinces, was made by the Imperial Secretariat Association in 1933 and formed the basis of a request that a percentage of ministerial appointments, in the Government of India Secretariat, should be reserved for the children and dependents of the members of that Association. The Government of India were unable to accede to this request and, as recruitment to the provincial services is entirely a matter for the Local Governments, they are not in a position to interfere with their discretion and are not prepared to suggest to them that any special reservation should be made.

(ii) The Government of India are not aware of any special difficulties in securing admission to Medical and Engineering institutions. But any difficulties that may arise are not confined to the sons and dependents of Government servants but are felt by all classes resident in a province or minor administration which does not itself provide these special educational facilities. Arrangements have been made for the admission of a few selected students, from centrally administered areas, into the King Edward Medical College, Lahore, and the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee, and the sons of Government servants are eligible together with other students for these vacancies. Such selected students are required to pay only the ordinary fee payable by local students in these colleges, and the balance of the cost of training charged by the provincial Government is met from central revenues.

COWS SHOT BY MR. WAUGH, HONORARY MAGISTRATE AND CHAIRMAN OF THE SHAHDARA NOTIFIED AREA COMMITTEE.

289. Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that Mr. Waugh, the Honorary Magistrate and Chairman of the Shahdara Notified Area Committee, shot 12 cows and bullocks recently near Shahdara ? If so, are Government prepared to make an enquiry as to why this was done ?

(b) Are Government aware of the strong feeling of Hindus of Delhi, as voiced at a public meeting held in the Azad Park under the auspices of the Hindu Youngmen's Association on the 14th July, 1934 ?

(c) Do Government propose to ask the Commissioner of Delhi to take disciplinary action against the offender for offending the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (c). I would refer the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 31st July, to Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen's question No. 311, on this subject.

(b) Yes.

APPOINTMENT OF BENGAL MUSLIMS TO POSTS UNDER THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OUTSIDE BENGAL.

291. Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Are Government aware that there is a strong feeling amongst the Bengal Muslims that, in the matter of recruitment to the vacant posts under the Government of India outside Bengal, due publicity is never given by means of advertisement of such vacancies in newspapers ? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter and remedy the grievances of the Bengal Muslims ?

(b) Are Government aware that there is a strong feeling amongst the Bengal educated Muslims that Government of India Headquarters being far away from Bengal, all vacancies under the Government of India are filled by the Muslims of those provinces contiguous to the Government of India Headquarters ?

(c) Do Government propose to remove the aforesaid grievances of the Bengal Muslims by fixing a quota or percentage for the recruitment of educated Bengal Muslims ? If not, why not ?

(d) Are Government aware that amongst the educated Muslims of Bengal there is a greater percentage of unemployment than amongst the educated Muslims of other provinces? If not, do they propose to enquire into the matter through the Heads of Universities in Bengal? If not, why not?

(e) Do Government propose to take steps to give publicity to the vacancies reserved for Muslims under the Government of India, according to the recent Home Department Resolution, through the Heads of Universities in Bengal so that Bengal Muslims may also apply for such vacancies? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) A list of newspapers, in which advertisements regarding competitive examinations and the posts to which recruitment is made by selection are issued from time to time by the Public Service Commission, was laid on the table of the House in reply to Mr. Jagan Nath Aggarwal's starred question No. 362, on the 16th September, 1931. The list includes a leading Bengal paper, the Statesman. In addition to advertising in the leading newspapers, publicity is given to all recruitment by open selection through the Public Service Commission by forwarding a copy of the advertisement in each case to all Universities as well as to the leading Libraries and Y.M.C.A.'s in India. Full information regarding examinations held by the Commission is also published in the Gazette of India and a copy of the notice relating to each examination is forwarded to the Associated Press of India and the Free Press of India. Further, copies of rules, regulations, etc., relating to each examination are forwarded to the Registrars of all Universities and to the leading Libraries. Government do not consider that anything more is required.

(b) and (c). Government have not undertaken to secure representation for Provinces, either generally or in terms of particular communities. Muslim candidates from Bengal have equal chances, with those from other provinces, of securing employment in the services, and it would be contrary to Government policy to take any special action in regard to them.

(d) In view of the position as stated in reply to parts (a) to (c), Government see no need to take the action suggested.

(e) Does not arise in view of the reply given to part (a).

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Are these posts reserved for Muslims to be secured through the Public Service Commission or only by selection or by favour?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I would refer the Honourable Member to the terms of the Resolution.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it not a fact that the Muslims of Bengal, who form more than 40 per cent. of the total Muslim population, do not get even a moiety of the percentage which is reserved for Muslim representation in the services?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot say off-hand.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Will the Honourable Member be able to inform us as to how many Muslims from Bengal are employed in the Secretariat here? Will there be even half a dozen?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am afraid, I must have notice.

Sir Abdur Rahim : There is only one.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member explain what is the purpose of reserving seats for Muslims if 40 per cent. of the Muslims are deprived of their due share or of any reasonable share in the reserved seats for Muslims?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : They are not deprived of their share. They have exactly the same opportunities of competing for that share as the Muslims of any other Province.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : But is it not a fact that they are not getting it?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I can not say whether they are getting a share in proportion to their population strength, but the opportunities are there, and, as I have stated, it is not the policy of Government, and never has been the policy, to reserve any particular percentage of places in the services for any particular Province, either by communities or otherwise.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member then explain, if there are opportunities for Muslims and Anglo-Indians to compete for any service in India, what is the purpose of reserving a particular percentage for these minorities? And will he kindly say, following that principle of reserving a certain percentage, why the Muslims of Bengal are deprived of their share, from the reserved posts in services?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The object of reserving for particular minorities is to carry out what I stated as the policy of Government, to ensure that there should not be an undue preponderance of any one community in any service.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is the Honourable Member aware that the number of Muslim graduates in Bengal is at least as large as in any other Province?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I will take the Honourable Member's word for it.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Will the Honourable Member kindly look into the matter and ascertain if the Muslims of Bengal do get a fair chance of entering the Secretariat and the Central services of the Government of India?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That is covered by the reply, I have already given, that full publicity is given to these vacancies in the Government of India, and that the Muslims of Bengal have the same opportunities to compete for them as the Muslims of other Provinces. I will, however, ascertain, if the Honourable Member would like me to, how many Bengali Muslims are actually employed in the Government of India Secretariat.

Sir Abdur Rahim : If the Honourable Member finds that there is a very serious disparity, will he make particular inquiries as to the reason which has brought it about?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If I can see any possible remedy, I shall certainly examine it.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that the Hindus of Bihar and Orissa are also deprived of their share in the Government services in the Secretariat and elsewhere ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I want a definite reply to the question I put. The Honourable Member refers me to the Resolution itself. I have read the Resolution, and I do not find any light thrown on this question from it. Therefore, I am going to repeat my question, and I want a direct reply. The question is : whether these reserved seats have to be given to the Muhammadans, for whom they are reserved, by competitive examination through the Public Service Commission or not.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I really do not exactly understand the question. I am not prepared to pronounce here in this Assembly anything that will amplify, still less modify, the terms of the Resolution.

ENQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AJMER MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

329. Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that a Committee was appointed towards the end of 1933, by the Honourable the Chief Commissioner, Ajmer-Merwara, to enquire into the administration of the Ajmer Municipal Committee ?

(b) Is it a fact that this Committee examined witnesses in the open Court as well as in camera ?

(c) Is it a fact that this Committee recorded evidence against the conduct of some of the members of the Municipal Committee but gave no opportunity to these members to explain the allegations made against them ?

(d) Has the attention of Government been invited to the report of this Enquiry Committee published in the Statesman of the 16th May, 1934 ?

(e) Is it a fact that this report was submitted to the Local Government without the Municipality or its individual members being called upon to explain the allegations against them ?

(f) Is it a fact that, after submission of the Report to the Local Government, the Honourable the Chief Commissioner called upon the Municipal Committee to furnish their explanation in regard to the allegations contained in the Enquiry Committee's Report ?

(g) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the explanation given by the Municipal Committee published in the Statesman of the 16th June, 1934 ?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : With your permission, Sir, I will answer questions Nos. 329, 330, 331, 332 and 333 together. The information asked for on certain points has been called for and replies will be given to the House in due course.

ENQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AJMER MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

†330. Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that the chief defects found by the Committee appointed by the Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara in the administration of the Ajmer

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 329.

Municipal Committee relate to the Public Works, Water Works and Public Health Departments and that these Departments had always been placed by the Municipal Committee under the direct supervision of Government experts, viz., the Civil Surgeon or Additional Civil Surgeon as Convener of Public Health Department and the Executive Engineer, Government Public Works Department as Convener of Municipal Public Works Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that no warning, advice, direction or guidance was given to the Municipal Committee with regard to general maladministration, etc., prior to the appointment of the Enquiry Committee ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Municipality submitted to Government several years ago a Sanitation Scheme prepared by well-known Lucknow Engineers for the improvement of Public Health and Water Supply, and also applied for the requisite loan from Government to carry out the scheme, and that the scheme and the question of loan are still under the consideration of Government ?

(d) Is it a fact that Ajmer Municipality have maintained financial stability and produced a substantially surplus budget and have also effected several improvements, e.g., the introduction of electricity, extension of primary education, increase in grants-in-aid to hospitals and dispensaries ?

(e) Is it not a fact that almost all the defects pointed out by the Enquiry Committee had been in existence for a very long time and that the present Committee during their term of office made earnest efforts by taking action themselves wherever possible, or drawing the attention of the Local Government through submission of schemes ?

(f) Is it a fact that some of these defects have been more or less removed by the present Committee, particularly those relating to objections by Government Auditors who now certify substantial improvement ?

ENQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AJMER MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

†331. Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that at a public meeting held in September, 1933, a request was made to Government to make enquiries into the Municipal administration and give advice and directions and not to punish the Municipality and the public ?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the proceedings of a public meeting published in the Statesman of the 26th June, 1934, requesting Government not to supersede the Ajmer Municipal Committee ?

(c) Are Government aware that the triennial general election to the Ajmer Municipality will take place early in December, 1934, and that the public will thus soon have a chance of voicing their real feelings in the matter ?

ENQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AJMER MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

†332. Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that the reply of the Municipal Committee to the reference made by the

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 329.

Chief Commissioner of Ajmer-Merwara in connection with the Report of the Enquiry Committee appointed by him, was referred to the Chairman of the Enquiry Committee, who, in consultation with the members of the Enquiry Committee, submitted a rejoinder to the Municipal Committee's reply?

(b) Is it a fact that this procedure is not provided for in section 243 of the Ajmer Municipal Regulation, VI of 1925, under which the Enquiry Committee was appointed and further action is contemplated?

ENQUIRY INTO THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE AJMER MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.

† 333. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : Are Government prepared to place on the table of this House all papers regarding the affairs of the Ajmer Municipality, including the Enquiry Committee's Report and the reply of the Ajmer Municipality?

ADMISSION OF MEDICAL GROUP STUDENTS OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY IN MEDICAL COLLEGES IN INDIA.

334. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Are Government aware of the fact that the F. Sc. Medical Group students of the Delhi University are not given admission to any Medical Colleges in India, except two candidates from Delhi to the King Edward Medical College, Lahore?

(b) If the admission is not open for the Delhi students, do Government propose to take any steps to ensure admission of the Delhi F. Sc. Medical Group students to other colleges in India?

(c) If admission to the Medical Colleges in India is not made open to the Delhi students, do Government propose to abolish the Medical Group of the Delhi University?

(d) Are Government aware of the fact that the Selection Board held at Delhi for interviewing these students, have not interviewed all?

(e) Will Government please state the reasons why the students, who passed the F. Sc. (Medical Group) examination of the Delhi University, are not permitted to appear at the test examination for admission to the Lucknow Medical College?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the answer given to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 248 on the 30th July.

ADMISSION OF MEDICAL GROUP STUDENTS OF THE DELHI UNIVERSITY IN MEDICAL COLLEGES IN INDIA.

335. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Do Government propose to take steps to open admission for Delhi University students, who passed F.Sc. (Medical Group) to other Medical Colleges in India, such as at Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Patna, Lucknow, etc.? If so, when?

(b) Do Government propose opening one Medical College at Delhi?

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 329.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 248 on the 30th July, 1934. The matter is under consideration.

(b) No.

CONSTRUCTION OF A CINEMA HALL ADJACENT TO THE CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH, CHANDNI CHOWK, DELHI.

336. *Kunwar Hajee Ismail Ali Khan : (a) Is it a fact that the Delhi Municipal Committee sanctioned the construction of a Cinema Hall adjacent to the Central Baptist Church, Chandni Chowk, Delhi?

(b) Is it a fact that the Christians of Delhi approached the Deputy Commissioner and prayed that a license to this Cinema may kindly not be granted, as it will hurt the feelings of all the Christians of Delhi as well as of those outside Delhi?

(c) Is it a fact that a license has been granted to the said Cinema?

(d) Is it a fact that after the above deputation, the Indian Christians of Delhi approached the Chief Commissioner of Delhi Province and prayed that the said license may not be granted?

(e) What action has been taken in the matter by the authorities?

(f) Are Government aware that the existence of a cinema in close proximity of a worshipping place is considered highly objectionable by the public and there is a danger of the breach of peace?

(g) Are cinemas permissible to be made side by side with the places of worship?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (c). Yes.

(b) A deputation, composed of a section of the Baptist community in Delhi, asked the Deputy Commissioner to refuse a license to the cinema.

(d) There is no record of such a petition having been made.

(e) and (f). No action has been taken in the matter. The Church in question is situated in the Chandni Chowk, which is a congested area, where all kinds of buildings are quite close to one another. Government do not consider that there is any danger of a breach of the peace.

(g) The Delhi Municipal Committee have power, under section 123 of the Punjab Municipal Act, 1911, to stop the use of a building as a cinema, if it is a nuisance to the neighbourhood.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that the Secretary of the Delhi Municipality is a Christian, and that he ought to look after the interests of Indian Christians?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am not aware whether he is a Christian or not.

EXPORT OF SKINS OF NEWLY BORN LAMBS AND KIDS.

337. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : (a) Are Government aware that there is a great demand in foreign countries of skins of newly born lambs and kids?

(b) Are Government aware that with a view to get much higher prices from foreign countries, the previous practice of slaughtering newly born lambs and kids has recently been started in India? If so, do Government propose to consider the advisability of stopping the practice?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the name of the country and the quantity, respectively, which imported such skins from India each year during the last five years?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : (a) to (c). Information has been called for and will be laid on the table in due course.

COMMERCIAL BULLETIN BROADCASTED FROM BOMBAY.

338. Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil : (a) Is it a fact that the broadcast of market reports from the Bombay Radio Station are stopped from the 1st July, 1934? If so, what are the reasons for this action?

(b) Are Government aware that the Morning Commercial Bulletin broadcasted from Bombay was greatly appreciated by the commercial community in India and that the number of radio sets has been increasing day by day for this reason?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to restore the commercial bulletin on the programme?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No. The special early morning transmission of commercial news has been discontinued and the transmission at 8 P.M. has been combined with the news bulletin at 9 P.M. in accordance with the orders of the Government of India, who decided that this activity of the broadcasting stations should be reduced by gradual stages.

(b) Government understand that a small proportion of the owners of wireless receiving sets, who belonged to the commercial community, appreciated this service but they have no precise information as to whether the number of sets in use increased on this account.

(c) The commercial bulletin is being actually broadcast with the evening programme. Government do not propose to restore the morning bulletin.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Do Government propose to extend this broadcasting to Karachi?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I hardly think that arises out of this question, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : With reference to part (a) of the question, do I understand the Honourable Member to say that broadcasting of market reports has not been discontinued?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Yes : I did say that.

RULES FOR COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

339. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state if the rules for commissions in the Army in India Reserve of Officers have been framed? If so, when are they likely to be published?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Yes. The draft rules are under examination by the Secretary of State and will be published, as soon as possible, after the receipt of his approval to them.

RULES REGARDING THE GRANT OF HONORARY RANKS IN THE ARMY IN INDIA.

340. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the rules regarding the grant of honorary ranks in the Army in India, whether to soldiers or to civilians?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The information is being collected and will be laid on the table at an early date.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE OFFICERS SERVING IN THE ARMY AND IN THE CIVIL DEPARTMENTS.

341. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Indian Medical Service officers serving in the Army and the number of those deputed to the civil departments?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : On the 1st July, 1934, there were 357 Indian Medical Service officers in military, and 294 in civil, employ.

EUROPEANS AND INDIANS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

342. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Europeans and Indians in the Indian Medical Service? How many of them are permanent and how many are temporary among each of these?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : On the 1st July, 1934, the number of British and Indian officers in the Indian Medical Service was :

British ..	.. 389	all permanent.
Indian ..	.. 262	including 48 temporary.

EUROPEANS AND INDIANS IN THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

343. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Europeans and Indians among the Indian Medical Service officers serving in the civil departments? How many among them are permanent and how many temporary?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : There were 294 officers of the Indian Medical Service in civil employ on the 1st July, 1934, of whom 195 were British and 99 Indians. All these officers hold permanent commissions.

TEMPORARY INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE OFFICERS WHOSE SERVICES HAVE BEEN DISPENSED WITH.

344. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of temporary Indian Medical Service officers whose services have been dispensed with during the last five years before the expiry of their term of contract? How many new temporary officers were recruited during the same period?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Strictly speaking the reply to the first part of the question is nil, since the period of engagement of these officers was for one year or for such less period as their services might be required. I presume, however, that the Honourable Member desires information as to the number of officers dispensed with before completing the maximum period for which their temporary engagements could be renewed, i.e., five years, or in the case of those in service on the 23rd October, 1927, nine years. If so, the answer is that, three were dispensed with, for inefficiency, and six were retrenched, on financial grounds. In the period in question, 27 resigned the service of their own accord and 42 were recruited.

APPOINTMENT OF TRADE COMMISSIONERS, DEPUTY TRADE COMMISSIONERS AND TRADE AGENTS.

345. *Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : (a) Will Government please state the names, qualifications, etc., of the persons who have been appointed Trade Commissioners, Deputy Trade Commissioners and trade agents of India in different countries ?

(b) How many new appointments are likely to be made during the present or the next year, and for which countries ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : (a) Sir Harry Lindsay, K.C.I.E., C.B.E., I.C.S., is the Indian Trade Commissioner in London and Mr. S. N. Gupta, I.C.S., is the Indian Trade Commissioner at Hamburg. There is one post of Deputy Indian Trade Commissioner in London only and the present incumbent is Mr. Y. N. Sukthankar, I.C.S.

Information with regard to Trade Agents is being collected and will be furnished to the House in due course.

(b) So far as can be seen at present, one new appointment will be made early next year, namely, to the post of Indian Trade Commissioner in Italy, for which a non-official Mr. Ahuja was selected on the recommendation of the Public Service Commission in 1931. He has hitherto been undergoing training in the Commercial Intelligence and Statistics Department, Calcutta, and is now required to undergo further training for four months in the Trade Department of the High Commissioner's office before proceeding to Italy.

INDIANS SERVING IN THE OFFICES OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

346. *Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : (a) Will Government please state the number of Indians serving in the offices of the League of Nations or its affiliated organisations at Geneva and how many of them are (i) Hindus, (ii) Muslims, (iii) Europeans domiciled in India, (iv) Indian Christians, (v) Sikhs, and (vi) Anglo-Indians ?

(b) Do Government propose to press for more appointments for Indians ?

for effective action in this matter is extremely limited. Government are at pains to take such action as is possible by causing India's delegates to the Assembly to ventilate the matter as often and as strenuously as is consistent with tactical considerations.

INDIANS AND EUROPEANS SERVING IN THE OFFICES OF THE TRADE COMMISSIONERS AND DEPUTY TRADE COMMISSIONERS.

347. *Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Indians and Europeans serving in the offices of the Trade Commissioners and Deputy Trade Commissioners ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : A statement giving the information asked for is laid on the table of the House. There is no separate office of Deputy Trade Commissioner, but there is one such post under the Indian Trade Commissioner, London, which is held by an Indian.

Statement showing the number of Indians and Europeans serving in the Offices of the Indian Trade Commissioners.

Office of	Number of Indians and Anglo- Indians.	Number of Europeans.
Indian Trade Commissioner, London	18	3
Indian Trade Commissioner, Hamburg	1	3

ELECTION OF A MEMBER ON THE FUEL OIL COMMITTEE.

[Mr. President.]

to the Fuel Oil Committee the Assembly Office will be open to receive nominations upto 11 A.M. on Monday, the 6th August, and that the election, if necessary, will be held as usual in the Secretary's Room on Wednesday, the 8th August, 1934. The election will be conducted in accordance with the principle of proportional representation by means of the single transferable vote.

THE INDIAN IRON AND STEEL DUTIES BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore on the 31st July, 1934 :

"That the Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. H. P. Mody, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. B. Das, Mr. S. C. Sen, Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla, Mr. R. S. Sarma, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra, Sir Leslie Hudson, Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, the Honourable Sir James Grigg, the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before Monday, the 13th August, 1934, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Member for Commerce and Railway) : Sir, if the debate on my motion in regard to the Iron and Steel Bill is not finished today, I would ask you to be good enough to direct that the House shall sit on Friday, the 3rd August.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair directs that the House shall sit on Friday for the transaction of official business if this motion is not finished today.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I was saying yesterday that the preferential treatment to our pig iron exports in the United Kingdom market was a mere eyewash. I also pointed out that we have very little knowledge of the refunds and rebates given in the United Kingdom. While we do not wish to stand in the way of the prosperity of British industries, we wish to convey that that prosperity shall not be achieved at the sacrifice of our own.

Sir, I now propose to turn to the Government proposals regarding the revenue and excise duties. In doing so, I do not propose to repeat some of the remarks already made by some of my Honourable friends on this side of the House, but I wish, however, to observe that it is remarkable that the Tariff Board should mix up the question of Government revenue with the issue of protection to an Indian industry. It does appear to me to be clearly outside the scope of the reference to them. Even the Honourable the Finance Member cannot agree to commit himself to years in advance and anticipate the approval of this Legislature. Ordinarily even the Honourable the Commerce Member would not consider it is within his province to suggest the removal of revenue duties, but this Board thought it right to do so. Sir, this is the first time that a Tariff Board has gone to this length, and I trust that this will not be taken as a precedent. The suggestion that duties should be removed on British structurals and plates would appear to have found favour with the Commerce Member. Assuming for the purpose of argument that in this way public utility services would be benefited, may I respectfully ask the Commerce Member why similar considerations did not prevail with the Government when they taxed the machinery. The Fiscal Commission strongly urged that even for revenue purposes machinery should not be taxed and this Assembly by a majority rejected the Government proposal to tax it for revenue purposes. Yet by resorting to certification, machinery was subjected to taxation. What became of these revenue considerations now? Since removal of duties benefit importers, I hope he will permit us to draw our own conclusions.

It is in keeping with the rest of it that the Government should propose excise duties. Sir Joseph Bhore observed that these excise duties would have to become a permanent feature of our fiscal system...

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I never said so at all.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Then, I stand corrected, Sir. I thought that he said so. Anyhow, if he did not say so, I withdraw my statement. We have yet to hear the Finance Member educate us on the virtues of that policy. In the meantime, may I respectfully ask both the Finance Member as well as the Commerce Member, whether there is a precedent in any country in this wide world where a key industry is subjected to an excise duty? In many countries such duties are restricted to alcohol and tobacco, while a few countries levied such duties on matches, sugar and the like. But I have not known a key industry, with foreign competition threatening it, is ever subjected to an excise duty. The Honourable Member was pleased to acknowledge that this is a key industry. Would the Honourable Member be impressed if I were to state that the Round Table Conference treated with greater consideration than the Government of India themselves this question of subjecting key industries.

Sir, to turn to another point, the Honourable the Commerce Member deprecated the attitude of the Tatas towards these re-rolling mills and expressed his concern for the subsidiary industries. If these subsidiary industries were to satisfy the conditions laid down by the Fiscal Commission, particularly with regard to the use of the raw material, I would be glad to join issue with him. Will the Honourable Member be pleased to satisfy himself whether they satisfy those two tests laid down by the Fiscal Commission? I am informed, they do not. Several of them, if not all, import their raw material from foreign countries and re-roll them with a view to compete with indigenous manufactures. If that were an accurate statement of a fact, any encouragement given to these mushroom enterprises at the expense of a genuine national industry is bound to encourage non-Indian firms being set up with a view to encourage foreign raw material and compete with the indigenous industry.

I would like to make one final observation on this point. We have to take good care that the major industry does not unduly suffer. It is observed that coal is the raw material for coke and coke is the raw material for pig iron which in turn is the raw material for steel. Steel ingots are raw material for blooms, billets and slabs which in turn are raw material for rails, sheets, etc. Either you protect the steel industry at each stage or you do not protect it at all. If you leave a loophole the whole scheme is bound to fail.

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

Another instance of the Board's utter lack of appreciation of their responsibility is illustrated by the want of realisation on their part that there must be a difference between tested and untested steel. The Press interview given by Messrs. Balmer Lawrie and Co. on this point is referred to by the Indian Finance.

Mr. Le Salter of Messrs. Balmer Lawrie & Co., has stated the British point of view in a Press interview. He draws attention to the Tariff Board's error in not realising that there must be a difference of at least Rs. ten per ton between the selling price of tested and untested steel. Even to one who is not initiated in the intricacies of the steel trade, there should be no difficulty in understanding that the tested steel must sell at a higher price than untested steel. The Tariff Board are not prepared to recognise so simple a truth."

Another important point made out by Mr. Salter is that :

"a revenue duty of 10 per cent. on British steel would, in my opinion, result in no reduction to the tonnage British makers are likely to ship to India."

But he adds :

"it would allow the Tata Iron and Steel Company to obtain a fair selling price, and, at the same time, would enable them to continue to distribute their products through the same channels as at present and would obviate any upheaval or disorganization or loss of business to metal merchants in India."

Sir, as we do not possess that hall-mark of expert knowledge said to have been possessed by this Board, we think from the common sense point of view that untested steel must necessarily sell at a lower price than tested steel. If no difference is shown, the Indian industry would be bound to sell all its steel as tested steel in competition with the British tested steel. The result would be that the Indian consumer of untested steel would be invited to pay more for tested steel.

Sir, I will try to avoid going into details. May I ask whether my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, furnished the Government of India with a balance sheet of the losses and gains to the steel industry of this country under these proposals? Someone has calculated such a profit and loss account and furnished me with a copy of it. According to this statement the value of protection given to the industry would come to 48 lakhs, and the increased payments are estimated to come to 69 ; thus leaving a minus balance of 19 lakhs. I wonder whether this is really an accurate statement of account. If that were so, it would be a travesty of truth to call this measure a measure of protection.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Are you quoting these figures from the Indian Finance?

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : No. If they are correct, there can be no question at all.

iron and steel. Was that object achieved? No. Is the country made self-supporting? No; on the contrary they do not even expect to be so. Are these present proposals calculated to encourage the growth of the industry to that end? I am afraid not. Will the consuming public be relieved to any appreciable extent by these proposals? I submit not. The interests of the consuming public weigh with several of us more than the interests of the industrial concerns. Among them the agriculturalists are an important and deserving section. They are poor and helpless while the industrialists are rich and influential. It is human nature that it should sympathise with the poor against the rich, the helpless against the powerful. My Honourable friend, Raja Bahadur Krishnamachariar, whom I do not find in his seat, waxed eloquent yesterday in advocating the interests of the consumers and the agriculturists in particular. That shows how even the rich can shed tears for the poor even more than the poor themselves. (Laughter.)

If we were to study the provisions of this measure purely from the standpoint of consumers' interests, the very best and excellent way of promoting and serving them is to throw this Bill out. The provisions of the Bill are designed with a view to eliminate foreign countries' imports, which probably are inferior in quality but certainly cheaper. The Indian market is expected under this measure to be catered to by the Tatas and the British. The prices are determined by them, and, therefore, the consumer is bound to pay still higher prices since the duties are prohibitive on cheap foreign imports. But it is these foreign countries who are our best customers of agricultural produce. Therefore, if we want to take only the immediate interests of the consumer and ignore wider national interests, proposals which seek to eliminate cheap foreign imports are antagonistic to consumers' interests. But in considering the claims of the consumer even, as has been pointed out by Sir Joseph, we have to take a broad view. No accurate balance sheet of the consumers' losses and gains can be drawn from that wider point of view. The value to a country of a key industry of this importance being established cannot be calculated in rupees, annas and pies. The country has accepted the policy of discriminating protection. Protection for the steel industry was advocated by every shade of political opinion in this country. It was advocated by Pandit Motilal Nehru, the then Leader of the Swarajist Party, when this question of protection was discussed on the floor of this House on the last occasion. It was advocated by Mr. Jinnah, the then Leader of this Group; it was advocated by every man of public importance in this country. No encouragement can be found from the country for a contrary view and that at a time when the nations of the world have been endeavouring to be self-supporting and to sell more and more and buy less and less. You accept protection or you do not. If you accept protection, the consumer is necessarily invited to suffer. All that we can do is to see that the suffering is temporary and that during the period of protection the industry has been able rapidly to develop so as to dispense with that shelter. The Indian industry has been able to prove even to the satisfaction of the Board and the Government that they did more than was expected of them. Under exceptionally trying conditions, in spite of falling demand, it maintained its output and reduced its costs; it has been able to capture three-fourths of the available home market. I say available market because the Railway Board do not appear to have placed their orders even to the extent of 25 per cent. of the estimates. However, the Indian industry appears to submit that it will be able to dispense with protection in the near future and will be satisfied with lesser protection now than even they were accustomed to. Because they themselves asked for less, should they get next to nothing and that for whose benefit? The Tatas ought to have realised the simple truth, "Importunity in begging has its advantages". They would have done so, had they secured the services of Mr. Mody a little earlier than they did. (Laughter). My Honourable friend, as the representative of the textile industry, studied that art to perfection and learnt the value of crying loudly for more than he deserved and found how excellently paying it was. (Laughter.)

[Mr. B. Sitaramaraju.]

I do not propose to detain the House any longer. If this industry is benefited and is prosperous and able to stand on its own legs, the primary consideration should be that relief must be given to the consumer, not by exposing to serious competition and reducing the competing strength of the industry, but by fixing from time to time a fair selling price and compelling the industry to sell at those prices. Any attempt of the Government in that direction will be acceptable. But, under no circumstances, will we consent to reduce its competitive strength against its non-Indian rivals. (Applause.)

Sir Leslie Hudson (Bombay : European) : Sir, I wish to pay a tribute to the Tariff Board for their very clear and concise report which is evidence of its members having given their closest consideration to every aspect of the steel trade. The country has no reason to be dissatisfied with that report, although its recommendations may not find universal acceptance. And I think that Messrs. Tatas themselves should be grateful to the Board for having shed the bright light of publicity on the successful re-organisation of their works at Jamshedpur during the past ten years. The following figures will show that, during an unprecedented period of depression, the Tatas have increased their output, have reduced their overheads and the average cost of manufacture in a manner which must cause the admiration of every one in India, and not only in India but outside India. Their output in 1923 was 163,000 tons, in 1924 it was 380,000 tons, and in 1933 it was 500,000 tons. In 1923 their overheads and depreciation were Rs. 57 a ton, in 1927 they were Rs. 39 a ton, and in 1934 they are reported to be Rs. 37½ a ton. The average cost of manufacture has similarly declined from Rs. 106 in 1923, to Rs. 98 in 1926, and Rs. 69 in 1933. These admirable results are no doubt largely due to the protection which has been afforded to the industry, but they are also due to the increased efficiency in the works themselves for which Tatas are entitled to take full credit. I now come to the principle of the Bill, which is a continuation, in a modified form, of protection for seven more years to the steel industry. On the general scheme of protection, as recommended by the Tariff Board, I have little to say, but there are two or three features of the Bill concerning which I wish to make certain observations. I first take the question of tested and untested steel. The Tariff Board have used the expression "British steel" as synonymous with tested steel and "Continental steel" as synonymous with untested steel. I would, however, draw attention to a memorandum issued by the National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers, dated the 12th December, 1933, in which the Federation assures the Tariff Board that the British industry is able and willing to hole of the requirements of India in untested as well as tested steel. It therefore does seem as if the contention of Tatas, that the differentiation contained in the Bill is not synonymous with the differentiation of tested and untested steel, may have some foundation. A letter which appeared in the Statesman of the 19th July, signed "A. S. S. S.", supports this contention. It is a very long letter and I propose to ask your permission to quote it to the House but I think it would be a real foundation for the criticisms which have been raised. The Government may see their way to reconsider this point. I think that in their note to Government, dated the 19th July, they stated that a condition of the admission of British steel, free of duty, should be its compliance with the standard specification, and to the best of my knowledge no British steel importer could take exception.

Das (Orissa Division Non-Mohammadan) : Is that a public statement of the Honourable Member is quoting from?

Mr. Hudson : I believe it is to be found in many quarters.

feature of the Bill, which I desire to touch upon, is the abolition of revenue duties in respect of certain items. Sir, the European Group have always taken the line that there should be a thorough examination of all revenue duties, with a view to their reduction where the law of diminishing returns operates and where they have a protective value and we believe this to be part of a sound fiscal policy. It may, however, be questioned whether such a policy is justifiable to effect this in regard to one particular item in a Bill and that at a time when an emergency budget and salary advance are in operation. I quite realise that the amount in this particular case is small but it is a matter of principle rather than the amount of revenue affected.

On the matter of excise. The Bill contemplates excise on steel ingots, to make up for loss of revenue, and this is referred to in paragraph 120 of the Tariff Board's report and also briefly referred to by the Honourable the Commerce Member in his speech yesterday. It does not, at present, appear to us to be sufficient reason for the imposition of an excise duty on a basic industry in a Bill, the object of which is continued protection. The Honourable the Commerce Member stated that the Honourable the Finance Member would deal with this point later on, so that the Government's case has not yet been fully presented to us, and this somewhat piecemeal presentation of the Government's position on an important measure, places the House at a disadvantage in dealing with their arguments. Surely, it might be possible for the Honourable the Commerce Member, as Leader of the House, to have presented a complete picture to the House, leaving it to deal at a later stage, with the arguments advanced during which his department is more intimately concerned. I will content myself now by stating that we are apprehensive of this proposal for an excise on steel ingots. Does this mean that in the future any industry which may have obtained protection may, at the end of that period, when it has been enabled to stand on its own legs, be saddled with an excise on its production? The Government regard income accruing from a protective tariff, the nature of a permanent revenue, which must be replaced if it is no longer necessary for the purpose for which it was [Sir Leslie Hudson.] originally imposed? If so, both the industry and the consumer may be in a worse plight than they were before the protection was granted, and any industry applying for protection in the future would have to take into their calculations the possibility of an eventual excise being imposed on their production. Our view is that excises should be imposed as part of a general financial policy and as national necessity arises. We hope therefore that the Honourable the Finance Member will explain to us later the particular justification for linking an essentially revenue measure with a Bill to extend a modified form of protection to a particular industry for a further period of years, and, also, that he will endeavour to give the House some indication as to the policy which Government is likely to follow in the future.

Another matter to which I should like to make a passing reference is paragraph 159 of the Tariff Board's report in which they write as follows:

"We attach great importance, from the point of view of developing the steel industry, to the adoption of suitable measures calculated to increase the market for fabricated steel. No other form of protection can have the influence on this development that would be exercised by a definite scheme spread over a period of years for capital replacements and construction of railways and other productive public works. The credit of the Government of India in the capital market is exceptionally high and money is both plentiful and cheap. A bold policy of public loans for capital expenditure would at this juncture afford enormous assistance in stimulating the market for capital goods like structural steel. We believe, that the effect of such a policy would not be confined to the steel industry but would be felt in every aspect of the country's economic life."

Sir, the European Group, as we have done on previous occasions, urge Government to extend their capital works programme, while credit is good and money is cheap, and we wholeheartedly endorse the recommendation of the Tariff Board that Government should take this into consideration when planning their capital works programme for the coming year.

I would refer briefly to the fact that there is some apprehension,—I think it has already been referred to by certain speakers who have preceded me,—that there may be a tendency for Tatas to become a monopolistic concern. I am referring particularly to the proposed erection of brick-making and coke-making plant which are referred to, I think, in the Tariff Board Report, and which will, if carried out, injure long-established concerns producing the same articles. This matter is dealt with by the Board in paragraph 78 in which they conclude by saying:

"Every reasonable effort should be made to avoid the prospect of the disappearance or weakening of an already established industry as the result of protection granted to another industry."

I hope the House may have some assurance, possibly by Mr. Mody, that the Tatas policy will not be directed to the elimination of such concerns which employ a large number of Indians and which contribute largely in freight to the railway receipts and which are perfectly ready, I understand, to come to an arrangement to supply the Tatas at reasonable rates. (Hear, hear.)

Sir, it was with considerable satisfaction that I heard the Honourable the Commerce Member say yesterday that the Government of India are in close negotiation with His Majesty's Government with a view to encouraging the export of manganese ore from India to the United Kingdom and I trust that the Honourable Member and the Government of India will spare no effort to assist an industry which of recent years has suffered from severe competition from Russian and other sources.

Finally, Sir, I may say that, I and my Group support the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee. The industry deserves the further meed of protection proposed. The question of tested and untested steel can be dealt with by the Select Committee; and with regard to the proposed excise duty, we reserve to ourselves the right to take this up in the Select Committee after hearing what the Honourable the Finance Member has to say on this subject. (Loud Applause.)

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association: Indian Commerce): Mr. President, my object in addressing the House is to place it in possession of the point of view of the steel industry towards the proposals embodied in the Tariff Board Report and the Bill before the House. I shall try to imitate the excellent tone and manner of the speech which my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, made in asking for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee, and I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating him heartily on the most admirable presentation of the case that he has made, even though with portions of it, I am entirely in disagreement. (Laughter.)

Sir, the Bill before the House raises some interesting speculations. When is a Tariff Board report to be regarded as sacrosanct, and when is it to be put on the scrap heap?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran: Non-Muhammadian): When it suits the Government.

Mr. H. P. Mody: That question has been answered in various ways by the Government of India during the last few months. Sir, a couple of days ago, I was told a story about the Commissioner of a Punjab Division who, whenever he got a number of appeals, told one of his chapparasis to arrange them in two rows on either side of the seat of judgment. When he went to Court and had the pleaders before him, he used to lay his hands on one pile and say "Manzoor", and then he would lay his hands on the other pile, and say "Na-Manzoor": that is, "admitted" and "rejected".

An Honourable Member: Does that sort of thing go on also in Bombay and with the Bombay mills?

Mr. H. P. Mody: My Honourable friend asks if this sort of thing happens in Bombay also. No, Sir, this is only possible in benighted parts of the country. (Laughter.) Sir, what I was going to say was that I earnestly hope the Government of India do not dispose of Tariff Board Reports in some such primitive fashion.

Now, Sir, I would like to contend that the iron and steel industry is the most outstanding vindication of the policy of discriminating protection which this country adopted a few years ago, and which has been endorsed on numerous occasions. That policy has very recently found some doubters among people, wise and otherwise, who are shaking their heads over its soundness, but, Sir, that policy has enabled India to be put on the industrial map, and I want to know whether there is any man here or outside who can challenge the fact that India would still be industrially, and in every other way, a very backward country if this policy had not been acted upon by the Government of India and the Legislature. It has, for instance, enabled the textile industry to survive. It has enabled, through that circumstance, hundreds of thousands of cultivators of cotton to find a livelihood. That policy has helped hundreds of thousands of sugar-cane growers to earn a living. It has made it possible for a basic national industry like the iron and steel industry to be established in this country and to be subserving a national purpose.

[Mr. H. P. Mody.]

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What about salt ?

Mr. H. P. Mody : And I do not feel called upon to offer any justification for it. But since doubts are occasionally expressed, I would like to say that in the steel industry you have a most convincing example of the soundness of the policy of discriminating protection. Sir, the protection which this industry got a few years ago has, according to my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, been fully justified. That opinion has been emphatically given in the Tariff Board report itself. Costs have gone down, efficiency has increased, and the figures are to be found in the Tariff Board report. The industry has been Indianized ; it must not be forgotten, however, that it involves highly technical processes and you cannot do without British and foreign experts, but it has been Indianized as quickly as it is possible for Indians to acquire the necessary experience and technical knowledge which are essential to the running of an industry of this character. That Indianization has proceeded in strict accord with the necessities and the demands of the works. Then, Sir, take another item which is also material. This industry, because it has received protection, because it has been able to establish itself securely, can afford to pay labour a higher scale of wages than labour could possibly find in any other industry ; and apart from higher wages, it has set up a town with amenities such as even some of the Presidency towns cannot claim so far as the labouring population is concerned. I would only refer my Honourable friends, in this connection, to a statement to be found in the Tariff Board report. In that they say :

" Our inspection of both the works and the town of Jamshedpur has convinced us that the arrangements made by the Company for the welfare of labour are adequate. In the opinion of some, too much attention and too much expenditure have been devoted to labour welfare, but we are definitely of opinion that the attention and expenditure bestowed on these activities are well repaid."

Sir, from all these points of view, I do not think that I would be claiming too much if I said that the protection, which the Government and the Legislature accorded to this industry a few years ago, has been amply justified. A great many criticisms have been heard of the Tariff Board, in respect of the report before us, during the last few weeks. I am not going to indulge in any harsh criticism. Even when I violently disagree with some of the recommendations and conclusions, I shall charitably assume that the Board were suffering from a sort of mental aberration in respect of certain important matters, and I shall leave it at that.

Mr. B. Das : That is not charity.

Mr. H. P. Mody : It is charity, because the best of us occasionally suffer from mental aberrations. (Laughter.) And even when we are not suffering from mental aberrations, our critical faculties very often go to sleep. Has not my Honourable friend noticed very respected and weighty Members of Government peacefully slumbering what time we are throwing out challenge after challenge in respect of their administration and their policies ? Are not their critical faculties asleep on these occasions ? Sir, what I was saying was that, one of the most unsatisfactory features of the Tariff Board report is its recommendation that in respect of certain articles it is essential that even the revenue duty should be removed. I was very gratified when my Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, emphatically dissociated himself and his Group from any endorsement of such a policy. I can understand the Tariff Board making a recommendation which is really outside their province, but I cannot understand the Government of India embodying this recommendation in a measure which they are placing before a popular Legislature. What are revenue duties for ? They are for revenue and must be guided by revenue considerations.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Hear, hear.

Mr. H. P. Mody : I am glad that my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, says : "Hear, hear". I hope that it only means that he is going to take an extremely reasonable view when he follows me. I am glad that at this initial stage I have managed to convince him. Sir, what I was going to say was that the over-riding consideration must be one of revenue, and as my friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, just now pointed out, if the law of diminishing returns has started operating, then obviously it is foolish to retain the revenue duty at a particular level because by doing that you are defeating the very object of the duty. There is another consideration. If it is a national object which is to be subserved by the removal or reduction of a revenue duty, then, too, the Government would be justified in adopting that course.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Hear, hear.

Mr. H. P. Mody : I will now remind you, Sir, of your past sins. I mean the Ottawa Delegation Report, which lays down certain principles which I am very glad to be able to quote here. The Report indicates in what manner tariffs are to be adjusted, and the House will forgive me if I quote at some length :

" The Indian import tariff is primarily a revenue tariff which imposes a moderate uniform rate of duties on all commodities, subject however first to the levy of a much higher duty on particular articles, second to exemption from duty or admission at low rates of other articles where national interests require such concessions, and finally to the imposition of protective duties when it is established that the encouragement of these industries is justified in the national interest. The higher rates of duty call for no comment ; the exemption from duty and the low rates fall into one or the other of the following categories :

- (1) Commodities of importance to the cultivator, such as agricultural implements and manures.
- (2) Particular medicines such as quinine, the side distribution of which is important from the point of view of health.
- (3) Commodities a duty on which might operate as a tax on knowledge, such as printing machinery and appliances.
- (4) Commodities a duty on which might retard a desirable development still in its infancy, such as aircraft and radio appliances.
- (5) Commodities a duty on which would impede the development of industries such as power machinery, raw materials and dyes.

[Mr. H. P. Mody.]

(6) Commodities a duty on which might appreciably increase the cost of railway transport, such as locomotives and many other classes of railway material.

In each case the exceptional treatment of the articles concerned was based on broad grounds of national policy deliberately adopted which, it was held, must outweigh purely revenue considerations."

I repeat, therefore, that the reduction or the removal of a revenue duty should form no part of the recommendations of a Tariff Board report. The matter must be decided in strict accord with budgetary considerations. I should have found no complaint with my Honourable friends on the opposite Benches if they had come forward in March and said: "Well, our budgetary position has improved so materially, our finances are in such a healthy condition and our credit stands so high, that we are going to take the risk of an all-round reduction of duties". If at that moment some such proposal, as the one under discussion, had come forward, I should have found no reason for complaint. But when the revenues of the Government of India are in the condition in which they are, Government cannot come forward with a proposal which I regard as most reactionary. They were so desperately hard up, a couple of years ago, that they actually increased the duties on machinery, which the Fiscal Commission had said should be free. They increased the duties on dyes and on a great many other commodities which are essential to industrial development. How can they now come forward and say that it is in the national interest that the revenue duty should be entirely done away with in respect of certain articles of British manufacture? Sir, even in respect of yarn, in spite of the interests of the handloom industry, the revenue duty on counts above 50's was retained. There is, thus, not the slightest justification for the proposal which has been put before us and I want to ask my Honourable friend, for whose benefit it is made? Does the fabricating industry want it? So far as one can understand their position, they do not want this remission of revenue.

In connection with this issue, somebody remarked in the course of yesterday's debate that, I have been hoisted with my own petard. Nothing of the sort. I take the same stand today as I have taken all along. I stand for preferential arrangements so long as they are in the interest of India, which must be our first consideration. And if the occasion arose again when it became necessary to subscribe to the same principle or to endorse similar arrangements which I made a few months ago, and which evoked such bitter criticism from a section of the Press and the public in India, I am prepared to take again the risk of public condemnation and obloquy. My position has been consistent. The interests of India must be served first, and I claim that in spite of all the criticisms of the Indo-Lancashire Paet, it was that consideration which was uppermost with me, and I repeat that if the occasion.....

Sir Abdur Rahim (Calcutta and Suburbs : Muhammadan Urban) : What has happened to it now?

Mr. H. P. Mody : That agreement is going on very wonderfully. (Laughter.) My Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, yesterday, strung up a sort of a limerick which was quite humorous but which lacked a bit in rhyme. It said that the British lion had swallowed me up and that the laugh was on the side of the lion. Well, Sir, I do not mind the lion laughing so long as I am in the happy position of being able to grin. So long as the lion does not feed off me, I do not mind how happy he is. I repeat that the position I am taking up today with regard to the exemption from revenue duties is entirely consistent with the attitude I have all along adopted.

I shall get on to the next objectionable feature of this report; and that is the burden of excise which has been laid upon the shoulders of the industry. It seems to me, Sir, in a general sort of way, that the consumer gets hit both ways. First of all, protective measures are imposed which naturally result in an increase of the burden on the consumer. A certain amount of revenue is, however, derived by the State and the general taxpayer benefits to that extent. Then when the protection is decreased, and the revenue drops, the consumer again is made to pay by the system of excise and countervailing duty instead of the general taxpayer being asked to bear his share of the burden. (Hear, hear.) While I myself have advocated the mulcting of the consumer for national interests, I cannot really justify the mulcting of him when there is no such consideration. My Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, there again, took up a sound attitude for which he deserves to be congratulated. I want to go a little further. I say, that in this proposal the industries throughout India must observe a danger signal hoisted up. (Hear, hear.) Every industry which comes forward for protection will have some sort of excise imposed upon it. It will be made to pay for the protection. If it is made to pay fairly we can have nothing to say, but in the present instance the burden is very unfair. Take the instance of the sugar excise. What was the justification of Government for that measure?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : No justification.

Mr. H. P. Mody : We say no justification, but I am putting the matter from Government's point of view. Even they are entitled to their opinion sometimes. (Laughter.) Well, what I was saying was that the Government justification for the imposition of the excise duty was that the revenue had dropped from something like ten crores to under two crores and was on the point of disappearing altogether. The second point was that the industry had been given an abnormal measure of protection, something in the nature of 200 per cent., including the surcharge, and the Finance Member felt he was justified in getting something back from it. The third argument was that the sugar industry was developing in a most unhealthy way and Government said, "well, this will be a salutary awakening to them. Let us administer the dose". Now, is any one of these considerations applicable to the iron and steel industry in India?

An Honourable Member : No, no.

Mr. H. P. Mody : I want to know what it is that the Government of India are taking their stand upon. Is it a definite recommendation in the Tariff Board report? What does the Tariff Board report say? It is important to remember that the Tariff Board had no business to meddle in questions of revenue. (Hear, hear.) They go out of their way to do it, and append a paragraph which talks of the possibility of the Government of India levying an excise duty. Now, if it was the intention of the Board that this proposal should be taken seriously, it was their bounden duty to discuss it, in the course of the evidence which was being led before them, with the representatives of the industry. They do not do anything of the sort. They dismiss the matter in a paragraph, where not even the method of collecting the excise is indicated. I am almost certain that if the Tariff Board had realised that the Government of India would greedily pounce upon this recommendation, and impose an excise on steel ingots, then even the Board might have paused. How will the excise work? It is being levied on the industry both in respect of its protected as well as of its unprotected products. Half the products of the industry are not protected and even in their case the excise duty has got to be paid. Then, Sir, the countervailing duty will not be helpful in respect of a very large part of the production and the result will be an intolerable burden on the industry. Now, I strongly oppose the very idea of the excise duty, but if it had to be levied, surely the Government of India might have considered the desirability of seeing that the countervailing duty was on a higher scale than the excise. How does the excise operate? When you take rupees four per steel ingot on every ton of the products of the Steel Company, you are taking from them something like 30 lakhs of rupees. The Government of India could only justify that, if they were in a position to prove that a countervailing advantage had been conferred upon the industry through the increase in the protective duty. But does it operate in this logical way? The Honourable the Commerce Member knows what happened when the duties against Japanese textiles were raised from 31½ per cent. to 50 per cent. The whole of the increase was absorbed in the price. When we were endeavouring to raise this 50 per cent. duty to 75 per cent., contracts were actually made by the Japanese manufacturers, that if the duty were increased, they would bear the whole of it. Now, what is there to show that when, either on account of a shrinking market in India or because the Continental works must also live, and, therefore, must compete here in this country as against British products, the price level is sharply brought down, the countervailing duty will protect the industry? Let me quote from the Tariff Board report; it is refreshing sometimes to be able to look to it for support.

[Mr. H. P. Mody.]

"To this extent there seems no other conclusion to be drawn than that it has been too readily assumed that the benefit of protection to the industry can be measured directly by the rate of protective duty. Experience has shown that in the circumstances of a growing industry this assumption cannot be made and that there will ordinarily be a lag between the theoretical price and the actual realisation."

It is instructive to recall in this connection that there is something like a duty of 33-1/3rd per cent. on the imports of steel into the United Kingdom. Everyone knows that Great Britain was the pioneer of the steel industry. Everyone knows how strongly it is entrenched. But the British Government found that this industry of national importance had fallen upon evil days, and they did not wait for elaborate and meticulous calculations of a Tariff Board of costs and fair selling prices. After a preliminary and none too elaborate examination by the May Committee, an Order was made in 1932.

This is what was said:

"In our first report presented on the 8th April last, we made a special reference to the position of the iron and steel industry in this country. We there stated that we are satisfied that the maintenance of a prosperous iron and steel industry in the highest degree of efficiency is essential to the economic progress of this country, while from the point of view of national security it must still be regarded as vital."

Let me say a few words with regard to the inadequacy of the protection that has been conceded. I recognise that if the proposals of the Tariff Board, where they lay down what should be allowed for depreciation, overheads and profit, were to be regarded as the essential and inviolable feature of the protection sought to be given to the industry, I may not have much to say. My only point is that the protection, which you think you are conceding to the industry through the adoption of the Tariff Board report, will not be worked up to for reasons which I propose to point out. My Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, has already referred, as did my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, to the difference between tested and untested steel. I do not want to elaborate that point; all that I want to do is to give one illustration of the way in which it will work. Take the case of bars. The fair selling price of bars has been fixed at Rs. 106, for the British, Continental and the Indian industry. Now, it is quite impossible that the Continent can sell its bars in this country at Rs. 106, if British manufacturers were able to market them here at Rs. 106. The Continent would have to accept less or be squeezed out of the market. In the same way, if British tested bars are to be sold at Rs. 106 in this country, what happens to the untested bars of the Indian industry? Naturally the Indian industry will be obliged to reduce its prices. As a matter of fact, even during these last few days, complaints have come from all over the country that the quotations which were in operation until the Report was published are no longer operative, and that the stocks in the hands of dealers and small merchants would have to be sold at a difference of 10 to 15 rupees.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad: What is your conclusion from that?

Mr. H. P. Mody: Conclusions always come at the end. (Laughter.)

There is another respect in which the protection falls greatly short of what is due to the industry. Today, as everyone knows, there is a continental cartel in existence. That cartel has survived for a considerable time. Who knows how much longer it will be in operation? The British industry is reorganising itself, through the operation of both these causes, it may well be that prices may witness a sharp drop in this country. If that happens, the whole structure of the Tariff Board's recommendation may fall to the ground. My Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, quoted certain figures which did not appear to be clearly understood by the House. He said that the total protection sought to be given was only 48 lakhs. What he probably was referring to was the Tariff Board's conclusion, namely, that if a certain switch-over from untested to tested steel took place, which is bound to happen in future in the new conditions, then the measure of protection to the industry on the products which are protected would be just 68 lakhs of rupees, which works out at something like 12½ per cent, which incidentally, I may say, is lower than the existing revenue duty. What Mr. Raju was trying to point out was that if there was no differentiation made between tested and untested steel, then it was possible that the industry may have to suffer a loss of something like 20 lakhs of rupees, in which case the effective protection would only amount to 48 lakhs. If it is that figure, it comes to something under nine per cent. Now, Sir, I do not wish to appear churlish. But I would like to tell a little story. A friend asked another on the New York Stock Exchange: "Is it true that Isaacson made twenty thousand dollars in rubber last autumn?" The other fellow said: "You are perfectly correct, but you have not got the details right. It was not rubber but it was copper; it was not last autumn but the summer previous; it was not twenty thousand dollars but two thousand dollars; and it was not Isaacson, it was me". (Laughter.) So if somebody were to ask my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, "Is it true that the Tata Iron and Steel Company is going to receive a very considerable measure of protection?", my friend would say, "Certainly, but we just want to make a few alterations in the last measure of protection. We want to do away with the revenue duties on certain articles; we want to reduce the scale of duties all round; we want to impose a little excise which might mean about 30 lakhs of rupees; and we want to tell Tata's that if they have got any remunerative contracts they must at once do away with them and sell at market prices!"

[Mr. H. P. Mody.]

Sir, I can realise that the obvious answer to all this is the provision which relates to off-setting duties. I welcome that proposal. I think it is very sound and it carries a little further the power which already exists in the Statute with regard to iron and steel products. But my only point is that it is very undesirable from every point of view that the continual invocation of this provision should become necessary. If ab initio your proposals fall very short of the protection which the Tariff Board concedes as due to the industry, then the provision with regard to the off-setting duties is not an adequate or a complete answer. And again it has got to be remembered that the off-setting duties, even with the utmost celerity with which Government steps in, can only come into operation after the market has been dislocated by abnormal importations or low prices and after losses have been suffered, not only by the industry itself but by all those who are distributors of its products. So, while I admit that in the application of this off-setting duty, there is a provision of immense importance to the industry, I only want to emphasise that it may not operate promptly or efficaciously.

Here, Sir, I shall briefly touch upon the question of the profits made by the industry. The Tariff Board have found that the profits over a course of seven years since protection was given were less than two per cent; if calculated on the block of 12½ crores. I hear whispers as to what our profits are going to be this year, and some of my Honourable friends are wanting to know why we have not come out yet with a balance sheet. We will come out with the balance sheet in good time, but I do not mind saying to this House that we are showing very good results this year. But what I want to know is this however; after seven years of protection, are we not allowed to make a decent profit even in one year of that period? Even if you take these profits into calculation and take them over the whole period of seven years, you will find that we have done nothing very wonderful; and therefore to fling in our face the large profits we have made in one year is unjust and ungenerous. Look at the matter from the point of view of dividends. In the last six years we have altogether distributed just Rs. 137 lakhs on a block of Rs. 12½ crores. For years, our ordinary shareholders, who have invested crores of rupees in the concern, have not obtained a single pie; not a single pie has been paid to our deferred shareholders; we are in arrears even with regard to the second preference dividends. Is it something very wonderful which these results show, that the Government of India should take the earliest opportunity of pouncing down upon the industry and saying "You are making too much money; that will not do"?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : Will you please tell us what are the amounts transferred to the several Reserve Funds and what are the amounts paid to the Managing Agents?

Mr. H. P. Mody : It is getting late : I will give these figures to my Honourable friend and to whoever else wants them : I have got them all here.

Sir, a great deal has been said about the national importance of the Tata Iron and Steel Company. A very handsome tribute has been paid by my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, and by every single Member who has followed him. I am sure the Tatas very deeply appreciate the generous way in which their efforts in establishing this industry have been recognised. Reference has been made by several speakers to the services which the industry was enabled to perform at the time of the Great War. Lord Chelmsford has put on record his opinion that, without the aid of the Tata Iron and Steel Company, he could not imagine how it would have been possible for India to conduct the campaigns in Mesopotamia, East Africa and Palestine. Some figures have been given to Honourable Members with regard to the sacrifices made by the Company in those days,—they amounted to Rs. six crores. But the Steel Company did not interpret their obligations in terms of what the Government imposed upon it. It did its best to enable Government and also public bodies to obtain their requirements of steel and iron materials at reasonable rates, what time the rest of the world was making abnormal profits. It installed two new open-hearth furnaces when it found that the Government of India wanted more steel, even though it paid the company better to sell pig iron instead. The Tata Steel Company did these things, and I am very glad that its services have been fully acknowledged in the course of this discussion.

I will just say one word about wages and living conditions. The industry pays Rs. 175 lakhs in the shape of wages every year. I am not talking of all the other benefits which labour receives in the way of housing, sanitation, water supply, hospitals, medical relief, and the like; I can only ask my Honourable friends to come and visit Jamshedpur and realise for themselves whether it is not a fact that labour at Jamshedpur is much better housed, much better treated, than is possible in any concern in the whole of India.

There is the question of the Steel Company's importance to other industries. Here again, facts and figures have been given by several Honourable friends and I shall not deal with them. I would only like to say a word with regard to the importance of the industry to the railways of the country. The Bengal Nagpur Railway derives fully a third of its revenues from the Company. In the course of the last few months, increases in railway rates have been imposed upon the company by the Bengal Nagpur Railway and the East Indian Railway, and these amount to an increase of Rs. 40 lakhs. From all these points of view, it can certainly be said that the Steel Company can claim to be regarded as a national industry in every sense of the word.

There is one point which my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, practically invited me to deal with, and that is the treatment of subsidiaries. It is rather unfortunate that the Tariff Board should have made certain observations in this connection, which the representatives of the industry appearing before it had no opportunity of rebutting. I can only say this : that it is quite possible, with an industry of such wide ramifications, that occasionally its competition may have hurt a particular concern. That might have happened, but that is something very different from the suggestion underlying the Tariff Board Report that any conscious injustice has been done to any concern or individual by the operations of the company. The Steel Company provides power, lighting, land and water, at reasonable rates, to a number of subsidiaries. It has aided the tin-plate, the agricultural implements, the enamelled iron ware, the firebricks, the wire products, and a great many other industries. It will be news to many of my Honourable friends that in the course of this spoon-feeding of other industries, the Steel Company has lost enormous sums of money running into eight figures. My Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, asked for an assurance from me with regard to the treatment of these minor industries. I can only say that the Steel Company has no desire to monopolise the market or to snuff other concerns out of existence. It believes in the great principle of living and letting live, and it hopes to continue to act up to that principle unflinchingly.

[Mr. H. P. Mody.]

There is one final observation, and it is this : the Bill is going before the Select Committee. I want to be assured that the 1 P.M. Committee is really going to apply its mind to every single problem arising out of the Bill and will be allowed to modify the proposals embodied in it. I have for some time been of opinion that it would be extremely desirable, in the interests of industries, that Tariff Board Reports should be released in advance of Government's proposals. That may lead to some sort of speculation, but I do not see why we should worry about that. After all, even speculators know that Tariff Board Reports are sometimes altogether ignored. On the other hand, if Tariff Board Reports were released in time, before Government have made up their minds, the industries concerned would be in a position to make their submissions, to point out in what directions some of the conclusions of the Tariff Board could not be sustained, and generally to put their point of view before Government. What happens now is that Reports are released along with Government's conclusions. And, Sir,—I am not saying it in any offensive spirit,—it is human nature, Government simply dig their toes in and refuse to consider amendments. My anxiety is to ensure that the Select Committee procedure has some meaning. Sir, with these observations and with the reservation that I do not agree with some of the vital features of this Bill, I have pleasure in supporting the motion. (Applause.)

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : I think I will adjourn the House just now and call upon the Honourable the Finance Member the first thing after lunch.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I shall be quite ready.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House now stands adjourned till a quarter past Two.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Sir, (Applause), this is the first occasion in my life on which I have had to make any considerable debating speech, and I am very grateful to the House for the friendly welcome they have given me, because it will encourage me in a task which must be one of some nervousness, and, obviously following the extremely skilled speech of Mr. Mody, one of some difficulty. Sir, it might be convenient if I took the House through the actual processes which led up to the revenue provisions of the Bill. But before I do so, I should like to make one slight digression and to comment on the tendency, which I have noticed throughout the debate and throughout the propaganda in the Press on the subject of this Bill, to mix up protection and revenue. This confusion between the two considerations is very wide-spread, and if I make a few preliminary remarks it may assist to get the two functions into their proper perspective. The object of a protective duty is, of course, to protect an important Indian industry. The object of a revenue duty is to raise revenue. The two objects should not be confused ; quite often indeed they are mutually destructive. As this confusion is an important point, I shall have to come back to it later but for the moment I content myself with saying that my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, has extremely skilfully exploited this confusion. He says first, why do the Tariff Board mix themselves up with revenue ? Incidentally, he seems to have forgotten one thing, namely, that paragraph (c) of the terms of reference to the Tariff Board specifically required them to pay attention to revenue considerations. However, that is by the way. Later on, he claimed that the revenue duty is really a protective duty and he protests against absorbing the countervailing duty in the revenue duty ! Mr. Mody wants it both ways ! But, perhaps, after all, he is entitled to have it both ways, seeing that he has had abuse both ways in regard to the Mody-Lees Pact. (Laughter.) He has been abused in England for having sold Lancashire for what is vulgarly called a pup ; he has been abused in India for having sold the pass. (Laughter.) So that he is no stranger to having it both ways.

The Tariff Board estimated that the alterations recommended by them will involve a loss of revenue of about Rs. 67 lakhs a year. Again, I may emphasise the point that,—in accordance with paragraph (c) of the terms of reference, they were required to take into account that very definite fact of the loss of revenue. On the later figures now available, we estimate the actual loss to be expected is from Rs. 25 to 30 lakhs, a figure which is less serious than Rs. 67 lakhs, but one which, in present circumstances, it is quite impossible to view with equanimity. The balance of the Budget is at best precarious, and no one knows at present what the final results of the Match Excise and the Sugar Excise are going to be in the way of revenue. Therefore, it was absolutely necessary for the Government to replace this Rs. 30 lakhs and to replace it at once. The problem was how to replace it. Naturally, we did not fail to consider whether it could be replaced purely by revenue duties on the importation of iron and steel. The ordinary rates of revenue duty on manufactures of iron and steel are, at the present moment, 10 per cent. on British and 20 per cent. on Continental. The report of the Tariff Board recommended that an overriding revenue duty [Sir James Grigg.] should be maintained on everything except tested structurals and plates, and our calculations of loss of revenue assumed that this overriding duty should be fixed at the present rates. The two possibilities of increasing revenue by way of import duties were, first, to impose revenue duties higher than the present revenue rates, and, secondly, to impose revenue duties on plates and structurals in disregard of the Tariff Board's recommendations. On the first point, that is, on the possibility of higher revenue duties than the normal ones on manufactures of iron and steel, I should like to say that personally I see considerable objection in going beyond what has become the standard revenue duty in the case of iron and steel. But, quite apart from that, our calculations show that, except in the case of sheets, an increase in the duty would result certainly in no increase, and quite probably, in an actual decrease of revenue. Perhaps, at this point I may quote paragraph 119 of the Tariff Board's report, as this question of sheets is a very important one.

"Whatever forecast may be finally arrived at, it is clear that the greater part of the probable loss in revenue will be due to the proposed reduction in the duty on galvanised sheets."

Thus, in order to obtain any substantial contribution towards our Rs. 25 or 30 lakhs, it would be necessary to increase enormously the duties proposed on sheets. My calculations, in fact, show that it will be necessary to put back practically the whole of the all round reduction of Rs. 43 per ton which the Board recommended, and to this Government could not consent. The considerable cheapening of sheets which will result from the Tariff Board's recommendations is, in the Government's view, one of the most valuable features of their report. It was specially recommended by the Board as likely to be of service to the agricultural community, who, as the House knows only too well, have suffered many misfortunes in recent years. (Hear, hear.) And the Government could, under no circumstances, agree to take away from them the benefit of the lower prices of sheets. Perhaps, I might here digress and point out that this reduction should amount, on certain rough calculations which I have made, to about Rs. 2 on each sheet of the size ordinarily used by the agriculturist. That disposes of the possibility of making up for the loss of revenue by what would be in fact, reversing the recommendations of the Tariff Board, at any rate, in the matter of sheets. There remains the possibility of a revenue duty on tested structurals and plates. According to our calculations the yield of ten per cent. duty on the basis of the imports of 1932-33 would be about Rs. 1½ lakhs, and on the figures of the next year would have amounted to a sum very slightly in excess of that figure, certainly well under two lakhs. Here too, therefore, there is no solution of our revenue problem.

Mr. H. P. Mody: May I ask a question? What would happen in the case of a switch-over from continental to British? Would not the revenue loss be greater?

of that was suggested by the Tariff Board itself in paragraph 120 of their Report. And may I here again turn aside to emphasize the fact that the Tariff Board were required, by paragraph (c) of their terms of reference to pay attention to the revenue aspects of their recommendations.

Paragraph 120 of the Report reads:

"The general question of replacing by some other source of taxation the Customs revenue lost to Government by reason of the policy of protection is one which the country must be prepared to face sooner or later. An obvious way of meeting the situation is to levy an excise duty, provided the protective duty is increased at the same time by a corresponding amount so as not to impair the measure of protection granted to the industry. The same principle may be applied to individual articles manufactured by a protected industry on which no protective duty is required by levying the duty on both imports and local production at a uniform rate so calculated that on the total consumption the aggregate amount of revenue desired by Government may be realised. Such a course has the advantage, besides safeguarding the Indian industry and supplying the deficiency in revenue of preventing so high a rise in prices as will follow if the whole duty is levied in the form of an import duty."

Perhaps here, if I have not already disposed of it, I might digress to deal with a point raised by Mr. Sitaramaraju. He said that this business of an excise was a new departure in Indian fiscal procedure. I am inclined to believe that it is not quite so new as he thinks. In paragraph 95 of the report of the Indian Fiscal Commission, I read these words:

"It is possible indeed that the necessities of revenue may force the Government to put a higher import duty on certain protected goods than is required for purposes of protection. We deal with such a contingency in a later chapter, when we recommend that any such excess revenue should be raised by means of an excise duty plus an additional import duty. The additional duties would be purely for revenue purposes and would be dealt with on strictly revenue principles."

Now, Sir, on this question of excise, I do not pretend that in the case of steel it is a very satisfactory device. I personally should have been very glad to be able to dispense with it—I hope the House will agree that I have proved we could not dispense with it, that is, if the balance of the Budget was not to be prejudiced,—and like my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, I cannot see this excise duty on steel ingots becoming a permanent feature of the Indian fiscal system. I think that answers my friend, the Leader of the European Group. In his further excursus, I should like to be excused from following him. The diminution of customs revenue as a result of protection is a well-known and, to me, terrifying feature of Indian finance and I do not pretend that I can present either to him or to the House a solution of that in the short space of three months. But what I do say, on this excise duty on ingots, is that we have imposed it at the lowest possible rate and in the least burdensome manner and only in response to a necessity which could not be denied. The burden on the consumer is as low as possible. It is certainly very small indeed in comparison with some of the reductions in price which will result from the recommendations of the Tariff Board. Perhaps, I might add here in passing, that the method of calculating or of assessing this steel duty is the same as that adopted in connection with the bounty of Rs. 20 a ton which was previously paid to Tatas.

So far, Sir, I have been dealing with the criticism which has concentrated itself on the excise duty. I now turn to the kind of criticism which has said that the Tariff Board's report and the Bill are unduly favourable to the British exporting interests. Two reasons have been urged for this argument. The differentials between British and Continental steel and the absence of a revenue duty on tested structurals and plates. As regards the first point, the position seems to me to be as follows. I may have erred in my inexperience but it seems to present itself to me quite clearly. Continental prices are dumped prices and so long as Indian steel is assured of its proper protection both against British steel and against Continental steel, it is a matter of no moment to the Indian industry what the differential is, for it merely places the Continental and the British manufacturer on an equality. In other words, we first impose the amount of protection, if any, required against the United Kingdom and then we super-impose on that an anti-dumping duty against the continent. On the other hand, if the margin between the two, that is British and Continental, is reduced, as it must be reduced, by the imposition of an over-riding revenue duty, the result may very easily be that the British exporter is cut out of the Indian market altogether, and that the whole surplus over the domestic production goes to the continent and none of it to the British exporter. If a certain margin is required to place the two on a competitive basis, obviously any substantial reduction of that margin will knock the British exporter out completely. So far then from the device of a revenue duty being required merely to preserve the position of India against the British exporter, it may be argued that it is an admirable device for cutting the British exporter out in competition with the continental exporter. I personally cannot see any flaw in that argument, and it seems to me to be quite valid, except on one assumption—and that is that either the differentials or the amount of protection allocated to the Indian indigenous industry or both are based on miscalculations. The question of miscalculations of the Tariff Board is, of course, a matter for the Commerce Member and not for me. So I leave it at that. Incidentally, I might perhaps, in passing, express a personal view that, if at any time the margin between British and continental prices diminish, owing to the Continent beginning to quote economic prices and not dumped prices, there would be a very strong case for a reduction of the differentials. As regards structurals and plates, I hope that the arguments that I have just used have disposed of the contention that there has been undue favouritism to Great Britain. If further argument is needed, I would point out that paragraph 114 of the Tariff Board's report makes it clear that their recommendation of no duty on tested structurals and plates proceed on the basis that no protection was required by Tatas against tested structurals and that a revenue duty would be contrary to the interests of the Indian public and of subsidiary industries—I was going to say, to whom Tatas have been accused of being step-motherly, but it would be ungracious to do so after Mr. Mody's assurances this morning. Perhaps I might read the relevant passage of paragraph 114:

[Sir James Grigg.]

"If revenue duties are imposed on such materials, the duties required on the products of engineering and other subsidiary industries will be substantially higher than we have estimated. Since most of these products are used in public utility works, it will be realized that, any increase in the duties on these products which is not required on protective grounds will create an undesirable burden on the public. The fall in demand for fabricated steel in recent years has been so great that it is essential, in order to encourage the growth of demand, to keep prices at as low a level as is consistent with the interests of the Indian industry."

While I am on this point, I might read a passage from the original Report of the Indian Fiscal Commission which illustrates rather aptly my point of the danger of mixing up revenue and protective duties:

"119. We have already explained that we contemplate a tariff consisting partly of revenue and partly of protective duties; and we have now to consider whether any principles can be laid down for regulating the rates of taxation on articles to which protectionist considerations do not apply. The mere fact of an article not requiring protection will not justify its being taxed without consideration of the effect of such taxation on other industries. We have recommended for instance that there should be as a rule no duties on raw materials. Similar considerations apply to the case of semi-manufactured articles, which do not go straight into consumption but are used in the process of manufacture of any industry in India. Any taxation imposed on such articles reacts on the industries which use them, and consequently will either injure these industries or will necessitate the imposition of some compensatory duty."

That, then, is the position. You have got a recommendation from the Tariff Board that no protection is required by Tatas on these articles; it is very desirable that these articles should be supplied as cheaply as possible to the subsidiary interests. If, then, the revenue obtained from the revenue duty on these articles would be negligible, why, in Heaven's name, why should you not carry out the recommendations of the Tariff Board's Report?

Perhaps I can, at this stage, dispose,—not very satisfactorily, I admit, because it is a weak point in my armour,—the point made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Sitaramaraju, about machinery. Certainly there is a ten per cent. duty on imported machinery—certainly, in my view, as soon as the financial position of the country admits of it and the existing commitments, which are many, have been carried out, that duty ought to be removed (Applause), but do not make any mistake about it: we do not get 1½ lakhs from machinery but 1-1½ crores and it is not so easy to remove the revenue duty! Then there was a somewhat technical point made,—I think by Tatas in their representations to the Government, and it has also appeared in a good many articles in newspapers,—about the essential price difference between tested and untested steel. That, as I say, is a technical point and as to its validity I am not in a position to judge. It obviously is the primary concern of my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member. In my view, it is a matter of protection and not of revenue and, in my view, the two matters should not be mixed up. If protection is to be given, let it be given in accordance with the conditions laid down by the Fiscal Commission: if it is not required, we ought not to give it all the same under the guise of a revenue duty, particularly if the revenue duty is a contradiction in terms and yields no revenue.

There were a few specific points raised in the course of the debate to which I might now turn. The point was twice made, by the Deputy President and by Mr. B. Das, that we have no right to reduce taxation while the pay cut and the surcharges remain. Of course, this argument carries us a bit too far, for it would mean that we are debarred from reducing a revenue duty even when it has passed the point of diminishing returns,—and I assume that neither of the Honourable Members would wish to be quite as logical as that. But anyhow,—if the two Honourable Members will forgive my saying so,—I think, the contention is irrelevant, for the scheme of taxation of iron and steel, at any rate, those items of iron and steel which are covered by the Tariff Board Report and by the present Bill must be treated as taxation of a single composite item, and this single composite item, by the scheme of protection and excise duties covered by this Bill, we have treated perfectly properly. We have sought to maintain the yield of the revenue from it as a whole, neither to diminish it nor to reduce it, and, therefore, in my view, we have kept ourselves within the spirit and the letter of the pledges. I must say, that I was a little surprised, and agreeably surprised, to get support for the excise duty, unintentional support, perhaps, from such unexpected quarters. Our scheme is simply that of preserving the revenue yield of a single item—a composite item it is true, but a single item of taxation.

[Sir James Grigg.]

Mr. Sitaramaraju invited the House to throw out this Bill. I wonder what Mr. Mody will think of that! (Laughter.) Perhaps I might very briefly explain to the House what the consequences would be. In October the whole of the present scheme of protection would lapse. There would be left no scheme of protective duties at all. As far as I can make out, the result will be that the whole of the articles previously covered by the iron and steel protective scheme would fall under the uniform, non-differentiated rate of 25 per cent. Now the latter rate would certainly knock out completely the British manufacturer. I do not know what view would be taken in Great Britain of that, but it would certainly have that effect. It would also do Tatas no good, because some of the duties recommended on continental dumped products are very nearly 70 per cent. ad valorem, and if you leave Tatas with a margin of 25 per cent. only, they would be 45 per cent. short of their requirements. Do not make any mistake; they would not like that; and Government would not like it either. It is no good making suggestions about throwing out this Bill until you know what the consequences would be,—and, Sir, the consequences in economic disturbance and political complications and every other thing would be quite disastrous.

Then Dr. Dalal made a point about the poor widows who had invested in Tatas' shares. I do not think he need be very troubled about the poor widows. The Tariff Board were very much at pains to provide what, in my view, was a fair scheme of profit-making for Tatas, but perhaps I might read out two quotations from some financial newspapers which will give him some additional re-assurance. The first is:

"The Tariff Board Report has by now been digested"—I am not quite sure of that—"and the bulls and the bears are still undecided as to the ultimate advantages or disadvantages of the recommendations. However, it would appear that the industry will get adequate protection, which can only be viewed in the light of a bull point for steel shares."

The other one I shall now go on to. In order to get the context in its proper form, I shall have to read a few slightly prejudicial comments with which I hope the House will not imagine that I necessarily associate myself. I merely read them in order to get the proper context:

"The present attitude of too large a section of the Indian Press on the suggested preference for the United Kingdom steel manufacture provides a case in point. I do not suppose for a moment that the views there expressed will deceive Government as to the extent of public opinion behind them. I hope the Members of the Legislative Assembly will suffer from small delusion from the hysterical expressions of some newspapers that ought to know better. One would imagine that the Tariff Board's recommendations in respect of preferences, if accepted by Government, would seriously injure the Tata Company or India. This is evidently not the opinion of the holders of Tata's ordinary shares, which at to-day's price of Rs. 72, are actually 12 annas higher than they were before the report was published and Rs. 16 higher than their price at the end of March, 1934."

So, I do not think Dr. Dalal need worry about his poor widows. (Laughter.)

Now, there was another point raised by my friend, Mr. Mody, in which he complained that the countervailing duty to the excise was merged in the revenue duty and was not additional to it. On that I would refer him to my previous argument. If higher protection is required, let it be given as such and subject to the conditions which are customary in connection with the grant of protection. It ought not to be given in the form of an increase of a non-revenue-yielding revenue duty. As I said before, Mr. Mody does really want it both ways. When it suits him to plead revenue considerations, he ignores the protective aspect of a revenue duty and when it suits him to complain about the hard fate of Tata's, he protects against the loss of protection conferred by a revenue duty. I am sure that he would not wish to leave the House in any misunderstanding as to his real attitude in these matters and he will forgive me if I have endeavoured to make it clear to them on his behalf. That, I think, is about all that I need say, except to take up one remark made by the Leader of the European Group, in which he paid a tribute to the Tariff Board and their work. Mr. Mody said in the course of his remarks that the Tariff Board suffered from mental aberrations. Well, the Government incline rather more to the view of Sir Leslie Hudson than to that of Mr. Mody. At any rate, they have shown their appreciation of the Tariff Board's report by adopting practically in toto their recommendations. With one final word, Sir, I will close my argument. In the shifting sands which surround the consideration of this question you have only two guides—the recommendations of the Tariff Board and the requirements of the Government as expressed by themselves in the way of revenue. Both the recommendations of the Tariff Board and the needs of the Government point to the course which we have adopted and I hope very much that the House will follow the Government in that course. Sir, I have now finished. I thank the House for listening so kindly and so patiently to my first effort in debate. I hope that I have dealt with all the points of substance which primarily concern revenue. If not, I have no doubt that my Honourable colleague, the Commerce Member, will be prepared to trespass a little and give the answers. (Loud and Continued Applause.)

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : Sir, I feel very fortunate that I have to speak immediately after the Honourable the Finance Member. Whether I agree with him or not, there is one thing which he has put before the House for which, I must give him a compliment, namely, that he has put his case very sensibly and persuasively. When I come to the question of considering whether this Bill should have contained two matters, one with regard to the protection to the iron and steel industry and the other with regard to the imposition of the excise duty, I submit that I will not use my own reasoning to show that it is a blunder that both should have been joined together, but I will rather use the words of the Honourable the Finance Member himself when he said that it was a mistake to mix up both of them. Sir, this Bill is for the protection mainly of the iron and steel industry. So far as the protection is concerned, I will not agree with any of the Members who gets up to say that protection should not be given. But with regard to the second question, which has been mixed up and on which there is a difference of opinion in this House and on which the Honourable the Finance Member has given his conclusive judgment that he would not have liked that these two matters should have been joined, had it not been done from the point of view of the necessity for revenue, I demur to agree. Whether I agree with him or not on this point, I submit, the question should remain absolutely open for the Select Committee to consider. Now, Sir, this raises a constitutional issue. What is the main principle of the Bill before the House? If the principle of this Bill is, as it appears to be, namely, to give protection to the iron and steel industry, then I submit that the question of imposition of excise duty is beside that principle. I hope the Commerce Member will agree with me that we should leave the question of excise, as an open question, for the consideration of the Select Committee. In other words, what I mean to say is that when this Bill goes to the Select Committee, it should not be said there that the question of whether the excise duty should be imposed or not has been accepted by the House by sending this Bill to the Select Committee. I submit this is a very important question.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

An Honourable Member : Get a ruling on this point from the Chair.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I would like some other Members, after a reply has been given to this point from the Treasury Benches, to get up and ask for a ruling from the Chair, but if none ask for it, I would get up myself. The point is very clear. As two things are wrongly mixed up, you cannot possibly say that the principle of the Bill covers both the points. I do find that I might be confronted with the preamble of the Bill. I take it that the main principle in that preamble also is to give protection to the industry but they have only added the question of the imposition of an excise duty. I will read the preamble. It runs :

“Provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel.”

I submit the principle of the Bill is to provide for the continuation of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India. They have, however, added the imposition of excise duty for revenue purposes. I submit that the latter portion of the preamble is only an ancillary one and it cannot be the principle of the Bill. On this question there is great variance in the House and I therefore submit that the question whether excise duty should be imposed at all should be considered by the Select Committee. So far as protection to the steel industry is concerned, I am absolutely in favour of protection being given not only to this industry but also to all the Indian industries in India. We have been clamouring for help to Indian industries. All the old Indian industries have been annihilated or rooted out. In former days, it was not necessary to give protection to those industries because they were very well conducted in all the places, in villages and towns and the industries in those days were self-contained and self-sufficient. But now those days are gone. We cannot speak of those ancient days now. Now it is being said that we are in progressive days and it is the machinery that is making our industries. But I submit that even though there is the machinery, yet the industries in India are of such a nature that they can only thrive if there is money. So in order to maintain those industries, we want money. Even if we have money, we do require protection in order to compete with those countries which have advanced in industries. So, from that point of view also, I think, it is really necessary that protection should be given to the Tatas. An industry like that of the Tatas is not the business of every one to start. It was the business of a man who had hoarded money and who had also the mind to spend it. Several Honourable Members have paid compliments to Jamshedji Tata from this point of view and I would add that not only had he the money but also he used it wisely being a Parsi who we know are the best commercial community in India. They have the intelligence and the instinct for trade. Therefore, Jamshedji Tata very rightly and very wisely embarked on this undertaking. It is to the credit of the Tatas that they have progressed this industry to this extent. Even though I will not put it in those strong words, as Mr. Mody did in order to whitewash every defect of theirs, I would say something in favour of the Tatas. There is a difference in what Mr. Mody said and what I am saying. The difference lies in this that he is interested in the Tatas whereas I am not. Therefore I submit that what I say would be most disinterested. I have not even seen Jamshedpur and I have no personal knowledge of what is going on there, but some literature has been put into my hands yesterday and I shall make some reference to it. I do not hold any brief for the Tatas. I have every sympathy for the Tatas because they have improved their industry to a great extent. This industry has taken deep root in India and I am glad to learn, as Mr. Mody has said today, that they have made some profit this year. But I do not say that because they have made some profit they should not be given protection. To refuse protection in their case is a suicidal policy. I do not think that the Government also will deny protection to the Tatas. I am glad that Government have carefully considered all these things and have come to the conclusion that protection must be continued to the Tatas. It was in 1924, that the Tatas first asked for protection and for three years they were given that protection. After three years the circumstances were such that they could not take advantage of the protection and carry on their concern with profit. It was therefore considered necessary in this House to extend that protection for a period of seven years. They have now got protection till 1934. Now there is another application for protection for seven years more. Apart from what Mr. Mody might say, and apart from what anybody else might say, it is certain that this question has been considered from all points of view and scrutinised very properly by the Tariff Board. The Tariff Board having considered all points of view have come to the right conclusion that seven years protection should be given to that industry. Therefore, I submit, that the question of protection is a very simple one to be decided by the House and even now the consensus of opinion in this House seems to be that the Tatas must have protection.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]

Now I will proceed to examine whether the Tatas have done something to deserve this protection. Among those things the first and foremost point is whether the Tatas are carrying on their concern in a manner beneficial to India and whether this industry is doing good to India. Some years ago I used to complain that the Tatas were doing good only to the European community. I used to say in those days that the Tatas were no good for Indians because their object did not seem to be to give an impetus to other industries and to employ Indians. However, there is improvement, but I must say that their view should be to make India stand on her own legs so far as these industries are concerned. It should not be that when the Europeans withdraw their help from us, with regard to our industries or in machine making, we should become defunct. That is not the Indian point of view at all. We should advance in all industries in such a manner as to stand on our own legs without any foreign help. With that aim in view I have enquired whether Tatas were going on those lines. It is said that the Tatas employ European officers on high salaries and that the Indians were not given proper encouragement. They were given only subordinate posts in that factory. I am glad now to see two pamphlets with regard to the welfare of labour and with regard to the technical institutes that they have started.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair which was then occupied by Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah, one of the Panel of Chairmen.]

Sir, I am very much pleased with what they are now doing, and I must express the hope that they should not stop here but progress further. With regard to the welfare of labour, I find that many amenities are given, but, of course, I am not taken in by their advertisement. They may be blowing their own trumpet and exaggerating, but it cannot be said that they have not progressed in that direction. I must, however, warn them that their own welfare lies only in helping the workers and Indianising their concern.

Then, coming to the question of Indianisation, I will say that they must give technical education in their Institute so as to prepare Indians who will be able to replace these foreigners and carry on the industry themselves. In that direction I find they now have the apprentice system. They are taking Indian graduates as apprentices in the various sections. But I hope they will take Indians from all over India instead of confining their recruitment to certain parts which are near to their factory, and train them for the purpose of running this industry.

In regard to protection, Sir, I hope I have sufficiently put my case before the House. Now I will come to the second question as regards the excise duty. This, Sir, would mean giving with one hand and taking away with the other. I find from the speech of Mr. Mody that Tata's are against this excise duty but that is not my concern. Of course on behalf of Tata's, facts must have been represented to the Tariff Board, and it must have been made clear to the Commerce Member, that this excise duty will do a certain harm to them. But I am more concerned with the consumer. Sir, naturally when a certain duty is imposed on a certain material the person who deals in it will take that tax into account and also the cost of production, and then fix the price for that article. Therefore, if, as a result of this duty, Tata's go on to increase their prices, I will certainly most strongly object to this duty. But I am told that there are two or three safeguards with regard to it, and I will place these safeguards before the House and criticise them also. But I must say that this excise duty and the safeguards should be fully considered by the Select Committee. I had a discussion with some of my colleagues about these safeguards, and they told me that Tata's will not be able to increase their prices because in that case continental material will be imported to such an extent that there will be keen competition and people will go in for continental materials and Tata's will suffer. This is considered as one of the safeguards. This is a point which the Select Committee should carefully consider. The second safeguard is given by the Commerce Member and that is that there will be a keen watch kept on Tata's to see whether they increase the prices and thereby affect the consumer. With regard to one or two materials like tin plates the Commerce Member by way of illustration said that they are going to fix Rs. 64 plus the excise duty and that the price to be made will be consistently with that price. Then there was a suggestion from some quarters that there ought to be fixed prices for all their materials. But that will be very hard and there will be a demand from them to fix prices for other industries also. Therefore, I do not see eye to eye with those who say that the price of every article should be fixed. But I must tell the Government of India that when they are imposing an excise duty which the public does not want, there ought to be a great scrutiny by the Government of India over the Tata Company with regard to the price so that the consumer may not be affected. The third safeguard which was suggested to me is that, if Tata's are sensible enough, they will see for themselves that they will suffer because they may not get protection hereafter if they make the consumers suffer in any way. This is a note which I am striking for the benefit of Tata's themselves. I do not see, therefore, any necessity for this excise duty at present. It should have been considered separately; and I do not think the arguments of the Honourable the Law Member were such as to dislodge one from that position that at this moment the excise duty should not have been brought forward.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : My Honourable friend refers to the arguments of the Law Member : I do not think the Law Member opened his mouth today.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am sorry : I always remember the Law Member being myself a lawyer. (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I add that unfortunately I am not one of the men who feel competent to speak on all subjects ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : There may come a time when he may have to learn everything—otherwise he might not be considered competent : of course he is new to the House and novices are not competent to speak on all subjects. What I meant to say was the Finance Member ; but as we know our frogs are always jumping on both sides so the Law Member interrupted. It was a slip of the tongue on my part when I said Law Member : I meant no slight to him or anything wrong.

Mr. B. Das : The Law Member will be the Chairman of the Select Committee.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Then the subject also belongs to him and he should have got up and said : " You have mentioned the Law Member and quite rightly so." As I was saying, this question of the excise duty should not have been raised now : the proper time would have been at the time of the Budget ; then we could see what revenue is required and how much can be drawn from this excise duty. That time is not yet come. I submit that, except the assertion of the other side that money is required, no substantial reason has been given in support of the imposition of the excise duty.

As regards the other questions, namely the question of reducing the price as customs duty and also the question of preference, I will content myself with giving the opinions of my constituents. I will not take the time of the House beyond reading one or two telegrams I have received from Karachi. The question of preference and the customs duty on each article is one to be considered in detail in the Select Committee ; here is what I have received—a telegram from the committee of the Buyers and Shippers Chamber, Karachi :

" Committee Buyers Shippers Chamber strongly protest principle lowering protection duty than revenue duty and undue preference by much lowering duties to several iron articles imported from Britain as recommended by Tariff Board for Iron and Steel Industry. They seriously apprehend that recommendations if carried would result in dumping by British manufacturers. Proposed reciprocity through free entry of pig-iron into Britain for low duties on British sheets places British interests at a preponderating advantage. Urge no protective duties be imposed on steel hoops 1½, 1½ inches and Angles of thickness upto ½ inches not manufactured by Tatas and neither in consumers nor Tatas interests. Removal of duties on structurals of United Kingdom and increase on Continental objectionable. Urge remedial measures."

Another telegram which I have received from the same Committee says :

" Committee Buyers Shippers Chamber strongly protest against monopolistic attitude of Tin Plates Company of India in not supplying needs of subsidiary industries such as local two Tin Factories and Oil Concerns and urge remedial measures in Protection Bill."

Finally, Sir, I will also read out the instructions I have received from my constituency on the question whether this Bill, if passed into law, should be applied at once or from next November. They say :

" It was resolved that Government of India be requested that revised duties on Steel materials should not be put into operation before 1st November, 1934, in view of the notification by the Government of India issued on 17th March, 1934."

The present tariff will go on up to October and therefore it is only reasonable that if this Bill is passed into law, it should come into force from November. With these words, I resume my seat.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Mr. Chairman, I think nobody up till now in this House has opposed this motion of referring this Bill to Select Committee, and I am confident, during the next two days, nobody from this side will rise to oppose this motion, because there is this unanimity of opinion that a basic industry like the iron and steel industry in India should be encouraged by all possible means that lies in the hands of the people ; and from the report of the Tariff Board we know that all the conditions that the Fiscal Commission expected to be satisfied, before the Legislature should extend its helping hand in giving protection, have all been fulfilled completely in this particular case. It is now a fact that India produces pig iron at the lowest cost and one point that I would like to hear from those who are well acquainted with the facts, is why Tatas are not in a position to produce steel also at the cheapest rate. Referring to the Tariff Board's Report, I find that they have given reasons how India can produce pig iron very cheaply. They say, at the top of page 59, this :

" The Indian industry possesses the great advantage of a low cost of pig iron due to the high iron content and low cost of the ore and the low cost of coal. Even in the case of districts such as Alsace and Lorraine and Luxemburg where iron ore is obtained chiefly in open workings and is smelted in furnaces located close to the mines, the low iron content of the ore renders production more expensive on account of the larger quantities of ore handled and the larger consumption of coke necessary to smelt it. We believe that as regards France, Belgium and Luxemburg, which are the continental countries principally competing with India, the advantage possessed by the Indian steel industry in this respect may be taken at not less than Rs. 8 per ton. On the other hand, the employment of the Basic Bessemer process renders the cost of manufacturing steel from pig iron lower on the Continent. By reason of the low phosphorous content of Indian pig iron, the process is inapplicable in India. The principal economy obtained by the Basic Bessemer process on the Continent where high phosphorous iron is available is on account of the credit realised by the sale of ' basic slag ' with a high phosphorus content for agricultural purposes. This, however, according to our information does not in many cases exceed Rs. 5 per ton. The advantage possessed by the Indian industry in the low cost of its pig iron is therefore in our opinion sufficient to offset the economy obtained on the Continent by the use of the Basic Bessemer process."

From the point of view of natural advantages, we see no reason to assume that India is under any handicap as compared with Continental countries in the manufacture of steel."

Sir, I find that the Tariff Board also agree that there is no reason why India should not only produce cheapest pig iron in the whole world but also steel at the cheapest rate. There have been suggestions made by the Tariff Board itself that steps should be taken to adopt the open hearth system, to replace the present combined method, by which it would be possible to manufacture steel at the cheapest rate. But, Sir, so far as I could see, the Tatas have not yet taken it up as a practical proposition. I think if they pay more attention to this aspect of the question, then many of our difficulties and the necessity of their having to ask for protection every time will be obviated. Even the Tariff Board itself says that this measure is more in the nature of an Anti-Dumping Act than as a protective measure. I shall quote a line from paragraph 111 at page 58. This is what they say :

" The protection which we now propose for the Indian steel industry may be regarded as in the nature of an anti-dumping provision rather than as a measure of substantive protection."

Sir, this shows that the fight that this great national industry is now waging, against external competition, is more against the continental importers because they are now selling iron and steel not at an economic price, but at a price which is meant merely to destroy the Indian industry. Therefore, Sir, the Indian industry certainly deserves all the help that we in India can render to it.

Then, Sir, as regards the point raised by the Finance Member, about the revenue duty, I should like to point out that in the case of structural plates manufactured in the United Kingdom, the Tariff Board have proposed their admission into India free of even the revenue duty. The steel companies cannot but regard this as an extraordinary proposal which runs contrary to the principle on which the Indian Tariff, which is principally a revenue tariff, is based. Every industry in every other country is entitled to such assistance as the revenue tariff might give it, and the only ground on which exemption from revenue duty can be justified would be that of urgent national interest. It is difficult to see how national interest would be prejudiced by the imposition of a revenue duty on these materials when in the interest of revenue even machinery is now subjected to a revenue duty. In paragraph 114, the Tariff Board argue that most of these products are used in public utility works. Even if that be the case, Government would not be worse off by the imposition of the revenue duty as they would get back in duty what they would pay extra in prices. But as a matter of fact products which are used more exclusively for public works such as rails, sleepers, and fish plates are not proposed to be exempted from revenue duty, while structurals and plates are. One of the possible consequences of exemption of structurals and plates from revenue duty will be that the order for the proposed Howrah Bridge will pass out of the hands of this company, and the old established engineering concerns like Messrs. Dorman, which are manufacturing rolled steel as well as fabricating it under this arrangement, will be entitled to import their own steel duty free and fabricate it at their shops in Calcutta.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

Sir, it has been argued by my friend, Mr. Raju, so ably, that I do not want to say much on it. A further point about the excise duty is that in no country in the world is the excise duty put on any basic industry. That was the main point. Even in the Fiscal Commission's Report they have put down certain conditions for the levy of an excise duty. We do not mean to suggest that under no conceivable circumstances an excise should be put on, but our contention is that in a basic industry, like the iron and steel industry, it is most inadvisable to put on an excise duty.

As regards Indianization, I should like to make one point. We all agree that great advance has been made by Tatas in the direction of Indianization, but what I should like to specially emphasise is that Indianization will not be accomplished by merely replacing non-Indians by Indians. What we want is that the high salaries paid to those non-Indians and other emoluments given to them should be curtailed so that they may reflect ultimately on the large overhead charges, which is a great burden on this industry. Sir, we should like to point out to this great institution of Tatas that in considering the question of Indianisation, they should also see that the overhead charges should be reduced by revising the scale of pay, because Indians can certainly be paid on an Indian scale looking to the present conditions in the country. Some of the manufacturing firms in Bengal have put before us some points which they desire to be placed before this House for consideration. They are compelled to purchase foreign billets, they will get a rebate up to the amount of the duty paid. There should be no countervailing excise duty. There should be at the same time a reasonable price fixed for the Indian billets. This price has been calculated at Rs. 53 per ton f. o. r. Tatanagar by the Tariff Board (page 51 of the Tariff Board's report)."

say :

Sir, I do not understand how some of the industries may be called subsidiary industries at all if they are to depend for their existence on foreign imported things. Even according to the dictionary meaning the expression means that these industries will be required to have all their raw materials from the principal or mother industry, that is, the Tatas. Now, if Government are making a provision that they may go to foreign countries for their raw materials, then what is the meaning of the expression subsidiary industries. We agree that as regards the price the Tatas, which are more or less in a monopolistic position, should not be permitted to charge any excessive price. There were certain allegations,—how far they are correct my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, is in a better position to say,—that the company sometimes charges, for raw materials or semi-finished articles, rates which are considerably higher than their export rates. If there is any truth in those allegations, I hope the company will in future see, or even the Select Committee may provide by a statutory provision against any such discrimination. As regards pig iron it has been urged that all firms in India consuming pig iron should be encouraged to buy Tata pig iron by all means. For castings, the rate of pig iron has approximately been fixed to be Rs. ten more than the export price. So long as no keen foreign competition in castings is on the horizon, and no better arrangement for internal consumption of Tatas' pig iron is made, this pig iron price for castings may remain. There should, however, be a statutory provision for this. Statutory provision should also be made for selling pig iron at the export price (or at a similar price when the export is absolutely stopped) for the conversion of pig iron into steel ingots and billets in this country.

On scrap they say that there is possibility and room for making steel ingots from scrap and pig iron. The Tariff Board did not visualise this when they found nothing wrong in Tatas exclusively exporting scrap out of India for remelting purposes. Export of scrap in its effects is injurious to this country both ways. It stimulates foreign competition in Indian market, and discourages prospective Indian ingot makers to a detriment of our national interest. Hence there should be provision for making all scrap available when required in this country at export price.

It is a fact that there is a considerable business in scrap with Japan and we do not see why there should not be arrangements by which this scrap, which is not sent out of India, may be re-melted or otherwise used, because what is done in Japan can be done in India. As regards differential and inequitable treatment, it is contended that statutory provision should be made against possible differential or inequitable treatment arising out of monopolistic or such other tendencies in big firms like the Tatas. The Tariff Board seems to have been satisfied with assurance that such things will not happen in the future. That is not enough. It is a fact that smaller firms will always be in an advantageous position to compete with big firms generally. And these smaller firms should be encouraged by the State to do so. Provision therefore should be made for reference to a third person in case of disputes between big firms like Tatas and small firms. In the matter of inequitable or differential treatment the referee who should be empowered with all powers of enforcing his decision may be a person or an officer commanding general confidence in the matter. Such a referee may, for instance, be the Chief Controller of Stores, Indian Stores Department.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

As regards the main question about semis which are now proposed to be imported free of duty for helping the subsidiary industries, the Bengal manufacturers put the case in this way :

"The Tariff Board recommend some protection against import of structurals, bars, plates and sheets, mostly continental (untested) ; for in many cases of United Kingdom's (tested) materials protection has not been desired or considered necessary. But queer it is that a country where steel making is the main national outlook, finished products are protected and raw materials like semis are to be imported free. If foreign billets are freely introduced....."

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Excuse me, Sir. It is not proposed to allow semis to come in free.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I think the Commerce Member is referring to the countervailing duty only.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : Revenue duty.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : My impression was that, in order to help these subsidiary industries, it has been decided that they may have the chance to get their raw materials, the semis, at a comparatively cheaper rate.

It has been suggested that semis will be free.....

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : No. I tried to explain that we proposed to impose a revenue duty on all semis, subject, however, to a proviso ; and the proviso is this, that if Tatas refused to sell without reasonable cause or refused to sell below a certain price, then we shall have to see what steps we should take to reduce the revenue duty so as to enable the small re-rolling firms to get billets at a price which we considered reasonable.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I am very much obliged to the Commerce Member.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I may explain that to that extent we have departed from the recommendation of the Tariff Board.

the House, are the preferential treatment which is sought to be given to certain goods of British manufacture ; and the imposition of an excise duty on Indian steel goods. With regard to the question of protection, as I said, opinion in this House is almost unanimous. I have heard a dissentient voice raised in some quarters. I would specially refer to my friend, Mr. Anklesaria, who proclaimed himself an out and out free trader, and has denounced the scheme of protection. He must remember that so far back as 1921 and 1922, the Indian Fiscal Commission accepted a scheme of discriminating protection to foster the indigenous industries of this country. All public men have given their support to the scheme. Every country has flourished, firstly under the shadow of protective duties, and at later stages, when the industry was able to stand on its own legs, it discarded this scheme. The superiority of one country over another in the matter of manufacture does not necessarily mean the superiority of skill of one nation over another. It often means that one nation has taken up the manufacture of particular goods at an earlier stage than the other country. I will only refer to the opinion expressed by John Stuart Mill who says :

"The superiority of one country over another in a branch of production often arises only from having begun it sooner. There may be no inherent advantage on one part or disadvantage on the other, but only a present superiority of acquired skill and experience. A country which has this skill and experience yet to acquire may in other respects be better adapted to the production than those which were earlier in the field."

Sir, England also, by passing numerous measures, gave protection to her nascent industries. I would only refer to the Safeguarding of Industries Act, of 1921, and the English Overseas Trade (Credit and Insurance) Act, of 1920, of later times. Professor Bastable says :

"To understand the position taken up by the modern opponents of free trade, it is, above all, essential to recognise that the keynote of their system is nationality. The claims of the nation as a whole are accentuated and regarded as far more important than those of the individual or the world at large. How perfectly this attitude harmonises with the actual policy of the European, and indeed of all protectionist states, is apparent. A particular industry is suffering under the pressure of foreign competition, i.e., a national interest is affected. The State then steps in by imposing additional duties on the foreign product, the loss to individual consumers and to the world as a whole being disregarded as unimportant."

Sir, I will not adduce any further argument on the question of protection beyond recalling the words of Mahatma Gandhi, who said so far back as 1924, as follows when the first Steel Industry Bill was under discussion (vide Searchlight, dated the 21st May, 1924) :

"Apropos of the contemplated protection for Tata Steel Works, I have been asked to state my own views on protection. Of what use they can possibly be at the present moment I do not know, nor do I know the merits of the proposal regarding the Steel Works. But I take the opportunity of dispelling the illusion that I am inimical to capital, and that I would destroy machinery and their products if I had the power. The fact is that I am a confirmed protectionist. Free trade may be good for England who dump down her manufactures among helpless people, and wishes her wants to be supplied from outside at the cheapest rate. But free trade has ruined India's peasantry in that it has all but destroyed her cottage industry. Moreover no new trade can compete with foreign trade without protection. Natal nursed her sugar industry by both bounty and import duty. Germany developed beet sugar by a system of bounties."

I would, therefore, maintain that the question of protection does not stand in need of any further support in this House. There are only the two subsidiary points to which I referred a few minutes ago. One is the preferential treatment which is sought to be given to certain goods of British manufacture. If I remember aright, my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, in the excellent speech which he has made and to which we listened with very great interest, stated that the continental prices are dumped prices. I do not know whether I correctly listened to him, but if so, I should like to know the evidence on which this statement has been made. I should like to know exactly on what evidence my Honourable friend said that continental prices, generally speaking, are dumped prices in comparison with the prices of British manufacture.

[Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.]

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I should have thought that it was implicit in the references in the Tariff Board Report to uneconomic prices. In fact, both implicit and explicit.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : So far as the explicit thing goes, of course we shall all await to find out the exact reference ; but so far as the implicit part of it goes, we should be at liberty to draw our own conclusions. Sir, this proposed preferential treatment which is sought to be given to certain goods of British manufacture is not in the interest of the indigenous industry of this country but it is merely in the interest of the English manufacturers.

My Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, in the Mody-Lees Pact, which has become famous, was a party to this preferential treatment so far as textile goods were concerned. Now here is the same thing with a vengeance—the further extension of the principle of Imperial Preference. We, on this side of the House, are opposed to this principle, not merely on sentimental or political grounds as it has been alleged, but also on more substantial grounds, that is, on economic grounds. Sir, in order to make up for the loss on revenue, it is proposed to impose an excise duty on certain articles of Indian manufacture irrespective of the consumers' interests. I did not know that the Government of India had come to the verge of bankruptcy. They are wasting the money of this country in various directions. Some of their proposals are grotesque. Take, for instance, the proposal to transfer the Pusa Institute to Delhi which means a loss of 40 lakhs at a stretch,—I am not going to introduce that point in discussing this question, but I just gave it as an offhand illustration to show how very reckless they are of the rate-payers' money in many matters. (Hear, hear.) Sir, I am glad, my Honourable friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, on behalf of the European Group, has voiced the sentiments which prevail on this side of the House with regard to these questions,—I mean the imposition of an excise duty on certain articles of Indian manufacture, and the preferential treatment which is sought to be given to certain British steel goods. But these points, I take it, will be considered more suitably in the Select Committee, and I do not propose to occupy the time of the House any more, but if I give my consent to the reference of this Bill to a Select Committee, it is on the distinct understanding that these two points do not form the main principle of the Bill. I do not think that the Chairman of the Select Committee will rule out any opposition to these points which might be forthcoming from Members of the Opposition on the Select Committee. I think the main principle of the Bill to which we are committed at this stage is to grant protection to a national industry of this country.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : What a discovery you have made !

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The fact is, it has been referred to by one Member speaking on this side of the House, my friend, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, and that is why I thought it right to clear the point. This little interposition of my Honourable friend, the Law Member, has also absolutely dispelled whatever little illusions might be lingering in the minds of some of us. Sir, with these words, I support the motion for reference of this Bill to a Select Committee.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions) : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, this Bill is, of course, of a very technical nature.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

....and it is only those people who are either dealing in these materials or who are experts such as engineers, or who have any interest in any of these industries, who can very well examine the contents of this Bill and they can be said to be authorities on the subject. I do not claim today, nor did I ever claim that I have been an economist or that I am an industrialist or that I can very well expatiate on the points concerning an industry. Nevertheless, Sir, I look upon this Bill as one more string to all the repressive and taxation measures that have been introduced into this House during the last Session and the present Session. My point is that this Bill is not only to protect the Tata industries or some other Indian industries, but having a provision for a revenue duty to be imposed on the consumers, it is a sort of indirect taxation on the masses of India. (Hear, hear.) Sir, I do not rise to oppose the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee but what I say is that this Bill ought to have been brought in when the Budget proposals were before the country. To bring this Bill at this stage and to ask the country and this House to pass this into an enactment is rather too hard for this Assembly. Sir, it is said that this Bill will exonerate the British manufacturers from duty and it will impose an excise duty on the masses of India, and to say that it is oppression, is, I submit, a fact. It is a great pity that the representatives of the people, who are here, do not look into this very great and important factor in this Bill, affecting as it does the poor dumb masses of India. Sir, thus I say that this is also one of the many repressive measures that have been passed in the past. I include this Bill also amongst repressive measures because I consider that at this time when the new constitution is about to come to India, it is the most inopportune and the most inadvisable measure to bring in to tax the already over-burdened people of this country. Sir, if such Bills or such actions of the Government of India can be tolerated by the country at this stage when the new constitution is to come, and if such Bills are a prelude to the new constitution, I do not know what will happen when the new constitution comes.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Is it coming at all ?

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : My friend asks if it is coming at all. I doubt that very much myself and that is the reason why I say that such Bills ought not to have been brought now.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Round Tablers ought to know.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : The Joint Select Committee people ought to know.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : These questions are beside the point. What I want to say is—I do not care whether the Joint Parliamentary Committee members or the Round Tablers are going to say something in favour or against this Bill but what I want to impress upon the House is—that such measures, if they are a sort of introduction to the constitutional reforms, then India would perhaps not like to have any constitutional reforms at all for this country. Sir, too many safeguards have already been provided in the new Constitution Act which is about to come. If a greater safeguard is now to be put into the Constitution Act, that all the pieces of legislation that have already been passed during these two or three years by the Government of India will not in any way be allowed to be abrogated by the new Assembly which assembles here, after the new constitution, then I think that will be the best and the wisest step and safeguard! Sir, I have read in one of the papers that the question involved is one of technical details. The position is this :

“Iron ore is converted into pig iron and then into steel ingots. An excise duty is to be imposed on all steel ingots. And steel ingots are then converted into semis (billets, slabs, sheets, bars). The first difficulty which the Indian product faces is that while indigenous steel ingots are taxed, semis from abroad come into India without paying even the revenue duty. Out of semis are produced rails, sleepers, structurals, bars, sheets and plates.”

An Honourable Member : That was corrected.

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : Yes, it has been corrected by the Honourable the Leader of the House but this was an objection. Out of the semis are produced bales, sleepers, structures, bars, sheets and plates. The countervailing duty which he has proposed to be imposed on the finished products will give no advantage to the local products and the excise duty will have to be paid out of the price available to local products. Sir, these are the doubts of those who know more of business and of this industry and I think the Government ought to satisfy this House that this duty will not affect very much the Indian industries as they fear at present. Sir, this Bill is going to a Select Committee and I do not oppose its being sent to it. But my experience of the Select Committee is rather very sad. Either our friends who are on the Select Committee shall have to subscribe to the Government views or the Government Members will have to subscribe to the views of those who oppose this Bill in the Select Committee. If the second contingency happens, then this Bill may come out in such form that it may give credit to the Select Committee. But if we find that the Government views remain what they are and if we find that the Government does not care to hear the views of the Opposition according to the wishes of the public, then I think that this Bill and this enactment will also, though passed by this House with the help of the majority of Government votes, remain as a sort of a Black Act on the Statute-book. Sir, I do not oppose the protection which the Government is going to give to the Tata's. I know that the Tata's have been of very great benefit from the very beginning to the Indian public and to the Indian industries. We find that several of our countrymen are finding employment in Tata's. They have not only done that, but they have, according to the report of the Royal Commission, provided housing establishments and different other amenities of life for the Indian employees there. But, Sir, the high emoluments that they are paying to foreigners is a matter which requires due consideration. In this connection, I come to a point to which my Honourable friend, Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya, who is not in the House now, took objection to a certain extent. There are times when communalism may be run down but there are occasions too when it should be listened to, irrespective of the fact whether the complaint emanates from a Muslim or a Hindu or a Sikh. If we find that there is absolutely no representation of a particular community in the case of a certain business, then it is the duty of every one of us to see that justice is done and the claim of that particular community should be considered. My friend, Mr. Pandya, relied to a great extent on a pamphlet which has been issued by some Mussalmans about the paucity of Muslim representation in the Tata's and I too hold in my hand a list which, if the Honourable the Commerce Member wants it, I can present it to him or I can lay it on the table of the House. In this pamphlet there is a list of the Muslim employees at the Tata Company at Jamshedpur.

Mr. H. P. Mody : Are you sure that it correctly represents the facts?

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali : I have not said that you have no right to deny it. Sir, I will read out only a few notes from it. It says that out of 212 Indians whose salary is from Rs. 250 to Rs. 5,000 per mensem, the number of Mussalmans is only 2. Then, Sir, we come to foremen. And here there is not a single Muslim supervising officer. There is a large number of private buildings on the main roads but none of them are for the Muslims because the Line Officer is a Bengali. There are 16 schools for boys and girls but there is none for the Mussalmans. Sir, these may or may not be true facts and I am not here to vouchsafe their accuracy. But this statement has been circulated to all the Members of the Assembly and I am sure it has also reached the Honourable the Commerce Member. Sir, it is not in a spirit of communalism that I have placed these figures before the House. What I say is that if there is truth in this allegation, then I hope Government will see that the Tata's or, for the matter of that, any other industry helped by the Government in India is not a monopoly for any one community whether it be the Muslims or the Hindus.

As I was saying, we do not object to the protection being given to Tata's but we wish that when they get this protection again, for any period that the Select Committee may recommend, they will try to supply the materials which they prepare to the Indian public rather cheap. Sir, these steel sheets and other materials prepared by Tata's are meant not only for the rich people but also for the poor people and if these materials are not sold at a cheap rate, then besides the duty which the Government is going to impose, it will be another blow to the economic condition of the poor people of India. They will have to pay higher prices because of the competition with the continental articles. I know that it is a key industry and as such ought to be helped by the Government of India just as the other Governments of other countries are helping the key industries of their own countries. Sir, we know it for a fact that the present Government is not a national Government and therefore we do not expect that sympathy from it which we would have expected from a national Government. Still we have great hopes in the Indian Commerce Member and we cherish this hope not only because he is an Indian but because he has always been sympathetic to his own countrymen. With these remarks I support the motion.

[Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali.]

Mr. K. P. Thampan (West Coast and Nilgiris : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I have heard all the speeches that were made on this motion and I was very pleased to find that not a single Member of the House denied the good conditions that are prevailing at Tata's. On the other hand, there has been a chorus of tribute paid to the manner in which the Tata Iron Works manage their affairs. I have gone to Jamshedpur twice as the guest of two of my friends employed there.

I can, therefore, bear testimony to all that has been said by the Tariff Board and several speakers in regard to the welfare conditions and other things of the industry. The Tata Iron and Steel Works have satisfied all the conditions laid down in the Fiscal Commission report. It is of Indian capital, the raw materials are all taken from the country, it has demonstrated that it can in course of time stand on its legs, and it has also Indianised gradually even the covenanted services. Over and above all these things the House will bear in mind the valuable contribution that the Tatas make to the revenues of this country. It has been said that they pay a large revenue to the Railway Department, the recent increase in the rates alone amounting to 40 lakhs as was said by my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody. Then, Sir, there is the income-tax. I will not be wrong if I say that the amount of income-tax paid by the company and their employees together must be an enormous amount. I should like to know if possible from the Honourable the Finance Member the exact amount of income-tax that the company and their employees together pay to the exchequer of the country. I am sure it will not be an insignificant amount. On the whole I am inclined to think that the annual contribution of the Tatas to the public revenues of the country will be in the neighbourhood of one crore. That is not a small amount. No sane man will therefore deny that the company deserve every help and encouragement at the hands of the State and of the Legislature. The main characteristics of this Bill are the discriminating preference shown to British iron, the excise duty proposed to be levied on iron ingots manufactured in this country and the reduction in the customs revenue. As regards discrimination I believe there is a history behind it. It was in 1926, if I am right, that the Tariff Board recommended a discriminating duty with regard to the British products. The chief reason for recommending a lower rate of duty was that the British steel was more costly and did not compete with the indigenous steel and that the c.i.f. price of British steel as compared with that of the Continental steel was very high. That was the reason why the Tariff Board in 1926 proposed a different scale of duty for the British goods. Since then many things have happened. Under the Ottawa Agreement a scheme of preference for British and imperial products has been adopted. Since then it has been the practice of the Government of India to introduce preferential rates whenever proposals for levying customs were brought before the House. I was surprised the other day to find a statement in the newspapers that in the House of Commons, Lieut.-Colonel Calwell, who I suppose is the Assistant Secretary for trade, in reply to a question said that negotiations were going on with the Government of India to bring the Indian Tariff duties also within the scope of the Ottawa Agreement. I did not know what it meant. Even this morning I read in the papers the Reuter's news, that Mr. Runciman in the House of Commons stated that negotiations were going on with the Government of India with a view to bring within the scope of the Ottawa Agreement all the Indian Protective duties. I happened to send notice of a short notice question on this subject, but unfortunately the Honourable the Commerce Member, not having all the particulars at his disposal, did not care to accept it. If that was answered, the position would have been made clearer. Anyway this policy of making British preference a fetish is a thing which I, for one, do not like. Sir, I want to invite the attention of the House to the proviso to clause 2 of the Bill. It says :

"Provided that the duty leviable on any such article shall in no case be less than the duty leviable on a like article of British manufacture."

What does that mean? It clearly means that the Government want

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhowe : That is only a repetition of the existing Act.

Mr. K. P. Thampan : Yes, obviously serving different purposes. It means that even in protective duties the Government want to implement the Ottawa Agreement. I remember, if my memory is right, that at the time the report of the Ottawa Committee was placed in our hands, it was categorically said that the proposals were distinctly subject to the revenue and other fiscal requirements of the country. The report of the Indian Delegation states in page 12 :

"The protective duties also stood in a class apart. The instructions we received from the Government of India precluded the acceptance of any proposal which would have the effect of impairing the protection afforded to an Indian industry by an Act of the Indian Legislature. Two of these Acts, it is true, provide for the imposition of lower rates of duty on cotton piece-goods and on certain classes of iron and steel made in the United Kingdom than on similar goods made elsewhere. But the duties on iron and steel were fixed after a full investigation by the Tariff Board and will come under review in the statutory enquiry of 1933 while the duties on cotton piece-goods had already been referred to the Board before our negotiations commenced. In both cases the lower rates of duty on British goods were adopted not in the interests of the United Kingdom but in the interests of India and in pursuance of the policy of discriminating protection. These rates of duty could not, we were satisfied, become the subject of bargaining between ourselves and the British delegation and any modification in them must, we felt, be postponed until the Government of India had before them the considered recommendations of the Tariff Board."

This is what the Delegation wrote. I request that before this motion is put to vote, the Honourable the Commerce Member will make a full statement in his reply about the position with regard to this matter.

Sir, I do not want to enter into the merits of the proposal in regard to the rates of duty proposed to be fixed upon the several articles mentioned in the report. But I may say that there are one or two things to which the attention of the Select Committee has to be invited. My friend, Sir Leslie Hudson, referred to the uniform rate fixed for tested and untested steel and my friend, Mr. Mody, also laid stress on that point. The untested British material did not hitherto come into competition. It was only the tested material of a high standard that was imported into this country and in fixing the duty on British steel the Tariff Board of 1926 did not take into consideration the importation of untested steel at all. So they levied a unitary rate of duty for

[Mr. K. P. Thampan.]

British steel. Sir, if the present proposals of the Tariff Board are accepted, the result would be that Tata's tested steel will have to be sold in competition with the imported untested cheap material from England. The National Federation of the Iron and Steel Manufacturers have distinctly stated that they are prepared to meet all the requirements of this country, even in respect of untested steel, and, if they begin to import untested steel, the Tata Iron Works will be put to considerable loss. Sir, in this connection, I would invite the attention of the House to page 69 of the Tariff Board's report. Speaking about the representation of the National Federation of Iron and Steel Manufacturers of the United Kingdom they say :

"While the Federation recognise that the Indian industry should have the first claim on the Indian market to the extent of the whole of its output, they propose that the balance of the Indian market for both tested and untested steel should be supplied by the steel industry in the United Kingdom at prices corresponding to the fair selling prices fixed for the Indian industry."

They want that no other country should compete with the British manufacturers ; in other words, reserving whatever can be made in this country to the indigenous industries, they want a monopoly of all imports. I thought that was a very large order and the Board ought not to have recommended proposals to that end. I am sure the Bill, if passed, will have the effect of complying with their request.

Sir, a good deal was said about billets, scraps, semis and other things. I have a copy of a representation made by the Lukshmi Iron and Steel Manufacturing Company at Ghaziabad, in which they protest against the imposition of any duty on the ground that these billets and scraps are raw materials for the manufacture of their articles. Sir, when I went to Jamshedpur I found that every article manufactured there was a raw material for the next process or stage. What is a raw material and what is a finished product with regard to the iron and steel industry is a thing which I am yet to know. These are very complicated questions and I should like the Select Committee to go into them very carefully and do proper justice to the industry. Sir, you will excuse my referring to the interference with the customs duty and the excise duty proposed to be levied in this Bill. So far as my knowledge of finance goes, the customs duty is levied for meeting revenue purposes and whatever customs duty is imposed on imported articles, to that extent the industries of the country are protected. That is not confined to one industry or other and I really cannot understand in what way Tata's do not deserve that shelter. The proposal will interfere with our budgetary position and was unworthy of the Tariff Board to recommend it. As regards the excise duty we know with what justification it was levied in regard to the sugar industry. There was an income of about 10 crores by way of customs duty on the import of sugar into this country which has to be sacrificed for the protection afforded and as the revenue of the country is derived mostly from customs duties and such a reduction was certainly very difficult to make good, Government were justified in levying a duty like that. You give protection to an industry and by that if the customs duty is decreased enormously you will be justified with a view to make good that loss of revenue in imposing an excise duty on the industry concerned. Here, the Tata Iron Works are not yet in a position to stand on their own legs and to help the foreign importers you are reducing the customs duty and levy a countervailing excise duty. What you give with one hand, you take away with the other. That is the position so far as the excise duty is concerned. Sir, I should like to know either from my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, or from Government the extent to which Tata's are going to be benefited by this measure every year, the net benefit setting off the one against the other. I should also like to know what amount Tata's will have to pay by way of excise duty. Mr. Mody in his speech said that the excise duty will be somewhere near 30 lakhs. What would be the amount that the company will be getting by way of protection if this Bill is passed into law? That is a matter that I should like to know. I do not think the net result will be what people seem to think. Anyway, it is up to the Select Committee to go into all these aspects of the question and if they think that in the interests of the industry the proposals ought to be accepted in toto, we shall then consider what has to be done. I will await the result. Sir, I have done.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Thursday, the 2nd August, 1934.

L245LAD

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, the 2nd August, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

THE HEDJAZ PILGRIMS (MUALLIMS) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai (Secretary, Department of Education, Health and Lands): Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill, which was recommitted to Select Committee, to regulate the activities of persons in British India who offer to assist Muslim pilgrims to the Hedjaz.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, may I suggest that you will kindly give precedence to items Nos. 30 to 45 on the agenda ? They are all motions for leave to introduce Bills and they will not take any length of time : if they are not reached in today's Agenda, there is no possibility of their being reached this Session.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : As a matter of fact, the Honourable Member may remember that this request was once made on a previous occasion, and it was not acceded to by the Chair. Of course, on an occasion previous to that, a request of a similar nature was acceded to by the Chair, but on that occasion the Chair pointed out that, if it was the desire of the House that motions for leave to introduce must take precedence, the House might take steps to amend the Standing Orders accordingly. The House has not shown any interest at all to move in that direction, and the Chair thinks, in the light of all this, it will not be justified in accepting such a procedure.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, be continued."

Honourable Members will remember that this Bill, countersigned by 52 other Members of the Legislative Assembly, was debated on the 2nd February last year, and it was referred to a Select Committee. The

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Government made it perfectly clear that, even after the reference to Select Committee, they will elicit public opinions with special reference to the speech made by the Honourable the Finance Member. Consequently, on the 28th June, 1933, they issued a circular for eliciting public opinions. During the last Delhi Session, I was anxious to convene a meeting of the Select Committee, and, after strenuous efforts, which I made in that direction, in which I received your assistance, Sir, a meeting of the Select Committee was convened, but it was postponed for further consideration. In the meantime, the Session was prorogued, with the result that the Standing Order precludes me from going on with the Bill unless the House permits me to continue it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, be continued.”

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member) : Sir, the Government do not intend to oppose this motion ; but in order to prevent any future misunderstandings, I should like to make clear to the House the circumstances in which and the conditions under which the Government have decided not to oppose it. The Bill to which the motion relates is one to which my predecessor expressed an incurable hostility. I share that hostility. In the course of the circulation for opinions, I think it was the Patna High Court which said that any instrument more likely to result in the collection of no income-tax at all could not be imagined. At the same time, during the course of the circulation for opinions, a certain suggestion was elicited, I think, from one of the Bombay commercial societies which my predecessor thought was worthy of consideration. He, therefore, agreed to a Select Committee, on the understanding that the original Bill would be opposed, but that if general agreement could be reached on this specific suggestion of the Bombay society and it was otherwise found suitable, he would give it sympathetic consideration. Now, as I have just said, the Government are unalterably opposed to the Bill in its original form and that I may say is the Bill before the Select Committee. But at the same time I consider, and the Government consider, that the promise of sympathetic consideration of my predecessor to an alternative scheme does place upon the Government a strong moral obligation to allow further discussion such as might most suitably be undertaken in the Select Committee ; but even on that alternative scheme, I would like to say one word of warning. The Honourable the Law Member and myself have considered this suggestion. We have grave misgivings about it and it is quite clear that it raises important constitutional questions such as the ousting of jurisdiction of the High Courts in certain cases, and we must not be assumed to be committed to more than the commitment entered into by my predecessor, which was sympathetic consideration to any scheme which was workable, which did not result in danger to the revenue, and which was generally acceptable. With that short explanation of the attitude of the Government, I should like to repeat that we are willing, subject to the views of the House, that this motion should be accepted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair would point out that the acceptance of Sir Hari Singh Gour's motion does not commit either the Government or any section of the House either to accept or reject the Bill of Sir Hari Singh Gour. That has to be considered purely on its own merits. This necessity arises because of the difficulty that has been brought to the notice of the Chair by certain Non-Official Members,—a difficulty which they have experienced in having Select Committees on Non-Official Bills convened. According to our present practice, the meetings of Select Committees are convened, the Chair thinks, by the Legislative Department. The pressure of Government business makes it probably extremely difficult for the Legislative Department to find time for meetings of Select Committees on Non-Official Bills. But when the House has agreed to refer a Non-Official Bill to Select Committee, then the Chair would suggest that every effort must be made by the Legislative Department to see that reasonable chance is given. (Opposition Cheers.) It is because the Honourable Sir Hari Singh Gour could not succeed in getting days allotted for the meetings of his Select Committee that he is driven to the necessity of making this motion for the continuance of the measure which, but for this motion, would lapse under the Standing Orders.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If I may say so, Sir, that was precisely one of the considerations that were in the mind of the Government in not opposing this motion. As regards the opportunity for further discussion, I understand that a date has actually been arranged for the meeting of the Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, be continued.”

The motion was adopted.

THE CHILD MARRIAGE RESTRAINT (REPEALING) BILL.

Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadian Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

“ That the Bill to repeal the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, be continued.”

Sir, this Bill has been on the anvil for nearly two years, and I had no chance of moving it except on one occasion, but, even then, as all the business on the paper had to be hurried up, the chance of moving my motion came to me at the end of the day. Consequently, nothing could be done further until now, as we had no other non-official day. Therefore, I request that the House may be pleased to order that this Bill may be continued.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

“ That the Bill to repeal the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, be continued.”

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member) : Sir, I have only to say that Government have no objection to the acceptance of this motion if it is acceptable to the House at large.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill to repeal the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929, be continued."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I don't move my motion*, Sir.

Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah (Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, as we are not in possession of the opinions on this Bill, I do not propose to move my motion†.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I don't propose to move my motion‡.

THE BENGAL STATE-PRISONERS REGULATION (REPEALING) BILL.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to repeal the Bengal State-Prisoners Regulation, 1818, be taken into consideration."

Sir, if I have taken upon myself the task of moving this Bill to repeal an obnoxious measure, which finds a place in the Statute-book of this country, after nearly two centuries of British rule, it is because I, along with the people of this country, do think that no civilized administration need be armed with such drastic powers as are contained in this Bill. Honourable Members may remember, that it was more than a decade ago, when you, Sir, were one of us, that I had the honour and the privilege of moving a Resolution in 1924 for the repeal of Regulation III of 1818. The history of this country, before the year 1924, during the last two decades preceding it, was one of repression and tyranny, if I may be permitted to use that word and if it is not unparliamentary, throughout the length and breadth of this country. Following in the wake of that ill-starred measure of that brilliant Viceroy, Lord Curzon,—I refer to the Partition of Bengal,—the rulers and the ruled of this country have been divided by sharp differences of opinion in matters political, which concern not only the welfare of millions of our countrymen but which also lie at the root of the peace of the world, if I may be permitted to say so. Sir, our memory goes back to those historical times when the Moghul Throne of Delhi was fast losing its hold upon the administration of this country. Territories after

 That the Bill to remove doubts about the application of the doctrine of representation, in case of succession to stridhan under the Dayabag, be referred to a Select Committee, etc., etc."

 That the Bill to provide for the abolition of untouchability among the Hindus, be referred to a Select Committee, etc., etc."

 That the Bill further to amend the Indian Bar Councils Act, 1926, be referred to a Select Committee, etc., etc."

territories were being taken away, and new rulers were arising not only in Northern India, but also in the South of India. Then we believe that, by Divine Providence, it was ordained that a nation which lived six thousand miles away across the seas, which had come here only for purposes of commerce, should take up the reins of administration of this ill-fated country. Provinces were divided against Provinces. To the Throne of Imperial Delhi, the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Tippoo Sultan in Southern India and others will not owe their allegiance, and we believe that by Divine Dispensation the Englishmen came to this country to give us peace in this land. They did not come here as conquerors. It has often been said that India was conquered by the sword. I say, Sir, that those are the words of false prophets, of people who have no idea of statesmanship. In fact the Englishmen of those days, as soon as they evolved order out of chaos and framed a proper administration for this country, took up the question of educating the people of this country, and that famous Education Despatch of Sir Charles Wood, the grandfather of that great Governor General of India, whose name will for ever be enshrined in our hearts as one of the greatest of peacemakers in this country, I mean Lord Irwin,—that famous Despatch is a Magna Charta of our political liberties, because an alien race, who have not much in common with us, came to us to give us education, to light the lamp of knowledge in the darkness which prevailed in the country, by introducing western science and western philosophy. And, Sir, when they were doing so, a great controversy was raging between Rajah Ram Mohan Roy and Rajah Sir Radha Kanta Deb, as to whether or not the people of India should be given education in oriental languages, in philosophy and literature, or whether they should be educated in western sciences and philosophy, or they should be allowed to combine both. At that time, it is a known fact that this country was not fully under British rule. Still the Britishers of those days thought that they were justified in bringing all the paraphernalia of civilized administration to this country, but at the same time they realised the dangers which existed in the country. There were then in the Punjab, the North-West Frontier and Sind Indian rulers who were making encroachments upon British Indian territories. There was the menace of the Pindaris which is known as the Pindari War in Indian history. There was also trouble along other frontiers and in Nepal ; and last, but not the least, there was another European power which was trying to establish its supremacy here. That was the time when Regulation III of 1818 came into operation. That was a time when every administration was entitled to ask for such drastic powers. In the Preamble to that Regulation we find these words :

"Whereas reasons of State, embracing the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign Powers,...."

I draw respectfully the attention of Honourable Members to the words "of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign Powers" :

".....the preservation of tranquillity in the territories of Native Princes entitled to its protection, and the security of the British dominions from foreign hostility and from internal commotion, occasionally render it necessary to place under personal restraint individuals against whom there may not be sufficient ground to institute any judicial proceeding, or when such proceeding may not be adapted to the nature of the case, or may for other reasons be inadvisable or improper."

So, Honourable Members will see that when the country had not settled down, when there was still a disturbance of the peace and law

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.] and order due to foreign machinations and international complications both on the frontiers and in other continents which had repercussions upon this country, it was found necessary to arm the executive of those times with powers so drastic that they have no parallel even in the draconian laws which may be found elsewhere. But nobody was against that Regulation at that time. Honourable Members may be pleased to remember that there was no Legislature of the type which we have at present or which we had during the Morley-Minto Reforms days or even Legislature of the type which was given to us prior to that, through that great friend of India Mr. Bradlaugh's efforts,—Lord Cross's Bill which first introduced the elective element in the Legislatures of India. Long, long before that, we had Executive Councils and we had Legislative Councils and we had Nominated Members there. Occasionally, in those Councils, we had men of revered memory, like the late Sir Rash Behari Ghose, but ordinarily we had an array of illiterate Knights and Rajahs who were known by the name of jo-hukums and who always bowed to the wishes of the powers that be.

An Honourable Member : They were āpka-wastēs.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : As my Honourable friend says, āpka-wastēs. It was even prior to that that this Regulation was enacted. They were the Councils which were foreshadowed in the Regulating Act of 1774, and these Councillors were no other than the rulers of the country and they had the power to do whatever they liked. They got a Regulation like this embodied in the Statute. Of course, I am not aware of the number of times or the number of persons against whom this Regulation had to be called into requisition in those days. Ordinary history does not show that ; probably a file of old newspapers may enlighten us. But to come to more recent days, we find the first application, which comes to our memory, is during the famous Wahabi case, and that was more than 60 years ago. After that, for a spell of nearly a quarter of a century, this Regulation and its sister Regulations in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay were not heard of and nobody knew that there was such a Regulation in the Statute-book of India even after the inauguration of the elective system in the Legislative Councils of India, through the efforts of Mr. Bradlaugh, for, I am sure, that if the Members of those days, when the elective system was introduced, knew that this archaic weapon would be availed of and could be availed of for purposes other than those for which it was enacted by a Government which wanted to silence the voice of the people, surely Member after Member would have come forward and taken the trouble of having these monstrous Regulations repealed, as I have been doing for the last 11 years in this House. As I have said, after a spell of nearly a quarter of a century, we come across the deportation of the Natu brothers, which marks a landmark in the annals of our political battle for getting our legitimate freedom in the land of our birth. I am not here at the present moment going to discuss what form of administration this country should have in the near future in order to give its people their legitimate rights and dues. But at the same time, I may be permitted to observe that in any administration, however dictatorial,—it may be ruled by a dictator. It may be ruled by a tyrant, it may be a democracy, or it may be a form of administration where responsible Government exists or the right of self-determination exists,—I beg to submit that no administration has a right to exist by suppressing the voice of the people or their legitimate freedom. It was in the year 1898 that the Natu brothers were deported and Honourable Members may be pleased to note that there was no reason of State embracing the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign powers, for at that time the British power was not only supreme in the Indian Continent but also in Burma, Baluchistan and also it had much influence in the border state of Afghanistan. Upper Burma had been conquered at that time and Baluchistan was also almost administered under British administration with the Khan of Kelat, while we know the good relations which existed between Afghanistan and India, from the days of Abdur Rahman. I would not go into the history of Dost Mohamed Khan or any of the Royal Prisoners who were kept in the cool heights of Mussoorie or the history of the conference in Rawalpindi. I would not go into the history of those times, but I am only touching the history of the times to which the subject of the Bill refers, namely, the deportation of the Natu brothers under these Regulations.

What led to the deportation of those two loyal and patriotic sons of India? No charge was framed against them, and afterwards they were released, and, I remember how the news was hailed with delight in the Lucknow Congress in 1889. Once more the Britishers retraced the false step they took and acted like true Englishmen. A decade afterwards came the Viceroyalty of that brilliant Viceroy, that superior person, I mean Lord Curzon. The partition of Bengal attempted to divide a highly cultured race and to put a stop to the self expression of a race which produced a jurist like Rash Bihari Ghose, a poet like Rabindra Nath Tagore and a scientist like J. C. Bose. They attempted to crush the legitimate aspirations of the people by dividing the people into two viz., Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal and driving a wedge into the solidarity of that Bengali race. Then a whirlwind campaign was undertaken by the people and their leaders and the settled fact at the beginning of the present century was unsettled. I mention it only to remind my friends that the Communal Award is not the last word and it can be unsettled. No Napoleon or Alexander can prophesy about any settled fact in connection with any political measure. The partition of Bengal was annulled. Later on, nine leaders of thought, none of whom were guilty of any of the crimes to guard against which this Regulation was intended were deported. Very extraordinary powers were asked for by Lord Minto from Lord Morley. Lord Morley promised to the extent that it was possible for him to do so. The perpetrator of that great administrative blunder, if I may be permitted to use that expression, wrote to Lord Minto in these words :

"I won't follow you into deportation. You state your case with remarkable force. I admit. But then I comfort myself in my disquiet at differing from you by the reflection that perhaps the Spanish Viceroy's in the Netherlands, the Austrian Viceroy in Venice, the Bourbon in the two Sicilies and a Government or two in the old American Colonies, used reasonings not wholly dissimilar and not much less forcible. Forgive this affronting parallel. It is only the sally of a man who is himself occasionally compared to Strafford, King John, King Charles, Nero and Tiberius."

Again, speaking of the Regulation and the Bengal deportations, Lord Morley wrote :

"The question between us two upon this matter may, if we won't take care, become what the Americans call ugly. I won't repeat the general arguments about

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

Deportation. I have fought against those here who regarded such a resort to the Regulation of 1818 as indefensible. So, per contra, I am ready just as stoutly to fight those who wish to make this arbitrary detention, for indefinite periods, a regular weapon of Government. Now your present position is beginning to approach this. You have nine men locked up a year ago by lettre de cachet because you believed them to be criminally connected with criminal plots, and because you expected their arrest to check these plots. For a certain time, it looked as if the coup were effective and were justified by the result. In all this, I think, we were perfectly right. Then you come by and by upon what you regard as a great anarchist conspiracy for sedition and murder and you warn me that you may soon apply to me for sanction of further arbitrary arrest and detention on a large scale. I ask whether this process implies that through the nine detenus you have found out a murder plot contrived, not by them but by other people. You say 'We admit that being locked up they can have had no share in these new abominations but their continued detention will frighten evil-doers generally.' That is the Russian argument."

I invite the Honourable the Home Member's attention as also that of the Honourable the Law Member to the words: "that is the Russian argument". We are here not for enacting any provision of law or retaining any law which savours of Russian odour. "By packing off trainloads of suspects to Siberia, we will terrify the anarchists out of their wits, and all will come out right." Probably that was the idea of the predecessor in office of the present Home Member,—to pack off trainloads of detenus from Bengal to Deoli. "That policy did not work out brilliantly in Russia and did not save the lives of the Trepoffs, nor did it save Russian from a Duma, the very thing that the Trepoffs and the rest of the 'offs' deprecated and detested". I may also add that that also brought about the downfall of the Romanoffs and cleared the soil of Russia of a dynasty which had been terrorizing the country for centuries. Sir, who were deported? I will give the names, Babu Aswini Kumar Dutt. Now any one who has had the privilege of ever having talked to him would have been impressed by the saintly character of that man. There are in India born saints, and Aswini Kumar Dutt, a follower of Keshab Chunder Sen, in the Bhakti Marga, was a saint. I had the pleasure and the privilege of knowing him for a long time and of even being his guest at the hill recess of Rajgir where I saw his nephew and wife looking into the minutest details of the daily wants of our life,—even from the cup of tea, which he himself did not take, down to milk brought in early in the morning, so that none of his guests might be uncomfortable in any way. He would read in those sequestered places religious books and he found great delight in repeating them to his guests and by collecting them on the verandah of his bungalow, and really men who had not the least religious instinct in them like myself (Laughter) were for the time being spell-bound and were charmed. Sir, such was the man. Even when two Muhammadan brothers were quarrelling with each other and were going to kill each other with the deadly kodali in their hand, one of the brothers at once said: "Let us go to Aswini Kumar Dutt", and he at once laid down his kodali and both of them went to Aswini Kumar Dutt,—and the quarrel was made up. Then, Sir, you may call it superstition, but my friend over there, who is a Sanatanist, knows also, I do not know how far the Shastras approve of it,—Sir, the first fruit that comes out in our trees is often offered to the gods, and will you believe me, Sir, in Barisal, it was the practice with several people to take the first fruit of the trees to this great saint of Barisal—Aswini Kumar Dutt.

Now, such is the man who was deported along with another gentleman whose memory also is revered throughout Bengal,—who, though younger in years, was in college with me and was in some way distantly related to me—Raja Subodh Chandra Mullick. I call him "Raja" because he was really a Raja, not like the Rajas whom we see here or elsewhere (Loud Laughter), one who was really the Raja of the hearts of the people of Bengal—Subodh Chandra Mullick, a millionaire, who threw away all his wealth for the uplift of his own countrymen and who, during his last years, lived rather in want. Then, with him was another old veteran journalist who was of the former generation, of the generation of my father as also of the father of the Honourable the Law Member,—I mean Babu Krishna Kumar Mitra,—another saint, so to speak, belonging to the Theistic School, who fortunately for us is still living and who by his wisdom is still trying to help the people in their onward march towards freedom,—not by revolutionary means, not through ways of bloodshed, but through constructive methods. Then there was another gentleman deported—Monoronjon Guha. These, then, were the men deported but against whom no charge was ever brought. And did not the officials afterwards realize their mistake and release all these men? And was not the atmosphere made calmer. Now, Sir, I have given these three instances of the use of this Regulation III of 1818, and afterwards, as the House may remember,—one was long, long after, about half a century from the enactment of this Act and another was a quarter of a century after that, and the third was occasioned by certain ill-conceived administrative measures and that was still a decade after, but what was the history after that? Sir, we find the provisions of this Regulation requisitioned for all and sundry, for every case, for every convenience, in all cases where there may not have been any tangible evidence, but about which some suspicion might lurk in the minds of prejudiced officials; as there was no evidence forthcoming, they would have free recourse to the provisions of this archaic weapon in the armoury of the Government of India, although, if they had taken the slightest care to be honest and fair, they would have found that the provisions of this Regulation did not apply to those cases. The latest one of the cases under this Regulation is the one about which we talked yesterday and about which we were told by the Honourable the Home Member that the Bengal Government had to be consulted in all these matters. They have enough advisers of their own, but they dare not act on their own responsibility nor have they the courage to go against the wishes of the Provincial Governments, although they happen to be the superior government, if I may say so, because I have seen objections to the use of words like 'subordinate government' and so forth. Whatever that may be, this Regulation is to be administered by the Government of India and the Government of India alone and not by any subordinate government. Of course, they cannot delegate the powers under the Act to a subordinate government. I was surprised that that can be so. And why? Because there was not a single occasion which is to be seen in the preamble of the Act. Of course, they could cope with it under the ordinary laws if they had the machinery to concoct the evidence as they say in law courts. Sir, about this concoction of evidence by private parties or by any other parties, the less said the better. I may remind the House of only one instance to show to what length this concoction can go. Honourable Members will remember the Naraingarh train wrecking case. People were chalanned and evidence was forthcoming that they were the people who wanted to wreck the train. It was proved that they placed the bomb there and every evidence was complete to convince a very obliging judiciary of those days with the result that some people were ordered to be transported for life and were sent to the Andamans. Now, by some misadventure, if I may so put it, when a case was launched against Arabindo Ghosh and his so-called fellow conspirators, evidence came out that the men who were sent to the Andamans, as they were found to be guilty on the evidence which the Judge believed to be true and therefore accepted it, were really not the men who were guilty of having placed the bomb in the Naraingarh train wrecking case. This sudden disclosure was attempted to be suppressed in those days. It is nearly a quarter of a century ago when this happened. But human depravity to whatever length it may go at times does assert itself and these people were got back from the Andamans and were released. That is the way in which evidence can be concocted. We, who practise in law courts, know how they fabricate evidence. It is not the peculiarity of India alone but if we look at the annals of the administration of justice of other countries of Europe, we will find astounding fabrications and concoctions of evidence which will baffle the brains of Indian fabricators. So, Sir, this fabrication and concoction is a thing which has come to this country along with English education and the knowledge of English history and philosophy and science.

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Science is responsible for it.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am told that science is responsible for it. Yes, with due respect to the Honourable the Law Member who says that, I do agree with him. Science is responsible for the manufacture of bombs, and also probably the science of mental and moral aberration is responsible for the fabrication and concoction of evidence. Be that as it may, I submit that if you can have such fabricated and concocted evidence to send men to the Andamans, why should you have a provision of a law brought in for application to a place where there is no fabrication and thereby incur the odium of the intelligent section of the people, I mean, at least the wiser section, who abhor this misapplication of law. Honourable Members may remember that there was an inquiry into the repressive laws by a Committee. The members of that Committee came to the conclusion that the application of this Regulation ought to be confined to its legitimate spheres, but unfortunately the whole Government was within a few months very much disturbed over certain seditious writings and conspiracies. I ask Government to be a little more strict in applying the provisions of this Regulation. They should apply them only in those circumstances in which they are applicable and not apply them by straining the language to those cases in which they are not applicable. As, however, they will not do this, and as past experience shows that they have been mis-applying the whole Regulation to cases in which it is not applicable, I most respectfully submit that it is the bounden duty of every Indian and every Britisher, if they are as much interested in our welfare as we are interested in their welfare, to have this obnoxious measure expunged from the Statute-book of India. Sir, the Repressive Laws Committee observed the following :

"We recognise the force of these arguments, in particular the difficulty of securing evidence or preventing intimidation of witnesses. We also appreciate the fact that the use of the ordinary law may in some circumstances prevent the very thing which a trial is designed to punish, but we consider that in the modern condition of India this must be done."

They say that in the modern condition of India this must be done.

12 Noon. Why? Because the risk will involve less danger to the security and peace of the Government than the application of a measure like this :

"It is undesirable that any Statute should remain in force which are regarded with deep and genuine disapproval by a majority of the Members of the Legislature."

This will be proved by looking at the voting list on the Resolution in 1924. The voting was 68 to 44 and if you remember that, out of this 44, forty were Nominated Members we may say that the voting was 68 to 4. In a House consisting of 72 elected Members do you expect that there will not be even four jo-hukums to carry on the mandate of the powers that be. I must, therefore, say that it was almost the unanimous voice of this House which represented the voice of the people of India that this Regulation should go. This was the recommendation of the Repressive Laws Committee. They recommended that it should be so amended as :

"to be used only for the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign powers, the preservation of tranquillity in the territories of the Indian Princes entitled to its protection and the security of the British Dominions from foreign hostility and only so far as the inflammable Frontier is concerned from internal commotion."

But the provisions of this Regulation are applied to a Province far off from the North-West Frontier, in the Gangetic delta which has been the abode of peaceful people for centuries and who never cared who ruled over them but who were contented in their village homes never caring for offices either at Delhi or at Murshidabad, for eight long centuries. During this period of so-called foreign rule Bengal non-co-operated with everything foreign except a few who were converted into other faiths by lure of gain either at Delhi or at Murshidabad. Who were the greatest men of those times? The writer of that melodious song : "the Gita Govinda", Jay Deb, greatest among the Vaishnavite poets of Bengal and Shree Chaitanya, the greatest of the modern Bengalees who was the embodiment of all that was good and great in the Bengali race, these were some of the greatest men that lived during that period, and I am sorry that this Regulation III is applied to a peace-loving people like the Bengalis. There is a proverb which says that, if you tread upon an ant it will also try to bite. Probably that is the reason why we find one or two revolutionaries here and there even in Bengal. The true home of revolutions is, among the martial races to which my Honourable friends over there belong, in the Frontier and in the Punjab. We are a non-martial race and we are not allowed to enter the army. We do not care to enter the army. We leave it to our Rajput and Jat friends, like Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh and Captain Lal Chand. We have our own philosophy, our own literature and our own culture by which we live.

An Honourable Member : Your law.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Yes. Law is also philosophy. Sir, I was saying that even in the peaceful homes of Bengal you have disturbed to such an extent that some children of theirs have become revolutionaries. It is a fact which I deplore and I hope the Government also deplore. If the Government also really deplore, then they must be awakened to a sense of justice and they must show their sympathy to the parents of these misguided youths. Be that as it may, I beg to submit, do not misapply such Regulations to peaceful people like the Bengalis. Justice requires that you must remove this measure from the Statute-book. Therefore, I move that the Bill to repeal the Bengal State-Prisoners Regulation, 1818, be taken into consideration. If this motion is passed, I shall move later on that the Bill be passed.

[Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.]

An Honourable Member : You do not want it to be sent even to the Select Committee.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am appealing to all the Members of the House, as they are reasonable men, to weigh fully the pros and cons of this measure and vote for the consideration of this Bill. I hope Honourable Members will not have any other consideration in their mind, either the lure of title or the lure of some office, and withhold their assent to this motion. I do not expect Honourable Members as you all are, Honourable as all of us are, every one of us is an Honourable Member and I expect every Honourable Member to be true to his own self and true to the honour of his country and vote with me for the repeal of this measure. (Applause.) There may be some difficulty with Executive Officers who administer the law, to assent to this measure, because they think that they do need this power at times. I trust that the Executive Officers and the Members of the Treasury Bench who adorn this House at the present moment, at least one of them will kindly remember these two lines which I had the honour of quoting on the last occasion. "Great Executive Officers never like or trust lawyers. I will tell them why, for they never trust or like law". I hope that by assuming the high office and the portfolio of law which my Honourable friend over there has assumed and from whom we expect great things in the near future in moulding the constitution of this country so that he will ever be remembered by future generations, I hope that he will be the one officer of the Crown who brought succour to this ill-fated Province. I expect that he at least will not fall a victim to these two lines that great Executive Officers never like or trust lawyers, for he is nothing if not a lawyer from the very beginning of his life. The eminent lawyer and the eminent jurist that he is I am sure that he will not fall into the trap of other Executive Officers (Hear, hear), who I believe are also too honourable and too good to be misled into giving support for a lawless law like the one which I am asking the House to repeal. Sir Nripendra Nath Sircar is perhaps at present trying to think, being a Government servant, how he can support this obnoxious measure, but in his helplessness he sees no way out of the difficulty, lawyer as he is, patriot as he is, a great administrator as he is going to be whose name is going to be handed down to future generations.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Who pays his fees?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : My Honourable friend does not do Sir Nripendra Sircar justice if he thinks that he cares for his fees at all. He cares more for his country and countrymen. His past life is a record of which every Bengali will be proud. He may care for his fees in the law courts but in other spheres of activity, political and social, I must say that there is no greater patriot than Sir Nripendra Sircar.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Sir, I may inform my Honourable friend that even some of my fees in the High Court are in arrears, and there is no chance of recovering them. (Laughter.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : It is a great shame that Government have not yet paid my Honourable friend's fees. But he does not charge any fees for being a patriot or for social work. But I wish with regard to Sir Nripendra Sircar's fees they may not play the same game as they did with Jagat Sett, from whom they borrowed 20 lakhs, promising to repay it year by year, and paid only five lakhs. And when questions were asked here, Sir Basil Blackett said that, it may be that some money is due to him. And that great patriot, Bepin Chandra Pal, said that it is right and proper that these Jagat Setts and Mir Jaffars and Umichands should be served like that. Be that as it may, I think Government cannot back out of their liabilities to Sir Nripendra Sircar.

Sir, it has been said that the deportation of even men of high moral and intellectual attainments was necessary, otherwise they embarrass Government. If that be the attitude of Government I will most respectfully recite a few lines of the great poet wherein it has been said :

"Earth is sick
And Heaven is weary of the hollow words
That States and Kingdoms utter when they talk
Of Truth and Justice."

I hope that will not be the case at the present time and Englishmen and Indians in this House will act with the sole aim of peace on earth and goodwill among men, for I believe that in this ancient land of ours, in this land of sages and philosophers, we are destined to work and live side by side for the common benefit and common salvation of both races. With these words, I appeal to every one in this House, to support me in repealing Regulation III of 1818.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to repeal the Bengal State-Prisoners Regulation, 1818, be taken into consideration."

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand (Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I am afraid I cannot congratulate the Honourable the Mover, who has so zealously and feelingly moved this motion, on the time he has chosen for this Bill. Honourable Members must have noticed that, during the course of his argument, he has appealed more to sentiment than to reason, and that is another reason, why I will ask Honourable Members not to be led away by sentiments alone.

Sir, I fully realise and agree with the Honourable the Mover that it is one of the fundamental principles of criminal law that nobody should be deprived of his liberty unless he is placed before a court of law, is given a regular trial, charges are framed against him, and is told that he is deprived of his liberty for so long. This is a fundamental principle of law and there can be no disagreement about it. But this principle is applicable to normal times and to ordinary crimes. For abnormal times, Government have to fall back upon another principle, which gets precedence over this fundamental principle. That other principle is, that it is the primary duty of a civilised Government to give an assurance to its subjects, that their property and life will be safe. And in the discharge of that primary duty of Government, without the discharge of which no Government is entitled to be called by that name, they have to make certain sacrifices, sacrifices not of principles but even of persons. There are occasions when there is no trial. In emergent cases, order is given by an ordinary officer, a subordinate judicial officer, and sometimes by a police officer also, to fire upon a mob. There without any trial, without being brought before any court, the criminals are shot dead and finished there. Why? This is because there is another principle that the part should be sacrificed in order to save the whole. In order to save the whole society from a certain poison the poisonous matter has to be done away with. So with that principle before us, we should consider the necessity of a Regulation of this sort. As a matter of fact, I sincerely believe that this power is inherent with Government, and even if this Regulation had not been there, Government would be entitled to use the powers they had been using under this Act. Some friends of the Opposition say, this Government is a paper Government; they want everything in writing and they do not want that any unwritten law should come in. Therefore, as early as 1818, the administrators of this country very wisely brought this Regulation on record and placed it on the Statute-book.

[Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand.]

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I ask my Honourable friend what he means by the expression "paper Government"? Does he use that phrase in the same sense in which we use the phrase "paper transactions"?

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : My Honourable friend understands very well what I mean, but I can tell him that what I mean is that they go by the written law, except in exceptional cases. When the written law is not sufficient, Government has to hand the authority to an agency which does not care for written law and who go by their conscience,—I mean martial law or unwritten law. So the choice of my friend is between this Regulation and martial law: such is the condition of Bengal nowadays. It is powers like these that have been instrumental in giving settled government and peace to our country, and we should be thankful to the early administrators who foresaw all these exigencies and placed such power in the hands of the Government. The chief argument that has been used by my friend, in favour of his Bill, is that, great men have been sacrificed, and many have been deprived of their liberty. He has quoted a series of names and has feelingly appealed to Honourable Members to have this Regulation repealed. He did not refer to the fact that each individual case has to come up to Government, and the best brains have to examine the records in each individual case separately and that is a sufficient guarantee that no injustice is being done and that all conditions are complied with. This power has not been misused in the past and there is no reason to fear that this will be so in the future.

Sir, there are two other reasons why this Bill should be thrown out. In the first place, the Bengal Council,—the Council of the Province of my Honourable friend,—has recently given evidence by an overwhelming majority of their intention in respect of the principle underlying this Bill. They have just passed a Bill directing these detenus to be detained for any length of times: they have made a temporary Act permanent; and we here at present are discussing the Bill in the Assembly. So this was not the proper time for my friend to bring in this Bill. The responsible opinion of his own Province was against him. Besides, another and perhaps more weighty reason than this is, that great reforms are in sight. The Provinces are going to get full Provincial Autonomy and here too we are going to have a great change. Under these circumstances, is it fair for us to ask this Government to leave a legacy of chaos and bloodshed to their successors? For, if they repeal these powers which they have enjoyed during all this period, and which have been responsible for guaranteeing peace to the country and keeping the terrorist movement underground, is it fair, I ask, for us to ask them on the day on which they are giving over charge to give up those powers and leave their successors to face the terrorist movement with all the consequent bloodshed? I think it is highly presumptuous on the part of an Honourable Member coming from Bengal where no less than 500 detenus have been detained and where the Local Council has given by an overwhelming majority proof of their intentions, and where the presence of the terrorist movement was admitted the other day by every Member hailing from Bengal,—I say, is it fair for a Member coming from that Province.....

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I inform the Honourable Member that I am asking for the repeal of a Statute which has nothing to do with terrorism and other matters of internal administration which cannot be dealt with under this Regulation? I shall be obliged if he can point out why this particular Regulation should be retained on the Statute-book.

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : If there was ever an occasion for a so-called repressive measure to remain in the hands of the Government, it is now, and I quote those as instances of the presence of abnormal conditions in my friend's own Province. I say, it is presumptuous on his part or on the part of any Member hailing from Bengal, to come forward and ask this Assembly to deprive the executive to give up all those powers by which they have kept the peace in the country. Does my Honourable friend realise what is being done in other civilised countries of the world? He must have been reading papers and I need not repeat instances here to show how justice is being done in other countries in cases where there are abnormal conditions. This is so in Germany, Austria and everywhere. Here in India we enjoy settled government and peace. This is due to the wise handling of these powers by the executive, and, therefore, I would appeal to Honourable Members not to be misled by any craze for popularity, in spite of the coming elections that are in sight.....

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadian Urban) : And in spite of the possibilities of nominations to the next Assembly? (Opposition Laughter.)

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : May I also remind Honourable Members that it is powers like these and others that have brought the Congress, from which all of us, whether Oppositionists or Nominated Members, differ, to their senses? They have realised that the real good of the country lies in co-operation. But I will not take this opportunity of recounting the history of the Congress as they are not here, and so I will earnestly appeal to Honourable Members to weigh the reasons, to see that the result of repealing laws like these, would be to hand over the country to terrorists, and chaos and bloodshed will be the result.

Sir, I will not take any more time of this House, but I will only ask the House not to be misled by these sentiments, and to use their own [Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand.] reason for the purpose of maintaining peace in the country rather than gain popularity outside while voting on this motion.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury (Bengal : Landholders) : Mr. President, after listening to the speech of my gallant friend, Captain Lal Chand, I am compelled to stand up here and refute some of the arguments he has advanced on this very important issue. Sir, it is a piece of good fortune that my friend, the Mover of this motion, got the chance today to make his motion, and I congratulate him. Sir, we on this side of the House know fully well how this Act has been worked by the executive in this country. My friend, Captain Lal Chand, in the course of his observations in opposing this motion, referred to the events of the martial law days, and I do not know if he has been able to convince even a single Member of this House.....

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (Agra Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Why not ?

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : Perhaps he could convince my friend, Mr. Yamin Khan, but the less said about my friend, Mr. Yamin Khan, the better. And when my friend, Captain Lal Chand, developed his argument, he said that he wanted to throw out this motion on the ground that he did not want to hand over a legacy of chaos and bloodshed to our successors. My friend is perhaps of the opinion that this Regulation, if retained on the Statute-book, will root out terrorism from our country. Sir, not many days ago, we had in this very House a somewhat similar legislation, I mean the Bengal Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, and it is still pending before the House. In the course of the discussion of that measure, my esteemed friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, made out a very strong case in opposing the motion. He also made it abundantly clear to the House that by measures of this character you cannot prevent terrorism, you cannot prevent young men, who are determined to kill another with a revolver in one hand and potassium cyanide in another, from carrying out their object, however strong measures you may pass in this House or elsewhere. On the other hand, it has been pointed out even by the Treasury Benches that what is wanted to stamp out terrorism from this country is co-operation. Sir, we on this side of the House quite appreciate that spirit, and we are all prepared to co-operate with you in stamping out terrorism from this country. Nobody wants terrorism in our country, but we are prepared to co-operate with the Government on reasonable grounds. This Regulation, which is obnoxious in its nature, should not be allowed to remain on the Statute-book of this country. Under this Regulation you can put under arrest any man without trial for an indefinite period. My friend, the Mover of this motion, cited several instances where the provisions of this Regulation have been grossly abused and misused in the name of law and order. There are thousands of cases which can be cited in which, though this Regulation has strengthened the hands of the executive, it has been administered in a most vindictive manner. Under these circumstances, we have to seriously consider whether the time has not arrived to support the motion for the repeal of this most mischievous measure. Sir, I really feel that if measures of this character are not repealed, they will lead to greater mischief, and there will be more chaos and trouble in the country. I also verily believe that the oppressive methods adopted by Government tend greatly to retard the progress of this country. Nobody will deny that terrorism must be suppressed, but the policy of repression that is now pursued in the name of law and order will not help to suppress terrorism at all. On the other hand, the oppressive methods pursued by Government are such that they only irritate the public mind, and I can cite instances of repressive methods pursued in the name of law and order, nay in some cases the executive have even usurped the functions of the judiciary. This is certainly most reprehensible. Even the executive have questioned the powers of the High Court in some cases. Do you by these means propose to maintain law and order in this country ? You being the custodian of law and order in the country, is this the way in which Government should administer justice ? Do Government think that by oppressing and terrorising people, in the way they are doing, they will be able to root out terrorism from this country ? Sir, I say it is a wrong dictum that my friend, Captain Lal Chand, enunciated here this morning. I believe he has an assurance,—whether it is a fact or not I do not know,—from his constituency that if he makes such a reactionary speech, it will strengthen his cause.....

Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri Lal Chand : Sir, if personal motives come in, then my community will stand to gain by the repeal of the Regulation in question and other similar laws. If there were no peace in the country, then we could deprive some of our rich friends, like my friend, of their property and riches. It is because of the peace that we enjoy under British rule that we are not able to do this.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Order, order.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : I did not mean to make any personal reflection. It is a question of principle that is involved here. If Nominated Members are asked to express such views in this House by their constituents, there is little hope for the country. I am sure that in the next Assembly some of the Nominated Members will have better sense.....

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Nominated by whom ? By the Congress ?

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : Nominated by the Government. What I want to point out is this. Terrorism can never suppress terrorism. Sir, in the course of the discussion on the Bengal Criminal Law (Amendment) Bill, it was pointed out that innocent people were attacked and assaulted in the name of law and order. Even a very highly respected man, a doctor of midwifery, I mean Sir Kedar Nath Das, was not spared by the police on his way to Darjeeling, and he was not only searched, but roughly handled by the police. Was there any sense in dealing with such an old and respected man in that manner ? If a young man visits any place there may be a suspicion against him, whether he be a terrorist or not, and the police can legitimately search him. But what is the meaning of searching a man like Dr. Kedar Nath Das who is an old man of 85 or 90 years ? That merely irritates the mind of the people. It is only by means of the co-operation of the people that terrorism can be suppressed. It is not by oppression but by persuasion that this terrorist movement can be eradicated. The other day, my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, threw out a challenge that he was prepared to take up the responsibility if the Government came to us with a reasonable attitude. If the Government are at all anxious to get the co-operation of the people, why do they not call a conference and find out ways and means of stamping out terrorism in India ? There is not a single Member on this side of the House who supports this principle of terrorism, this principle of sporadic murders. We should look to the root cause of this malady. The Government simply give out that it is economic depression which drives these young people into drastic actions like that. It is not for their personal ends that they leave their homes and their parents, and if I may say so, some of them are jewels of the University. Why should they commit such heinous crimes? The Government have power behind them, they have munitions behind them, and think that they can suppress terrorism by simply legislating enactments like these and oppressing the masses. That is not the way to suppress terrorism. No one in this world can suppress terrorism by terrorising the public. It can only be done by enlisting the co-operation of the public and their goodwill. The Indians are inherently loyal to their Government, and if Government come with a clean slate and consider the matter in a calm and dispassionate manner, certainly some solution can be found. But Government will not care to do that; they never care to listen to the public. May I mention the instance of Hijli? What happened there? Those innocent detenus were dining quietly and they were shot dead like dogs. With what result? An enquiry was made and the man who was guilty of that crime was simply transferred, and nothing else was done. Can it satisfy the public? You have heard how detenus are suffering,—men against whom no charges have been brought in a court of law, they are merely kept under suspicion for an unlimited time. Still my Honourable friend, Captain Lal Chand, comes here and opposes this motion. I do not understand on what sense he has based his attitude, I do not know under what guidance he proposes to throw out this motion at this stage. If my Honourable friend had a little grain of sense in him, if he had a sense of responsibility, he would not have said like that.

[Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhuri.]

Among the detenus there are some who are very respectable. Take the case of Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose who the Home Member said was a terrorist. Can any crime or action of terrorism be proved against him in a court of law? The Government cannot, they dare not. And still Government is keeping that honourable gentleman within the prison bars. He is kept under restrictions, and he cannot earn his living. There are thousands of instances like that, and if the Home Member only took a little care to scrutinise each case personally, he would find that there are a number of detenus who are absolutely free from the taint of terrorism. You keep them merely under suspicion. It may be for a temporary period, but there is no reason why they should be detained for ever and not given a chance of coming out and mixing in social life. I could have understood if these special measures were brought in a time of war; it would have been justified then. There is no such thing now. There is no revolutionary movement, no organised revolutionary movement in this country. There are some sporadic murders, and those people who are addicted to such crimes do not consult each other. They have no regular organisations, but they are merely irritated by the actions of the police. Take the affairs in Chittagong, for instance. When I was coming up to Simla I was travelling with some high official; he was a police officer who was a Muhammadan. I asked him how things were going on in Chittagong. Government have always tried to describe this movement as a Hindu movement. My friend told me that it is nothing of the kind, that it contains both Hindus and Muhammadans. He further told me that 500 Muslim houses were searched in Chittagong and that they were very irritated over that. I do not understand why the Government should simply impose punitive taxes on one particular community. This principle is absolutely wrong—not that I say that the taxes should be levied on other communities also. For one single soul who committed a crime the whole nation is blamed. The higher officials do not spare any opportunity to praise the police, and still the police cannot detect the criminal and for one single action like this the whole nation is branded as terrorist. No soul in Chittagong can sleep soundly at night. Is it administration? Do you call it administration? I think the executive have lost their brains and also their sense of responsibility and their statesmanship at the present moment. We have got strong belief in the British justice. But where is that British justice? Can it happen in England that men are detained without giving them a proper opportunity of facing the charges against them? No. There is no war now, there is no revolution, and still you persist in these Regulations. My Honourable friend, Captain Lal Chand, referred to the fact that the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act was passed by a majority. That sufficiently shows that the public are for eradicating terrorism. Why should not Government join hands with the public and have an enquiry into matters? Let there be a non-official enquiry. The other day the Home Member had the courage to say that even a man like Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan is a terrorist. But I am sure if Government would have cared to see even the cartoon that came out in the Hindustan Times they would have realised that they were afraid of their own shadow of terrorism. If the Government will only make inquiries, and face the facts, Government will find that a great number of these men are absolutely innocent and they have been detained on mere suspicion. I am not one of those who support this terrorism. I am not one of those who is pleading the cause of murders and political crimes, but I am certainly one of those who believe that with the co-operation and goodwill of the people this terrorism will stop. If only Government will come over and shake hands with the public and consult them on these matters and try to find out a satisfactory solution, they will get it. If they pursue a policy of repression, there is hardly any chance. Look at the evidence of the girl who shot at His Excellency the Governor of Bengal. You find oppression was done to her. I do not approve of her action. She has to be convicted.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: May I contradict the Honourable Member? I had something to do with this case. She made no complaint of any oppression of her by anybody.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions: Non-Muhammadan Rural): On her friends and relations.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: I am answering my friend's allegation that she complained of oppression on her.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhuri: On her relations.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: Is my Honourable friend aware that what is supposed to be her speech or defence has been taken verbatim from one of the older English trials. Only the names have been changed.

Mr. S. C. Mitra: That is done by lawyers.

L251LAD

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That is not her language. That is the lawyer's language.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : I am only giving that as an instance. I entirely agree with the Law Member. She may not have complained of oppression on her part but it is perfectly true that her relations and other people were oppressed. There are many Members here who will stand by me here on this particular issue that her relations and others were oppressed. I say that boldly.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I quite appreciate the boldness. Who was the relation who was oppressed?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : In one of my speeches I have quoted the whole of the details if the Honourable the Law Member cares to read it.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I have not only read that but I have read other literature on the subject.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : By terrorising terrorism, they cannot stop it. Every one in this sense who has got some brains and common sense will support me. It is my firm belief that it is wise to adopt a policy of co-operation and conciliation and to take the public into your confidence. This is the spirit with which this motion has been moved and I support the motion of my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : By enacting Regulation III of 1818, shortly after the battle of Waterloo, the then Government of India, which were yet in an unstable state, took upon themselves abnormal powers to deal with abnormal circumstances by deporting without trial persons suspected of conspiracy with foreign and rival powers. The French power in India were still a menace and the erstwhile wards of the new Home Member from the Punjab, I mean the Sikhs and the Jats, (including my esteemed friend Captain Lal Chand), were rising in power. But it was quite one hundred and sixteen years ago. Administrators that used to be sent out to India then from the British Isles had, I suppose, much less brain than those of recent years. At that time, the most ruthless legal weapon that could be devised by the law makers was this Regulation III. But the law makers of the present day have been able to devise the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Acts which stand incomparable among the Statutes of the world from which both Stalin and Hitler may take lessons with profit. In the face of these repressive Statutes, the old and decrepit Regulation III has become worn and obsolete. But our administrators are nothing, if not extremely courteous. In their supreme regard for their ancestors in office and their actions, they still cling to this antiquated and ante-diluvian law, Regulation III of 1818, for it deserved effacement from the pages of the Statute-book long ago. I trust the new Law Member, who has dealt extensively with both Regulation III and the present Criminal Law Amendment Act in Bengal, will advise the Government on the comparative merits of the two Statutes.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : May I contradict the Honourable Member. I have never dealt with Regulation III. I have had nothing to do with it either as Advocate General or as Law Member.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : I stand corrected. Sir, I will take this opportunity to state before this House the pathetic story of two Regulation prisoners deported from Jaypore Estate in the District of Vizagapatam. Two brothers named Narsing Sahu and Radhakrishna Biswas Rai, who happened to be non-violent Congress volunteers working in the Samasthanam, were arrested and deported in 1930, for what offence nobody knows.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Were they non-violent?

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Even the signing of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact could give them no relief and they are still rotting in the dungeon. I believe their difficulty is that as they happen to be very small fry in the Congress movement, Government of India have completely forgotten all about them—their very existence.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member) : May I ask the Honourable Member what is the case to which he refers.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : These two brothers are residents of Jaypore Estate in the Vizagapatam district. It is a zamindari.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not think that could be under Regulation III.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : They were deported under the sister Regulation in Madras. Sardar Vallabhbhai's case was always before the mind's eye of the rulers. He had friends and admirers throughout the length and breadth of India. Even Mahatma Gandhi was very much concerned on his account. But it is no wonder that these two poor unknown young men, coming from an obscure place and, arrested for minor activities, have been totally forgotten by the mighty British Government. Sir, there is still reason why their cases have been obviously forgotten. The type of our administrators who framed regulation laws were perhaps much more humane and considerate than at present. So in these regulations there is provision for suitable allowance to regulation prisoners. But while perhaps all such prisoners are getting allowances, these two unfortunate fellows happen to be noble exceptions. They do not get any allowance with the result that, if newspaper reports be correct, the members of their family, who were dependent upon them for their maintenance, are living by begging. Because they do not cost the Government anything in the shape of allowances it is another reason why they have been thrown to the depths of oblivion. Sir, I have stated all these facts before the House only in the hope of drawing the kind attention of the new Home Member to their cases and I hope it has been drawn. I trust the new Home Member will interest himself in their cases and see if their detention is still necessary and if so whether they deserve any allowance.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I should be glad if the Honourable Member will send me particulars. I cannot trace the cases either under the Bengal Regulation or under the Madras Regulation.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Thank you. I have concluded my observations.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria (Bombay Northern Division : Non-Muhamadan Rural) : Mr. President, after the very statesmanlike and gentlemanly speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Lahiri Chaudhury, I do not think there is any doubt as regards the fate of this motion. My Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, is not here, I am sorry to say. He has always said that he has got a soft corner for me in his heart ; I should also like to inform him that I also have got a very soft corner for him in my heart, and, therefore, I regret very much that I have to oppose his motion. Sir, my Honourable friend recited old and recent history ; he appealed to our honour and he appealed also to my Honourable friend, Sir Nripendra Sircar, as regards arrears of fees. Sir, much better and much more cogent arguments were brought forward and considered by a Committee of this House appointed to consider the abolition of the repressive laws. That Committee was presided over by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru,—a name, Sir, which evokes as much regard and respect as that of my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. (Laughter.) What did that Committee say ? That Committee was decidedly of the opinion that, of all repressive laws, this particular repressive law should not be abolished but should be continued on our Statute-book. That should be a sufficient answer to the present motion. Sir, my Honourable friend stated that the conditions which obtained, when this law was enacted in 1818, are no longer in existence. My Honourable friend's memory is very short. If he had just tried to remember the very cogent and very forcible and very documented speech made in this House, only a few days ago, by the Honourable the then Home Member, Sir Harry Haig, I think he would have found and he would have realized how uncalled for and how unjustifiable his present motion is. Sir, Sir Harry Haig stated that not once, not twice, but many times that powers to fight terrorism and revolutionary activities were taken and were relinquished and that after each relinquishment and relaxation of such law there was a fresh recrudescence of terrorist and revolutionary activities. Sir, it would be defying common sense and experience to accede, under the present conditions, to the motion of my Honourable friend. It would be a serious dereliction of duty on the part of this Government not to stand by millions of peace-loving and law-abiding citizens and loyal officers of the Government who are doing their duty under conditions of extreme embarrassment and distress. (Ironical Laughter.) Sir, my Honourable friend said that under this law there was much room for concoction of evidence. I am not in a position to deny.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I never said that under this law there was room for concoction of evidence. I said, in other cases.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : I stand corrected, but I understood him to say that because there was some concoction of evidence in cases under this law, therefore, this law is a bad law. My Honourable friend is also a lawyer and I would ask him whether he does not come across every day, in Courts of law, concoctions of evidence in criminal cases. Does he mean therefore that the Penal Code should be abolished and repealed. My Honourable friend also said that there has been much oppression of detenus detained under this law. Very serious charges were made on the floor of the House the other day as regards the alleged Midnapore atrocities and the Government of India, after due and considerable inquiry, have refuted those charges and shown them to be absolutely unfounded.

Mr. S. C. Sen (Bengal National Chamber of Commerce : Indian Commerce) : Who made the inquiries, may I know ?

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : The Government-constituted authorities made that inquiry.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Which Government ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhamadan) : Judge of their own case.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Which Government ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Chaukidars' Government ! (Laughter.)

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Lahiri Chaudhury, talked of the root causes of the revolutionary activities. I would agree with him in asking the Government to try and investigate and remedy whenever possible those root causes. So far as I am able to ascertain, the root causes are more economic than political. (Mr. S. C. Mitra : " Question.") If the Government side by side with attempting to suppress terrorism and revolutionary activities also tries to suppress and remedy the acute unemployment in Bengal and acute economic distress in Bengal, I think we shall hear much less of terrorism. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I inform my Honourable friend that this Regulation is not meant to deal with terrorism or terrorist activities but is meant to deal with international relations and relations with foreign powers and internal commotions, and not with sedition or terrorism.

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : My Honourable friend has at last stated the truth. This Regulation is meant to deal with internal commotion also and people, who, behind the screen, behind the Purdah, foment movements of terrorism and revolution, are meant to be dealt with under this Regulation. This is my answer to the interruption of my Honourable friend. I was finishing and he interrupted me. I say that if Government were to take some trouble to ascertain the root causes and eradicate those causes, which I find to be more economic than political, we should hear much less of terrorism and revolutionary activities in this country. For, Sir, I do believe that the pangs of hunger are the worst possible pangs and people afflicted with the pangs of hunger cannot be held responsible for deeds which we all must deplore.

Sir, I oppose the motion.

Mr. J. M. Chatarji (Bengal : Nominated Official) : Sir, the motion before the House is to repeal the Bengal State-Prisoners Regulation of 1818. This Regulation, however, has been extended, on different occasions, by various enactments, to parts other than Bengal, and the motion for repeal will, therefore, mean that it will be repealed not only in respect of Bengal but also in respect of other parts of the country to which it has been extended under various Acts.

[Mr. J. M. Chatarji.]

Mr. S. C. Mitra : How will the repeal of this Regulation affect the other Acts ? What is the relevancy ?

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : It will not affect the other Acts but it will affect the areas to which it has been extended. In the discussions which have followed the motion, Bengal and the situation in that Province have necessarily loomed very large. It may, however, be mentioned that the Regulation provides for several contingencies only one of which, as has been pointed out by the previous speaker, is that arising from internal commotion. There are other aspects of the Regulation which do not concern Bengal particularly and on those aspects there will probably be other speakers to speak.

As regards the danger to the State from internal commotion, I need mention only one aspect which must be patent to those who have to carry on the day to day administration in the country. We have heard of terrorism and other matters connected with circumstances which this Regulation is intended to provide against. It may be said that of late the Province has taken powers to combat the most recent phase of subversive activities in the form of terrorism. Why, then, have this Regulation on the Statute-book ? As has been pointed out by my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, the sources of mischief are very difficult to reach under the ordinary laws of the land. Sir, during the last four years I have had to deal with hundreds of political prisoners. I have also had the awful misfortune of having to attend an intended victim of a terroristic outrage immediately after the crime was committed. Fortunately for those who stood by that victim, it pleased Providence to help them in bringing him back from the jaws of death. I have also been the recipient of many threatening letters while in the discharge of my duties. I do not boast of these experiences. As an official, it has been my duty to face them. As an Indian and as a Bengali, it has been my misfortune to have been in circumstances in which I had to witness the misery of many promising young men, a misery which they not only brought upon themselves but one which they carried to their homes, their families, their relations and their friends. I do not think, Sir, there is anyone in this House who will not deplore these developments. I believe the voice is unanimous in deploring these developments and in wishing that they did not occur. We have also heard, times without number, that the ways in which the Government are trying to tackle the situation are not proper. We have yet to know what exactly is the proper solution. It is exactly that which has not been quite clearly and plainly put. It is not my business to go into them, nor do I intend to go to the root causes of these activities. But what I do intend to say here and now is that behind all these manifestations of unrest there must be some spirit and some power which is not quite manifest and it is to get at the source of that mischief that the Government must always have some power in reserve. I have known boys and young men who have done deeds which, in their cooler moments, they would probably never have thought of doing and which, in their cooler moments, they probably have repented having done. Now, what was it that incited them to do what they would not have done if they had not allowed their judgment to be clouded by extraneous influences ? Sir, it is the atmosphere which is in the country. I will not go deeper into the causes which have led to the development of that atmosphere. Some may be of the opinion that it is due to an irresponsible Press ; others may hold that it may be due to irresponsible speakers on public platforms ; others, again, would put it down to economic and political discontent. Whatever the reason may be, it will probably not be denied that each and one of these causes has in varying extent contributed to the situation which we have unfortunately to face at the present moment. Now, what is the remedy against those who will not show their hands but who will use these impressionable young men to do all the dirty acts that they, in the secrecy of their own office or their chamber, want them to do. A power like that given in Regulation III of 1818 is about the only power which the State can possibly have for exercise in times of internal commotion and grave emergency. I have heard some speakers say that the powers have been abused, but that is quite another matter. That power has been abused or that some officials of the Government have exceeded their powers is no argument that the power is unnecessary and superfluous. Unless you have the power you cannot exercise it in case of necessity. I should think that many of those, who, with a sense of their own security, decry the possession of such power, would, when faced with threats and dangers from outside, come to those very men who are looked upon as the myrmidons of the administration which sanctions the exercise of such powers. Sir, in my official career, I have often been amused by the conduct of people who have large interests at stake in the country. I have known of instances in which the prospective heirs to large landed interests have been either overtly or covertly implicated in some subversive movements. It required only a few minutes conversation with such people to convince them that the views they entertained were not only subversive of the State but that they might mean ruin to their own future career. What was the influence that made them go into planes of conduct to which they could never have thought of going if they had time coolly and calmly to reflect upon what they were going to do. I can cite one instance, in which the President of a Union Board, who happened to be the grandson of a great Maharaja in Bengal, gave me notice that he with some of his fellow members had decided to resign from the Union Board and to carry on an intensive no-tax campaign within his area. When I got that intimation, I got into touch with the old Maharaja who naturally was very much fluttered about it. I went to the place and had a quiet conversation : it took me about half an hour to convince him that if they did anything like that, the next thing that his *raiya*s would do, would be to turn him out from his beautiful palace, to take out all his motor cars from his garage and to ask him for the privilege of occupying the palace from which they had been kept out so long.

An Honourable Member : Who is this gentleman ?

Mr. J. M. Chatarji : I may be pardoned for not mentioning the name ; for the old Maharaja is still alive in Bengal and he is one of the most loyal supporters of Government with a very sensible head on very old shoulders. It did not take me long to convince the young man : he felt that I had gone there like a friend to talk the matter over with him and to find out the reasons which led him into that frame of mind. It may be that we shall have to cope with influences which we cannot possibly get round with the ordinary criminal law of the country and it is for that reason that the Government must have the power to act upon reliable information and when they are convinced that sinister influences are at work which could only have the inevitable effect of leading to internal commotion.

[Mr. J. M. Chatarji.]

Sir, I need not detain the House very long. I can only say this that anyone who has got an ounce of practical experience in the administration of the country will probably recognise the need for the State to have powers for use in emergencies like that we certainly have in Bengal today. It is no use concealing the facts from ourselves. If we say that things have quieted down, the latest attempted outrage on the ruler of that Province would be a grim reminder of the embers. Fortunately for us, an all merciful dispensation of a wise Providence ruled that a career so bright should not be cut off in the prime of youth, and that a Province which was so bravely struggling to rise above her difficulties should not be cut off the guidance of a farsighted statesman that she has now the fortune to have to preside over her destinies. Sir, I believe that every parent and guardian in Bengal, whatever he may say outside, whatever he may say on public platforms and in the Press or whatever he may say in order to court popular favour, cannot but view with some amount of distress the position in that unfortunate Province in which he can never be sure that his young ward, away from him possibly for purposes of education, training or employment, is very safe. I might admit that laws are not the only thing to meet the situation. There must be other avenues : and along with those who have always thought that Government must have powers to keep control over those who, without showing their own hands, directly engineer sinister movements, and lead innocent blooming lives into devious ways and paths, I have also been among those who thought there must be other remedies also for a solution of the most difficult problem that the State has ever had to face. Sir, it is some consolation to the people of my Province that they have at last an administrator who has the breadth of vision and the courage to look deeper into the problems and to take whatever measures he may think necessary.

Sir, at a time like this, it would be unfair to Bengal, it would be unfair to the country, to do anything to cripple her honest efforts to set herself again on the path of progress. Sir, I oppose the motion. (Applause.)

Mr. N. R. Gunjal (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : (The Honourable Member, supporting the motion, spoke in the vernacular.)

THE BENGAL STATE-PRISONERS REGULATION (REPEALING) BILL.

the other purposes which are mentioned in the preamble to the Regulation. If I may quote for a moment from that preamble, it is stated that :

"Whereas reasons of State, embracing the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign Powers, the preservation of tranquillity in the territories of Native Princes entitled to its protection and the security of the British dominions from foreign hostility and from internal commotion....."

Now, you will see, Sir, that at least 75 per cent. of the objects of the Regulation are devoted to matters other than quelling internal commotion, and I think I am right in saying that probably some 75 per cent. of the use which is made of this Regulation at present is intended to serve those purposes and not the purposes of dealing with internal commotion. However, the Honourable the Mover wishes the House now, because he objects to the use that is made on that 25 per cent. basis, to repeal the entire Regulation and to leave Government without any powers whatever for fulfilling its other obligations. If I may say so, Sir, his attitude appears to be somewhat like that of the auctioneer who said to a prospective purchaser : "I am sorry, Sir, if you wish to buy this table lamp, you must also take the garden roller." I am quite sure that the Honourable the Home Member will have very good reasons to tell us why it is quite out of the question for him to accept the table lamp. My only object is to try and assure the House that it is quite impossible for the Government to purchase the garden roller. I will now attempt to give the House my reasons for that view.

Sir, as the House is well aware, India is surrounded by a very long line of frontier, on the other side of which there are a number of foreign countries. There are, out of these facts, arising certain implications and obligations which make it important for the Government of India to possess the power of restraint over the movement of individuals. I mainly refer to refugees from foreign countries who may take asylum in India ; also I refer to persons whose presence, within the borders of an Indian State, cannot be tolerated in the interests of law and order. I am concerned, as Foreign Secretary, mainly with refugees from foreign countries and with the use of Regulation III as it arises out of the presence in this country of such foreign refugees. The House will realise that along that enormous stretch of the country which borders India, there are a series of States in various stages of personal rule. In those States, dynasties rise and fall, and with those rises and falls, there are necessarily a certain number of individuals who are obnoxious or may have reason to fear the existing dynasty and those individuals very often take refuge in India. It is obviously in the interest of India to see that those refugees are not in a position to create trouble for the country from which they have fled. Now, it will be easy enough for the Government of India to say to these people : "you must go and live in a certain place",—but without legal powers to enforce such orders, there is nothing to prevent those refugees from living where they like and, as they have frequently done in the past, from escaping again to the country from which they originally fled and there causing an amount of trouble to our relations with that neighbour, which I do not think I need go into. Some form of personal restraint is, therefore, necessary not only for the good of India and the maintenance of peace, but for the fulfilment of ordinary international obligations. I could, Sir, quote numerous instances in which the Regulation has been applied, but it is perhaps unnecessary to trouble the House at length on this point. I can only say quite frankly that from the foreign point of view,—and I have done no more than touch upon the political point of view relating to Indian States,—I can say from the foreign point of view, with complete confidence, that it would be utterly impracticable to deprive the Government of India of the powers which they at present possess under this Regulation. I, therefore, would ask,—is it worth while for the House to take into consideration a motion for the complete repeal of a Regulation, under which alone these powers can be exercised?

[Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe.]

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai (Sind : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support this Bill. My namesake, Captain Chaudhri Lal Chand, has spoken on this Bill, but he held a different view and a different brief. I must say that I do not in the least blame him for the opinion that he has held and which he placed before the House. I will not go to the extent of blaming him for it, because he is a Nominated Member, nor do I suggest that he holds that opinion and supports Government in expectation of some help like a re-nomination to the next Assembly.....

An Honourable Member : What are your expectations?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I am not going to blame my friend at all for the opinion he holds. As I said, I am not in a mood to blame him, but I shall point out his mistake very soon. My friend, in his zeal and enthusiasm to speak for Government, has missed the real issue involved in this Bill. He failed to understand the very requirements of this measure and proceeded to make a general criticism and condemn the terrorists, the Civil Disobedience and other movements. Sir, those things have no bearing on this measure at all. Nobody will say that the terrorist and other allied movements should not be curbed, and if for that purpose Government adopts certain reasonable measures, if they do not do anything unlawful, they will have every support from this side; and they will be perfectly justified in adopting all proper and reasonable measures. But, Sir, he has really missed the issue involved in this Bill. I do not belong to Bengal, and I cannot cite many instances of injustice that have been perpetrated, as has been done under this measure; but I must say, Sir, that though this Bill is applicable to Bengal alone, the whole House knows there are similar Acts in force in other Presidencies as well. In the year 1827, they have passed certain regulations which are in force in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies. They exist up to this day. I only ask whether the present civilisation, whether the present times require such Regulations, and that is the main question that should be considered. I will not go to the extent of saying that terrorists should not be confined and that measures are not necessary to put them down. The question is what are the provisions of this Regulation and whether any sensible man can say that such un-British laws should remain on the Statute-book any more. Let us take the history of these Regulations. They were made in 1818 and 1827, and in order to come to a decision on this motion we should know what the provisions of those Regulations contain. These are Regulations for internment persons, but the point is, is that internment done in a manner so as to give justice to the interned and the trial may not be a mockery or a farce? If you are still in need of special laws to meet the present conditions and present circumstances, do make them by all means, but we are asked to make laws putting restrictions on peoples' liberty, even freedom of speech, etc. Such laws are being actually made even now but provisions are made in them in order to give opportunities to people to explain themselves. But under the 1818 Regulation, a man can be interned without giving any reasons. Is that right I ask, is that justice I ask, is that British law I ask?

An Honourable Member : No.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : When a man is interned without any reasons, if he asks what is the harm he has done, the reply would be : "I won't tell you." When the representatives of the people come here and ask questions as to why he is interned, they get answers such as were given the day before yesterday, that they are not going to say anything or give any reasons to the representatives of the people.

An Honourable Member : Their case is put before two Judges.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : No, it is not. I shall come to that. There is no charge against the man, and the matter does not go beyond an executive officer. It is a matter in which you are actually curbing the liberty of a man. When you do so, you should certainly bring his case before some judicial authority so that the man may vindicate his innocence and show to the public that the Government are proceeding on a wrong assumption. What happens in this country is this. Everybody knows who virtually decides these things. It is none else but the police, it is the C. I. D. The C. I. D. and others bring information to the officers. It may have been a police constable who gave the information. When it goes before the higher officers, they cannot over-ride the constable's information. The horror comes to them that if they do not support the constable now, then he won't give them information afterwards and others will also not give information. Can you say, therefore, that the way by which you get this man interned is pure, honest and impartial? Therefore, what I say is, repeal all these Regulations, and if necessary enact another law amending the defects of these Regulations. By all means you intern him. I have no objection to that if you have any reasonable grounds, but after getting him interned at one place, what do you lose by giving him a charge sheet? He is not out; he is under restraint, and why do you not bring the case before two Judges to decide? What harm is there in doing that? Why do you perpetuate such a measure which does not give any help in that direction? As regards the terrorists, their cases are brought before two Judges, and why should you not do the same thing in the case of these interned men? Is it because you will not be able to prove the case that you do not want to do it? In that case, make a law that the matter will be summarily tried and not elaborately tested under the Evidence Act and so on. At any rate, the man will have some chance. What happens under the Regulation is, you just gag the man, clap him in, and that is all, finished. Therefore, this is a law, which should not exist any more. There is only one question which I have to answer and that came from the Foreign Secretary. The Foreign Secretary is not here in his seat; however, I will reply to his point. He said that this Regulation is intended to apply not only to internal commotions but also to external disturbances in which foreigners are concerned. My point is, after he is interned, why not enquire whether that is really a reason for internment? Nowadays measures have been passed to protect the interests from foreigners aggression also. We have in this very House passed the Press Act controlling the Press from saying anything against a foreign sovereign or government. We have also passed laws by which people have been barred.

[Mr. Lalchand Navalrai.]
from doing certain things. These are new laws which have replaced the old antiquated laws. Then why do you want to keep this one? Therefore, what is asked by my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, is not that you should not take any steps against terrorism or against the Civil Disobedience Movement but that if you are going to intern a man you should do it justly according to the rules and regulations in your own country. You should not place him in one place and say that you shall never open your mouth. Sir, I support this Bill whole-heartedly.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: I am perhaps fortunate in that, on this the first occasion on which I have the honour of addressing this House, the issue should be one that is perfectly clear cut and completely lacking in ambiguity. The answer to the Honourable the Mover's motion today must be a clear "Yes" or a clear "No". There is no half way house about it. I am perhaps less fortunate in that the subject is, owing to the Honourable the Mover's courage and persistence, one with which this House is perhaps almost unduly familiar and which I am perhaps not wrong in describing as having been discussed almost threadbare. On numerous occasions within the last ten years, this motion or an almost exactly similar motion has been before this House. The first occasion was a little more than ten years ago, the last was a little less than six months ago, when this House, after a somewhat brief debate and without a division, rejected a motion that this Bill should be circulated for opinion. Now, Sir, the Honourable the Mover in an early passage in his very eloquent, and if I may be allowed to say so, very moderately worded, speech gave expression to the following sentiment. "No administration", he said, "has a right to exist by suppressing the voice of the people and the legitimate freedom of the people". That, Sir, is a sentiment to which nobody, least of all myself, who has any regard for ordered Government or for liberty, can take the slightest exception. On the other hand, I am afraid that in these days we must face the facts and however much we may object in theory, today we must admit that there are in point of fact a great many Governments in a great many countries which exist, to put it quite frankly, by suppressing the voice of the people and by suppressing their legitimate claims to freedom. It is not necessary for me to mention the names of those countries. They will suggest themselves to every Member of this House. In those countries, the power of internment of Government's political opponents, not necessarily of violent opponents but merely its theoretical critics, is used on a scale far surpassing anything that has ever been seen in India. The Honourable Member reinforced that principle, which I have just quoted from his speech, by reading to the House certain quotations from the speeches or letters of that eminent Secretary of State, the late Lord Morley. Now, Sir, Lord Morley was of course a very eminent Liberal statesman, but he was essentially, if I may say so without disrespect, a statesman of the doctrinaire liberal school, and like so many of that school, his actions were very often not in strict accord with his expressed sentiments. It is no doubt within the knowledge of every Member of this House that, whatever sentiments Lord Morley might have expressed in those letters which the Honourable the Mover quoted, he did not in fact agree to the repeal of this Regulation, though he was repeatedly and incessantly pressed to do so. I would like the House to listen, if they will bear with me for one moment, to a short quotation from a speech of that statesman in which he alluded to the pressure put on him to repeal this Regulation, and in which he said that the Regulation is:

"of course, a tremendous power to place in the hands of an Executive Government. But I said to myself then, and I say now, that I decline to take out of the hands of the Government of India any weapon that they have got, in circumstances so formidable, so obscure and so impenetrable as are the circumstances that surround the British Government in India."

He then went on to say:

"You must protect the lives of your officers. You must protect peaceful and harmless people, both Indian and European, from the blood stained havoc of anarchical conspiracy. We deplore the necessity, but we are bound to face the facts. I myself recognise this necessity with infinite regret, and with something, perhaps, rather deeper than regret. But it is not the Government, either here or in India, who are the authors of this necessity."

Now, Sir, in the face of that quotation, I really do not think that the Honourable the Mover can claim that the late Lord Morley was a very stalwart champion of the motion that he wants the House to adopt today.

The Honourable the Mover has quoted instances in which he alleges that in the past the Regulation has been abused or has at any rate been used without proper discrimination and in effect, he intended to imply, in a cruel and vindictive manner. I regret I cannot follow the Honourable the Mover into the details of those cases, but I must admit that I do not see how the repeal of the Regulation now would right those past wrongs, even if they do in fact exist; but I do most emphatically take the standpoint that at present the Regulation is not being used in any such manner. I deny altogether that the Regulation at present is being abused. On this point there is one side issue which I would like to mention very briefly. One speaker, I cannot remember who, attacked the Government in respect of a reply which I gave yesterday admitting that in regard to the internment of a certain gentleman, Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose, the Government of India had consulted the Local Government and he implied that by this consultation the Government of India had exceeded their rights, their statutory or legal rights, and had evaded their responsibility. Now in regard to that, I admit I am wholly unrepentant; and I do not for a moment admit either that the Government of India, by consulting the Local Government, have evaded their own responsibility, and in fact I go a great deal further than that—I say that the Government of India would have been very much to blame if they had come to a decision in a case of that sort without consulting its local agents—the Government of Bengal. On that point I fear I cannot for a moment allow that the Government of India are in any way whatever to blame.

Now, if I may allude to what was said by the last speaker, Mr. Lalchand Navalrai, I should like to say,—and here I speak from personal experience,—that the picture which he gave to this House of the procedure that is followed in deciding whether a person is to be interned or not, that that picture was an absolutely misleading one and that what actually happens is nothing of the kind. He made out that Government, on the report of some constable of the C. I. D.,—those mythical constables of the C. I. D. of whom there are very few but who in the imagination of some Honourable Members exist by the million,—on the information supplied by some constable of the C. I. D., and entirely unverified and entirely unchecked by such other information as is available, the Government decides that a man must be interned. Now, I have had in another [Sir Henry Craik.] capacity myself to deal with a considerable number of these cases,—not of course under the Regulation but under the very analogous case of the power which was given, and still is given, to the Punjab Government by the Punjab Criminal Law Amendment Act. Under that Act, the Government has power to detain, for a limited period only, without trial, persons whom it suspects of being likely to cause internal commotion or to upset the tranquillity of the realm. I would ask the House to believe me, when I say that the picture drawn by the Honourable Member from Sind of what actually happens in those cases is entirely wrong. What happened within my experience? Practically all the people, at any rate the very great majority of British Indian subjects interned under this Regulation,—and I think I am right in saying all those interned under the analogous power given by the local Criminal Law Amendment Act,—are interned because they are implicated in the terrorist movement. Now the sort of thing that used to happen was this. A report, not by a C. I. D. constable at all, but a report, usually by an officer of at least gazetted status and often of a very high gazetted status, would come to me and it would say in effect “for months, we have been following, trailing so and so. We know his movements; we have checked them up for weeks; we know who he is in touch with, we know who he is corresponding with. We know, or at any rate we in our own minds are absolutely convinced, that he has just come into possession of arms or bombs. We cannot lay our hands on these, because we do not know where to look for them and because, every possible precaution is taken to conceal them. Further, we know”—and this information generally comes to the officer within twenty-four hours before he would approach me,—further, he would say,—“we know that this particular man contemplates a particular outrage and we have strong reasons to suspect that that outrage will be attempted within the next day or two”. Very often it is even known who the intended victim is. We know sometimes, or we have reason to believe, what the place of the outrage will be....

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: Who gives that information? Who gives that information to that officer?

An Honourable Member: Order, order.

Another Honourable Member: Why “Order, order”?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): Order, order.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: That information is given by methods which are necessarily secret and devious, but to which I have myself on several occasions applied every possible test. It is easy enough to say “Oh, this man is a police informer, he is not worth anything”. But you can believe him when he makes a statement if you know that ninety-five per cent. of his previous reports are true, and when you can check up by actual past events or by information drawn from other sources that the report put forward is one that the informer could not have invented or could not have found out for himself, unless the events related had come to his own actual knowledge. Now, Sir, confronted with information like that, I should like the House to reflect very seriously, what action an officer of Government in the position I held and now hold is to take. Am I to say: “well, I cannot put this suspect before a Court; I have no evidence to put before a Court. But on the other hand, I am convinced that if I do nothing, somebody's life will not be worth twenty-four hours' purchase”? Am I to say: “very well, I will allow him to go on, I will take every possible precaution, I will surround the intended victim with gun-men, I will post sentries around his house and will not allow him to go out, and then let him take his chance”? Well, Sir, the experience of the last ten years has proved, if it has proved anything, to the satisfaction of anyone who knows anything about the subject, that, given a sufficiently desperate man, a man who is entirely reckless of the consequences to himself and who is determined on assassination, that no precautions, however carefully planned, can prevent him carrying out his design. Well, if I take that line, if I say, “let the man go on, and only when he attempts to commit his outrage, then arrest him and then try to get a conviction in Court”, am I not surely running an entirely unjustifiable risk, while I have this weapon available in my hand, the power to intern? I am not at the moment speaking of the Regulation but of the analogous power given by the Provincial Act. Surely, I should be gravely failing in my duty if I allowed this man to go on and attempt to commit the outrage planned and allow his intended victim to risk his life. No, Sir, I cannot for a moment accept that view; I think I should be gravely wrong if, in circumstances such as those,—and those are the actual circumstances of half a dozen cases at least with which I have actually had to deal,—if, in such circumstances as these, I did not use this weapon which the law has placed in my hand. I feel sure that the House will agree and that in fact nobody in the House would take a different view if he was placed in similar circumstances. (Hear, hear.) I should be absolutely wrong if I neglected to use an instrument which might save several valuable lives.

Sir, the words which I read from Lord Morley's speech speak of his unwillingness to deprive the Government of India of this weapon or indeed of any weapon “in circumstances so formidable, so obscure and so impenetrable” as were the circumstances of that day. Our justification for the retention of this Regulation is that the circumstances of today are every bit as formidable and every bit as obscure. We are today confronted with two very grave dangers. The first is anarchical crime and the second is communism, and it is against these two dangers, almost exclusively, that the Regulation is now being used. I am not for the moment speaking of its use in regard to the persons referred to by my Honourable friend, Mr. Metcalfe, but its use in regard to internal commotion is now practically entirely confined to terrorists and communist agents. I do not know if the House is familiar with a phrase which has lately become a sort of cant saying or a common place piece of journalese in England,—it came over from America,—it is a phrase “Public Enemy No. 1”. It was originally applied to a certain notorious gangster in America whose name, I think, was Dillinger, who was “bumped off”, to use again an American expression, by a squad of police outside a Chicago cinema the other day. That gentleman, who was responsible for I do not know how many murders, was known as “Public Enemy No. 1”. Now, Sir, I take it that in India our “Public Enemy No. 1” is the anarchist, the terrorist who brings to his abominable cult every kind of diabolical ingenuity, not only in carrying out his crimes but in concealing the traces and the evidence of it. Further than that, he exercises the same diabolical ingenuity in perverting to his cult ill-instructed, uneducated and half-formed youths, and I submit that in both those capacities, I am perfectly entitled to call him our "Public Enemy Number One". I further submit that, in dealing with a man of this nature, who not only deliberately sets the law at defiance, but whose object is deliberately to paralyse and render ineffectual the whole machinery of the law, we are entitled to use any weapon, however drastic, that we have at our disposal. The methods used in other countries are, of course, far more drastic than those which we apply. The gangster, who first earned the title of "Public Enemy No. 1", was hunted for months before he was eventually exterminated. There was no question of arresting him. He was to be shot at sight and that was his eventual fate. He fell riddled with bullets.

[Sir Henry Craik.]

Now, as regards communists. I really think that I may call the communist "Public Enemy No. 2". Communism is, as the House is aware, a very growing danger in certain parts of India and the country is being, I will not say flooded, but infiltrated by communist agents, many of them trained by the Communist Internationale or by communist teaching institutions at Moscow and most of them supported by the funds of the Communist Internationale. Those people are steadily penetrating into India and as regards their objects, it will be within the recollection of the House that we had recently within the last year a judicial pronouncement by a High Court that their object is,—I cannot remember the exact words, but it comes to this,—by armed revolution to subvert not only the existing form of Government but the whole fabric of society, to nationalise land, factories, railways, irrigation schemes and practically every sort of wealth and, in fact, to turn the existing fabric of society completely upside down. Their object is to do that by means of an armed rising of what they call "the peasants and workers" and it has been held judicially that that object is not a distant or eventual one but an immediate object. Against those persons, I submit, we are fully entitled to use this weapon of the Regulation. It is impossible, in practically all cases against persons of that character, to secure a conviction in a Court of law. Their methods are underground, evidence is not available and I am not even ready to say that the holding of these doctrines is in itself an offence. But, at the same time, they constitute a public danger only slightly less appalling than the anarchist.

Sir, I might have appealed to this House to reject this motion on the ground that its acceptance would stultify the decision to which the House itself arrived with very little hesitation less than six months ago, but I do not desire for a moment to take that tactical point. I would appeal to the House to give its verdict entirely on the merits of the case. That is to say, to say definitely whether it desires to deprive the Government at this stage in the history of India, at this stage both in the history of the terrorist movement and the history of the communist movement, and also, I may say, because I think it is just as relevant, at this stage in the history of the constitutional progress, of this valuable weapon for dealing with the forms of menace which I have described. I have little doubt that, from a House which has repeatedly assured Government of its detestation of the terrorist movement, of its readiness to help Government in getting rid of that movement, the answer will be that which I hope the House will give. (Applause.)

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, if I intervene in this debate at this stage, it is to bring to the notice of this House certain facts to which the Honourable the Home Member has not adverted. While speaking of the Home Member, Sir, I wish heartily to congratulate him upon his maiden speech and I am quite sure that as a Home Member he will make himself thoroughly popular with both Sections of the House (Applause) by representing the case of the Government as fairly and fully as he has done today. And if I criticise the Honourable the Home Member, it is not because what he has said but what he has omitted to say, and that was perhaps because it was not in his brief. This Regulation was passed as far back as 1818, and it was brought under review of this House in 1922. In the report of the Repressive Laws Committee, signed by the then Home Member after the examination of the present Home Member who was then officiating as the Home Secretary of the Government of India, the unanimous decision of the Repressive Laws Committee dealing with the State Prisoners Regulation was that it required to be amended, and Honourable Members will find this fact clearly stated at page 7, paragraph 13 of their report. This was a compromise report to which the then Home Member appended his signature as also the Law Member and it was then expected that what was given in this report would be given effect to by the Government of India. Now, Sir, Honourable Members will find that this report was signed on second September, 1921. Now, it is about 13 years since the publication of this report that this House has been expecting the Government of India to implement their decision by bringing forward before this House appropriate laws. They never said for one moment that they were not going to abide by the decision of the Repressive Laws Committee. On the other hand they were co-signatories to the unanimous report of that Committee and when, in the first Assembly, this question was raised by one of us, the Honourable occupants of the Treasury Benches assured the House that they were taking steps to bring appropriate laws to give effect to the recommendations of that committee. Some laws were brought. They were brought forward and they were passed. One of them at least has since been repealed. Now, Sir, the question that this House is entitled to ask of the Honourable the Home Member is this : do not the Government stand pledged to modify the provisions of the State Prisoners Regulation in accordance with the decision of the Repressive Laws Committee to which they were a consenting party. That is my first question. Now, the second question that I wish to put is this. Whatever the Honourable the Home Member has given is a blood-curdling picture of the activities of the communists and terrorists in this country, we are used to that picture, only the other day his distinguished predecessor, speaking probably from a similar brief, raised the hair-raising story of the terrorist movement which required the enactment of what is known as the Criminal Law Amendment Act. Now, the plenary and full provisions of that permanent measure of the Bengal Government of India legislation is to suppress terrorism in Bengal. Under the provisions of that Act, the Home Department of the Government of India, only the other day, issued a Notification declaring as illegal all communistic organisations throughout the length and breadth of the country. Therefore, we are led to the conclusion that the Criminal Law Amendment Act, enacted by this House only the other day, is sufficient in the eyes of the Government to deal with the dual terror to which the Honourable the Home Member has adverted, namely terrorism and communism. If that be so, what is the necessity of retaining on the Statute-book an old rusty weapon which has long been superseded by an enactment of this Legislature passed only the other day. That I submit is my second question. The Honourable the Home Member has said that there are other countries where more drastic laws are passed and he asked this side of the House to recall those countries. We remember them, but may I ask the Honourable the Home Member to extend to us the courtesy of studying the constitution of those countries. Have they got an irresponsible Central Government, or have they not a responsible parliamentary system of Government? It may be that they have got Dictators but these are the Dictators created by the people and maintained by the people and have the confidence of the people and the moment they forfeit that confidence they will be thrown out of their dictatorship. Can we say the same of the Honourable the Home Member? Can we say the same of the entire occupants of the Treasury Benches? If they had been there by our vote and suffrages, the analogy between the countries which enjoy responsible Government and whose heads resort to repressive laws for the purpose of suppressing terrorism and crime in that country would have been more appropriate. I hope the Honourable occupants of the Treasury Benches will remember when they deal with this question the very antithesis that exists between the Governments of those countries and the Government of this country. Sir, we have been told that, so far as internal commotion is concerned, this Regulation is at the present moment utilised for the purpose of suppressing terrorism and communism. I have already reminded the House that the Government have a sufficient and strong weapon in their possession which the Government have used most effectively for the purpose of suppressing the dual mischief of which the Government complain. The Honourable the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Metcalfe, said that 75 per cent. of the detenus under the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation are foreigners and are persons connected with illegal foreign activities and only 25 per cent. of them are persons....

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : I do not claim any exact knowledge on the subject. I said that was my impression. I stand open to correction. I am not certain of the figures.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I understood the Foreign Secretary to state in that sense. It is only a rough calculation. I am not binding him down to the exact percentage. The bulk may be 75 per cent. or 70 per cent. or it may be even 50 per cent. We are concerned here with the bulk of the persons dealt with under this Regulation and they are persons who come under the exact wording of the preamble to the Regulation and according to the estimates of the Foreign Secretary, only a small fraction, 25 per cent., it may be more or less, are persons who are the disturbers of internal peace. Now, so far as the disturbers of internal peace are concerned, I have already pointed out that we have given Government a carte blanche. They have been entitled now under the provisions of the Criminal Law Amendment Act to issue lettres de cachet against anybody whom they think responsible for terroristic or communistic activities. Now as regards those who come under the jurisdiction of the Foreign Secretary, the bulk of the people, the Repressive Laws Committee were presented with a similar argument and it was pointed out to them that this State Regulation was being used very largely for the purpose of upholding the due maintenance of the alliances formed by the British Government with foreign powers, the preservation of tranquillity in the territories of Indian Princes entitled to its protection and the security of the British Dominions from foreign hostility. The Repressive Laws Committee unanimously decided that this limited purpose for which the Statute was being used should be clearly defined in another Statute and that the Government of India should take in hand the enactment of such a Statute. My friend, Mr. Anklesaria, ejaculated a moment ago, that this was a motion for the repeal of the State Prisoners' Regulation. He has been long enough in this House to know that, on a consideration motion being passed, it is open to any Member of Government to refer the matter to Select Committee, and to limit its scope in the Select Committee, for the purpose for which the Repressive Laws Committee recommended the Statute should be limited. Now if the occupants of the Treasury Benches intended to carry out the recommendations of their own Committee they would have said that they are quite prepared to consider the State Prisoners' Regulation by limiting its scope to persons mentioned by the Foreign Secretary. But that has not been done because if that had been done I am quite sure that my Honourable friend, the Mover of the motion, would have been found in a more compromising mood. Now, Sir, the position, therefore, is this. If you wish to limit the scope of the Statute, for the limited purpose for which it is being mainly used, you will have no difficulty in limiting it for that purpose; and the Statute as it stands is too wide and it is against that that we complain. It has been said by my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, that we on this side of the House complain that prisoners and persons dealt with under this State Regulation are dealt with upon ex-parte evidence and ex-parte information. That fact is admitted by the Honourable the Home Member that there is ex-parte statement and ex-parte information, most of it secret information, upon which these people are apprehended and detained in custody for an indefinite term. Now what we ask the Honourable the Home Member is that, whatever may have been the position in 1818, we have now regularised our criminal procedure. In 1818 there was no criminal procedure at all. Hic volo hic jubeo,—that was the compendious expression of the law of the executive government, but since then we have regularized the procedure. We have the Evidence Act and the Criminal Procedure Code, and I am somewhat surprised that my friend, Mr. Anklesaria, who is drawn from the Bar, should ask if there is no concoction of evidence in cases falling under the Indian Penal Code. If there is concoction of evidence in cases falling under the Indian Penal Code, there is a Court of appeal of which perhaps my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, has not yet heard, and there is a Court of revision of which I am afraid my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, is wholly ignorant. If there is concoction of evidence it passes through the filtering judgment of two superior judicial Courts and is there any similar safeguard....

Mr. N. N. Anklesaria : My Honourable friend has a very short memory. The Honourable the Home Member distinctly stated and made it clear that it is not possible to put the evidence before a Court of law.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I never thought that my Honourable friend, Mr. Anklesaria, would arrogate to himself the position of the Home Member. I was dealing with the legal aspect of the question and I was turning to the Honourable the Home Member with reference to the remarks that fell from him that a great deal of the evidence has got to be necessarily secret and one-sided. Now I ask the Honourable the Home Member one question and I am quite sure that he will at once see the justice of our comment. In cases under the Indian Penal Code and under the general criminal law, which are tried by experienced Magistrates, where there is a law of evidence, where the evidence is tested by cross-examination, no less than 50 per cent. of the cases are set aside by the High Court on the ground that either the evidence is insufficient or that it is incredible or that it is concocted or that it has been believed without any justification.

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Did the Honourable Member say 50 per cent. ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Yes, about 50 per cent.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I cannot agree with that at all.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Which High Court is my Honourable friend talking about which sets aside 50 per cent. of the convictions ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I was dealing with the statistics that were collected in connection with the establishment of the Supreme Court in India, and portions of which have been sent out to England, showing how many cases are likely to appear before the Supreme Court. And it is in that document that Honourable Members will find the reference to which I have alluded. I am not referring to 50 per cent. up to the last decimal but about 50 per cent. is what I said. But let it be 25 per cent. of the cases. My argument is equally sound because it does not depend upon the percentage of cases.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That is a big drop, from 50 to 25, and you are now somewhere near the mark.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : There may be a big drop in the figures, but no drop in the argument. (Loud Laughter.)

The point I was making was that you have a considerable percentage of cases in which the High Courts have found that the evidence that was recorded by the trial Judge was either insufficient or incredible or concocted or otherwise inadequate to support a conviction. Now you have, therefore, a salutary check by a judicial officer which gives an innocent person the relief to which he is entitled. I ask the Honourable the Home Member what similar relief is provided to a person who is apprehended under the State Prisoners Regulations ? That is a question which worries me and I am sure that it worries many Members on this side of the House. Have you got any check upon the vagaries of the police and other subordinates who collect evidence ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : We have the evidence almost invariably reviewed by two experienced Judges. The question of the continuity of the internment or release of the internee is periodically reviewed by the Government.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Once upon a time, in 1922, this evidence was reviewed by two High Court Judges. Then the High Court Judges complained and said : "This is not our job." Now the evidence is being reviewed, as the Honourable the Home Member knows by two Sessions Judges but reviewed in camera, without the arguments of Counsel, without hearing both sides, and without the salutary test of checking the credibility of that evidence through the process of cross-examination. What is the value of this check ? I was only dealing, when I drew the analogy of the High Courts setting aside the convictions arrived at under the process of law by the constituted judicial tribunals and compared them with the lettres de cachet issued by the executive government against which the prisoner had really no relief. The point I was making is, assume that where in a judicial trial you have at least half the number of people,—the Honourable the Law Member does not like half but will perhaps concede one-fourth or a certain percentage of people who are wrongly convicted : what guarantee is there and what check have you provided against the illegal incarceration of State prisoners under the Regulation ? There is no provision, and I can well understand it. In the good old days of 1818, when there was no procedure, no Evidence Act, no Legislative Assembly and indeed no Legislative Council....

An Honourable Member : And no lawyers !

Sir Hari Singh Gour : And, as my friend very rightly points out, no lawyers to act as tribunes of the people, the executive government made the laws and administered them. Now, in 1934, can the Honourable the Home Member ask this House to retain these laws in the executive armoury without a protest ? And I say this protest was once made in 1921 by the Legislative Assembly, and it will continue to be made with increasing vigour by the later Assemblies. It is, therefore, time, while the Honourable the Home Member has got such friendly critics as my friend, Mr. Anklesaria (Laughter), and my friend, Mr. Yamin Khan (Laughter), to take courage in both hands and ameliorate the condition of these prisoners by reducing the severity of the Regulations and giving them a reasonable chance of defending themselves either in camera or in open Court according to the wishes and expediency of the Government. That, I submit, is a very reasonable request to make and if the Honourable the Home Member would only ponder over these small questions that we are bringing to his attention, I am sure he will feel that there is a great deal to be said on this side of the House. We may be treated by some Honourable Members on the other side as Public Enemy No. 1, but I can assure the Honourable Member that we, in our desire to co-operate with the Government, aspire to be Public Benefactors No. 1, and it is in that spirit that we ask the Honourable the Home Member not to make a dialectical point by saying that everything is well done and well tried, well tested by the executive government, because if the executive government is capable of testing these cases, why have the High Courts ? Why have judicial administration in this country ? Try every case yourself,—it will mean saving of time and money. Let all cases be dealt with by the executive government. Abolish all your Criminal Procedure Codes, the Evidence Act.....

An Honourable Member : And lawyers !

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The lawyers will act as advisers of the Government. (Laughter.) Raja Bahadur Krishnamachariar will be one of them. I, therefore, submit that this is not one of those cases in which the Government should carry their point by brute force. We know that situated as we are, we may not be able to carry this point in the division lobbies, but I appeal strongly to the Government to carefully reflect upon the injustice, that at least some people incarcerated under the State Prisoners Regulation have suffered, and to ameliorate their condition; and if this is done, I am quite sure that justice will not be over-strained. On the other hand the occupants of the Treasury Benches will receive the congratulations and thanks of the representatives of the people on this side of the House for having not only carried out the solemn pledge which they themselves gave as far back as 1921, but carrying out the repeated Resolutions passed by the House since that year. That I submit ought to add to the force and strong contention of Members on this side of the House. Whenever a question comes up on that side of the House, we on this side are alarmed by the words 'terrorism', 'anarchism', 'communism', and my timid friends, like the Raja Bahadur, are hypnotised into a willing acquiescence by the words: "Your land will be forfeited, your land will be nationalised, your property will be confiscated.".....

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

Raja Bahadur G. Krishnamachariar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : That is what the Congress says.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Let us not be hypnotised by these amulets, these charms, these talismans of the executive. Let us look at the question in a cool and calm light, as persons who wish to feel that while all lawlessness is curbed, in curbing that lawlessness, the innocent are not mixed up with the guilty. That, I submit, is the only point of difference between us on this side of the House and the occupants of the Treasury Benches. (Applause.)

Mr. S. C. Sen : Sir, I did not desire to take part in the discussion on this motion at this late stage. I support the motion of my friend so far as the repeal of this Regulation relating to internal commotion is concerned. We are much indebted to the Honourable the Home Member for informing us of the practice which he used to adopt as regards the terrorist movement in the Punjab, and also for the careful manner in which he looked into the papers. Of course, he denied that the Local Government had any voice in the administration of Regulation III of 1818 and that the whole responsibility lay on the Government of India. In this matter he could not enlighten us, as to what the procedure of the Government of India was, as regards any particular person who was considered to be a man to whom the provisions of Regulation III of 1818 should be applied. Sir, he referred to a particular case, namely that of Sarat Chandra Bose. I would ask him to refer to the papers in that case, to refer to the record of that case, and let us know, some time later, what inquiries the Government of India made in connection with that matter. I know, Sir, from personal interviews I had with my Honourable friend's predecessor, that he was actually guided in his orders by the Government of Bengal. (Hear, hear from the Opposition Benches.) I saw my Honourable friend's predecessor on more than ten or twelve occasions regarding this matter. I was instrumental in transferring Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose from the hot prison at Jubbulpore to his house at Kurseong. I was instrumental in getting his leave to send his brother Subhash Chandra Bose out of India for being treated at Vienna. I asked Sir Harry Haig, during the last Delhi Session, whether, now that the country was in a more quiet and peaceful condition, now that Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose had been transferred to his own home and as there was no complaint against him, he could release him. He said: "I can't release him. I can release him at once if the Government of Bengal would consent to such a release". (Hear, hear from the Opposition Benches.) That was his opinion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : What does the present Honourable Member say to that ?

Mr. S. C. Sen : I would, therefore, ask my friend, the Honourable the Home Member, to go into the papers. If he likes, I should like him to take advantage of the opinion of that eminent and brilliant lawyer whom the Government of India have been fortunate enough in having as their Law Member at the present moment. (Hear, hear from the Opposition Benches.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Here is a sporting offer. Place it before the Law Member.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Sir, from the speech made by the Honourable the Home Member, I consider him to be a sympathetic man, a man who will not decide matters in an autocratic manner, a man who is prepared to consider all these cases judicially and to the best of his ability. Sir, the Honourable the Home Member referred to certain cases which he said he had to decide based upon the reports of the police. He said that he took ample care to see that the police reports were correct, so far as he could judge them,—but that he could not do anything more. I suggest, Sir, why did he not act according to the provisions of the Act known as the Rowlatt Act, an Act which came out of the Rowlatt Committee's Report. Sir, the Rowlatt Committee, after considering the whole matter, came to the conclusion that an inquiry should be made as regards these particular cases in camera during which the accused or the detenu should be given an opportunity without the help of a lawyer to clear himself.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : And be present.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Yes, and be present and clear himself. Why can't you follow that procedure ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : By what agency is that inquiry to be held ?

Mr. S. C. Sen : That inquiry is to be held by two persons, one a High Court Judge and another any other well-known loyal person on whom the Government can place reliance.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does the Honourable Member challenge the authority of the Rowlatt Committee ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : No. But I did not remember what procedure it prescribed.

Mr. S. C. Sen : There was an Act, known as the Revolutionary Crimes Act, which came out as the consequence of the Rowlatt Committee's Report and he will probably find the procedure laid down there as also in the report of that Committee presided over by that eminent Judge, Sir John Rowlatt, and I ask my friend, I entreat him, so far as it lies in his power, to adopt the procedure suggested in that Act, and not to imprison these people for ever and without giving an opportunity to clear themselves.

Now, Sir, as regards this particular motion, I support it, because I do not see any utility in keeping it on the Statute-book. My friend, the Honourable the Home Member, referred to the two classes of cases in which this Act is sought to be applied; the first is the terrorist movement, and the second is the communist movement.....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : It has been applied not only in Bengal, but it has been applied in the North of India also.

Mr. S. C. Sen : The terrorist movement is not an all-India movement, nor have we seen references of such a movement in the papers because the papers are now gagged.....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : You never heard of the attempt to assassinate the Governor ?

Mr. S. C. Sen : That was several years ago.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : That was about three years ago.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : There were some cases in Delhi known as the Delhi conspiracy case.....

Mr. S. C. Sen : I have not heard of those cases.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : They were published in newspapers.

Mr. S. C. Sen : From the recent Act passed by the Bengal Legislative Council the newspapers are not allowed to publish the names of the prisoners or of the witnesses who are examined in a Court of law, nor to publish any part of the proceedings without the consent of the President of the Tribunal.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That explains why you did not read the Delhi conspiracy cases ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That might be infringing the law.

Mr. S. C. Sen : I am talking of Bengal. As my Honourable friend, the Law Member, knows perfectly well, the Bengal Act recently passed goes much in advance of this Regulation 1818.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : This is milk and water in comparison.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Yes, compared to the Bengal Acts, this is milk and water. Under these circumstances, when the Government have got such powerful weapons in their hands, why keep the rusty weapon of 1818 ? I ask the Honourable the Home Member to consider what is the use of retaining this Regulation in the Statute-book when they are armed from head to foot with more powerful weapons ? I, therefore, consider, Sir, that this motion which has been brought forward, and especially so far as its application to internal commotion is concerned, is well conceived and ought to be supported by the whole House. With these remarks, I support this motion.

[At this stage, several Honourable Members rose to speak.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : If it is the desire of the House to continue this debate, the Chair has no objection to carry it over.

Several Honourable Members : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Is that the desire of the House ?

Several Honourable Members : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House now stands adjourned till 11 O'clock tomorrow morning.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Friday, the 3rd August, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Friday, the 3rd August, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 133 asked by Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad on the 16th February, 1934.

ALLOWANCES OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports :

- "(a) (i) The Inspectors of the ticket checking branch who are governed by the old East Indian Railway Rules are eligible for night allowance under the rules applicable to them.
- (ii) No allowances for Inspectors are mentioned in the Moody-Ward Report.
- (b) The staff under the East Indian Railway Company's Rules were given the option to elect the State Railway Rules for the grant of travelling allowance."

Information promised in reply to unstarred questions Nos. 212, 213, 214 and 215 asked by Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin on the 19th March, 1934.

GRANT OF MILEAGE ALLOWANCE TO THE TRAVELLING TICKET CHECKING STAFF.

212. (a) Travelling Ticket Examiners are charged with the duty of checking passengers' tickets in trains.

(b) The Guard is the Railway servant in charge of a train. Persons who are ordinarily held to be "Connected with the charge of a moving train" are the engine staff, an Assistant or Conductor Guard, a brakesman and, in some cases, a road van clerk.

(c) From the information now furnished by railways it appears that the only staff who get mileage allowance and who are not connected with the charge of a train are Travelling Ticket Examiners on the Burma Railways. This information had not been received at the time that a reply was given to Sardar Sant Singh's question No. 1363 on the 11th December, 1933, and the question as to the withdrawal of that allowance is now being referred to the Agent of the Burma Railways.

GRANT OF MILEAGE ALLOWANCE TO THE TRAVELLING TICKET CHECKING STAFF.

213. The Agent, East Indian Railway, reports as follows :

- (a) and (b). No.

CONDUCTOR GUARDS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

214. (a) Conductor Guards travel by night on mail trains and their duties are to look after the safety and comfort of passengers.

(b) On the trains on which Conductor Guards are provided, they perform a part of the duties ordinarily allotted to a Guard and as such they have duties connected with the charge of a moving train.

- (c) Yes.

(959)

DUTIES OF AN ENGINE KHALASI,

215. (a) The Second fireman is not in charge of a moving train, but is considered connected with the charge of a moving train.

(b) The general rules applying to "Firemen" apply to all classes of firemen with equal force.

(c) Raking out the ash-pan, breaking up and passing forward of coal on the tender; assisting in cleaning fires and such as other duties as the driver may order him to carry out.

(d) Second firemen are ordinarily paid mileage allowance or overtime, in the same way as all other locomotive running staff.

Information promised in reply to unstarred questions Nos. 8, 9 and 10 asked by Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh on the 18th July, 1934.

COMMUNAL COMPOSITION OF THE STAFF IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

8. (a) and (b). Statements are laid on the table.

(c) Three Income-tax Officers and three Assistant Income-tax Officers were promoted to the grade of Assistant Commissioners and Income-tax Officers, respectively. As regards non-gazetted staff, the number of promotions in the various grades was eight.

(a) Statement showing the total Number of Gazetted and Non-Gazetted Officers employed in the Income-tax Department, Bihar and Orissa, and the number belonging to each Community.

Posts.	Number employed.	Beharee Hindus.	Bengalee Hindus.	Muhammadians.	Oriyas.	Christians.	Remarks.
Gazetted.
Commissioner	1	1	1	1	1	1
Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax.	3 (a)	1	2 (b)	1	1	1	(a) One temporary. (b) Brahmo.
Income-tax Officers	16*	6	7	2	1	1	* One appointed temporarily as Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax.
Non-gazetted.
Inspector-Accountants (permanent)	17 (c)	6	4	4	2	1	(c) One officiating.
Inspectors (temporary)	9	4	3	1	1	1
Clerks (permanent)	88	42	21	16	5	4
Clerks (temporary)	30	12	9	6	1	2

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

(b) Statement showing the Number of new Appointments made after the passing of Emergency Finance Act, 1931, in the undermentioned Services of the Income-tax Department, Bihar and Orissa.

Services.	No. of new appointments made.
Assistant Commissioner	1
Inspector of Income-tax—
Permanent	6
Temporary	9
Clerks (temporary)	30

COMMUNAL COMPOSITION OF THE STAFF IN THE OFFICES OF THE ASSISTANT COMMISSIONERS OF INCOME-TAX, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

9. Statement showing the Number of Assistants of Various Communities employed in the Offices of the Assistant Commissioners of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa.

	Beharee Hindus.	Bengalee Hindus.	Muhammadians.	Oriyas.	Christians.	Remarks.
Office of the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, Central Range—
Head Assistant.	1	..	..	..	..
Sheristadar and Examiner of Accounts.	..	..	1	..	..
Other Assistants.	2	..	..	..	..
Office of the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax Southern Range—
Head Assistant.	..	1	..	..	..	This area comprises of Orissa and Chota Nagpur where no Beharee likes to serve.
Sheristadar and Examiner of Accounts.	..	..	1	..	..
Other Assistants.	..	2	..	..	..
Office of the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, Northern Range—
Head Assistant.	..	1	..	..	..
Temporary—
Sheristadar and Examiner of Accounts.	1	..	..	..	..
Other Assistants.	1	..	..	..	..

[3RD AUG. 1934-

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE SUPERINTENDENT IN THE OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME-TAX, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

10. The answer is in the negative.

Information promised in reply to starred questions Nos. 132, 133, 135 and 139 asked by Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad on the 19th July, 1934.

COMMUNAL COMPOSITION OF THE STAFF IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

132. (a) The required statements are laid on the table.

(b) Yes.

(c) These appointments were filled before the issue of the revised orders by Government. The percentage of Muhammadans on the ministerial staff was 18.4 and as they formed only 11.3 per cent. of the total population of the Province, they had no preferential claim to either of these two posts. They were, therefore, filled strictly in accordance with merit.

a) (i). Statement showing the Number of Persons of Different Communities in Various Gazetted and Non-Gazetted Posts of Bihar and Orissa, Income-tax Department, as stood on the 1st April, 1931.

	Biharee Hindus.	Domiciled Bengalees.	Muslims	Oriyas.	Europeans or Anglo-Indians.	Indian Christians.	Remarks.
Commissioner	..	1	..	..	..	..
Assistant Commissioners.	..	1	..	..	1	..
Income-tax Officers	8	6	1	2	1	..
Assistant Income-tax Officers.	..	2	1	..	..	..
Inspector-Accountants.	5	3	2	1	..	..
Ministerial Officers	42	23	18	5	..	..

Statement showing the Number of Persons of Different Communities in various Gazetted and Non-Gazetted Posts of Bihar and Orissa, Income-tax Department, recruited after the 1st April, 1931, up-to-date.

(a) (ii).

	Biharee Hindus.	Domiciled Bengalees.	Muslims.	Oriyas.	Christians.	Remarks.
Assistant Commissioners.	1	2(a)	..	..	..
Income-tax Officers	..	..	..	..	..
Inspector-Accountants (Permanent).	1	1(b)	2	1	1
Inspector-Accountants (Temporary).	4	3	1	1	..
Ministerial Officers (Permanent).	..	..	..	..	..
Ministerial Officers (Temporary).	12	9	6	1	2

(a) One temporary. The appointments were made by promotion of the 3 senior Income-tax Officers.

(b) Officiating.

OVER-REPRESENTATION OF DOMICILED BENGALIS IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

133. In the absence of any commonly accepted criterion of over-representation I am unable to answer the Honourable Member's question. I might however inform him that only 28½% of the total strength consists of domiciled Bengalis.

PREPONDERANCE OF ONE COMMUNITY IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

135. The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the latter part, steps are being taken in the direction desired by the Honourable Member and presumably the recent orders of the Government of India published in the Gazette of India of the 7th July, 1934, will assist in this object. Out of 163 permanent and temporary appointments in the province, 71 are held by Biharee Hindus. 46 by domiciled Bengalees, 29 by Muhammadans and 17 by Oriyas and aboriginal Christians.

GRIEVANCES OF THE STAFF IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

139. (a), (b) and (c). I regret that I have been completely unable to trace the articles referred to and I am certainly unaware of the existence of any such discontent as the Honourable Member suggests. I may, however, say that the Commissioner is always ready to receive representations from his staff and to give them all the consideration they merit.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 296 asked by Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra on the 30th July, 1934.

RECRUITMENT OF ORIYAS IN THE SALT DEPARTMENT.

(a) None.

(b) Does not therefore arise.

THE INDIAN IRON AND STEEL DUTIES BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore on the 31st July 1934 :

"That the Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. H. P. Mody, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. B. Das, Mr. S. C. Sen, Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla, Mr. R. S. Sarma, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra, Sir Leslie Hudson, Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan, Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, the Honourable Sir James Grigg, the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before Monday, the 13th August, 1934, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, it is with a feeling of considerable embarrassment that I rise to intervene in this debate, an embarrassment which is due, not indeed to the fact that I find myself for the first time on my legs in this Assembly, but is more acutely due to a realisation of my own shortcomings and my capacity to enter into a discussion of so technical a subject as the one before the House. I wish I could have commanded the agility of mind and body which enables my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, to lie on hard steel with as much ease as he lies on soft cotton. (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Is that parliamentary language, Sir ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I am surprised that my Honourable friend should have misunderstood what I stated and given so unfair an interpretation to my words. I did not say that he was lying about it ; I said that he can lie on hard steel with the same facility with which he lay on, if I may say so, soft cotton. Therefore, I say that it is with considerable embarrassment that I rise to speak on this subject.

I do not wish to detain the House on a disquisition of the part that the steel industry has played in this country, on the special utility that the Jamshedpur Works have proved to be of to this country and on the many improvements that have been carried out in that great industry. It is unfortunate, but it is nevertheless true, that the fortunes of the steel industry in this country are so inextricably, so vitally, and so overwhelmingly connected with the fortunes of a single firm. That has led to a great deal of delicacy in the handling of this question during the past few years, and successive Commerce Members have acknowledged that that delicacy was inevitable in the handling of this question.

It is a delicacy which the House can easily understand, and from the prolonged laughter which resulted from a "faux pas" of my Honourable friend, the Deputy President, you will easily appreciate that that delicacy applies as much to those on the Treasury Benches as to those who sit on this side of the House. In fact, I do not think that even Presidents and Members of Tariff Boards, Commerce Members, Finance Members, Leaders of the Opposition, and Leaders of the Parties, or individual Members of the Assembly, have been free from that delicacy, to put it in the most parliamentary language that I can think of. But, nevertheless, the duty that one has to perform on behalf of one's constituency has to be performed, and, therefore, it is that I find myself on my legs today to speak a few words on the subject.

I do not propose, as I said, to dilate on many points regarding the steel industry at Jamshedpur. Other gentlemen have done it much more ably than I can. I shall confine myself mainly to the speech of my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, a speech on which I may congratulate him, because, bereft as it was of polished rhetoric, it still had a great amount of subtlety about it, and it is that subtlety that I propose to examine this morning. I shall confine myself to three or four aspects of this question of steel protection, first, whether the removal of the revenue duties on tested structurals and plates is justified, whether it is a proposal which the Tariff Board could have legitimately made, and, whether it is a proposal which the Government could have legitimately accepted. I shall then propose to deal with the question of galvanised sheets and the reduction of duty that has been proposed both by the Tariff Board and by the Government on galvanised sheets. I shall then, if I find time, deal with the question of the engineering firms and how they have been affected and will continue to be affected if the proposal regarding the removal of the revenue due on tested structurals is carried out and other proposals in the Bill connected with fabricated steel are accepted. And if I find time, I shall touch on the question of Mr. Dalal's concern for widows. (Laughter.)

The Honourable the Finance Member said that the removal of the revenue duty was a very simple transparent proposition, that it did not admit of any discussion at all, and that it was so simple that he was surprised that my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, and my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, should have raised any objection to it. He made a great point of the fact that Mr. Mody was confusing the revenue duties with protective duties. We, in this House, are accustomed to hear, with bated breath and whispering humbleness, the dictum of Finance Members. We have heard them during the last 15 years, and we have heard them without being any the wiser for them. It is not surprising, therefore, that we have this dictum from the Finance Member that Mr. Mody confounded the revenue duties with protective duties. May I add that the Finance Member has been equally guilty of confounding revenue duties with protective duties and that the whole course of his argument on the subject will show, as I propose to prove later, that he has been a victim himself to that confusion. The Honourable the Finance Member referred to the Fiscal Commission's report on that subject, a report which is admittedly an admirable one, a report on which everybody relies, both on this side of the House and on the other side. And what does the

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Fiscal Commission say on the matter? Let me quote the relevant paragraph, paragraph 94.

"The tariff, as we envisage it, will be a combination of revenue and protective duties. The existing tariff will form the basis of the revenue duties and will become progressively modified as the duties on particular commodities are successively determined on a protectionist principles."

That is to say, the basic revenue duty will be increased as protective measures are being adopted by the country. Then the Fiscal Commission continues:

"Even when this process, however, is complete, there will remain a large residue of purely revenue duties, and these it should be open to Government to vary from time to time on purely revenue considerations."

The point that my Honourable friend, the Finance Member, has to prove in this case is that from purely revenue considerations he felt bound to vary the duties that have been imposed on the tested structurals. Is it his case that from a purely revenue point of view he has felt it incumbent to come before the House and say that these revenue duties should be removed? My Honourable friend, the Finance Member, no doubt said that a case may arise when even a revenue duty may be so prohibitive that no revenue is derived on account of that duty, that it defeats its own purpose. Is my Honourable friend in a position to prove that with reference to this revenue duty it has been so prohibitive that no revenue is accruing from the imposition of this duty? The sea-borne statistics prove a complete negation of that case. They prove that under the duties as they exist now, a great amount of steel has come into this country. The amount of duty may be small. The Finance Member, now beginning his term of office, may feel that three lakhs or seven lakhs, as it is interpreted by the Tariff Board, is a flea bite. But I assure him that as months and years roll by he will find that every lakh, every single thousand rupees, is of vital importance to him. He has himself admitted in another part of his speech that the sugar duties are not likely to produce results as was anticipated and also that the match excise duty is not going to result in the manner.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg (Finance Member): I did not say anything of the sort. I simply said that nobody knows what the result of them will be.

which has nothing to do with the protection of the industry. My Honourable friend quoted with triumph, on more than one occasion, in the course of his speech, a reference to paragraph (c) of the terms of reference to the Indian Tariff Board and that reference relates to the Resolution that was adopted by this Assembly when the question of appointing a Tariff Board was first considered. My Honourable friend stated in the course of his speech that he was handicapped on account of the fact that he was new to parliamentary institutions and was for the first time making a debating speech. May I suggest to him that he is handicapped by more than that fact. He is certainly handicapped by the fact that, on account of the shortness of his stay so far in this country, he has not had the time to study all the past literature on the subject, to know exactly what had happened before, and, to know the relevancy of the considerations that prevailed at one time. It is only natural. Nobody can blame him for that. Let me refer now, Sir, to the actual Resolution which was adopted by this Assembly and which is adverted to in the terms of reference—paragraph (c). I will read out the relevant portion. May I suggest, Sir, that it is very difficult to read extracts in this light. May I suggest that a table lamp may perhaps be provided for the purpose, for any individual Member who may like to have it? I make this only as a suggestion.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The Chair has itself felt that the lighting arrangement of this Chamber is even more defective than at Delhi, because, if the curtains are removed, the glare becomes too great. The Chair is glad that Sir Frank Noyce is here to take note of it.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce (Member for Industries and Labour): I shall be glad to do my best to see what can be done to improve the lighting of the Chamber.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: The relevant paragraph in the Resolution of 1923, which was adopted by this House, was this:

"That in the application of the above principle of protection regard may be had to the financial needs of the country and to the present dependence of the Government of India on import, export and excise duties for a large part of its revenue."

This is an unquestionable proposition, Mr. President, because the extent of protective duties may be such that the revenue may be actually wiped out. I do not quarrel with the proposition, but to find authority in that proposition for the statement that the revenue duties which are returning a certain amount of revenue to the country should be removed, because a reference was made in this manner, is, I think, wholly fallacious. My Honourable friend, the Law Member, knows that an eminent Judge in a certain case in the Madras High Court, with reference to a breach of contract case, said that the plaintiff must prove that he is damnified. Now, what Sir Charles Innes was trying to make out here was, that if the Government of India were damnified in their revenue returns, then the Tariff Board has to take into consideration the revenue position of this country in considering its proposals. If my Honourable friend goes through the speech of Sir Charles Innes, he will find that he has there explained this portion of the Resolution. And may I here state, Sir, that the amended Resolution was moved by Sir Charles Innes himself and the phraseology was the phraseology of Sir Charles Innes. He will find the reason explained clearly in the terms in which I have explained it. The Fiscal Commission had made a recommendation that the export duty on hides and skins should be removed; it had made a recommendation that the excise duty on cotton should be removed; it had made a recommendation that certain bounties should be given to a particular industry. Now, the Commerce Member was faced with the position that if he simply said that he accepted the Resolution which was moved for the first time in this country in favour of protection, he would be faced with all those alternatives which the Indian Fiscal Commission had suggested. Therefore, he took the precaution to say that, if his revenue dropped, he was bound to take that into consideration before he accepted the protectionist policy. Now, my Honourable friend has come forward with a converse proposition and says that even if his revenue is good, still the Tariff Board has a right to say: "Give out a portion of the revenue not to protect an industry in India, but also to protect an industry abroad." In support of this argument, my Honourable friend has referred to the fact that, under paragraph (c) of the terms of reference, the Tariff Board had a right to go into this question. I say that it had no right, and I most emphatically deny that right. I hope it will not be made a precedent and the fact will be taken note of that the Tariff Board did not consider the question impartially and fairly on the merits of the industry concerned.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

An Honourable Member: What about the present?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: As I was saying, the Indian Fiscal Commission had made recommendations which would result in the loss of revenue to Government in various ways. Referring to these recommendations, Sir Charles Innes said:

"These recommendations involve either a direct sacrifice of revenue or direct expenditure on the part of the Government if it is a question of bounties, and I think that it will be clear to everyone that in considering recommendations of this kind, we must take careful note of the state of the finances."

Then, he wound up the debate with this passage which I commend to the attention of the Honourable the Finance Member:

"I do not wish to make too much of this point (that is to say, how far revenue considerations must prevail over considerations regarding protection to an industry). After all, one of the main advantages claimed for a policy of protection is that the industrial development will add ultimately to the wealth, and, therefore, to the taxable capacity of the people. My point is that the transitional period must be difficult and that we must always keep in view the danger of disorganising the public finance by too rapid and too violent action. So it would have been easy for me to omit all reference to the financial situation. After all, we are concerned today only with the principle of protection, and it would have been easy for me to omit all reference to the fact that the financial situation may operate as a break on the application of this policy. But, Sir, the fact stares us in the face, and would it be honest for a responsible Government and for a responsible Legislature to shut its eyes to the fact?"

That was the consideration that moved the Honourable the Commerce Member. I take it, in making his terms of reference and to call the attention of the Tariff Board very rightly to this aspect of the question.

Now, Sir, let me take the recommendation of the Tariff Board on this subject. They say:

"We recommend that no duties should be imposed for revenue purposes on tested structurals, tested plates and billets for re-rolling none of which require protection."

The question is not a question whether they require protection. If they do not require protection, do not make any recommendation regarding protection. But what business have you to remove the existing revenue duty which was not a protective duty? I shall, later on, if I have time and when I refer to the engineering firms, try to point out that even the revenue duty has got to be treated incidentally as a protective duty, and that is why we are complaining against the removal of that revenue duty, apart from the fact that the finances of this country today are less to that extent. And then the Tariff Board says that it will be a great handicap for public utility concerns. Now, the Tariff Board had a great deal of evidence before them. They considered all aspects of the question. They examined many Government witnesses also, at any rate they got written statements from them, and I think this is the most hollow of pretensions for the Tariff Board to suggest that public utility concerns will be damaged if this revenue duty remains. Now, let us examine it for a moment. Public utility concerns are either carried on largely by the Government of India or by Local Governments. So far as they are carried on by the Government of India, it does not make a penny worth of difference whether the duty is levied on it or not, so far as the incidence of that duty is concerned; it is only an adjustment of financial resources from one pocket to another. Supposing the duty is levied on tested structurals and the Government of India undertake the construction of a bridge and have to pay a duty on those things, it merely means that the whole bridge costs so much, the amount of duty that is collected on it is transferred to the Customs Department and is collected as customs revenue by the Government. It is true that in the case of what may be called remunerative enterprises the amount of incidence of that duty may have an effect in postponing the inauguration of a remunerative project, but even so, so far as taking off the duty on the Government of India is concerned, there is no difference whether the tariff duty is levied or not. So far as the Provincial Governments are concerned,—and the Tariff Board talks so much of public utility concerns—is it in a position to suggest that any Provincial Government can undertake large public utility concerns? And this Government of India which clutches at this recommendation on such fallacious grounds, is it in a position in the near future to lay down a plan of public utility concerns which it can undertake? My Honourable friend, Mr. James, the other day in a very excellent speech regarding the subject invited the Government of India to undertake large public utility concerns and to initiate a loan policy, so that the present economic depression in the country may be lifted. There was no response, sympathetic or otherwise, from the Government Benches, and why try to put this forward as a reason when we know perfectly well that the position of most Local Governments is so shaky that they cannot possibly undertake public utility concerns on any large scale whatsoever? As I said I shall leave the question there, so that I may come at a later stage of my argument back to it when I deal with the question of engineering firms.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

I now come to what I call the most extraordinary, the most novel and the most surprising of all proposals of the Tariff Board, and may I add, if I may say so, the most improper of the proposals which the Government of India have accepted. I come to the proposal relating to galvanized sheets. The Honourable the Finance Member has laid stress on that aspect of the case. He has said and quite rightly and quite honestly, if I may be permitted to say so, that the proposal of the Tariff Board relating to galvanized sheets is one of the most vital and one of the most important proposals of the Tariff Board. I accept that statement; it is so, but from a quite different point of view from that from which the Honourable the Finance Member thought it was important. It is important as showing the complete lack of judicial impartiality with which the Tariff Board has examined this question. (Mr. B. Das : "Hear hear.") What is the case about these galvanized sheets? You, Sir, were at one stage very intimately connected with the consideration of the question. There was a duty on galvanized sheets according to the recommendations of the Tariff Board of 1927, accepted by the Government, of Rs. 37 per ton whether the galvanized sheets came from Great Britain or from foreign countries. The galvanized sheets industry felt that, owing to the drop in prices, the protection given to it was not sufficient, and, in the year 1930, they applied to the Government of India for examination of the whole question by another Tariff Board, if necessary, so that the protection might be increased to what might be necessary for them to obtain a fair selling price. The Government of India thought there was a prima facie case made by the galvanized sheets industry in this country and they appointed a Tariff Board who examined the whole question. The President of the present Tariff Board, Dr. John Mathai, is a personal friend of mine, and I have the highest regard for him. He happened to be a Member of that Tariff Board also, and the terms of reference—and I would invite the attention of the Honourable the Finance Member to the terms of reference—the terms of reference which the Government of India then issued were to report "whether galvanized sheets of British manufacture"—not foreign—"are being imported into British India at such a price as is likely to render ineffective the protection intended to be given". The Tariff Board went into the whole question and suggested an increase of another Rs. 37 per ton on these galvanized sheets, so that the import duty then came to Rs. 67. I hope the House is not wearied (Voices : "Go on, go on"), but I find it necessary, to develop my argument, that I should be able to give the whole history of this case, both for the benefit of the House, and, if I am not impertinent, for the benefit of the Honourable the Finance Member.

Now, when this duty of Rs. 67 was passed by this House, it continued for some time in operation. Then came the brilliant idea of another Finance Member of the Government of India, Sir George Schuster, and I do not apologize for making a reference to it, because, during his presence in the Treasury Benches here, I did make a reference to that aspect of the case. In September, 1931, he levied a surcharge on all customs duties of 25 per cent. The then Finance Member took pride in the fact that these customs duties and the surcharges were so scientifically examined and so precisely arranged that nobody, on this side of the House could find a flaw in them and he threw out the challenge—and my Honourable friend can refer to that speech—to any Member inside this House or outside to show in what respect and in what manner the customs duty could be varied and whether the law of diminishing returns had begun to operate with reference to such duties. In connection with the sugar excise duty, it was my painful privilege to point out to the then Finance Member that here at least was a case of surcharge put on without thought, without foresight and without any idea of its effect on the revenue derived and that it does not require even the precocious lad of Macaulay to find out that a surcharge on what are called protective duties for revenue purposes is an absurdity; and yet it did not strike the then Finance Member and the Finance Department and the surcharge was levied as much on protective duties as on purely revenue duties. The first case, therefore, was the impropriety of the surcharge on sugar for which we had to levy a countervailing excise duty, and which I still consider is one of the most objectionable of duties. The second case we now come to is the surcharge on all these protective duties, and that raised the duty on these galvanized sheets from Rs. 67 to somewhere like Rs. 83. When the matter was in that stage, you, Sir, went as one of the members of the Ottawa Committee. At the Ottawa Committee, the case of galvanized sheets loomed large. It was one of the most vital things that the British Delegation had to deal with, and you will realize—and you would have told us so if you were on these Benches—with what anxiety they were concerned over a satisfactory settlement of this question of a duty on galvanized sheets. You had a great deal of negotiation on the subject, I do not know, but I am fairly certain that the highest politicians and statesmen of Great Britain were anxious to come to a settlement with you and your colleagues on that subject, and ultimately you came to a settlement on the subject. What was the settlement? Let me read a few sentences from the Report of the Ottawa Committee :

"The importance of the trade in galvanised sheet to the British Iron and Steel Industry may be gauged from the fact that in 1927-28 the value of galvanised sheet accounted for half the value of the total imports of British steel into India, and even in 1931-32 it was still 30 per cent. of the value, but between these two years the value of the imports of British galvanised sheet had fallen from Rs. 7.2 crores to Rs. 1.93 crores. It will be evident from these figures, how gravely the new competition from Belgium had affected the British industry, more especially because it became intense at a time when demand was declining and prices were falling. Here, if anywhere, measures calculated to bring relief—provided always they were consistent with the interests of India—were most likely to be of value. But conversely, of all the rolled steel products on which protective duties have been imposed, galvanised sheet is the one where it is easiest to make concessions without detriment to the interests of the Indian industry."

and you recommended that if galvanized sheets are rolled out of Indian bar, a duty of Rs. 30 a ton may be levied. If they are not rolled out of Indian bar, but if they are rolled out of English bar, then a duty of Rs. 53 may be recommended, and that, if they came from continental places, a duty of 83 may be recommended, and you advised the Government of India and the Legislature to accept your recommendations :

"If the special arrangements connected with the duties on galvanised sheet were to be acceptable to India, it was indispensable that they should furnish reasonable security that any increase in the sale of British galvanised sheet in India should be accompanied by an equivalent increase in the sales of Indian sheet bar in the United Kingdom."

Now, the concrete fact and a vital factor in the whole of the arrangement was that Indian sheet bar should, to that extent, be imported to England and come back again as galvanized sheet in this country. I ask the Honourable the Finance Member to remember it, because I know that the very respected Tariff Board has not remembered that fact :

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

"If the duties were so adjusted that the British manufacturer had no inducement to use Indian sheet bar when making sheet for the Indian market, it would fail to achieve one of its primary objects, namely, the securing of a fresh outlet for Indian steel."

You repeat over and over again, you emphasize the fact that the crux of the whole Agreement is the fact that Indian bar is being imported into England and comes back again as galvanized sheet :

"It was impossible to obtain the necessary assurances on this point at Ottawa and it was on this account that the final settlement had to be postponed until further discussions had taken place in London."

And, as you are aware, a final settlement was arrived at in England by an exchange of letters between Sir George Rainy and Sir Horace Wilson :

"As a result of these discussions we have received assurances that the representatives of both industries are satisfied that, with a difference of Rs. 23 a ton between the duty on sheet made in the United Kingdom from Indian sheet bar and sheet made from other bar, it will be possible to do business at prices satisfactory to both industries, so that the extended use of Indian sheet bar is assured."

Again, you emphasize that fact :

"That being so, we are satisfied that the scheme is one which we can recommend for adoption by the Indian Government and Legislature."

You recommend that this scheme should be in force till 1934, when the whole question will come under review by the Indian Tariff Board and when necessary arrangements can be made according to the recommendations of the Indian Tariff Board. Now, let us look at the Tariff Board report and its recommendations. This is what the Indian Tariff Board say on the subject :

"In the case of galvanized sheets, however, we have estimated the duties on a different basis. Since November, 1932, the price of galvanized sheets has been fixed at an artificial level under the Ottawa Agreement. No direct information is therefore available regarding the level of market prices under ordinary competitive conditions and our estimate of market prices has in consequence to be based on somewhat arbitrary considerations."

I will refer to that later. They continue :

"The advantages offered to India in return for the preferential duties on galvanized sheets under the Ottawa Agreement were first the exemption from import duty and facilities for the sale of a specified quantity of pig iron in the United Kingdom and, secondly, the provision of a definite market in the United Kingdom for Indian sheet bar."

Now, let us take the second condition first. I will come to the first condition later :

"The latter is now of much less importance to India than at the time of the Ottawa Agreement because of the increased capacity for the manufacture of sheets in India and the possibility of a larger demand for billets from re-rolling mills in India."

Therefore, one of the important considerations in coming to this extraordinary agreement at Ottawa, namely, that Indian sheet bars will be used for making galvanized sheets in England falls to the ground, as, according to the Tariff Board inquiries, India is not in a position now to export her bars to England and have them manufactured as galvanized sheets. The internal consumption has grown, and it is a matter for congratulation that it has grown, and India is not in a position to send these things abroad. Now comes the second condition they are speaking of—about this pig iron. I wish my Honourable friend, the Commerce Member, had considered more carefully the advantages which would result from a continuance of this agreement, when he, amid the acclamation and cheers of this House, announced the grand fact that the continuance of the agreement of free entry of pig-iron into England had been secured by the Government of India. I do not congratulate the Government of India on this action, when one considers the advantages which this country will have to suffer by lowering the protective duties on galvanized sheets. What is this pig iron, and how much of it is exported to the United Kingdom? What is the profit which the Indian merchant gets out of this pig iron? My Honourable friend, Mr. Sitaramaraju, has already given figures to show that the sale of pig iron to foreign countries is far in excess of the sale to the United Kingdom. It was about 93,000 tons last year. The previous year it was about 75,000 tons, and the year before it was 69,000 tons. One has to draw the balance sheet to know what the profit on pig iron per ton is. At the most, it is one rupee per ton, so that the grand profit which the merchants of this country make by sending 90,000 tons to the United Kingdom is Rs. 90,000 per annum, and the Assembly cheered my Honourable friend when he made this announcement. I beg of him to discard that agreement. I beg of him to say to the United Kingdom: Thanks to you. Our merchants will find markets for pig iron elsewhere, and we are ready to allow pig iron to be exported to the United Kingdom on the same conditions on which you are prepared to allow any other produce from any of the other dominions, and, therefore, the main consideration which weighed with you, when you entered into this arrangement about the entry of pig iron into the United Kingdom, is of very little concern to the industry. The profit is one rupee per ton and no more. What is the advantage that we get by an agreement on this subject?

Mr. F. E. James (Madras : European) : Perhaps the Honourable Member would be good enough to give the House the source of his information.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I have been assured by a good many men, who are in the best position to know about the Steel Works at Jamshedpur and who have come to an agreement with the Bengal Iron Works with reference to the import of pig iron into the United Kingdom and to Japan and other places—the beneficiaries under the scheme that the direct profit will be seven rupees per ton and the direct and indirect profits combined is no more than one rupee per ton and that they for their part are willing to forego the advantage of this benefit in the United Kingdom for their pig iron. Now, Sir, as I said, these are the trifling, trivial, almost negligible advantages that we derive, but look at the balance sheet on the other side. My Honourable friend may put it at five rupees a ton if he likes. I have no objection, but he dare not and cannot possibly suggest that anything further can be got out of it. Now, look at the advantages on the other side. I was reading the report of the Tariff Board, and I stopped at the point of the actual cost of production in Great Britain.

The Tariff Board report says :

"No direct information is therefore available regarding the level of market prices under ordinary competitive conditions and our estimate of market prices has in consequence to be based on somewhat arbitrary considerations. Two alternative methods have been open to us first, to take the average price in the earlier half of 1932, and adjust it for the variation in the price of spelter since that period, and secondly, to proceed on the basis of calculation adopted by the Ottawa delegation, namely, to take the United Kingdom price at the lowest figure which the delegation considered would give a reasonable return to the British manufacturer and to take the Continental price at the lowest figure actually reached in recent importations. Under ordinary conditions we should be inclined to adopt the first method in estimating the measure of protection.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

That is to say, take the imported price of 1932 which was the actual price and make allowance for the increase of price in spelter, but they have dropped that, though it was their legitimate duty. That was how they could have calculated the real price, but they have dropped it. The Tariff Board further says

"The United Kingdom prices in that case would be almost the same as Continental prices and there would be no scope for differential duties."

I ask the Honourable the Commerce Member and the Honourable the Finance Member to make a note of that statement. If they had calculated on the basis of the actual price in 1932 before the Ottawa Agreement was entered into and had made allowance for the increase in the spelter price, then the prices of the United Kingdom galvanized sheets would be almost the same as the prices of Continental sheets. That has a very great reference to the actual cost which they have adopted in an earlier part of their report.

If my Honourable friend will turn to Table XXIII on page 54 of the Report, he will find that galvanized sheet is stated to cost the United Kingdom Rs. 160 and Continental Rs. 130 and the fair selling price for Indian sheets is Rs. 170. Therefore, so far as the United Kingdom is concerned, the duty is put at Rs. 10, whereas, in the case of Continental, it is put at Rs. 40. But if this premise is wrong, then the United Kingdom price is only Rs. 130. Sir, I heard, in the course of the speech of the Honourable the Finance Member, at any rate I got the impression that the Honourable the Finance Member and the Honourable the Commerce Member have entered into a deed of partnership, this firm of Shortt and Codlin is going to be responsible for this Bill. The Honourable the Finance Member turns to the Honourable the Commerce Member and says if there is any miscalculation in price, the Commerce Member will reply and the Honourable the Commerce Member turns round to the Honourable the Finance Member with equal courtesy and says if there is any question of revenue, the Honourable the Finance Member will reply. But both Shortt and Codlin mean the same thing, so far as I am concerned. Whoever is responsible for this, I ask if the price of Continental steel is the same as of British steel. If so, it means that the British steel is valued at Rs. 130 per ton, and, therefore, the fair selling price being Rs. 170, the duty must be exactly the same on British galvanized sheet as on Continental. That is to say, the duty must be Rs. 40. Now, it is because of this agreement that you have reached, this Trade Agreement is going to be of so much benefit to this country, the sale of pig iron is going to make India so much richer, that you artificially inflate the price of British galvanized sheets and you bring it up to the level of Rs. 160 which was fixed at Ottawa for this purpose, and you say that the protective duty should be Rs. 10. That is to say, you give a bounty of Rs. 30 per ton to the United Kingdom manufacturer of galvanized sheets, a bounty which he does not require, if only the real cost price is taken into consideration. I would have no objection even to that bounty if it can be given with undue cost. But the bounty is given, at what cost? It causes you a loss of 20 lakhs on this bounty which you give to the United Kingdom producers of galvanized sheets, and, therefore, you are driven to the necessity of levying an excise duty on the steel ingots that are manufactured in this country. (Hear, hear.) Is that what is called fairness? You come forward and say, this is a protective Bill to protect the Indian industry. No, Sir. Let us be fair. Let us try to place the facts as fully as possible before the public and come forward with an honest proposition that for certain reasons we must make this concession to the British industry. This National Federation is so powerful and it plays such an important part that my Honourable friend hinted at the possibility of political calamities overtaking this country. Let us put all that in the balance if you like, but do not say that we are having a protective measure, because this is not a protective measure. England does not really require that. You are giving her a bounty of Rs. 30. The proper price of galvanized sheets is Rs. 130, and, therefore, the duty of Rs. 40 will not hit that industry.

My Honourable friend said that the United Kingdom industry should not be penalised. Sir, my record in this Assembly has been such that I can say with legitimate satisfaction, at any rate with perfect honesty, that I never have been a party to penalising the British or any other industry without any benefit to India. I said so on the last occasion in connection with the Textile Bill, I repeat it again. I look at it from the point of view of the Indian industry. If, against the United Kingdom, only ten per cent. is required to protect the Indian industry, and if, against the Continental goods, 30 per cent. is required to protect the Indian industry, I am willing to accept ten per cent. and 30 per cent., not because it is Imperial Preference or anything like that, but because the Indian industry requires that much and no more. I am not willing to increase the duty on United Kingdom goods to 30 per cent., merely because it gives a theoretical satisfaction to my heart. I have quoted the duty on British and Continental goods and somehow or other this amounts to Imperial Preference. This sort of hitting against the United Kingdom unnecessarily, I will not be a party to. That was the position I took up on the last occasion in connection with the Textile Bill. That is the position which, I repeat, I am prepared to take up in connection with this Bill. What is the position with reference to galvanized sheets? You have given, as I said, a bounty to the United Kingdom, and that bounty has been paid out of the cost of the indigenous industry which is mulcted by way of an excise duty. The Honourable the Finance Member quite rightly said "We cannot afford to miss this amount of revenue, we must find ways and means by which we can make good that revenue, and that is why I have come forward with a proposal, which I do not like, namely, the proposal for an excise duty." But why lose the revenue at all? Why is this selling price of Rs. 160 fixed for British goods, whereas it is Rs. 130 in the case of Continental goods? Why not levy the same duty on both goods and get your revenue? It is not as if these goods have been shut off. It is not as if they cannot come to this country. Here I must say very respectfully that according to the showing of the Tariff Board, it has certainly gone beyond the terms of reference, beyond its legitimate duty in making this recommendation.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Now, Sir, I come to another interesting fact which the Tariff Board has unearthed. In calculating the loss of revenue, the Tariff Board points out that 75 per cent. of the loss is due to galvanized sheets. The percentage is correct, though perhaps actually the total amount of loss estimated by the Tariff Board was not correct. It gives a curious reason why this loss of revenue should be sustained. I want to canvass that curious reason again, especially because it has been adopted by the Government of India. They say in the Report :

"We have provided that ad valorem revenue duties in almost every instance shall be alternative to the specific duties and since the revenue derived from ad valorem duties must vary with the prices of imports it is likely that if the present upward trend of steel prices continues, the loss in revenue per unit of product will be less than we have estimated. Whatever forecast may be finally arrived at, it is clear that the greater part of the probable loss in revenue will be due to the proposed reduction in the duty on galvanized sheets. We have already laid stress on the benefit of this proposal to the agricultural community."

Now, Sir, let me pause. The Honourable the Finance Member took the cue from the Tariff Board. My Honourable friend, Captain Lal Chand, of course an out and out enthusiastic advocate of the agriculturists, said that it was a great thing that the agricultural industry was being thus promoted. My Honourable friend, the Finance Member, said, here is a thing which is of direct benefit to the agricultural industry, and, therefore, that is another reason why the duty on galvanized sheets should be reduced. "When the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept". What is your record about the agricultural people? What is the record of the Government of India with reference to the agricultural people? If you had possessed even an iota of that sympathy which some of us at least on this side of the House, like my friend, Raja Bahadur Krishnamachariar, possess, you would not have ventured to make this recommendation. Let me remind you of what this very Tariff Board said on a previous occasion with reference to these agriculturists and the possibility of their being benefited by a lower price for galvanized sheets; and Dr. Mathai was a party to this recommendation. Again, I suggest that if the Honourable the Finance Member had taken care to read the earlier reports, he would not have landed himself in the position in which he finds himself today. There they were increasing the price of galvanized sheets from Rs. 30 to Rs. 67, directly hitting the agriculturists. The sum and substance of what they say is that it will not affect the agriculturists at all. The price still is the same as what it was in 1908 and 1912. Even with the addition of a 67 per cent. duty, the price of galvanized sheets remains the same as in 1912. And comparing the purchasing power of the country now with the purchasing power of the country then, it will not make any difference to the agriculturists at all if this duty of 67 per cent. is laid on galvanized sheets. My Honourable friend turns now and says: "Any duty in excess of ten per cent. is such an overwhelming burden on the poor agriculturists, for whom my heart goes out, that I dare not be a party, and why should I reject the recommendation of the Tariff Board, specially if it is made in the interest of the agriculturists? My Honourable friend, I am common champions of the agriculturists." Nothing of the sort. We know what the agriculturists have been suffering from, and let me read this paragraph. They point out that the two sets of agriculturists, who will use these galvanized sheets for agricultural implements, are the jute growers and the paddy growers. With reference to the jute growers, I shall leave the question to any Member coming from Bengal who knows the position of the jute cultivators and who will be in a position to state it. With reference to the paddy growers, this is what the Tariff Board says :

"We have carefully considered the trade returns with a view to ascertain to what extent the demand for galvanized sheet is influenced by price. It is quite clear that the demand is a fluctuating one and depends not so much on price as on industrial development, railway expansion, and the outturn and price of certain crops, particularly jute and rice, the prevailing crops in those districts in which galvanized sheet is mainly used. The demand for galvanized sheet can frequently be postponed and when depression exists in certain trades the demand falls off. Similarly the cultivator replenishes his requirements of galvanized sheet in those years in which his crops are good and prices satisfactory."

—Mark these words, Sir,—

"in years of bad crops he makes no purchase however favourable the price. The demand is not constant and the price of galvanized sheet does not form the most important factor in determining the demand even of the agriculturist. We believe therefore that the increase which we propose will cause no serious hardship."

I prefer to follow the John Mathai of 1930 to the John Mathai of 1934, and that without making any sort of personal aspersions against Dr. John Mathai. I invite my Honourable friend to do likewise. He will find himself on safer ground if he does that. What is his record, what is the record of the Government of India, with reference to these paddy growers? I do not want to go beyond the scope of my subject, but we know that the prices have fallen and have fallen ruinously. We have been agitating month after month and week after week, cabling, telegraphing, writing, submitting memoranda, waiting on deputations, and so on; and this Government, which is absolutely hide-bound, which refuses to move, which will not take note of these things, has for the last eight months turned down every one of our requests. We wanted the importation of rice from Siam to be stopped. Nothing of the kind happened. We wanted a duty on those imports; nothing of the kind was undertaken. And tons and tons are being unloaded, and every day we are being pestered with telegrams and letters and representations from paddy growers, and this Government refuses to move in the matter. How can I take as an honest statement of fact what the Finance Member says, with this black record which he, along with the other Members of Government, have got, with reference to the paddy growers, that his heart goes out to the agriculturists, and it is only because the agriculturist wants his implements that galvanized sheets should have this duty reduced. In the "Vicar of Wakefield" there is a character who used to utter a particular word as he was listening to the others from time to time, and if you will permit it, Sir, and if Parliamentary decorum will permit it, I would like to use it, but I am very doubtful whether you will permit it. That is not the way in which we can be convinced of the fairness of your proposals. Agriculturists indeed! This Government, with its record about paddy growers, with its carelessness about paddy growers time after time, talks of the agriculturists! And even now tons and tons are being dumped into my Presidency, and it has come to 80,000 tons now. The Secretary to the Department of Education, Health and Lands sits there impassive like the Delphic Oracle, not making any statement or making such dubious statements that they can be interpreted in any way. He gave us hopes, incalculable hopes, and we are now in August, and those hopes have not materialised. And this is the Government which asks me to enthuse over the statement that agriculturists are being cared for and cared for most conspicuously by the drop in the rates of protective duty on galvanised sheets. But if you are so serious about conditions of agriculturists, may I ask you another question? In the first place, it would not increase the price by a pie if a duty of 40 per cent., instead of 10, is levied, because the Continental price and our unfair selling price will control prices. Secondly, obviously even according to these prices, which the Tariff Board has accepted, there is a difference of Rs. 30 between Continental and British goods. Then, why do you not have the same protective duty or the same duty on Continental goods, and let the thing freely into this country, so that the agriculturists may be satisfied and, at least one section, the consumers, may be benefited, never mind what its effect on protection may be? And that was exactly what my Honourable friend, Mr. Raju, referred to in his speech the other day, a reference which I venture to think the Honourable the Finance Member completely misunderstood. The Finance Member said that Mr. Raju invited this House to throw out the Bill. Nothing of the kind. He said, if you are really very keen on the consumer, if you want the consumer alone to be thought of and nobody else, then throw out this whole measure. Let us have at least one satisfaction that we have done well by the consumer, irrespective of the fate what this key industry, this basic industry, this military industry, comes to. My Honourable friend thought that that was not his statement, but that he invited us all to throw out this Bill without caring for the consequence. I can assure the Honourable the Finance Member that even we on this side of the House, with the little material that we have at our disposal, with no notes, no Secretaries, and no whispers from departmental officials, can use a little of our own intelligence to understand what is good for the country and what is not good for the country. And believe me, we have come to the conclusion that, so far as these galvanised sheets are concerned, to whomsoever it may be a beneficent thing, it is not a beneficent thing for the agriculturists and for the industrialists of this country; it is not a beneficent thing for the Government of India as it is constituted even at present.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Sir, I said that I would refer to the position of the engineering firms and try to prove that the removal of the revenue duty and the reduction of duty on fabricated steel are both calculated to hit them very hard. And I want to establish the position that engineering firms in this country are bound to suffer a good deal because of these two aspects of the question. I said it was not merely a question of revenue being lost to Government, but the removal of that duty on tested structurals in conjunction with the other proposal with reference to fabricated steel is bound to hamper the growth of the engineering industry in this country. Nay, more; it is bound to make it absolutely impossible for them to keep up even their present position. And here let me say quite candidly what are the engineering firms that I am referring to. I have not come forward merely to advocate the cause of Indian firms in this country. Whether it is Indian or English, if it is established in this country, if its outlook is confined within the geographical boundaries of India, I am prepared to give it assistance. That was the position which we came to at the Round Table Conference. I am prepared to abide by that position, and now I am advocating the cause of firms like Braithwaite & Co., Jessop & Co.,—both English firms established in this country, trying to do business in engineering, and which, along with Indian firms, will be hampered if this duty is removed. They have made plaintive representations to the Tariff Board. It was my painful duty last night, and that was the only time when I could get these reports, to go till late at night into the representations they have made. I invite the Honourable the Finance Member, whose heart is so sympathetic, to go through some of these representations, and I invite him to go also through the representation of the National Federation of Steel Industry of Great Britain. He will find that these industries will be thoroughly handicapped if this duty is removed. They refer to the organisation that has been established in England, to the rationalisation that has taken place in England, and I now understand what Mr. James meant by rationalisation, because from these papers I realise what sort of rationalisation they refer to—combines, trusts, getting together all the weaker and stronger companies to come to some agreement as regards the sale price for export purposes and as regards the sale prices in England, dumping goods into this country and trying to get from the home consumer the actual cost of that dumping into this country. This is the sort of cartel that they are trying to establish, and establish with the active connivance, nay, on the recommendation and the exhortation of the Chancellor of the English Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain. Now, it is against these combinations, these trusts, these cartels that the engineering companies in this country are complaining. They point out instance after instance where by a system of grant of rebates all possibility of competitive prices has been cut out even under the existing protective duties and revenue duties. They refer to the case of the Nerbudda bridge: they show how handicapped they were because of the system of rebates that had been granted: they refer with hesitation, with fear, with growing anxiety to the possibilities of what might occur with reference to the Howrah Bridge: they want some assurance that a structure of that kind involving the consumption of steel to the extent of 60,000 tons according to them, and 25,000 tons according to the Tariff Board Report, an undertaking which comes, as they say, almost once in a lifetime, may not go out of their hands, and they plead and plead earnestly that the tender might be retained in the country; they quote chapter and verse for saying that the same motto that animates the National Federation animates them, keeping the home consumption to yourself, keeping the home markets to yourself. My Honourable friend, the Finance Member, has been for three years there in the latter part of his period in England: he knows what it means to have the slogan "Buy British": he has read, I believe, the Rothermere and the Beaverbrook press: he has read the placards that have been posted all over London and the bigger cities in the Provinces advocating the consumption of British goods and the use of British goods. What is our position here?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: British in that connection means Empire goods, including India.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar: But home does not mean Empire, at any rate.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: We are talking about the word "British".

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam: Non-Muhamadan Rural): Is not Empire British?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : He must have seen home products being encouraged, appeals to home industries being encouraged and to home concerns being allowed to thrive. They refer to the fact that electric towers for transmitting electricity could be manufactured in this country cheap and that encouragement should be given to that industry. They refer to the fact with regret that in my own Province in connection with the extension of the electric line to Cochin and Ernakulam from the Pykara Hydro-Electric works—the contract for these towers has gone to foreigners—foreigners in their language meaning Britishers : of course they are foreigners, and I am glad Jessops use that word, that Braithwaites use that word : that is the spirit which we want Englishmen in this country to adopt ; make this your home and see to it that the fortunes you are trying to get here are Indian fortunes and do not have a soft corner always across the seas, so that we can never see eye to eye with you : they refer to the fact that there is a danger which has come within the last few years, a danger which is of the highest concern to these engineering firms, against which they pray piteously to the Tariff Board, to the Government of India, to Sir Joseph Bore, the Commerce Member, that they may be saved from. In my younger days, when I was, I believe, much nearer heaven than I am today.....

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : It is just the other way ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I am certain of another place—I used to look at the ceiling and think it was heaven itself ; and when I was in a position to spell a few words, the first thing that I read looking at the ceiling and at the girders, there was Dorman Long and Company in big letters. And what is the position of Messrs. Dorman Long and Company ? It is an integrated concern to use the very technical language of these iron and steel manufacturers—and they take pride in clouding the issues by these technical words : an integrated firm, if I may understand it in my own mathematical way, is the opposite of a disintegrated firm : a firm which produces everything, that is to say, from the steel ingot right down to bolts, nuts, screws and anything possible : that is what is called an integrated firm : the integration is complete : the last stage is reached by that firm. It is the only British firm of that character, the only integrated firm. Dorman Long and Company have established a branch in Calcutta, and, of course, you may realise that if these revenue duties are removed or if lower protective duties are levied, how handicapped the other engineering firms will be as against Messrs. Dorman Long and Company. Read their memorandum addressed to the Secretary of the Tariff Board and to the Commerce Member, and note their plaintive cries. I do not know whether it was my friend, Mr. Sitaramaraju, who referred, in the course of his speech to an undertaking given by Mr. Elliott on behalf of the National Federation of Steel, an undertaking which the Tariff Board has reproduced with great gusto and which they think meets the situation of the case.....

Mr. F. E. James : No.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : It does not meet the case—that is exactly my point : I am going to prove that that undertaking has not been considered worth the paper on which it has been written by Messrs. Braithwaite, Messrs. Jessop and other engineering firms.

Mr. F. E. James : The Tariff Board have said so.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : They complain of the system of rebates and refunds which was being given to these exporters by the combination in Great Britain and Mr. Elliott admitting after the event, as he was bound to admit, that in the case of the Nerbudda Bridge things had gone a little astray and perhaps a little unfairly as against the Indian consumer—and here I am glad to have the admission that even British firms can be unfair occasionally when it touches their pocket—he says that in future he will try to see that that sort of thing does not occur, and he gives an undertaking on behalf of the industry in the United Kingdom that no refunds will be granted for fabricated steel work exported to India beyond what is necessary to bridge the gap between the home prices current at the time and the established export price for plain materials for India. No doubt the Tariff Board begins by saying that this hardly meets the case, but what is their conclusion ? They say :

“ If as a result of further steps in that direction it is found that the grounds which now exist for apprehending unfair competition from the United Kingdom have disappeared, it will be open to Government to reduce the duty to the revenue level.”

Now, I would like to read only a short extract from the submission which Messrs. Braithwaite and Company have made with reference to this undertaking. It explains the position in which the Indian engineering industry finds itself as against the organised British industry. They say :

“ This powerful national effort to recapture lost markets is in process of development (in Great Britain) and its full effects have not yet been felt in this country. Some industrial units, however, who on their own initiative anticipated these developments have already given us a foretaste of what is in store for us and it is these recent examples that we propose to analyse as a guide to the future.”

Then they say :

“ This new form of attack has developed on two parallel lines—

- (a) extremely lower tenders in rupees for sale in India of steel work fabricated out of India entirely from foreign steel;
- (b) extremely low tenders in rupees for sale in India of steel work fabricated in India by foreign firms entirely from foreign steel of their own rolling.”

And they wind up by saying :

“ By these means the whole Indian fabricating trade has been disorganized and in spite of the present scale of protection the Tata Iron and Steel Company has been unable to realise the full prices that the tariff is intended to obtain for them. The fabricators have been put in the unbearable position of having either to quote heavily below cost or see the foreigner skim the cream of India's requirements. Unless remedied without delay the persistent depletion of the industry's liquid resources will, before long, be making it impossible to finance its trading activities even if prices rise again to an economic level. For every day that passes the industry is being damaged. Long trained and experienced labour is being dispersed, selected and skilled supervisors are losing their employment, plant is wearing away without earning the money required for its maintenance and renewal and valuable buildings are depreciating as there are no funds to repair them. Time, in this matter, is ‘ of the essence of the contract ’.”

Then, Sir, with reference to the invitation that was extended to Messrs. Dorman Long and Co. to come to terms with these firms, they have their own reply to give :

“ It follows clearly that so long as the Federation ”—

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

--That is the National Federation of England--

"cannot in fact prevent its integrated members from transferring to their fabricating shops plain materials at prices below the controlled prices, its conditional undertaking to limit the export refund arrangements so as not to exceed the gap between the 'Home' and 'Export' controlled prices is a concession which has no value to the Indian fabricators except in so far as it limits the competition of non-integrated British fabricators."

That is to say, this concession is of no value so far as Messrs. Dorman Long and Co. is concerned, which is an integrated firm, and which has established its branch in Calcutta :

"The Federation realises this position only too well, since it finds it necessary to invite the Indian fabricators to respond to advances to be made by Messrs. Dorman Long & Co., who are stated to have the intention to approach the Indian fabricators regarding the Howrah Bridge and the future generally, and makes the suggestion that a proprietary brand of high tensile steel may be specified by the consulting engineers for use in the Howrah Bridge."

"As regards the suggestion of Messrs. Dorman Long & Co., contained in their memorandum that the Board should instruct us,"

--This is what they say--

"Regarding the objects of protection, may we point out that we cannot find that any member of the Indian fabricating industry has asked for more than an assured home market for the industry's output."

The reference is to a memorandum which Messrs. Dorman Long and Co. sent to the Tariff Board. While these engineering firms were crying out for bread, when their contractors were being deprived of their contracts on account of rebates and so forth, Messrs. Dorman Long and Co. had sent a memorandum ridiculing the local firms. This is what they actually say :

"The Board should instruct us regarding the objects of protection and that we cannot find that any member of the Indian fabricating industry has asked for more than an assured market for the industry's output. We note with great interest"

And this is what I was referring to :

"that on the same page, the memorandum refers with justifiable complacency to the embarkation by Great Britain on a policy of protection as a result of which the Home market is assured."

Now, Sir, we want our home markets to be assured to our industry. It does not matter whether Indian firms are carrying on the business or European firms established in this country, and I venture to suggest that the removal of the revenue duty together with the inadequate duties on fabricated steel is going to hit engineering firms terribly, and, therefore, as a corollary, hit the steel producing industries like the Tata Iron and Steel Company or other concerns like them.

I am afraid, Sir, I have taken more time than I had intended to do, and there are various other matters to which one can legitimately refer to, but I shall not weary the House any more. I do not think I should dilate on the question of tested and untested steel from Great Britain,--my friend, Mr. Mody, has already referred to it, and I hope that in the Select Committee we shall be able to go carefully into this question.

Now, Sir, there is only one other point that I should like to refer to, and unfortunately it happens to be again a point which arises out of the speech of my Honourable friend, the Finance Member. The Honourable the Finance Member read the other day two extracts relating to the prospects of the Tata Steel industry. One said, let me make an accurate quotation, so that I may not be charged with misrepresentation,--the one quotation ran as follows :

"The Tariff Board Report has by now been digested, and the bulls and the bears are still undecided as to the ultimate advantages or disadvantages of the recommendations."

That was one extract.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Read the next sentence please, and complete the extract.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Most certainly :

"However it would appear that the industry will get adequate protection, which can only be viewed in the light of a bull point for steel shares."

I am glad my Honourable friend has drawn attention to it.

Then comes the extract from the Capital, that great paper which claims to write about commercial and industrial matters, and which certainly claims to be an expert on matters relating to the share market. This is what it says :

"The present attitude of too large a section of the Indian Press on the suggested preference for the United Kingdom steel manufacture provides a case in point,"-- a point for the sort of understanding, prejudicial, purely biased views which these Indian political agitators continuously claim to possess or advocate :

"I do not suppose for a moment that the views there expressed will deceive Government as to the extent of public opinion behind them."

There is no question of deceiving the Government. Whoever has ever heard of the Government of India being in any way influenced, much less deceived, by views expressed in what is known as the progressive press in this country :

"I hope the Members of the Legislative Assembly will suffer from small delusion from the hysterical expressions of some newspapers that ought to know better. One would imagine that the Tariff Board's recommendations in respect of preferences, if accepted by Government, would seriously injure the Tata Co. or India. This is evidently not the opinion of holders of Tata's ordinary shares, which at today's price of Rs. 72, are actually 12 annas higher than they were before the report was published and Rs. 16 higher than their price at the end of March, 1934."

Now, has the Honourable the Finance Member cared to find out what these ordinary shares fetch by way of dividends since the time the Tata industry was established ? Let me give him an idea of that. In one of the numerous statements that Tatas have published, and the statement happens to be one of the most valuable, the amount of dividend on ordinary shares is given :

1925-26

Nil.

1926-27

2.3 lakhs or 1.32 per cent.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Then comes a period of unbroken prosperity to the ordinary shareholders and to my friend, Dr. Dalal's widows :

Dividends in 1927-28 .. Nil.

„ 1928-29 .. Nil.

„ 1929-30 .. Nil.

„ 1930-31 .. Nil.

„ 1931-32 .. Nil.

„ 1932-33 .. Nil.

„ 1933-34 .. Nil.

I can anticipate and say Nil, and I say that so long as this protection period lasts and as long as I can humanly visualise it, the ordinary shares of Tata Co. will never produce a dividend and are worth practically nothing.....

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Does the Honourable Member deny that these shares were quoted Rs. 16 higher than their price at the end of March, 1934 ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I do not deny that there are a number of fools in this country. That is a self-evident proposition.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Does the Honourable Member suggest that people who buy Tata shares are fools ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : People who buy the Tata ordinary shares are fools, and I want the Honourable the Law Member to think over the proposition carefully. The shares are worth Rs. 75. Today they are quoted at Rs. 72. For the last ten years they have not paid any dividend. There are fools and bulls who speculate, and the majority of the speculators are fools, and that is the sort of speculation that has led to the increase of 12 annas in the price of these shares. My Honourable friend has probably, fortunately for him, no knowledge of the share market, otherwise he might have invested in Tata ordinary shares. But I can assure him that it is absolutely a waste to invest money in Tata ordinary shares now or in the near future, and I shall conclude my speech by telling my friend, Dr. Dalal, that he can derive no consolation from the fact that the Honourable the Finance Member has undertaken to look after his widows. (Applause.)

Sir Abdur Rahim (Calcutta and Suburbs ; Muhammadan Urban) : I must admit that it has been rather difficult for me to make out the exact point of the eloquent speech of my Honourable friend. As a matter of fact, I do not propose to deal with any detailed questions that arise out of this Bill, because the Members of the Select Committee will go exhaustively into those matters. All that we are now concerned with is the principle involved in the Bill if we accept the motion before the House. My friend, the Diwan Bahadur, has warned us that this question has to be handled with a great deal of delicacy, and he has included every one in his warning. Sir, I for one do not think that there is no need for plain speaking on a question of this nature. I think that we ought to understand the position quite clearly and frankly. Sir, at the outset I feel a certain amount of difficulty as to what I am expected to do on the Select Committee. The Bill that we have before us is really based on excise duty on ingots, and I should like to have your ruling as to whether it will be open to us in the Select Committee to decide that it is not desirable, in the interests of the country, to have any excise duties on the ingots produced by the Tata Iron Company. I should like also to know from the Commerce Member how far the excise duties are an essential part of this Bill, and whether the protection that is sought to be given to the Jamshedpur industry will be continued even if we decide that it is not desirable or necessary to impose excise duties on steel ingots. I do not know whether you are at present disposed to give any ruling on the point, whether to decide the general question of protection, it is open to us to consider the advisability or otherwise of imposing an excise duty.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : What Sir Abdur Rahim wants is a ruling whether he will be entitled in the Select Committee to move any amendment for the omission of the excise duty on steel ingots altogether.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I am not aware of what the rules of order are and whether the fact that the word "excise" appears in the title of the Bill means an acceptance of the principle of excise. So far as that question is concerned, it is for you, Sir, and not for me. But in so far as the Government are concerned, I may say at once that the Government do regard the excise as an absolutely vital part of the Bill.

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : I submit, Sir, that the principle of the Bill is merely the protection of the Tatas and the portion of the Bill which proposes an excise cannot legitimately be regarded as a part and parcel of the principle of protection.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhamadan) : Sir, I raised this point in my speech the other day, and from the few words which the Honourable the Law Member said on that occasion I could gather that he did not regard this excise duty as forming an integral part of this Bill.

Mr. H. P. Mody (Bombay Millowners' Association : Indian Commerce) : I submit that it would be extremely unfair if our support for reference to Select Committee would tie us down in the matter of raising the question of excise in the Committee, because the Bill lumps together the provision for the continuance of the protection and for the levy of the excise. If it had not been so, if the two Bills had stood separately, and if the excise had been brought up independently before us, and we had referred the matter to a Select Committee, then certainly we would have been bound by the principle of the excise. But in view of this lumping together of both, I submit it would be very unfair if our acceptance of the Select Committee motion would tie us down to support the excise.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I think there is some confusion between a point of order and a point of policy. The point of order is entirely for you, but on the point of policy the Government regard the excise as a vital part of the Bill and would consider the loss of excise as equivalent to loss of the Bill.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : May I point out that, so far as the question of principle of the Bill is concerned, the excise duty has been instituted only due to an apprehension on the part of the Gov-open to the Select Committee to show that Government need not have that apprehension or to find an alternative method by which that revenue can be made good to the Government, in which case will the Honourable the Finance Member insist that the excise must be there? If they insist on it, it can be construed possibly as a principle of the Bill. But if they do not insist on it and the Select Committee or this House is in a position to show either that that loss cannot accrue, or to indicate an alternative method by which it can be made good, then it is a clear case in which the excise duty cannot be a part of the principle of the Bill.

[Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Finance Member says that the Government consider their proposal regarding the levy of an excise as a vital part of the Bill and very necessary for them.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : That is all right, but the Chair would like somebody on behalf of the Government to say what reply there would be to the point of order raised by Sir Abdur Rahim. Would Government contend that the levy of the excise duty is a part of the principle of the Bill to which this House would be committed by referring this Bill to a Select Committee? The Chair wants to know the opinion of the Government on that point.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : So far as I am concerned, I can only endorse what my Honourable colleague, the Finance Member, has said, namely, that we regard the excise proposals as a vital part of the Bill. Personally, I do not see why, during the course of discussions in the Select Committee, it should not be open to Honourable Members to make any suggestion that they may like to make, but our own position is absolutely definite so far as this particular question is concerned.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair understands the position of Government all right, but it is for the Chair to decide as to what is the principle to which the House is committing itself by referring this Bill to a Select Committee. The Chair must rule that the only principle to which this House will be committed, by referring this Bill to a Select Committee, is that the steel industry of India requires protection. (Cheers.) It may be that in the opinion of Government one corollary of following that policy of protection is a need for levying an excise duty to make good the loss in revenue, but that is not the principle of the Bill. The only principle is that this House recognises that the Indian iron and steel industry needs to be protected. (Applause.)

Sir Abdur Rahim : I am obliged to you, Sir, for the ruling which you have given. The matter is now clear, and I do not express any opinion of my own at this stage on the merits. I reserve it till I have heard the discussions in the Select Committee. But it is clear that it will be open to any Member to raise the question of excise in the Select Committee. It seems to me equally clear that the Government take their final stand on the question of excise. The Honourable the Finance Member has said that if you eliminate the excise duty it would be tantamount to dropping the Bill. That being the position, I shall just make a few general observations on the Bill. But before I do so, I wish to add my appreciation to what has been expressed on all sides of the House, of the great improvement in efficiency which has been effected by the present management of the Steel Company at Jamshedpur. It is not necessary to dilate on that point because the facts and figures given in the Tariff Board's report speak for themselves. They are an eloquent testimony to the way the management of this Company recognise their duties and their obligations to the public of India which has given them protection. They apparently recognise that these protective duties are not to be a permanent burden on the taxpayers or the consuming public of this country, but that the Company must, within the opportunities allowed to them, put their house in order that the need for protection might disappear as soon as may be practicable. With that end in view, they have considerably reduced their costs. They have seen to it that the equipment is efficient, and they have, above all, done their best to see that the labour employed at Jamshedpur is contented and efficient. They have been giving effect to the policy of Indianisation, which was one of the recommendations made at the time the first Bill was passed, and they have made considerable advance in the matter of giving technical training to those who seek employment at their works. As regards the workmen, it is one of the most pleasing features of the activities of those responsible for the management of these great works that their wages are on a higher level than in most industries in this country. They are doing a great deal more than many an industry here to look after the health and welfare of labour. In all these respects they have undoubtedly deserved well of the country. Their efficiency has gone up so much, that the Tariff Board thinks that they are in a position now to recommend a considerable reduction in the import duties. The Tariff Board has come to the conclusion that it is quite safe to recommend a considerable reduction of import duties as the Jamshedpur Works will be able to hold its own without any high protective wall. At the same time, as I read the report, and it seems also to be the opinion of Government, the Tariff Board is apprehensive that the Tatas may establish a monopoly of steel production in India and they make no secret of this apprehension, for in more than one place in their report they say that such a monopoly is desirable and suggests that there is in fact room for another steel works to be established in the country. Most of their principal recommendations, to which very strong objection has been taken by speaker after speaker on this side of the House, are, as I read the report, based on this apprehension. Sir, I do not believe that either the Tariff Board or the Government would contemplate the possibility of the Tatas Steel Works suffering seriously. What very much concerned the Tariff Board was that the Jamshedpur Works should not monopolise the steel production of the country, and that other subsidiary, fabricating industries in India may prosper, so that the public at large may not suffer in the long run. I for one have always advocated, and I advocate still, that India with all its resources can be entirely self-sufficient as regards the industrial requirements of the country and I would not view with very much concern even if the Tatas did acquire a monopolistic position, provided the Government was in a position to see at the same time that the public did not suffer. If the Tatas were allowed to monopolise the production of steel in the country, then, in that case, it would follow as a corollary that the public should be protected and that Government should take the power of fixing the prices of steel products. However, that is a mere theory. As it is, the position seems to be that we are faced with the question which we have to answer for ourselves, how far protection should go, whether it should go far enough to enable the Tatas to shut out imports from outside, whether from Britain or from other foreign countries, or whether we should allow room for imports to come in, so that there may be some competition with the Tatas and the engineering firms, public utility works, the railways and the public generally may not have to pay exorbitant prices for the articles that they require. If we are faced with that question, as the Government think that they are faced, then we have to proceed to examine the recommendations of the Tariff Board in that light. I have said that neither the Government nor the Indian public would think for a moment of the contingency or possibility of Tatas concern suffering any serious prejudice. That is absolutely clear from the fact, that an industry like that is essential for purposes of Imperial or national defence, and on that ground alone, if nothing else, I am certain the Jamshedpur company will not be let down. Now as regards the scheme for protection, I do not wish now to express any definite opinion on the question of abolition of revenue duty or the imposition of excise to make up for the loss in import duties. A great deal has been said as regards the constitutional position with respect to both these questions. I myself do not think that any constitutional difficulty is involved. The abolition or maintenance of a revenue duty must be controlled by considerations of revenue. That is a self-evident proposition, and ordinarily, supposing the Honourable the Finance Member was presenting his Budget to the House, very few Members on this side would think of questioning any proposal of his to reduce customs duties or any other revenue duties. The abolition or reduction of revenue duties is not, in itself, an evil : and certainly we on this side of the House do not think so, ordinarily. Therefore, in dealing with this recommendation of the Tariff Board, what really is at the bottom of this objection is that the abolition of the revenue duty on certain articles has been really recommended in the interests of certain non-Indian business houses. That is a matter which has to be examined in the Select Committee,—whether the effect is really to injure the Indian industry in order to benefit British or other foreign industries. As regards the question about the excise, as I followed the case of the Honourable the Finance Member, the position is that there would be a very heavy reduction in the revenue if the recommendations of the Tariff Board, regarding a considerable reduction of the import duties and also the letting in of certain articles revenue-free, were adopted, and that he is not in a position to give up all that revenue at present. Incidentally, I may observe, that though I do not know what the next Budget will be like, apparently, from what has been stated by the Honourable the Finance Member, he is not very sure that he is going to present us with a prosperity Budget next March. He is just fresh from England and he knows that the British Chancellor of the Exchequer has been able to present a prosperity Budget to the British public.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Today is Friday. The House will now adjourn till a quarter past two.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till a Quarter Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at a Quarter Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Sir, I was commenting on the fact that the Honourable the Finance Member does not find himself in a position to give up any income from the customs duties, and, therefore, he has found it necessary to impose an excise duty on steel. I was also pointing out that, so far as his own country is concerned, the Government have been able to produce a surplus budget, the actual surplus being something like 39 millions pounds. I fully recognise that my Honourable friend has practically inherited the Budget he will have to present to this House next February and he may not be in a position to do much to help the situation himself. But I may here express a hope that he will see to it that the cloud of depression, which seems to have lifted from Britain and other countries, should also lift soon from India as well. He will be in charge of our finances for the next five years and I hope that he will be in a position to give some relief to the taxpayers and to the industrialists of this country. (Hear, hear.) Now, I pass on to the question of the principle involved in the imposition of the excise duty. We were very pleased to have a very clear statement from the Honourable the Finance Member that he is personally opposed to the imposition of such a duty on the products of the country. This undoubtedly is the right policy. I hardly know of any country which imposes an excise duty on products of this nature. It certainly is not in the interests either of the public or the growth of industries that such duties should be levied. I entirely agree with what my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, pointed out that the circumstances in which the excise duty on sugar was imposed were of a very exceptional nature. Though we now know that the Government are determined not to give up the excise duty in this case, I do think that they will still consider whether there is or is not any alternative to it. We know further that some articles will be let in revenue-free. I do not attach much importance to the question whether the Tariff Board went out of its way to suggest that the revenue duties on certain articles should be taken off. Apart from the general terms of reference it may be said on behalf of the recommendation of the Tariff Board that they had to take the entire situation into consideration. They had to consider whether the interests of the subsidiary industries have to be protected and if so what is the best method of protecting those industries. The real question we have to consider in the Select Committee is how far the proposals of the Tariff Board, as embodied in this Bill, are going to handicap the steel industry, both the main industry of the Tatas, as well as the subsidiary industries, and if so to what extent we are in a position to remove such handicap. The scheme of protection which the Tariff Board has adopted is quite simple. It set itself to find out first of all the working costs of this enterprise, what are the overhead charges, what should be allowed for the manufacturer's profit and what allowance should be made for what is called the freight disadvantage, which arises from the fact that it is far more expensive for the Tatas to carry their goods to Bombay than for Britain to send her goods to that port? The Tariff Board have also made allowance for any lag between what is called the theoretical price and the realised price. Taking all these facts into consideration, they have arrived at the fair selling price of Tatas goods at the port of Bombay. Having arrived at that figure, they have tried to find out the difference between the landed import prices and the fair selling price, and, they have assessed the duty which they have proposed on the basis of that difference. That is given in Table XXIII at page 54 of the report and I find from that table that that is the method adopted with respect to all the articles produced in this country, rails, fish plates, structurals, bars, plates, semis, black sheets, galvanized sheets and sleepers.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

When my Honourable friend, Mr. Mudaliar, was speaking, I got the impression that the Tariff Board did perhaps make some sort of discrimination in the case of galvanized sheets. But from the table I find that the galvanized sheets are treated on the same footing as the other products of the steel industry in the country. He has also told us the history of galvanized sheets. He told us, for instance, what happened at the time the Ottawa Pact was accepted and the inference he has tried to draw was that the proposals in the Bill will be even more adverse to the manufacturers of galvanized sheets in the country than the proposals that were embodied in the Ottawa Agreement. I do not wish to enter at present upon the question of the Ottawa Agreement; my views on that Agreement are well known to this House. I held at the time that, if that Agreement in any way injures the industrial interests of this country, we should not confirm it. But if that Agreement also helps Indian industries, without injuriously affecting the industries or the consumers of our country, then we should have no objection to such an agreement. Shortly, I believe, a Committee will be sitting to examine how far that Agreement has benefited India, and I, therefore, do not wish to say anything which might tend to prejudice such an inquiry. The question of galvanized sheets and the duties that have been proposed on these articles will have to be undoubtedly very carefully examined by the Select Committee because that is a very important item amounting, I believe, to no less than about 50 per cent. in value of the imports. If it is found that the proposals of the Bill regarding galvanized sheets are in any material respect going to injure the industries here, we will have to ask the Government to reconsider that proposal. Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliar is very strong in his suggestion that the whole scheme of the Tariff Board is conceived in the interests of British industries and not to protect the Indian concerns. Sir, he used no mild language nor any vague language in order to make his point. That is a point which will undoubtedly be considered by the Select Committee, and, I am sure, my friend, Mr. Mody, will help us considerably in reaching a conclusion on that subject. Mr. Mody was not so eloquent in denouncing the greed of the British industrialists and naturally so, but Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliar, in spite of the delicacy with which he said a subject of this nature ought to be treated, was certainly extremely eloquent, forcible and plain in denouncing the proposals which in his opinion tend to favour certain British manufacturers. If the conclusion of the Tariff Board is correct, that the British manufacturers are not able to sell their goods here at prices lower than those of Tata's, then it seems to me that in the present condition of things it could not be said that the Tariff Board's scheme is wrong. But if I followed my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, correctly, he sees great dangers ahead. He is a businessman, and, it is possible, his foresight in that respect might be correct. He is apprehensive that the Steel Federation of Britain will be able to dump their products here just as the Continental Steel industries are doing at present according to my Honourable friend, the Finance Member. He also says, that the danger is such that the power given to the Governor General in Council to meet it by emergent orders in order to make the necessary adjustments when the import prices happen to be substantially lower than was contemplated by the Tariff Board may prove ineffective. Mr. Mody thinks that, that power is not likely to be of much avail, and, therefore, the result would be that if the powerful Federation of the Steel industry in England so chooses,—and it would be in their interest to do so,—it can under-sell Tata's in India and the protection now given to the Tata's will prove unavailing. As regards that point, what, I take it, the Select Committee will have to consider is, what other alternative is open to us. The only alternative,—and I do not know if Mr. Mody clearly suggested it,—we shall have to consider, seems to be whether we ought not to enhance the duties on British production as well. I have always held the view that business concerns, whether British or Indian, have their own method of conducting business, and that profit is the object which they place before themselves first and foremost, and nothing else. And if preference is to be given to English goods, I take it that they will take the fullest advantage of it in order to capture as much of the Indian market as possible. Mr. Ramaswami Mudaliar cited to us some documents and statements showing that this really was their attitude. I might have referred him also to the debates in the Parliament on questions of this nature, and, if he looked into those debates, he would have found that the British industrialists are anxious to preserve the Indian market as much as possible to themselves.

On another occasion, the House will remember, when the Textile Bill was before it and the proposal was to give the Japanese a quota, I suggested that England also should be given a quota. I know my suggestion did not find any sort of acceptance or approval from the Treasury Benches; but if you are going to adopt a system like this of preference, and, at the same time, you want that the Indian industries should not be hampered in any way in developing themselves, then I do not see how it is possible to restrain any outside competitors from encroaching on the market of India, as much as they are able to do. I really should like it to be explained,—I hope it will be explained to us clearly,—how such a contingency is going to be prevented. On the present calculations undoubtedly it will be correct to say that, the margin left for outside exporters is only 28 per cent., according to the figures given by the Tariff Board. But what guarantee is there that that competition will be confined only to this margin of 28 per cent.? I think I am correct in saying,—I should like to be corrected if I am wrong,—that many other countries have adopted the system of quota, and I believe some of the self-governing colonies have given quotas to Britain also. That is what I gathered from reading the debates in some of the Dominion Parliaments as summarised in the Empire Parliamentary Association's publications; and I really do not see that you can stop at the sort of indefinite arrangements that are proposed. You will have to be far more precise; you will have to adopt the same policy towards other countries as you have adopted towards Japan.

[Sir Abdur Rahim.]

Sir, I do not wish to take up any more time of the House. I wanted to place before the House certain general considerations which seemed to me to arise from the provisions of this Bill and from the speeches that we have heard upon it. The scheme of the Tariff Board amounts to this, stating it in a very few words. We are prepared to concede to the Jamshedpur company sufficient protection in order to meet outside competition, but we are not prepared to shut out competition altogether, since there is no other company or concern in India which produces steel and there are a number of other concerns which produce fabricated articles from the steel either produced by Tata's or imported. The conclusion, therefore, that they have come to is that we must keep the door of competition open till some other steel producing works are started. At the same time they hold that the interests of the Tata's must be sufficiently safeguarded; and as regards future contingencies, on which my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody, has dwelt,—and I do not say they are fanciful or remote,—they have given power to the Governor General in Council to make the necessary adjustments. Sir, I for one do not want on principle to give too much powers to Government to be exercised in their executive capacity, but in circumstances of this kind, I am not prepared at the moment to suggest any other remedy. If any other remedy is suggested I am sure the Select Committee, and I hope Government themselves, will give it their best consideration.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : Sir, I think it is the general desire of the House that this measure should go to the Select Committee, and it is, therefore, perhaps unnecessary for me to reply at any great length, especially as the Select Committee is the forum in which the really relevant issues, that have been raised, can be most suitably discussed. But, Sir, let me in the first place advert to the criticisms of the personnel of the Tariff Board. I listened with feelings of pain and indignation to what I conceived to be personal attacks upon the two Indian members of the Board which was charged with the task of going into the examination of this question. Those two gentlemen, Sir, can afford to ignore attacks of that character; but those who indulged in that personal criticism overlooked the fact that it requires greater courage and greater independence to sponsor what may be an unpopular decision than it does to rant and rave in support of a popular slogan. Sir, we can do in this country with more of the former type and less of the type which so courageously shouts with the crowd and, when there are two crowds, with the larger.

The Bill, Sir, has two aspects, a revenue aspect and a protective aspect. So far as the former is concerned, my Honourable colleague, the Finance Member, has already dealt with it. He has shown the various revenue implications and results of this measure. If, Sir, I intervene and say a few words with regard to that particular aspect of the question, it is in response to his request that, as he has not the right of reply, I might add anything that might be necessary to supplement his statement. I will confine myself, Sir, to the question of the excise duty. Our position is that it is only the compelling necessity for obtaining revenue that has made us put forward this proposal. We do not intend that it should be a permanent imposition and it will be removed as soon as financial considerations permit. But, Sir, the objections to this excise duty are surely based on misapprehension and misunderstanding. They appear to me to be two: the first is the objection of my Honourable friend, Mr. Mody. I think he suggested that the imposition of an excise and the levy of a corresponding import duty to balance that excise would immediately result in the foreign competitor swallowing the additional duty imposed which would result in the industry having to swallow the excise. Why the imposition of a corresponding duty to the excise should so excite the appetite and the capacity of the foreign competitor as to make him want to swallow something unpleasant at once I for one fail to see....

Mr. H. P. Mody : I am afraid my Honourable friend has not interpreted my remarks correctly. All that I said was that there was the possibility of the foreign exporter reducing his price to a certain extent in order to meet the countervailing duty. I did not say that the mere imposition of the countervailing duty would immediately result in his coming down in his prices.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : I am very glad to see that my Honourable friend has taken a position which is not so uncompromising as I thought. But I go further and I say that if the foreign competitor could absorb the corresponding additional import duty, he could just as easily have undercut the home industry, had there been no excise and no corresponding duty. The relative position of the two appears to me to be absolutely unaltered by the imposition of an excise duty and a corresponding addition to the import duty.

There was some suggestion also that this method of obtaining revenue places an undue burden upon the consumer. All methods of obtaining revenue in this case involve an attack upon the consumer's pocket. But I do suggest to the House that that attack is less serious through the method of excise and corresponding addition to the import duty than through the method of a pure revenue duty. My Honourable colleague, the Finance Member, has explained this view at some length and it is unnecessary for me to dilate upon it. But I do not wish it to be understood that I am in favour of an excise in every case: in this case, I frankly admit, there may be considerations which render this particular excise not an ideal method of taxation; and it is for that reason, that we have made it perfectly clear that the excise will be removed at the earliest possible opportunity when financial considerations permit.

But I am primarily concerned with the protective aspect of this Bill, and I have been and I am prepared to meet criticism on the basis either that it gives too much protection or too little protection.

Those who think the protection too much seem to be somewhat poorly represented in this House; but they share one thing with the other class, namely, the class that thinks this protection too little, they both avoid having recourse to the actual facts and figures of each case to support their contention. There have been certain general calculations quoted by one Honourable Member of the total quantity of net protection given to Tatas. Those calculations appear to me to be open to the most serious objection. The basis of calculation in a good many cases seems to be entirely incorrect. For instance, it is quite incorrect to say that the quantity of protection recommended, for instance, against British galvanised sheets by the Tariff Board, was a revenue duty: it was nothing of the kind: it was ten rupees, nothing more and nothing less. Again it seems to me that it is not correct to say that the excise duty will come out of the pockets of the industry. I have endeavoured to show that that statement is at any rate a gross exaggeration, and if I am right, it is in all probability entirely incorrect. Take one case. Take the case of rails and fish plates. The Government are the only buyers of rails and fish plates and the whole of the excise duty will be passed on to the Railway Department. Then in making their calculations Honourable Members must not forget that the Board has made it quite clear that in arriving at a fair selling price in each case they have allowed wide and generous margins. For instance, they have allowed six per cent. as interest on working capital and they have allowed a profit of eight per cent. But that is not all. Take the case of semis. There the Board has calculated the fair selling price at Rs. 53 a ton. This provides for profit. Nevertheless the Board have accepted the price of Rs. 64 a ton for the sale of semis to the Tin Plate Company, the Wire Nails Products Company and the purchasers of billets.

[Sir Joseph Bhore.]

Mr. H. P. Mody : Rs. 59, I think : not Rs. 53.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I think it is Rs. 53. My Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar, indulged in a very eloquent speech and attacked us somewhat violently. May I say that his statement of the case in regard to galvanised sheets was a travesty of what I venture to submit is a fair and reasonable point of view. My Honourable friend, with his deep love and concern for the agriculturist, painted in somewhat lurid language the disastrous effect of low prices on the agriculturist ; and yet when our proposals visualise a reduction, and an appreciable reduction, in the price of galvanised sheets, a reduction which in the aggregate would represent something like Rs. 48 lakhs to the consumer, my Honourable friend says : " No, we do not want it. Let the agriculturist pay. He need not buy, he need not replenish his stock until agricultural commodity prices go up." Surely this is a case in which agriculturists may well say, save us from our friends. The point at issue is a perfectly simple one. Only it has been somewhat clouded by my friend's rhetoric. The Tariff Board has arrived at a fair selling price for Tata's galvanised sheets. Is that price correct or is it incorrect ?

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : It is correct.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : It is correct, I am glad. Then all that the industry can ask is that we should secure it this selling price. I submit, Sir, that under the powers given to us under clause 2 of this Bill, we are in a position to ensure that that fair selling price shall not be materially encroached upon by uneconomic competition from outside, whether that competition is from British or from non-British sources.

My friend considered that the price of Rs. 160 for British sheets leaves the British producer a large margin of profit. That, Sir, is most certainly not so, for, Sir George Rainy and the Ottawa Delegation were quite definitely of opinion that the figure of Rs. 160 allowed the British manufacturer nothing but a fair margin of profit. To suggest that he has Rs. 30 a ton up his sleeve is, to the best of my knowledge, absolutely incorrect. If my friend will refer to pages 35 and 36 of the Report of the Ottawa Delegation, I think he will find that I am correct in this statement.

Sir, we have heard a good deal of the iniquity of the Tariff Board in making recommendations which do not afford adequate protection to the industry. Charges of inadequate protection and favouring British industries have been jumbled together in some confused way and hurled against the Board. But what was the crime of the Tariff Board in this particular case ? They proceeded in the normal way in making this investigation. As my friend, the Leader of the Opposition, has just pointed out, they proceeded by ascertaining first the fair selling price for the Indian product. They then ascertained the selling price of British competitive commodities, the difference between the two being the extent of the protection needed by the Indian commodity. They proceeded to follow exactly the same procedure in regard to non-British competitive commodities, and they arrived at the extent of the protection in exactly the same way. Now, Sir, the Tariff Board has arrived at its conclusions following the cold logic of facts and figures and through the processes of cold arithmetic. Is it contended that their facts and their figures are wrong or that their arithmetic is faulty ? If so, Sir, we are quite prepared to look into any evidence that may be adduced in support of a contention that the facts and the figures of the Tariff Board, and the deductions drawn therefrom, need revision. That, I have no doubt, will be done in the Select Committee.

Sir, one of my friends, I think perhaps two, attempted to minimise and belittle the value of the free entry of our pig iron into the United Kingdom. The reasons, I think, which influenced my friend, Mr. Raju, were firstly that a matter of ninety thousand tons of pig iron made very little difference to the Indian pig iron manufacturers of this country.....

Mr. B. Sitaramaraju : Not so much as that. What I was saying was, that so far as the United Kingdom markets were concerned, I could show figures which would show that the United Kingdom markets had restricted their purchases, whereas our foreign imports have gone on increasing. That was the point.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I am glad to hear that that was my friend's point, but I think if it was not my friend, then it was my friend, Diwan Bahadur Mudaliar, who said that ninety thousand tons was nothing at all—a mere bagatelle. I think my friend, Mr. Raju, also raised this point, namely that our best customer was Japan. Well, Sir, so far as Japan is concerned, there is one crucial point to be remembered, and that is that Japan is strenuously encouraging her own and her Manchurian blast furnaces, and it is only a question of time before she will be able to satisfy all her own requirements. My friend gave figures in regard to the imports into Japan of Indian pig iron, but I think he omitted to mention this significant feature, namely, that whereas, in 1928-29 and 1929-30 Japan took something like 350,000 tons of pig iron, last year, her takings were about half that quantity. That, Sir, I submit is eloquent proof of the contention that I have advanced, namely, that the Japanese market is a steadily diminishing market. It becomes all the more important for us, therefore, to find out alternative markets for our pig iron. If we could find markets for our pig iron as easily as my friend, Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar, rolls out his rounded sentences, we should have no difficulty. But, Sir, to say that 90,000 tons of pig iron is a mere bagatelle, that it means nothing at all, is to shut our eyes to the actual facts of the case. It may be perfectly true that 20,000 tons or 25,000 tons of pig iron may mean practically nothing to Tatas, but Tatas are not the only manufacturers of pig iron in this country, and for those other manufacturers of pig iron 50,000, 60,000 or 70,000 tons may make all the difference between continuing production and closing it down. (Applause from the European Benches.)

[Sir Joseph Bhole.]

or, Sir, should it be overlooked that in allowing us free entry of pig iron into the United Kingdom, the United Kingdom is allowing us free entry in respect of a commodity which she manufactures herself.

Now, Sir, more than one speaker has made reference to the Board's recommendations that there should be little practical differentiation between the fair selling price of tested and untested steel. That, Sir, also is a matter which I think can more appropriately be gone into in the Select Committee. But to those who fear that the Government proposals will make it possible for British importers to dump certain kinds of steel at uneconomic prices, I would merely say that clause 2 provides us with the necessary powers to face a situation of that description. Those powers will be used, whether it is the British or whether it is the foreign competitor, who attempts to upset our scheme of protection.

I would only, in conclusion, emphasise two points : firstly, when protection has been given in pursuance of a policy of discriminating protection, then, Sir, that protection must be effective both against British and against non-British rivals ; secondly, Sir, in no case should protection be in excess of what is actually necessary. Those are the principles which have actuated our policy in the past, and those are the principles which will actuate our policy in the future. Sir, I ask the House to endorse this Bill to the Select Committee.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill to provide for the modification and continuance of the protection afforded to the iron and steel industry in British India, and to impose an excise duty for revenue purposes upon certain steel be referred to a Select Committee consisting of Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. H. P. Mody, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar, Mr. B. Das, Mr. S. C. Sen, Lala Rameshwar Prasad Bagla, Mr. R. S. Sarma, Mr. Hari Singh Gour, Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra, Sir Leslie Hudson, Mr. Muhammad Amin Khan, Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, the Honourable Sir James Rigg, the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce, and the Mover, with instructions to report on or before Monday, the 13th August, 1934, and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be five."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : What about the statement of business for next week ?

Mr. G. H. Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department) : The list of business for next week having already issued, a statement of business has not been prepared.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 6th August, 1934.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Monday, 6th August, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

TRANSFER OF THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE SORTERS FROM ALLAHABAD TO JUBBULPORE AND GAYA.

348. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that the sorters of F2 and P15 sections of the R. M. S. Department have been transferred from Allahabad to Jubbulpore and Gaya respectively ?

(b) Is it a fact that these changes have been made against the wishes of the employees concerned ?

(c) Is it a fact that the employees of F2 and P15 sections are the permanent residents of Allahabad and the United Provinces, and these transfer orders have placed them in an awkward and embarrassing position ?

(d) Is it a fact that, despite the protest of the said employees, these changes have been made and in spite of their repeated representations, no provision has been made for the increase in their respective allowances, nor is any extra amount sanctioned for compensating them for their house-rent and transportation expenses ?

(e) Is it a fact that the transfers of these employees were ordered contrary to the terms of the agreement made with them at the time when they were employed in the service ?

(f) Are Government aware that the transfer of the United Provinces men to the Central Provinces will create a lot of inconveniences and difficulties to them in shifting their parental homes to a strange place and furthermore will create a great hindrance in the progress of the education of their children, who are at present prosecuting their studies in the United Provinces, and are not familiar with the curriculum of the Central Provinces schools ? If so, will Government please state what special provision in the salaries of the said employees they are prepared to make ?

(g) If the answer to part (f) be in the negative, are Government prepared to cancel the transfer orders of the said employees and allow them to work in the same manner as they are working at present ?

(h) Is it a fact that instead of giving an increase to the employees of F2 and P15 sections, a further reduction has been ordered in their pay and the future scale of payment ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the rule under which this has been done ?

(997)
1265LAD

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) to (h) : Information has been called for, and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

SCHEME OF PROVINCIAL SERVICE IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

349. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : Will Government be pleased to state whether the scheme of Provincial Service in the R. M. S. Department, which was introduced in 1920, has proved satisfactory both to the public and to Government ? If so, will Government be pleased to state how far this scheme has enabled them to make an economy in the expenditure ? If not, will Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to revise their decision and to revert to the old system ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : By the term, "The scheme of Provincial Service in the Railway Mail Service Department", it is presumed that the Honourable Member refers to the abolition of the separate Railway Mail Service Circles and the transfer of the administration of the Railway Mail Service to the heads of postal circles. No such scheme was introduced in 1920, though a scheme was considered in that year but was not adopted. It was, however, again taken up in 1926 as the result of a recommendation made by the Posts and Telegraphs Department Committee of 1924-25, and, the transfer of the control of the Railway Mail Service to the heads of postal circles was gradually completed during the years 1926 to 1929. The reasons for the change were chiefly administrative, although an economy in expenditure has also resulted. Government regret that they are not in a position to supply the exact figures as to the savings effected. They are, however, satisfied that substantial administrative and financial benefits have resulted and they do not propose to revise their decision or revert to the old system.

SCHEME OF PROVINCIAL SERVICE IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

350. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that in spite of the Provincial Service scheme in operation the employees of the C27 and C28 sections of the Railway Mail Service are made to run through three Provinces, that is to say, they have to run from Howrah to Lucknow and vice versa and thus they have to pass through the provinces of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa and the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state what particular difficulty they experience in allowing the sorters of F2 and P15 sections to run from Allahabad to Jubbulpore and vice versa ?

(c) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, and if Government are not prepared to accede to the request of the sorters of F2 and P15 sections, are Government prepared to open a new Record Office of F. Division at Allahabad on the same lines as the one already in existence at Jhansi, without incurring any extra expenditure according to the scheme submitted by the sorters of the said division in a memorial to the Post Master General, Nagpur, Enquiry Committee, Madras and Retrenchment Committee, New Delhi, in which the memorialists have submitted that a net saving of Rs. 5,000 per annum can be made by the Postal Department, if the authorities are prepared to abolish the Record Office at Jubbulpore and change it into a Sub-Record Office without discharging a single hand and facing any inconvenience in the efficiency of the work ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) to (c). Information has been called for, and a reply will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

MILEAGE ALLOWANCE TO THE TICKET CHECKING STAFF.

351. Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : With reference to the reply to starred question No. 132 (a), (i), (ii) and (iii), dated the 16th February, 1934, regarding mileage allowance to the ticket checking staff, given in this House, will Government be pleased to state if a deviation from the Standing Rules of the administration is admissible on the Indian State Railways without an amendment of the said rules ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply to this will depend on the nature of the rule in question. As regards the rule referred to in question No. 132, I have nothing to add to the reply given by me on the 16th February.

ALLOWANCES OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

352. Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : Will Government be pleased to state the result of their enquiries in respect of starred question No. 133, parts (a) and (b), dated the 16th February, 1934, regarding allowances of the Travelling Ticket Inspectors on the East Indian Railway, and state why the mileage allowance of the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors has been compulsorily substituted by the consolidated allowance ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply to parts (a) and (b) of starred question No. 133 has been laid on the table of the House.

Regarding the latter part of the question, I would again refer the Honourable Member to the reply given to Sardar Sant Singh's starred question No. 476, on the 4th September, 1933.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if the question of allowances has been finally decided ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I think that certain memorials are at present under consideration.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : The Honourable Member has always been saying that they are under consideration ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : They are not always under consideration, Sir.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I now know from the Honourable Member when he can remove the anxiety of these men and when Government will say whether they are going to get back those allowances or not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I cannot remove the anxiety of these men and say definitely before considering the memorials whether they will get whatever they were in receipt of.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Have Government received the replies from the Agents ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Replies have been received recently.

RULES FOR THE SUBMISSION OF MEMORIALS ON STATE RAILWAYS.

353. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : With reference to the reply to unstarred question No. 141, parts (a) to (d), dated the 6th March, 1934, will Government be pleased to state, if there are no different rules regarding the submission of memorials on different State Railways, what the circumstances were under which the Agent, East Indian Railway, has been held competent to dispose of such memorials which, based on the same subject, were forwarded by the Agent, North Western Railway, to the Railway Board ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Rules regarding the submission of memorials on the State-managed Railways are the same. But even though an Agent is empowered to deal finally with certain memorials, there is nothing to prevent him from forwarding such memorials to the Railway Board, if he wishes to do so.

MEMORIALS REGARDING PAY AND ALLOWANCES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

354. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : With reference to the reply to unstarred question No. 142, dated the 6th March, 1934, will Government be pleased to state if the case of the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors of the Accounts Department, on the East Indian Railway, who are now employed under the Operating Department under the Moody-Ward scheme of ticket checking, is not a class case and whether it is not a case under which the conditions of service, on which these men were engaged have been adversely affected in respect of emoluments, provident fund deductions, retiring gratuity and future prospects, etc. ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, the ex-Travelling Ticket Inspectors were, on the abolition of their posts, offered other posts as an alternative to retrenchment, which they accepted. It is not, therefore, a case of alteration of conditions of service.

MEMORIAL FROM THE TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

355. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : With reference to the reply to unstarred question No. 142 (d), (f) and (g), dated the 6th March, 1934, and to the memorial from the Travelling Ticket Inspectors on the East Indian Railway, will Government be pleased to give a reply now to these questions ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The memorial referred to is under consideration.

INFORMATION PROMISED IN REPLY TO CERTAIN QUESTIONS ASKED IN THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

356. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : Will Government be pleased to give a reply to the undernoted questions, promised to be given in due course :

Unstarred questions Nos. 212, 213, 214, 215 and 216, dated the 19th March, 1934 ; and No. 140, dated the 6th March, 1934 ; and starred questions Nos. 180, 181 and 182, dated the 21st February, 1934 ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Replies to all, except one of the questions referred to by the Honourable Member, have been laid on the table of the House. Government are making further inquiries in regard to question No. 216.

MODIFICATION IN THE MOODY-WARD SCHEME ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

357. *Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the East Indian Railway authorities are contemplating some modification in the present Moody-Ward scheme ?

(b) Is it a fact that reduction amongst Travelling Ticket Examiners is anticipated as a result of any modification ?

(c) Are Government prepared to issue instructions to the East Indian Railway authorities that in any such change the retention of Travelling Ticket Examiners should be strictly based according to seniority and as per recommendations of the Court of Enquiry and that no other factors should be allowed to govern the issue ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have called for certain information, and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

SAFEGUARDING OF THE INDIAN FILM INDUSTRY.

358. *Mr. B. V. Jadhav : (a) Have Government noticed the announcement in the Press that foreign producers of cine-films are going to produce their pictures in Indian vernaculars, in competition with Indian talkies ?

(b) If so, what steps do Government propose to take to safeguard the Indian film industry in the face of this competition ?

(c) What consideration have Government given to the suggestion of the Motion Picture Society of India to levy a protective duty of Rs. 3-8-0 per every foot of foreign film produced in Indian vernaculars ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The suggestion of the Motion Picture Society of India on this subject is under examination.

DEFINITION OF "MACHINERY" PERTAINING TO CINEMA INDUSTRY.

359. *Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Will Government be pleased to state the definition of the term "machinery" pertaining to the cinema industry as understood at present for customs purposes ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : There is no special definition of "machinery" pertaining to the cinema industry. Apparatus, or parts of apparatus, imported for the purposes of that as of any other industry are assessable under items 59A and 59D of the Import Tariff Schedules, if they satisfy the conditions laid down in those entries.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it a fact that the projectors were taxed at ten per cent. a few months ago, but that now they are taxed at 30 per cent ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It is a question of interpretation of the items in the Tariff Schedule, as I have stated in my original answer.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it not a fact that the same machine was classified as machinery and taxed at ten per cent., while latterly it is now taxed at 30 per cent ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It is a question of interpretation and of the precise nature of the machinery. I think what the Honourable Member has in mind is that we should apply ex post facto the criterion of what the machinery is used for. The tax must be based on the nature of the machinery in relation to the Tariff Schedules.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it not a fact that projectors are used as machinery ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I should certainly think so.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it a fact that they were taxed at ten per cent. as machinery, and that they are taxed at 30 per cent. now ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : They can be used for other purposes as well as cinema purposes.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government consider the question of giving a rebate if they find that the projector has been used as machinery for the cinemas ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir. As I said just now, I do not think Government can possibly apply ex post facto tests and revise customs duty in accordance with the use to which the machinery is put, once it has passed the customs.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : May I know when this change was introduced, by putting them under the category which brings them under 30 per cent. duty, while for many years they were put under the category of machinery and levied only ten per cent ? When was this change made by the customs authorities ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : There is no change at all. It is a question of the interpretation of the descriptions in the Tariff Schedules.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : When was this new interpretation put ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not admit that there was any new interpretation.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that the projectors were charged at ten per cent. before ; and they are now charged at 30 per cent ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It is a question of interpretation of the items in the Tariff Schedules. If the projectors satisfy one specification, they are charged at the lower rate. If they don't, they are charged at the higher rate.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Is it after the financial difficulties of the Government of India increased that the new interpretation was put and 30 per cent. was charged instead of ten as formerly ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I should not think so. I should not think that the difference was a vital element in the budgetary equilibrium of India.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Will the Honourable gentleman tell us from what date this new rate of duty is being enforced ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not admit that there is a new rate. What I am contending is that the rates have been charged in accordance with the decisions as to which category the articles fall into.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : It is a revised rate. From what date has this revised rate been enforced ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have already answered that question.

Mr. T. N. Ramakrishna Reddi : These projectors were originally charged ten per cent. Now they are charged 30 per cent. Does the Honourable Member deny that ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The rates on the various items have been charged in accordance with the judgment arrived at by the Collectors of Customs as to which category they fall into.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : From time to time ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : From time to time.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE INDIAN CINEMATOGRAH COMMITTEE.

360. Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Will Government be pleased to state when they propose to take action on the recommendation of the Indian Cinematograph Committee (vide paragraph 208, page 98 of the report published in the year 1928) to make it "obligatory on all exhibitors to show at every exhibition a small percentage of educational films" for a period not exceeding 15 minutes and not less than 10 minutes ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Consideration of the proposal of the Indian Cinematograph Committee, referred to by the Honourable Member, was dependent upon the constitution of a Central Cinema Bureau which was also recommended by the Committee. The scheme regarding the Bureau did not, however, find favour with most of the Local Governments and trade interests consulted and had to be dropped.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : May I suggest that a reference be made now to the Local Governments in view of the rate of development of this industry in recent times ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I would convey that suggestion to the Department concerned. I am merely concerned with educational films.

MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY OF INDIA.

361. Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Are Government prepared to consider the inclusion of the motion picture industry of India among the industries that will be treated by the Bureau of Industrial Intelligence and Research attached temporarily to the Indian Stores Department ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The Government of India have not drawn up any detailed list of Industries to which the activities of the proposed Bureau of Industrial Intelligence and Research will be confined. It will be sometime before a detailed scheme for the working of the new Bureau is formulated, but it will be open to 'the motion picture industry' to approach the Bureau when it starts to function for such assistance as it may be able to give.

FILM DEPARTMENT OF THE RAILWAY PUBLICITY BUREAU.

362. *Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Will Government be pleased to state whether the Film Department of the Railway Publicity Bureau is functioning? If not, how long did it function? How many films have they produced, and how much money have they spent on the production of the films?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. The work of production of cinema films was undertaken from 1927 to 1931. The total number of films produced was 101 and the cost of their production was Rs. 3,19,071.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it not very high cost?

SELECTION BOARDS OF THE OPERATING AND COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

363. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Will Government please state the date from which Selection Boards have been functioning on the Operating and Commercial Departments of the East Indian Railway?

(b) Are substantive promotions to selection post or posts in special grades made on the recommendations of the Selection Boards only and not according to the choice of a single officer?

(c) Is the same principle observed when making officiating appointments to vacancies in the special grades or selection posts?

(d) If the reply to part (c) be in the negative, will Government please state the guiding principle observed in connection with such officiating arrangements?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I shall reply to this and the next question together. I have called for information, and will lay a reply on the table of the House in due course.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if he knows whether these Selection Boards consist of officials only or of non-officials also?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not think they would normally contain non-officials.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will you please make an inquiry about that?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I do not see any reason why non-officials should be on these Selection Boards.

PROMOTIONS IN THE COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†364. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Will Government please state the principle and the procedure prescribed when making substantive promotions to posts in the category of "Special Grades" in the Commercial Department of the East Indian Railway?

(b) Is the same procedure followed when making officiating appointments to these posts?

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the negative, will Government please state the procedure that should be observed?

ABSENCE OF MUSLIM STENOGRAPHERS IN CERTAIN GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DEPARTMENTS.

365. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that permanent Muslim stenographers are conspicuous by their absence in the following departments of the Government of India :

- (i) Home,
- (ii) Finance,
- (iii) Commerce,
- (iv) Legislative Department,
- (v) Legislative Assembly Department, and
- (vi) Army Department, and that there is only one stenographer out of a cadre of six or seven stenographers in the Department of Education, Health and Lands, and that the same is the case in the Foreign and Political Department?

(b) Will Government please state if their attention was ever invited to the paucity of Muslim stenographers in the Government of India Secretariat and to the injustice thus done to Muslims? If so, will Government kindly state why no steps were taken to increase the number of Muslim stenographers in the Government of India Secretariat?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) There are no Muslim stenographers in the Finance, Commerce, Legislative and Legislative Assembly Departments, but there is one in the Home Department, (at present on deputation elsewhere), and one in the Army Department. Of five permanent stenographers in the Education, Health and Lands Department one is a Muslim, and in the Foreign and Political Department one of six is a Muslim.

(b) The attention of the Government has been drawn to the desirability of appointing Muslims to stenographers' posts. Government always consider the claims of qualified Muslims, but it must be remembered that vacancies in this grade are not of frequent occurrence.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : Am I to understand that there are no qualified Muslims even in the Provinces—in which case Government may, I hope, be pleased to have them drafted therefrom to the Government of India offices?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 363.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have no doubt that there are a number of qualified Muslims in the Provinces. I think a later question on today's paper deals with that suggestion that stenographers should be drafted from the Provinces to the Government of India.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I know if Government take the religious persuasion of a particular individual into consideration in making appointments ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think in order to retain the proper communal proportions, that has to be considered.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, "community" is one thing and "religion" is another. I am now speaking of "religion".

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not quite see the difference.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if, in order to meet that inequality, Government propose to take those persons that have to be taken in on that account only or also on the ground of efficiency ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Efficiency is certainly considered ; it is necessary for every stenographer, I understand, to pass a qualifying examination.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if all the recruitment that is to take place is through the Public Service Commission ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, that is so.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government state what is the test of efficiency for a stenographer ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am afraid I cannot say that off-hand.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government please state whether any attempt has been made during the last two years to appoint any stenographer in the Home Department ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have only been in charge a week, but I believe that there have been no vacancies during the last year or so.

MUSLIM STENOGRAPHERS IN RECEIPT OF SPECIAL PAY IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

366. Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that in the Government of India Secretariat, stenographers working with Honourable Members, get a special pay of Rs. 150 per mensem, each, while those attached to Secretaries and Joint Secretaries get a special pay of Rs. 50 per mensem, each, only ?

(b) Will Government kindly state if there is any Muslim stenographer in the Secretariat who is in receipt of such a special pay ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) above be in the affirmative, will Government please state if they intend to take any steps to remove this grievance of the Muslim community ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) Yes, at present there is one in the Railway Department.

(c) I presume that the Honourable Member wishes to know what action Government intend to take to increase the number of Muslim stenographers in posts carrying special pay. If so, I must point out that selection for these posts is governed by fitness and not by communal considerations.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : May I know from the Honourable Member if he knows that the Muslims have never asked that inefficient and incompetent hands should be entertained in any Department of the Government services ? (Hear, hear.)

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I will take the Honourable Member's word for it.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Do Government propose to take steps to convert men of one religious faith into another, in order to equalize representation in the services ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The answer is an unhesitating negative.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : Is it not a fact that the importance of the Muslim community as a community has been recognized by the Government in matters relating to all these appointments ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, Sir.

APPOINTMENT OF MUSLIM STENOGRAPHERS IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT.

367. Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : (a) Is it a fact that the Government of India in the Home Department have recently issued a resolution fixing the percentage of Muslims in the services at 25 ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the whole of the Secretariat of the Government of India there are only five Muslim stenographers working as follows :

- (i) one in the Foreign and Political Department ;
- (ii) one in the Education, Health and Lands Department ;
- (iii) one in the Agricultural Research Council ; and
- (iv) two in the Industries and Labour Department ; against about fifty stenographers belonging to other communities ?

(c) Is it a fact that very well qualified Muslim stenographers are available in the various Provincial Governments who would be quite prepared to come to the Government of India ?

(d) Will Government please state whether in order to remove this disparity, they are prepared to ask Local Governments to submit the names of properly qualified Muslim stenographers for employment in the Government of India Secretariat ?

(e) Is it a fact that in the past some Hindu and Christian stenographers were exempted from the general test of the Public Service Commission and are now working permanently in the Government of India Secretariat ?

(f) Do Government likewise propose to exempt such Muslim stenographers, (who are considered competent by their officers), as may wish to come from the Provincial Governments to the Government of India Secretariat?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) The Resolution in question provides that 25 per cent. of vacancies to be filled by direct recruitment will be reserved for Muslims.

(b) My information is that out of 71 stenographers, temporary and permanent, nine are Muslims.

(c) I have no information.

(d) The normal method of recruitment is from candidates who have passed the test prescribed by the Public Service Commission. But provision exists for the appointment of candidates with special qualifications, and applications from such candidates will be duly considered.

(e) In the past, the Public Service Commission have exempted, one Hindu and one Christian, from the prescribed test, but these exemptions were not made on communal grounds.

(f) No.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state for what reasons these exemptions were made?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am afraid I have no exact information on that point, but I imagine that it was because the two persons in question had previous special experience and qualifications. If the Honourable Member so desires, I shall be glad to look into the matter further.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur : May I know whether, if the Muslims also satisfy the same condition, or conditions, they will come under the same category as those that have already been exempted on these grounds?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, I should say, certainly, Sir.

GRIEVANCES OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS.

368. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an article under the heading of "A suggestion to the Railway Board" published in the Railway Times, Bombay, dated the 23rd June, 1934?

(b) Is it a fact that the Agent's reply referred to therein has proved that the Travelling Ticket Examiners are utilised in other than their legitimate duties?

(c) Did the Public Accounts Committee give its consent to retain the Moody-Ward system under the Operating control? If so, when? Or was the consent given in respect of the Crew system which has been abolished?

(d) When was the Crew system abolished and when were these recommendations made, as quoted in paragraph 2 of the said article?

(e) Is it true that the questions about mileage allowance and grade promotion are under the consideration of the administration, as mentioned in paragraph 4 of the said article?

(f) If the reply to part (e) above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state when the decision is likely to be given?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state if the complaint contained in paragraph 6 of the said article is true, and if so how is it being overcome by the East Indian Railway authorities?

(h) Is it true that an employee drawing Rs. 200 pay and with longer service is held junior to a man drawing Rs. 160 pay and with shorter service?

(i) Do Government propose to consider the advisability of having a joint check by Accounts and Operating on the lines suggested in the concluding paragraph of the said article? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) I presume, my Honourable friend is referring to the reply given to question No. 155, asked by himself, on the 16th February, 1934. If so, the fact that Travelling Ticket Examiners have duties in addition to checking tickets does not imply that these duties are not part of their legitimate duties.

(c) I would refer the Honourable Member to paragraph 47 of the Proceedings of the Public Accounts Committee which examined the accounts of 1929-30 and to the evidence recorded in pages 39-43 of Volume II of the report.

(d) The Crew System was abolished from June, 1931. As regards the second part of the question the date on which the question was discussed by the Public Accounts Committee, if my Honourable friend is referring to it, was 27th November, 1931.

(e) Two memorials, one from the Travelling Ticket Examining staff of the North Western Railway and one from the Ticket Examining staff of the East Indian Railway, are under the consideration of the Railway Board in consultation with the Agents of the railway administrations.

(f) I regret I am unable to give an exact date, but I hope it will not take long, as the remarks of the administrations concerned have been recently received.

(g) and (h). These are matters entirely within the competence of the Agent, East Indian Railway, and Government are not prepared to interfere; but I am sending a copy of the question to the Agent for information.

(i) Government do not contemplate making any change at present in the organisation of this department.

CLASSIFIED SENIORITY LIST OF STATE RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

369. Mr. S. G. Jog : Is it a fact that Government have informed this House in reply to unstarred question No. 95 on the 24th February, 1934, that the classified seniority list of State Railway employees are meant for departmental use and not for publication? If so, will Government please state:

(a) whether any Department of Government publishes its classified lists;

- (b) whether the lists for sale shown in the catalogue of the publications by the Superintendent, Government Printing, are departmental classified lists or otherwise ;
- (c) the rule or order notified in the Gazette or otherwise notifying that such lists should not be notified to the staff ;
- (d) the method, means, or ways of getting acquainted with the seniority or juniority of the staff amongst themselves ;
- (e) how the seniority or juniority of the Financial Commissioner, Railways, stood on the 1st July, 1934, amongst his colleagues and officers of the Accounts and Audit Services ;
- (f) how the Financial Commissioner, Railways, came to know about his position on the list when it is never notified to the staff ; and
- (g) whether Government now propose to publish and notify to the staff and place a copy of the classified seniority lists in the Library of this House, and if not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Yes.

- (a) So far as I am aware no Department of the Government of India publishes classified seniority lists of subordinate staff.
 - (b) If my Honourable friend will kindly inform me what publications in the catalogue he refers to, I shall endeavour to give him a reply.
 - (c) There is no such rule or order. If my Honourable friend will refer again to the reply he refers to, he will find that I did not say that these lists should not be notified to the staff.
 - (d) I am not aware that at present subordinate staff have any difficulties in finding their relative seniority ; they have only to apply to their superior officers.
 - (e) The latest classified list of officers in the Finance Department, Government of India, and the Departments under its administrative control is up to the 31st May, 1934, and a copy, is, I believe in the Library of the House. If my Honourable friend is interested in knowing the relative position of the present Financial Commissioner of Railways, as compared with the other officers in the Indian Audit and Accounts Service, he can find the information in page 19 of that list.
 - (f) My Honourable friend's assumption in the second part of the question is incorrect. Classified lists of Gazetted Officers are usually compiled by Departments of the Government of India including the Railway Department, and are published.
 - (g) A copy of the classified list of officers of all railways, corrected up to the 31st December, 1933, is in the Library of the House.
- The printing of seniority lists of subordinates is a matter for the Railway administrations to decide with reference to their utility for departmental use, and Government are not prepared to issue general instructions that seniority lists of all subordinates should be printed. I understand, however, that State-managed Railways generally print lists of subordinates in grades rising to Rs. 250 and over.

PROMOTIONS IN CERTAIN GRADES, ON THE LUCKNOW AND MORADABAD DIVISIONS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

370. *Mr. S. G. Jog : Is it a fact that Government informed this House on the 2nd March, 1934, in reply to the starred question No. 323 (a), that the collection of the information regarding promotions in certain grades on the Lucknow and Moradabad Divisions of the East Indian Railway, is likely to involve a considerable amount of labour ? If so, will Government please accept the cost of labour from me and collect the required information ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative, and to the second in the negative.

APPRECIATION OF THE WORK OF TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS.

371. *Mr. S. G. Jog : Is it a fact that the working of the Travelling Ticket Examiners during the period 1916—28, was considered satisfactory and as such was appreciated by the authorities ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have not been able to trace any reports received by the Railway Board on the subject.

CONTROL OVER THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

372. *Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Is it a fact that the cadre of the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway during the period 1916—28 was under the Audit Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that the principal function of the cadre of the Travelling Ticket Examiners under the Audit Department was to check and to detect unauthorized travelling, frauds or irregularities of the Traffic Department ?

(c) Is it a fact that under the Audit Department the Travelling Ticket Examiners unearthed the irregularities of the Traffic Department ?

(d) Is it a fact that to achieve the complete check and detection of irregularities the Audit Department is created ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) Their duties consisted in checking tickets of passengers in trains and collecting the proper fares and any penalties due from passengers found travelling without tickets.

(c) Travelling Ticket Examiners were expected to endeavour to detect all irregularities which came within the scope of their duties.

(d) It is one of the functions of the Audit Department to examine the accounts in order to detect irregularities, if any.

CONTROL OVER THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

373. *Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Will Government please state the circumstances under which the Divisional Superintendents on the North Western Railway in 1925 assembled and unanimously decided to take over the control and working of the cadre of Travelling Ticket Examiners from the Audit Department?

(b) Will Government please lay on the table a copy of the minutes of the meeting of the Divisional Superintendents? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The decision was based on the consideration that better supervision over travelling ticket examining staff would be possible with Divisional Superintendents and their District Officers constantly travelling about.

(b) No. These documents are confidential.

UNAUTHORISED TRAVELLING BY THE PERSONNEL OF THE RAILWAY TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT.

374. Mr. S. G. Jog : Is it a fact that the personnel of the Traffic Department, both officers and subordinates, enjoy the privilege of unauthorized travelling?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply is in the negative.

CARRYING OF RELATIVES AND FRIENDS OF TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT OFFICERS IN THEIR INSPECTION CARRIAGES.

375. Mr. S. G. Jog : Is it a fact that officers of the Traffic Department do carry with them in their respective Inspection Carriages, their friends and unauthorized relatives without tickets or permits?

Mr. P. R. Rau : No Railway officer is permitted to carry with him in Inspection Carriages his friends or relatives without proper tickets or passes.

CONTROL OVER THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

376. Mr. S. G. Jog : (a) Is it a fact that the cadre of Travelling Ticket Examiners was formed on the North Western Railway under the Audit Department in 1912?

(b) Is it a fact that the cadre of Travelling Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway was transferred in 1915 from the Audit Department to the Traffic Department?

(c) Is it a fact that the Control and Working of Travelling Ticket Examiners from 1912 to 1915 was under the Audit Department?

(d) Will Government please state the nature of duties of the Travelling Ticket Examiners performed under the Audit Department between 1912 and 1915?

(e) Will Government please state the circumstances under which the Control and Working of the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway were transferred in 1915 from the Audit Department to the Traffic Department?

(f) Is it a fact that the cadre of the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway was in 1916 retransferred from the Traffic Department to the Audit Department?

(g) Will Government please state the circumstances under which the control and working of the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the North Western Railway were re-transferred in 1916 from the Traffic Department to the Audit Department?

(h) Will Government please state the nature of duties of the Travelling Ticket Examiner, performed under the Traffic Department between 1915 and 1916?

(i) Will Government please lay on the table copies of the reports submitted both by the Audit Department and the Traffic Department on the Working of the Travelling Ticket Examiners during the period 1912-15 and 1915-16, respectively? If not, will Government please state the source through which the efficiency or extravagancy of the cadre was judged?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a), (b), (c), (e), (f) and (g). I would refer my Honourable friend to the reply given to question No. 461, asked by Sardar Sant Singh on the 4th September, 1933.

(d) and (h). Government are not aware that the duties of Travelling Ticket Examiners changed between 1912 and 1916. Their duties presumably included checking tickets and collecting fares and penalties.

(i) I understand that no records are now available.

DEBT LEGISLATION.

377. Rai Sahib Badri Lal Rastogi : Are Government aware that more than one Provincial Government has introduced debt legislation in its Local Legislative Council? Are Government also aware that the question of slump in trade is an all-India question? If so, do Government propose in the interest of the country as a whole to take up the question of debt legislation?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The answer to the first two parts of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the last part, I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given on the 19th July, 1934, to starred question No. 143, by Sir Muhammad Yakub, in which my predecessor explained why the Government of India did not consider it desirable to introduce central legislation in the matter.

Mr. J. Ramsay Scott : Are Government aware that the United Provinces Government are introducing legislation which penalizes the creditor for the benefit of the debtor amounting to legalized default?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am aware that the United Provinces Government have under consideration legislation which does fix the rates of interest on loans, but I am not familiar with the details of that legislation.

Mr. J. Ramsay Scott : Are Government prepared to assist Local Governments to overcome these difficulties by supporting land mortgage banks and thus avoiding the enactment of such an objectionable and dangerous legislation?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think the question of land mortgage banks is dealt with in a Resolution of the Finance Department published after the Economic Conference held last April.

Mr. J. Ramsay Scott : Will Government kindly consider the question and make a statement or put it on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Which question ?

Mr. J. Ramsay Scott : On its attitude towards this proposed provincial legislation and land mortgage banks.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I do not think it is fair to ask the Government of India to make a statement at present on their attitude towards provincial legislation. That is a matter for consideration when the legislation in question takes final form and emerges from the Local Legislative Council.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : May I ask, Sir, how far the recommendation made at the time of the Reserve Bank Bill about rural credit has progressed ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Would the Honourable Member mind repeating the question ?

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : There was a recommendation made about rural credit when the Reserve Bank Bill was under consideration, and the Government had promised to take some steps in the matter. I would like to know what steps have been taken in that matter, because that will go a great deal to solve the question of interest as well as the question of land mortgage banks.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I think that question ought really to be addressed to my Honourable colleague on my left, but I understand that the Reserve Bank Act does contain a section directing that the Bank shall set up a department to deal with rural credit, and steps are being taken to carry out that direction of the Act.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I want to know what progress has been made in that direction ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That does not arise out of the present question. If the Honourable Member puts down a question, I will be able to give an answer.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : With reference to the question put by Mr. Scott, may I ask whether the Government of India are aware that the Government of the United Provinces have made a great mess of this question of rural indebtedness with the result that they have annoyed the landlords of the United Provinces ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Bhai Parma Nand.

Bhai Parma Nand : Is it a fact that the Indebtedness Relief Bill was before the United Provinces Legislative Council and that certain important changes were made in it ? Those changes required the sanction of His Excellency the Viceroy, and, therefore, the Bill has been sent to His Excellency the Viceroy for his sanction. Will the Honourable Member give us information on that point ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : My impression is that one Bill that emerged from the United Provinces Legislative Council was submitted to His Excellency the Governor for his sanction and that he referred it back to the Council suggesting that certain amendments should be made. I am only speaking what I have read in the newspapers. That is my impression. I do not think the legislation has advanced beyond that at present. But I speak subject to correction. I have been out of India for the last three months, and I have not closely followed what has been going on in the United Provinces.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : With reference to the reply just given by the Honourable Member, is it a fact that this Bill, which was really stopped by the Governor, was a Government Bill and it was really based on the report of a Committee and was drafted with the approval of the Executive Council and passed by the Legislature, and then it was stopped altogether ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Is the Honourable Member giving information or is he asking for it ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : I am asking a question by saying "Is it a fact ?"

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Honourable Member is himself in a much better position to answer that question. I have been out of India during the last three months, but my impression is that the Bill was certainly a Government Bill and that amendments were carried against the Government vote in the course of its passage through the Legislative Council and these amendments His Excellency the Governor found himself unable to accept. So he referred the Bill back to the Council. I am speaking subject to correction as my knowledge is drawn entirely from what I have read in the newspapers.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it a fact that the reasons for the withholding of this Bill are in this question ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Mr. Bhuput Sing.

CONFISCATED FUNDS NOT RETURNED TO THE CONGRESS.

378. Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the total amount of confiscated funds in each Province which are not going to be returned to the Congress ?

(b) How is it proposed to utilise these confiscated funds ?

(c) Will these funds remain in the hands of the Central Government or the Provincial Governments concerned ?

(d) Do Government propose to divert the whole amount to the Viceroy's Earthquake Relief Fund for utilisation in the affected areas of Bihar ?

(e) If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) By section 17E of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, a Local Government was empowered, if it was satisfied that any monies, securities or credits were being used or were intended to be used for the purposes of an unlawful association, to declare such monies, etc., forfeited to His Majesty. I must make it plain that there is no question of the return of moneys so forfeited.

I regret I have no information of the total amount so forfeited in the various provinces.

(b) to (e). Forfeited moneys are credited to provincial revenues and merge in the provincial balances.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will Government kindly inquire how much money has been confiscated in all the Provinces ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I regret I have no information on that point.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will the Honourable Member kindly make an inquiry from the Local Governments ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : If the Honourable Member really thinks it worth while, I shall make inquiries.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government please explain the principle why they make a difference between the confiscation of movable and immovable property ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The difference is made in the Act. There are two sections of the Act, one refers to money, credits and so on, and the other refers to immovable property.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it not stated in the Statute that the immovable property is also confiscated and that Government can get money out of those properties by putting them into auction ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The Local Government can take possession of the immovable property, but it is not forfeited to His Majesty. That is the distinction.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : May I know if the immovable property is sometimes returned when these societies are declared lawful ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, that is correct.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Why have not the Government returned back the movable property when these societies have been declared lawful ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Because, in the case of cash, securities, credits, and so on, the Statute says that they can be forfeited to His Majesty. In that case, there is no question of return. In the case of the immovable property, that is to say, land or buildings, the Statute only allows the Local Government power to take possession of them. If the ban on the Association is removed, such immovable properties are returned, but not the movable properties which have been forfeited to His Majesty.

Mr. Bhuput Sing : Will the Government of India kindly ask the Local Governments to use this money for the relief of the distressed people who are suffering either from floods or earthquake ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I said that the money merges in the general provincial balances, and whether it can be applied to such purposes as the Honourable Member suggests is really a question of financial propriety.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will Government take steps to utilise that money for the relief of the new Finance Member ? (Laughter.)

(No answer.)

LIGHTING ARRANGEMENTS ON THE LONGWOOD ROADS, SIMLA.

379. *Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that there are no lighting arrangements on Longwood roads passing through cottages allotted to the Members of this House ?

(b) Are Government aware that there are such arrangements on the Cart Road ?

(c) Do Government propose to take any steps to remove the darkness ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No. Certain lights are provided by the Central Public Works Department, and there are also lights provided by the Municipal Committee in the neighbourhood.

(b) Yes.

(c) I would suggest that the Honourable Member might refer the matter to the House Committee. Government will give careful consideration to any suggestions made by the House Committee for the improvement of the lighting arrangements at Longwood.

FLOODS IN NORTH BIHAR.

380. *Mr. Bhuput Sing : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they have in their possession any additional information than that published in the newspapers regarding the serious floods in North Bihar ?

(b) How many lives have so far been lost and what is the extent of the damages to property ?

(c) Can relief be given out of the Viceroy's Earthquake Fund for these floods, and will local bodies be given anything out of the funds granted to Bihar and Orissa Government for earthquake relief ?

(d) Do Government propose to make a special separate grant to the Provincial Government for flood relief ?

(e) What steps have the Bihar Government taken so far to relieve the distress arising out of floods and what preventive measures have been taken?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai: I lay on the table copies of the Press communiqués, issued by the Government of Bihar and Orissa, dated the 18th, 19th and 26th July, and also a copy of the Government of Bihar and Orissa's letter, dated the 30th July, 1934. It will be seen that there has been no loss of life or loss of cattle; though some damage has been done to katcha houses, it is not very serious; damage has also been done to the crops, and it is estimated that five per cent. of the Bhadai crop has been damaged severely in Champaran, but that the damage to the paddy is less serious. In Muzaffarpur, the extent of the damage cannot be estimated, as the water had only just shown signs of falling on the date of the report (July 28th). Necessary relief measures have been organised by the Local Government.

The 18th July, 1934.

The position regarding the floods in the Tirhut Division, as ascertained up to the night of the 17th July, 1934, is as follows:

An aeroplane was obtained by the Local Government for the purpose of ascertaining the exact position. Mr. J. E. Scott, Commissioner of the Tirhut Division, flew over the whole of the affected tract and landed at Motihari. There has been an abnormal flood on the Sikrana and Burh Gandak rivers, which came down with more than the usual acceleration. This flood has caused a shallow sea to form from Motihari to Muzaffarpur but the water is extremely shallow and is not likely to cause any danger. Though numerous villages are surrounded by water, little damage appears to have been done to the house or to the inhabitants or their cattle. There is very little flooding in the Dhaka direction. The flooding on the river Bagmati has never been abnormal and gives no cause for alarm. North of Muzaffarpur eight or nine low lying villages have been washed out by the waters of the Bagmati banking up against the flood in the Bur Gandak. The inhabitants of these villages have been rescued.

The 19th July, 1934.

Heavy rain at Motihari and in the hills to the north has led to flooding in the basin of the Sikrana (Burh-Gandak) river. The flood is now receding at Sugauli and is making its way towards Muzaffarpur. There is no reason for anxiety and the flood is not expected to be abnormal. The Bagmati river is low. The Commissioner of Tirhut flew over the affected area on Tuesday last. The villages likely to be affected by the flood have been warned and all precautions have been taken.

The 26th July, 1934.

Up to the morning of the 23rd of July, the position with regard to the floods in North Bihar was as follows:

In Champaran the floods started to fall on the afternoon of the 17th. By the 19th the water had fallen considerably in the area round Motihari and to the west of that town. As the water passed down from the north west of the district, there was heavy flooding round Madhubani from midnight of the 17th. In this area a few village sites went completely under water and a certain number of houses have

The flood rescue arrangements which had been organized by the Collector worked well. Sufficient boats were available and the inhabitants of submerged villages were rescued promptly and given food and clothing. By the 22nd the necessity for active relief work had ceased everywhere in Champaran except at Madhubani. The information received is to the effect that no lives, either of human beings or of cattle, were lost and that about two annas damage was done to transplanted rice in the worst affected areas. A certain amount of damage has also been done to the bhadai crop.

In Muzaffarpur nothing serious occurred in the Hajipur Sub-division, though the Gandak river rose very high. There was flooding in the north east of the Sitamarhi sub-division, where the water had fallen by one foot by the 22nd. The brunt of the floods fell on the country to the north of Muzaffarpur in the Sadr Sub-division. The first eleven miles of the Muzaffarpur-Sitamarhi Road were breached or went under water in numerous places and villages along the line of the road were heavily inundated in Minapur, Sakra, Katra, and Muzaffarpur thanas. Here again the special flood rescue system worked well. Relief parties went out promptly in boats with money, food and fodder and a large number of refugees have been brought in to Muzaffarpur and given shelter in the Damuchak colony.

The general position is that the danger is over for the present in Champaran, north and west Sitamarhi, Darbhanga and Saran. There should be no more trouble in the portion of the Sadr Sub-division of Muzaffarpur, west of the Sitamarhi Road except damage to houses and crops from prolonged immersion. East of this line towards Pusa and Samastipur it is not yet possible to gauge the position as the flood water is now passing in that direction. The bund which protects Samastipur town has been strengthened.

In anticipation of floods, elaborate arrangements were made at the instance of Government to provide boats in unusually large numbers to organise rescue centres and to provide for refugees. The necessity for this organisation has been amply justified. This was the first occasion on which it was tested, and it is satisfactory to find that the organisation has worked efficiently. Without it, the damage caused by the flood would have been far more serious.

Copy of a letter No. 1145-R.E., dated the 30th July, 1934, from the Government of Bihar and Orissa, to the Government of India, Home Department.

In reply to your telegram No. D.3312 of the 27th July, 1934, and in continuation of my telegram of the same date, I am directed to give the following additional information about the floods in the Champaran and Muzaffarpur districts—

(a) Loss of human life reported nil.

(b) Loss of cattle reported nil.

(c) Damage to property:—Some damage to property has resulted from the entry of flood water into village-sites and the consequent crumbling of walls and damage to katcha houses. The extent of the damage thus caused cannot yet be estimated, but it is not very serious. With regard to crops, damage was done to the bhadai crop in the flooded area of Champaran district, where considerable areas were under water, and it is estimated that 5 per cent. of the bhadai crop in that district has been severely damaged. The damage to the paddy is less serious. No estimate of the damage done to crops in Muzaffarpur can yet be given, as the water is draining off very slowly from the central parts of the district.

(d) With regard to the measures taken by Government in readiness for the floods, the construction of a large fleet of boats had been in progress for several months and the boats were distributed before the onset of the rains at places where they were likely to be required. Shelters for refugees were constructed after the earthquake, and these were purposely made in greater numbers than were certainly required then, so that there would be room in case of necessity for flood-refugees. Money was placed at the disposal of the Commissioner and Collectors from Famine Relief Funds and arrangements were made by the local officers and officers of the District Board to meet any situation caused by floods. The Local Government arranged for an aeroplane to be available at very short notice, wherever required.

(e) An air-reconnaissance of the flooded area was made at an early stage by the Commissioner of Tirhut, Mr. Scott, and valuable information was thus obtained. The boats have proved valuable in moving many hundreds of people from flooded sites to higher ground. The Public Works Department and district board authorities made special arrangements, to watch and strengthen and if necessary raise embankments, and the efforts of those engaged in this work prevented much more serious damage in several places,—particularly in Muzaffarpur town itself. Visits were made by officers deputed for the purpose to the badly-affected areas, by boat in many cases, and food was distributed where necessary. Arrangements were made for shelter for refugees on high ground, and in Muzaffarpur town the shelters already constructed proved extremely useful. Copies of three press communiqués issued on the 18th July, 19th July, 1934, and 26th July, 1934, are enclosed. The latest news on the 28th morning is that the rivers which had begun to rise again are falling and the flood is abating.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask, Sir, what assistance the Government of India have given or propose to give to the Bihar Government in order to cope with this situation that is arising out of the floods ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India have not been approached by the Government of Bihar for any assistance presumably because they consider that the resources which have already been placed at their disposal by the Government of India and from the Viceroy's Relief Fund are adequate.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know if the assistance from the Viceroy's Relief Fund could be given to cope with the flood situation ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have a recollection of reading in the Press the other day that Rs. 50,000 have been allotted from that Fund for flood relief.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are not Government making a serious attempt to cheapen corrugated iron sheets in the interests of the distressed agriculturists ? I am simply reminding the Government of it and they can take credit for it.

Mr. E. Studd : Are Government taking steps to see that in the rebuilding of devastated towns, provision will be made for an improved lay-out and the abolition of the old slum areas ? Or is it Government's intention to allow the slums to be re-built ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I should have thought that the Relief Commissioner would certainly take the elementary precaution which the Honourable Member has mentioned when he considers proposals for re-construction.

Mr. E. Studd : Will the Government of India be prepared to support the proposals of the Local Government for an improved re-construction.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government of India, as far as I know, have received no proposals from the Government of Bihar for improved re-construction of the slums, because that appears to be a question which is perfectly within the competence of the Local Government. But my Honourable friend's suggestion, if he so wishes, can be passed on to the Government of Bihar.

DECLARATION OF A PUBLIC HOLIDAY FOR Chaitra Sudi Tryodashi.

381. Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are aware that Chaitra Sudi Tryodashi, that is, the thirteenth day of New Moon in Chait, is the anniversary date of birth of Mahabir, the last Tirthankar of Jains, which is observed throughout India by all sects of Jains ?

(b) Do Government propose to declare it as a public holiday under the Negotiable Instruments Act ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) Yes.

(b) Section 25 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, vests the power to declare any day to be a public holiday in the Local Government and not in the Government of India. The matter is, therefore, one for Local Governments.

BIOCHEMICAL WORK IN THE INDIAN LAC RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

382. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that there is very little biochemical work on the programme of the Indian Lac Research Institute at present ? If so, do Government propose to consider the abolition of the post of the biochemist, or at least recruiting one on a smaller pay suitable for the needs of the situation ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Biochemical work has been temporarily curtailed to some extent in order to enable greater attention to be given to problems of lac manufacture and utilisation. The question is primarily one for the Indian Lac Cess Committee.

BIOCHEMICAL WORK IN THE INDIAN LAC RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

383. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Is it a fact that the Biochemist of the Indian Lac Research Institute has not carried out any research work in the laboratory for the last 11 years ? If she has, in which publications have the results been brought out ?

(b) What are the research publications on lac by the Biochemist ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Biochemist was only a bacteriologist at Coimbatore and Kasauli, previous to her appointment in the Indian Lac Research Institute, and, that, she had no previous experience of plant biochemistry or chemistry of lac, which was the qualification required according to the terms of the advertisement ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). No. A list of her publications since she joined the Institute, including publications on lac research, will be found in the statement which I lay on the table.

(c) No. Before appointment to the Lac Research Institute she had held three appointments as Biochemist at different times, and had specialised in Biochemical technique at the Lister Institute.

Post.	Academic qualifications at the time of recruitment.	Research experience on lac.	Posts held by them, salaries received and research publications before joining the Institute.	List of their individual publications since joining the Institute.
1	B.Sc. Hons. Chem. M.Sc., A. I. C.	3 The Director is a qualified research worker in Organic Chemistry which includes natural resins and special-ised at the Lister Institute in Biochemical technique and modern methods of research.	4 1. Biochemist under the John Howard MacLadden Research Fund. Salary, £250 per annum. 2. Reader in Biochemistry, Indian Institute of Science. Salary, not ascertainable. 3. Research worker in Biochemistry under the Indian Research Fund. Salary, not ascertainable. 4. Bacteriologist to the Government of Madras, pay, Rs. 650—50—800. (If confirmed after 3 years she was to be absorbed in the Indian Agricultural Service but she resigned before the 3 years were out.) Research publications before joining the Institute. 1. Derivatives of Naphthacene quinone with Ch. Weizmann and R. V. Norris. 2. Derivatives of Anthraquinone with Ch. Weizmann and R. V. Norris. 3. The Diacetyl Reaction for Proteins with Dr. Harden. 4. The Bacterial Production of Acetyl methyl carbinol and	5 1. A comprehensive Report covering the activities of the Indian Lac Association for Research from March, 1926 to August, 1931. 2. Lac Research in India. 3. Lac and Shellac Industry of India. 4. An investigation into the plant requirements of Zizyphus Jujuba during growth and under lac cultivation with M. Rangaswami, M. Venugopalan and S. Rangaswami. 5. A preliminary note on the use of Acacia Catechu (Khair) as a host alternative with Schlechtens trijuga (Kusum) for the cultivation of Tachardia Lacca (Lac) with H. T. Bates and M. Rangaswami. 6. The Lac Industry in India. 7. Shellac. 8. The Lac and Shellac Industry of India. 9. Report on the State of lac cultivation and general condition of the lac industry in Burma.

2-3 Butylene Glycol from various substances, with Dr. Harden. 5. The Bacterial Production of Acetylmethyl carbinol and 2-3 Butylene glycol from various substances Part II with Dr. Harden. 6. The Relation of Concentration of food Supply to the Generation-time of Bacteria; with Dr. Penfold. 7. A note on the bases of gas-works coal tar which are believed to be the predisposing cause of pitch cancer with special reference to their action on lymphocytes together with a method for their inactivation Part I Anxetic Action. 8. A preliminary Note on the preparation of culture media suitable for organisms used in vaccines. 9. A further note on the preparation of culture media suitable for the growth of organisms used in vaccines. 10. The preparation of culture medium suitable for the growth of organisms used as vaccines. 11. The preparation of a simplified culture medium for field workers. 12. Bacterial infection of cotton bolls with E. Ballard.	10. Notes on the use of Schlechtens trijuga (Kusum) in lac cultivation. Pruning and Cropping. 11. The establishment of Aleurites Fordii (Tung Oil) in the Ranchi District of Chota Nagpur, with H. T. Bates. 12. Advice on the more profitable use of the Kusum tree as a lac host.
---	---

Post.	Academic qualifications at the time of recruitment.	Research experience on lac.	Posts held by them, salaries received and research publications before joining the Institute.	List of their individual publications since joining the Institute.
1	2	3	4	5
Entomologist	B.Sc. Honours	An honours course in Entomology includes general and special study of the methods of insect research and control, as a whole, and includes work on the group Coccidae into which the lac insect falls.	Demonstrator in the Zoological Department Leeds University, on a salary of £200 per annum. No publications.	1. Shellac by P. M. Glover, Oil and Colour Trades Journal LXXVII No. 1643 and 1652, 1930. 2. Paper on Lac Plantations by P. M. Glover, Proceedings of the Bihar and Orissa Forest Conference, Ranchi. Published by Bihar and Orissa Forest Department. 3. Entomological Aspects of Lac Research in India by P. M. Glover, Bulletin of Entomological Research volume LXI page 3, 30th October, 1930. 4. A Practical Manual of Lac Cultivation by P. M. Glover, June, 1931. Published by Ind. Lac Res. Inst. 5. A Report on the state of lac cultivation and general condition of the lac industry in Burma 1931 with two appendices by Mrs. Dorothy Norris, December 1931. Appendix 2, Entomological: Published by Ind. Lac Res. Inst.

6. The effects of temperature and Humidity on Oviposition incubation and emergence in the Lac Insect. Laccifer (Tectardia) Lacca, Kerr, (Coccidae) and on the resulting crop by P. M. Glover, P. S. Negi, M. P. Misra and S. N. Gupta, 1932. Ind. Lac Res. Inst. Bull. 6.

7. Some Simple Methods of Controlling the Insect Enemies of Lac, by P. M. Glover, Agricultural Department, Bihar and Orissa. Leaflet No. 2, 1932.

8. Aspidiotus (Furcaspis) orientalis Newstead. (Coccidae) its economic importance in lac cultivation and its control: Bull. 16. Ind. Lac Res. Inst. 1933.

9. An account of the occurrences of Chrysomphalus awranii Mask and Laccifer lacca, Kerr on Grape Fruit in Ranchi district, Chota Nagpur, with a note on the Chalcidoid parasites of Aspidiotus orientalis Newst. In press Jour. Bombay Nat. Hist. Soc.

Post.	Academic qualifications at the time of recruitment.	Research experience on lac.	Posts held by them, salaries received and research publications before joining the Institute.	List of their individual publications since joining the Institute.
1	2	3	4	5
Physico-Chemist.	B. Sc. (Hons.) A. R. C. Sc.	Two years research on the Physico-Chemical properties of compounds on lines similar to those necessary for research on lac. Several months in the research laboratories of the General Electric Coy. whose research programme includes lac as an insulator.	At the G. E. C. Research Laboratory £200 per annum. Research Publications before joining. 1. Thesis for Ph.D. University of London 1929 'Chemical Fogs'. 2. J. C. S. CXXXIX, 1930, P. 1103 'Production of Fog in the Neutralisation of alkali with hydrogen halide.'	1. Res. Bul. No. 5. 'Humidity and Storage of Button Lac.' 2. Res. Bul. No. 7. Orpiment and the Iodine Value of Shellac. 3. Res. Bul. No. 8. The Iodine Value of Shellac. 4. Res. Note No. 1. A note on the bleaching of shellac. 5. Res. Note No. 2. A note on determination of shellac fluidity. 6. Res. Note No. 3. A note on the swelling of shellac. 7. Res. Bul. No. 12. Shellac drying oil combinations. 8. Res. Bul. No. 13. Orpiment in Shellac. 9. Res. Note No. 4. Some effects of baking shellac varnish films. 10. Res. Note No. 5. Shellac ester oil combination.

11. Res. Note No. 6. The use of Lithophone in shellac paints.
12. Res. Note No. 7. Reconditioning shellac.
13. Capital Feb. 1933. Research for Shellac.
14. Res. Bul. No. 14. The Heat Curing of Shellac, Part.
15. Res. Note No. 9. Trioreyl Phosphate and Water Resistance of shellac.
16. Res. Note No. 11. Further notes on reconditioning shellac.
17. Res. Note No. 13. Improvement in the Heat Resistance of shellac mouldings.
18. Res. Note No. 14. Treatment of shellac varnish with theourea and Urea.
19. Res. Note No. 15. Influence of nitrogenous substances on shellac bleaching.
20. Res. Bul. No. 17. The refractive index of shellac.
21. Res. Bul. No. 19. Heat curing of shellac, Part II.
22. Res. Note No. 16. Utilisation of 'Kiri' for Plastic Mouldings.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will it not be more correct to say that these so-called researches were not based upon any laboratory work undertaken by this lady, but they embodied the results of certain field observations which are quite different from laboratory research work?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have not perused myself these publications of the lady, and I am, therefore, not in a position either to affirm or to contradict what my Honourable friend has said.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : May I draw my Honourable friend's attention to the fact that I wanted information with regard to research work in the laboratory for the last 11 years? Do I take it that the reply to part (b) which the Honourable Member has given refers to work specifically carried out in the laboratory?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My Honourable friend's question, part (b), reads "What are the research publications on lac by the Biochemist?". There is no specific mention here about research work in the laboratory.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am referring to part (a) in which I want information about research work carried on by this lady in the laboratory for the last 11 years.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : This lady has brought out 12 publications since joining the Institute. I expect that her publications regarding "Notes on the use of Schleichera trijuga (Kusum) in lac cultivation, and the establishment of Aleurites Fordii (Tung Oil)" that these involve investigation in the laboratory, but I would not like to express any definite opinion on the subject.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I am glad that my Honourable friend makes a reservation.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : My Honourable friend has not studied Biochemistry and so he cannot pronounce any opinion on the subject.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not know that my Honourable friend, apart from having studied astronomy, had acquired first hand knowledge of Biochemistry as well.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do I take it that this lady had previous experience in plant Biochemistry or Chemistry of lac before she was appointed?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : As I have already explained to my Honourable friend, she had received training in general Biochemical technique, and I doubt very much whether, at the time when the appointment was made, it would have been possible to secure somebody with first hand knowledge of lac Biochemistry.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That is what I wanted to know.

Mr. B. Das : What control does the Department of the Imperial Agricultural Research Council exercise on this so-called Biochemist expert and on the work that she is actually doing on the research side?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It is not the function of the Department of the Imperial Agricultural Research Council to exercise supervision over the work of the Director, especially in its technical aspects. The Vice-Chairman of the Imperial Agricultural Research Council is the Chairman of the Indian Lac Cess Committee, and I dare say as such he discharges such duties as he considers proper and appropriate.

Mr. B. Das : Did not the Honourable Member, in reply to a question of mine, the other day, say that the Indian Lac Cess Committee does not contain any experts, rather they consisted of laymen. If so, how do the Committee exercise any control over the researches of this lady?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not say in reply to my Honourable friend that the Indian Lac Cess Committee contained no experts. What I told him was that the Indian Lac Cess Committee had a number of experts, but only one Chemist.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has it struck my Honourable friend that during the last 11 years the total contribution to research made by this lady is represented by two or three papers only and that in other branches there are as many as twenty under each?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Looking at the papers which I have before me here, her contribution in the form of written work since she joined the Institute is represented by twelve papers published.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : All relating to Biochemistry of lac?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Whether they all relate to lac or whether they all relate to Biochemistry, I cannot say.

Mr. B. Das : Have those papers received any commendation from the sub-committee of the Lac Research Institute in England or America?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : If my Honourable friend means to ask me whether she has received the Nobel Prize for these investigations, I should say, no; I have not noticed that. But what measure of notice her work has received in the transactions of chemical and other societies in England and America, I could not say, because I am not a student of these.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member name anybody in the Lac Research Institute who is in a position to judge the work of this lady in the research work of Biochemistry?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Well, I should not say that there was anybody on the Committee who was a Biochemist.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Then, who is in a position to judge her work? There are other experts, and I should like to know if there is anybody on that Committee who is in a position to judge the work of this department in Biochemistry of Lac Research?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The experts on the Committee are the Imperial Entomologists, and there is, I think, the Inspector General of Forests, who I presume, has a certain working knowledge of Chemistry, but quite frankly I do not think that anybody on the Committee, as it is constituted at the present moment, is a Biochemist in addition to the Director herself.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Then, how is the Honourable Member going to satisfy himself that a fraud is not being actually carried on in the name of research unless he makes some reference to an independent authority?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think the word "fraud" is perhaps too strong, and, in my opinion, it is language which my Honourable friend cannot justify at all.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I did not characterise her research as fraud. What I meant was that supposing that fraud is committed in the name of research, how is the Honourable Member going to satisfy himself about it?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is a hypothetical question whether, if fraud were being committed, how Government will deal with this matter. But I think there is some substance in the underlying suggestion of my Honourable friend, namely, that there ought to be an expert body which, should, from time to time, review the scientific work which is being done at the Institute, and that particular aspect of the matter will undoubtedly receive consideration.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that the First Assistant in this department of Biochemistry has gone to England to specialise in applied Chemistry?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I want notice. I cannot say off-hand whether the First Assistant has gone. I know that there Research Officers have been deputed by the Lac Researchers to carry on research work in England.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it also a fact that several Assistants, who used to be engaged in Biochemical work, have for some time switched their activities over to other departments, and does not all this show that there is little Biochemical work carried on in the Institute?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think last year I answered a question asked by my Honourable friend in regard to the general activities of the Institute, and then I said that emphasis on the work has changed by reason of the altered requirements of the industry in England. It is quite possible that for that reason those, who were engaged upon Biochemical work before, are doing chemical work proper, which does not mean that their services are no longer required. It must be appreciated that the Biochemist is also the Director of the Institute, in other words, apart from doing Biochemical work she is supervising the research work of the Institute generally.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : May I take it that at the time of the renewal of this contract of Biochemist, Government will take into consideration whether some other officer could take over the research in Biochemical works and general supervision as well?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I answered that question last year. I said that, at the time of the renewal of the contract, the general question of the desirability of continuing the particular kind of work will be taken into consideration.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that, in the last meeting of the Lac Cess Committee, they actually made a recommendation that the terms of this lady's contract may be extended?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is perfectly true, but my Honourable friend is also aware of the fact that Government have passed no orders on that recommendation.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : And that she herself, being a member of that Committee, voted in favour of her service being extended?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I agree with my Honourable friend that she is a member of that Committee, but as to the actual voting on that occasion, I am afraid, I have no knowledge.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Do not Government expect the Members on this side to be more chivalrous to that lady, when she is the only lady in that department?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I hope my Honourable friend's appeal to chivalry will not fall on deaf ears.

EUROPEAN OFFICERS ON CONTRACT AT THE INDIAN LAC RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

384. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement giving the following information regarding the European officers on contract at the Indian Lac Research Institute :

- (i) their academic qualifications at the time of recruitment,
- (ii) their research experience on lac,

(iii) the posts held by them, salaries received, and research publications before joining the Institute, and

(iv) a list of their individual publications since joining the Institute?

(b) Is it a fact that their posts were not advertised in India?

(c) Will Government please place on the table a list of the Indian candidates with their qualifications who applied for these posts?

(d) Is it a fact that the posts were advertised only in England and the Lac Association was determined to appoint only Europeans?

(e) Do Government now propose to advertise these posts in India and replace the officers on contract with better qualified Indians, if available, and give these European officers notice of termination of services within the provisions of the contract?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the statement which I have laid on the table.

(b) and (d). These appointments were originally made by the Indian Lac Association for research. The post of Biochemist was advertised in India but not that of the Physical Chemist or Entomologist.

(c) I regret that I cannot comply with the Honourable Member's request as it is not the practice of Government to reveal the names of unsuccessful candidates for employment.

(e) Attention is invited to the reply given to the Honourable Member's starred question No. 5 on the 16th of last month.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member tried to find out why some of these appointments were not advertised at all in India?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The fact of the matter is that, at the time these appointments were made, Government had no control over the activities of this Institute.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Who had the control ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Indian Lac Cess Association as it was called at the time, I think.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Was not this Indian Lac Cess Association created as a result of legislation which was passed by this House ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is perfectly true ; but my Honourable friend ought to draw a distinction between legislation which was passed in 1923 and the legislation which was passed in 1930. It was legislation which was passed in 1930 which gave to the Governor General in Council the authority or the power to give approval to certain appointments carrying salaries of more than Rs. 500 a month which are made by the Committee.

CONTRACT SERVICE AT THE INDIAN LAC RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

385. Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the article in the Searchlight, Patna, dated the 22nd June, 1934, revealing the conditions of contract service at the Indian Lac Research Institute ?

(b) What is the policy followed by the Lac Cess Committee in the matter of renewal of contracts ? Is the work of the officers subjected to any scrutiny by scientific experts ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) In so far as there can be a general policy in regard to technical appointments of this character, it must be to renew the contract of service of an employee if his services have been satisfactory and his technical skill and experience are needed for a further period. None of the renewed contracts of research workers has yet expired. If the Honourable Member has in mind outside scrutiny, the answer to the second part of the question is in the negative.

JUDGING OF WORK IN THE INDIAN LAC RESEARCH INSTITUTE.

386. Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is there a single non-official Biochemist, Physical Chemist or Applied Chemist on the Lac Cess Committee to judge the value of the research work done by the Institute Biochemist and Physico-chemist or coordinate the work in England and America on the utilisation of lac in industries ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The present Committee includes one Applied Chemist, but no unofficial Physical Chemist or Biochemist.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does it not come to this that it is these expert officers themselves who have to decide whether their contracts should be renewed or not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir, that is not so. The decision with regard to the renewal of contracts is that of the Committee in which only one of these officers, namely, the Director, is included.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : But, so far as the work carried on by these experts is concerned, am I not right in assuming that the judgment passed by these officers themselves is taken as the basis for the decision of this Committee ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already, in answer to a supplementary question asked on an earlier question, said that the question whether there should be an expert organisation in order to advise the Committee in regard to the nature of the work that is done by these people is being examined.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is there any technical expert to whom these technical men like biochemists, etc., are responsible for their work, or do they judge for themselves whether the work done is satisfactory and thus decide their own cases ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already answered that question, that apart from this one Applied Chemist on the Committee there is no one either on the Committee or associated with the Committee in order to express an opinion upon the work which is being done by these officers.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : May I know whether this thing has proved to be a success in this case, that persons are responsible to themselves, and there is no one to judge whether the work done is good or not ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That, Sir, is asking for an expression of opinion, but I have already answered the point involved in an earlier question.

CONTRACTORS FOR RAISING COAL FROM STATE RAILWAY MINES.

387. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that experienced mining men are ordinarily appointed as contractors for raising coal from State Railway mines ?

(b) Are minors, without mining experience, employed as contractors in the Railway mines and did the Chief Mining Engineer recommend to the Board any minor ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for such appointment of a minor and the recommendation by the Chief Mining Engineer ?

(c) Is it a fact that three of the big quarries of Kargali Colliery have been given to the lowest tenderer, who is a minor boy named Nagendra Prasad Singh, aged about 12 or 14 years only, and is the son of the late Contractor, Babu Ram Bilash Singh ?

(d) Is it a fact that this minor Contractor has been asked to start work before signing the agreement ? If so, why ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). A tender in the name of Rambilas Nageshwar has been accepted for removing overburden and quarrying at Kargali Colliery. Government understand that this was a joint tender of Rambilas Singh, the existing Contractor, who has plenty of experience and his son.

(d) The Contractor will not start work before signing the agreement.

SAVING FROM COLLIERIES ON COAL RAISING.

388. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Will Government be pleased to state the saving that can be made from the collieries on coal raising and overburden clearing, per month and per annum, and whether any arrangements have been made to effect a saving ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I lay a statement on the table showing the old rates and the new rates introduced on the 1st August, 1934.

State Railway Collieries.

	Bhurkunda.			Jt. Bokharo.			Jt. Swang.			Kargali.
	Per ton of coal raising.	Per 1,000 cft. over-burden.	Per ton for coal raising.	Per 1,000 cft. over-burden.	Per ton for coal raising.		Per 1,000 cft. over-burden.	Per ton for coal raising.		Per 1,000 cft. over-burden.	Per ton for coal raising.
					Pits.	Incline.		Quarry.	Pits and Incline.
Old rates	Rs. a. p. 1 12 0	Rs. 15-30	Rs. a. p. 1 2 0	Rs. 15-30	Rs. a. p. 1 2 0	Rs. a. p. 1 6 0	Rs. 10-50	Rs. a. p. 1 2 0	Rs. a. p. 1 7 0
New rates	*1 3 0	15	0 10 6	16	0 11 0	0 14 0	29	0 11 0	1 0 0

* Anticipated when departmental working is introduced.

GIRIDIH COLLIERIES, E. I. R.
Joktiabad.

Deep pit.				Remarks.
Average reduction in rates for coal raising in the two pits at Giridih by introduction of Departmental working Re. 0/3/9 per ton (including the revision of the Departmental rates).

Under Contractor
Departmental

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Under the Revised Rates of Pay Rules and the Revised Leave Rules, 1933, published in the Gazette of India of the 23rd September, 1933, and, 16th December, 1933, respectively, persons who were in Government service on or before the 15th of July, 1931, and, whose services have been continuous from that date, will not be governed by the new scales of pay and the new leave rules. The same applies to persons on probation on the 15th of July, 1931, who were subsequently confirmed in their service or post and who were not specifically warned to the contrary at the time of their appointment on probation.

COMMISSION FOR EXCHANGE OF COINS IN BOMBAY.

392. *Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the merchants in Bombay are required to pay a lot of commission to the private Shroffs and Marwaries to get their small coins exchanged ? Is it a fact that no tenders of less than Rs. 100 of each kind are accepted for exchange by the Bombay Currency Office ?

(b) Has the minimum rate of Rs. 100 been fixed in all the Currency Offices in India ? If not, why is this fixed in Bombay ?

(c) Do Government propose to issue now instructions to the Bombay Currency Officer to change the rate in order to save the merchants from paying high rate of commission to the Marwaries and Shroff ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 392, 393, 475 and 476 together :

The necessary information is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course.

ISSUE OF COPPER COINS FROM THE BOMBAY CURRENCY OFFICE.

†393. *Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that no copper coins are issued by the Bombay Currency Office except in multiples of Rs. 50 ?

(b) Have the public to go to the Imperial Bank of India if they require copper coins for less than Rs. 50 ?

(c) Is the above practice followed in all the Currency Offices in India ?

(d) Is it not possible for the Bombay Currency Office to issue copper coins for less than Rs. 50 to avoid the great inconvenience caused to the public ?

394. *Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they are aware of the fact that great nuisance is caused to the third class passengers as most of the carriages, used on the Bombay Suburban Service of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, leak during the monsoon ?

(b) Do Government propose to issue instructions to the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Administration to arrange to have all their third class carriages on the Suburban Service, painted every year, before the monsoon to avoid the nuisance of leakage during the monsoon ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Government are not aware that the facts are as stated.

(b) A copy of this question and of the reply thereto is being sent to the Agent, Great Indian Peninsula Railway, for such action as may be necessary.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 392.

LEAKAGE OF CARRIAGES ON THE BOMBAY SUBURBAN SERVICE.

†395*.

DELAY IN THE DELIVERY OF POSTCARDS, ENVELOPES, ETC., ADDRESSED IN HINDI IN THE PUNJAB.

396. *Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Is it a fact that post cards, envelopes, packets, etc., addressed in Hindi do not reach the addressees in the Punjab as soon as those addressed in Urdu ? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether postal employees in the Punjab are being required to pass any departmental test in Hindi to remove this grievance of the Hindu-minority of the Punjab ?

(b) If the reply to the latter part of (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state when the arrangements are expected to be complete in this respect ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Information has been called for and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

LEGISLATION ABOUT THE PURITY OF DRUGS USED BY MEDICAL MEN IN INDIA.

397. *Bhai Parma Nand : Is it a fact that some time ago, an all-India Committee was appointed to safe-guard the purity of drugs used by medical men in India ? If so, will Government be pleased to state when the findings of this Committee are to be carried into effect by means of suitable legislation on this subject ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes. The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to Mr. S. C. Mitra's starred question No. 38, on the 23rd August, 1933. The views of all the Local Governments were not received until February, 1934, since when the nature and scope of the action to be taken on the numerous recommendations of the Committee have been under consideration.

INDIANS EMPLOYED AS POLITICAL AGENTS OR RESIDENTS OF INDIAN STATES.

398. *Bhai Parma Nand : Will Government be pleased to state the numbers of Indians employed as political agents or residents of Indian States within their own jurisdictions during the last three years, respectively ?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : None. So far there has been no Indian officer in the Political Department of requisite seniority and experience, except one who has been employed as Administrator of the Nabha State, since 1932.

INCONVENIENCE FELT BY ILLITERATE INTERMEDIATE CLASS PASSENGERS IN MAIL TRAINS.

399. *Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Are Government aware that poor illiterate passengers who are used to travelling third class, have sometimes to travel intermediate class by mail trains on account of the exigencies of their business ?

†This question was withdrawn by the questioner.

(b) Are Government also aware that these passengers find it very difficult to secure even seats in intermediate carriages by mail trains ?

(c) Are Government prepared to issue definite instructions to Railway guards to see at every Junction station that these passengers are not being put to any avoidable inconvenience ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) and (b). It is possible that some passengers, who normally travel third class, have sometimes to travel in intermediate class, but Government are not aware that they are subject to any special difficulties when doing so.

(c) Guards have instructions to give their best assistance to all passengers entraining.

MIGRATION OF KABULI UNSKILLED LABOURERS TO INDIA.

400. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Are Government prepared to enquire from various Local Governments whether it is a fact that there is a seasonal migration of Kabuli unskilled labourers to various parts of India ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state whether it is a fact that this periodical increase of foreign labour affects the wages of indigenous unskilled labourers adversely ?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : (a) It is a fact that a seasonal migration of Ghilzai tribesmen takes place annually into India. This migration is a historical fact, and has become a well-established feature of the economy of Northern India, and Government see no reason to institute enquiries from Local Governments.

(b) Such Afghan tribesmen as engage in labour in India mostly undertake, by long usage, heavy manual work, such as the excavation of channels and the building of mud walls, and Government have no reason to think that their employment affects the wages of indigenous labourers adversely. On the contrary, there is reason to believe that their assistance is readily welcomed by villagers, who are believed frequently to defer construction of such works until their arrival.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know if these Kabulis come and create disturbance in India ?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : That does not appear to me to arise out of the question, but so far as I know, they do very good and honest work.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Are Government aware that these Kabulis are a menace to the innocent Bengal villagers and that they often terrorise them and demand usurious rates of interest ?

Mr. H. A. F. Metcalfe : I think the Honourable Member is making a mistake. The Pathans who lend money to the Bengal villagers are quite distinct from Kabulis who come down to do heavy manual labour.

INDIANS RECRUITED AS SOLDIERS OR SAILORS.

401. Bhai Parma Nand : Will Government of India be pleased to state the number of Indians recruited in the various ranks of the Military and Marine Department, as soldiers or sailors, province by province and community by community, i.e., Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs, during the last five years, respectively ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : A statement containing the required information as regards soldiers of the Indian Army is laid on the table.

Similar information in respect of sailors of the Royal Indian Marine is being collected and will be laid on the table in due course.

Statement showing numbers of Indian Soldiers enrolled during the five Provinces.	1st April 1929 to 31st March 1930.				1st April 1930 to 31st March 1931.

	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Musalmans.	Total.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Musalmans.	Total.
N. W. F. P.	..	..	1,085	1,085	..	..	909	909
Punjab	2,582	3,385	4,465	10,432	2,853	3,266	4,883	11,002
United Provinces	1,215	..	122	1,337	1,638	..	96	1,734
Bombay Presidency and Hyderabad (D).	1,078	..	219	1,297	1,214	..	155	1,369
Madras	481	..	54	535	638	..	41	679
Rajputana and C. I. ..	840	..	123	963	873	..	214	1,087
Nepal	1,727	..	..	1,727	2,564	..	..	2,564
Afghanistan	..	..	132	132	..	..	133	133
Total	7,923	3,385	6,200	17,508	9,780	3,266	6,431	19,477

years ending 31st March, 1934, by Provinces and by Communities.

1st April, 1931 to 31st March, 1932.				1st April, 1932 to 31st March, 1933.				1st April, 1933 to 31st March, 1934.
Hindus.	Sikhs.	Musalmans.	Total.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Musalmans.	Total.	Hindus.	Sikhs.	Musalmans.	Total.
..	..	738	738	..	..	1,083	1,083	..	..	827	827
2,399	3,104	5,132	10,635	3,027	2,765	5,274	11,066	2,366	2,675	4,467	9,508
1,183	..	150	1,333	1,407	..	112	1,519	1,260	..	150	1,410
947	..	87	1,034	853	..	60	913	686	..	61	747
402	..	79	481	295	..	60	355	315	..	64	379
663	..	131	794	929	..	128	1,057	727	..	140	867
1,947	..	..	1,947	1,863	..	..	1,863	1,485	..	..	1,485
..	..	122	122	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
7,541	3,104	6,439	17,084	8,374	2,765	6,717	17,856	6,839	2,675	5,709	15,223

Mr. S. C. Mitra : May I take it that the recent service award is strictly followed in the recruitment of soldiers and marine officers also ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am afraid I do not quite understand the question.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : May I take it that the Honourable Member knows that there has been an award about service for different communities in India and do they apply to the recruitment of soldiers and marine officers also ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : That Resolution does not affect the Army at all.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Why not ? Will the Honourable Member please explain if there are any vested interests and other special interests in the recruitment of these officers ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : There is nothing communal about the recruitment of officers either for the Army or the Royal Indian Marine. As regards the recruitment of other ranks, there is a certain class composition laid down for the Indian Army and that is followed. As regards recruitment to the Royal Indian Marine at the present time, this is carried out in the areas where the best recruits are obtainable.

Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Is it not a fact that all of them are Muslims ?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it because in the Army the Government care for efficiency and to keep up standards and not in the civil services ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am afraid I cannot answer that question, Sir.

Bhai Parma Nand : Is this Army not an all-India service, and does not the Resolution of the Government apply to it ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : If I remember rightly, the Resolution definitely says that it does not refer to the military services : but only to the civil.

POST OFFICE CASH CERTIFICATES NOT CASHED OR RENEWED AFTER THE EXPIRY OF TWELVE YEARS.

402. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Is it a fact that there are several postal cash certificates which have not been cashed even after the expiry of twelve years by their purchasers without any renewal ?

(b) Are Government aware that this is due to the fact that some of these purchasers have died sudden deaths, without letting their heirs know anything about their having bought these postal cash certificates ?

(c) Does the money of these purchasers invested in these postal cash certificates lapse to Government without being claimed by their survivors ?

(d) Is it a fact that this state of affairs can be easily mended if purchasers of postal cash certificates be made to declare, in their printed application forms, the names of their heirs to whom the money is to be paid by the postal authorities in case of their deaths ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the number of postal cash certificates lying uncashed in Government Post Offices even after the expiry of twelve years on the 31st March, 1934, and the amount of money thus unclaimed ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to issue suitable instructions to postal authorities to have the money of these postal cash certificates handed over to the survivors of the deceased purchasers through Magistrates or Tahsildars ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b) and (c). Post office cash certificates are kept by the purchasers in their own custody and are not kept in post offices. The information desired by the Honourable Member is not therefore available.

(c) No. The money is payable to the heirs of deceased holders at any time, if they can establish their claim.

(d) I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given on the 7th of November, 1931, to part (c) of question No. 1252 asked by Lala Hari Raj Swarup.

(f) Government do not consider it necessary to alter the existing procedure.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if any notice is given to persons who hold these certificates before they lapse to Government ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If the Honourable Member will read my answer, he will see that they do not lapse to Government. The money is payable to the heirs of the deceased holders at any time, if they can establish their claim.

FAILURE OF INDIAN INSURANCE COMPANIES.

403. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Indian insurance companies which failed in India during the last ten years ?

(b) Are Government prepared to enquire from official and non-official experts how far defective legislation has been responsible for the failure of these companies ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : (a) Eleven Indian Life Assurance Companies went into liquidation during the period from 1924 to date, and one Indian company, transacting insurance business other than life assurance business, went into liquidation since the passing of the Indian Insurance Companies Act, 1928.

(b) As the Government of India propose taking steps in the near future to consider the desirability of amending the existing insurance law in India, they do not consider it necessary to institute separate enquiries in the matter.

GRANT OF CONCESSIONS TO THE STUDENTS OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES IN THE DELHI UNIVERSITY.

404. Bhai Parma Nand : Are Government aware that the Nagpur University has extended certain concessions to students of depressed classes on their admission to their various examinations ? If so, will Government be pleased to state whether the University of Delhi proposes to move in this direction ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The answer to both parts of the question is in the affirmative.

MEMBERS OF DEPRESSED CLASSES EMPLOYED AS PEONS IN THE RAILWAY AND POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS OFFICES.

405. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of members of depressed classes employed as peons (chaprasis) in Railway and Post and Telegraph offices, respectively, in various provinces of India on the 31st March, 1934 ?

(b) If the number of the chaprasis belonging to depressed classes be small in proportion to the numerical strength of the community, will Government of India be pleased to state what steps they intend to take in this matter for the future ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) The information is not available and Government consider that its collection will involve an amount of time and labour which is unlikely to be justified by results.

(b) The policy of Government on this question is laid down in the Home Department Resolution of the 4th July, 1934, copies of which are available in the Library.

USE BY MEMBERS OF THE DEPRESSED CLASSES OF PLATFORMS OF GOVERNMENT-OWNED WELLS.

406. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether platforms of Government owned wells situated on such public grounds as those of tehsils, courts, schools, hospitals, police stations, etc., are open, in actual practice, to the use of such depressed classes as Bhangis (sweepers) and Chamars (leather-workers) within the territories administered direct by the Central Government in case when these subjects of the Crown do not happen to be engaged in their professional work of scavenging or flaying dead bodies ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to issue definite instructions in this connection to the officers in charge, and if so, are they prepared to take steps to ensure that their instructions are carried into effect by their subordinates ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). The information asked by the Honourable Member in part (a) has been called for, and a reply to both parts of the question will be laid on the table of the House in due course.

EVIDENCE BEFORE THE TARIFF BOARD ON THE PROTECTION OF STEEL.

407. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the evidences—both written and oral—before the Tariff Board on Steel Protection will be available before this House takes up the discussion of the Steel Protection Bill ?

(b) If the evidences cannot be published in time, will Government be pleased to place on the table the original copies of evidences for reference of Honourable Members ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : (a) and (b). Spare copies of the evidence, as far as available, were placed in the Library of the Legislature on the 31st July. A complete set will be available to members of the Select Committee, and all Honourable Members will also have access to that set, when the House takes up the consideration of the Select Committee's Report on the Bill.

EVIDENCE BEFORE THE TARIFF BOARD.

408. Mr. B. Das : In view of the unusual delay in the matter of publication of evidences before the Tariff Board, do Government propose to direct the Tariff Board to secure four additional copies of all memoranda and representations for use of the Members of this House ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhoré : The suggestion made by the Honourable Member will receive consideration in connection with future enquiries undertaken by the Tariff Board.

PROPOSAL FOR THE REMOVAL OF THE PUSA AGRICULTURAL INSTITUTE.

409. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following remarks published in the editorial article in the Times of India, dated the 20th July, 1931, regarding the proposal for the removal of the Pusa Agricultural Institute :

"In these days, when it is so difficult to get even the smallest sum for beneficial State activities, it is right and proper, that an estimated outlay of Rs. 26 lakhs for the transfer of the Institute, should be very critically regarded. Estimates of cost, particularly when they are put up by those supporting a scheme, naturally tend to be conservative. It is an open question whether the sum of Rs. 36 lakhs would be the end of expenditure on the transfer suggested" ?

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the same editorial article, regarding the supposed inaccessibility of Pusa :

"Those of us who know our India would not regard such disabilities in too serious a light. They may sound rather tragic to people accustomed to the accessibility of all corners of England, but in this country such difficulties of access can be taken almost as a matter of course not only in getting to Pusa, but in getting to many other parts" ?

(c) In the light of the above remarks, do Government propose to revise their proposal ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) Government have decided, after reconsideration, to adhere to their proposal.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if it is not a fact that before the earthquake, students took very little advantage of this Institute and very few students attended at Pusa, because it was not centrally situated ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is what I understand.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is this Institute open for students to be admitted ? It is only a Research Institute.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No ; in addition to research work, they undertake post-graduate instruction.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Has there been any paucity of students at Pusa ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I do not quite know what my Honourable friend means by paucity of students : the number of students, as far as I know, has never been zero, but I gather that the Institute has not been quite so popular as it would have been if it had been more centrally situated.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Does the Honourable Member mean that the required number of students was not available in any of these years ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I do not quite know what my Honourable friend means by "required". It is not the case that the Institute requires a fixed number of students to go to the Institute. There are students who apply for admission to the Institute and naturally the number that apply, after consideration of their qualifications, are admitted. The point I was making was that because of the inaccessibility of Pusa, as many students were not applying as would have been the case otherwise : that opinion is based upon what I have been told by Directors in the Provinces.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Is that also one of the reasons for removing the Institute from Pusa to Delhi ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think the reasons for removing the Institute from Pusa to the vicinity of Delhi have been stated in the memorandum presented to the Standing Finance Committee, a copy of which I laid in the Library in reply to a question asked by my Honourable friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, some time this Session.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Has this question been finally disposed of by the Government of India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I would invite the attention of my Honourable friend to what I said just now—"Government have decided, after reconsideration, to adhere to their proposal".

Sir Abdur Rahim : Does it mean that they have made up their mind finally and decided the question ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : What it means is that, so far as they are concerned, they adhere to their proposal.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Who else is concerned in the matter, may I know ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : There were a series of questions asked sometime ago, I think, on the question as to whether the Assembly would have an opportunity of discussing this matter or not.

Sir Abdur Rahim : I want to know whether it will serve any purpose so far as the Government of India are concerned for this matter to be discussed in the Assembly.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Why not ?

Sir Abdur Rahim : That is why I wanted to know if the Government had finally decided the question.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : What I have said in my reply to the question is : "Government have decided, after reconsideration, to adhere to their proposal."

The proposal is to transfer the Institute from Pusa to the neighbourhood of Delhi. That proposal is still before the Standing Finance Committee. The Standing Finance Committee has not pronounced upon it. What the attitude of Government will be after the Standing Finance Committee and the Legislature have pronounced upon the subject is a question upon which I cannot give any answer just now.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Then there is room for reconsideration ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : There is certainly room for an expression of opinion by the Standing Finance Committee and the Legislature, and I do not think I need tell my Honourable friend that views expressed by the Committee and the Legislature always receive the most careful consideration of the Government.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government please explain, in view of the fact that that question is going to be discussed in the Assembly very soon, why they reconsidered and decided to adhere to their old decision ? Is it not an affront to the Assembly ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I did not say that they have decided to adhere to their decision. The stage of decision is reached after the proposal which they have put before the Standing Finance Committee has been pronounced upon by the Standing Finance Committee. All that I said was that, after consideration of the passages in the newspapers, to which my Honourable friends have referred, and other criticisms, Government have decided to adhere to their proposals.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Then, we take it that Government will reconsider their former proposal before coming to a final decision. Then, what is the meaning of saying they will adhere to their proposal ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Government for the present stick to their proposal, but the decision on the subject may be reached after an expression of opinion by the Legislature on the subject.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : What was the urgency in revising their decision and adhering to their proposal, knowing full well that the question would be raised in the Assembly in a day or two.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : My friend, Sir, it appears to me, has not appreciated the distinction between a proposal and a decision. I have said that we have decided to adhere to our proposal. (Laughter.)

Sir Abdur Rahim : May I know if the approval of the Secretary of State was sought by the Government of India to their decision or to their proposal and that the Secretary of State has given his approval ? If so, does not that settle the matter once for all ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Sir, if my friend will look at the telegram, of which a copy was placed on the table of this House some time ago, he will find that the word used in the telegram to the Secretary of State is "proposal".

Sir Abdur Rahim : Proposal by the Secretary of State or by the Government of India ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Naturally in the telegram to the Secretary of State the proposal will be the proposal of the Government of India and not of the Secretary of State.

Sir Abdur Rahim : And that after it is approved by the Secretary of State, it will not be subject to any revision by the Assembly or by the Government of India which is a subordinate Government ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It is not a question of a subordinate Government. I think the constitutional position in regard to the rights of this House was fully gone into by the series of supplementary questions that were asked. I think, on the third day of this Assembly.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Sir, there is a motion standing in my name with reference to this particular question. All that I am anxious to know is whether it is worth while either to the House or myself to discuss the matter if the Government have made up their minds already in the matter. That is all I want to know.

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I have already stated, Sir, that the views or intentions of Government are undoubtedly subject to reconsideration in the light of the verdict of this House if this matter is discussed.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state whether Government will pass the proposition that the Pusa Institute be transferred from Pusa to Delhi ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I am afraid I could not follow the question.

Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state whether, in taking votes on this question, they will take the help of the official votes as well ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is a question really for the Leader of the House.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS TO NON-MIGRATORY STAFF IN NEW DELHI.

29. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that it is the practice to allot Government quarters in Delhi on the basis of the highest revenue to be derived ? If so, why is it that preference is given to the migratory (moving) staff of the Government of India, over the non-migratory staff ? Is it not a fact that the latter normally contribute a higher revenue ?

(b) Is it a fact that those members of the migratory staff who are not provided with quarters in New Delhi during the winter season receive a separation allowance ? Is it also a fact that the staff of certain offices (e.g., Army Headquarters), who do not get quarters in New Delhi, are given quarters in Old Delhi and paid a conveyance allowance to cover distance ? If so, why is it that similar treatment is not accorded to the non-migratory staff ?

(c) Are Government prepared to take steps to ensure equal treatment to the non-migratory staff in the matter of an allowance, or, in the alternative to provide quarters for the whole season to those who are yearly residents of Delhi ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) No. The method of allotment is stated in the rules, a copy of which will be found in the Library. Preference is not given to the migratory over the non-migratory staff in the matter of allotments. The quarters available are distributed between the two classes on a pro rata basis. It is, of course, true that a tenant who pays rent throughout the year pays a larger sum than a tenant who is in occupation for the Delhi Season only.

(b) and (c). Such of the migratory staff of the Secretariat and Attached Offices, as are entitled to free "family" accommodation in Simla or receive house-rent allowance in lieu, and who, for want of accommodation, do not take their families to Delhi, are paid an allowance in order to compensate them for the inconvenience and extra expenditure involved in maintaining two establishments and for transporting their families to places other than Delhi. Those who draw this allowance are not granted any family travelling allowance for the moves to and from Delhi. There is clearly no justification for granting a similar allowance to the non-migratory staff.

As regards the conveyance allowance, for which only the migratory staff are eligible, the Government's policy, as has been stated before in this House, is rigidly to oppose the extension of this concession. The provision of additional Government quarters in New Delhi will, as time goes on, permit Government to do away with the allowance altogether. Government are providing quarters sufficient, with those already existing, to accommodate approximately 87 per cent. of the clerical establishment.

EXAMINATION FOR RECRUITMENT OF LOWER DIVISION CLERKS IN THE PUNJAB POSTAL CIRCLE OFFICE.

30. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Will Government please state whether an examination for recruitment of lower division clerks was held by the Postmaster, Lahore, about two months ago ?

(b) What was the number of candidates who were allowed to appear at this examination ?

(c) Was the son of the Head Clerk, Staff 'B' Section, of the office of the Postmaster-General, Lahore, one of the candidates ?

(d) What was the merit of the candidate referred to in part (c) above in the result of the examination ?

(e) Was the examination cancelled ? If so, why ? Was it not done on the suggestion of the Head Clerk referred to in part (c) above ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The questions Nos. 30, 31, 32 and 33 are dealt with together.

Government have no information. The matter is one with which the Postmaster-General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle, to whom copies of the questions are being sent, is competent to deal.

EXAMINATION FOR RECRUITMENT OF LOWER DIVISION CLERKS IN THE PUNJAB POSTAL CIRCLE OFFICE.

31. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Was the Postmaster, Lahore, directed to hold for the second time an examination for recruitment of lower division clerks, and was he not given clear instructions regarding irregularities, if any, committed by him in the first examination held for the same purpose ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 30.

(b) What was the number of candidates allowed to appear at the second examination ?

(c) Why was a lesser number of candidates allowed to appear at the second examination than at the first ?

(d) Is it a fact that the son of the Head Clerk, Staff 'B' Section, of the office of the Postmaster-General, Lahore, could not appear at this examination due to illness ?

(e) Was this second examination cancelled at the suggestion of the Head Clerk, referred to in part (d) above ? If so, why ?

EXAMINATION FOR RECRUITMENT OF LOWER DIVISION CLERKS IN THE PUNJAB POSTAL CIRCLE OFFICE.

†32. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Has an examination now been held on the 6th July, 1934, in the Circle Office, Lahore, for recruitment of lower division clerks ?

(b) What was the number of notices issued to candidates for this third examination and of candidates who actually turned up ?

(c) Is it a fact that the notices to the candidates for this examination were issued from the Circle Office under registered covers only on the 3rd July, 1934 ?

(d) What were the reasons for this short notice of one or at the most two days ? Was it not due to the suggestion of the Head Clerk, Staff 'B' Section of the office of the Postmaster General, Lahore ? If so, why ?

(e) Is it a fact that applications from certain officials in the Circle Office, requesting their sons being permitted for this examination, were either not entertained or refused ?

(f) Will Government please state whether successive cancellation and holding of the examination in the Circle Office over the head of the Postmaster, Lahore, in higher grade than the Assistant Postmasters-General who held the examination, has ever been done before ? If not, what were the special circumstances for ignoring the Postmaster, Lahore, and for holding the examination in the Circle Office for filling up vacancies in the Lahore General Post Office ?

(g) Is it a fact that the said Head Clerk unnecessarily entered the examination room a number of times on one plea or the other and had ultimately to be warned by one of the Examiners (Assistant Postmaster-General) to quit the examination hall till the examination was finished ?

(h) Is it a fact that according to the standing orders of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, an official personally interested and concerned in a case, in any way, is prohibited from dealing with that case ?

(i) If the reply to part (h) above be in the affirmative, why did the said Head Clerk deal with this case of examinations ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 30.

EXAMINATION FOR RECRUITMENT OF CLERKS IN THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE, "L" DIVISION.

†33. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Was a son of the Head Clerk, Staff 'B' Section of the office of the Postmaster-General, Lahore, specially permitted to sit at the recruitment examination recently held by the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, 'L' Division, in preference to the claims of the candidates on the waiting list of the Railway Mail Service of that Division, and is it a fact that he failed there ?

(b) Is it a fact that the undue favouritism referred to in part (a) above was brought to the notice of Government through an article in the Daily Herald, dated the 19th June, 1934, and if so, what action was taken in the matter ?

(c) Has this examination held by the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, 'L' Division, also been cancelled ?

(d) Is another son of the said Head Clerk already employed in the office of the Postmaster-General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle ?

(e) If the reply to part (c) above be in the affirmative, why are favours being extended to the sons of the said Head Clerk, when sons of many deceased employees in dire circumstances and deserving of sympathy, are crying for appointments since a long time ?

(f) Is it a fact that the rights of a number of candidates who passed sufficiently high to secure appointments in the two examinations held by the Postmaster, Lahore, and one by the Superintendent, Railway Mail Service, 'L' Division, have been unjustly usurped ? If so, how do Government propose to remedy this ?

(g) If the replies to the preceding parts indicate an irregular and unprecedented procedure and favouritism, what action have Government taken, or intend to take, against the officials responsible for it ?

STOPPAGE OF THE INCREMENT OF A TELEGRAPHIST IN THE PUNJAB POSTAL CIRCLE.

34. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : With reference to starred question No. 234 put by Bhai Parma Nand on the 24th February, 1934, and the reply given by the Honourable Sir Frank Noyce, regarding the stoppage of the increment of a Telegraphist in the Punjab Postal Circle, will Government please state what action, if any, has been taken by the Local authority concerned ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Government have no information and do not propose to obtain it as the matter is one which it is within the competence of the Head of the Circle concerned to dispose of finally.

DISPOSAL OF THE STAFF CASES OF THE PUNJAB POSTAL CIRCLE OFFICE AND OF THE DEAD LETTER OFFICE, LAHORE.

35. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : (a) Will Government please state whether it is a fact that according to the Standing Orders of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, in Posts and Telegraphs Circles where there are two Deputy Postmasters-General, the staff cases should be dealt with by one Deputy Postmaster-General and Establishment cases by the other, and that the Establishment cases in the Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle are assigned to the Senior Deputy Postmaster-General and Staff cases to the junior ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 30.

(b) If the reply to part (a) above be in the affirmative, will Government please also state why the Staff Cases of the Punjab Circle Office and of the Dead Letter Office, Lahore, are assigned to the Senior Deputy Postmaster-General, when he is in charge of Establishment cases ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) There is no standing order of the Director-General, Posts and Telegraphs, such as that mentioned by the Honourable Member.

(b) Does not arise.

PREPONDERANCE OF MUSLIMS IN CERTAIN CADRES IN THE DERAJAT POSTAL

DIVISION.

36. Seth Liladhar Chaudhury : With reference to the replies to unstarred questions Nos. 85 and 87, put by Bhai Parmanand on the 24th February, 1934, will Government please state what steps they have taken, or propose to take, to remove the preponderance of Muslims in the cadre of staff in the Telegraph Engineering Department and amongst Branch Postmasters, Mail Overseers, Postmen, and Inferior Servants in the Derajat Division ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Government have not taken, nor do they propose to take, any special action except to ensure that their orders regarding communal recruitment, as in force from time to time, are carefully observed.

TOURS OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL AND THE SENIOR DEPUTY POSTMASTER GENERAL, PUNJAB AND NORTH-WEST FRONTIER CIRCLE.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Information has been called for and a reply will be laid on the table in due course.

GAZETTED OFFICERS DUE TO RETIRE IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

38. Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many gazetted officers, Indians and Europeans, in the Government of India Secretariat and its attached and subordinate offices are due to retire during the next eight or nine months ?

(b) Is it a fact that some of them are to be re-employed on special duty ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) above be in the affirmative, will Government please state their names and also give reasons for their re-employment ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the House in due course.

PAPERS OF WHICH AN INCOME-TAX ASSESSEE IS NOT ENTITLED TO HAVE A COPY.

39. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government please lay on the table of this House a list of the papers in an assessment file of which the assessee is not entitled to have a copy ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer given in reply to his question No. 317, on the 31st July, 1934.

INCREASE IN THE IMPORT DUTY ON PROJECTORS, AMPLIFIERS AND LOUD SPEAKERS, ETC.

40. Mr. B. V. Jadhav : Will Government be pleased to place on the table a copy of the order increasing the import duty on projectors, amplifiers, loud-speakers, etc., when imported as one unit for use in cinema theatres for the reproduction of sound films from 10 to 20 per cent. on British machinery and from 10 to 30 per cent. on non-British machinery ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No such order has been issued by the Government of India. Enquiries are, however, being made from Collectors of Customs and the result will be laid on the table in due course.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF INDIA.

41. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Will Government be pleased to state in a tabular form Revenue and Expenditure, year by year, from 1921 to the latest year, the figures for which are available, showing the additional new taxation levied in each year ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a similar statement relating to the provinces ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) A statement is attached. The figures in the last column of the statement represent the yield estimated at the time of the imposition of the taxation. It is not possible to calculate the actual yield.

(b) Figures of provincial revenue and expenditure are given in Accounts Nos. 8 and 9 of the Finance and Revenue Accounts of the Government of India, copies of which are available in the Library. Information regarding the yield from additional taxation levied by the provinces is not available.

Statement showing Revenue and Expenditure of the Central Government from 1921-22 and the Estimated yield from new or increased Taxation imposed during each year.

(In lakhs of rupees.)

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.	Estimated yield of new or increased taxation imposed during the year.
1921-22 ..	1,15,21	1,42,86	12,13
1922-23 ..	1,21,41	1,36,43	12,84
1923-24 ..	1,33,17	1,30,78	4,28
1924-25 ..	1,38,04	1,32,36	—4,50
1925-26 ..	1,33,33	1,30,02	{ —71 in 1925-26. —1,75 in a full year.
1926-27 ..	1,31,70	1,31,70(a)
1927-28 ..	1,27,26(b)	1,27,26	{ —42 in 1927-28. —82 in a full year.
1928-29 ..	1,28,98(c)	1,29,30	83
1929-30 ..	1,32,69	1,32,42	4,96
1930-31 ..	1,24,60	1,36,18
1931-32 ..	1,21,64	1,33,39	Original Finance Bill .. 13,27 Supplementary Finance Bill .. 7,55 for 6 months in 1931-32. 15,01 in one full year.
1932-33 ..	1,26,40	1,24,85
1933-34 ..	1,19,31	1,19,31(d)
(Revised) ..			2,83
1934-35 ..	1,19,71	1,19,61(e)
(Budget) ..

(a) Includes 2,96 on account of transfer to Revenue Reserve Fund.
(b) Includes 2,22 on account of transfer from Revenue Reserve Fund.
(c) Includes 74 on account of transfer from Revenue Reserve Fund.
(d) Includes 1,29 on account of transfer to Earthquake Fund.
(e) Includes 1,51 on account of transfer of share of jute export duty, etc.

MESSAGE FROM H. E. THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : I have 12 Noon. got to deliver a Message to the House :

(The Message was received by the Assembly standing.)

" Gentlemen of the Assembly,

You are naturally anxious to be informed of the course which will be adopted with a view to the constitution of a new Assembly. There appears to be a general impression that it will rest with Lord Willingdon to dissolve the existing Assembly as a preliminary to the constitution of its successor. This impression is erroneous. The power of extension conferred by clause (b) of the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 63D of the Government of India Act having been exercised, the power of dissolution conferred by clause (a) of that proviso, is not available for the dissolution of the Assembly in the period intervening between the expiration of its normal life and the date to which it has been extended. Consequently, the present Assembly will remain in existence until the 31st December, 1934, but with a view to the constitution of the new Assembly in time to admit of the commencement of its first Session in January next, resort will be had to the power conferred by the proviso to sub-rule (2) of rule 27 of the Legislative Assembly Electoral Rules which enables the Governor General to issue notifications calling upon constituencies to elect Members at any time not being more than three months prior to the date on which the duration of the Legislative Assembly would expire in the ordinary course of events. In the exercise of this power, the Governor General will issue the notifications in question in respect of the constituencies of each Province on such date early in October as will accord with the electoral programme contemplated in the Province and polls will be taken on dates varying slightly from Province to Province within the first half of November."

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The House will now resume consideration of the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932.

Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move :

" That after clause 2 of the Bill, the following new clause be added :

" 3. Section 4 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, shall be omitted."

Sir, the procedure laid down in the local Act for the arrest and detention of persons is not only summary but most unsatisfactory. There are two sections in the local Act under which arrest and detention can be made. Under section 2, sub-section (1), the Local Government can arrest and detain a person if in their opinion such an act is essential for the purposes and reasons stated in that section. In the second place, section 4 of that Act also empowers any officer of that Local Government, provided that officer is specially empowered in this respect, to make such arrest. Sir, the provisions of section 4 of that local Act require scrutiny. It is not stated to what grade of officers that power would be delegated by the Local Government. Then, Sir, it is well-known that in these matters it is the police officers who are empowered to make arrests, and such police officers may be even petty and small. Apart from corrupt and malicious motives, there may be overzeal on the part of such officers in making arrests. If by chance such an officer first makes an arrest, then it is but natural for him to adhere to his view and opinion and try to collect more evidence against the person. All the safeguards laid down in the section, in my opinion, will not be sufficient to protect the unfortunate victims. We must remember that these persons are arrested and detained merely on suspicion and not anything like judicial evidence. Let me advert to the procedure that the Local Government follows in verifying the reports of such officers. The other day the Honourable the Home Member, who honourably filled the post of Home Member in the Punjab, said in this Assembly that he was always very careful in verifying these reports and he got them confirmed and that he was fully satisfied. But may I ask him whether it is possible for him, or for the matter of that, for any Home Member in any Province, or for the matter of that, any District Magistrate to personally verify and come to a right conclusion and lay his hands upon his breast and say that the facts stated in the report were correct? In my humble opinion, it is impossible. These officers will have to follow the report in many cases blindfold. This is one of the reasons why I submit that the power of the High Court to direct the production of persons detained should be retained and should not be taken away.

[Rao Bahadur B. L. Patil.]

Then, Sir, Government have assigned two reasons for taking away this power from the High Court. The first is that, under the circumstances obtaining in Bengal, they want to substitute executive discretion for that of the judicial. The second reason is that in the nature of things the evidence in such cases cannot be disclosed. May I ask whether the executive enquiry that is provided in the local Act is in any sense sufficient or judicial? The enquiry may be made by the executive, but I submit that it must be judicially done. Are there sufficient provisions in the local Act to assure that? If you just turn to section 9 of the local Act, you will find that some sort of, I should say, summary scrutiny is provided. Under that section, the facts collected, and the circumstances noted against the persons will be placed before two officers of the grade of Sessions Judge or Additional Sessions Judge, and also the answers given to the allegations made against them by the Government on those facts and circumstances. Then, the officers will have to consider these materials and submit their report. Here there are two points to be considered. Is the person concerned given any opportunity to meet those allegations in person? The only opportunity he gets is to submit his written answers to the allegations made. With regard to the report submitted by the officers, nobody would know what it would be, and then the Local Government is not bound to follow it. The Government may or may not accept it. This is most unfair. In my opinion, if Government want to safeguard the liberties of these persons, they must at least agree to accept the opinion of the officers whom they have themselves appointed. I need not mention that the whole of this procedure is confidential. This is my second reason why the power of directing the production of these persons should not be taken away.

Let me now come to the provisions of section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Section 491 simply provides that the High Court has power to direct that any person illegally or improperly detained should be produced before it. What is the scope of this section? It merely gives power to the High Court to see whether the arrest and detention are made under law and whether the person is properly imprisoned. What does it mean? The High Court has no other power except to see that the provisions of the particular law are complied with. That is the only power; but the other day the Honourable the Law Member assured this House that the High Court has power to go into the record and see whether the provisions of the law are complied with or not in spite of the retention of this barring clause. Therefore I submit that section 4 of the Act of 1932 is either superfluous or mischievous. It is superfluous for the reason that the power under section 491 is there whether such a barring clause is there or not. It is mischievous for the reason that if the High Court had already such a power, why should a barring clause like this should be inserted in the Bill? For these reasons I submit that the Government should not sit adamant, but agree to adopt this amendment. A number of Honourable Members have raised this question on this side of the House and Government have replied on all those occasions and stuck to their view. But we on this side of the House are not at all convinced by the reasons given by the Government, and, especially in view of the fact that the provisions of the local Act as well as the provisions of Act VIII of 1932 are now made permanent, I submit that it is most unfair that the power of the High Court to issue a writ of Habeas Corpus should be taken away. May I also submit that, in this country, not only the educated classes, but even the masses have implicit faith in the fountain head of justice as lying in the High Court. Therefore, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Amendment moved :

“ That after clause 2 of the Bill, the following new clause be added :

“ 3. Section 4 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, shall be omitted ”.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Sir, I do not desire to take up the time of the House—not that there are too many here—by repeating the arguments I have advanced before. I have heard my Honourable friend, Mr. Patil, say that he has not been convinced. If he has not been convinced, I dare say, my paraphrasing the same arguments in a different language will not convince him. I do not want to detain the House by repeating arguments which I have already advanced on a previous occasion when I went into the matter at some length. I shall only point out, with great respect, the amount of confusion in the mind of my Honourable friend, Mr. Patil, in the contentions which he has put forward before this House today, for instance the argument based on the overzeal of the lower police officials. What has that got to do with the matter? If the police has gone wrong and if the Government have come to a wrong opinion, it is possible by reason of the Bengal Act, because the suspect has no chance of having recourse to a Court of law, but we are not concerned with that. This House is not doing something by which the overzeal of the police officer is being confirmed. That is done by the local executive and that is done by virtue of an Act which has been passed by the Bengal Legislature. I do not desire to take up the time of the House further. I took more time on the last occasion than I wanted to. I oppose the amendment.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

“ That after clause 2 of the Bill, the following new clause be added :

“ 3. Section 4 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, shall be omitted ”.

The motion was negatived.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member) : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill be passed."

I do not desire at this stage and after the very lengthy debates that have taken place to make a speech on this motion. I was not, of course, in this House during those debates, but I have spent many hours reading, I think I may say, conscientiously, every word that has been uttered in this House during the three days debate on this Bill, and with the best will in the world I cannot find anything new whatever to say about the Bill. Therefore, I content myself with making the motion. Sir, I beg to move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill be passed."

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad (United Provinces Southern Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : From this side of the House, we assured the Government that none of us is a terrorist or favours terrorism. We said repeatedly that we would like to strengthen the hands of the Government to eradicate terrorism altogether from the country, but the difference between the Government and the Opposition is that we are willing to have the Bill as a temporary measure in order to remove this terrorism, but we do not want it to remain permanently in the Statute-book of the country. We know that the Indian Criminal Law Act is supposed to be one of the best Acts in the world, and I was told that several countries had tried to adopt this as a specimen. I think it is a stigma, both on the Government and the people of this country, to have this as a permanent measure. It is a stigma on the people, because you assume that terrorism is going to be a permanent feature in the country. We earnestly believe that this is a passing phase, and it will disappear if proper actions are taken. It is a stigma on the Government, because it will be said that, after 175 years of their rule, they could not establish a peaceful Government in the country and they have to resort to a permanent Statute of the kind now before us. We on this side believe that to have this as a permanent measure is a stigma on the people as well as on the Government. If right action had been taken 18 years ago, this situation would not have arisen. Government failed in their duty at the right time. Certain Commissions and Committees recommended proper action, but the Government allowed the thing to pass away. I still believe that if right action is taken, this thing will be eradicated in time and this Bill would not be necessary. We on this side of the House are willing to allow the Government to have this measure for a temporary period so long as it is necessary, but not to have a permanent measure.

It was hinted at by some speakers, and I emphasize the fact, that had the Government adopted a right policy in education when the Calcutta University Commission reported, then the whole position would have been cleared up. Had proper action been taken to revise the educational system of Bengal, it would have made an enormous difference in the condition of Bengal and in the revolutionary movement. They have got a system of high schools which a number of educationists condemn. They have very low type of teachers. The teachers practically teach nothing in order that they may be employed as tutors to the richer boys. The whole system of aided schools and recognised schools requires a great improvement and it was suggested that if the schools are made State schools and better provision is made for the teaching, then the boys will do some constructive work and they will not turn to revolutionary occupations. I am myself an old alumnus of the Calcutta University. I took my M.A. degree from the Calcutta University, and it was an honour to be a graduate of the Calcutta University in those days. The standard of education at that time was high. The people who took the degree scattered all over India and were prominent in every walk of life. They practically captured the whole of the Government of India Secretariat. They would have kept up their educational supremacy even to this day but for the lowering of the standard for which the Government of India are chiefly responsible, and I say that this terrorism has arisen because of the wrong policy of the Government of India in educational matters.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney (Nominated Non-Official) : Why not change the Senate of the University ?

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : That is a very small issue compared with the bigger problem which I have now laid before the House. I want to change the whole educational system of Bengal, particularly the secondary education ; a change in the personnel of the Senate will not change the educational system of the country. It may be hardly relevant on this Bill to give a whole discourse on the educational policy of Bengal, but I must emphasize this fact that this whole cult of terrorism, whatever it may be called, is the result of a wrong training and wrong policy pursued in the matter of the education which the boys have been receiving in schools and colleges now. Of course, a thing of this kind is nearly an impossibility in any other Province. In all other Provinces they have got a better supervision, and a better system and standard of schools and colleges. Sir, sometime ago, I emphasized that the Government have in every important country taken the responsibility as regards secondary education. Why should we not act similarly so far as Bengal is concerned ? Let the Government directly take the responsibility of secondary education and of providing the people of Bengal with opportunities for good and sound education ; so that they may turn out good college students, and the people of Bengal may again regain the position which they have now lost on account of pursuing a wrong and unsound and inefficient educational policy of recent years.

Then, Sir, coupled with the question of education, there is also the economic problem. Now, the economic problem is no doubt keen in every Province, but it is much keener in Bengal than it is in the other Provinces on account of the large number of persons who have already qualified themselves from the universities there and who find no future for themselves. Now, Sir, if you make only these changes, that is, provide some kind of healthy occupation to the persons who come out of these universities, give them the right kind of education and a good standard, so that they may not fall a prey to mischief-makers and dangerous propaganda, then, I am sure, such people will have absolutely no time to think of mischievous pursuits. To give an apt illustration, those, familiar with the agricultural life of the country, will probably remember that all sorts of troubles crop up in the country when the cultivators have got nothing to do, but as soon as the harvest or cultivation time comes round, the moment the tenants and other agriculturists have some kind of occupation, there are no troubles in the rural area. It is only when there is nothing to do that these unhappy troubles arise. Idleness is the mother of mischief. Similarly, if the right policy of education is steadily pursued, if we keep the time of the boys well occupied in healthy pursuits and if, after these boys leave their schools and colleges, we provide some healthy occupation for them and have a proper supervision over them, then the whole troubles which now exist will probably disappear. Therefore, Sir, I take this opportunity to beseech the Government that these terrorists should not be taken to be a permanent feature of the country. You may have certain powers, no doubt you have them, of removing them for the time being, but if you want to have a permanent cure and wish to establish a peaceful Government and not a military Government, then, in that case, it is up to you to find out the right solution: and the right solution is—change your whole educational policy, and provide some kind of living or means of living to all these persons who turn out from these schools and colleges. If you fail in that, and if you simply have recourse to your present methods, then I am afraid this thing will never disappear. You may for the time being divert detenus from one place to another, it may appear to have subsided, but it will not disappear unless you take the right action. Time after time I urged, when I was on the Calcutta University Commission, that that was the right course to follow, but unfortunately the Government of India were too timid to take the right course of action, and they did not want to spend money without which nothing can be achieved. Unless you have both, it is impossible to realise your object. Therefore, I say that this measure that we are now passing is really a stigma to the people of India and to the Government of India, and we should like to repeat from this side of the House that this is not really the permanent cure of the problem which is now before us. Do have no doubt a temporary measure till you solve it, but at the same time do think out some methods by means of which this sort of thing can be permanently and effectively cured. With these words, Sir, I resume my seat.

[Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad.]

Mr. S. C. Sen (Bengal National Chamber of Commerce : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I oppose this motion entirely. I do not think that there is any utility in the measure or that the grounds advanced are at all sufficient for extending the operation of this measure or for making it a perpetual measure, and I do not think that the Government of Bengal really now requires any power to send these detenus out of the Province of Bengal. Sir, in 1932, when this Act was passed (Act VIII of 1932, I believe), there were certain reasons for the Government of Bengal coming up before this House, the first reason being that there was not sufficient accommodation in the jails of Bengal at that time. That was the time when the Civil Disobedience Movement was in its full swing, and the whole resources of the Provincial Government, so far as regards accommodation in jails, were taken up by these Civil Disobedience prisoners. In this connection, I may read a passage from the Bengal Administration Report for 1932-33 issued by the Government of Bengal. It says at page 22 :

"The heavy influx of civil disobedience prisoners during the first six months of 1932 placed a great strain upon the resources of the Jail Department.... The Hijli

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL, 1931

Additional Special Jail, the Dum Dum Special Jail, and the Dum Dum Additional Special Jail remained in commission throughout the year, and when these were found insufficient in accommodation, a second additional special jail was opened at Dum Dum. The old sub-jail buildings at Hijli were treated at first as part of the additional special jail for the reception of female civil disobedience prisoners, but the latter were subsequently removed to a female jail that was opened at Berhampore, and the Hijli sub-jail buildings were then utilized for female detenus."

Sir, all these sub-jails which were opened in 1932 are presumably now lying vacant. The Civil Disobedience prisoners amounted in 1932 to about fourteen thousand. They are now no longer being housed by the Government of Bengal, and, I ask, what is being done with all that accommodation? Is it all lying vacant, or is it being utilized for teaching the boys of Bengal how to behave themselves properly? I take it, that is not done; they are lying vacant, and I do not see why, for the reason of accommodation the Government of Bengal should have come before this House in order to secure special provision. That is the first point. The second point made out by Sir Harry Haig was that these detenus were very dangerous and that they were in communication with outside persons. That was his charge; and, to prevent that being done, these persons were sent to Deoli. The Government of Bengal, however, in the Bengal Council did not say as much. On the 19th March, 1934, the Honourable Mr. Reid, the Home Member of the Government of Bengal, said this (I am reading from the Bengal Council Proceedings, page 304 of Vol. XLIII-No. 5) :

"Mr. N. K. Basu dwelt on the question of Deoli. I think the House is well aware of the reason why the Deoli Camp was started in 1932. There was a great congestion in Bengal and we could not accommodate further detenus here, and that is one reason why it was started. The second reason was this: that these men which we have in the Detention Camp are all men who are deep in the terrorist movement. To remove them outside the province does make a difference both to conditions here and also to their own mentality."

There is no suggestion here that they were guilty of communicating with people outside or of hatching conspiracies inside the detention camp and making it available for people outside. No such charge has been made, and I believe Sir Harry Haig, when he said this, was making a mistake or rather misunderstanding what was said about the terrorist prisoners in Bengal and not the detenus, for I find this passage in the report of the Administration of Bengal. They say :

"The increase in the number of terrorist convicts was also marked, and these prisoners were exceedingly troublesome and proved a source of great anxiety to Jail Superintendents. They consistently attempt to undermine discipline and to hold unauthorized communications with outside sympathisers, and they frequently threatened the jail staff with violence. Three terrorist prisoners actually succeeded in escaping from Midnapore Central Jail. One was recaptured during the year, and the other two in 1933. It was to free the jails of the province from the disturbing presence of these undesirables that deportation to the Andamans was decided upon by the Government of India, and during the year 58 such terrorist convicts were despatched from Bengal to Port Blair."

I say, therefore, that there is no justification for Sir Harry Haig to make the assertion that these detenus were communicating with outsiders. If that portion of the argument goes out, then what remains of the argument for extending the operation of this Act? I do not find any. So far as the question of congestion is concerned, I do not find any argument. So far as the communication with outsiders is concerned and which the Government wanted to prevent, it was never in existence so far as this class of detenus are concerned. Under these circumstances, I oppose this Bill.

LE65LAD

[Mr. S. C. Sen.]

Then, Sir, there is another question, namely, to make this Act a permanent one. Why should that be done? The Government of Bengal has thought fit to make the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1930 a permanent feature of the Statute-book of Bengal, but that does not apply in the present case. The Honourable Sir Harry Haig stated that if you make a Statute terminable with a particular period, the terrorists would await for that period and wage war again. He also said that, that was the lesson the Government had learnt from the history of the terrorist revolution from 1905 downwards. Sir, if one reads the history of the terrorist revolution in Bengal, I do not think he will come to this conclusion. He laid great stress on the fact that the 1925 Act was repealed in the year 1930, and, thereafter, there was a great recrudescence of outrages in Bengal. The history of the terrorist outrages in Bengal is very succinctly stated in the report on the Police Administration in the Bengal Presidency for the year 1931. There it is said :

"The total number of persons interned under the 1924 Ordinance and the 1925 Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act was 187."

And the number of persons who are now under detention is over 2,000. Therefore, it is sought to be proved that by the release of these 187 detenus, there was a recrudescence of the terrorist activities in Bengal. It goes on :

"All these persons and those made State prisoners under Regulation III of 1818 were released by the end of January, 1929, the majority being released in 1928. In 1929, terrorist outrages increased, four being committed, of which the murder of a police officer in Barisal and a dacoity in the Rajshahi district were the most important."

This Act was, if I remember aright, agreed to be repealed by the Government of Bengal by a speech made by Sir Stanley Jackson in the Bengal Council in March, 1930. At the same time, he warned the people that if any recrudescence of terrorist activity took place, he would at once get the Government of India's permission to promulgate another Act. Sir, everybody knew at that time that the Act of 1925 was given up at the pressure of the Home Government (the Labour Government) which was in office at that time.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : What date was this?

Mr. S. C. Sen : It was March, 1930. And the police did not wait for a long time before they could make out a case for the re-promulgation of this Statute, for, if I remember aright, by the 15th April, 56 houses in Calcutta were searched by the police and some more houses were searched in the Mufassil including Rajshahi. But the next day was a very fortunate day for the police, because, on the day after that, the Chittagong armoury raid case was found to have been committed.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : As my Honourable friend is wrong about all his dates and in most particulars, I do not want to interrupt him now.

Mr. S. C. Sen : May I know in what respect I am wrong?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : You said that 56 house searches took place in March and the Chittagong armoury raid took place the next day. That is not the case. The Chittagong raid took place on the 18th April, 1930.

Mr. S. C. Sen : I am simply stating the facts, and the Honourable Member has not understood me. After that day, that is to say, 15 days thereafter, about the 15th of April, house searches were made in Calcutta. I was not wrong about my date, and two days thereafter the Chittagong outrage took place, and the day after that the Ordinance was passed. So, I have no quarrel about that matter. But what I wish to emphasise is that 187 prisoners were released in 1929. That is what I have shown from the Bengal report, that on the 18th or 19th of April, barely a month after, these people should have made up their mind and made all sorts of arrangements about the raiding of the armoury in Chittagong is something novel. If these men are capable of doing that.....

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am sorry to interrupt the Honourable Member, but he is really wrong about his facts. The majority of the detenus were released about the end of 1928, more than a year before the Chittagong outrage took place.

Mr. S. C. Sen : That is what I am saying.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : My Honourable friend said distinctly, and this the House was asked to believe, that these detenus, less than a month after their release, had been able to plan the Chittagong outrage.

Mr. S. C. Sen : My point is that it is over a year between their release and the Chittagong outrage although the Act of 1925 was not repealed more than a month ago, and, therefore, this point is against the argument adduced by Sir Harry Haig in this House that so long as the Act remained in force, these people could not do anything, but after the Act was over, they took steps. Therefore, the contention that because they were released in 1928, and were hatching this plot from time onward is not relevant. The date of the repeal of the Act is the only point to be considered. That is what I say. If these few men could make arrangement for the raiding of the armoury in Chittagong where there is a great military force, I should think that Government, instead of imprisoning them, should have taken them into the army (Laughter) and given them suitable posts.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I wish my Honourable friend knew even some of the facts of the Chittagong case.

Mr. S. C. Sen : These are the facts taken from the publications of Government. I need not go any further.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : I have also got the publications of Government. My friend knows little about the matter.

Mr. S. C. Sen : The administration reports are here and the dates are also mentioned, and I am trying to draw my own conclusions from them.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : They are wrong conclusions.

Mr. S. C. Sen : That may be according to you ; but, to my reading, that is the position. Therefore, the mere non-existence of that Act of 1925 did not conduce to the terrorist outrage at Chittagong—that is my contention. Moreover, I will tell you one thing. My idea is, and that is confirmed by a very high official in the Government of Bengal, Special Department, and his opinion was that the recruitment of the terrorist outrage was planned, not after the repeal of the Act, but after the rioting which took place in Dacca by the end of 1929. That was the idea of that high official of Bengal, the idea is not mine. He is supposed to know more about the state of Bengal and about terrorists than any other person here.

[Mr. S. C. Sen.]

An Honourable Member : Who is that high official ?

Mr. S. C. Sen : I shall be excused for not mentioning his name.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Possibly some imaginary person.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Of course everything that we on this side say is imaginary, and everything that the Government say is gospel truth. We are expected to take them as true facts.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : We cannot test those statements. If conversation was private, it was not meant for public use.

Mr. S. C. Sen : Not only that, how did the Government treat that riot in 1929. It was with the concurrence, that is the contention, of officials in Dacca at that time that this outrage took place. Even the guns from the hands of the local Hindu bhadraloks were taken away lest they, by firing, enraged the Muslim mob. That was the suggestion made, not by the officers themselves, but by the Committee of Inquiry which sat there.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is that the reason for not disclosing the names of the members of the Committee ? The Honourable the Law Member has secret knowledge of these things. Let him be fair.

Mr. S. C. Sen : I do not know what he will do, because I am not in his confidence.

Then, not after the Chittagong outrage, but after the murder of Ahsanullah, in Chittagong, there was a great depredation of property by the police officers. A report was made after an inquiry which was held by Mr. Nelson, the Divisional Commissioner, but that report has not seen the light of day. These and other things are the causes for the recrudescence of terrorist outrages in 1930, in Bengal, and this, gentleman also told me that some of the Muslim youths were guilty of attempted terrorist outrages, but that was suppressed, because the Government would not allow a Muslim name to be dragged into the controversy, lest they find that the fine which they were inflicting on the Hindu bhadralok class should be questioned. Sir, I take this opportunity of expressing my regret for informing the House the other day about the Rowlatt Act. I told the Honourable the Home Member the other day that the Enquiry Officers were a High Court Judge and another gentleman. I now find that that was not so. They are one or more investigating authorities for the purpose and every investigating authority shall be appointed by order in writing and shall consist of three persons, of whom two shall be persons having held judicial office not inferior to that of a District and Sessions Judge, and one shall be a person not in the service of the Crown in India. I made a mistake in telling the Home Member that it was one of the High Court Judges. I may, however, tell him one thing that although this Act was on the Statute-book for three years, it was not applied.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Which Act ? The Rowlatt Act ?

Mr. S. C. Sen : Yes. The report on the Police Administration in the Bengal Presidency for 1931 states :

“ In 1923, a fresh series of terrorist outrages began. The Defence of India Act had expired six months after the end of the Great War and although as a result of the Sedition Committee's report, the Rowlatt Bill, after slight modifications, became law as the Revolutionary and Anarchical Crimes Act, 1919, this Act, was never brought into force, and was repealed with other so-called repressing laws in 1921.”

That shows that so long as that Act was in force, and when there was an Enquiry Committee in which the accused was entitled to be present, the Government had not the courage to put forward their cases before such a Committee lest the result should prove the contention of the public that the so-called evidence upon which people are arrested and kept in detention are imaginary and untruthful. The Government feared that the castle which they built in the air upon false evidence should burst. The next Act which was passed in 1925 did not contain these provisions and enquiry officers, and we know why they were not there. Under these circumstances, I oppose the Bill.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, Government in their wisdom have rejected the amendment moved by my Honourable friend, Mr. Patil, not to make this obnoxious Bill a permanent measure on the Statute-book of this country. Now, it is therefore the duty of the Opposition to throw out a measure like this, because I shall presently show that whatever might have been the urgency and necessity of getting the Bill passed into law in Bengal,—the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1934—there is no necessity of giving an extension to the rigorous provision of transportation of political suspects to other Provinces. As I was listening to the arguments of the Honourable the Law Member on this subject, I found that he made it clear that many of the speeches were not relevant, and he said :

“ The main point was whether the suspects can be detained in jail outside Bengal. Then the other argument was, for instance the consideration that the detenu loses his liberty, that he loses the company of friends, that in some cases prompt medical attention is not given and similar complaints. I say in all humility that these are irrelevant considerations because they may as well happen in jails inside Bengal as outside it.”

With great respect for the logic and arguments of my Honourable friend, the Law Member, I say that I join issue with him on each of those grounds. It is not a fact that the internment of a detenu in Bengal is the same so far as rigour of life and conditions of his health, his food, his interview and all these various items are concerned, if he is externed outside Bengal. That is the main point on which we differ and on which we argue that this provision for externing the Bengal detenus should not be accepted by the House. Instead of giving facts which the Honourable the Law Member will consider as imaginary, I shall take some of these points and show how they really prove a great hardship on the friends and relatives of the detenus. Just now I should like to read a few letters that I have received in the course of the last 10 or 15 days from the relatives of the detenus as regards interviews. Some of my friends, particularly my friend, Mr. Chatarji, waxed eloquent over the comforts of these detenus and said they do not suffer in any way and that they are getting all conveniences in jail. If I have time, I shall deal in detail with the points that he has raised; but from the graphic description that he gave, it seemed to me as if he is tempted to be inside the jail as a detenu rather than be an official Member of the Legislative Assembly.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

Mr. J. M. Chatarji (Bengal : Nominated Official) : Sir, I never said that I was tempted to be inside a detention camp instead of being an official.

I P. M.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : The description given by him was so tempting,—that they are getting all sorts of food, they are getting books and all other comforts,—that if the nominated Members could have an additional luxury of getting Rs. 20 a day, as they get here, they should perhaps prefer to be inside these jails. I shall be the last man to grudge my Honourable friend, Mr. Chatarji, if, in consideration of his services, he is made permanent as a Magistrate in Bengal, but I shall deal with his points later on. But at present I shall deal with these interviews. I say, it is no concession, it is no favour to these detenus to permit them to have interviews with their relations. I made it clear before the House, and Government also admitted it, that they are only suspects and there are at least some, may be a small percentage of five or ten, who may not be even guilty of any of the charges which are laid at their door. But I should like to know from the new Home Member why these interviews, which are always allowed in the presence of police officials under very strict conditions that these police officials may like to suggest, why even in those conditions the interviews are repeatedly refused. I do not speak on mere imaginary facts. I was myself an applicant to see my own nephew. Not once or twice, but several times I have applied myself, and the father of the boy, my own brother, applied for interviews; but they have been repeatedly refused without being given any reasons. We said we were ready to abide by any conditions. The interviews are held in the presence of police officials; they can at any moment stop the interview if they think there is any conversation going on which is objectionable from any standpoint. The detenu is kept a few feet apart and he may be kept behind some iron bars. Yet why did Government take it into their head to interdict these interviews?

Then, as regards these communications, Sir, the Honourable the Law Member is absent just now, but I think it was he who raised this question that it does not make any difference when a man is sent out of the Province. I say that, as regards these communications, they suffer very much, and it is a standing grievance of all the relations and friends that they never receive regular correspondence about the health of these poor people. With your permission, Sir, I should like to place some of the letters that I have received about these communications. For the last one month and a half, so far as I understand, all communications and letters between these detenus and their friends and relations have been stopped.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Where?

Mr. S. C. Mitra : At the Deoli Detention Camp. I will read some of these letters, and I shall be glad if the Honourable the Home Member is in a position to say whether they are on hunger strike or whether there is a general order interdicting all correspondence with these detenus. Here is one letter :

“ My second son, Narendra Nath Das, is a detenu in Deoli camp. The last letter I received from him is dated 28th May, 1934. Since then I have not received any news about him. I sent various letters and wires to the said detenu for information but got no reply from him. I have also written to the Commandant, Deoli, on 11th June, 1934, and 15th July, 1934, but he did not care to reply to any queries. I have also sent petitions to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, I. B., Calcutta, for information on the 1st July, 1934, and again on 18th July, 1934, for an interview with the said detenu, but I have not been favoured with a reply as yet. Again I applied to the Secretary of the Government of Bengal, Political Department, for asking the Commandant, Deoli, to supply me with information by wire as to the health of this detenu; but unfortunately I failed to secure any information on the subject. So I pray that you will be pleased to help me with information as to his long silence and of the present state of health of the said detenu concerned by any means you may choose, and thus relieve his poor parents of the anxiety for their unfortunate son.

I have the honour to be, etc.,

Charu Chandra Das, Mukhtear,
Diamond Harbour Criminal Court,
District 24-Pergannas.

Dated 21st July, 1934.”

Here is another letter. This is written by a lady, named Probbabati Devi. Her address is 21-1-1 Sreemohan Lane, Kalighat, Calcutta, and the letter is dated 21st July last. I give the substance of it :

“ My younger brother, Rabindra Nath Ray Chaudhury, is a detenu for the last eight or nine months at Deoli. If there is no strike or special disturbance, I get letters from him regularly, but whenever there is a strike correspondence is stopped. I got his last letter on the 18th June last, and after that date we are receiving no letters. Apart from us there are several other detenus whose parents or near relations have got no letters from their relatives. They are anxious and came to us to inquire if we have received any letter from Rabi. They are very much frightened that some of the mothers of these detenus are becoming blind by weeping. Our apprehensions are that due to reduction of the daily allowance of these detenus or for reducing the expenses of letter writing, there must have been some strike. There is no way of getting any information by any means. Many have sent two or three telegrams but have received no reply. Will you kindly move in this matter? ”

I place these letters for the perusal of the Honourable the Home Member, and I hope he will give some reply as to why all correspondence has been stopped with these detenus for the last one month and a half; and I can personally say that I have also received no reply or letter from my own nephew for the same period. There must be something going on there, and it is the settled policy of this Government, whenever there is any trouble in the shape of hunger strike or anything else, that they take credit in suppressing all facts and figures in these matters. My Honourable friend, Mr. Chatarji, or the Law Member, sitting here, may think that these detenus are in Paradise and there is nothing to be desired in these detention camps. But I should like to point out even from these simple matters that the relations of these poor detenus cannot get even a letter or even a reply to their pre-paid telegrams simply saying that the detenus are keeping good health. They have paid the requisite money and the only information they want is about their health. And, in all these matters, there is so much of miserliness on the part of Government that they will not satisfy the anxieties of these relations. If anybody has done anything wrong, it is certainly not the relations of these detenus who are sent away from their homes.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

Sir, I have spoken about these interviews. I want some categorical reply from the Home Member as to whether they consider it an act of great grace that the relatives of these detenus should be refused these interviews under police surveillance and under any conditions, without any reasons whatsoever being given. I shall deal with the other little points that will be apparent to the Honourable Members of this House. My friend, Mr. Morgan, may prefer the Deoli climate to Bengal climate. But, as I have said, to a Bengali his own climate is certainly more congenial to his health than the desert climate of Ajmere. If the European Members prefer to be in a dry climate, let them have it; but we like to have a specific answer to the question why, in a vast country like Bengal, they cannot have some segregated place, in a hill station or in some quiet part of the country, where these detenus can be as much segregated as in Deoli. It is no use saying in a round-about way that they do not suffer in any way. The burden lies heavily on Government to show, if their police and jail officials have to keep them out of harm by communicating with the outside public, why cannot they find some place in Bengal itself, which would be as much convenient to them as Deoli, so far as communication with the outside world is concerned. It is all beating about the bush not giving any straight answer to these questions, but simply saying that they do not suffer very much. I appeal to you, Sir, that it requires imagination really to feel the position of these poor fellows. Almost every day we pass these five or six hours in this Chamber: but once a rule is made that no one will be permitted to go out of the Chamber during these six hours, how these Honourable gentlemen will feel it? I say, it may not be necessary at all to go out of the Chamber in these six hours, but if there is a rule or regulation that Members will not be permitted to go out, how will it tell upon the nerves of these Members? It requires imagination, which the bureaucracy proverbially lacks, to feel for these men who suffer—not for days or weeks, but for months and months, and some for years and years, in a distant land, for no offence which can be proved in any way before a competent Court of law. We were talking of tested and untested and fabricated steel, but here it is mostly fabricated evidence that is used in all these cases. (Opposition Laughter.) The Honourable the Home Member was giving this House some idea about the charges that are framed against these detenus. I can speak of these incidents with first hand knowledge. I shall give some details, so that the House may realise what these charges are.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): Will the Honourable Member take some time?

Mr. S. C. Mitra: Yes, Sir.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The House now stands adjourned till 2-30 P.M.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

Mr. S. C. Mitra: Mr. President, when the House rose for Lunch, I was giving my personal experience to the House about some of these affairs about which the Honourable the Home Member also spoke from first hand knowledge. I should like to give the House a definite idea as to how these charges are levelled against these detenus. The Honourable the Home Member made an impression that these prisoners were only deprived of a public trial, but otherwise they got all chances to know what the charges against them were, and that they were also given an opportunity to clear themselves of the charges to the Government. Sir, I will tell the House what were the charges against me in 1924, and I hope the House will judge for itself how a man can meet the so-called charges levelled against him. It is contemplated in the Regulation itself that the detenu must be made acquainted with the nature of the charges. Now, the first charge against me was that I was a member of a revolutionary party. Sir, I ask the House, how can anybody meet that charge? I was not allowed to represent my case before any Tribunal, but I was allowed opportunities to make a statement, and all that I could say was that I was not a member of any revolutionary party. Then, the second charge was that I was an associate of Mr. Subhash Chandra Bose, a man who is loved and respected throughout India, Professor J. C. Ghosh, a very much respected patriot of Bengal, Mr. Anil Baran Roy, who is also held in very great esteem throughout Bengal, and one, two or others who were mentioned on that occasion whose names I don't remember just at the moment,—but I ask the House, how a gentleman could possibly refute a charge like this.

Then, Sir, the third charge against me was that I was a party in the smuggling of arms between two dates, say, 31st January, 1922 and 31st July, 1924, and no details, no date or any description, or where, or how or when exactly the arms were smuggled, were mentioned in the charge. It was a perfectly vague and indefinite charge. I challenge the Honourable the Home Member to say if it is any charge at all, or I appeal also to the Honourable the Law Member to say, with all his vast experience of law, whether these vague things can either be considered as charges according to any jurisprudence in any part of the civilized world. Now, Government come forward and say that the detenus are made acquainted with the charges and they are given every chance to refute those charges. I find there is only one Honourable Member in the European Group whom I expect to take an impartial view.....

An Honourable Member: No, there are two Members.

Mr. S. C. Mitra: Yes, there are two Members,—I stand corrected.—I expect them to judge these matters from the high traditions that the British nation possesses of ideas of liberty and justice. Are these the charges which gentlemen, suspected of political crimes, are expected to meet? I challenge the Honourable the Home Member to say whether what I say is not correct. Let him go through the old records. Sir, I know that subsequently one of the highest officials, the Deputy Inspector General of Police, the late lamented Mr. Lowman, who was a great friend of mine, told me that our confinement was merely precautionary and that they knew that we were leaders of thought in Bengal, but the apprehension of the Government was that, after the failure of the non-co-operation movement, there might be a recrudescence of revolutionary crime, and that was why they put us all under restraint! This was the admission made by one of the highest police officials; but yet responsible Members get up and speak with such an innocent air as if they resort to these methods only in the case of confirmed terrorists and they are afraid of public trials on the ground that some of the witnesses might be tampered with or there might be risk to their lives, and so forth. Sir, it is well-known that in Bengal, by legislation, they have provided for Special Tribunals, where the witnesses may be examined in camera, if necessary. All this procedure has now been arranged, and, in spite of all that, it is still pleaded that there is no way to bring home the charges against all these hundreds of young men who are now under restraint and rot in jails for years and years together.

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

The Honourable Sir Harry Haig was pleased to give the other day a description of the history of the terrorist legislation in Bengal. He said that it began from the year 1915. It has been rightly pointed out by my friend, Rao Bahadur Patil, that the Defence of India Act was a war measure. It was not peculiar to Bengal or to India, but it was introduced in all the countries that were engaged in the Great War. England was not excluded. There they had the famous Defence of the Realm Act, which was a war measure, but it ceased within six months after the conclusion of the War. Sir, I say, it is not correct to say that these repressive measures were first enacted in the year 1915. When in 1920 the non-co-operation movement was taken up by the people of this country, there was no terrorist or revolutionary crime for a long period, but when it was observed that the non-co-operation movement was failing to achieve its desired object of securing Dominion Status or Self-Government by non-violent means, the police became apprehensive that some of the ardent youths might resort to serious crimes and so some of the police emissaries and spies began to report to the higher authorities that there might be a recrudescence of crime, and, in 1924, all in a hurry Government passed the Ordinance. Sir, I was a victim of that Ordinance, and, later on, of Regulation III, and, still later on, of the Bengal Criminal Law (Amendment) Act. Government are making much of it, and the Honourable the Law Member himself said that the Bengal Council passed this measure by a vast majority in 1932 and so we must follow public opinion. May I ask, Sir, what happened in 1925 when the first repressive legislation was introduced in the Bengal Council? What was the respect of this great Government for public opinion at that time? Is it not a fact that the very introduction of such a measure was refused by the Bengal Legislative Council which was then properly represented by the nationalists and Congressmen of Bengal? You are very respectful of public opinion today and quote that you have 80 votes as against 20! I shall give you the names of these Members. But may I ask you, at the very inception of these repressive measures had you public opinion on your side? That is by the way. Then, for three or four years, several hundreds of young men were clapped into jail and Government had their own way. A few years after, they found that it was all useless and unnecessary. So far as I could see, I know the Chittagong case is not in a link with other terrorist acts. It is a sporadic action. I think my Honourable friend, Mr. Sen, made a mistake in saying that it was an after-effect of the Dacca communal riot case. That is not correct, but the analysis of the situation as given by him is perfectly all right, because we know from responsible officials, both in the Government and in the police, that soon after the communal riot at Dacca, when Government went out of their way to support one community against another giving the go by to their sense of impartiality....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The riot itself was organised under official auspices.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : My Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, who always correctly analyses these affairs and who knows the genesis of the Dacca trouble much more than I do, says correctly that they were initiated under the Government auspices. But these are past affairs. In this very House I challenged the predecessor of the Home Member to publish Mr. Nelson's report, and whether it was not a fact that that Honourable gentleman came to the definite conclusion that there was evidence to show that there were police officials who instigated some of those crimes, and he recommended that Government should, without standing on their false prestige, compensate the poor sufferers. These are the reasons—the conduct of the officials, not only of the lower strata, the mercenaries, but the high officers of Government putting one community against another, that has given rise to these troubles. Of course, it is only one aspect of the thing. I admit there are economic causes. I admit that when young men find no outlet, no prospects in life after their education, and when they find that they cannot keep their body and soul together even after putting themselves to the hardest labour—in that condition it is not unlikely that they really do not know what is in the best interest of their country. I say that legislations like this will not help the Government to cure India and the Indian youths of their patriotism. Even the Honourable the Law Member was repeating several times that the Bengal Council had, by 80 votes against 20, passed the present measure and that we should not bother ourselves with the Supplementary Act at all. Now, turning to the list of Members who voted for and against the measure, I find that the total number who opposed was not 20, but 16, and among the opponents you will find names like those of Babu Jatindra Nath Basu, Mr. Narendra Kumar Basu, Mr. Syama Prasad Mookerjee, Mr. Shanti Shekhareswar Roy, Mr. S. M. Bose, Maulvi Abdus Samad, Maulvi Syed Majid Baksh, Maulvi Abdul Hamid Shah, Dr. Naresh Chandra Sen-Gupta, etc.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : All Liberals and not Congressmen.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : These are important men whose names are known to the villagers even in Bengal. In speaking on the measure before the Bengal Council, Mr. Shanti Shekhareswar Roy said :

“Sir, this position is not to be judged by the voting in this House, because it is well-known that long ago the dominant party in this country, whose position in the estimation of my countrymen is not challenged in any quarter, has left this House.”

The less said about those who voted for the Bill is the better. I remember in this connection a saying of Herr Hitler in his book on “My Struggle”. He says :

“Just as a hundred fools do not make a wise man, a heroic decision is not likely to come from a hundred cowards.”

[Mr. S. C. Mitra.]

It is not always the number that counts. I shall be very glad to be in opposition with a minority in the company of leaders like Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. K. C. Neogy, Diwan Bahadur Ramaswami Mudaliar and others rather than be in a majority with gentlemen like Mr. Yamin Khan, Captain Chaudhri Lal Chand and a host of others. (Laughter.) Here I should like to clear one point. It has been said by the Honourable the Home Member in this connection and also in other connections that we make exaggerated and inaccurate statements. Particularly he referred to my speech on the 19th March. I do not like to take the time of the House at this stage to refute those charges. I think I shall get enough opportunity to dilate on this point on other occasions. But there is one question which I should like to refer to, and that is, about a rape committed on a woman. (Mr. K. C. Neogy : "By whom?") I shall read out the whole of the paragraph :

"A few significant cases will give some idea about the serious situation.

During the small hours of the night of the 25th January, 1934, a number of Garhwali soldiers surrounded the house of S. J. Murari Mohan Sasmal of Jukhia in P. S. Bhagwanpur in the Contai sub-division, and one of the soldiers committed rape on the wife of S. J. Bhupan Chandra Sasmal, the elder brother of Murari Babu. Both the brothers were absent from home and the neighbours were prevented by soldiers and policemen from coming to the rescue of the unfortunate woman."

The reply was :

"The case has already been mentioned above. A judicial enquiry was held and the complaint found to be false and a prosecution for false evidence was instituted against Murari Mohan Sasmal."

And the whole House was convinced that it must certainly be a false case! As a matter of fact, Mr. Burrows, Commissioner, when the whole case was sub judice, did not hesitate to make a speech commenting on this very case. Does the House know that there was a case instituted against this Murari Mohan Sasmal for having made a false charge, and what was the result? He was acquitted.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : What does that prove?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : It speaks for itself. The Honourable Member's predecessor laid a great deal of stress on that case.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : A man was charged for bringing in a false case, and, with all the resources of Government, they were unable to book that man under that charge and he was acquitted. What is the result? Any man having common sense will draw his own inference. There are difficulties for non-officials to prove these cases. In the allegations which I wanted to be enquired into I said there were Magistrates who accompanied some of these parties, and how difficult it was in this unfortunate land where there is no separation of judicial from executive functions for the poor people to bring home their charges against officials. On another occasion, speaking of the British sense of justice in olden days, I was referring to the case in which Lord Curzon, though he found that a Court of law acquitted certain soldiers for some misbehaviour against a woman, yet took up the case and instituted a departmental inquiry and punished the whole battalion. That was the time when really British statesmanship made an impression in this country. Now, Government are more anxious to cripple the powers of the High Court and the only bulwark of British administration in India. The relief of the people is that the British people may fail in everything, but they will never lose sight of their sense of justice. Now, they are undermining that foundation. You are taking away the foundation of the British Government, and every time you encroach upon the rights of the judiciary, you are responsible for creating the terrorism in this country. I do not like to refer to the speech of my friend, Mr. Chatterji. I know he had not the freedom to speak like an elected Member like myself, but I would like to remind him that, when they give a version, they should not mislead the House. Has he forgotten the case of the police murdering Santosh Kumar Mitra and other Barisal detenus in the Hijli detention camp? The position in these camps is not so comfortable as he thinks to be in his leisure time sitting on those back Benches. What are the reasons for the police shooting these unarmed detenus in detention camps? I pray that the new Home Member will take care himself to go into some of the charges, and, like his predecessor, Sir Harry Haig, who was telling this House that he personally inquired into the minutest detail, may I appeal to him to depute the Honourable the Law Member, who hails from Bengal and who is the pride of my race, and some other officials and non-officials to visit the detenu camps and make a report to the Honourable the Home Member? I know he will not be permitted, however exalted he may be in the estimation of the Government and whatever he may reply to my speeches. I wish the Honourable the Home Member had not alluded to the rule now obtaining in Germany and Austria approvingly last time.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Not approvingly.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Every student of politics knows that they may be successful for a short time, but it is bound to have its reactions and they shall have to reckon for the coming day. We appreciate British character. I hope they will not be swept off their feet by these temporary successes in other countries. He was also speaking of Dillinger, Public Enemy No. 1 in America and the conduct of the police there. I think even in the civilised world this sort of thing is never approved. I can say boldly that if they are considered as Public Enemy No. 1, the thoughtlessness and the unstatesmanlike actions of the bureaucracy, instead of putting an end to terrorism, will foster terrorism in India. They will be considered as Public Enemy No. 2 by the future generations. It is to the interest of both Indians and Britishers to see that terrorism is put an end to, but, as I have said, this legislation will not help. Sir, I oppose the passing of this Bill.

Mr. B. R. Puri (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadian) : Any adverse comment upon a measure of this nature is liable to be taken amiss as promoting or encouraging the terrorist propaganda. It is hardly necessary for me to say that so far as "terrorism" is concerned, there is no difference of opinion between the two sections of the House that this movement ought to be really stopped. The disagreement occurs only when we come to consider the propriety of remedies recommended by the Government to eradicate the evil.

So far as the merits of the case are concerned, I have got very little to say which has not already been said in one form or another. That I would frankly admit, but none the less I am addressing this Honourable [Mr. B. R. Puri.] House for the sole reason that I want my protest against a measure of this kind to be put on record.

I trust it will be considered a pertinent question if I were to ask with all respect the Honourable the Home Member if the Government have by this time arrived at any final conclusion as to what are really the grounds upon which the operation of this Act is being sought to be extended. I have had an opportunity to go through the reports of the debates from the very beginning, and I have been struck with one feature of the debate, i.e., the statement of the Government made from time to time as to the reasons and the causes which have necessitated this measure. We have been told that the measure is necessary because of the lack of accommodation in the Bengal jails. This was seriously put forward as an argument at one time. At another time, we were told that the lack of control in the jail administration in Bengal was responsible for this. It is urged that the movements of the detenus in Bengal jails cannot be properly controlled and checked and that they resort to devices by which they manage to send out communications and they are constantly in touch with anarchists outside, that things are smuggled in and smuggled out, that communications go on between those who are detained inside and their friends and associates outside. This was at one time seriously put forward as the reason for the Government asking the House to permit these undesirables to be banished from their own Province to be lodged in distant jails scattered all over the country. Sir, there is yet a third reason, the authorship of which, I find, is to be attributed not to the Government, but to a semi-Government agency, I am referring to my Honourable friend, Mr. Sarma, who informed the House that the real reason at the bottom of this proposed legislation is that the Bengali youth is a very sentimental individual, that he always has a great love for his motherland, and that when he is transported from his own Province to distant places, he frets and fumes and his life becomes miserable: and, therefore, said Mr. Sarma, it serves as an additional penalty and that the measure was necessary to achieve that end. Now, may I very respectfully ask, which of these is the true reason which has led the Government to ask this House to extend the operation of this measure from Bengal to other Provinces in the country? Is it the first, is it the second, is it the third, or is it all three? Surely, by now, the Government must have made up their mind on this point. If they were to indicate their mind, we would be in a better position to deal with the case, but we cannot do that if the Government constantly keep changing from one ground to another, and thus confuse the real issue.

Sir, the 1930 Act was not the first Act of its kind: I understand that, that was preceded by another Act, namely, the Act of 1925. I have not had the opportunity of going through the provisions of that Act, but I am told by those who have read it that the provisions of the 1925 Act were substantially the same as the provisions of the later Act of 1930.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) vacated the Chair, which was then occupied by Mr. Deputy President (Mr. Abdul Matin Chandhury).]

Now if that is correct, it is obvious that it had taken the Bengal Government seven years to discover the necessity and the desirability of having their Act extended to other Provinces. It reminds me, Sir, of the case of a man who went up to a Magistrate presiding in a Court and with folded hands said: "Sir, I have got a complaint. Such and such a man has called me a 'rhinoceros'. I have been very seriously defamed, my character has been damaged, and I want to lodge this complaint". The Magistrate turned round and said: "Now, when did that man tell you you were a rhinoceros". He replied: "He said it four years ago". "Four years ago?", said the Magistrate—"and you come with your complaint today?" He replied: "Sir, the reason is that I saw a rhinoceros only yesterday." (Laughter.) Now, it seems to me that the Bengal Government should have discovered this the moment they started their repressive programme; I am advisedly using the word "repressive", I will presently come to the Honourable the Law Member's speech, I know he has got a strong prejudice against any Honourable Member using this expression (The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: "I have none"), but in the Honourable Member's speech I find it is so recorded; anyhow, I will come to that. Now, Sir, that being the case, if the grievance of the Bengal Government was genuine, I maintain that we should have had some indication of their difficulties much earlier and much longer, before they actually came and knocked at the door of this House.

I was referring to the speech of the Honourable the Law Member and I must congratulate him on a very able address which he made before this House—at the same time I am afraid I am not quite in agreement with some of his views on certain matters; I know I am at a disadvantage, as I am opposed by an eminent lawyer of the Law Member's position. Before taking up the law points, however, I wish to deal with a matter raised in the Honourable the Law Member's speech which I find contains a very unfair and gratuitous attack on the Congress, I would invite your attention, Sir, to a passage in his speech at page 568 of the Report of the Legislative Assembly, dated the 24th July, 1934. The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar said, in the course of his speech:

"Then, Sir, in considering the present Act, we need not go into the details of what exactly has been done by Bengal Council, what amount of repression is necessary in the situation which has arisen in Bengal."

Then, my friend, Mr. Neogy, interjected "and for all time". Then, Sir Nripendra Sircar goes on:

"and for what time and in what manner, that has been decided by the Bengal Council by men who are most competent to decide this matter. I daresay, if my Honourable friend, Mr. Neogy, had been in the Bengal Council,"

Mark the irony, mark the sarcasm:

"he would have tried to bring about such a change in their frame of mind that, by an overwhelming majority, the Bill would have been thrown out. But, as it is, the Bill has been passed."

He is giving this bitter pill to Mr. Neogy to swallow:

"When a Statute is said to be permanent, of course it is always subject to its being repealed."

That is nothing new. And mark the next sentence:

"And we have been assured that the time is not very far when some people, who are not in the Assembly yet, will get every repressive law repealed and that their permanency will disappear within a short time if that assurance is carried out."

Now, Sir, this is an attack upon those who are not yet in this House.

[Mr. B. R. Puri.]

The Honourable the Law Member could certainly afford to ridicule that political organisation, the Congress, which is threatening to come into this House and whose open and avowed programme is to repeal every repressive law. I am quite sure that neither the Honourable the Law Member nor his colleagues are afraid of what the Congress is threatening to do or rather undo. But, Sir, the test of the pudding lies in its eating. My answer to that part of the speech of the Honourable the Law Member is very simple. It must have been noticed by most of the Honourable Members that the Act, which we passed in the year 1932, is due to expire on the 5th April, 1935. That up to the first week of April, 1935, under the old Act of 1932, the Bengal Government have got power to transfer their detenus to any jail they like. May I respectfully ask the Government why are they betraying an indecent hurry in precipitating this measure before the present Assembly? Why could they not wait and face those very gentlemen whom they are trying to ridicule and belittle?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: May I point out that the question has already been answered, not by my humble self, but by the Honourable the Home Member, as to why they could not wait till the Budget Session or till February for passing this Act. It is because they must make arrangements for the removal of 1,500 men. In any case, if the law is passed now, it can be repealed next year, by those who are coming.

Mr. K. C. Neogy: Did we not hear from His Excellency the Viceroy's Message today that the next Assembly is to meet in January? Would there not have been sufficient time between January and April for the passing of such a measure?

Mr. B. R. Puri: That is exactly what I was going to say that the new Assembly is to come into being in the very first month of the next year, and there will be no dearth of time and opportunity for the Government to face the new Assembly with a measure of this kind. Evidently, there is some misgiving and fear in the mind of the Government. They know that the present Assembly is a docile body; they know we have been accommodating them in the past in every way; they know that in the present Assembly they can carry any measure,—good, bad or indifferent. Why cannot they wait for another few months? Why cannot they wait and face the new Assembly and then see the fate of their measure?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: You may not be there.

Mr. B. R. Puri: I may not be there, but you may not be there either. Nobody is certain what is going to happen tomorrow. Now, Sir, this brings me to one or two legal propositions which the Honourable the Law Member, in the course of his speech, was pleased to lay down. One was, and lest I might do injustice to the Honourable Member, wherever I will refer to him, I will quote chapter and verse.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: In my speech there is no rhyme, but only reason.

Mr. B. R. Puri: Some people's prose is poetry, and I am quite willing to concede that in the case of the Law Member. His prose is worse. I do not mean w-o-r-s-e.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL, 1934

Now, Sir, the Honourable the Law Member, on page 568, at the bottom of it, is reported to have said:

"Now, Sir, in considering this Bill I beg of this House to remove from its mind certain considerations which, in my humble submission, are not relevant at all on the sole issue which is being discussed, viz., whether suspects can be detained in jails outside Bengal."

Sir, you will be pleased to observe that to the Honourable the Law Member the only question that is relevant for purposes of the present debate is the one which he has stated and which I have just now read to the House. Everything else connected with this Bill, according to him, is irrelevant and this he assures us in all humble submission. Sir, any expression of opinion, coming as it does from a high authority like the Honourable the Law Member, is entitled to very great respect. But I venture to think that the view advanced by him is not sound. In the case of a lay Member, perhaps it might be excusable, but when such an expression comes from a Law Member, I think the only ground on which the Law Member's attitude can be explained is that probably the Honourable the Law Member thinks that we are all boobies on this side of the House and that we know no better, otherwise I cannot possibly admit that the absurdity of this contention is not fully known to the Honourable Member. Let me put it in a very crude form. Suppose the Honourable the Law Member received one morning a sealed book with a covering letter saying: "This book contains the provisions of an Act which we have passed, you are not supposed to open the book. We merely want you to extend the operation of this Act in such and such manner." Would the obliging nature of the Honourable the Law Member permit him to comply with the demand without looking into the Bill itself? Would he not like to know the antecedents of these people whom they want to be transported? Why have they been imprisoned? What offence they have committed? On what evidence has their guilt been proved? What is the procedure that has been followed? These would be pertinent and legitimate questions which every person or body or Legislature is bound to go into before lending any assistance asked. Before the Bengal Government could ask for our co-operation, we must satisfy our own conscience that they deserve co-operation, and, in determining that question, all these considerations which I have enumerated must be gone into critically, each and every one of them. We are not finding fault as to why the Bengal Council have passed this Act of theirs. They are welcome to do it. They have got the power to pass it and they have done it. We are not finding fault with them in any way. It is they who want our assistance, and, before we do that, are we not entitled to know that it is a case which deserves our assistance. Let me put it in another homely form. Suppose a Government official were to come to you and say: "Here is a man whom I have awarded 20 stripes. That is the limit of my power, and I cannot exceed it." The man, however, deserves more, and I want you to sanction additional ten stripes." Would you not go into the whole question? Would you not ascertain from him what has this man done? Under these circumstances, could it be urged that the contention of the Law Member is sound? I submit it is not. That may be the sole desire or the sole object which the Government are trying to achieve, but that is not the sole issue before us. Before we come to decide that issue finally, we have to go into all the questions I have set out above. We would not be discharging our duties properly if we did not do so.

[Mr. B. R. Puri.]

The next point urged by my Honourable friend—I am still referring to the Honourable the Law Member—was that it was a mistake to call a measure, such as the present, a “repressive” measure. He seems to have got a strong prejudice against its being called “repressive”. He quoted the authority of a Judge who said that the use of strong and vituperative epithets does not improve the situation. The Honourable the Law Member, however, did not disclose the name of the learned Judge nor the occasion on which the said observation by the unknown authority was made.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That occasion was a question of negligence and gross negligence and Chief Justice Denman said that the situation is not improved by adding the vituperative epithet “gross” to negligence.

Mr. B. R. Puri : I must thank the Honourable Member for this information which comes in instalments.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : But you did not apply for this before.

Mr. B. R. Puri : However, I am very grateful for this information. Whatever may be the view of that celebrated authority let us revert to the question before us. According to the Honourable the Law Member, every law is “repressive”. The penal provisions for offences like murder and dacoity are “repressive”. According to him, even the penalties provided under the Motor Act are “repressive”. He says that we do not improve the position by condemning this measure by calling it “repressive”, because he says that this is no more a repressive measure than any other penal provision taken out of the Indian Penal Code or out of any of the minor Acts. This is a proposition, Sir, which I contest. I submit that the exposition of the law by the Law Member relating to Habeas Corpus was very exhaustive, but I wish that he had taken a little trouble for the guidance of this House to lay down the definition of the word “repressive”. He has, however, endeavoured to describe it, and I have given you, Sir, his description of the word “repressive”. Now, Sir, I will risk a counter description leaving the House to choose whichever is sound. I venture to submit that all offences fall in one category or the other, they are divisible into two classes, the one includes the offences which are of normal character and which have been and will be committed in all countries, in all climes, by all classes of people, namely, murders, dacoities and such like offences.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : This is also murder.

Mr. B. R. Puri : I hope the Honourable Member will kindly wait and listen. There is another class of offences which are periodical, which are seasonal and there are special reasons, circumstances and causes which give rise to them. They may be of political character, they may be of non-political character, they come and go like a wave of crime which passes through the country. They are not perennial manifestations, they occasionally come and pass away. There are special causes which cause rise to them and those causes have to be tackled in order to uproot them. Exactly parallel of it is the case of ordinary diseases to which we, as human beings, are subject, as distinguished from epidemics like cholera and plague, and so on. I submit that “terrorism” which no doubt includes murders as the Honourable the Law Member reminded me...

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a crime at all? We are dealing only with suspects and not actual offenders.

Mr. B. R. Puri : Undoubtedly we are dealing only with suspects. I take it that the Honourable the Law Member is alluding to certain murders of a political character which have been committed in Bengal. I submit that terrorism is not a phenomenon of a normal character, it is a passing phase, it all depends how long this crime lasts and that depends upon the methods and the remedies that Government employ to eradicate it. That is a separate matter altogether. But it is not of a permanent character. It is abnormal, it is extraordinary. I am willing to concede that on all abnormal occasions, whether it be with regard to crime or whether it be with regard to disease, exceptional measures are needed. These measures must in their nature be more stringent and more severe and it is such measures that are called “repressive” measures. I would ask the Honourable the Law Member to consider my description of what a repressive measure is, which, I trust, is neither extravagant nor misleading. The Government are providing punishments for acts which are no offences under the ordinary law of the land—suspicion, a mere suspicion, though I know that for the sake of ceremony they have added the word “reasonable” to it and that is just to give it a legal gloss. Otherwise, we know what it practically means. If you are the judge of that reasonableness, then a bare suspicion is good enough from your point of view. Any man, no matter what his position in society may be, could be arrested and put into jail for an indefinite period, with certain ceremonies which have to take place periodically. And I say that if this is not repressive law, then the word had better be removed from the English language. I will ask my Honourable friend, the Law Member, to indicate what other law could more appropriately be put into that category which he is pleased to regard as repressive.

Sir, this brings me to a very interesting conversation which I once heard between two Nominated Members. One Nominated Member belonged to the Bengal Legislative Council and the other happened to be one of our own Honourable colleagues. I do not know why they permitted me to listen to such a conversation. Says the Honourable Member of this House to the other, “We started somewhat shakily, but look at the support we have given to Government throughout our life. We have come to Government’s rescue, we have passed every measure irrespective of its nature or merits, and I can boldly assert that we have rendered great service to Government”. He was, therefore, hoping that these services would be duly and adequately recognised. In answer to this, the Nominated Member of the Bengal Legislative Council turned round and said: “What are your achievements? Look at our achievements. We have helped Government by a majority of 80 against 20”,—which is the boast of the Treasury Benches,—“we have passed a measure, whereunder people can be put into jail without any trial. Is your achievement greater, or ours?” The Assembly Member had to admit that, in the present state of modern civilisation, it was no doubt a great achievement. So the Bengal Member said: “Not to speak of the searches and forfeitures of property and the infliction of fines which could be recovered from the parents and guardians, these are only bye-products, the main thing is that you can catch hold of any man whom the Government do not like, put him in jail, and he has no redress". The Assembly Member rejoined and said: "Yes, but don't forget we came to your rescue. That beautiful Bill of yours, the operation of which was circumscribed within a very limited area,—look to what extent we have extended it". I listened to all this, and I did not know whether to congratulate the one or the other. Finally, they turned round to me and asked me what I thought of all that. I said: "Well, if you will permit me, it reminded me of a little anecdote. Two little boys were playing together, and one of them boastfully said to the other: 'Do you know we have bought a hen?' The other boy said: 'Oh, really? What about it?' He said, 'It laid five eggs yesterday!' 'Well', said the other, 'that's nothing; my father laid a foundation stone the day before! So, is your performance greater, or ours?'"

[Mr. B. R. Puri.]

Sir, here is an opportunity for this House of redeeming its past inactivities. We know Government have had very long innings so far as this Assembly is concerned. They have been batting and we have been fielding. We have dropped so many catches that each and every one of the Government bats has proved a Bradman for us. Sir, here is the last opportunity, and I beg my Honourable colleagues here in this House to look into the merits of this Bill. Let them put their hands to their breasts and ask themselves the question, is this a measure which is consonant with the elementary rules of justice? I am not talking of British justice, but is it based on the universal rules of justice? Can there be any justification in putting a man in restraint, against whom nothing has been judicially proved, and that for an indefinite period? The original Bill is bad enough, and let us not, I submit, make it worse by extending its operation.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar (East Punjab : Sikh) : Sir, I am rather in an unfortunate position, because I have risen to speak after two fountains of wisdom have spoken. It is admitted on all hands that terrorism is a curse, that it is very deep-rooted, and that there is no greater enemy to the peace and prosperity of this country than terrorism. My friend, Mr. Puri, has gone further and established quite correctly that it is more like an epidemic than an ordinary disease. Surely, in exceptional circumstances and for such exceptional diseases, very exceptional measures are called for. It is admitted that it is worse than communism, and you find that very drastic kinds of legislation have been passed in different countries to meet communism; and India needs a very exceptional legislative measure to meet this bigger enemy, namely, terrorism. Having been admitted that it is an epidemic, it must be admitted that prevention is better than cure. It is not wise, it is not advisable, that we should allow the epidemic to flourish and destroy thousands and thousands of lives before we deal with it. It is much more advantageous and in the public interest and for the welfare of our people that we should try preventive measures rather than curative ones. People outside Bengal are only aware of this terrorism from what appears in the papers. But terrorism is in fact much more deep-rooted than we on our side are aware. From the pace at which it is flourishing, from the fact that it has been able to defy the police and the C. I. D. so long, it is apparent that it has gone very very deep indeed, and ordinary remedies will not provide a sufficient stimulus for the executive to be able to stop it. I had for a long time thought that perhaps terrorism is due to the unemployment among the educated youths, to the very limited openings for the display of their energies and intelligence and the desire for the service of their country, and that if enough means are found to keep them occupied in some business or some occupation or in some profession or service, the time at their leisure, which is now utilised for destructive purposes, may be utilised for more advantageous and progressive purposes in this country. But more and more you know about it and learn about it, you find that that impression which exists in my mind and in the mind of many other people does not stand the scrutiny of facts. We find that very well-to-do and very prosperous people, who are neither hunters for jobs nor in want of employment or occupation, but whose families are well settled down, for some mysterious reason or other take to this kind of terrorism.....

Mr. B. Das : Have you got any inner knowledge of it?

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : My friend, Mr. B. Das, is perhaps more acquainted with terrorism, and that is why he puts that question to me. We in Northern India are comparatively spared from the misfortunes of terrorism than people nearer Bengal. But, recently, from unofficial sources it came to my knowledge that in colleges and schools even in Northern India people who are found to be nationally minded students in colleges, somehow mysteriously find this terrorist literature lying on their beds or in their rooms unsolicited, and it comes from channels of which they have no knowledge. I was surprised to hear how these things happened. But I was convinced by the experience of somebody who himself was in that college that because he read a few books on literature which tended to preach socialism and democracy.....

Mr. B. Das : Socialism is not terrorism.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Just hear me : have some patience. That because his ideas coincided with modern progressive thought of socialism in the west, on some days when he returned from his walks or rounds he found thrown through the window in his room literature on terrorism, and that he could never imagine who threw it or how it came there and how those people came to know that his ideas were moving from conservatism to socialism and thereafter sympathetic to terrorism. Further, I learn that persons from Bengal in different guises living in most aristocratic hotels, dodging the C. I. D. and the police all the way, have been able under disguised forms to come in contact with people who had ideas of socialism. If really these things are a fact and Government are better fitted through their usual agencies to know about them, and then, if the executive is satisfied that these things do happen and that terrorism is so deep as I have described it, surely it is our duty to leave in the hands of the executive to adopt such measures as they consider absolutely necessary for the prevention of this disease rather than for its cure. The interests of India are at stake. We see every day how drastic measures are adopted by different countries for meeting such drastic diseases, and it is idle to deny that we should deal likewise. We saw recently what happened in Germany and what a wonderful testimonial came to the head of the executive from the greatest patriot, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, the President of the Republic, for dealing in such a speedy manner with a disease which threaten Germany and the German nation. We cannot play with the safety of this country and the peoples of India. We must deal, as sound administrators, with problems of this sort and we can quite well leave the administration of these drastic legislative measures in the hands of one who in his own province had always acted in a straightforward and honest manner in the administration. If he had found that the magistracy or police under him was corrupt, he admitted it in the Council and stopped it by taking executive measures and dispensing with the services of those whom he found unfit to discharge their duties. I feel, therefore, that Government should be fully empowered to meet with this terrorism with our co-operation and support.

[Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar.]

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : But how do you associate the detenus with the commission of these crimes ?

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : My dear friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, asks how I connect them. The Government agency can be trusted to place such evidence as lies in their power before the executive and the officials of the Government will certainly sift down that evidence. I feel and I recognise that it is very hard to put a person in detention without giving him a chance to prove his innocence before a Court of law, but that is the ordinary way of dealing with ordinary diseases and ordinary troubles. For epidemics sometimes we have to give an injection to a person however unwilling he may be, in order to prevent the epidemic spreading. It gives him pain, it gives him trouble, it is unwelcome to him ; but in the interests of society, in the interests of his people and his country we have to adopt these measures ; and, in the circumstances I support this motion, for to me the interests of India and her people are far greater than the pleasure of supporting an abstract principle.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I understand that my Honourable friend, Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar, is no longer a Member of the Nationalist Party. That is what I heard just now, because if he spoke as a supporter of Government, he ought to have taken his seat.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : I supported as an elected Member.

Mr. B. Das : But you did not support the measure as a member of the Nationalist Party, and if my friend wanted to support the measure, he ought to have taken his seat along with those who generally support Government, and that would have shown him in his true colours.

Now, Sir, not being a lawyer, I am not going to deal with my Honourable friend, the Law Member, with whom my friend, Mr. Puri, has dealt so thoroughly and so ably ; and there are also several legal giants who will deal with the Law Member when he will rise to address the House again, but I will refer to the two speeches that were delivered by the two Members of the Government, the outgoing and the incoming Home Members. Sir, I found a change in the speech of Sir Harry Haig, and I also welcome the very sympathetic manner of delivery of the speech of my Honourable friend, Sir Henry Craik. Both utilised the occasions to take the House into their confidence a little, which we have not been accustomed to during the past 11 years of my association with this House. I am grateful to both these gentlemen for taking us into their confidence, for telling us that they are human beings, that they have got humanising thoughts or they are actuated by similar feelings as we are on this side of the House, and that they take pains before they come to decisions over cases relating to detenus and anarchists. Sir Harry Haig pointed out that the Bengal Government is exploring conditions and that terrorist crimes would cease in Bengal. Sir, three conditions were given, and the first of them was that the Government were rousing "public opinion". I know how public opinion is being roused in Bengal, how fathers and mothers are being punished for the alleged crimes of their sons and daughters !! Then, there is "unemployment", and the Government of India are assisting the Government of Bengal to remove unemployment. The Government of India, Sir, as everybody knows, are bankrupts today, and every Provincial Government is also a bankrupt today.....

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : No, not Madras.

Mr. B. Das : I apologise to my friend. Madras excels in everything, and I know that Madras is prosperous. But, Sir, every Finance Member has got his own pet theories. The outgoing Finance Member started the hare and the Provincial Governments are hunting after it, he started the question of economic planning and economic survey. So nothing will come out of it, and the Bengali youth for whom my friend, Mr. Mitra, pleaded so much will not find employment through the Economic Boards and Economic Surveys of the Bengal Government or of the Government of India.

[At this stage, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) resumed the Chair.]

Then, Sir, much has been said of "Education". I do not think that my diagnosis of the causes of terrorist crimes and terrorist movements tallies with the diagnosis which the Government have arrived at and which they often give out on the floor of the House. Of course, they know the real causes, but they would not like to tell us here what are those causes. How is it that in 1927-28 and 1928-29 the terrorist crimes were in abeyance ? How is it that when Mahatma Gandhi issued his appeal to the youth of Bengal particularly—nobody knows who those terrorist youths are,—but when he issued his appeal not to have recourse to terrorist methods but to keep silent till the national leaders of the country settled with the Government about the future Constitution of India, there was a drop in terrorist activities in Bengal ? And everybody knows it, and I am sure the Honourable the Home Member will recognise it, that there was certainly a marked decline in terrorist crime after that appeal of Mahatma Gandhi,—in fact there was no crime at all. But what happened in 1931 ? Mahatma Gandhi went to England as the sole Deputy of the Congress. He was being fooled by the Sankeys and others in the Round Table Conference. The Government of India at that time went on manufacturing instruments of horror like the Chittagong Ordinances and various other Ordinances. And what happened ? When Mahatma Gandhi landed in Bombay, within two days he was arrested. At that very moment he telegraphed to the Viceroy requesting for an interview,—I shall not mention the name of the Viceroy, but there was no response. The other day, in reply to a question relating to Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose, it was pointed out that both Messrs. Subhash Chandra Bose and Sarat Chandra Bose have some influence over the youths of Bengal. I do not think, Sir, they have any influence over those youths who are actuated with terrorist impulses. But yet the Government of Bengal did incarcerate Mr. Subhash Chandra Bose and Mr. Sarat Chandra Bose. Even that did not accentuate the feelings in Bengal, but when Mahatma Gandhi was incarcerated in January, 1932, these so-called anarchists and youths of Bengal knew that their leaders could not succeed in persuading the Government to accept the constitutional demands made by the country.

[Mr. B. Das.]

I do not know if I should congratulate my Honourable friend, Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar, on the serious charges that he laid against the students of the Punjab and the U. P., that they are all turning socialists and that they read books on Lenin, Carl Max sent by the Third Internationale through secret channels to the Punjab and U. P. students to read,—but so far as the youths of Bengal are concerned, I know they are intellectual, and they are ever with their great ambition to free their nation, and these youths lost all their faith in reconciliation, in negotiations between the national leaders whom they often hate,—they have expressed opinions of hatred to people who come and hobnob with the Treasury Benches and with the Government of India or with the Governors or the Viceroy,—these youths look upon these leaders with contempt and hatred,—they lost all their faith. Therefore, the real cause of the recrudescence of terrorist crime in Bengal is not what Sir Harry Haig depicted or what the Government of India want the country to believe, but the real causes are altogether different. If a few youths have got anarchist tendencies today, they have become desperate, but why have they become desperate? The real cause is that the Government of India, when the country was in a mood to respond, to reconcile to the conditions after the Gandhi-Irwin Pact,—I don't blame my Honourable friend, Sir Henry Craik, who was then in the Punjab Government,—the Government of India went on manufacturing, not only Ordinances, but instruments that will go against the very spirit of Gandhi-Irwin Pact. Thereafter, if the Bengal Government thought that they could stop the people from holding anarchist and terrorist views by the application of the Bengal Ordinance Act, or even if this House gives sanction that there should be a permanent legislation to stop these crimes, then I say Government are entirely mistaken in their diagnosis of the situation. If Government are made of iron, then I can believe that a machine has no soul and that a machine does not appreciate the spirit of the nation and the feeling of the youths. But, after all, the Government Members are human beings. I do not think that in their heart of hearts, or when they are outside this Chamber, they believe in the stories that they trot out on the floor of this House.

As I said at the beginning of my speech, I welcome the very sympathetic speech of the Honourable the Home Member in replying on the debate on the repeal of Regulation III which my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, moved. That gives me hope. Today, the Congress, which represents the greatest and the biggest political party in India, is willing to make peace with the Government. It has decided to come into the Legislatures. Government should follow it up by dropping all those feelings of prejudice that certain Members of Government bore against the Gandhi-Irwin Pact. To continue to bear those feelings of prejudice is not the way to reconcile two great nations, Britain and India. The Congress is willing today to co-operate, and they have told the world that they are coming into the Legislatures to co-operate, but it should be honourable co-operation. But the interpretation by my Honourable friend, an eminent lawyer like Mr. Puri, of the speech of the Honourable the Law Member proves that the Government are afraid that when the Congress comes in they will not get the least chance to pass such repressive measures easily. They feared that the Federal Government will put powers into the hands of the people, but no Government Member will say that today, because they know that the Federation is receding, but they think that power is going to the provinces, to the people, and they try to hoodwink us by saying that when you get your provincial autonomy you will yourself need these powers. Certainly not. We do not need these lawless and drastic powers. But if I rose to speak on this occasion, it was because I wanted to make an appeal to the present Home Member. I want him to start with a new leaf. He must have had talks with the Governor of the Punjab,—the Gandhi-Emerson talks over which the whole of India rejoiced. Sir Herbert Emerson—at the time he was Mr. Emerson,—the Gandhi-Emerson talks were negotiated with good feeling and goodwill on both sides. Have Government the same goodwill today to the people of India? No. They do not have it. Otherwise, they would not have got behind and broken the spirit of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact and incarcerated Mahatma Gandhi at Yerrawada jail in 1932. The leaders of the Congress have assured Government that they are willing to reconcile themselves to the present condition of things. Are the present Government going to irritate them? That reminds me of the speech of Mr. Anklesaria at the second stage of this debate. He had the cheek, he had the insolence to call Mahatma Gandhi an apostle of all subversive movements in India. Who sheltered these Parsis in India twelve hundred years ago when they were driven away for their religion from their homes in Persia? It was the forefathers of Mahatma Gandhi that allowed them to settle down on the shores of Bombay.

Mr. H. P. Mody : Why do you condemn all Parsis?

Mr. B. Das : I am not condemning all Parsis, Mr. Mody. I hope that Mr. Mody when he returns to Bombay will ask his community of 50,000 Parsis in India to say that Mr. Anklesaria does not represent anybody else but himself in calling Mahatma Gandhi the apostle of all subversive movements. I know what Mr. Anklesaria is angling for. He is angling with the Sanatanists or the Satanists as somebody told me....

Pandit Satyendra Nath Sen (Presidency Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : But may I remind my Honourable friend that Mr. Gandhi is very anxious to call himself a foremost member of that community which my Honourable friend is pleased to describe as Satanist! I think my Honourable friend may have also read in this morning's papers that Mr. Satyamurti is fondly inviting the so-called Satanists to join the Congress Party to which my Honourable friend belongs.

Mr. B. Das : I was merely repeating a joke. My Honourable friend must have a sense of humour to take a joke as a joke. Now, Sir, that Parsi gentleman is trying to angle with the Sanatanists of Guzerat and get their votes, because the Sanatanists, of whom Pandit Sen is one, as we all just now found out,—the Sanatanists are out for the head of Mahatma Gandhi, and, therefore, Mr. Anklesaria had the audacity to say those things which no man would have the courage to repeat outside the floor of this House.

[Mr. B. Das.]

Mr. H. P. Mody : He was also joking.

Mr. B. Das : But Mr. Anklesaria was joking too much, as he will find it to his cost. Mr. Anklesaria had the audacity to say not only that, but he said that in some way Mahatmaji is responsible for the recrudescence of terrorist crimes in India. I do not know how he got this. I know in Guzerat there are no terrorist crimes, though there is in Maharashtra—there was, not at present. But to connect up Mahatmaji as the inspirer of terrorist crimes in Bengal is sheer nonsense. And I have said that, if there is a revival of anarchism in Bengal, it is due to the incarceration of Mahatma Gandhi, and that proves that Mr. Anklesaria's arguments are all wrong.

Sir, my Honourable friend, Mr. Mitra, spoke about his talk with the Deputy Inspector General of Police in Bengal, the late Mr. Lowman ; after his own incarceration in 1924 or 1925, I think it was 1925, and he was told that it was because the Government of Bengal were afraid lest the leaders of the non-co-operation movement might incite the masses—for what?—for the legitimate demand of Swaraj. How am I to know that these 1,500 or 1,600 detenus that the Bengal Government has got, some of them or most of them are not real national leaders? They think differently from friends like Sir Satya Charan Mukherjee or Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi. I hope that my friend, Mr. Puri, did not have Sir Satya Charan Mukherjee in mind when he was giving that story this afternoon. Government know that there are people who believe in the Civil Disobedience Movement. There are people who believe in the non-violent non-co-operation movement, and there are people who believe in the full dominion status movement, but there are loyalists who would go to any extent. They wait in the ante rooms of the Government officials whether at Simla or at Calcutta or Darjeeling. When they talk to high officials, they say that they are quite satisfied with the present order of things until their life passes away, and thereafter it does not matter what comes to India. This is a very important point that Mr. Mitra raised, and let me assure the Honourable the Home Member that the nationalist leaders all over India, whether they are Congressmen, progressives or nationalists, think that these weapons of repression are all designed to suppress the nationalist movement—the demand for self-government—Dominion Status. It may not be full Dominion Status as some of us are now willing to accept. Sir, I live on the border line of Bengal. I was deeply pained to hear the statement from my Honourable friend, Sirdar Harbans Singh, that the rich men's sons from Bengal travel to the Punjab and get hold of these Sikh youths and teach them anarchist and terrorist crimes. My friend may not have visited Bengal, but I know the Bengali youth and I know the Bengali gentlemen and I am in touch with the Bengali press, and I do not think that Bengal has today that large wealth and that the sons of wealthy men like the Honourable the Law Member, who travel like Rajas and princes, teach the youth of the Punjab terrorist and anarchist crimes.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : My son very often goes to Lahore.

Mr. B. R. Puri : Why don't you visit Lahore once?

Mr. B. Das : When the Law Member's son visits Lahore, it must be some professional work and nobody can believe that the son of the Honourable the Law Member, who has accepted the Law Membership in the present Government, can have any sympathy with the terrorist or anarchist crimes. I want the Government to change their attitude towards the people of this country. The more we try to reconcile ourselves to things, the more they become terrorisers and oppressors. They so embitter feelings that I do not know when we sit on these Benches in the next Assembly there will be any friendly relations between this side and that side of the House. I want to know whether it is the policy of the Government of India to re-echo the die-hard sentiments in England or whether it is their policy to reconcile the feelings of all sections in India and to create a good atmosphere. If that be so, the Home Member ought to withdraw this Bill and ought not to give the Bengal Government that permanent lease, so that the officers in Bengal can go on terrorising the people. I am grateful to my friend, Mr. Mitra, for giving certain personal experiences. I also ask the Honourable the Home Member this question. We are all human beings, whether some are Members of the Government or not. I will ask him to find out from 1921 up to this date how many Bengal civilians and police officers have run away from Bengal and have not returned to Bengal. There was one Mr. Donovan, a very friendly Member of this House, the patron of my friend, Sir Satya Charan Mukherjee. He left Bengal and did not want to come back.

Rai Bahadur Sir Satya Charan Mukherjee (Nominated Non-Official) : Mr. Donovan did not fly from Bengal on account of the terrorist movement. He resigned the service on account of certain personal reasons.

Mr. B. Das : My friend has repeated the story from the Whip of Calcutta. My friend gets his inspiration from the Englishman which is now defunct. Mr. Donovan was made a Commissioner, but he did not have the courage to remain. The officials in Bengal leave the country and are not returning, because they are afraid of their own handiwork—the seething discontent they have created. I was told that a Chief Justice of the Bengal High Court did not take the train from Calcutta, but took a motor car and took the train from some station outside Calcutta.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : That was done by Mahatma Gandhi who got down at Belur. The Chief Justice went from Howrah.

Mr. B. Das : Mahatma Gandhi got down at a wayside station, because people on account of the love for him overcrowded the stations. He wanted to avoid over-crowding in stations; but what happened to that Chief Justice? I am not giving these instances in any vindictive spirit. I am not in favour of the terrorist movement. But the fact is there that overjealous Government officers have so terrorised the people of Bengal that Bengal has no peace. I want the Government to revise their policy in time. If they do not do that, they will lose India. Whether they lose it today or tomorrow, they will lose India if they continue in their mad orgies and mad policy of continuing to govern India by repressive laws. Sir, I oppose the Bill.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I will not take more than a few minutes while I speak on this motion. I do not want to go into the merits of this Bill. I only wish to explain the position I am bound to take at the third reading stage when the motion is put to the vote. My Honourable Leader, Sir Abdur Rahim, has made it clear that he would not oppose this Bill if the Government agreed to limit the period to three years, but in case the Government were not prepared to accept it, we on this side of the House were not prepared to disfigure the Statute-book by a permanent legislation of this kind. The Government have not accepted the period of three years and we have no alternative but to record our protest by going into the lobby against the measure.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, as I observed in making my motion this morning, I had not the advantage of hearing the three days' debate which took place on this Bill, but I did devote many hours yesterday to reading those debates with considerable care. I felt, Sir, after reading them, that practically everything that could be said about this Bill, either for or against, had been said already, and that was why I refrained from making any speech on the motion for the third reading. After listening to this afternoon's debate, I confess that, though my memory is impaired as the effects of old age and hard work, I cannot recall or can hardly recall a single thing that has been said this afternoon that has not been said at some stage or other of the earlier debates, possibly in different language or phraseology, but still, in substance, the arguments put forward to have have all, or very nearly all, been put forward at an earlier stage. Therefore, in replying, I hope the House will forgive me if I myself am compelled to use arguments in refutation of those used in speeches made by some of my Honourable friends this afternoon which have themselves been made or used by previous speakers on this side.

Sir, the first point made by my Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad,—who opened the opposition to the third reading,—was that there was no justification for making this supplementary Act one of a permanent nature. Now, that point was very fully dealt with in the speech of my predecessor, Sir Harry Haig, in dealing with the first of the two amendments, where he made it quite clear that the necessity for permanence was justified by our previous experience of the Acts enforced for short terms, then allowed to lapse and then afterwards revived. He reminded the House that when the Defence of India Act lapsed at the end of the War in 1919 or 1920, it only took a year or two for the terrorist movement to revive. Within a year or two of the lapsing of the Defence of India Act, there was a very serious recrudescence of the movement and that became so serious that a few years later in 1924 it was necessary for the Governor General to promulgate Ordinances re-imposing the powers granted by the Defence of India Act, and these subsequently took the form of legislation by the Bengal Council. Then, again, he explained that practically all the detenus were let out in 1928 and that the special powers were a little later allowed to lapse. They lapsed actually in 1930, I think it was in the beginning of 1930, and within a month or two we had that terrible outrage at Chittagong to which allusion has been made in more than one speech this afternoon. Then, again, after that and after other outrages of the same kind, the special powers had to be taken again. Now they are due to lapse if this Bill is not passed, at any rate some of them are due to lapse in 1935. As Sir Harry Haig pointed out, all experience shows that it was a mistake to let the special powers lapse; that it encouraged the terrorists, and that it directly contributed to the revival of the terrorist movement after it had once been got fairly well under control. That, Sir, is the justification for making the powers conferred by this Bill of a permanent nature; and, as my Honourable friend, Mr. J. M. Chatarji, the official Member from Bengal, and I may say as several other speakers pointed out, making the powers permanent does not mean that this Act, as it will become I hope, will necessarily remain on the Statute-book for ever. It merely means that so long as the terrorist danger is an immanent one, this very valuable weapon will be available for use. When the movement is finally brought under control, there is no reason why this Act should not be repealed; it is only permanent in the sense that we want it to be continually available so long as the danger, from which it is designed to protect us, is present.

My Honourable friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad, went on to attack the faulty education system in Bengal. On that subject I cannot, of course, follow him—I am aware that he is a very eminent authority on education, especially higher education, which I cannot claim to be—I cannot follow him or refute in detail his attack on the Bengal system, because I have no personal knowledge of it, but I would remind him of a point which was brought out in the debate, that that particular point—the reformation of the system of education, and especially of higher education, in Bengal, with special reference to its effect on the recruitment of young men to the terrorist movement,—is engaging the anxious attention of the Bengal Government. I entirely appreciate my Honourable friend's point and I merely wish to recall now that it has been explained by one of the Government speakers, I think, Sir Harry Haig, himself, that that is a subject to which the Bengal Government are devoting their constant attention. My Honourable friend also alluded to other causes or alleged causes that contributed to bringing in recruits to the terrorist movement—both the economic situation, with its reactions on employment, and so on, and other grievances, real or imaginary, not so much, I think, against Government as against the present organization of society. Now, my Honourable friend's point was that those wider causes were the things which Government had to tackle and that the terrorist movement would never be brought to an end by what he called “repressive” measures alone. Well, there, of course, I am entirely in agreement with him; and I think,—and I thought when I read the debate—that the attitude of Government on that point had been made quite clear by my predecessor, Sir Harry Haig. It is not our attitude that you could by these special laws alone end and finally crush the terrorist movement. I can admit that the causes are deeper than that and that these social phenomena to which my Honourable friend has alluded do require the most careful examination and that it should not be beyond the wit of man to devise, I hope in no very long process of time, some successful solution of those difficulties.

Now, Sir, I pass from my friend, Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad's speech and take up the points made by the next speaker, Mr. S. C. Sen. He cast doubts on the suggestion that the accommodation in the Bengal camps and jails was so congested that it was impossible for the Bengal Government to receive the 500 or so detenus who are now confined at Deoli. I should point out that it is not so much a question of congestion in accommodation in Bengal jails or in Bengal detention camps, but of the danger, which has been proved to be no idle chimera, but a real danger, that the more active and leading of these men have, if detained in Bengal, opportunities of communicating with their friends and associates outside and even of actually hatching fresh conspiracies, and that danger is greatly minimised by their detention in a more remote and inaccessible place like Deoli.

[Sir Henry Craik.]

Mr. K. C. Neogy : That danger was not mentioned in the Bengal Legislative Council by the Home Member. That was Mr. Sen's point.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : The Bengal Home Member said change of mentality.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Effect on their mentality.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Mr. Sen went on to speak, and his accuracy was challenged not by me so much, but by my Honourable colleague, the Law Member, regarding the dates and the sequence of events up to the time of the Chittagong outrage. I am sorry that I am unable to deal with that part of his speech, but he did conclude by a reference to the Rowlatt Act and he asked the House to draw the inference from the fact that Government had never used the procedure of inquiry provided by that Act, that Government were afraid to lay these cases before the kind of tribunal which that Act proposed to set up, namely, I think, two judicial officers and one non-official. Now, that is an entirely misleading inference. My recollection is that there was no such fear that an impartial inquiry by a tribunal of that sort would expose the fallacy of the charges brought against these suspects. It was not that, but it was the general unpopularity excited by the Rowlatt Act as a whole that prevented the Government from ever making use of that Act. In fact, I think, no part of it was ever brought into operation, and it was repealed some three or four years after it was passed. That, however, is ancient history.

Then, Sir, I come to my friend, Mr. S. C. Mitra, the champion of the detenus in this House, and no doubt outside. He put to me several points about the conditions in the Deoli Camp and suggested that interviews were repeatedly refused, that relations of the detenus were not informed of their relatives' health, that their letters remained unanswered, and so forth. He read certain letters, or extracts from one or two letters, which he produced in support of those allegations. I must admit that the extracts he read did not particularly impress me as corroborating all that he said in his speech. In any case, I hardly think that a great deal of weight can be attached to ex-parte and interested statements of the kind likely to be contained in the letters of such correspondents.

Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury (Bengal : Landholders) : Government are also following ex-parte procedure.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Government do, at any rate, try to do their best to ensure that the conditions at these camps are not unduly rigorous and a very elaborate set of rules has been drawn up by the Home Department.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : These letters were not sent to me to be read out here. I only made use of them in order to mention specific dates. Government are at liberty to contradict them instead of making the allegation that they are not accurate and are written in an exaggerated form.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I did not say that they were inaccurate, but only that, to my mind, they did not carry very much weight. But in dealing with allegations of this sort that in Government institutions—I am not talking of detention camps, but any kind of institution—allegations that abuses exist and that subordinates ill-treat the people committed to their charge, and so on, I am faced with a very familiar difficulty that heads of Departments are frequently faced with. We draw up an elaborate code of rules and we do our best to see that those rules are enforced. Allegations are brought against us that the rules are not, in fact, observed and that the abuses go on. That sort of allegation is obviously extraordinarily difficult to contradict or refute on the spur of the moment. The Honourable Member will admit that I am naturally not in a position to say that these abuses about which he complains do not take place, because the accusation is made across the floor of the House and obviously I cannot telephone to Deoli to ascertain whether they are right or wrong. So, I hope the Honourable Member will appreciate my position which is this that Government do their very best to see that these abuses of which he complains do not take place.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I only asked for an inquiry and the Honourable Member says that he does not attach any importance to the documents I quoted from. There I do not agree with him. Why does he not attach importance to them especially when I have given their dates?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : All that I can say is that I will do my best to see that such abuses do not take place (Applause) and that I will make it my very early duty and take the first possible opportunity to follow the example of my predecessor, Sir Harry Haig, and visit the Deoli Camp myself and see that it is being properly conducted. I am not for a moment suggesting that it is not properly conducted, but I do recognise that it is a matter which has excited considerable amount of interest in the Honourable Member and those whom he represents, and I quite agree that it is one of the most important subjects committed to my charge. I propose to make myself acquainted with the conditions prevailing there as soon as I possibly can. At any rate, I only hope that the Honourable Member will wait before making other accusations until I have had an opportunity of looking into the state of affairs there myself. I would only like to remind him that in regard to the statement that interviews are repeatedly refused or rather, I think, he said that no attention is paid to an application for an interview.....

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I said that no reasons are given. I personally applied for interviews, and they were not only refused, but no reasons for refusal were given.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : All I can say is that the rules do quite clearly lay that the detenus are entitled to a certain number of interviews. I think it is once a fortnight. But the interviews are only allowed to people who are authorised to have them. That is to say, it is not open to anybody to walk up to the camp and say "I want to interview so and so". He must have a proper authorization which he has to obtain from the Bengal Government and it is possible that some persons who apply for an interview—I am only suggesting that this is a possible explanation of what the Honourable Member complains—do so without getting the correct authorisation.

[Sir Henry Craik.]

Mr. S. C. Mitra : I regularly applied first to the Commandant, and at his request, I applied to the Government of Bengal in my own case. I agreed to observe any condition that Government wanted to impose on me as regards the interview and yet the interview was not granted and no reasons were given.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Then, of course, that explanation does not fit the Honourable Member's case. But I suggest that it will fit certain other cases where delay has occurred in answering applications. The Honourable Member, I think, rather hinted at the possibility of there having been a hunger-strike or some such incident at Deoli and of the detenus being punished. All I can say is that the Home Department has heard nothing whatever of any such happening and I am quite certain that if anything of the kind had occurred, then we would have been immediately informed of it. I think I can safely assure the Honourable Member that that suggestion—I do not think he stated it as a fact, but merely as a surmise—that that surmise is in fact quite incorrect.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Honourable Member kindly enquire if there is any reason for prohibiting correspondence for a month and a half in the case of detenus?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : In certain cases where the detenu has misbehaved, the privilege of writing or receiving letters can be withdrawn as a punishment. But I do not believe for a moment that there has been any general withdrawal. Such a punishment may have been inflicted on certain individuals, but I think we should certainly have heard if there had been any general penalty of that kind inflicted.

Sir, I do not want to follow the Honourable Member, Mr. Mitra, into the latter part of his somewhat contentious speech, but I cannot allow to pass without challenge one remark he made which was, I think, supported by interruptions from certain other Honourable Members sitting in his part of the House. The Honourable Member stated as an accepted fact that certain communal riots were deliberately promoted by officers of Government. Now, Sir, that is a statement that I have heard made in other cases of communal riots, and it so happens that, in the course of my experience in India, which is now perhaps longer than most Members of this House, either European or Indian, I have had a good deal to do with communal differences. I have seen communal rioting on more than one occasion at first hand and I hope I will never see it again. But that sort of charge I have heard made repeatedly, that these communal differences are promoted either by individual officers of Government or by Government themselves as a deliberate policy. I should like to say here as emphatically as I can that a more wicked and malicious charge and one more utterly without foundation could not possibly be made. (Applause.) If there is one thing that British Government in India stands for, it is for unity between the various communities. (Hear, hear.) If there is one thing in this country that ensures that that unity is not broken more often than it is, it is the hand of the British Officer. That I know from my own personal experience. (Applause.) The House can take it from me that that experience has been a pretty grim one. A fantastic and unfounded charge like that cannot be allowed to go without being contradicted.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL, 1933

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does the Honourable Member expect those people who have witnessed things with their own eyes to believe what the Honourable Member says?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I have witnessed things as bad.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I have witnessed, and thousands of other people also have witnessed with their own eyes what happened in Dacca.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I still cannot accept the Honourable Member's statement. I deny that these communal differences are being fomented by Government.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Divide and rule is the policy.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Honourable Member publish the Neisen report with reference to Chittagong? It is a report made by an officer of Government with regard to certain things that happened there and the part that the police took in the riots in Chittagong in the name of carrying out searches. (Applause from certain Non-Official Members.) Let the Honourable Member accept this challenge and publish that report. The Honourable Member dare not do it.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : How does the Honourable Member know the contents of the report? Has he seen it? After all, this discussion is not relevant to the subject under discussion today.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : This point was referred to by one of the speakers today.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Yes, I have replied to that point, and I do not wish to waste the time of the House or discuss any more that particular incident of the debate which was irrelevant, a regrettable irrelevancy. But I did feel that I could not allow a statement of that kind to pass unchallenged.

Now, Sir, I pass with some relief to the speech of my old friend, Mr. Puri, who comes from my home town of Lahore, and I think the House is indebted to him for the delightful story about the rhinoceros which, I must say, was new to me and which I shall try to remember. I would like, if my Honourable friend will forgive me, to draw his attention to the fact that he announced in his opening words that he intended to be very brief, that he only took part in the debate in order that he might register his disapproval of the Bill and he then took 46 minutes by the clock in doing so! Perhaps the Honourable Member would forgive me if I in reply tell him a short story. Sir, it is known that Mr. Hoover, the late President of the United States, was a peculiarly laconic man, that he was very terse in his conversation. It was related of him on one occasion that on a Sunday morning when he was President of the United States, he went to the Church by himself and when he came back to the White House and sat down with his family to lunch, they said to him.

[Sir Henry Craik.]

"Well, what sort of service did you have? What was the sermon about?" His reply was: "Sin". His family again said: "Tell us something about it. What line did the preacher take about it?" His reply was "He was against it". Now, Sir, my Honourable friend was "against" the Bill, but what Mr. Hoover said in four words it took him 40 minutes to say.

An Honourable Member: It must have been Coolidge.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: I stand corrected. The Honourable Member challenged the Government to show the justification for banishing these detenus to Deoli. Now, that is a point which I have already dealt with and which was also dealt with by Sir Harry Haig and I need not go into it again. He also raised the point of what was the hurry in passing this Bill. That, again, Sir, was a point that was taken on the opening day of the debate on this Bill when the motion was made that the House should take the Bill into consideration. That very point was raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, by an interruption, and the reasons for taking this Bill this Session were explained to him across the floor of the House by Sir Harry Haig. I do not think I need repeat them as they will be within the recollection of the House. I need only say that it would be most awkward for the Government of Bengal if the Bill were to remain suspended in the air for another four or five months with its fate uncertain. The Government of Bengal would naturally be unable to decide what arrangements they would have to make in the contingency of the Bill being thrown out.

Finally, Sir, I come to the speech of my friend, Mr. Das, opposite, and I should like to acknowledge with grateful appreciation his kindly references to my own maiden speech in this Assembly a few days ago. I am grateful to the Honourable Member for the commendatory words he used about that speech. He assured us that the Congress was coming into the Legislature, I understand, with a view to co-operating with Government. I do not quite know what authority my Honourable friend has for making that statement, but I accept that from him and I hear it with pleasure.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar: He has got a ticket.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: I understand that he is quite certain of his ground in making that statement, no doubt just as certain as he was in making the assumption that he will be back in this House himself; and I certainly hope that in both assumptions he is correct. The co-operation offered, of course, will not be in the spirit of "Heads I win, tails you lose", but honest co-operation and genuine co-operation.

That, Sir, I think, is the only point in my Honourable friend's speech that I need refer to, because his speech, though interesting and refreshing, had really very little to do with the Bill.

Sir, we have now debated this comparatively simple measure for four days, and I think every possible angle and every possible aspect of the Bill has come under the most scrupulous and careful examination, and I do not think there really is anything more to be said either for or against the Bill. No one certainly can accuse this House of having scamped its task in dealing with this Bill. I hope, Sir, it will now proceed to put the crowning edifice on that task by passing the Bill.

THE BENGAL CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT SUPPLEMENTARY (EXTENDING) BILL, 1935

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty): The 5 P.M. question is:

"That the Bill to extend the operation of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment (Supplementary) Act, 1932, be passed."

The Assembly divided:

AYES—54.

Abdul Aziz, Khan Bahadur Mian.
Ahmad Nawaz Khan, Major Nawab.
Ali, Mr. Hamid A.
Bagla, Lala Rameshwar Prasad.
Bajpai, Mr. G. S.
Bhadrapur, Rao Bahadur Krishna Raddi B.
Bhore, The Honourable Sir Joseph.
Brij Kishore, Rai Bahadur Lala.
Buss, Mr. L. C.
Chatarji, Mr. J. M.
Craik, The Honourable Sir Henry.
Dalal, Dr. R. D.
Duguid, Mr. A.
Ghuznavi, Mr. A. H.
Grantham, Mr. S. G.
Grigg, The Honourable Sir James.
Harbans Singh Brar, Sirdar.
Hockenbult, Mr. F. W.
Hudson, Sir Leslie.
Ibrahim Ali Khan, Lieut. Nawab Muhammad.
James, Mr. F. E.
Jawahar Singh, Sardar Bahadur Sardar Sir.
Kamaluddin Ahmad, Shams-ul-Ulema Mr.
Lal Chand, Hony. Captain Rao Bahadur Chaudhri.
Lee, Mr. D. J. N.
Lindsay, Sir Darcy.
Lumby, Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R.

Metcalfe, Mr. H. A. F.
Morgan, Mr. G.
Muazzam Sahib Bahadur, Mr. Muhammad.
Mujumdar, Sardar G. N.
Mukherjee, Rai Bahadur Sir Satya Charan.
Noyce, The Honourable Sir Frank.
Pandit, Rao Bahadur S. R.
Perry, Mr. E. W.
Rafiuddin Ahmad, Khan Bahadur Maulvi.
Raisman, Mr. A. J.
Rajah, Rao Bahadur M. C.
Ramakrishna, Mr. V.
Rau, Mr. P. R.
Richards, Mr. W. J. C.
Row, Mr. K. Sanjiva.
Scott, Mr. J. Ramsay.
Scott, Mr. W. L.
Sher Muhammad Khan Gakhar, Captain.
Singh, Kumar Gupteshwar Prasad.
Singh, Mr. Pradyumna Prashad.
Sircar, The Honourable Sir Nripendra.
Spence, Mr. G. H.
Studd, Mr. E.
Talib Mehdi Khan, Nawab Major Malik.
Trivedi, Mr. C. M.
Zakaullah Khan, Khan Bahadur Abu Abdullah Muhammad.
Zyn-ud-din, Khan Bahadur Mir.

NOES—34.

Abdul Matin Chaudhury, Mr.
Abdur Rahim, Sir.
Aggarwal, Mr. Jagan Nath.
Azhar Ali, Mr. Muhammad.
Badi-uz-Zaman, Maulvi.
Bhuput Singh, Mr.
Das, Mr. B.
Dutt, Mr. Amar Nath.
Gunjal, Mr. N. R.
Jadhav, Mr. B. V.
Jog, Mr. S. G.
Lahiri Chaudhury, Mr. D. K.
Lalchand Navalrai, Mr.
Liladhar Chaudhury, Seth.
Maswood Ahmad, Mr. M.
Mitra, Mr. S. C.
Mody, Mr. H. P.

Mudaliar, Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami.
Murtuza Saheb Bahadur, Maulvi Sayyid.
Neogy, Mr. K. C.
Pandian, Mr. B. Rajaram.
Pandya, Mr. Vidya Sagar.
Parma Nand, Bhai.
Patil, Rao Bahadur B. L.
Phookun, Mr. T. R.
Puri, Mr. B. R.
Reddi, Mr. T. N. Ramakrishna.
Roy, Rai Bahadur Sukhraj.
Sen, Mr. S. C.
Sen, Pandit Satyendra Nath.
Singh, Mr. Gaya Prasad.
Sitaramaraju, Mr. B.
Thampam, Mr. K. P.
Ziauddin Ahmad, Dr.

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 7th August 1934

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 7th August, 1934.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) in the Chair.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PROPOSAL FOR THE REMOVAL OF THE PUSA AGRICULTURAL INSTITUTE.

410. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the following remarks published in the editorial columns of the Times of India, dated the 20th July, 1934, regarding the proposed transfer of the Pusa Agricultural Institute :

“ The proper way to judge the plan is solely in relation to the great financial stringency of the moment, and the inability of Government to finance many a measure of social importance, let alone reduce the crushing burden of taxation—their first duty. It would be interesting to have more details as to how the Rs. 36 lakhs estimate of the cost of the transfer has been compiled, and whether it has been proved that the capital outlay will be recouped in a reasonable time by savings effected through removal from Pusa. There would be a case for the transfer if that were demonstrated beyond a doubt, but unless and until it can be, the Assembly should turn down the plan ” ?

(b) What amount of saving is expected to be effected every year through the removal of the Institute from Pusa, and how, and what time is it likely to take for the capital outlay to be recouped ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Yes.

(b) As explained in the Memorandum submitted to the Standing Finance Committee, no saving in recurring cost is expected.

COMPILATION OF A BOOK CONTAINING LIFE NOTES OF THE POLITICAL LEADERS AND SUSPECTS IN INDIA.

411. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Government have ordered the compilation of what may be described as “ Who is Who ”, containing life notes of the political leaders, and “ suspects ” in India, and that the Provincial Criminal Investigation Departments have been directed to compile such accounts of persons residing in their jurisdiction ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the cost of such a compilation, and the time when it is likely to be in print ?

(b) Can a copy of the correspondence or in connection with it be laid on the table ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) No.

(b) Does not arise.

(1097)

LS70LAD

SECURITY MEASURES FOR LADIES TRAVELLING OVER-NIGHT ON THE BENGAL AND NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

412. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that the authorities of the Bengal and North Western Railway have issued an instruction to their Guards, reminding them of their responsibilities towards ladies travelling at night, to examine all doors and window fasteners of upper class carriages, in order to obtain security for such ladies travelling over-night ? If so, will Government be pleased to lay a copy of such instructions on the table, and state whether they propose to have similar instructions issued on other Railways for the security of ladies travelling during night ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. A copy of the instructions issued by the Bengal and North Western Railway is laid on the table. As a result of a recent incident on the North Western Railway, the subject of adequate protection of lady passengers, travelling alone by night, was taken up by the Railway Board; and at their instance, the Agent of the North Western Railway has issued the following instructions :

"(a) Conductor guards are to run regularly on 7 Up and 8 Down mails between Karachi and Lahore, and on 3 Up and 4 Down mails between Lahore and Delhi.

(b) Divisional Superintendents will arrange, for Conductor Guards, wherever it is considered that special circumstances make such provision desirable.

(c) Instructions have been issued to ensure that all door and window fastenings on carriages are kept in efficient working conditions.

(d) Special steps have been taken to rectify any defects to all door and window fastenings as carriages pass through shops.

(e) Instructions relating to the use of door and window fastenings by passengers is to be exhibited in a conspicuous place in all compartments.

(f) Orders have been issued to the effect that, by those trains which have no Conductor Guard, the primary duty of the Guard in charge is to look to the safety of lady passengers."

2. Other Railways have been informed of the steps taken by the North Western Railway, and the matter has been referred to the Indian Railway Conference Association to consider if they can suggest any further measures in this respect.

Statement.

The Bengal and North Western Railway Company Limited.

(Incorporated in England.)

Traffic Manual.

Addition and alteration Memo. No.

Page 34, Chapter II. Add the following as para. 3-XIV.

XIV. Care of Lady Passengers travelling in upper class compartments alone during

Attention of Guards and Assistant Guards is drawn to the instructions at page 2 paras. 8 and 9 of the Appendix to Working Time Table reproduced below :—

(a) 8. Ladies' Compartments :—

The doors of 1st and 2nd class ladies' compartments must be locked by Guards of trains at night if so desired by the occupants. Guards should also show passengers how to use the window and door fasteners, and be prepared to unlock the doors when required. This matter must receive special attention.

(2) Ladies with 1st or 2nd class tickets travelling alone at night may be permitted to take into the compartment with them one servant holding a third class ticket.

9. Care of passengers :—

(1) Attention is drawn to General Rules 138, 183, 194 and 195 of Part I, and 4 of Part II and Subsidiary Rules thereto. The staff are directed to carry out the orders laid down therein most carefully, station masters and others in authority instructing the staff under them. The greatest care must be taken to see that these orders are carried out and that the safety and welfare of passengers are considered and attended to.

(2) All cases of criminal assault on passengers in trains or on station premises, whether committed by fellow passengers or by the Company's staff, should be reported at once by telegram to Government Railway Police, Traffic Inspector, District Traffic Superintendent, Traffic Manager and Agent. The District Traffic Superintendent must at once take up the matter, have it enquired into and report to the Traffic Manager.

(3) In conducting the enquiry, special attention must be directed to see :

(a) that all rules of the Railway for the protection of passengers have been duly observed.

(b) That every effort has been made to bring the offender to justice, and

(c) that every point brought to light in the enquiry has been duly communicated to the Police.

(b) When taking over charge of night trains, Guards must examine all door and window fasteners of upper class carriages and should any of them be found defective the carriage examining staff should be requested to put them right before starting.

(c) If it is not possible to put them right in the time available, a special report should be made in the Guard's Journal giving number of the carriage and particulars of the defects, and a wire sent to the carriage Examiner at destination giving a copy to the District Loco. Superintendent concerned.

(d) Should any ladies be travelling in upper class carriages at night they should be directed to a compartment in which the fasteners are in good order but should this not be possible owing to lack of accommodation the Guard must exercise particular vigilance at every station at which the train stops.

J. D. WESTWOOD,

Traffic Manager.

TRAFFIC MANAGER'S OFFICE,
Gorakhpur, 25th July, 1934.

Mr. Gaya - Prasad Singh : Sir, the Honourable Member has been reading out his answer with the rapidity of a mail train. Do I understand him to say that instructions have been issued to other Railways to take similar precautions ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : Instructions have been issued on the North Western Railway, and copies have been sent to other Railways to take similar action.

IMPORT OF CUT-PIECES FROM JAPAN.

413. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Have Government received a representation from the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association on the excessive import of standard cut-pieces (so-called fents) from Japan ?

(b) Is it a fact that Japan is sending to India cut-pieces of standard sizes of three yards and six yards to avoid higher tariff thereon?

(c) What is the total yardage of such standard cut-pieces imported so far from Japan and what is the total loss of revenue thereon?

(d) What steps are Government taking to stop the import of such cut-pieces under the guise of fents?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) Statements to this effect have been made in the representations received by Government on the subject.

(c) and (d). Figures relating to the imports of fents of three yards and six yards are not available. I would, however, state that fents over four yards in length are liable to the same rate of duty as cotton piece-goods and are included in the quota fixed for Japanese cotton-piece-goods under the Indo-Japanese Commercial Convention. Government have already issued instructions to the Collectors of Customs to the effect that the lower rate of duty on fents should be applied only to job lots of varying lengths and sizes, not exceeding four yards, rejected by mills on account of their defective weaving or dyeing or other substantial damage. Such fents would invariably be bundled (as distinct from the packing adopted for piece-goods) and invoiced by weight. There is therefore no reasonable scope for any evasion of customs duties.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member received representations that there are similar cases of evasion of customs duty on the part of Japan in respect of some other items of cotton textiles, particularly hosiery?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I should like to have notice of that question, Sir. My only recollection is that a representation was made that evasion was taking place by shipment to Indian State ports. That matter is receiving the attention of the Government of India.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Have no complaints been received with regard to hosiery?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I shall look into that matter.

Mr. B. Das : Do I understand the Honourable Member to say that instructions have been issued to Collectors of Customs to the effect that when piece-goods come in sizes of three yards but are packed like ordinary piece-goods, they should be assessed a heavier duty?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : The point really, Sir, is this, that the mere fact that a piece of cloth is four yards in length, does not bring it under the definition of fent. Collectors of Customs have been given full instructions to see that despite the fact that a piece of cloth may be four yards in length, if it does not fulfil the description which I have just read out, they should treat it as ordinary piece-goods which will be included in the quota which has been allotted for Japanese piece-goods.

Mr. B. Das : What steps will Government take to safeguard the problem of three yard cut-pieces coming into the market by paying a lesser duty?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I made that point perfectly clear.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Instructions applicable to four yard lengths will be applicable to three yard pieces also.

CHANGE IN THE TIMINGS OF THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS SPECIAL TRAIN RUNNING BETWEEN SUMMER HILL AND SIMLA.

414. Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Will Government please state whether it is a fact that the Army Headquarters special train which used to leave Summer Hill at 9-27 A.M. is now timed to leave that station at 9-5 A.M. from the 24th July, 1934?

(b) Will Government kindly state whether the change in the timings was notified to their Secretariat staff?

(c) Will Government also please state the reason for this sudden change in the timings?

(d) Are Government aware that the men living in Summer Hill quarters have to leave home before 8-45 A.M. to be in time to catch the train and so have hardly any time to take their meals, bath, etc.?

(e) Are Government aware that the bulk of the residents in the Summer Hill quarters are the Government of India Secretariat staff and Members of the Assembly and the Council of State, and do Government propose to run the train to its original timings or re-arrange the arrival time of the 8-30 up to 9-30 or 9-45? If not, why not?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) The Honourable Member's information is correct, except that the change took effect from July 23rd, 1934.

(b) and (c). The Honourable Member does not perhaps realise that his train has been arranged for some years past by the Army Department, to bring members of the staff of Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters resident in Summer Hill, to their work in Simla and is paid or by that Department. The reason for the recent change in timings was that, when the train left Summer Hill at 9-27 A.M., it was delayed by an earlier train, with the result that the clerks referred to arrived late in office. The change was certainly notified to the staffs concerned and Government have no reason to believe that other persons affected were not aware of it in good time.

(d) So far as the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters establishments are concerned, the changed timings entail no hardship.

(e) For the reasons just given Government regret that they cannot agree to take the action suggested.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : What about their taking meals in time?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : They seem to manage it, according to my information.

APPOINTMENTS OF SUPERINTENDENT AND DEPUTY SUPERINTENDENT, WATCH AND WARD DEPARTMENT, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

415. *Sardar G. N. Mujumdar : (a) Is it the policy of the Railway Board that the appointment of Superintendent and Deputy Superintendent, Watch and Ward Department, East Indian Railway should be held only by Imperial Police Officers ?

(b) If the answer to part (a) be in the negative, why was it considered necessary to obtain the services of an Imperial Police Officer to act as Deputy Superintendent, Watch and Ward Department, East Indian Railway, when the permanent incumbent of the post was on leave in 1933 ?

(c) Has this Department been in existence for ten years ? If so, are there no officers or senior subordinate officers fit to act or to be promoted to a higher grade ?

(d) Is it more economical to obtain the services of Imperial Police Officers to act in such vacancies, or are there surplus Imperial Police Officers ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Imperial Police Officer brought in to act in a leave vacancy in 1933, when relieved, proceeded on leave on average pay which was higher than his pay in the Police Department ?

(f) Is the average pay in such cases debitable to Railways ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) No.

(b) In the interests of the public service.

(c) The answer to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. The number of officers in the department being small, selection from a wider range was considered desirable.

(d) No question of economy is involved.

(e) Possibly, his leave salary would be calculated according to the ordinary rules.

(f) The distribution of leave salary in such cases will be according to the ordinary rule governing loans of an officer from one Government to another, which is contained in Article 183 (2) of the Audit Code, Volume I.

FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES OF YARD SUPERVISORS AND YARD INSPECTORS.

416. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (on behalf of Rai Bahadur Lala Brij Kishore) : (a) With reference to the answer given to starred question No. 391, dated the 6th March, 1934, will Government be pleased to state what the function and duties of the Yard Supervisor and Yard Inspectors are and in what material respects they differ from those of Assistant Yard Masters ?

(b) Is it a fact that Indian Yard Supervisors, in big yards like Khanalampur, Ghaziabad, Delhi and Lahore, etc., perform the same duties as European and Anglo-Indian Assistant Yard Masters on the East Indian Railway and on a lower scale of pay ?

(c) Is it a fact that Number-Takers, after the necessary training, have been and are promoted as Yard Foremen and Yard Supervisors on the North Western Railway and are found capable of coping with the work of the Yard, and a similar practice obtains on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Section of the East Indian Railway as well ?

(d) Is it a fact that the request of Head Number-Takers to be tested for Assistant Station Masters' examination and to permit them to pick up the work of the post of Assistant Yard Masters, has been turned down on the plea that they cannot aspire to these posts in the East Indian Railway Sections ?

(e) Is it a fact that, in contrast to this, the Divisional Superintendent, Lucknow (old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway section) has held that the natural avenue of promotion of a Head Number-Taker lies to the post of Assistant Yard Master and, in pursuance of this policy for the second time in the Lucknow Division, has permitted a Head Number-Taker to learn the work of an Assistant Yard Master and given him an officiating chance ?

(f) What answer did the Divisional Superintendent, Lucknow, give on this point to the Agent, East Indian Railway ?

(g) Are Government aware whether, at the time of permitting the Head Number-Taker at Lucknow to pick up the work of an Assistant Yard Master's post and subsequently giving him an officiating chance, the claims of other Senior Head-Number Takers, who were refused these facilities, were considered ?

(h) In view of the Railway Board's letter No. 5153-E., dated the 20th May, 1934, stating that the normal channel of promotion for a Head Number-Taker was provided to the post of a Yard Supervisor, and Government's reply to question No. 391, referred to in part (a) above, stating that the Agent, East Indian Railway, is unwilling to provide facilities to them for their promotion to the posts of Yard Masters and Assistant Yard Masters, will Government please now state to what higher posts must the staff in the Number Takers' category look for their promotions, and what is their normal avenue of promotion ? Is it a fact that the post of Yard Supervisor is non-existent on the East Indian Railway ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to this and the following question together. I have called for information and will lay a reply on the table of the House in due course.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable Member also inquire whether, on the East Indian Railway, Number-Takers are not promoted as Yard Foremen and Assistant Yard Masters ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I shall be pleased to do so.

PROMOTION OF NUMBER-TAKERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

417. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (on behalf of Rai Bahadur Lala Brij Kishore) : (a) Is it a fact that the Number-Takers on the East Indian Railway have submitted a joint appeal on the subject of their promotion to the posts of Yard Masters and Assistant Yard Masters through their Divisional Superintendents, and if so what answer has been given to this appeal ?

For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 416.

(b) What objection has the Agent, East Indian Railway, to get suitable and deserving Head Number-Takers to go through a course of training at the Railway School at Chandausi to make them eligible for promotion to higher posts? What is the use of maintaining this School, if it is not to qualify staff for higher posts and make them more efficient in their work?

(c) Is it not the recognised policy of Government to keep an avenue of promotion to higher posts in the upper subordinate cadre open for staff in each category? If so, why is staff in the category of Number-Takers deprived of this opportunity for promotion when the same is open to clerical staff in other categories?

(d) Is it a fact that A class Guards are permitted to pick up the work of the post of Assistant Yard Master, prior to their promotion to these posts? Is this facility refused to Head Number-Takers?

(e) Is it a fact that as a result of this policy Anglo-Indian and European guards with only a few years service have been promoted as relieving Assistant Station Masters and to Assistant Yard Masters' posts, and that senior Indian Head Number-Takers and Indian Assistant Station Masters have remained blocked on their maximum of Rs. 110 and retired from that post?

PAY, ETC., GRANTED TO THE OLD OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY STAFF ON PROMOTION.

418. *Rai Bahadur Lala Brij Kishore : With reference to the answer given to starred question No. 746, dated 17th April, 1934, will Government be pleased to state definitely whether the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway staff in the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway grades of Rs. 78—3—90 and 75—5—100, after their transfer to the East Indian Railway Section, will on promotion get the East Indian Railway grade of Rs. 105—5—120 or old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway grade of Rs. 104—6—140 and whether similarly the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway staff in the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway grade of Rs. 104—6—140, after their transfer to the East Indian Railway Sections will get their promotion to old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway grade of Rs. 220 or the East Indian Railway grade of Rs. 200?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have called for information and will lay a reply on the table of the House in due course.

ALLOTMENT OF ORTHODOX AND UNORTHODOX CLERKS' QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

419. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Is it a fact that A type orthodox clerks' quarters in Simla are four-roomed blocks, and is it a fact that such four roomed blocks are allotted to persons getting a salary of Rs. 300 and above?

(b) Is it a fact that there are A type unorthodox quarters which are styled as four-roomed blocks, and is it a fact that such four-roomed blocks are allotted to persons getting a pay of Rs. 450 and above?

(c) Is it a fact that B type orthodox clerks' quarters in Simla are three-roomed blocks, and is it a fact that such three-roomed quarters are allotted to persons getting a salary of Rs. 150 and above?

(d) Is it a fact that there are B type unorthodox quarters which are also in some cases styled as three-roomed quarters, and is it a fact that such three-roomed quarters are allotted to persons getting a pay of Rs. 300 and above?

(e) Is it a fact that C type orthodox clerks' quarters in Simla are two-roomed, and is it a fact that such two roomed quarters are allotted to persons getting a pay upto Rs. 150?

(f) Is it a fact that there are C type unorthodox clerks' quarters in Simla which are also in some cases styled as two-roomed quarters and is it a fact that such two-roomed quarters are allotted to unorthodox men getting pay upto Rs. 300?

(g) If the reply to the preceding parts be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons, why unorthodox people getting higher pay, are allotted quarters with smaller accommodation than those allotted to their orthodox colleagues? Do Government propose to do away with this distinction—in the fixation of a minimum pay for the purposes of allotment of different classes of accommodation? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) to (f). Married clerks' quarters in Simla, both orthodox and unorthodox, are divided into A B and C classes according to the accommodation provided. The three classes of unorthodox clerks' quarters at Summer Hill are sometimes referred to as 4 roomed, 3 roomed and 2 roomed quarters, but this is not an official designation and is not applied to quarters elsewhere than at Summer Hill.

The quarters are allotted as follows :

Orthodox.

A class to officers drawing over Rs. 300 but less than Rs. 600 a month.

B class to officers drawing Rs. 150 and over but not more than Rs. 300 a month.

C class to officers drawing less than Rs. 150 a month.

Unorthodox.

A class to officers drawing over Rs. 450 but less than Rs. 600 a month.

B class to officers drawing Rs. 300 and over but not more than Rs. 450 a month.

C class to officers drawing less than Rs. 300 a month.

(g) The pay limits were settled in consultation with the Imperial Secretariat Association, and Government do not propose to make any change. The limits for unorthodox quarters are considerably lower than those which were in force prior to 1925, and were designed to ensure a fair distribution of the accommodation available. Moreover, the unorthodox accommodation is on the whole better than the orthodox accommodation, and this in itself is a justification for the distinction to which the Honourable Member refers.

UNORTHODOX QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

420. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : Will Government be pleased to state separately the number of each of the A, B and C types of unorthodox quarters at Kaithu, Summer Hill and Tuti Kandi ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I lay on the table of the House a statement giving the information asked for by the Honourable Member.

Statement showing the number of different classes of unorthodox clerks' quarters at Kaithu, Summer Hill and Tuti Kandi, Simla.

	A Class.	B Class.	C Class.
Kaithu	2	4	38
Summer Hill	45	30	10
Tuti Kandi	1	..	2

UNORTHODOX QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

421. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : Is it a fact that there are only four B type quarters and two A type quarters as against 38 C type quarters in Kaithu ? If so, do Government propose to convert some of the C type quarters into B type by some additions and alterations ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part, Government do not consider it desirable to make any change, as the proportion of quarters, available at Summer Hill, Kaithu and Tuti Kandi to total demand, is greater for B than for C class, and the C class demand for quarters at Kaithu and Tuti Kandi is more than adequate.

UNORTHODOX QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

422. *Mr. Bhuput Singh : (a) Are Government aware that practically all the men, entitled to A and B types unorthodox quarters under the present scales of pay, fixed for the different types of quarters, will have no chance of being allotted Kaithu quarters ? If so, do Government propose to amend the rules in such a way that all will have a fair chance of being allotted quarters in Kaithu ? If not, why not ?

(b) Are Government aware that under the existing scales of pay fixed for B types, once a man in the second division of the Secretariat or a man in the first division of the Railway Board gets one such quarter in Kaithu, he blocks the claims of others to these quarters and no one would be able to obtain such quarters till such a man retires from service ?

(c) Do Government propose to amend the allotment rules in such a way by which either the maximum pay limit or a maximum number of years' stay in a particular type of quarter, whichever is earlier, should debar the men to Government quarters until they are entitled to a higher type of quarter by virtue of their increase in pay ? If not, why not ?

(d) Is it a fact that, in the matter of exchange of one unorthodox quarter to another in Simla the longer stay in the unorthodox quarter has been made the criterion in the allotment rules ? Is it also a fact that men have been compelled under the rules to adopt the same type, either orthodox or unorthodox, both in Delhi and Simla ?

(e) Is it also a fact that the European quarters in Delhi were declared unorthodox on the 16th January, 1924, whereas the European quarters in Simla were declared unorthodox only in December, 1931 ?

(f) Are Government aware that men who were really unorthodox occupied such quarters in Delhi before 1926 when the men had to pay minimum fixed rent for such unorthodox quarters in Delhi, irrespective of pay ?

(g) Is it a fact that since that minimum fixed rent has been substituted by the 10 per cent. rent on the basis of pay, many people who were not keen before have styled themselves as unorthodox for the purposes of better accommodation ? If so, do Government propose to amend the rules for exchange of unorthodox quarters in Simla in such a way that the continuous longer stay in the unorthodox quarters since 1924 in Delhi should be made the criterion of getting preference for such exchanges either in Simla or Delhi ?

(h) Are Government aware that those men who occupied unorthodox quarters in Delhi before the introduction of the rent on the 10 per cent. of pay basis, suffered heavily by way of rent ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why the men who have suffered financially and gave Government better revenues for all those years before 1926, should not be given some preference in the matter of allotment of quarters in Kaithu ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a), (b) and (c). Government are aware that as there are only two A class and four B class unorthodox quarters at Kaithu, and as persons to whom the quarters are allotted remain in occupation until they become "out of class", the chances of any individual applicant obtaining quarters at Kaithu are comparatively small. Government are not, however, prepared to change the rules relating to lien which have worked satisfactorily.

(d) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. The Honourable Member will find a copy of the rules in the Library. With regard to the second part, no Government servants have been compelled to adopt any particular style of living either in Delhi or in Simla. Applicants for Government accommodation are, however, expected to be consistent, and those who are consistent are, under the orders of Government, given preference over those who wish to change their style of living.

(e) I am prepared to take it from my Honourable friend that the European quarters in Delhi were declared to be unorthodox in 1924. The decision was probably one of the New Capital Committee, which no longer exists. The change was made in Simla in October 1931.

(f) I cannot say whether the men who occupied unorthodox quarters in Delhi before 1926 were really unorthodox or not. The percentage rates for the rent of all quarters, (which were very favourable), were uniform, except during the years 1920-21 and 1922-23, when slightly higher rates were charged for unorthodox quarters.

(g) Government have no information as to the first part of the question, and do not think that any useful purpose would be served by the amendment of the rules in the manner proposed.

(h) The fact that certain persons may in the past have paid higher rent for unorthodox quarters in Delhi than they would have paid for orthodox quarters, does not justify the grant to those persons of any special concessions in Simla or elsewhere.

CONGESTION IN THE ROOMS OCCUPIED BY THE CLERICAL STAFF IN THE OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR GENERAL, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

423. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Is it a fact that the office of the Accountant General of Posts and Telegraphs has been located in some rooms allotted to the office of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs ? Is it a fact that separate accommodation was provided for the former ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government please state under whose order this was done ?

(c) Is it a fact that in consequence of this arrangement the staff of the office of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs has been greatly inconvenienced ?

(d) Do Government propose to look into the matter and see that the congestion in the rooms occupied by the clerical staff in the office of Director General, Posts and Telegraphs is removed ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The fact is not exactly as stated ; a portion of the accommodation occupied by the office of the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs was found to be in excess of the standards prescribed by the Government of India. This excess was utilised for the accommodation of some of the Branches of the office of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, in the interest of efficiency and economy.

(b) The arrangement was made by the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, and the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, in consultation.

(c) No.

(d) Does not arise.

OFFICE ACCOMMODATION ALLOTTED FOR THE OFFICE OF THE ACCOUNTANT GENERAL OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS IN THE NEW DELHI SECRETARIAT.

424. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Is it a fact that the office of the Accountant General of Posts and Telegraphs has been shifted in the summer months of this year from Old Delhi to New Delhi ?

(b) If so, will Government please state (i) what office accommodation was allotted for that office in the New Delhi Secretariat and (ii) whether the accommodation provided is being used by that office ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) Yes.

(b) (i) 3,231 square feet of floor area and a record room.

(ii) Yes, except that it has been possible to surrender a room with a floor area of 1,089 square feet, originally provided for that office, by accommodating certain sections of the Office of the Accountant General, Posts and Telegraphs, in surplus space available in the office of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs.

CHANGE IN THE TIMINGS OF THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS SPECIAL TRAIN RUNNING BETWEEN SUMMER HILL AND SIMLA.

425. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Are Government aware that the timing of the Army Special Train, which used to start from Summer Hill at 9-35 A.M. before, has been changed to 9-5 A.M. ?

(b) Are Government aware that this change in the timing is causing great inconvenience to the small school-going children of the employees of all the Civil Offices of the Government of India who have been provided quarters at Summer Hill ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of gentlemen and lady clerks and assistants taken together who are employed in the Army Headquarters and have been officially allotted Summer Hill Government quarters for the year 1934-35 ?

(d) Do Government propose to place on the table of this House a statement showing the names of the clerks and the numbers of the respective quarters allotted to those employed in the Army Headquarters who are required to attend office at 10 A.M. ? If not, why not ?

(e) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of clerks and assistants taken together, who are employed in the Civil Departments of the Secretariat and other offices of the Government of India and who have been officially allotted Government quarters at Summer Hill ?

(f) Do Government propose to place on the table of this House a statement showing the names of the clerks and assistants and the numbers of the respective quarters allotted to those employed in the Civil Departments and offices of the Government of India whose office hours are 10-30 A.M. ? If not, why not ?

(g) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of free railway passes which have been issued by the Army Headquarters to the clerks and assistants of the Army Headquarters and the number of free railway passes issued to their children residing in Summer Hill quarters, for their conveyance between Summer Hill and Simla ?

(h) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of monthly season tickets which have been issued by the North Western Railway between Summer Hill and Simla during the current month ?

(i) Will Government be pleased to state the total number of free railway passes issued by the Railway Board and the North Western Railway administration between Summer Hill and Simla during the same period as in part (h) ?

(j) Is it a fact that the total number of passengers holding monthly tickets on payment and railway free pass-holders, whose office and school hours are 10-30 A.M., is greater than the number of passengers holding Army Headquarter passes, whose office and school hours are 10 A.M. or earlier? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons for ignoring the conveniences and inconveniences of a larger number of the travelling public by changing the timing of the Summer Hill Special?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby: (a) Yes.

(b) to (j). The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply I have just given to Sardar G. N. Mujumdar's question No. 414. Having regard to the explanation given in that reply, Government do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by collecting the information asked for by him.

FREE CONVEYANCE TO ONE CLASS OF GOVERNMENT SERVANTS.

426. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra: Will Government be pleased to state the reasons why they should allow free conveyance to a class of Government servants and refuse the same to the Secretariat and other civil offices staff?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: The Honourable Member's reference to free conveyance to a class of Government servants is presumably to the free railway train service between Summer Hill and Simla for the employees of Army Headquarters, a concession which is not at present allowed to the members of the Civil Secretariat and their Attached Offices. The question of granting this concession to the staff of the latter has been considered more than once on representations from the Imperial Secretariat Association, but in view of the differences between the pay and leave terms of the staff of Army Headquarters and that of the other offices, Government see no justification for extending the concession to the civil offices.

DISPOSAL OF INCOME-TAX OBJECTIONS IN THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

427. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra: (a) Is it a fact that the proviso to section 45 of the Income-tax Act is considered a dead letter by the Income-tax authorities in Bihar and Orissa, and the discretion vested therein is refused as a rule? Are Government aware that the Income-tax officers in Bihar and Orissa make a demand within the year in all cases in their charge, summarily under section 23 (4)?

(b) Are Government aware of the huge amount of interest that the tax-payers lose on account of the actions of the Income-tax officials in Bihar and Orissa? If so, do Government propose to issue necessary instructions to expedite disposal of objections in all cases in which big amounts of tax are involved or collected?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: (a) As regards the first part of the question, the answer is in the negative. As regards the latter part, it is not understood what is meant, as under the Income-tax Act, all assessments including those under section 23 (4) are expected to be made during the year concerned and demands in respect thereof are to be made as soon as they are completed.

(b) All the evidence at my disposal goes to show that the Honourable Member's allegations are unfounded and the question of issuing instructions does not, therefore, arise.

CASES REMANDED OR RE-OPENED UNDER CERTAIN SECTIONS OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT.

428. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra: Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing the number of cases remanded under section 31 or 33, or re-opened under section 27 of the Indian Income-tax Act, in the years 1931-32, 1932-33 and 1933-34, the total amount of tax found refundable thereon, and the number of them in which more than six months elapsed between the date of actual collection of the tax and the date of actual refund?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: The required information is not available.

JUDGMENT OF THE PATNA HIGH COURT IN THE CASE OF RAGHUNATH MAHADEO.

429. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra: (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a judgment of the Patna High Court in the case of Raghunath Mahadeo, reported in All-India Reporter 1925-Patna, page 694, and the remarks made therein by the then Chief Justice in the following words?

"The facts as set out in the petition and as stated by Mr. Jayaswal on behalf of the assessee are that the accounts produced in support of the cloth, gold, silver and jute businesses, although not balanced or not closed in the sense I have already referred to, undoubtedly show by taking very slight trouble and carrying out a very simple sum in arithmetic what the actual profits made for the year in question were. If that is so it seems to me quite clear that the Income-tax Officer was negligent in his duty in failing to carry out that simple matter himself and so ascertain what was the effect of the books. He cannot shirk his duty by merely stating that the account is not balanced if the result of that balance can be ascertained by taking small amount of trouble. The books were there but he apparently refused to accept them merely upon that ground. In my opinion he was not entitled to act in that way."

What steps, if any, were taken against the officer concerned to stop repetition of such cases in future?

(b) Are Government aware that such abuse of powers against all rules of fairness, justice and consideration of the established principles of law, are only too common among the Income-tax authorities in Bihar and Orissa? If so, will Government please state if and how they propose to redress these every day grievances of the tax-payers in Bihar and Orissa?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg: (a) The case referred to was decided nine years ago, and as Government do not preserve records pertaining to matters of this kind for so long a period, the required information is not available.

(b) The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative and in consequence the latter part does not arise.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai: May I know from the Honourable Member whether he is aware that this practice is going on all over India where the Income-tax Officers on small grounds throw away the account books that are produced before them, because they are not closed. If they only go into them, they will know what the account really is. That is the complaint throughout India, and this instance having been cited, will the Honourable Member kindly issue a circular to the effect that the Income-tax Officers must take the account books as they are produced before them and find out for themselves by a little bit of calculation what the result of the accounts is ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would certainly consider issuing a circular if the Honourable Member would produce to me some verification of his statement that there have been complaints of this practice all over India. If there had been such complaints, it is very surprising that the Central Board of Revenue have no information as to that.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I inform the Honourable Member that I myself have raised such questions, but unfortunately the Honourable Member was not here in those days. In those days complaints have been made and these are in the office and could be found out by the Central Board of Revenue.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If that is so, I shall look into it.

PETITIONS UNDER SECTION 66 (2) OF THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX ACT IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

430. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government please lay on the table a statement showing the number of petitions under section 66 (2) of the Indian Income-tax Act filed and the number of them actually referred to the High Court, the number rejected by the Commissioner, and the number withdrawn or decided under section 33 thereof in Bihar and Orissa in each of the years 1931-32, 1932-33, 1933-34 and 1934-35 (up to date) ?

(b) Are Government aware of the inordinate delay made by the Commissioner in dealing with petitions under section 66 (2) of the Act and the loss of interest caused to the assessee thereby ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) A statement giving the required information is laid on the table.

(b) No. As regards loss of interest, for the information of the Honourable Member, I would add that in the case of references to a High Court under section 66 (2) of the Income-tax Act, when an assessee is successful, the amount of tax paid is refunded with interest as per section 66 (7) of the above Act.

Statement showing the number of petitions filed under section 66 (2) and the number actually referred to High Court, the number rejected by the Commissioner and the number withdrawn or decided under Section 33 in Bihar and Orissa in the years 1931-32 to 1934-35 (up-to-date).

Year.	Number of petitions filed under Section 66 (2).	Number actually referred to High Court.	Number decided and rejected by the Commissioner.	Number withdrawn by the assessee.
1931-32	71	4	47	20
1932-33	51	8	30	13
1933-34	51	6	34	11
1934-35 (up-to-date).	29	Nd	Nd	Nd

JUDGMENT OF THE PATNA HIGH COURT IN THE CASE OF SETH BANSHIDHAR PADDAR.

431. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a recent judgment of the Honourable the Patna High Court in the case of Seth Banshidhar Paddar, published in All-India Reporter, 1931, Patna 46 and the remarks of the Honourable the Chief Justice therein, deprecating the procedure adopted by the Commissioner of Income-tax in Bihar and Orissa, in starting an inquiry after the order of the High Court directing him to state a case, in the following words ?

"The procedure adopted by the Commissioner in starting an inquiry after the order of the High Court directing him to state a case is to my mind to be deprecated in this particular case, because it is clearly a hurried inquiry undertaken in order to bring the case within the law as stated by the Privy Council. The assessee was all along under the impression, as was indeed the Court, that the matter to be dealt with was the state of facts which led up to the appellate order and materials upon which the appellate order founded the decision. At the last minute to conduct a sudden inquiry even if that were a legal inquiry is hardly a procedure in accordance with the principle of fairness to the assessee nor has the inquiry, itself, such as it is, resulted in any further finding of fact which is of assistance in determining the point before us."

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to stop such misuse of powers by the head of the Income-tax Department in Bihar and Orissa, and insure justice and fairness to the common tax-payer ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) Government do not admit that there was any "misuse of power", as the Commissioner of Income-tax thought it advisable to make further enquiries in the case, simply because in his opinion, all the facts required to state the case properly before the High Court were not available.

REPORTS OR REMARKS WHEN CALLING FOR INCOME-TAX CASES UNDER APPEAL IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

432. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Are Government aware that instead of refraining from asking for reports or remarks when calling for the records of cases under appeal, as directed in the instructions issued by the Central Board of Revenue in 1927, the appellate officers in Bihar and Orissa as a rule not only call for such reports in all cases without exception but also insist invariably on the presence of either the Income-tax Officer or the dealing Inspector Accountant at the time of the actual hearing of appeals ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to stop this malpractice ? If not, why not ?

(c) If the reply to part (a) be in the negative, do Government propose to make an enquiry into the matter ?

(d) Is there a printed form for calling for such reports in appeals and if so, what was the total number of such forms used by the different Assistant Commissioners in Bihar and Orissa in 1932-33 and 1933-34 ?

L270LAD

B

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a), (b), and (c). Reports are called for by appellate officers, to give the assessing officer an opportunity of commenting on the various allegations made in the appeal lodged, which seems to me quite fair and reasonable. The assessing officer is present during the hearing of an appeal, only when the appellate officer considers it necessary to have an explanation as regards any statement in the Assessment Order the meaning of which may be doubtful. As the explanation is given in the presence of the appellant, there can be nothing unfair in this procedure.

(d) Yes. The number of forms used was 3,371 for 1932-33 and 3,140 for 1933-34.

QUOTATION OF FOREIGN OUTWARD STATION TO STATION GOODS RATE ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

433. *Mr. D. K. Lahiri Chaudhury : (a) Is it a fact that an experiment to facilitate the quotation of foreign outward station to station goods rate was started on the North Western Railway in 1929 and is still in the experimental stage ?

(b) Is there anything in the nature of the work of the experiment on account of which it has continued as an experiment for such a long period ?

(c) Is the Railway over which it is working now in a position to say whether the experiment is a success or not ?

(d) How much has been spent upon this experiment so far since the beginning of it ? What are the recurring expenses of the experiment ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Agent, North Western Railway, had submitted his final report on the working of the experiment, recommending that the scheme may be placed on a permanent basis ? If so, on what grounds has the Railway Board decided to continue it as an experiment for two years more ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Yes, except that the registers were not issued to stations till the close of year 1930.

(b), (c) and (e). The Agent, North Western Railway, has reported favourably on the experiment but his report was based only on six months experience during which period changes in rates have been comparatively few. The Railway Board have decided to continue it as an experimental measure for two years, in order to obtain further data to arrive at a decision whether the cost incurred is justified.

(d) The total cost, including cost of compilation and maintenance up to the end of 1933-34, was Rs. 2,90,261. The recurring expenditure is estimated at about Rs. 39,000 per annum.

FUNCTIONS, DUTIES AND SCALES OF PAY OF JOURNEYMEN EMPLOYED IN THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

434. *Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Are the functions, duties and scales of pay of all journeymen employed in the various Departments of the North Western Railway similar ?

(b) Is it a fact that the new Leave Rules issued in the Railway Board's letter No. 8373/E., dated the 20th February, 1930, and enforced on the North Western Railway, with retrospective effect from the 1st April, 1927, have deprived the journeymen of the Mechanical Workshops of the North Western Railway of the privileges of leave that the said journeymen were entitled to enjoy previous to that date ?

(c) Is it a fact that whenever Government have had the occasion to revise schemes, overhaul systems and frame new rules, it has never been the object to deprive any one of the privileges enjoyed by him under the old set of rules ?

(d) Is it a fact that the journeymen employed in the sheds and the journeymen chemists and monthly rated mechanical staff other than journeymen employed in the shops, having their scales of pay much lower than that of journeymen, e.g., Train Examiners, Block Maintainers, etc., are all allowed to enjoy the privilege of leave admissible to the supervisory staff ?

(e) Is it a fact that those of the apprentices of the Mechanical Workshops of Moghulpura and Sukkur who, after the completion of a five years' course of practical and theoretical training, are retained as journeymen in the scale of Rs. 100—10—170, are treated as "inferiors" and "labourers" for the purposes of the new Leave Rules ? Is it a fact that the illiterate mistries knowing only thumb rule methods are promoted as "junior chargemen" in the same scale of pay as that of journeymen, but are treated as supervisors and thus given the benefit of privilege leave ?

(f) Is it a fact that the practice in the Electrical Branch of the North Western Railway is vice versa to that mentioned in question (e) ?

(g) Is it a fact that the duties actually performed by the journeymen in all the shops are either of supervisory or of clerical nature or of both, but the North Western Railway Administration are always trying to maintain that the journeymen are mere labourers ?

(h) If the answers to parts (a) to (g) be in the affirmative, do Government propose to abolish the distinction between the "journeymen" and other staff employed on the same scale of pay in the various departments of the North Western Railway in the matter of the application of Leave Rules ?

(i) Has any representation to the above effect been made to the Railway Board by the Railwaymen's Federation ?

(j) Have Government taken any action in this behalf ? If not, do Government propose to take any action in this connection, and if so, when ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : I have called for certain information necessary to enable me to reply fully to the question and will lay a reply on the table of the House in due course.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : I believe they will be presented in the next Assembly !

(No answer.)

RECRUITMENT OF PROVINCIAL CIVIL SERVICE MEN AS ASSISTANT SECRETARY, UNDER SECRETARY, ETC., IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

435. *Khan Bahadur H. M. Wilayatullah : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if Provincial Civil Service men are recruited from the Provinces for appointment as Assistant Secretary, Under Secretary, etc., in the offices of the Government of India ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state how many such officers were recruited and appointed during the last ten years, and from what Provinces?

(c) Was a member of the Provincial Civil Service from the Central Provinces ever recruited for these appointments? If not, are Government prepared to consider the desirability of making a selection in future from the Central Provinces also?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik: (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer to part (a) of Mr. Lalchand Navalrai's starred question No. 90, on the 20th January, 1930. The position briefly is, that in some Departments the posts of Secretary, Joint Secretary, Deputy Secretary, and Under Secretary are reserved for Indian Civil Service officers. Posts of Assistant Secretary are ordinarily filled from the Imperial Secretariat Service.

(b) I lay on the table a statement giving the information desired.

(c) The reply to the first part is in the negative. As to the second part, I would point out that posts of this nature must be filled on the basis of merit and suitability, not on provincial considerations.

Statement showing the number of Provincial Civil Service officers recruited during the last ten years to the posts of Assistant Secretary, Under Secretary, Deputy Secretary, Joint Secretary and Secretary in the Government of India offices.

Department.	Assistant Secretary.	Under Secretary.	Deputy Secretary.	Joint Secretary.	Secretary.	Province and year.
Finance	1	1	1	1	1	Punjab, 1932-33.
Education, Health and Lands.	1	1	1	1	1	Punjab, 1931-32.
Legislative	1	1	1	1	1	Madras, 1925-26.
	1	1	1	1	1	Bombay, 1928.
	1	1	1	1	1	Madras, 1934.
Imperial Council of Agricultural Research.	1	1	1	1	1	Madras, 1929.
Home (Dy. D. P. I.)	Deputy Director of Public Information.					U. P., 1932.
Foreign and Political	None.
Commerce	Do.
Railway	Do.
Industries and Labour	Do.
Legislative Assembly	Do.
Army	Do.
Financial Adviser, Military Finance.	Do.
Reforms	Do.

ALLEGED COERCION IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

436. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that coercion is the order of the day in the Moradabad Division, East Indian Railway?

Mr. P. R. Rau: So far as Government are aware, the answer is in the negative.

STAFF FORCED TO ACCEPT POSTS ON LESS EMOLUMENTS IN THE TICKET CHECKING BRANCH, MORADABAD DIVISION.

437. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the staff are forced to accept posts carrying less emoluments than they are drawing in the Ticket Checking Branch of the East Indian Railway, Moradabad Division?

Mr. P. R. Rau: With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 437, 438 and 440 to 447 together.

I have called for certain information and will furnish replies in due course.

WITHDRAWAL OF MILEAGE ALLOWANCE FROM CERTAIN TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS POSTED AS TICKET COLLECTORS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†438. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the staff are told that the ex-gratia Consolidated Allowance sanctioned by His Excellency the Viceroy to compensate the loss by the withdrawal of Mileage Allowance from the old Travelling Ticket Inspectors will not be paid to them, if and when, they are posted to stations as Ticket Collectors on the East Indian Railway, Moradabad Division?

MILEAGE ALLOWANCE OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

439. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the question of mileage allowance of the Travelling Ticket Inspectors, East Indian Railway, is under disposal?

Mr. P. R. Rau: Certain memorials, from the Travelling Ticket Examiners of the East Indian Railway, are at present under consideration.

POST OF ASSISTANT HEAD TICKET COLLECTOR, MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†440. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the post of Assistant Head Ticket Collector, Moradabad Division, East Indian Railway, is scaled Rs. 120-10-140?

(b) Is it a fact that to the post of Assistant Head Ticket Collector, Moradabad (Rs. 120-10-140) Travelling Ticket Examiners on Rs. 160 plus Rs. 50 Consolidated Allowance are posted? If so, will Government state where the economy lies and whether average is not taken?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 437.

(c) Will Government please state whether Travelling Ticket Examiners of the Accounts Departments will get the same emoluments under Operating Department, if and when, posted as Assistant Head Ticket Collectors? If not, why not?

CADRE OF TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†441. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the cadre of Travelling Ticket Examiners, Grades I and II, on the East Indian Railway is one independent unit under class "Ticket Checking of Commercial Group" as provided in the rules for the recruitment and training of subordinate staff?

TICKET CHECKING STAFF ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†442. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the cadre of Ticket Collectors, Grades I, II and III, Assistant Head Ticket Collectors and Head Ticket Collectors, Grades I and II, is as a whole one unit on the East Indian Railway under class "Ticket Checking of Commercial Group" as provided in the rules for the recruitment and training of subordinate staff?

TRAVELLING TICKET INSPECTORS OF THE ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†443. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that the cadre of the Travelling Ticket Inspectors of the Accounts Department (now under Operating Department) is one independent unit on the East Indian Railway?

ALLEGED HARASSMENT OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†444. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that under the Operating Department the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the East Indian Railway in general and Moradabad Division in particular work under threat and harassment by the Transportation (Traffic) Supervising Staff?

WORK OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†445. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that under the Operating Department the work of the Travelling Ticket Examiners on the East Indian Railway is not independent?

CHECK OF THE TRAINS AT CERTAIN PLACES ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†446. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Is it a fact that sometime in April, May or June, 1934, an independent check of the trains was conducted by the Inspectors of the Accounts Department, East Indian Railway at Arrah, Dinapore and Gaya? If so, will Government please lay on the table their report and the remarks of the Operating Department thereon? If not, why not?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 437.

CHECK OF THE TRAINS AT CERTAIN PLACES ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

†447. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: (a) Will Government please state the result of the independent check of trains conducted some time in April, May or June, 1934, by the Inspectors of the Accounts Department, East Indian Railway at Arrah, Dinapore and Gaya respectively?

(b) Are Government satisfied with the independent check of trains other than the Operating Department? If not, why not?

CHECK OF TRAINS CONDUCTED BY THE WATCH AND WARD AND THE ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENTS ON THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

448. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Will Government please state the reason why the Operating Department, East Indian Railway, failed to achieve the requisite result which has hitherto been achieved by the independent checks conducted by the Watch and Ward and the Accounts Departments as reported by the Agent? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau: I regret I have been unable to understand clearly what my Honourable friend is referring to. If he refers to the additional temporary checks imposed on the East Indian Railway last year, the reason was explained by me in my reply to question No. 189, asked by Khan Bahadur Haji Wajihuddin, on the 23rd July, 1934.

SEPARATION OF THE TRAVELLING TICKET EXAMINERS, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY, FROM THE OPERATING DEPARTMENT.

449. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Do Government realise the necessity of separating the Travelling Ticket Examiners, East Indian Railway, from the Operating Department and placing them under an independent Audit Department? If not, why not?

Mr. P. R. Rau: Government do not consider it necessary to transfer the Travelling Ticket Examiners from the Operating to the Audit Department.

Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: Will the Honourable Member be pleased to ascertain the reasons for this?

Mr. P. R. Rau: I think the onus of proving that a change is necessary rests on my Honourable friend who proposes it.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE TRANSPORTATION (TRAFFIC) INSPECTOR OF THE MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

450. *Maulvi Sayyid Murtuza Saheb Bahadur: (a) Is it a fact that the zealous and honest Travelling Ticket Examiners working conscientiously are avenged on by the Transportation (Traffic) Inspectors when placed in power or authority?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the negative, will Government please state whether it is a fact that the Transportation (Traffic) Inspector, of Moradabad Division, East Indian Railway, on 21st April, 1934, accompanied by hill girls (without tickets) travelled in Second Class from Moradabad to Delhi by 3 MD Train ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 437.

(c) If the reply to part (b) be in the negative, (i) what were the movements of this Inspector on 21st April, 1934, (ii) what business had he on that date at Delhi; (iii) what were the ticket numbers of second class tickets held by these girls ex-Moradabad to Delhi or ex-Kashipur, Ramnagar or Haldwani to Delhi; (iv) what was the report of his enquiry or inspection held at Delhi on that date submitted by him; and (v) who were these girls, relatives or friends, who travelled with him on his duty pass ?

(d) Was the said Inspector placed to officiate as Assistant Superintendent Transportation (Commercial), Moradabad Division, during June, 1934 ? If so, will Government please state : (i) the total number of punishments inflicted by him during his short period on the Ticket Checking staff, (ii) the nature of offence committed individually by and the punishment awarded to the Ticket Checking staff, (iii) the number of a gazetted officer to inflict fine on the staff; and (iv) the persons amongst the Ticket Checking Staff to whom he sanctioned enhanced increments ?

(e) What were his movements during his short period of officiating as a gazetted officer ?

(f) What was his movement on 1st July, 1934 ?

(g) Do Government propose to make an independent inquiry into the conduct of the said Inspector ? If not, why not ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) Government have no reason to believe that such is the case.

(b) to (g). Information is being obtained and will be laid on the table in due course.

MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE HEAD OFFICES OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY AT CALCUTTA.

451. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims employed in the Head Offices of the East Indian Railway located at Calcutta ? How many of them are Bengal Muslims and how many belong to other provinces ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply questions Nos. 451 to 456 and 482 together. Government regret they are unable to supplement, with further detailed figures, the information in regard to communal representation in Railway services which is contained in the Annual Administration Reports of Indian Railways, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE HEAD OFFICES OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY AT CALCUTTA.

†452. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims employed in the Head Offices of the Bengal Nagpur Railway located in Calcutta ? How many of them are Bengal Muslims and how many belong to other provinces ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 451.

MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE HEAD OFFICES OF THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY AT CALCUTTA.

†453. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims employed in the Head Offices of the Eastern Bengal Railway located in Calcutta ? How many of them are Bengal Muslims and how many are Muslims from other provinces ?

NON-BENGALI MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE HEAD OFFICES OF THE THREE RAILWAYS LOCATED IN CALCUTTA.

†454. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Is it a fact that in the Head Offices of the three important railways located in the capital of Bengal there are a large number of Muslims belonging to provinces other than Bengal, and are Government aware that there is acute unemployment amongst the educated Muslims of Bengal ?

BENGALI MUSLIMS EMPLOYED IN THE OFFICES OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY AT LAHORE.

†455. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Is it a fact that there are no Bengal Muslims employed in the offices of the North Western Railway located in Lahore ? If not, what is the total number of Muslim employees in those offices and how many of them are Bengal Muslims ?

BENGALI MUSLIMS IN THE HEAD OFFICES OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY AND THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY AT BOMBAY.

†456. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Is it a fact that there are no Bengal Muslims in the Head Offices of the Bengal Nagpur Railway and Great Indian Peninsula Railway located at Bombay ? If so, will they be pleased to state the number of Bombay Muslims employed in the Head Offices of the different railways located in the capital of Bengal ?

APPOINTMENT OF BENGALI MUSLIMS IN THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

457. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : Is it a fact that there are several first division and second division vacancies in the Department of Commerce of the Government of India, and that the Muslim organizations of the Punjab are trying to force Government to recruit only Punjab Muslims ? If so, do Government propose to recruit a number of Bengal Muslim graduates and M.As., now unemployed in Bengal, against such vacancies. If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhow : There are at present no vacancies in the First or Second Division in the Department of Commerce ; nor has any representation been received from any Muslim organisation in the Punjab urging the Department to recruit only Punjab Muslims. The latter part of the question does not, therefore, arise.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 451.

SUMMER HILL AND KAITHU QUARTERS IN SIMLA ALLOTTED TO THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

458. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Summer Hill and Kaithu quarters, to be shown separately, that have been allotted to the men belonging to the Army Headquarters and the rent realized from them during the year 1933 and the rent to be realized in 1934 upto the end of September ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 458, 459 and 460 together.

The information is not readily available and Government do not propose to collect it as the result would not justify the labour involved.

SUMMER HILL AND KAITHU QUARTERS IN SIMLA ALLOTTED TO MEN BELONGING TO OTHER OFFICES, EXCLUDING THE SECRETARIAT.

†459. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Summer Hill and Kaithu quarters, to be shown separately, that have been allotted to men belonging to other offices, excluding the Secretariat, and the rent realized from them in 1933, and the rent expected to be realized in 1934 upto the end of September ?

SUMMER HILL AND KAITHU QUARTERS IN SIMLA ALLOTTED TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT STAFF.

†460. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will Government be pleased to state the number of Summer Hill and Kaithu quarters, to be shown separately, allotted to Government of India Secretariat staff and the total amount realized from them in 1933 and 1934 as house-rent by the forfeiture of house-rent allowances, to which such men were entitled under the Simla Allowances Code, in April and May of those years ?

PREFERENCE TO SECRETARIAT STAFF IN THE ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

461. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that at the last Public Accounts Committee meeting Government raised the question of very meagre yield of revenue from the house-rent realized on the basis of ten per cent. of pay, both in Delhi and Simla ?

(b) If the reply to part (a) be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why men of the attached offices and the Army Headquarters are being allotted quarters in Simla on the basis of six months' rental from the middle of May to the middle of October in preference to the men of the Secretariat Departments, from whom they realize the whole of their house-rent allowance ranging from Rs. 225 to Rs. 550, which roughly works out to about 20 per cent. of their pay if calculated on the same basis of six months' rental from the middle of May to the middle of October when these men live in Simla ?

(c) Do Government propose to amend the rules of allotment of clerks' quarters in such a way that Secretariat staff would get the first preference in the case of all Government quarters in Simla ? If not, what is the justification for Government losing revenue ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 453.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) I do not think that it is correct to say that Government raised the question of the inadequate realizations of rent in Delhi and Simla. A statement of the position was given by the Accountant General, Central Revenues, in paragraphs 12-16 of his report on the Appropriation Accounts for 1932-33 under the heading : "Administration of Residential Buildings", and this statement was naturally discussed by the Public Accounts Committee.

(b) This part of the question does not strictly speaking arise, but I may explain that, under the rules, allotments in Simla are ordinarily made for the financial year and that this arrangement was favoured by the Imperial Secretariat Association. An exception is, however, allowed in favour of men who receive no House Rent Allowance, and desire that the allotment should be for the season of seven months, (1st April to 31st October), only. Men of the Attached Offices and Army Headquarters ordinarily receive no House Rent Allowance, and, are, therefore, entitled to ask for seasonal allotments. I do not follow my Honourable friend's suggestion that these rent-paying tenants should be placed at a disadvantage as against men who either pay their rent from an allowance drawn from Central Revenues or pay no rent at all. The House Rent Allowance is not intended to be a source of profit, and I cannot accept the view that men who are given free accommodation in lieu of the allowance are unfairly treated.

(c) No. The rules already give a slight advantage to men who are entitled to House Rent Allowance, and no further preference can be shown to them.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Do Government realise their responsibility of getting as much rent as possible for these quarters and not losing money by building costly quarters for the Government of India officials ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Yes.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Then how will he justify his decision, in view of the answer just given, by letting these quarters to people who only contribute less amount of the rent according to ten per cent. of their salary ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I think that that question arises more naturally in connection with the reply I shall give in due course to the Honourable Member's question No. 463.

PREFERENCE TO SECRETARIAT STAFF IN THE ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

462. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that all the staff of the Army Headquarters living in Government quarters in Simla, who move down to Delhi, pay rent only for six months of their stay in Simla on the basis of 10 per cent. of their pay ? If so, will Government be pleased to state the reasons why such persons are allowed to retain their lien on their quarters in Simla when they do not pay rent for such quarters during the period when they are away in Delhi ?

(b) Is it a fact that the men belonging to the Secretariat Departments living in Government quarters in Simla are allotted quarters for the whole of the financial year in lieu of the annual house-rent allowances to which they are entitled ?

(c) Do Government propose to amend the Simla allotment rules in such a way that at the next allotment all quarters from which Government realize only six months' rent at 10 per cent. basis from the men belonging to offices other than the Secretariat, should be allotted to the Secretariat staff first? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : (a) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative, but the summer season is the period from 1st April to 31st October, and not a period of six months as stated by the Honourable Member. In dealing with question No. 461, I have explained that the men concerned are rent-paying tenants and Government see no reason why they should not retain their liens from year to year.

(b) Quarters are allotted for the financial year. Men entitled to House Rent Allowance at the old rates draw the allowance in cash, and pay rent in the ordinary way. Men entitled to House Rent Allowance at the new rates occupy their quarters rent free, and do not draw the allowance.

(c) No. I may remind the Honourable Member that the object of providing Government servants with residential accommodation is administrative rather than commercial.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Do Government take into consideration the commercial side of this question? Are they guided by merely administrative reasons as regards realisation of rent? Do they not care in the least whether there is loss of money or not?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I venture to think that that question, if I may say so with all respect, comes rather curiously from a Member of this Assembly who gets his own accommodation at what is very far from being a commercial rate.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : And the Executive Councillors get it free almost. They pay only Rs. 5, for their tennis grounds. The Honourable Member knows it, and his Department is in charge of these things.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The Honourable Member is under a misapprehension.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : He is not.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : If he is willing to go into this question with me, I think he will find that there is no question of getting more rent for these quarters. As far as I can understand him, he seems for some reason or other to think that members of the staff belonging to Attached Offices are favourably treated. That is not the case. They are the only class who pay rent from their own pockets.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it not a fact that in assessing rent for the Government quarters of Executive Council Members, no rent is charged for the ground, and the Honourable Members' bungalows are provided with large compounds which are not taken into account in assessing rent, and is it not a fact that the Honourable Members only pay Rs. 5 for their tennis grounds?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Whether rent is charged for the compounds attached to Honourable Members' houses or not, I can assure the Honourable Member that, in my opinion, and that of my Honourable colleagues, we pay an enormous rent for the accommodation we get.

REFERENCE TO SECRETARIAT STAFF IN THE ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

163. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Are Government aware that by allowing the men of other offices than the Secretariat to retain their quarters, Government lose heavily by way of house-rent, which was complained of by the Auditor General at the last meeting of the Public Accounts Committee? So, do Government propose to remedy these defects immediately? If not, why not?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : No. The men, against whom the Honourable Member proposes to discriminate, pay rent from their own pockets, while the members of the Secretariat staff receive an allowance from Central Revenues to enable them to pay their rent. I have already explained that residential accommodation is provided for administrative rather than commercial reasons, and that Government could in no circumstances agree to exclude a large class of its employees from the benefits of the housing rules. I must add that I am not aware that any complaint was made by the Auditor General at the last meeting of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Does the Honourable Member in deciding administrative questions not take into consideration the commercial aspect at all?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Yes, Sir. Obviously the commercial aspect is taken into consideration, but there are certain circumstances in which the administrative aspect is much more important than the commercial. If the Honourable Member can establish to my satisfaction that the Government will obtain an increased revenue by the course which he proposes that Government should adopt, I shall be happy to consider his proposal. I have gone very carefully into this question, and I can assure him that there is no question of financial advantage involved.

ALLOTMENT OF QUARTERS IN SIMLA.

64. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that the allotment of quarters has been framed in such a way that they may help the Anglo-Indian staff of the offices other than the Secretariat to retain the Government quarters in preference to the men of the Secretariat? If not, do Government propose to take steps to increase the Government revenue by bringing all quarters on a 12 months' basis so that those who will move to Delhi would be compelled to pay for the whole of the 12 months at 10 per cent. pay basis? If not, why should the Secretariat staff be made to forego the whole year's house-rent allowance in lieu of Government quarters?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : The reply to the first and second parts of the question is in the negative. As regards the third part of the question, I understand that the Honourable Member refers to Government servants of the Secretariat staff who are entitled to the Simla House Rent Allowance at the new rates and are allotted Government accommodation rent free instead of drawing the allowance in cash. I would point out that the allowance can, in no circumstances, exceed the amount actually paid, and that so far as Government servants in this category are concerned, the period of allotment is immaterial.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : May I put a question ? How does this basis of ten per cent. on the salary work out at the rate of six per cent. return on the outlay on these buildings ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I must ask for notice of that question.

CREATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY CORPS OF CLERKS.

465. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the reasons which have now led them to create the Indian Army Corps of Clerks in the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters for all the new entrants ?

(b) Why was the necessity of such a kind of enlistment of the Indian establishment under the India Army Act never felt during the Great War period and before that ?

(c) Is it a fact that Indian Army Corps of Clerks was formed in 1923 or so ? If so, how is it that the Army Headquarters have after a lapse of twelve years, realised the necessity of introducing the Indian Army Corps of Clerks in the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) The reason, which led Government to form a section of the Indian Army Corps of Clerks for new British and Indian entrants to the ministerial establishment at Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters, was that the previous constitution of that establishment had failed to meet military requirements in the matter of general efficiency.

(b) Before and during the Great War military clerks predominated in Army Headquarters. At that time the number of Indian clerks in these offices was very much less than it is now. More recently an experiment was made at civilianizing the military portion of the establishment. This has not proved successful, and it has now been decided to revert to a military organisation.

(c) The reply to the first portion of this question is in the affirmative ; as regards the second portion the experience of the last ten years has led to the view that the introduction of a military organisation into what are after all military offices would make for efficiency.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it a fact that those who get themselves enrolled in the Indian Army Corps of Clerks will have to execute a bond for service for a stipulated period—say ten years ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : That is the case. The terms of the bond go to show that, if their services are satisfactory, there is no reason why they should not be allowed to serve up to the age of fifty-five.

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : They are liable to be discharged if their services are unsatisfactory ; but I think it is made quite clear in the bond that they have to sign that, if their services are satisfactory, they will be allowed to serve on, as I say, until the age of fifty-five.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it also a fact that enrolment in this Indian Army Corps of Clerks confers none of the privileges attaching to a military status, such as free quarters and other allowances ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : No. The basic pay and the twenty per cent. extra over the ordinary rates of pay laid down cover all the privileges that they get.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : On the civil side—I am asking for information—(Laughter)—there is no point in trying to raise a cheer at my expense—(Laughter)—is it a fact that those who enrol themselves on the military side as Indian Army Corps of Clerks are put at a disadvantage in the matter of free quarters and house allowances, or not, as compared to the civil side ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : If the Honourable Member is referring to clerks in Civil Departments, I do not think there is any disadvantage. If he is referring to clerks of the Indian Corps of Clerks in other stations, the clerks at Army Headquarters do not get these other concessions, but they do receive a twenty per cent. addition to their pay.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Twenty per cent. in addition to the pay which the clerks on the Civil side get ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : A twenty per cent. addition to the pay laid down in Army Regulations for clerks in the various grades of the Indian Army Corps of Clerks, that is, 20 per cent. more than clerks serving, say, at Ambala or Rawalpindi.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not a fact that they are put at some disadvantage as compared with the clerks who are serving on the Civil side, even with this additional pay ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I do not think that there is any greater disadvantage than there was as compared with the rates of pay both categories drew before.

Mr. T. N. Ramakrishna Reddi : Do people discharged after ten years get their proportionate pension or Provident Fund ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I think I am right in saying that, if they are discharged after only ten years' service, they are not entitled to pensions.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is it not also a fact that those employed in the Civil Secretariat and Attached Offices are given higher scales of pay and allowances than those employed in the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Yes, they always have been.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : I understood from the Honourable the Army Secretary's answer that the experiment of civilianizing this staff has proved a failure and that the Government have reverted to the "military clerk" system. May I know in what respect this experiment proved a failure ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The experiment of civilianization only affected the British portion of the staff, because previously that was its only military portion. We found we did not get the best men from regiments because at Army Headquarters they had not such satisfactory prospects as in their own regiments.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Is it a fact that the Army Retrenchment Committee proposed, and with the concurrence of the military authorities, that civilianization should go on with reference to this Corps?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am afraid I cannot give an answer off-hand.

NEW CONDITIONS OF SERVICE AND NEW SCALES OF PAY IN THE ARMY AND ROYAL AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS.

466. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Is it a fact that the new conditions of service together with the new scales of pay have been sanctioned, with effect from January, 1934, for the new entrants in the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters?

(b) Will Government please state if the Public Service Commission, while notifying their decision to hold the examination for recruitment to ministerial establishment of the Government of India Secretariat and Army Headquarters in 1932 and 1933, ever mentioned in any of their notifications that those candidates who would be employed in the Army Headquarters, will be required to enrol themselves under the Indian Army Act?

(c) If the reply to part (b) above be in the negative, how do Government now justify their action in asking the candidates employed on the result of the above mentioned competitive examinations, to enrol themselves? Is it a fact that due to their enrolment, they would be placed in a much inferior and disadvantageous position than their contemporaries on the civil side?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) Yes.

(b) No, Sir.

(c) As regards the first portion of the question, the attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the reply given in the Legislative Assembly on the 2nd March, 1934, to Mr. Uppi Saheb Bahadur's starred question No. 304. Government do not admit that the statement contained in the second portion of this question is correct.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY AND ROYAL AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS.

467. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Are Government aware that the men, who have been appointed in the Army and the Royal Air Force Headquarters, as a result of the examinations held by the Public Service Commission in 1932 and 1933 and who were never given any warning at the time of examinations, are now being forced to enrol themselves?

Force Headquarters, who were asked to enrol themselves, have since then resigned and gone away?

(d) In view of the facts mentioned in the preceding parts, do Government now propose to enrol those men only who will be taken as a result of the examinations for which the Public Service Commission will announce the new conditions of service in the Army and the Royal Air Force Headquarters, and to exempt the men, who have been employed as a result of the examinations held in 1932 and 1933, from enrolment under the Indian Army Act? If not, why not?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) to (d). Government have received representations from the clerks of the category mentioned in part (a) of the question and these are now receiving considerations.

SCALES OF PAY FOR NEW ENTRANTS ENROLLED UNDER THE INDIAN ARMY ACT.

468. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government please state the scales of pay which will be given to the new entrants enrolled under the Indian Army Act?

(b) Will Government also state the scale of pay they propose to give to those entrants who might be exempted from enrolment? Will it be the scale that has been given to new entrants in the Civil Secretariat and its attached offices, together with house rent and compensatory allowances? If not, why not?

(c) Have Government any proposal to further reduce the rates of pay that will be given to the entrants who will be enrolled in the Indian Army Corps of Clerks? If so, what are those rates?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) The attention of the Honourable Member is drawn to the reply given to part (c) of his starred question No. 56 in the Legislative Assembly on the 30th January, 1934.

(b) I am afraid I cannot answer a hypothetical question of this kind.

(c) These rates of pay will be subject to any general revision that may be decided on for the pay of personnel paid from the Defence Services estimates.

COMPENSATORY ALLOWANCE AND HOUSE RENT FOR NEW ENTRANTS IN THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

469. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Are Government aware that the new entrants in the Civil Secretariat and Attached Offices, whose pay has been revised, are given compensatory allowance and house rent, and that no such allowances have been sanctioned for the new entrants in the Army and the Royal Air Force Headquarters? If so, why have Government kept the Army Headquarters establishment on a different footing even on the introduction of the new scales of pay? Is it a fact that the scales of pay in the Secretariat and its Attached Offices have become uniform altogether?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Government are naturally aware of the terms of service of all establishments under their control. The reason for the differentiation referred to by the Honourable Member is the dissimilarity in the conditions of service and nature of work of the two categories. The reply to the last portion of the question is in the affirmative.

OPTION GIVEN TO NEW ENTRANTS IN THE ARMY AND ROYAL AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS TO ENROL THEMSELVES OR NOT.

470. *Mr. S. C. Mitra : Is it a fact that Government have given the new entrants in the Army and Royal Air Force Headquarters the option to enrol themselves or not ? Will there be any difference between the rates of pay of both the categories ?

Lieut. Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The reply to the first part of the question is in the negative. The rest of the question does not arise.

SELECTION OF A MAN FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE POST OF W. I. X. ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

471. *Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Is it a fact that a letter (No. 925 E.1111, dated the 27th May, 1933) was issued from the Divisional Superintendent's Office, Delhi, for the selection of a man for appointment to the post of W. I. X. in the grade of 150—10—190 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the posts of Divisional Inspector, Assistant Inspector, and Sub-Inspector, Watch and Ward, were abolished and a post of W. I. X. newly created ?

(c) Is it a fact that no mention about the selection for the post of the Head Watchman was made in the letter quoted in part (a) ?

(d) Is it a fact that the post of Head Watchman was not newly created but is the same as it was prior to retrenchment ?

(e) Is it a fact that Altaf Hussain, Abdul Gani and Chandi were selected as Head Watchmen under cover of the same selection held for the post of W. I. X. in the grade of 150—10—190 ?

(f) Is it a fact that abovementioned demotees were junior to demotees Pirthi Singh, Ganga Parshad and Alamgir Khan according to entries on the waiting list at the time of selection ?

(g) Is it a fact that the recommendations of the Court of Enquiry, vide North Western Railway Gazette Extraordinary, dated the 20th June, 1932, appointed by the Government of India, vide North Western Railway Gazette Extraordinary of February 1933, were ignored and the senior men mentioned in part (f) were not selected ?

(h) Is it a fact that Government had assured the demotees to re-instate them in the order of seniority, vide paragraph No. 9, of the North Western Railway Extraordinary Gazette, dated June 20, 1932 ?

(i) Is it a fact that the staff employed as Head Watchmen on the Karachi Division was given preference over the confirmed hands of Delhi Division ?

(j) Will the Honourable Member in charge of the Railway Department explain why this was done ?

(k) Will the Honourable Member also explain why the seniority basis was not kept in view while re-instating the Head Watchmen, as was done in all the other categories on the North Western Railway as directed by the Government of India ?

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : No. 472. Was this in abeyance ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The next one or two I have not yet answered.

STOPPAGE OF ISSUING NEW COINS TO THE PUBLIC BY THE BOMBAY CURRENCY OFFICE.

472. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether it is a fact that the Bombay Currency Office, has stopped issuing new coins and particularly new copper coins to the public ;

(b) if so, the date from which the issue of new coins has been stopped and the reasons therefor ;

(c) whether there have been complaints from the members of the public that the coins issued by the Currency Office, Bombay being over-used, great difficulty is felt by them in exchanging the same ;

(d) if the reply to part (c) above be in the affirmative, the reasons why such over-used coins are not sent to the Mint as uncurrent coins ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) No. New coin is issued when old coin is not available.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) One such complaint was recently received but was found to be groundless.

(d) The issue of a larger amount of new coin would of course involve increased expenditure, and in view of the answer to (c) there appears to be no sufficient reason for altering the existing procedure.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Why is it that new coins are not issued ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Because they are not needed and because it would be much more expensive to hand them out. (Laughter.)

REMITTANCES OF OLD COPPER COINS FROM THE TREASURY OFFICE TO THE BOMBAY CURRENCY OFFICE.

473. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) the total amount of remittances of old copper coins from the Treasury Offices to the Bombay Currency Office since January, 1934 ;

(b) whether the coins thus remitted by the Treasury Offices were surplus or whether new coins were issued in exchange thereof ;

(c) whether such remittances during this period were abnormal for this season ; if not, the special reasons for such remittances ;

(d) the total expenditure on the remittances to such of the Treasury Offices from which the old coins were received and to which new coins were sent in exchange ;

(e) whether the expenditure on such remittances could have been avoided by issuing new copper coins to the public from the Bombay Currency Office ;

(f) if the reply to part (e) be in the affirmative, whether they propose to issue orders to avoid such expenditure ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the reply given to Mr. S. G. Jog's question No. 304, which is recorded in the Proceedings of the 30th of July, 1934.

NEW COPPER COINS MADE DARK.

474. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to state whether any new copper coins were purposely made dark by some process to avoid the circulation of new coins to the public ? If so, what was the extra expenditure incurred on this account, and the total number of new copper coins made dark by this process ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given to Mr. S. G. Jog's question No. 304, which is recorded in the Proceedings of the 30th of July, 1934. The total value of the coin which was subjected to this mechanical process is Rs. 6,100.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I know from the Honourable Member if it is a fact that the coins are being made dark by some process to avoid circulation ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No, Sir. As I said, as an experimental measure, certain very small numbers of coins were made dark by a mechanical process. That experiment is being discontinued, and the Honourable Member can draw what conclusion he can from the fact that it is being discontinued.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : What was the object of doing that—to make them dark ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Because I understand that the demand for new coins is a demand which grows by what it feeds on. The experiment is being discontinued, and I think we will not repeat it.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Was it not deceitful ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That is an expression of opinion.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : Is it not a very salutary example in which attempts are made to show new things as old while people always generally try to make old things appear new ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I merely think it was an attempt to carry out the Scriptural injunction not to mix up old and new wine. (Laughter.)

NON-ISSUE BY THE BOMBAY CURRENCY OFFICE OF COPPER COINS WORTH LESS THAN RUPEES FIFTY.

†475. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the copper coins worth less than Rs. 50 are not issued to the public from the Currency Office, Bombay ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 392.

(b) Is the practice in other currency offices in India the same as the one in Bombay ? If not, what is the practice in other currency offices ?

(c) What are the special reasons for adopting a special practice in Bombay ?

EXCHANGE OF SMALL COINS BY THE BOMBAY CURRENCY OFFICE.

†476. *Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : Will Government be pleased to state :

(a) whether the Currency Office, Bombay, accepts for exchange from the public, small coins worth less than Rs. 100 ;

(b) whether on account of this rule the members of the public have to pay commission to the Marwaris for exchanging small coins for less than Rs. 100 ;

(c) the authority for fixing this minimum of Rs. 100 ;

(d) the practice obtaining in other currency offices in this respect ;

(e) whether it would not be possible in the interest of the public to change the practice prevalent in Bombay in favour of accepting small coins of any amount ?

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO EXAMINE THE RULES REGARDING PAYMENT OF THE VALUE OF THE LOST CURRENCY NOTES.

477. *Mr. Muhammad Muazzam Sahib Bahadur : (a) Has the Expert Committee appointed to examine the question of the rules regarding payment of the value of the lost currency notes referred to in the Honourable the Finance Member's speech on the 31st August, 1933, submitted its report ? If so, when ?

(b) Have Government taken any action on the recommendations of the Expert Committee ? If so, to what extent ? Will Government be pleased to place the report and other connected papers on the table ?

(c) Do Government propose to publish the recommendations of the Committee for public criticism before taking final action ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to look into hard cases that had occurred in the past and in particular the case of the Bank of Hindustan, Limited, Madras, and others out of which arose the discussion in the course of which the Honourable the Finance Member made the speech referred to in part (a) above ?

(e) Has the Expert Committee recommended any substantial reduction in the cost to the public of remitting money through :

(i) Post Office—

(1) Money Orders, and

(2) Insured letter post,

(ii) Supply Bills,

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 392.

- (iii) Currency Telegraphic transfer, and
(iv) The Imperial Bank of India ?

What progress has been made in carrying out the Committee's recommendations in each case ?

(f) Are Government aware that Insurance Companies are in a position to protect parties against losses of currency notes sent through insured post at rates which are substantially the same as the cheapest rates of the Imperial Bank of India ? If so, are they prepared to consider the grant of cheaper remittance facilities to the public ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 477 and 478 together. The Expert Committee which was appointed to examine the Currency Notes (Refund) Rules submitted their report on the 11th of May, 1934. Their recommendations have been under the consideration of the Government of India, and I hope that it will be possible very shortly to publish the report and to make an announcement on the subject.

Government have no information regarding the rates offered by insurance companies for protection against the loss of currency notes.

Mr. T. N. Ramakrishna Reddi : Is the report of the Committee unanimous ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I am not sure whether the Honourable Member on the Honourable Member's left did not make a certain reservation. Anyhow, the report will be published as soon as it is possible to do so.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Government issued a communiqué, dated the 6th June, 1934, evidently based on the report of the Expert Committee, and, again on the 11th July, 1934, the same has been cancelled. I should like to know what is the object of that ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : In order that the recommendations of the Committee may be dealt with as a whole.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Are they going to take up the matter soon or will it be taken up only after the formation of the Reserve Bank and when the Bank begins to function ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I am sorry I did not hear the Honourable Member.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Is it the object of the Government to issue these final rules after the Reserve Bank has been constituted and after consultation with the Bank, or before that ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I should like to have notice of that question. But speaking off-hand, and I can confirm it if a question is put down, I think it is not proposed to wait until the constitution of the Reserve Bank. As I said, we shall publish the report very shortly and also make an announcement on the subject.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Surely, Sir, I am not expected to go beyond what I have already said at this moment, namely, that we will publish the report very shortly and also make an announcement on the subject. I hope the Honourable Member would not insist on our making a piecemeal announcement on this subject as he has already called attention to the fact that we started off by making a piecemeal announcement and then had to withdraw it.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : What I wish to know is whether the hard cases which have occurred in the past are likely to be considered ? That is the main question.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I am sorry I could not hear the Honourable Member.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : I wish to know whether the hard cases that have occurred in the past will be considered as promised by the Honourable Member's predecessor ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Presumably they will be considered, but I cannot make any announcement on the subject.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO EXAMINE THE RULES REGARDING PAYMENT OF THE VALUE OF THE LOST CURRENCY NOTES.

†478. Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : In view of the statement made by the Honourable the Finance Member on the 31st August, 1933, "that if as a result of the work of the Expert Committee (regarding Currency Notes Refund) it was possible to devise clearer and more restricted rules which would regulate the position for the future then the Government might be willing to consider looking into hard cases that had occurred in the past", are Government prepared to consider such hard cases (including that of the Bank of Hindustan, Limited, Madras) now that the said Committee has submitted its report ?

TRAFFIC INSPECTORS IN THE MORADABAD DIVISION, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

479. Bhai Parma Nand : (a) Is it a fact that out of five Traffic Inspectors in the Moradabad Division, East Indian Railway only one was a Hindu ?

(b) Is it a fact that on account of the recent decision of Government the Divisional Superintendent, Moradabad, appointed a Muslim as Traffic Inspector ?

(c) Is it a fact that soon after, another post of Traffic Inspector was created and given to an Anglo-Indian, and that the claims of the Hindu candidates were ignored ?

(d) If the replies to parts (a) to (c) above be in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state if this was in accordance with the intention of their decision ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) to (d). Government have no information about the particular cases referred to by the Honourable Member, but have no reason to believe that their policy about recruitment to railway services is not followed by the East Indian Railway. As I have pointed out more than once in this House, it is impossible to give communal considerations any place either in promotions or in the staffing of individual offices.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 477.

DUTIES OF SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS IN THE CIVIL HOSPITAL, DELHI.

480. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that Sub-Assistant Surgeons in the Delhi Civil Hospital are deputed to attend to emergent cases in the nights ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Assistant Surgeon in that Hospital is in receipt of an allowance of Rs. 50 per mensem and has also been allotted a residential quarter in the Hospital compound with the sole object of being made responsible to attend to such cases ?

(c) If the reply to part (b) above be in the negative, will Government please explain what this allowance and the allotment of a residential house within the Hospital compound are intended for ?

(d) Is it a fact that Sub-Assistant Surgeons required to attend to emergent cases at night are made to work constantly for 28 hours ?

(e) Is it a fact that none of the Sub-Assistant Surgeons so deputed is residing within the Hospital compound ?

(f) Are Government aware of the inconvenience caused to these Sub-Assistant Surgeons in consequence of this unusually lengthy period of duty and the fact that their families have to live alone during this period ?

(g) Is it a fact that after completing the 28 hours' duty at nights, these Sub-Assistant Surgeons are required to do the normal outdoor duties ?

(h) Will Government please state if this prolonged duty is not in contravention of the ordinary rules intended for Government servants, so far as their hours of work are concerned ?

(i) What action do Government propose to take for the amelioration of the condition of the Sub-Assistant Surgeons concerned ?

(j) Do Government propose to consider, with a view to remove the grievances of the present staff, the question of the appointment of one more residential medical officer to attend to emergent calls at nights and to act as leave reserve when necessary ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : With your permission, Sir, I shall answer questions Nos. 480 and 481 together. The information has been called for, and replies will be furnished in due course.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN DELHI FOR THE MEDICAL INSPECTION OF SCHOOLS.

481. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that some officers of the Medical Department are employed in Delhi (City) solely for the medical inspection of schools ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 480.

(b) If the reply to the preceding part be in the affirmative, will Government please supply the following information in connection with those officers :

(i) the number of part time officers so employed, or the number of those who are in receipt of an allowance for the work in addition to their pay ;

(ii) the number of the whole time officers so employed, and the pay and allowances granted to them ; and

(iii) the total expenditure incurred by the State ?

(c) Is it a fact that the schools in the rural areas in Delhi Province are medically inspected by the medical officers of the respective Ilaqas ? If so, will Government please state why a similar arrangement cannot be made in Delhi ?

(d) Is it a fact that no arrangement similar to that existing at present in Delhi is in operation in the Punjab ? If so, will Government please state why this arrangement is being continued in Delhi at an additional expense ?

(e) Will Government please state whether, with a view to curtailing the expenditure, they are prepared to consider the advisability of reducing the appointments of Medical Inspectors of Schools in Delhi ?

MUSLIMS, EUROPEANS, ETC., IN CERTAIN APPOINTMENTS ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

482. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims, Europeans and other non-Muslims in the following appointments on the North-Western Railway :

(i) Traffic Inspectors,

(ii) Station Masters in Grades II, III, IV, V, VI and VII,

(iii) Assistant Station Masters in Grades II, III, IV and V, and

(iv) Assistant Controllers ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the number of vacancies that occurred in the appointments referred to in part (a) above during the years 1931, 1932 and 1933, and the number of Muslims who were recruited in each appointment in those vacancies ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state the number of Muslims at present on the waiting list for the appointments referred to above ?

(d) Is it a fact that the number of Muslims at present holding some of the above appointments is shortly going to be reduced ? If so, why ?

REDUCTION OF PAY OF SUBORDINATES ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

483. *Haji Chaudhury Muhammad Ismail Khan : (a) Is it a fact that the scales of the Senior and Junior Subordinates on the North Western Railway have been reduced ?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 451.

(b) Is it a fact that the reduction in these scales was effected when a few Indians were admitted to these services?

(c) If the answers to parts (a) and (b) above are in the affirmative, is it a fact that the admission of Indians has resulted in the reduction of pay of these appointments?

Mr. P. R. Rau : (a) I presume my Honourable friend is referring to the new scales of pay introduced for all new entrants into the subordinate services on the North Western Railway from the 1st August, 1934; if so, the answer is in the affirmative.

(b) and (c). No.

FALL IN INCOME-TAX REVENUE OWING TO THE EARTHQUAKE IN BIHAR.

484. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Are Government aware that there will be a fall in Income-tax revenue, under the head 'property' owing to the earthquake in Bihar? If so, what is the expected deficit to the estimated income-tax revenue from Bihar and Orissa?

(b) Do Government propose to grant remissions of income-tax revenue to the people in the area affected by the earthquake?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : (a) Yes, but it is not possible at present to give any reliable estimate of the short fall.

(b) A notification has been already issued granting an increased allowance on account of repairs in the case of house property situated in the affected area.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know what the Finance Department of the Government of India, especially the Central Board of Revenue, is going to do towards those affected by the earthquake in Bihar as regards the remission or suspension of income-tax?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : If the Honourable Member wants to know the views of the Government of India on a general question like this, I shall be very grateful if he will put it down on paper. This specific question relates to granting an increased allowance on account of repairs in the case of house property situated in the affected area. That point has already been dealt with.

and Orissa, and whether there is any such minimum fixed in other provinces?

(d) Will Government please state the total number of requests for leave made by Income-tax Officers in Bihar and Orissa during the years 1932 and 1933, and the number of them that were granted leave?

(e) Are Government aware that this sense of insecurity in service, as well as the insistence of longer hours of work at the cost of the health of the staff of the Income-tax Department in Bihar and Orissa was expressed in a Resolution passed by the Bihar and Orissa Income-tax Officers Association? If so, what steps have Government taken to remove those grievances of the staff of the Income-tax Department in Bihar and Orissa? If they are not aware, do Government propose to inquire into the service conditions of that Department in Bihar and Orissa?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions 485 and 486 together. Enquiries are being made and the result will be laid on the table in due course.

STANDING COUNSEL TO THE INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

†486. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Are Government aware that the present Standing Counsel to the Income-tax Department in Bihar and Orissa was also implicated along with the present Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa in the sensational allegations made by Maharajadhiraja of Dharbhanga in the suit filed by him against the Income-tax authorities in Bihar and Orissa in 1928?

(b) Is it a fact that the present Commissioner of Income-tax is responsible for the selection of the present Standing Counsel in succession to the Honourable Justice Agarwala, when he was promoted to the Bench?

RETRENCHED HANDS OF THE BIHAR AND ORISSA INCOME-TAX DEPARTMENT.

487. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government please state if the names of retrenched hands in Bihar and Orissa Income-tax Department are retained on a waiting list for reinstatement for being offered posts against vacancies that occur, according to their assurance given to the men retrenched from the Railways, and particularly when the Honourable the Finance Member stated on the 20th April, 1934, in his reply to my question No. 792 that retrenchment is not punishment?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The answer is in the negative.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Do not Government propose to treat the retrenched officers of the Income-tax Department in the same way as the retrenched railway officers?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : As a matter of fact, I have made inquiries into this matter and the explanation is this that the retrenchment of Income-tax Officers in Bihar and Orissa was confined to those whose work was consistently unsatisfactory, and that is the reason why they will not be re-instated.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Will Government make further inquiries in view of the representations recently made by some of those who have been retrenched?

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 485.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Certainly, but there can be no question of re-instating those officers whose work was found to be consistently unsatisfactory.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Am I to take it that the work of all these officers who have been retrenched in the Province of Bihar and Orissa has been uniformly unsatisfactory ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That is my information.

Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : May I ask, Sir, whether these officers have been retrenched as a punishment ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I did not say that at all, but obviously commonsense requires that if you are retrenching officers in a Department you should get rid of the most unsatisfactory first.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : In view of the persistent complaint made in regard to the injustice done to the retrenched officers of the Income-tax Department in Bihar and Orissa, will the Honourable Member see his way to look into this matter once again ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have already, in connection with this question, made inquiries into the matter and certainly, as I said before, I will not be a party to the re-instatement of people whose work has been consistently unsatisfactory.

Diwan Bahadur A. Ramaswami Mudaliar : Does the Honourable Member realise that if a Government servant is to be removed for unsatisfactory conduct, a charge has to be framed and an opportunity has to be given to him to show that the charge or the orders passed are justified ? In the present case, no charge has been framed and no explanation has been taken, and if the Honourable Member now says that they have been retrenched because of their unsatisfactory work, does it not really mean that they have been dismissed without the elementary principles of justice being satisfied ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : The explanation given by me does not mean anything of the sort. There is a world of difference between officers who have been retrenched and those who have been dismissed as a consequence of a specific charge.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : Can a member of the service, drawing a high salary and having served for a number of years, be retrenched without giving any reason whatsoever, and when vacancies are being filled now, his case is not being considered at all ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I do not quite understand the point of the question. As I said, a certain number of officers were retrenched and the Department chose quite sensibly to retrench those who were least efficient and most unsatisfactory. Obviously, it will be a folly to re-instate in the service, when the vacancies arise, people whose work was consistently unsatisfactory.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : But the fact that the work of these officers has been consistently unsatisfactory was brought to the light of the Central Board of Revenue only at the time of the retrenchment. Was there any bad record of these officers previously also ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I imagine that the Central Board of Revenue were perfectly well aware of the unsatisfactory nature of their work but it did not amount to its being so unsatisfactory as to justify their dismissal on disciplinary grounds or on grounds of incompetency, but quite naturally when you have to get rid of officers, you should get rid of the least efficient.

Mr. Lalchand Navalrai : May I ask, Sir, if there are no more unsatisfactory officers in the Income-tax Department ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I would not like to give a categorical answer to a question of that nature.

Dr. Ziauddin Ahmad : In view of the fact that this is not a solitary example and there has been similar examples in other Provinces to which the attention of the Finance Department has already been drawn before the present Finance Member came to India, namely, that retrenchment has been misused by the Departments and that persons, against whom the Government did not like to frame charges, were retrenched, will Government inquire into such cases ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : What I am going to say now will illustrate the point of my reply to my Honourable friend, Diwan Bahadur Mudaliar's question. When these people were retrenched, they presumably got compensation or pension under the ordinary retrenchment terms. They were in fact people who were not so unsatisfactory as to justify dismissal. They have got full compensation for their services, and the only thing is that we are not going to put them back into service again.

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Was there any inquiry, departmental or otherwise, before these people were retrenched for uniformly unsatisfactory work, and whether they were given any chance to refute those charges ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : No charges were brought against them. They were retrenched and given full compensation for their services. All I say is that presumably the quality of their work was perfectly well known to the heads of their Departments. It would be an act of gross folly to put back people whom we regarded as incompetent.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The quality of their work was perfectly well known to the officers. Am I to understand from this that there was evidence on record to show that their work was uniformly unsatisfactory from before the time they were given orders of discharge ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : In the case of every officer there is a confidential record of his work kept every year throughout his service.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is it the case of the Honourable Member that retrenched officers were men whose work was found unsatisfactory ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : Does the Honourable Member mean generally or specially ?

Sir Abdur Rahim : Generally.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I could not possibly give any categorical answer.

Mr. B. R. Puri : If it had not been on account of retrenchment consideration, would you have framed charges against these people on account of their uniformly bad work ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have not said any such thing. Everybody knows that there are always border-line cases in an office of people who are uniformly inefficient, but who have not committed any offence or any wrong and whose inefficiency would not justify their being dismissed out of hand without any compensation or pension.

Mr. B. R. Puri : What I should like to know is this that, if their work was uniformly bad and if the question of retrenchment had not come in and you wanted to get rid of that lot, would you or would you not have framed charges against them and give them an opportunity of explaining those charges ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I cannot answer a hypothetical question like that.

Mr. B. R. Puri : That is not a hypothetical question. It is a very concrete question.

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : This is certainly a hypothetical question. "Would I have done a certain thing if a certain thing had happened" is certainly a hypothetical question.

Mr. B. R. Puri : How long was this uniformly bad work on the part of these people known to the Department ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : It varies in the case of the different officers.

Mr. B. R. Puri : Was it or was it not known to the officers in charge of these people long before retrenchment came in ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : In some cases at any rate, yes.

Mr. B. R. Puri : Then why were they not got rid of earlier ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : I have answered that earlier that their work, though unsatisfactory, yet was not so unsatisfactory as to justify their dismissal out of hand without any compensation or pension.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do I take it that it was the unsatisfactory condition of the Government finances that aggravated the unsatisfactory character of their work ? (Laughter.)

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : That is a question which does not arise out of this.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : May I know why one Mahesh Prasad Chaudhury, who had very satisfactory work throughout his 13 years service, was retrenched ?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Obviously that question cannot be answered off-hand by the Finance Member.

Maulvi Muhammad Shafee Daoodi : There are only three cases which are under discussion and no more than that. I am asking a particular question, because the Honourable the Finance Member has been evading replies to questions. That is the reason why I am asking this particular question. Is it not a fact that one Mahesh Prasad Chaudhury had a good record of work for 13 years and he has been highly spoken of by officers of his Department and still he was retrenched without being given any chance for showing that he was not inefficient ?

The Honourable Sir James Grigg : As pointed out by you, Sir, I am afraid I cannot answer any questions of this particular nature on this subject.

ORIYAS EMPLOYED IN THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT IN THE ORISSA CIRCLE.

488. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : Will Government please state the number of Oriyas employed in the Telegraph Department in the Orissa Circle ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I presume that the Honourable Member is referring to the Bihar and Orissa Circle. The information has been called for and a reply will be placed on the table of the House in due course.

EMPLOYMENT OF UNQUALIFIED MEN IN THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA OFFICES.

489. Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Will Government please state the number of permanent and quasi-permanent (e.g., vacancies caused by men on leave pending retirement) posts in the ministerial establishment of the Government of India Secretariat and its attached offices, which are shown in the registers of the Accountant General, Central Revenues, as lying unfilled or having been filled temporarily or in an officiating capacity ?

(b) Is it a fact that a number of permanent, deputation and temporary vacancies in the Railway Board, Office of the Director General, Posts and Telegraphs, Home, Foreign and Political, Finance, Industries and Labour Departments and the Imperial Council of Agricultural Research are at present being held by unqualified candidates ? If so, will Government please state the number of these vacancies and the period for which they have been existing in the respective offices and have been held by unqualified candidates ?

(c) Is it not a fact that the Public Service Commission have been holding regular examinations for the recruitment of ministerial staff since 1931, and have been supplying the offices with lists of candidates who are qualified for temporary appointments ? If so, will Government please state how these unqualified men could be appointed in preference to the men on the lists of the Commission and why no steps have been taken to replace them ? Are Government not under a moral obligation to provide those candidates who appear at and pass their examinations to the vacancies existing, permanent or otherwise ?

(d) Is it permissible to appoint unqualified men to officiate in permanent vacancies or to appoint such men in long period temporary or deputation posts when qualified men are available ? If so, under what rules ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). The information is being collected and will be supplied to the House in due course.

(c) and (d). The answer to the first part of clause (c) is in the affirmative. As regards the right of Departments to employ unqualified men in temporary vacancies, I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to the reply given to parts (c) and (d) of Sardar Sant Singh's question No. 212 on the 21st February, 1934.

REVISED SCALES OF PAY FOR THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ATTACHED OFFICES.

490. *Mr. Sitakanta Mahapatra : (a) Is it a fact that Government have announced the revised scales of pay for the clerical establishment of the attached offices ?

(b) Is it a fact that under that announcement all clerks in the lower division of attached offices are to be classed as second division clerks and that a third division shall be introduced gradually in those offices through fresh recruitment ?

(c) Are Government aware that there already existed two divisions, viz., second and third divisions, under two different sources of recruitment in the lower division of attached offices before the announcement was made ?

(d) Is it a fact that as a result of this announcement many clerks who were recruited on the results of the Second Division Examination have been placed in the third division while many clerks who were recruited as a result of the third division examination have been placed in the second division and that the latter class of clerks have thus gained an advantage not only over the former class but also over their confreres in the third division of the Secretariat ?

(e) Are the third division clerks in attached offices, who are thus classed as second division clerks, to receive preference over or equality with those clerks who were recruited as a result of the second division examination and who continue to remain in the second division along with them in matters of seniority and promotion ? If not, do Government propose to issue clear instructions on this point ?

(f) In making the announcement, was there any reason not to recognise the two divisions in the lower division of the attached offices which were in existence at the time of the announcement and on the basis of which recruitment had been made upto that time ? If there was any reason, what was it ?

(g) Is it not a fact that the net result of the new announcement has been to benefit the old third division, that is to say the typists and routine clerks at the expense of other clerks who are qualified for the first and second divisions of the Secretariat ? If not, why not ?

(h) Are Government aware that the latter class of clerks in the attached offices have already doubly suffered in comparison with their confreres in the Secretariat by being given a third division rate of pay which has also been the pay for the third division clerks in their offices and lesser scope of promotion to the first division ? If so, do Government propose to ensure that the rights and privileges of the old second and the first division qualified clerks in matters of promotion, etc., at least continue as they were at the time of the announcement ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : (a) and (b). The reply is in the affirmative.

(c) Prior to the re-organisation effected in conjunction with the introduction of rates of pay for new entrants to Attached Offices, there were only two Divisions in such offices, namely the First and the Second.

The latter, however, contained two categories of men, viz., those who had qualified for the Second Division and those who had qualified for the Routine Division.

(d) No. The orders provide that all those in the old Second Division will remain in the new Second Division. No existing members of the Second Division are to be placed in the new Third Division which is to be formed by future recruitment.

(e) to (h). I find it difficult to understand the point of these clauses, but I may say generally, that it is not proposed to disturb the existing orders fixing the proportionate basis of recruitment to the First Division. If the Honourable Member will let me have the details of any particular case or cases he has in mind I will have them examined.

COMMISSIONED OFFICERS SERVING IN THE INDIAN ARMY, THE INDIAN AIR FORCE AND THE INDIAN MARINE.

491. *Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : (a) Will Government please state the total number of commissioned officers serving in the Indian Army, the Indian Air Force and the Indian Marine ?

(b) Will Government please state the average number of annual retirements in each of these branches ?

(c) Will Government please state the average number annually recruited to the commissioned ranks of these services ? How many of them are to be British and how many Indians according to present arrangements ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a), (b) and (c). The number of King's Commissioned officers, at present serving in the Indian Army, is 2,990. The average number of those who have retired during the last three years is 110. During that period the same average number has been recruited annually, made up of 90 British and 20 Indian officers. When the Indian Military Academy begins to turn out its full quota the number of Indian officers recruited annually will increase to about 60. I presume that the Honourable Member is not asking for information regarding the Viceroy's Commissioned officers of the Indian Army as he has put down a separate question on this subject.

The number of commissioned officers at present serving in the Indian Air Force is nine. It is impossible to estimate the average wastage in a service which has only been in existence for a little over a year. Six Indian cadets are now receiving training at the Royal Air Force College, Cranwell, to which normally two Indian cadets are sent each year. The British officers at present serving with the Indian Air Force have been loaned to it from the Royal Air Force to supervise its formation. Its establishment will ultimately be entirely Indian.

Information regarding the Royal Indian Marine is being obtained and will be laid on the table at an early date.

Sir Abdur Rahim : It appears from the answer given by the Army Secretary that he is not quite sure that 60 will be the output of the Military College at Dehra Dun this year or every year. Is that the position ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : There may always be a certain amount of wastage. Some cadets may not qualify for commissions ; so I qualified my statement by saying "about 60". I hope there will be the full 60.

Sir Abdur Rahim : What will be the exact number ? I think he is in possession of it.

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I believe 23. We were not able to make good the wastage during the first term as you can well understand.

RECRUITMENT OF VICEROY'S COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

492. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : (a) How many Viceroy's Commissioned officers are generally recruited in one year ? Is the recruitment to continue or not ? If not, when will it stop ?

(b) How many Viceroy's Commissioned officers are to be retired annually from now onwards and when will this service become extinct according to the present plans of Government ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : (a) and (b). Viceroy's Commissioned officers are not generally recruited direct, but are usually promoted from the non-commissioned ranks of the Army. The average number of Viceroy's Commissions, granted during the past three years, is 328. This figure excludes those appointed to Pioneer Battalions which have been disbanded.

The existing system of granting Viceroy's Commissions will continue for the present except in the case of units which are being Indianised. The non-commissioned ranks of such units will still be eligible for promotion to Viceroy's Commissioned rank in units which are not being Indianised.

Approximately 300 Viceroy's Commissioned officers, now serving in Indianising cavalry and infantry units, will be retired between January, 1935, and the end of 1940, but the exact annual proportion is not yet certain.

The rank of Viceroy's Commissioned officer will not become entirely extinct until the Indianisation of every part of the Indian Army is complete. As regards the extension of the policy of Indianisation beyond the existing programme, I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer to part (c) of question No. 63, asked in the Council of State, by the Honourable Rai Bahadur Lala Jagdish Prasad, on the 20th February, 1933.

Captain Sher Muhammad Khan Gakhar : May I ask if Government have made any arrangement for the young Indian officers who will be replaced by the cadets from Abbottabad from the Indianised units ? Are there not young Indian officers who have not completed the service for pension ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I want notice of that question. There is certainly no intention of getting rid of any Viceroy's Commissioned officers prematurely without compensation.

Sir Abdur Rahim : If the Indian Viceroy's Commissioned Officers are gradually eliminated, does it not mean that it will require practically double the number of officers from Dehra Dun than would be otherwise under the present system in which Viceroy's Commissioned officers are to be found in the Indian Army ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The Honourable Member is perfectly correct. The figure of 60 which is the present output of the Indian Military Academy is based on the figures of the officer establishment of the division which His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has announced is to be Indianised first of all. The officer establishment of that Division is reckoned on the basis of 28 Indian Commissioned officers for an infantry unit and the full establishment of Indian Commissioned officers in every other kind of unit.

Sir Abdur Rahim : What will be the increased cost under the new system that is proposed ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : To take an Indian infantry battalion, I understand the saving will be somewhere in the region of Rs. 20,000 a year.

Sir Abdur Rahim : If the Viceroy's Commissioned officers are replaced by the Dehra Dun officers, then will there be a saving or an increase in the cost ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am referring to the time when the new establishment is complete and there are no British officers, but a full establishment of Indian Commissioned officers paid at the rates which are being fixed for new entrants to the Indian Army.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Even taking into account the fact that there will be no more Viceroy's Commissioned officers ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Even taking that fact into consideration, and even taking into consideration the fact that the establishment is to include some nine warrant officers who will be more highly paid than any non-commissioned rank at present serving in an Indian regiment. These warrant officers will be paid nearly as much as a jamadar, and still there will be a saving.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney : Is it not a fact that the gradual and ultimate complete extinction of the Viceroy's Commission does not meet with any approval amongst the Indian officers ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : There is at least one ex-Indian officer in this House who approves of it.

Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry Gidney : Does one constitute the whole lot ?

Sir Abdur Rahim : Will not the saving be effected by considerably lowering the pay of the officers of the Dehra Dun Academy ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The initial rate of pay was announced in 1932. The starting pay is Rs. 300 a month instead of the present rate of Rs. 400.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Will the scale of pay be lower throughout and also the pensions ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Yes, Sir. The idea is to base the scale of pay on purely Indian standards. This, I understand, it is proposed to do, throughout the Indian services. The rates of pay proposed are practically identical with the rates of pay that are at present drawn by officers of the British army serving in England.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Was any inquiry made by the military authorities before embarking on this experiment of reducing the scale of pay of future officers ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am not quite clear from whom the inquiry was to be made.

Sir Abdur Rahim : From officers who are there and from public bodies generally ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I think I am correct in saying that, when the reduced scales were being framed, it was understood that this was being done in accordance with the wish of Indian public opinion that future scales of pay should be less than they are at present.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Was that public opinion ascertained by any specific inquiry or investigation ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I am afraid I cannot say how the inquiries were made, or indeed whether we made any inquiries.

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya : Was it not also public opinion that the British service and salaries should be curtailed ? If one part of public opinion is carried out, why should not the other part also be carried out ?

EUROPEANS RECRUITED TO THE COMMISSIONED RANKS OF THE ARMY.

493. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Europeans who are at present annually recruited to the commissioned ranks of the Army, and the number which will be recruited if the Indian Army Act is passed into law and the recruitment to the Viceroy's Commission is discontinued ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer questions Nos. 493 and 494 together.

I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer which I gave today to his question No. 491.

As a member of the Select Committee on it, the Honourable Member should be aware that the Bill he refers to deals with discipline and kindred matters and will not, if passed, have any effect on recruitment. Similarly, the decision gradually to discontinue the grant of Viceroy's Commissions will have no effect on the number of Indian Commissioned officers recruited ; on the contrary the pace of their recruitment will regulate the number of Viceroy's Commissions to be granted.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Is it not a fact that by the extinction of Viceroy's Commissions, the number of King's Commissioned officers who are recruited in those Divisions which ought to be Indianised will be doubled, while the rate of Indian Commissioned officers appointed to those Divisions will remain stationary ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I do not understand where the difference comes in. The Indian Commissioned officers recruited from Dehra Dun will gradually replace the Viceroy's Commissioned officers and the British officers in the establishments of infantry units which will gradually be expanded to a strength of 28 Indian officers.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Are you going to increase the Indian Commissioned officers in the same proportion as the Viceroy's Commissioned officers are to be reduced in addition to the present number of Indians recruited as Commissioned officers ? Is it not a fact that at present every Regiment has 14 King's Commissioned officers and 18 Viceroy's Commissioned officers, but in future there are to be no Viceroy's Commissioned officers, but only King's Commissioned officers 28 per regiment instead of 42 ? Are Government prepared to allot all these additional 14 vacancies in each Regiment for Indians in addition to the present recruitment of 60 Indian Commissioned officers per year ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : As I have already said in answer to another supplementary question, the figure of 60, which is to be the output of Dehra Dun, is based on the Indianisation of one division, the officer strength of which is worked out on the increased establishments of Indian officers.

INDIANS RECRUITED TO THE COMMISSIONED RANKS OF THE ARMY.

†494. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of Indians now recruited to the commissioned ranks of the Army annually and the number of Indians which will be recruited annually if the Indian Army Act is passed into law and the recruitment to the Viceroy's commission is discontinued ?

INDIANISATION OF THE COMMISSIONED RANKS OF THE ARMY.

495. Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will Government please state the number of years within which the commissioned ranks of the Army in India will be wholly Indianised at the present rate of Indianisation ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the last sentence of the answer I have just given to his question No. 492.

Sirdar Harbans Singh Brar : Will I be correct in assuming that the answer of Government is that it is never going to be Indianised ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The answer of Government is, as I have said twice before this morning, that the figure of 60 as the output of the Indian Military Academy is based on the proposal to Indianise one Division only. It was never the intention that the figure of 60 should Indianise the whole Indian Army. It certainly could not.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Will that take nearly 20 years ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : I find that it was estimated that the time it would take to Indianise one complete Division, taking into account the Indian officers that we have at present and the output from Dehra Dun, was about 18 years.

†For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 493.

Sir Abdur Rahim : And supposing the output is reduced to 23 as in the case of the very first year, how much longer will it take ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The reason for the reduction to 23 in the very first term is that it was impossible in the first term to fill up the vacancies caused by cadets who fell out. In future, there should only be the wastage that happens at the end of each term, because cadets fail to qualify at the end of the course. Every vacancy that occurs during the course is filled up at the latest at the beginning of the term after it occurs.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Is it not a fact that there are ten times as many applications as there are vacancies in the Academy and that you had a selection out of that number this year ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : The applicants are many, but I do not think they are quite as many as ten times the number of vacancies. They were considerably more on one occasion. But the numbers who qualify are not very many more than the vacancies which have to be filled.

Sir Abdur Rahim : Are there not six Divisions in the Indian Army ?

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby : Actually the organised Divisions are four, but you could probably, if you tried, make more than four. You could probably squeeze out the infantry of as many as eight.

MARRIED LADY CLERKS IN THE RAILWAY BOARD'S OFFICE.

496. Mr. M. Maswood Ahmad : Will Government be pleased to state the number of married lady clerks in the office of the Railway Board ?

Mr. P. R. Rau : One lady stenographer is married and one lady clerk is a widow.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 223, asked by Mr. Bhuput Sing on the 25th July, 1934.

PROVISION OF A TURNSTILE GATE AT THE GARHI HARSARU RAILWAY STATION ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The Agent, Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, replies as follows :

(a) Yes.

(b) Hardly a large number.

(c) No.

(d) There is a third class passenger waiting shed with an area of 720 sq. ft. to accommodate 80 passengers at 9 sq. ft. per passenger. There are, so far as we are aware, no ferocious wild animals or dacoits.

(e) Our information is that a Dharamshala was provided at a cost of Rs. 20,000 for the use of any one whether travelling by rail or not.

(f) Our policy is not to allow outsiders to supply water to passengers in trains or on platforms. As a special case, however, one Seth Kishanlal has, at his own request, been allowed to send 4 men to supply water to passengers. But they are actually superfluous, as besides the travelling watermen in trains there are two Hindu watermen and one Bhisti during the hot weather and one waterman and one Bhisti at other times.

STATEMENTS LAID ON THE TABLE.

(g) Yes.

(h) Possibly so, but on further consideration the applicant was advised by this Railway's Traffic Superintendent that it was not proposed to provide the gate.

(i) The applicant was asked by this Railway's Departmental officers to agree to pay, for the facility asked for, the usual annual rental payable in similar cases as per this Company's Rules.

(j) Yes.

(k) Yes, but as an opening already exists in the Railway fencing for the convenience of passengers and it was considered that the travelling public going to and from the Dharamshala and the station were not put to any undue hardship by using it, the request for a separate gate in the fencing opposite the Dharamshala was refused.

(l) No. Government consider a further enquiry unnecessary.

Information promised in reply to starred questions Nos. 251 and 252 asked by Seth Haji Abdoola Haroon on the 30th July, 1934.

WATCH ON THE ACTIVITIES OF YOUNG MEN IN BALUCHISTAN WHO READ NEWSPAPERS.

Question No. 251.

No.

PERMISSION TO CERTAIN GENTLEMEN TO ISSUE NEWSPAPERS FROM BALUCHISTAN.

Question No. 252.

Applications from these persons are at present under the consideration of the local officials.

Information promised in reply to starred question No. 300 asked by Mr. S. G. Jog on the 30th July, 1934.

EXTENSIONS GRANTED IN THE CURRENCY OFFICE, CAWNPORE.

(a) Yes.

(b) and (c). Extensions have been granted to three persons only since 1925.

(d) One in the Cawnpore Office and three in other Currency Offices in India.

ELECTION OF A MEMBER TO THE FUEL OIL COMMITTEE.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : I have to inform the Assembly that up to 11 A.M. on Monday, the 6th August, 1934, the time fixed for receiving nominations for the Fuel Oil Committee, only one nomination was received. As there is only one candidate for the vacancy, I declare Mr. F. E. James to be duly elected.

THE INDIAN ARMY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

PRESENTATION OF THE REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE.

Lieut.-Colonel A. F. R. Lumby (Army Secretary) : Sir, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill further to amend the Indian Army Act, 1911, for certain purposes.

THE ASSAM CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT (SUPPLEMENTARY) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik (Home Member) : Sir, I beg to move :

“That the Bill to supplement the Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1934, be taken into consideration.”

This legislation is largely of a formal character and is of a class with which this House is familiar as it has passed several Acts of a somewhat similar character. The necessity for the Act arises out of the fact that, in March of this year, the Assam Legislative Council passed an Act conferring on certain officers certain special powers for dealing with terrorism and that Act contained two sections which were ultra vires of the Local Legislature. Section 15 conferred on persons convicted by certain Special Tribunals set up by the Act a right of appeal to the High Court; and section 29 abrogated the powers of the High Court under section 491 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. As the House is well aware, a Local Legislature is not competent to pass any legislation modifying or adding to the jurisdiction of the High Court as laid down in the Letters Patent, and, therefore, those two sections of the local Act are of no effect, and unless this Supplementary Bill is passed, persons convicted by these Special Tribunals will have no right of appeal to the High Court. It may be asked, why the Local Legislature passed these two sections which they were not competent to pass. I am afraid that, as regards that, the debates in the Assam Legislature do not throw any light. I tried to find out whether the point of the competence of the Local Legislature was raised in the course of the debate, but apparently it was not. Section 15 of the Assam Act was passed without any debate at all, and section 29 was passed after only a short debate and not a debate on this particular point.....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Then why not refer it back and keep the thing pending ?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : What is the good of referring it back ? They cannot pass these sections, they are admittedly not competent to pass them. I do not think it is necessary for me to say anything more about this Bill ; as I have said, this Central Legislature has on more than one occasion passed Bills of almost exactly similar character to cure deficiencies or to supplement lacunae in local Acts, and I hope that the House will accept the same principle and agree to the passage of this Bill. Sir, I referred to the abrogation of section 491 of the Criminal Procedure Code which is a very valued right, viz., the right of Habeas Corpus.

THE ASSAM CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT (SUPPLEMENTARY) BILL. 1153

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, I did refer to that. I explained that section 29 of the local Act purported to abrogate the powers of the High Court, the Habeas Corpus powers : I am not quite sure that I apprehend the Honourable Member's point. I did explain that the local Act purported to abrogate those powers and that that was not within the competence of the Local Legislative Council. This Bill purports to do exactly the same thing, which the Local Legislative Council did without having the authority to do it. I hope that is clear.

Mr. T. R. Phookun (Assam Valley : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I think it is usual to have the original Act before the Members : on other occasions it has been done, but, unfortunately, I do not find the original Act to which this is going to be an amendment ; and before the House is asked to judge about the matter, I hope the Honourable the Home Member will think about it as it was done by Sir Harry Haig on a previous occasion.

Mr. S. C. Mitra (Chittagong and Rajshahi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the same question was raised on a similar occasion and I think you gave a direction ; and it will be doing an injustice to the House if we are asked to pass a legislation on subjects of which we are quite ignorant, and I hope that some direction from the Chair will rectify this. There have been repeated complaints about this. We are not in a position to judge the Supplementary Bill unless we are supplied with the main Act.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair explained the other day that, where we have got an amending Bill, it is not possible to supply to every Member of the House a copy of the original Act of which this is an amendment. But, what the Chair undertook was that it would see that a sufficient number of extra copies were kept in the Library of the House for reference purposes, and, in accordance with that, there are lying on this very table extra copies : if any Member had cared to look, or ask for it, it would have been supplied.

Mr. T. R. Phookun : I think it should have been supplied to Members in good time so that they could have studied it : simply putting it on the table just now does not make up for the deficiency I am speaking of.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Is it the contention of the Honourable Member that, if there is a Bill to amend the Civil Procedure Code, for example, the whole of the Civil Procedure Code should be given to every Honourable Member ?

Mr. T. R. Phookun : The Act we are going to amend is not the Civil Procedure Code—it is an Act of another Legislature and we must know its provisions : we merely know that the Assam Council has passed a measure which neither the Government there nor the Members knew that they had any jurisdiction to pass.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair undertook to see that a sufficient number of extra copies were placed in the Library. Beyond that, how is the Chair to give a direction generally that copies of the original Act should always be given whenever there is an amending Bill ?

Sir Abdur Rahim (Calcutta and Suburbs : Muhammadan Urban) : Copies of the Bengal Act were supplied to Members, if I remember aright. In matters with which the House is familiar, like the Civil Procedure Code or the Criminal Procedure Code, there is no necessity. But when there is an amending Bill, and the Act sought to be amended is of an abscure nature, not known to the House, and is not very bulky, I think the Government might consider whether they could not distribute copies to every Member.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar (Law Member) : Sir, may I explain what happened ? If these copies had to be distributed, they would have been distributed by the Legislative Assembly Department. On the last occasion, when this question was discussed, as soon as the question was raised, as many copies as were available were supplied to Members, and it was said that if there was any demand for any Act which was being discussed, as many copies as were available would be supplied. This Bengal Act and the Assam Act appeared on the agenda on the same day ; I think these have been appearing on the agenda for the last 15 days, and during these last 15 days not one Member has made any application either to the Legislative Department or to anybody, nor did they show the least anxiety to have a copy of this Act. That is why it has not been possible to supply copies.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, so far as I am concerned, I have got a copy.

Sir Abdur Rahim : It was said just now that the Legislative Department did supply a few copies of their own motion.

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : Yes, because there was a demand for them, and it was also stated that if, in respect of any Act there was a demand, as many copies as were available would be supplied, and not that copies would always be supplied to each of the Members.

Sir Abdur Rahim : They had supplied a few copies without application ?

The Honourable Sir Nripendra Sircar : A grievance was made that copies were not made available, but that is not correct.

Mr. T. R. Phookun : It is understood that even copies of the proceedings of the Assam Legislative Council are not available in the Library. How are we to judge then of the effect of this measure ? It may be that one particular Member is interested in it, and, therefore, is going abegging, but should others ? When a measure of such importance is going to be placed before the Assembly, I think the Departments concerned should not mind a little trouble or expense in getting ready as many copies of the Act as possible for the use of Honourable Members. Now, Sir, in this particular case, not even the proceedings of the Assam Legislative Council are available in the Library of the House, not to say that no copy has been placed on the table of the House. Therefore, I would urge that Honourable Members who do not know much of Assam or who do not take much interest in Assam should be made fully aware of how things are going on there, and as many copies of the proceedings and also of the Acts which will be discussed here should be made available for use of Honourable Members.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I went to the Library to ask for a copy, and I was told that there was only one copy, and Mr. Neogy pinched it in my presence. I do not know how many copies were supplied to the Library by the Department concerned.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Did the Honourable Member ask for a copy in the Library ?

Mr. B. Das : There was only one copy in the Library, and it was taken away by another Member.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Did the Honourable Member, Mr. B. Das, want a copy and he was not given a copy ?

Mr. B. Das : Because there was no other copy available.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair has asked a specific question.

Mr. B. Das : The Librarian told Mr. Neogy in my presence that only one copy was available.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Did the Honourable Member, Mr. B. Das, ask for a copy in the Library and he was refused ?

Mr. B. Das : The only copy available was given to Mr. Neogy.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Did the Honourable Member, Mr. B. Das, want a copy, and it was not given to him ?

Mr. B. Das : Because there was no other copy available.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Was a copy of the Act refused to him ?

Mr. B. Das : The Librarian told Mr. Neogy in my presence that only one copy was available.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Therefore, the Honourable Member says that sufficient copies were not available.

Mr. B. Das : There was only one copy in the Library.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Is that correct ?

Mr. Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : The Librarian told me when I went there for a copy that there was only one copy available.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, my copy was taken away by Mr. S. C. Mitra, and I was deprived of it.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The Chair is told that the Legislative Assembly Department asked for a sufficient number of copies to be placed on the table, and the Legislative Department were not in a position to supply those copies.

Mr. G. H. Spence (Secretary, Legislative Department) : No such request was made to me. If any such request had been made to the Legislative Department, it is very improbable that it would not have come to my knowledge.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Here is the endorsement—"Copies of this Act have not been printed, and, therefore, these have not been received."

Mr. G. H. Spence : I do not know anything about the request for copies of this Act.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : We are referring to the Assam Act as passed by the Assam Legislative Council.

Mr. G. H. Spence : I take it that somebody from the Legislative Assembly Department approached somebody in the Legislative Department for copies and received the reply that you have read out, but the matter was not brought to my notice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, may I make a correction? What I find in my hand was given to me as a copy of the Assam Act, and it is merely a copy of the Bill. I do not know whether this represents the Act as finally passed.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The complaint is perfectly clear now. Let us hear what the Honourable the Home Member proposes to do in the light of the discussion that has taken place.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, I would like to point out that this Bill merely purports to amend only two sections. (Laughter from the Opposition Benches.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy : The Honourable Member should not stare at us like that. Why is the Honourable Member ruffled by the laughter? This is not the Punjab Council.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Sir, I was going to say that two sections only of the Assam Act are affected by this Bill, and those two sections are firstly section 15. Section 15 of the Assam Act is exactly the same as clause 2 of the Bill, except that there is only one change. In the Assam Act, the Code of Criminal Procedure is referred to as "the Code"; and in this Bill it is referred to as "the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898". That, I think, is the only difference. In fact, it merely re-enacts section 15. It is merely proposed to re-enact section 15 of the Assam Act in identical language. Then, the other section of the Assam Act affected is section 29 which dealt with two things. It ran as follows :

"No suit, prosecution or other legal proceeding shall lie against any person for anything which is done in good faith....."

There was no suggestion to amend it.....

Mr. S. C. Mitra : Sir, unless we know what is in the Act, how are we to judge of the provisions in the Supplementary Bill?

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : We are not proposing to amend it at all. The Bill has no effect on that at all,—and the section then goes on :

"and the powers conferred by section 491 of that Code shall not be exercised in respect of any person.....under this Act."

Now, Sir, clause 3 of the Bill.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Perhaps the Honourable Member will please resume his seat for the moment. The Chair does not think at this stage he need go into the explanation relating to the provisions of this Bill. What the Chair wants to know first is this. It is now clear that copies of the Assam Act are not available in the Library, and therefore, are not available to Honourable Members. In view of that, the Honourable Member, Mr. Phookun, proposes that the consideration of this motion should be postponed until the copies of the Assam Act are made available. The Chair wants to know from the Honourable the Home Member what he has to say on that point.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : I am quite prepared to meet the wishes of Honourable Members on that matter, but I hope that this measure can still be passed in this Session. The point is, I understand, that certain trials are going on under this Act in Assam, though none, so far as I am aware, have been concluded yet.....

Mr. W. L. Scott (Assam : Nominated Official) : Two, Sir.

The Honourable Sir Henry Craik : Until our Bill is passed, if any persons are convicted, they will have no right of appeal there. However, if we pass it this Session, it will be all right. Anyhow, if clause 4 is passed, the question of limitation will not arise.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore (Leader of the House) : Sir, after consultation with my Honourable colleague, the Law Member, I am able to say that I think it will be possible to print the Assam Act and circulate it to Honourable Members at a very early date, and in that case we can take up the consideration of this measure perhaps on Monday.....

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What about the fact.....

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Let the Honourable the Leader of the House finish what he has to say.

The Honourable Sir Joseph Bhore : I think a proposal like that should meet the wishes of the House, and if the Chair agrees, we shall get a fair number of copies printed, and circulate them as soon as possible.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What about the fact that even the debates in the Assam Legislative Council on the original Bill are not available in the Library of the House?

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : As a matter of fact, the debate has just been received, but that will not perhaps be a sufficient ground for asking a postponement of consideration of the Bill. The Chair thinks it will meet the general desire of the House if the consideration of this motion is postponed till Monday next. In the meantime, the Chair hopes steps will be taken to make available the Assam Act to Honourable Members.

THE INDIAN CARRIAGE BY AIR BILL.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to a Convention for the unification of certain rules relating to international carriage by air, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

This Bill has emerged unscathed from the Select Committee and it is, therefore, unnecessary for my remarks on it to be anything but very brief. There are one or two points which have been raised with regard to it. The first was the representation of India at the Conference at Warsaw, the outcome of which is embodied in the Schedule attached to the Bill. The meeting at Warsaw took place in 1929 at a time when civil aviation in India had not advanced to the degree that it has reached now. We were invited to send representatives to the Conference but it was thought sufficient to entrust Indian interests to the British representative. The House knows, as well as I do, the progress that we have made in respect of civil aviation in recent years, and I have no doubt whatever that, should a similar occasion arise and an International Conference in regard to the regulation of civil aviation be convened, India will have its own representative. That, Sir, deals with the first point. In the Select Committee certain doubts were expressed in regard to one clause of the Convention which is embodied in sub-clause (2) of article 20 of the First Schedule to the Bill. That sub-clause reads as follows :

[Sir Frank Noyce.]

"In the carriage of goods and luggage the carrier is not liable if he proves that the damage was occasioned by negligent pilotage or negligence in the handling of the aircraft or in navigation and that, in all other respects, he and his agents have taken all necessary measures to avoid the damage."

The point of my remarks will be seen when it is realised that under the terms of the Convention the carrier is not liable for damage to goods and luggage ; he is liable to damages for injury to passengers. As often happens, this sub-clause, in the form in which it emerged from the Convention, represents a compromise between two different points of view. The British point of view which was supported by the French representatives was that the carrier should not be responsible for any mistakes made by the pilot whether in regard to passengers or to luggage. That is the British point of view in regard to marine law, and the British representatives naturally wished the same principle adopted in respect of the law of aviation. I imagine that the British practice arose from the fact that British requirements in regard to the qualifications of ships' captains and similarly of air pilots, are so high that they did not consider it desirable to impose the further obligation on carriers that would follow if the sub-clause applied to both passengers and goods and luggage. Russia, on the other hand, which is not a maritime nation, pressed for the view that the liability should apply in respect of both passengers and goods and luggage. The sub-clause in the form in which it appears in the schedule is, as I have already said, a compromise which is as put forward by the German representatives. I hope, Sir, that sufficiently explains the point. It is quite obvious that at International Conferences there must be give and take, and that the countries which subscribe to the Convention have to adopt it as a whole whether they like all its detailed provisions or not. I think that is all I need say, and I commend the motion to the House.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to a Convention for the unification of certain rules relating to international carriage by air, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Muhammad Azhar Ali (Lucknow and Fyzabad Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, the unique feature about this Bill is that it has come out of the Select Committee with a unanimous verdict and without even the change of a comma, or semi-colon in it. It is a fact that the high contracting parties are very big nations and India too is roped with them and thus the Select Committee is no doubt to be congratulated at their report. My idea is that the Members, who attended the Select Committee or who were members of the Select Committee, did not read the Bill beforehand or there was some mystery about it that no amendment is made. The personnel too is such that none of us here on this side of the House at least could ever think that there could be any likely change in the Bill, and our hopes have been realised to the full. The Bill has the hearty support of every one of us inasmuch as there are no great political or economical questions of importance to India involved in the Bill and I do not think that at present there are any Indian or Asiatic companies who are undertaking this great adventure. I hope that this Bill, when it is enacted, will be a great encouragement to Indians and that the Government will come forward to give all kinds of encouragement to Indians to undertake to form an aerial company. Sir, with these remarks I support the motion.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-madan) : Sir, this Bill seeks to implement certain rules and conventions which were adopted by the International Convention held at Warsaw in 1929. India was not represented at that conference, but those present adopted these rules and the Government of India think that they are quite suitable for our adoption. As a member of the Select Committee, I may say that on the whole the Bill is not open to any serious objection. It was pointed out to us that we must adopt the whole set of rules or we may not adopt them at all. There was no question of making any changes in the Bill, because that was the set of rules adopted by the International Convention. It was for that reason that we could not suggest any changes in the Bill. No changes are also necessary. There was only one point which I raised myself in the Select Committee and which has been referred to by my Honourable friend, Sir Frank Noyce, and that relates to Article 20 of this Bill, in which negligent pilotage or negligence in the handling of the aircraft or in navigation is being sought to be indemnified. This is a point which is open to objection because in the case of every public carrier, for instance, the railways, if there is negligent driving which results in damage to goods or injury to persons, then the man who suffers is entitled to get some sort of compensation and so on, but this particular sub-clause seeks to prevent any person suffering damage either in limbs or property from getting compensation from a public carrier and is, therefore, open to objection ; but as it was clearly understood that England and other international powers have accepted it we must also accept it in toto or reject it in toto. It was on this that we accepted it. On the whole, after the explanation which has been given by my Honourable friend, I do not think any serious harm will be done if this clause is retained as it is. There is only one little point to which I should like to make a reference, and it is contained in clause 33 of the Bill which reads as follows :

"Nothing contained in this Schedule shall prevent the carrier either from refusing to enter into any contract of carriage, or from making regulations which do not conflict with the provisions of this schedule."

This also, as I pointed out, is open to some objection, because a public carrier should not be given the option of refusing to carry a person without assigning any reason, if he is prepared to pay the fare and so on. Under the Railway Act, for instance, the railways are not given power to refuse to carry a person who purchases a regular ticket and so on, but here power is sought to be given to air carrier to refuse to carry a person without assigning any reason. This is open to objections. I hope in practice it will not be necessary to exercise this power. But as I stated at the outset, we had to adopt the whole set of rules in toto or to reject them in toto. These two points, I admit, are not of very serious importance, and so the Select Committee thought it proper to adopt the whole set of rules. I am glad that the Government of India has after all decided to adopt the International Convention relating to this subject. India has been in its infancy, so far as this subject of aviation is concerned, and I think the Government of India will not lag behind in giving the proper impetus to the development of Civil Aviation and the training and appointment of Indians, so that in later times it may not be said that no suitable Indians are available to take up the important superior appointments in this new service. With these few words, I support the motion which is before the House.

[Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.]

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I do not think that I have very much to say in regard to the point raised by my Honourable friend, Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh, whose keen interest in Civil Aviation is well-known to this House. I am not quite clear whether I understood him correctly in regard to the exact meaning of sub-clause (2) of Article 20. As I endeavoured to explain, this sub-clause only applies to goods and luggage and, if a passenger is injured, he is entitled to compensation.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : I stand corrected to that extent.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : It is a point of some importance and that is really the only reason why I have got up to speak. I have no doubt whatever that, when another International Conference comes to consider the working of the Warsaw Convention, all the points that have been mentioned will receive due consideration in the light of the experience of the working of the Convention in the interval.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill to give effect in British India to a Convention for the unification of certain rules relating to international carriage by air, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2, 3 and 4 were added to the Bill.

The First Schedule and the Second Schedule were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I move :

"That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be passed."

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : The question is :

"That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be passed."

THE INDIAN AIRCRAFT BILL.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I move :

"That the Bill to make better provision for the control of the manufacture, possession, use, operation, sale, import and export of aircraft, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

This Bill was not quite so fortunate in the Select Committee as the one in regard to which I have just made a motion, but as a matter of fact the changes made by the Select Committee were very few and unimportant or rather comparatively unimportant, having regard to the subject matter of the Bill and its importance in connection with the control of Civil Aviation in India generally. There were only three changes. Clause 5, as originally worded, empowered the Governor General in Council to make rules prohibiting or limiting the manufacture, possession, use, operation, sale, import or export of any aircraft or class of aircraft. The Select Committee felt that this was giving the Governor General in Council rather drastic powers and that it was advisable to omit the words "prohibiting or limiting". That amendment the Government were very willing to accept as they felt that the power of regulation left in the clause should be sufficient for all practical purposes. Then, in clause 6, it was originally provided that the compensation could be determined by such officer as the Governor General in Council might appoint in this behalf. The Select Committee felt that it was desirable to make a provision that the determination of the amount of compensation might be left to Courts and they have, therefore, provided that it should be determined by such authority as the Governor General in Council might appoint. The Select Committee also felt that as the provisions of this Bill deal with a comparatively new and rapidly developing branch of activity, it was desirable that any rules which it is proposed to make should be given wide publicity and that ample notice should, therefore, be given in order to enable criticisms to be submitted and duly considered. They, therefore, inserted in the Bill a provision requiring that the period for which draft rules should be published before being taken into consideration in accordance with the procedure set forth in the General Clauses Act should not be less than three months. Those, Sir, are the changes which were made by the Select Committee, and, as I have said, they cannot be called extensive. There was, however, one point raised in the Select Committee on which I promised to make a statement to this House when moving this motion. The Select Committee naturally wanted to know exactly what the position of Indian States was, vis-a-vis the Government of India, in regard to the control of Civil Aviation. I am glad to have this opportunity of explaining that position, and, it is especially desirable that I should do so, in view of the fact that the settlement of the exact relationship took a very long time to effect, and that it was really because it took such a long time that it was not possible to place this Bill before the House at an earlier stage. The problem was considered by the Standing Committee of the Chamber of Princes for no less than eight years—from 1923 to 1931—in consultation with representatives of the Government of India. At long last, a summary of principles was evolved and was formally adopted at a meeting of the Chamber of Princes in March, 1931. It was only after that, that we were able to get on with the formulation of this measure. The main principles adopted by the Chamber of Princes were these. The Princes were recognized to have sovereignty over the Air in their States, in the same measure as their sovereignty over the territory of their States is recognized. The Princes recognized that the International Convention for the Regulation of Air Navigation, 1919, was signed on behalf of India as a whole. They recognized that the Government of India have the responsibility of implementing this Convention for the whole of India, British India and the States alike. In order to secure compliance with the International Convention, the States agreed that aircraft should be registered and certified and provided with log books, and aircraft personnel licensed by arrangement with the Government of India. They also agreed to the investigation of accidents and the inspection of aerodromes and aircraft factories in State territory by representatives of the Government of India. It was agreed that the States were entitled to declare prohibited areas in their territory after consultation with the Government of India. They may also, in order to safeguard their fiscal rights, establish customs aerodromes in their territory. Finally, every State has the right to reserve to its national aircraft the carriage of persons and goods for hire between two points in its territory. In accordance with these principles, a working arrangement was made with the Jodhpur Durbar in November, 1931. This arrangement has been found a suitable model and has been adopted by other States which have since become concerned with aviation in their territories. The essence of the arrangement is that, in all matters of routine, including the registration and certification of aircraft and the licensing of personnel, correspondence is carried on directly with the Director of Civil Aviation as if the aircraft and personnel concerned were located in British India. On all technical matters, the appropriate authorities in the States communicate directly with the Director of Civil Aviation. On all matters of policy or principle, communication passes through the normal channel—the Agent to the Governor General or the Resident and the Foreign and Political Department of the Government of India. Sir, I trust I have said enough to convince the House that our relations with the States in this matter have been placed on a very sound and satisfactory basis, and that the States have shown a very gratifying willingness to co-operate with the Government of India in all respects. I think that is all I need say in support of this motion, and I would commend this Bill to the favourable consideration of the House. I should like to add that although the changes made by the Select Committee have been very few, the Select Committee took a very great deal of trouble over the Bill and spent a whole afternoon in examining its provisions very carefully.

L270LAD

[Sir Frank Noyce.]

Sir, I move.

Mr. President (The Honourable Sir Shanmukham Chetty) : Motion moved :

"That the Bill to make better provision for the control of the manufacture, possession, use, operation, sale, import and export of aircraft, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur, cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, this Bill has been conceived on right lines. In 1919, there was an International Convention for the regulation of aerial navigation to which India was a signatory, and this Bill is intended to give effect to the conclusions arrived at at that Conference. So I have nothing very important to say on this Bill except on one or two points which I should mention presently. Reference has already been made by my Honourable friend Sir Frank Noyce, to clause 5, a few words of which were deleted by the Select Committee. But even as the clause stands at present, I think it is open to a certain objection. The clause reads as follows :

"The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, make rules regulating the manufacture, possession, use, operation, sale, import or export of any aircraft or class of aircraft."

This gives too wide a power to the Governor General in Council ; but we did not carry our opposition to the point of recording a minute of dissent in the Select Committee, on the clear understanding that the Governor General in Council would certainly exercise his discretion in the proper manner, especially in view of the fact that aerial navigation is in its infancy in this country and requires encouragement ; but I personally should have thought that the powers which this Bill seeks to confer on the Governor General in Council should have been curtailed a little more if possible. Then, Sir, I come to clause 6 of the Bill, which also purports to give great powers to the Governor General in Council. I will read out the relevant portion of this clause :

"If the Governor General in Council is of opinion that in the interests of the public safety or tranquillity the issue of all or any of the following orders is expedient, he may, by notification in the Gazette of India," do certain things, and these certain things comprise the cancellation or suspension of licenses or certificates issued under this Act ; he may prohibit or regulate the flight of all or any aircraft or class of aircraft over the whole or any portion of British India ; he may also prohibit, either absolutely or conditionally, or regulate the erection, maintenance or use of any aerodrome, aircraft factory, flying-school or club, etc. ; he may also direct that any aircraft or class of aircraft or any aerodrome, aircraft factory, flying-school or club, etc., together with any machinery, plant, material or things used for the operation, manufacture, repair or maintenance of aircraft shall be delivered, either forthwith or within a specified time, to such authority and in such manner as he may specify in the order, to be at the disposal of His Majesty for the public service. I could understand such wide powers being taken by the Governor General in Council during times of war, or certain grave emergencies, but the Bill is not intended to limit the operation of this clause to that contingency. It only says that if in the interests of public safety or tranquillity it was necessary, the Governor General in Council may exercise all these powers. Sir, we can say from our own experience in the past that wide powers, which have been granted by law to executive officials, have been often misused. Now, for instance, I will mention the case of section 144 of the Criminal Procedure Code. This section was intended to be applied in particular circumstances, but it has within the last few years been misapplied to cases to which it was never intended to apply, in checking, for instance, certain acts connected with the Non-Co-operation Movement, and so on. I am, therefore, of opinion that even as this clause stands it gives the Governor General in Council very extensive powers, inasmuch as in the interests of public safety or tranquillity he is authorised to give all or any of the directions which I have already mentioned. Personally, I would have wished that these powers should have been curtailed or the wording was changed suitably to indicate that these powers, or such of them as may be necessary, to be exercised would be exercised only during the time of war or grave emergency. Then Sir there is clause 14 of the Bill to which I should like to refer for a minute. This clause says :

[Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh.]

"Any power to make rules conferred by this Act is subject to the condition of the rules being made after previous publication for a period of not less than three months."

The Select Committee added the period of three months. But, even as it is, there is no provision in this clause to indicate how public opinion is to be elicited. I would have been glad if in this clause, or somewhere else, some definite provision had been made asking the public to send in their views which would be considered by the Governor General in Council. This is, after all, a minor point, but the other points which I have mentioned are of some substance. As, however, no one has tabled an amendment on this point, and as the report of the Select Committee has been an agreed one to which I was a party, I did not think it proper to give any notice of any amendment, but I hope that in actual practice the apprehensions, to which I have given expression on the floor of the House just now, will not be realized and the law will be operated in the best manner possible so as to be conducive to the expansion of Civil Aviation in the country. With these few words I support the motion.

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : Sir, I am very glad indeed that my motion has received, if not a satisfactory measure of vocal support, a satisfactory measure of implicit support from the House. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh has objected that the powers, conferred under this Bill, are very wide, but he has not carried his objections sufficiently far to propose amendments. I am glad that he has sufficient trust in myself and in my Department to believe that we shall endeavour to work the rules with as little friction and harassment as possible. As regards his remarks on clause 6, I would point out that this clause only applies in times of trouble and that there are ever more extensive powers in the existing Act. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh has expressed the hope that we shall go ahead with Civil Aviation and do all we can to foster it. I am very glad indeed that he has given me an opportunity of doing what this House so often asks the Members on these Benches to do and that is to take it into their confidence. We have, for some time past, had under our consideration extensive proposals for capital expenditure on Civil Aviation. We hope before long to place before the Standing Finance Committee proposals which I trust will not frighten them for very substantial expenditure on the improvement of our principal routes. We hope, in the first instance, to take up the trans-India route, and the Karachi-Bombay-Madras-Colombo route. On those routes, our programme is to consolidate runways on important aerodromes, to enlarge and generally improve the aerodromes, to provide additional hangars and additional emergency landing grounds, and to floodlight the Karachi-Calcutta section, a point to which my Honourable friend attaches considerable importance and on which he has raised questions in this House from time to time. We also hope to provide observatory buildings and quarters for meteorologists.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What about the training of Indians on these lines ?

The Honourable Sir Frank Noyce : I should like to finish what I have to say on this subject before passing on to the point my Honourable friend has just raised. As I have said, the two main routes will be taken up in the first instance, and when we have finished with them, we shall go on to the Bombay-Calcutta, Calcutta-Madras and Karachi-Lahore routes. These proposals are now being worked out, and, I hope, that we shall be in a position to place a skeleton programme before the Standing Finance Committee before the close of this Session. If the Standing Finance Committee agree to our going ahead with this capital expenditure and also if this House approves, we shall go forward as rapidly as we can.

